

N.C. Doctors Plan Own Insurance Firm

RALEIGH, (AP)—North Carolina doctors today announced plans to form their own mutual insurance company to ensure that they will continue to have malpractice insurance coverage.

Dr. James E. Davis, president of the North Carolina Medical Society, told a news conference the company would go into operation as soon as $1 million in capital could be raised and legal technicalities taken care of.

He estimated the process could take two weeks. In the meantime, he said, doctors whose insurance policies expire will face difficult individual decisions about whether to continue seeing patients.

Davis said the society was hopeful that the legislature will eventually change North Carolina laws to make it more difficult for patients to sue doctors and reduce the amount of money they can get in malpractice settlements.

Meanwhile, the North Carolina Hospital Association was awaiting word from the Lloyd's of London insurance company on whether its proposal for self-insurance would be accepted.

The malpractice problem reached crisis proportions Monday when the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. announced it was pulling out of the malpractice business in North Carolina. St. Paul said it would no longer offer the insurance voluntarily and was seeking a temporary court order exempting it from a new state law requiring the coverage be offered.

St. Paul provides coverage to 97 per cent of the state's 5,500 doctors and a number of hospitals. Eleven of those hospitals have policies that expire Wednesday and policies held by about 250 doctors expire during October. In addition, a group policy from Employers Mutual of Wassau held by 43 other hospitals also expires Wednesday and won't be renewed.

Had St. Paul decided to continue offering coverage, its own clients and those whose companies have quit providing the insurance would have had access to protection. By dropping out, St. Paul left a void that no other company has offered to fill.

The 1975 legislature had tried to head off a malpractice crisis by setting up a reinsurance pool similar to that for auto insurance. The new law required all 350 general liability insurance companies doing business in the state to offer malpractice insurance.

Under the law, a company could provide the coverage itself or it could put the policy into a pool in which all companies participate, sharing the risk or profit.

That law has been challenged in court with insurance companies claiming it is unconstitutional for the state to force them to offer such insurance. That is pending before the courts and is months from resolution. It is expected to be appealed at least to the state Supreme Court no matter which side wins in Superior Court.

Meanwhile, 240 insurance companies have won court orders exempting them from the new law until its legality is settled. St. Paul has asked to be included in that group and insurance industry spokesmen said the 100 or so other remaining companies are likely to take similar action.

If all companies are temporarily exempted from the law's provisions, doctors and hospitals will be unable to buy malpractice insurance at any price unless an alternate program is worked out.

Undercover Agent Offered $25,000 To Kill President

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An undercover agent of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was offered $25,000 within the past month to kill President Ford, the director of the bureau said today.

Rex D. Davis, in a statement prepared for a Senate subcommittee investigating the Secret Service, said the individual who approached the agent was arrested the day following the offer, after sufficient evidence was gathered.

Davis also said his agents acquired information during the past month from an informer "relating to the informer's contact with a member of a militant organization."

"The subject was a twice-convicted felon armed with three high-powered rifles and a possible automatic weapon," Davis said. "The felon indicated he was en route to a city where a meeting with a militant organization was to take place to discuss the President's scheduled visit to that city."

In his prepared statement, Davis made no other mention of the $25,000 offer to kill Ford, except to say it occurred in a Midwestern city during September.

Davis made the disclosures while detailing examples of cooperation between his bureau and the Secret Service.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, whose department is responsible for the Secret Service, defended the agents as "highly competent, well-trained individuals and, as they have shown time and time again, they are also wholly dedicated to their mission."

The investigation by the Senate subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and general government appropriations, follows two assassination attempts on President Ford within 17 days.

Subcommittee Chairman Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., said the hearings were being held

"to examine our options and look for solutions" to the problems confronting the agency whose best known job is the protection of the President.

"We must make sure that adequate resources — money and manpower — have been made available to the Secret Service," Montoya said.

Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight asked the panel for a supplemental appropriation, saying it was needed "to handle the increased demand upon the Secret Service."

He said the number of persons protected by the Secret Service has more than doubled, increasing from 57 to 132, in the past three years.

A subcommittee staff member said the Secret Service also was expected to ask for additional funds to guard the 1976 candidates.

New FBI Building Is Dedicated

By FRANCES LEWINE

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, joining in the dedication of the FBI's new $126 million headquarters, called today for "renewed commitment to the rule of law in America and to the legal system that perpetuates freedom and justice."

"Without law," the President said, "we have neither freedom nor justice."

Ford went from the White House down Pennsylvania Avenue a short distance for the dedication of the huge J. Edgar Hoover building, a structure the late FBI director reportedly considered an architectural monstrosity.

In addition to the President, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi and FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley were scheduled to address about 1,600 present and former FBI officials, members of Congress, police officials and guests and the formal dedication ceremonies in the courtyard of the new building.

Ford said the structure honors the memory of "a pioneering public servant."

The President noted that Hoover served under eight presidents going back to Calvin Coolidge, and all had high praise for Hoover's professional achievements.

Under Hoover's direction, Ford said, "the FBI became the superior professional organization it is today ... with the best scientific crime detection facilities to serve the federal government and the American people."

ization it is today ... with the best scientific crime detection facilities to serve the federal government and the American people."

The President also saluted the FBI agents as "legendary symbols of American justice for decades."

Ford quoted Hoover's words shortly before his death about the rule of law in America: "The tests of time and challenge in our nation's history have more than prove the majesty of the law."

"Mr. Hoover was right," Ford said, "the continued dedication of the men and women of the FBI to the preservation of the rule of law and the protection of citizens' rights will be a monument even more enduring than this imposing building."

He suggested that the ceremonies were really "to rededicate ourselves to the principles of equal justice and liberty under law which must motivate all the actions of the federal government."

Claims 'Fine Exhibits' As County Fair Opens

The Pitt County Fair began last night with "a real nice crowd for a rainy evening," according to Mrs. Sam Winchester, receptionist.

Products, and crafts, which may be seen in the Exhibit Hall, are being judged this morning. Winners lists hopefully will be ready for announcing tomorrow, Mrs. Winchester said. "We've got some of the best exhibits ever and the rides are as much fun as ever," she said.

Rides and sidshows and concession stands are provided by the traveling Buck-Page Exposition.

REASON FOR TUITION FEE

My father lives outside of Greenville and my mother lives in Greenville. I like going to the Greenville Schools, but would like to live with my father, but cannot because they can't afford the $60 a year out-of-district fee. Why do the people who live in Brook Valley go to the Greenville School and they don't have to pay any tuition? They aren't City residents either, are they? J. H.

The Greenville City Schools get no money at all from the City of Greenville government. All school taxes are levied through the Pitt County government. Anyone living in the Greenville School District pays a 25 cents per $100 extra evaluation, and Brook Valley is in the Greenville School District, though not in the Greenville City Limits, Greenville Schools Superintendent Glenn Cox explained.

TWO CHECKS

I ordered a book called Great People of the Bible from Reader's Digest and paid for it upon receipt. As per the agreement, when I decided not to keep it I returned it by registered mail. I have tried and tried to get a refund. They cashed my $13.41 check May 6. L.W.

Hotline wrote the company and you soon received a letter apologizing for the lack of response to your earlier inquiries and promising to have your check in the mail in a matter of days. You did receive a check, you report, and two days later an identical one. You destroyed the second one, you say.

Hospital Covered

Pitt Memorial Hospital Director Jack Richardson said this morning the hospital's local agent through whom malpractice insurance is purchased has assured him that the hospital is still covered by a policy issued by St. Paul Insurance Company.

"I don't know what will happen before the day is over and certainly not before this premium period expires," he said, however. "It's the most confused situation I've ever seen."

St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company has said it will stop offering coverage in North Carolina. Pitt Memorial, along with other N.C. Hospital Association members, may have to consider a self-insurance plan backed by Lloyd's of London. If so, this will be much more costly than the present coverage, Richardson, has indicated.

Special water studies have been started in the Chicod Creek Watershed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service and the U.S.D.I. Geological Service, it was announced today by Roy Beck, district conservationist for the SCS in Greenville.

The studies will cover a period of five or more years.

Data will be collected before, during and after construction of the Chicod Creek Watershed Project. The study will evaluate stream flow, stream water quality and ground water levels. "Four stream flow and water quality gauging stations are being constructed," Beck said. The Chicod Creek stations are located at the bridges on Secondary Roads 1760 and 1766 and the station for Cow Swamp is at the bridge on State Road 1756."

Three pairs of observation wells will be installed near Chicod Creek at State Road 1780. One well of each pair will be driven into the water table aquifer and the other one into the Castle Hayne Formation. A third well will be installed in the water table aquifer near the N.C. Department of Natural and Economic Resources' operation observation well near Cox Swamp on State Road 1755.

"Water quality data will be gathered on total dissolved solids, suspended solids, nitrogen, phosphorous, and dissolved oxygen. Trace metals, including arsenic, mercury, copper, lead and zinc will be determined in bottom materials at each site as well as in filtered and unfiltered water samples. "Additional information about the study is available from the Soil Conservation Service at their Greenville and Raleigh offices," Beck explained.

'Porkfest' Scheduled

An October Porkfest program has been scheduled for Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Building.

Mrs. Pat Reed, home economist of the N. C. Pork Producers Association, will be guest speaker. She will be demonstrating and sharing her ideas of the "Wonderful World of Pork Cookery."

Miss Connie Adams, 1975 Pork Queen, will be present. Miss Adams will be appearing as a guest on "Carolina Today," Channel Nine, WNCN-TV Wednesday morning.

Other guests at the Wednesday afternoon program will be the Porkettes, who are wives of pork producers. During the program, there will be films, literature, recipes and a tasting party.

The program will be open to the public according to Miss Addie R. Gore, home economics extension agent, who also said that October is National Pork Month.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Paul D. Methven, a 32-year-old Virginia Beach carpenter, has signed a statement admitting he participated in a bomb-threat plot to extort $45.5 million from seven major oil companies, according to a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Methven's statement also incriminated two other men—Larry Shaffer and William R. Carpenter, agent Charles H. Sanderlin testified Monday in U.S. District Court.

Sanderlin was one of the agents who arrested Methven Saturday in Virginia Beach. Shaffer was arrested the same day in Chicago in connection with the alleged extortion plot.

A local FBI spokesman said information provided by Methven was "partially responsible" for the discovery of four bombs Sunday in Pittsburgh and Columbus, Ohio. The FBI had said Saturday four other bombs had been recovered. None of the eight had detonated.

Methven told the FBI he took part in the plot with Shaffer and Carpenter and traveled with Carpenter in a rented car to place bombs in tanks at service stations in Pittsburgh, Columbus and Jacksonville, Fla., Sanderlin testified Monday.

Methven and Shaffer, 34, are accused of conspiring to extort money under the threat of bombings. Two surface bombs allegedly placed by the defendants were detonated Sept. 11 at service stations in Chamblee, Ga., the FBI said.

There were no injuries and only minor damages.

After the probable cause hearing before Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr., Methven was ordered held in lieu of $250,000 bond for grand jury action on a conspiracy charge.

Extortion letters mailed early this month to the oil companies demanded $6.5 from each for a fictitious group called the Fighting American Indians, the FBI said. The senders claimed they wanted to raise money for Indians at Wounded Knee and other places.

Despite the extortionists' claims they would bomb the oil companies' facilities, no money was paid.

The federal grand jury considering the case apparently will sit in Atlanta, since both Methven and Shaffer were arrested on a complaint issued there Friday by a federal magistrate.

Carpenter supplied federal authorities with information that led to the arrest of Methven and Shaffer, a local FBI spokesman said, but Carpenter was not named as a defendant in a criminal complaint.

The spokesman said Carpenter "isn't being sought. We know where he is." But he declined to give any information on Carpenter's whereabouts and said he did not know whether Carpenter would be charged in the conspiracy.

Morgan Says CIA 'Finest In World'

FAYETTEVILLE (AP)—U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., has come to the defense of the Central Intelligence Agency, calling it the "finest intelligence agency in the world."

In a talk to the N.C. Cooperative Council Monday, Morgan said he was more concerned about some of the activities of the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service than the CIA.

Morgan, who is a member of a Senate committee investigating charges against the CIA, sharply criticized Rep. Otis Pike, D-N.Y., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who are heading up probes of the CIA.

Morgan said he did not condone all that had been done by the CIA, but he was of the opinion that "what has been done was done on instructions of higher authority."

Morgan said the FBI had kept a file on every member of the Senate committee now investigating the CIA, including himself.

"He said both the FBI and the IRS have infringed on the rights of thousands of Americans "and we have a right to be left alone unless suspected.

Ask Help On Area Clinics

Citizen's groups in two Eastern North Carolina communities have asked assistance of the East Carolina University Office of Community Health Services toward developing local dental and medical clinics in the area.

Resolutions asking the ECU office for assistance have been received from Aurora and Vanceboro, according to Bill Byrd, director of the ECU Community Health services program.

Some 150 area citizens met in Aurora on Sept. 11 and endorsed a plan whereby the two communities will cooperate in the development of local clinics. Mayor Grace Bonner of Aurora was elected chairman of the Aurora area's 27 representatives to Tri County Health Services, Inc., the legal vehicle of the two groups.

Some 450 area citizens met at the Vanceboro Elementary School on Sept. 23 and elected that area's representatives to the board and named Joe Thomas as chairman of that area's delegation.

Rep. Bundy To Speak At Event

State Rep. Sam D. Bundy will be the featured speaker at the annual Ladies Night Program of the Aulander Ruritan Club next Monday night and he and Mrs. Bundy will be accompanied by State Sen. and Mrs. Vernon White.

Tuesday of next week Bundy will address a district conference of the Future Business Leaders of America at the Conley High School. He will be in Raleigh attending a meeting Thursday of next week of the N.C. Advisory Council on Teacher Education and on Friday attending the monthly meeting of the Advisory Budget Commission. Tuesday, October 14, he will speak to the Hickory Kiwanis Ladies Night Banquet and on Friday of that week he will be in Pinehurst as the featured banquet speaker at the Conference of Superior Court Judges of North Carolina. Rep. Bundy plans to wind up his activities for the month with a speech on Oct. 24th in Goldsboro at the annual convention of the North Carolina Movers Association.

Television Buff Tired Of Phonies

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Why are people ashamed to admit that they watch television?
I have friends who say, "I NEVER watch television, but I just happened to catch 'All In The Family' last Monday evening, and..."
That kind of snobbery irks me to no end. What's with these phonies, anyway?

ENJOYS TV

DEAR ENJOYS: Most people would like to appear to be more intellectual than they really are, and since they regard watching TV as something less than an intellectual pursuit, they're reluctant to admit that they're constant viewers. It's the same kind of insecurity that causes people to say they read the book when they only saw the movie.

DEAR ABBY: With all the important problems you get, mine will probably sound like nothing, but I sure need some advice.

I am married to a stubborn, hot-tempered man who has a terrible foot odor. His feet perspire, and he won't change his shoes and socks or bathe his feet when he comes home. He leaves his shoes on right up until it's time to go to bed, then he takes them off and leaves them in the bedroom. This smells up the whole bedroom like you wouldn't believe. It sure repels me from any romantic ideas I might have.

I have bought him foot deodorant and anti-fungicide sprays, which he used a few times reluctantly, but it didn't help much.

I can't sleep anywhere else because I have a bad back and have to sleep on an extra firm mattress that is in the bedroom we share. What do I do now?

ASPHYXIATED IN SAN CARLOS

DEAR AS: Move the extra firm mattress to another room and pleasant dreams.

DEAR ABBY: I am a clergyman, and as such, I perform many marriage ceremonies.

My pet peeve is the well-meaning shutterbug who insists on flashing his camera during the wedding service.

One such photographer actually kept crawling around on the altar, adjusting the bride's veil and the groom's coat. He even asked me to please "lean in" a little more toward the couple. And all this while I was performing the ceremony!

Please put something in your column to discourage this type of thing.

DISTRACTED PASTOR

DEAR DISTRACTED: Seems to me that a pastor performing a marriage is, or should be, in command. He should lay down conditions for photography, and if the client couple dislikes the conditions, let 'em hunt up another pastor.

New York's Ninth Avenue Offers Food Bonanza

By TOM HOGGE

AP Newsfeatures Writer
Anyone visiting New York this summer should set aside one day for a tour of Ninth Avenue, which offers a dazzling array of foods of more than 20 ethnic groups in the one-mile stretch between 37th and 57th streets.

Along this span there are food shops where you can purchase everything from the honey-drenched pastries of Greece to cheeses of half a dozen nations.

If you prefer to eat out, there are restaurants galore along the stretch, featuring foods of Latin America, Europe and the Far East. One Italian bistro offers a party-size, six-foot hero sandwich crammed with 15 pounds of Italian meats, cheeses and vegetables which can be delivered at no extra charge to your hotel room or apartment.

The noodle takes on many guises along Ninth Avenue. They include Italian ravioli, Jewish kreplach, Chinese wonton and Polish pierogy. For these pastas there is an endless variety of sauces and about as many fillings.

Did you ever eat phyllo, the thin, flaky, strudel-like dough that forms the base for many baked specialties? Phyllo is difficult to make, but you can purchase it in a number of Greek and eastern European stores along this avenue.

Spices and herbs to tempt most every palate are available along Ninth. If you need lemon grass for an Indonesian rijstafel or aromatic herbs for an Italian pasta, they should be available.

A wide display of meats is also on tap, including baby lamb, rabbit, whole suckling pigs and game meats and fowls.

To publicize the attractions of this unique street, the Ninth Avenue Assn. has come out with the "Ninth Avenue Cookbook and Shopping Guide."

This paperback booklet carries a listing of the shops and restaurants plus a wide assortment of recipes from many lands. Here is one for Bosnian casserole provided by the Sisters of Saints Cyril and Methodius Croatian Catholic Church.

2 pounds beef, pork and lamb
1/4 pound bacon, chopped fine
1 large onion sliced
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 pound soup greens
1 1/2 pounds small new potatoes
1 tomato
1 green pepper sliced
1 cup string beans, cut up
1 cup green peas
1/2 small head cabbage, leaves separated
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 cups water
4 cups white wine
Salt and pepper to taste
Cut meat into 1 1/2 inch cubes and brown in bacon and garlic. Arrange meat and vegetables in layers in large casserole. Pour water, vinegar and wine over mixture. Add salt and pepper. Cover tightly and cook in 300-degree oven four hours. Serves 8 to 10. Good with a burgundy.

(Cookbook obtainable for $1 from James Dell'Orto, president, Ninth Avenue Assn. 492 Ninth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10018.)

Four Shaker Women Keep Village Alive

BY JACQUELINE HUARD
CANTERBURY, N.H. (UPI)
— Only four elderly Shaker women remain to stroll beneath the sprawling elm, maple and pine trees which cover their 900 acres of rich and rocky New Hampshire farmland.

When they die, modern-day tourists will be allowed to roam the lush, quiet hills and white wood buildings of the village in search of the philosophy which kept the Shaker men and women happily celibate for more than 200 years.

"If the physical aspects die, which they might, still the philosophy will never die — somebody will pick up the torch," says 78-year-old Sister Bertha Lindsay. "We are planning for it always to be here."

The Shaker community, founded in Canterbury in 1792, has been Sister Lindsay's home since she was eight years old. It is one of two survivors of the 19 American communities founded by Shakers in the late 1700s and early 1800s. Sabbath-day Lake, Maine is the other.

In its early days Canterbury village thrived with 400 brothers and sisters and nearly 4,000 acres. Shakers drew their flock with no official creed but instead stressed equality, simplicity, hard work and a celibate life.

Sister Lindsay says the Shakers decided in 1957 not to admit new members because there are no male elders to teach new boys. The last brother died in 1942.

The plan to retain the Shaker life includes a more than $1 million trust fund which will maintain the community long after the sisters have died.

Now the four white-haired women spend their winters and summers providing small handmade items for their gift shop and welcoming visitors for the tour of their 20 buildings.

The tour includes a museum in the old meeting house which details the Shakers' inventions — everything from the square broom and clothespin to early herbal medicines and the buzz and circular saws.

Sister Lindsay says the number of inventions arose out of necessity. "They had to have things to do with," she says. "There were people who came among us who brought their skills and talents with them."

One devotee of the Shaker life is Charles Thompson. The middle-aged singer and lecturer came to Shaker Village 17 years ago looking for new music for his country and western tours.

Thompson has been here ever since with his wife and their four sons.

"I became completely enamored with the people," says Thompson. "They had the whole Christian principle in action."

He set up the museum in the village and spends his time restoring the buildings and lecturing about the Shaker philosophy in the region.

Thompson has no doubts the Shaker life will continue.

"It will gain its immortality on its own," he says. "A little group of people dressed like Shakers won't do it."

Sister Lindsay also believes the Shaker philosophy is inherent in the land and the mood which surrounds the village. Although early Shakers are buried in a communal plot on the grounds, Sister Lindsay says their fervor is still alive.

"What you feel is the presence of the wonderful people who have gone before," she says.

Money Question Gets Answer

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Is there a way of coexistence for money and the single girl?

"In spite of recent inflation raising her cost of living as much as 15 per cent in a year, facts indicate yes."

So emphasizes W. Scane Bowler, chairman of and chief executive officer of Pioneer Western Corp., a financial services organization.

"There are some career girls who are prone to money problems — who often have trouble surviving in the world of business."

"For these women, there is the now legendary race to the bank each payday. Take-home pay is often virtually spent before the check is even in hand."

What causes this flurry, hurry — and most of all, worry?

"Poor management," Bowler says. "A great deal of it could be alleviated with a little more stop, look and caution."

Budget, budget — and budget again. Get it down on paper — calculating in your head simply won't do.

First things come first. No. 1 on the hit — not miss — parade is rent. Never be in arrears more than two or three days. It can wreck your credit standing, to say nothing of your once warm relations with the building management.

Consider life insurance as a "cushion" for retirement years.

Scribble on buying things that are not really needed. Watch out for impulse buying. If an item strikes your fancy, let it simmer overnight before purchasing.

Plan — don't jump — into equity investments. Skim off the top of the salary check for deposit in a savings account.

Cut out luxuries which you may enjoy but which do nothing to improve your career, health or image.

Avoid overuse of credit cards.

How you handle checking and savings accounts, as well as credit cards, will establish your financial rating.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A group at a party the other evening were discussing marriage when Marilyn turned and looked at her husband lovingly (like she had just popped a Geritol tablet) and said, "Dan and I have a good marriage because we have meaningful conversations with one another."

I couldn't get it off my mind. On the way home I asked my husband, "Have we ever had a meaningful conversation?"

"I don't think so," he said. "That's hard to believe," I persisted. "In 26 years we've never had one?"

"Not that I can remember." We drove along in silence for about 20 minutes. Finally I said, "What is a meaningful conversation?"

"You're kidding! You actually don't know?"

"No. What is it?"

"Well," he said, "it's a conversation with meaning."

"Like the oil embargo and Paul Harvey?"

"Exactly."

"What about them?" I asked.

"What about who?"

"The oil embargo and Paul Harvey."

"It doesn't have to be a conversation about the oil embargo and Paul Harvey," he said. "It could be a discussion on anything in your daily schedule that is pertinent."

"I shaved my legs yesterday."

"That is not pertinent to anyone but you."

"Not really. I was using your razor."

"If you read the paper more," he said, "your conversations would be more stimulating."

"Okay, here's something meaningful I read just yesterday. In Naples — that's in Italy — police were searching for a woman who tried to cut off a man's nose with a pair of scissors while he was sleeping. What do you think of that?"

"That's not meaningful," he said.

A few minutes later I offered, "Suppose it was the American Embassy, and the woman was a spy, and the nose belonged to Henry Kissinger which held secret documents about an oil embargo between Saudi Arabia and Paul Harvey?"

He drove in silence. "How long have Dan and Marilyn been married?"

"Twelve years," I said. "They must pace their meaningful conversations."

Hope From Highway 264 Ass'n

A Highway 264 Association was organized in a meeting in Washington, N. C. last week, which gives hope that at long last there will be a serious effort to have U. S. 264 improved.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft was elected as chairman of the group which is dedicated to having U. S. 264 developed into a four-lane limited access road through this area.

Representatives from Greenville, Wilson, Farmville and Washington attended the meeting. Taft said the group plans to assemble economic and demographic information which will make the case for improving the busy highway which is Greenville, Farmville, Washington and Wilson's access to the state capital.

Taft said, "It's our feeling that Greenville is becoming the economic focal point in the East and that it's time for us to take the steps that are necessary to insure the development of adequate transportation into the Piedmont and to the ports on the coast."

Taft promised that some of the most prominent and influential business and community leaders along U. S. 264 will serve on the board of directors.

We couldn't be happier. This Highway 264 Association is something that has long been needed to look after the interests of the counties and communities along U. S. 264. Already work is well along on developing U. S. 70 from Raleigh to the coast and even now a study is underway about improving U. S. 64. If nothing is done by Greenville, Wilson, Washington and Farmville we will find ourselves left out again in the development of east-west highways.

There is really nothing in the state which compares with the development that is going on in Greenville at present. We can see that in a few years Greenville will be a major city. Yet, if nothing is done to begin planning improvements to U. S. 264, it could very easily be the turn of the century before anything is done about an adequate highway from Greenville to Raleigh.

The time to speak up is now and it will take an organization like to Highway 264 Association to make our feelings known. Every business and every individual in this area should support the association and, through it, efforts to improve U. S. 264.

BLOOD OUT OF A STONE!

They'll Want Funds

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service, facing its first Senate investigation because of two assassination attempts against President Ford, is expected to plead for more money to provide better protection.

The Senate subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and general government appropriations begins hearings today, hoping to find out what the Secret Service needs to do its job. Initial witnesses include Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, whose department is responsible for the agency, and Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight.

A subcommittee staff member said the agency, best known for its role in protecting the President and presidential candidates, probably will ask for additional funds to guard the 1976 candidates.

"They are going to ask for a supplemental request," he said, predicting that the request would be based on the advanced starting date for Secret Service protection of the candidates.

The protection had been planned to begin in January. Then, after two assassination attempts on Ford within 17 days, it was decided the protection should start Wednesday. The Treasury Department announced Monday that protection would be offered to six candidates.

The subcommittee also will explore whether more agents or special programs would assist the agency.

The investigation is the first such probe by a government body since the Warren Commission looked at the Secret Service while investigating the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Subcommittee staff members said that, although the panel handles Secret Service appropriations, the agency never has undergone strict congressional scrutiny.

The hearings had been planned after the first attempt on Ford's life in Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 5, but were moved up after the second assassination attempt Sept. 22 in San Francisco.

The Dun Sparrows Free

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Freddie Lee Pitts and Wilbert Lee went to prison in 1963, charged with two murders they insisted they did not commit. Ten days ago, after more than 12 years behind bars, most of them spent on Death Row, a pardon from Governor Reubin Askew set them free.

There is a story here of pride and shame, of dedication on the one hand and stubbornness on the other. It is a sad story, and only because happiness is relative, like other conditions of mankind, is it possible to say that the story had a happy ending.

The shame is a Southern shame, the stubbornness a Southern stubbornness. Southerners know these things. I know them. I am a Southerner, and I love the South, but the Pitts-Lee case in Florida, like the Silas Rogers case some years earlier in Virginia, is a matter not for regional pride, but for regional shame.

The Pitts-Lee story began on a hot summer night in Port St. Joe, a small papermill town on the Gulf Coast. At a Mo-Jo service station, an argument developed when two black women sought to use a restroom marked "White Ladies Only." Lee, who was then 28, was working as a wood pulper. Pitts, then 19, was a private in the Army. They are black. Perhaps that goes without saying.

Later that night the two service station attendants disappeared. Two days later their bodies were found 14 miles away. They had been shot in the head. They were white. Perhaps that, too, goes without saying.

Pitts and Lee had been among those at the station at the time of the argument. To make a very long story short (only to get at the happier aspects of the tale), they were arrested and charged with murder. They "confessed." A publicly appointed lawyer pled them guilty. An all-white jury at a mercy hearing brought in a verdict of death.

Except for the "confessions," there was no substantive evidence against them: no fingerprints, no gun, no ballistics tests, no stolen money recovered. The chief prosecution witness changed her story, time after time. But the 1963 verdict stood. It stood even though a white man, Curtis "Boo" Adams, who several months later was imprisoned for robbery, confessed in 1964 that he himself had killed the Mo-Jo victims. The Pitts-Lee prosecutors stubbornly refused to believe Adams' account.

Years passed. The Pitts-Lee case dragged through appellate courts. At last came a retrial in 1972. Again the case was heard by an all-white jury in Panhandle Florida (the prosecutor struck every black talesman from the panel), and again the verdict was death. The story might have ended there.

But opposed to the shame and the stubbornness were the pride and the dedication. Southerners can indeed take pride in what happened.

A courageous newspaper reporter, Gene Miller of the Miami Herald, never gave up. Miller is one of the country's top crime reporters. He early became convinced that Pitts and Lee were innocent. His newspaper, which offered a $15,000 reward to clear up the case, stood behind him all the way. Miller worked for nine years to keep the case alive.

He had help. Warren Holmes, a polygraph expert, labored with equal dedication. Phillip A. Hubbard and Irwin J. Block, attorneys, gave their time and their hearts. Hundreds of white Southerners, eager to see injustice remedied, contributed to a defense fund. Finally Governor Reubin Askew turned his attention to the case. Askew read the (Continued on page 5)

To the editor:

Recently a five-year-old child was admitted to my service at Martin General Hospital, Williamston, N.C. because of advanced liver failure. His body was cadaverous. His features were bird-like. Death appeared imminent. Acting out of frustration and futility I left the order: "Connect the patient immediately to the artificial liver machine!" Before I could leave the hospital the nurse in charge on the floor came running after me and inquired, "Where is the artificial liver machine?" I replied, "I don't know where it is?" A few hours later the patient died.

I often wonder: "Where was the artificial liver machine? Was it sacrificed for Vietnam? Was it on a space ship headed toward Mars? Did the Russians get it via detente?" I concluded: "The artificial liver machine's non-existence could be explained by a thousand different causes!"

Liver disease in America is bad and it is getting worse. One out of every 14 people will suffer some form of it this year. It has become the third leading medical killer of adult Americans, people over age 25. The number one medical killer is heart disease. Last year the American Heart Foundation spent 50 million dollars on research. The number two medical killer is cancer. Last year the American Cancer Society spent 48 million on research. The number three medical killer is liver disease. Last year the American Hepatic Foundation financed by a few private citizens, had only $13,133 to spend on all aspects of its research and educational programs. Obviously more priority needs to be given to liver disease research.

Questions Growth Of Service

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — You often hear the U.S. consumer economy being described as turning more toward the production of services, in which travel, rents, education and the like are offered in greater abundance than goods.

The assumption is widely accepted, but not by Fabian Linden, research chief at The Conference Board, a private research organization. He maintains that such a trend, while it was true in the 1950s, hasn't been spotted since.

He says that in recent years "the proportion of total consumer spending that goes for services has remained more or less constant."

He suggests that one reason for the persistence of the notion is that service prices have risen more sharply than those for goods, in part because productivity of goods rises faster than that of services.

For example, technological innovations, new materials, new work methods and other factors improve productivity in the goods sector. But how to you obtain similar improvements in the productivity of a barber or doctor?

Linden says the faster price increases for services helps lead to the illusion that production-consumption of services continues to grow at a rate faster than for goods. It may be precisely opposite.

Linden writes in the "Conference Board Record" that "one of the more striking changes in the pattern of consumer spending since the early sixties has been the decline in the importance of services."

He concedes that following World War II services claimed a growing share of the family budget, "rising from roughly 35 per cent to 40 per cent of total personal consumption expenditures in the course of the Fifties."

But, unless there has been a change in the past two years, this pattern no longer seems to prevail. It appears to have ended in the 1960-1973 period, and since 1967 actually may have turned the other way.

Where does that leave us? In 1973, consumer spending was 42 per cent per cent services, 58 per cent goods, and there probably has been little change since then. Based on 1973 figures — which showed total personal consumption spending at more than $800 billion and less than $350 billion of that for services — the board offers this percentage breakdown of service spending: Shelter, between 34 and 35 per cent; medical, about 15; household operations, 14; personal business, between 13 and 14; transportation, about 7; higher education, 2; foreign travel, less than 2; other, 12 per cent.

There is an asterisk accompanying that shelter percentage. Linden fears the rate is bound to rise. He explains: The condition of shelter seems to be deteriorating. Housing starts have been inadequate to accommodate growth and of offset obsolescence.

THIS AFTERNOON

Restoring Early Splendor

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—The Capitol of North Carolina is not being remodeled. It is being restored to its original splendor, the team of experts involved are quick to remind you.

It has been remodeled before: carpets covering original wide pine planks in the floor; layers of brick covering original soapstone fireplace linings; layer-on-layer of paint obscuring the original color; wooden platforms supporting the rows of desks in both the Senate and Commons chambers.

All is being torn back—carefully, painstakingly—to the original.

"We can put it back the way it was," says Architect William W. Dodge, III, of Raleigh. Dodge is obviously engaged in a labor of love as he spends long hours with dirty hands poking through the materials yielding to the workmen's tools.

Important Job
"Yes, this job is very important to me... personally, and to all North Carolinians. Even to the world."

"This is the last building of its kind in the world in this fine a state of preservation," Dodge said.

When the workmen complete their tasks—hopefully by next June, in time for the Bicentennial celebrations beginning in July—the Capitol will be "very similar to the original... but with all modern conveniences in the way of plumbing, wiring, heating, and so on," says Fred Senter, the contractor's superintendent on the job.

"We love renovation work, and this is one of the finest buildings in the state and the nation. It has been abused, but it will be a showplace," Senter said. He will supervise the Williams Building and Realty Co. crews.

Completed in 1840 after seven years of construction, the Capitol is made of heavy granite blocks quarried in Raleigh.

Inside walls are plaster over the thick granite, and the roof—including the large dome at center and two smaller ones over the legislative chambers—are supported by an elaborate system of massive timbers, hewn by hand and hoisted into place atop the three-story granite walls.

Behind Scenes
Behind a door still bearing the bronze marker "Journal Clerk-Private" is a tiny spiral staircase whirling upward nearly 60 feet to the attic. Clambering over huge beams held in place by wooden pegs, you can reach a vantage point inside the Capitol dome—97 feet above the stone floor of the rotunda. Completed in 1840 at a cost just over half a million dollars, the renovation work now is costing twice that—including earlier completion of a new copper roof and exterior cleaning and sealing of the granite blocks.

Until 1888, the Capitol housed all of state government, but when the General Assembly moved to new quarters in 1963, followed by last year's evacuation by Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., to make way for the renovation, only Secretary of State Thad Eure remains as a regular tenant. He will leave later and the building will become a showplace for the State Department of Archives and History.

Original mahogany furniture in the legislative chambers will be returned in refinished condition; the benches in the galleries will be cleaned of defacing initials and dates; ornamental ironwork, chandeliers, hardware and marble fireplaces will be gleaming in their renewed condition, and Tar Heels can welcome the visitors who come to see what will surely be one of the finest examples of Greek Revival architecture anywhere.

INSIDE REPORT

Rumsfeld Tactics Suspect

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The fact that a 34-year-old presidential aide named Dick Cheney is increasingly taking charge of day-to-day White House business is a fascinating manifestation of backstage intrigue with far-reaching implications.

The reason Cheney is handling so much of the White House routine today, say knowledgeable insiders, is that his boss and mentor, presidential chief of staff Donald Rumsfeld, is quietly deepening his involvement in the management of President Ford's election campaign. And that is widely viewed in upper reaches of the administration as a means to one end: putting Rumsfeld on the 1976 ticket as Vice President.

That a Ford-Rumsfeld ticket is talked about seriously in high places is a clear sign that Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's problems have by no means been solved. While Mr. Ford's praise for his Vice President grows ever warmer and less conditional, Rockefeller's stock among party leaders perceptibly declines.

All this creates a tableau worthy of the Byzantine palace. Mr. Ford, typically open and straight-forward, clearly wants to reward Rockefeller's loyal service the past year with a full term as Vice President. But constantly at the President's side advising him is Rumsfeld — secretive, clever and no friend of Nelson Rockefeller.

Strengthening Rumsfeld's hand in surreptitiously pushing to dump Rockefeller are two outside events: the Vice President's ill-advised Southern tour, which did not win over conservatives and sickened liberals, and the Harris poll showing him hurting the Ford ticket.

The result in agitation against the Vice President in Republican ranks which goes beyond the usual phalanx of right-wing Rockefeller-haters. State chairman Paul Haerle of California, who defied his state's Ronald Reagan zealots to announce his early support for Mr. Ford, is now publicly calling for a new running-mate. One prominent conservative leader who is counted on by Reagan forces has come to feel so strongly that Rockefeller must go that he is thinking about making this offer to the White House: dump Rocky and I'll back Ford.

If Rockefeller, 67, is dumped, it is highly unlikely that Reagan, 64, will replace him. High-level speculation about a younger successor boils down to the three B's — Sens. William Brock, 44, and Howard Baker, 49, both of Tennessee, and Ambassador George Bush, 51 — plus Rumsfeld, 43.

Baker is the best known but is widely distrusted both in the White House and party circles. With Brock up for reelection next year, his selection might turn another Senate seat over to the Democrats — or, if a Ford-Brock ticket lost, remove him from political life. As for Bush, he was one of Mr. Ford's final three choices for Vice President (along with Rockefeller and Rumsfeld). But now out of sight in Peking as envoy to China, he is also out of the political mind.

Enter Rumsfeld. While the Ford campaign is technically removed from the White House, Rumsfeld actually runs it. He talks to party leaders far more than is generally known (including wily old-pro F. Clifton White of New York, architect of Barry Goldwater's 1964 presidential nomination). What's more, anti-

Rockefeller conservatives get this private message from Rumsfeld: I can't do anything about it right now, but I agree that Rocky should go. "Taking the overall drift of the way Rummy operates," one presidential aide told us, "I can only conclude that he is running for Vice President."

But the cheering would be restrained if Rumsfeld succeeds. "He reminds me too much of Nixon," says one conservative Congressman. "You never know which way he's going." Similarly, Rumsfeld is not without ferocious enemies in the administration and the White House itself.

Some of those enemies think that if Rockefeller goes, he should be replaced by a non-Washington figure — preferably a young, moderate governor such as Gov. Daniel Evans, 49, of Washington or Gov. Robert Ray, 47 of Iowa. Conservatives would much prefer Gov. James Holshouser, 40, of North Carolina.

There is, however, a built-in liability for Rumsfeld or any other seeker of the 1976 vice-presidential nomination young enough to become Mr. Ford's heir-apparent in 1980: all other Republicans ambitious for the 1980 nomination would try to stop him to keep the post-Ford option wide open.

Strength For Today

THE PURPOSE OF LIVING
The most stabilizing belief a person can ever entertain is a deep-seated belief that life has its purpose—that it is headed in a definite direction and is going to reach its destination regardless of any works of man.

Human life is not just a physical phenomenon in a physical universe. It is an eternal heritage promised to everyone who lives by faith. We are on a pilgrimage, and what happens to us in the course of it—what we suffer, what we get, or what we lose—these are incidents of trifling importance in the larger scheme of things.

The end is celestial triumph. We have the promise that the consummation will be eternal life with God. Every day of fidelity and endurance takes us one step closer to a realm in which there will be no more weeping or crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away.

Eternity is not something we can take or reject. Eternity is the portion of every human heart.

Learning About Family Disease

BY STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — More than 100 descendants of Antone Joseph, a Portuguese immigrant whose genes carried a crippling and fatal disease, are finally learning about the mysterious family illness that has killed 48 of them.

Some members of the family learned for the first time last weekend that they are victims of "Joseph's Disease" when Dr. William Nyhan, professor of pediatrics at the University of California at San Diego, conducted a special clinic for them at Oakland Children's Hospital. The incurable neurological disorder occurs only in Joseph's descendants.

"A single gene carries it," Nyhan said. "Every time you have a child, there's a 50-50 chance of transmitting it and that, in genetic terms, is a huge risk, the biggest risk we deal in."

Nyhan and Dr. Robert Roseburg, a neurological expert from the University of Texas, counseled and tested family members in the clinic sponsored by the National Genetic Foundation of New York.

"Early on, people notice that they start getting wobbly and staggering and their speech becomes slurred," Nyhan explained. "As time goes on they become increasingly spastic."

Usually it's at least 10 years from the onset of the illness to the time of the patient's death.

Nyhan told parents who face the possibility of passing the disorder on to their offspring: "We had two brothers and one said, 'With this information, I'm simply not going to have any children.' The other said, 'I'm not going to limit my life in any way, I'm going to live my life regardless of this.'"

Family member Rosemary Silva, who traced the descendants and organized the clinic through the foundation, described it as "an emotional experience. For years we didn't know what kind of disease we had."

The mistaken belief that the disorder was linked to venereal disease had made many family members reluctant to discuss the illness, said Mrs. Silva, who is not a victim.

"Genetic disease has the kind of stigma that cancer once had, like it's someone's fault," said David Balis of the foundation. "But it's just hereditary. In this case, nature throws the dice and all four children in a family may have it or they may all be OK."

Harold Herber of San Jose, whose brother and two sisters have the disease, said family members have reacted in different ways to being told about the disease.

"People can get emotional over this because when you talk about marriage, the only way you can stop this in a family is not to have children," said Herber, who is 40 and believes he has escaped the disease. It is normally detected in a person's 20s or 30s.

"I wasn't really hoping for anything for myself," said Violet Weidon of Redding, who has known about her illness since 1964. "Basically I am quite peaceful with myself anyway."

Postal Service Will Give More Attention To Public Complaints

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did that package marked "fragile" arrive in your mailbox in a battered condition? Did this month's girlie magazine arrive dog-eared with the centerfold torn out?

Now you can tell it to the post office.

Beginning Wednesday, the Postal Service is launching a program that will invite disgruntled postal patrons to air their complaints.

Unhappy customers will be able to obtain a "consumer service card" from post offices and from letter carriers. The complaints written on the card will get quick attention, the Postal Service says.

The new system will "let us know, in a quick and simple way, about service problems," Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said in announcing the program.

Bailar's announcement came before the House voted Monday to revoke the Postal Service's financial independence as a result of dissatisfaction with the way the service operates.

The campaign "reflects our feeling that the idea of good service must mean more than the speed of delivery. It involves responsiveness and understanding, too," Bailar said. The Postal Service decided on the national program after trying out the consumer service card this summer in Arizona, Illinois, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

The number of complaints over the six-week test period in the four states was 9,890. In the same period last year there were 7,473 complaints taken to postal officials by residents of those states.

The consumer service card is a two-piece card, two postal cards with carbon paper between them. After filling out the top copy, the two cards can be separated.

One of the prepaid postal cards goes to the local postmaster. The other goes to the Postal Service's Office of Consumer Affairs in Washington.

After acting on the complaint, the local postmaster is to explain on the reverse side of his copy of the card how the problem was handled. Then, he is to mail his copy of the card to Washington.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the information from the other card is used to create an index of consumer satisfaction. The card allows not only for complaints, but also for information requests, suggestions and other comments.

"I believe that once the new program is firmly established, it will demonstrate both our willingness to solve people's problems and the over-all high quality of our service," Bailar said.

The pardon means no particular political profit to Askew. Hubbard and Block and Holmes never can be compensated for their work. Miller has written a book, "Invitation to a Lynching," that Doubleday will publish in October, but his royalties will just about cover his typewriter ribbons. Those who fought for Freddie Lee Pitts and Wilbert Lee fought for love, not money—and not for love of two obscure black men as such, but for love of justice and right conduct.

When I first wrote of the Pitts-Lee case, four years ago, I remarked that compared to the bright plumage of an Angela Davis or a Bobby Seale, poor Pitts and Lee were a pair of dun sparrows. They never became a cause celebre. Two sparrows may sell for a farthing, said Matthew, but God marks their fall. This time, mortal hands lifted a couple of sparrows, up, to let them live again.

Robbers Discarded Part Of Their Loot

GREENSBORO (AP)—Three bank robbers threw away part of their loot after a tear gas container exploded inside a money bag.

They threw the bag out of a stolen truck from which they had fled from the Summit Avenue branch of the Northwestern Bank Monday.

Red dye which made the money unspendable also was released.

It was the second robbery at the bank and the 40th bank robbery in the state this year. It also was the second bank robbery in three days in Greensboro. Three men robbed a branch of the First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. of more than $40,000 Friday.

The men abandoned the truck a block from the Northwestern bank and were seen getting into a car. A pistol and some $20 bills were found on the floor of the truck, police said.

The car, also stolen, was found abandoned in the parking lot of a Greensboro nursing home. Employees of the home conducted a room-to-room search, but no trace of the men was found.

The robbers had a shotgun and a pistol. One wore a white ski mask and another a hard hat.

The amount of the loot was not disclosed. Police said they were seeking for questioning three men who are wanted on bank robbery warrants in Winston-Salem.

Ticketed 9 Times In 10 Years; Now Too Late

RALEIGH (AP)—Records of the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles show that a Winston-Salem man charged with second-degree murder following a fatal auto collision had been ticketed nine times in the last 10 years. And his license had been suspended three times, most recently for an indefinite period in March.

He is Alfred Allison Wade, 28. He received only minor injuries when a car he was driving collided with another at a Hickory intersection Sunday, killing the other driver, Michael Fred Seagle of Hildrebran.

Trooper Michael Huffstetler said the Wade car had been stolen from Paramount Motors in Hickory. He said he was chasing it and had clocked it at 120 m.p.h. just before it collided with the Seagle car, which had pulled into the intersection after the light turned green.

Huffstetler said that Wade also has been charged with drunk driving, and will be given en a hearing Wednesday morning. He is in Catawba County Jail without privilege of bond.

The trooper said the Wade car cut the other car in half.

Records show that in the last 10 years Wade has received three tickets for driving on the wrong side of the road, twice causing accidents. He also received tickets for reckless driving, having no liability insurance, going 95 m.p.h. in a 65 m.p.h. zone, running a red light, driving with an improper license, and negligent driving.

Huffstetler said he wanted to stop Wade by getting in front of him and forcing him off the road, "but he was going so fast I couldn't get in front of him."

The trooper said he hasn't been able to sleep well since the accident. And he is not sure he ever will be able to stop someone going over 100 m.p.h. again.

"I think that'll be the last one I try. They don't go to jail because the judges just fine them and put them on probation and they're back on the street the next day. It's just not worth it (to try to stop them). I almost got killed in that accident. I'm not going to get in front of one of those drivers again."

Two Wrecks Yesterday

An estimated $775 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted when a car driven by Retha Perkins Little of 405 West 14th St. collided with a utility pole about 7 p.m. on Wade Street, 50 feet North of the Broad Street intersection.

Officers, who made no charges, estimated damage to the Little car at $400. No damage resulted to the pole.

Cars driven by Jesse Curtis Miller of 401 Avon Lane and Lester Brown Jr. of 207 Contentnea St. collided about 5:40 p.m. on Farmville Boulevard 20 feet West of the Tyson Street intersection.

Police estimated damage at $225 to the Miller car and $150 to the Brown vehicle. No charges were reported.

Moore, charged with attempting to assassinate Ford in San Francisco, will be called to testify Wednesday.

Mrs. Moore reportedly asked to be placed in police custody before Ford arrived in San Francisco, but the secret Service decided not to have her held.

The staff member said the panel also would want to find out why Mrs. Moore and Lynette A. Fromme, arrested in the Sacramento assassination attempt, were not on the list of persons the Secret Service considers threats to the President.

Other witnesses to be called include previous presidential candidates who will discuss the protection they received and offer ideas they might have for legislation to improve the Secret Service.

Franco Tactics Stir Up Deep Resentment And Opposition

By FRED COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Deep-seated opposition to Western Europe's last dictatorship, to political repression and to capital punishment are among the reasons for the uproar of condemnation of the execution of five Spanish terrorists last weekend.

Demonstrations and attacks on Spanish property erupted throughout Western Europe. Twelve governments called their ambassadors home temporarily to express their disapproval of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's refusal to commute the death sentences.

Pope Paul VI called the executions "murderous repression."

"Satanic murderers," said Swedish Premier Olof Palme of the Franco regime.

It was the biggest outburst of indignation in Europe since World War II.

Communists, Trotskyites,

Maoists and other militant leftists were prominent in the street affairs. But the extent of the reaction and particularly the reaction of anti-Communist governments and of the Pope made clear that this was much more than another Communist attack on conservatism.

Much of Western Europe is governed by Socialists or Socialist-led coalitions, and the Socialists have been the avowed enemies of Franco since he killed a Socialist democracy in the Spanish civil war. It is a policy supported by millions, many of whom do not forget that Hitler and Mussolini helped bring him to power.

Expectations of the end of the Franco regime were heightened by the revolution in Portugal last year, which left Spain with the only dictatorship in Western Europe. But the regime's response to an upsurge of terrorism this year made clear that harsher repression and not liberalization was its recipe for survival.

The executions also went against a prevailing sentiment abroad against capital punishment. Almost every West European country except Spain and Portugal has outlawed or does not carry out the death sentence.

The belief was also general that the military trials of the five terrorists — and of six others whose death sentences were commuted — were mockeries of justice.

Two Recipients Of Scholarship

For the first time two graduate students in history at East Carolina University have been named recipients of Brewster scholarships for the same year.

The 1975-76 Brewster Scholars are Stephen M. Russell of Kinston and Phillip Stanley Skeen of Winston-Salem.

Russell is a 1972 graduate of East Carolina with a major in history and a minor in geography. He entered military service after graduation and returned to the ECU graduate school for study in history this fall.

Skeen did his undergraduate work at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill majoring in history with honors. A Phi Beta Kappa student at UNC, Skeen began graduate study in history at ECU in 1974.

In addition to being named Brewster Scholars, both Russell and Skeen hold teaching fellowships at ECU.

The Brewster award, carrying a $1,000 stipend, is the highest recognition of scholarship in the ECU Department of History. Recipients are chosen by a committee on the basis of proven scholarship and potential.

A department official said both Russell and Skeen ranked "unusually high" in the top two per cent nationally on the basis of Graduate Record Examination (GRE) scores.

The Brewster Scholarships were established in 1972 by Dr. Lawrence F. Brewster, retired professor of History.

The department said that Russell and Skeen will be recognized at public ceremonies later in the year.

See Accord On Grain To Poland

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz says it appears likely that a long-term agreement to supply Poland with U.S. grain will be worked out when he visits Warsaw two months from now.

Butz and Polish Minister of Agriculture Kazimierz Barcikowski said Monday they had "agreed on the principles" of such a pact, but they declined comment on how much grain may be involved.

There has been speculation in the industry that Poland might seek about 2.5 million tons of U.S. grain annually over the next three years.

According to Agriculture Department export figures, Poland already has bought about 1.9 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn from this year's harvest, about double its purchases last season. Further sales to Poland were stopped Sept. 22 at the request of the State Department, despite protests by Butz.

The hold on Polish grain sales followed an earlier ban on sales to the Soviet Union, an embargo President Ford said would continue until mid-October.

By then, Agriculture officials hope the Soviets will have agreed to a long-term schedule for purchasing grain.

Butz and Barcikowski said in a joint statement after a meeting Monday that "the actual quantities to be covered" by the agreement will be worked out when Butz visits Poland Nov. 25-28.

Meeting briefly with reporters, Butz said Poland has been a good customer of American farmers and that the forthcoming agreement is "completely consistent" with U.S. intentions for meeting the grain needs of traditional customers.

Asked if similar international agreements with other countries might be developed, one senior USDA official said later that he knew of no others and that "we're not really soliciting any."

Collectively, Poland, East Germany and Romania have bought about 4.7 million metric tons of U.S. grain this year. Normally, they rely heavily on the Soviet Union for grain, but those supplies were dried up by shortfalls in the Soviet harvest. Soviet purchases from the United States totaled 9.8 million metric tons before sales were halted in July.

Arrest Man In 1972 Incident

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Douglas MacArthur Langley of Route 1, Washington on armed robbery charges in connection with a 1972 incident at 603 Gooden Place here.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Langley was taken into custody at the Pitt County Court House where he was scheduled to appear in District Court in a traffic law violation case.

Cannon said Langley allegedly took $180 from James Walter Lloyd of 602 Church St. at the Gooden Place residence on September 18, 1972.

Bond for Langley was set at $5,000 pending hearing of the case.

They'll Handle Health Money

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A $14 million national program aimed at improving rural health programs will be administered by the medical school at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

School officials said the five-year program was funded by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation of Princeton, N.J. It has a goal of setting up 25 model community medical practices in small towns throughout the nation. UNC was awarded a grant of $2 million to run the project to be headed by Dr. Donald L. Madison.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — While the remnants of the Symbionese Liberation Army enlarged their arsenal and gathered the makings of a bomb factory, they collected thick files of information on business and government activities and notes on corporate officials.

Weapons, explosives and cryptically labeled file folders were listed in a 128-page inventory of items discovered at two apartments — one that had been occupied by Patricia Hearst and Wendy Yoshimura and the other by SLA members

William and Emily Harris.

The FBI, which catalogued the items but declined to elaborate on many of them, made the inventory public Monday.

Miss Hearst, the Harrises and Miss Yoshimura were arrested on Sept. 18. Miss Yoshimura charged with a bombing and the other three accused of a variety of charges including bank robbery and kidnapping.

The two apartments yielded 17 guns ranging from .38-caliber revolvers to sawed-off shotguns and thousands of rounds of ammunition. In the Harris apartment, agents found several pipe bombs and materials for making more explosives.

In a file folder marked "Money," agents found a one-page diagram that apparently showed the interior of a bank teller's window, with the notations "window," and "till, coins, cash drawer."

Separate pages mentioned "Wells Fargo La Sierra" and "B of A Marysville."

A spokesman for the Bank of America said the Marysville branch has not been robbed in the past 18 months, and a Wells Fargo spokesman said there is no Wells Fargo branch in La Sierra.

Miss Hearst is charged with participating in the April 15, 1975, robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch in San Francisco.

In Sacramento on Monday, Chief Deputy Dist. Atty. Geoffrey Burroughs said authorities there are investigating robberies at the Crocker Bank in suburban Carmichael on April 21, 1975, and the Guild Savings and Loan Co.'s Sacramento of-rice on Feb. 25, 1975, for possible SLA connections.

The four robbers who shot and killed a woman patron during the Carmichael robbery wore ski masks.

The FBI inventory of the Harris apartment included a navy blue ski mask.

In both the Hearst and Harris apartments, agents found more than a dozen wigs, large quantities of makeup and cosmetics and a wide variety of sunglasses and clothing.

Phony identification documents, including college student ID cards and California drivers' licenses in the names of deceased persons, were also found in both apartments, along with more than 100 books ranging from Marx and Lenin to Herbert Marcuse and Chairman Mao.

Hundreds of clippings from the New York Times, Wall Street Journal, San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Chronicle, Oakland Tribune and other publications were also found

Candidates Face Public

Candidates' for mayor and city council of Greenville will express their views at a public forum to begin at 8 p.m. Thursday. The forum, sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters (LWV), will be held at the Elm Street Recreation Center.

According to Margaret Wirth, Voters Service Chairperson of the local LWV, all candidates for mayor and city council, including the two write-in candidates, have accepted an invitation to participate in the forum. Each candidate will have four minutes in which to state his or her views and three minutes immediately thereafter to answer questions from the audience. Rhea Resnik, President of the local LWV, will be the moderator.

Lillian Woo Lists Goals

RALEIGH (AP)—Promising standardized accounting procedures and performance audits of state agencies, consumer advocate Lillian Woo jumped into the race for auditor Monday.

Mrs. Woo, 37, said performance audits are needed to determine whether programs ordered by the General Assembly are doing what they were intended to do. The audits would allow her "to provide an objective and independent overview of state government operations," she said.

She will face incumbent Henry L. Bridges, 68, in the Democratic primary. Bridges announced earlier he would seek another term in the office he has held since 1947.

"I have decided to seek this office not for what it has been, but for what it could be," Mrs. Woo said in a news conference.

Mrs. Woo is a former member of the state Milk Commission and for several months last year was a special assistant to Atty. Gen. James Carson, an appointee of Gov. Jim Holshouser who was defeated last year by Rufus Edmisten.

An economist, Mrs. Woo has degrees from Vassar College and Columbia University. She is the founder and director of the Consumers Council of North Carolina.

"I have been continuously dedicated to the cause of seeing that the consumers of this state get their money's worth. Now I seek to be a taxpayer advocate," she said. Money management in North Carolina government has been slack she said, promising to clamp down.

One of the functions she said would be to advise the legislative budget committees on how well funds are being spent.

Malpractice Insurance: Everyone's Problem

Protection For 6 Contenders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless they specifically reject it, six contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination will be provided Secret Service protection beginning Wednesday.

The Treasury Department, which oversees the Secret Service, informed the six candidates Monday after the Federal Election Commission reported they had raised at least $100,000 each in campaign funds.

Asst. Treasury Secretary David Macdonald said the protection will be automatically provided each of the six unless some they individually reject the offer. One candidate accepted immediately, another turned it down and the other four indicated they were thinking it over.

The six were: Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz.; Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.; Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex.; former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford; former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter; and Alabama Gov.

George C. Wallace.

Wallace accepted the offer, saying the Secret Service was "a very professional organization" and that "if it were not for them, I probably would never have made it to Laurel, Md." where an attempt was made on his life during the 1972 campaign.

Sanford, rejecting the offer, said he considered such protection for him "unnecessary and an undue burden on the taxpayers."

The $100,000 figure, which is calculated by the Federal Election Commission, also qualifies the candidate for matching federal funds.

A candidate who accepts the offer of protection will be assigned at least two agents to travel with him and his immediate family.

Other Democratic candidates who have not raised the required funds include Sargent Shriver, former Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma and Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania.

Protection for the presidential hopefuls originally was scheduled to begin Jan. 1 but the date was moved up to Oct. 1 by a congressional advisory board after two attempts were made on the life of President Ford.

RALEIGH (AP)—A medical malpractice insurance crisis is everyone's problem.

When doctors and hospitals cannot get insurance, they cannot perform their services without the threat of losing virtually everything they own.

As news stories in recent years illustrate, suits charging doctors and hospitals with mistakes or faulty services have become more common. Also, settlements in such suits are sometimes costly.

That's why doctors need malpractice insurance. And, that's why they don't want to practice without it.

Dr. James Davis of Durham, president of the North Carolina Medical Society, said, "Doctors without it won't practice and patients won't get medical care. It's the people's problem."

There are about 5,500 physicians in North Carolina and 250 of them stand to lose their malpractice coverage in October unless something is done to avert the problem.

St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., which covers 97 per cent of the state's doctors is likely to win a temporary court order exempting it from a law requiring insurance companies to offer malpractice insurance. Already, the courts have temporarily exempted 240 of the state's 350 companies. The remaining companies are expected to also seek temporary exemption.

The exemptions are valid until the courts decide whether the law is constitutional, and that will take months.

If nothing else will work, the legislature could be called into session and, as a last resort, the state could provide malpractice insurance.

To illustrate the effect of the problem, assume nothing is done immediately.

Hospitals would virtually be forced to cut back services. John Marston, vice president of the North Carolina Hospital Association, said, "The hospitals that have had to face this situation in Elizabeth City and Greenville have determined to reduce services to emergency services only." Some hospitals might take a chance and continue normal operations, though, he said.

Malpractice policies for 54 North Carolina hospitals expire Wednesday.

That means people in need of surgery or other care might be rejected unless it is virtually a matter of life or death.

Only 250 doctors would lose insurance in October, but in coming months additional doctors would join the ranks of the uninsured. Spring months would be crucial since that's when a great many of the physicians' policies are up for renewal.

Davis said patients of doctors who stopped practicing because they can't get insurance would have to seek other doctors. That would eventually result in treatment of only emergency cases because those doctors whose policies hadn't yet expired would be swamped with work.

"Delivery of health care is going to drop off significantly," Davis said.

Barn Blast Killed Three

KINSTON, N.C. (AP)—Three farm workers were killed Monday when a tobacco drying barn exploded while they were removing grapes from an adjoining walk-in cooler.

Sheriff Leo Harper of Lenoir County said about 300,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco was destroyed. Tobacco is selling for about $1 a pound.

The sheriff said that a gas furnace was being used to dry the tobacco, and a gas line was burning after the blast.

The explosion occurred on the farm of Tull Hill six miles north of Kinston. The men were employees of the R.E. Newborn Farm in the same neighborhood.

They were identified as Elbert Bryant, 47, of Kinston; Donald Harris, 22, of Rt. 2, Grifton; and Nelson Moye, 18, of Rt. 1, Kinston.

The grape cooler adjoined the tobacco warehouse and a potato storage house, which were destroyed by a two-hour fire which followed the blast.

Farmville Leaf Market Prices Steady Monday

FARMVILLE—Louis Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, reported that grades for grade, prices were steady on the market Monday with quality leaf grades, smoking leaf and a few piles of cutters accounting for the top quotes.

Williams noted that the demand for cutters yesterday was stronger than at one time this season and smoking leaf and leaf grades accounted for most of the sales.

More non descript grades on the floors yesterday than on any Monday in several weeks, the supervisor added. The volume of damage tobacco was unusually heavy for a Monday sale, he said.

Stabilization receipts accounted for 2.29 per cent of sales. The market sold 757,653

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—The market was steady on eggs in North Carolina Monday. Supplies were light to moderate and demand good. The weighted average price for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs delivered in cartons to nearby retail outlets: grade A large whites 66.44, medium whites 58.43, small whites 45.17.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—The North Carolina Hog Market is steady to .50 lower today. Wilson, 62-63; High Falls, 61.25-62.25; Rocky Mount 62.50-63; Kinston, 62.50-63.50; Salisbury, 61; Tarboro and Bethel 61.50-62.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—The trend on the North Carolina hen market is stronger today. Supplies are light, demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm, too few; FOB plants, 27.5 cents.

Trading on the North Carolina FOB dock broker market is active. The market is steady with supplies fully adequate and demand generally good. The North Carolina dock weighted average price for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at docks this week is 47.20 cents per pound. Estimated slaughter today is 1,128,000.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—Grain prices were weaker in the state Monday. No. 2 yellow shelled corn was 2.78-2.90, mostly 2.83 in the East, and 2.75-3.00 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 5.49-5.59; No. 2 red winter wheat 3.38-3.50; No. 2 red oats 1.35-1.50.

NEW YORK (AP)—Concern over the federal deficit, the future of the economic recovery and fresh New York City troubles sent stock prices tumbling for the second straight session today.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones industrial average was off 5.17 to 800.06. But declines outdistanced advances by more than a 3 to 1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

As the market opened, the government reported its index of leading economic indicators, a widely followed signal of future economic performance, was unchanged in August after five straight gains.

Concern also lingered about predictions by Treasury Secretary William Simon that the federal deficit might hit $90 billion this year. He said today the impact of Treasury borrowing must be considered in any economic forecast.

Meanwhile, news that public pension plans will not be forced to purchase New York City or New York State securities led to sharp price drops on the bond market and further clouded New York City's financial future.

Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing led Big Board actives, off 2 1/4 to 51 1/2.

IBM fell 3/4 to 190. The company announced price increases on its data processing products and services.

The NYSE's composite stock index declined 0.35 to 44.77, while the American Exchange's market value index dropped 0.40 to 83.64.

Ford Repeats: Congress Is To Blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — Price controls on domestic oil are officially in effect again, but President Ford says fuel costs will increase anyway and that only Congress is to blame.

Ford signed a compromise bill Monday, extending price controls on most domestic oil until Nov. 15. But he warned that the extension would not affect the newly increased prices of imported oil produced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

"When the price of gasoline goes up at the service station, I want the American people to know exactly where the blame lies," Ford said. "Until Congress acts, there is nothing this country can do about arbitrary OPEC price hikes — and there may be still another fuel price increase next June."

The President accepted the price-control extension bill as a temporary compromise with Congress, but he said the measure "does nothing to reverse our growing oil dependence" on OPEC countries.

He said Congress must use the time of the extension to pass some sort of national energy measure agreeable to the White House.

OPEC countries, meeting in Vienna, agreed Saturday to hike oil prices by 10 per cent.

Ford said the increase "provides beyond any further argument the urgent need for the United States to reduce its growing dependence on imported fuel at prices arbitrarily set by others."

Ford has proposed speedy removal of price controls on domestic oil to push prices up, forcing Americans to adopt conservation methods while supplying oil companies with revenue to seek new energy sources.

Congress has sought a longer period for phasing out controls, along with legislated stabilization or rollbacks of prices.

The bill signed Monday requires that some 60 per cent of domestic oil have a maximum price of $5.25 per barrel, compared with world market prices of about $12.

President Ford flies to the Midwest late today on an overnight trip tailored to limit his exposure to the general public and ease the job of protecting him.

Ford's journey to Chicago and Omaha will be his first outside Washington since Sept. 22 when a woman in San Francisco fired a shot in his direction, the second apparent assassination attempt in 17 days.

All of Ford's appearances in Illinois and Nebraska will be before groups whose members can be screened in advance by Secret Service bodyguards.

Ford's schedule does not call for him to mingle with crowds or stand in an open car as he often has done in other cities.

Several motorcades were planned, but it was understood he would ride in closed, armor-protected cars and that White House advance agents were avoiding traditional efforts to drum up street crowds along his routes.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said last week that there would be adjustments in security procedures and that Ford's tentative plans for heavy travel in October were being reviewed.

The President had planned for some time to make the trip to Chicago and Omaha, but there were indications that security considerations prompted him to scale down the number of appearances in both cities.

For example, the White House had made tentative preparations for the President to appear Wednesday at a student news conference on the Evansville, Ind., campus of Northwestern University north of Chicago.

Instead, Ford will meet in his suburban hotel suite with a group of about 30 mayors from the Chicago suburbs and smaller communities in Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Rather than stay at a hotel in downtown Chicago, as he has in the past, Ford will spend Tuesday night in suburban Skokie. It was widely believed that security considerations prompted this departure from past practice.

Nessen said the Republican National Committee would pay the cost of the President's trip to and from Chicago because of his appearance there Tuesday night at two GOP events, a $125-a-plate fund-raising dinner for about 1,000 guests at the Conrad Hilton Hotel and a reception there afterwards for about 75 party contributors.

Federal funds will be used to finance the Omaha leg of the President's journey. He will fly there Wednesday for a local television interview, then appear at a White House-sponsored conference on domestic policy drawing participants from Nebraska and Iowa.

A quantity of drugs were stolen from the Pitt Memorial Hospital pharmacy last night. Police Chief Glenn Cannon said the theft was discovered about 11:45 p.m.

Entrance to the pharmacy, he said, was apparently gained through a window, while entry to the narcotics room as accomplished apparently by slipping the lock on the door with a knife.

Cannon said an inventory is being taken to determine the exact amount of drugs missing.

LANDIS, N.C. (AP)—The new garbage truck of this Rowan County textile town of 2,300 population is almost too pretty to use for garbage.

It's painted red, white and blue, and has stars and a stripe. There's a bicentennial design on the sides. And an American flag adorns either side of the front bumper.

Mayor Gene Beaver says, "We needed a new garbage truck. So we saw it as an opportunity to paint this one as our contribution to the bicentennial."

Unity Plea By Jenkins

KENANSVILLE — "Ours must be a government with responsibilities and limitations," Dr. Leo W. Jenkins said Monday night.

The East Carolina University chancellor, addressing the Duplin County Young Democrats Club, said it is "often forgotten" that Americans have an "inherent right" to bring grievances to their legislature as individuals and as groups.

"All boards, agencies and commissioners are subordinate to the citizen through the legislature," Jenkins said. He said a new four-year medical school at ECU was "achieved through people going to their legislators."

"Remember, throughout history, apathy of the good made possible tyranny of the bad."

Jenkins, describing himself as having worked for the Democratic party for more than 40 years, said it is "gratifying to see young people" turning to the Democratic party.

UNC Officials To Washington

CHAPEL HILL (AP)—President William C. Friday of the University of North Carolina and other UNC officials will go to Washington Thursday for a discussion of the university's desegregation efforts with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW has threatened to begin administrative action to cut off the $80 to $100 million in federal aid the university system receives each year as a result of what it regards as foot-dragging in implementing its HEW-approved desegregation plan.

HEW's main criticism has been the action of the UNC Board of Governors in deciding to place a proposed veterinary school at predominantly-white North Carolina State University rather than predominantly black North Carolina A and T University.

Again Tries Sway Ford

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., tried again Monday to persuade President Ford to sign a tobacco price support increase bill. The President, who has until Wednesday to veto the measure or let it become law without his signature, did not indicate his decision.

Last week, Thurmond and a delegation of tobacco-state congressmen met with Ford to urge that the measure become law.

The bill, which would raise federal price supports for flue-cured leaf by about 10 per cent, has been opposed by Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

Some of the points Thurmond said he expressed to the President include:

The measure would relieve about 600,000 tobacco farmers of a squeeze between costs and prices.

It would correct inequities in the current price-support formula, which is based on calendar years. The bill would change the base to marketing years.

It wouldn't cost the government money in that additional funds would be needed only for loans to farmers.

Exports would not be adversely affected.

—And signing it now would benefit tobacco-producing areas in the future.

Four Named To ECU Sports Hall

East Carolina University will induct four new members into the Pirate Sports Hall of Fame here October 18. The ceremony will highlight half-time activities of the Pirate homecoming game against Western Carolina University.

Dave Alexander, Maurice Everett, Bill Holland and Ken Midyette will join the 10 initial inductees who were selected in 1974, the Hall of Fame Selection Committee has announced.

To qualify for nomination as a player, a five-year time span from the time the person's eligibility has expired must have passed. The same qualification holds true, in terms of service, for an administrator.

Each performer selected by the committee was adjudged on his overall outstanding performance and outstanding contributions to the ECU program while an active participant.

Alexander was one of East Carolina's greatest football players. In 1964 and 1965 he was honored as the team's leading rusher, leading scorer, and most outstanding player. He led ECU to bowl victories in 1963, 1964, and 1965. His senior year he was an All-Southern Conference and Little All-American selection. He is now living in Gaithersburg, Md., where he is a community and business leader.

Everette was an outstanding tennis player who came to East Carolina on a basketball scholarship. His basketball career was short lived as he became the North State Conference Singles Tennis champion for three straight years (1955-58). He is currently a tennis pro in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Holland was an outstanding baseball and football player at ECU from 1935 to 1938. In 1939, he signed a professional baseball contract with the Washington Senators. He is currently the vice-president and manager of a hardware firm in Goldsboro, N.C.

Midyette was one of ECU's most outstanding divers. He was the NAIA nation diving champion in 1958 and 1959. He was an All-American diver in 1957, in addition to the following two years. He is now manager of a contractors service and rental corporation in Raleigh, N.C.

Pirate Women Open Volleyball

By CONNIE HUGHES
Special to the Reflector

Tonight the Lady Pirate volleyball team faces a season opener with defending state champs UNC-Greensboro in Minges Coliseum.

The ECU team enters this year's play with a past of inexperienced players and mediocrity and a future of fresh, experienced talent with nowhere to go but up.

In the past the team has relied on players without prep experience. The first volleyball they had played was college level. Now, with an increasing interest in women's volleyball in the high schools, college level skill and competition has improved. The Lady Pirates feel the difference.

"We have never had one of the strongest teams in competition," said Coach Catherine Bolton. "But we have enough talent to do better this time around. We're getting more freshmen who can play the game."

Bolton explained that seven of the 14 volleyball team members hail from the Raleigh-Durham area which has sponsored the sport in the high schools. Four of these seven women are freshmen.

"This interest in volleyball is reflected in the league formed for girls by the Pitt County schools. Soon volleyball will improve," said Bolton.

Bolton described the team's progress. "We are beginning to gel. We've set our sites on the state championship, but there will have to be much improvement before that happens," she said.

Sure to start on Tuesday night will be Marie Chamblee and Charlotte Layton. Chamblee is a prime setter, moving the ball to key Pirate spikers. Layton, a senior, has had much college experience and has shown good form in practice.

Sophomore spiker Debbie Freeman is bound to capitalize on Chamblee's set-ups against Greensboro. Freeman is a strong player with good skills.

One freshman may break into the line-up, according to Coach Bolton. "Gayle Kerbaugh, a Raleigh freshman, has looked good in practice and may show for the Pirates."

"At any rate," said Bolton, "this match will give some indication of the improvements we've already made and will show what improvements we must make to achieve our goal."

The match is slated for 6 p.m. in Minges Coliseum tonight. A J.V. match will follow.

Players Charge Shortchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Professional athletes are short-changed by the traditional channels of collective bargaining because their careers are so short, according to the head of the National Football League Players Association.

The chairman of the House labor-management subcommittee said legislation to expedite cases brought by athletes before the National Labor Relations Board might be in order because of the current NFL labor controversy.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., the panel chairman, said the subcommittee would hear Thursday's testimony by representatives of the NFL Management Council before making recommendations.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, told the subcommittee Monday an increasing number of players believe collective bargaining does not work "because of the enormous power of the league owners as opposed to players whose careers span but 4½ years and who have no protection if they are discriminated against because of their union activities."

Sooners Remain Atop Poll By Slim Margin

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After telling it like it is, Barry Switzer is telling it like it will be.

"I'm still happy to remain No. 1 after our poor performance against Miami last Friday night," says the Oklahoma football coach. "But what I'm doing right now will take care of the polls."

Switzer, whose team reclaimed the No. 1 position in the AP's weekly poll Monday despite an unimpressive 20-17 victory over the Hurricanes, is going into an intensive huddle with his coaches for the upcoming match with Colorado.

He was honest enough to suggest after last Friday night's game with Miami that the "Boomer Sooners" didn't make enough noise to be the nation's top team. But he also honestly believes that Oklahoma's class will tell by the end of the college football year.

"Most teams are up and down during a season, but if you're a good enough football team the polls will take care of themselves," says the realistic Switzer. "We play tougher teams than a lot of those other guys."

While Switzer was being honest over the weekend, Coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State was being immodest. He said that his Buckeyes deserved to be No. 1 because of its 25-point beating of North Carolina Saturday.

Ohio State held No. 2 this week, same as last. "He should think they're the Number One team, he's the coach at Ohio State," said Switzer, commenting on Hayes' brashness.

But Switzer wasn't entirely worried about position this week—just Colorado.

"I'm not really concerned about the polls," he said. "I wasn't last year and I'm not this year. Last year we were No. 1 the first week and the second week we weren't. But at the end of the year we were there. Ask me again after it's all over."

Despite that close escape at Miami, Oklahoma's defending national champions received 30 first-place votes and 1,066 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Ohio State, 32-7 conquerers of North Carolina Saturday, collected 26 votes for first place and 1,065 points.

Last week, Oklahoma received 56 first-place ballots to three for Ohio State and a point spread of 1,192 to 1,031.

Southern California remained in third place, collecting one vote for first place and 878 points following a 19-6 triumph over Purdue. Nebraska, the nation's No. 4 team last week, retained that position after a 56-14 rout of Texas Christian. Missouri remained in the No. 5 spot following a 27-21 triumph over Wisconsin.

The remainder of the Top Ten was shaken up. Texas A&M moved from No. 8 to No. 6, passing both Texas and Notre Dame, after whipping Illinois 43-13. Texas fell one place despite beating Texas Tech 42-18 and Notre Dame slipped from seventh to eighth although the Fighting Irish crushed Northwestern 31-7.

Alabama advanced from No. 11 to No. 9 by beating Vanderbilt 40-7 and Penn State jumped from 12th to 10th after a 30-10 whipping of Iowa.

Casey Stengel Dead Of Cancer At Age 85

GLENDAL, Calif. (AP) — The "Old Perfesser" is dead.

Casey Stengel, one of baseball's most colorful and adored figures, succumbed to cancer Monday night at the age of 85—leaving a golden legacy for fans of all ages.

"It's just impossible to sum up what he's been to baseball," said a close friend, California Angel General Manager Harry Dalton, after learning of Stengel's death at Glendale Memorial Hospital.

"He popularized our game with so many people,"

Stengel died at 10:58 p.m., PDT—only a few hours after a close friend had disclosed that the onetime manager had a rapidly spreading malignancy in the lymph glands. Stengel had been admitted to the hospital on Sept. 14 for tests.

The funeral arrangements are incomplete. He is survived by his widow, Edna, whom he married in 1924. They had no children.

Stengel was a breathing legend. Perhaps more than any other figure in the history of the game, he earned the title of baseball's goodwill ambassador.

Casey raced into the Hall of Fame with his baseball exploits but it was only a small part of his exquisite contribution to the game he loved.

There are more diamond-like Stengel stories around than you can shake a bat at and countless witticisms from the language of "Stengelese" which he created with his gloriously fertile imagination.

Stengel never would say in a few words what he could say in a couple of hundred and anytime the grand old man of baseball held court, he always had his audience spellbound—and usually mystified—by his fractured syntax.

Stengel was always great in the clutch, Hall of Fame pitcher Warren Spahn once remembered.

"There's no doubt in my mind who is the most amazing Met of them all," said the great pitcher when he played for Stengel on the old, uproarious New York Mets. "I can understand why he's become an image. Why he's so beloved. Why he's the greatest ambassador the game has ever known."

"That man is a marvel. He's unbelievable. I don't care how old he is. He's got all those young fellows beat by a mile. I've never seen a more understanding person. Or a more dedicated baseball man. Sure, he's a comedian. Sure he double talks. But he's plenty deep. And nobody knows more about this game. If you listen to him carefully and concentrate on what he's telling you, you can learn plenty. A fellow can get an education just being around him."

The sometimes-clownish Stengel leaped across baseball history, spanning the ancient and modern ages with equal ease. And throughout the colorful career that covered 56 years, the hawk-nosed figure produced an abundance of rich stories.

Once when he was managing Brooklyn he took off his hat on the field—and a swallow flew out of his hair.

Another time, at Boston, when his Braves, for a change, were ahead, it began to rain. Casey pointed toward the darkening sky and demanded the game be called. He was ignored until he pulled a flashlight from a pocket and began signalling his bullpen with it. He was ejected.

Sometimes, to demonstrate his shock at an umpire's decision, Stengel would keel over in a mock faint. Once when he used this ploy, umpire Beans Reardon did the same thing. "When I peeked outta one eye and saw Reardon lying on the ground, too, I knew I was licked," said Casey. "So I got up and walked away."

In 1947 Stengel, then 57, was steered to the subject of umpires in an interview. Soon Casey was pounding his desk and shouting, "Those umpires! They take years off a guy's life, believe me. I don't know what keeps me going, honest I don't. They'll be the death of me yet."

In tribute to his 56 years in baseball, Stengel won a niche with the game's other immortals in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

He managed the New York Yankees to stunning triumphs and piloted the expansion Mets in the most poignant part of their young history.

Stengel, enshrined in the Hall of Fame when he was 76, managed 37 years, including 25 in the major leagues.

Prior to his years of glory with the Yankees, Stengel had managed the old Brooklyn Dodgers and the old Boston Braves.

Charles Dillon Stengel resigned as the Mets' field boss in 1965 after breaking his hip in a fall. His career managerial mark showed 1,926 victories and 1,867 defeats for a winning percentage of .508. He produced 10 American League pennant-winners and seven World Series titles with the Yankees.

Contest Winners

In one of the tightest battles in the history of the Daily Reflector Football Contests, Mike Gillin came away with the first place prize this week.

Gillin, of Rt. 8, Box 180, Greenville, came up with 28 correct answers in the weekly contest, but won on his point total guess. Gillin correctly picked 70 points as the highest total score in any one of the 32 games listed. That came in San Jose State's upset win over Stanford, 36-34.

Second, place went to Donald Wike of P. O. Box 1554, Greenville, also with 28 right. He picked 68 points as his total guess to take second place.

Twelve other people also had 28 games right, making it a stiff contest right down to the wire. The tie game between Kentucky and Maryland was counted wrong since it is possible to pick a tie.

This week's contest appears on the following pages.

'Showdown' Time In Manila For Ali, Joe

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
MANILA (AP) — Muhammad Ali fired off his final taunts and Joe Frazier let the smoke burn inside himself Monday in the smoldering hours before their 15-round rubber battle for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world.

"The showdown has come," bellowed an emotionally charged Ali, the self-proclaimed instrument of Allah, turning the occasion into a burlesque road show. "Come early. Joe Frazier may sit down before you do.

"This fight will be the complete annihilation of Joe Frazier. It may end before the first round."

Frazier only gritted his teeth and punched the bag a little harder. From the ring, where he held his final workout, he told some 5,000 Filipinos:

"On Wednesday, you will have a new champion."

The defending champion, Ali, was in full voice and high spirits while the one-time titleholder and challenger, Frazier, maintained a tremendous calm and refused any brash predictions of an early knockout.

"The fight will go one to 15 rounds," he said hoarsely. "I will be there. I ain't going nowhere."

The bout is scheduled Wednesday at 10:45 a.m., local time (Tuesday 10:45 p.m., EDT, in the United States) in the 25,567-seat indoor coliseum. If every seat is taken as promoters predict, ranging from $30 for ringside to $4 in the gallery, the gate would be more than $1.8 million, an indoor record.

Additionally, closed circuit TV is being beamed to 68 countries, including the Soviet Union, and with 380 locations in the United States alone, poses potential revenues of $22 million to $30 million.

"Seven hundred million people may watch this fight," said Don King, the flamboyant, imaginative one-time Ohio numbers king and former convict who has emerged as boxing's modern P.T. Barnum.

"No fight in the past has been witnessed by so many people paying such a price."

Ali is guaranteed $4.5 million against 43 per cent of the gross, Frazier $2 million against 22 per cent. If the extravaganza meets King's expectations, Ali can take home as much as $9 million and Frazier $5 million.

Ali, is the 2-1 favorite based on his eighth-round knockout of big George Foreman to regain the title in Zaire last Oct. 30 and subsequent victories in the past year over Chuck Wepner, Ron Lyle and Joe Bugner.

Frazier, the Philadelphia slaughterhouse butcher who won the title in 1970 and lost it in Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 22, 1972, when Foreman crushed him in two rounds, has had only two fights since losing a 12-round non-title decision to Ali Jan. 28, 1974. He stopped Jerry Quarry in five and Jimmy Ellis in nine.

One of the mysteries of the fight is how much speed and power the challenger has lost since his two bruising battles with Ali, the first won in a 15-round decision, the second lost in 12.

Tigerettes Claim Win

WILLIAMSTON—Williamston High School's girls' tennis team romped to a 9-0 victory over Plymouth High School yesterday as the Tigerettes open Northeastern Conference play.

Williamston had little trouble in the match, winning each of the singles handily. The most games lost in any one match was three in the singles. Only one doubles match was extended, won by Williamston, 9-7.

The victory raised the Williamston record to 2-1 overall and 1-0 in league play. The Tigerettes play host to Edenton tomorrow.

Summary:
Nancy Sharp (W) defeated Vicky Alexander, 6-0, 6-1.
Sissy Taylor (W) defeated Cheryl House, 6-0, 6-0.
Rachel Roberts (W) defeated Lisa Styons, 6-3, 6-2.
Amy Hardison (W) defeated Bonnie Alexander, 6-2, 6-3.
Lisa Robertson (W) defeated Pam Norman, 6-1, 6-0.
Susie Orton (W) defeated Grizzelle Keel, 6-0, 6-0.
Lucia Peele-Debbie Mobley (W) defeated V. Alexander-Styons, 9-7.
Cindy Cullipher-Christie Rogerson (W) defeated House-B. Alexander, 8-5.
Lisa Roebuck-Beth Boyd (W) defeated Miriam Hannon-Cassandra Mitchell, 8-1.

"I have been pointing for this fight for eight months," Frazier said. "I have sacrificed and worked to get at this man again. I have it all together. I don't think I have ever been better."

Frazier weighed in at 214½ and Ali at 224½, both heavier than anticipated. Ali, supremely confident, boxed only one day during the past week, saying, "Why should I box? I know where Frazier will be. His head always will be in front of my fist."

Informed of the champion's comment, Frazier responded: "I know where he is going to be, too. I got the best handlers in the world."

Ali, at 33 two years older than his opponent and a superb 6-foot-3 athlete with dancing feet and quick hands, has indicated he will come out fighting instead of back-pedaling, with the intention of scoring an early knockout.

Frazier's chief trainer, Eddie Futch, considers this nothing more than idle talk. "Ali's track record shows that instead of coming out swinging he usually is trying to protect himself," Futch said. "If he gets too froggy, he just may get tagged."

A comparatively short man—5-foot-11½—with stubby legs and huge thighs, Frazier does not depend heavily on boxing skills. He is a bore-in fighter, a buzz-saw who will take five shots to land one. His left hook is the most devastating weapon in a limited arsenal which has brought him a 32-2 record with 27 knockouts.

Ali calls Frazier "a gorilla." "He is so ugly," taunts Muhammad, "when he was a baby and cried, tears started down his face, then turned back and ran to the back of his head."

Ali, who is 48-2 with 34 kayoes, is rated by many experts as possibly the finest all-around fighter of all time—lightning quick, smart, confident to the point of arrogance. He beat Foreman by playing the ropes, driving the giant Texan to sheer exhaustion and then putting him away in the eighth.

This emerging nation of 7,100 islands, islets, rocks and sandbars with 111 cultures and 70 languages, has been whipped into a frenzy by the excitement of the fight.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos, having placed the country under martial law three years ago and now in the midst of a purge of high officials, has taken a personal interest in the event and the principals. It is unknown whether he will attend.

VMI Looking For Big Game

By MARSHALL JOHNSON..

AP Sports Writer...
Virginia Military got its start toward the Southern Conference football championship last year with a season-opening 7-0 upset over Furman's Paladins in what Keydet Coach Bob Thalman calls "one of our toughest games, and we expect the same kind of game this season."

The Keydets go to Furman Saturday night for one of three crucial conference scraps, and it will be a battle this year of two teams who won last weekend after losing their first two starts.

VMI, victim of two one-point nonleague defeats, routed Davidson's Wildcats 55-0 and Furman, which had lost four in a row over the last two seasons, upset Appalachian State's Mountaineers 30-23.

"Like I've said before, our challenge this season is to defend the championship. We've looked forward to it, and that's what it's all about," says Thalman.

The VMI coach adds that "I know we'll be ready to play a great football game. The sea-

Ruff Gets SC Honor

RESTON, Va. (AP)—Linebacker Brian Ruff of The Citadel, named twice last year as the Southern Conference defensive player of the week, today was given the same honor for his performance last Saturday night in the Bulldogs' 16-7 victory over Wofford.

Ruff, an All-Southern selection as a sophomore in 1974, had seven primary tackles, 10 assists, two quarterback sacks and one tipped pass in The Citadel's second triumph of the season.

The 219-pound junior called The Citadel's defensive signals, and Coach Bobby Ross said "he had another super game."

Ronnie Moore, Virginia Military's senior wide receiver, was named Monday the offensive player of the week.

Moore returned the opening kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown as the Keydets opened defense of their league title with a 55-0 rout of Davidson's Wildcats.

He also caught three passes for 62 yards, ran for seven yards and returned two punts for 13 yards.

Defense Shines In Denver Win

By JOHN MOSSMAN

AP Sports Writer
DENVER (AP) — The heralded duel between Green Bay quarterback John Hadl and Denver's Charlie Johnson never came off, nor did the running battle between John Brockington and Otis Armstrong.

Both Johnson and Armstrong were sidelined early in Monday night's National Football League game, leaving it up to reserve quarterback Steve Ramsey and an alert Denver defense to star in the Broncos' 23-13 victory.

Ramsey, thrust into action late in the second quarter after Johnson suffered a split nail on the index finger of his throwing hand, passed 10 yards to Jack Dolbin for a touchdown and guided the Broncos into position for the clinching score, Jim Turner's third field goal of the game.

The TD pass was made possible by linebacker Jim O'Malley's interception near midfield and return to the Packer 12-yard line.

After Hadl passed the Packers to within 16-13 late in the game, middlelinebacker Randy Gradishar came up with another defensive gem, picking off a Hadl pass and running 44 yards for a score with 40 seconds remaining.

It was Hadl who almost single-handedly made a game of it in the late stages. His aerial wizardry helped atone for a meager Packer ground game that accounted for just 71 yards in the face of a surprisingly sound Denver defense.

"Hadl was just superb," said Denver Coach John Ralston, whose team boosted its record to 2-0 with the triumph. "He did a masterful job. He picked us to pieces in the second half."

Although he finished with 23 completions in 36 attempts for 273 yards, Hadl had to endure a frustrating first half in which he was sacked four times for losses of 31 yards. On numerous other occasions he was forced into hurried throws by an onrushing Denver front four.

But his protection toughened in the second half and Hadl began hitting wide receiver Ken Payne with regularity. Payne caught four passes for 39 yards on the Packers' first scoring drive. Rookie running back Will Harrell caught the four-yard TD toss on the second play of the final period.

Satisfied with the combination, Hadl and Payne hooked up three more times for 45 yards on Green Bay's next TD march. Green Bay reached the Denver two, but it took Brockington four cracks to reach the end zone, consuming precious minutes.

The loss dropped the Packers and new Coach Bart Starr to 0-2.

Armstrong, who carried five times for 45 yards, was shelved in the first half with bruised ribs. Among the other casualties were Denver cornerback George Hoey who suffered a broken jaw; Green Bay cornerback Willie Buchanan, hobbled by an ankle sprain, and Packer receiver Charley Wade, who was hospitalized with a serious upper leg injury.

Wilson In Net Victory

WILSON—Strong Wilson High School's girls' tennis team rolled to an 8-1 victory over Rose High School's lassies yesterday.

It was the first match in over a week for the Rose girls who had had three matches rained out last week.

The lone victory for Rose came in the number five singles where Karen Jeffreys came away with a victory. Only one other time was Rose able to take a set from a Wilson netter.

The loss left Rose with an 0-1 Division I record, and an 0-3 overall mark. The Rampants travel to Kinston today for their next outing.

Summary:
Marcia Bussey (W) defeated Marty East, 6-0, 6-1.
Susan Hollar (W) defeated Serena Matney, 6-3, 6-1.
Gina Gibbons (W) defeated Kitsy Bailey, 7-6, 6-2.

Ann Jeanette (W) defeated Sheri Augspurger, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.
Karen Jeffreys (R) defeated Mitzi Corbin, 6-0, 6-3.
Sandy Lamm (W) defeated Peggy Barber, 6-3, 6-3.
Bussey-Hollar (W) defeated East-Matney, 8-3.

Linda Lafferty-Ann Dillard (W) defeated Augspurger-Cindy Talbert, 8-6.
Elizabeth Raspberry-Lou Hackney (W) defeated Jill Carney-Bailey, 8-3.

Some Managers Will Be Back For Next Year

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer
Earl Weaver, Red Schoendienst and John McNamara are all going back to hear the cheers next year. Danny Ozark is going back, too, but may hear some jeers.

Weaver, Schoendienst and McNamara are among the latest baseball managers to sign for the 1976 season. Ozark has been brought back to fulfill the end of his two-year contract despite voices of anger in Philadelphia.

Weaver, one of the most successful managers in baseball, not unexpectedly signed for another season with the Baltimore Orioles for a healthy contract estimated at $85,000.

"There are other managerial jobs opening up," said Baltimore General Manager Frank Cashen, pointing to weekend firings in Minnesota and Milwaukee. "If Earl really wanted to hold out, maybe he could have done better elsewhere."

But Weaver did not want to go elsewhere, as he pointed out after signing for his ninth season with the Orioles.

"Cashen knows that I'd rather stay in with Baltimore than go any other place," Weaver said.

Since replacing Hank Bauer as Baltimore manager in July, 1968, Weaver has guided the Orioles to a 724-477 record for a won-lost percentage of .60283. That beats out Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson (.60269) for second place behind Joe McCarthy for managers with five or more years' experience since 1900. Among his accomplishments, Weaver boasts a World Series triumph.

The St. Louis Cardinals brought Schoendienst back for his 12th year. Under the unflappable redhead, the Cardinals have won 938 games and lost 835 for a percentage of .529. The Cardinals won two National League pennants and captured a World Series under the former Cardinal star.

McNamara pulled the San Diego Padres out of the cellar for the first time in the expansion club's history. The Padres finished with a 71-91 record for fourth place in the National League West.

Like Weaver and Schoendienst, McNamara signed a one-year contract.

Ozark will return to the Philadelphia Phillies for the second year of his contract, but it might not be a happy association if the boo-birds come out again in Veterans Stadium. They booed Ozark unmercifully most of last season, despite the fact that he had the Phillies in contention for the National League East. They finally finished second to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Open Flag Football

South Greenville downed Eastern School, 19-7, yesterday in the opening Flag Football game of the year.

Eastern grabbed the early lead, driving 50 yards following the opening kickoff, with Mont Carter scoring on a 15-yard sweep. Duane Fisher added the extra point.

In the second period, South Greenville came up with its first score, taking just two plays. The score came on Randy Warren's 25-yard run. The PAT try failed, leaving Eastern ahead, 7-6, at the half.

South Greenville took over in the third period as Paul Taylor scored on a 45-yard run and Marvin Williams got the PAT for a 13-7 lead. Taylor then scored on a 55-yard fourth quarter run to finish it off for South Greenville.

Kenny Strickland and Mark Saied were listed as defensive standouts for Eastern.

Duke football teams in four of the past five seasons have finished with either a 6-5 or a 5-6 record.

A Sort Of D-Day Today For Producer And Cast

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Today is sort of a D-day for producer Norman Lear and his new "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" soap-and-comedy opera, which he's trying to sell directly to TV stations or station groups.

He says today is when the contract options of the show's cast expire. Whether he'll renew them and go into production again depends on whether enough stations have agreed to buy the daily series.

In a phone interview last week, the man who gave American TV "All in the Family" said he has firm offers from stations in 47 markets.

But he said he needs stations in at least two more major markets — or five smaller ones — buying "Mary Hartman" just to cover the cost of the five-day-a-week series.

If he gets them, he says, "we'll make it even if there isn't a nickel's profit in it, feeling sure that it'll succeed and then more stations will come in."

The sad-faced writer-producer, who only has two episodes of "Mary Hartman" on tape, adopted his unusual over-the-counter sales approach because he couldn't get any network to buy the series.

The two shows seemed radical for a soap opera. Their scenes were quick, the dialogue was brisk and each had a heavy helping of humor.

Lear said he first proposed the series to Brandon Stoddard, then head of ABC's daytime programs division. Stoddard liked it. Alas, Stoddard took another job and his successor didn't like the show.

Then, he said, he took the idea to CBS, which financed the episodes he has on tape. The then-CBS programs chief, Fred Silverman, saw them, liked the concept, but wanted two major changes, Lear said.

He wanted the show to be a once-a-week, hour-long evening series and wanted it taped before a live audience, as is the custom with such Lear shows as "All in the Family,"

"Maude" and "The Jeffersons."

In short, Lear said, "what he wanted was another cookie from my cookie cutter." The producer said he balked at both requests and took his wares to NBC, which said it had no place in its schedule for it.

He said Silverman, now programs chief at ABC, still has no eyes for "Mary Hartman" without some changes. He quoted the executive as saying, "I don't understand it in its present form."

"See, he doesn't understand that the intention of the show was to appeal to people on two levels," Lear said, meaning the show could be taken as serious or funny social comment.

"If you'd seen it with, say, 15 people, and you were laughing in places, somebody might have turned to you — and I've seen this happen — and said, 'What the hell were you laughing about? That's tragic.'"

"And you'd say, 'I understand all that, but I'm looking through another prism, I guess.' But the other person won't forgive me. He or she sees only a tragedy. Those are the two levels it is to appeal to."

Libyan Money Spreads Islam

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer
TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya is pumping a hefty bundle of its petrodollars into a budding Islamic center to spread the faith in Africa as well as to Christians in Europe and the Americas.

In downtown Tripoli, on the compound of what was the Roman Catholic cathedral only five years ago is now the headquarters of the Islamic Call Society. It directs a network of about 200 "propagators" in 35 branches ranging from Brazil to Japan, Denmark to Kenya.

The society, also maintaining close contact with North America's black and white Moslems, is financed in part by the four per cent holy war tax Libya imposes on income and sales. Its budget is put at 20 million a year and it is increasing.

While it provides an international apparatus for strongman Moammar Khadafy's revival of Islamic fundamentalism at home, its fervor and elite supply challenge to the delicate and carefully nurtured detente between Christianity and Islam, the world's two largest religions whose warriors once slaughtered each other as an act of faith.

The society's declared aim is to teach Islam, considered by Libya's revolutionary and devout Moslem leaders as "the seal of all other religions." But conversions — particularly of Christians in the West — are prominently mentioned. "A Danish lady came all the way to Tripoli yesterday to embrace Islam," a society official said. "An Italian lady is next."

"We are now accepted even in Western societies," says the society's head, Sheikh Mahmoud Subhi.

Black Africa, however, still remains the society's prime target as it is for Christian missionaries, particularly for Roman Catholic orders.

Islam's drive southward has won over 140 million of the continent's 340 million population, officials here claim, but an African bishop, Jean Zoa of Cameroun, said he expects the continent's Christians, now only 23 per cent of the population, to make up over a half by the year 2000.

In parts of Africa swept by rapid decolonization, Christianity is still portrayed as white man's religion.

While there exists no known incidents in drives for conversions, Khadafy has promised help to Moslem rebels fighting central governments dominated by Christians, especially aid to Eritrea's Moslem rebels against Ethiopia, and the Moslems in the Philippines.

Libya is also said to have aided Lebanon's Moslems in recent sectarian warfare there.

Khadafy views them more as political "liberation" movements than just religious conflicts. "To incite Moslems against Christians and vice versa is not among Islamic principles," he once said.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

South refused "to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," and instead came up with a thoughtful play to bring home his slam which had been endangered by a bad break.

North-South bid well to get to their optimum spot despite an effective barrage put up by their opponents. North considered the possibility of a grand slam, for South's cue-bid of six clubs surely marked him with both red aces and a void in clubs. However, he wisely decided that his side might have a spade loser. Seven clubs would have been a good sacrifice; but East had hopes that his major suit holdings would come as an unpleasant surprise to declarer.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy. With a normal 3-2 spade split, he would have to surrender a spade trick and no more. He ruffed the king of clubs, drew trumps in three rounds and cashed the king and ace of spades, only to learn the bad news.

All was not lost. If hearts divided 3-3, declarer could discard one of dummy's spades on his long hearts. However, that chance was not too good, so declarer dug deeper into the position and came up with a line that was sure to succeed. He cashed the king and queen of hearts and then led a heart to the ten!

No, declarer had not taken a peek at East's hand—he just didn't care if West turned up with the jack of hearts. If West had started with three hearts to the jack, he would now be endplayed and have to give declarer a ruff-and-sluff. Declarer would discard a spade from dummy while ruffing in his hand, then discard dummy's remaining spade on the ace of hearts.

As it was, the heart finesse won. Declarer simply continued with the ace of hearts, discarding a spade from dummy, and then conceded a spade trick to East. His remaining spade was ruffed in dummy and a very well-played slam rolled home.

Note that declarer was sure to succeed even if West had four hearts to the jack. On the fourth heart declarer simply discards a spade from dummy, allowing West to win the trick. West is forced to yield a ruff-and-sluff, allowing declarer to get rid of dummy's last spade.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, OCT. 1, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to be more thoughtful of the future. Try to enter into new agreements which will give you and associates an opportunity to express your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Using spare time for being with persons you enjoy can add much to your happiness today. Express your talents.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Getting conditions improved at home is wise at this time. Do some entertaining, but don't invite a troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Talk with associates about ways to improve mutual projects you may have. Don't neglect important correspondence.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day for expansion, so put your mind to projects in the future that could add to your abundance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are magnetic today and can achieve a great deal if you contact the right persons. Be sure to attend the social.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make long-range plans of the future and be sure to talk them over with trusted associates. Obtain the data you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) State your aims to a good friend and you will get good suggestions on ways to add to your income. Become more popular.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your position in your line of endeavor and know what should be done in order to be more successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Stop wasting time and put those new ideas to work instead of procrastinating. New contacts can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Come to a true understanding with those you do business with and much can be gained. Think constructively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Clarifying with associates what each of you expects from the other is the best way to proceed at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You hardly know where to begin with all the work you have to do, but if you control your temper all will be fine.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have to be taught early to smile more and gain the goodwill of others. Don't let pride get in the way of progress. Be sure to direct the education along lines of working with the government.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

PLAN HA901Y LOOKS LIKE a single-family home, but has an optional apartment or professional office. Upstairs is a complete three-bedroom, one-floor living unit. The lower level is laid out to show what can be done should a separate living or professional suite be required. The lower-level apartment can be entered from outside by its own side doors. It could be an apartment for an in-law, live-in servants or guests or used by a doctor or dentist with the kitchen a lab or X-ray room, bedroom a treatment room and living room a waiting room and office. There are 1,250-square feet in the upper level, 560 in the optional apartment and 650 in the finished basement. Anyone wishing to learn the cost of the blueprint can write to York and Schenke, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica, N.Y. 11432, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

How N.C. Congressmen And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 18 through Sept. 24.

HOUSE
OIL—Passed, 255 for and 148 against, a many-faceted bill (HR 7014) to increase domestic sources of energy, encourage energy conservation and establish a national oil policy. The measure was sent to conference with a similar Senate-passed bill.

The most crucial and controversial provision deals with oil price controls. HR 7014 would reinstate the $5.25 per barrel ceiling on "old" domestic oil which expired Aug. 31. In addition, the bill would for the first time set price controls on "new" domestic oil. Currently selling for roughly $13 per barrel, the price of "new" oil would be rolled back to as low as $7.50 per barrel.

HR 7014 would also set fuel-efficiency standards for cars and other consumer products, create a billion-barrel anti-embargo oil reserve, give a President stand-by gasoline rationing authority, require that for three years the quantity of gasoline sold by service stations would not exceed 1973-74 embargo era levels, encourage conversion to coal and other non-oil energy supplies, and strengthen federal auditing of energy firms to give Congress access to more reliable energy statistics.

One supporter, Rep. William Randall (D-Mo.), argued that HR 7014, unlike the Administration's oil decontrol plan, would promote the nation's economic recovery and control inflation.

One opponent, Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio), said the bill is a "chamber of horrors," which because of its price control provisions is headed toward a presidential veto.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), W. G. Hefner (D-8) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."

Reps. James Martin (R-9) and James Broyhill (R-1) voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Rose (D-7) did not vote.

BUSING—Adopted, 204 for and 201 against, an antibusing amendment to prohibit the use of gasoline to bus students to schools other than those in their neighborhoods.

The amendment was attached to HR 7014 (above) and was ostensibly designed as a fuel-saving measure. It would be enforced by the Federal Energy Administration.

If enacted, the amendment will not prevent the courts from ordering busing to achieve school desegregation. Therefore, it could prove to be superfluous. In any event, the vote demonstrated growing congressional dissatisfaction with busing as a school desegregation tool.

Rep. James Collins (R-Tex.), the sponsor, said the amendment fits in with other provisions of HR 7014 designed to curtail "unnecessary transportation" and thus save energy. One opponent, Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.), said the amendment "has no place in this energy bill" and is "not Constitutional and not sensible."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Rose did not vote.

PANAMA CANAL—Rejected, 197 for and 203 against, language to kill a previously-voted ban on any State Department negotiations which could lead to relinquishing U.S. control over the Panama Canal Zone. All other provisions of the conference report on the amendment's parent bill (HR 8121), which appropriates operating funds to the departments of State, Justice and Commerce through Sept. 30, 1976, were adopted later by voice vote.

The controversial amendment, adopted last June, denies appropriations for any Panama negotiations that would ultimately result in loss of U.S. jurisdiction. It was later removed by the House-Senate conference on the bill. Before the conference report on HR 8121 can be cleared for the White House, the Senate must respond to the House's vote to retain the language.

Supporters of nullifying the amendment said it would undercut Panama treaty negotiations now being conducted by the State Department. Rep. John Rhodes (R-Ariz.) said the amendment amounted to "pre-judging the whole situation and saying there is no way we can come up with some kind of a treaty which will make the Panamanians happy and which the U.S. will approve."

Opponents said U.S. supervision of the canal zone is vital to avert Communist takeover of the unstable country. Rep. Robert Bauman (R-Md.) said the amendment should be preserved to show "that the Congress will not sit still for the sellout of the American interests in the Panama Canal."

Preyer voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "nay."

Rose did not vote.

SENATE

FEDERAL PAY RAISE—

Rejected, 39 for and 53 against, a resolution (S Res 239) disapproving President Ford's recommendation that a five percent pay raise for Members of Congress and many federal employees be enacted this year, instead of an 8.66 percent increase which was proposed by the Advisory Committee on Federal Pay.

Those voting against favored the five percent level. Unless the House adopts a resolution of disapproval, the five percent hike will take effect Oct. 1. A five percent hike would raise salaries of House members and senators to $44,625. An 8.66 percent increase would raise salaries to $46,150.

Earlier this year Members of Congress voted to make themselves eligible for the annual cost-of-living pay hikes available to civil servants and some other federal employees. The 39-53 vote was to determine the precise amount of the 1975 increase.

Supporters of the resolution said the 8.66 percent increase is necessary to offset the impact of inflation upon federal white collar workers and others, such as the victims of black lung disease receiving federal benefits.

Opponents criticized the 8.66 figure as budget-busting. They said it would necessitate trimming the federal budget by laying off thousands of federal military workers.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "nay." Sen. Jesse Helms (R) answered "present."

WORKER SAFETY—Adopted, 48 for and 45 against, an amendment designed to make federal job safety regulations less applicable to small businessmen. The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 8069) appropriating operating funds to the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare through Sept. 30, 1976. HR 8069 was headed for passage and conference with the House.

The amendment prohibits the use of any funds contained in HR 8069 for safety inspections of employers with three or fewer employees. Such inspections are now permitted under the 1970 Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Sen. Carl Curtis (R-Neb.), the sponsor, said the safety regulations at issue were designed to protect employees of large, "hazardous manufacturing concerns," not small, "family-operated" businesses.

One opponent, Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), said employees of small firms "are human beings as much as the fellow working for... General Motors," and thus deserve the protection afforded by the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Helms and Morgan voted "yea."

Tear-Gassed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham and entertainer Pat Boone led some 800 other choking moviegoers in song after they were forced from a theater by fumes from a swastika-embellished tear gas canister.

The celebrities were among some 800 persons who streamed out coughing and watery-eyed after the Beverly theater was tear-gassed Monday night just before the premier of a Graham-produced film on the Dutch Christian underground during World War II.

Also evacuated was Corrie Boom, whose autobiography "The Hiding Place" was the basis for the movie of the same name. She and her family helped Dutch Jews flee the Nazi invasion and occupation.

Police Lt. Bill Davis said no one was injured in the incident, but the screening of the movie was canceled because tear gas fumes continued to linger in the theater.

Fire officials said a swastika had been pasted to a four-inch tear-gas canister they found near a side exit close to the stage. Davis said the incident was being investigated.

Witnesses said Graham and Boone led the crowd in a round of songs outside the theater, while firemen worked in a bid to clear the fumes.

THE TIME HAS COME TO PUT PRICE & PRIDE TOGETHER AGAIN.

Price & Pride.
Side by side.
Shoulder to shoulder, we worked together at A&P for over 100 years.
That's what made the Great A&P great.
Then Blooey!
The grocery business changed.
And Pride was forced to take a back seat.
He suffered quietly.
And A&P suffered, too.
Things weren't always so great at the Great A&P.
We know it.
You know it.
Price without Pride is no bargain.
The time has come to put Price & Pride together again.

If we can't do it, nobody can.
