Hostages Held In UN Offices

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Eleven Chilean refugees and a Brazilian holding five U.N. officials and employees hostage under threat of death appealed today for the "good will" of international leaders to find a country where they can go.

Argentine officials have agreed to let them go if a country can be found to take them. "My understanding is that the United Nations is now negotiating with six or seven countries to find one that will take us," a refugee spokesman said by telephone. "But so far no answer." He said the countries included Belgium, Sweden and Denmark and at least one unidentified Socialist nation. He did not name the others. A Buenos Aires radio station said without citing any sources that the group might leave at noon on a plane, but the refugee spokesman said: "That's news to me, and I don't think it's true." He said the group was determined to remain in the U.N. High Commission for Refugees offices, which they seized at midday Wednesday, until their demand is satisfied. The spokesman clarified the exact number of refugees but declined to identify them by name. The Brazilian appeared to be the leader and was referred to as "Number One" by the others.

Progress Report Given On Recreation Dept. Program

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
The $375,000 Greenville Recreation Department Work Schedule for 1975-76 was the subject of a progress status report given by Recreation Director Boyd Lee at the October monthly meeting of the Recreation Commission Wednesday night. The 11 item development program, made possible by Community Development federal funds, consists of one completed project — acquisition of the 346 acre tract of land north of Tar River — and ten items in various stages of progress. City Manager Harry Hagerty, who said he was present in a "personal, not an official capacity," explained that in all the recreation projects, the city council has delegated to the Redevelopment Development Commission "the mechanisms of procedures, appraisals and environmental guidance" required in justifying expenditure of Community Development funds. The progress report made by Lee shows the following projects, the projected cost of each program, and the estimated date of completion projected for each project. —Purchase of West Greenville Recreation Center (old C. M. Eppes school property) — $120,000. The date established for possible conclusion of negotiations with the Greenville City School Board has been set for December 15 this year. It was pointed out that the $120,000 does not represent an agreed price, but is rather a working price basis on which negotiations can be conducted between the Recreation Commission and the Greenville City School Board. (In all the development projects, the Recreation Commission acts as an advisory body making recommendations to the City Council, which is the government body authorized to make final decisions.) —Expansion of the East Greenville Park — $50,000. Expected date of completion April 30, 1976. This project is the first stage (site plans development) for a projected joint Recreation-Library complex to be built in East Greenville. Another project item, listed as "site plan for East Greenville Park" at $20,000 ties in with development plans for the projected building complex. Completion date for this item is January 1, 1976. —Purchase of reserved recreation land — $10,000. Lee explained that the city planner has recommended that the $10,000 in funds for this proposed land purchase be carried over to the 1976-77 fiscal year. "He feels," Lee commented, "that since no designated piece of land is under consideration, and because of the time involved in environmental review required, it would not be feasible to attempt to make this purchase during this fiscal year."

—Landscaping of recreation sites — $25,000. This project, slated to get underway at the end of October, is scheduled for completion by the end of next May. It was stated there is no concrete date on projects such as this for fiscal year planning, as the beginning date on some projects is also considered the beginning date of an applicable fiscal year period. —Evans Park Parking Lot paving—$25,000. This project, contracted to Barrus Construction Company, carries a beginning date of October 1 through a completion date of November 1, 1975. Hagerty explained that the weather has not permitted work to start on this, but that the time-table should provide for completion by the November 1 deadline. Hagerty also added that the mechanics of receiving funds for Community Development projects was a rather complicated administrative process. "We can't keep on hand any money for more than ten days," he said, "and any interest earned on this money has to be accounted for and turned back in."

Beirut Armies Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Private armies of Christians and Moslems battled in the streets of Beirut today as Premier Rashid Karami again sought Syrian mediation from President Hafez Assad in Damascus.

Unofficial estimates of casualties in the past 24 hours ranged up to 60 dead and more than 200 wounded.

A heavy rainfall, the first of the season, stilled the gunfire for 40 minutes shortly after dawn. But street fighting resumed as the sun rose.

"Armed men are everywhere," Beirut Radio announced. "All roads are closed. There is no change in the situation."

Machinegun battles raged in several residential areas. Sniper fire and bomb blasts terrorized suburbs outside the main combat zones.

Fires started in Wednesday's battles burned out of control until the arrival of 12 fire engines from Syria to help hard-pressed Lebanese crews.

Government sources said Karami left for Damascus before dawn in a last-ditch attempt to "Arabize" the Lebanese conflict with mediation from other governments.

Syria had sent Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam to mediate in the last round of sectarian fighting here, resulting in a temporary cease-fire that ended after the Moslem feast of Eid el Fitr.

Late Wednesday night, Karami expressed support for a Kuwaiti proposal to convene an urgent conference of Arab foreign ministers to discuss the Lebanese situation.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A 25-year-old ex-convict killed 17 persons in the past two months, slaying one couple for 36 cents and the others for a total of $55, police said today.

The ex-convict, identified as Kim Dae-doo, was arrested Wednesday and confessed to all the murders, police said.

Airlines Object To More Freedom

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's plan aimed at stimulating competition in the air transportation industry is drawing strong opposition from airlines.

Ford announced Wednesday he is asking Congress to remove some of the authority of the Civil Aeronautics Board, to allow airlines more freedom to raise and lower fares and to start and stop service between cities.

Administration officials contended the legislation would result in lower over-all air fares for the public by stimulating competition.

Major airlines objected to the proposal, saying it would lead to higher prices and turn the nation's transportation system into chaos.

The heads of House and Senate subcommittees involved with studies of airlines indicated agreement with the effort to make air travel more affordable, but withheld immediate judgment on the Ford proposal.

Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., chairman of the House Public Works aviation subcommittee, called Ford's proposal "commendable."

Sen. Howard Cannon, head of the Senate Commerce Committee's aviation subcommittee, said, "I admit there is too much regulation. I am not ready to form a judgment on the legislation until I see it." Much opposition to the Ford proposal was aimed at a provision that would let airlines start or stop service on routes. This proposal, which would be effective Jan. 1, 1981, would allow airlines to begin flights on routes which they now have no CAB authority to serve. It also would let them halt service on unprofitable routes unless the federal, state or local government agreed to subsidize losses.

The Air Transport Association, representing scheduled airlines, said Ford's proposal would "tear apart a national air transportation system recognized as the finest in the world. The proposal would cause a major reduction or elimination of scheduled air service to many communities and would lead inevitably to increased costs to consumers."

Sanford Aide Resigns

RALEIGH (AP)—A new campaign manager is to be named next week by Terry Sanford, candidate for Democratic presidential nomination.

In a statement released Wednesday, Sanford said his campaign organization is still in good shape despite the resignation Tuesday of his chairman, former Vermont Gov. Philip Hoff.

"The campaign is not going under and will not go under," Sanford said, adding, "The organizational and financial structure looks the most promising it has looked since my announcement."

Sanford also said he will name a finance chairman and reveal the status of efforts to financially qualify for federal matching campaign funds.

Hoff said he was forced to return to his law practice because he ran out of money. Hoff will remain in the campaign but will have no official title, Sanford said.

"The campaign has been in a restructuring process over the last several weeks," Sanford said, adding, "We have been pulling in our financial reins and we are encouraged. Our plans are broadening and new people are coming aboard."

—Renovation of South Greenville Recreation Center — $45,000. The renovation project would update the facility on Howell Street to give better usage of existing space. Scheduled to start the first of November, the projected completion date would be at the beginning of February, 1976. —Re-lighting South Greenville Activity Field — $12,000. A tie-in project in the overall improvement of the South Greenville Recreation Center, re-lighting work would get underway early in March and be completed by (Continued on page 10)

Congress Prepares For Columbus Day Vacation

By HARRISON HUMPHRIES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, about to begin a week's Columbus Day vacation, is expected to stamp final approval on a resolution that will place American technicians at electronic detection posts in the Sinai desert.

The proposal, part of the United States commitment in the Sinai peace accord between Israel and Egypt, was given overwhelming approval Wednesday by the House, which added an amendment to bar the use of U.S. military forces in the region. The resolution was approved 341 to 69.

President Ford had sought approval of the stationing of the technicians in the buffer zone between Israeli and Egyptian forces by last Friday, but the Senate has yet to act on the proposal.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., has moved to scuttle the measure by returning it to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for further work. A vote on his proposal was set for today.

Senators said they would take final action on the issue this Friday, the day they recess for their vacation.

If the Senate does take final action on the measure this week, it will have to accept the amendments tacked on to the proposal in the House and turn down a dozen others proposed by senators. Otherwise, final action would have to await the

Go-Go Evicted By Navy Wives

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Go-go is gone-gone at the Philadelphia Naval Base, chased away by Navy wives furious about the "disgusting and filthy shows" put on during lunch and dinners at the officers clubs.

Rear Adm. Wycliffe Toole Jr., the base commander, said Wednesday his less than honorable discharge of the go-go dancers was not connected with the July reprimand given a submarine skipper who hired a topless dancer to caper atop the sub as it left a Florida port for sea duty.

The admiral said simply that the dancing was "not appropriate to a naval facility."

end of the week's vacation, when the two chambers could iron out their differences.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., manager of the measure on the Senate floor, urged his colleagues to adopt the proposal as offered by the House. Humphrey said time is essential, noting that congressional action on the measure will trigger final implementation of the peace accord.

Before approving the resolution, the House passed an amendment specifying that the measure gives the President no authority to introduce U.S. military force into the Middle East. The amendment, introduced by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., won approval of supporters of the technician resolution, including Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, who said it would not bar Ford from using U.S. military strength to rescue the civilian technicians if they were in peril.

The House also approved on a voice vote an amendment requiring Ford to report to Congress on the feasibility of replacing the Americans with technicians from other nations.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who negotiated the interim settlement, has said both sides demanded that American technicians monitor the peace from a demilitarized zone in the Sinai.

"No, it is not legal," says Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon. "This would be considered carrying a concealed weapon. Any time you carry a weapon of any kind, it must be where others can see it. If you're in a car, you must have the weapon uncovered on the seat or dashboard or floorboard, somewhere in view of anyone approaching the car. If it's in a glove compartment, the door of the compartment must be open. Carrying a gun in a locked car trunk is not considered having it concealed. Concealment may be charged when a person has weapon hidden in a place where he can easily get to it himself."

Biofeedback Curing Psychosomatic Illnesses

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Biofeedback, a technique that "is still pretty much of a mystery," is curing chronic psychosomatic illnesses by teaching patients to tap power within their own minds, doctors reported at a national medical seminar.

Speakers at the first National Congress on Integrative Health said Wednesday that patients using biofeedback have learned to alter their blood pressure, stop migraine headaches and control asthma attacks simply by concentration.

"Biofeedback is the yoga of the west," said Dr. Elmer Green, head of the psychophysiology laboratory at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan., an institution pioneering research in the technique.

He said biofeedback harnesses "the placebo effect," the well-documented phenomenon of patients improving merely from suggestion after taking a fake medicine.

"The placebo effect is one of the most powerful things known to medicine," said Dr. Green. "That power hasn't been utilized."

Biofeedback uses sensors that monitor a patient's skin temperature, brain function or nerve action. These signals are amplified and then displayed on a dial. The patient is shown the dial reading and told to change it simply by concentration.

Dr. Green said that patients, in effect, are taught to consciously affect some bodily functions which normally are controlled by the unconscious mind.

A high rate of success of the technique has been shown for psychosomatic illnesses, or ailments with a mental instead of physical origin. Dr. Green claims that 50 to 80 per cent of all medical complaints originate from psychological stress.

Dr. Arthur E. Gladman, a California psychiatrist, reported he has used biofeedback to treat successfully such disorders as migraine headache, Raynaud's Disease (a circulatory disorder), asthma, peptic ulcer and chronic pain. He said he has used the technique on 175 patients and experienced some degree of success with each one, but he admits "biofeedbacks is still pretty much of a mystery."

His patients ranged in age from 11 to 84 and all had ailments caused by some type of emotional and psychological stress.

He said that often the beneficial effects went far beyond the original complaint.

"Many patients feel they are at the control of outside forces," said the psychiatrist. "When they develop a way to control internal forces, they develop a new awareness of self. It enables individuals to view the world in a new way."

The reports came on the first day of the meeting, sponsored by the Academy of Parapsychology and Medicine. It has attracted doctors from 30 states.

N.C. Archivist Is Learning More Of Early N.C. In London

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection

Written for Associated Press CHAPEL HILL (AP) — When they couldn't answer a question concerning North Carolina history, some historians around Chapel Hill and Raleigh have had a habit of saying, "Ask George."

By George, they meant George Stevenson, lately an archivist in the State Division of Archives and History noted for his ability to produce little-known facts of our past.

Well, it isn't going to be so easy to ask George anymore, for George is in far-off London. There every day in the Public Record Office he spends many hours poring over 17th and 18th century records concerning North Carolina and ordering copies of those not already available back in the state.

For most people, such an occupation would be pure drudgery. For George Stevenson it is pure delight.

Already he has discovered that Henry Eustace McCulloh, a Loyalist and the largest landowner in pre-Revolutionary North Carolina was committed to an insane asylum in England in 1807. Since McCulloh lost 800,000 acres of land with only minimal compensation during the Revolution, there can be little question that his plight damaged him emotionally.

Stevenson, who attended the University of North Carolina and worked in its rich North Carolina Collection before moving on to Mt. Olive College and then the Division of Archives and History, has replaced Dr. Robert J. Cain as the London agent of North Carolina's Colonial Records Project.

Dr. Cain, who is now back with the State Archives in Raleigh, spent nearly six years in England where he selected and had copied more than 100,000 pages of documents.

Among the subjects enriched by these documents are Indian affairs, migration patterns, religious controversy, piracy, and trade with the West Indies and Europe.

Of particular interest as the bicentennial approaches is the large amount of material on naval activity off the North Carolina coast during the Revolution. Records of British war vessels give detail about North Carolinians who were "impressed" into service as seamen in the royal navy.

The more important documents eventually will be published in the new series of the Colonial Records of North Carolina, under the editorship of Dr. William S. Price Jr. All of them will be preserved in the State Archives where, as guides to them are completed, they will be more easily accessible to researchers.

Efforts to obtain copies of all European documents relating to North Carolina date back to the 1820s when Archibald D. Murphey persuaded Governor Burton to request a list of records of interest to the state.

A list—very incomplete—was prepared. It only whetted the desire of subsequent historians such as John H. Wheeler and David L. Swain, but no copying program was established prior to the Civil War.

During the war, however, Wheeler sailed to London through the Union blockade and copied some materials. But again, this was only a nibble.

The most concerted effort to obtain copies of records relating to the state came in the 1890s when William L. Saunders, the crippled secretary of state, engaged W. Noel Sainsbury, an official of the Public Record Office, to oversee the copying of thousands of documents which were later published in the first series of the Colonial Records of North Carolina.

Historians, though, knew that vast numbers of documents remained uncopied. A short-lived program was begun in the 1920s, but it was not until the observance of the 300th anniversary of the issuance of the Carolina Charter of 1663 that the General Assembly committed the state to an exhaustive project to obtain copies of all its colonial records. It was under this program that Dr. Cain went to London in 1969 and that Stevenson recently replaced him.

Several more years will be required for the completion of the task which periodically yields large bundles of documents at the post office in Raleigh.

History is an evolving field of learning, and each bundle brings new parts to the puzzle of our colonial history. It is only through the painstaking research of men like Robert Cain and George Stevenson that we will learn more and more about the origins and early decades of our state.

Sky Pirate Admits 'High On Drugs' During Hijack

By PAT LEISNER Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Two young men from Connecticut have been charged with hijacking an airplane over North Carolina and taking it on a 600-mile journey that ended with one being arrested while watching television in an airport, the FBI says.

"I was high when I took it and I've been high ever since," Ronald E. Ralph, 27, of Manchester, Conn., told U.S. Magistrate Paul Game at a hearing Wednesday.

Ralph, a college dropout with an admitted drug problem, was placed under $30,000 bond on an air piracy charge, pending another hearing Friday. The charge carries a maximum penalty of death.

The bearded defendant sat slouched with his hands folded on his lap and spoke impassively as he told a judge he couldn't remember when or where he last worked.

"It goes too far back to remember, really," Ralph said. Later, a man telephoned local police, saying he wanted to turn himself in. An officer went to a pre-arranged spot and found David Paul Burke of Edenfield, Conn.

Burke, 21, also was charged by the FBI with skyjacking the small plane at gunpoint Tuesday from Greensboro, N.C. Police said Burke handed over a .22-caliber pistol he had beneath a coat draped over his arm.

Meanwhile, the hunt continued today for a third suspect, agents said.

Ralph, who told the court he had one semester of college and six previous arrests, rented the private four-seater Cessna with Burke and another man in his 20s, authorities said.

An official in Greensboro said the men claimed they were going on a one-day, round-trip business trip to Atlanta, and presented keys to a car with Connecticut tags and a driver's license from Portsmouth, Va.

Three minutes after they were airborne, police said, one of the men put a .22-caliber revolver to the head of pilot Larry Adams, 23, and ordered him to fly to Florida.

After a refueling stop in Savannah, Ga., the plane continued to Tampa where Adams was permitted to call his boss, according to the FBI.

"He called me and said he had been hijacked at gunpoint," said John Godwin, president of the firm that owns the plane. "He said he was inclined to cooperate under the circumstances."

But Adams slipped a call to the FBI, and at 4 a.m. EDT Wednesday, agents arrested Ralph at Tampa International Airport. They said he was watching television with the pilot, and appeared to be intoxicated.

Game appointed a court-attorney to handle Ralph's defense after he claimed he had only $16.

Ralph told the judge he had a prior arrest record of sale of marijuana and breaking and entering in 1969, theft of a motor vehicle, breach of peace, interstate transportation of a motor vehicle and was currently on probation in Connecticut on a third-degree larceny charge.

He said he has been addicted to barbiturates, heroin and cocaine, and has been at detoxification centers twice, the last time in 1973.

Suspects Less Test Interest

By ANN BLACKMAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent drops in college entrance examination scores may reflect high school students' more relaxed attitudes about attending college, says the president of the Educational Testing Service.

"It's no longer true that if you're in the top quarter of your class, you think you have to go to college," William W. Turnbull said Wednesday.

He added that a national pre-occupation with students' test scores is on the wane. ETS, of Princeton, N.J., administers the college entrance exam and other tests.

Speaking to a group of reporters at a Washington Journalism Center seminar, Turnbull said many high school students are more willing to question their parents' values and concerns with higher education than were students of the early 1960s.

"I would speculate that in the early 1960s, there was a greater acceptance on the part of young people that one worked hard and tried to make it in the system," Turnbull said. "That acceptance of the adult middle-class value system has been eroding since the 1960s."

Today's students are "more willing to abandon parental values and experiment with values of their own choosing," he said.

Another reason why many students are more relaxed about getting into college is that there are more colleges now, Turnbull said.

"I attribute this to a rise in community colleges. Kids today know they can get into the smaller colleges."

"In almost every area of the country, there is a college in reach ... They're more willing to go to a college nearby than to a more competitive school."

Early-Hour Collisions

Two early-morning mishaps near the same intersection today resulted in an estimated $575 property damage, investigators reported.

Police reported cars driven by Jerry Allen Brady of 2818 Edwards St. and Leslie Spahr Moore of Winston-Salem collided about 12:40 a.m. on Fifth Street, 15 feet East of the Harding Street intersection resulting in an estimated $100 damage to each of the two vehicles.

Moore was charged following investigation of the mishap with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

The other mishap, which officers said occurred at 12:40 a.m. on Fifth Street, 30 feet East of the Harding Street intersection, involved cars operated by Norman H. Tadlock Jr. of Belcross and Karol Ann Hart of Farmville.

Police, who charged Miss Hart with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage in that collision at $300 to the Tadlock car and $75 to the Hart auto.

Farmville Mart Prices Steady

FARMVILLE—Prices yesterday on the Farmville market remained steady. Top price was $1.40 for wrappers, with choice leaf bringing $1.25 per pound. Demand for most grades was stronger than any previous day this week.

The volume of primings and lugs showed a substantial gain, with non-descript and damaged tobacco continuing to account for a large volume of sales. Stabilization receipts accounted for 3.34 per cent of gross sales.

The Farmville market on Wednesday sold 733,686 pounds for $799,625 for an average of $108.99 per 100 pounds.

To date the market has sold 26,740,050 pounds for a total of $26,882,673 for a season average of $100.53 per 100 pounds.

Hospital Ignores Plea To Let Their Son Die

ELYRIA, Ohio (AP) — The parents of a 17-year-old boy who has been in a coma for two weeks say they want their son to die "mercifully," but hospital officials refuse to disconnect his life-support system.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Carmen of Wellington have asked Elyria Memorial Hospital to take their son, Randal, off a respirator which is keeping him alive.

But James C. Brown, hospital administrator, said hospital policy is that "we do everything in our power to maintain life-saving procedures regardless of the condition of the patient."

He said the hospital will try to keep the boy alive until all vital signs have disappeared. "He's dead," the youth's father said. "He's been dead for two weeks."

The boy was injured during a football game in a friend's yard on Sept. 21. He finished the game but complained of a headache when he returned home, his parents said.

He lapsed into a coma while X rays were being taken.

Besides the respirator, the youth is being kept alive by a machine that controls his temperature and tubes that pump food into his body.

"We want legislation to make a decision on what constitutes death," Carmen said. "To me, if the brain is gone, that is death."

Carmen said he and his wife "talked to a lot of preachers and prayed a lot.... I don't think parents should have to go through this."

The Carmen case is similar to that of Karen A. Quinlan, 21, who has been in a coma for five months in a Denville, N.J., hospital. Her parents have asked the hospital to let her die, but the state has raised legal objections.

The medical and legal communities have been embroiled for several years in a controversy over when death occurs. Death is generally considered to occur when the heart stops beating, but there has been a growing movement toward redefining death as when brain activity ceases, despite a continuing heartbeat.

Firemen Voted To Join Union

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Without waiting for the city to act on their pay hike request, 54 of Gastonia's 70 firemen eligible for union membership have voted to join the International Association of Fire Fighters, AFL-CIO.

The balloting Wednesday followed requests by the firemen for pay parity with Gastonia's policemen and a 9.7 per cent cost-of-living increase.

Policemen are paid up to $9,230 annually, while salaries for firemen go up to $8,762.

Three firemen who had been representing the departmental personnel in pay negotiations were named temporary officers for the union's new local.

Rick Anthony, the local's temporary president, declined comment on why the vote was taken before the city acted on the pay request.

Aid Fraud

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Three women convicted of lying about their income to obtain welfare payments will have to perform unpaid community service and pay back some of the money they received.

Ernestine Hager, 29, Ruby Horton, 24, and Paulette Kimble, 28, were convicted last month in Mecklenburg District Court of misrepresenting their incomes to receive money under the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program.

Judge Jim Lanning also sentenced them Wednesday to spend the next 10 weekends in jail. Mrs. Horton and Mrs. Kimble also received suspended jail sentences and were placed on probation.

Hong Kong's Textile Industry Is Threatened

By HARIHAR KRISHNAN HONG KONG (UPI) — The label in a fashionable suit or dress worn by a European as often as not once read "Made in Hong Kong." But not anymore.

Reasonably priced quality tailor-made men's suits, chic synthetic women's dresses and fashionable knitwear made this British Crown colony one of the global giants of the textile business.

Almost one million of its citizens work in the textile industry, accounting for 50 per cent of all export revenue. Textiles exports are expected to reach $1 billion this year.

But tough quota restrictions imposed by the European Common Market countries threaten to undermine the industry. Depending on the product, the new quotas will reduce exports as much as 25 per cent.

The Common Market, which buys 36 per cent of Hong Kong's textile exports, is the colony's major customer. The quotas, contained in a July 18 agreement, renewed provisions of an earlier pact.

The reason given for the new quotas was Common Market commitments to less developed countries such as India and Pakistan, which depend heavily on textile exports for foreign exchange and because of Common Market concern that unrestricted flow of Hong Kong textile exports could seriously affect its own recession-hit industries.

Negotiations between Hong Kong officials and Common Market representatives for relaxation of the quotas broke down recently in Brussels, sending a wave of panic among exporters here.

Exporters say orders are pouring in from Europe but the government here has stopped issuing export licenses.

Some exporters are resorting to "borrowing" from next year's quota to unload swollen inventories. Others are selling their own quotas to the highest bidder, an action that has drawn severe criticism.

Still, Hong Kong authorities hope talks can be resumed with the Common Market to get partial relief from the new restrictions.

Autumn is the peak season for exporting winter clothes and merchants fear that any more delay will drive Europeans to other countries.

"We hope that even if the EEC is not able to meet us all the way, it will be able to offer some degree of alleviation to help our trade," a colonial government spokesman said.

"We have signed up with the EEC on restraints to ensure an orderly and equitable development of trade. If the implementation (of the agreement) results in wholesale disruption of our trade we have to go back to Brussels."

Hong Kong does not accept the premise that it is a developed colony and should not receive the same preferred treatment accorded to developing countries.

The colonial government also says it is justified in asking for liberalization of the quotas under the 1974 General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Exporters say there is no way to make up lost European exports by selling more in other countries.

"We have very comprehensive agreements with the United States, Austria, Australia, Sweden, Norway and Canada. What other major markets are left?" a spokesman said.

Spice Has Asiatic Origin

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

The French novelist, Anatole France, once said that "a tale without love is like beef without mustard; an insipid dish." Which may explain why it takes an annual crop of more than 400 million pounds to satisfy the world demand.

Yet, unlike other aromatic spices, mustard in its powdered form has no more redolence than so much flour. It acquires its highly pungent quality only after being mixed with cold water or some other liquid. It takes from 15 to 15 minutes, incidentally, to develop the full flavor of mustard after it is mixed with water, grape juice or any other comparable liquid.

Those who like to slather hot mustard on their egg rolls might be interested to know that the Chinese have been using the spice for thousands of years. In fact, it is of Asiatic origin.

About 2,000 years ago, soldiers in the Roman legions developed a fondness for mustard which they called sinapis. They carried the seeds everywhere, including England.

There are two basic types of mustard seed, the white or yellow familiar to hot dog buns and the dark brown seeds, known as Oriental mustard.

Powdered mustard has endless uses as an enhancer of meats, fish, fowl, sauces and salad dressings, cheese and egg dishes.

The tiny whole seeds of mustard are used in pickling, with boiled beets and as a garnish for salads. They are also good boiled with cabbage or sauerkraut.

It was the French, known for their love of aromatic spices, who began calling it mustard, because they made it by mixing the crushed seeds with an unfermented wine called "must."

In medieval times, mustard was so popular with the French court that King Louis XI always took along a pot when invited out to a banquet, apparently fearful that his hosts would forget to serve it.

Some night when you are having roast beef, this mustard sauce will give it a lift.

Toothbrushing Program Being Taught In Schools

By SANDI LATIMER LOGAN, Ohio (UPI) — Conditions in Appalachia are so poor that some families don't even own toothbrushes, and some school children have never brushed their teeth.

With the help of Dr. James Henahan, a dental consultant for the Ohio Department of Health, toothbrushing is joining the three R's in some elementary schools in the southeastern area of the state.

The toothbrushing program is being introduced in four elementary schools: Marion in Morgan County, Salisbury in Meigs County, Nashport in Muskingum County and Frankfort in Ross County. Henahan said they were chosen because they had the best facilities.

Henahan's program teaches youngsters how and when to brush their teeth. He is helped by two registered hygienists, Linda Miller and Connie Zsombok, who are certified to teach dental health.

The hygienists work with second and third grade teachers, orienting them in a program for teaching dental health.

The three-year pilot program will be expanded in each of the next two years. By the end of that time, Henahan hopes that students in the first six grades of the schools will have been reached.

"The program includes individual oral hygiene to see that by the end of the three years the children's mouths are clean, if they brush and how they brush," said Henahan. "The program has nothing to do with cavities or X-rays."

The Ohio Department of Health furnishes materials, including toothbrushes. The students themselves must bring toothpaste.

"If the students can't furnish their own toothpaste, maybe some organization in the area can provide that," Henahan said. "If we (Department of Health) walk in with the toothpaste, that constitutes an endorsement."

"The idea of the program is

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My husband tossed his brown paper bag on the counter the other night as he dragged in from work.

"Another day . . . another lunch!" I chirped.

"Why do I always have the feeling I'm having a prescription filled?" he asked.

"What kind of a crack is that? Don't you like the lunches I send?"

"It's not what I would call a religious experience."

"What is wrong with them?"

"We don't seem to be able to communicate," he said flatly.

"For example, when you send a plastic bag full of bacon-bit cookies, and I bring the cookies home, that means I do not want to eat the cookies. I have no intention of eating the cookies. The cookies will make me sick. I cannot work when I am sick."

"I don't know what cookies you are talking about."

"The ones you've been sending every day since Christmas."

"The ones shaped like Christmas bells and the ding dong is a bacon bit?"

"Those are the ones."

"You said you liked them."

"I said they were interesting."

"Same thing."

"It is not the same thing. I like Mary Tyler Moore. Henry Kissinger is interesting."

"It's not easy packing lunches," I sulked.

"Why don't you hold the fruit for a few days until it gets well?"

"Why?"

"One more day and the apple will go into the Guinness Book of Records for endurance."

"That's not funny," I said.

"I didn't mean it to be. How do you think I feel when a guy at the next desk looks over and says, 'Hey, what's in that sandwich?' and I have to read the label on it."

"What was wrong with the sandwich?"

"You've heard of instant replay?"

"I am always open to suggestions," I said evenly.

"Okay, why don't you get one of those wide-mouth thermoses for hot things?"

I looked at him. "They don't make them in your size."

Communication is overrated.

It's His Privilege To Change Name

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a direct descendant of General Joseph Hooker, who served valiantly in the Civil War. I do not know how my family name became a synonym for prostitute, whore or harlot, but I find it very offensive. There are numerous other Hookers who are respectable, law-abiding citizens, and I am sure I speak for them when I say we Hookers are slandered by this commonly accepted, immoral connotation.

I have two daughters and a son, and the girls especially have been embarrassed numerous times by people who have made jokes about their being a couple of "hookers."

My son is seriously considering changing his name because his fiancée doesn't want to be a "Hooker," and she says if she has daughters, she doesn't want them to be "Hookers," either.

Am I overly sensitive? Or have I a point?

A PROUD HOOKER

DEAR PROUD: You have a point. Little can be done about thoughtless people who use your family name as a synonym for a woman of the streets, but I'll print your letter as a reminder. Also, if your son wants to change his name, it's his privilege.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a guy who is so cheap that he won't marry the mother of his kids because she is on welfare and it pays for all her doctor and hospital bills?

We are a young married couple who worry about the high cost of living but struggle along, trying to pay for doctor and hospital bills, the house we are buying and our taxes.

Our neighbors have been living together for three years. He makes more money than I do, but he told me that he would be a fool to marry his "old lady" because she'd lose all those benefits from welfare.

It burns me up to see them enjoying all the extra money they have from such a fraud while they laugh at us honest people.

BURNED FATHER

DEAR BURNED: I agree, it's a rotten, unjust situation. But what is the alternative? Forcing people to marry? The attendant evils to that would be even worse.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a slightly flabby male in my mid-30s who occasionally wears a corset under a turtleneck or other outfit where "midriff bulge" gives me a particularly unsightly appearance. It's not too uncomfortable, and it greatly improves the way I look.

When someone once asked me how I "lost" so much weight, I made the mistake of telling him the truth about the corset. Now I'm the butt of jokes from some of the guys at work.

What's wrong with a man wearing a corset or some kind of girdle? Men aren't ashamed to wear padded shoulders, elevated shoes and hair pieces. They have as much right as women to do whatever is necessary to improve their appearance. Yet when a man buys any kind of a support to firm up his stomach, he lies about it and says it's doctor's orders for a bad back.

What do you think about this, Abby? Women want equality. Well, so do men!

PALO ALTO

DEAR PAL: For my part, a man can wear anything he wants to wear for any reason. And if he's concerned about what others think, he's making a problem where none exists.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Cox Is Qualified For The Job

Greenville's city election is over and we will have a new mayor, along with one new face on the City Council in December.

Percy Cox, who has been on the City Council for 12 years was elected in convincing fashion, defeating incumbent mayor S. Eugene West.

Cox polled 2,335 votes to 1,496 for West, while the third candidate, Willis Stancill received 208 votes.

Cox's one-sided victory was decisive, not only because of the number of votes he received, but also because every Cox vote had to be written in on the ballot since Cox did not file for the office and his name did not appear on the ballot. Following the filing deadline, Cox announced that he would seek election to the mayor's office on a write-in campaign.

Cox has consistently been strong in the voting each time he has run for City Council and for the past eight years he has served as mayor-pro-tem.

In the council race there was only one change in the six persons who have been serving. Rev. William Hadden was elected to fill the seat vacated by Cox.

The top vote getter in the council balloting was Millie McGrath, the only woman member of the council. The mayor pro-tem position is now vacant (because of Cox's elevation to mayor). While it is not legally required, traditionally the top candidate in the voting has been named mayor pro-tem, and Mrs. McGrath has said that she would like to have the job. The final decision will be up to the new council when it is sworn in in December.

We don't see any reason why the new Council can't have a productive and progressive two years. All of the council members have at least one term's experience, except Rev. Hadden, and most of them have a number of year's service.

Mayor-Elect Cox is as well grounded in the workings of city government as any one possibly could be. He has proven tremendously popular with the voters in election-after-election.

Cox said after being elected that his "one big objective right now is to help bring harmony among the City Council, the County Commissioners and all the different community boards and commissions we have to work with." He said he would "work hard to see what we can do to get more understanding and better working relations."

Cox obviously enjoys tremendous prestige throughout the city and we would like to think that if anyone can bring about harmonious relations between the city, county and university communities Percy Cox will be able to.

Leaving Standard Tests

For more years than most of us can remember, American school children have been taking nationally standardized tests. Now comes that National Association of Elementary School Principals to say that the tests are biased, meaningless, deceptive, uninformative, and altogether wrong. This is an old controversy, but it merits renewed attention.

The association has devoted the whole of the summer issue of its magazine, "Principal," to a devastating assault upon these familiar tests. The several authors, attacking from different quarters, cannot find a single good thing to say about them. Paul L. Houts, editor of the magazine, says the tests, well-intended in the beginning, have become "a bogey that haunts us and troubles our sleep."

The issue must concern parents everywhere. The National Education Association estimates that 200 million achievement tests forms are used each year in

Other Editors Say Logic Wins

(The Wilson Times)

When you take a stand and it is based on sound principles and judgment you will win. This is the position Dr. William Friday, president of the University of N.C. system, is in since the federal officials of HEW have backed down from insisting that North Carolina place a planned veterinary school at predominantly black N.C. Agricultural and Technical State University at Greensboro.

Behind the HEW request to place the school at Greensboro was the threat of cutting off millions of dollars in federal funds to the university system.

There is logic in the reasoning of Dr. Friday. Riding up to Durham on Sunday you pass the green pastures and white painted buildings used by N.C. State University in the livestock programs. With the majority of agricultural interests centered in N.C. State University, the veterinary medicine school belongs at N.C. State University.

HEW officials gave in grudgingly, saying "they knew that where there are institutional deficiencies, these must be corrected first before new programs are authorized."

The question is one of desegregation and by putting the new graduate school at the largely white and more affluent branch of the university system, North Carolina was further increasing inequities in the quality of education offered at the two schools, according to the HEW officials.

The issue of locating the veterinary school may be closed but according to the discussion that followed there are other matters relating to desegregation, which are yet to be answered, although Dr. Friday said many of HEW's points were answered in a report sent to the agency about the same time that HEW warned the university system.

One point is settled and this is the location of the veterinary school at North Carolina State University.

Bankers Feel Responsibility

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If financial default became a probability in his home town, said J. Rex Duwe, new president of the American Bankers Association, he would be eager to help but not to the point of risking depositors' funds.

"I would try to work with the community to help it become fiscally responsible and try to match spending with receipts. I would do everything I could but that doesn't mean lending money it couldn't pay back."

The greatest social irresponsibility that can be committed by a banker, said Duwe, 57, who on Wednesday took over for one year the leadership of the nearly 14,000-member commercial bank group, is to risk insolvency of his bank.

This is much the same posture taken by New York City's bankers as the city tries to find solutions to its financial difficulties, and puts pressure on banks and other institutions to offer financial aid.

What makes Duwe's views unusually interesting is his background in grass-roots America, where he runs the Farmers State Bank in the tiny town of Lucas, Kan. The population is 620, up by 96 bodies since the last census, according to a check with the county clerk.

Lucas has almost no unemployment, "only those who don't want to work," Duwe said. It has little crime because it has "a large and well-equipped police force, who happens to be a friend of mine." It has, Duwe said, "a vital minority, but he too is a good friend."

It is very unlike the stereotype of New York, and New Yorkers sometimes fear that stereotype costs them sympathy. But, said Duwe, the same banking principles apply, big town or small.

In his long climb through the ranks of the association, Duwe said, "I haven't found one banker who doesn't feel a keen responsibility to his community. It is demonstrated here in New York."

New York bankers, he said, "not only have walked the first mile, but the second, third and fourth miles to keep the city afloat. I have the distinct feeling they have gone beyond where I would have gone."

Although Duwe didn't forecast it, under his formula a default would be the next step for New York City. It would mean "honing expenses down to the point where they could be paid from tax revenues."

The actual impact of default is impossible to assess, he believes, although it probably would be mainly

Heart Studies Stifled

By GENE SCHROEDER
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — One of the nation's pioneer heart surgeons says major breakthroughs in treating heart disease are being stifled by consumer activists whose threats of malpractice suits are frightening physicians.

Dr. Dwight Harken of Boston, here to deliver the keynote address to an international symposium on cardiac surgery, said in an interview Wednesday that the "well-intentioned and often good efforts" of many consumer advocates have frequently proved harmful.

"There has developed a public attitude that could kill creativity" in heart surgery, said Harken, the first surgeon to successfully remove shell fragments from the heart during World War II.

"Consumerism and overkill in demands for absolute safety have become so restrictive that many errors of omission may replace a few errors of commission."

"The public requirement that the practitioner be completely successful or be responsible if the courts is a devastating inroad."

"That any failure of a device or procedure may be penalized has stifled innovation, restricted industry and unfavorably affected the quality, distribution and cost of the delivery of health care."

Harken was the first physician to place a totally implantable pacemaker in the body and has developed heart valves, heart lung machines, instruments and surgical techniques for treating heart disease.

He said it is important that more doctors work to develop still better instruments and techniques, but the "popular growing wave of consumerism plus the epidemic of malpractice suits" now sweeping the medical community has caused hesitation among many would-be pioneers.

40 Years Ago Today

October 9, 1935

Fire early this morning gutted a single-story building on Evans Street occupied by a clothing store and tailor's shop. The stocks and equipment of both concerns were a total loss and heavy damage occurred to the building. The total loss was estimated to run from $5,000 to $6,000.

When the fire was discovered about 3 a.m., it had gained considerable headway and firemen did good work to confine it to the one store.

With lighter sales yesterday, less than a million pounds of leaf were disposed of on the Greenville tobacco market and the day's average was two cents below the high average price reached here Monday.

With the crop only about half sold, those in close touch with the market were of the opinion that the usually better prices through the month of October would bring the season's average here to the parity figure of 21 to 22 cents a pound.

THIS AFTERNOON

Familiar Slogan Returned

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina's popular slogan—"Variety Vacationland"—is back in use among travel promotion folks, having been banished in favor of another slogan nearly two years ago.

That other theme, picked in a statewide contest, is at least on extended leave, if not retired. "The Best of the South is North..." just never caught on, it seems.

The man who has made the switch is famous among sloganers. He is credited with coming up with that world-famous "Virginia is for Lovers" theme, but doesn't believe such a lucky bolt of lightning will strike twice. North Carolina, he says, doesn't particularly need a slogan.

William Arnold, a 39-year-old Greenville native who left North Carolina for a newspaper job and spent the last 10 years as assistant director of the Virginia travel promotion operation is now head of the travel division in North Carolina.

Can Be Corny

Slogans, Arnold believes, have to be just right, or they wind up sounding corny.

"Virginia is for Lovers" was, by his own estimation, a great international success—but a freak: the result of good luck, good timing, and not likely to happen again.

To many Tar Heels, Variety Vacationland is an emotional phrase and many will be happy to see its return, although on a limited basis. A new bumper sticker in red, white, and blue will sport the theme.

Magazine advertisements to be launched this winter will tell another story—without the "Best of..." business which so many found trite. The idea, Arnold said, is to develop a theme with continuity in the advertisements, but without limiting creativity by locking in one catch-phrase.

The basic idea in the promotion will be finding something in North Carolina.

A young married couple pictured on a beach, for instance, say they "came to North Carolina looking for fun, excitement, and romance... they found themselves."

A swanky chap posed in front of his Rolls with Biltmore House in the background says, "George Vanderbilt came looking for a home... he found one in North Carolina... a state where you can build dreams or find them."

A family came looking for high adventure without high prices. "They found it on Mt. Mitchell... highest peak in the east."

Copy with the pictures deliberately traces the state's activities from coast to mountain, with touches of the non-commercial appeal available, the variety of things to do, places to see, and so on.

A Touch Of Humor

The promotion, Arnold insists will show humor and a light approach. "There should be fun in the ads, because that's what you can find in North Carolina... and will show a lot of our people and the relaxed, easy-going atmosphere."

"Some of our most attractive features are unsophisticated things and friendly people... they don't feel obligated to prove anything to anybody; only to be themselves. So, with good humor and the nostalgia craze, we can present that picture," Arnold said.

The pitch will be aimed further away from neighboring states where heavy advertising has been done, more toward the heavily urbanized and industrialized Northeast and Midwest. "Those people are cooped up and crowded and they've had it up to here... and they are gonna take a vacation, Arnold said.

The idea is to present the North Carolina story this winter as people plan forward to next summer's trip; take advantage of the times by showing one state with a wide array of activities so that limited travel time, budget and gas will present the most vacation possible.

Arnold is working with a magazine and television budget of less than half-a-million, and with half of that already committed to TV, he thinks the magazine portion is entirely too small. It is, he said, less money than South Carolina spends, and about half what Virginia spends.

The total state travel promotion budget is about a million dollars. The travel industry should become a billion-dollar business this year for the first time.

INSIDE REPORT

Limited Victory For Ford

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Far from signaling congressional abandonment of its grabs for foreign policy, the remarkably solid vote in the House last Thursday restoring arms aid to Turkey was a case apart: a product of intense lobbying efforts by President Ford himself.

With Secretary of State Henry Kissinger keeping discreetly in the background, it was Gerald Ford who turned the tide on Turkish aid. But the President's glittering array of lobbying tools detract from the significance of the vote.

Tool No. 1: In a private Oval Office huddle last Monday with Peter Agri, publisher of the Hellenic Chronicle in Boston (probably the most influential Greek-American newspaper), Mr. Ford made the national security argument so persuasively that Agri postponed his return to Boston. He stayed here, transmitting the President's message to Capitol Hill.

Tool No. 2: Feeling compell to veto a $100 million tobacco price support bill the day before the Turkish aid vote, Mr. Ford quietly ordered the Agriculture Department to allocate $15 million worth of extra tobacco purchases under Public Law 480. That unannounced action diluted tobacco state fury over the veto.

Tool No. 3: To drive home his point that the Turkish aid-ban has endangered the North Atlantic Alliance (NATO) in the eastern Mediterranean, Mr. Ford ordered NATO Ambassador David Bruce here from Brussels to talk turkey to fence-sitting House members.

The success of these presidential tools, after humiliating failure in the vote last August, has produced a vague euphoria in high quarters here: that the White House has turned the tables on a Democratic Congress insatiable in its encroachment upon traditional foreign policy preserves of the executive.

In fact, nothing could be farther from the truth.

The Turkish arms embargo is a crystal-clear case of an intended remedy turning out worse than the disease. Beyond this case, the bitter fight between Kissinger and Congress is showing no signs of fading. That fight includes demands, from both Democrats and Republicans, that intimate details of diplomatic talks be made public, and is consequently undermining American diplomacy.

"We are being asked bluntly by foreign countries whether we can guarantee that their words won't appear in a Senate document," one foreign policy insider told us. While Kissinger is part of this problem, he is merely the top of an iceberg which formed long before he came to Washington as the most freewheeling Secretary of State in history. The iceberg started forming in the mid-1960s when Lyndon Johnson used the Tonkin Gulf resolution as legal underpinning for escalation of the Vietnam war.

It is now overwhelming the administration's foreign and national security policy. Congressional intervention, including tell-all investigations of the Central Intelligence Agency and the long delay in approving the Egyptian-Israeli Sinai agreement, undercuts this country's credibility abroad for years ahead.

The current example concerns negotiations for a new base agreement with Spain. In private talks at the United Nations between Kissinger and Pedro Cortina Mauri, Spain's foreign minister, the deadlock over a new agreement has begun to crack. But Kissinger cannot give Cortina the total assurance Spain wants that whatever deal Kissinger negotiates will end up as the "real" American position. He is unable to because a Congress increasingly more

Strength For Today

THE TRIPOD

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, had three good words with which he ordered his life. They were: believe, love, and obey.

These are the legs of a tripod upon which life may rest secure. They represent three fundamental elements—right theory, right emotion and purposeful action. We must have the right theory about life before we can live it in a satisfying fashion; and what we believe constitutes our philosophy of life. Believe the right things, said Wesley, begin with the right theory, and you have at least started in the direction of right action.

By love Wesley meant an attitude of active good will toward everyone.

With the right theory of life and the right attitude toward others, one is ready for action. This action Wesley described as "obedience." For if God has given us the truth, then the major task of life should be the searching out of that truth and obeying it.

Reveal SLA Kidnaped Patty Hearst In Retaliation

TEA. AMERICAN STYLE—First Lady Betty Ford chats with Madame Huang Chen, wife of the chief of the People's Republic of China Liaison Office, at the White House Wednesday. Mrs. Ford entertained Madame Chen at tea. (AP Wirephoto)

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnaped Patricia Hearst in retaliation for the arrest of two comrades in the murder of an Oakland school superintendent, according to an SLA document published in part by the San Francisco Examiner.

The newspaper, which did not say how it gained access to the material, printed lengthy excerpts from an SLA manuscript which explained the Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping of Miss Hearst, whose father, Randolph A. Hearst, is president of the Examiner.

The manuscript was included in a variety of written material confiscated from the San Francisco apartment where SLA members Bill and Emily Harris were living when they were arrested on Sept. 18. Miss Hearst and artist Wendy Yoshimura were arrested later the same day at another apartment they shared here.

The manuscript quoted in the Examiner, apparently written by several SLA members, said the Hearst kidnaping was aimed at securing the release of SLA "soldiers" Russell Little and Joseph Remiro, who were arrested Jan. 10, 1974, for the slaying of Marcus Foster.

"We didn't have any doubt that the Hearst family could arrange for a release of Osceola (Little) and Bo (Remiro), but we needed to know whether the pressure of their daughter's kidnaping would be enough to put this power into operation," the manuscript said.

"We were f--- p---off that the pigs had our two brothers and we all made a commitment at that time to come back strong. One of the objectives of the kidnaping was to test how much bargaining power we needed to get our comrades released."

Little and Remiro were convicted this year of the 1973 Foster slaying. They have been sentenced to life imprisonment.

The Examiner said the documents taken from the Harris apartment consisted of 175 to 200 pages of writings ranging from intellectual statements of revolutionary philosophy to coarse indictments of the establishment.

There were also personal histories of several SLA members and accounts of some major SLA actions, the newspaper said.

The only portion of the documents published by the Examiner was that dealing with the kidnaping of Miss Hearst. It said the SLA never directly demanded the release of Little and Remiro because Hearst's response to initial SLA demands made it apparent he would not influence authorities to free the pair.

The SLA had demanded that Hearst feed the poor people of California. He set up a $2-million food giveaway, but the SLA later denounced that effort as insincere.

In another development in the Hearst case Wednesday, 14 prosecutors who believe they have cases involving the SLA met to discuss what a source called "the order of battle" in trying their cases.

Prosecutors in Los Angeles and San Francisco are vying for the opportunity to try Miss Hearst first. She faces federal bank robbery charges in San Francisco and state kidnap, robbery and assault charges along with the Harrises in Los Angeles.

The source said Los Angeles prosecutors want to try Miss Hearst and the Harrises together to save the expense of two separate trials.

ideological in dealings with foreign countries may rebel against new agreements with right-wing distasteful Spain.

Even repeal of the Turkish arms embargo may prove only temporary. Leaders of the powerful Greek Lobby are plotting a future arms aid ban if Turkey fails to do what Kissinger predicts: settle the refugee problem on Cyprus, pull out more Turkish troops, and evacuate some of the territory seized last summer.

The question now is whether the Greek bloc in Congress will give Turkey's weak coalition government enough time to carry out Turkey's end of the bargain. With senate elections coming up in Turkey later this month, no Cyprus solution can emerge from the arms embargo repeal for many weeks. In fact, the humiliating punishment administered Turkey by Congress makes it extremely risk for Ankara to act swiftly, as though its decisions were dictated by the U.S. Congress.

Thus, realists in the Ford administration say the odds are about even whether Congress will restrain itself from administering another dose of punishment to Turkey. That would simply underline the harsh fact that Thursday's vote, far from a watershed, was a congressional aberration resulting from unique presidential pressure. The struggle for control of U.S. Foreign policy will get worse before it gets any better.

"We need a new era of public awareness that a doctor tries to give the patient something better than what he has," despite the fact that the effort may not always be successful, Harken said.

third-grade vocabulary test, for example, asks the children to check the correct multiple-choice definition of such words as crystal, pasture, genteel, serpent, torrid, proffer, debility, recumbent, and taciturn. Such questions, in his view, are "clearly biased." The child who correctly recognizes these words has a particular kind of reading experience and a particular home environment.

Another reading test asks the child to read a short paragraph about Nan and Bob, who wanted a pet rabbit and built a trap to catch a rabbit. They baited the trap and, after a couple of days, they saw that "the trap had worked." Had they caught (a) a rabbit, (b) a wildcat, (c) a lion, (d) an ant, or (e) a dog?

"A child with some imagination," Harman remarks, "might very easily think that an animal other than a rabbit had been caught by the trap. Answering 'dog,' for instance, would be considered by the examiner an error, although it is a very plausible answer, easily defensible, and on the surface indicates that the child can read and has seen fit to put a different animal into the trap."

Houts, Taylor, Harman, and the other critics have made a successful assault. The standard national tests may well be as poor as they say they are. But parents and taxpayers surely have a right to some objective evaluation of the educational system they are compelled to support. If test results are to be kept in confidence and not released to the press, as Houts urges, how is the public to appraise the teaching performance? Are the criticisms a massive cop-out? Are the tests inept? Or is the system inept?

This may be one of those problems for which there is no satisfactory solution. For a variety of reasons, public education is in deep trouble in America. We need urgently to know the dimensions of this trouble; we need to know which approaches, techniques, and devices work, and which ones fail. The innocent pupils can't tell us; the defensive educators don't want their schools compared; parents are ill-equipped for evaluation. That leaves the standard tests. Defective as they are, we had better keep them in use.

Ducks Unlimited Dinner Scheduled For Oct. 16

Eddie Smith Jr., Greenville area chairman for Ducks Unlimited, announced that the annual DU dinner meeting is planned for Oct. 16 at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

According to Smith, the area dinner will get underway at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour, followed by dinner and the annual Ducks Unlimited program.

This year's gathering of area sportsmen will be highlighted, as in past years, by the auction of several items on behalf of Ducks Unlimited with all proceeds going to the national DU fund to further the waterfowl conservation effort.

Last year's meeting and auction raised some $16,000 for DU work as the Greenville chapter had its most successful membership meeting ever. Local officials are hoping to top last year's fund effort.

A popular area auctioneer is expected to be on hand to assist the chapter in raising funds, it was pointed out.

DU members will have an opportunity to view various displays of sporting merchandise prior to the meeting.

Again this year, one of the popular Ducks Unlimited feature films will be shown at the conclusion of the meeting.

Tickets to the dinner are available from Smith, Dr. Ed Clement, Roger Collins III, Coffman's Men's Wear, John Farley, H.L. Hodges Hardware, W.C. King, Dr. Ray Minges, Tom Taft, Pat Thomas and Jack Whichard.

Ducks Unlimited Inc., with headquarters in Chicago, is a private, non-profit membership organization dedicated to the conservation and propagation of North American's waterfowl as a valuable natural resource.

The organization was founded by a group of sportsmen and incorporated by them in 1937.

Funds raised by the local chapter and at other DU dinners and meetings are channeled into the national fund for work involving the long range welfare of the waterfowl population.

California Hospitality Is Enjoyed By Hirohito

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Japanese Emperor Hirohito fulfilled a "long cherished desire" in a daylong visit here, eating California avocados amid mariachi music and shaking hands with two of his favorite personalities, John Wayne and Mickey Mouse.

The emperor was scheduled to fly to San Diego today for a tour of the city's acclaimed zoo and to visit the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in nearby La Jolla. He flies to San Francisco late in the day for his next-to-last stop on a 15-day U.S. tour.

The emperor's plane circled the Grand Canyon briefly before arriving here from Chicago on Wednesday, and he later rode a tiny steam-engine train through a Disneyland exhibit showing the evolution of the national landmark.

The 74-year-old emperor and Empress Nagako were greeted at the amusement park gate Wednesday by Mickey Mouse and the Seven Dwarfs, then were seated on wrought-iron chairs for a command performance of the park's musical salute to the Bicentennial, America on Parade. Hirohito and his wife earlier were hosted by Mayor Tom Bradley and other state and local officials, including Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., at a lavish luncheon in the downtown Music Center.

The lunch included filet mignon and California wines, and Hirohito's interest was piqued by the avocados in his salad and the music of a Mexican mariachi band in the hall. He toasted the mayor and citizens of Los Angeles before stopping briefly to chat with actors John Wayne and Charlton Heston on the way out.

Hirohito is a Wayne fan and had met Heston some years ago in Tokyo during the Japanese premiere of the movie "Ben-Hur," the emperor's news secretary said.

The emperor ended his day by dining with members of the Japanese-American commu-

Some Wept On Seeing King

NEW YORK (AP) — King Olav V of Norway was greeted by cheering Norwegian-Americans on a visit to a home for the elderly on Staten Island.

Many residents of the home wept when they saw the king Wednesday.

"I spent my childhood in Norway and my heart is still there," said one elderly lady. "This is the first time I've seen the king."

OPORTO, Portugal (AP) — Demonstrators supporting mutinous far-left soldiers in Oporto clashed with opponents overnight and hospital authorities said between 60 and 80 persons were injured, four with bullet wounds.

Most of the victims, including six soldiers, were injured during rock-throwing battles, the hospital said.

It was impossible to fix the origin of the shots in the general confusion.

The civilian supporters of the artillery regiment rebelling against the moderate-left central government set up defensive barricades around the garrison today.

In Lisbon, meanwhile, a small leftist party, the Reorganization Movement of the Proletarian Party (MRPP), reported that one of its officials, Jose Alexandrino Sousa Antonio, drowned today as a result of an attack by members of another small leftist group which it identified as the Democratic Popular Union (UDP).

The MRPP said a group of its men was surprised while putting up wall posters and they were thrown in the Tagus River by the UDP group. Sousa Antonio was unable to swim and drowned.

At the height of the fighting in Oporto, rebel troops fired blanks at the crowd of several thousand and drove a tank into their midst in an attempt to break up the protest.

The demonstration, grouping about 5,000 members of the centrist Popular Democratic party (PPD), began in the heart of Portugal's second largest city 175 miles north of Lisbon. The demonstrators shouted their support for Portugal's current, moderate government.

Large sections of the crowd then crossed a bridge over the Douro River and headed for the rebel artillery regiments barracks, where they were confronted by a few hundred leftists who are camping outside the headquarters in support of the mutineers.

There were rock-throwing battles and charges behind makeshift wooden shields by both sides before the firing broke out and the military regiment sent in its tank.

The mutineers are demanding the reinstatement of leftist activists purged from military units.

Fear of civil war has increased in Portugal as more and more army units have taken sides between moderate leftists who control the government and the radical left which preaches revolution.

The moderates, led by the Socialists and the Popular Democrats who won two thirds of the vote in April's national elections, seek restoration of traditional discipline within the military, while the Communists have promoted dissent.

From Bar Association To Bar Tender's Role

By DARST MCNAIRY

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— From bar association to bartender is a long jump, but Greensboro lawyer Sam Shaffer is making the switch.

Shaffer, 34, will open a bar—as a fulltime venture—in Chapel Hill this month. It's not a pipedream.

A Greensboro native, Shaffer is a dedicated fan of Chapel Hill and the University of North Carolina. He has pined for a return to "The Hill" since his seven years there as undergraduate and law student, during which he was nicknamed "Troll."

The decision to go back was on the spur of the moment. He tells it like this:

"One Thursday in August, I woke up and said to myself, 'It sure would be nice to be in Chapel Hill today.'

"Saturday, I came over to a football scrimmage and enjoyed seeing old friends.

"Sunday, I said, 'Why not open bar?' Monday, I came back and found this place.

"I signed the lease on Wednesday and started on it Thursday."

Shaffer is known among many UNC alums for his favorite pastime—keeping in touch.

TV Revival By 'Howdy Doody'

MIAMI (AP) — Beginning next September, a new generation of youngsters, and possibly a lot of oldsters, will be singing "It's Howdy Doody time."

Buffalo Bob Smith, Howdy's fringe-coated sidekick, says he will revive one of television's most popular children's shows and offer the series for syndication.

Jack Drury, Smith's manager, said Wednesday that the new series is result of a hugely successful campus tour that saw nostalgic collegians and other young adults welcome Smith with open arms.

He's also known for his instant recall of UNC players and statistics in numerous sports over the last decade or two.

Shaffer has a small office at the rear of his bar and will list himself in the telephone book as an attorney. He plans to practice law, if necessary, to subsidize the bar.

"It isn't anything against practicing law. It's just that after doing it so long, you kind of get tired of it," he said.

"And I'm tired of chasing fees. When you sell beer, they pay right on the spot...not $10 now and $10 later.

And he's closer to UNC and its athletic teams.

Shaffer vows he'll still be keeping up with Carolina sports events, "all of them, except maybe fencing, which I took once and didn't like."

U.S. Pavilion Could Offer College Degree

By GENE SALTZGAVER
MOTOBU, Okinawa (UPI) — If you want a college degree in oceanography, just visit the U.S. pavilion at Japan's Expo '75.

Divers, submarines, thermal energy plants and an underwater airplane highlight the United States' vast seven-module oceanographic pavilion at Japan's Expo '75.

The pavilion, developed by the U.S. Information Agency and describing America's past relationship to the sea, current oceanographic technology and its dreams for the future, is one of the most popular at the International Ocean Exposition on this Pacific island with more than 1.5 million visitors so far.

Laurence W. Lane Jr., commissioner-general for the U.S. exhibit, said recently that the American pavilion's visitors could learn everything they need for a college degree in oceanography if they studied the whole display carefully.

"The latest technologies in oceanography are shown," Lane said. "This kind of display has never been put together before in the world."

The seven hexagonal display modules blend exhibits from both the government and private industry in emphasizing oceanographic technology.

Artifacts and exhibits depicting the American seafaring tradition dominate the pavilion's front plaza. A multiple screen motion picture in Module I shows contemporary America's involvement with the sea.

In Module II, wet suit divers in a 25,000-gallon saltwater tank demonstrate underwater cameras, while live and videotaped pictures flicker from overhead monitors.

Module III contains U.S.

developed underwater exploration equipment, including a large 3/4 scale model of the deep-sea research submarine ALVIN that can carry scientists to depths unequaled by any other operating submarine.

Also displayed is the Shark Hunter, resembling an airplane but used for subsea exploration, pollution patrols, and underwater photography. Makakai, one of America's newest submersible inspection vehicles, can descend to 600 feet.

Module IV places visitor's at the base of a huge offshore platform, with displays of safety devices for workers and divers, and Module V demonstrates the interaction between the oceans and the atmosphere, and its effect on weather. A 55-foot transparency of a reef showing divers, fish and undersea plant life forms the lower level of the demonstration tank.

A magician uses illusion to help explain ocean conservation in Module VI. The section also contains an animated two-story model of an ocean thermal energy machine to show possible future uses of the sea as a new source of energy.

In Module VII, a three-screen underwater film surrounds visitors, demonstrating man's responsibility to the sea.

Lane said he wished the pavilion had one last module to show what the United States is going in the battle against pollution, but other pavilions cover the subjects.

"Everything taken into consideration, the exposition as a whole covers all aspects of saving the seas," Lane said.

Police say they have suspicions about the motive behind the fires but they lack enough evidence to go to court.

Nance said he hoped a grand jury investigation could uncover the evidence.

The latest fire involving a restaurant or lounge occurred early Wednesday and destroyed a restaurant at the K-Mart shopping center in the southeast area of the city.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A

Charlotte fire inspector whose brother died in a lounge fire in August plans to request a grand jury probe of the city's 18 unsolved lounge fires.

Greg Nance, 28, says he will make the request as a private citizen because he suspects that the fires are related.

"I know for a fact that there is more involved in this particular case than is being opened up to the police and the fire investigators," Nance said.

Nance's brother William, 18, was one of two youths who died in a fire Aug. 25 at the Stallion Lounge, owned by the other victim's father.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—Corn prices were steady and soybeans stronger in the state Wednesday. No. 2 yellow shelled corn was 2.70-2.80 mostly 2.75 in the East and 2.70-2.90 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans were 5.16-5.30½; No. 2 red oats 1.35-1.50; and No. 2 red winter wheat 3.24-3.50.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices firmed ahead again today, spurred by a brighter outlook for New York City and a continued downturn in interest rates.

The noon Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.33 to 828.24, and issues gaining in price outstripped losers by more than a 2 to 1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers said Wall Street continued to draw hope for Wednesday's statement by Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns, which indicated a crack in the federal government's previous solid opposition to aiding New York City.

But today, Treasury Secretary William Simon reiterated the Ford administration's opposition to such aid. Traders also were reported hopeful that the continued decline in short-term interest rates might lead major banks to cut their prime lending rates Friday.

The NYSE's composite stock index added 0.40 to 46.90, while the American Exchange's market value index was up 0.48 to 84.55.

Sees Cost To Consumer

COLUMBIA (AP)—The consumer movement has "gotten out of hand" and the consumer may feel a pinch in his pocket-book because of it, the chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers said Wednesday.

David B. Meeker said his association feels the U. S. consumer is already well protected and further government interference in the form of consumer regulatory agencies could bring higher prices at the retail level.

"The consumer is our customer and we can survive only if we can make the customer happy," he said. "If a business doesn't provide the quality products and services a customer wants, the customer won't do business with it."

Also, said Meeker, the courts system offers an adequate means of redressing grievances without having to resort to "bulky" government consumer agencies.

the beginning of May, 1976. —Removal of architectural barriers — $20,000. For restructuring, remodeling and renovation of existing facilities, with particular reference to construction of ramps and other architectural devices to provide assistance to handicapped persons using the city's recreational facilities.

Following the presentation and discussions on the Community Development programs, members of the Recreation Commission heard an informal discussion by Hagerty concerning use of Greenville's recreation facilities by non-residents of the city.

Hagerty expressed concern over what he terms the continuing and growing use of the city's recreation facilities by non-residents. "I give you a problem that needs to be faced," Hagerty commented, "and it's one full of complexities."

The city manager said "the ideal situation would be for the county to participate by providing a pro-rata type of financial support."

Recreation commissioners, after discussing various suggestions and alternatives, reached a consensus that the commission needs to study the subject in depth before taking any action. Vice-chairman Mrs. John East appointed a study group consisting of Hugh Bazemore, Mrs. W. R. Woolles, and Dr. Edgar (Dick) Douglas to come up with recommendations.

Seize Cache Of Tape Decks

Swearingen of Florence under a section of the federal code prohibiting illegal reproduction of copyrighted material. No arrests have been made.

Hint Immunity Offer If Talks

DETROIT (AP) — The government may grant immunity to the son of Detroit's reputed organized crime boss in an attempt to learn more about the disappearance of ex-Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa, according to sources close to the investigation.

A federal grand jury probing Hoffa's disappearance questioned Anthony J. Zerilli, 47, for nearly an hour on Wednesday. Sources said prosecutors may grant Zerilli immunity from prosecution, which means he could be found in contempt of court and sent to jail for refusing to answer questions before the grand jury.

Zerilli has been described by authorities as the heir apparent to the leadership of the Detroit crime syndicate. He already is serving a four-year prison term in Sandstone, Minn., for conspiring to obtain a hidden interest in a Las Vegas casino.

Three times during his grand jury appearance Wednesday, he emerged to confer with his attorney, Neil Fink. Zerilli refused to talk with reporters, and Fink also refused comment.

Zerilli's father, Joseph, 78, has been named in Senate testimony as the top mob figure in Michigan, and he reportedly has eluded the FBI, which wants to talk to him in connection with the Hoffa case. Police sources said if organized crime had anything to do with Hoffa's disappearance, Joseph Zerilli would know about it. The elder Zerilli has not been seen recently at his 20-acre estate in Sterling Heights near Detroit. He also has homes in Northern Michigan, Arizona and Florida.

Oil-Grain Sale Deal Is Nearer

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S.-Soviet agreement on American grain sales may be near and could involve a separate accord for the U.S. purchase of Russian oil, government sources say.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Bell, one of the negotiators, was scheduled to arrive here today "with no assurance that an agreement had been reached" for long-term grain sales, a senior Agriculture Department official said.

But White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said there had been no snag in the grain deal and that the U.S. team's chief negotiator, Undersecretary of State Charles Robinson, had left Moscow for another meeting in Paris.

Other sources said Wednesday night, however, that Robinson had remained in Moscow in hopes of putting final touches on at least an "agreement in principle" on both grain and oil.

The sources stressed that the deal does not involve a barter of U.S. grain for Soviet oil and that the two are being considered as separate trade packages. The sources also indicated that formal agreements still could be some time off.

The sources indicated that if accords are worked out, announcements would come simultaneously from the White House and the Kremlin.

Meanwhile, President Ford is under pressure from farm groups and congressmen from rural areas to lift an embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union. Ford announced Sept. 9 that the sales moratorium would remain in effect until after a new U.S. crop report in mid-October and to allow time for negotiating a long-term grain sales agreement.

The administration acted after concern was expressed by various labor groups and others that the exports would increase U.S. food prices by driving up grain prices.

The Agriculture Department will announce a new 1975 harvest estimate on Friday. It had been implied strongly that if record crops are still indicated — as they had been earlier in hopes of putting final touches on at least an "agreement in principle" on both grain and oil.

The lid on grain sales was triggered in July when Russia bought 9.8 million metric tons (more than 2,200 pounds each) of grain from U.S. firms to help make up drought-shortened harvests of its own. Under threat of a ship-loading stoppage by maritime unions, Ford halted further sales to Russia.

Indira's Legislation Is Scrutinized By Judges

By PAUL CHUTKOW
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A five-judge panel of India's highest court today began considering the validity of legislation freeing Prime Minister Indira Gandhi from a conviction of corrupt electioneering that could drive her from power.

Seven weeks of courtroom drama ended with Mrs. Gandhi's political opponents again arguing that on the court's decision hangs the future of democracy in India.

The court, which has a long tradition of independence from politics, gave no indication when a decision might be forthcoming, but opposition lawyers estimated it would be at least two weeks.

If the court upholds the retroactive legislation, the case will be over and Mrs. Gandhi's hold on power will appear unbreakable. But if the court strikes down the constitutional and statutory legislation, both sides will return to the courtroom to argue the merits of the appeal of Mrs. Gandhi's June 12 conviction by the Allahabad high court that she illegally used government officials to help her 1971 parliamentary election campaign.

Shanti Bhushan, chief attorney for Mrs. Gandhi's political opponents, said he was "98 per cent certain" the supreme court would strike down a constitutional amendment nullifying retroactively the right of courts to hear an election case dispute involving the prime minister.

For the case as a whole, Bhushan said the chances were "55-45" the court would rule in his favor. "Even if the case as a whole goes against me, my hope is that the court will strike down the constitutional amendment," Bhushan said in an interview. "This amendment would lay down a principle which would be harmful to democracy," he said. "What happens in an individual case is not that important. What happens to democracy is."

The court will also consider an election laws amendment—passed by Parliament in August just before Mrs. Gandhi's appeal was to open—removing the specific charges of which Mrs. Gandhi was convicted. The amendment in effect declared that what were offenses were no longer infractions.

Bhushan based his case on the claim that the retroactive legislation was an unconstitutional violation of a 1973 supreme court ruling that the fundamental structures of Indian democracy cannot be changed.

Rampants Open Loop With Gryphons

Rose High School's Rampants, still red-faced from their 38-0 licking at the hands of Reid Ross last week, open Division I play

Friday night, hosting Rocky Mount's Gryphons.

The 7:30 p.m. game will be Homecoming for Rampant graduates and fans.

At stake will be the Division I title won last year by the Rampants, and a third-straight chance to represent the conference in the State 4-A playoffs at the end of the season.

Of course, the game won't decide who gets one of the two bids the conference receives this year, but Rose Coach Dave Bumgarner is anxious to get off to a good start in the league—and to renew some of the enthusiasm lost last week.

"I guess if we could list a whole page full of reasons, why we lost, we could. But the biggest reason was that we just weren't mentally ready to play football," Bumgarner said of last week's first loss of the season. "This is one of the biggest problems of coaching, so I guess you have to call it a coaching error when you don't get the players ready. We had a long, comfortable trip down to Fayetteville, and this may have helped to lull us.

"Then, physically, we did everything wrong we could do. We didn't block, tackle, or run the ball well. We fumbled and we threw interceptions. It was error after error."

Bumgarner noted that Reid Ross was excited about the game. "It was a prestigious game for them. But it didn't mean as much to us. This is one reason why I don't like to play games like this. When you have to travel so far from home, you can't really get a rivalry going. I'd much rather play someone closer, like Southern and Eastern Wayne, instead of Jacksonville and Reid Ross. But they wouldn't schedule us."

The coach added that he didn't think Reid Ross was 38 points better than the Rampants. "They are a good team. I'm going to take that from them. But I don't believe that they are that much better. They played an outstanding game, and we played very, very poorly."

"I hope to be able to continue playing competitive tennis through college. I haven't really thought much about where I'd like to go."

Serena, too, is glad that more girls are getting the opportunity to play sports. "It's only fair. I'm glad—as a girl—that more girls are being recognized now. The women should receive just as much attention."

For her, the attention seems to be coming sooner than expected.

The game could turn into a blessing in disguise. "It's most important that our kids realize what it's all about. It's do or die from here on out. Getting beaten could have taught us a lesson. I'm glad it happened when it did if he had to lose one. It was just fortunate that we got on one hurt badly."

One regular did sustain an injury, Willie Best, a defensive tackle. He'll probably miss Friday's game.

"When you have a six-term conference, it doesn't leave very much room for losses," Bumgarner warned. "Oh, you could still have an outside chance at 4-1, but 5-0 will probably win it. Three-two will probably be left out in the cold."

Bumgarner describes Rocky Mount as a typical Gryphon team. "They do a lot of things impressively," he said.

The Gryphons come into the game with a 2-3 record, however. They lost their opener to Tarboro, 8-0, then came back with a 20-12 win over New Hanover. They then lost to Goldsboro, 12-6, before downing Broughton by 21-6. They again lost, 27-7, to Hillside. Last week they were open.

"They've gone loss-win-loss-win-loss," Bumgarner said. "I hope their 'win' came up during their open date."

Bumgarner noted that the Gryphons have a good defensive unit, and very good running backs. "William Battle is one of the best in this part of the state," he said. "They have a good passing game out of their power offense. They'll probably run a very tight defense against us to stop our running game."

Last week, the loss hurt only pride and the won-lost record. This week, the results will mean position in the conference race.

Matney Among Girls Getting More Play

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In these days of Billie Jean King and women's lib, Title IX is having its effect on the sporting scene across America. And Greenville is no exception.

During the coming years there is going to be an explosion in women's sports—in fact—it's already under way.

One facet that is already underway is in girls' tennis on the high school level, and Rose High School's Serena Matney is glad that it has come along.

So far this year, Miss Matney, the number two singles player on the Rose High School team has put together a 4-2 mark, best on the team.

And surprisingly, she's only been playing just a short time. "I started playing when I was 13," Serena said. Now a junior at Rose, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Matney, has just over three years of experience behind her. Most of the early play was on her own, with little instruction. "I did attend a clinic sponsored by the Jaycees, but I really didn't take too many lessons until this past year."

There was no particular reason for her gaining interest in tennis. "I just like outdoor sports," she said. "I guess that was why I started playing."

Last year, as a sophomore, Serena tried out for the Rose team and worked her way up to the number four singles. This year, she's moved past two others to the number two spot.

"She played in a lot of tournaments over the summer, and this helped her a lot," Gwen Waller, coach of the team said. "She's also been taking private lessons, and this has brought her along too."

Serena agreed with her coach as to why she has come along on the team. "The experience of playing in sanctioned tournaments was real good for me. I got to play against some of the best juniors in the state." While she didn't reach the finals of any of the tournaments, Serena feels that she did improve.

She also joins in with Marty East, the number one singles player, to form the number one doubles unit for Rose, but admits that she likes singles more. "When you play doubles, a lot depends on how you or your partner are. If you're not having a good day, a lot of the load then falls on your partner. It's hard for both of you to have your best day at the same time." The two played in the sectionals as a doubles team last year, and appear headed that way again, with hopes of making it through to the state finals.

A member of the Greenville Tennis Club, Serena was the runner-up in the junior tournament last year.

"My goal for this year is to improve on my record from last year, when I was 8-4," she said. Currently, she's headed that way.

When now involved in tennis, Miss Matney is a home room representative on the student council, and a violin student. After nine years of lessons on the instrument, Serena plans to major in music when she goes to college.

"I hope to be able to continue playing competitive tennis through college. I haven't really thought much about where I'd like to go."

Serena, too, is glad that more girls are getting the opportunity to play sports. "It's only fair. I'm glad—as a girl—that more girls are being recognized now. The women should receive just as much attention."

For her, the attention seems to be coming sooner than expected.

This time Notre Dame will be on the rebound after having lost 10-3 to Michigan State following victories in its first three games. Notre Dame is tied for 15th nationally.

North Carolina is 2-2, having beaten Virginia last week following losses to Ohio State and Maryland and an opening victory over William and Mary.

Four Leagues Oppose Playoffs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Representatives of at least four major conferences appear set to oppose formation of a long-awaited national collegiate football council, declined to give a breakdown of the vote among a 17-member football championship feasibility committee which recommended the playoff.

Prior to the Wednesday announcement, however, the AP learned that the tabulation was 8-4 for advancement of the proposal, with five committee members absent from a meeting last weekend.

There will be one other conference game, in which Wake Forest will be playing at Clemson against a Tiger team looking for its first victory.

Clemson has passed for 724 yards, compared to the opponents' 188. However, the four opponents have rushed for 1,295 yards against Clemson's 529 in the four games.

Tigerettes Take Win

AHOSKIE — Williamston High School's girls' tennis team gained a 6-3 victory over Ahoskie yesterday, snapping a two-game losing streak.

Williamston won four of the six singles matches, and extended the two they lost to three sets. They came back with victories in two of the three doubles to sew up the victory.

The win boosted the Williamston record to 4-3 overall and 3-2 in Northeastern Conference play. Williamston closes out the regular season on Monday, traveling to Washington. The conference tournament will be next Wednesday and Thursday at Edenton.

Duke's rushing leader, Al Gore, did not make the trip to Pitt last week because of an ankle injury. His absence was felt as the Blue Devils managed only 33 yards on the ground in a 14-0 loss. Duke quarterback Bob Corbett did pass for 191 yards, and the defense held Pitt to 284 total yards. Duke is at Army this

Recreation Football

Wahl-Coates and the White team captures victories in the Recreation Department's flag and tackle football programs yesterday.

Wahl-Coates downed Eastern, 13-0, in the flag game. Steven White scored the first Wahl-Coates touchdown on the year in the first period. Ryner Bullock passed to Richard Holloman for the PAT and a 7-0 score.

Bowling

Bullock hit Steven Holloman with a 15-yard pass for a touchdown in the fourth period for the final 13-0 score.

Defensive standouts for Eastern were Dwayne Fisher, Joe Joyner and Mont Carter; for Wahl-Coates, Donald Russell, Steven Wysokowski, and Billy Kittrell.

The January playoff would involve a two-team or four-team format.

Voting on the proposal during the Jan. 14-17 annual NCAA convention in St. Louis will be delegates of 134 Division I schools, many of them faculty representatives.

Cincinnati Planning To Steal Their Way To World Series Title

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — After stealing the National League pennant, the Cincinnati Reds are planning the biggest haul of all — the World Series.

The Cincinnati gang, which stole bases almost at will in a three-game NL playoff sweep of the Pittsburgh Pirates, prepared to hijack the rich world championship of baseball with a similar plan.

"We can steal, we can hit, we have the bullpen," says Pete Rose, brash ringleader of the National League champions. "We did everything against the Pirates. I don't see why we should stop now."

The Reds worked out today in Cincinnati and planned to jet into Boston Friday morning before taking on the American League champions in the World Series opener on Saturday. The Red Sox went through a similar workout in cozy Fenway Park.

Although the Red Sox will have the advantage of the extra home game in this best-of-seven series, the Reds have been installed as slight favorites by virtue of their extraordinarily successful season.

Led by Rose — alias the "Cincinnati Kid" — the Reds flashed through the National League West and knocked off 108 victories en route to the division pennant.

Among the muscleboys on the Cincinnati club are Johnny Bench and Tony Perez, two right-handed hitters who'll no doubt have their batting eyes fixed on the friendly left field wall in Fenway called "The Green Monster."

Bench, possibly the best catcher in baseball, was bothered by a sore arm for most of the year but still managed to wallop 28 homers and bat in 110 runs. Perez, the first baseman almost traded by the Reds last winter, belted 20 homers and had 109 RBI. Second baseman Joe Morgan, another strong wheel on the "Big Red Machine" and possibly its most important cog, had his best season in 1975 — a .327 batting average, 94 runs batted in and 67 steals.

To be sure, the Reds have an exquisite all-around team that, excels on defense as well as offense. Shortstop Dave Concepcion plays at third baseman Rose's side and rounds out the infield. The outfield includes three players with some of the most powerful arms in baseball — George Foster in left, Cesar Geronimo in center and Ken Griffey in right.

Along with the lusty hitting and the gorgeous defense, the Reds have a pitching staff that includes Don Gullett, the opening day starter, Fred Norman and Gary Nolan and a bullpen anchored by Clay Carroll, one of the best in the game.

The Red Sox, who are starting unaffable Luis Tiant in the first game, know exactly what they have to do to beat the rugged National League kings.

Points out catcher Carlton Fisk: "You can't stop good baserunners. But if the pitchers do their job and keep them off the bases, that's how you stop them."

If Tiant pitches anywhere like he did in last week's American League playoffs against the Oakland A's, the Red Sox are in business. Boston's "old man" pitched a three-hitter against the three-time world champions, triggering the Red Sox to a shocking three-game sweep.

The Red Sox, in the World Series for the first time since 1967 and only the third time in owner Tom Yawkey's career in Boston, are a perfect blend of age and youth.

Outfielder Carl Yastrzemski, the respected veteran who is one of the two players left from the 1967 Red Sox team, calls this year's edition the best Boston club he's ever seen. Third baseman Rico Petrocelli, the considered "the best defensive catcher in the American League."

"We would rather have played Oakland because all of their catchers were suspect," said Rettenmund, a utility player who came to Cincinnati two seasons ago.

He said there is no chance the Reds will take the Red Sox lightly.

"Every one we've talked to said we are going to be very surprised by Boston. In the past you didn't worry about Boston. They usually beat themselves. But this Boston team is for real," he said.

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University's women's volleyball team suffered a pair of losses yesterday, bowing to the University of North Carolina-Wilmington.

The Bucette varsity dropped a 2-1 decision. The ECU team won the first game, 15-11, then were outfront, 19-17, in the second contest. Wilmington then gained a 15-7 win in the finale.

East Carolina was hampered by missing on of its setters, Gail Chamblee, who missed the game with a knee injury. The other setter, Marie Chamblee, went out of action in the second game with a sprained ankle.

Reds To Watch Tiant Closely

CINCINNATI (AP) — A "Battle of the Balk" is brewing for the 1975 World Series.

The Cincinnati Reds are ready to raise a fuss over the delivery of Boston Red Sox pitcher Luis Tiant. Ex-American Leaguer Merv Rettenmund thinks the Reds have a solid case.

"He'd be called for balking if he were in the National League," said Rettenmund, a former hitting star on two Baltimore World Series teams.

The controversy surfaced Wednesday when the Boston Globe reported that Reds Manager Sparky Anderson sent films to major league officials raising the issue.

Anderson denied sending films, saying the matter "will be up to the umpires and the president of the league."

The Reds, who send left-hander Don Gullett against Tiant in Saturday's Series opener, rely on base stealing as a major weapon in their high-powered offense. Cincinnati set an all-time record with a success percentage over .820 for the season and ran at will against Pittsburgh on the way to a 3-0 sweep in the National League finals.

The Reds stole a record seven bases in the second game against Pittsburgh and finished with a perfect 11-for-11.

Rettenmund describes Tiant's move to first base as "lightning fast but he doesn't step, he jumps. You definitely have to come to a stop before going to the plate."

"If they call him for it, we'll get the big leads," he said. Tiant's trademark is his tenacity, says Rettenmund. "He doesn't throw hard, but his location is exceptional and he has all that herky-jerky stuff."

Rettenmund said Cincinnati could have exploited Oakland easier than Boston because Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk is considered "the best defensive catcher in the American League."

Candidates Drawn To N.H.

By STEWART POWELL
CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — A Brooklyn, New York man booked a conference room at a sprawling white hotel to declare he wanted to be president. Grady Ocumings III did not show up, but two reporters did. The Highway Hotel billed the unannounced — and absent — Democratic presidential candidate $23.10.

And while Missouri evangelist Billy Jo Clegg and his running mate were off meeting voters, someone stole their headquarters.

The self-proclaimed "five star general in God's army" said either rabble rousing teenagers or candidates threatened by his candidacy walked off with the $150 tent.

New Hampshire, traditional site of the nation's first presidential primary, attracts White House aspirants from all walks of life, the famous and the not so famous. Candidates campaigning for president five months before election day range from senators, former governors and a congressman to rookies planning to begin elected politics at the top — in the White House.

The contest next Feb. 24, may put President Ford against his threatened conservative challenger, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

And seven Democrats already crowd the nation's seventh smallest state, although only five have pledged to enter the primary. The Democrats include Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, former Govs. Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Terry Sanford of North Carolina, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp and Sargent Shriver, a Kennedy in-law and 1972 vice presidential candidate.

But in many cases the most colorful presidential candidates remain the ones with the least to lose.

Chief Burning Wood, a Republican, is back. One eighth Oneida Indian, the 57-year-old Kentucky native vows to shed his headress this time and tone down his speeches.

In 1972 while campaigning for vice president, he got caught filing a voter registration card listing himself as A. Marion Burton, a woman delegate to the GOP national convention. His legal name is Austin Marion Burton.

Others also have encountered difficulty with the law. Arthur Blessitt, 34, the "minister of Sunset Strip" who built a reputation in the 1960s helping drug users and runaways in Los Angeles, got arrested walking through the state capital with his 12-foot wooden cross. He spent a weekend in jail before a local judge dismissed a disorderly conduct charge against him because of the "inadequacy of the complaint."

Candidates are drawn here from beyond the continental United States. Joseph A. Ryan, for example, campaigns against big oil as Hawaii's only announced candidate for president.

Others have experience in the presidential primary. Don Dumont of Chicago, a 1924 graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., who once worked for the good Humor Ice Cream Co., campaigned as a Republican in the two previous contests. Now he wears his Ford administration WIN button upside down. He says it stands not for "Whip Inflation Now" as the Ford administration would like to think, but rather for NIM — "Need Immediate Miracle."

One middle aged woman has expressed interest in the presidential primary, although she was turned away April 30 at the Secretary of State's office because she arrived 10 months before the filing period opened in the presidential contest.

Prior to one campaign trip, the New York-based stewardess called a reporter and asked which party dominated state politics — Republican or Democrat. Told the GOP held the edge on party registrations, Peggy Hoening replied, "Oh good, I was going to run as a Republican."

FRED HARRIS, former Oklahoma senator, campaigns in a coffee shop Walpole, in preparation for the New

Eastern Airlines Asks Voluntary Wage Freeze

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines, beset by serious financial problems, has asked labor unions to accept a 12-month wage freeze and a no-strike pact in return for the industry's first profit-sharing plan.

Frank Borman, Eastern president and former astronaut, said the plan offered Wednesday to the Miami-based carrier's 32,000 employees would allow workers to share one-third of any profits the firm might earn during the next five years.

Eastern also offered to withdraw from the airline industry's mutual-aid pact, under which airlines grounded by strikes are paid by their competitors, if the unions accept binding arbitration. The unions vehemently oppose the pact.

"We're going to have to intelligently solve our own problems or go the route of nationalization," Borman said at a press conference.

He said that if employees accept the freeze, the airlines would raise pay by 8 per cent in 1977.

"It's a good program. I hope it will sell," he added.

Borman asked unions to reply by Oct. 17.

Eastern reported a $2.9 million loss for the first seven months of 1975, but a $647,000 profit for August. Earlier this year, Eastern was projecting losses of $30 million for 1975.

In June, Borman endorsed a voluntary pay-cut plan that asked employees to take temporary cuts ranging from 3 per cent for those with salaries of $10,000 to 8 per cent for company officers. The money would have been returned with interest if Eastern showed a profit.

The program was not accepted by the unions, which demanded that the airline withdraw from the mutual aid pact.

Last month, the 1,800 pilots and 990 flight engineers of Pan American World Airways agreed to forego $2 million in wages to avert the layoff of 175 employees.

Erskine Caldwell Says Poverty Not Improved

By BILLIE BROWN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Poverty in the South is as acute as ever, even though it has moved from rural tenant shacks to urban hovels, novelist Erskine Caldwell says. The author of "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre" returned to his native state this week to talk about a new edition of a 1937 book he did with photographer Margaret Bourke-White, then his wife. "You Have Seen Their Faces" chronicled in words and pictures the plight of the southern sharecropper.

In the introduction to the new edition, he writes, "The tortured face of poverty was not an appealing sight in the Deep South in the 1930s. Now, 40 years later, whether in full view or in profile, the shrivled visage has not been improved by the passage of time."

Caldwell told graduate students in sociology at Atlanta University he believes poor people are better off in the country than in the city.

Cities, he said, blur individualism, undermine the family and breed crime and violence.

"Once you eliminate so-called slums and build a high-rise barack for people to live in, you're right back where you started," said Caldwell. "I think there has to be more individuality than that."

High-rise urban renewal projects "look nice on the outside, but something happens on the inside of these installations," he said. "The dope pusher, the prostitute, the numbers man — they feed on each other."

Caldwell, born in 1903 in Coweta County, Ga., said his novels depict "a sociology of life — the way people feel and what they do and think."

The vivid novels made him unpopular for many years in Georgia.

He recalls the time his parents were recognized while driving through a small town in East Georgia and were run into a ditch by another driver. "That's where you belong," the man told his father.

Rep. Beard To Address Dinner

Congressman Robin L. Beard Jr. of the Sixth Congressional

REP. ROBIN BEARD

District of Tennessee will be the principal speaker Saturday evening at a Republican dinner at the American Legion Building here.

The dinner is being held in conjunction with the District Republican Convention scheduled for Saturday afternoon at the Pitt County Courthouse.

Republican delegates are expected to be present from all of the 21 counties comprising the state's First Congressional District.

Beard, a native of Knoxville, Tenn., began his political career in 1972 by defeating four-term Democratic Congressman William Anderson in the Sixth District, making him the youngest congressman ever elected in that district.

He is the eighth ranking minority member of the House Armed Services Committee and also served on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

The Congressman attended Montgomery Bell Academy and received a B.A. degree in history with a minor in political science from Vanderbilt University in 1962.

Popularity At New Low

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pollster Louis Harris says the popularity of elected officials has dropped to an all-time low because people believe elected officials are out of touch with the public's needs.

Harris told the National Conference of State Legislatures Wednesday that a recent poll conducted by his organization showed that the American electorate was unwilling to support politicians "who would try to soothe away their worries with false and easy promises (or) those who would try to panic them by appeals to easy fear."

Harris' speech drew a standing ovation, and the delegates jammed a press room to get a copy of the talk. Several said they needed the information because it could help them remain in office.

Harris told the delegates that politicians have been unwilling to come up with hard solutions to such problems as the energy crisis and recession for fear they would lose popularity.

He said, however, that polls have shown Americans respect a strong stand on controversial issues.

"Make no mistake about it," he said. "The public is finished with the old politics."

Field Demonstration Of Conservation Equipment

The Pitt County Soil and Water Conservation District and the North Carolina Chapter of Land Improvement Contractors of America are sponsoring a field demonstration of conservation equipment and techniques Friday from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. on the Woodrow Wooten farm located approximately seven miles west of Greenville on Highway 43 near Bruce.

A variety of conservation practices will be constructed during the day using some of the most modern construction equipment available. Twelve to 15 manufacturers will be demonstrating various equipment including several trenching machines using various types of laser control. A bulldozer utilizing laser control will also be demonstrated along with scrapers and motor graders.

The Soil Conservation Service is providing the technical assistance for planning and designing the conservation measures being installed on the Wooten farm.

The equipment will operate throughout the day installing subsurface drainage, laying plastic tubing, backfilling, constructing waterways, land leveling and road grading.

The purpose of the field demonstrations is three-fold, according to E.T. Allen Jr., president of the NC-LICA. The LICA will get some exposure with farmers and land improvement contractors from Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, hopefully getting some new members. The manufacturers hope to stimulate interest in their equipment through the demonstrations. The Soil Conservation District wants to promote good soil conservation through new techniques and get farmers and contractors interested in soil conservation.

The Lion's Club will have a lunch meal available at the demonstration site. The demonstration will be held Saturday if it rains on Friday.

The NC-LICA fall meeting will be held following the demonstrations at 6:30 Friday night at the American Legion Hut. Howard M. Ellis, a native of Beaufort County and professor emeritus at North Carolina State University will speak on "Historical Geology of North Carolina."

Says Americans Given Unnecessary Education

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American schools provide more formal education than a student needs, and high school or college should be shortened by a year or more, says a former U.S. commissioner of education.

Harold Howe II, who held the top education post from 1965 to 1968, also said Tuesday that adults should be allowed a year or more of education later in life.

Speaking at a four-day conference sponsored by the Washington Journalism Center, Howe, now a vice president of the Ford Foundation, said that 16 years of U.S. education — starting at age 6 and ending at 21 — is a luxury no other country has.

"People get fed up with classrooms after being in them for 16 years," he said, adding that it would be preferable for adults to be allowed a year of formal education at government expense when they are more mature and in a better position to appreciate it.

Howe also said he suspects television is responsible for the decline in national test scores among students.

"No one knows why the scores are going down," he said. "But we're now seeing a generation that has been watching television throughout its lifetime."

He added that many children watch TV four to six hours a day while children from lower-income families watch even more.

Howe predicted that when schools are asked where the fault of lower test scores lie, they will respond with a "back-to-basics" movement.

Ask Dismissal Of Indictments

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, accused of murdering his wife and two children at Ft. Bragg, N. C., in February 1970, has asked a federal appeals court to dismiss his indictments.

MacDonald, then an Army doctor, was arrested by military authorities and charged with fatally stabbing his wife and two daughters, aged 3 and 6.

However, the charges were dismissed following a lengthy military investigatory hearing at Ft. Bragg.

MacDonald left the Army and moved to Long Beach, Calif., where he joined the staff of a hospital.

Last January, a federal grand jury in Raleigh indicted MacDonald on three murder charges after his former in-laws insisted that the case be reopened. He is free on bond. MacDonald's attorneys argued Wednesday before the U. S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals that the government cannot pursue the prosecution because MacDonald's military hearing amounted to a trial.

Defense attorney Bernard L. Seigel also argued that MacDonald's right to a speedy trial had been violated.

Government lawyers said the military hearing was not a general court martial but was like a grand jury probe.

They also argued that some of the witnesses at the original military proceedings committed perjury.

The government lawyers said they had obtained new leads from the testimony at the military hearing.

OUT SAILING, REMOTELY SPEAKING—Riding the wave off Weymouth, England, is the Crossbow, called by yachtsmen a "flying proa", a craft which carried no crew but is controlled remotely from a "sidcar" known as an outrigger. The four-man crew in the sidcar operates the controls—two winches to adjust the angle of the sails and, at the front, a wheel to determine direction. Crossbow has to be towed to the starting point and can only tack to starboard, meaning she cannot turn around and can only sail when the wind is blowing from the right. At recent speed trials she clocked 31.9 knots (nearly 36 mph.). Crossbow has a sail area of 850 square feet and is 55 feet long. (AP Wirephoto)

Mediator Trying To Resolve Washington Post's Walkout

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Wire
WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal mediator is trying to resolve differences between the Washington Post and its striking pressmen as the newspaper's management continues to publish 24-page editions.

The mediator arranged a meeting today between negotiators for the newspaper and the pressmen's union.

Printing presses damaged in the wake of the walkout by pressmen Oct. 1 were a key factor in the refusal of Newspaper Guild members, the editorial and advertising employees who comprise the largest of the Post's 12 unions, to honor the pressmen's picket lines.

Three times since the strike began, members of the guild unit at the Post have voted to continue working. The votes placed the Post guild unit in direct defiance of the leadership of the Washington-Baltimore Newspaper Guild, made up of units in publications in both cities.

With 843 members, the Post unit is the largest local in the Washington-Baltimore Guild.

Brian Flores, administrative officer of the parent guild unit, said Wednesday the executive board is considering disciplinary action against Post guild members who have crossed picket lines.

Asked at a news conference about the practicality of such action, which could include suspension and fines, Flores replied, "If we have a cancer on our right arm we will cut it off."

At Trenton, N.J., in a speech Wednesday night to the state chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalism fraternity, Katharine Graham, publisher of the Post, lashed out at the violence that marked the start of the strike.

Mrs. Graham referred to "the rampage of sabotage, fire and vandalism that broke out in the Post's pressroom last Wednesday morning."

The mailers and photoengravers unions, whose contracts also expired Oct. 1, joined the pressmen in their strike this week. Members of other backshop unions have refused to cross the picket lines.

But abbreviated editions of the Post continue to appear. And gradually, as nonunion machinists repair the damaged presses, printing of the newspaper is shifting back into the Post plant.

The Post has published 24-page editions printed at nonunion plants outside Washington every day except one since the strike began.

Post backshop employees are among the highest paid in the country. Salaries for pressmen average $22,589 a year. The average for mailers is $19,854.

Among the issues in the dispute are the size of crews manning the presses, when overtime must be paid, the handling of grievances and whether supervisors should be members of the union.

Fighting Nonreturnables Ban TV Networks Do Their Own Testing Of Series

By LEE MITGANG
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Support from federal agencies and U.S. senators appears to be growing for a proposed set of federal guidelines banning nonreturnable beverage cans and bottles on federal property.

The idea is vigorously opposed by industry and organized labor, who fear it is a step toward a nationwide ban on such beverage containers.

Federal officials say they expect the Environmental Protection Agency to publish the guidelines within a few weeks.

The act of publishing the guidelines would not automatically give them the force of law. First there would be a 30-day period during which the EPA would invite comment. But probably by early next year, a final version of the guidelines would be printed and that version would become mandatory on all federal property.

The key feature in the proposed guidelines would impose a five-cent deposit on beverage containers sold on federal property such as military bases, post offices, parklands and veterans hospitals. Federal agencies would have a year to comply.

Other parts of the country would be unaffected, and most experts estimate the EPA guidelines would affect 2 to 4 per cent of the nation's beverage sales.

Manufacturers say the regulation would probably increase costs to consumers. The EPA says that over the long haul the price would probably not increase and might even go down, though short-term equipment changes and handling procedures might raise the price temporarily.

But neither side of the controversy has been able to show what the economic effects would be from either the proposed federal bottle and can deposits or of a more sweeping nationwide ban on nonreturnables.

"There is no answer," says Frank McManus of the Can Manufacturers Institute, which has fought the proposed guidelines. "The EPA and no one knows what people will do, what businesses will be affected."

But one way or another, can manufacturers, bottle makers, the workers in those industries and beverage distributors and retailers all say they fear a loss of revenue and jobs.

Backers of the proposed guidelines say the nation has been buried under heaps of empty cans and bottles. The volume of that rubbish has increased about 230 per cent since 1960, they say.

According to one study cited in Senate testimony by the EPA, beverage containers account for nearly 20 per cent of highway litter.

And spokesman for the National League of Cities and the National Association of Counties said that there has been an enormous increase in solid waste in recent years.

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — We all know how ratings usually determine the life or death of a television series. But ever wonder how the networks decide which new series might click on TV, aside from fortune-teller visits?

Well, a fascinating part of the process involves the showing of a series pilot to a live audience — before the show airs nationally — and asking said audience what they like or dislike about the program.

Only CBS says it recruits its own screening-room audiences. It dispatches ticket-bearing pages here and in Los Angeles to ask folks if they'd like to see what could become a new TV series.

NBC — which also conducts cable-TV-only audience tests — and ABC rely on outside testing firms for their screening-room testing, usually hiring a Los Angeles company called ASI Market Research, Inc.

Jay Eliasberg, CBS' vice president for research, says screening-room testing of possible series goes on year-round at his network, with the average screeningroom audience numbering about 20 viewers.

He says each person is given a machine on which to register favorable or unfavorable reactions during a show. Viewers also fill out questionnaires about the show, and discuss it afterwards with CBS officials.

After that, he says, "we analyze those reactions to try to determine whether we think the show will be successful and what can be done to improve it."

ASI, which has no direct say in a network's decision on a potential series, does pretty much what CBS does in recording the reactions of a test audience to pilot shows.

However, ASI says it alone recruits its screening-room audiences, doing this both by phone and by sending interviewers to areas of heavy pedestrian traffic, such as shopping centers.

The company's per-show audience is much larger than that of CBS — it says it averages 400 viewers per show — and only Los Angeles residents are invited to its screenings. Out-of-town viewers are deliberately excluded.

Why?

"Well, what we're trying to do is hold what is called a laboratory situation," says Roger Seltzer, a top ASI executive. "In a laboratory, you try to hold as many variables as possible constant, aside from the one you're testing."

"And we've found that when you get tourists, you introduce a variable that's tough to control."

He rejects the contention usually made by Manhattanites — that Los Angeles is the loon capital of the world. In fact, he says, "we've found it to be a very good test market for this kind of thing, because you have a very homogenous group living here, many people who've come here from elsewhere in the country, or first-generation residents. And either they or their families have brought with them the attitudes that exist in many other places in the country."

"So it is a good microcosm for doing testing on which you can base some national projections."

THE OLD AND THE NEW—One of Tallahassee's older homes, built around the Capitol complex area in 1874, is moved down Adams Street as the steel frame of Florida's new 22-story Capitol looms in the background. The house is on its way to a more exclusive housing section where it will be restored by a local couple. (AP Wirephoto)

Opening lead: Three of ♦.

Like a conjurer, a competent declarer can seem to make defenders' tricks disappear. Observe South's legerdemain on this hand from the Golden Pairs event at the recent American Contract Bridge League's Summer National Championship.

East took advantage of the vulnerability to preempt with three hearts—a bid that would be frowned on by adherents to the Rule of Two and Three. South's hand was by no means ideal for an overcall, but it was more dangerous to pass. For North might not be able to compete, due to a spade shortage. North had ample to raise to game.

Bridge players like to claim that those who can play; those who can't, write. This is not always the case as this hand proves, for sitting South was our associate, Tannah Hirsch of Stamford, Conn., a member of the Goren Editorial Board.

He won the opening diamond lead with the ace and made the normal play of trying the spade finesse. East won the queen and continued a diamond, which declarer ruffed. A spade to the ace revealed the unfortunate distribution, and prospects were bleak—it seemed that declarer would have to lose a second trump trick in addition to two heart tricks.

However, a closer study of the position revealed that there was the possibility of telescoping two of the defenders' tricks into one. For that to succeed, declarer would need some luck in the minor suits. He ruffed a diamond and, when both defenders followed, West's distribution became obvious: four spades (known), four diamonds (judging from his opening lead), one heart (probably a high honor), and, therefore, four clubs.

Now the hand could be played almost double dummy. Declarer cashed the king of spades, crossed to dummy with the king of clubs and ruffed another diamond. When West had to follow, declarer's analysis was confirmed. He followed with the ace of clubs and, when the jack did not appear, a club to the ten. This finesse succeeded, as declarer was sure it would, and the queen of clubs became the game-going trick.

On the last two tricks the defenders had to play their ace and king of hearts and the only remaining trump in the game!

Startling proof that we are not alone in the universe...

New Technologies At Libraries

CHICAGO (AP) — "Lights, camera, action — you're on the air!"

These words usually come from a director in a television studio, but today the director is likely to be a librarian and the studio may be located behind the library stacks.

At least 150 libraries around the country have added a television capability to their community services and are not only producing programs for local cable television but are inviting community residents in to see the programs live, according to Robert Wedgeworth, executive director of the American Library Association.

The programming might encompass anything from adult education classes to documentaries focusing on community problems to children's story hours.

Cable television programming is just one example of the quiet revolution in library services over the past several decades.

Videotape, recordings, microfilm, audio-visual equipment, teletype machines — even computers — have become almost standard equipment today in public, college and research libraries.

"Technological development has proceeded at an incredible pace, and everyone has been affected," says Wedgeworth.

The new technology has both strengthened and expanded the library's role in serving the public, he points out. Cable television, for example, has helped transform many libraries into community information and education centers, making possible more direct involvement on the part of the user.

Local libraries in Tulsa, Okla., and Boulder, Colo., and the state library in West Virginia are among those that have built studios for programming community affairs. Libraries in Danbury, Conn., and San Jose, Calif., were put in charge of municipal cable television programming last year.

Still other libraries (Port Washington, N.Y.; New York City; Bakersfield, Calif.) have made video equipment freely available to people for individual experimentation.

Library information services have also undergone some dramatic changes in recent years.

The New York Times Information Bank, a computerized reference system, serves library users through keyboard-operated terminals and video viewing screens. Patrons can quickly obtain summaries of news and feature stories, columns and reviews of the arts from daily and Sunday issues of The New York Times since 1969, along with information from about 60 other domestic and foreign journals.

The Los Angeles Public Library has a computer that dispenses practical information to patrons on such topics as drug abuse, venereal disease and alcoholism.

"One of the most important developments over the past two decades has been the growth of regional library systems," says Wedgeworth.

These cooperative inter-library systems, called "networks," are formed so that resources can be shared. Networks may eventually make books and information available to all — including those in the remotest areas, says Wedgeworth.

"The day may not be far off when you can call in a book request to an operator, who in turn would consult a computer that stores a bibliography for a regional library system," he explained. "In moments, you'd know whether the book is available for loan, and a 'save' may be automatically put on the book in your name."

Designed to make more information available to today's library user more quickly, says Wedgeworth, these technological innovations are only the beginning. "With the information explosion outracing any single library's ability to acquire all that's new, cooperative programs and sophisticated electronic equipment are helping the library better serve the individual and the community," he adds.

Schedule Resettlement Completion In December

WASHINGTON (AP) — All of the remaining 29,000 Indochinese in U.S. refugee camps should be resettled by mid-December if government plans stay on schedule.

Julia Vadala Taft, head of the Interagency Task Force directing the effort, told the House immigration subcommittee Wednesday that plans call for closing the Camp Pendleton, Calif., camp by Nov. 1 and that the Indiantown Gap, Pa., and Ft. Chaffee, Ark., camps will be closed after all of the refugees are resettled, expected in two months.

The Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., reception center has already closed its doors.

Slightly over 100,000 refugees have been resettled within the United States and about 6,000 have gone to other nations, Mrs. Taft said.

She said the program for the 137,000 refugees who fled or were evacuated after the collapse of U.S.-supported governments in Vietnam and Cambodia five months ago has been a success. She said agency interviews with 1,570 heads of households, representing 9,300 of the resettled refugees, reveal:

—Sixty-eight per cent of males and 51 per cent of females over 14 years old have found employment.

—About 75 per cent of those 55 and older can't find jobs.

—Family incomes are low; under 10 per cent earn $7,500 or more a year.

—Eighty per cent were satisfied with American sponsors; of the other 20 per cent, most expressed problems dealing with cultural differences or the sponsor's attitude or treatment of them.

Mrs. Taft told the panel that about 81,600 refugees, mostly from the Guam camp, will sail back home on a ship of Vietnamese registry. The ship, currently in Guam harbor, will not have American personnel aboard, nor will U.S. ships escort it.

An additional 1,400 refugees have applied for permission to return to their homeland, she said.

Senate Study

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Juanita Kreps of Duke University has been named to a nine-member committee which will study the way the Senate is organized and operates.

The study is to be completed by next Sept. 30. It will look into the functioning of the Senate's officers and staff, the physical layout of offices and facilities, coverage by the news media, pay and office allowances, lobbying, and possible conflicts of interest.

The commission was established by a unanimous Senate vote.

Northrop Again Is Investigated

By BROOKS JACKSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is investigating allegations that Northrop Corp. improperly charged the Pentagon for parties, goose shoots, political donations and other outlays disguised as military spending.

Several reports on Northrop's alleged misuse of government funds have been sent to the Justice Department "for appropriate action," the Air Force said in a letter to Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

Another Air Force spokesman said the reports were sent to the FBI on Sept. 17. Sources said the FBI's probe is centered in Los Angeles, Northrop's headquarters.

The FBI would say only that it is studying the matter. A Northrop spokesman declined comment.

Northrop making illegal U.S. political donations and paying bribes to sell its airplanes in foreign nations. Recent disclosures have centered on Northrop's domestic lobbying efforts, including its admitted use of a Maryland goose-hunting lodge to woo Pentagon and congressional VIPs.

Last week, the Pentagon said it admonished 40 civilian, Air Force, Navy and Marine officers for violating the spirit of official regulations in attending Northrop's expense-paid hunts worth roughly $100 apiece.

According to reports by the Washington-based Capitol Hill News Service, the Pentagon's auditing arm accused Northrop of charging the cost of the hunts to the government.

Weekend Peak

Early Impact Seen From Shortage In Natural Gas

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A looming natural gas shortage may start forcing as many as a half million Americans out of work in a matter of weeks unless Congress and the Ford administration can reach a compromise on national energy policy.

Congressional testimony has indicated some 500,000 workers may be out of jobs when the anticipated natural gas shortage hits this winter. There are predictions the layoffs could begin soon after Nov. 1.

No one in Congress has challenged the prediction, but neither Republicans nor Democrats in the Senate have indictated willingness to budge from their positions on energy pricing — the issue that has put the Democratic-controlled Congress at odds with President Ford for almost nine months.

Each side has its own proposed solution for the gas shortage forecast for 14 states this winter. The Federal Power Commission says either bill could help reduce the shortage to manageable proportions.

Republicans are seeking an end to all price controls on natural gas. They say ending controls would increase the price and therefore the supply of gas available to the 14 threatened states.

Democrats have pushed for emergency legislation that would permit gas-short states to buy gas directly from gas-producing states, mainly Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, for about $1.25 per unit. That price is almost 150 per cent above the current controlled price.

But Republicans, with the President's blessing, have refused to consider the emergency legislation except as part of their effort to eliminate price controls on natural gas permanently.

Democrats are refusing to allow a vote, saying elimination of price controls would bring the oil-gas industry a bonanza and worsen inflation and unemployment. They note House leaders say there is no chance of passing a long-range gas bill in the House this year.

An attempted compromise was defeated Wednesday.

By a 55 to 45 vote the Senate rejected an amendment by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., that would have let the well price of gas rise sharply over the next five years, with oil prices reduced during the same period. At the end of five years, the President could have, with congressional approval, modified the price controls or removed them altogether.

In general, Republicans say price controls have created gas shortages by denying the petroleum industry money needed to develop more energy. Democrats generally agree that prices should be allowed to rise somewhat — but not to the level that might be expected if controls were eliminated.

The proposal was rejected after the Senate, on a surprisingly close 54 to 45 vote, defeated an amendment by Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., seeking to break the nation's largest oil and gas companies into numerous smaller firms.

The shortage is expected to be greatest in 14 states, which have nearly six million workers whose jobs are dependent on natural gas. These states are Ohio, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, West Virginia, Delaware, Missouri, Iowa and California.

Lecturing At Falkland School

Sgt. Glenn L. Swanson of the Traffic Safety Information Office of the N.C. State Highway Patrol is spending today in the Falkland Elementary School in the Medic Center giving lectures to students of the school.

Using lectures and films, Swanson explains law enforcement procedures used in Pitt County. A patrol car will be in the area for the children to inspect.

This new program is also available to clubs, agencies, churches, or other interested groups.

Tutorial Program

The Greenville City Schools, with the assistance and cooperation of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, is again this year organizing a tutorial reading program.

Initiated in 1971, the tutorial program for the city schools is one that depends on workers willing to donate two hours per week to the program.

Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education, notes that "concern and interest in young people and not formal training is the qualifying consideration of those wishing to volunteer to help us in this program."

All volunteers will be personally contacted relative to the most suitable time and dates for their participation. Expression of preferences — for elementary, middle, or junior high, will be considered.

Ross is asking interested persons to contact the principal of the school in which the volunteer may be particularly interested, or to contact him or Mrs. Kay Whitehurst at the Greenville City School office, 752-4192.

N.C. Woman In Convicted Gang

NEW YORK (AP) — A Durham, N.C. woman was among eight persons convicted in federal court Wednesday of involvement with what authorities called largest black narcotics ring in the nation.

Barbara Hinton, 31, of Durham, common-law wife of the ring's alleged leader, was found guilty by a jury of eight women and four men after three days of deliberation and a two-month trial.

Another Durham woman, Marzella Steele Webb, was one of the five defendants found innocent.

Federal prosecutors said the multimillion dollar ring operated in black neighborhoods from Durham to Boston.

The alleged ringleader, Frank Matthews, 31, jumped $350,000 bail in 1973 and is listed as a fugitive.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Ronald DePetris said Matthews lived in a $200,000 mansion on Staten Island and maintained a lavish lifestyle before disappearing.

Mrs. Webb is Matthews' aunt. The defendants were variously charged with conspiracy to import, distribute and sell heroin and cocaine or illegal use of the telephone to facilitate their operations.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and the other charge is punishable by four years in prison.

Judge Jacob Mishler set no date for sentencing. Seven of those convicted remain free on bail and the eighth is serving a term in the Atlanta federal prison on another narcotics charge.
