Without A Cut In Government Spending

May Get Income Tax Cut Of $37 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans should get a $37 billion income tax cut next year without a parallel cut in government spending, a Senate staff study said Saturday.

Federal revenue will grow enough in the next five years to allow for a $20 billion cut on top of an extension of this year's $17 billion tax break during fiscal 1976, the study projected.

The 44-page report by the Senate Budget Committee staff said the increased tax cut is needed to "counter current high levels of unemployment" and make up for a projected economic slide on lags in federal spending between now and 1980.

The study did not directly refer to President Ford's demand that Congress limit federal spending to $395 billion in fiscal 1976 to go along with his proposed $28 billion tax cut for fiscal 1976.

But it said predicted government receipts caused by increased personal and corporate income between now and 1980 "would fully replace those lost in a sizeable tax reduction."

The report suggested, therefore, "that comparable reductions in federal expenditures would not be required for budgetary control."

The normal increase in federal revenue combined with forecast cuts in federal spending would give the government an $80 billion budget surplus by 1980 unless tax cuts are instituted, the committee staff said.

Apparently referring to the growing sentiment of many in government against greatly increased federal spending, the staff said it "assumes that permanent federal spending programs will grow no faster than the country's potential output."

The report noted that the traditional approach would be to delay a tax reduction until full employment revenues reach 20 per cent of potential Gross National Product, which it predicted will occur in 1978.

"By delaying such a reduction until that time, however, Congress would lose a major opportuunity to boost the economy," it added.

Escaped From Illinois Jail

Five Fugitives Hunted

By SAMUEL O. HANCOCK

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — Federal agents, state police and prison guards Saturday hunted five "extremely dangerous" fugitives who used a home-made electronic control device the size of a softball to open barred doors and walked to freedom from a maximum security U.S. penitentiary.

No trace of the escaped convicts had been found since they walked out of the prison's front door shortly after 8 p.m. Friday. Warden Charles E. Fenton indicated outside accomplices may have helped them flee the 900-acre penitentiary site.

Fog and ground mist hampered the hunt for hours. No guns were used in the escape but authorities said the convicts may have obtained weapons after fleeing and the FBI said, "They are extremely dangerous persons."

Fenton said the jerry-built device that foiled the prison's modern, sophisticated security system apparently was fashioned in a prison shop by Ed Roche, 39, Katonuh, N.Y., who was serving a 39-year sentence for bank robbery and carrying a dangerous weapon. Roche worked in the electric shop.

Fenton said the device apparently triggered a miniature receiver which was clandestinely placed in the master control panel of the prison's security system during recent repairs.

The warden said the remote control device, which was turned over to the FBI for investigation, was equipped with a battery, switch and perhaps parts of an old radio. The prisoners attached it to a loudspeaker, the warden said, and it transmitted a signal—apparently to the miniature receiver—which activated a series of electronically controlled metal grill corridor doors.

The five men walked out without a challenge. Neither guard tower saw them leave and no shots were fired. A technician on duty, and a guard farther back in the prison, saw that the grills had been opened and sounded an alarm. Floodlights were turned on within minutes but the escapees had disappeared.

Fenton said the five, along with 13 other prisoners, had met Friday night with six civilians, members of a historical society study group which had visited the prison regularly for several years for discussions with convicts.

Fenton said that by a ruse, the five tricked a security guard into going with them and unlocking the door to a storeroom, either to get study materials stored there or to get a bandaid to bandage a feigned injury to a finger.

The convicts overpowered the guard and locked him in the room, which opened onto a corridor between the second and third of three grills. Then, the warden said, they apparently wired their electronic device to the loudspeaker, part of the regular prison security system.

The grill doors are so devised that supposedly no more than one can be opened at a time, Fenton said. But the transmitter-receiver combination somehow overrode normal signals in the control point atop the prison and automatically unlocked all three doors—two that stood between the plotters and the front lobby and one farther back in the prison.

Prison officials were unable to explain immediately how plotters managed to place the miniature receiver in the heart of the prison's security system. They said in "no way" would a prisoner ever have access to the control tower but that it was possible that during the repair work the control panel was elsewhere in the prison.

The five men were believed to be wearing Jaycee jackets when they fled. There is a Jaycee chapter at the prison.

The escapees, in addition to Roche, were identified as Henry M. Gargano, Arthur T. Mankins, Dennis D. Hunter and Maurice J. Philion.

Gargano, 43, Chicago, was serving a 199-year term for murder while committing a bank robbery in a Chicago suburb. Mankins, of Germanton, N.C., was serving a life term for the slaying of an FBI agent in North Carolina.

Wilbur Hardee Missing

A missing person's report has been filed on Greenville resident Wilbur Hardee, founder of the Hardee's and Wilbur's fast-food chains, according to Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon.

Cannon said Hardee's wife said she has not seen or heard from her husband since September 29 when he talked over the phone with the manager of Wilbur's here. Cannon said Hardee told the restaurant manager he was calling from Raleigh, where he was conducting business.

An all-points bulletin has been put out for Hardee, Cannon said, and a search is being conducted state-wide. He added, "At this stage of the game, we don't suspect foul play."

Although he is still involved with the Wilbur's chain, Hardee sold his interest in Hardee's several years ago.

As Fighting Continues

Military Supports Government

By DAVID D. PEARCE

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The military Saturday endorsed Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo's campaign to restore law and order to Portugal but troops had to put down a fierce gunbattle in the north between rival political groups.

The 19-man armed forces Revolutionary Council met for 18 hours and afterwards voiced its support for the sixth provisional government and Azevedo's efforts to put a stop to rising violence.

"(The council) decided to reaffirm support for the sixth government in its efforts to resolve the crisis and problems resulting from it in accord with the political action plan put forth to the country by the prime minister," a communique said.

But even as the military leaders were meeting, fighting broke out in the northern city of Porto between Socialists and far leftists.

Hospital spokesmen said 54 persons were injured in the clashes, four seriously. That boosted the toll in three days of sporadic violence throughout Portugal to one dead and at least 134 wounded.

Witnesses said the fighting began late Friday when a group of Maoists assaulted the headquarters of a rival far left group, the Popular Democratic Union. Socialists from a nearby rally were drawn into the conflict.

The witnesses said the rival groups battled with guns, grenades and Molotov cocktails before troops moved in with tanks and armored cars to seal off the Popular Democratic Union building.

The headquarters of another far left group a block away was also sacked.

Mutinous troops continued to occupy a key artillery base on the outskirts of Porto and the Communist party became increasingly vocal in its opposition to the government — even though the Communists have a cabinet post.

The party, which has supported what it calls the "popular offensive" of revolutionary groups, said in a statement that the current political orientation of the government "will encounter a redoubled resistance and new aggravation of the crisis."

Navy Veteran Nguyen Van Tho

VN Bachelor Refugee Finds New Home Here

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Long, suspense filled months have passed since a 25 year old Vietnamese Navy veteran escaped by sea from the South Vietnamese coast on April 30 in a last minute bid for freedom.

On Friday, October 3, Nguyen Van Tho (pronounced Nuh-win Van Taw) arrived in Greenvile after a circuitous escape route involving thousands of miles of travel by sea and land, often with only the hope of finding a haven sustaining him in dark moments.

The second Vietnamese refugee to be located in Pitt County, Tho is under the sponsorship of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, with arrangements coordinated by the Christian Social Concerns Committee of the church. A couple of months ago, St. Gabriel Catholic Church arranged for the placement of Nguyen Van Vang, his wife and four young children.

Rev. John Farmer, Associate Minister at Jarvis Church and Dr. David Middleton of the Division of Continuing Education, ECU, were two of those most actively engaged in making arrangements for Tho's coming to Greenville.

Nash Deputy Killed

By United Press International

A Nash County Deputy Sheriff was killed when hit by a truck early Saturday as he directed traffic for a Boy Scout campout in the pre-dawn darkness and a heavy fog, the Highway Patrol said.

The death of deputy Rossell Edward Gilliam, 58, of Middlesex, said officers, brought North Carolina's accidental weekend traffic death toll to at least nine.

Late Friday night three Red Springs residents died when a car ran a stop sign in Hoke County and struck another vehicle broadside and two 14-year-old Salibury boys died when the trail cycle they were riding in the wrong lane and without lights hit an oncoming car.

Officers said Gilliam, Chief of Police in Middlesex from 1957 until he joined the Nash County department in 1964, was standing in the road on U.S. 264 half a mile west of Bailey when a dump truck, unable to stop in time once the driver spotted the officer in the dark and thick fog, struck the deputy.

In other accidental deaths, Verlane Singleterry, 34, and James T. Harrington, 51, were killed when the car in which they were riding Friday evening ran a stop sign south of Raeford and collided broadside with a car driven by Roy Nell Jacobs, 19. All three victims were from Red Springs.

Troopers said Terry David Troxell and Jimmy Dale Trexler died about 11 p.m. Friday in Rowan County when the trail cycle Trexler was driving ran head on into a car. Officers said the two were on the wrong side of the road and the trail bike had no lights.

District 1 Republicans Held Convention Here

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

The three district officers were re-elected for another two-year term and nine district members to the GOP state executive committee were chosen yesterday afternoon at the District 1 Republican convention held at the Pitt County Courthouse.

The officers were nominated by the district nominating committee and were voted in without opposition. Herb Lee of Greenville was elected chairman. Helen Vernelson of Craven County was elected vice-chairman and Dewey Wells of Camden County was elected secretary-treasurer. All were incumbents.

John Wilkinson of Beaufort County presided over the officers' election. Before the election, he traced the history of the Republican Party in the South. He said the GOP no longer opposes the Democratic Party, they are now working against a "national socialist workers' party." Wilkinson said the Democratic Party was "murdered by Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt," a remark which brought applause from the delegates.

Also elected at the convention were nine members to the GOP state executive committee from District 1, which encompasses the 21 eastern North Carolina counties of the first congressional district.

Elected were: Elton Gammage, Dare Co.; Curt Smith, Jones Co.; Frank Rouse, Lenoir Co.; Dixie Greene, Pitt Co.; Garvin Hardison, Pamlico Co.; Berton Daniels, Cartaret Co.; Kenneth Robinson, Martin Co.; John Wilkinson, Beaufort Co. and Jimmy Spruill, Creaven Co.

Following the elections, Lee told the delegates the events of the past two years have "showed us the power of the media." He said press leaks were responsible for the downfall of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew and said the press "crucified and exploited" Nixon.

"The Presidency has been so weakened, we have become a second-rate power," Lee said. He said he hoped the next two years would be better than the last two.

Several hopefuls to be selected from District 1 to attend the Republican national convention at St. Louis were introduced to the group along with a gubernational hopeful, the Rev. Wallace McCall of Transylvania County. They were given a chance to briefly express their views to the delegates.

Bill Berryhill, an assistant of Senator Jesse Helms attended the convention and was available afterwards, to, meet with delegates and take messages for Helms.

Faye Maddigan of the state party organization addressed the group about the November state convention which President Ford will attend, along with former Governor John B. Connally of Texas.

Following the convention, the Pitt County Republican Party held a social hour at the American Legion Hut which preceded a dinner for the GOP members. Keynote speaker at the dinner was Robin Beard of Tennessee.

Some Defense Contracts Are Being Investigated

By JOHN MILNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public disclosure of questionable lobbying practices by the Northrop Corp. has touched off official investigations of possible corrupt activities involving other defense contractors, a Pentagon spokesman said Saturday.

"We are investigating a number of similar allegations which have come to our attention since the Northrop story broke," the spokesman said. He said the Defense Contract Audit Agency is performing the investigations, but declined to give other details.

In addition, he said, an investigation has been ordered to learn who leaked the initial Northrop information to reporters.

Reports quoting Pentagon sources have said in recent weeks that Northrop entertained congressional and defense department officials at a company-owned hunting lodge during the company's successful quest for a jet fighter contract. They said Northrop charged the government for that entertainment.

The Pentagon has not publicly confirmed those reports, but officials have said they sent Congress the DCAA audit report cited as the original source of the information on Northrop's lobbying efforts.

Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements told a defense industry trade association Thursday the Pentagon "deserved" the criticism it had gotten about such incidents.

Clements and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger now are studying ways to reemphasize rules issued in January to tighten standards of conduct for senior defense officials who deal with contractors, the spokesman told UPI Suturday.

The spokesman confirmed claims by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., that the Pentagon ordered an investigation to find out who leaked information about Northrop's practices to reporters.

But he denied Aspin's charge that defense officials are more interested in locating the source of the leak and covering up Northrop's misdeeds than they are in ending improper contractor activities.

The leak probe was ordered, the spokesman said, because proprietary company information furnished confidentially to the government had been disclosed.

Aspin said Pentagon officials ordered the Defense Investigative Service — which normally does security clearance investigations — to uncover who leaked accounts of Northrop's questionable consultant fees, its lavish parties and its duck hunting lodge operation in eastern Maryland.

At the time, Northrop was competing with other companies for a contract to build a lightweight jet fighter plane which eventually became the Navy's F18. Northrop got the contract.

Soldier's Medal

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)—The highest peacetime recognition, the Soldier's Medal, will be awarded posthumously today to a Marine MP from Charlotte, James Boyd.

He and another MP killed two bank robbers at the Ft. Bragg two years ago.

Boyd, then 19 years old, was fatally wounded in the gun duel.

The eight-sided bronze medal hanging from a red, white and blue ribbon will be accepted by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd Sr., in a ceremony at the fort.

Student, Pilot Killed

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A high school sophomore and a professional pilot, both from Kannapolis, were killed Friday when their plane crashed in a wooded section of northern Mecklenburg County.

They were 15-year-old Desi Moore, whose father Carl Moore had bought the plane less than two weeks ago, and 63-year-old Elmer Logan.

The 1964 Cherokee 235 had taken off from Douglas Muncipal Airport in Charlotte, and disappeared from the radar screens seven minutes later. It was on a flight to Spencer Airport south of Concord.

It took rescue workers nearly four hours to find the wreckage. Authorities said a newly installed device which was supposed to send a radio signal if the plane crashed was not working.

Deputies File Suit

GREENSBORO (AP)—Two former Guilford County Sheriff's Department deputies, claiming their constitutional rights were violated when they were fired, are asking that they be rehired and given $250,000 in punitive damages.

They filed a lawsuit Friday in U.S. Middle District Court against Sheriff Paul H. Gibson.

Richard D. Cox and Raymond Smith say they were fired because they were members of the Guilford County Sheriff's Deputies Association. They contend that violated their contitutional rights to free speech and association.

Sentenced To Die

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A superior court judge has sentenced a Hickory man to die in the gas chamber Dec. 12 for the 1973 murder of a waitress during the armed robbery of a restaurant.

Judge Sam J. Ervin III handed down the sentence Friday after Nelson C. Montgomery, 18, had been convicted of the fatal shooting of Kristin Cress Andrews, 20.

Mrs. Andrews was a Lenoir Rhyne coed from Greensboro who worked at Jordan's Steak House in Hickory.

The case will be automatically reviewed by the state Supreme Court.

Monks Stood Vigil

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP) — Ninety Irish monks stood vigil by telephone hotlines at seven monasteries today, hoping for a call from the kidnapers of Dutch businessman Tiede Herrema.

Informed sources said the Capuchin monasteries — two in Dublin, three in Cork and one each in Kilkenny and Donegal — had been given a code word used by the kidnapers, which would establish the authenticity of anyone calling to negotiate Herrema's release.

Interns May Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors serving as interns and residents at major hospitals may soon be using union tactics, including strikes, to improve their wages and working conditions.

Leaders of the Physicians National Housestaff Association vote today on constitutional changes that would turn the loosely knit 18,000-member organization into an independent nationwide labor union for doctors.

No Evidence

DALLAS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service investigated allegations that former President Richard M. Nixon deposited millions of dollars overseas in Swiss bank accounts but found no evidence to substantiate the allegations, the Dallas Morning News said in today's editions.

Different Interests

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Apprentice cowboy Steve Ford, the President's youngest son, says he's a lot more interested in running a ranch some day than thinking about marijuana or politics.

The lanky 19-year-old, garbed in a red, white and blue cowboy shirt with Western jeans and a tan cowboy hat, stepped out of the saddle Friday to talk to reporters, who asked about his older brother Jack's statement that he had tried marijuana.

Illinois Almost Broke

CHICAGO (AP) — The state comptroller says Illinois is almost broke. But Gov. Daniel Walker says the state is just like a family that can't pay a bill on a certain date, but does pay it eventually.

Republican Comptroller George W. Lindberg Jr. — who keeps track of the $20 million Illinois spends daily — said Friday the state's cash reserves "are gone ... last night the state could not pay its bills."

Could Damage Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disclosure of 27-year-old secret orders that authorized the CIA to carry out covert operations abroad could damage foreign relations and prompt attacks on U.S. diplomats, according to an unprecedented government summary of long-classified documents.

The summary was filed in federal court here by officials of the National Security Council in response to a Freedom of Information suit.

Klan To Publish List

LODI, Ohio (AP)—The grand dragon of Ohio's Ku Klux Klan has pledged to publish within six weeks a list of Communist front groups and individuals which may become targets of Klan activities.

Dale Reusch of Lodi said Friday the organization would use force if necessary to protect the country from its internal enemies.

Boat Sinking May Involve Mutiny

MIAMI (UPI) — The Coast Guard, in answer to a mysterious SOS that reported "many men fighting...send help," Saturday searched the Old Bahama Channel for four German officers missing from a freighter that may have been sunk in a mutiny.

Five crew members found adrift in a liferaft were being held under guard aboard a rescue vessel.

A Coast Guard spokesman said airplanes were searching for the four officers where debris from the sunken ship, the 220-foot Mimi, was found in the channel off the north central coast of Cuba, 200 miles south of here.

The spokesman said a Cuban aircraft also was apparently aiding in the search for the missing officers, flying over Cuban territorial waters.

The five crewmen—four Indonesian seamen and a Filipino cook—were picked up from a life raft by the German freighter, Lalli, and were being held aboard the ship.

The Lalli's captain reported to the Coast Guard that the crewmen told him only that the Mimi's captain, Lothar Eckard, had a fight with the chief engineer, Bernd Hesse, "and the ship sank."

The Coast Guard said the crew of the Lalli was keeping the Mimi crewmen in a locked compartment until the ship arrived at West Palm Beach, Fla., late Sunday.

The mystery started Friday night when a high seas telephone operator in Jacksonville received a transmission from an unidentified ship saying: "Many men fighting. Something has happened to the captain. I believe he is dead. Send help. SOS."

The operator said the transmission from the ship's agitated radio operator ended abruptly after giving the ship's location but not the name of the vessel.

The Coast Guard was notified and put out a bulletin, alerting ships in the area. Saturday morning, the tugboat Amy Moran reported finding some debris in the vicinity by radar.

Two Coast Guard planes were dispatched and spotted the debris, which included six large freight containers, and the five crew members in their raft.

They alerted the Lalli, which was in the area, and it was diverted to pick up the five crewmen.

VN Refugee Finds Home . . .

In arranging for the local reception of a Vietnamese refuge, finding work is one of the most important considerations. Long before Tho came to the attention of the committee at Jarvis, Bob Nobles, proprietor of Bob's TV (with shops in Greenville and Ayden) had let it be known he would be interested in giving work to a refugee with an electronic background. So Tho was a perfect choice, and his selection was simplified by the fact that as a bachelor, many of the problems facing a refugee family would be minimized.

Tho is living with Wayne Walters, an employee of the Voice of America. "I've never seen a person so intent, so determined to make good, both at work and in his eagerness to learn English," Walters said. Walters said that Nguyen Van Vang and Betty Ma, a Vietnamese student at ECU, have been most helpful in getting Tho established.

Armed with a Vietnamese-English dictionary, his own language notes and cards, Tho doggedly and successfully pursued words that puzzled him so that he could be sure of answers to questions put to him.

"I am from fishing family," he explained in simplified English. "There are five brothers, six sisters and one sister dead in my family." The youngest child of a large family, "my mother is 69 years, my father 70 years," Tho found it difficult to make a decision to leave.

If conditions ever reach the stage where he would be free to make a safe return to see his family, Tho, his face lit by a big smile, declared quickly. "I would go, yes."

A native of the village of Xa Phuoc Hai in Tinh Phuoc Tuy Province of South Vietnam, Tho is a veteran of "seven years Vietnamese Navy." "I work communications, radar, the AN-VRC-46 and AN-PRC-25." (These are abbreviated designations of complex equipment provided the Vietnamese Navy by the American government during our involvment in Vietnam.

"For two years I work too as photographer," he added, getting across that photography is one of his great loves and that he hopes to be able to get back into that once he's established.

As one of about 20,000 refugees making a last minute escape immediately after the surrender of the Saigon government to North Vietnamese forces, Tho found space on a small boat "with many other people" leaving "Can Gio village near Vung Tau. It take seven weeks on boat to Singapore," he explained.

From Singapore, Tho was able to find passage on another boat, one headed for the Phillippines. "After four days there, I go to Guam by air." he said, writing down the stages to be sure they were understood.

Following processing in Guam, Tho was eventually transferred to the Refugee Relocation Center at Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, arriving there on July 9.

Nearly three months of waiting at Fort Chaffee passed before the opportunity to come to Greenville came up—and necessary arrangements could be completed.

After the long wait, the time span between his Friday evening arrival in Greenville and reporting to Bob's TV in Ayden for work the following Monday morning provided a sharp contrast.

But Tho got across that the immediate plunge into work so soon after his arrival did not at all bother him. "I enjoy television work, radio work," he said. "I like being to work."

Concluding American Visit

By ROBERT C. MILLER

HONOLULU (UPI) — Honolulu entertained Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako Saturday with hula dances at a reception attended by 2,200 guests selected at random by computer.

To pick guests to honor the emperor on the last day of his official visit to the United States, Mayor Frank Fasi said names were drawn from the voting list, "so the common people can have a chance.

"Too often guest lists for receptions paid for by the taxpayers are not representative," he said.

Fasi's novel method not only upset the well-heeled folks who expected to go, but the Secret Service as well.

"We have no way to check these people out," an agent said grimly.

The invitations were sent to 1,100 persons, and each was told to bring a friend. The Japanese consulate and city hall were deluged with phone calls asking what a person wears to a reception for an emperor.

Callers were told "afternoon clothes," which in Hawaii means aloha shirts.

Hirohito, 74, arrived Friday night from San Francisco after 12 days of touring the continental United States. He has dined with President Ford, peered through microscopes at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, petted a koala at the San Diego zoo and visited a middle America farm.

His DC8 jet was brought in on the shortest of Honolulu's two runways to avoid flying over Pearl Harbor and the USS Arizona memorial to those killed in Japan's Dec. 7 surprise attack 34 years ago.

Many Japanese in the welcoming crowd of 4,500 ignored a request not to shout the traditional greeting of "banzai" — a word meaning welcome in Japanese but with unpleasant connotations for World War II veterans.

A reception for civic dignitaries Saturday night, closing Hirohito's official tour, was to be held in the Japanese consulate, the center of Japanese espionage activities prior to World War II. It was in the consulate that Japan's master spies sent detailed reports on movements of U.S. naval ships.

Gov. George Ariyoshi, son of a sumo wrestler and America's only governor of Japanese descent, offered Hirohito pig roasted in an open pit at a luau at the governor's mansion. Their day also included a brief visit to see Hawaiian artifacts at the Bishop Museum.

The official tour ended Saturday. But today was to be spent on the island of Hawaii, 250 miles south of Honolulu, where the royal couple planned a day of rest at Laurence Rockefeller's Mauna Kea resort on the Kona Coast.

Hirohito was scheduled to leave for home Monday from Hickam Air Force Base, an installation still pocked with reminders of the 1941 bombardment.

Couple Found Dead

OAK CITY, N.C. (AP)—A Norfolk, Va., couple was found dead Saturday in a pickup truck parked in a wooded area near Oak City, Martin County officials said.

They were identified as Marvin Earl Roache, 48, a driver for Oil Transport Inc. of Chesapeake, Va., and his wife Lois Smith Roache, 42. Dr. Frank Sheldon, Martin County medical examiner, said there were some puzzling aspects to the case and an autopsy has been ordered.

The couple was reported missing since Oct. 5. Their bodies were found by hunters looking for deer tracks.

Officers said Mrs. Roache had two bullet wounds in her left side and Roache apparently had a wound in the mouth. A .22 caliber rifle was found between the two, but investigators said they were puzzled by the absence of blood.

Before moving to Virginia, Roache lived in Grifton and Greenville, N.C.

Party Leader Shot In Beirut

By MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Leftist gunmen killed a right-wing Phalangist party leader in the Moslem suburb of Chiah Saturday, wrecking a government attempt to bring life back to normal after weeks of near civil war.

The Phalangist chief, Pierre Mazraani, was shot to death in a burst of sniper fire as he crossed with a delegation into the Chiah district from neighboring Ain Rummaneh, a predominantly Christian suburb.

The assassination came just after army commandos tore down barricades between the two districts to carry out a pledge by Premier Rashid Karami to restore war-weary Lebanon to normal within 48 hours and end three weeks of political and sectarian warfare in which 500 persons have died and nearly 1,000 were wounded.

Mazraani was accompanied by Danny Chamoun, the son of Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, Abu Hassan, Palestinian guerrilla chief for the Beirut western sector, and other district leaders when the gunmen opened fire and forced the delegation to dive for cover, witnesses said.

Mazraani was hit and died later in hospital.

Four other Phalangists were reported missing, and rightist gunmen in Ain Rummaneh seized a Moslem Shiite leader, Sheikh Mohammed Yahkoub, and some of his followers as hostages, police sources said. But the Sheikh was later released unharmed.

The incidents marred general rejoicing that came after army commandos moved into the streets dividing Chiah and Ain Rummaneh and dismantled barricades.

Citizens poured onto the streets, and those who had been killing each other the day before kissed and threw flowers at security troops moving into a buffer zone.

A jubilant Beirut Radio announcer said "everyone is smiling everywhere."

In Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, traffic also flowed freely through the streets for the first time in days.

After the killing of Mazraani, however, gunmen in Beirut manned sandbagged positions off the main road connecting Rummaneh and Chiah and tension rose in the city. Shops and businesses remained shut.

Young Girl Fatally Shot By Twin Sister

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—"I'd warned the boys not to play with the rifle, they knew it was loaded; but I never dreamed the girls would play with it," a father told police.

His 12-year-old daughter, Sharon Hoots, was fatally shot with the antique rifle Friday by her twin sister.

Officers said Sharon and her sister Karen were playing with the .22 caliber rifle when Karen pointed the weapon at her sister and pulled the trigger. It did't go off the first time, but discharged when she pulled the trigger a second time, they said.

The bullet penetrated the victim's lung and severed the main artery to the heart, police said. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

Officers said the rifle had been left to Mr. Hoots by his late father.

Police called the shooting accidental and said it would be handled in juvenile court.

Thirty Injured In Jail Fire

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — Some 30 persons were injured Saturday after a prisoner in the Madison County Jail started a fire in his cell and fighting broke out when some 100 inmates were evacuated to the courthouse basement.

Deputies said fights broke out when the prisoners were taken downstairs to flee the flames and smoke.

One prisoner was seriously injured when a comb was jammed down his throat. His condition was not immediately known.

Military police from the nearby Redstone Arsenal Army Base and state troopers with M1 carbines and shotguns were called in to quell the fighting.

Officials said the fire started in a padded cell on the 10th floor. The flames were confined to the one cell and most of the injured were treated at local hospitals for smoke inhalation.

Officials said some jail visitors were among those taken to hospitals.

After the situation quieted, the remaining prisoners were moved to the Huntsville City Jail until conditions at the county jail could be restored to normal.

Madison County Sheriff Dave Headrick blamed the disturbance on overcrowding caused by a federal judge's order barring admission of new inmates to state prisons.

"I'll tell you right now that we can't watch over this many prsioners at one time," said Headrick. "These fellows know what's going on. This prison situation has got to be straightened out."

Sakharov Wants To Accept Nobel Prize

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov says he wants to go to Oslo to accept the Nobel Peace Prize but cannot see how he will get permission, especially after an attack from the Kremlin.

After nearly a day of silence on the award, the official news agency Tass on Friday called the award a political ploy contrary to the interests of peace and East-West detente.

In response, Sakharov, a physicist who played a key role in developing the Soviet hydrogen bomb and a member of the prestigious Soviet Academy of Science, told foreign reporters that the Tass attack was "a reflex action and a distortion of my views. It is very sad. All the same I had to expect it."

The award should be considered a victory for detente rather than an insult to the Soviet leadership, he said.

The award is the third Nobel prize awarded a Soviet citizen out of favor with his nation's leadership. The 1970 literature prize went to Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who received it only after being exiled in 1974. Boris Pasternak won the literature award in 1958 for "Doctor Zhivago," which was never published in the Soviet Union.

45th Reunion For Winterville Class

It has been almost half a century—45 years, since a group of Winterville High School graduates received their diplomas in the spring of 1930.

On Friday night, a number of the graduates and their spouses gathered to celebrate their 45th class reunion. The event, held at a local restaurant, saw the vice-president of the 1930 senior class, Ray Oglesby, acting as Master of Ceremonies.

Those attendidng were: Julian Worthington; Selma McLawhorn (Mrs. Lewis Clark); Elizabeth Hardy (Mrs. Phillip Averette); Lila Taylor (Mrs. Robert Murphy); Mae Griffin (Mrs. Robert Sutton); Grace Vincent (Mrs. Clarence Cunningham); Minnie Mae Smith; Alma Lee Braxton (Mrs. Wilbur Worthington); Hazel Forrest (Mrs. Clinton Bowling); and Myrtle Ange (Mrs. Myrtle Blank).

Wayland Hunsucker, unable to attend, was represented by his wife.

Special guests for the class reunion were Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Conley, Mr. and Mrs. Don Langston, and Mrs. Dennis McLawhorn.

Plans were made for the 50th class reunion in 1980.

Obvious Benefits In Program

The Pitt County commissioners this week approved a resolution which asks that Pitt County be included in the Mid-East Housing Authority program.

The action could mean that as many as 125 low-rent housing units could be built in the smaller communities of the country. The action opens the way for communities which are too small to have independent housing authorities to administer such programs.

The other four counties of the Mid-East Region already are members of the regional housing authority and have low-rent housing units. The other counties are Beaufort, Martin, Bertie and Hertford.

The action by the county commissioners is a step forward for Pitt County. Low rent housing is already available in Greenville, Ayden and Farmville. In Greenville the availability of low-rent housing has meant that hundreds of dilapidated housing units have been eliminated. Many people are now living in better housing than they once had and some of the city's worst slum areas have been cleared and the sites improved.

The county commissioner's action of this week could mean better housing for some people who live in smaller communities of Pitt County and it might help eliminate some unsightly slum areas in our county.

Growers Can Answer The Quality Complaint

Gov. Holshouser was told by West Germans that they were concerned about the high price of American tobacco and lower quality of the leaf.

Properly the governor told the West Germans that there probably wasn't much hope for lower prices but that he would relay the message about quality.

We don't see much that can be done about the rising price of tobacco, but the growers can do a lot about quality. We must raise and market a superior quality tobacco if we are to maintain our world markets. We can't compete with the lower costs of production around the world, but we can supply a better product—and that falls on the growers.

"Goodness! It's almost election year . . . time to migrate down to the hustings!"

Wings For Rural Doctors

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—The state has put together a small air force to serve physicians located in isolated rural areas, under the auspices of the Area Health Education Centers (AHEC) at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The five light planes help meet one of the most critical problems in getting a doctor to agree to take up practice in the far reaches of the state—professional isolation.

Resistance to rural practice is not so much lower income—the physicians still make plenty of money—but, "they feel isolated from the profession," says Dr. Archie T. Johnson, Jr., assistant secretary for health affairs with the State Department of Human Resources, and chairman of the advisory committee of AHEC.

Keep In Touch

"Doctors train to practice their skills and improve their knowlege, and they will not go where there are not enough well-trained nurses, well-equipped facilities, and some contact with an academic community," Johnson says he has learned from his close contact with AHEC, from his own experience as a pediatrician.

It boils down, Dr. Johnson said, to finding ways to keep the isolated doctors tapped in to the latest thinking and developments in the profession.

The AHEC air force is designed to combat that problem. Just back from a quick trip to Manteo, Dr. Johnson and a couple of consultants flew down on schedule to have a conference with the clinic staff there, and to take a look at several special problem cases previously set for the day.

The planes carry films of special techniques carried out at Duke or UNC; carry medical students to Manteo or Murphy for a day or two in the rural health setting; transport resident physicians to isolated sections for a visit; deliver a special training program for area nurses . . . in sum, "the idea is to decentralize education and training . . . we go to them to keep them in touch," Dr. Johnson said.

Winter Coming On

Last winter, crowds of protestors met in various places and converged on the General Assembly to protest the continued upward march of electric bills.

As predicted by several observers, with warm weather the use of electricity declined, the protestors relaxed, and the rates continued to spiral. Colder months will cause some to compare current rates and wonder what good came of all that work last winter.

Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten thinks Utilities Commission staff, commissioners, and his own attorneys are at a disadvantage when they try to decipher the loads of evidence put before the commission by highly paid lawyers and consultants for the power companies.

Edmisten is seeking backing from legislators for between one-half and three-quarters of a million dollars to enlarge the staff in his office to "match wits with the utilities on a more equal footing."

Edmisten says his office is the only advocate for the people in the rate-making process able to counter the power company barrage of "self-serving information."

"I don't know what we can do to make the cost of energy completely tolerable again—maybe nothing," Edmisten is telling legislators. "But I do know that what I want will make the costs more tolerable."

Caracas Wants Cars

By JOHN VIRTUE

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — At 15 cents a gallon it doesn't cost much to "fill'er up" in oil-rich Venezuela. The problem is how to get an automobile.

"We have a waiting list for some models that's so long that some people will have to wait until next year," Chevrolet sales manager Armando Hernandez said in a recent interview. "We just can't meet the demand since our assembly plants are already working at full production."

The Venezuelan Development ministry says car and truck production climbed 25 per cent to 70,848 units during the first six months of 1975. But car dealers say even that increase seems modest when compared to the demand.

FIAT sales manager Ruben Jaramillo said car sales "must be running at more than 30 per cent over last year."

"It's difficult to know why the demand is so great, but it might be that people are buying now because they fear prices are going to go up," he said.

Gasoline is no problem in the world's third largest oil producing and exporting nation. It sells for 15 cents per gallon for regular and 34 cents for high octane.

The government regulates the prices of "popular" cars, and these have remained unchanged for two years. The best selling car in the country — one of the regulated ones — is General Motors' Nova, selling at $4,730.

"If I could get a Nova dealership and all the cars I could sell, I could retire in two years," confessed one GM executive.

The four major U.S. automakers, West Germany's Volkswagen and Mercedes Benz, Italy's FIAT and France's Renault all assemble cars in Venezuela, but a percentage of the parts must be locally made. Next year, 45 per cent of the car's value must come from Venezuela.

The country has 1.4 million motor vehicles to serve 12 million inhabitants. The capital of Caracas is congested with 300,000 cars, one for every seven residents.

Venezuelans traditionally like buying big cars, but luxury models like the Cadillac, Lincoln and Chrysler must be

Sunday Morning Notes

A pretty girl pulled up to the curb near her home recently. The front wheel bounced up over the curb, and then came back down on the pavement.

She got out sheepishly.

"Talk about women drivers!" she commented.

Well, don't worry about it. Men do it, too.

And one local lady means it when she says she doesn't want smoking in her car.

Mounted on the dash board in a large "No Smoking" sign.

Write-in votes, as Tuesday's election showed, are legal. Percy Cox ran against Eugene West for mayor with Cox running on a write-in campaign.

Cox won as most people know by now. Apparently though one voter couldn't decide. The ballot was cast for "Percy West."

There were some other write-ins. Dave Patton, ECU's exciting new basketball coach, got one. So did "Snoopy" the likeable dog in the "Peanuts" comic strip.

ALVIN TAYLOR

Come to think of it "Snoopy" might really put some life in city government. He'd probably surround himself with World War I flying aces.

The Daily Reflector staff stands by on election night to take results from the poll holders. In between we get lots of inquiries about the way various races are going.

Some people just want to chat, like the lady who called to say she haved to bother us as such a busy time "but I've been listening to the returns over the radio and you just wouldn't believe the music you have to hear in-between.".

Well, there's a challenge to the entertainment world. How about an album entitled "Music to Listen to Election Returns By."

Greenville's precincts are number one through ten, but alas, there are only nine actual polling places.

The discrepancy comes because Precincts 2 and 8 were combined into one precinct and now vote at the Willis building on First Street.

One observer of the election noted that the 13th, floor is often omitted in tall buildings because of the superstition that the number 13 is unlucky.

"Sure hope Precinct Two doesn't become unlucky if

INSIDE REPORT

The Overconfidence Virus

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The need by the Ford campaign last week to call on veteran California political pro Stu Spencer as a troubleshooter reflects how much Gerald R. Ford and his closest associates, all Washington-oriented, have been bedazzled and misled by the glitter of presidential incumbency.

Spencer, heading the Los Angeles campaign management firm of Spencer-Roberts Associates, quietly slipped into Washington to take charge of the president's campaign on a temporary but indefinite basis. Landing on the run, he quickly did what had been neglected for months: setting up a Ford-for-President organization in New Hampshire, where the nation's first presidential primary will be held Feb. 24.

This was caused by the Ford political braintrust for so many months dismissing the possibility that anybody—including Ronald Reagan, an ex-governor of California lacking a political base—would dare challenge an incumbent President. The call for help to Spencer shows a belated, grudging, still not entirely convinced realization that Reagan is virtually certain to announce his candidacy before Thanksgiving Day.

Tardy apprehension of reality has cost the President. Little has been done in campaign organization or fund-raising, and Reagan forces have a head start in New Hampshire. Thus, Reagan's long delay in announcing his candidacy is largely neutralized. Although Mr. Ford remains an overwhelming favorite, the odds have been narrowed.

The notion that Reagan would never really challenge the President was implicit in the selection of Howard (bo) Callaway, Secretary of the Army, to run Mr. Ford's pre-convention campaign. Callaway, a spellbinder but no political organizer, was assigned to talk key Republicans into presidential endorsements. His choice as deputy was veteran party pro Lee Nunn, known for fund-raising rather than campaign organization.

Since nobody at the White House expected Reagan would run, there was no need to organize primary election campaigns. But we reported two months ago that some Ford supporters, recognizing the increasing likelihood of a Reagan candidacy, were pushing for a competent organizer to replace the Callaway-Nunn team.

The White House still reassured itself that Reagan wouldn't dare. Meanwhile, the Callaway-Nunn match was not made in heaven. Complaining of the fast-traveling Callaway's refusal to make decisions, Nunn packed his bags and prepared his return home to Kentucky two weeks ago. He was deterred by the pleadings of Jack Stiles, Mr. Ford's crony from Grand Rapids and personal agent at the campaign committee.

About the same time, however, Callaway traveled to California with a plea for Spencer to come East and take charge. Spencer accepted on a temporary basis, arriving here Oct. 1. Callaway will remain as nominal chairman and front man. But on Oct. 2, Nunn quit for good, telling friends he never had admired Spencer and the campaign committee was too small for both of them.

Spencer's staff work in signing up prominent Californians (including many erstwhile Reaganites) has been a bright spot of the early Ford campaign. A more important credential for Spencer, however, is intimate familiarity with Reagan's political traits. The Spencer—Roberts firm managed Reagan's campaign for governor, helped in his belated 1968 presidential try and consulted on his 1970 re-election.

With that background, Spencer will not join so many Democrats, liberal Republicans and Easterners in underestimating Ronald Reagan. Instead, Spencer last week moved quickly to get a Ford campaign going in New Hampshire with Rep. James Cleveland named as chairman. Spencer plans early trips to New Hampshire and Florida, another key early primary state, while also reorganizing the campaign and seeking his own permanent successor.

But when he gets to New Hampshire, Spencer will find a well balanced cast of Reagan supporters put together over several weeks by national campaign director John Sears. Right-wing Gov. Meldrim Thompson supports Reagan but will not run the campaign. Reagan's chairman is former New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gregg, Rockefeller chairman in 1964. Ex-House Speaker Stewart Lamprey, Goldwater chairman in 1964, will be a fulltime Reagan staffer. Former state chairman David Gosselin, a younger moderate, also will back Reagan.

Beyond New Hampshire, Spencer faces state after state where Callaway has signed up party notables but done nothing about county-

Other Editors Say On One Condition

(Henderson Daily Dispatch)

Among the major facets in our theory of the economy is the yearning for relief from high taxes. Very few will differ with that idea. Everybody would like to pay less to government at all levels, and Washington may well rate at the top.

What we are driving at is President Ford's proposal for a $28 billion Federal tax cut. We are all for it—if. And it's a sizable "if."

By all means impose the reduction, but on one condition, which the President included in his plan, namely, cutting expenses in the same amount. As serious as high taxes are deficit spending is more so. The President asked for a ceiling just under $400 billion.

It would seem that in the lavish outlays approved by Congress there could be a slash in the amount suggested. Congress, by its habitual profligacy, is spending this country into bankruptcy. By every measure of private enterprise, government has already reached that point. The Federal establishment has simply gone overboard in spending, and the process continues. Every Congress votes more huge outlays, much of which has to be met by deficit financing and by borrowing, which increases the national debt, while at the same time soaking up capital that should be made available for business expansion, by way of creating jobs and payrolls.

In some comment, the President's plan is termed ridiculous and impossible. But it is impossible only to the extent that there is lack of willingness to economize. A sensible budget would admit of both the tax cut and cutting expenses.

We are all for the tax cut, but only if spending is reduced in the same proportion. And both can be done if there is a will to that end. The two are inseparable if soundness is to be retained. Congress is not of a mind to curtail. That is the road block that lies ahead for the Ford plan.

October 12, 1935

The total enrollment for the fall quarter at the close of registration at East Carolina Teachers College is 1,071. This means that the enrollment for the entire year will probably go far beyond the estimate made before school opened.

There are 861 students in the dormitories and 210 day students. There are 105 boys, eleven more than last fall. The transfers from other colleges number 71.

Yesterday's sales on the Greenville tobacco market brought the total poundage to above 34 million pounds with the average price to date standing at $20.03 per hundred pounds.

With the crop a little more than half sold, indications are that the local market will handle slightly above 60 million pounds for the season.

Strength For Today

OLD OAK LEAVES

Have you ever noticed that all through the winter many of the oak leaves stay on the trees, and no matter how hard the winds blow the leaves remain.

It takes the power of new life at last to dislodge them. When the sap begins to mount and new leaves begin to come, the old leaves drop off.

This is Nature's way of saying that the old must stay until the new comes—that what is dead and useless is finally done away with by the rising and invigorating power of new life.

In like manner, old customs, poor governmental policies, and outworn creeds are destroyed not by outward pressure but by the renewal of life from within. Like the oak tree, humanity tends to hold on to whatever it has, even though this may be moribund, until something better is provided.

That new and better thing comes when the forces of renewed life get into operation and produce something vibrant and vital to take the place of what is dead and outwork.

College Grads Still In Demand

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Because many of this year's college graduates have had difficulty obtaining work isn't sufficient reason to conclude that higher education doesn't pay.

But Herb Bienstock, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics office here, says some high school youngsters actually have asked him: "Why go to college when college grads are walking the streets?"

After such questions after a lecture at a nearby school, Bienstock decided to assemble government statistics on the subject. He concludes that "the demand for college graduates is expected to grow at nearly three times the rate of demand for all workers in the American labor force.

The projection to which Bienstock referred, for the period 1972-1985, puts at 68 per cent the expected growth of college graduates in the labor force, compared with a 24 per cent growth overall.

There is more evidence. In March, the government conducted a special survey of the jobless in relation to the level of formal education.

For high school dropouts the jobless rate was 15.2 per cent; for high school graduates, 9.1 per cent; for those who had some college but who did not graduate, 6.9 per cent; and for college grads, only 2.9 per cent.

"There is little question that it is more difficult for college grads to find jobs today," Bienstock concedes, but he contends the difficulties are relative.

"In the 1950s and 1960s graduates were carried off on a magic carpet," he said in an interview. "Companies were stockpiling brains. They were convinced they were going places, and that they could find uses for those brains."

During a recession, however, companies lose this confidence in the immediate future and aren't as inclined to stockpile talent.

Still, that demand hasn't been turned off completely as June graduates are finding jobs, albeit more slowly. In fact, while the nation was losing jobs at the worst of the recession, the number of jobs rose for the professional and administrative categories, Bienstock said.

He also notes that the jobless rate in these two categories, at 2.9 per cent and 3 per cent respectively in August, were the lowest figures for any job category. By comparison, in the same month the jobless rate for factory workers was 12.7 per cent and for unskilled, 16.2 per cent.

But perceptive critics will ask whether the demand for college-educated workers is the result of a fundamental upgrading in the nature of work that requires greater education, or have the hiring criteria simply been raised arbitrarily?

The answer probably includes a bit of each. If employers had no college-trained applicants, Bienstock says, then it is possible that high school grads may be hired.

But he adds, "Employers believe the credentials stand for something.... They feel the kid will be able to grow into things."

Integration Acceptance

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—Despite the violent anti-busing outbursts in various parts of the country at the start of the 1975-76 school year, acceptance of racial integration has grown sharply since the Gallup Poll's first measurement in 1963.

The latest survey shows a majority of white parents both in the South and North saying they would not object to sending their children to a school where as many as half of the students are black.

Currently, 38 per cent of Southern white parents express objection to sending a child to a school where half of the students are blacks. In a 1963 survey, conducted just prior to President John Kennedy's famous appeal to end racial discrimination, the comparable figure in the South was 78 per cent, double the current figure.

Among white parents outside the South, the proportion who would object to sending their children to a half-black school has declined from 33 per cent in 1963 to 24 per cent today.

But Busing Not Seen As Answer

While growing acceptance of racial integration in schools is found in all regions of the nation, the U.S. public has consistently voted against busing as a means to achieve racial integration in schools. In fact, in the current survey, only 4 per cent nationally choose busing from a list of various plans which have been proposed as ways to achieve racial integration in schools.

The public is amenable to alternative plans. About one person in three (31 per cent) says he would favor "changing school boundaries to allow more persons from different economic and racial groups to attend the same schools." About one in five (18 per cent) favors "creating more housing for low-income people in middle-income neighborhoods."

Another 19 per cent do not choose any of these plans, but favor some other way to achieve racial integration, short of busing.

Little Difference By Groups On Busing

Interestingly, little difference in opinion is found regarding the various plans in terms of educational background, racial background, or political affiliation. In addition, non-parents and parents, who of course have more at stake, are in close agreement on the issue of busing vs. alternative plans.

This question was asked of white parents in the latest survey to determine attitudes toward sending children to racially integrated schools:

"Would you, yourself, have any objection to sending your children to a school where a few of the children are blacks? Where half are blacks? Where more than half are blacks?"

The following tables compare the latest results with those recorded in 1970 and in the first survey in 1963:

SOUTHERN WHITE PARENTS
(Per cent objecting)

	1963	1970	1975
Where a few are blacks:	61%	16%	15%
Where half are blacks:	78	43	38
Where more than half are blacks:	86	69	61

NORTHERN WHITE PARENTS
(Per cent objecting)

	1963	1970	1975
Where a few are blacks:	10%	6%	3%
Where half are blacks:	33	24	24
Where more than half are blacks:	53	51	47

The latest nationwide Gallup survey is based on interviews with 1,592 adults, taken in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Sept. 12-15.

level support. That only $700,000 has been raised nationally in five months is another symptom of the overconfidence virus.

The virus is not yet totally eradicated. Ford insiders defy logic and fact by insisting Reagan in the end will decide not to run. Callaway still reassures Republican politicians that even if Reagan wins New Hampshire and Florida, he cannot exceed 15 per cent in Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania. This is the lingering stage of overconfidence, which has unwittingly nourished Reaganite hopes and now forced the sending of an SOS to a Western political pro not in intoxicated by presidential incumbency.

The Republic Will Survive Political Quagmire

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

You would have to mine a million tons of political ore to find a situation more ironical than the situation one finds in the nation this fall. It makes you wonder how we muddle through.

Here is the greatest Republic in the free world. And here are the two greatest parties in the greatest Republic in the free world. And here are the prospective presidential candidates of the two greatest parties in the greatest Republic in the free world. What a picture!

Take the Republicans first. Almost nobody else will take the Republicans, but for purposes of discussion, take a look at the GOP. Depending on which poll you believe, only 13 to 21 percent of the voters still identify themselves as Republicans. So many statehouses have been lost to the party that when the Republican governors meet, they can barely get up three tables of bridge. The party just managed to lose a Senate seat in New Hampshire, which until recently was one of the most Republican states in the land.

Behold this poor old elephant! It is saddled with blame for the worst recession in years. In the popular view, it is the party of double-digit inflation. That inflation was fueled by cumulative federal deficits, over the past seven years, amounting to $171 billion. These have been seven years of Republican presidents. Unemployment still is running at 8.3 percent in the nation. In certain areas, it's twice that bad.

The Republican party is a party of distinction. This is its distinction: It is tainted by Watergate with the worst political corruption in American history—worse than the corruption of Grant, worse than the corruption of Harding. They were Republicans, too. No fewer than forty men associated with the Nixon campaign of 1972 have pleaded guilty, or been found guilty, on criminal charges. The number may be higher. One loses count. Some of these birds are still in jail. The Republicans' landslide winner of 1972 had to resign before he got impeached. No other party can make that claim.

Gerald Ford is the Republicans' putative nominee for 1976. Only 46 percent of the people approve of his presidential record. Until this moment, Mr. Ford has never campaigned for national office. His putative vice-presidential choice is Nelson Rockefeller, three times repudiated by his own national party. The three leading conservative journals, closely identified with the GOP, treat Mr. Ford as if he had smallpox. They think Rockefeller is Typhoid Mary.

This is the irony: Given such a gorgeous opportunity, at such a time against such a woebegone party, whom do the Democrats have to put up? You have to pause to think. You truly do. Every time you open the paper, some other Democrat is responding to popular clamor that he run for the White House. Fifty-two of them, more or less, have modestly indicated their availability, but when it comes to presidential timber, this is second-growth stuff. What you have is 52 vice-presidential prospects. These are mostly bullpen artists.

The Democrats' best prospects for '76 are Senators Henry Jackson of Washington and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. They are not what you would call fresh faces. Scoop appears to have peaked too soon: He peaked in the spring of 1972. The Happy Warrior is 64. If elected, he would be the oldest inauguree since Buchanan in 1857.

Governor George Wallace of Alabama is said to be still a Democrat. So far as the national party is concerned, he is very still. The last time the governor wholeheartedly supported a Democratic nominee was in 1924, when he went all out for the late John W. Davis. Mr. Wallace was five at the time. No one expects him to stick with the party in 1976. If he somehow got the nomination, he would split the party asunder.

For the rest, you have a gaggle of agreeable gentlemen who are variously named Bayh, Carter, Church, Sanford, Bentsen, Udall, Harris, Shapp, and Shriver. Their names turn up in the polls about six points behind none of the above. Senator George McGovern of South Dakota toyed with notion of trying again, but gave it up. Someone told him he might lose Massachusetts also if he ran again. Bella Abzug may yet announce. In this field, don't write her off.

We are four and a half months from the first primary in New Hampshire. The voice of the people will be heard in the land, rolling up votes for Whaddyacallim and Whatsisname. The Republic doubtless will survive, but by the bones of the Founding Fathers, you sometimes wonder how.

Ford Tax Strategy Is Reminding Public That It Does Have A Choice

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

President Ford's latest tax proposition has sent shock waves through a Congress which has broken all records for lavish deficit spending. And well it might.

Ford linked a tax cut to a limit on spending increases and dumped the package onto the 1976 political stage. Big-spending Democrats were quick to cry political foul. They hadn't anticipated the Ford strategy which, in effect, says to the people "you have a choice," and poses this question:

"If you had your druthers, would you take (1) a big tax cut or (2) unrestricted increases in deficit-financed federal spending which underwrites so much of the current inflation?"

This translates the tax-spending issue into easy-to-understand terms. And it is the first time a President has even suggested that the people have a choice in the matter.

Specifically, what Ford proposed was a $28-billion tax cut, including extension of this year's reductions with some sweeting, tied to a corresponding limit on how much projected spending can rise in the 12-months ending Sept. 30, 1977.

Needless to say, this shook up the Democratic-run Congress. The legislators were all set to extend the tax cuts voted this year as an assist to the ailing economy. But they were not prepared for the Ford stategy of even bigger cuts linked to a future spending ceiling.

The spending limit Ford asked Congress to vote for fiscal 1977 is $395 billion. This would accomodate a tremendous rise in spending. It would be $28-billion higher than the target Congress itself set for fiscal 1966. But it is $28-billion—the amount of the proposed tax cut — below the $423-billion projected for fiscal 1977. And it is highly unlikely that the $395-billion limit on spending could be handled without another big deficit.

Washington reaction has been that Congress will cold shoulder the President's proposal, which is aimed at getting inflation under control. While there would still be another big jump in spending, the proposed limit would force Congress to face up to the need for "CCAP" — ceilings — on the open-ended welfare commitments of the Great Society years. This, the Democrats are reluctant to do, although an end to inflation would tend to limit future costs.

But the Ford approach won't end with whatever action Congress takes this fall on extending the current tax cuts. It invites debate on the whole tax-spending issue. And thus holds promise of this aspect of the inflation economy before the public at a popular pocketbook level.

Public attention also will be attracted by the continuing problems of New York City. This is a classic case of liberal-run government hitting the end of its rope. It taxed until taxpayers fled its reach. It spent without regard to its resources. Its continuing deficits soured its credit. Controlled by its unions (the local special interests) it can't make needed economics.

There is, however, one big difference between the U. S. Government and New York City. Washington has the constitutional authority to issue currency. It need not fear bankruptcy, in the legal sense. But its money can keep shrinking in value, as the inflationary process goes on.

Congress, it is safe to say, is concerned about the damage inflation does and, of course, is aware of the contribution made by years of deficit spending. But members associate the public money they vote, for this or that "worthy" special interest, with reelection — the security of their own jobs. Also, they like their Santa Claus role, so are reluctant to do anything that might dim this image.

But if the voters ever get in a position where they can make a choice between lower taxes and unrestricted spending, members need have no concern about the verdict. Even when the recession was deeping, poll after poll showed the public more concerned with continuing inflation than with rising unemployment. Pocketbook sentiment was clear.

And Ford, with his White House advantage, can make the tax-spend issue just as clear. A dollar left with the taxpayer will be better used in support of the economy than a dollar spent by Congress. In the first place, the taxpayer will spend or invest (save) every cent, depending on his needs. The dollar spent by Congress filters down through levels of bureaucracy, leaving a bit at each stage, until it is well shrunken when it reaches its destination. Deficts flowing from tax cuts are more stimulative.

But it will be hard to shake Congress off its Santa kick.

They Didn't Help Much On Crushing An Instep

I've always been wishy-washy about hurting people's feelings by telling them off or saying no. For instance, when the heating man knocked a hole in my wall, I didn't scream at him for not bothering to measure correctly; I apologized for my duct being in the wrong place. And when a telephone surveyor called and asked if I used Slender Miss Pantyhose, I said yes to avoid hurting his feelings-even though the only place I could possibly have worn Slender Miss Pantyhose in-the past eight months was on my arms.

So it was with great interest that I read an article in October's Reader's Digest on assertiveness training.

"Look at this article," I said to Phillip. "I'm going to follow these steps and change my irresolute character into something more assertive."

"You don't need to be more assertive," he answered reassuringly. "Remember last week when I refused to take out the garbage? You were certainly assertive then. You just dumped it in my lap."

"I'm not talking about our relationship," I sighed. "This is the type of training that teaches you to crush a salesman's instep when he slips his foot in the door."

Phillip still refused to believe that the training didn't have any dangerous implications for him, but I went ahead with it anyway.

Now the first phase of training was to learn to stand up to people when you weren't facing them directly. This could be done in a number of ways. You could wait until someone's back was turned and then crush his instep. The only problem with this is that he might have sold you something before he turned his back. Or you could be assertive over the telephone. I decided to use the latter procedure. I got so good at this that, if nobody called me, I called them. Then when someone asked, "May I help you?", I'd say "No!" and hang up.

GAIL MICHAELS

The next phase of training was to stand up to the offender in person. Now this was a little bit harder than the first phase, so I had to practice a lot. First, I told off in no uncertain terms the kitchen door that kept running into me at all hours of the day. And I treated the cat to a very firm lecture when she ate all the blooms off my African Violet. I could tell that the training was beginning to work because the next time she only ate one bloom off my geranium.

But my real chance to test my assertiveness came when a dictionary salesman appeared at my door.

"Have you ever wondered what the word 'canaliculate' means?" he asked.

"No, but I know what the word 'nuisance' means," I answered, trying to close the door over his foot.

"Well, you'll find that word and many others in this lovely illustrated dictionary," he purred, sticking his foot farther in the door. "See, here's a magnificent picture of an aardvark."

"My cat would probably eat it," I explained firmly, still wrestling with his foot. "Besides, I already have six dictionaries and a thesaurus."

"But I'll bet you don't have one that includes a translation of all the Yiddish phrases in 'Fiddler on the Roof' and a complete catalogue of the similes Hubert Humphrey has invented to describe the President's economic program."

As I walked back into the den, miserably holding my seventh dictionary, I said to Phillip, "You know, there's one crucial thing that assertiveness training didn't mention."

"What's that?" he asked.

"Never try to crush an instep when you're wearing flip-flops."

Argue Constitutional Guarantees Not Voided By Convictions

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Should a convicted felon have the right to vote? Should the constitutional guarantee of a vote become void when a person is convicted of such a nonviolent crime as forgery?

Those are two of the questions that attorneys for Gary Allen, of Aiken, S.C., hope to have answered through a class action suit in federal court here. A hearing on the suit is scheduled for Monday.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union, which is defending Allen, say the came is unprecedented. They say the state law challenged in the suit is counter-productive, and should be struck down.

"It also involves the right of the ex-offender to reenter society," says John Brown, vice president of the South Carolina ACLU.

Allen, a civil rights activist and used car dealer, was convicted in 1970 of forgery. He was sentenced to 18 to 21 months in prison, served his time and was released in June 1972. He also was notified that he could no longer vote.

Under state law, the only way Allen can regain his right to vote is to be pardoned by the state Probation, Parole and Pardon Board.

Allen says in his suit, filed in August, that the law is discriminatory, arbitrary and "unrelated to any appropriate state interest and in the regulation of registering and voting and deprives plaintiff and his class of due process..."

The suit names as defendants James B. Ellisor, director of the state Election Commission, and the Aiken County Board of Registration.

Brown says it's difficult enough for the former convict to "reestablish ties with the free world, to retread an identity outside of prison."

He says it's like saying, "You're a free man, but we're not going to let you vote. It forces the inmate back into the world that society doesn't want him to be part of. It's an unnecessary barrier for society to place before him."

The ACLU says the only state it knows of that allows convicted felons to vote is Vermont, where prisoners vote by absentee ballot while they still are serving time.

Grady A. Wallace, director of the Probation, Parole and Pardon Board, says the latest figures show that during the 1973-74 fiscal year, 121 of 127 pardon petitions were granted.

The board now has about 18,000 persons under its supervision. "Technically, anybody is eligible for a pardon after he has been sentenced," Wallace says. But normal procedure is for persons who have been on parole for five years to be pardoned automatically.

"Wheat we're saying is that's not necessary," says Brown. "You shouldn't have to go through that process. The right to vote is guaranteed."

He says to say that 18,000 persons were on parole and only 127 applied for pardons points out another problem for the ex-convict trying to get his voting rights restored.

Each application must be investigated, and Brown says the board doesn't have the staff to investigate 18,000 petitions for pardons. He says if the court rules that the state must set up a mechanism whereby convicted felons can apply for their rights to be restored, the state would have to expand its staff.

The law disqualifies persons from voting if they are convicted of burglary, arson, obtaining goods or money under false pretenses, perjury, forgery, robbery, bribery, adultery, bigamy, wife-beating, housebreaking, receiving stolen goods breach of trust with fraudulent intent, fornication, incest, sodomy, assault with intent to ravish, larceny, murder, rape, or crimes against the election laws.

The law was reaffirmed in 1974 by the state legislature, which dropped miscegenation as one of the offenses listed.

But the law doesn't include all velonious offenses, says Laughlin McDonald, the ACLU attorney who will appear before U.S. District Court Judge Robert W. Hemphill Monday.

"It excludes others that are worse, such as manslaughter and kidnaping that are certainly as serious as robbery, whereas it includes some of the benign sex crimes such as sodomy and fornication," McDonald says.

"It's both overinclusive and underinclusive. It's just an irrational scheme," he adds.

The only similar case every to be tried involved a California law that disqualified all convicted felons from voting. "We attempt to distinguish from that case on grounds that the South Carolina case does not attempt to do that. It does not include some felons and does include others," McDonald says.

Even if the court rules in Allen's favor, the decision would only apply to South Carolina, says Brown. But, "if somebody brings a similar case in another state, it would set a precedent," he adds.

The state recently challenged the suit as a class action, but Hemphill ruled when he set the hearing date that there is a common bond between Allen and other convicted felons. He ordered the ACLU to determine how other persons who might wish to become plaintiffs can be notified.

McDonald says he will contend that he doesn't have to give notice. "The main thing the court is concerned with is whether this one individual is an adequate representative for all these people. But the court has ruled that he is," he says.

Annual Moose Clothing Drive Begins Monday

The annual Clothing Bank drive, sponsored by the Greenville Moose, will get underway on Monday.

Under chairmanship of Dan Harris, the Moose will be collecting used clothing for redistribution among Pitt County's most needy families. Teams will fan out from the Moose Home Monday at 7:00 p.m. to collect articles of clothing.

Donors may begin calling the Moose office (756-4370) Monday afternoon to report items available for pick-up.

Governor Jim Fleming told the members "this is an opportunity for a lot of local families to dispose of clothing that doesn't quite fit any more, or is a little bit worn, or is not longer in the latest style. It can help someone less fortunate to be warmer this winter."

As in other years, the prime need will be in children's clothing; however, Fleming said there would always be need for items adults can wear.

Secretary E. M. Baldree announced that as usual, donors would not have to worry about cleaning or minor repairs that might be needed. The clothing will be sorted, repairs made, and it will be cleaned before distribution.

"Something else should be added," he said. "We're frequently asked how the Moose can assure the clothing they collect will go to qualified families.

"The answer is simple: Our help goes to those who have been recommended to us by teachers, ministers, state and county agencies. A recipient's needs are verified by outside responsible sources."

Collections for the Clothing Bank will not be limited to this Monday night. Prospective donors who were unprepared for the Monday pick-ups can call the Moose office on another date, and arrangements will be made to pick up the clothing.

Offer Forum On What Schools Should Teach

"What Should the Schools Teach?" will be examined Oct. 14 in a public forum sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters (LWV).

The forum will begin at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Allied Health Building (also known as the Carol Belk Building) at the intersection of Charles Blvd. and the 264 Bypass. Plenty of parking is located at the side of the building.

Speakers for the evening will be Dr. Carl Dolce, Dean of the School of Education at North Carolina State University, and George Kahdy, Assistant Superintendent for Instructional Services at the State Department of Public Instruction. Both men have at one time served in the capacities of teacher, principal, and superintendent or assistant superintendent in a public school system, Dr. Dolce in the New Orleans Public Schools and Mr. Kahdy in the Raleigh City Schools.

Dr. Dolce received his M. Ed. in Educational Administration from Loyola University and his Ed. D. in Educational Administration from Harvard University.

Kahdy received his M.A. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, specializing in school administration, and has done post graduate work at North Carolina State University and Duke University.

After the speakers' presentations, panel members with a background in the humanities will each comment briefly on the subject at hand. The panel will include three East Carolina University faculty members, Ms. Myree Hayes of the Psychology Department, Dr. Buford Rhea of the Sociology Department, and Ms. Grace Ellenberg of Modern Languages. Questions and discussion from the audience will follow, moderated by Ms. Rhea Resnik, president of the Greenville-Pitt County LWV.

This meeting will be the first in a series held on three consecutive Tuesday evenings in October. The series was made possible by a grant of $1,595 from the North Carolina Humanities Committee and the contribution of in-kind services by the local LWV and the community, bringing the total cost of the series to $4,250.

Groups which have endorsed the series include the Greenville P.T.A. Council, the Greenville Association of Classroom Teachers, the Greenville and the Pitt County Chapters of the North Carolina Association of Educators, Sheppard Memorial Library, and the Division of Continuing Education at East Carolina University.

All interested citizens, whether or not directly connected with the public schools, are urged to attend.

Construction Begun Here On Fishing Boat Plant

NEW BOAT PLANT . . . This is an artists rendering of the new North American Fiberglass Corp. plant under construction in the industrial park north of Greenville. The firm will produce open fiberglass fishing boats under the trade name River Ox.

Officials of North American Fiberglass Corp. have announced that construction has begun on a new plant here which will manufacture open fishing boats under the trade name River Ox.

The 12,500 square foot steel building, located in the Greenville Industrial Park near the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop, is expected to cost about $300,000, according to Pat Dayson, chairman of the board of directors of the firm.

The new plant, expected to be completed in mid-January, will replace a 6,000 square foot temporary facility used by the firm on N.C. 30 near the N.C. Department of Transportation offices since production began here about eight months ago.

The River Ox, an all-fiberglass open fishing boat, is produced in 14 and 16-foot models. It has a V-hull with a one-inch keel.

Graham Flanagan, president of fiberglass firm said 'River Ox boats have achieved tremendous acceptance in the marketplace and we felt the new plant was needed to enable us to keep pace with the demand for them."

Production capacity of the new facility, Flanagan said, will be about 22 boats per week, "about triple the current output."

At present 11 people are employed by the firm. About 17 will be working at the new plant, Flanagan explained.

Members of the board of directors of North American Fiberglass include: J. Hugn Bazemore, John R. Farley, Hal G. Waddeall and Ercell S. Webb.

General contractor for the project is J. H. Hudson.

Latin America Has Red Tape Process Down Pat

By ROBERT E. SULLIVAN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — The man's open sobs of frustration turned to anger. His wife, tears dripping down her cheeks held him back — afraid he might do something he would later regret.

The couple was going through one of the trying moments of Latin America life. They were trying to register a car in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

In many South American countries that simple act takes literally hundreds of working hours and exacts a horrible toll in tears and nerves.

Paperwork is the name of the game — only it's not a game, it's an industry.

Thousands of people called "despachantes" earn their living filling out incredibly complicated forms for ordinary individuals who haven't the patience of Job or a law degree.

Roughly translated "despachante" means one who expedites things. It is a misnomer.

Some examples:

In order to register a used car in Argentina you have to have a mound of papers more than an inch thick, including the receipts for all taxes paid on the car since it was made.

The car has to go through several inspections, including one at an army post where a soldier verifies that the engine and body numbers match. Don't ask why the army.

If you have a good despachante, the whole process takes only about four months, with weekly consultations with the despachante on what the strategy will be for the next step.

Authorities told the head of an American business office in Buenos Aires that he had to have the head of his office sign a permit allowing him to drive the company car.

So he wrote a letter to himself, saying he was allowed to drive the car. The letter had to be verified by a notary public, and then the notary public's signature had to be verified, in turn, by the college of notaries. It took a month.

The situation doesn't change across the border in Brazil, either.

Brazilian consulates across the world are now giving out special authorizations for new Brazilian residents to bring in their personal belongings tax free.

However, the Brazilian customs service at home does not recognize the authorizations.

A recent arrival went down to the docks to pick up some old clothes and a used radio that he had sent unaccompanied from London — with the Brazilian consulate's permission — and was told he would have to pay a tax of $2,500.

Over the next five months he:

Told them to heck with the luggage, send it back to London. They refused because the luggage had never officially entered customs.

Was told he would be fined for even trying to bring the bags in on his type of visa.

Was told by a straight-faced customs agent that he was to be fined storage fees for not taking his luggage out of customs.

Was told that he couldn't take out the luggage without paying the tax — now much greater than the original $2,500.

Was told by a physician to try not to worry too much about it.

Back in Argentina, all children, even those born to foreign parents temporarily in the country, must be given a Spanish name from an approved list.

A new father in Buenos Aires spent six weeks getting official permission to call his son by an American name, during which time the son didn't have an official birth certificate — needed for citizenship in either country — and therefore was neither American nor Argentine. Officially the child did not exist.

A new resident arriving in Brazil must have his chest x-ray in his hand as he approaches the immigration desk at the airport. If the x-ray is in his luggage — being checked through customs a few feet away — they take away his passport for several weeks.

The answer to it all is to do what the man did in Argentina, cry.

Representing 19 Countries

According to preliminary complilation, foreign students are attending ECU from Italy, Costa Rica, Canada, Colombia, British West Africa, Iran, Korea, China, British East Africa, Vietnam, Belgium (African possessions), Cambodia, Finland, Thailand, France, India, New Zealand, Germany and the United Kingdom.

ECU has a record Fall term enrollment of nearly 12,000 students on campus.

Plan To Build Giant Buddha

HONG KONG (UPI) — A landscape garden with a 150-foot golden statue of Buddha to be built on nearby Lantao island has been approved in principle by the government.

But the Hong Kong Tourist Association notes the Po Lin monastery which plans to build the giant Buddha will have to provide a public roadway from the monastery to the garden, plus free admission. Plans call for the statue to be covered with gold powder.

SPECIAL PLANE

CARACAS (UPI) — The Venezuelan armed forces has ordered a Boeing 737 jetliner to be used by President Carlos Andres Perez.

More Join In Pension Plans

NEW YORK (UPI) — The number of persons enrolled in pension plans with insurance companies has risen to nearly 14 million from about four million in 1955, the Institute of Life Insurance reports.

Almost 50 million persons are enrolled in private and public retirement plans other than the federal Social Security program, the institute suys.

Fayetteville Hospital Sued

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Fayetteville hospital whose medical malpractice insurance expired Oct. 1 has been sued by the family of a patient who died there in June 1974.

The $900,000 lawsuit, filed earlier this week in Cumberland County Superior Court, alleges that Lonzel David Bledsole died of seizures caused by intravenous fluids administered by the emergency room staff at Cape Fear Valley Hospital.

County officials maintain that the previous insuror, Employers Mutual of Wassau, would be liable for any judgement in the case since the treatment occurred before the policy's expiration date.

The lawsuit, filed by the victim's widow and four children, claims hospital personnel performed no tests to determine whether Bledsole had any chemical imbalances before administering the fluids.

Named as defendants were the county hospital system, Barry Emergency Medical Services, Dr. William Barry and Dr. John Hartness. The Barry firm operates the emergency room under a contract with the hospital system.

The county hospital system decided against joining the insurance pool established by the state Hospital Association to provide coverage to hospitals whose policies had expired.

Several insurance companies have decided not to offer malpractice coverage in North Carolina.

Officials said the rates — $100,000 a year for $250,000 coverage — were too high.

VA Raised Loan Rates

The Veterans Administration increased its home loan mortgage interest rate ceiling from eight and one-half per cent to nine per cent, effective Sept. 2, according to an announcement by H. W. Johnson, director of the Winston-Salem VA regional office.

Johnson said the increase was made in accordance with a joint Veterans Administration and Department of Housing and Urban Development policy of keeping the maximum rate in line with actual mortgage market conditions and to keep discount points to a minimum.

The increase, he explained was necessary to permit the VA to maintain its mortgage interest rate ceiling at a level consistent with the demands of the loan market.

If the interest rate is allowed to fall behind the market, the availability of money for VA loans becomes seriously impaired, he added.

When Aruba was discovered by Spanish explorers nearly 500 years ago, it was considered worthless. Today the little island just off the coast of Venezuela is one of the most popular tourist destinations in the Caribbean, with more than 100,000 vacationers annually.

Considers Southern Bell Rate Raise

RALEIGH (AP)—The state Utilities Commission was asked Friday to consider the financial well-being of consumers before it decides on Southern Bell Telephone Co.'s request to raise rates.

The company want an increase amounting to $62.4 million.

Consumer advocate Joan Taylor Munger, speaking for Consumers on the Watch, noted that the company wants to raise household rates about 25 per cent to help protect its top financial rating and attract investors. But, she said, "who seeks to protect the financial position of the American working man?"

The company is asking for higher basic rates and higher installation charges. Also, Bell has requested permission to charge 20 cents for each call to directory assistance after the first three such calls in a month.

Mrs. Munger said 31 per cent of Americans moved in 1973, meaning they lost their telephone book listing for all or part of that year. She also complained that the telephone directory is issued only once a year and asked if the company would put it out more often to ease the need for directory assistance calls.

As an alternative to the company's request, Mrs. Munger suggested that the company be allowed to charge for directory assistance calls only if the number requested isn't listed in the current book.

"Of course the legally handicapped should not be penalized, nor should those seeking a new number with no other way to obtain it. In this way, the service would be paid for not by those who must use it, but by those who abuse it," she said.

Historic Home Open

The Hezekiah Alexander Homesite is now open to the public free of charge on Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The house is also open on Sundays from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m.

Hezekiah Alexander was a revolutionary statesman and signer of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence. The old stone house, completed in 1774, is located on the grounds of the Methodist Home at 3420 Shamrock Drive, Charlotte. Although it will take some time to complete the furnishing of the house, it is well worth a visit now to see the emaculate restoration itself.

The City of Charlotte has commissioned the Mint Museum of Art to operate the homesite and to develop a museum of history on the property. This museum, now under construction, is scheduled to open in 1976.

All visitors to the house are welcome. Groups are requested to make reservations in advance by calling the Mint Museum at 334-9723.

Odds Are, Prince Charles Has Met Future Queen

PRINCE CHARLES has now met all the obviously eligible young British ladies of his generation and chances are his future Queen is among them. (UPI Photo)

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles has now met all the obviously eligible young British ladies of his generation. Chances are his future queen is one of them.

"He might not have recognized her at first glance," a knowledgeable source said recently.

"Love at first sight is no more common among royalty than it is in the general population. But the chances are that the next queen of England has already made her entrance."

The source said he assumed that Charles still holds the opinion he once expressed — that he would have to choose a bride from the aristocracy because it would not be fair to subject a completely unprepared girl to the formulity and ceremony of life at court.

Not everyone, said the source, would want that kind of existence — like living in a pageant. Even Queen Mother Elizabeth, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore whose family seat is storied Glamis Castle (where Shakespeare set Macbeth) was reluctant to marry into the royal family.

But at least young ladies raised in historic homes frequented by titled families, or accepted in that set, have a better idea of what queenship entails and a better chance of adjusting to the demands, privileges and restrictions of the role.

Charles, who will be 27 on Nov. 14, is in no hurry to find a permanent mate — although he alleges he is keeping his eyes open.

"There must be someone somewhere for me," he has said. "Obviously there are certain people I've looked at and thought 'could I ever marry her?' or something like that."

If Charles has missed her it won't be his fault. His low key dating system — he says it's to protect girls from having their names linked with his — tends to obscure his active social life.

But he has been spotted escorting blondes, brunettes and redheads of high and lower degree.

"If I talk to a girl she immediately gets sized up as my future spouse," he said. Or a girl friend.

A married woman he danced with at a night club (her husband was present) said she was shocked to find herself being talked about.

If Charles has met all the eligible Britons — and everyone agrees a foreign consort is unlikely — the big question is: Which one will be his queen?

It's easier to say who won't be. One by one as the years go by the girls whose names have cropped up most frequently in connection with Charles have married elsewhere.

The latest is Lady Victoria Percy, 26, daughter of the Duke of Northumberland, listed as a possible queen when he was only 7 and she was 6.

Another great heiress, Lady Leonora Grosvenor, daughter of the Duke of Westminster, was also a favorite in speculation. But she married the Earl of Lichfield — a cousin of Charles.

Lucia Santa Cruz, Rosie Clifton, Bettina Lindsay, Sibella Dorman — only part of a long list of dates past.

At present Charles sometimes takes out Caroline Longman, 23, daughter of a wealthy publisher whose mother, daughter of the Earl of Cavan, was a bridesmaid at Queen Elizabeth's wedding. Miss Longman spent a week at Balmoral, dined with Charles several times and went water skiing with him.

Davina Sheffield, 24, is another friend and the name of Lady Alexandra Hay, daughter of the Countess of Erroll and Sir Iain Moncreiffe, also appears from time to time.

Charles seemed to be interested in pretty blonde Penelope Eastwood, 20, at a polo match. Then along came Norton Knatchbull, grandson of Earl Mountbatten and another of Charles' cousins.

"She's my girlfriend," he snapped at inquirers. "She's nothing to do with Charles."

And, of course, there is Lady Jane Wellesley, 24, daughter of the Duke of Wellington, still a very good friend though they are not seen out any more since reporters and photographers almost mobbed them.

"Of course Charles keeps his real interests very quiet," said the source. "It's possible she's a girl who has never yet been mentioned."

Biggest Item Is Personal Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American families in all economic brackets now spend more on personal taxes than any other item in the household budget.

Withholding taxes and Social Security payments claim 23 per cent of high-income family budgets and 16 per cent of low-income family budgets, according to Labor Department estimates. In 1968, personal taxes accounted for only 17 per cent of the most expensive family budget and 12 per cent of the smallest family spending plan.

Course In Handicapping Apparently A Good Bet

DALLAS (UPI) — If his long shots at the track do anywhere nearly as well as the unlikely college curricula he dreams up, it might pay to enroll in Oscar Dunston's course in handicapping at Eastfield Junior College.

Horse betting is banned in Texas. There was "the religious problem," and who would have thought of such a thing anyway?

Differences in opinion are everywhere, Dunston figured. That's what makes horse races.

So he sold the idea, and Handicapping Horses joined the list of Community Service program noncredit courses at Eastfield this fall.

"It's Lucky Lucy by a nose, and you knew it," said the course description. "Learn a professional method of handicapping horses for fun and (if you're lucky) for profit. A trip to Louisiana Downs will be organized at the end of the course for those interested in applying the information they have learned."

Did the hunch of Professor Dunston, owner of a string of steak houses, pay off? A winner, going away, he reported.

"Response was tremendous," he said soon after the term began. "And I was surprised at the class of people — businessmen, accountants, secretaries."

Bryon McClenney, Eastfield's president, concurs that the course has student appeal. The twice-weekly sessions are filled to capacity.

Students learn how to read a racing form, how to judge a jockey's record in terms of a horse's record, the terminology —"how to pick a winner," says the catalogue's course description.

But after a couple weeks into the term McClenney admitted to problems.

"Yes, we had complaints. The most notable was the editorial blasting we took from the 'Baptist Standard,'" he said. "They said we had no business teaching such a thing, but they were factually wrong in charging us with offering the course at taxpayers' expense. There's not a tax dollar in it."

The course is supported by the $15 fee charged to its students, McClenney said.

Dunston convinced the school the course was a good idea, McClenney said, and "in terms of popular response, he was right."

However, the school president said, "We have made an administrative decision not to offer the course again."

Further Travel Growth Seen

NEW YORK (UPI) — Consumer travel aftermarkets are expected to expand from an estimated $48.7 billion in 1976 to $78 billion by 1983.

A Frost & Sullivan, Inc., survey indicates the number of nonlocal travel miles will climb to 500 billion in 1983 from 370 billion miles in 1972. An increase in the number of nonlocal miles is not anticipated through 1976, however.

The greatest growth potential is projected in hotels-motels, eating places, trailer markets and retailing of sporting goods and camping equipment.

INDEPENDENCE

ORIGINAL BUILDING . . . of the church was located on Dickinson Avenue.

First Christian Church Marking Its 75th Year

On Sunday, Oct. 19, the First Christian Church will observe its 75th year of discipleship in Greenville and its seventh year in the new facility on Greenville Boulevard.

Since its organization as a religious body in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Travis E. Hooker Oct. 18, 1900, and its institutional beginnings with 32 charter members in the original building on Dickinson Avenue, the church's membership has increased to the current 729.

Five of the members have entered the ministry of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) including Dr. William E. Tucker, dean of Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University. In 1958 the congregation supported the establishment of a daughter church, the present Hooker' Memorial Christian Church.

In 1916 the congregation relocated on Eighth Street and from that date to 1968 was called Eighth Street Christian Church. The move to today's structure near Pitt Plaza and the change of name to First Christian Church of Greenville came in 1968. The new building was largely the result of years of determined and tireless efforts by the Rev. W. J. Hadden in promoting and directing the project.

For the anniversary celebration, Dr. Will R. Wallace, 15th minister, will lead the service. Former ministers W. J. Hadden and M. Dana Hunt will also participate in the program, which will include reflections on the past and recognition of the oldest living leaders and members.

At noon a covered-dish luncheon will be served. Entertainment will be provided by the Flatland Family Band.

A special invitation is extended to all former members and friends to attend the anniversary and homecoming.

Inventor Never Finished School

SALISBURY, Conn. (AP) — Inventor Edward E. Kleinschmidt never finished high school, but in his 100 years he has had his hand in inventions as varied as macaroni twisters and the teletype.

And through his years of tinkering, the slender, white-haired centenarian has played a key role in speeding communications around the globe.

Kleinschmidt, who has just celebrated his 100th birthday in his summer home here, claims credit for inventing the teletype, still used throughout the world by news wire services. He and his wife spend the winter in Bal Harbour, Fla.

He has 118 patents and takes credit for inventing or helping develop the high-speed stock ticker, an automatic fishing reel and railroad signaling devices. His last invention, at the age of 92, was a miniature teletype for use in police cars so messages would not have to be sent by radio, where they could be intercepted.

The inventor, now hard of hearing although generally healthy, "felt the Morse Code was too slow at the time and he wanted to speed up the transmission of communications," his wife Eleonora said in an interview recently.

In 1914, The Associated Press became the first news organization to install teletypes.

Eleven years later Kleinschmidt merged his business with its only competitor to become Morkrum-Kleinschmidt, later known as Teletype Corp.

American Telephone and Telegraph Co. bought the company for $30 million in 1930.

In 1940, Kleinschmidt was honored for his invention of the teletype with the John Price Wetherill Medal, awarded by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia.

The inventor was born in Germany and was 8 years old when he came to the United States.

He began experimenting at the age of 15 and, according to his wife: "he's read every book on electronics in the New York Library."

One of Kleinschmidt's earliest inventions, a wet acid battery, was called the "Little Giant."

"Kids used it to run all kinds of things," he said. But the acid in the device had a tendency to spill.

Kleinschmidt persevered and in 1898 opened a shop in New York and hung a sign over it saying, "Inventions Developed."

"I think he got interested in Morse Code originally and electronics just was something he became terribly interested in and he pursued it," his wife said.

X-Ray Bubbles Said Effective

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Radiologists at a children's hospital here ask their young patients to blow bubbles while they take chest x-rays.

Drs. Lawrence R. Kuhns and Andrew K. Posnanski of C.S. Mott Children's Hospital say the technique is a safe and effective way to get children between the ages of three and six to breathe forcefully.

EPA Seeking To Cool Critics

By BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To some of its critics, the Environmental Protection Agency is a band of bureaucratic visionaries and fanatics striking out against pesticides with scant concern for consumer food needs or farm profits.

The EPA says it isn't so. But the agency is feeling the heat of opposition from pesticide manufacturers and users, now that pressure from environmentalists has slackened since the first major ban in 1972 against DDT.

Farm bloc congressmen are threatening to rewrite EPA's pesticide control authority to give greater weight to the views of farm and food supply interests. In response, EPA officials have begun a major effort to cool criticism of the way they handle pesticide safety programs.

While EPA Administrator Russell Train and his deputy, John Quarles, insist they are not compromising on public health and safety, Train told the House Agriculture Committee recently he is providing "greater access to and participation in agency decision making by all interested people, particularly the agricultural community."

Train created an advisory committee to solicit the views of farmers, the pesticide industry, environmental spokesman and others on future policy decisions. He invited farm bloc congressmen to make recommendations for membership on the committee.

Meanwhile, the EPA recently decided to restore limited use of cyanide for control of coyotes and other predators.

Train conceded these steps would not end complaints about the way EPA has forced farmers and others to abandon a host of widely used pest control chemicals. But he said the advisory committee should improve the agency's "communications" with groups affected by its rulings.

In an interview, quarles said many farmers believe the EPA follows "a zero-risk approach, in which we ban anything posing a risk regardless of its benefits." He denied there had ever been such an instance.

"Every time we've banned a chemical, we've determined the shift would not have severe or disruptive effects on agricultural production and costs — significant effects, yes, but not severe," Quarles said. "We've balanced the risks and benefits as most people would."

EPA officials said the DDT ban had meant somewhat higher costs for farmers and consumers but no cutback in production.

Replacing DDT with substitute pesticides has cost cotton growers annually slightly more than $1 an acre nationwide, and about $6 an acre in the Southeast. The cost to retail buyers of cotton goods has risen only 2.2 cents per person annually, the EPA said.

It was the environmentalists who forced major reforms in pesticide controls because they felt past policies under Agriculture Department direction had paid too little attention to dangers in the widespread use of chemical pest killers.

In 1970, when EPA was created and given control of pesticides, and in 1972 when a major pesticide reform law was passed, "there was a very strong and active public concern" over the issue, Quarles said.

The creation of EPA, passage of the reform law and the DDT ban "caused the general public to reduce its active attention," he said. "There was an impression that the problem had been solved.

"It left us with a situation in which the organized groups most concerned with policy have been the manufacturers and users," he said.

Criticism from these groups over the DDT ban mounted with other EPA actions, including a ban on the widely used pesticides aldrin and dieldrin, restrictions on predator control and controversial limits on use of the pesticide mirex to control fire ants in the South.

The agency is considering a ban on chlordane and heptachlor, members of a long-lived family of chlorinated hydrocarbon chemicals, because of a suspected cancer threat. Both are used on corn and a number of other crops.

But the EPA recently angered some environmentalists by authorizing limited use of cyanide against coyotes. At the same time, Train ordered aides to study new "alternatives" for controlling fire ants.

Train instructed EPA pesticide officials to report directly to him so he can act personally on issues normally handled by subordinates, and is seeking a compromise with farm and state officials on methods of certifying farmers to use dangerous pesticides.

Quarles says he recognizes "tremendous benefits" in using pesticides, but the issue is balance. "The question is one of hoping to get the benefits of pesticides while minimizing or avoiding the dangers," he said.

Deaf Can Call For Assistance

By BILL BUCY

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Emergency telephone services have meant little to the deaf or mute.

But now, thanks to a small, portable machine, the deaf have a way to "talk" and summon help, even from a pay telephone.

A new system, installed recently in the Sacramento County Sheriff's department, allows the deaf to communicate through a portable battery-operated keyboard device much like a small typewriter.

"Deaf people are not only forgotten but often neglected," said Sheriff Duane Lowe. "This machine will enable them to communicate with us much like anyone else."

Called the "MCM telecommunications device," the small box is operated by placing the telephone receiver in a cradle and dialing the sheriff's department.

A special dial tone alerts the communications division to hook up its device. All that remains is to type messages back and forth, which appear on a display window, much like that on a hand-held calculator.

Persons with the machines are given instructions on its operation and specific codes are used. Some messages must be in a certain form to avoid confusion such as "fire, my house," or "child injured."

Once the basic information is gathered, officials can ask questions and give instructions.

Department telephone operators and communications workers have also undergone special training so anyone can quickly put the system into action.

Many deaf persons already use a teletype machine provided them at nominal cost by Western Union. Police and sheriffs departments also have a teletype hookup for emergency calls from deaf people.

"But they are bulky and immobile while these machines are portable and can be hooked up at any communications station we have," he said.

The small boxes weigh only about five pounds and can be carried anywhere. They even can be used on pay telephones such as to report a car accident, Lowe said.

The devices are more expensive than the stationary teletype machines, about $625 each. But Lowe said they are more efficient and their portability gives the deaf a broader range of communication.

He said they can be used to talk with other machines like it, the older teletype system or other devices used by the deaf.

Not Supporting A Conviction

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thirty-nine per cent of American adults questioned in a survey said they think women should carry as much life insurance as men.

But they are not backing this conviction with dollars, says the Institute of Life Insurance. It said 81 per cent of the life insurance bought last year was protection on the lives of adult males. Only 14 per cent was on adult females.

Playhouse Season Set

The East Carolina Playhouse will open its Bicentennial season with a world premiere production, The Flight Brothers, a musical history of Orville and Wilbur Wright. The season includes two musicals, two award winning plays, and one opera masterpiece, with the first show opening October 28 in McGinnis Auditorium.

The Flight Brothers is straight from the heart of America. It is filled with moments reminiscent of songs from our country's turn of the century. As a musical comedy, The Flight Brothers is old fashioned in that it has everything: Big production numbers with dances, comic songs, and beautiful ballads. This premiere opener runs from October 28th through November 1st.

The second show, Who's Happy Now? is a modern comedy first produced at the Mark Taper forum in Los Angeles; it then toured successfully throughout the country to open as a much acclaimed off-Broadway hit in New York. This perceptive comedy is concerned with a bizarre boyhood in the bosom of an offbeat Texas family.

The third show, The Rimers of Eldritch won the Vernon Rice Award and introduced a new and talented playwright, Lanford Wilson. Wilson has since written the smash hit, Hot 1 Baltimore. In The Rimers of Eldritch Wilson employs a chronological technique to capture the heart and meaning of the small middlewestern town of Eldritch.

The fourth show, The Contrast, originally came to light as an early American version of comedy of manners in 1778 by Royal Tyler. First staged in New York in 1787, its production marked the beginning of professional theatre in the newly created United States. Don Pippin has written the musical score for this play. The Contrast is a natural addition to any '76' season.

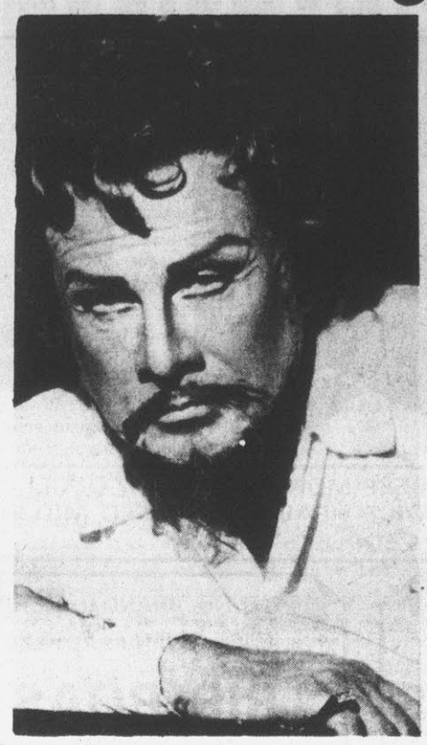
The fifth show, LaTraviata is the romantic opera masterpiece by Giuseppe Verdi. La Traviata is based on another classic, La Dame Aux Camelias by Alexandre Dumas fils. The story of a fashionable courtesan who falls in love with a young man and eventually dies of tuberculosis, La Traviata will be sung in English. The East Carolina University School of Music and the East Carolina Playhouse will co-produce the opera.

Season tickets for the East Carolina Playhouse's Bicentennial season are on sale in the office of the ECU Drama Department for $8.50.

Information on the season or any production can be obtained by calling 758-6390 between 9:00 and 5:00 Monday through Friday.

In Donizetti Opera

Sills Singing Today



TWO "ROBERTO DEVEREUX" SINGERS . . . John Alexander (left) as Roberto Devereux, and Susanne Marsee as the Duchess of Nottingham, join Beverly Sills and Richard Fredericks in Donizetti's opera being telecast at 2 p.m. today over Channel 25, Greenville.

America's first lady of opera, Beverly Sills, will star in the opening production of the new "In Performance At Wolf Trap" series today at 2 p.m. over Channel 25, Greenville.

Miss Sills is joined by opera veterans John Alexander, Susanne Marsee and Richard Fredricks in Gaetano Donizetto's opera about England's Queen Elizabeth I, Roberto Devereux. The basis of the opera's story is the tragic love affair between Elizabeth and the Earl of Essex (Roberto Devereux).

Julius Rudel of the New York City Opera, is conductor for this full technicolor TV performance. Premiered in 1837, the opera was rarely staged during the 20th century until a highly successful performance in Naples in 1964 led other opera companies to stage their own versions.

MacMillan Show At Art Center

PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST'S MOTHER . . . one of a dozen portrait paintings by Henry Jay MacMillian now on view at the Greenville Art Center.

Although the exhibit of work by Tar Heel artist Henry Jay MacMillan now on view at the Greenville Art Center is considerably short of being a retrospective, it does provide a broad look at the field he is best known for—portraiture. In this category, there are paintings dating from as early as 1934 to as recently as 1969.

The finest example in this show — "Portrait Of My Mother" is a work long in the making. It's dated 1954-67 — a working span of 13 years. This is a work of beauty, of a woman obviously endowed with a regal bearing and a strong personal character.

Other portraits in this show with the kind of personal reflection one expects to find in portraiture are the study of a young man seated, a 1934 painting titled "The Communist;" and a 1936 painting of a young woman, "Elizabeth Sleeping."

In these earlier portraits, colors are deeper, mellower, warmer. For this reason, as well as the fact the earlier ones more truly capture the spirit of the inner person, I find them more rewarding than the later portraits in this show.

MacMillan also shows half a dozen flower paintings. Here again, an earlier work, the 1941 "Still Life With Amaryllis" comes off far better than the three flower paintings dated 1974.

Two examples of pleasing, if uninspiring wood panels with lights are included in this show. Designed by MacMillan and executed by David A. Walker, they are fashioned of stepped levels of curved shapes painted

Rounding out the show are five small India ink and wax crayon drawings dated 1946, and two large landscape paintings of 1939. One of the landscapes, "Windy Morning," has a strong feeling of the intense lull that precedes an onset of turbulence. This painting was shown in the New York World Fair of 1939.

It's unfortunate that space at the Greenville Art Center did not permit the artist to show some of the works for which he has received considerable acclaim, a group of paintings of Normandy from World War II.

Among his major achievements have been a one-man show at No. 10 Gallery in New York in 1941, and a commission by the Sperry Corporation for a mural in Rockefeller Center.

After serving with the Army in Europe during World War II, MacMillan taught at the Parsons School of Design in New York for ten years before returning to Wilmington. In addition to his continuing work in painting, the artist is active in preservation work in Wilmington, where he is Chairman of the New Hanover Historical Commission.

It's good to have this opportunity to see both early and recent examples of this native artist's work. Hopefully, another show at another date can be arranged to give local viewers contact with a broader scope of his total accomplishments

A Homecoming Show Of Jenkins' Art

A collection of oil paintings by ECU Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins is going on exhibit today in the gallery of ECU's Mendenhall Student Center.

The show, part of the Homecoming Week festivities, includes landscapes, seascapes and paintings of old buildings. Colors used by Dr. Jenkins in his paintings frange from delicate pastels to deep grays and earth browns.

Dr. Jenkins has never studied art formally, and is relunctant to term himself an artist. "I am really a technician," he said, 'and strictly an amateur."

Among subjects of the paintings are a weathered millhouse with its large water wheel, woodland and country settings, peaceful coastal scenes, mountain views and other outdoor scenes.

This exhibit, located on the top floor of the student center, is open to the public each weekday from 8:30 a.m. until 11 p.m. and for several hours on Saturday and Sunday.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

THE LONELY HUNTER by Virginia Spencer Carr is a long and highly readable biography of the great southern novelist, Carson McCullers. Her life is seen primarily through those who knew her — Tennessee Williams, Dame Edith Sitwell and countless others who loved her and sometimes hated her, and many who could not put up with her demanding self for long. As Lillian Hellman is heard saying here: "Carson burdened everyone who got close to her. . . I don't like such burdens." Indeed she did, this tiny, boyish author, who burst upon the literary scene sensationally at the age of 23, and who was every bit as eccentric in real life as any of her vibrant, Gothic creations. Capable of the wildest infatuations for members of either sex, Carson lived all her life in a world of her own making, a world where fact and fiction were undestinguishable. Virginia Carr traces McCullers's life from her rather hectic childhood in Columbus, Georgia, marked by a determination to become a concert pianist, to her later years spent in constant ill-health, and which included a violent marriage, that ended in her husband's suicide. She also explores Carson's deep emotional experiences and love relationships, and gives a vivid description of the writer's painstaking, tortuous work habits. Perhaps it's best to remember Carson McCullers through her works where she escaped into that special wistful world of the grotesque. Mrs. Carr discusses the books, books into plays, and stories as they appeared intermittenly but lets them speak for themselves. As for Carson's story, it fascinates and exasperates much as she did, tapering off in the last sad years of constant drinking and smoking, and real physical pain. One remembers her and identifies with her best as Frankie Addams, "a member of nothing in the world."

Every year Americans give nearly $25 billion to worthy— and some not so worthy causes. As donors, how can we determine which are the most deserving of the million dollars we give away? In BETTER GIVING, George Kirstein surveys the whole charity field in the U.S. today and gives valuable guidance for better giving. He analyzes the reasons people give, the modern techniques used to raise funds, the increasing role government plays in philanthropic activity, and the selection and duties of the trustees who are legally responsible for the work of the agencies. Examining the relative merits of giving to child care, education, hospitals, health agencies, recreation, conservation and the arts, the author describes the work of leading agencies in each field. The book also surveys the educational and social programs sponsored by the various religious organizations. Neither a paean of praise for all "do good" organizations nor a expose of the very few "charity cheats," BETTER GIVING is a fair-minded, pratical study of the many legitimate but confusing appeals that confront all who wish to give where money is most needed.

Urban Indians Often Can't Cope With Difficulties

By CHRIS J. HARPER
Associated Press Writer

Thirteen years ago Dorothy Demarris left her home in Taos, N.M., and became an immigrant in her own country.

"It was scary and I was all set to go back home," recalled the 28-year-old Pueblo Indian, whose travels ended in a dingy, skid row hotel in Chicago.

Many Indians made similar journeys in the 1950s and 1960s under the Bureau of Indian Affairs' Relocation and Employment Assistance program, leaving behind both the troubles and security of the reservation.

Today, about 45 per cent of the nation's 800,000 American Indians live in the cities.

Mrs. Demaris found work as a secretary, but many other urban Indians are unemployed. The Indian population in metropolitan areas has doubled in the past 15 years, and there has been a corresponding increase in problems of employment, adequate housing and health care.

The federal Bureau of Indian Affairs provides a variety of services for Indians living on reservations, but does not operate among urban Indians. The Department of Labor, however, does provide funds for job centers for urban Indians, and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare pumps some money into health services and other assistance programs. Congress also has appropriated money for city schools with Indian children.

The transition from reservation to city life is often a shock.

"The only thing I can relate it to is going to a foreign country from the United States. The pace of the city is so fast. It's so unfriendly and cold," said Helen Whitehead of the Native American outpost in Chicago.

"At least on the reservation, the pace is slower and the people are friendly."

Indians centers in a number of cities attempt to help the migrants adjust to their urban surroundings. But many centers are "band-aid operations" with small staffs, says one Indian center officials.

Thirty-five cities report populations of more than 1,000 Native Americans. The largest number — 50,000 — are settled in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area. Tulsa, Oklahoma City, New York, San Francisco, Phoenix, Minneapolis and Chicago all list more than 10,000 Indians apiece.

Native Americans tend to congregate in poorer neighborhoods like Chicago's Uptown area. A federal study reported recently that about 19 per cent of urban Indians live in moderately or severely overcrowded housing, compared with a national average of 7 per cent of the population. More than eight per cent of urban Indians live in housing without toilets, 14 times the national average.

The Indians ventured to the cities for jobs, but as the nation's economic woes have increased, employment opportunities have dwindled.

"When recession comes who are going to lose the jobs? The Indians because they don't have the skills," said Al Cobe, founder of the Indian Employment Center in Chicago's Uptown area. "Whenever there's a depression or recession, the Indians lose out."

A notable exception to the trend, however, is Oklahoma City, where jobs from the oil industry have kept the unemployment rate at about two per cent for the city's 15,000 Indians.

Unlike almost every other city with a large Indian population, the conditons in Oklahoma City are generally better primarily because of the employment situation. The migration to Oklahoma City began much earlier than elsewhere because of the state's large Indian population. Therefore the period for adaptation to urban life has been longer.

Health care poses an awesome problem for many urban Indians. "The disadvantaged people aren't able to get the health services,' said Cobe, who also has opened a small medical clinic in Chicago. Unless Indians are breathing their last breath, the hospitals won't take them. They want to know who'll pay first."

Many Indian leaders fear that the city schools and the urban environment have aided in the deterioration of Indian culture among the young. More than one-half of urban Indians marry non-Indians in the cities, increasing the cultural breakdown.

Still, the migration has had one seemingly positive result. The educational levels of urban Indians have risen dramatically. A federal study showed that 42 per cent of urban Indians were high school graduates in 1970, compared with 28 per cent in 1960.

Urban Indians often lack the political clout to solve their difficulties. In many instances, their problems have been overshadowed by those of the larger black and Spanish-speaking populations in metropolitan areas.

"We lack identity because we don't have Watts," said Wee Cie Ford, director of the South Bay Indian Services Center in Long Beach, Calif.

Sometimes, however, internal battles within the Indian community have hampered progress.

"The Seattle area is commonly referred to as the snakepit of the nation," admitted Greg Frazier, director of the city's Indian Center. "Generally, the urban Indian is the most politically active ethnic group while at the same time the most politically ineffective. We fight each other all the time."

Recommends Service Role

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Dr. John W. Oswald, president of Pennsylvania State University, who recently returned from a two-week study tour of the Soviet Union, says Russian educators are puzzled that American students are permitted to decide their life plans without any government intervention.

"The closed societies are convinced that central planning and decision-making is the best method for societal service and full employment," Oswald said, "and yet they observe the facts of a free society's accomplishments and vigorous survival."

Oswald, vice president of The Association of American Universities, said the American higher education system is not entirely without planning. He said "educators seek balance in the needs of society and interests of our people."

"No one can or should really dictate to you in a free society that you must use your talents nor direct just how you should use them," Oswald told recent graduates. "But the weight of the evidence is that a life of service and concern for your fellow man is more fulfilling, comforting and self satisfying than one of selfish gratification."

Homemakers Told Compare

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Homemakers tempted to bake at home or hoard products should compare total costs of all alternatives, says an Oklahoma State University home economist.

J.C. Hamilton, extension economist, said last year's flour can become buggy and last summer's high-priced sugar can become harder than a rock unless stored properly. Prices on both products are lower priced now than last year.

Hamilton said retailers report distinct changes in consumers buying. They are becoming do-it-yourself persons once again. Sales have been increasing sharply for flour, yeast and other baking ingredients. In most stores, sales of mixes have been declining, he added.

Pirates Edge Citadel On Conaty's Boot, 3-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The Citadel's strong defense, ninth best in the nation against the score, almost did the job last night against East Carolina.

The Bulldogs held the Pirates to just a field goal by Pete Conaty, a 25-yarder, but it was all the Bucs needed to chalk up their third victory of the season, and their second in Southern Conference play, 3-0.

It was the least amount of points scored in a Pirate victory in the school's 43-year gridiron history.

The field goal was set up by a Citadel fumble, after which the Bucs moved 29 yards from the 31 to the two. They were helped along by two Citadel penalties, one of 13 yards and the other of four. But three cracks from the three netted only a yard against a team that has allowed only three touchdowns in five games. Conaty then kicked the field goal and that took care of the night's scoring.

The Citadel was hampered not only by a strong Pirate defense, which gave up only 68 yards on the ground, but by their own mistakes, pass interceptions and costly penalties.

One penalty cancelled a 57-yard punt return by Mike Riley that might have made the difference. The return went for a score, but an illegal block nullified it.

Although the Bucs had trouble moving the ball in the first half, they more than dominated play in the second, despite not being able to score again. They were hurt somewhat when Conaty suffered a shoulder injury and had to leave the game, Jimmy Southerland then came in and moved the team well as they kept it out of The Citadel's hands on key drives.

The Citadel, hurt by both the East Carolina defense, and its own mistakes, failed in several efforts to push the ball into the end zone. The Bucs, knocked on the door twice, but got only the field goal for its efforts.

East Carolina crossed the 50 first, but only for a yard before the defense hurled Pirate quarterback Pete Conaty for an 11-yard loss on third down.

But following the Pirate punt, Jim Bolding picked off a fumble on the Bulldog 31. Ken Strayhorn got five yards on the first play, and The Citadel was penalized 13 more for a personal foul. After two plays for five yards, to the eight, another penalty against The Citadel put it on the four, where it took two plays for the Bucs to make a first down at the three. Three plays, including one pass ruled trapped in the end zone, netting just a yard, and Conaty kicked a 25-yard field goal to post the only points of the half. The time was 2:59 of the first period.

On the kickoff, The Citadel fumbled again and Larry Paul recovered for the Bucs on the 25. This time, however, a first down loss due to a fumble and a penalty pushed the Bucs too far back for a first down, and a 48-yard field goal attempt by Conaty fall short.

The Citadel finally crossed the midfield stripe in the second period, moving from its own 25 to the Pirate 34 on two 12-yard Ron Lenning passes and a 17-yard run by him. But at the 34, Ernest Madison halted the drive with an interception.

With just over four minutes left in the half, The Citadel forced another punt and mayhem erupted. Riley hauled in the ball at the 'Dog 43 and weaved his way through the Pirate defenders to race 57 yards for an apparent score. A panelty flag was thrown when the entire Citadel bench ran on the field to congratulate Riley, but then a clip was revealed at the Buc 41. The 15-yarder, coupled with a five-yarder for delay of game pushed the Cadets back to their own 39.

Each team had one threat in the half, The Bucs moving to the Bulldog 40 before an interception turned it back. The Citadel then drove to the 23 before a field goal with just seconds left was was wide of the mark.

During the half, The Citadel collected eight penalties for 69 yards, while the Bucs has just three for 25.

On their second possession of the second half, the Bucs got off a drive from their own 35 that ended in a missed field goal from the 22 in the drive, Conaty sustained a shoulder separation and left the game after gaining 13 yards for the first Buc first down. The Pirates took a long time to move it, but it stalled after a penalty after reaching the 12. Larry Paul's first collegiate field goal attempt was short of the mark.

Following a poor Citadel punt, the Bucs appeared heading for a second driving from the 'Dog 46 to the 13 before Jimmy Southerland fumbled and Stan Yarborough recovered at the eight.

The two exchanged turnovers around the Bulldog 40, as Bolding intercepted a pass and Ronnie Easterby recovered a Pirate fumble at the 41.

Harold Randolph then came through with a key stop on four and one with 4:17 left in the game, turning the ball over at the Citadel 33 after they had moved that far following the fumble recovery.

The Bucs controlled it for three minutes, then punted but got it back on Reggie Pinkney's interception at the 'Dog 37 with 33 seconds left.

The Pirates ran out the clock from there.

Overall, The Citadel picked up just 204 yards in total offense, as their passing game made goodon 11 of 23 passes for 136 yards. East Carolina rushed for 191 yards, but saw their own conference leading passing game fizzle. The Bucs hit just three of 10 for 24 yards and a total of 215 total yards.

The three interceptions by the Bucs were another fateful part of the game, turning over the ball at key times.

Defensively, Zack Valentine led the Bucs with 12 tackles, while Randolph had 9, and Willie Bryant and Cary Godette had seven each. Seven tackles were for losses.

East Carolina, now 3-3 overall and 2-2 in the Conference, returns home Saturday to host Western Carolina in the annual Homecoming game.

Furman Spanks Presbyterian

CLINTON, S.C. (AP)—Quarterback David Whitehurst threw two touchdown passes and scored on a 15-yard run as Furman's football team whipped Presbyterian 35-7 Saturday night after spotting the home team an early 7-0 lead.

Furman scored in every quarter as it won its second game against three losses while dropping Presbyterain to 0-3-1.

Junior tailback Larry Robinson, who scored in the fourth period on a three-yard run, gained 147 yards in 20 rushes. He brought his three-season rushing total to 2,076, a school record.

Furman cornerback Mark Gordon tied a school mark with three interceptions.

Presbyterian had drawn first blood when Jody Salmon passed five yards to Steve Farish for a first quarter score.

Before the period was over, Whitehurst hit Tommy Southard with a five-yarder for the equalizer and Whitehurst's 15-yard scamper in the second period put the Paladins on top at halftime 14-7.

Furman iced it with two third quarter scores while its defense held Presbyterian in check. Whitehurst hit Brette Simmons with a 16-yard scoring strike and southpaw tailback Harry King threw a four-yarder to Angus Poole for another score. King has completed all three of his passes this year, two for touchdowns.

Furman rolled up 20 first downs to 14 for Prebyterian and outrushed the losers, 294 yards to 155.

Gamecocks Roll Over Virginia

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Quarterback Jeff Grantz put on a dazzling offensive show as he ran and passed South Carolina to a 41-14 victory over Virginia Saturday night.

Grantz scored three touchdowns and passed for another as he rolled up 278 total yards while South Carolina picked up its fourth win of the season in five tries.

Grantz got plenty of help from Clarence Williams who rushed for 95 yards and scored the Gamecocks' first touchdown on a seven-yard run, and fullback Kevin Long who added 103 yards on the ground.

Taking a 27-0 halftime lead, the Gamecocks appeared all set to run the Cavaliers out of the stadium. Virginia, however, came alive in the third quarter and threatened to scored another before South Carolina's defense stiffened to send the Cavaliers home with their fourth loss against one win.

Key performer for Virginia was junior tailback David Sloan whose slashing runs netted him 166 yards in 27 carries. But his hard charging performance was overshadowed by Grantz' heroics.

Grantz got his first touchdown with a 26-yard scamper on an option play early in the second period. His second score came in the third quarter when he weaved his way through Cavalier defenders and then outraced them 48 yards to the end zone.

His final touchdown was a four-yard keeper early the final quarter.

Late in the second quarter, the versatile Grantz, who also handles South Carolina punting duties, hit Bob Helminski on a 77-yard pass play.

Helping clinch the Gamecockes victory was a pair of field goals by Bobby Marino for 24 and 32 yards plus his kicking five extra points.

Ohio U. Bobcats Claw William & Mary, 22-8

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Arnold Welcher ran 36 times for 212 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as Ohio University's Bobcats defeated William and Mary's Indians 22-8 in an intersectional footzall game Saturday.

The heavily favored Bobcats posted a field goal on the final play of the first half and added points the first three times they had possession after intermission to wear down the winless Indians.

Senior Gary Homer augmented Welcher's touchdowns, both of which came on one-yard plunges, with field goals of 35, 50 and 27 yards.

It was the first time since 1955 William and Mary had lost its first five games. Ohio U. is now 3-1-1.

Welcher, from Youngstown, Ohio, picked up 114 yards in the first quarter as Ohio dominated the early action.

But it was a frustrating period for the Bobcats, who misfired on two field goal attempts before finally moving 72 yards to take a 7-0 lead on Welcher's first touchdown.

William and Mary mustered two mild threats in the second quarter before yielding the first of Homer's three field goals.

An interference call first helped the Indians get inside the Ohio 30, but the drive stalled at the 28. A few minutes later, the Indians reached the 22 before being pushed back and missing a 49-yard field try.

The Bobcats, rolling 62 yards to the William and Mary 18, took a 10-0 lead at halftime, then capitalized on a poor Indian punt to make it 16-0 after five minutes of the third period on Welcher's second touchdown.

Homer's 50-yard field goal, his second longest of the season, came with 3:40 remaining in the third quarter, and he wrapped up the Ohio scoring with his 27-yarder midway the final period.

The Indians' touchdown was set up by middle guard Gary Meenan's block of a punt at the Ohio 23.

Moments before, the Indians had been on the verge of scoring, but Paul Kruis' third-down pass was intercepted by defensive back Lyle Govert, who raced the ball from the end zone to the Bobcats' 21.

Welcher's performance was the third best single-game rushing net in Ohio U.'s 80-year football history.

Helping balance Welcher's running was quarterback Rick Lilienthal, who completed seven of 14 passes for 115 yards. Altogether, the Bobcats amassed 417 yards to 312 for the Indians, who tried several combinations of backs in an effor to get their offense rolling.

Field Goal Beats Deacs

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—Freshman quarterback Willie Jordan kicked a 34-yard field goal with five second left to give Clemson a 16-14 Atlantic Coast Conference Football victory Saturday over Wake Forest.

The three-pointer came two minutes after Wake Forest had taken the lead on Quarterback Jerry McManus' 12-yard pass to John Zeglinski for a tying touchdown. Joe Bunch kicked the extra point for Wake's brief 14-13 lead.

Earlier, McManus passed for five yards to Zeglinski for a second-period touchdown.

Clemson forged into a first half lead on a pair of touchdown passes. Flanker Craig Brantley scored on a 55-yard pass play from quarterback Willie Jordan. End Bennie Cunningham tallied on a one-yarder from another freshman quarterback, Steve Fuller.

Each team also tried 42-yard field goals, but both were short.

Clemson moved into position for the winning field goal Wake's 12 after a a five-yard offside penalty was imposed against the Deacons.

Lenoir Rhyne Annihilates 'Cats

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP)—Junior halfback Scott Crawford ran for 248 yards and four touchdowns as Lenoir Rhyne amassed 914 yards total offense Saturday to trample Davidson's football team 69-14.

The winning Bears ran 68 times for 837 yards and added 77 passing in bringing their record to 3-1-1 and handing Davidson its third straight loss.

The rushing and total offense marks eclipsed listed National Collegiate Athletic Association university and college division records, but since Lenoir Rhyne, of the new South Atlantic Conference, is not an NCAA member, they will not be listed by that body.

Lenoir Rhyne, which did not have to punt, led the Southern Conference Wildcats only 14-7 after one period, but scored three times in the second quarter for a 34-7 halftime lead. Two more scores in the third period and three in the fourth completed the rout.

Four lost fumbles and 135 yards in penalties, two of which wiped out touchdowns, prevented further Lenoir Rhyne scoring.

Chip Shefsield scored twice for the winning Bears on short passes from Tohmy Bradley.

Duke's Blue Devils Overpower Army By 21-10

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Freshman linebacker Carl McGee raced 68 yards with an intercepted pass and Mike Dunn, a first-year quarterback, directed two scoring strikes in leading Duke to a 21-10 college football victory over Army on Saturday.

Chuck Williamson's four-yard run capped an 81-yard drive midway through the second period, giving Duke a 14-0 lead. Mike Barney, who rushed for 109 yards in his first start, scored the final touchdown on a one-yard end run early in the fourth quarter, four plays after Duke's first fumble recovery in five games.

It was Duke's second triumph. Army, losing for the third time after starting the season with two victories, rallied to within 14-10 on seven consecutive pass completions by Leamon Hall, including a seven-yarder for a touchdown to Tony Pyne.

Barney's score put the game out of reach after Laniel Crawsord recovered a fumble by Pyne at the Army 35.

The winners turned back two late threats at their one-yard line when Tom Knotts intercepted a Hall pass and Rod Sensibaugh recovered another fumble by Pyne after a 32-yard gain.

The game ended with Army on the Duke six after Hall completed five more passes for 80 yards.

Hall, whose first two passes were intercepted, the second for McGee's touchdown, finished with 16 completions in 24 attempts for 222 yards.

The Blue Devils drove 54 yards in a steady rain to the Army eight after Troy Slade returned the opening kickoff 32 yards. But on fourth down, Barney, who carried 22 times, was stopped at the seven, three yards shy of a fi st down.

Duke's Tony Benjamin, who also rushed for 109 yards, fumbled the ball away at his own 48 after Kirk May intercepted Hall's first pass.

Jeff Bruckner recovered for Army but five plays later Hall threw the ball straight into McGee's hands and the 210 pound freshman turned it into the game's first score.

Dunn replaced starting quarterback Bob Corbett after an Army fourth-down gamble failed at the Duke 19 early in the sectnd quarter. The 6-foot-4 freshman engineered an 11-play scoring drive that took 5½ minutes. Enroute, he carried four times for 26 yards and completed two passes for 21 more.

Army came alive late in the seiond period after Duke's Vince Fusco missed a 41-yard field goal attempt. Hall completed three passes for 56 yards in a nine-play drive, hitting Pyne for a touchdown 42 seconds before the intermission.

Mike Castelli's 25-yard field goal five minutes into the third quarter made it 14-10 but Duke put the game away following Pyne's fumble two plays before the end of the period.

Long Pass Gives Irish A 21-14 Win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Notre Dame's Ted Burgmeier took a short pass from Joe Montana and jigged 80 yards down the sideline with a minute left to give the Irish a 21-14 comeback victory over North Carolina Saturday.

Burgmeier's play crushed the Tar Heels' hopes for an upset. Led by a fired up defense, they held a 14-0 lead over the 15th ranked Irish going into the final period.

Then quarterback Rick Slager, ineffective most of the day, hit Burgmeier, Mark McLane and Ken McAsee with short passes to spark a drive to the North Carolina two. Al Hunter got the touchdown, but a two-point converstion attempt failed as Slager was hit while trying to throw.

Coach Dan Devine inserted sophomore Montana on the next Irish possession to get a more effective passing attack. Montana responded by lofting the ball 38 yards to Dan Kelleher, who had gotten behind John Daw. He was pushed out on the two and Hunter got his second touchdown on the next play.

This time, the conversion play worked as Montana fired over the middle to Doug Buth to tie the score.

The Tar Heels moved downfield into field goal range but Tom Biddle missed his third attempt of the game. It looked like a tie was imminent.

In an apparent attempt to use the clock, Montana threw a short sideline pass to Burgmeier. But, Bobby Trott missed the tackle for the Tar Heels and Burgmeier was gone, stunning a record crowd of 49,500.

Dennis and Edgerton, the defending champs were one shot ahead of Joe Alligood and Billy Barnes both of Wilson who shot a 65. Two strokes off the pace are Tommy Boone and Rob Welton of East Carolina with a 66. Billy Boles and Sid Bruton carded a 68 for fourth place.

The tournament will wind up today at Brook Valley Country Club

Maryland Upends Wolfpack, 37-22

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — A 56-yard touchdown run by Rick Jennings on a first quarter punt staked Maryland to a 17-14 halftime lead, and then an aroused defense enabled the Terps to roll over North Carolina State 37-22 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Maryland is now 4-1-1, including 2-0 in the ACC, where it is defending champion. State's record is 3-3, with an 0-2 mark in the league.

After a seven-yard TD pass from wingback John Schultz to Kim Hoover gave the Terps a 24-14 lead midway through the third period, the Maryland defense became a dominant factor the rest of the way.

The Terps got to State quarterback Dave Buckey on three consecutive plays, forcing the Wolfpack to punt after reaching the Maryland 17 on their only possession of the third quarter.

Then, during a 1½-minute span early in the last quarter, Maryland recovered two fumbles deep in State territory, setting up two more touchdowns to make it 37-14 with 11:43 to play.

Fullback Tim Wilson scored from the two after Maryland recovered a fumble on the State 19. Another fumble, on State's next play, was recovered on the 22 and four plays later, Larry Dick tossed a 10yard scoring pass to Schultz.

A nine-yard TD run by fullback Scott Wade, who scored twice for State, gave the Wolfpack a 7-3 lead in the first quarter. But Jennings, who earlier this season had a 93-yard kickoff return, took the ensuing kickoff on the four and went all the way to put the Terps in front for good.

— Slugger Tiant Sparks Winning Rally —

Bosox Take Series Lead Shutting Out Reds

BOSTON (AP) — Crafty Luis Tiant baffled Cincinnati's sluggers with a variety of speeds and motions and started Boston's winning six-run rally with his first hit in three years Saturday as the Red Sox trimmed the Reds 6-0 in the opening game of the World Series.

Tiant, a pitching patriarch, who, according to the record books will celebrate his 35th birthday next month, was locked in a tense, scoreless pitching duel with young lefthander Don Gullett until the seventh inning.

The veteran right-hander, who finished with a five-hitter, led off the seventh for Boston and surprised the sellout crowd of 35,205 with a single to left field. Deprived of his bat by the American League's designated-hitter rule, Tiant had been to the plate only once since 1972 and was the last guy the Red Sox expected to start a rally for them.

Manager Darrell Johnson, playing for a single run, ordered a sacrifice by Dwight Evans. The bunt was fielded by Gullett, who tried to get Tiant at second base. But his throw was too late and the Red Sox had men on first and second with no outs.

Denny Doyle followed with a single between third base and shortstop and Tiant, no gazelle on the basepaths, stopped at third. Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, who had seen Gullett squirm off the Red Sox hook all afternoon, decided to stay with the southpaw against Carl Yastrzemski.

Yaz, who had made a clutch catch earlier in the game, delivered with a line drive to right field. The runners held, waiting to see if Ken Griffey could catch the ball but it dropped in front of the Cincinnati right fielder and Tiant headed home.

The trip wasn't simple. Griffey rifled a throw home that might have forced the pitcher if first baseman Tony Perez had not cut it off. That gave Tiant a break he needed because he missed touching home plate on his first pass. The Cuban born right-hander went back and touched it before the Reds knew what happened and the Red Sox had the game's first run.

That finished Gullett. Clay Carroll relieved and walked Carlton Fisk on a 3-2 pitch, forcing in a second run.

Now it was Will McEnaney's turn. Anderson called on the left-hander to face rookie sensation Fred Lynn. For a while the move looked great. Lynn, looking overmatched, struck out. But the Red Sox got to McEnaney after that.

Rico Petrocelli, the only man besides Yastrezemski from yhe Red Sox 1967 American Leagie champions, drilled a single to left field for two more runs, making it 4-0.

Then Rick Burleson rifled his third hit of the game for another run and Cecil Cooper's sacrifice fly completed the big inning for the Red Sox.

Six runs were considerably more than Tiant needed on this cold, overcast day. Changing speeeds and motions constantly, Tiant, fierce looking with a Fu-Mancu moustache, breezed through Cincinnati's power-laden lineup. He struck out three and walked two, both intentionally.

The shutout was only the sixth of the season against Cincinnati. It was the first World Series complete game shutout since Bob Gibson blanked Detroit 4-0 in 1968.

Tiant has not allowed an earned run in his last 36 innings and was in complete command despite a fourth-inning furor over his controversial move in an attempt to pick off a Cincinnati runner.

The Red Sox ace had retired the first 10 batters in order until Joe Morgan singled for the Reds' first hit. As the Cincinnati speedster led off first base, Tiant threw over four times trting to hold the runner close. On the fifth pickoff throw, National League umpire Nick Colosi—working first base—called a balk. Tiant and the Red Sox complained bitterly but to no avail.

That put Morgan on second base with one out and the dangerous Johnny Bench at the plate. Tiant, working carefully, needed 13 pitches to get Bench on a foul ball. Then Tiant struck out Tony Perez for the the third out.

Tiant could have had trouble in the seventh inning when George Foster opened with a single. But Yastrzemski saved a hit with a tumbling grab of Dave Concepcion's twisting fly ball. Then, the Reds tried their running game. Foster took off, but Fisk gunned him down at second base by a wide margin.

Griffey followed with a double into the right field corner that probably would have meant a run if Foster still had been on base.

Johnson ordered Cesar Geronimo walked, bringing up Gullett. There was some surprise when Anderson let his pitcher bat. But Gullett is one of the best hitting pitchers in baseball. Gullett's league has no designated hitter rule and he hit one home run in the National League playoffs.

He looped a soft liner between first and second base that Doyle snared. The Reds didn't know it at the time but that was their last gasp. By the next time they came to bat, Boston had six runs and Tiant mowed down the last six Cincinnati batters in order to end it. When Petrocelli threw out Concepcion for the final out, the Red Sox players mobbed their ace pitcher. But they did it carefully. He is, after all, a youngster no more.

The Reds will try to get even in the best-of-seven series when they pitch right-hander Jack Billingham in Sunday's second game. He will be opposed by left-hander Bill Lee. Game time is 1 p.m. EDT.

The Series moves to Cincinnati for night games Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, then back to Boston for day games next weekend, if necessary.

Rose Takes Loop Win Over Gryphons

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High's offense, drained of its spark last week against Reid Ross, flickered again Friday night three times as the Rampants, behind Dough Paschal's two TD's, beat Rocky Mount, 20-14.

The Homecoming win put the Rampants 1-0 in conference as they opened Division I play Friday night, and 5-1 overall.

Paschal scored twice and carried the ball 21 times for 73 yards. His longest gain of the night came on the only Rose pass conpletion of the game, 24 yards. The other Rampant score was by Trevathan in the first quarter that gave Rose an 8-0 lead.

Paschal's score in the third quarter put Rose up, 14-0, but Rocky Mount battled back in the period to score its first on a run by Michael Upchurch. Rose got it back in the fourth quarter only to see The Gryphons score on a 59-yard pass.

Rocky Mount got first crack at the ball but could not move against the Rampants. The Rampants took over on the punt on their 46 and drove 54 yards to score.

Paschal picked up three on first down and William Joyner moved Rose into Gryphon territory on a 25-yard gain. Trevathan kept to the 19 and Joyner carried twice moving the ball to the 13. From there Trevathan kept around his right end for the touchdown. Paschal ran in the conversion.

But that was all the offense the Rampants could muster. They picked up just one more first down before halftime having to punt three times and fumbling twice.

Late in the first quarter, Rocky Mount began opening holes in the middle of the Rampant line sustaining a drive that began on the Gryphon 20 and going to the Rose 38. Rocky Mount drove to the Rampant 25 twice in the second period but could get no closer.

Things seemed to be picking up in the second half as Rose scored again the first time the Rampants had the ball. Starting from their 32, the Rampants drove 68 yards in 16 plays, converting two third downs and one fourth. Rose ground it out with Paschal and Joyner doing most of the ball-carrying. Rose converted a fourth and three at the 11 when Paschal drug nearly the whole Gryphon team to the one before finally being stopped. On the next play he carried the ball over.

Rose held RM but on a third and seven, they tired a halfback pass which was intercepted by Ronald Kearny who returned it to the Rose 32. Upchurch carried for two and then Battle ran six times moving Rocky Mount to the one. The Gryphons were aided by a facemask penalty. Upchurch dove over from the one with 1:04 left in the third period.

Rocky Mount held Rose on the Rampant's next possession but gave the ball right back on a fumbled recovered by Joe Godette. It took Rose five plays to put up another six points as Paschal went in from the one. Joyner had almost scored the TD having been bumped out of bounds at the one-foot line on the previous play.

Rose threatened to score on its next possession driving to the Gryphon 14 where the Rampants ran out of downs. The turnover inspired Rocky Mount to battle back and cut the lead to 20-14. They got a big break when Mike Alexander fumbled a punt and Rocky Mount recovered on its 36.

Rocky Mount started moving in the wrong direction, however, as it was penalized twice for 30 yards back to its 16. But a 15-yard penalty against Rose and a 21-yard pass from Linden Willis to James Bynum on fourth down, gave the Gryphons new life at the Rose 44.

The Gryphons were fined 15 yards on the play, however, moving them back to their 41. Morris and Herman Bullock stunned everybody with a 59-yard pass play to cut the lead to six points.

Rocky Mount tried an onside kick which worked perfectly but Rose held and forced a loss on fourth down. After that, Rose just held the ball waiting for time to run out.

The Rampants will be looking for win number six and their second in Division I this week as they host Bertie in a game scheduled for Thursday. This is to allow time for preparation of Ficklen Stadium for East Carolina's homecoming the following Saturday.

Win Has More Meaning Than Hunter's Pair Of Scores

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
Reflector Staff Writer

CHAPEL HILL—Al Hunter returned to the state where he ran long and hard for his high school years and keyed Notre Dame to a come-from-behind, 21-14 victory over a determined Carolina team this past Saturday. But there is more to the win than just Hunter's two tallies.

The fleet back set Greenville on fire while running for Road High school, gaining over 1,200 yards in his senior year. Then came the shocker when he announced that he would attend Notre Dame. There his exploits continued. He highlighted his freshman year with a record-setting 93-yard kickoff return in the 1974 Sugar Bowl. The town honored him with a formal reception and dinner.

Those honors and plaudits became tarnished when a story from Chicago said that Hunter and five of his teammates had been suspended for a violation of dorm visitation. The precise charge was that he and his five roommates allegedly raped an 18 year old girl. The girl did not press charges upon learning of the players' suspension.

That story set about a stream of rumors that Hunter feels will never be substantiated. "There were a lot of rumors about. The press really distorted the facts out of proportion. I don't think the actual truth will come out."

Though an event such as this one would change the outlook on life for many, Hunter remains the same jolly character most of his classmates knew in high school. And that personality has spread to his teammates. While he was being interviewed in the lobby of Notre Dame's Motel, some of his teammates came by and exchanged pleasantries, a sign that time helped them all forget the past.

"I have a good time, I enjoy it," Hunter said.

Coming back into the fold after a year's inactivity didn't really affect the calibre of Hunter's style. "I don't suffer from it now. First, when I tried to cut, I felt like I'd trip. My legs were pretty sore, too, but now I'm running smooth. It wasn't too hard to accept the contact." Hunter added that going through scrimmages built up his confidence again.

For a time it was feared Al wouldn't make the trip to Chapel Hill. He described last week's Michigan State game as the most "brutal game" he'd ever been in. As a result, he suffered a back injury and only practiced two days of last week. He was listed on the 48-man roster as the 49th man. Nevertheless, Coach Dan Devine decided to bring Al along, a move which paid off in the long run, so to speak.

Describing his thoughts after the close skirmish in Kenan Stadium, he said his objective was "to hold on to that rock near the goal line. He held on twice within the five-yard line, and it paid off in an Irish win. After the game, his mother, and brother Joe led a reception committee from Greenville in welcoming him back to the home lands.

Al said the team goals were to reach a bowl game once again, but first to get the schedule out of way before they decide, a schedule which includes the Air Force, Georgia Tech, and always powerful Southern California.

When a reporter asked Al how it felt to be back, his reply was simple, "It felt great . . . mighty good." For his friends and admirers in Greenville and in Chapel Hill, it felt mighty good, too.

Bradley Leads Green Victory

Jamie Bradley scored twice as the Green took a 24-8 win over the Blue in Recreation football, Friday.

Bradley scored in the first quarter on runs of 40 and 12 yards giving Green a 12-0 lead. Late in the first half, John Meeks passed to Ashley Taylor three times the last going 15 yards for a Green TD.

Blue score its only touchdown on the first play of the second half as Kenny Barnes ran the Green kickoff back 50 yards.

Green finished the scoring in the fourth period as William Frizzell intercepted a Barnes pass and returned it 40 yards for a score.

Sims Sets Mark As Tech Bops VMI

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Powerful David Sims scored three touchdowns and pounded out 151 yards on the ground, triggering the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets to a school rushing record en route to a 38-10 college football romp over outmanned Virginia Military Institute Saturday.

Sims scored on bursts of 51, 2 and 1 yards. Freshman Drew Hill had Tech's other two touchdowns on scampers of 36 and nine yards.

Don Bessillieu closed out Tech's fourth consecutive triumph with a 24-yard field goal.

VMI scored on a 33-yard field goal by Rick Tufaro and on a 65-yard TD pass from Mark Lambert to Ronnie Moore in the first half.

VMI, 2-3, could manage only one first down in the second half after the Southern Conference team had 143 yards through the air and nine first downs in the opening half.

Tech, 4-1, rolled up 306 ground yards in the opening half for a 28-10 margin. The Yellow Jackets, with 11 backs running the ball in its powerful wishbone offense, which ranked fourth in the nation before Saturday, ground out 558 yards.

The record snapped the 487 yards Tech set last year in its opener against South Carolina. The Yellow Jackets added another 42 yards through the air.

Ball St. Turns Mistakes Into Win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Safety Mike Lecklider stopped three Richmond drives with interceptions and the Ball State defense came up with four fumble recoveries as the Cardinals took advantage of the mistakes to defeat the Spiders 25-14 here Saturday.

In addition, Richmond quarterback Dave Taylor was sacked five times by the Ball State defense.

Ball State scored first on a 49-yard pass from Art Yaroch to Leo Crossfield. A 45-yard scoring run by substitute fullback Jeff Harrison staked Ball State to an insurmountable 18-7 lead in the final quarter.

Richmond ran 30 more plays than Ball State, but Taylor encountered a rough day in his first varsity start. He was 10 for-22 passing, but threw all three of the passes that Lecklider stole, stalling Richmond drives at the Ball State 10, 12 and 43-yard lines.

Cardinals defensive end Art Stringer recovered a John Palazeti fumble at the Richmond 15 on the first play of the second half. Three plays later, George Jenkins scampered seven yards for a touchdown.

Richmond scored later in the quarter following a fumble recovery by Pittman Rock. John Palazeti capped a 62-yard drive with a one-yard plunge on fourth down.

In the fourth quarter, following Lecklider's third interception, Harrison ran for 45 yards and the game-clinching touchdown.

Although Richmond had the ball more than Ball State, the Cardinals managed 317 yards in total offense against a Richmond defense that was constantly put in bad position by the turnovers.

Jaguars Blank Conley, 30-0

FARMVILLE—Carroll Griffin scored twice and Jeff Wilkes and Mike Windham once each to lead the Farmville Central Jaguars to a 30-0 defeat of D.H. Conley, Friday night.

The loss was the third conference defeat for the Vikings but the Jaguars claimed their third victory in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Jaguars scored all but two of their points in the first half still not being able to get out of the one-half jinx. Wilkes put the Jags on the boards as he returned the opening kickoff 81 yards for a touchdown. Randy Jackson added the PAT.

In the second quarter, Griffin started a rally by scoring on a one-yard run with 6:49 left in the half. With time running out, Mike Windham intercepted a pass and returned it 27 yards for a Jaguar score.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Conley receiver fumbled and Walter Gorham recovered for Farmville Central at the Viking 35. Wilkes picked up 10 and Griffin set up his second score passing to Mike Jenkins for 24 yards to the one. Griffin went in from there.

The final points came in the fourth period when Conley's Joey Bassett was tackled by Wilkes in the Viking end zone for a safety.

Farmville Central travels to C.B. Aycock this Friday while Conley returns home hosting Southern Nash.

Chargers Rip Hawks, 49-0

WHEAT SWAMP—Ned Craft scored three times and Terry Morris rushed for one score and 105 yards leading the Ayden-Grifton Chargers to a 49-0 rout of North Lenoir.

The win was the third in a row in the Eastern Carolina conference, the second shutout in a row and the second 49-0 score in a row for the Chargers A-G is 4-1-1 overall.

The Chargers scored the first six times they had their hands on the ball. The first score came at the end of a 73-yard drive as Craft scored on a 17-yard run with 8:16 left in the opening frame. A few minutes later, Craft blocked a punt and recovered it on the Hawk 10. He cracked over from the two with 4:41 left and Vern Davenport added the PAT. The Chargers got another chance later in the period getting the ball back on a punt at the Hawk 38. With 59 seconds left, Dennis Cristiano hit Paul Ricciarelli with an eight yard pass for a 21-0 lead.

The Chargers scored three more TD's in the second period. Twendie Simpson carried his only time of the night 26 yards for an A-G tally. Greg Garrett intercepted a pass and returned it 16 yards to score and Morris's 20-yard run gave the Chargers a 42-0 lead at halftime.

Craft finished the Hawks off with a five-yard scoring run in the fourth period. Davenport made all seven extra points.

The Chargers travel to Greene Central this week.

Panthers Win Second, 14-13

SPRING HOPE—North Pitt put together a successful goal line stand in the waning seconds of their game Friday night to preserve a 14-13 win over Southern Nash, their second victory of the year.

Southern Nash dominated the ground play rushing for 210 yards to North Pitt's 60 but North Pitt completed nine of 15 passes for 99 yards to just 50 for the Firebirds.

North Pitt is now 2-4 overall and 1-2 in the ECC. Southern is 2-4 overall also but 0-3 in the loop.

The Firebirds went on the boards first in the second quarter as Albert McKinnon scored on a six-yard run and Tony Joyner kicked the PAT.

North Pitt tied it up later in the period as Donnie Perkins hit James Carr with a 10-yard touchdown pass. Jay Bedworth added the PAT.

North Pitt got the winning point in the next frame as Perkins threw a scoring strike to Jesse Harris of 25 yards. Bedsworth's kick gave the Panthers the winning edge.

Southern Nash had a chance to win it in the closing seconds. Robin Fassnacht scored on a one-yard dive but the two-point conversion run by McKinnon stopped by the Panthers with :25 left preserving the victory.

BOSTON (AP) — Not to be outdone by other state and local officials, Boston Mayor Kevin White joined the World Series gamblers and bet Cincinnati Mayor Theodore Berry a dinner.

If the Red Sox win, White will be treated to "a good German dinner of sauerbrauten, sauerkraut, potato cakes and good German beer," Berry said.

If Cincinnati wins, Berry will get two New England lobsters, a crock of Boston baked beans and two chances in the Massachusetts state lottery.

Berry said he was satisfied with the bet.

"Considering the price of lobster these days, I guess we're even."

Morton Going Against Dallas, Hoping For Better Outcome

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Whenever a traded player comes up against his former teammates, the adrenalin shifts into high gear. With Craig Morton, the juices must be in overdrive.

For years, the one-time All-American quarterback at the University of California and Dallas' No. 1 draft pick in the 1965 National Football League draft spent much of his time on the sidelines, watching Roger Staubach call the Cowboys' signals.

Despite some brilliant performances, like his guiding Dallas to a Super Bowl, he was still considered the team's No. 2 quarterback. Ultimately the situation got to be untenable and Morton began the "play-me-or-trade-me" plea which has been voiced by more than a few disgruntled players who felt they were destined for stardom.

And eventually the Cowboys heeded his pleas and dealt Morton to the New York Giants, getting in return a No. 1 draft choice which ultimately turned out to be defensive end Randy White.

A few days after he switched uniforms, the Giants played the Cowboys. And although Morton passed for 185 yards in the three periods he played, Dallas won 21-7.

It wasn't a fair test, though, considering he was dealing with a wholly unfamiliar system. But he certainly made his presence felt in the long run. In their first seven games of 1974 the Giants scored just 68 points. In the last seven they scored 127. And for the season he completed 122 of 237 passes for 1,510 yards and nine touchdowns.

And on Sunday in New York, he has a chance to show the Cowboys what they lost.

In Sunday's other games it's the New York Jets at Minnesota, New England at Cincinnati, Houston at Cleveland, Green Bay at New Orleans, Oakland at Kansas City, Chicago at Detroit, Buffalo at Baltimore, Philadelphia at Miami, Denver at Pittsburgh, Los Angeles at San Diego and Atlanta at San Francisco. On Monday night it's St. Louis at Washington.

There'll be a lot of attention paid to another quarterback matchup. In Minnesota, the Vikings' Fran Tarkenton and Joe Namath of the Jets go head-to-head for the first time ever in regular-season play. And in Cincinnati, quarterback Jim Plunkett resumes his comeback from a preseason shoulder injury, leading the Patriots against the Bengals, who have not only the NFL's top passer in Ken Anderson but also own the toughest defense in the American Conference.

The Oilers, having tasted defeat for the first time this year — compliments of the Bengals last week — head into Cleveland, where Browns' Coach Forrest Gregg is still looking for his first victory.

Two other new head coaches are in the same boat with Gregg — but their chances of bailing out of the winless list appear vastly different. Bart Starr's Packers are going against the equally winless Saints, who have managed a mere 10 points in their three games, while Paul Wiggin's Chiefs have to try to slow down the unbeaten Raiders.

The Bears and Lions are getting together for the 83rd time in a rivalry that dates back to 1934.

Trying to stop O.J. Simpson seems to be the toughest job one could get this year — and now Baltimore's got it. But the Colts have more to worry about. In only three games, the Simpson-led Buffalo ground game is just 88 yards short of 1,000 for the season.

Roanoke Blasts S. Edgecombe

PINETOPS—Ricky Spruill went on a rampage Friday night scoring five touchdowns leading the Roanoke Redskins to a 49-9 pasting of South Edgecombe for the Redskin's sixth win and their fifth in the Eastern Plains conference.

Roanoke had the game all but wrapped up by the end of the first half having pushed over 21 points in the first period and 14 in the second.

Spruill got the Redskins on the boards on the first play of the game returning the opening kickoff 70 yards. Reid Bullock ran in the extra point.

Spruill did it again a few minutes later capping a Roanoke drive by going three yards and Bullock's kick made it 15-0. An 11-yard run by Spruill later in the period increased the Redskin lead.

Spruill opened the scoring in the second quarter taking a 37-yard pass from Charlie Smith. Bullock added the PAT. South Edgecombe broke the shutout when Steve Williams kicked a 20-yard field goal in the second period but the points were erased as Spruill returned South Edgecombe's kick 90 yards for a TD.

Spruill's last score came on an 11-yard run in the third quarter.

Wilbur Thorpe scored the only SE TD of the night in the third period on a four-yard run.

Carl Whitley scored on a 25-yard run in the fourth period for Roanoke and the Redskin defense forced a safety for the final two points of the night.

Lee Getting Nod For Second Game

BOSTON (AP) — For three consecutive years, No. 18 has spelled frustration for southpaw Bill Lee of the Boston Red Sox. However, he's going to get another shot at it this year — as the second-game pitcher in the World Series.

Lee won 17 games in each of the last three seasons. This year he reached that figure on Aug. 24 and appeared en route to a 20-victory campaign. Then the jinx struck again.

Boston Manager Darrell Johnson doesn't believe in hexes, though, and named Lee to start Sunday against Cincinnati's Jack Billingham at Fenway Park.

Lee made his last start in Detroit Sept. 19, his fifth futile bid for an 18th victory. Since then, he has appeared in just two games, pitching a grand total of two innings.

"I haven't been out there for a long time," Lee said wistfully after pitching in batting practice Friday. "However, I've been working hard and I'm ready. I don't know how I'll do, but I'll show up."

Lee was bothered by inflammation in his left elbow, but everyone agrees he's fit again.

"The arm is still there, intact," Lee quipped. "It's not as strong as early in the year, and maybe it's erratic. The elbow trouble is nothing new. It comes and goes."

Lee admitted he is mainly concerned with his control — or lack of it — because of his inactivity.

"At times I don't know where the pitches are going," he said. "The other day in batting practice I tried to throw the ball low and away and was knocking people down. I have to hope things will be better against Cincinnati."

Johnson and Boston pitching coach Stan Williams aren't worried about Lee.

"We picked him to start for several reasons," Johnson explained. "He is a sinker-ball pitcher who has always done well here in our ballpark. By starting Lee, we can save Rick Wise for the third game in Cincinnati Tuesday night. Wise is a high-ball pitcher who should do better in the big park there."

Lee also has another reason to be happy. He will get to bat because the American League's designated hitter rule is eliminated in the World Series.

"I haven't hit in three years," Lee said, "but I'm ready for any pitcher. I'll be up there swinging."

Charge Dropped

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)— Bitterness remained Friday after a charge against North Carolina University's jogging math professor was dropped.

On order of Acting Chancellor Jackson Rigney, Dr. Robert Ramsay will not be prosecuted for refusing to leave the campus track when ordered to do so by football Coach Lou Holtz. Ramsay was jogging his usual four miles a day Monday but the football team was conducting closed practice on the field inside the track.

Holtz feared Ramsay was a spy from the University of Maryland. The two schools play this afternoon.

When Ramsay refused to leave, Holtz had security guards arrest the 35-year-old professor. Ramsay was charged with obstructing the officer Holtz order to remove him.

Dr. Samuel Tove, chairman of the Faculty Senate, said he opposed closing off any part of the campus. He suggested the team have its secret practices at the stadium.

"Holtz made a fool of himself. Ramsay came off looking intemperate. And the university was damaged. It has done no one any good, " Tove said.

Ramsay, who has been at State seven years, expressed his unhappiness by criticizing the athletic program. "I'm no spy. Holtz takes himself much too seriously. This is typical of the insensitive way the athletic department operates."

Wildlife Afield: A Story With A Happy Ending

By JIM DEAN

Back in the early 1930s, the greater snow goose was considered an endangered species. There were only 7,000 of them, and their rapidly dwindling numbers were cause for alarm.

Given the history of some endangered species, one might expect the greater snow goose to be little more than a memory by the time 1975 rolled around. Not so. The greater snow goose is no longer an endangered species. In fact, the snow goose is posing quite a different problem now—there may be too many of them.

Careful estimates—based on highly reliable aerial photographic surveys—indicate that somewhere around 200,000 greater snow geese will be winging their way down the Atlantic Flyway this fall to traditional wintering grounds in North Carolina, Virginia, and New Jersey.

The greater snow goose is so abundant now that for the first time since 1931, a special hunting season for these geese has been offered by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The season will be December 16 through January 14 and the daily bag limit will be two birds with four in possession. The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has also announced that the season can be closed at any time under short notice in case it appears that the desirable number of geese has been harvested.

There are several reasons why the season on greater snow geese is being reopened after more than 40 years, and these reasons are of more than passing interest. For one thing, the story of the greater snow geese is the story of wildlife management. It is a heartening—but reasonably predictable—success story.

The impressive growth of the snow goose population is the result of a combination of things. Habitat protection paid for by hunters in the form of refuges, such as the Federal Pea Island Refuge on the Outer Banks of North Carolina, has helped a great deal. Snow geese have strong instincts to winter in the same place year after year, and by protecting those places, the chances of survival and population growth have remained good over the years. Favorable biological factors and breeding ground conditions also played a part.

Another factor was the closing of the season on greater snow geese in the United States in 1931. Hunters in Canda continued to have an annual season on the geese, but the harvest has been within acceptable limits.

Actually, there is some reason to believe that the United States may have waited too long to consider reopening the season on greater snow geese. There is biological evidence that snow geese may now overpopulate their wintering grounds.

Already, crop depredation and marsh damage have resulted in the wintering grounds in New Jersey, Virginia, and North Carolina. Consider what has been happening in North Carolina in recent years.

"Traditionally, the wintering grounds for greater snow geese in North Carolina have been the Pea Island Refuge," explains Jack Donnelly, waterfowl biologist for the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "But now, snow geese are feeding extensively on winter wheat in at least five eastern counties as far inland as the Chowan River area west of Elizabeth City. This is also happening with the Back Bay, Virginia, flocks.

"Also, this huge population of snow geese has caused considerable damage to the valuable salt marshes in northeastern North Carolina," says Donnell, "and the combined damage to crops and marshes has become a significant problem."

It is undoubtedly for this reason—along with the fact that the snow goose is no longer in danger—that the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service offered a snow geese season to states in the Atlantic Flyway this winter.

The season on greater snow geese is expected to trim a small part of this excess population to lower levels that can be more readily supported by the available food and habitat. And yet, the snow goose population may still remain very high.

Biologists in the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service indicate that even with this winter's hunting season on snow geese, the total U. S. and Canadian harvest is not expected to exceed 5,000 birds, with a 10,000 bird harvest considered a high estimate.

Lloyd Carries Tigers To Win

WILLIAMSTON—Williamston bounced back off last week's loss to Washington to take a 23-6 win over Tarboro behind Deno Lloyd's three touchdowns.

Lloyd ran for 99 yards in 12 carries. He put the Tigers on the boards in the first quarter taking a 65-yard pass from Tim Hardison who returned to the lineup for the first time after preseason surgery. Tommy Gardner added the PAT, as well as a 24-yards field goal later in the period.

In the third period, the Tigers blocked a punt and recovered it at the Tarboro 18. Lloyd took a pitchout on the first play and went 18 yards to score. Gardner's kick made it 17-0. With 1:39 left in the period, Lloyd scored again going eight yards.

Tarboro scored its only TD in the fourth period on a one yard run by Bryant.

Williamston, now 5-2, hosts Ahoskie this week.

Rams Dump Falcons For Homecoming Win

SNOW HILL—After losing its first four starts, Greene Central has turned things around winning their last two football games including Friday night's homecoming game as the Rams beat C.B. Aycock, 22-8.

It was the second win in a row for the Rams and their second Eastern Carolina Conference win. They are 2-1 in the loop and 2-4 overall. The loss was only the second for the Falcons who are 4-2 and 1-2 in the conference.

The first Ram score came in the first period as Torre Albritton hit Mike Canady with a 70-yard scoring pass. Ron Hilliard kicked the PAT.

Hilliard made the score 10-0 in the second quarter kicking a 30-yard field goal. The Rams forced a punt later in the period and Canady, fielding it on his 40, eluded the Falcons to streak 60 yards for a second GC touchdown.

The Falcons got on the board just before the half ended as Shelton Robinson ran two yards and he added the two-point conversion.

Jeff Warren finished off Greene Central's night with a seven-yard scoring run in the last period.

The Rams picked up 263 yards in total offense but gave up 183 to Aycock through the air.

Greene Central hosts Ayden-Grifton this week.

Solar Heat Now Possible For North Carolinians

Heat conservation is the name of the game in solar heating, as indeed it is in all kinds of home heating and cooling, if it is to be done economically, according to those conducting a seminar on Solar Energy in North Carolina at N. C. State University last weekend.

"Build yourself a heat-conserving house and you can keep it warm with two candles," Dr. Donald Barnes of the N. C. State University school of Design said. "Of course, they'll have to be six feet high and four feet in diameter," he joked.

Solar heating is very possible now, the speakers said, but the initial outlay can be great, largely because most units are custom-built. The breakthrough will come when they can be mass-produced.

"What I'd advise anyone thinking of building a house soon," said Leon Neal, an applications engineer with the N. C. Science and Technology Research Center, "is to insulate just as well as possible and make use of passive solar heating through the use of windows placed only on the south whenever possible."

Studies have shown that the greatest heat losses in any building occur through the floor and through and around windows and doors, he said.

"Seriously think about every window you plan to put in your house. If you feel you really must have it, then see if there's a way to place it on the south, so as to receive through it maximum heat during sunny days. At night and on dark days, close them as completely as you can—with shutters or thermal drapes or whatever you can come up with." He told of an experimental house in Pennsylvania which has photocells on the windows, causing shutters to automatically open when a certain amount of light hits them and to close when there's less light, much as street lights come on automatically as darkness approaches and go off at dawn.

INSULATION

"Walls and ceilings and floors should be insulated with whatever is the best material to be had at the time you build your house," he said. He recommended foam insulation, but admitted that is is quite expensive. "You also might look into a new tongue and groove building board which has a polystyrene core. If this were used, sprayed foam could be used only to seal around windows and doors and where the walls meet the floor."

He would not give an opinion as to whether a concrete slab or a conventional foundation is better for preventing heat loss. "You just have to do a superior job insulating either," he said. "Polystyene could be used under the slab."

Dr. Barnes said he plans soon to analyze by computer just when the law of diminishing returns sets in with insulation—when the cost becomes so high that you cannot pay for it with fuel savings in a reasonable length of time.

Several speakers said they believe that the utility companies will soon go to peak time rating. One area of Pennsylvania has tried a plan, they said, in which 16 cents per kilowatt hour is charged for daytime usage, with four cents per kwh being charged for nighttime usage. Once this gets to be widespread, there'll be more reason than ever to make use of solar or heat pump systems, both of which can be used to heat stored water during the non-peak time and circulate it "free of charge" the rest of the day.

STORAGE

Persons who wish to "retrofit" their homes for solar heating and cooling later on would do well to consider a heat pump with forced air circulation at present, Dr. Frederick Smetana of the NCSU Department of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering, said. He suggested a gunnite underground storage tank large enough to hold enough hot water for about two days of heating. Then all they'd have to do is put the collectors on the roof or in the yard later on and hook them up, continuing to use the heat pump as a back-up system. A tank large enough for about a two-day supply of heat seems ideal, he said.

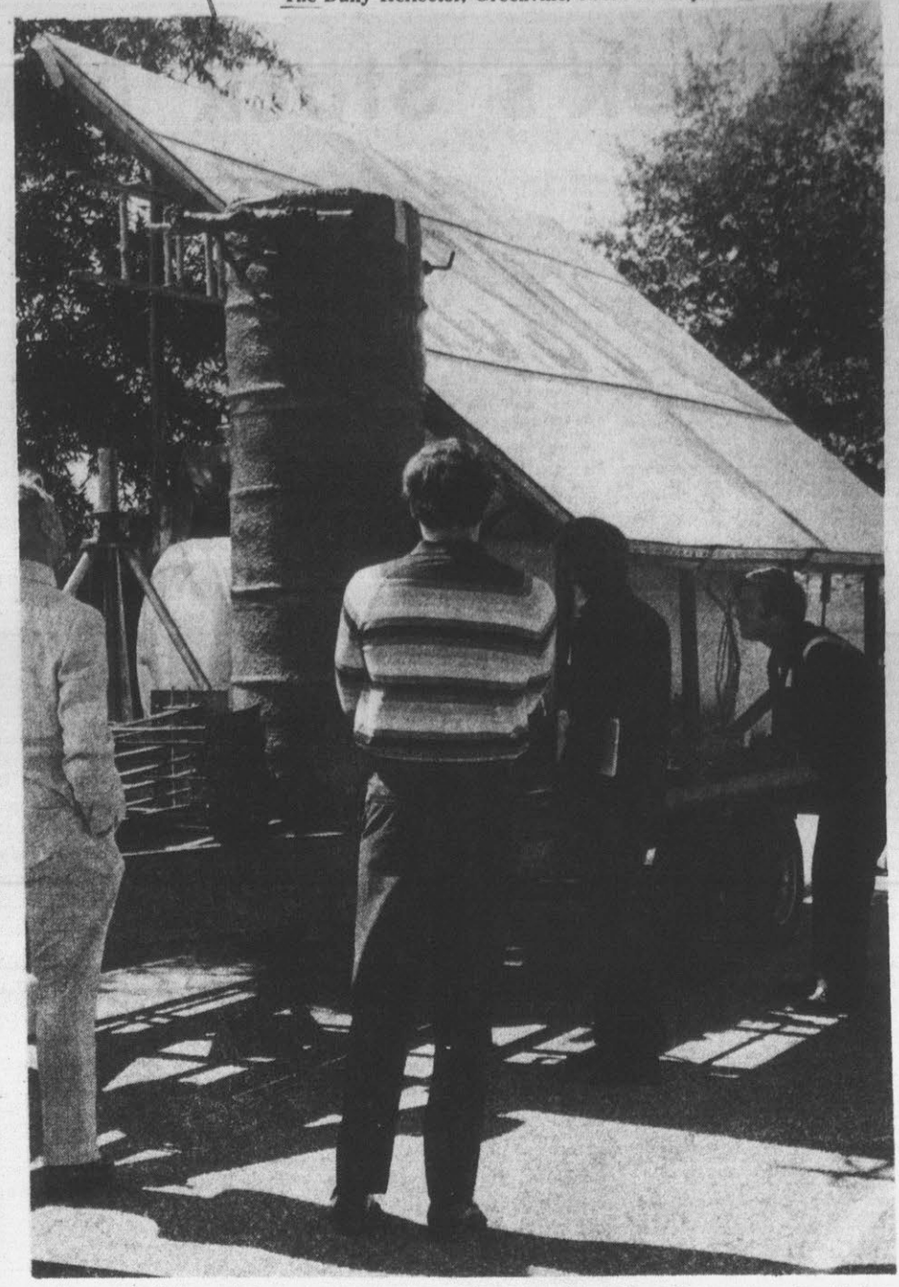
CAN REDUCE RATIO

Dr. Smetana said a house insulated according to present FHA standards would require a ratio of about one square foot of solar collector for every two feet of floor space. A house insulated using the methods alluded to in this article could probably have a ratio of one square foot of collector for every four to five feet of floor space.

There are basically two kinds of solar collectors: flat plate and ones that concentrate like the kind that track the sun and concentrate the sun's rays on the small aea. The flat plates are best, most of the speakers agreed, because some energy is gained from the sun even on cloudy days by the flat plate collectors.

Water or some other fluid is usually run through either copper or aluminum serpentine coils under the collector plate to heat the water. Larry Bennett of the Lamda Plastics Corporation in Charlotte said an all-plastic collector soon will be patented. It will bring down the cost of collectors considerably, he said, and be just what it takes to make solar energy more usable for the masses.

Brian Crutchfield of the State Economic Opportunity Office said he believes that tax breaks and guaranteed loans will at some time in the not-too-distant future be provided for persons who will use solar energy for heating. Widespread use of superior heat conservation measures will be widely used only when the building codes require it, he said. Standards for solar units to insure quality for the buyer also need to be set, he said.



THE EXPERIMENTAL SOLAR UNIT . . . shown above is being developed by Dr. Frederick Smetnan and his students at NCSU. This unit utilizes freon as a working fluid in conjunction with a heat pump. It will be on display at the State Fair, with someone on hand to explain it.

Psychologist, Preacher, Philosopher

Social Worker Sam Fudge Loves To Work With Kids

CHAPEL HILL — Sam Fudge is a psychologist, a preacher and a philosopher. But mostly he's a social worker who loves kids.

Fudge is a member of the Group Child Care Consultant Services them (GCCCS), a division of the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He spends about 65 days a year crisscrossing the country visiting group child care homes, formerly called orphages. He works with the staffs, helps develop programs and takes ideas from one home to another.

With his quick smile and neatly clipped beard, Fudge could be any child's favorite, good-humored uncle. He's never too busy to listen to problems, to help with advice or a shoulder to cry on.

And he knows the problems very well. An ordained Presbyterian minister and the director of a children's home before he joined GCCCS 12 years ago, Fudge has had personal experience with most of them. He knows what works and what doesn't.

"One time I had to mediate between the staff in a home and the kids," he recalls. "The kids went on strike—they wouldn't work. They said one of the staff members was sexually molesting the kids. I told them I would conduct a test to find out who the culprit was. The kids weren't sure how I would to this—neither was I—but I made sure all staff members knew they'd be tested. As it turned out, the suspect left soon after—apparently afraid to take the test. My psychology worked."

As one of six GCCCS consultants, Fudge works with the children, staff and administrators of some 80 children's homes in 30 states and Canada. GCCCS is the only such service in the country. Although the service also holds training programs, seminars and workshops at UNC during the year, a visit to the home's "campus" gives everyone—from director, to cook, to houseparents and children—a chance to discuss their current problems.

"Running a children's home today takes the group effort of a lot of sincere and dedicated people," Fudge says. "Most of the children in group child care homes are not seriously troubled, but are there because they or their families have adjustment problems severe enough to prevent their living together—either temporarily or on a long-term basis. Their problems range from a breakdown in communication to family tensions, fighting and divorce. Since most are there for short-term care, the role of the staff, and GCCCS, is to help prepare them for independence and to learn how to cope with their family. We want them to be able to go back and live in the community without getting put in jail."

Helping the children confront their problems is one way of helping, he says. He often uses humor to make a serious point palatable. "You have to have a sense of humor to survive in child care," he says. One time he the home appeared with a banner headline labeling the children "troubled."

"What do the papers mean, we're troubled, Mr. Fudge?" one of the youngsters asked him.

"Well, you are," Fudge answered, and the two laughed together, breaking the tension and giving Fudge the opportunity to discuss with the child that fact that everyone has trouble and how to understand and deal with his special kind.

Fudge often points out solutions that the staff may have overlooked because they're so close to the problem. He helped a home track down a runaway youngster once just by being sensitive to non-verbal clues.

"All we knew was that she'd gotten a letter from someone the day before she disappeared. I looked on the wall of her room and saw a map of North Carolina with a line drawn to Winston-Salem. Alongside, a picture of her mother was tacked to the wall. It turned out her mama had written the letter, upset the child and she had gone home. The handwriting was on the wall, so to speak," Fudge said with a laugh.

Runaways really aren't a major problem, though, Fudge says. "Most of the kids are pretty happy to be in a place that's 'homey' and where the people really care about them. Of course, sometimes people in the surrounding community don't realize this.

visited a North Carolina children's home the day after a newspaper story featuring

"One time a scout troop was scheduled to tour a home I supervised. I found out ahead of time that some of those parents had been threatening their kids with being sent to the children's home if they didn't behave themselves.

"Well, when the troop came for their visit," Fudge said with a mischievous smile, "I made a point of telling them all about the great things we had—like air conditioning, horses to ride, a swimming pool, basketball courts, and so on. Some of them started looking pretty envious.

"But then I asked them: 'What don't you see here that you have at home?' There was a short silence while the kids thought about that and then one little fellow piped up, 'I know—Mommy and Daddy.' "

Group child care kids aren't much different from any other kids, Fudge says. "Sometimes it's hard for them to leave 'home' when the time comes. Some come back to get help changing their anti-freeze or to get advice on their gardens. Some just come back to visit. Those times you feel maybe you've done something for them—helped them become good citizens.

"Other days," Fudge says, "you wonder if you're doing everything you can. That's what keeps those of us in child care humble—never knowing for sure."

At Tryon Palace Gardens In New Bern

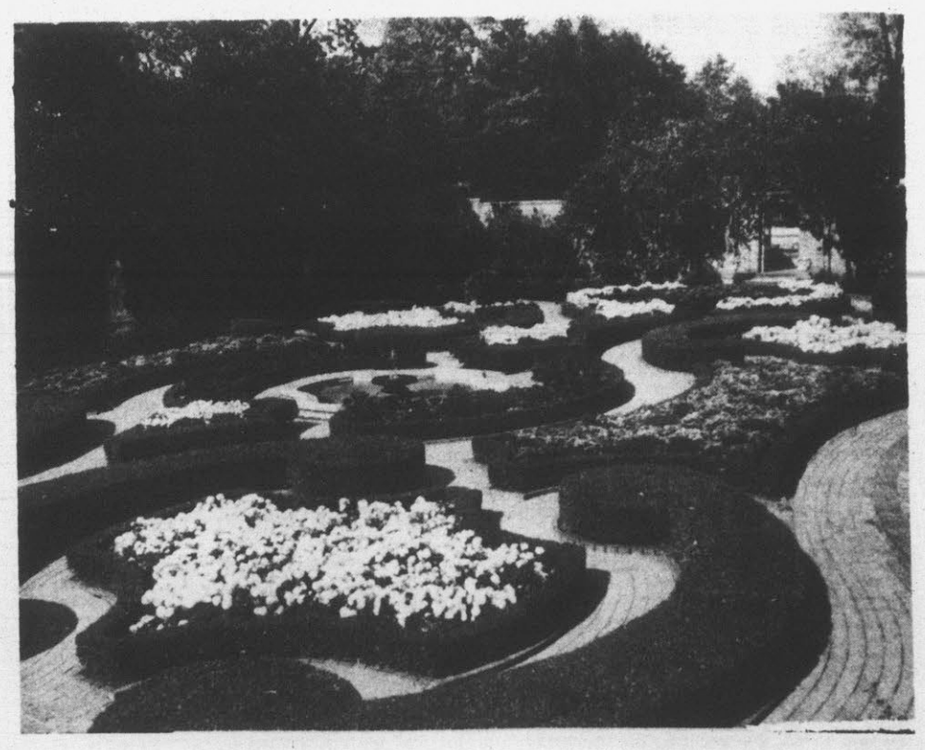
First Annual Observance Of Chrysanthemum Sunday

A veritable sea of chrysanthemums will welcome visitors to the gardens of Tryon Palace this autumn. The fall shower of varied colors caused such comment in recent years that Sunday afternoon, October 19th has been set aside as Chrysanthemum Sunday. On that date, the gardens of the Palace will be open free to the public from 1:00 until 5:00 p.m. This first annual Chrysanthemum Sunday event will draw attention to the splendor of the autumn gardens which many guests feel are as spectacular as those of spring.

While the peak of the fall flowering season usually occurs during the first three weeks of October, early and late blooming varieties of Chrysanthemum extend the color spectacle from late September until the first frosts of November. The buildings of the Tryon Palace Complex, Tryon Palace, John Wright Stanly House and Stevenson House, will be open as usual for guided tours at the regular admission charge.

Visitors to the Tryon Palace Restoration Complex will be able to admire thousands of chrysanthemums whose colors cover the entire range for this flower. Varieties used in the Tryon Palace PGardens are Red Headliner — red, Charles Nye — yellow, Powder River — white, Baby Tears — White, Ruby Mount — red, Cameo — pink, Yellow Supreme — yellow, Minn Pink — lavender and pink, Roll Call, bronze, and Purple Waters — purple.

Chrysanthemums, bred and cultivated by the Chinese at least 500 years before the birth of Christ, were introduced to this country in the late 18th Century. The garden variety of chrysanthemum was bed for early flowering and broad spreading habit of growth. Modern day hybridists have made striking improvements in the garden variety, and the chrysanthemum today is our most popular fall flower.



CHRYSANTHEMUMS . . . in bloom at Tryon palace. The hours of 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, October 19 has been set aside for free admission to the public for viewing the fall flowers.

Work Law Hampers Young Employer

IT'S TOUGH ON THE SMALL BUSINESS MAN—Steve Shalita, 13, thinks the government is too hard on the small businessman. Steve repairs bikes for the neighborhood kids in the family's garage. He even got a friend to help him, and that's when he got in trouble. An inspector for the state Labor Relations Board called to say he was violating laws regarding unlawful employment of minors. His mother tried to explain, but the inspector closed Steve down. (AP Wirephoto)

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Shalita had his own business for three years until he ran afoul of government regulations. Now he's trying to find someone willing to hire a 13-year-old bicycle mechanic.

Steve was operating "Steve's Bike Shop" in his family's garage in suburban Van Nuys until an inspector from the state Labor Relations Board forced him to stop repairing bikes.

The inspector said Shalita was violating laws regarding unlawful employment of minors — in this case, a neighborhood friend.

Like other small businessmen, Steve complains that the goverment shouldn't use the law to harass a person who is providing employment to others.

"They should go after the businesses that rip off people," the 4-foot-9 youngster said.

Steve said the dispute began this way:

"What happened was ... a kid in my neighborhood ... we agreed on a payment and afterwards he wanted more. I don't know what happened, maybe his mom told him to go to the labor people. Anyway we settled it.... I gave him a pair of handlebars."

But Steve's mother, Ann, said an unidentified official called on the family to tell them the department had received a complaint and that "Steve's Bike Shop" had to shut down.

Mrs. Shalita said she told the official that the bike shop "was more of a play project for Steve. He's just really a little boy."

But she said the official took the whole matter quite seriously.

Melville Sornberger, chief deputy of the Labor Relation Board, said the department "received an anonymous call concerning the unlawful employment of minors. Any type of complaint that we receive, we make every effort to check them out. The officer left information (with Steve's parents) concerning the applicable state and county regulations."

Now Mrs. Shalita says Steve is looking for a job, and she hopes someone will hire him.

"It was a good thing, it kept him out of trouble and other kids out of trouble," she said.

Democrats Oppose Tax Cut Plans

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford's plan to cut taxes and federal spending equally by $28 billion, which produced immediate opposition from Congressional Democrats, had stirred some unfavorable reaction by week's end from the business community.

Henry Kaufman, senior economist with the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, termed the plan "inappropriate," telling a bond conference in New York Thursday it would place upward pressure on interest rates.

Kaufman said the proposal would increase the Treasury's new cash needs by $12 billion in the first half of 1976, strain the money markets even further and push up lending rates. Treasury Secretary William Simon had estimated only $5 billion in new cash needs.

Ford and Simon also spent the week defending Ford's refusal to extend federal help to debt-ridden New York City, although sentiment began to appear in Congress for some sort of assistance.

Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a joint economic committee Wednesday that a New York City default "could produce serious strains in securities markets." Unless the crisis is resolved, he said, "the process of economic recovery now under way in our nation could be injured."

But Burns stopped short of actually advocating direct federal help for the city.

He did reiterate his position that the Federal Reserve system stood ready to make emergency loans to banks endangered by a New York City default, and two bank regulators told a separate hearing that some banks are likely to need such help.

Frank Wille, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., told a House Government Operations subcommittee that 271 banks in 34 states hold New York City debt issues equal to 20 per cent or more of their total net worth. He said another 56 banks in 18 states hold New York City debt equal to 50 per cent of their net worth.

While New York teetered on the brink of default, W.T. Grant Co. began the first part of its court-supervised restructuring under bankruptcy protection Thursday.

The ailing retailer announced the closing this year of 201 of its 1,074 stores, virtually ending its operations west of the Mississippi River. On Oct. 2 Grant became the largest retailer to file under bankruptcy laws in U.S. history.

A group of 27 banks had loaned Grant about $640 million, and over the week wrote off about a third of the debt individually under loan-loss provisions.

Citing loan losses, several major banks reported sluggish earnings reports for the third quarter this past week.

Chase Manhattan Corp., parent of Chase Bank, said its third quarter earnings were off 50 per cent from the same period last year, while Chemical New York Corp., parent company of Chemical Bank, said its earnings for the period had edged up only one per cent.

Marine Midland Bank Inc.'s third quarter earnings rose only 0.5 per cent and Bank of New York Co.'s declined 3.3 per cent.

Billions Spent

NEW YORK (UPI) — Total spending for pollution control in 1972 totaled $18.7 billion, or 1.6 per cent of the Gross National Product, according to the latest estimate by the Commerce Department. Almost $8.6 billion in antipollution spending by consumers, business and government was tagged for combatting water pollution.

Opposes Increase In Tobacco Price Support

RALEIGH (AP)—While a major tobacco company backed an increase in tobacco price supports, Georgia Agriculture Commissioner T.T. "Tommy" Irvin opposed such a move as premature.

J.E. Edens, chairman and chief executive officer of Brown and Williamson Tobacco Co., said President Ford received "poor advice" when he vetoed the 10 per cent increase in tobacco supports. "We shall continue to stress the desirability for realistic but reasonable price supports in the grower's interest," he said.

Edens made his comments in a talk to the Tobacco Growers Information Committee meeting Friday in Raleigh. He restated his position at a news conference later.

Also at the news conference, Irvin said he opposed higher price supports because it was premature. "We don't want to price ourselves out of the world market," he said. Irvin also said he was afraid of losing the tobacco price support program.

Edens also announced that Brown and Williamson plans to build a $151 million manufacturing and cigarette storage facility in Macon, Ga. He said the facility would ultimately accomodate 100 million pounds of tobacco.

First stage of the plant is to begin operation next fall with expansion of the facility determined by sales levels.

Meanwhile, an organization was formed to provide tobacco research funds and to promote harmony among segments of the industry. The North Carolina Tobacco Foundation Inc. set a goal of raising $500,000 in its first year.

The foundation will work with North Carolina State University. Tobacco Associates gave the foundation its first contribution—$100,000.

Elected president of the foundation was George B. Watson of Watson Seed Farms Inc. in Rocky Mount and Ivan Meas, manager of agricultural research for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., was elected vice president.

Economic Meet Set

WASHINGTON (AP) -- An economic summit will be held at a chateau near Paris next month in a high-level effort by seven Western nations to stimulate the world's economy. President Ford will participate.

"Economic issues of mutual interest," will be discussed by Ford, the president of France and prime ministers of Britain, West Germany, Japan and Italy, from Nov. 15-17, the White House said Friday.

Canada also is expected to participate, the White House said.

The summit was proposed by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing several months ago to focus on monetary policies.

Topics are to include "promotion of recovery in the world economy, trade and monetary policy, developments in energy and other raw material markets and relations with other developed and developing nations."

Former Treasury Secretary George Shultz represented the United States in hush-hush meetings held to plan the summit session, which was not enthusiastically received by the administation initially.

State Department counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt said the French are looking for a site for the meeting, outside Paris so participants can secure "informality" and a minimum of publicity.

Because it was agreed that the number of participants would be kept to a minimum, Ford will be accompanied only by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Secretary of the Treasury William Simon.

ARCHES, GRILLWORK CARRY DESIGN MOTIF.

FACADE FAVORS SPANISH INFLUENCE

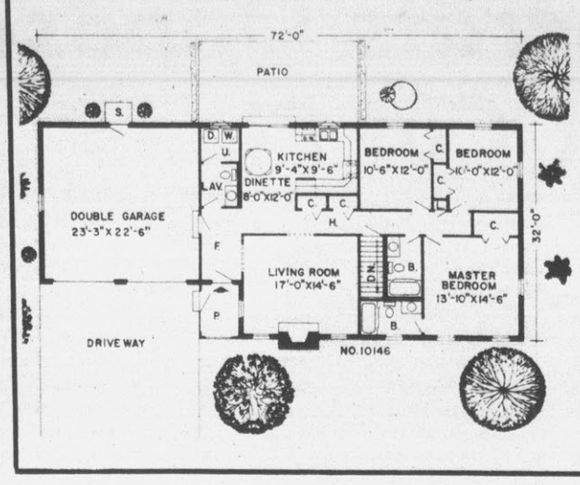
By Jerry Bishop

Arched windows and doorways and wrought iron grillwork add a Spanish accent to the San Miguel, a moderate sized three bedroom plan. Containing less than 1,500 square feet of living space, the plan employs brick casing and a statuesque chimney to visually increase the size and carry out the design theme.

The covered entry porch is framed by wrought iron grillwork and gate, which, besides setting the tone of the design, functions as a comfortable spot for relaxing on a warm summer evening or a safe place for small children to play.

Inside, the plan is based on a central hallway radiating from the entry foyer. The foyer itself allows ready access to the living room, hallway, half bath, and garage.

Brightened by a wood-burning fireplace, the living room promises a restful atmosphere for entertaining or family use. Accross the hall, the open kitchen-dining area stresses informality and provides adequate space for food preparation and casual dining. Its sliding glass doors extend the area's boundaries to the massive patio for cookouts and neighborhood parties.



PLAN YOUR HOME

Bordering the kitchen area is a segmented half bath and utility room. Well-placed for first floor convenience in doing laundry, the utility room shows space for a washer and dryer, while the half bath is handy to all entrances and activity areas.

Three bedrooms comprise the sleeping wing of the San Miguel. Each of the bedrooms provides plentiful closet space, and two additional closets line the hallway. Placed apart for privacy, the master bedroom merits its own full bath, and another full bath serves the second and third bedrooms.

Large enough for some storage duty, the double garage features doorways to the back yard and directly into the foyer. A full basement provides another 1,498 square feet of potential living space.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A new lock designed to be "pick" proof.

Manufacturer's claim — That the lock cylinder is the most radical development in the 114-year history of pin tumbler lock design ... that the critical feature of the unit is the interlocking of the pin tumblers in the cylinder ... that the tumblers must not only be properly raised, but also rotated to the proper angle before the lock will open ... that these functions are accomplished only by a special key that has angular cuts in it instead of the conventional notches ... that the lock has millions of different key and tumbler configurations for the largest key systems known ... and that Robert McDermott, lock and burglary expert for the New York Police Department before his retirement in 1971, spent five hours unsuccessfully attempting to pick the new lock.

THE PRODUCT — A low-cost mitre box with pre-set 45 and 90-degree cutting angles.

Manufacturer's claim — That it is lightweight, yet rigid in construction, and as easy to use on the job as those used by professional carpenters ... that it holds lumber of various types and sizes up to a standard 2 by 4 for cutting with a hacksaw or crosscut panel saw ... that there are holes in the mitre box for fastening to a workbench or for fastening to a replaceable bottom board ... and that it has been especially designed for home owners.

THE PRODUCT — Special panels for rooms with high ceilings.

Manufacturer's claim — That these prefinished hardboard planks come in 10-foot lengths, but are only 16 inches wide, just one-third the width of regular paneling ... that the planks have tongue-and-groove edges for better installation ... that special metal clips that fit over the edges, as well as adhesive, assure a very strong bond ... that matching mouldings are available with the planks ... and that the soil-resistant finish resists heat, moisture, smudges and stains.

THE PRODUCT — A wipe-on sealer for aluminum.

Manufacturer's claim — That this product both renews and protects aluminum with bi-annual applications ... that corroded aluminum is restored by scrubbing the surface with a green nylon abrasive pad wetted with the sealer ... that the surface is then wiped clean with a lint-free cloth ... and that the surface is then sealed by wiping on the product.

(Thirty-five do-it-yourself projects are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper in care of Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

(The lock is manufactured by Emhart Corp., 225 Episcopal Road, Berlin, Conn. 06037; the mitre box by the Stanley Works, 195 Lake St., New Britain, Conn. 06050; the paneling by Marlite, Division of Masonite, Dover, Ohio 44622; and the aluminum sealer by Coricone Corp., 540 Frontage Road, Northfield, Ill. 60093.)

Can Detect Oven Leaks

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — An inventor and Purdue University professor has applied for a patent on an inexpensive device to measure leakage from household microwave ovens.

The instrument is lightweight, about the size of a paper ice cream cup, self-contained and, its inventor says, can be used by anyone in the home. It features light-emitting diodes, micro-circuitry and a tiny antenna. It has no batteries or moving parts.

The inventor, electrical engineer Walter L. Weeks, says the device's antenna picks up leaking energy when it is held by hand near the seal to the oven door. Weeks says the smallest leak usually will register, lighting up one diode and mainly indicating that the detector is working.

If all three diodes light up, he says, the oven seal should be checked first for food or other foreign matter. If it still leaks after cleaning, the manufacturer's service agent should be called.

Radiation detection devices now on the market sell for as much as $800. Weeks envisions his retailing for only $15.

Here's the Answer

Q. — We have fallen heir to some Early American furniture. Unfortunately, it appears to be made of inexpensive wood. Some years ago I saw a similar set of furniture that had an unusual finish on it. When I asked what it was, the owner said "a flame finish made with a propane torch." I never asked how it was done because I never thought I would ever do it. Now I'd like to take a crack at it. Can you help me?

A. — First, I'd like to warn you that any time you apply a flame to wood, you have to be extra careful. Secondly, I have to point out that the first time you attempt this finish, it may not come out the way you expected. Therefore, if possible, do the job outdoors and practice first on some scrap wood.

The method is very similar to that employed when using a paint sprayer. Keep the container part of the torch about 10 to 12 inches away from the surface and see that the flame is moving across the wood at all times. Do not stop it in one place. After you complete this part of the project, go over the surface with a stiff brush, moving in the direction of the grain. When the surface is the way you want it, rub in paste wax.

Q. — We have an old-fashioned laundry tub made of cast cement. It has developed a crack on the inside wall. Can this be repaired?

A. — Yes. It can be patched the same way as you might patch a cracked sidewalk. Use one part of cement to three parts of sand — or a ready-mixed sand mix. Spread the mixture into the crack and smooth with a putty knife. For an extra strong bond, use one of the cements that has a liquid bonding agent to be used in place of water.

Q. — I'd like to apply enamel over a previously painted surface. Can this be done or do I have to remove the old finish? Also, are there any other tips you can give me about the use of enamel, which I have never used before?

A. — Enamel will go on well over an old finish that is not cracked or peeled. If either of those conditions exist, the old finish will have to be taken off. Assuming that, in this case, the old surface is intact, wash it lightly, then sand it lightly to remove the remaining gloss. Wipe with a cloth moistened with turpentine. This will take off any bits of grit or dust still there from the sanding. Use an under-coater under the final finish. This can be a regular product marked undercoater or the same enamel thinned about 50 per cent with turpentine.

Read the directions on the label to see which type of undercoater is recommended by the manufacturer. In applying the enamel, use the same system as with varnish. That is, brush it on with the grain, then across the grain. The final step is to use the tips of the brush, with little or no additional enamel, to smooth out the finish in the direction of the grain.

Did You Conserve Energy Today?

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
United Press International

You've heard it before. But have you, personally, done anything about energy conservation?

It's easy to put off. We're all so used to turning up the heat when we're cold, the air-conditioning when we're warm; turning the faucet for unlimited hot water; flicking a switch for light wherever and whenever we want it; plugging in any appliance.

Yet, if we don't start to conserve, the time may come when flipping a switch won't bring the usual response. An estimated 30 per cent of the energy used in this country is wasted, according to the Federal Energy Administration.

About 20 per cent of all the energy produced is consumed by the 70 million households in the United States — more than half of it for heating and cooling, about 15 per cent for water heating and the rest for lighting and to run appliances such as refrigerators, washers and dryers. It is obvious American families can help eliminate some of that waste.

Even if energy conservation were no consideration, with the bills for it climbing steadily, most families will find it an economic necessity to cut down on energy usage where they can.

One of the most effective ways, of course, is to add insulation to walls, ceilings and floors over unheated areas if your home is deficient. And, unless it was built recently with an eye to energy conservation, the chances are it is deficient.

There is more to the question of insulation than just the amount used and the homeowner would be wise to seek the advice of experts.

For instance, it is the efficiency of the material used rather than its thickness that is important in insulating. Wood, for instance, is four times as efficient as cinder block as an insulator, six times more efficient than brick, 15 times better than concrete or stone, 400 times better than steel and 1,770 times more efficient than aluminum.

In shopping for insulation, the National Cellulose Insulation Manufacturers Association recommends you consider the R-value factor. R-value is a measure of the ability of a material to retard heat flow. The higher the R-value, the higher the insulating quality.

The Association recommends R-30 for ceilings, R-14 for sidewalls and R-13 for floors over uninsulated areas.

It is possible to save in little ways, also. C.I.T. Financial Services offers some suggestions:

Reduce energy consumption in cooking. Use pans that cover the entire heating element so that heat is not lost to the surrounding air. Make good use of oven heat. Plan an entire oven-cooked meal or make dishes for freezing and later reheating. Use accessory ovens for small meals.

Wash most clothes in cold or warm water, rinse in cold, using hot water only where absolutely necessary.

Don't run clothes washers and dryers except for a full load. Run dryer only as long as necessary. Hang clothes outdoors when and where possible.

Don't run dishwasher with partial loads, but don't overload. The average washer uses 14 gallons of hot water per load. Eliminate drying cycle, opening door to permit air drying.

Lighting consumes 16 per cent of all electricity used in the home. Replacing bulbs with the next lower wattage, except in reading and working areas, should save about four per cent of costs. Keep lamps and lighting fixtures clean. Dirt blocks light.

Light colors for walls, rugs, draperies and upholstery reduce the amount of artificial lighting required.

Keep drapes and shades open in sunny windows — close them at night.

Dust or vacuum radiator surfaces frequently.

Reduce indoor temperature. Keep warm with warmer clothing.

Make a family project of conservation and you'll be surprised with the savings possible.

Gardening Questions

Q. What are some good cover crops to plant in my garden? Also give me instructions for planting them. (P.S., Lexington)

A. Almost any of the small grains, especially rye, would serve well as a cover crop. Vetch is another cover crop that makes a lot of vegetative growth. Seed—broadcast—after the garden has been plowed. If you have a fall garden, you can seed the alleyways. Then your cover crop will get a good start before cold weather. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Last spring my strawberry plants bloomed well but the fruit was small and mishapened. Some berries were hardly berries at all—only a few seed. How can I prevent this next spring? (M. H., Clinton)

A. There is not much you can do, because the problem you describe was caused mostly by weather conditions. In some cases it was too cold for bees to work, resulting in poor pollination. In other cases the problem was caused by frost damage or drying winds. Let's hope the weather next spring will be better. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I store apples for a long time? (L. S., Winston-Salem)

A. Apples keep best at 31 degrees and 85 per cent humidity. However, they can be kept for several months at a higher temperature if they are not overripe when stored. Many people store apples in an old refrigerator. They are placed in plastic bags with a paper towel and stored in the refrigerator at 35 to 40 degrees. Basements are usually a poor place to store apples because most basements are 55 degrees—the temperature of soil—and above. The back porch or garage may be a better place to store apples than the basement. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. I grew a few sweet potatoes in the garden last year, but some of them had "hard cores" when I tried to eat them. (D. F. Goldsboro)

A. Hard cores can be caused by exposure to low temperatures—under 55 degrees. A cold snap in the fall will not injure sweet potatoes still in the ground, but it can damage potatoes that are exposed on the ground after digging. A hot scorching sun will also damage sweet potatoes. Always try to get your potatoes out of the field within two hours after digging. (Charles Averre, extension plant pathologist)

Strip Mine Grapes Harvested For Test

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Breathitt County '75 may never replace Chateau Lafite-Rothschild '26 in the hearts of wine connoisseurs, but it may prove a point about strip mine reclamation.

"Breathitt County '75" is a designation that might be applied to a batch of wine now being made from grapes grown on an abandoned Appalachian strip mine.

The grapes were harvested from a test plot at a Falcon Coal Co. site and the consultant who had the idea pronounced the experiment a success, as far as two grape strains go.

"We aren't at the point where we could tell someone to plant a 50-acre vineyard on old strip mines," said the consultant, William Oliver of Bloomington, Ind.

"But the one thing we have proved is that at least these two hybrid grapes — Cascade and Aurora — will grow there," said Oliver, an Indiana University law professor who owns a small winery.

Of the grapes planted two seasons ago, only white Baco ("Baco Blanc" to wine enthusiasts) failed, he said in an interview.

Oliver said the wine now being made from the grapes would have to be tested, "because it's not merely a question of growing the grapes."

A given grape, grown in different soils, can produce wines of widely varying quality, he said. Oliver added, however, that he was optimistic about the quality of the test wine.

"A superb type of wine, a unique wine, is what we hope for," he said, describing the soil at the site as a good blend.

Oliver said the mine was reclaimed to put 100 feet of material between bedrock and the surface — an important step, he said, because grapes have deep roots.

Oliver said the southeastern Kentucky climate seemed to suit the grapes well, aside from a wet spring that allowed fungus disease to develop despite a spraying program.

KAMAZ Project Is Impressive

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY
Associated Press Writer

NABEREZHNYE CHELNY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Soviets have always tended to equate bigness with goodness. They built the world's biggest hotel (Rossiya), the world's biggest school building (Moscow University), and the world's biggest man-made lake (Bratsk).

Now they are building, here in the heart of Russia, the world's biggest truck factory. But KAMAZ, as the Kama River Industrial Project is called, is more than just a big factory aimed at the record books.

It is a symbol of Russia's hurried quest to embrace the "automobile age" and to get one giant step closer to the status of advanced technological power it so desperately wants.

KAMAZ also is a significant proving ground for East-West business cooperation. The project is so ambitious, the Russians could not build it alone. They have contracted for more than $1 billion in foreign technology to equip the plant.

"KAMAZ is the first large-scale Soviet industrial project of the post-Cold War era which involves a truly international procurement program backed by Western financing of such major dimensions," said a 1974 study by New York's Chase Manhattan Bank, one of the major creditors for the project.

The project was conceived in the late 1960s as a one-shot attempt to boost production of heavy-duty trucks by 30 to 35 per cent. Large tractor-trailors are needed to upgrade a highway freight system woefully inadequate for a country of Russia's size. Big dump trucks also are needed for ambitious construction programs and to increase agricultural efficiency.

KAMAZ is supposed to produce 150,000 three-axle trucks and 250,000 diesel engines each year, a capacity which the Chase study says is greater than that of all the U.S. heavy truck manufacturers combined.

The Russians do not have the technology to achieve their goal of turning out an 8-to 11-ton truck every 90 seconds on one assembly line, so they turned to the West.

At first they wanted a Western firm to build the plant for them, but most were scared off by the enormity of the task and some discouraging reports about the experiences of Italy's Fiat with a complex one-third the size. Ford dropped out after the U.S. Defense Department complained that KAMAZ trucks might end up in North Vietnam.

So the Soviets decided to build it themselves, relying on foreigners for design and equipment. KAMAZ has been under construction since 1970 and is not expected to produce its first truck until next March, nearly two years behind schedule.

The project has been plagued by lack of coordination, a sloth-like building pace and installation delays. Familiar Soviet bugaboos such as government red tape and haphazard workmanship undoubtedly share some blame, but most Western observers say the Soviets have done a surprisingly credible job given the enormity of the project and the need to coordinate input from 140 separate foreign firms.

The dimensions of KAMAZ are staggering:

A $5 billion construction budget ... 9.8 million square feet of factory space ... a new city to house 250,000 workers and their families ... 155 miles of highway ... 75 miles of railroad tracks ... 150 buildings.

All this has been plunked down on a 40-square-mile tract in the countryside of the Tatar Republic, 600 miles east of Moscow.

For a group of Americans who recently got a rare look at the site, the effect was somewhat like stumbling across a mini-Detroit emerging from the cornfields of Nebraska.

"These fellows, with their system, can do this kind of thing, and you have to admit it is something to see," former North Carolina governor Terry Sanford said as he stepped back into the jet furnished by the Soviets for a one-day tour.

Sanford, president of Duke University and a Democratic presidential aspirant, was talking about the "command" economic system directed by the state. In effect, it allows planners in Moscow to point to an available spot on the Soviet map and say: "Here is where we will put the place."

The engineers and workers are then shipped in, buildings go up, electricity and roads go in, and there you have it: instant civilization.

Of course, it is never so simple, but the principle has guided dramatic development in this country's once-barren eastern regions.

KAMAZ did not start entirely from scratch. Naberezhnye Chelny was a 200-year-old fishing village of 30,000 when the bulldozers arrived five years ago. Today, the "old" city has been expanded to house 110,000 and a "new" city of 150,000 has sprung up down the road.

The Soviet hosts urged their visitors, including two American correspondents, not to be shocked by the "unfinished look" of the site but to visualize a neatly clustered industrial park laced with trees, gardens and fields of mown grass.

The image was hard to conjure up. The bare land bristled with concrete and steel. Dump trucks and bulldozers bustled everywhere. Cranes jutted above scores of box-shaped apartment houses in varying stages of completion.

A whirlwind tour of the six-factory installation showed that only the tool and repair shop, employing 3,000 workers, was in actual production. Everywhere there were portraits of Lenin and billboards exhorting the workers to push harder, and restating what has become the motto of the project: "The entire country builds KAMAZ." It should have added: "... and a score of other countries, too."

Nearly every advanced Western country, along with the Eastern European socialist allies, has a piece of the KAMAZ action. There are 40 U.S. firms alone involved in the project with contracts worth $400 million.

Swindler-Dressler, a division of Pullman, Inc., designed and is equipping the foundry with contracts worth $42.6 million. Ingersoll-Rand has provided the engine block assembly line, describing it as the longest in the world, at a cost of $20.2 million.

France's Renault designed and is also helping to equip the engine plant. It has contracts worth nearly $300 million. The West German firms Liebherr and Huller designed and equipped the transmission and gear plant for a total cost to the Soviets of $171.8 million.

How are the Soviets paying for all this?

The days when Russia was too poor to pay hard currency are dying fast as the nation reaps the rewards from oil, gas and gold sales, but it still did not have all the money needed for KAMAZ purchases. Again the Russians looked to the West.

The U.S.-based Export-Import Bank and Chase Manhattan concluded in 1973-74 credit agreements with the Soviet Bank of Foreign trade totaling $322.9 million. Moscow is to pay 10 per cent down to its American suppliers, with the remaining 90 per cent financed by Ex-Im and Chase, which is headed by the Kremlin's old friend David Rockefeller. He says Chase is charging "market rates" while the Ex-Im Bank has set a fixed rate of six per cent interest.

France, Italy, West Germany, Austria and Britain have provided other credit. And the Soviets are carrying four-fifths of the construction costs for KAMAZ without financing.

One reason the project is so monstrous is that KAMAZ is designed to be nearly self-sufficient, not depending on the age-old problems of Soviet industry such as shortages of parts and delivery delays from other plants. Most Western automotive firms stepped away from this all-in-one concept decades ago on the principle that it was more economical to specialize in what they were good at, designing and assembling a vehicle.

But to a great extent, the independence of KAMAZ was dictated by its location so far from the country's supply facilities in western Russia. So, why put the world's biggest truck factory halfway to Siberia?

KAMAZ is another step toward the development of eastern Russia, a process started during World War II when hundreds of factories in western Russia were relocated away from invading German armies. Also, the Tatar Republic is rich in energy resources and manpower, has good river and road access and was deserving of a major project because it was underdeveloped.

Another Law Is Waiting

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — American consumers soon can expect better warranties on products they buy, thanks to a new federal law.

Marilyn Furry, a family resource management specialist at Pennsylvania State University, says the law does not make warranties mandatory, but it does set Federal Trade Commission standards which manufacturers must follow if their products carry warranties.

"The new law aims to make manufacturers provide consumers with straightforward, meaningful warranties which will be backed up," Mrs. Furry said. "It also strengthens the Federal Trade Commission's ability to protect consumers against unfair and deceptive practices."

She said the FTC is authorized to go to court to obtain redress on behalf of consumers for violations or for unfair and deceptive practices.

Because of paperwork involved in setting up standards and regulations, the date has not yet been set for the law to take effect, she added.

Most Griping About Tailors

HONG KONG (UPI) — Visitors from the United States complained the most about Hong Kong shops and services during the last fiscal year, the Hong Kong Tourist Association reported.

The main target of complaints were tailors. Other familiar gripes concerned late or nondelivery of merchandise, according to the association's annual report. However, the report said the number of complaints represented a 7.8 per cent drop from the preceding year.

HISTORIC VESSELS

LONDON (UPI) — A Trinity House light ship that retired from service in 1943 now forms part of a collection of historic vessels on show at the St. Katharine Yacht Haven, close by the Tower of London. Other vessels on display include a steam tug and a Thames sailing barge.

University Condominiums are at this point mostly SOLD OUT and the owners figure that if they have sold this fast then the sales price must be too low. There are some of us who would like to blame it on superior salesmanship, but as I'm the only salesman here, I'll have to agree with the owners. At a sales price of $19,900 University Condominiums, by any appraisal technique, are simply priced too low. So as of November 1, 1975, the sales price of our lovely antique brick homes will be $21,500.

How To Measure Real Miles Per Gallon By Car

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Just when you may have finally sorted out all of those different automobile fuel economy numbers, they went and changed the rules.

In the process an American-built car is sharing the top mileage honors for the first time with those fuel-stingy imports that have been putting a big dent in the U.S. car market. The Chevrolet Chevette and the Japanese-buipt Datsun B-210 and Subaru are rated at 33 miles per gallon — a figure that may be confusing.

Ever since the Arabs clamped down on oil supplies in the full of 1973, the number of miles a car can squeeze from a gallon of gasoline has become increasingly important. So far, the government — in the form of the Environmental Protection Agency — has been the prime source of fuel economy comparisons.

But each year, the EPA's figures have been met with criticism.

The first figures two years ago revealed the results from a "city" cycle which manufacturers — especially those in Detroit — said put their vehicles at a big disadvantage.

So the EPA added a "highway" figure last fall and drew the ire of car owners who found they couldn't come anywhere near matching the higher figure which was the only one the automakers chose to promote.

Pushed by another government agency, the Federal Trade Commission which ordered automakers to use only EPA results and give equal prominence to both figures, the EPA in September announced the mileage results for the 1976-model cars — with yet a third number.

That "combined" number is based on statistics from yet another government agency — the Federal Highway Administration — that show the average motorist does 55 per cent of his driving under city conditions and 45 per cent under highway conditions.

The EPA maintains that a person interested in a new car should check each figure.

If most of the driving is done in the city, the lower figure will be the most important. A motorist who is on the highway most of the time will want to look at the higher figure. And the combined figure will be of prime interest to suburbanites and others who spend time on both the freeways and in stop-and-go city traffic.

"Our principal purpose in publishing these figures is to help consumers do comparison shopping," Russell E. Train, EPA administrator, explains.

"Some consumers, however, have taken these figures as gospel," he says. "They forget that fuel economy varies according to each person's driving habits, the type of driving, how well the car is maintained and what optional equipment is installed."

The use of the combined figure gave GM something to cheer about and is giving Detroit automakers some ammunition to refute charges that they don't know how to build fuel-stingy cars.

"We've always said that we can match the foreign cars in every weight class we compete in," says GM President Elliott M. Estes. "And now we're competing in their class."

If the combined figure hadn't been used, GM's Chevette at 39 m.p.g. would have placed third to Datsun's 41 m.p.g. and Subaru's 40 m.p.g. highway results. But in the city, no other car could touch its 30 m.p.g. figure.

It's doubtful that any of the auto companies will use the combined figure in their advertising since that "highway" figure in the mid-to high 30s is still impressive, even if the FTC says the lower city figure must be used right alongside.

In their early ads, GM and Ford pushed their smallest models with the highway and city figures. But most industry observers are still leery of the government's test results.

"Use them as a comparison," advises John Spears, the "Mileage Miser" at Detroit's WWJ-TV.

Since July, Spears has been driving Detroit and foreign offerings three times over a 60-mile circuit that combines all types of driving — in light, medium and heavy traffic and in stop-and-go city traffic, on freeways and on secondary roads that have a maximum speed of 45 miles per hour.

His results most of the time are in between the city and highway results from the EPA and usually close to the "combined" result.

On a 1976-model Ford Gran Torino with a 400-cubic inch engine and automatic transmission which the EPA rates at 13 m.p.g. in the city and 18 m.p.g. on the highway, Spears averaged 14.3 m.p.g. The EPA's "combined" figure was 15 m.p.g.

A Mercury Capri II that EPA gives a "combined" fuel economy rating of 26 m.p.g., Spears averaged 25.2 m.p.g.

On one of the fuel-hungry luxury models — the Cadillac Eldorado convertible with a 500-cubic inch fuel-injected engine — Spears averaged 14.2 m.p.g. while EPA gives the car a 12 m.p.g combined average.

The difference, says Spears, is the type of test. The EPA's laboratory tests do not take into account wind resistance and other on-the-road factors.

"You'll generally come out a little better on the larger cars than the figures from the EPA indicate because the wind resistance and mass don't play as much a factor when you have that big engine pushing the car," Spears says.

The EPA's tests are conducted at its Ann Arbor, Mich., laboratory on a dynamometer, a treadmill-like device that measures the spin of the wheels and the exhaust gases. It provides a gas mileage comparison, even if the results are not "real world" as some critics complain, because each car is tested in exactly the same way.

The "city" driving test represents commuter driving and includes stopping, starting and operating the vehicle at speeds averaging 20 m.p.h. over a 7.5-mile test. The "highway" driving test includes rural and interstate driving at an average speed of 48 m.p.h. over a 10-mile test.

Oceanographers Probe Deeper In Continental Drift Secrets

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

PALISADES, N.Y. (AP) — A band of men who study the seas ship out again Sunday to search for clues to that almost mythical day some 200 million years ago when there was perhaps just one land and just one vast ocean.

This latest scientific treasure hunt into the mysteries of continental drift is being conducted by oceanographers from Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory — a bastion of sea knowledge atop a rocky cliff some 350 feet above the Hudson River.

In just the last few years, oceanographers here and elsewhere have revolutionized the science of geology and notions about the earth.

Explorary voyages have shown that the earth's surface is composed of about a dozen moving plates, colliding, brushing against each other, sliding under, their edges being swallowed up by the depths only to rise again.

These restless crustal plates, about 60 miles thick, are the result of fissures in the earth where hot rock from underneath the crust wells up, pushing two plates apart.

The Atlantic Mid-Ocean Ridge is such a fissure. It is part of a double-ridge of two-mile-high mountains circling the world in an almost continuous line 45,000 miles long. At the mid-Atlantic ridge, the sea floor is spreading at the rate of about two inches a year, rather fast in geologic time.

All this is called the new global plate tectonics, an entirely new view of the earth beneath us. Now the scientists want to find out in detail the nature of the underlying forces, the unknown and little-understood machine that is driving this process.

The first leg of the search begins Sunday when Lamont-Doherty's research vessel the Robert D. Conrad sets out to explore the continental margin stretching from off New York to off Florida, out about 200 miles.

In December, the Conrad will sail for the Caribbean for research there. Later will come explorations of the mid-Atlantic ridge, perhaps a younger rifted area such as the Gulf of California and in the Pacific where a plate appears to be disappearing under another plate.

"We would like to know a little bit more about the anatomy of this process, "says John I. Ewing, associate director for research at Lamont-Doherty, and brother of the late Maurice Ewing, founder of the observatory.

The continental margin is an area of transition from typcially oceanic crust to continental crust. The two crusts have quite different physical properties.

"Let us consider the so-called passive rifted margins," says Lamont-Doherty director Dr. Manik Talwani, "such as the Atlantic margins of Europe and North America, which came into existence as Europe and North America split apart nearly 200 million years ago.

"Although most geologists believe such a split occurred, we still know very little about any continents split, or how."

"In any event," Talwani continues, "evidence shows that very interesting and important events took place when the continents first rifted."

Ewing and Charles C. Windishch, research associate, say they want to find out: "What are the steps in the process? What formations develop? There are ideas, but no real knowledge. There is a tensional force exerted in the crust and probably in the mantle of earth, but what is the driving force, the machine that does it? There is nothing proven."

Talwani: "The margin is the place where the continental shelf broke off. We really don't know why they broke off. What was going on at the time? "This is the real scientific puzzle. We really don't know why the continents broke."

The scientific equipment that is making this search into the past possible is being adapted from sophisticated technology developed by the oil industry, where it has been in use for years, but until now not utilized by large oceanographic institutions.

The new equipment aboard the Conrad will be a highly complex version of basic technique, costing $1 million.

Miss Mary Lang Weds Saturday

FARMVILLE—The Farmville United Methodist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Miss Mary Annis Lang and Richard Edward Hunter Jr.

The double ring ceremony at 11:30 a.m. was performed by the Rev. Kermit Wheeler. A program of music was rendered by Mrs. Danny Rice, organist, and Eddie Thigpen, trumpeteer.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Octavius Lang Jr., the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of white satin designed with an empire waistline. The bodice and sleeves were fashioned with rosepoint chantilly lace matching the edge of her cathedral length illusion mantilla. She carried a bouquet of white cymbidium orchids and pom pons.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Edward Hunter of Warrenton.

The bride's honor attendant was her sister, Mrs. Albert Wollaston Smith III of Atlanta, Ga. She wore a formal length gown of cotillion blue knit designed with a gathered Bianchi neckline complemented by short flared sleeves. The gown had a modified empire waistline and a full skirt. She carried a long-stemmed red rose.

Bridesmaids were Miss Susan Virginia Adams of Raleigh, Miss Margaret Susan Andrews of Washington, D.C., Mrs. Steven Edwards Brooks of Warrenton, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jerry Blount of North Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Miss Norma Winstead of Wilson. Their attire was identical to that of the matron of honor.

The father of the bridegroom of best man and ushers were Roland Scott Lang of Smithfield, brother of the bride, Frank Wills Hunter, brother of the bridegroom, and Steven Edwards Brooks, both of Warrenton, Richard Pelham Taylor Jr. of Raleigh, Evans Broadhurst Jr. of Fayetteville, and Albert Wollaston Smith III of Atlanta, Ga. Acolyte was Albert Coy Monk IV of Farmville.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the bridal couple will reside in Warrenton.

The bride attended N.C. Wesleyan College and graduated from UNC-Chapel Hill with a B.A. in English and received her M.S. in rehabilitation counseling from ECU. The bridegroom attended Louisburg College and graduated from UNC-CH. He is administrative assistant to the district attorney in the Ninth Judicial District.

A wedding breakfast was held immediately following the ceremony in the fellowship hall given by the parents of the bride.

The reception table, decorated with a lace and embroidered cutwork cloth, was centered with a silver epergne of white snapdragons, yellow mums and gypsophila.

Friends and relatives of the bride assisted throughout the hall greeting and serving guests.

The bridal couple was honored at the Farmville Country Club at a champagne party and dance given by their friends. Conventional and contemporary music was provided by David York of Williamston.

Other nuptial events honoring the bridal couple included a dinner party following the rehearsal given by the bridegroom's parents and his aunt, Mrs. Nicholas Mustian at the Holiday Inn, Greenville.

Guests included the bridal party, out-of-town guests and relatives.

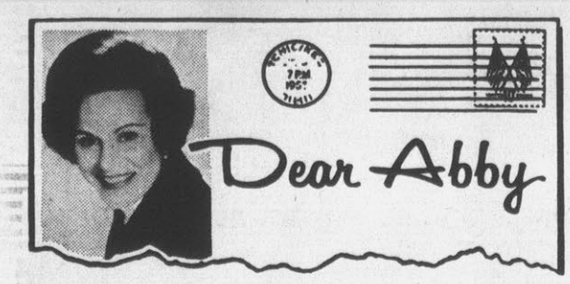
The Greenville Golf and Country Club was the scene of the bridemaids luncheon given by aunts of the bride, Mrs. Roger Beamon, Mrs. Daisy Rogers, Mrs. A.C. Monk Jr., Mrs. Sue Todd Holmes and Mrs. Tommy Lang.

Guests included the attendants, mother of the couple, Mrs. A.C. Monk III, Mrs. Nicholas Mustian, aunt of the bridegroom, Mrs. Garnett Keith and other-of-town guests.

The luncheon table was decorated with an arrangement of fall flowers.

Miss Lang remembered her attendants with gifts of engraved sterling letter openers.

Husband Likes His Selections



By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife has good taste as far as WOMEN'S clothes go, but she doesn't understand the first thing about MEN'S clothes.

I never interfere with her choice of clothing, but she is constantly interfering with mine. If I put on the blue suit, she says, "Why don't you wear the brown one?" And if I put on the brown suit, she says, "Why don't you wear the blue one?"

This really bugs me, and it's now gotten to the point where I will deliberately wear exactly the opposite of what she wants me to just to show her who's boss. But even that doesn't seem to sink in.

How can I get the message across to her that a man has the right to look the way he wants to?

If you print this, it might help. Thanks, pal.

FRED

DEAR FRED: If I print it, it might help HER—not YOU. When she wants you to wear the blue suit, she'll ask you to wear the brown one.

DEAR ABBY: I'm going straight to the point of my problem. What does a married woman do when her husband rapes her—which happened to me?

After my assault, I ran to a neighbor's house and called the police. After they arrived and asked the customary questions, they told me it was impossible for a husband to rape "his" wife! They also told me I must have a screw loose to call the police for such a complaint, but I didn't know what else to do after having been repeatedly raped for hours.

The definition of rape is forcibly having sexual intercourse with a girl or woman without her consent. It says nothing about her being married or single. Now, because of the way the police sided with my husband, he thinks that I am crazy.

First, I want you to know that in the 10 years of our marriage, I have never refused my husband's advances. If anything, he has been the one with the bedtime "headaches." I thoroughly enjoyed our sex life. As a matter of fact, I didn't even understand the complete meaning of sex until I met this man. To me, it was the most beautiful way to express the ultimate in mutual love and understanding.

Now, since this rape, I can't bring myself to feel as I formerly did. However, I'm sticking with him, hoping I'll be able to forgive and forget.

Can you understand my feelings? Or am I really crazy?

GOLD-BANDED RAPEE

DEAR RAPEE: You most certainly are not crazy, and I can understand your feelings. The legal definition of rape is "the illicit carnal knowledge of a woman without her consent." This makes it LEGALLY impossible for a man to rape his wife, but it is still morally wrong for a husband to force himself physically upon his wife. And let's hope that archaic law changes soon.

DEAR ABBY: How can I break my husband of the habit of calling me "Mamma"? And are there other wives who dislike it as much as I do?

I don't mind his referring to me as "Mamma" when he talks to one of the children—for instance, "Go get Mamma."

But when he says to me, "Mamma, will you please hand me the paper?" it irritates me no end!

I am NOT his Mamma. And I do not want him to call me "Mamma." If I had wanted to be his Mamma I would have adopted him, not married him.

Will you please put this in your column? He reads you religiously and maybe it will take effect. Telling him hasn't helped.

NOT "MAMMA"

DEAR NOT: Here's your letter. Now tape it to his bathroom mirror so he can see it every time he shaves.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Environmental Portraits Are Specialty Of Young Widow

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When her husband died in 1970 after a prolonged heart illness 40-year-old Joyce Wilson was left with three children, no life insurance and a photography business.

Friends expected her to sell the business and become a full-time mother. Instead, she called a family conference, enlisted the cooperation of her children in a smooth-running household, and tackled the business by herself.

Today portraits by Joyce Wilson win top awards in photo competitions. And she frequently lectures to fledgling photographers — including those who heard her during a three-week tour in New Zealand this year. She will be lecturing in Oregon in the spring of 1976 and will teach at Winona School of Professional Photography, Winona Lake, Ind., during the summer of 1976.

She attributes much of her success to the wholehearted support of her children, Jerry, 14; Lori, 16, and Leesa, 18. After their father's death she asked them whether they wanted her to hire household help or if they would rather do the chores with her and save the money for recreation. They chose the latter.

"My children have pitched in and helped with all the housework, grocery shopping and laundry," she says. "It has meant that we could afford to take ski trips, eat dinner out occasionally and do other things we all love."

Mrs. Wilson, a slim, attractive blonde, in addition to taking photography courses has drawn upon her art education in seeking new ways to create a portrait.

"I constantly change and modify styles, moods, locations and techniques in my drive to be a photographic innovator," she explains.

In the environmental portraiture in which she specializes, individual subjects or whole family groups are photographed "on location" in attractive parks, roadsides or other spots which provide an appropriate backdrop for the portrait.

"I really had to educate people to the beauty of this type of portrait, but now it's my most popular style," she says. "I photographed one family in all types of outdoor settings, then displayed the portraits. Now customers specifically request that type of portrait."

Mrs. Wilson advises her subjects to wear whatever clothes they find comfortable and flattering.

"This may mean jeans for teen-agers, a long party dress for a young girl or a pants outfit for a woman," she says. "One of my favorite portraits shows a girl in a long, old-fashioned dress in a wheat field."

Family group portraits are another specialty.

"It's not easy to get a great portrait when there are several people in the group — especially if one is a small child," she admits. "But I enjoy the challenge. And it's so rewarding to create a really good portrait of any entire family. Everyone loves the photo — it means so much to them."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've never been really sure what the American Dream was until I read a survey on it the other day.

It seems people between the ages of 14 and 25 feel they will have achieved ultimate bliss when they acquire (in this order):

1. A home of their own.
2. A savings account of at least $5,000 and life insurance totaling at least $50,000.
3. A college education.
4. A new car.
5. An air-conditioned home.
6. Opportunities for travel abroad.
7. A stereo.
8. A Master's degree.
9. A color TV set.
10. A dishwasher.

My personal dream changes daily. There was a time when I envied those who traveled. Now I want to be able to afford staying at home. And the old pressure on a daughter to "marry a doctor" has been amended (due to malpractice insurance and the high cost of dedication). I am now advising my daughter to "marry a game show contestant" — preferably one on "High Rollers" or the "$10,000 Pyramid."

Maybe when you are 14-25, happiness is synonymous with possessions. At my age (whatever that is) it's the little things that constitute the American Dream:

1. A doctor who will see me when I am sick. I never seem to be able to make my illness come out even with my appointment.
2. Someone who doesn't understand a word Henry Kissinger says and will come and sit with me sometimes.
3. A universal spray can that will hold everything from whipped cream and deodorant to starch and hair spray.
4. A recording that has the courtesy to say, "You're welcome" when I say "Thank you."
5. A letter sweater for kids who excel academically.
6. A realistic Christmas savings that you could withdraw from in March if you had to.
7. A septic tank with an original way of telling you it was going bad.
8. A dishwasher — maybe two of them — who didn't slap one another and yell, "I'm telling!"

Competitiveness Is Asset In Her Racing Career

By SANDI LATIMER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Competitiveness is an asset in Rosie Broome's motorcycle racing career.

In five years, this 20-year-old from Columbus has worked her way up from Powderpuff competition to become one of the first female racers in the novice class in Ohio. It hasn't been easy.

"The first time I got on a motorcycle to race, I was thrown off and went to the hospital," she said in an interview.

"I've even been in some races where the guys wouldn't even speak to me," added Miss Broome, a 5-foot-1 brunette with blue eyes.

"They completely ignored me," she said. "They wouldn't tell me where I was in the lineup, so I grabbed the list out of the guy's hand and looked for myself."

Her father, Gene, her older brother, older sister and younger brother have all raced at one time or another.

"I was the last one to start," she said.

She said she had big dreams in the beginning, but has learned to live one day at a time.

She spent her first three years in Powderpuff events.

"There you couldn't pass anyone, and the first off the line won," she said. "I was the first girl in Ohio to pass anyone in that class, and I was told I would be disqualified.

"I told them I thought passing was the object of the game," she added.

She said she had little trouble breaking with the all-male lineup.

"The people at the tracks didn't want the women racing because they thought they'd be hurt," she said.

Last year she made it to the novice class on a 100 cc motorcycle. This year she graduated to a 360 cc.

"I did pretty well in the South, picking up 12 points at Daytona," she said. "I've had some bad luck in Ohio."

She said she became accustomed to the South's dirt tracks, but had difficulty adjusting to the pea gravel at the tracks in the North.

"And the first half of this year I spent learning how to hang onto the larger motorcycle," she said.

A rider needs 40 points to move from novice to junior division on the racing circuit. Her 12 points will carry over next year and help toward her 40 points.

Miss Broome travels to races with her mechanic father in a red-and-white van with red roses along the side. Inside are her two Yamaha 360s, a cooler and a tool box.

She wears powder blue leathers with white lettering and a white helmet, and says she finds most male racers are nice.

"If they're worried about my beating them, then they're not good racers," she said.

"After the initial shock of a woman racer wears off, we get along fine," she added. "I've had no arguments, but heard a few snide remarks.

"Before a race, I'm nervous," she said. "When I get on the track, I don't think of all those racers in front of me, or those behind me. I just concentrate on who is beside me and race him, regardless if we are battling for last place.

"Some men probably wouldn't have hung in there this long," she said about her slow pace in attaining the 40 points needed to move up in the racing circuit.

"It could take 10 years for me to get my 40 points, but all the time I'm learning," she said. "I've fallen down, but that all goes toward learning, and everyone had to do it sometime in his career.

"Most guys quit when they get married and can't afford it any more, or if they get busted up pretty bad," she said. "That's probably how I'll have to quit."

Ballroom Dancing Is Returning

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Dancing to rock music is getting a twirl for its money from folks trying the waltz again.

Dance school managers in this area say people of all ages are returning to ballroom dancing but the greatest increase is among students in their late teens and early 20s.

At Yale about 30 students have added fox trot lessons to their curriculums. The weekly classes are taught by two students, Rosanne Pollack and Leonard Sperling.

"I think that people are tired of inventing their own things and jumping around and shaking their bodies all over the place," says Miss Pollack.

"Ballroom dancing offers some structure, but yet you can improvise on your own. And it gives you a chance to dance with your partner."

Dancing cheek-to-cheek, instead of across the room from each other, has achieved a degree of popularity at the University of Connecticut where a ballroom dancing club was organized last year by chemical engineering professor Richard Stephenson and a professional dance instructor friend.

One dance school manager says some people find the singles ballroom a better place to meet than a singles bar room. That, plus the nostalgia kick and tough economic times contribute to growing popularity of ballroom hoofing, the manager says.

The manager says older couples whose blue-chip stocks have dipped 10 points are getting in on the act. "They are looking for diversions and they are going back to things they used to do for fun."

Another dance man says there's an increasing demand for lessons in Latin steps. "There are more cruises, believe it or not, even though the cruise ships are supposed to be dying."

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

Homecoming festivities were a great success this week at Rose High School. The assembly and game against rival Rocky Mount brought an exciting end to more than two weeks of preparation.

The theme for the Homecoming was the "Spirit of 76" which was well represented in the float competition.

The senior class, the past, had a likeness of the crossing of the Delaware. Jaws, the new hit novel and movie, was the theme of the sophomores and their present-minded float. Finishing were the juniors, the future, and a likeness of the space age.

Also competing with the class floats were two well-made creations by the Art Club and the French Club.

The assembly hosted a number of alumni, back to visit their old alma mater. A welcome was given by Student Government Association president, Clay Shugart. Football players and their sponsors were introduced followed by a skit performed by the Homecoming skit committee.

Introductions of the princesses, Homecoming Court, and Mr. and Ms. School Spirit were then made.

Inky Dawson and Cathy Leggett were the sophomore princesses and Junior princesses were Kitsey Bailey and Sonya Smith.

The Homecoming Court consists of Felice Streeter, Regina Girdharry, Cathy Bell, Shirley Murphy and Gwen Maye.

Ann Williams, Pat Inman, Melinda Haynie, Donna Goodson, and Janet Boone were also members of the Court.

The queens were announced at the assembly Friday afternoon including Janet Boone and Regina Girdharry.

Joe Godette and Jackie Ferebee were Mr. and Ms. School Spirit, while Harry Pair and Lorraine Rayford also received the honor.

The varsity cheerleaders were joined by some members of the junior varsity squad at the game that night. Sharon Moore, Donna Tripp, Connie Brantley, Pat Paschal, Tori Clement, and Gina Whichard cheered in the place of some regular squad members, who sponsored football players or were members of the Homecoming court.

Following the game was a dance, held by the Student Government, and a refreshment party for the players was given by the Booster Club.

Methodist Women Set Christmas Tour Of Homes

The United Methodist Women of Jarvis Memorial Church will hold their second Christmas Tour of Homes in December of 1976, it was announced today by Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, UMW president.

Mrs. Jasper Lewis Jr. and Mrs. Dan Warren have been named co-chairmen for the four of homes.

The event will include both daytime and candlelight tours, as well as a Christmas Tree House, featuring handcrafted Christmas decorations and gifts, and a Sugar Plum House, where home bake specialties, jams and other condiments will be available.

Homes will be announced at a later date.

The women of Jarvis held their first homes tour in December, 1973.

SAFE WARM UPS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Warming up your car engine in an enclosed area such as a garage is an invitation to disaster.

The consumer education department of Cornell University cites the case of a New Jersey family, several of whose members were killed by carbon monoxide escaping into their house from an attached garage. The father apparently had left his car to warm up while he shaved.

In fact, the improved viscosity of oils and lubricants has eliminated the necessity for engine warming, the department said. It recommends for any weather or season simply starting the car and driving off slowly, without revving or idling.

Irish Americans Dream Of 'Home'

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

CLOONLARA, County Mayo, Eire (AP) — "And maybe someday i'll go back to Ireland, be it only at the closing of my day ..."

Many's the night Tom Glynn heard the words to that song drifting out of the Irish bars around New York's Penn Station, and every St. Patrick's day the bands boomed it up the canyon of skyscrapers to remind him of the pledge he made to his mother. He promised her he'd return someday to County Mayo and take over the land.

Now 62 and retired after 31 years as a Long Island Railroad cop, Tom Glynn like thousands of other Irish-American pensioners has come back to the Ireland of his dreams. He sits beside a turf fire in the evening in the house that his father built on land that has been in the family for 200 years listening to the ticking of an heirloom clock on the white-washed wall.

The windows have lace curtains, the Glynn coat-of-arms is mounted in the hallway, and his billy stick, the proud emblem of his years in America, hangs by the fire. A blackened kettle hisses on the hob. To be sure, the cottage has a horse-shoe over the door, as another Irish ballad ordains, only now there is an American Flag struck through it. No telephone. No TV. But things are not as rustic as they seem. There's an electric heater in every room, a refrigerator in the corner of the kitchen, and all the latest cooking appliances.

"The electricity makes it bearable," Glynn confesses apologetically.

He turns his gaze to the fire and sorts out his reasons for coming back.

"Burglars, muggers, vandals, lawyers and judges, nights riding the trains and mornings in criminal court," the ex-cop, greying but still trim and handsome, reminisces. "It was an exciting life. But this is what I came home to find: sanity and silence. It was sentiment with me. I had to come back.

"I was 17 when I left," Glynn said, looking out at his lush rose bushes and "my supermarket," a newly planted vegetable garden in the old potato patch. "There was no living here then. My father tried to raise five kids here on 30 acres. Some of us had to go."

His passage through America, like many an immigrant returning now to live off a government pension, might have been plotted by Steinbeck or written up as a case history by some social workers.

Landing in Chicago at the height of the Depression wity only his size and strength to recommend him, Glynn hit the "steel mills, stockyards and iron foundries, whatever was going," then turned to boxing.

At the outbreak of World War II, Glynn landed a job as a policeman with the Long Island Railroad. He liked it well enough to remain 31 years, with time out overseas as an infantryman with the 36th Texas Division. "Anzio, Salerno, Monte Casino," he ticked off the tough ones, "then we marched into Rome and got kissed."

From a tenement on Columbus Avenue, he trod the immigrant path of upward social mobility to a semi-detached in Williston Park, Queens, a suburban split level at Glen Cove in Nassau country, a son at Colgate, another at Boston University, then, following a growing trend among American cops, firemen and other civil servants, home to the ancestral acres.

"It's a funny thing," Glynn laughed, "around here I'm known as the big Yank. All the time I was in America, I was known as the big donkey."

A stranger on both sides of the ocean, Tom Glynn's identity enigma points up the pathos and predicament of Ireland's wild geese flying home to roost. For more than a century after the potato famine of the 1840s, people were Ireland's chief export. Now, as the growing retirement colony attests, these tragic balance-of-trade figures are beginning to go the other way.

Each month the U.S. embassy in Dublin mails out more than 7,000 Social Security, Veterans Administration and Railroad Retirement Board checks. New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities with large Irish-American populations similarly mail off checks to thousands of retired municipal employes who have returned to the land of their ancestors to finish their days.

Ireland is by no means unique as a retirement haven. Italy and Greece, with larger populations and similar contributions to the American melting pot, receive far more federal benefit checks. in Rome, the monthly Social Security glut is so great the processing of checks has been farmed out by the embassy to a commercial bank.

The Irish, like the others, return for complex reasons: to stretch their retirement dollars in a less affluent society, to escape the crime, pollution, racial tensions and get-ahead pressures of urban America, to rediscover their youth and reap the nostalgia of long years of yearning.

"The sad thing is that many find Ireland has changed with the years and they have changed even more," lamented Father Michael Geaney, a curate in Dalkey, a seaside suburb of Dublin that attracts pensioners because of its proximity to the countryside. "They find a new kind of violence. O'Connell Street is blocked off for a bomb scare or the airport ringed with soldiers for a security check. Some give up because of the weather, and the lack of central heating. The summers are fine, but winter proves how American they've become."

Only one house in 10 in Ireland has central heating, but other things have moved more rapidly with the times. The parish priest now has long hair, the nuns drive station wagons. The little thatched house by the side of the road trembles when the huge trailer trucks pound by. The pub has television and jukebox, instead of a sing-song around the fire at night or conversation exploding with wit and imagination. Burglary and house breaking are on the increase, to support the rebel cause up north, and in border areas people venture out cautiously on the roads at night for fear of being hijacked or forced to deliver a "proxy" bomb into Ulster.

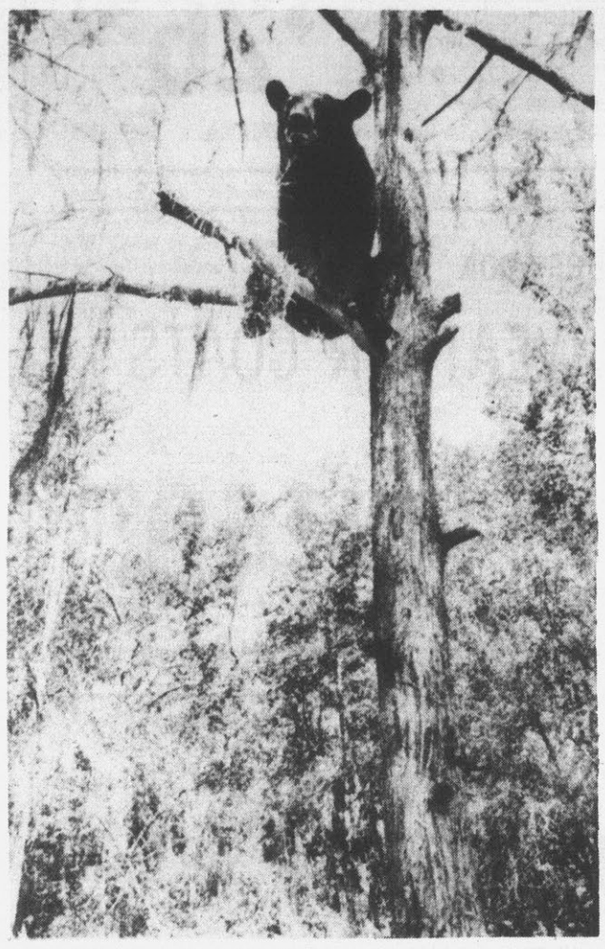
The crock of gold that the fairies promised at the end of the rainbow would come in handy at today's prices in Ireland. Last year, inflation was the highest in Europe after Iceland and Turkey, but in recent months it has dipped below Britain's 26 per cent rate. Potato prices have risen 138.5 per cent during the year, making almost a luxury item of what once was the staple of the peasantry.

As a U.S. embassy economist points out: "The economic advantage of coming back to Ireland is rapidly disappearing."

The sentimental attractions can also prove illusory.

In America, they sought the consolation and comradeship of Irish bars, gaelic football clubs, the dances run by the Hibernian Society and various country organizations like the Moymen and the Sons of Galway.

Back in Ireland, they seek out the company of other ex-Yanks, often miles and counties away, and band together in veterans' organizations and clubs like the Irish-American Society in Charlestown, County Mayo, which draws 31 members to its monthly meetings.



"BEARLY" HANGING ON—A Black bear at the Tallahasee (Fla.) Junior Museum finds a precarious perch in a tall pine tree and enjoys the afternoon sun as he looks down on spectators. The attraction features natural surroundings for animal and bird life. (AP Wirephoto)

Plant Engineer Less Affected

CHICAGO (UPI) — Plant engineers often face an increased work load during hard times when production lulls provide the time to complete maintenance and other projects, says Plant Engineering Magazine.

The plant engineering workforce is less affected during economic recessions than any other industrial manpower segment, the magazine says. "The plant engineer who plies his profession in a hospital, government facility or other nonindustrial installation has the same thing going for him," it adds.

Books-By-Phone Program Helps

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Rural residents in a three-county area in Missouri can get needed information from two traveling "bookmobiles" equipped with mobile telephones and telecopying machines linked to the main public library here.

The "books-by-phone" program provides rural library patrons with copies of materials transmitted over the local mobile radio-telephone to the telecopier in the traveling van.

TV SHOWTIME

For The Week Of October 12-18, 1975

The World Series

Throughout the years that the NBC Television Network has provided exclusive, live coverage of Major League Baseball's World Series - 1975 marks the 29th consecutive occurrence, each and every autumn that the Fall Classic has been on television - one constant has remained - the Director, Harry Coyle.

Startling advances have been made in the electronic sports journalism of television. In 1947, when NBC-TV telecast its first World Series, the network receiving the games consisted of just four stations - in New York City, Washington, Philadelphia and Schenectady, N.Y. Three black - and - white cameras were employed for coverage of that year's Series, in which the New York Yankees downed the Brooklyn Dodgers four games to three. And instant replay? There was no such thing.

In 1947 there were only 150,000 television sets capable of receiving the NBC signals. Contrast with that the fact that this year there are just slightly under 70,000,000 TV homes in the United States, all of which are within the coverage area of NBC's television network of 220 stations.

The NBC Sports production team stands geared to capture this year's World Series action for a total audience that will exceed 100,000,000 persons. The Fall Classic will also be beamed over the NBC Radio Network throughout the United States, as well as being beamed to American Forces Radio and Television Service (AFRTS) affiliates the world over.

Nine "hard" color cameras and one-hand-held "mini-camera" will be employed to record the on-field action for the millions of viewers in front of television sets around the country. And selecting the camera shots the armchair fans will see is that previously mentioned constant, Harry Coyle, who has been a party to each World Series covered by NBC-TV - 29 years of being in the director's chair at World Series time.

In addition to its 10-camera complement, NBC Sports will also be utilizing three slow motion machines, a pair of video - tape recorders, one vidifront machine and a slide projector to enchance the coverage, to show exciting and crucial plays from various angles, to superimpose player statistics and significant records at appropriate points in the action.

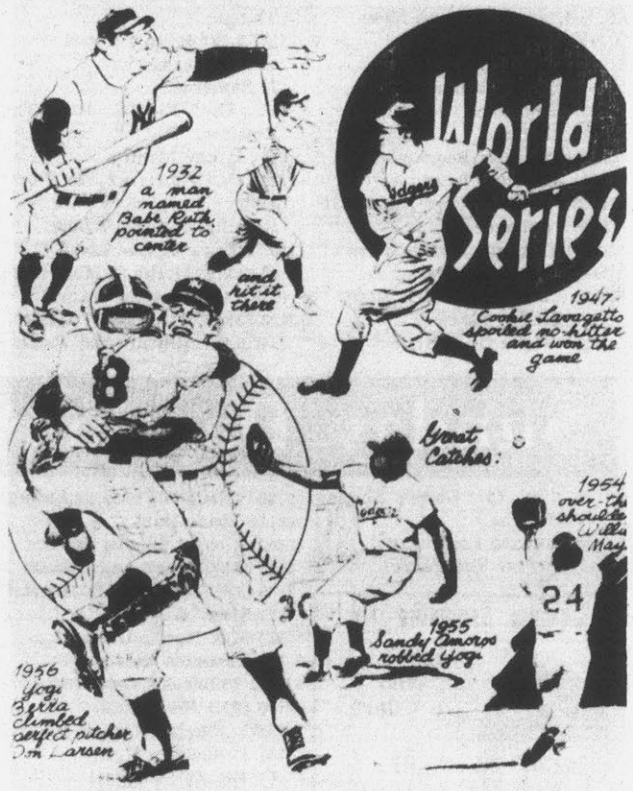
An added feature for 1975 will be an Announcer's Camera, so designated from among the ten on hand and used exclusively to follow the objects of commentary in the broadcast booth without direction from the control trunk. This innovation will provide the viewer with an instantaneous liasion between what the commentator says and the picture he (the viewer) will see on his television set.

NBC-TV will again be presenting prime - time coverage of the World Series' mid-week games from the home city of the National League champion. This year's Classic begins in the park of the American League titlist Saturday, Oct. 11, where it continues the next day. If necessary, Games Six and Seven will also be in the Junior Circuit town Oct. 18-19.

The third, fourth and (if necessary) fifth games, all scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 14-16, following special World Series editions of the award - winning "Baseball World of Joe Garagiola" (to be seen preceding the weekend contests, as well), are expected to be viewed by more than 50,000,000 persons each evening. NBC's prime - time telecasts of the World Series - broadcasts which began in 1971 - rank among the most widely watched evening sports events of all time.

Curt Gowdy, Joe Garagiola and Tony Kubek, along with a designated announcer representatives from each of the two league champions, will describe the action for both the NBC Television and Radio Networks.

All told, the 1975 World Series - as so many Fall Classics have done before - will provide memorable moments and baseball thrills to a worldwide audience, most of which will receive its verbal or video picture through NBC transmissions.



WORLD SERIES HEROES...Over the years, the World Series has had many memorable moments a few of which are depicted here. The NBC Network will televise the World Series for the 29th consecutive year in 1975. Regular programming will be pre-empted to provide live coverage of all the World Series Games.

The Lady's Quite A Gal

SUPERSTARS — Country music superstars Loretta Lynn and Conway Twitty will be featured performers on the ninth annual Country Music Association Awards special presentation, honoring outstanding achievements in the country-music field, to be broadcast live from Nashville's Opryland Monday, Oct. 13 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

"The first time I went out on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry, I was told that I should wear high-heeled boots like all the rest. I told them that I would wear what I had on. You see, high heels were viewed with suspicion in Butcher Hollow, Ky., where I grew up. I was one of eight children of a coal miner. Seems like yesterday that I was goin' to school— I didn't get past the eighth grade— at the one-room school house a mile and a half from home at 6 a.m."

Thus speaketh country-western music star Loretta Lynn, who — with Conway Twitty— will be featured performer on the ninth annual Country Music Association Awards.

Co-hosting for the special, to be broadcast live from Nashville on Monday, Oct. 13, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11., are Glen Campbell and Charlie Pride.

Loretta was 13 when she married Mooney Lynn and left Butcher Hollow.

"My first of six babies was born when I was 14, and I because a grandmother when I was 28. Mooney and I were living in Washington state at the time and we used to get along by me washing other people's clothes and picking strawberries with the migrant workers."

Diminutive (she's only 5 foot, 2 inches tall) Loretta has sold thousands of records and numerous honors have been bestowed on her. She and her husband preside over a little empire which includes three music publishing companies; the Loretta Lynn Western Stores; a talent agency and other ventures under the umbrella of Loretta Lynn Enterprises, not to mention the $100,000 bus that carries the seven-man, one-woman team that travels with her.

Loretta is a unique creation. A few years ago she was invited to an official dinner at the White House, and she practically broke the place up when she referred to former President Nixon as Richard.

"I meant no disrespect. I just felt like I knew him. Like recently there was this doctor, a real educated man, who told me that if I ever had my picture taken with Charlie Pride, he'd drop out of my fan club. I did, and he did!"

Let's Travel With Flip

Flip Wilson and company will bring to television one of the most unusual and entertaining specials ever presented on the small screen Monday, Oct. 13, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11. Titled "Travels With Flip", the hour-long entertainment special promises to be a panoramic look at America and a cinema-style showcase for Flip's uncanny ability to deal with people on a one-to-one basis.

"Travels With Flip" follows the comedian to unique corners of America, places him in real situations and lets the comedy and theatrics fall where they may. In Los Angeles, Flip spars with the World's Heavyweight Champion, Muhammed Ali. In the historic town of Boley, Oklahoma (the nation's first all-black city), Flip rides the rodeo and talks with the city's residents. In Hawaii, Flip samples an authentic luau. In Atlantic, Georgia, Flip learns baseball from the Braves. In San Francisco, he conducts a cable car . . . and throughout all the adventures, the cameras capture Flip spontaneously dealing with new situations and unconventional people.

The producer of the show, Lee Mendelson, admits this kind of entertainment-documentary has been a long term dream for him. "I've thought about this sort of format for years. But very few people can handle it. There is a feeling of total spontaneity, of coping with things as they happen. It takes someone of Flip's rare talent to do that."

Flip himself considers the special one of the most significant shows he's ever done. "I loved it," he says frankly. "It let me do what I like to do best - meet people and talk with them. The way I figure it, my fans are my friends, so I was just introducing one group of my friends to another group."

Actress Has New Career

Mary Stuart has been communicating with television audiences for more than 23 years through the warm, likable character of Joanne Tate in "Search for Tomorrow," daytime serial on CBS-TV. And these days she's found a new way of communicating, and is spinning a new career for herself—as a recording artist.

The name of Mary Stuart may be new to the record departments in stores throughout the country, but to the very large audience (millions) of daytime television viewers, she's been a familiar name and 'friend' since the series began on Sept. 3, 1951. The drama is seen weekdays at 12:30 to 1 p.m.

One might think that after 23 years it would be time to relax and retreat to a comfortable home in the country on weekends. Not Mary Stuart! Singing and songwriting have been part of her life for a long time. Since her first record album "Mary Stuart", was released two years ago, she's been traveling throughout the country, meeting many of the people who have 'known' her for years as televisions Joanne.

"I've been performing before cameras for television audience—and before that movie audiences—for a long time," said Miss Stuart, "and now there's another exhilarating and rewarding experience in performing before a live audience at a concert with my music."

A good part of it is indeed her music. Many of the selections in her concerts, as well as in the album, are her own compositions. Other musical pieces she sings in concert, backed by six New York studio musicians, are by such contemporary artists as Michel Legrand (she wrote the lyrics for his "Everybody Knows"), Kenny Rankin, Don McLean, Paul Williams, Roger Nichols and John Denver.

The concert scene, Miss Stuart feels, is a two-way street. "The audience is there to be entertained," she said. "Hopefully, I do that. But, more importantly, I look at the concert as being a place where people of all ages gather to exchange ideas and to share something. I've lived long enough to have something to say (she's just in her 40s) and who's ever too old to learn?"

She paused for a moment, smiled and added, "Besides, I'm truly having fun with it."

Joe Combines

"The Baseball World of Joe Garagiola," the only sports show ever to have one the prestigious George Foster Peabody Award, will blend whimsy and the trend of action on the field preceding each World Series game on NBC-TV.

The whimsical touch, a Garagiola trademark, will be the crowning of the 1975 bubble-gum-blowing champion of the major leagues. Preliminary competition this season has been contested at the team level for the last few weeks in an effort to uncover the bubble blower capable of out-puffing the current champion, the Los Angeles Dodgers' Andy Messersmith.

James Caan Relates To Role

UNUSUAL LOVE STORY — Marsha Mason introduces James Caan to the pain of involvement and the joy of commitment in "Cinderella Liberty," an unusual love story on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sunday Oct. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

James Caan, who has brawled his way through more than a few super - macho movies, talks about tenderness when he talks about his character in "Cinderella Liberty," the unusual love story making its television debut on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Oct. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Caan plays First Class Boatswain's Mate John Baggs, Jr., a sailor since the age of 17, but a sailor far removed from the stereotyped image: "Baggs is a really straight, pure person," Caan says. "I don't know if people are going to accept that. People can misconstrue that straightness and honesty for weakness, but I think he's the strongest guy of all time.

"He's the kind of guy who won't ever give up. He meets this girl who is a barroom pool hustler. He likes her and wants her to quit, and even when he finds her with another man - who gets thrown out quick - he still comes back to her. She has a kid who's really hostile. Baggs offers friendship and gets insults, but he keeps trying and the kid opens up. When he finds the girl is already pregnant he blows up - but he goes back.

"The girl and her son rely on him for guidance, for discipline, for love - and that gives him a terrible feeling of strength and responsibility. When someone asks him why, he says, 'Because it makes me feel good. It makes me feel terrible . . . but it makes me feel good.'"

Caan remembers being raised in a neighborhood where, to prove manhood, "you had to eat your 23 wildcats and go with as many women as you could. That whole image of masculinity has become part of our society, and it was certainly part of me.

Dobson Followed Impulse

At twelve to ten in the morning a ruggedly handsome guy, wearing a striped sport shirt and a look of desperation, jumped out of a cab outside a phone booth in New Jersey and called his wife.

"I'm going, Susan, Leaving. Get me a reservation on the next flight to L.A."

Does this sound like the opening scene of a TV detective show? You're almost right. Almost, that is. Actually, it's a true-to-life scene and it was 'portrayed' seven years ago by Kevin Dobson, who, today, is Detective Crocker on "Kojak" (Sundays, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N,9-11)

Leading up to this 'scene,' Dobson had been actively pursuing a theatrical career in New York where he was a member of the Neighborhood Playhouse, studying under the direction of Sandy Meisner. He sustained himself by working as a taxi driver, waiter and bartender. Subsequently, he won roles in films being filmed in and around the city - "Love Story," "Klute," "The Anderson Tapes" and "Carnal Knowledge."

Finally, he gave in to the 'yen' for bigger-and-better-things and followed an impulse. Hence, the phone call and his hasty flight to the west coast.

Lean times set in until he got his first big break, a feature role in a "Mod Squad" segment. While waiting for his next role, he worked as a fireman for the Santa Fe Railroad. Prior to being selected to portray Detective Crocker in "Kojak", he understudied Jon Voight in the Los Angeles stage production of "Streetcar Named Desire."

During his leisure time, Dobson either watches or participates in one his favorite sports - especially baseball. While attending high school in Jackson Heights, N.Y., he was offered professional baseball contract with the San Francisco Giants. He passed it up, however, to fulfill his military obligation in the U.S. Army.

He, his wife, Susan and their 10-month-old daughter, Mariah Shannon, live in Studio City, Calif.

PEOPLE'S CHOICE

CBS-TV will air "The People's Choice Awards" for the second straight year as a two-hour prime - time special in February.

The awards will encompass the TV, motion picture and musical fields with the sports area, which was one of the categories last year, being dropped from the categories.

This should be the keynote in decorating children's rooms. Youth is a time of fun and games and juvenile decoration should reflect it. Children love bright colors and plenty of whimsey. They have not yet been conditioned to status with all its overtones of the safe, conventional approach to room design. So let yourself go when it comes to planning the children's world. In the process you will find that the youngsters have decided ideas of their own which can serve as a springboard.

Boley's Favorite Son—Flip Wilson

The Chief of Police of the little town of Boley, Okla., also served as Grand Marshal of this year's gala rodeo and parade. He rode into town at the head of the parade, resplendent in white buckskin with red rhinestones and embroidered roses, a rhinestone holster and, of course, a white hat.

But, what's this? The Chief of Police of this sleepy western town is riding his horse backwards! Maintaining a temporary, uneasy truce with his horse, comedian Flip Wilson completed his ex-officio parade duties, which will be seen in "Travels With Flip," comedy special to be presented Monday, Oct. 13, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

In this, the first of a series of specials starring Wilson to be presented this season, the popular entertainer also travels to San Francisco, Atlanta, Hawaii, Nashville and Los Angeles, and visits country music star Loretta Lynn and meets heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali in the ring.

At the end of the Boley parade route, a relieved Wilson dismounted and looked his horse in the eye. "Here," he bellowed, "I'll make a deal with you: I never rode you and you never rode me," diplomatically resolving the question of who had been in charge.

Wilson's involvement with the town of Boley goes back 12 years, when the struggling young comedian discovered in a New York bookstore an old poster for "The Crimson Skull," the first all-black motion picture filmed in the all-black town of Boley.

"With its slogan, 'Four Smashing Wheels of Entertainment,'" Wilson explains, "I had to have it. It has since been one of my favorite possessions, but I didn't know anything about Boley beyond the poster."

Country Music Is Riding High

Kris Kristofferson, a Rhodes scholar and one of country music's chief contemporary songwriters and singers, remembers his family's reaction when he told them he was determined to write country songs for a living.

"Nobody who's over 14 years old listens to that kind of music," said his father. "And if they did, they wouldn't be anyone we'd want to know."

The elder Kristofferson's sentiments pretty much summed up the feeling for country music once shared by a goodly number of the population. No longer. Country music, which started spreading during the Depression, came out of the hinterlands some eight years ago and rose steadily to the top of the charts. Its appeal will be very much in evidence on Monday, Oct. 13, 10 to 11 p.m., when the ninth annual Country Music Association Awards ceremonies are broadcast live on CBS Channel 9-11.

One of country music's chief proponents is a native-born New Yorker named Joseph Cates who, for the past five years, has produced the awards presentations. As one who, he says, knew nothing about 'country' before being handed the job of putting together his first awards program, Cates, today, is a staunch supporter of the one-time porch strumming milieu.

"I learned about country by going out and doing some homework," he says. Now with 11 country oriented shows to his credit, Cates talks knowingly on the subject.

"It's the closest thing to the pop music of long ago that we have," he says. "The melodies are simple, even repetitive. And the lyrics tell a story. That's something we've been away from for a long time - a complete story."

Yet, Cates is the first to admit that country music still gives some of the populace shivers - not the music as much as the musicians. There are all those 1940s-style pompadour hairdos, and enough sequins to make Lierace look like a cloistered monk. Bosh, says Joe. "Walk down Fifth Avenue and you'll see funnier clothes than that - and on funnier looking people." And don't dare use the term "hillbilly" in front of Cates. "These country people are wonderfully courteous people. 'Hillbilly' — that can be taken as a sign of not being very sharp, not hip. But these are very bright people. Some have built giant careers for themselves. Enormous financial empires. There's nothing 'hillbilly' about that. That's pure, smart 'country!'"

Or, as one country lady put it, with a toss of her mink stole: "Hillbilly becomes country when you can wear one of these."

Popularity Will Last

She walked into the press room with that flair so reminiscent of Phyllis, sat down, took a deep breath, looked around and laughingly asked, "O-kay, is it over?"

Not exactly the 'normal' way to start an interview.

And yet, come to think about it, Cloris Leachman, star of the new hit comedy series, "Phyllis" (seen Mondays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11), is anything BUT the normal, run-of-the-mill gal. Like Phyllis, she's zany, witty, and a little on the vague side. Ask her a question. Maybe, just maybe - she'll give you a straightforward answer. Usually not. What she will give you is a rambling, delightfully amusing dissertation on any number of widely varying subjects.

On the other hand, however, Cloris, the actress - a serious and dedicated one at that - 'surfaces' from time to time with valid opinions about the series and the direction in which her career is heading.

In the span of a few years, she's zoomed into prominence in feature films, TV movies and guest shots. Now, she's tying herself down to a series. Why?

"Because It's a good time to 'focus'," she responded. "I think it's good now to fill out something more fully, and I am overjoyed to have such a happy company (The MTM Production Co.) with which to work. They're all creative and they're still learning.

How does she feel about having Dick Schaal, the real-life husband of Valerie Harper ("Rhoda") in her series?

"I'm overjoyed!" she exclaimed. "He is so talented, so skilled. You know, I feel that 'Gable's back and Garson's got him!' It's one of those things. I'm the lucky one. He's such a good actor. He, Valerie and I work together with a stage group in Los Angeles."

Will there be many changes in Phyllis from the way she was on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show"? Will she be a much more practical gal?

"Well . . . I think that if one doesn't have a husband anymore . . . or any means of income . . . one tends to become practical quick. Right quick!

Does she think the series' popularity will last?

"You know - the people at the head of CBS - they're 'crafty'. They said, 'Well, why don't you give us six (segments).' Then they said they'd take 13. But," she concluded with a Phyllis-type laugh, "They know it's going to go for at least 10 years!"

Thus ends an interview with Phyl . . .er, excuse me, Cloris Leachman.

Time Has Way Of Marching On

'Youth springs eternal,' so the saying goes, but it doesn't last forever. Case - in - point: Richie Cunningham, the whimsical, sensitive highschool senior who's captured the hearts of fans - young and old - through his weekly experiences on "Happy Days" (Tuesdays, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.)

He's still the warm, affectionate son all parents would love to call theirs, and he's the 'big brother' little girls would adore to have, but . . . he's getting taller, a little heavier, and the time's a 'coming when he won't really look like a teen ager. What about Richie then?

"Well, last year he was a junior. This year a senior," Ron Howard, the actor who portrays Richie, responded. "Next year, if we're 'picked up' by the network, I suppose he'll go to college."

The 'aging process' matters not, however, to "Happy Days." It is one of the most popular TV shows and unique in that so many viewers' relate' to its characters and the lives they lead. Those 'over-the-hill' think back to the time in their life when . . . teen agers compare themselves to Richie, Fonzie and the rest of the gang . . . teeny-boppers dream their dreams.

America's not the only country that's "Happy Days" crazy. Ron and his bride of four months recently returned from a trip to Australia. He was astounded at the popularity of the show in the 'down-under country.'

"It's a big smash!" he exclaimed. "It really surprised me. Everything down there is syndicated. It shows 5 times a week and it's now on its sixth run."

SUSPECTS? — After having been locked in accidentally in Arnie's Drive-In, Richie Cunningham (Ron Howard, left), Ralph Malph (Donny Most) and Potsi (Anson Williams, right), are arrested on two charges - for defying a new curfew statute and for breaking and entering by Officer Kirk, (Ed Peck) in civilian clothes, in "Jailhouse Rock," on "Happy Days," Tuesday, Oct. 14 (8-8:30 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

Moving Time Is Here

"Beacon Hill" will be seen on Wednesdays and "Kate McShane" on Tuesdays as the dramatic series exchange time periods on Oct. 21 and 22 (10 to 11 p.m.) on CBS Channel 9-11.

"Beacon Hill," the critically acclaimed drama depicting the intertwined lives of a rich, influential Boston family and its staff of servants, will switch from Tuesday to Wednesday (10 to 11 p.m.) on Oct. 22.

"Kate McShane," starring Anne Meara of the popular comedy team of Stiller & Meara, will take over the Tuesday (10 to 11 p.m.) time period on Oct. 21.

Many Believe In The Occult

Recent studies have shown that more than 50 percent of the American public believe in some form of the occult. Popular daytime TV stars are no exception, either. In fact, they not only believe, but several have had some really startling experiences.

Take popular daytime hostess Dinah Shore, for instance ("Dinah!"). At age 14, she was in a classroom when she was seized with a desperate compulsion to rush home.

"I knew my mother was deathly ill - and I told my teacher I had to leave. The teacher said 'Don't be silly. . .get back to your seat.' Finally she let me call home," she said. "I could tell by our maid's voice that something was terribly wrong. She said yes, my Mother was sick. I dropped the phone and ran the whole 15 blocks home."

Dinah's mother, who had been perfectly healthy that morning, died of a heart attack moments after Dinah arrived.

Macdonald Carey (Dr. Tom Horton on "Days of Our Lives") says: "Fantasies and dreams are very important to me. ESP has been guiding me since I was 14. My mother tuned me into it and I've been using it ever since. But my father always told me fairy stories as a child and they have influenced me most. I firmly believe the key to the occult power lies in mythology. Folklore is loaded with mystical phenomena."

Lois Kibbee (Geraldine Whitney on "The Edge of Night") says her family is given to precognition-not premonition-knowing ahead of time that something will happen, not just getting a feeling it will.

One evening while she was unemployed, Lois was sitting in her apartment reading a book when she had a vision of herself at the desk signing a contract. She thought it odd, because contracts are never signed at home.

The next week, she got a part in a show and the agent sent her the contracts through the mail. There she was, just like in her vision, signing the contracts at her own desk.

"Sometimes I know who's on the telephone before I pick it up - and I've had no previous indication that the person will call. To me," says Lois, "the occult is like electricity. I don't understand a thing about it, but I believe it exists.

Tank Versus Plane In "Death Race"

Two American pilots in a damaged plane that cannot fly but can taxi along the ground are pursued by a German tank and its crew across desert wastes in North Africa in "Death Race," the "CBS Late Movie," "Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3-7. The action in the film takes place after the World War II battle of El Alemein with German Marshal Rommel's troops in retreat.

Lloyd Bridges stars as a German General commanding the tank, with Doug McClure and Roy Thinnes starring as the two Americans who become his prey. Also starring is Eric Breaden as the tank sergeant.

Fighter pilots Del Culpepper (McClure) and Arnold McMillan (Thinnes) are on a mission to destroy a German mine field during the British 8th Army's victorious advance after the battle of El Alamein. McMillan is shot down, and in a rescue attempt, Culpepper's P-40 aircraft is damaged by a lurking German tank, the lone survivor of a shattered Panzer brigade.

The plane cannot take off, but it is able to taxi along the ground. Hopes of rescue become nil when McMillan and Culpepper find themselves relentlessly stalked by the tank. The tank commander is the fanatical Gen. Beimler, who has become obsessed with the destruction of the plane and the pilots, putting him in conflict with Sergeant Stoeffer and the rest of the tank crew.

The unusual situation creates a deadly tortoise and hare battle of tank versus airplane—the desert war in microcosm.

William Conrad: Actor, Sportsman

Of all the honors to come his way - quite a few in his eclectic acting-directing-producing career - none pleases William Conrad more than one he acquired through a very personal educational interest of Catalina Island.

Conrad, the star of the long-running "Cannon" private-detective series broadcast Wesnesdays, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV and Channel 9-11, proudly serves on the Board of Trustees of Catalina Island School, a unique preparatory school. His son Chris has been graduated from that seat of budding marine biologists.

Just last year, Conrad was named the most popular American television performer in three European countries - Germany, Spain and Finland. And he's the possessor of such non-professional distinctions as being named honorary mayor of his hometown (Sherman Oaks, Calif.) He is also the world record holder for a six-pound test line sailfish catch (51 and ¼ pounds) and a member of the exclusive wine and food society, Confrerie des Chevaliers du Tastevin, founded in France in 1934.

But none of that is as close to Conrad's heart as his connection with Catalina Island School, one of the few prep schools in the nation to offer a practical field course in marine biology.

"I love that school," he says. "It's a wonderful educational experience for a lot of young people."

Moreover, Conrad has expressed his feelings for CIS in a number of beneficial ways. He funded a documentary film used to promote campus expansion; provided his yacht, a 47-foot ketch, for instructional purposes in a seamanship class; and turned over, for the use of underclassmen, a fishing boat he had purchased for his son, Chris.

Innovative educational concepts have become a trademark of Conrad's three-year reign on the school's Board of Trustees, particularly under the leadership of Headmaster Richard Wheeler.

A recently introduced experiment, described as a "school within a school," invited participation of 10 other privately endowed schools to monitor Catalina Island classes in a variety of subjects, from marine biology to Catalina geology.

Starsky And "Glaser"

Paul Michael Glaser is an energetic, gregarious young man who knows how to live "in the moment," approaching work and play with a high level of consciousness and enjoying himself most of the time.

He roars around on a big motorcycle "when I am not feeling reckless."

He plays a hard game of tennis "when I feel good and am not hung up on winning, which is when I usually win."

He is devoted to his mixed-breed Husky "Max," still a shoe-chewing pup, "because he's an honest-to-God living creature who doesn't know how not to give and receive love."

He sticks to a nutritious diet "because my life and this body are gifts, and the least I can do is take care of them."

"I wasn't always like this," Paul freely admits. "There was a time, not so long ago, when my head was messed up and I didn't want to do anything. But that was then and now is now."

One of the things that's happening "now" to the Cambridge, Massachusetts - born actor is that he's playing 'Starsky' in ABC-TV's unusual new police series "Starsky and Hutch," which follows the far-out adventures of two hip, tough, witty undercover police officers who manage to keep their sense of humor in life-and-death situations. The series airs Wednesdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 3-5-12.

Glaser, who earned Masters degrees at two universities, Tulane and Boston, is amused and amazed by Starsky.

"Dave Starsky is incredible!," exclaims Paul. "He's from a background quite different from mine and he's a food freak. He likes chili, donuts, pizza, and anything from a delicatessen, but he moves like an athlete and never has indigestion."

How will he manage to stock to his diet when the series is shooting?

"Obviously," shrugs Paul, "I'll have to do whatever the script calls for. I'll be into the part, so I'll probably enjoy the junk I have to eat."

"I just hope there won't be too many 'takes'."

Cancer Special On CBS

If you live in the United States today, your chances of getting cancer are higher than if you lived in any other country in the world. The relationship between the increase in cancer and our exposure to chemicals in our food, our air, our water and our workplace is the subject of CBS Reports: "The American Way of Cancer," Wednesday, Oct. 15, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

The United States, number one in cancer, is also the most industrially developed nation in the world. CBS Reports: "The American Way of Cancer" is an examination of the technological genius of American Way of Cancer" is an examination of the technological genius of America, and the possibility that it has spawned what some experts fear will be an epidemic of cancer in this country.

THRILLER — The body of Jenny Campbell (Lee Pulford) who died under mysterious circumstances, is pulled from the ocean by her pet Doberman, Murphy, in this contemporary thriller "They Only Kill Their Masters," on "The CBS Thursday Night Movie" Thursday, Oct. 16 (3N-9-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Breaking Out Of The Mold

"Many people have always considered me more a personality than an actress," says June Allyson.

"It's time it was the other way round."

June is doing what she can about that by starring with James Garner and Katherine Ross in "They Only Kill Their Masters," the "CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Oct. 16 at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11.

The girl famous for her Peter Pan collars is playing a role far afield from anything she's ever done.

"Let's just say for now that the character is a masculine lady with a strong personality," June says. "Saying much more than that would give away story points and besides I want the audience to be totally surprised at what I'm playing.

"There's nothing vulgar in the role. I don't do anything wrong. At least, one doesn't see me. I'm not running about in the nude or anything like that. But it's 180 degrees out of phase with my image.

"When my daughter Pamela read the script, she said, "Wow, why you?' "

Pike's Peeks

TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD—Lee Grant became so enraged while talking about the cancellation of "Fay" that a gesture she made while she was on the "Tonight Show" had to be bleeped by the censors. Regardless, the talk of Hollywood is the cancellation after only three episodes aired.

Meanwhile, "Jigsaw Jones," an hour-long police drama starring Jack Warden will soon be on the air on NBC. No word yet on what it'll replace, but production is underway on the show. Warden also starred in the pilot movie that aired last Spring.

ABC-TV is saying "Barbary Coast," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Howard Cosell," and "Mobile One" are very 'iffy' for much longevity. The same might be said of "Matt Helm" on the same network. However, "Starsky & Hutch," "Welcome Back, Kotter," "On the Rocks" and perhaps "When Things Were Rotten" appear good for the balance of the current season.

"Big Eddie," "Beacon Hill," "Kate McShane" and "Three for the Road" are in trouble at CBS. "Bronk" got off to a poor start, but having premiered later than the other shows it'll get a chance before any decision is made.

Another potential mid-season show at ABC is "Donny & Marie," Osmond by name. They'll star in a pilot in November for a possible variety-comedy show.

On last note. Cher's ratings are at a shocking low, and insiders say it's because of the new family hour restrictions.

TV Presents "Real" American Woman

Television has long remembered Mama and loved Lucy.

But today's television recognizes that women have also helped shape America's history and culture. And women are making greater contributions than ever to television - on camera and off.

For example, during October and November, you'll be seeing "First Ladies' Dairies: Martha Washington," "Babe," a portrait of sports immortal Babe Didrikson Zaharias, "Sounder," Emmy-winning Cecily Tyson's portrayal of the struggles and spiritual triumph of a black woman, and a documentary on the role and status of European women.

More and more women are on camera broadcasting the news. And behind the scenes gathering it. They're executives, writers and technicians. And, more than ever, stars of their own shows.

Interested In Food

As Joe Vitale, a widower raising two teen-age sons on "Joe and Sons" (Tuesdays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11), Richard Castellano isn't on a budget, but he is on a diet, though not a strenuous one. He finds that when he's working on a series his weight drops off, without much effort.

Castellano remembers well the family meals, when he was a child in New York City. "My mother cooked American and my father cooked Italian. So, while I enjoyed both, my all-time favorite then was frankfurters with sauerkraut. I guess it still is."

Play Dramatizes Poet's Life

There are going to be a lot of TV viewers who think there's been a mistake in the TV schedules that list "Paradise Restored" for Classic Theatre's Thursday (Oct. 16) presentation, 9 p.m., on UNC-TV.

Everyone knows, they're bound to say, that it's "Paradise Lost," by the great English poet John Milton. But the listings are exactly right — "Paradise Restored" is a play about Milton, not by him, which Don Taylor wrote especially for television. And it's the only modern play in PBS' "Classic Theatre - the Humanities in Drama."

Starring as Milton is John Neville, known to PBS viewers as John Chuchill of "The First Churchills," and to Broadway theatre audiences for his recent stellar performance as "Sherlock Holmes."

"Many, many years ago, when I was at school," says Neville, "I had a man who taught me English. He also became a kind of mentor, and he's the reason I'm in the theatre, I think. He had two hobby horses - one was Shakespeare and the other was Milton.

"I took the Shakespeare, and it led me to devoting some of my life to being a Shakespearean actor," explains the Old Vic star. "About ten years later, he had another pupil, who took Milton as his kind of God, and that man, Don Taylor, wrote and directed 'Paradise Restored,' We're from the same English master and I find it an extraordinary, chilling thing. I didn't know Don Taylor went to the same school until I started doing this play."

"Paradise Restored" is an intimate drama about the personal life of the brilliant, blind poet who was also a brilliant statesman. It is set amid the Great Plague of London, the English Civil War, and the Restoration, chaotic events out of which emerged Milton's enduring poem, "Paradise Lost." The mostly fictional play includes Milton's disastrous first marriage, his headstrong daughters, his longing for companionship and his intense frustration when he becomes blind and cannot read his books.

Better Late Than Never

"One nice thing about achieving success at this age, is that I have fewer years to become a has-been," said Jack Albertson, who stars on NBC-TV's "Chico and the Man," Fridays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on Channel 6-7, now in its second season.

About the late arrival of success in his life, Albertson says, "People sometimes ask me, 'Are you enjoying your success or do you have regrets that it took so long?' And I say, 'Well, I did have regrets for a while but now I have accepted the fact and I am very pleased."

Albertson, a veteran of more than 40 years in the business, has no childhood dreams for his future.

"I don't think I had any definite purpose or goal in life," he said, "Ours was a rather simple life because we were in a small city, Malden, Mass., which had a rather small town flavor. I just went to school and played with the other kids, as I recall, without any great or exciting things happening."

He does not feel that his mother's interest in the theatre had a direct influence on his decision to become a performer.

"I hated the idea of the theatre," says Albertson. "My mother worked in a little stock, she was not in the sense a professional actress, it was a hobby. Because there was no one to leave me with, she would drag me to the theatre to watch her perform. I had to suffer through these dramatic things which had little or no impact on me as entertainment. My reaction to the theatre was not a very good one."

As Albertson grew older, his attitude toward show business began to change. He started out as a dancer in vauderville and later became straight man to such comics as Milton Berle, Phil Silvers, and Bert Lahr.

He began dancing, during his teens, in pool rooms. Albertson said; "I was pretty good with a pool cue. That's really where I learned to dance. Your feet get a little flat from trudging around the pool table, so I'd shake them every now and then and do a little dance to lighten up the feet. I tried my best to stay away from anything that seemed like work.

"I am pleased with the fact that I have arrived at a plateau in this business which many people struggle for and never obtain. Of course, I am always amazed at my success because I have no idea as I watch myself on the screen what it is people see in me or my work.

A Turnabout Beauty Bash

Comedienne Joan Rivers will preside at the selection of "the most beautiful, desirable, glamorous, affluent, handsome and available bachelor" in "The Second Annual Unofficial Bachelor of the Year Awards," a "Wide World: Special" to be seen on Friday, Oct. 17, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., on ABC Channel 5-12.

Ellen Corby, a star of "The Waltons," glamorous Abbe Lane, Peter Marshall, host of "Hollywood Squares," and actress Carol Wayne will judge the ten contestants in this turn-of-the-tables "beauty pageant" in which men are the award competitors.

The names of the ten contestants, none of whom are in show business, will not be announced until air time.

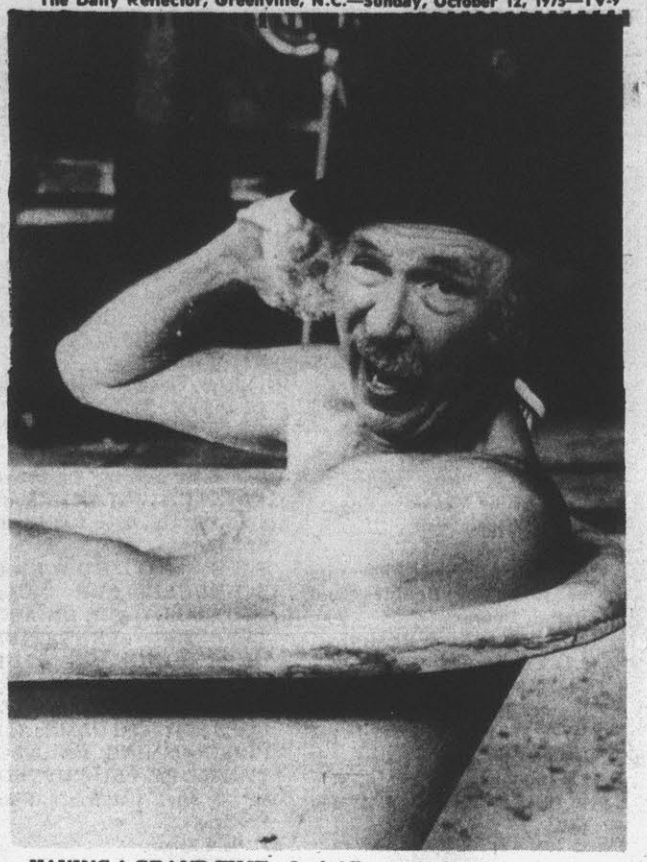
Highlights of the selection events begin with a dance contest when each man dances with Abbe Lane, who then will have all the information she needs to evaluate their ability of the dance floor.

Next, there will be a bathing suit contest which will give Joan Rivers the opportunity to discuss the merits and demerits of their physiques.

Interviews with the contestants will follow. These are conducted by Carol Wayne and the men will have the opportunity to demonstrate the level of their intelligence.

After the interviews, Ellen Corby directs a calisthenics event in which the men give evidence of their agility.

Finally, in a speed competition, Peter Marshall gives each man a bag of clothes and a time limit during which they are to dress, rush out in the audience, kiss a woman and return to the stage.



HAVING A GRAND TIME—Jack Albertson, shown scrubbing in a scene from "Chico and the Man," says stardom which has come to him after 40 years in show business via the co-starring role in the comedy series, have left him "very pleased" Alberton and co-star Freddie Prinze are seen in the series Fridays (8:30-9 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Husband-Wife Team

"No Place for a Happy Man," starring husband-wife team — ELI Wallach and Anne Jackson — Edward Binns and Keenan Wynn, is now in production in Toronto, Canada, and will be broadcast as a "CBS Playhouse 90" presentation early next year. Paul Stanley is directing for a script by Gwen Bagni and Paul Dubov.

The drama centers on Harry, a successful middle-aged house painter with a wife and three children, who quits his long-time job with a contractor to become his own boss.

In the process, he expeiences painful revelations about his life and the people with whom he shares it. On the advice of his doctor, he takes up bicycle riding, which slowly becomes his one escape from the increased pressures of his new business venture.

Harry enters a grueling cross-country bike race, and culmination brings life into sharper focus.

Eli Wallach and his wife, Anne Jackson, have appeared together and separately in a long list of stage, film and television productions.

Wallach has illuminated the New York stage since the late 1940s when he appeared in the American Repertory Theater presentations of "Henry VIII," "Yellow Jack" and "Androcles and the Lion." He and his wife appeared together with Charles Laughton in Shaw's "Major Barbara" and with Zero Mostel in "Rhinoceros." He created the leading male roles in Tennessee Williams' "The Rose Tatoo" and "Camino Real," and in the film "Baby Doll. Among his other screen credits are "The Magnificent Seven," "The Misfits" and "How the West Was Won."

SILENT HEROINE — Jan Chasmar plays a mute girl who reports the movement of British troops to the Continental Army, in spite of her wounds in "The Silent Eye" in color on NBC-TV. Len Gochman plays her father, a teacher. This program is one of 13 that will be part of the "Go-USA" Bicentennial series in the 1975-76 season on Saturdays (12:30-1 p.m.)

Heroine On Skates In "GO"

A young, mute girl, Katrina (Jan Chasmar), finds herself in serious danger when she attempts to inform an American officer that British troops have attacked her family's stockade in "The Silent Eye," to be colorcast on NBC-TV's Bicentennial series, "Go-USA," Saturday, Oct. 18, 2:30 to 1 p.m.

Katrina often finds herself the object of teasing because she cannot speak, and her father, Mr. Van, the schoolteacher (Len Gochman), tries to help. Katrina is a champion ice skater, and when British soldiers burn the stockade, she skates across the lake, pursued by a British officer, Lt. Prescott (Joseph Lambie). Though wounded, she gets through to the American commander, Captain Martin (Timothy Crowe). Writing in the snow, and answering questions by nodding her head, she conveys the message.

"What's Communism All About?"

"What's Communism All About?," another in the continuing series of special CBS News broadcasts for young viewers, will explore the original ideas and present realities of that system of government, as well as its evolution in Europe, Asia and the Caribbean. The broadcast will be presented Saturday, Oct. 18, 1:30 to 2 p.m.

A Little Guy With A Big Job

Terry Metcalf, the elusive tackle-breaking runner for the St. Louis Cardinals, will be a vital part of the Big Red machinery when they meet the Washington Redskins Monday, Oct 13, at 9 p.m. on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

During last season, the most successful one thus far for St. Louis, Metcalf was sensational. He was the team breaker, the one who delivered the big play when it was needed. His accolades for his dazzling sophomore season included a total of 2,058 combined net years (718 rushing, 377 receiving, 963 on returns), thereby breaking the club record of 1,666 set by Ollie Matson in 1954. This led to the title of Most Valuable Player for the Seattle, Washington native.

The trigger-man of the Cardinals attack, Metcalf is an incredibly gifted athelete with 4.3 speed and amazing agility. As proof of his value, consider that all four loses last year came when Metcalf was either sidelined or severly hampered by injuries.

He was ranked sixth in NFC rushing, seventh in receiving, fourth in punt returns, was proclamied runnerup to the NFL's most valuable player — Oakland's Ken Stabler — by AP, runnerup to NFC player of the year (Big Red's Jim Hart) by UPI, was Football Digest's all-NFC kick return specialist and played in the Pro Bowl. During his college years,

Metcalf broke several school records as a college junior, running for 1,673 yards, averaging 6.0 yards per game and running up the score with 29 TDs, the latter a NCAA college division record. In track, he won the conference long and triple jump titles.

In assessing his own ability, Metcalf has positive thoughts.

"I know what I want to do on punts and kickoffs," he said. "That's not my doing but the planning of the whole team.

"If possible, I like to circle under a kick and be in motion when I catch it. . . that first step can carry you past the first wave. After that, you look for your blocking and, when it's there, man, it's easy."

The fact that he is frequently running a zigzag course is something that he enjoys. "The one thing I have trouble doing," he said with a ring, "is to run straight ahead. When I was on the track team in high school, I never liked running the 100-yard dash. Running straight down the track didn't seem any fun at all. So I went in for the jumps and the long relays, where you'd run around a turn in the track. That was fun."

Stretched out, Metcalf still comes up short. He's only 5'11"; not even a long putt. When he was looking for a college that would take him, Southern California overlooked him. In fact, the Trojans didn't look him over, they looked right over him. Even his high school coach told him to forget it; he'd never make it in football because of his size.

"That's what kept me going, I think," he says.

Even today he is reminded of his size. "It wasn't so bad last year, but the year before, when some big guy would dump me, he'd say 'where do you think you're going, little man? It happened again in our preseason games. I'll remember that when those guys get here."

Joe Gibbs, Cardinal defense coach, calls Metcalf "an energetic runner. Terry's not a control runner, like Donny Anderson — with his arms tucked in, grasping tha ball in his gut."

Of all the teams the Cardinals clash with, Terry has the most respect for their Monday night opponent, the Redskins. "they know how to play. They don't make mistakes. You do something against them and you know it's an accomplishment.

VERSATILE STAR — Versatile speedster Terry Metcalf prepares to "Juke" around an opponent. The St. Louis Cardinals meet the Washington Redskins from R.F.K. Stadium in Washington on Monday Night Football, October 13 at 9:00 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Bench-RBI King

In collecting three RBI championships, Johnny Bench drove in 148 runs in 1970, 125 in 1972, and 129 in 1974. Combined with his overall hitting power and defensive ability, Bench must be considered as one of the greatest to ever play his position. His presence will be tremendously important for the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series.

"He might win ten RBI championships before he's finished playing," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson. "With that crew batting in front of him, I figure John could easily win the next three RBI titles in a row."

The crew Anderson refers to includes the 1-2-3 batters in the lineup; Pete Rose, Dave Concepcion and Joe Morgan.

"I've been fortunate in having good hitters ahead of me," he admitted. "In 1970 when I drove in 148 runs, Rose led off, with Bobby Tolan, second, and usually Tony Perez, third."

While Bench remains a 'tough out' for most pitchers, he is also a superb defensive player.

"If anybody does a better job of blocking that plate than Bench," Anderson added, "I haven't seen him. He is a wizard back there. Those one-handed tags he makes have really become his trademark."

Sports Veteran New Analyst

Mendy Rudolph, a 24-year veteran of officiating in the National Basketball Association, has been named as the expert analyst for CBS-TV Sports coverage of NBA games for the 1975-76 season. The announcement was made by Robert Wussler, Vice President, CBS-TV Sports, at a press conference held in New York.

In making the announcement, Wussler described Rudolph as "a knowledgeable and articulate observer of the game who has been one of the league's central figures almost since its inception. We believe his background will enable him to present a unique and incisive analysis of professional basketball to our viewers. We are happy to have him with CBS Sports."

Rudolph will provide expert analysis on the Network's 40-game television schedule for 1975-76. He will work with CBS play-by-play announcer Brent Musburger, who also served in that capacity last season. The first televised game will be on Sunday, Nov. 9, the first of four Sunday telecasts before the end of the year. On those occasions, Rudolph will work with CBS Sports broadcaster Don Criqui, while Musburger acts as host of "The NFL Today" studio broadcast from New York.

A Soccer-Style Specialist

Not too long ago, professional football teams didn't feel they could afford to have a full-time kicking specialist. Players like Lou Groza became an All-Pro tackle before being valued as a kicker, and Paul Hornung was best known at Green Bay for his running, even though he also became a top kicker. However, kickers of the caliber of Jan Stenerud have completely changed that strategy. Jan specializes in kicking for the Kansas City Chiefs, who take on arch-rival Oakland Raiders on Sunday, October 12, at 4 p.m., on NBC.

Pete Gogolak led an influx of foreign-born, soccer style booters who changed the entire complexion of professional football. In fact, the goalposts were moved ten yards back to the end line because of the tremendous amount of long field goal attempts.

Hank Stram, former coach of the Kansas City Chiefs, drafted a young Norwegian in 1967 who fitted the Gogolak mold; his name was Jan Stenerud. Out of Montana State University, few people had heard of the shy youngster, but within a matter of months, every fan in Kansas City had his name on their lips.

Growing up in a happy environment, Jan played a great deal of soccer in his native country.

"I was in organized soccer in Norway for ten years, so I did plenty of kicking. I was usually a forward, and I was best at making accurate passes to the big goal scorer. I really enjoyed the game," Stenerud says.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ELIOT JANEWAY, economist

Your predictions for our economic future are rarely optimistic. Is there no sign of improvement, or hope for the future?—A.S. Kravitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● I used to be criticized for being too optimistic. Now it's the reverse. We Americans live in a world in which all the other countries are bargaining in their own interests, while we put our own national interest last. I see no signs of improvement while this unrealistic stance continues. But I'm confident we'll see an improvement once we learn to stand up to oil countries, and once we ask Russia what she can do for us in return for our letting her eat at our table. Actually, I'm very hopeful about the future, but not because I expect things to get better by themselves as a bonus for our faithful attendance at the wishing well.

FOR EILEEN FORD

As a career woman, wife and mother, how do you keep so trim and healthy?—Mrs. Jane Keany, South River, N.J.

● The secret is not very complex. (1) Allow enough time to exercise daily, even if it means getting up a half-hour earlier. (2) Diet, as well as daily weighing, must become a way of life. (3) Never become so tired that it shows on your face. (4) Relaxation is important—even if it's just a long soak in the tub (with lots of bubbles) on Saturday afternoons.

FOR RONALD REAGAN, former Governor of Calif.

What qualities do you regard as most important in a Governor?—Gyula Hoffman, Waterbury, Conn.

● A governor, or any other officeholder, should make every decision on the assumption that he will never seek office again. This doesn't mean he definitely won't seek it, but that he must never make a decision on the basis of how it might affect voters in the next election. The proper basis is that it be for the good of the people.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON, star of the Buffalo Bills

After your 2,003-yard year and your TV exposure, I think you symbolize pro football. How do you feel about it?—J.J. Connolly, Durham, N.C.

● I don't agree. When I travel around the country, people tend to associate me with the "Superstars" show as much as pro football. Joe Namath is still Mr. Pro Football.

FOR BILL HUDSON of The Hudson Brothers

Has any of you ever fallen for another brother's girl?—R.B., Decatur, Ill.

● We have too much respect for each other to do that. If we did, it wouldn't go beyond the "thought" stage. Brett is going out with a super girl right now, but Mark and I would never dream of stealing her away. If the three of us are out, and we see a nice girl, we draw lots to decide who makes the pitch. Sometimes the three of us go together and kid around about which one she wants.

FOR TAYLOR CALDWELL

I was disappointed to hear that your 1972 marriage ended in divorce. Would you ever marry again, even though you are in your 70's?—D.J. Sullivan, Brighton, Mass.

● Yes, I would. This is one woman who needs a husband to be head of the house and manage things and bring order out of chaos—or maybe the reverse, which is more interesting.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER

How often do you go to the hairdresser?—Penny Bero, Green Bay, Wis.

● Never.

FOR HALE IRWIN, U.S. Open champ in '74

I'm told a National Open championship brings the winner about a million dollars in side benefits. How did you make out?—Jack Miller, Austin, Texas

● It didn't mean any million dollars for me. I got a few endorsements which paid about $10,000, and that's all.

FOR REP. SAMUEL STRATTON (D-N.Y.)

One of the criticisms of your proposal that women be admitted to West Point is that if a woman got pregnant, she could not fulfill her five-year commitment after graduating. How do you answer that?—Joanna Banker, Amherst, N.Y.

● This doesn't happen often among women in the armed forces. Male graduates are sometimes prevented from fulfilling their commitments, too. I think women who are motivated enough to put up with the rigors of a service academy will have enough self-discipline to carry out their commitment.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I saw Alice Faye in "Good News" at New York's Westbury Music Fair and I wonder why she stopped making movies. What's the inside story?—H. Herman, Monsey, N.Y.

● Without waiting to pack, she walked off a movie set in disgust back in 1945 and has been back only once since then. She made a brief comeback in 1962 in "State Fair," was sorry she did, and kissed movies good-by. She decided to headline as Mrs. Phil Harris instead. None of the offers during her "retirement" appealed to her, until "Good News" came along. ("My children and grandchildren were grown, and I didn't feel I was deserting them," said Alice.) The fact that none of her musicals won an Oscar still rankles: "We were used! When those old movies were sold to TV and made millions, we didn't get a cent—not even an old reel of film for a souvenir."

"How We Keep Fit"

Surprising, Rigorous and Heart-Thumping Ways Famous People Keep in Shape

As told to Charles Merrill Dowden

Recently, FAMILY WEEKLY asked a host of well-known people of various ages—all remarkable for their health and vitality—what they do to keep in shape. The celebrities answered with lists, sermons, lectures, daily schedules—even poetry! Here they are—actors, athletes, musicians, savants—sharing with you their daily exercise regimens.

DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Exercise vs. Tranquilizers

"My exercise is swimming. When I'm home, I do 80 to 100 laps per day in an Olympic-size pool. You know, exercise is the best tranquilizer around. Studies have been made comparing the electrical activity in the muscles before and after exercise and before and after dosage with one of the most frequently prescribed tranquilizers. Electrical activity in the muscles is an objective way to measure a person's nervousness. It was found that after 15 minutes of exercise, the electrical activity in muscles declined by 20 percent and continued declining for an hour. The tranquilizing drug, used on the same person, produced very little difference in electrical activity in the muscles."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

"Don't Get Fat"

"Here's my advice for staying healthy, in list form:

(1) Don't get fat. (2) Sleep enough. (3) Don't put things off. (4) Exercise out of doors, in any weather and every day. (5) Learn to do things that don't cost anything. (6) Tell the truth."

CHARLTON HESTON

"Exercise Should Be Torture"

"An actor's principal tool is his body. Like an athlete, an actor can't give his best unless he's in good physical condition. Even if he's playing a man in a wheelchair, an actor must be in top shape to give his maximum performance. I keep in shape mainly by running—not merely jogging—two miles a day on Mulholland Drive in the Hollywood Hills near my home. I also swim and do stretching exercises, and I play tennis every day I can. But things like tennis are fun, and I think if exercise is going to do any good, it must be hard work. Running is torture for me. I keep on running because I want to keep on working."

MUHAMMAD ALI

A Poem to Physical Fitness

"How do I keep in shape?
you ask,
I'll tell you, man, it's no easy task;
I never drink and I never smoke,
And you can bet I don't gamble on dope.
I run, and sometimes carry a weight,
To help get rid of the extra freight.
If you like to eat, and are lazy too,
Then there's a lot you'll have to undo;
And if you really want to hustle,
You ought to try the Ali shuffle.
But the best exercise, if you are able,
Is to firmly push away from the table."

"My Other 'Conversion'—to Fitness"

BILLY GRAHAM

"Physical fitness, to me, is good housekeeping. This wonderful mechanism called the body is a marvel of muscles, nerves, arteries and tissue—the most amazing piece of engineering in the universe. Like lesser machines, it requires care and maintenance. It is tragic that one of the most affluent societies in the world, the U.S., has one of the poorest records of physical health. Somehow, we have lost respect for the importance of health.

"About 20 years ago I took a look at myself in the mirror and was distressed at what I saw. My stomach had begun to protrude, my color was pale and wan, my posture was beginning to sag. In that moment I had a 'conversion' of sorts, to a sensible program of physical fitness which has prevailed to this day—and it was one of the important decisions of my life.

"Rarely a day goes by that I do not jog up the mountain road where I live, with half of it up a steep grade. Even though I have had a 20-year problem with high blood pressure, I believe this exercise has lengthened my life by several years. In addition to getting strenuous exercise daily, I do bend-overs and push-ups in my room. Also, many times I carry dumbbells for arm and hand exercises, and when possible, I swim half an hour a day.

"Too many people exercise sporadically. This is a mistake. It not only does little good, in my estimation, but it is actually dangerous to engage in violent exercise unless your body is conditioned for it.

"I don't think the kind of exercise is important. I do believe it is important to bring most of the body's muscles into play in the exercise program. Even running in a fixed position (which I do when weather or circumstances prevent me from exercising out-of-doors) is good. I have a friend who runs up and down the stairs forty or fifty times a day. The important thing is to get the old 'ticker' chugging and the blood moving through those arteries to make the body come alive."

CAPTAIN JAMES A. LOVELL

Former astronaut and head of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports — "I Involve My Family"

"It would be nice if I could report that I decided to keep myself fit because of some marvelous insight or noble impulse. But that isn't the way it happened. For more than 25 years, from my days as a midshipman through my career as a Navy pilot and astronaut, 'staying in shape' was part of the job description. If you weren't fit, someone took your place.

"It was only gradually, over a period of years, that I began to associate physical fitness with anything other than being able to fly the ship and survive the mission. If I had anything resembling an inspiration, it occurred during the 14 days I spent aboard Gemini 7, unable to move about, with weightlessness relieving my body of the necessity of supporting itself. The rapid deterioration in my physical condition was a crash course in the essential nature of exercise.

"Like most Americans, I prefer exercise that is enjoyable—sailing, skiing, tennis, golf and other so-called 'leisure' or 'lifetime' sports. Although I was never a great athlete, I am fairly proficient in several of these activities. I had courses in jungle, desert and ocean survival. I have flown almost everything that will fly, from conventional aircraft to Apollo 13 and hang gliders. I have learned to ski, sail and skin-dive, and I have played some of the racquet sports. I practice these sports whenever I can, and I involve my family in them at every opportunity. It's great fun, but I don't kid myself that it is, by itself, a great fitness program.

"Let's face it, three or four times a week you need to get out there and run or swim some laps, knock off some sit-ups and push-ups, and do all those sweaty, unpleasant things that it takes to get your heart and lungs pumping. I probably don't like it any better than you do, but I do it. If you know what's good for you (and I mean that in a friendly way), you'll do it, too."

PAT BOONE

"A Clean Conscience"

"I'm asked all the time, 'How do you manage to stay so young?' I infer from that that they expect me to look old, but I'm flattered, so I give a serious answer. I always say it's three things: lots of milk, lots of exercise and a clean conscience. People can understand the milk, which has to do with a balanced, healthy diet. They can understand the exercise part, too—I jog, play tennis and basketball, work with weights, do physical and competitive things all the time. But the third part—about the 'clean conscience'—puzzles folks. How can anybody today have a clean conscience?

"Ah, but therein lies the secret of real health. I know where to go to get my conscience cleaned. I turn to my religion. Because, you see, to be free of guilt and its accompanying tensions, is to be eternally healthy. That's my 'secret' and I recommend it heartily."

LAWRENCE WELK

"It's Hard to Beat Dancing"

"My farm training made me an early riser from the days of my boyhood. My day starts at about 5:30 A.M., without the help of an alarm clock or a 'wake-up call.' After a shower, I swim a few lengths in our indoor heated pool. Another shower, and by this time breakfast is ready. If it's still too early to go to the office, I may hit a few golf balls into a net rigged up in our backyard.

"Sometimes after a light lunch, I try to get to the Bel Air Country Club for some golf. I oftentimes wish I had discovered golf much earlier. I'm convinced that sports, like music and work habits, are best learned at a very young age.

"As for exercises other than golf and swimming, I have an electric powered Exercycle (a 70th birthday gift from our Musical Family). And, of course, when it comes to healthful, enjoyable exercise, I find it hard to beat dancing. As I'm sure many of you already know, I manage to indulge in this pleasant pastime at every opportunity. I'm convinced that a lifetime of dancing lively polkas and leisurely waltzes has been instrumental in keeping me in what the doctors tell me is remarkable physical condition for my age. And I assure you, physical fitness is extremely important—even for a man whose chief contribution to our show is only an occasional 'wunnerful, wunnerful' or 'a-one and a-two.'"

SURF AND TURF CHOW CHOW.

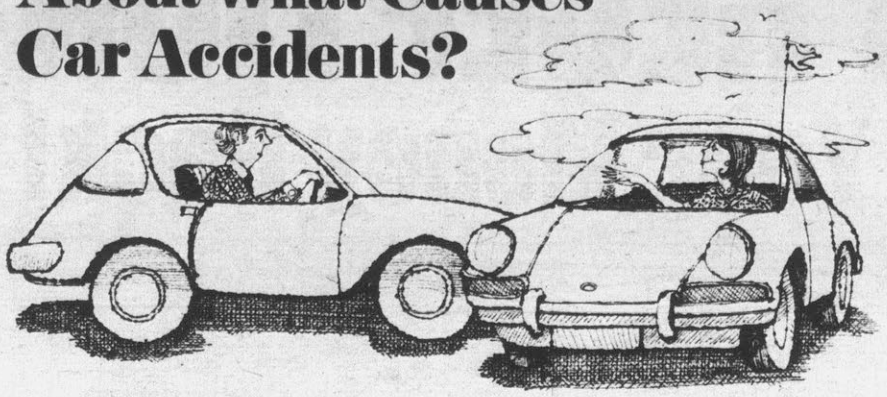
People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

How Much Do You Know About What Causes Car Accidents?



True or False? When a man yields the right of way to a woman driver, it often has nothing to do with chivalry. (See number 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How subject you are to automobile accidents depends largely on how good a driver you are.

2. Auto accidents can hurt you even if you escape without a bruise or scratch.

3. If you have a history of assorted traffic mishaps, there are certain times when you should avoid driving.

4. When you meet another driver at an unmarked intersection, it's easy to tell whether or not he's going to give you the right of way.

5. When a man yields the right of way to a woman driver, it often has nothing to do with chivalry.

6. One of the most deadly types of accidents is the head-on collision on the open road. You can protect yourself from the accident-prone driver coming toward you by simply flicking a switch.

ANSWERS

1. False. Studies have demonstrated that, in many cases, drivers with above-average skill in car handling have more crashes and traffic violations than the general population. Auto accident-proneness is, as one leading authority points out, "a personal idiosyncrasy that predisposes certain individuals to a relatively high accident rate." Studies show that people most likely to have such accidents tend to have specific characteristics in common, including unhappy marriages, many changes in occupation, a chip-on-the-shoulder attitude. And they are given to impulsive action, particularly in stress situations. A further characteristic: "Anti-attitudes"—a negative outlook.

2. True. In studies conducted by a team of specialists at the Neurological Clinic, University of Münster (West Germany), case histories are cited of persons who developed serious depressions "following accidents, the majority of which were car accidents." These persons developed at least two of the following symptoms: sleep disturbances, loss of appetite, severe anxiety, withdrawal from social contacts and self-destructive fantasies.

3. True. Dr. Manuel Rodstein, Clinical Professor of Medicine at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, finds that there are certain conditions which increase the likelihood of an accident-prone person having an accident. These conditions include acute boredom, lonesomeness, anxiety, frustration, and mental or emotional conflict.

4. True. If he carefully avoids meeting your eye, he's sending you a message which translates: "I'm taking the right of way—period. And you'd better not try to take it, because you can't tell if I really don't see you or if I'm just pretending." This is borne out by traffic studies conducted at Tufts University.

5. True. A university study of American attitudes toward women drivers suggests that many men are inclined to give women drivers the right of way largely because they think of them as "unpredictable," and feel that failing to yield to them might result in an accident. However, studies conducted by University of London behavior specialists of traffic patterns in both city and rural areas showed that "female drivers yielded to male drivers almost as much as male drivers yielded to them."

6. True. A team of Indiana University investigators conducted a study in which "photographic recordings were made of the position of oncoming automobiles on the open highway in the daytime—with and without headlights displayed on the camera car." Findings: Oncoming cars occupied a safer zone on their side of the road when the camera car had its lights on. Conclusion: Oncoming drivers are more alert when they face approaching headlights in the daytime.

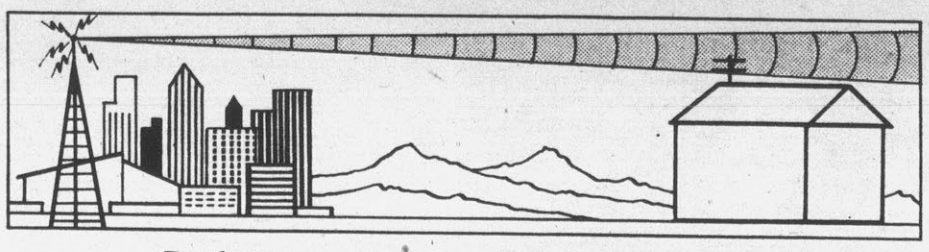
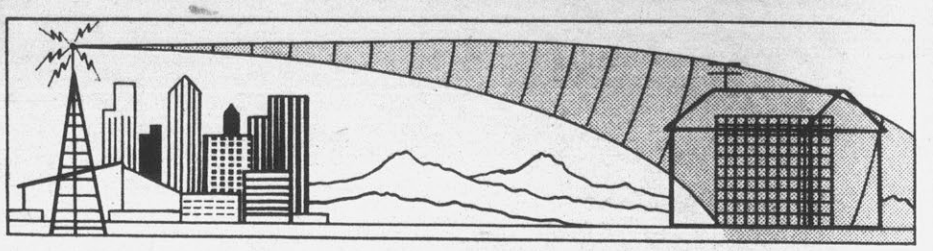
No matter what your TV set cost — whether you paid $59.50 or $800.00 — the reception it gives you can only be as good as the signal that reaches the set! That's why this exciting new indoor electronic wave interceptor can promise you . . .

MOVIE-CLEAR RECEPTION

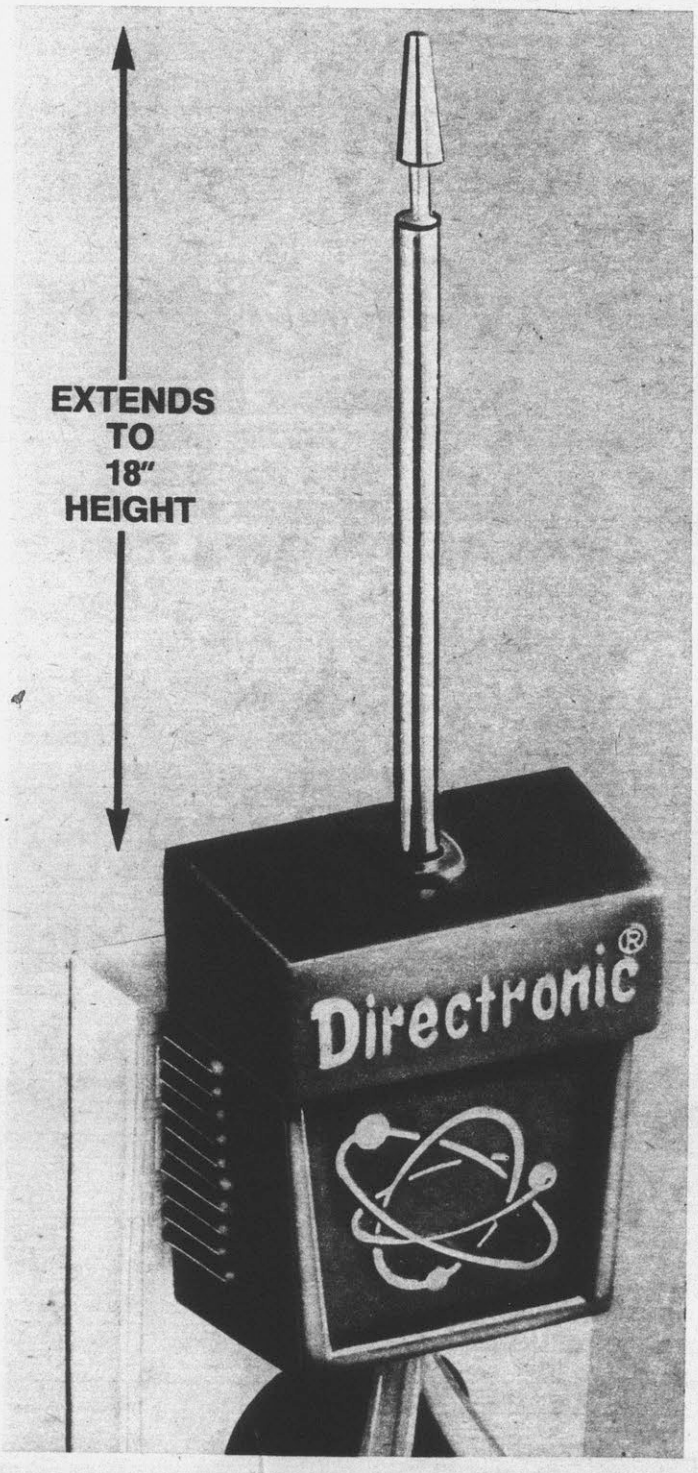
On All Channels — or Your Money Back!



Roof antenna receives only signals reaching it



Socketenna turns entire house into a giant receiving grid

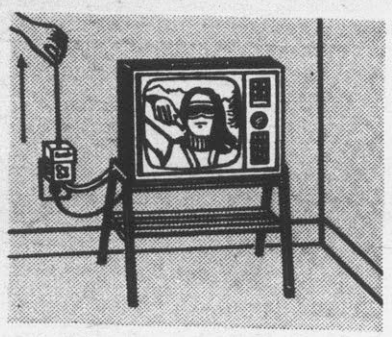


The larger your antenna, the greater its ability to intercept electronic waves. That's why giant antennas covering acres of ground were built in order to receive TV signals from the moon! So one way to improve your TV reception would be for you to get a very much bigger antenna and get it up higher, so there is a greater surface area presented to the signals broadcast by the station. But the neighbors might object to a tower in your backyard, or on your roof, even if you could afford it!

Now there's another way! It "plugs your set in" to a truly giant antenna, made of pure copper, which you already have in existence in your home or apartment house! In an average one family home, this "antenna" presents a grid toward the TV signal measuring about 30 by 15 feet — a giant 450 square feet of receiving area!

How to connect this super antenna to your set

This super antenna is the electrical wiring in your home! Made of electrically conductive copper it's already "receiving" those TV signals — but unless you have this amazing electronic invention called the Socketenna, there's no way to bring those signals to your set (without bringing all the unwanted electric current too!) Simply connect the leader to your set, then plug Socketenna into any unused electrical outlet. It isn't an electrical appliance but an electronic device that pulls in the TV signal without making electrical contact. So it doesn't use a watt of your expensive electricity — and there are no tubes to go bad either, because it's a solid-state device. And you can further "fine tune" the strong signal you receive with the extendable telescoping whip antenna mounted on the device.



Why put up with poor reception one day longer?

Socketenna can solve your problem. Works for color or black and white! Works on hard-to-get UHF stations as well as VHF. Works to give you beautiful bell-clear FM radio reception too. Uses no house current — has no tubes to burn out — so simple to install you can do it yourself in seconds — instantly improves signal strength and set performance almost like magic — whether your set is brand new or years old.

Maybe you think you're getting good reception now with your current TV set and aerial. BICENTENNIAL SPECIAL

An 18th Century Feast for Today's Busy Homemaker

Two of our greatest heroes are Christopher Columbus and George Washington. We hope Columbus will forgive us for yielding to the Bicentennial spirit this year by spending Columbus Day visiting George Washington's birthplace.

When most people think of George Washington, they think of his beautiful home at Mount Vernon. But actually Washington was born at a place called Pope's Creek Plantation, a lovely farm on the Potomac River, 38 miles east of Fredericksburg, Va. Today, run by the National Park Service, it is known as George Washington Birthplace and is a real working farm with real crops and livestock.

At the birthplace, an authentic 18th century dinner was prepared for us over open fires in the plantation's kitchen. We enjoyed it so much that we wanted to share it. Here are the recipes we were served—translated into a more modern version for your convenience.

In the formal dining room of the plantation, master and mistress of the house await their guests. Meanwhile (top photo), servants enjoy a simple meal in the plantation's out-kitchen.

Dick Van Dyke:

"I'm No Great Chef– But You'll Love My 'Veal Piccata'!"

"My little daughter Carrie Beth spent two weeks in Iowa visiting some friends. She's never been on a farm before. She called us up and said, 'We went out and picked corn and cooked it right away. I never knew corn tasted like that!' "

By Dick Van Dyke
In conversation with Helen Dorsey

I've never been a bachelor. I went from my mother's arms right into marriage. As far as cooking for myself is concerned, it's generally been a disaster! Only on occasion do I cook. And when I do, it's something very, very simple. But I do make a veal piccata that is the best ever. I try to get a friend of mine, who has an Italian restaurant, to order me some good, white Minnesota veal through a purveyor. The secret is to beat the veal paper-thin. I've got one of those rolled hammers that leather workers use. I put oilcloth on both sides of the veal and beat it until the meat is thin and even. Then I marinate it in fresh lemon juice. Cooked quickly in a lot of butter and wine, it makes a wonderful meal with hearts of palm salad.

My wife, Marjorie, also makes a chicken kiev using a special combination of herbs mixed with butter. It takes her all day, but it's so good!

We like to serve good food when friends or family come to visit. That's kind of a Midwestern tradition. [Dick grew up in Danville, Ill.] There's nothing like the vegetables in the Midwest.

My little daughter Carrie Beth spent two weeks in Iowa visiting some friends. She's never been on a farm before. She called us up and said, "We went out and picked corn and cooked it right away. I never knew corn tasted like that!"

VEAL PICCATA

3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter (or 1 tablespoon each of butter and olive oil)
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons water or beef bouillon
3 tablespoons dry white wine
4 to 5 lemon slices
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley or capers

1. Pound veal until very thin. Place veal scallops in shallow dish. Rub 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice into veal; let veal marinate several minutes.

2. Melt butter in large skillet. Shake off lemon juice from veal. Quickly brown veal on both sides in hot butter.

3. Season lightly with salt and pepper. Add remaining lemon juice, water and wine. Top with lemon slices. Cover, simmer 1 or 2 minutes.

4. Remove to heated serving platter.

At 16, I was so fat, I had to wear maternity clothes.

By Cheryl Bruhn – as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

My poor mother! She tried just about everything to get me to lose weight. Talks with our family doctor, reducing pills, the Stillman diet, the Atkins regime, sessions at Weight Watchers, promises of beautiful clothes—even insults about my fat. But all her efforts ended in my eating more. So by the time I was 16 years old, I weighed 210 pounds.

Actually I started building up my layers of fat at the age of 12. I put enough cookies, candy and ice cream on my hips, stomach and thighs to make me waddle like a duck. My twin-brother, Joe, was so ashamed of the way I looked, he wouldn't even walk with me. And as for gym class, it threw me into a panic every week. We wore shorts and I hated the thought of everybody staring at me.

Then came the time of my eighth grade graduation. I had such a terrible time finding a dress that Mom and I had to go to every store in Phoenix, Arizona (near my home in Scottsdale). But not even a girdle could get me into anything, except old-lady styles. That's when a friend of my mother's suggested a maternity shop. I was so heartbroken, I cried. But that's where I found my dress.

With all that grief I still didn't learn to control my appetite. And freshman year in high school, I became totally introverted. It wasn't until sophomore year that I realized nobody could change my life but me. And to do that I had to lose weight.

Fortunately, right after one of those thoughtful moments, I saw a woman on television talking about Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy. Since Ayds contained no drugs, I went to the drugstore and bought some of the chewy vanilla caramel kind. I didn't tell Mom what I'd done, because I didn't want to disappoint her again.

Well, I took Ayds as directed and they really helped me cut down on what I ate. By the third week on the Ayds plan, I'd lost nearly eight pounds. That's when I told my mother. I don't know who was more excited—she or I!

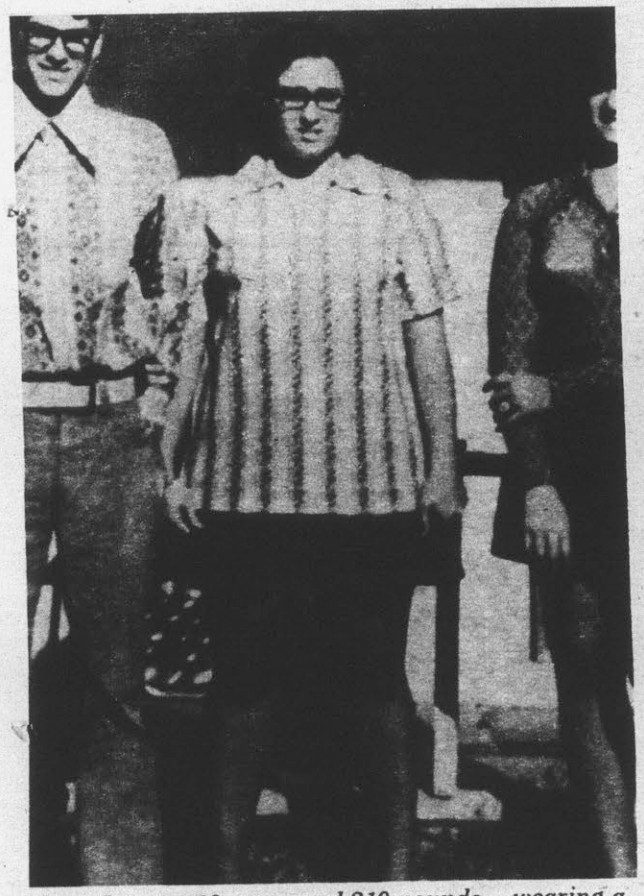
By the middle of the summer, I'd lost 50 pounds on the Ayds plan. A neighbor, who'd watched me lose, said to my mother: "She's a new girl! As soon as the weight came off, her mouth opened up." And she was right. I was no longer an introvert.

When I went back to school in the fall, I was even slimmer. If I do say so myself, I created quite a sensation that first day. My science teacher didn't even recognize me. But my brother's friends sure noticed me. Of course, now that I'm 125 pounds, Joe is proud to be seen with me—particularly since I have a whole new junior-size wardrobe.

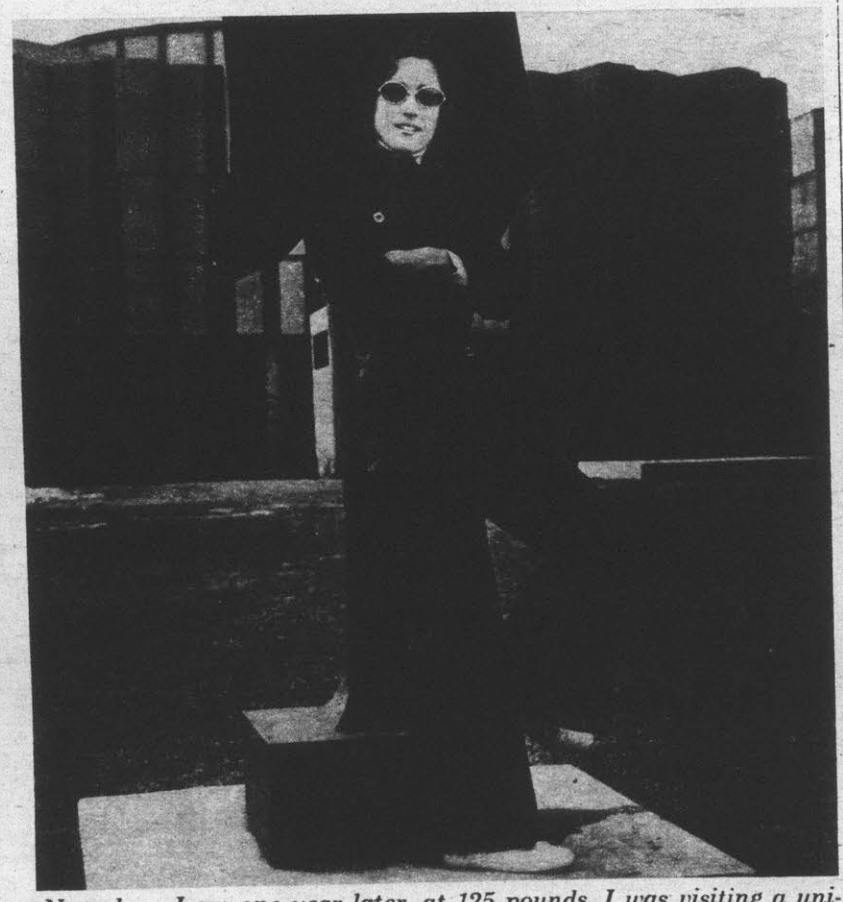
Now there's just one thing I want to say for the benefit of any young people with a weight problem. You have to stop finding excuses for not losing weight. When you do, as I did at 16, there's no better or more pleasant way to take off pounds than on the Ayds plan.

BEFORE AND AFTER MEASUREMENTS

	Before	After
Height	5'3½"	5'3½"
Weight	210 lbs.	125 lbs.
Bust	41"	34½"
Waist	39"	25"
Hips	44"	36"
Dress (Maternity)	18	9-11



Here I am at 16 years and 210 pounds—wearing a maternity blouse. It was the only thing that fit!



Now, here I am one year later, at 125 pounds. I was visiting a university, and thanks to my being slim, lots of guys gave me the eye.

Star Chat

He's bald, barrel-chested, small hipped, a bit jowly, with a nose that starts in the middle of his frown and extends downward like an awning over his full upper lip. His whole head—dominated by piercing dark eyes beneath craggy eyebrows—settles into the curve of his thick shoulders almost without the hesitation of a neck. Until I met with him recently face to face, I had not quite understood the terrific magnetism Aristotle (Telly) Savalas can exert on people. Now, here I was, confronted by Kojak himself, and I was learning fast . . .

FAMILY WEEKLY: How did the name "Telly" come about?

TELLY: It was impossible for the other children to say Aristotle. I am not sure they even wanted to. They had such fun calling me other things. To give you an idea of how they reacted, they labeled me "Kelly the Greek."

FW: Do you come from a large family?

TELLY: I had four brothers and one sister.

FW: Were any of them so nobly named?

TELLY: I have a brother Constantine Socrates, who is head of the Information Service with the U.S. Embassy in Greece, and a brother named Theodore Praxiteles, who is a teacher at Athens University. And, of course, George (he was christened Demosthenes) plays my sidekick, Stavros, on the show.

FW: He has quite a head of hair . . .

TELLY: And I don't, eh? If I'd let mine grow, I'd look just like that. Now you know why I shave it off.

FW: What made you decide to denude your head?

TELLY: Director George Stevens wanted me to play Pontius Pilate in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." He suggested it might make the character more interesting if I shaved my head, and asked what did I think. I shaved my head.

FW: But why didn't you let it grow back?

TELLY: I enjoy my head. It's lovely. I wear it with great aplomb. Besides, I've been so busy since, I haven't had time to let my hair grow out.

FW: Since you are obviously not the Tyrone Power-Robert Taylor type of leading man, has it surprised you that you have come to be a sex symbol to millions of viewers?

TELLY: Surprised? In what way? I've always been that. And I express this not to my fault or to my credit. I was born with a romantic nature and I'll carry it to my grave.

FW: You sound as if you feel it is an inherited quality . . .

TELLY: My father was a romantic as well. He was an extraordinary man.

FW: What did he do?

TELLY: He was a salesman. He sold all sorts of things. Mainly he sold enthusiasm.

FW: And your mother?

TELLY: She is Christina Savalas, a noted artist. She is using a brush now. Before, when we were growing up, it was humanity. She's a compulsive person. Artists tend to be compulsive. She's beautiful. Was Miss Greece at the 1938 World's Fair. She's also a wild chick. A great lady.

FW: Were your parents from Greece?

TELLY: They were born in Greece, yes. And they spoke Greek to us. My father used to say, "My children, I want you to learn many languages so that you can communicate with lots of people. But when you speak to the gods, speak Greek."

FW: How many languages can you speak?

TELLY: Four or five. I get along in many, but mainly by using physical expressions.

FW: Where were you born?

TELLY: In New York. We had a very lively, stimulating household filled with children, countless uncles and my grandparents. My grandmother lived to be 107. My grandfather lived to be over 90. He got married when he was 53. Twenty-four children later, my father was born, and there were three more after him. And only two sets of twins. My grandfather thought that no man should marry before he was 50. I feel the same way. And I am not yet 50 [he's reportedly 49], so all of my children to date are rehearsals. [Telly's recent divorce from his wife Marilyn ended twelve years of marriage. Supposedly, Lyn, as Telly calls her, will get $5,000 a month in alimony and $500 a month support for each of his two youngest daughters. Telly is now going with attractive Sally Adams.]

FW: How many children do you have?

TELLY: I have three daughters: Christina, who is 23 and is attending Holyoke College, Penelope, 12, and Candace, who is 11.

FW: Greek families have the reputation of being very close. Is yours?

TELLY: My mother and father always stressed that as long as they were alive, no matter how old I was, I was still a child. And then they said, "When we are gone, you become the older generation. All we ask of you is that you keep your family together. Everything else—all the money and fame in the world—is meaningless if the family falls apart."

FW: "Kojak" has become so popular, you must be doing very well financially at this point. Are you pleased with its success?

TELLY: It has its negative sides. I'm part gypsy. I love to travel. The producers know that I'm the reluctant "dragon" coming into work. They knew that from the beginning when they tried to talk me into the series. I've made well over 30 movies in 11 countries since 1961. The incentives had to be very great to corner me on television. And they were! But I can't say I'm completely successful, because I don't like being in one place. I want to be in one place only about six months out of the year. However, I think I've adjusted.

FW: You didn't originally intend to be an actor, did you?

TELLY: Not at all. I am what you call a "late-bloomer." I was 35 before I found my way into this creativity. For the majority of those first years, I intended to be a psychiatrist—as opposed to a psychologist.

FW: Why didn't you become one?

TELLY: I became totally disillusioned. I went into it virgin-like, with all the dedication of youth. And I found it had a synthetic quality. It was intellectual speculation. The biggest crook of all time was a guy named Sigmund Freud who took a few intellectual expectations and tried to make a science out of an art form that's used by unemployed actors to titillate themselves.

FW: Did you ever go to a psychiatrist?

TELLY: I grew up with one. My uncle was the leading psychiatrist of the world.

FW: Did your study of psychology help you as an actor?

TELLY: Absolutely not. I enjoy acting, but I want to put back into this business the quality of razzle-dazzle, glamour and make-believe that it once had.

FW: How do you hope to do this?

TELLY: By taking the artistic, creative decision-making out of the hands of the powers-that-be in that big black tower! [He motioned toward the black glass high-rise that houses the VIPs of Universal Studios.] I've written a script which I will co-produce with Universal. When I gave it to them, I told them they should consider it just on the value of the script alone, not on my being the one giving it to them or on my being connected with it in any way. I am doing them a favor to bring them the screenplay. They are not doing me a favor if they use it. And I am not interested at all unless I have total and complete artistic control.

FW: Do you think they'll agree to that?

TELLY: They already have!

Does Your Antacid Upset Your Low-Salt Diet?

The leading antacid roll tablet may be giving you more than half your daily sodium allowance. Here's what to do!

If you're worried about salt in your diet—a case of heartburn or acid indigestion can present a real problem.

You should know that just five tablets of the leading roll antacid taken during the day would exceed more than half the allowance of sodium many doctors recommend for strict low-salt diets.

That's playing it pretty close. And that's why you ought to know about a tablet that absorbs more excess acid than the leading roll brand—yet contains far less sodium. Its name is Bisodol® Tablets. (Bisodol Powder does contain sodium bicarbonate for people not concerned with low-salt diets.)

Bisodol Tablets quickly relieve that miserable heartburn and acid indigestion, and it's good to know you can take them whenever you need them—without worrying about sodium.

Remember, Bisodol Tablets are low in sodium—high in antacid power.

"TARZAN" AND BURROUGHS
In 1938, Glenn Morris played the "ape-man's" role

In this time of Bicentennial celebrations, don't overlook the centennial of the birth of one of America's best-loved authors, Edgar Rice Burroughs. Burroughs created Tarzan, the hero who grunted his way into legend through more than 40 movies (gross receipts: more than $600 million to date). All 16 men who portrayed the old tree-swinger on screen made fortunes. "Not bad for a man who had failed at every enterprise he ever attempted," said Danton Burroughs, grandson and vice-president of the million-dollar Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., logically located in Tarzana, Calif. The company handles sales of the Tarzan comic strip, books, movies and memorabilia that remain perennial pop-culture favorites. Burroughs had been a failure as a gold miner, stationery store owner, and inventor of a dubious snake oil cure for alcoholism. He was broke and frustrated at 35 when he wrote "Tarzan of the Apes" in 1911 on the backs of letterheads of his unsuccessful businesses. He wrote 25 sequels, printed in 31 languages. Two million copies of these adventures are sold every year.

Most happy fella. Said singer Jim Stafford to FAMILY WEEKLY: "I think I'm one of the few happy-go-lucky, optimistic people in show business. I have fun writing lyrics because I invent plots and characters and tell a story. But strangely enough, people have this conception that all show-business people are unhappy. I might be if I were an actor, because what do they do between movies but make themselves unhappy? I've led a luxurious existence. I love the travel and the transiency—which I suppose makes me an oddity since so many of us are concerned about having 'roots.' " Stafford, who years ago made a vain attempt at "making it" in Nashville, said of the new movie "Nashville": "It's not a realistic depiction of life there any more than 'West Side Story' was a total vision of New York City."

Jim Stafford

LUCI JOHNSON NUGENT
Had to be "pushy"

"White House children may be the stars of their own little show," says Traphes Bryant, former dogkeeper for four Presidents, "but deep down most of those I have known have suffered loneliness. There's never a boy or girl next door who can just wander over to the White House and get acquainted. As Luci Johnson once told me, 'You have to be pushy to have any friends at the White House. No one will call you anymore. You have to call them.' Jackie Kennedy tried to lick the problem of finding playmates for Caroline by running a nursery school at the White House. Presidential parents tend to feel guilty and try to make it up to their children by pampering and indulging them. Even as far back as Lincoln, Presidents realized there was a barrier between their own children and other children and tried to solve it with pets." From "Dog Days at the White House," by Bryant and Frances Spatz Leighton (Macmillan, $9.95).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

HEATED ARGUMENT

Our thermostat upon the wall
Quite frankly doesn't help at all.
Turned up by me, down by my wife,
It's less a help than cause of strife.
What's cool to one, to one is hot.
I say, "It's cold." She says, "It's not."

It's not the thermostat we peer at
Upon the wall and jibe and jeer at.
The trouble's this, though little known:
Each has, inside, one of one's own.

"I insured my voice for $250,000," announced the noted diva.

"Oh," a rival prima donna responded, "and what did you do with the money?" Clotilde Larson

A notice was sent to Al Brown telling him his magazine subscription had expired.

A note came back to the magazine: "So has Al." —Gene Yasenak

After finishing her shopping, a woman stepped into an elevator and was met with a surly, "What floor?" from the operator.

"Seven," she replied, "if it isn't out of your way." —Tom Gallagher

Supervision: Extremely good eyesight. —Georgie Starbuck Galbraith

Speaker to audience: "I've practiced this speech all week and I feel pretty good about it. So, if you could just manage to look a little more like a bathroom mirror, we'll begin."

Three-year-old Michael kept asking why he couldn't visit in big brother Jackie's classroom. No answer satisfied him. Finally, I told him it was against the school's rules, and we couldn't break their rules. Not knowing what rules were, he said thoughtfully, "I wasn't going to break them, I just wanted to play with them a little."

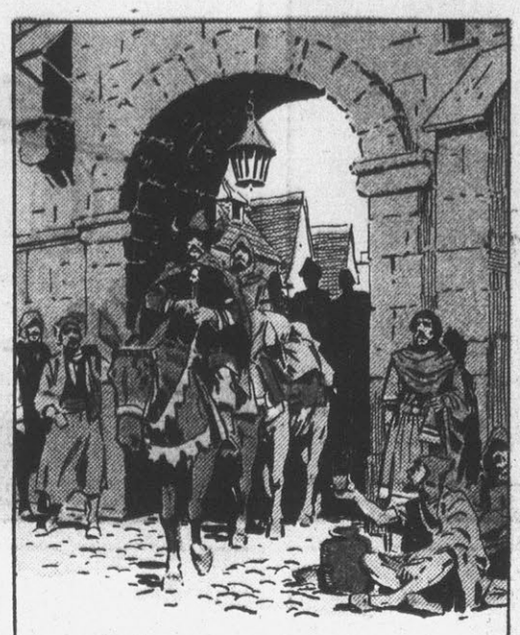
Our Story: QUEEN ALETA GOES SHOPPING FOR HOLIDAY ATTIRE, BUT THE PIRATE RAID OF LAST SUMMER HAS LEFT LITTLE OF VALUE IN THE MARKETPLACE.



THROUGH THE CITY GATES RIDES HASHIDA THE SORCERER, FOLLOWED BY A TRAIN OF BAGGAGE MULES.

HE FINDS A SHOP WHOSE SHELVES ARE EMPTY. THE MERCHANT, HELPLESS TO RESIST THE IRON WILL AND PIERCING EYES OF THE WIZARD, IS SOON HYPNOTIZED.

ALETA ARRIVES AT THE BOOTH AND CRIES OUT IN DELIGHT AT THE JEWELED ORNAMENTS AND FABRICS OF MANY COLORS. "BUT THAT IS NOT ALL," CONFIDES THE SHOPKEEPER, "THE BEST TREASURES ARE IN THE BACK ROOM."

IN THAT ROOM STANDS HASHIDA, SUAVE, SMILING, HIS BRIGHT JEWEL SWINGING RHYTHMICALLY. "BE SEATED, MY LADY, FOR SHOPPING IS TIRING. THE HOT SUN HAS MADE YOU SLEEPY, YES, YOU ARE SLEEPY."

HE EXERTS THE FULL POWER OF HIS WILL: "SLEEP!" ALETA'S EYES ARE BLANK. SHE MAKES ONE EFFORT TO REGAIN HER COMPOSURE, BUT THE GLITTERING JEWEL DISTRACTS HER.

"THIS WINE WILL REFRESH YOU." HE FILLS TWO GOBLETS. SHE DRINKS HERS, HE PUTS HIS DOWN, UNTOUCHED.

AND SHORTLY THEREAFTER A LITTER WITH DRAWN CURTAINS MAKES ITS WAY TOWARD THE SORCERER'S MOUNTAIN STRONGHOLD.

AT MAUMEE UNIVERSITY THE FOOTBALL SEASON IS UNDER WAY! NOT A GREAT TEAM, NO BIG STARS, —BUT, BABY, THE FANS ARE FLOCKING IN..

..EAGER FOR THE MOMENT WHEN THE SQUAD COMES OUT FOR WARM-UP PRACTICE!... THE BAND HITS A FANFARE — AND INTO THE STADIUM MOVES A BRIGHTLY DECORATED VAN...

THE MUSIC ROLLS INTO "DON'T LET ANYONE BRING YOU DOWN" — MS. SCHWEISENBERGER STEPS OUT, IN FULL UNIFORM, THE BAND HITS A BIG, LOUD TA-DAAH!

AND THE CROWD GOES WILD —ESPECIALLY THE WOMEN

THEN IT IS ALL BUSINESS!... TWO CENTERS FEED STALKY THE BALL — AND SHE RIFLES PASSES TO A DOUBLE LINE OF RECEIVERS DOWNFIELD...

AS THE TEAMS GO TO THEIR LOCKER ROOMS, STALKY RETURNS TO HER CAMPER...

THEN GOES TO THE BENCH WITH THE SQUAD, AS THE STARTING TEAM TAKES TO THE FIELD...

OF ALL THE BUSH-LEAGUE HOTDOGGING..

COME TO LIFE, YOU MUMMY!..

THAT OTHER TEAM IS AL—READY UNSTUCK! IF SHE GOES IN AS A PASSER, THEY HAVE A LICENSE TO MURDER THE GIRL! — BUT WHO WANTS TO PUT AN ELBOW INTO THAT FACE?

SO STALKY SITS ON THE BENCH —ALWAYS A BACKHANDED THREAT... THEN AFTER THE FINAL GUN SHE RETURNS TO HER CAR — AND IS ESCORTED BY AN R.O.T.C. HONOR GUARD

SENSATIONAL, STALKY! HEY! WHY THE FLOOD?

YOU CAN TELL OL' ONION RINGG.

YOU DON'T NEED TO! IT'S LEIGHTON OLSON'S SHOW — AND HE ISN'T HERE TO TAKE THE BOWS!
