Greenville Conference Center Feasibility Study Is Sought

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

The conference committee of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association voted last night to request the Regional Development Institute to make a comprehensive study on the feasibility of building a conference center in Greenville.

The study will include whether a conference center should or should not be built and what facilities should be included in a center if it is built.

Yesterday morning, a similar committee from East Carolina University also voted in favor of the study. The Chamber pledged cooperation with the University and the city on the project.

It was announced that Houston Tucker, a local motel executive, has volunteered to chair the chamber's involvement in the study.

At the meeting, the Chamber committee, along with ECU and city representatives, heard from Barry Rogers, who heads the Center for Continuing Education at Appalachian State University, a center similar to that being studied for Greenville.

The ASU center, located at Boone, was built at a cost of $3 million, Rogers said. Only $100,000 of this was state money, a fact which created many "advantages" for the center, such as more freedom in the spending of funds, Rogers said.

The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare granted $300,000 to the project and bonds generated $1.5 million. The rest was funded by industry, Rogers said, which "saw an opportunity to realize something from their investment later on."

The ASU center provides motel facilities in addition to conference facilities. Although the original plan of the Chamber was to investigate only the feasibility of conference facilities, according to director Harold Creech, a special motion was made to include the study of "all attendant facilities" to a conference center, including motel facilities.

Rogers said the ASU center has a good relationship with area motels, despite the fact that its 91 guest rooms occasionally compete with the commercial motels. He said the motels understood that the center was generating more business for them than it was taking away.

Tucker told the group he didn't think a small motel in the Greenville center would upset area commercial motels, although he, personally, feels there is adequate motel space in the area. The requested study will include a study of motel space needs in the Greenville area.

Rogers said ASU built a conference center and not a convention center because of the educational aspects involved. He said the center chooses educational functions almost exclusively to be held at the center.

The ASU center provides three types of services, according to Rogers. It will provide conference facilities only, importing "talent" to hold programs; it will cosponsor programs with other agencies and it will sponsor programs exclusively.

Rogers said the center usually deals with relatively small groups—another distinction between conferences and conventions.

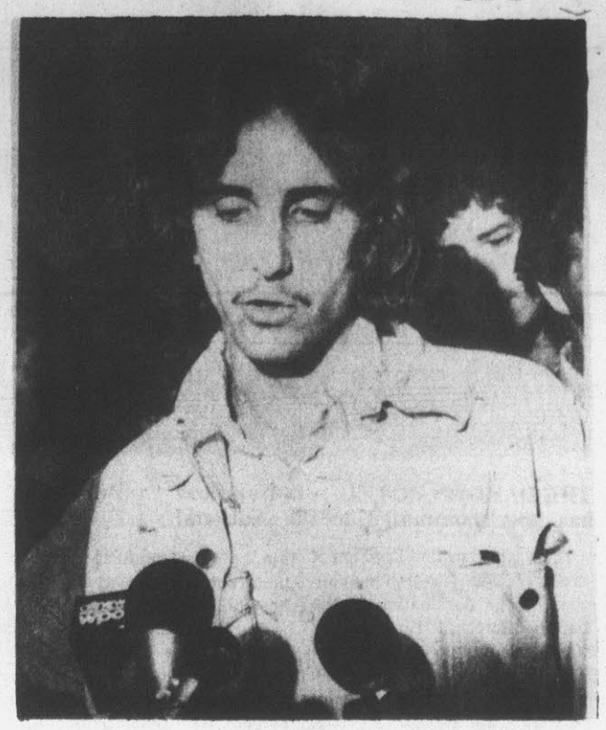

There is a "a great diversity in interest" among the groups who use the center, Rogers said. Industry uses it for training programs, professional groups use it for study seminars and parents of ASU students stay in the motel when visiting their children.

"It is not unusual," Rogers said, "to have a group of men with junior high educations in one room training for their job and to have a group of nuclear physicists across the hall discussing something like hydrogen bombs."

Rogers told the group the center's purpose is not to make money. He said surplus funds are put back into programs at the center. "We really want to just break even," Rogers said.

Chamber Director Harold Creech said a conference center would be good for Greenville's economy. He said a study had been made two years ago which suggested "maybe there was a need" for a center here. The Chamber committee voted unanimously to have the new study conducted.

Youth Drove Into Side Of Ford's Car

INVOLVED IN ACCIDENT—James Salanites, 19, of Meriden, Conn. makes a brief statement to newsmen at Hartford Police Headquarters early this morning. (AP Wirephoto)

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A teen-ager who drove his car into President Ford's armor-plated limousine said he entered the intersection and accidentally crashed into the presidential motorcade because he had a green light.

Ford was not hurt, but a member of his party was treated for a fractured finger after the incident Tuesday night.

The driver of the other car, 19-year-old James Salanites, was questioned and voluntarily took a sobriety test, Hartford police said. There were five other teen-agers in his Buick, but none of them was hurt.

"I don't see where he did anything wrong," police Lt. Thomas Grant said of the Meriden, Conn., team. Police said no charges would be considered against Salanites until blood test results were available in several days.

It was the third incident to mar one of Ford's recent out-of-town journeys. He was the target of two alleged assasination attempts in California during separate visits in September.

A police spokesman, explaining how it was possible for an auto to get a clear run at Ford's car, said police were only guarding intersections within two blocks of the President's departure point. The incident occurred three blocks away.

"I feel fine, I feel great," Ford said shortly afterwards. The presidential limousine stopped only briefly before taking the President to the airport for the trip back to Washington.

A Secret Service spokesman said of the incident, there was "no reason to believe it was anything but an accident."

It was little more than a fender bender for the heavily fortified limousine. But the Buick sustained heavy damage to the front, which hit the limousine's right front fender.

There were calls for Ford to curtail his travels for security reasons after the recent assassination attempts, but he has continued his frequent forays, while taking care to appear before groups which were easily screened.

The GOP fund-raising dinner he was here to address Tuesday night was one such occasion, and there were no incidents. But it was less than a minute after Ford left the Civic Center where the dinner was held that Salanites' car barreled into the limousine.

The motorcade entered the intersection at Talcott and Market streets while the traffic signal was green, but witnesses said the light had changed to red when the limousine entered the cross-road and was hit by the Buick, which was descibed as moving rapidly.

Pistols drawn, Secret Service agents leaped from one car and surrounded the Buick. Police said Salanites emerged from his car and said the crash was an accident, explaining he saw the green light and simply proceeded through the intersection.

Authorities said it is normal procedure for the motorcade to continue against traffic lights.

Pool reporters said the President's limousine was stopped for only about 45 seconds before continuing along its route.

Frederik Biebel Jr., state GOP Chairman in Connecticut, suffered the fractured finger.

Proposed Priorities In Drug War Stirs Dissent

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House report on drug abuse appears to have inflamed rather than quelled a battle inside the government on how the war against drugs ought to be fought and who should do most of the fighting.

Written by a task force of President Ford's Domestic Council, the report recommended a de-emphasis of law enforcement measures aimed against "recreational" marijuana users who privately possess or consume pot.

Efforts to stop the spread of heroin and other dangerous drugs should take priority over efforts to suppress the private consumption of marijuana, the report said.

It also recommended that firm steps be taken to stop the rivalry and squabbling that have marked the relationship between the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the U.S. Customs Service, the nation's two top narcotics law enforcement organizations.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., ranking minority member of the Senate's permanent investigations subcommittee which has probed alleged corruption inside DEA, said he believes

Nine Killed

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP)—Nine Marines were killed today when a jet training plane crashed shortly after takeoff, a Marine Corps spokesman said.

The spokesman said the TC4C Gulfstream aircraft, which is designed for navigational training, burned on impact.

Military authorities launched an investigation to determine the cause of the crash.

Names of the victims—four crewmen, an instructor and four students—were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Renew Beirut Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — New fighting between Christians and Moslems broke out in Beirut early today.

Security officials said at least 19 persons were killed and 28 wounded, but the count was incomplete.

Left-wing Palestinian guerrillas fighting on the side of Lebanese Moslem leftists fired antiaircraft guns into two Christian neighborhoods near the Tel Zaatar refugee camp.

Mortar and machine-gun duels raged in other northern and eastern suburbs of the Lebanese capital.

Christian and Moslem militiamen accused each other of violating the cease-fire.

Most banks and shops closed again after a one-day resumption of business.

The government designated most approaches to the city unsafe because large numbers of armed militiamen from the numerous private factional armies were on the move.

The ultra-conservative Order of Maronite (Christian) priests sent a memo to President Suleiman Franjieh saying there could be no Christian-Moslem dialogue of reconciliation until the government regained control in areas occupied by Palestinian guerrillas.

More $2 Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2 bill, which disappeared almost a decade ago because of public disinterest, is staging a comeback in time for the Bicentennial, a congressman says.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said today that he has learned that the Treasury Department plans to issue 400 million $2 bills annually. At the same time, the department will cut in half the current production of 1.8 billion $1 bills, Rosenthal said, citing a letter from Deputy Treasury Secretary Stephen S. Gardner.

Although the letter to Rosenthal indicated a final decision on reissuing the bill had been made, a Treasury spokesman said the decision was not yet final. The Treasury scheduled a public hearing later today to get views of consumers on whether they thought the bill would be well-received by Americans.

A portrait of Thomas Jefferson, the U.S. president whose picture was on the old issue of the $2 bill will probably adorn the new issue, it was learned.

The old $2 series was discontinued in 1966; the new bill would be issued in connection with the nation's Bicentennial observance.

Consumer disinterest in the $2 bill in the past was the chief reason it was taken out of circulation in 1966.

But Gardner said in an Oct. 10 letter to Rosenthal that studies, including a Harvard Business School survey, indicate that reissuance of the bill is "both feasible and practical."

Gardner estimated the $2 bill would save $4 million annually in printing costs since fewer total bills would be needed. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing prints the U.S. currency.

Another Cost Item For Utilities Water Plant Told To Commissioners

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector Managing Editor

Utilities commissioners learned last night that it will cost $280,000 to provide for treatment of water returned to the river from the water treatment plant.

Even though the excess water from the treatment plant is virtually the same as that which came from the river, it must be treated to meet environmental standards.

Director Charles Horne said it had been determined that the best way to do this is to send the excess water into the sanitary sewer system to be treated at the waste disposal plant downstream. That, however, will involve the installation of two holding tanks at the water plant so that the water can be released into the system gradually. The cost of the installation was estimated at $280,000.

The treatment is required to meet federal standards.

The commissioners were informed that a ruling is expected this month on Vepco's retail rates. Horne said a special meeting of the commission would be set to bring local rates in conformance.

Commissioners approved the bid of American Mutual of $25,377. Annually for $5 million excess umbrella liability insurance.

Also approved was a bid by Utilities Service Inc. of $16,650 for an underground construction truck. A bid by Utility Distributors, Inc. of $17,250 for a truck chassis and boom was approved.

Horne reported that a study for a new waste treatment plant is 90 percent complete. The plant is set for future construction north of the river on a site yet to be decided.

Horne also reported that $750,000 in sewer bonds and $500,000 in water bonds ($250,000 to pay off bond anticipation notes) were sold Sept. 16 at an interest rate of 5.9819 percent.

TIGER WOES

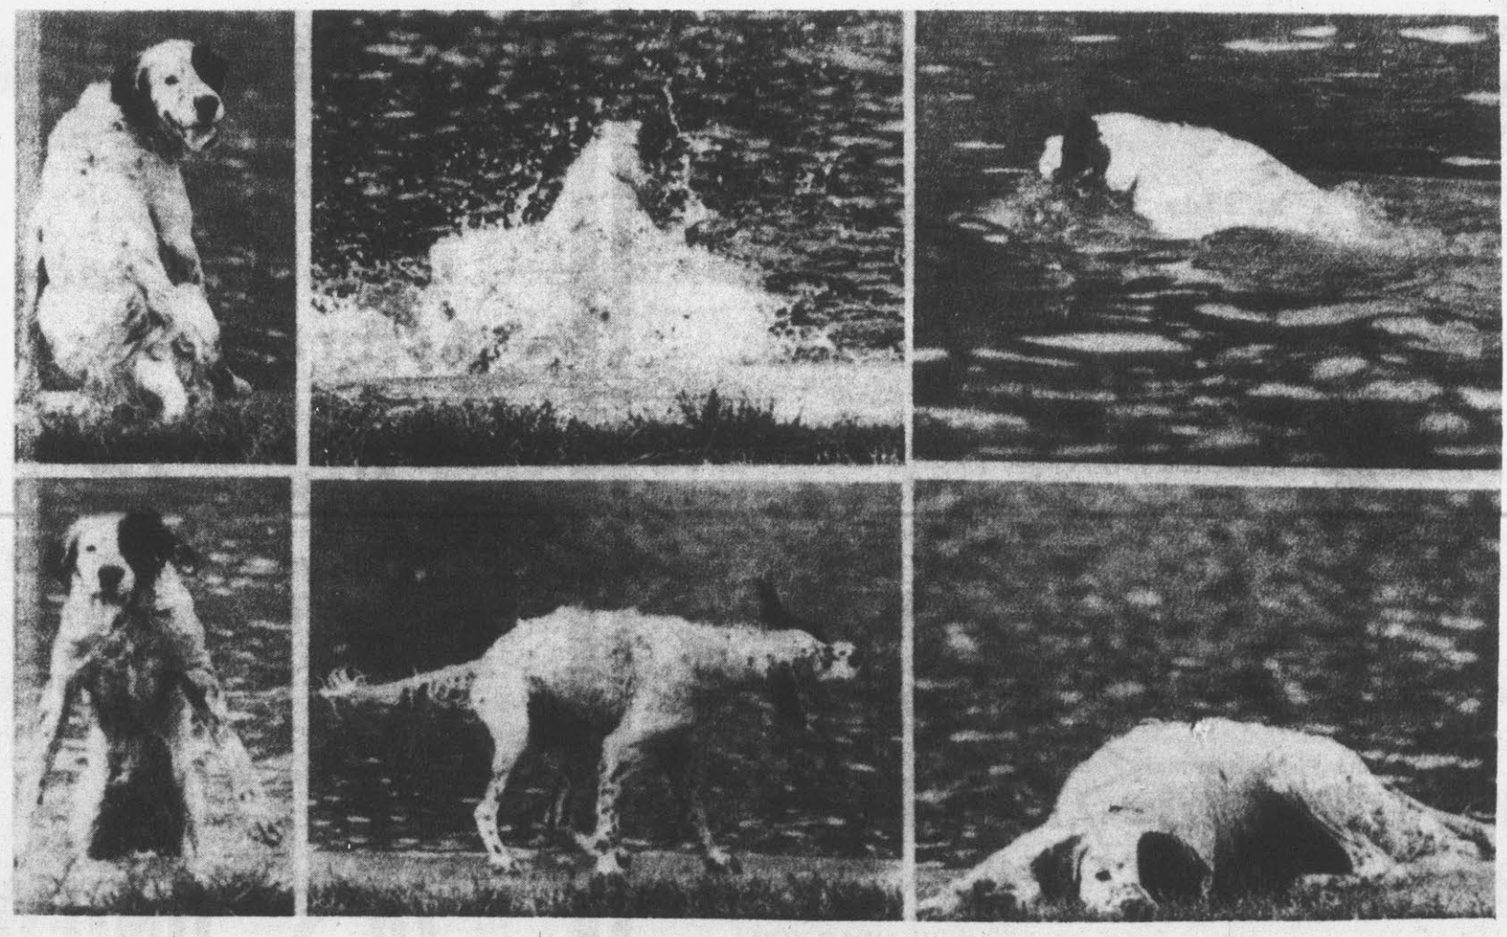

Last summer the tiger from Sambo's Restaurant came to my kindergarten. The people with him gave each child a card which said, "Join Sambo's Tiger Club. When your birthday comes, we'll send you a membership certificate and a Tiger Buck good for $1 worth of food. Spend it at Sambo's and get a gift and a free strawberry shortcake." I sent it in by mail, but didn't get anything. On my birthday, I went there and didn't get anything. Can you protect other children and me from this false advertising. S. S.

A spokesman for Sambo's Restaurant here told Hotline that these Tiger Club memberships are honored. You must have dealt with a new waitress, she said. Wallace Says Opinions Are Turning His Way

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said today most aspirants for the Democratic nomination for president are beginning to see things his way.

Answering newsmen's questions at the end of a half-hour meeting with Belgian Prime Minister Leo Tindemans on the second stop of a European tour that started in London, Wallace said he didn't know whether his trip would improve his chances in running for the nomination.

"Polls say I'm the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination," Wallace noted as he was being wheeled from an elevator to the courtyard at the Belgian premier's office, "but I am the governor of the state and I've been staying in that state and I haven't been getting outside throughout the United States."

"I do know," the Alabama governor said, speaking in a low voice, "that most of those who aspire now sound more and more like I used to sound and the people I support used to sound which I think is a very good thing."

Wallace discussed European and Atlantic alliance problems with Tindemans.

"We feel very strong in our attitude toward a strong NATO and a strong friendship with Western European and with great countries like Belgium," Wallace said.

The governor told Tindemans there were many problems in the United States and in Alabama itself. He did not elaborate but said he was happy to hear the Belgian premier quip that "we have a no problems here."

"I'm glad to have come to a place that has no problems," Wallace answered.

Wallace, who was accompanied by U.S. Ambassador Leonard K. Firestone, then drove to the U.S. Embassy for a briefing by American officials on Common Market and NATO affairs.

Belgian police gave the governor top security treatment, with armed uniformed state-policemen always close by.

Also on Wallace's schedule were a courtesy call on Belgian Foreign Minister Renaat van Elslande and a dinner at Ambassador Firestone's residence.

A spokesman said Wallace had expressed the hope to meet with Gen. Alexander Haig, supreme commander of allied forces in Europe and former President Nixon's chief of staff at the White House.

Officials said the meeting was impossible since Haig was in the United States. Wallace was expected to meet with another senior U.S. officer instead.

Thursday the Alabama governor will meet with NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns and Henri Simonet, a vice-president of the European Common Market's executive commission.

Mayor Paid For Tickets

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Mayor Harry Kessler wrote a personal check for $119 to cover the fines of 17 motorists who illegally parked while attending a band festival at Bowsher High School earlier this month.

Despite the mayor's objections, patrolmen ticketed cars which pulled off the street onto a grassy area near the high school stadium. Residents said it was a common practice at football games.

Kessler said he asked an officer to withold the tickets until the car owners could be summoned over the public address system and be given a chance to move their vehicles.

He said the officer refused, claiming a complaint had been received.

"I just got upset," the mayor said. "If the City of Toledo is so damned hard up for parking revenue they have to do that, I figured I'd just pay them myself."

The car owners apparently didn't know of the incident. A newsman spotted the stack of traffic bureau receipts on the desk of the mayor's secretary and got Kessler to explain what happened.

Feminist Chilled By Show Of Chivalry

DEAR ABBY: Please help me settle an argument. A few nights ago, I was out with the same gal I always date. We're pretty close. She's very independent about a lot of things, such as opening doors for herself and things like that. Well, I learned to live with that until the following incident occurred:

We stopped at a garage to have something fixed on my car, and because she's a pretty good-looking girl, the mechanic began flirting with her. To start with, this annoyed both of us. When his talk became offensive, I spoke up and straightened him out.

Afterwards, my girl became upset with me, saying it was HER place to straighten the mechanic out if she thought he was out of line.

Granted, if she were alone, it would have been her place. But since she was with me, I thought it was MY place.

What do you think?

CHIVALRY LIVES

DEAR CHIV: Most women would be angry with a date who failed to straighten out a presumptuous stranger, but maybe your gal enjoyed it.

In any case, now that you know she prefers to fight her own battles, either give her that privilege or find a less militantly independent girl.

DEAR ABBY: Even though I am only 13, I have made up my mind to do something I think is very important. Before reading your column I never even gave it a serious thought, but now I would like to donate my kidneys and eyes to someone else after I die.

Juveniles need kidneys, too, and cannot use adult ones, so in case I die before I become an adult, I'd like to leave whatever organs are still usable to some child who needs them.

Abby, I am not planning on dying soon, so please don't feel sorry for me.

LAURA MYERS, GARDEN CITY, CALIF.

DEAR LAURA: To become donors, minors need the consent of their parents or guardians. And, Laura, please tell your parents for me that they have a beautiful daughter!

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you 10 years ago, but I didn't take your advice. My problem was that after 33 years of marriage, I found out that my husband was having an affair with a young woman who worked for him.

I told you that although I still loved him, I wanted to end our marriage.

You told me that I should bide my time, that as long as I still loved him I should try to forgive and forget, and that I should keep my marriage together, which is what he wanted to do.

My pride was so hurt that I divorced him, anyway. He married the young woman, but soon afterwards, he started calling me, telling me that he had made a terrible mistake. He said he still loved me, could never forgive himself for what he had done and wanted to come "home."

My pride still wouldn't let me take him back. Well, he died a year ago. He left a little something to his second wife, but the bulk of his estate he left to me. He was a rich man, and now I am a rich woman, but that doesn't matter. I guess he really did love me.

I wish I had taken your advice, Abby.

Drying Is Way Of Preserving

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A good cool-weather project for do-it-yourselfers who have built everything else, perhaps, might be equipment for drying foods — oven-drying trays, dehydrators, sulfuring boxes or solar dryer.

Such equipment might be particularly useful in the event of shortages of canning-jar lids, a problem experienced recently in some areas during the height of the growing season, and it may be even more economical than freezer storage. In any event it might be fun as an experiment.

Before investing time or the money needed for building materials, one could have a trial run of drying foods in the home oven, suggests the Farm Journal's "How To Dry Fruits and Vegetables." The book provides directions for building dehydrators and other equipment as well as the instructions for drying and storing foods.

To test the idea, they advise making oven-drying trays by covering oven racks with one layer of cheesecloth. It should be pinned to the four corners, then to the front and back edges as you stretch it. Sides should be pinned around the first rung in from the edge to allow air circulation at the edges.

If you enjoy the foods you dry, you may want to use a more efficient method which might be as simple as a frame with screen. That kind of frame — a screen stapled or tacked to a butt-joint frame — can be made from almost any clean, dry, 1 by 2 scrap lumber (which is ¾ by 1½ when it is bought) that is free of pitch. Do not use yellow pine.

Aluminum screen material might be used, although some foods discolor and corrode it, but stainless steel hardware cloth (⅛ inch to ¼ inch mesh) is better although more expensive. Galvanized screen is not recommended by the farm group because the zinc and cadmium in it could cause "dangerous reactions" in contact with acid foods, they maintain. It is suggested too that screens of vinyl, copper and synthetic materials are unsuited for this purpose.

Wood slats (or dowels) may be used for the bottom of trays. Thin wood lattice, one-quarter-inch thick and about one and a half inches wide, may be nailed to frames with one-half-inch spaces between them. When small pieces of food are to be dried, the slats can be covered with cheesecloth.

A small family may need no more than that kind of tray. From 1 to 2 pounds of fresh prepared food may be spread on each square foot of tray space. A load should be no more than 4 to 6 pounds at a time and it should be distributed over two or more trays. An oven 18 inches high may hold four trays with 2½ inches of space between each tray and a minimum of three inches free at top and bottom. If an oven holds only two racks, additional trays could be used by stacking and separating them with small wood blocks. A framework to hold all trays could be built and used instead of oven racks.

The average oven temperature for drying is about 140 degrees, although different foods require different temperatures. Thermometers are needed as a check and the door must be propped open as a careful eye is kept on the food to see that it doesn't scorch.

That is one reason why people may prefer a portable electric food dehydrator. One made with half-inch plywood and 1 by 1 wood strips, 18 inches wide, 24 inches high and 24 inches deep holds five trays and is heated by nine 75-watt light bulbs, drawing "a little less than 1 kilowatt-hour of power each hour." Designed by Dale E. Kirk, agricultural engineer at Oregon State University, it uses five aluminum window screens for trays, thermostat, electric fan, alum num foil, copper wire, butt hinges and door latch, among other things. It might cost more than $75.

There are directions also for a natural draft dehydrator which requires no thermostat.

Do-it-yourselfers in a low temperature area with dependable sunshine might enjoy building a solar dryer. The box resembles a cold frame and uses either plexiglass or glass with a single 4 by 8 foot sheet of ½ inch exterior plywood. It has vents that can be covered with nylon mesh to protect foods from insects.

Food drying may seem like a lot of work until one gets into the routine. It is easier perhaps to blanch some vegetables and toss them into the freezer or to can foods in the traditional way. But food drying has advantages — more food can be stored in less space, it travels well and it can be economical.

("How To Dry Fruits and Vegetables" is published by Countryside Press, distributed by Dolphin.)

Preserve That Responsibility

One doesn't kick somebody else when they're down; and that isn't our intent. But the continuing debate over federal help for New York City involves a lot of issues that cannot be ignored; and, indirectly, involves even the people in Pitt County.

It isn't just a matter of economic health in New York. Conceivably, Greenville could be pushed into the same condition. So could Simpson; even county governments are not immune.

To us, bankruptcy could not mean the demise of New York City. "Fun City" will continue to exist even if it goes broke. Individuals go bankrupt; so do partnerships; so do small businesses and big businesses. History is full of instances when American cities have gone broke, but they do survive. It is not the end of the world.

Every governmental unit's financial standing is based on its fiscal responsibility . . . a wholly impartial standard; and New York City is judged on that basis just as is Greenville. It is a matter of satisfaction for Greenville that its government has been able to function and serve its people on the basis of costs falling within the limits of anticipated revenues and known resources. In that respect we are matched by thousands of other American municipalities and county governments, as well as 50 state governments.

There is not a single municipality in North Carolina that is in default on a single general obligation bond.

So why the big fuss over one . . . or six, or eight, or a dozen . . . governmental units who fail their responsibilities. Other than their respective size, they are no different in their responsibility than the smallest village in the national make-up.

Sound government is more than at first meets the eye. Good business practices are a prime requisite; a candidate for office who promises pie-in-the-sky cannot ignore the price involved. Nor can government permit its budgetary responsibility be controlled by non-governmental forces. Those principles seemingly were abandoned in some of our larger cities, or, their power to govern nibbled away.

Logically, that could happen to any government, great or small; even to us. It's something to guard against.

It does concern us that because New York City is a big governmental unit it is asking federal help to resolve its problem. More than that, the call for help appears in no way linked to realistic steps to solve its own problem . . . that is, living within its income.

So, if Uncle Sam says "Okay, here's a couple billion to bail you out"; two years later they'll be knocking at the door again. More than that, a precedent will have been set. Every governmental unit in the country, every political candidate, every office holder, will get the message: "Uncle will bail you out".

There's no better road to ruin.

Turkish Base Stakes

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the United States again shipping F4 Phantom jets to Turkey following the easing of the arms embargo, Pentagon officials are hopeful Turkish leaders now will allow the United States to regain control of military bases in Turkey.

Officials said six F4s — part of the 24 to be delivered this month — left Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C., on Tuesday on the first leg of the long flight. After a stop at Torrejon Airbase in Spain, the planes are due to fly on to Turkey Thursday.

Twelve more Turkey-bound F4s will take off from Norh Carolina within the next week, followed by six in late October. Counting 16 planes delivered before the congressionally ordered embargo was imposed last winter, this will complete a current U.S. commitment of F4s for Turkey.

The United States already has provided Greece with 36 F4s, for a rough balance between the rival Turks and Greeks in this form of air power.

U.S. officials say none of the restrictions imposed by Turkish officials after seizing control of U.S. bases last July have been relaxed, despite the recent easing of the U.S. embargo by Congress to permit movement of $185 million in arms to Turkey.

Turkish government leaders have said relaxation of the embargo was only a step in the direction of eliminating what the Turks have called "an unjust decision" to cut off the arms flow in the first place.

Congress imposed the embargo on grounds that Turkey used American-supplied arms in its invasion of Cyprus in the summer of 1974.

Of particular concern to American officials are key radar monitoring stations which formerly kept track of Soviet missile tests.

Pentagon specialists say the United States has lost important information on the progress of some Soviet weapons developments, including a new 2,200-mile-range missile.

CIA chief William E. Colby told Congress in August the loss of the information from the Turkish stations could not be fully made up by any other means of intelligence-gathering.

Urge Drug-Running Fight

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina has some gorgeous, deserted coastline.

The beaches, inlets, creeks, and marshes draw thousands of tourists, hunters, fishermen.

They also draw visitors of another sort: dope smugglers who use the isolated waterways to bring their goods into the country.

Top law enforcement officers from throughout the Southeast gathered in Raleigh recently to exchange information and ideas on drug smuggling, with the goal of establishing an area-wide exchange of information, and pulling into the fight not only state and federal law enforcement officials, but state foresters, Wildlife Resources field men, park rangers, and any others who are regularly out and about in the isolated sections of the state.

Footpaths

There are places on the North Carolina coast, one top law enforcement official says, where the constant pounding of feet through the sand to retrieve drugs smuggled onto the beach have made permanent paths.

"You can do down there, follow the path, pick up the right bush, and pull a package of heroin or cocaine out," he says.

The thousands of small boats along the coast, the numerous deserted waterways, and the huge profits to be made from drug trafficking make the problem a critical one, law officers say.

Drugs are being brought in by air, as well.

Deserted airstrips in isolated rural sections are apparently the scene of a great deal of activity if the few cases in which the drugs have been confiscated is any indication.

The thrust of the regional plan to combat smuggling will be toward organizing the various officials who are in the field regularly, and training them to recognize signs of smuggling.

North Carolina's major military installations located in eastern counties compound the drug problem. Research has shown that the heaviest drug use centers around those bases, and the conclusion follows that hard drugs to supply that market must be brought in.

The State Bureau of Investigation has already put into operation special drug squads who concentrate in that field, and the record shows an average of 10 to 15 drug arrests daily in the state.

Concentration must be on the traffic in hard drugs, says Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten, who hosted the Southeast planning session.

They Are Killers

"We would like to see every effort made to take those who are dealing in drugs off the streets.

"They are murderers. They are killing young people who start using drugs and turn to the hard stuff."

Some states have relaxed law enforcement on what is considered minor drug violations in order to zero in on the pushers.

Edmisten favors that approach. He does not endorse legalizing marijuana, and gives some credence to the idea that some number of those who start off smoking marijuana graduate eventually to more serious drug use.

"But I would be in favor of simply issuing a citation to a marijuana user. They are doing that in some places and it is working quite well . . . why clog up the courts and the police stations with such cases. Police could simply issue a citation and the defendant could appear for trial."

Edmisten is directing the SBI away from involvement in marijuana cases, urging that agency to concentrate rather on the pusher and the hard drugs.

"It's a matter of priorities," Edmisten said, "and my philosophy is to set the priorities on serious things. . .including the traffic in hard drugs."

The War Of The Stones

WASHINGTON—Last week I had a kidney stone attack in Evansville, Ind. I wouldn't have even mentioned it except that an alert Associated Press urology correspondent picked up the story, and it made the A.P. wire. So many people have written in asking what a kidney stone attack really feels like that I decided to try to explain it in terms that the layman can understand.

A kidney stone is about the size of a tiny pebble to everyone except the person who has one. To this person it is the size of the Rock of Gibraltar. In fact, many people when they get a kidney stone attack scream out, "I've got a piece of the Rock."

There are two kinds of kidney stones. One is made up of uric acid and the other of calcium. Doctors can differentiate between the two, but patients can't nor at the time of an attack do they give a damn. If you've felt one kidney stone, you've felt them all.

This is what seems to happen as far as the victim is concerned. He is going along minding his own business when suddenly, out of nowhere, a mountain forms in the kidney which, as I said, feels like the size of the Rock of Gibraltar.

The kidney reacts angrily to this interference with its function and tries to push the rock into what might be described as the Suez Canal. Obviously the Suez Canal cannot accommodate the Rock of Gibraltar, and without any warning war is declared between the kidney and the rock.

An urgent message is sent on the hot line from the kidney to the rock. "Unless you get out of our canal immediately, we will attack with everything we have in our organ."

The rock sends back a one-word reply, "NUTS!"

The patient, who is a horrified neutral spectator to this exchange, tries everything to achieve peace. He paces up and down, rolls to and fro and eventually tries to climb the wall in hopes that the kidney and rock will come to their senses.

Using Kissinger diplomataic tactics, the patient tries to persuade the rock that if it will just move a few inches down the canal, the kidney will not try to break it up.

But the rock is adamant and demands tremendous concessions in exchange for withdrawing from its position.

"How do I know," the rock asks, "that if I move from where I am now I will not be driven into the sea?"

The victim assures the rock the kidney has no intention of pushing it into the sea. All the kidney wants to do is live in peace with the lower part of the body. As long as the rock doesn't try to prevent the kidney from doing its work, the rock can live in the bladdar for as long as it wants to.

If negotiations fail and the rock refuses to move, then a U.N. doctor is called in who immediately fires a volley of Demerol or some other painkiller into the bloodstream.

This does not stop the war between the rock and the kidney, but it gives some shelter to the innocent, while the kidney tries to push the enemy out of its territory. This can only be done with gallons of water which the kidney forces against the rock.

If the good guy (the kidney) wins, the rock will retreat and even sue for peace. If the rock is able to repulse the water attack and hold its

Picture the Soviet Union sending buyers to the United States with firm orders, and hard money to back them up, for a billion dollars worth of automobiles.

Now extend this impossible dream by imagining certain politicians and labor leaders demanding that the government scotch the deal because additional sales aboard might cause car prices to go up at home.

Ridiculous? But just substitute grain for automobiles and you have today's "insane demand" by some to shut off further grain shipments to foreign customers.

That is the analogy drawn by Keith C. Barrons, an agricultural scientist with Dow Chemical Co. and author of a just-published book, "The Food in Your Future."

For years the American farmer has been raising grain for export just as much as for domestic consumption, says Barrons. Currently he is harvesting more than two billion bushels of wheat, knowing that all the bread, crackers, pasta and pastry we will eat in the U.S.A. during the coming year, plus a reasonable addition to our reserves, will require less than half that amount. The remaining billion-plus bushels were raised to be sold, just like every automobile that rolls off the assembly line, and this grain must be sold abroad.

Farm production for export has been a lifesaver for our economy, Barrons contends. Last year we exported $21 billion worth. If all this food had been retained at home just to keep domestic process down, the resulting high deficit in foreign trade would have caused further deterioration in the value of the dollar and higher costs for everything we import.

Even if a block to the free export of farm commodities had a temporarily depressing effect on food prices, the long-range effect would be higher prices, he says.

"Any manufacturer faced with the possibility of a ban on exports would gear his output to meet only the domestic market. With lower volume his costs would go up, and these increases would eventually reach the consumer.

"Farmers will certainly not plant for the superabundance we have been blessed with in recent decades if their foreign markets are in jeopardy. Do those advocating an export shut-off expect farmers to produce a high surplus in future years just so the prices they receive will go down?"

With higher taxes and greatly increased costs for equipment, fuel, fertilizer and everything that goes into a crop, many farmers are already on the ropes, says Barrons. An export ban could knock them completely out of the ring.

Preparations are about completed for the opening of the Greater Greenville Fair next Monday night at 6:00, secretary N. G. Bartlett said today.

Bartlett stated that the exhibit hall is being put in "tip-top" shape for the agricultural exhibits and that indications are that there will be plenty of exhibits for the visitors to the fair.

The old dangerous grandstand which was in use last year, will be replaced with cool open air bleachers, which will be erected to take care of the grandstand attractions.

INSIDE REPORT

Intelligence Is Drying Up

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Overshadowed by congressional emasculation of the CIA but perhaps even more damaging to the national interest is the sudden drying up of valuable intelligence through exposure of National Security Agency (NSA) techniques.

Formerly super-secret methods used by the NSA in monitoring commercial international phone and teletype circuits became common knowledge soon after they were given to congressional investigations of the intelligence community. Thus forewarned, foreign users of commercial channels for transmitting information of great interest to the U.S. government switched to more secure means.

Losing this information is viewed at the Pentagon as considerably more serious than Defense officials care to admit. While lacking hard proof of who leaked the NSA information, these officials believe it almost surely came from the staff of the House Intelligence Committee headed by Rep. Otis Pike of New York. "I firmly believe none of this came from our staff," Pike told us. The fact remains, however, that descriptions of NSA monitoring techniques appeared in public prints (including a long account in the Sept. 8 Newsweek) soon after the secret material was handed over to Pike's staff.

Several foreign nations who had been using commercial channels switched to private couriers. One result: the U.S. government has lost valuable information about Arab strategy in international oil price manipulations. But even more important information, directly related to U.S. security, also is gone.

Ford In N.H.

The Ford-Reagan confrontation in New Hampshire's Republican presidential primary begins on a strident note thanks to confusion over just what President Ford said to former Gov. Hugh Gregg at a picnic lunch in Amherst, N.H., Sept. 11.

Gregg got the distinct impression the President asked him to run his campaign there. Ford campaign sources say the President informed them he made no such offer. Former Sen. Norris Cotton, an old friend of the President who introduced him to Gregg in Amherst, was present for part of the conversation and remembers Mr. Ford talking about Gregg being a good man to "take hold" of his New Hampshire campaign.

There was no follow-up to the picnic conversation, and Gregg ended up as Ronald Reagan's state chairman. Ford sources say Gregg went with Reagan only because he could not run the Ford campaign; Gregg contends the President's men reneged on the President's offer. Thus, another New Hampshire primary begins with the sour tone typifying that state's Republican party.

A footnote: Until Oct. 5, Ford campaign managers were planning major campaigning by Jack Ford for his father throughout New Hampshire. Since his admission of using marijuana, however, Ford operatives wonder whether Jack would go over with Granite State Republicans and are delaying speaking plans for him there.

Victimizing Sonnenfeldt

Totally discredited security allegations first made against State Department counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt two years ago are behind a new move to block his promotion by President Ford as a foreign service career minister.

An unpublicized objection by right-wing Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina has held up Senate confirmation of Sonnenfeldt and seven other top diplomats as career ministers ever since the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved their nominations last July.

After keeping the nominations from the Senate floor in early August, Helms finally wrote Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Oct. 2.

Strength For Today

WHO IS DEFEATED?

There is an old political axiom which runs, "Always beware of any really good man who has been badly defeated."

A weak man defeated is crushed and broken. A bad man defeated becomes one whose whole energy is turned into destructive channels. But a good man defeated becomes a revitalized personality whose every power is now marshalled for victory. There it is that he girds up his loins and makes ready for a battle which makes all previous conflicts appear as nothing. He and his cause become fused together into a mighty crusade.

We can test character by the way men take defeat. The weak collapse under it, the wicked grow bitter and vengeful, the righteous regard it as a challenge. With renewed strength they prepare to begin the battle all over again.

The next time you feel defeated, remind yourself that there is no such thing as permanent defeat for any person whose cause is truly in the right.

Working On 1976 Forecasts

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — At this time of year the economic forecasters usually are well into the process of constructing their projections for the coming year.

It's an old tradition, and one that many of the very esteemed names will have nothing to do with, feeling that it is somehow a prostitution of their calling, a bit like putting them in a category with fortune tellers.

In fact, it is as distasteful to some reknowned academics as is the inclination of some of their colleagues to join the political bandwagon of one party or another, for politics, it is maintained, compromises good economics.

Those economists who ply their trade in the business world, however, cannot have the luxury of simply analyzing events after they occur. They are paid to look ahead, to foretell, and even suggests what moves to make.

So the tradition continues, and as always the same cry is heard: "There are to many imponderables this year."

Can you imagine inviting an economist to your annual convention, paying him a stiff fee and taking care of his room, board and entertainment, and not squeezing out of him a forecast?

Can you imagine an economist turning down the opportunity of making the same 40-minute speech to three different conventions in two weeks and collecting three four-figure fees while enjoying the sun and relaxing?

Can you imagine a commercial bank that must, for its own purposes, attempt to look far into the future, not sharing its views with its big corporate customers? Or a highly paid consultant declining to go out on a limb?

The forecasts, therefore, will be spilling forth in profusion between now and Christmas, despite a record of unsuccess over the past four years that in individual instances is quite lamentable.

In forecasting prices, for example, none other than the President's Council of Economic Advisers has understated the fact in 11 of the past 14 years, even though they did have more success in anticipating broad economic directions.

To praise economic forecasters, says Arthur Okun, a former chairman of the council of advisers, is "like saying that the Titanic had a good trip except for that iceberg."

You may be certain, therefore, that the early forecasts will call your attention to the icebergs, which is the equivalent of telling the Titanic's passengers "we'll be in New York as scheduled if we don't hit one of those things."

N.C. Culture Week Plans Set For November 4-8

By Dr. H.G. JONES, Curator
North Carolina Collection
Written for The AP

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—North Carolina's cultural heritage will be the focus of Culture Week in Raleigh Nov. 4-8.

No other state matches North Carolina when it comes to sipping from the culture cup during one event-packed week involving a dozen different statewide organizations. Drama, music, art, poetry, literature and history are served in bounteous portions.

Old-timers will find one big difference this year—the setting. The Sir Walter Hotel no longer serves conventions, so Culture Week will move to the new Sheraton-Crabtree Motor Inn in West Raleigh.

Programs, though, will be in a familiar mode. One of the highlights will be the observance of the 75th anniversary of the founding of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association Friday, Nov. 7.

"Lit and Hist" Day will begin with a morning session featuring Dr. Blyden Jackson of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He will discuss George Moses Horton, a black slave poet in antebellum North Carolina. Walter Spearman, journalist, will be the luncheon speaker.

The dinner Friday night will honor living former presidents of the association, all of whom have been invited as guests. President Margaret Harper will convey the honors.

At the evening session, Dr. Frontis W. Johnston of Davidson College, a former president, will evaluate the influence of the organization since its founding in 1900.

Key awards—the Mayflower Cup for nonfiction, the Sir Walter Raleigh Award and the Christopher Crittenden Memorial Award for contributions to history—will be presented following Johnston's address.

The annual meeting of the Roanoke Island Historical Association opens the week with a luncheon on Tuesday, Nov. 4. The North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs will hold its 19th annual Music Day in the afternoon and evening, with Dr. Robert Sunderberg, chancellor of the School of the Arts, as dinner speaker. Wednesday is Art Day, with the North Carolina Art Society meeting throughout the day and evening. The dinner speaker will be Dr. Sherman E. Lee, director of the Cleveland Museum of Art. At 8:30 p.m. a reception in the Museum of Art will open the 1975 artists' exhibition.

The Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina will meet Thursday morning at the Sheraton-Crabtree and hold its dinner that evening at the Archives and History-State Library building with Leopold Adler II of Historic Savannah as speaker.

The luncheon on Thursday, sponsored by the North Carolina Genealogical Society, will include an address by Prof. William S. Powell of UNC at Chapel Hill. E. Frank Stephenson Jr. of Murfreesboro will speak at the afternoon meeting of the North Carolina Museums Council.

In addition to the sessions of the Literary and Historical Association, the North Carolina Folklore Society will present its program on Friday. Its afternoon gathering will feature ballad singing, folk dancing and an illustrated history of the guitar.

The final day of the week involves four organizations. At the Governor's Inn in the Research Triangle Park the Society of Mayflower Decendants and the Historical Book Club of North Carolina will honor the winners of the Mayflower and Sir Walter Raleigh awards.

At the Sheraton-Crabtree, the North Carolina Poetry Society will hold a workshop and luncheon. Speakers for the Society of County and Local Historians on the same day will be Dr. Lindley S. Butler of Wentworth and Lura S. Tally of Fayetteville.

Culture Week got its start early in the century when other heritage groups began holding their annual meetings in conjunction with that of the Literary and Historical Association.

The term "Culture Week" was first used in a tongue-in-cheek article by Jonathan Daniels, and Dr. Christopher Crittenden, who coordinated the activities for 34 years, adopted it as the formal designation of the annual gathering of the cultural clans.

All meetings are open to the public and nonmembers may get a free copy of the program by writing the Literary and Historical Association at the Archives and History-State Library in Raleigh.

Environmental Seminars Will Begin Oct. 16

A series of seminars on environmental topics will be offered by the East Carolina University Department of Biology this fall. All seminars are open to the public.

The series will begin Oct. 16 with a presentation by Joe Harwood of the Duke Power Co. who will discuss the role of biology in Duke Power operations.

The Harwood seminar, and all others in the series are scheduled for 9 a.m. in the Biology Auditorium.

Seminar leaders and topics for other programs in the series are:

Oct. 21: Roy Beck, Soil Conservation Service. "Soil Conservation in Eastern N.C.

Oct. 23: A Weyerhaeuser Co. environmental specialist, "Environmental Considerations in Weyerhaeuser Operations in Eastern N.C."

Oct. 28: Quentin Bell, First Colony Farms, "Environmental Aspects of Farming Coastal Peat Lands."

Oct. 30: Doug Mercer, Texasgulf Inc., "Environmental Considerations in Phosphate Mining in Eastern N.C."

Nov. 4: Parker Chesson, College of the Albemarle, "Coastal Zone Management in N.C."

Nov. 6: Dr. Phillip Adler. Sierra Club, "Activities of the Cypress Group of the Sierra Club in Eastern N.C."

Nov. 11: A.C. Turnage, Dept. of Natural and Economic Resources, "Environmental Management and the Quality of the Environment in Eastern N.C."

Further information about the seminar series is available from Dr. Graham Davis of the ECU Department of Biology.

Because the quasi-official American Foreign Service Assn. (AFSA) had not been consulted, Helms contended, the nominations were illegally submitted to the Senate. AFSA is headed by right-winger John Hemenway, who was routinely "selected out" of the foreign service several years ago.

Helms's letter to Kissinger claimed the State Department violated foreign service "procedures" when President Ford nominated Sonnenfeldt and the seven other diplomats — including Assistant Secretary of State Arthur Hartman — to the highest foreign service rank.

But Helms's real reasons are unsupported charges made against Sonnenfeldt in 1973, when he was nominated by then President Nixon as Under Secretary of the Treasury, that he had leaked national security information. Helms was a key witness against Sonnenfeldt, who was strongly defended by conservative Republican James Buckley of New York after making his own investigation.

The Senate Finance Committee approved Sonnenfeldt's nomination following months of delay, but Kissinger brought him into the State Department as counselor before the Senate acted on the Treasury nomination.

The Foreign Relations Committee is now studying Kissinger's reply to Helms, contending that promotion procedures agreed to between the State Department and AFSA give AFSA no right even to be consulted on career minister nominations, much less any right of veto.

own, then the kidney will have to surrender, which means handing over negotiations to the Blue Cross.

It would be nice to report that once a kidney stone has lost a battle others would learn their lesson. But unfortunately this is not the case. Even though my kidney moved the enemy to a safe place, I distinctly heard in my Demerol stupor the rock say to the kidney, "I may go down the drain, but there's a lot more of us where I came from."

Supreme Court Rules Out Natural Gas Exemptions

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a growing natural gas shortage expected this winter, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled out a tactic which the Federal Power Commission considered its best hope of providing any immediate relief.

By barring 180-day exemptions from federal price controls on natural gas, the court left it squarely up to Congress to decide whether to permit such exemptions which in effect temporarily lifted the price controls that are blamed by the natural gas industry for shortages.

Even if Congress takes action later this year to permit the exemptions, however, that would provide only partial relief for the expected shortages.

The Federal Energy Administration estimates that temporary exceptions from federal price controls would make it possible for interstate pipelines to buy an additional 200 billion to 400 billion cubic feet of gas this winter at unregulated prices up to three or four times as high as the federal ceiling price.

But this is only a fraction of the total shortage, forecast at about 2.9 trillion cubic feet.

Meanwhile, concerned about suspicions that some producers or pipelines may not have been trying as hard as they could to meet their contract obligations for gas deliveries, the FPC announced Tuesday that it will crack down on any who are unnecessarily reducing their deliveries.

The FPC did not cite any specific examples, but said such questions have arisen through congressional hearings "as well as in the day-to-day administratration" of the Natural Gas Act by the FPC.

The FPC said it will hold pipelines and gas producers responsible for delivering their obligated amounts of natural gas or explaining why they can't. When appropriate, the FPC said it will take administrative action or go to court to enforce gas delivery obligations.

Gas shortages have been growing since about 1971. Both the industry and members of the FPC, including outgoing chairman John N. Nassikas, have blamed them on the legal requirement that the FPC regulate the price of interstate gas sales.

They say this has diverted much of the natural gas away from the interstate market, to the higher-price intrastate market which is outside federal regulation.

In an effort to give the pipelines more of the gas available on the unregulated market, the FPC permitted "emergency" purchases without price ceilings for as long as 180 days during the heating season of 1973-1974.

The spokesman said some 196 billion cubic feet of gas were purchased under 180-day exemptions that season. But the procedure was challenged by the Consumer Federation of America, the American Public Gas Association, the American Public Power Association, the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Eventually, the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled the 180-day exemptions illegal, and the procedure was not used during the 1974-1975 heating season while the case was pending.

On Tuesday, the Supreme Court made the Appeals Court's decision final by refusing to review it.

President Peron Due Back Today

By ALFONSO CHARDY
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Isabel Peron was due back from vacation today, and official sources said arrangements were being made for her to take over from acting President Italo Luder at a ceremony Thursday night.

Labor organizations scheduled a big rally Friday afternoon at which Mrs. Peron was expected to speak.

Rumors of a military coup have been circulating since the government announced last week that Mrs. Peron would return to office. She has been vacationing since Sept. 13 at an air force rest camp 450 miles northwest of the capital.

Interior Minister Angel Robledo said he believed the coup rumors were false because "the sources of power have repeatedly recognized how important it is to maintain constitutionality."

Security precautions were expected to be heavy for Friday's rally, which comes on the 30th anniversary of the rise to power of the late Juan D. Peron. His death July 1, 1974, elevated his widow to the presidency.

There had been much expectation that Mrs. Peron would not return to office because her administration had been unable to do anything about the country's grave economic situation, the political terrorism that has resulted in more than 1,000 deaths in the 15½ months since she took office, and the split in the Peronist movement between conservatives and leftists.

Political observers agree that the 44-year-old president must take decisive action against the nation's grave problems, or pressure to force her out of office will snowball.

Meanwhile, on Tuesday, police in Buenos Aires found the bullet-torn body of a 17-year-old university girl who apparently had been kidnaped and killed by right-wing terrorists.

Left-wing terrorists shot and killed a federal police officer in Buenos Aires, presumably in revenge for recent murders of leftists by right-wing death squads.

Sale Volume Still Heavy

FARMVILLE — Volume of sales on the Farmville Tobacco Market continued heavy Tuesday, according to sales supervisor Louis Williams, with offerings consisting of more leaf and smoking leaf than on any previous sales day this season.

Williams said that the volume of other grades yesterday was below normal and non descript grades accounted for only a small percentage of the overall volume.

Grade for grade, he said, prices were some stronger than on the last sales day with more sheets of tobacco selling for $1.20 per pound than on any previous sales day. Quality of offerings, as a whole, was the best in several days, the official added.

Stabilization receipts of 4,296 pounds or .65 per cent of gross sales represented the smallest totals this season, it was noted.

The market sold 661,362 pounds for $731,533 to average $110.61 per hundred pounds. To date, 27,791,188 pounds have been sold for $28,034,024, an average of $100.87 per hundred pounds.

Meet Friday

The third membership meeting of 1975 of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association will be held Friday at noon at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Five Greenville and Pitt County leaders will be the guest speakers. They are: Edwin L. Yancey, county chairman, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service; Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University; Reese Hart, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission; Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the School of Medicine, ECU; and Dr. James H. Bearden, dean of the School of Business, EECU.

Concluding remarks will be made by Curtis Hendrix.

Reservations are $3 per person.

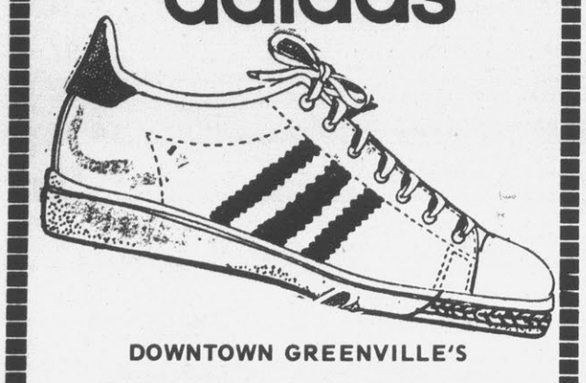

Shriver To Be Guest Speaker

WASHINGTON — Henry Shiver, farmer and humorist, will be the featured speaker for the annual stockholder's meeting of the Production Credit Association and Federal Land Bank Association here on Thursday.

James Foster, president of PCA and Joe Griffin, president of the Federal Land Bank in Washington, said that the meeting will be held at the Washington High School beginning at 5:30 pm.

Items on the business agenda include the annual report on the association's progress by the presidents of each association, the election of directors, and a report from directors on actions taken during the year.

Urban Officials Fear Snowball If NYC Defaults

SPENDING COMPARISON — This chart depicts per capita expenditures in various areas of public services for New York City and Pittsburgh. The Tax Foundation Inc., noted that New York spent over $1,000 for every resident while Pittsburgh spent just over $200. (AP Wirephoto)

By The Associated Press

Urban officials say they are afraid a New York City default will trigger financial crisis in other metropolitan areas, including some that are in sound fiscal condition.

Cities already are finding it harder to borrow money, to sell their bonds. They are forced to pay higher interest rates.

"The investor . . . is afraid of a New York situation and doesn't have the information about whether it exists in other cities," said Frank Strahsmeier, a partner in William R. Hough & Co., a bond trader in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Although the Ford administration has steadfastly refused to bail out New York, federal officials are beginning to admit that a default could have serious implications for the rest of the country.

An Associated Press study shows that no other city even comes close to New York in terms of the seriousness of its financial problems.

Let's look at the financial health of some of the big cities.

Standard & Poor's Municipal Bond Selector showed that as of the end of August, New York City owed more money, in both absolute and relative terms, than any other city.

What does that mean?

In absolute terms, New York City's overall bonded debt for which the city taxpayers are responsible was $7.7 billion. The next closest city was Chicago, with an over-all bonded debt of $1.2 billion.

Economists also measure debt in relative terms, however, comparing it to the number of residents, to the value of the city's property and to the income of its citizens.

The New York per capita debt was $983, equal to 9.4 per cent of the city's property value. Per capita debt represented just over 20 per cent of per capita income.

In Chicago, the nation's second largest city, per capita debt was $363, equal to 3.8 per cent of property value. Per capita debt represented only 7 per cent of per capita income.

A look at 20 of the nation's largest cities shows no other city where per capita debt is more than 15 per cent of per capita income.

The runner-up to New York, according to Standard & Poor's, is Pittsburgh, where per capita debt is 14.9 per cent of per capita income and overall debt represents 10.3 per cent of property value.

Pittsburgh, however, gets an AA rating from Standard & Poor's on its municipal bonds, meaning that the rating service believes the Pennsylvania city is very unlikely to default or fail to pay part of its debt on time.

The higher a city's bond rating, the easier it is for the city to raise money and the lower the interest rate it will have to pay. (The highest rating, AAA, indicates that the experts believe the quality of city management is superior and the payment of the bond when it falls due is a virtual certainty; the double-A bond is only slightly less certain to be paid off on time.)

Standard & Poor's suspended New York City's rating on its general obligation bonds — long-term debt — last spring and has not restored it.

Why does Pittsburgh get a double-A while New York City doesn't get a rating at all?

One reason is that debt isn't the only factor taken into consideration by Standard & Poor's and Moody's Investor Service, the other main rating agency.

They also look at long-range local improvement plans, at general financial operations, at the over-all health of the region's economy and at spending.

New York City has, for many years, engaged in a series of budgeting techniques criticized by economists. It has borrowed money, year after year, on a short-term basis to cover deficits that occurred when revenues didn't live up to expectations and spending exceeded them. Pittsburgh has not.

New York City also spends more money on various services, paying for items like welfare and education which, in other areas, are financed by county, state and federal governments or by separate taxing districts.

The Tax Foundation Inc. reports that for fiscal 1973, the latest year for which complete statistics are available, New York spent $1,224 for every resident, including $296 for education and $315 on welfare. Pittsburgh spent $216 per resident, including less than a dime on welfare and education combined.

If no one else is in as bad shape as New York, why is everyone so worried?

"New York's problems ... have a snowballing effect on the marketplace," said Henry G. Simmons, the New Orleans director of finance.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns said, "Many soundly run, creditworthy communities and public agencies could have great difficulty or suffer excessive costs in raising needed funds ... The process of economic recovery now under way in our nation could be injured."

There are two separate but overlapping groups of cities which would be adversely affected if New York City defaults.

First are those cities — mainly in the East — which have serious, long-term financial problems. The problems are not so critical as those in New York, but they are similar. Urban experts generally believe that these cities can and will recover if they are given time, but they warn that a default might take away that time. Financial analysts differ about which city is in worst shape, but the list of trouble spots includes Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Buffalo, N.Y.

The second group of cities includes areas with outstanding bond anticipation notes. A bond anticipation note is a city IOU, sold to an investor with the promise that it will be paid off after future bond issue is sold and the short-term debt is converted into long-term debt. These notes are not backed by local taxes or revenues. (They are different from the so-called general obligation bonds that make up over-all bonded debt.)

A New York City default would temporarily make it very difficult for the cities with anticipation notes to float a long-term bond to pay off these short-term debts. They would have to find the money somewhere else or face default.

An Associated Press spot check showed the cities on the second list include Cleveland; Philadelphia; Lincoln, Neb.; Columbus, Ohio; Boston and Buffalo.

Cleveland, Philadelphia and Buffalo are on both lists, but the shock of default would not necessarily hit these cities first. It could hit Lincoln, Boston or Columbus, depending on the timing of default and when the notes are due.

Boston treasurer James Young said his city has $30 million in anticipation notes that come due Nov. 24. "I think we would be able to refinance or sell the bonds," he said, but added: "That's not to say I don't have major fears (of what would happen if New York defaults.)"

James Lebenthal, executive vice president of Lebenthal & Co., a bond house, estimates that the fear of a New York City default has cost municipal borrowers $1.84 billion this year in extra interest.

"This is what the brinksmanship of default already has cost city taxpayers and they got nothing for it," he said.

No matter who gets hit first by a default, the impact will eventually affect almost all municipalities.

"Any city that has a welfare problem, any city that has short-term unfunded debt, and city that is borrowing for current expenses, any city that has made unwise settlements with police or other workers, any city that is less than kosher, could eventually be a candidate for default," said one bond dealer who asked to remain anonymous.

Many urban officials believe that increased federal aid is needed no matter what happens in New York.

"The problems aren't going to end until the federal government stops pursuing a policy of throwaway or disposable cities," said Dick Glauman, an aide to Milwaukee Mayor Henry Maier.

Plan Contractors Hire Sinai-Watch Civilians

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private American contractors under U.S. government supervision would hire the civilian technicians to operate the Sinai desert early-warning stations, according to preliminary plans.

President Ford, having signed a joint congressional resolution authorizing up to 200 American civilians to be stationed in the Sinai, now is moving to get the operation underway. His final decisions on the mechanics of the U.S. role will be made "relatively soon," a White House official said.

The role for private American contractors is among key proposals in a National Security Council memo being prepared for Ford to put the Israeli-Egyptian agreement into effect.

Administration sources say the President will make his decisions after receiving the NSC memo with options provided by a number of federal agencies, including the State Department, the Pentagon and the Office of Management and Budget.

Congressional sources say the idea of private American contractors appears to be a key proposal on which there is little opposition. Two basic options involve how the U.S. government will oversee the operations — whether through a small interagency task force, like the one set up to handle Vietnam refugees, or whether the job will be handled solely by the State Department or its Agency for International Development (AID).

According to the agreement Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger worked out with Egypt and Israel, the American-manned electronic warning stations will start operating by Feb. 22.

"We don't plan to have anyone in there until some time in January," said an U.S. official involved in the planning.

Meanwhile, some Americans have reacted enthusiastically to the idea of serving in the peacekeeping operation.

A State Department spokesman said over 800 applications have been received from civilians seeking the jobs, including 200 letters turned over by congressmen from their constituents.

Salaries around $40,000 a year have been mentioned as incentive pay to get highly trained personnel to serve in the lonely desert outposts.

Starting Course In Decorations

Pitt Technical Institue is offering an 18 hours course in Seasonal Decorations. The classes will meet each Wednesday from 7-10 p.m. in room 163 at Rose High School. The registration fee for each person will be $3.

The course will present appropriate and imaginative decorations for Halloween, Thanksgiving, and Christmas, such as, Pine Cones Decorations, Weathers, Candle Rings and Angels.

All interested adults should plan to attend the first class session.

Algeria, Morocco Eye Disputed Land Ruling

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

Algeria and Morocco have reinforced their troops in areas bordering the Spanish Sahara in advance of a ruling Thursday by the International Court of Justice on the disputed West African territory.

The World Court at The Hague is to announce its decision whether the territory of 102,703 square miles and 80,000 people was unclaimed land when it was occupied by Spain late in the 19th century or whether it was subject to the Moroccan throne.

The advisory ruling was sought by the United Nations and has no binding effect.

Morocco's King Hassan II has pledged to bring at least the phosphate-rich northern half of his southern neighbor under Moroccan sovereignty before the end of the year.

Algeria, which has only a 35-mile border with the Spanish Sahara, says it has no territorial claims in the area but wants the territory's 60,000 nomadic inhabitants to determine their own future.

Mauritania, on the western and southern side of the Spanish Sahara, claims part of the territory, contending that it was inhabited by tribesmen of Mauritanian descent at the time of Spanish colonization.

Spain also favors self-determination. It has some 70,000 troops in the territory. But Spanish officials have said repeatedly that the Franco government is not prepared to become involved in a colonial war and would pull out rather than fight a prolonged war if Morocco invaded.

A three-nation United Nations mission which recently visited the area recommended to the U.N. General Assembly on Tuesday that the population be allowed to determine its own future, under U.N. auspices.

The mission — made up of Cuba, Iran and the Ivory Coast — recommended "consultation" with the people but stopped short of proposing a referendum. It also suggested a U.N. presence in the territory and a "common accord" among the interested nations to avoid changing the status quo.

A large part of the Moroccan army was deployed on full combat alert along Morocco's southern border. Algerian army units, also on full alert, patrolled Algerian territory only 20 miles across the trackless, stony desert.

The two countries fought a brief but bloody border war over parts of the Algerian Sahara 12 years ago. King Hassan last week set up headquarters in Marrakech, the south Moroccan city from which he directed Moroccan forces in the 1963 border war.

Town Hasn't Forgotten: Still Hunting A Murderer

BENSON, N.C. (AP) — Hope springs anew every time telephone 894-6735 rings in Benson.

Maybe, a volunteer wonders as he answers, this call will provide the clue necessary to bring about the arrest and conviction of the person who killed Mrs. Bonnie Wheeler Neighbors three years ago.

Benson, a town of 2,500 in Johnson County, eastern North Carolina, has not forgotten the case.

Instead of letting Mrs. Neighbors' bizarre murder fade away unsolved, citizens have revived the effort to find her killer.

They have raised $15,000 and with $5,000 from the state they have posted a $20,000 reward.

Volunteers are answering the special telephone around the clock.

The latest citizen effort had had side effects. The SBI has reopened its investigation, and law officers have renewed confidence that someone will come up with a clue.

Mrs. Neighbors, an attractive housewife, was 33 years old when she was killed.

She had taken her four-month-old son, Arthur, with her to pick up another son at school.

They never got to the school. Three days later, her body was found in a vacant migrant labor camp. She had been shot in the head. Arthur was lying nearby, still alive.

Officers believe someone must have fed the baby during the interlude between Mrs. Neighbors death and the discovery of her body.

Several persons were questioned but no one was arrested.

Peter Denning, a member of the town board and president of Benson Insurance and Realty Co. is heading the renewed effort to find Mrs. Neighbors' murderer.

"Many of the 2,500 residents of the town have not forgotten the case and are still angry about it," Denning said. "People here don't stop until something is done."

Denning heads the Bonnie Neighbors Committee, an organization of about 100 friends and relatives. Members of the committee, which was organized about two weeks ago, solicited contributions for their reward fund.

The telephone is viewed as a key in coming up with a clue. Denning said callers may remain anonymous and all information they provide will be kept confidential.

The telephone will be manned for the next month or two, or even longer if necessary.

"We have gotten some good leads, Denning said. "I don't believe there is a perfect crime and all we have to do is find the right source."

He said he was confident that somebody somewhere knows something.

Some people have difficulty even talking about the case, "One caller was on the phone discussing the case and broke down and never did call back," Denning said.

Mrs. Neigbors' husband, Ken Neighbors, 42, an accountant who has remarried, has a hard time talking about her death.

But he has been grateful for the community's latest response. "It has been encouraging to see the interest shown from all the law enforcement agencies and friends," he said.

"Everybody knew us," he added. "They are our friends and they put themselves in our position."

Police Chief Lindell Nordan said he is confident that the reward offer will help.

"Unless someone pays more than $20,000 to keep somebody quiet," he expects there will be some arrests made in the case.

Suit Filed By Prisoners

ALBEMARLE, N. C. (AP) — Four prisoners have filed a lawsuit in U. S. District Court in Greensboro, advancing their plan to relieve overcrowding in North Carolina prisons.

Their proposal: Don't lock up any more people, at least until the overcrowding is relieved.

The felony prisoners with the plan, inmates at the Stanly County corrections unit, were listed in the suit as Tommy Bolding, 25, of Gastonia; Robert Fink, 27, of China Grove; Samuel Bost, 32, of Concord; and Raymond Creason, 52, of Cullowhee.

They typed their lawsuit on notebook paper and filed it last week as paupers, in the tradition of jailhouse lawyers. They named corrections Secretary David Jones as defendant.

The suit contends that overcrowding causes inmate tensions to rise, making it harder for prisoners to get along with each other.

The suit adds that since guards cannot adequately protect prisoners from one another, assaults increase.

Jones acknowledged Tuesday that prisons are crowded.

Corrections figures list the Stanly unit as designed for 100 inmates, with a Tuesday head count of 138. Statewide, the prison system supposedly has room for 10,000 prisoners, with a current head count of about 12,500.

Jones repeatedly has spoken out about overcrowding in the prisons, and he has tried unsuccessfully to persuade the General Assembly to finance a massive prison-building program.

At one point, the corrections secretary went so far as to warn that he might have to quit taking prisoners.

Jones said Tuesday, however, he was not yet ready to hang out a no-vacancy sign and would continue to take prisoners. "I don't have a choice," he said.

Specialist Will Report Research

Dr. Hal J. Daniel, associate professor of speech, language and auditory pathology at East Carolina University, will address two national conventions in November the usefulness of the Mongolian gerbil as a laboratory research animal.

He will discuss specific aspects of previous auditory research projects using the Mongolian gerbil, which were conducted with Patricia J. Loesche, former graduate student at ECU.

On Nov. 20, Dr. Daniel will report their findings to the American Academy of Laboratory Animal Science in Boston, and on Nov. 23, he and Ms. Loesche will address a gathering at the American Speech and Hearing Association in Washington, D.C.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today with an apparent lift from a prime rate reduction by a small St. Louis bank.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 4.41 at 839.66, and gainers took a slight lead over losers after trailing by a good-sized margin earlier on the New York Stock Exchange.

It remained to be seen whether any major banks would match the quarter-point cut in the prime rate to 7¾ per cent posted by St. Louis' Southwest Bank. The move nevertheless seemed to encourage investors following the steady rise of the basic rate on business loans this past summer from the 6¾-7 per cent range to 8.

Halliburton was the most active issue on the Big Board, off 2¾ at 152 in a 103,600-share block trade—a transaction with a value of more than $15 million.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .03 to 84.10.

The NYSE's composite index, by contrast, picked up .13 to 47.41.

Higher third quarter profits helped Alaska Airlines climb ⅜ to 5½ among the volume leaders on the Amex.

ABC Leads TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, enjoying its best season in years, finished No. 1 in the weekly ratings averages for the first time since January, according to the latest A.C. Nielsen ratings.

Nielsen figures released Tuesday for the week ending Oct. 12 estimated that ABC's prime-time viewing audience was 13 million homes each night, compared with 12.5 million for NBC and about 12 million for CBS.

Also, seven of its shows were in the top 20.

CBS traditionally has been the front-runner in weekly averages for the last 20 years and ABC has been a consistent third-place finisher. Over-all, for the first five weeks of the season, CBS is the front-runner, according to Nielsen's estimated average audience levels.

CBS' "All in the Family" was the top-ranked show last week.

The 19 other most popular shows were "Sanford and Son" (NBC); "Phyllis" and "Maude" (both CBS); "Six Million Dollar Man" (ABC); "Rhoda" (CBS); "Marcus Welby," "The Rookies," "Streets of San Francisco," "On the Rocks" and "Barney Miller" (all ABC); "Chico and the Man," last week's baseball playoffs Tuesday night, and "Little House on the Prairie" (all NBC); "Good Times" (CBS); "Starsky and Hutch" (ABC); "Mary Tyler Moore," "The Jeffersons" and "Medical Center" (all CBS), and the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie."

the task force did not investigate "some of the fundamental shortcomings in narcotics law enforcement."

Percy said he believes far more substantial changes are necessary, "starting with a settlement, at long last, of the seething and counterproductive dispute between the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Customs Service...."

The Customs Service long has objected to the 1973 reorganization plan in which the DEA was given primary responsibility for investigating narcotics smuggling in the United States and abroad. The reorganization limited the role of Customs to seizures of contraband at the border.

Speaker Green Will Be Running

RALEIGH (AP)—House Speaker Jimmy Green has committed himself to seeking Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor and will make his formal announcement around the first of next year.

Green, a seven-term veteran of the General Assembly, Tuesday took his first official action as a candidate by naming state Rep. Kitchin Josey, D-Halifax, to be campaign treasurer. Green's action had been expected as his name has been popping up for months as a potential candidate for governor or lieutenant governor.

The news release announcing Josey's appointment was on campaign stationery with Green's picture and the words "Jimmy Green Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor" at the top.

In a telephone interview from his Clarkton office Tuesday, Green said he wants to wait to formally announce because the primary election will be in August and an announcement now would make the campaign too long.

Another reason he gave for the delay was his duties as speaker. "I'm staying real busy with the speakers office," he said. As leader of the state House, Green must make appointments and keep in touch with interim legislative committees.

Green said he will use the time to get his personal affairs in order and to finish putting together his campaign organization.

Josey is in his third term in the House and is speaker pro tem. "It is most gratifying to have someone of Kitch Josey's stature support you in a bid for statewide office, but it becomes a signal honor when a person of such caliber volunteers his services for such a responsible job in the campaign," Green said in the announcement.

Green is a farmer and tobacco warehouse owner.

Fears Invasion By Guatemala

By SALLY-ANN WELFORD
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Premier George Price of Belize says he fears an invasion "at any minute" by neighboring Guatemala, which has claimed the tiny Central American British colony for years.

"We don't want war, but with British help and support, we are prepared to fight if necessary," Price said after a fruitless appeal to the Mexican government for help.

The premier of what used to be British Honduras said Guatemalan troops are gathering on Belize's borders and the Guatemalan navy is patrolling off the colony's Caribbean coast. He said Belize has 900 armed guards, policemen and auxiliary police while Guatemala has a 12,000-man army.

Price said Guatemalan officials told him the troop reinforcements sent recently to the border area were for local military celebrations.

The premier returned home Tuesday night after a four-day visit to attend the opening of the Pan-American Games last Sunday. He said he had asked President Luis Echeverria to mediate between his government and Guatemala. But Echeverria turned him down, saying his government sides with Guatemala.

Square Dance Friday Night

A square dance, featuring the Flatland Family Band, will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall of St. James United Methodist Church.

The price of tickets is $1.50 per person. Proceeds will go to the church.

Expect A Large Dinner Turnout

A large gathering of Ducks Unlimited members is expected for Thursday night's annual DU dinner meeting at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Area chairman Eddie Smith said that the evening will begin with a 6:30 p.m. social hour and will be followed by dinner and the DU program, which includes the annual auction with proceeds going to the national DU fund.

Last year's meeting, which drew a gathering of some 210 members resulted in approximately $16,000 being raised locally to further the waterfowl conservation effort.

Rampants Seek Second Loop Victory

Rose High School, hopefully on guard, will play host to Bertie Senior High School Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

The Rampants will be chasing their second Division I victory against the winless Falcons. Bertie, which has lost six straight games, and has only scored 11 points, however, could prove a spoiler if the Rampants are not careful.

"It bothers me," Coach Dave Bumgarner said when asked about a possible letdown against the Falcons. "I'm afraid some of the players are taking them lightly. But they shouldn't. Everyone we've played so far has been up for us; and there is no reason why they shouldn't be too."

Rose, following its stunning 38-0 upset loss to Reid Ross two weeks ago, came back to open Division I play last week with a 20-14 win over Rocky Mount.

"We started out by sticking right to our game plan." Bumgarner said of the Rocky Mount contest. "We expected them to come out in a 60-defense, and they did. We guessed that they'd try to cut out our inside game, so we simply moved to the outside right away, and it worked for us. We scored early, and did what we wanted to do—except for a fumble and an interception."

Then, the coach expressed some unhappiness with the play of his charges. "We never did put them away like we could have and should have," he said. "We got down inside the 20 twice more and didn't score. It seems like we're satisfied just to do enough to win. Maybe we just lack a killer instinct."

Bumgarner did praise the blocking of the team, saying that it was "150 per cent" better than it had been against Reid Ross. "The defense did a much better job too."

Bumgarner said he wasn't too worried about having to play on Thursday. (East Carolina, in its current agreement with Rose, will not allow the Rampants to have a home game on Friday night prior to a Saturday afternoon game due to the turnaround time in getting the stadium ready. Rose thus plays such games on Thursday or Satuday nights.)

"We miss one day of practice, so we don't get quite as much time to prepare. I'm glad we had a pretty good game to go into it with. It would have been a lot worse if we had loss. It also gives us an extra day to start preparing for Northern Nash," Bumgarner said.

While fearful that Bertie is going to be coming in sky high, Bumgarner notes that the Falcons have a very young team. "They even cancelled their junior varsity schedule to bring everyone up to the varsity," he said. "They run out of pro-set, and they scored early against Wilson. They have a good threat, it's just a question of making the offense work."

For Bertie, it is the first year of 4-A football play. A member of Division I in all other sports for the past two years, Bertie played a 3-A non-conference schedule.

"We need a darn good win," the coach said. "We have a morale problem, and I'm not sure what to do about it. The kids are not up like they should be. They seem like they're ready at the start of the game, but then there is a letdown. We have to fight every week to get out and by the time it's over, we're physically and mentally beaten. We need to have a game when we can play a lot of people and really get happy."

Bumgarner is hopeful that the Rampants will be able to put it all together against the Falcons. "We need it. We need to build up our confidence, especially before these next two games. But everyone is playing us hard. So we have to go after people a little harder.

"We really need that big victory," he added.

Bertie, in its six previous starts, has failed to win. They list successive defeats at the hands of Roanoke, 7-0; Washington, 26-0; Tarboro, 14-6; Ahoskie, 28-0; Plymouth, 29-8; and Wilson, 42-8.

Rose, in its six starts to date has beaten Goldsboro, 13-7; New Bern, 28-0; Kinston 21-15; Jacksonville, 16-14; and Rocky Mount, 20-14. The Rampants lost to Reid Ross, 38-0.

Trevathan Is Triple Threat For Rampants

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Years ago, when the single wing offense was the thing across the country, people looked to the player who was the triple threat: the man who could run, pass and kick.

Well, the days of the single wing are gone now, but Rose High School can look on its own triple threat man in Henry Trevathan, its quarterback.

This year, as a senior, Henry is in his third year as the starting signal caller for the Rampants. He's running better than ever, his passing has improved, and he's also handling the punting duties for Rose.

"Henry is a good quarterback. He's a knowledgeable one, and he can pick up things quickly" Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "He calls a lot of the game himself, and we go over our game plans to try and insure that we can get the job done. He has great ability to do this."

Trevathan has helped guide the Rampants to two straight State 4-A playoff berths, and is hopeful that he can do it again. "We didn't do well in the state last year, and I think we should have gone further."

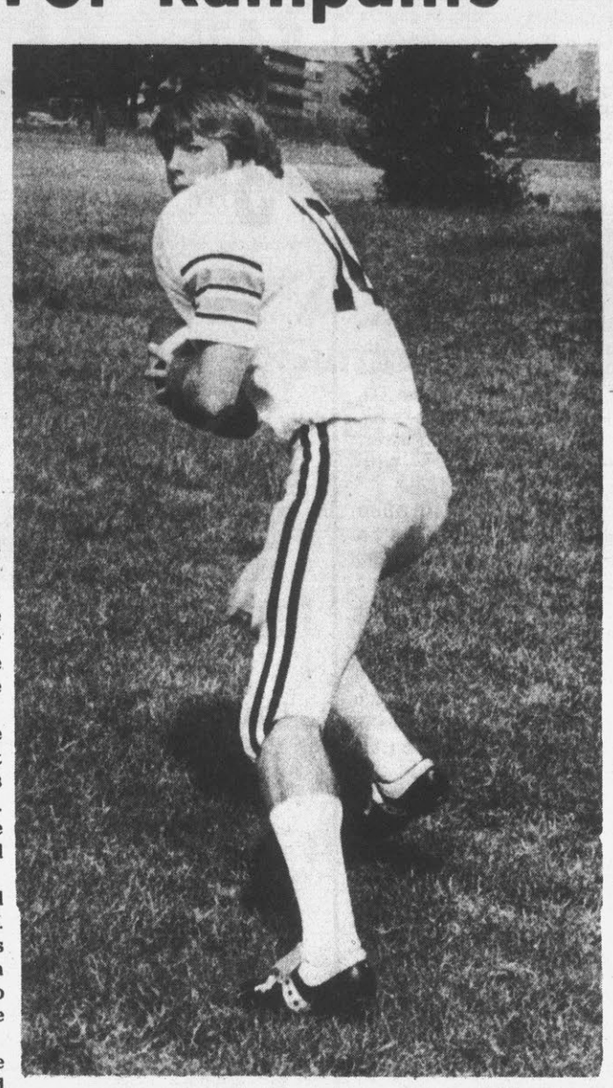

Henry is glad to have had some good teammates, too. "We've had a lot of good players during the past three years. I'm fortunate that I've been able to play with them. They've made me look a whole lot better."

Asked about the many close games the Rampants have had this year, Trevathan said the team seems to get off to a good start, but then falls off. "We look like we're going to blow them right off the field, then we have mental letdowns that enable them to come back and we have to fight for our lives."

The quarterback is also worried that a big letdown could come Thursday night. "Some of the players aren't taking them seriously. We've got to get them ready. We had a letdown against Reid Ross, so we should know what can happen. We have to respect Bertie as much as anyone."

Trevathan is pleased with his increased running chores and the increased yardage that goes with it. "I worked hard during the summer to try and increase my speed and quickness. Also with the experience of two years behind me, I can tell better when to pitch out on the option."

Trevathan, who has come under fire at times by the fans for his passing, has worked hard on this segment of the game too. "I feel it's improved. I'm throwing the ball harder now, and I think to some extent this has hurt our receivers. But our offense doesn't call for that much throwing.We just need to work on it to make it work when we need it."

Quarterback Henry Trevathan

The kicking chores came easy to Trevathan, who says he really enjoys this part of the game. "I've been kicking all along, but I really worked had on it during my summer workouts. I'd kick 15 or more times every day."

Henry started his football career in the "fourth or fifth grade" while still in Wilson. He moved on to junior high ball at E.B. Aycock, then to the varsity at Rose. "I've been a quarterback since I started junior high," he said. "I was a halfback in recreation ball."

A member of the Key Club and Monogram Club at Rose, Henry enjoys summer activities such as swimming and water skiing.

Following this year, he plans to go to college to further his education. And he has hopes of playing more football.

But for now, he's still guiding the Rampants, hopefully toward a third straight playoff berth. "I think we're improving as a team each week. We weren't as good at the start as we should have been. But we're slowly climbing. I feel we can be a real good team. But we've got to work a little harder to get there."

CLAIMS INTERFERENCE — Boston Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk, left, hesitates before throwing to second in an attempt to force out Cincinnati's Cesar Geronimo in the tenth inning of the third game of the World Series last night. Fisk and Boston manager Darrell Johnson argued that batter Ed Armbrister interferred with Fisk on the play, but plate umpire Larry Barnett, right, ruled otherwise. Fisk's error on the throw to second allowed Gerinimo to move to third, and he later scored to give the Reds a 6-5 victory in the game. (AP Wirephoto)

Big Red Machine Is In The Driver's Seat

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Big Red Machine is in the driver's seat of the World Series, thanks to some sudden power and a spark from a home plate collision.

The Cincinnati Reds unlimbered their big guns and turned a controversial play at home to their advantage for a 6-5, 10-inning victory Tuesday night and a 2-1 lead in baseball's Fall Classic.

In tonight's fourth game, the Reds send left-hander Fred Norman against Boston right-handed ace Luis Tiant at 8:30 p.m. EDT.

"We won tonight because we're lucky ... because the good Lord takes care of us," said Manager Sparky Anderson.

Anderson could think of no other way to describe the Reds' bittersweet victory in Game 3 — a pulsating, tense affair that had everything, including the most talked-bout play of the 1975 World Series so far.

This was the situation: with the game tied at 5-5 and a runner at first in the 10th inning, Anderson ordered pinch hitter Ed Armbrister to lay down a sacrifice bunt. Armbrister did as expected, but something unexpected followed.

The ball hopped a few feet in front of home plate and Boston catcher Carlton Fisk charged to field it. He had difficulty getting to it, however, because Armbrister was in his way.

When Fisk picked up the ball, he threw toward second base in an attempt to get the lead runner. But the throw was wild into center field and the Reds suddenly had runners on second and third base because of the error.

The play triggered a protest from the Boston bench, particularly Fisk and Manager Darrell Johnson. They felt the batter had interfered with Fisk's play and therefore should have been called out by home plate umpire Larry Barnett.

The play became all the more crucial, because the Reds loaded the bases and went on to win the contest on Joe Morgan's single.

A seething Fisk had nothing pleasant to say about Barnett after the bitter defeat at Riverfront Stadium.

"He blew it two ways," the Boston catcher said of Barnett. "The first time was when he didn't call interference on the play. The second time was when he didn't call the man out because I probably tagged him after I got the ball."

Johnson was equally incensed.

"I don't need to read the rule out of the rule book," he said. "We all know the rule and Armbrister did interfere with Fisk. The man is entitled to run to first base, but the runner can not come into contact with the fielder before he has the opportunity to field it.

"I went up to the plate umpire and when I didn't get any satisfaction, I went to the first base umpire. I didn't get any satisfaction from him, either. He just shrugged and didn't say anything. Their interpretation of the rule is obviously different from mine."

Barnett, of course, had his own interpretation of the rules, as did the Cincinnati camp.

"I ruled that it was simply a collision," Barnett said. "It is interference only when the batter intentionally gets in the way of the fielder. I signalled that the ball was fair and in play."

Dick Stello, the first base umpire who backed up Barnett during the heated Boston protests on the field, said: "It was not interference. In such a situation, the batter has as much right to go to first base as the fielder has to go for the ball. To make it interference, the batter would have had to intentionally try to impede the fielder from going for the ball. He did not do this."

As was expected, Armbrister swore up and down that he did nothing intentional to block Fisk's way.

"I hit the ball in front of the plate and it bounced high," said the player in the middle of the dramatic controversy. "I started to break for first and Fisk just came from behind and bumped me. The play was behind me, and if he hit from behind, I would say he interfered with me."

If it wasn't for what Sparky Anderson called his "stupid" mistake, the whole business wouldn't have happened.

The Reds had a 5-3 lead going into the ninth inning with reliever Will McEnaney seemingly in control of things. The Reds' left-handed bullpen ace struck out Fred Lynn for the first out and the crowd of 55,392 at Riverfront settled back for what looked like a comfortable Cincinnati victory.

Then McEnaney gave up a single to Rico Petrocelli and Anderson brought in Rawly Eastwick to face Dwight Evans. He didn't face him too long, for the Boston outfielder promptly parked one of his pitches into the left field seats to tie the game and send it toward its unpredictable climax.

"I made a dumb mistake, it's as simple as that," Anderson said. "I should have had Eastwick in there a batter earlier pitching to Petrocelli. I waited one batter too long to bring in a right-hander against Petrocelli."

Cesar Geronimo got things started in the 10th with a single and moved to third on the controversial bunt play. The Red Sox issued an intentional walk to Pete Rose to load the bases. Pinch hitter Merv Rettenmund struck out before Morgan came through.

Earlier, Johnny Bench hit a two-run homer for the Reds in the fourth. And Dave Concepcion and Geronimo blasted homers in the fifth, when Cincinnati scored three times. Before Evans' game-tying wallop, the Red Sox got solo homers from Fisk in the second and Bernie Carbo in the seventh. The total of six shots tied a World Series record for most homers by two teams in a game.

Was It Or Wasn't It? Nobody Knows For Sure

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

CINCINNATI (AP) — Was it interference or was it just an innocent, unavoidable collision?

"Interference," argued Manager Darrell Johnson, catcher Carlton Fisk and other members of the angry Boston Red Sox, beaten 6-5 on a controversial bunt situation that sent Cincinnati ahead in the World Series, two games to one.

Plate umpire Larry Barnett of the American League contended it was a collision — and no violation of baseball law — when pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister of the Reds backed into the catcher after laying down a bunt.

Johnson and his Boston players were furious. They intimated they were robbed.

Manager Sparky Anderson of the victorious Reds told catcher Johnny Bench: "I don't think it was interference."

Barnett stuck to his guns and received support from the first base umpire, National Leaguer Dick Stello.

This was the situation:

With Cincinnati batting in the bottom of the 10th after the Red Sox had rallied from a 5-1 deficit to knot the score in the home run-studded game, Cesar Geronimo was on first with an opening single and Armbrister pinch-hitting for pitcher Rawly Eastwick.

Armbrister bunted in front of the plate. Fisk rushed to field the ball. As he did so, Armbrister and Fisk came together. Armbrister took two steps toward first, backed up and then started again.

Fisk made the damaging wild throw, allowing Geronimo to race to third.

There was a definite collision. Whether it constituted interference became a question that may be debated for generations.

Here are the rules, involving interference:

Rule 2.00 Interference, (a) Offensive interference is an act by the team at bat which interferes with, obstructs, impedes, hinders or confuses any fielder attempting to make a play. If the umpire declares the batter out for interference, all other runners shall return to the last base that was, in the judgment of the umpire, legally touched at the time of the interference, unless otherwise provided by these rules.

6.06 A batter is out for illegal action when —

(c) He interferes with the catcher's fielding or throwing by stepping out of the batters box or making any other movement that hinders the catcher's play at home base. Exception: Batter is not out if any runner attempting to advance is put out, or if runner trying to score is called out for batter's interference.

7.09 It is interference by a batter or a runner when —

(1) He fails to avoid a fielder who is attempting to field a batted ball, or intentionally interferes with a thrown ball, provided that if two or more fielders attempt to field etc. etc.

Confronted with Boston's protests after the game, Barnett said, "I ruled that it was simply a collision. It is interference only when the batter intentionally gets in the way of the fielder. I signalled that the ball was fair and in play."

Bench Waiting For Real Reds

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench still is waiting for the real Cincinnati Reds to stand up.

"I did not like the way things worked out. Maybe this will wake us up," said the Reds catcher Tuesday night after Cincinnati's 10th-inning, 6-5 victory over Boston propelled the National League champions into a 2-1 World Series lead.

"Somebody was looking over our shoulders," said Bench, after the Reds capitalized on home plate umpire Larry Barnett's favorable call on a controversial bunt play.

"I had a feeling it was going to be a play where he (Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk) hit me or I hit him," said pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister, whose bunt triggered the storm of controversy after the two collided after the ball was tapped.

"I don't feel I interfered. I didn't step back to get in his way," he said.

Barnett saw it the same way despite a heated dispute from red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson.

How did Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson see it?

"I can only say that whenever you hit a ball, you have the opportunity to run to first base," he said. "It was strictly a judgment call and we can't argue with the umpires' judgment."

Joe Morgan's bases-loaded line drive over drawn-in centerfielder Fred Lynn settled the outcome, but he shook off questions about whether the crucial triumph was tainted.

"We're ahead 2-1, let them say what they want. The rules say we're ahead 2-1," snapped Morgan.

Bench said he didn't get a clear view of the game-turning play, "So I asked Sparky what happened. He said 'it was not interference.'"

Earlier, Bench helped spark the Reds to a 5-1 lead with a two-run homer off Red Sox starter Rick Wise in the fourth. Dave Concepcion and Cesar Geronimo added back-to-back solo blasts in the fifth.

But Boston clawed back, jumping on Cincinnati's vaunted bullpen for two late-inning home runs. "We're all pushing a little extra hard," said Bench. "But I was very, very disappointed. I wasn't very proud of the way we played."

Morgan added dismay over the Cincinnati letdown. "Sometimes we have the tendency to think a 5-1 lead is enough," he said. "Boston proved to us they can come from behind. We had them 5-1 and let up."

His game-winning hit off reliever Jim Willoughby came with one out and two strikes. "I was determined I wouldn't strike out. I stayed with the pitch and hit it straight away," said the all-star second baseman.

It was the second time in three Series games that the Cincinnati bullpen had its problems, and Anderson acknowledged concern.

"I am disappointed with our losing the lead in the ninth because all season long we have been consistent in holding leads we took into the ninth inning," he said. Rawly Eastwick came up with his second series victory, despite a two-run homer in the ninth by Dwight Evans that tied it at 5-5.

Angry Boston Feels It Was Robbed Of Win

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Boston Red Sox were a bitter lot. They were mad, and didn't care who knew it.

As gracious as they've been all year en route to the American League pennant, they literally blew their tops Tuesday night after dropping a controversial 6-5 decision in 10 innings to the Cincinnati Reds.

Ironically, plate umpire Larry Barnett from their own league was the target of most of the epithets, stinging sarcasm and denunciation. However, first base ump Dick Stello of the National League came in for his share.

"If those are the best umpires we have, we need more," said Carlton Fisk, who considered himself the victim of Barnett's call backed up by Stello.

"Why don't we use the honor system and put baseball back in the hands of the players and people?" Bill Lee asked bitterly.

"Nestor Chylak and guys like him should be umpiring this Series," Boston captain Carl Yastrzemski said. "We should have guys who have busted their butts all season. Nestor probably shut off the TV when he saw that call.

"I don't know whose idea it was to rotate umpires. Why don't we rotate teams and see how the fans like that?"

The Sox' fury was over Barnett's refusal to call Cincinnati pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister for interference after a controversial bunt play. A collision between Armbrister and Fisk caused Fisk to throw wildly to second, allowing Red runners to advance to second and third and setting up the winning run.

"He (Barnett) blew it two ways," Fisk said. "The first was when he didn't call interference on the play. The second was when he didn't call the man out because I probably tagged him after I got the ball."

Johnson said he had seen similar plays during his long career and all had been ruled interference by umpires. He admitted, though, "I've never seen any such play in a game anywhere near as big as this one."

"I went up to the plate umpire and when I didn't get any satisfaction I went to the first base umpire," Johnson said. "I didn't get any satisfaction from him, either. He just shrugged and didn't say anything.

"Their interpretation of the rule obviously is different from mine. We all know the rule and I feel the man (Fisk) was interfered with. However, there's no way you can protest an umpire's judgment call."

"I didn't even want to listen to the umpire's explanation," losing pitcher Jim Willoughby said. "You might as well take it off the book. Fisk had to physically push him out of the way to make the play."

No Easy Wins For U.S.

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — What was supposed to be a rout is instead — suddenly, shockingly — a race.

After just two days of competition in the VII Pan American Games, the Americans find their ranks somewhat stunned, in disarray, trying to regroup in the face of a headlong assault by the upstart Cubans.

The heavily favored U.S. effort, backed by more than a million dollars, was tied with Cuba in total medals, 26, but trailed by a decisive 14-11 margin in gold medals.

Brazil was next with 12 medals, including three golds. The Canadians also had three golds and 11 total, with Mexico next with 10, including two golds.

Seventeen more events were scheduled for finals today — six in weightlifting, where so far the Cubans have cleaned, pressed and jerked the heck out of their opposition.

Featherweight Roland Chang and his bantamweight counterpart Carlos Lastre won all three gold medals in each category Tuesday, accounting for six of Cuba's nine golds in the second day of competition here. On Monday, Cuba's Francisco Casamayor got the hat trick in the flyweight category.

Cubans also accounted for the two Games' records bettered Tuesday.

Two Americans, Martha Watson and Kathy McMillan, appeared to have finished 1-2 in the women's long jump with 21 feet 6¾ and 21-3½ respectively — both having broken the record of 21 feet 2¾ inches — until Ana Alexander managed an astounding 21-9 on the last jump of the day.

The petite Cuban had qualified poorly and was not considered a threat.

Earlier, young Silvio Leonard won the men's 100-meter dash with such reckless abandon, he plunged down a tunnel opening at the end of the course. Leonard, who suffered an ankle injury, traveled the distance in a record 10.15 seconds.

The best any American could do in the 100 meters was a fifth by Clancy Edwards of Santa Ana, Calif.

Track and field finals were scheduled today in men's discus, men's triple jump, men's and women's 800 meters, and the 20-kilometer walk.

Other finals were set in men's fencing, judo and shooting — in which the Americans have done the best so far.

Herschel Anderson, a 38-year-old Army sergeant from Columbus, Ga., won a gold medal in individual air rifle Tuesday, and that, coupled with a victory Monday in the free hand pistol event, made him America's only double gold winner.

It appeared some of the anti-American tide might be turning after an impressive game in basketaball between the Yanks and the highly regarded Mexico team.

The United States won 99-70 but Coach Marv Harshman praised the losers. "They played awfully well," he said. "They really tied us up at times with their zone. And for a time there in the first half, they took control of the boards away from us."

In baseball the Americans downed El Salvador 7-0. And in field hockey, the U.S. team and Mexico tied 1-1.

American 500 To Rematch Best Of NASCAR Circuit On Sunday

By RICHARD WATERS
Associated Press Writer

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — The fourth from the last stop on the Grand National stock car tour comes up Sunday with the 11th annual running of the American 500.

The 500-mile chase around the North Carolina Motor Speedway, fastest mile-long oval on the circuit, will rematch the front-runners of the National 500 in Charlotte two weeks ago — Richard Petty, David Pearson, A.J. Foyt, Buddy Baker, Cale Yarborough and Bobby Allison.

Those six dueled practically wheel-to-wheel for most of the race, with Petty crossing the finish line .26 of a second ahead of Pearson and six seconds ahead of Baker. Foyt, Yarborough and Allison, who led at various intervals, were in contention until mechanical problems sidelined their cars.

Another half dozen drivers are also expected to be contenders in Sunday's 36-car race, which carries a $114,550 purse. They are 1975 Daytona 500 winner Benny Parsons, Dave Marcis, Charlie Glotzbach, Donnie Allison, Lenny Pond and Dave Marcis, who chalked up his second Grand National victory last Sunday in the Capital City 500 in Richmond, Va.

The Dodge-driving Petty goes into the race with an unprecedented sixth Grand National point championship virtually locked up despite a last place finish in the Capital City 500. Petty needs only to finish last in the remaining four races to take the title.

Petty's performance at Richmond marked the first time that he had finished last in nine years and 361 starts. However, he still considers himself lucky.

"I've had the most luck this season, but I don't see how anybody can be rated a favorite in any race with all those good drivers and good cars," said Petty, who has won 12 of the 26 Grand National events on the 1975 schedule.

"A good break for one team and just a little bit of bad luck for the others can mean all the difference," he surmised. "There are a bunch of cars real close together. I certainly haven't had an easy time of winning any of the races."

Qualifying for the pole position, worth $1,300, and the first 20 starting places will begin Friday afternoon. The remaining 16 positions will be filled Saturday.

Making A Name

GREENSBORO (AP) — Clemson's freshman quarterback Willie Jordan is making a name for himself in Atlantic Coast Concerence football.

The talented 180-pound native of Griffin, Ga., has been picked as the ACC rookie of the week for his play in leading the Tigers to a 16-14 triumph over Wake Forest last Saturday. Earlier this season, he was the league's offensive back of the week.

Against Wake Forest he booted a 34-yard field goal with only five seconds remaining in the game to provide the victory. It was his fourth successful three-pointer in five tries this season.

Jordan, who started at quarterback against the Deacons, accounted for 165 yards in the victory. He rushed for 42 yards on nine carries. He hit on six of nine passes for 123 yards, one a 55-yard scoring strike to Craig Brantley.

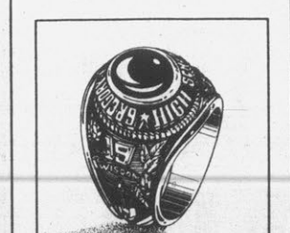

He engineered Clemson's first scoring drive, a 67-yard touchdown march, and the winning drive in the final period which started at the Clemson 20. On the last march, he passed for 29 yards and ran for 27 more.

Earlier this week, a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association selected Maryland wingback John Schultz and Clemson end Bennie Cunningham as the offensive players of the week.

Provides All The Oil Data

By JERRY R. WILSON

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The CIA believes in the value of it and bought at least three copies last year.

The Arab oil states have copies delivered to their embassies in Washington and New York.

The Internal Revenue Service, for reasons unspecified, buys several copies each year, as do assorted other federal agencies and military departments.

It is the International Petroleum Encyclopedia. In more humorous times, it might have been subtitled, "Everything you always wanted to know about oil, but didn't know who to ask."

Oddly enough, however, those who might find it most valuable — members of the House and Senate — are not on the buyers list for the IPE, which is updated and published annually by the Petroleum Publishing Co., at a list price of $37.50.

In 1974 the names of only three members of Congress — all senators — were included on the buyers list.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., had obvious reasons for wanting to keep up on the development of the world's petroleum resources. Somewhat more surprising, considering the absence of any other lawmakers from Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana or other oil states, were orders from Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, both members of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

"If congressmen had the book they would have the information at their fingertips to answer any of their questions (about petroleum)," says Barbra Snyder, editorial coordinator for the 1975 edition. "We feel this book can answer just about any question anyone would have about the petroleum industry."

The atlas-sized, 480-page publication provides raw data from government and industry sources on all aspects of petroleum throughout the world, and does so with little discernable editorial comment.

Country-by-country data is provided on all nations with any oil or gas reserves, and many with none of either. Individual, regional, hemispheric and world figures are given on refining capacity, vehicle population, consumption, every known individual oil field, fiscal data on the world's 50 largest oil companys, ports, rivers, pipelines, tankers, cities and topography.

Special sections are devoted to the North Sea, the primary hope of the future for most of Europe, and to an overview of the international petroleum industry.

The IPE tells the reader where the oil is, how much is there, how much was produced last year, where it was refined, where and how it was shipped, how much was paid and in what forms and at what rate it was consumed.

The charts draw no conclusions, but it takes little effort to find disturbing information in them.

For example, with the information provided, it is a simple matter to compare current world production-consumption rates with proven reserves and determine how long those reserves will last. The answer is less than 38 years at current rates of consumption.

George Weber, publisher of the weekly Oil and Gas Journal, flagship of Petpubco and one of the chief sources of information for the IPE, would like to sell the reference manual to every government official in every nation — particularly the U.S. Congress. With it, he believes, most of them would have sound information on which to weigh the daily barrage of dissenting views from lobbyists on all sides of the energy question.

Despite an increasing urgency of the energy problem and growing need for information there has been little interest in Congress, as evidenced by the three senators who were among last year's 12,000 buyers of the IPE.

$218,313 In Grants Received By ECU

A total of $218,313 was awarded East Carolina University during the month of September for support of four campus research or service projects.

Primary source of the funds were two state agencies. The N.C. Department of Human Resources awarded $130,780 to Dr. Marlene G. Irons, director of the ECU Developmental Evaluation Clinic for a prekindergarten screening program.

The N.C. Drug Commission gave $65,777 to the ECU Regional Drug Program to continue its outreach program in eastern N.C.

Other grants were: an award of $18,883 to Dr. Vila M. Rosenfeld of the ECU School of Home Economics to support a food and nutrition occupational education project. The funds originated from the American Home Economics Association.

Dr. David S. Phelps of the ECU anthropology faculty received $2,873 from William F. Freeman Associates to support an archaeological survey of the Swift Creek Watershed in Pitt County.

Report of the funds received was released by the ECU Office of Sponsored Programs, a campus agency which coordinates outside funding for ECU.

Amputee Shares Karate Talents

By PAUL CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer

STEELTON, Pa. (AP)—Ten years ago, Ted Vollrath lost a 13-year battle to keep his legs. They had been shattered by a Communist mortar shell in 1952 during another battle, near Inchon, Korea.

Now Vollrath is fighting a third battle — to save the hopes, spirits and self-esteem of handicapped youngsters — and he's winning.

Vollrath has signed up black belt karate experts to teach handicapped youths in the United States, England and Canada. Last spring he incorporated a group called Martial Arts for the Handicapped.

The program seems to be going strong, largely because of the mind-bending example set by Vollrath.

The 39-year-old yodan — fourth degree black belt — is widely known in karate circles. Magazines have featured him and he often performs at karate shindigs. Recently he packed them in at Madison Square Garden in New York.

He has just completed a razzledazzle movie thriller — "Pushers Die Hard" — and is set to do another.

But Vollrath says that apart from his family, his biggest passion is the Martial Arts for the Handicapped (MAH) group.

"I'm the first one in the world to get a black belt from a wheelchair ... I've got other handicapped people involved now," he said.

"I have about 187 black belts signed up right now teaching handicapped students. We have blind students, we have quadriplegics missing both arms and legs. All he (a quadriplegic) can do is read on the martial arts. A couple years from now he's going to be able to lecture on the history and philosophy of the martial arts."

Karate classes have already been started for 176 handicapped individuals in England and in several states.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I think it would come to this," Vollrath said.

Vollrath has third-place billing in the new movie, which also features Dick Jekeyll, John Agar and the Chitwood stunt drivers.

"My name in the movie was 'No Legs,'" Vollrath said. He plays the part of a drug czar aide who starts taking over the organization.

Vollrath continues a hectic pace of personal appearances, traveling in his specially adapted car or by air, often working 16 to 20 hours a day. At every opportunity he plugs his martial arts organization for the handicapped.

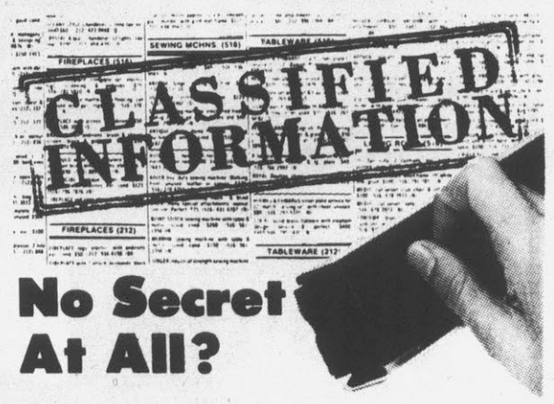

But he also finds time to be with his wife and four sons, ages 3 through 15, who are studying martial arts, too.

The Vollraths live in a modest home near this Harrisburg suburb, but that may change. He is now getting up to $1,000 for a single appearance and $750 a day while making movies.

He said he plows most of the money back into his activities. Last year he said he netted only $4,100 after expenses.

When you pack books for shipping or moving, alternate the direction of their spines and pack them flat.

How N.C. Representatives And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 2 through Oct. 8.

HOUSE

COLUMBUS DAY RECESS — Adopted, 263 for and 136 against, a resolution (H Con Res 424) authorizing the current congressional recess, which began Oct. 9 and ends Oct. 20. Two other recesses — Veteran's Day (Oct. 23-28) and Thanksgiving (Nov. 20-Dec. 1) — are scheduled during the remaining 1975 session. There was virtually no debate on H Con Res. 424.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), Richardson Preyer (D-6) and Charles Rose (D-7) voted "yea."

Reps. L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), W. G. Hefner (D-8, James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

SINAI — Rejected, 122 for and 287 against, a proposed two-year limit on a resolution (H J Res 683) implementing the Administration-sponsored Middle East peace agreement. The agreement permits Americans to operate an early-warning system in the Sinai buffer zone, as requested by Egypt and Israel. The resolution was subsequently adopted and sent to the Senate.

Although the House rejected the amendment, it imposed other conditions on the Administration's request for up to 200 American civilians to monitor the peace. H J. Res 683 requires that the U. S. technicians be volunteers subject to removal if fighting occurs or Congress determines that they are no longer needed. H J Res 683 also provides for a twice-yearly Presidential report on the observers.

Rep. Paul Findley (R-Ill.), the sponsor, said the two-year limitation is needed to keep the U. S. from becoming a permanent fixture in the Sinai. He said his amendment would insure more congressional input in ffuture American attempts to shape long-lasting peace in the Middle East.

One opponent, Rep. William Broomfield (R-Mich.), said the amendment "introduces an element of uncertainty and unreliability which will certainly delay and could well prevent. . .what may be the last chance for peace in the Middle East."

Jones, Fountain, Hefner and Broyhill voted "yea." Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Martin and Taylor voted "nay." Henderson did not vote.

PESTICIDES — Rejected, 167 for and 175 against, an amendment giving the Secretary of Agriculture veto power over future pesticide bans imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The amendment sought to soften the EPA's authority to ban DDT and other pesticides. It was proposed to a bill (HR 8841) extending through Sept. 30, 1976 the law governing EPA's pesticide authority. HR 8841 permits the Secretary of Agriculture to comment on but not overrule EPA pesticide regulations. HR 8841 was headed for passage.

One supporter, Rep. Keith Sebelius (R-Kan.), said more "input from the agricultural sector" is needed along with that of environmentalists and consumers. Rep. Charles Grassley (R-Iowa) said, ". . .the farmer cannot produce cheap food without the use of chemicals."

One opponent, Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.), said, "The health of the American people has to come first. Allowing the Agriculture Department, with its constitutency of a very specialized nature, to be able to overrule the decisions of the EPAA, is just plain wrong."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Hefner did not vote.

BEEF BOARD — Passed, 229 for and 189 against, a bill (HR 7656) to provide a legal framework for U.S. beef producers to organize a "Beef board" to promote the industry and provide consumer information on beef. Federal organizational clout was sought because private, voluntary efforts to organize have been ineffective.

The beef board would be composed of 68 beef producers, with the Secretary of Agriculture as an overseer. The organization would receive no federal funds, and would be funded by a tax on beef and dairy production. The board's existence would depend on a referendum among producers. This bill authorizes the referendum.

HR 7656 is supported by the American National Cattlemen's Association and the American Farm Bureau Federation. It is opposed by the National Farmers Union, the National Farmers Organization and the Consumer Federation of America. HR 7656 was sent to the Senate.

Supporters said the bill provides for a "self-help" program — not a federal handout — which is needed by the financially hard-pressed cattle industry. Rep. Thomas Railsback (R-Ill.) said that unless farmers are permitted "to produce to get a fair return . . .the prices of farm products, and particularly beef, are going to go higher and not lower."

One opponent, Rep. Frederick Richmond (D-N.Y.), criticized the bill's premise that "advertising and promoting beef, our most expensive food, is in the public interest and should be encouraged."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea." Andrews and Martin voted "nay."'

SENATE

SCHOOL LUNCH VETO — Overrode, 79 for and 13 against, President Ford's veto of a bill (HR 4222) extending the School Lunch Act and other child nutrition programs. The House also overrode the veto, thus clearing HR 4222 for enactment.

HR 4222 authorizes $2.7 billion for fiscal 1976 to help fund a program providing reduced-price lunches for children whose family income is less than $9,770. It also subsidizes meals for needy school children, preschoolers, mothers and infants, and pregnant women.

In his veto message, Ford said HR 4222 would exceed his fiscal 1976 child nutrition funding proposal by $1.2 billion, and provide unnecessary subsidies for non-poor families.

One supporter, Sen. Herman Talmadge (D-Ga.), said "Mr. Ford is again playing a numbers game" in calling the bill a budget-buster. Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) said HR 4222 would mean a 10 percent increase over current funding of child nutrition programs, an increase that is "substantially less than the rate of food price inflation."

One opponent, Sen. Carl Curtis (R-Neb.), criticized HR 4222 for broadening the existing child nutrition program into a "suplementary income measure." He said HR 4222 was like promising "a free lunch for the kids . . .and then running out of the restaurant and skipping out on the check, because this year the federal government will have a budget deficit of about $70 billion."

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea." Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

BIG OIL — Rejected, 45 for and 55 against, an amendment to break up the large, vertically-integrated U. S. oil and gas companies. The amendment would have set a five-year deadline for large oil or gas producers to give up related assets such as refineries, transport facilities and marketing outlets. The companies could then take part in only one facet of their indistry.

The amendment was proposed to a bill (S 2310) to avert natural gas shortages this winter. The Senate will again take up S 2310 after the Columbus Day recess.

Supporters said it is time to break up the domestic oil "cartel" and cast a vote for "free enterprise." Sen. Philip Hart (D-Mich.) cited the federal depletion allowance, tax relief, import quotas and tariffs as government contributions to the success of the oil industry. He said, ". . .what the state gives the state surely in the interest of the common good should be able to take away."

Opponents said the amendment would crush exploration for new energy reserves becaus only the largest companies can round up the capital needed for such exploration. Sen. Dewey Bartlett (R-Okla.) contended that "effective competition" exists in the oil industry and that the amendment threatened to disrupt the nation's entire economy.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

Cannon Carriage Trade 'Booming'

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich. (AP) — James Bradley's carriage trade is booming, but that's not too surprising — Bradley makes cannon carriages.

He has at least a six-month backlog of orders, and there seems to be little competition in his field.

Bradley says only one other company is in the field, the Ashe Ordnance Works of North Carolina. And, that company has a three-year backlog.

The pressures of time aren't great anyway in Bradley's carriage trade. Many customers are museums and "they have a different view of time. Sometimes they'll wait six months before responding to a bid," he said.

Bradley started the business last year when a friend asked him to make carriages for cannon to decorate a local restaurant.

Then, the owner of the firm supplying the cannon barrels for that project suggested Bradley become a fulltime carriage-maker.

"It didn't take much urging; I was fascinated," Bradley recalled.

Since then, he has built carriages ranging from those for small naval guns to one bearing field pieces up to 3,500 pounds weight. The heavy weapons, he says, require carriages with wheels up to eight feet in diameter.

Bradley started carriage making after working as an electrical contractor, diver and maker of custom furniture.

Despite all that experience and his success, there are occasional problems in the carriage trade.

Usually, Bradley has only photographs or sketches from military history books to guide him.

"Sometimes I have to sit down and figure out how a particular piece or part was used, what function it served. Sometimes that'll give you a clue as to how it was made," he said.

But a more persistent problem occurs because of the lack of deadline pressure, Bradley reported.

"I've had to fight the urge to make every little piece perfect," he explained.

Natalie Cole Abandoned Medical Studies To Begin Singing Career

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Four years ago premed student Natalie Cole had dreams of stethoscopes and scalpels. That was before the 25-year-old daughter of the late Nat "King" Cole began belting out blues and rock songs with the determination of a seasoned gospel singer.

Now Miss Cole, whose 5-foot-9 trim body is topped with a mane of curly, ebony hair, has cut one album, is working on a second and has a hit single. It is called, "This Will Be."

"I had a music appreciation class that lasted half a semester, and I took piano lessons for two years — the quickest two years of my life," she yelled from the kitchen of her tiny upper West Side Manhattan apartment.

"Really," she said, leaving the kitchen with a neatly made peanut butter sandwich, "I've been so unbelievably unmusical about the whole thing. My father is probably disgusted with me because he never thought I was interested in music."

If the legendary singer-pianist-composer were alive today, she said, he'd tell her to "do your own thing." Natalie's mother never encouraged her to go into show business because "she knew the knocks my father had to go through."

Natalie does not plan to follow in her father's image — "I believe in myself, and I believe in my talent." She jumps up from the dining room table to change the radio station from soothing jazz to funky rock.

"People are going to add 'the daughter of' anyway, and I can understand that," she said. "But I would rather go on my own name, because I wouldn't really be true to myself, and I would never know in the end if I was being recognized as Natalie Cole or the 'daughter.'"

Success has not spoiled Natalie Cole. She says she does not hunger for the opulent lifestyle of the superstar. Instead, she has set three goals for herself: a house in the country so her family can get together; children of her own; and a boat, because she likes the water.

When Natalie talks about her brothers and sisters and mother, an infectious smile dances across her face. The same smile appears when she looks from her apartment window to the vast blueness of the Hudson River and the rich greenery of the New Jersey cliffs.

"My life has changed," she finally says, resting her head on her hands as she straddles a chair in front of her desk with Nat Cole photos.

"A year ago I was uptight and not too easy to get along with. I was a loner, really," she said. Then the big chance came when her singing career began to leap and she became a Baptist.

She has been compared to a young Aretha Franklin when she first started. And Natalie admits that the legendary rhythm and blues singer has been an influence in her own career.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

When this hand was played in the European Championship, one declarer went down in six diamonds while the other made a grand slam in the same denomination. Despite the result, both declarers played the hand properly! The swing result was caused by the fact that they were in different contracts.

The bidding shown is that of the French pair, Michel Lebel and Paul Chemla. They used a natural sequence, during which each player showed his major suit control. When Blackwood elicited the information that all the aces were present, North showed his interest in a grand slam by inquiring for kings, and South jumped to seven diamonds on the strength of his solid suit.

At the table where the contract was six diamonds, declarer won the opening spade lead in dummy and drew trumps in two rounds. He cashed the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club high, and had the suit divided 3-3, he would have claimed the rest of the tricks. When this failed to materialize, declarer entered dummy with a low trump to the eight and took the heart finesse—a 50-50 proposition. Unfortunately, West held the queen, and his spade return defeated the slam.

When Chemla held the South cards, he, too, received a spade lead and tackled the hand in the same way. After clubs failed to break, it seemed he was sure to go down. He could enter dummy with a trump to ruff another club, thereby setting up the fifth club for a spade discard, but there was no apparent re-entry to dummy to enjoy the long club.

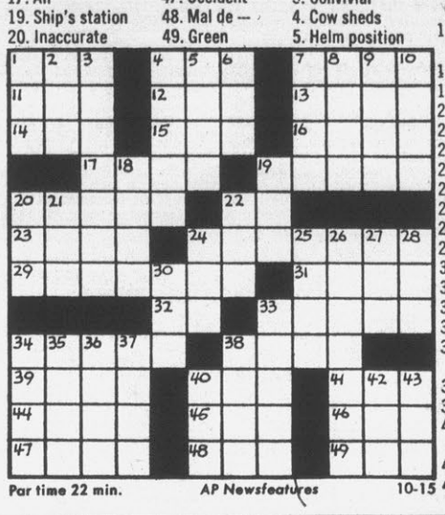

There was only one glimmer of hope. If either defender held a doubleton queen of hearts, the jack would become the extra entry. So declarer laid down the ace and king of hearts, with very happy results, and the grand slam rolled home.

As we noted, the odds of a successful heart finesse are 50 per cent. The chances of dropping the queen of hearts in two rounds are slightly under 10 per cent. Sometimes, there is no justice.

Designates Energy Conservation Week

RALEIGH (AP)—The week of Nov. 2-8 has been designated Energy Conservation Week in North Carolina and to remind everyone, the state will put up billboards saying, "Time is running out. Conserve energy now."

In announcing the week Tuesday, Gov. Jim Holshouser said, "an all out energy conservation effort is essential this winter if we are to get through it without serious consequences for many of our people."

Beginning Nov. 15, the state will have its natural gas supply curtailed with the shortage expected to reach a level of 50 to 60 per cent, Holshouser said.

"We are doing everything we can to get more natural gas for the state. We've been knocking hard on the doors of the Congress to get legislation adopted that will help us through the winter," he said.

"But it is very clear that we have to conserve every bit of natural gas we can—in our homes, our offices, everywhere. Many industries employing thousands of people face the very definite possibility of shutting their doors this winter if we aren't able to get natural gas."

Citizens will be encourage to conserve all forms of energy, with the governor's office and other state agencies issuing suggestions on how to save energy, he said, adding that all forms of energy are interrelated. Some companies are switching to alternate fuels this winter, he said.

One step the governor urged citizens to take immediately was to start using buses or join car pools to get to work.

After Tuesday's news conference, Holshouser presided over the first meeting of the new Energy Policy Council, which was established by the 1975 General Assembly to deal with energy problems.

Offshore Oil Poses Promise Of Riches And Risks

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — The expensive art of drilling for oil in the bottom of the sea was born off this marshy coast and grew up like a brat with permissive parents.

"We thought it was a shot in the dark," said B.J. Courtney, who was a 22-year-old roughneck on the crew that drilled the first oil well in the Gulf of Mexico out of sight of land 28 years ago.

"We never thought much would come of it."

What has come of it is obvious — 4.5 billion barrels of crude from the Gulf alone. Now oilmen say that America's 17 offshore basins which may hold oil and natural gas, a total of about 180 million underwaters acres, could produce a bonanza equal to the nation's entire 116 years of past production.

But offshore production also threatens to bring oil spills and industrial blight, and states up an down both coasts are demanding more time to prepare.

Not Louisiana. Here, where offshore drilling began, some environmentalists are saying that oil spills aren't so bad after all, that in fact oil and water do mix — provided the oil is crude, unrefined. Clearly, other environmentalists disagree vehemently.

For the historic first well the drilling rig was mounted on a platform atop wooden pilings in water 18 feet deep, 11 miles off the beach.

The well came in on a splendid October Sunday in 1947 with the bit a mere 1,500 feet deep. It turned the fishing village of Morgan City, 43 miles to the north, into an offshore oil boomtown — and it still is.

But the fishermen, enraged by fouled nets and stinking bays, were known to take a shot or two at offshore workers in the early '50s and clashes between oil exploration boats and shrimp fleets were frequent. But things change.

Now fishermen and oilmen warily coexist on the bountiful Gulf. Shrimp boats thread their way among thousands of oil and natural gas wells and tough regulations have shut off the days of careless dumping and spills.

Smiled upon by presidents and sheiks — Preident Ford toured an offshore rig during last April's visit to New Orleans — drilling has spread from these kindly seas to shallow waters around the world.

The Gulf Coast, where it all started, remains the classic example of the good and bad which can result from 20 years of nonregulated oil fields and the growth of a powerful technology.

Other countries with rigs drilling off their shores send observers to Louisiana to study what they should do — and what not to do.

"I suspect the Louisiana coastal area has been subjected to every type of petroleum environmental threat that could be thought up," said Dr. L.S. St. Amant, assistant director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission and a noted marine biologist.

"We survived. We learned from hindsight. And mistakes we made can be avoided by the newer offshore areas."

St. Amant was among the first critics of oil's freewheeling operations along Louisiana's coastal marshes in the '20s, '30s, and '40s, but he says regulated offshore drilling poses no serious problems and won't "kill" the sea.

Those who travel to New Orleans to talk with St. Amant include delegations from almost every Atlantic Coast state, where opposition to offshore drilling runs deep.

He found some of them irritatingly skeptical.

"I'm supposed to be a man of some expertise on this subject and I sure wouldn't perjure myself for any industry," he said. "but a lot of people have fixed ideas about environmental problems."

They're at least a good deal more skeptical than St. Amant.

Spencer Apollonio, Maine's commissioner of marine resources, said "the more we looked at the effect of oil on marine organisms or the marine nvironment, the more concerned we became.

"There is a wide variety of effects — the outright kill, of course: the sub-lethal, chronic, long-term effects. We know that a variety of organisms can store oil, transfer it apparently along the food chain.

"Put all the information that we have together in the world, on the effects of oil on the fish, and you've got a fairly frightening picture. It is hurting. There's no way that it cannot hurt."

Apollonio said he is still studying the effects of a 1964 crude oil spill off Maine. "It's still affecting the organisms, and these are second and third-generation clams we're talking about. At the present rate of dissipation, it's going to be with us a hundred years."

Despite such contrasting opinions as those of Maine's Apollonio and Louisiana's St. Amant, the Department of Interior has pressed on with plans to sell Atlantic offshore oil leases, with the first sale tentatively scheduled for next June.

To The Citizens of Greenville:

Home Winemaker Immersed In Art; Anybody Could Get Involved

By DANIEL C. RIKER

COLUMBIA, Md. (UPI) — If my wife had known what she was starting when she gave me a winemaking kit a couple of years ago, I probably would have gotten a sweater instead.

The wine from the kit was undrinkable. Better grape concentrates did not produce outstanding wine.

So I set out this fall to make 200 gallons, the legal maximum, from fresh grapes grown in the Middle Atlantic states.

My first 1975s were two whites made from French hybrids. They yielded 28 gallons of pressed juice. Each weekend since late August I have devoted to the noble but inelegant art of winemaking.

My hands sometimes look like those of a car mechanic who hasn't washed in a week. Fruit flies in our basement are like a plague of locusts. I've pulled a muscle, scratched an eye, almost cut off a finger, run my car with a trailer attached into a ditch and gotten a bee sting that itched for a week.

Now I've decided not to try to make 200 gallons of wine because making a small amount at home is harder than starting a commercial winery.

I began last year by substituting two-by-fours, a cloth bag and a trash can for the automatic crushers, destemmers and presses used by commercial wineries.

Probably only the thought of fruit fly larvae crawling over my toes keeps me from stomping the grapes with my bare feet.

Making wine at home is hard work. The real fun doesn't begin for one and a half to six months, when blending time arrives, and you taste the wines in the hope that some will be good.

I was told red grapes must be stemmed before fermentation. Sometimes helped by my wife and friends, I removed the stems by hand, dropped the grapes into a plastic trash can and mashed them with the end of a two-by-four. With yeast added the red grapes were allowed to ferment for a couple of days and then pressed through a linen bag by a pair of two-by-fours tied together like scissors.

But a porous cloth is needed. I had juice all over everything, but mostly in the bag.

Two days of huffing and puffing produced only five gallons each of red and white juices. So I built a press out of redwood and a hydraulic jack. It seemed simple until I used it. The wood cracked each time the juice began to flow.

The basement floor soon was deep blue. Whole generations of fruit flies lived and died while I worked on that press.

But there was a reward: a professional winemaker called it decent. I was inspired to plant Cabernet, Merlot, Riesling, Pinot Chardonnay and Marechal Foch vines. They now must brave Maryland's unpredictable climate, Japanese beetles, neighborhood children and a friendly wild rabbit.

I also found a friend with a grape press and crusher I can borrow to expand my production, although it still will only be about half of my original over-ambitious plans.

You really don't save much money by making your own wine. It won't be as good as a good French variety, but it can equal a decent jug wine, and few of us can afford to buy anything more expensive for everyday drinking.

The key elements are decent wine grapes, not native wild grapes; sugar content that will produce alcohol levels above 11 per cent (you'll need a hydrometer for this); moderate acid levels (you need acid testing equipment); wine (not baker's) yeast; good fermentation and storage containers (the most practical are five-gallon glass jugs; the worst are soft plastic); fermentation locks and sulphur to kill vinegar bacteria and prevent oxidation.

Forget the traditional way of putting juice in a crock in a cool place and letting it ferment naturally. The result often is a wine of low alcoholic content that can easily turn to vinegar.

Supplies are sold in winemakimg shops and by mail order firms.

Before starting, you should read some books. The two best are "Home Winemakers Handbook," a paperback by Richard P. Vine and Walter S. Taylor, both commercial winemakers from New York state, and "American Wines and Winemaking," by Philip M. Wagner. Wagner is a former editor of the "Baltimore Sun" who operates a winery just north of Baltimore and who brought French hybrids to the U.S. in the 1930s.

Professors at the University of California at Davis have written several major works on grape growing and winemaking, but they are expensive and more suited to professionals.

U.S. University In Money Crisis

CAIRO (AP) — U.S. political and economic influence is returning to Egypt but the American University here is facing a financial crisis.

The anticipated deficit for 1976 is $1.6 million.

"We are freezing all services and cutting back," says Dean of Faculties Thomas Lamont. "But Congress says squeeze more. The irony is that just as our mission is bearing fruit and we need more support to affirm the educational impact we have been able to make, the U.S. government is reducing its financial help."

The U.S. Congress approves allocations the Agency of International Development provides for American schools and hospitals abroad.

In the past two years, administrators say, the U.S. contribution to the university's annual budget of about $6.2 million has dropped from 78 to 66 per cent of the total.

The administrators are bitter about the cutback and feel the government is letting them down after the university maintained a link between the two countries during the seven years when there were no diplomatic relations. Egypt and the United States resumed ties in March 1974. They were severed during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

At the same time the United States has begun to pump money into Egypt's sagging economy — $250 million in 1974 and maybe double that this year — in an effort to keep the government here from again turning to the Soviet Union for help.

To cut down the deficit, the university has raised tuition fees from $125 a semester to $175 and plans to boost the rate to $250 in four years. Egypt is a poor country where per capita income is $210 a year.

Alumni also are being asked to give. A recent fund-raising drive brought in $2,500.

A long-term solution to the financial problem may rest with a fund equivalent to $17 million that a group of American businessmen manage for the university. The money came from amounts the Egyptian government owed the United States for wheat purchases.

"The fund is separate from the university operating expenses and cannot be used for the deficit," explained William Stevens, vice president for financial development. "Its purpose is to generate income and eventually reduce the university's dependence on grants."

The American businessmen hope to invest the money in profitable projects in Egypt and have announced plans to open a travel agency in their first venture.

Administrators expect it will take five years before investment returns become meaningful.

Other than the Islamic University, Al-Azhar, the American institution is the only non-state-owned university in Egypt. Although it is 55 years old, the school has only recently won a long battle for academic respectability with a government decision last year to recognize its degrees for the first time.

As a result of official recognition, applications for admission have increased 18 per cent the past year, administrators say. Enrollment for the 1974-75 year was 6,500 students, counting graduate departments and non-credit education programs.

Most of the student body is Egyptian but there is a sprinkling of Americans, various Europeans, Africans and Arabs from other countries.

With the government's opening to the West, the university is becoming more politically acceptable than it was. Many Egyptian leaders have enrolled their children.

But despite its increased prestige, the university remains in sharp contrast to its "sister" American institution in the area, the American University of Beirut, also facing a cutback in U.S. government funds.

For more than a century the school in Beirut, Lebanon, has been a center of political liberalism, producing scores of Arab political and intellectual leaders.

One Man's Dream Castle Was Rescued By Lady

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Leed the Saxon had a vision of a great castle rising from the middle of the lake like a midsummer night's dream. But that was beyond the architecture of the Kingdom of Kent in the year 857, so what he moved into was a mostly wooden fortress, with the lake as a moat.

Then Robert de Crevecoeur of the conquering Normans also fell in love with the beauty (and strategic value) of the setting near the village of Maidstone and turned Leeds castle wholly to stone in 1119. A century later, King Edward I made it fit for the kings and queens who would live and visit there.

But it was not until Olive Lady Baillie chanced upon it, timeworn and neglected, in 1926, and determined to make its restoration her life's work, that Leeds castle achieved the full romantic beauty worthy of its fascinating history as one of the oldest inhabited houses in England.

When she died a year ago, Lady Baillie bequeathed the castle and its contents and an endowment of 1.4 million pounds ($2.9 million) to a charity trust to be held for the public benefit in perpetuity. Proud of her ancestry on both sides of the Atlantic, and of Leeds, she saw it as an Anglo-American castle.

"By an extraordinary historical coincidence," according to Lord Geoffrey-Lloyd, chairman of the board of trustees, "she had links through both sides of her family with the most famous of all the owners of Leeds Castle, King Henry VIII.

"Her father, Lord Queensborough, was a descendant of Baron Paget, who was raised to the peerage by Henry VIII.

"Her mother, Pauline, belonged to the American family of Whitney, whose ancestors included James Whitney, an officer in the royal household of Henry VII, and his brother, Robert Whitney, nominated a Knight of the Bath by Henry VIII on the occasion of his marriage with Ann Boleyn, who must have often been at Leeds with Henry."

There is another connection between Leeds Castle and the colonies. George Washington got his first job through his friend and patron Thomas, the sixth Lord Fairfax, who owned the great "Fairfax Proprietary" (5.2 million acres in Virginia and Maryland) as well as Leeds Castle. Sally Fairfax was said to be the great love of Washington's life.

Lord Geoffrey-Lloyd, a former minister of education, said Lady Baillie saw Leeds as more than another great treasure house for Britons and tourists to marvel at as they do in so many of the dwindling number of stately homes. The Whitneys in America were prominent in medical philanthropy (former Ambassador to Britain John Hay Whitney is a trustee) and Lady Baillie was herself a nurse in World War I.

"She hoped the castle would become a center of the arts, and those parts of it not otherwise needed could be made available for meetings of medical scientists from all over the world," he said. In this connection, and mindful of Lady Baillie's interest, we recently arranged the first medical seminar at Leeds in association with the Royal College of Nursing."

He said there would be other meetings of small, high-level groups in the arts and sciences at Leeds, but it was planned to open the famous gardens to the public next spring, and perhaps some of the luxurious rooms, a number of them designed and decorated by Boudin, who did the French rooms at the White House for Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis when she was the wife of the President.

Lord Geoffrey-Lloyd, who is steeped in the history of the castle, said the de Crevecoeur were a turbulent family who often fought against the king, so Edward I took Leeds into direct royal ownership in 1272, and for 300 years it belonged to and was regularly used by the early English kings and queens.

The household accounts of Joan of Navarre, queen of Henry IV, from March 8 to July 21, 1422, have been found and translated recently from the medieval Latin. The last queen to hold Leeds was Catherine, widow of Henry V of Agincourt fame whose secret marriage to her squire, Owen Tudor, produced the Tudor dynasty.

King Edward II turned over the castle temporarily to one of his ministers, Lord Badlesmere, who refused admittance to Edward's queen. Infuriated, Edward and an army of 30,000 captured the castle, sent the Badlesmere family to the dungeons of the Tower of London and executed Lord Badlesmere.

And so it went over the tumultuous years until the castle fell into decay and Lady Baillie came to its rescue. And only then did the dream of Leed the Saxon really come true.

Chefs' School Receives Grant

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — A $40,000 federal grant to The Culinary Institute of America here will enable the chefs' training school to establish a laboratory for studying proper hygienic maintenance of work areas where food is prepared.

The grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare also will be used to develop additional sanitary methods of handling food.

The grant will be matched with Institute funds.

Almost Half Undernourished

TRUJILLO, Peru (UPI) — about half of all Peruvians under five years of age are undernourished.

At least one and a half million children out of the nation's total population of 16 million population are undernourished, said Dr. Orlando Ramos at a nutrition convention in this northern Peruvian city.

Dr. Ramos, who was president of the convention, said another 400,000 Peruvians suffer from mental retardation or underdevelopment caused by nutrition problems.

By the mid-1980s, offshore oil fields in the North Sea are expected to be producing four million barrels per day, about twice current British consumption.

Bicentennial Will Spotlight Covered Wagon

By SANDI PATIMER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The covered wagons which pushed the frontiers of the United States over mountains and through valleys to the Pacific Ocean are returning to the cradle of the nation's birth to celebrate the bicentennial.

The latest wagon to be presented, representing Ohio, is now on display at the Ohio Historical Center.

Each of the 50 states has been presented with a wagon to participate in the national Bicentennial Wagon Train Pilgrimage which is to converge on Valley Forge, Pa., next July 3.

The Ohio wagon, like all the state wagons, was manufactured by hand in Jonesboro, Ark., and hauled here by a moving company.

The wagon is a conestoga which was used in the westward movement to haul heavy goods.

"It's bottom is bowed to provide for an even distribution of cargo," said Gene Worman of the Ohio Historical Society.

"The wagons went up and down many hills on their movement westward," he explained. "The bow in the bottom kept the load from moving either front or back and made it easier for the horses to pull."

The Ohio wagon will be drawn by a team of horses provided by the Ohio Horsemen's Association.

Some states have conestogas, others have prairie schooners, the ones which carried the passengers. There are also five chuckwagons and the five lead wagons from the state of Pennsylvania which will carry musical troupes to perform in campsites along the trail.

Volunteers participating in this bicentennial observance will be manning the wagons throughout the tour.

The nationwide movement began last June in Blaine, Wash. Several wagons from the west will "winter" in Fort Laramie, Wyo., before resuming the trail to Pennsylvania in the spring.

Separate trails will be used across the nation before the wagons join in a common trail to enter Valley Forge where a national ceremony will be held July 4.

Ohio will join wagons from the Great Lakes states of Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana at Sylvania May 26. The Great Lakes train will merge with a train from the Southwest at a point along the Ohio River in western Pennsylvania for the final leg.

The wagon train will progress along secondary roads eastward, camping in small communities where the public will have the opportunity to share in the reverse migration.

Outriders, or scoutfng ambassadors, will ride ahead of each train, visiting communities not on the pilgrimage route, collecting signatures on Declarations of Rededication.

Income Loss Is Biggest Worry

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — A Pennsylvania State University researcher says industrial workers worry much more about loss of income than they do about missing their jobs or having enough to do after retirement.

Francis D. Glamser said a study of employes nearing retirement at six Pennsylvania glass manufacturing plants found workers considered money the most important aspect of working, and the thing they would miss most in retirement.

Most of the hourly workers interviewed gave the impression that their sole reason for continuing to work was to qualify for a better pension or improved social security and Medicare benefits.

Farm Scene

County Extension Chairman

Winter Wheat

Farmers who plan to plant winter wheat should make preparations for seeding the crop soon. October 25 through November 10 are recommended planting dates.

Several varieties have been tested in performance trials in the Coastal Plain and have proved their adaptability to conditions here. Abe, Arthur 71, Blueboy II, Coker 68-15, McNair 1813 and Oasis are medium maturing varieties. McNair 701 is a medium-early maturing variety. All varieties have good resistance to leaf rust, mildew and mosaic except Blueboy II and Coker 68-15. Both varieties are rated as poor in resistance to mildew.

Experiment station and on the farm test results indicate that 1½ bushels of seed wheat per acre should be used. A soil test is the best basis for fertilizing the crop. If test results are not available, however, a general recommendation is to use 20 lbs. Nitrogen, 40 lbs. of phosphate (P205) and 40 lbs. of potash (k20) at planting. Topdress with 40-60 lbs of N. on loam and sandy clay loam soils or 60-80 lbs N. on sandy loam and lighter soils.

Farmers planning to double crop with soybeans as a second crop should apply all the phosphate and potash required for both crops when fertilizing the wheat. A 40 bushel crop of soybeans will remove about 40 lbs. P205 and 80 lbs. of K20.

Forage And Grain Testing For Livestock And Poultry Producers

The biggest cost in any livestock or poultry operation is feed. It makes sense therefore, that improved feed efficiency will return more profit to the producer.

Through a special arrangement with Southern Testing and Research Laboratory the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service makes available to dairy, beef, sheep, swine, horse and poultry farmers a forage and grain analysis program. The Laboratory analyzes the sample of forage or grain and Extension Specialists follow through with recommendations about rations or supplements based upon the analysis.

Costs of the service range from $3. for a salt content analysis on poultry feed to $17. for an analysis that gives moisture, crude protein, crude fiber, estimated TDN, estimated net energy, calcium, phosphorus, fat, and salt. A complete fee schedule, instruction manual and sample cartons are available at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

Planting Time For Thin Lawn

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Fall is the ideal planting time for a new lawn, and seeding time for a thin lawn.

A seedsman here says fall planting gives seedlings plenty of opportunity to become established before winter. Fall planting ensures that seeds fall on warm soil when hot days are growing shorter, cool nights longer, dews heavier and soil moisture more favorable. These factors contribute to better germination and seedling growth.

Seeding in late fall can prevent sprouting or real development before spring. So plant before early October for best results.
