

Compromise Reached On Malpractice Insurance

RALEIGH (AP)—St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram have compromised in their dispute over medical malpractice insurance.

At a news conference this morning, Ingram said the compromise was effective immediately, meaning that doctors and hospitals whose policies with St. Paul have expired this month now may renew them.

The compromise was aimed at ensuring continued availability of the insurance while the courts decide whether a new law aimed at ending the problem is constitutional.

Ingram said he is also allowing a substantial rate increase for other companies. He had earlier agreed to St. Paul's request for higher rates. Ingram said the rate increase for hospitals will jump the price for insurance from the old $26 per bed to about $270 per bed.

Though St. Paul will now offer the insurance, Ingram said the company had indicated to him it won't accept new customers. That means hospitals and doctors who had coverage from another company will still be without coverage unless the other companies also agree to resume providing the insurance.

The compromise between Ingram and St. Paul was over what is called a "reporting endorsement." That endorsement is an extra charge paid by a doctor to continue protection in the event of a late malpractice suit if the doctor changes companies, dies, moves or retires.

St. Paul had demanded that the endorsement be in three annual payments with the amount of each payment determined by the number of claims made the previous year.

Ingram rejected that and insisted on one payment. If the number of claims and the settlement amounts continued to increase as they have historically, St. Paul's method of charging would have resulted in the firm collecting more money than they would under Ingram's plan. Ingram said the compromise was that doctors who move to another town or began military service would have just one payment for the reporting endorsement. Most others would have a three-year reporting endorsement.

Meanwhile, a special legislative commission set up to study the malpractice insurance problem was to adopt a resolution this afternoon accepting Ingram's decision as a temporary solution. Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, chairman of the panel, said the members also wanted the doctors and hospitals to continue working on setting up their own insurance plans.

Messer said the doctors and hospitals need an alternative source of insurance.

The North Carolina Medical Society is to put up $500,000 in security and seek its license for establishing a company this week, Ingram said.

Meanwhile, John Marston of the North Carolina Hospital Association, said his organization is continuing efforts to set up a self insurance plan. He said he believes the self insurance plan will eventually be cheaper.

Suits against the new law will be heard in Wake Superior Court Nov. 3. The law requires all companies to offer malpractice insurance and to participate in a reinsurance pool.

The companies have challenged the law, claiming it is unconstitutional. They also were exempted from the law's provisions until the courts decide whether it is constitutional.

Any decision is likely to be appealed. Ingram's compromise with the insurance companies is in effect until June 30, 1976, to give the courts time to resolve the issue.

At Tuesday's meeting of the special legislative session, doctors, lawyers and Ingram came in for blame for the malpractice insurance emergency.

Toynbee Is Dead At 86

LONDON (AP)—Arnold Toynbee, eminent British historian, died today in York, England, the British Press Association said. He was 86.

Toynbee's "A Study of History," a best-selling chronicle of the rise and fall of civilizations, had a profound effect on his generation. Some historians disagreed with his theories but none disputed the breadth and depth of his world view.

It took Toynbee 34 years to write the three million words of his book in longhand. It was published in 12 volumes between 1934 and 1961. An abridged version sold more than 250,000 copies in the United States at the outset of publication.

Toynbee's idea was that civilizations arise, develop and then decay — usually because they make a wrong response to a challenge facing them. Uplift follows and then the pattern begins again, he maintained. He saw parallels between the decline of Greece and Rome and current events in the West.

The later volumes of his study reflected Toynbee's belief that the history of man is essentially the history of religion. "Religion," he said, "holds the key to the mystery of existence."

Capsule Took Pictures Of Landing On Venus

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union landed a space capsule on the hot and cloudy surface of Venus today and "obtained a unique picture" of the landing site, Tass announced.

The capsule was softlanded on the planet by the unmanned spacecraft, Venus 9, which went into orbit Monday as Venus' first artificial satellite, the news agency said. The distance of Venus from earth ranges from 25 million miles at the closest point of its orbit to 160 million miles at the farthest point. It is the earth's nearest planetary neighbor.

"A unique image of the surface of the planet in the place of landing was obtained for the first time in conditions of the planet's atmosphere with the pressure 90 times bigger than earth, and the temperature 485 degrees centigrade (905 degrees Fahrenheit)," Tass said.

Tass said the capsule transmitted data, including the "image of the landing place," for 53 minutes to the orbiting

Venus 9 which sent it on to earth.

It was not known if the vehicle's equipment had then gone out of commission in the planet's intense heat.

The Soviets' earlier unmanned crafts known as Venera VII and Venera VIII both also landed on Venus and transmitted information from its surface.

American scientist Harold Masursky, who works at the U.S. Geological Survey's Center of Telegeology at Flagstaff, Ariz., said last month that Venus 9 and 10 would gather data that will complement information to be obtained by an American probe of Venus in 1978.

He was interviewed in Flagstaff after a trip to Moscow and said the two Russian craft would attempt to analyze the chemistry of the planet's surface. He said obtaining that information from Soviet officials indicated the new sense of cooperation on the part of the Russians.

Venus 9 was launched June 8, followed six days later by Venus 10. It was speculated at that time that one of the craft would attempt to land and the other would orbit the planet as an observer.

Venus 10 was scheduled to arrive in the vicinity of Venus on Saturday, Tass said. The nature of the rendezvous was not known.

Tass said the data transmitted from the Venus descent vehicle included material on the cloud layer of the planet, optical characteristics and parameters of the atmosphere of Venus, intensity of illumination on the surface, and physical properties and the nature of soil in the landing place.

The Soviet news agency said the landing craft separated from the main spacecraft on Monday and Venus 9 then went into an elliptical orbit with a minimum distance of 932 miles from the planet's surface.

Speculate Franco Near End Of Rule

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer
MADRID, Spain (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco had a satisfactory night and is continuing to improve following an acute heart attack two nights ago, his doctors reported today.

However, speculation continued that Franco was nearing the end of his long rule, and political sources predicted Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon would replace him as chief of state within weeks or even days.

Franco was visited early today by his chief physician, Dr. Vicente Pozuelo.

The government denied reports abroad that Western Europe's last dictator had died on Tuesday, and officially he was still in power. But he was in seclusion at his Pardo Palace just outside Madrid, and a high diplomatic source said his condition was grave.

Already afflicted with Parkinson's disease, the 82-year-old leader who has ruled Spain with an iron hand for 36 years became ill last Thursday with influenza.

His doctors were reported to have detected fluctuations in his heart beat at the time, and on Monday night he reportedly suffered an attack of endocarditis, or inflammation of the heart valves.

A two-paragraph announcement told Spain's 35 million people Tuesday that their leader had suffered an "acute coronary crisis" but was recovering and had resumed some of his normal activities.

Vicente Cardinal Enrique Tarancon, the archbishop of Madrid, asked the public to pray for Franco and for the future of the country.

There was no reaction from the public. But the gravity of the generalissimo's illness was evidenced by two long visits to his residence Tuesday by Premier Carlos Arias Navarro and by the concern of the government in denying the reports of his death.

Informed sources said Franco and the premier discussed whether to transfer the powers of the chief of state to the 37-year-old prince Franco designated six years ago to succeed him when he died or retired.

Franco made just such a transfer of his powers 15 months ago when an attack of blood clotting nearly killed him. But he resumed his office after 40 days.

The law of succession provides that in the event of Franco's death, the Cortes, or parliament, has eight days to proclaim Juan Carlos Spain's first king since his grandfather, King Alfonso XIII, fled from the country in 1931.

Juan Carlos did not go to El Pardo Tuesday but met with Arias immediately after the premier's second visit to Franco. The prince also lunched with the president of the Cortes, Alejandro Rodriguez de Valcarcel.

Hospital Board Votes To Use Security Agency

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees voted last night to request the services of McKenzie Security of Greenville for providing security, night watchman service, and visitor control at the hospital 24 hours a day.

This plan will replace the use of off-duty policemen as visitor controllers. For insurance purposes it seems best that the hospital go to 24-hour service, the Trustees were told, and it seemed best to use a local firm. The Board agreed to the plan with the stipulation that, if McKenzie is not satisfactory, an outside firm, like Pinkerton, will be tried.

By-laws of the new Hospital Auxiliary were approved. The auxiliary, a group of about 75 volunteers which renders services to hospital staff and patients, is now underway. Mrs. Mary McPherson has been hired as part-time coordinator of the program.

Business Manager Craig Quick has drafted a 15-page affirmative action plan which shows that Pitt Memorial does not discriminate on the basis of race, creed, religion, or national origin, or sex in its hiring practices, the Trustees were told.

The Board members were invited to the Second Annual Hospital Employees' Banquet to be held Friday at 6:30 p.m. at the Moose Lodge. Approximately 55 employees will be honored at this time for years of service.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson said a rehabilitation associate director will be hired soon to head the rehabilitation section of the hospital now under construction. A detailed job description is available he said and somebody will probably be chosen to begin work around Jan. 1, 1976.

Dr. Eric Ferrington, Chief of the Medical Staff, summarized three audit reports recently done

DST Ending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clocks across most of the nation will be set back one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday as the country ends eight months of Daylight Saving Time.

The change will occur in all states and U.S. possessions except Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the eastern time zone portion of Indiana. Those areas do not observe DST.

The nation will observe regular time for six months unless Congress agrees to a recommendation by the Department of Transportation to observe only four months of regular time.

For two years, the nation has been on an experimental schedule of eight months of daylight time and four months of regular time. However, the legislation setting up that experiment has expired and unless Congress passes new legislation, the country will revert to the six months daylight time-six months regular time schedule used in previous years.

DST will start again on Sunday, April 26, 1976, if Congress does nothing to change the schedule. It will start of the last Sunday in February if the recommendation of the Transportation Department is passed. To date, no such legislation has been introduced, the department said.

WHY A SUPPLEMENT?

Why do Greenville City Schools teachers get a supplement and have gotten one for over 30 years, when county teachers do not? K.W.

According to City School Superintendent Glenn Cox, the people of the Greenville School District voted in 1937 to levy on themselves a 25 cents per $100 evaluation supplemental tax for public education. One of the things called for them was supplement to the salary of each teacher of the District. This has remained basically unchanged. The supplement starts at $180 per year, with amounts being determined by certification and years of experience, he said.

SHOT WITH AIR RIFLE

We live in a subdivision within the city limits of Greenville. My children's pet cat was shot with an air rifle by someone in our neighborhood. Is there a law prohibiting the use of an air rifle for this purpose or some ordinance against mistreatment of animals? B. S.

There is a city ordinance against discharging an air rifle in the city limits within 200 feet of a dwelling or other occupied buildings, says Chief of Police Glenn Cannon. Killing or injuring any animal (except those designated in a hunting or fishing license) violate both civil and criminal laws of North Carolina (G. S. 19A and Article 47, Paragraph 14-360 of the Criminal Code), according to research by Liz Whalen of the Pitt County Humane Society. Section 5-9 of the Greenville Animal Control Ordinance prohibits "mistreatment" of any animal, but what may be considered mistreatment is not spelled out.

Collected 178 Pints Tuesday

A schedule six-hour visit by the Bloodmobile to East Carolina University yesterday was cut in half but the abbreviated drive still collected 178 pints of blood.

Pitt Blood chairman Billy Ross said that the Bloodmobile vehicle broke down in Bethel yesterday morning and arrived at ECU around 2:30 p.m., some three and a half hours after the scheduled 11 a.m. starting hour.

Ross said that the collection effort, the first of a three-day visit planned for the campus, got underway at 3 p.m. and was extended an hour later until 6 p.m. In addition to the 178 units collected, there were 15 people rejected for various health reasons, Ross noted.

He thanked donors for their patience in view of yesterday's delay and urged those who planned to give blood but were unable to return Tuesday afternoon to visit the Bloodmobile again today.

Today's and Thursday's blood drives are scheduled from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. at Wright Auditorium. The three-day visit is under the sponsorship of the Air Force ROTC.

Toning Improves Disposition

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you can "learn to rub your husband or wife the right way you will never lose him or her."

The remark was made with a chuckle by the well-known octogenarian, Dr. Harold J. Reilly, a physical therapist, to emphasize his claim that body toning can improve the disposition.

"Grumpiness can be the direct result of tension that can start a lot of arguments. Healthy people can control their emotions and accept irritations more philosophically. If husbands and wives could massage each other and exercise more they'd be more fit to live with ..."

In a half century Reilly has manipulated and toned the muscles of thousands of people, and "blindfolded, I'd probably know by touch any one I've ever put my hands on even if I didn't recognize the face," he insists. They came to him from far and near — Gloria Swanson, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Mae West, Gypsy Rose Lee, Bob Hope, several Rockefellers. He treated the late poet, Robert Frost, and philosopher John Dewey.

He healed with his hands and with water, helping paraplegics and others with his therapy techniques. He is a devotee of exercise — the right kind, but older people should consult with their physicians before attempting exercises, he insists.

"Today many hiatus hernias may be caused by certain movements in yoga which might be too strenuous for middle-aged persons who haven't been exercising. Inexperienced people teaching yoga may not be aware of that danger."

A witty, blue-eyed, jolly man, Reilly had expected to retire in 1966 to write a book, when he gave up the last of his business endeavors, the famed Reilly Health Institute at Rockefeller Center where he had been located for 30 years, but his followers wouldn't let him. In fact, he must keep his address a secret — people go to great lengths to find him.

He was too busy to write the book after all, he had decided, but was eventually persuaded by a patient, Ruth Hagy Brod. An editor with the firm that recently published Reilly's book, "The Edgar Cayce Handbook for Health Through Drugless Therapy," she collaborated with him.

Why a book about Cayce, the well-known "sleeping prophet"? "I had hundreds of his readings — the messages that were brought to me by his patients. They are so good we decided to publish them along with a few nuggets of his writings on health."

In a way Reilly and Cayce were partners in the manipulation of bodies. Cayce prescribed for his patients by going into a trance, dictating his remedial formulas and often sending patient and formula to Reilly who would execute the ideas in healing ligaments, varicose veins, scars, burns and so on. The two didn't meet for years even though they had become a team in a sense. Reilly was amazed at the good results with very difficult problems.

"I am really convinced now that Cayce actually tapped some kind of universal wisdom," Reilly explained. Cayce died in 1945 and a foundation preserves his 15,000 or so psychic readings at Virginia Beach, Va.

In addition to the many Cayce readings in the book, Reilly has included principles of diet and nutrition, an anti-aging program, hydrotherapy healing and his own massage techniques and exercises that can be done at home. He believes that exercise is necessary to provide activation to the nutrients in the body.

"I don't like regimented movement in exercise, even though it is better than nothing," he concedes. "I exercise for a half hour or hour and a half each day. I do a steady walk for a couple of hundred paces, I jog a while, I goose step for a few hundred paces, then I might walk sideways just to vary the movement."

Dropping to the floor, Reilly spryly illustrated some of his favorite exercises, animal ones, that can add a bit of zest to the idea. There is a bunny hop and the walks of crab, cat, bear, monkey, gorilla and homo sapiens — with hands and feet on the floor. He straddled across the floor, crab fashion; kept his legs fairly stiff "but knees must be slightly bent" as he ambled bear-like; performed with the slinky, long-legged stride of a cat; walked as a monkey with one foot in front of the other, and as a gorilla does with knees bent and fists clenched, rocking from side to side. Hopping along like a bunny in a crouched position he kept his balance all the way. Homo sapiens was easy — Reilly performed a running step "in place" as he propelled himself along the floor. He could have won a 50-yard dash.

Another favorite "rain or shine exercise" is done with towels and combines Cayce's exercises and Reilly's interpretation of the principles.

Reilly's interest in physical education began early. At 12 he was "training kids to box" in his backyard and he was running and jumping in athletic competitions. He taught Japanese to box and learned jujitsu which came in handy in 1916 when he was in the Army on the Mexican border and taught it "to avoid fatigue." He was chief challenger for his regiment.

Interest in physical therapy came when he left the Army and began working with partially paralyzed shrapnel cases, teaching them to practice facial movements in the mirror to reeducate their muscles. He also trained blind soldiers in the art of massage.

Along the way he has picked up eight degrees, including a master of physiotherapy and a doctor of science, and he has served 14 terms as president of the New York State Society of Physiotherapists.

Bridegroom's Mother Was Out Of Line

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently married. The wedding was beautiful and quite costly. My parents paid for everything. They hired the finest photographer in town, who took nearly 100 pictures in color. He took about 25 group pictures in which the mother of the groom appeared.

Later, we learned that she went to the photographer's studio and asked to see the pictures of the wedding. Then she BOUGHT the negatives of all the pictures in which she thought she looked "terrible," and she destroyed them! Those pictures can never be replaced, Abby. What do you think of such a vain woman? And what can be done about it?

HURT BRIDE

DEAR HURT: If your parents hired the photographer, he had no business selling the negatives to anyone. The groom's mother was clearly out of line. There is nothing you can do about it now. (P.S. One word of advice, dear. Don't taunt your husband about this. He's not responsible for his mother's deeds.

DEAR ABBY: My family name is "Gay." My ancestors have been traced back to France in the early 1600s. I am writing this in hopes that the Gay Liberation Society will see it and realize how unfair they are being in using our name for their organization.

The gay liberation group holds that they have a right to live and let live—a philosophy with which I am in complete agreement. But in so doing, they have infringed upon the rights of others.

Since the homosexuals have organized and officially adopted our name for their group, we have been harassed with crank telephone calls at all hours, and subjected to insults and ridicule.

Our name was "Gay" long before they took that name, so I think in all fairness to us Gays, they should change the name of their society to one more befitting to their crusade.

The last straw came when my father called me long distance after he saw a TV series on homosexuality, and he seriously suggested that WE change OUR name!

A PROUD GAY

DEAR PROUD: I understand your plight and am most sympathetic, but I doubt if the Gay Liberation Society will consider changing its name. Although you were Gay first, I believe there are more of THEM than there are of YOU.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for 30 years and raised a fine family. He was a wonderful man, and I loved him very much. After he had been gone for 10 years, I married another man.

This marriage was not a beautiful love affair, as was my first. It was a convenience for both of us. My second husband also had been married previously.

I want to be buried in my family plot when my time comes, and my present husband wants to be buried beside HIS first wife. We are agreed on that, but here's the problem: How can I be buried beside my husband with my present husband's last name—which I legally bear?

That would be dreadful.

Could I have my marker read: "Elizabeth, child of God, 1915"? Or would that be in poor taste?

PLANNING AHEAD IN CANADA

DEAR PLANNING: I think you've hit on the perfect solution.

DEAR ABBY: I have a sex problem that I have tried to handle myself, but it's not getting any better. I don't have a minister to talk to, and even if I did, I don't think I could discuss this with him.

You see, when my husband and I make love, I don't feel anything. I mean, I get aroused, but nothing happens. I'm 27 and have four children. Shouldn't I feel something?

This is my second marriage, and it was the same way with my first marriage. Does this mean I'm frigid?

I am afraid my husband will start shopping around for a replacement if I don't put a little more enthusiasm into my lovemaking. I pretend I'm getting something out of it, but I'm afraid I'm not very convincing.

Abby, please help me.

MISSING SOMETHING IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MISSING: First, see your gynecologist. After a thorough examination, he will know if something physical needs correcting. If it's not physical, ask for his recommendation. Your local university has a human sexuality program that offers excellent counseling. If it's any comfort to you, your problem is far more common than you think.

East And West Foods Mixed

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor
"East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

— Rudyard Kipling, 1889

Eat your words. Mr. Kipling, East and West met — collided in a better word — at the 23rd annual frozen foods buffet here given by a regional frozen food manufacturers association for the trade and news media.

Monosodium glutamate and meat-stretching vegetable protein products, both Eastern staples of long standing, appeared to be the most frequently used ingredients in everything from frozen prepared dinners to breaded and fried foods. About the only products free from them were desserts and baked goods. Not surprisingly, the latter two categories in general were better tasting and better textured.

In addition, two major manufacturers introduced cook-and-serve Oriental-style vegetable mixtures. Products from the Birdseye Division of Gen-al Foods are Japanese, Chinese and Hawaiian Stir-Fry Vegetables. Seabrook Farms' six mixtures are Far Eastern, Tahitian, Norman, Parisian, Roman and Sicilian. (Norman usually indicates the presence of apples or apple products.)

In a real switch, none of the aforementioned products contains MSG, although they certainly would if made by Oriental chefs.

While they do not taste as good as the same vegetables prepared at home with fresh, raw ingredients, their flavor is good, and their texture appropriately crisp if they are cooked quickly and served at once.

The medical world's opposition to MSG in baby and junior foods is well known, as is the Chinese restaurant syndrome, usually manifested by brief but excruciating pain that some research attributes to excessive amounts of the flavor enhancing salt. The role of MSG in allergies is less well known. Medical specialists call it one of the most frequent causes of allergic reactions.

Products containing both MSG and meat-stretching vegetable protein included several Empire kosher ready-to-eat meats and Farmland's sliced pork loin roast with a choice of three sauces: Polynesian, barbecue or country style. The roasts resembled crumbly meatloaf. The Polynesian sauce was unpleasantly sweet, and the barbecue sauce tasted like mild catsup.

Swanson's Hungry-Man Sirloin Burger Pie was only slightly better. A spokeswoman for the manufacturer said each pie contained at least 17 burgers, but could not say what percentage or weight of meat was present in a single serving. The burgers were chewy,

Childhood Disease Control Lapses

"Protect them from harm" is the theme of October Immunization Action Month.

Make sure your child is fully vaccinated against polio, measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis (whooping cough).

Nationally, government, organized medicine, industry, and volunteer organizations are working together to increase public awareness of potential dangers of childhood disease and preventive measures against childhood disease.

Following is a discussion of each preventable disease so common to children. The information is summarized from fact sheets which can be ordered from the Public Health Service, Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Georgia 30333.

RUBELLA—is a common and relatively unimportant disease of childhood. When pregnant women get it, however, rubella can cause babies to be born with abnormalities or pregnancies can end in stillbirths or miscarriages. It is a mild, three-day infection that is entirely different from measles. The best way to prevent exposure of pregnant women to rubella is to vaccinate the major source of exposure, children. The vaccine is most useful for children between one year of age and puberty.

MEASLES—is a serious, common childhood disease which is sometimes called "Hard", "Red", "Seven day", or "Old-fashioned" measles. The disease causes much discomfort as well as temporary or permanent disability. Some measles complications are ear infections, pneumonia, deafness, blindness, convulsive disorders, or other forms of brain disease. Healthy children beyond the age of one year who have never had measles should be vaccinated.

POLIO—is caused by a tiny virus. There are three known types of polio virus. They tend to attack cells in the intestinal tract and in the central nervous system. When they get into nerve cells, they cause paralysis. All unimmunized persons between the ages of 6 weeks and 18 years of age should be vaccinated.

MUMPS—are caused by a virus. Some of the complications of mumps are impaired hearing inflammation of the brain and inflammation of the testicles in men and the ovaries of women. The vaccine is especially important for young children, but it is also recommended for older children and adults who are still susceptible to the disease.

DIPHTHERIA—is generally uncommon, but outbreaks continue to occur. Adequate immunization last for 10 years or more. For 25 years, routine immunization in infancy and childhood has been generally practiced in the United States.

TETANUS—Regardless of age, immunization is necessary and is highly effective and long lasting. It also is a part of routine infant and childhood immunization.

PERTUSSIS (Whooping cough)—The severe complications and high mortality from pertussis in infancy are the major reasons for immunization in early life. Immunization is not generally recommended for children above six.

If you take your children to a doctor regularly, he probably has had all his immunizations. If not, check with the health department. Don't let your child go without protection.

Business Week Activities Begun Sunday

The Greenville Business and Professional Woman's Club began their observance of National Business Women's Week Sunday.

Members attended services at the Memorial Baptist Church and a tea in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Stella Dunbar Farmville.

On Thursday, the Executive Committee and the National Business Women's Week Committee will hold a dinner in honor of Mrs. Cora Powell at the home of Mrs. Arlene Mallison. School Discipline Is Helped

The U. S. Supreme Court has ruled that the public school teachers can spank a child, even if it is against the wishes of the parents.

We say hurray for the Supreme Court, not because we particularly wish to see any child spanked by a teacher, but because it is hopefully another step toward getting the courts out of school problems.

The Supreme Court, in its ruling, upheld a decision by a three-judge court that the spankings were legal. The lower court did spell out some procedures, however. It said the pupil must be informed beforehand of the things that could bring on a spanking. Written explanation should also be given to the parents on request. Paddling should be done only after all other means of discipline have failed, and another school official must witness the punishment.

While those requirements don't seem unreasonable, we think even the procedures for administering the punishment should be left up to the school authorities.

Ideally, of course, the school personnel should never have to spank a youngster. The teachers and administrators would merely turn an unruly child over to the parents and the parents would take care of the discipline.

In practice, that doesn't always work out and the school teachers and principal are left with the choice of letting an undisciplined child disrupt the schools, or to mete out punishment in the schools.

Too often in recent years, the courts have interfered with the school disciplinary measures and the result has been that the learning processes are often disrupted for all those students who are willing to abide by the rules.

We can have chaos in the schools or we can have orderliness. To have order, though, there is going to have to be some discipline and, at times, some punishment. These are situations which the school authorities should deal with and the courts should stay out of it, wherever possible.

The Comeback Begins

WASHINGTON — The New Nixon was sitting on the porch of La Casa Pacifica at San Clemente slumped in his chair staring out at the sea. The Old Nixon carrying a golf bag came out jauntily whistling "Hail to the Chief." "Where are you going?" the New Nixon asked bitterly. "I'm going to play golf with the Teamsters at La Costa," the Old Nixon said. "What a day." "How can you play golf after what we've been through?" the New Nixon asked. "Cheer up, Dicky boy," the Old Nixon said. "We're on the comeback trail. Look at this. We're on the cover of Newsweek magazine. Did you ever dream we'd ever make the cover of Newsweek again?"

The New Nixon shook his head. "I don't get it. You never give up, do you?"

The Old Nixon said, "You're damn right I never give up. They had me counted out after the presidential election in 1960. They had me counted out after the presidential election in 1960. They said I couldn't get elected dogcatcher after I lost for governor in 1962. But I fooled them, Dicky, and I'm going to fool them again. They haven't heard the last of Richard Milhaus Nixon."

"I wouldn't believe it if I didn't see it with my own eyes," the New Nixon said. "Wait until our book comes out," the Old Nixon said. "Just wait until they hear our side of the story. There will be more than Teamsters wanting to play golf with me then."

"Richard," said the New Nixon, "do you really think we can make a comeback? Or are you just saying that to make me feel better?"

"It's in the cards, Dicky. After my interviews with David Frost, the American people are going to see that all we were trying to do was protect the Presidency of the United States. O, there will be some who will say we lied and we cheated and we brought disgrace on the office. But we won't hate them for saying that."

"We won't? The New Nixon said. "No," replied the Old Nixon, "but we'll keep their names on file cards and someday when we're back in power they're going to be sorry they ever made an issue of Watergate."

"What are we going to say about Watergate in our book?"

"It was a mistake, and we should have taken more of an interest in what our staff was

Agency Rules Govern

By JOHN LENGEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency orders a reduction in parking places in Boston and Los Angeles. The Civil Aeronautics Board says the cost of an airline ticket to Miami can be increased. A boatyard owner is forced to install a safety ladder leading out of water three feet deep. A child's toy is declared unsafe.

These are some of the federal rules and regulations drawn by the staffs of 67 agencies. Last year, the agencies drew up 7,496 fresh regulations while Congress was enacting 404 laws.

The regulations have the force of law. They often carry criminal penalties of heavy fines and jail, and have one more thing in common: Congress never specifically approved them.

Instead, the regulations were drawn to implement broad mandates of Congress given at the time of passage of laws, for example, to clean up pollution, regulate airlines and to assure safety of workers.

Now, a move is under way to give Congress a legislative veto, broad power to set aside any rules or regulations with a negative vote of either house.

Congress has approved limited veto power in such cases as the rules of the Federal Election Commission. And it can pass another law, as was the case in doing away with the regulatory requirement for car seat-belt interlock systems.

But passing a new law "is cumbersome method," for dealing with the problem, says Rep. Walter Flowers, D-La. He is chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee which took the first testimony Tuesday on several bills that have the combined backing of one-third of the House membership. Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, Ga., said the bureaucracy has become "a fourth, nonconstitutional branch of government with a thick tangle of regulations."

Still, the agencies have defenders. Rep. George D. Jeison, D-Calif., reckons that only 1 per cent of federal rules "are offensive." He did feel that proposed EPA parking regulations for Los Angeles "would have been like an atomic bomb hitting the Southern California economy." The rule was aimed at reducing automobile pollution.

40 Years Ago Today

October 22, 1935
The Greater Greenville Fair got off to a good start last night when the first program of a week's run was carried out by the Fair management.

With ladies and children free at the main gate, many families took advantage of the offer and brought the entire household to enjoy the first night.

The New York Follies entertained the Grand Stand patrons with a production of entertainment and showed an excellent cast of performers. The show is direct from one of the Pair and Theatre Circuits of the North and West. The La Parades, in their aerial bicycle, thrilled the spectators with their daring feats. Smith's Band, a well-known aggregation of musicians, played a special concert program.

THIS AFTERNOON

Your Privacy On The Line

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Who will hold the key to a computer storehouse of knowledge about many North Carolinians?

That is what the present argument over the state's computerized information system comes down to. Right now, the argument is about criminal information and data wired in from the courts, police stations, jails, and the prisons.

If the information system is restricted only to criminal justice actions of a public-record sort, the debate remains important. If the system is fed with investigative reports, hearsay, gossip, and data from other sources such as the revenue department, motor vehicles, welfare offices; the debate takes on added importance for all Tar Heels.

Here, briefly, is the background:

Present System
The state has a Police Information Network giving computer data on warrants outstanding, arrests, cars or boats stolen, and prison records. That system is, says Director Howard Livingston, factual and under strict supervision.

The Police Information Network is operated under jurisdiction of the Justice Department, headed by Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten. Police and sheriffs across the state are plugged in.

The Governor's Law and Order Commission has voted to seek some $14 million in federal Law Enforcement Assistance Act money to build a Criminal Justice Information System, of which the Police Information Network would become just a piece, linked through a central control point with other pieces such as the courts, the prisons, the motor vehicles office, among others.

There has been no decision made on who will run the new system, although all signs point toward control in the executive department of state government.

Sam H. Long, Gov. James E. Holshouser's legal counsel, is pushing for a special commission to be set up to oversee the system, set policy, and supervise what goes in, what comes out, and who has access.

Edmisten is concerned with the dollars involved, believing that the money could be better spent to make the Police Information Network better, and warning that taking federal money means federal control.

Invade Privacy
But his main concern is privacy of the individual—who can get and use information from the system in times when, as he sees it, we are gripped by "computer mania." . . . the potential to push a button and pull a person's life history out. . . . everybody wants to push a button and get something on somebody."

Warning a recent gathering of the Legislative Study Commission on Intergovernmental Relations that the new computer system is "creating a monster," Edmisten said the existing criminal records computer system was authorized by the General Assembly. But the federal program seeks to change that.

Rather than factual, limited information, the new system could "be a total monster" which would spill out on command gossip, rumor and information on a person's personal life, habits, religion, etc.

The governor's office obviously agrees with several of the concerns voiced over the new system. Counselor Long said the General Assembly should take a direct hand in determining how the system is supervised, and that Holshouser is appealing to Congressmen to correct one area of the new regulations: limited access to what has been public court records.

Boiled down, the new regulations prevent the public and the press from getting the criminal record of an individual except in a current case, or in case you can give the date of the action (knowing the answer before asking the question); and even limits access by law enforcement officers after a given number of years.

The GALLUP POLL

Polls Strike One In Seven

(Copyright 1975, Field Enterprises, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited, except with the written consent of the copyright holders.)

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J.—One of the questions polltakers are frequently asked is—why not take a poll on polls? On the occasion of its 40th anniversary, the Gallup Poll did just this and asked a cross-section of Americans if they had ever been interviewed before, what they knew about polls, and what they think of them.

The survey results indicate that approximately one person in seven nationwide (15 per cent) has been interviewed in a survey at some point in his or her life. This figure projects to approximately 22 million adults, 18 and older.

Public awareness and understanding of public opinion surveys have grown since the early days of scientific polling in the mid-'30s.

Over the last decade, for example, the proportion who say they have some understanding of how public-opinion surveys work—that is, how a small sample can reflect the views of the whole country—has grown from less than a majority to well over a majority, with approximately six in 10 now indicating at least a general knowledge of how they operate.

With growing awareness has come growing acceptance. Today a large majority of Americans express generally favorable attitudes toward public-opinion polls.

At the same time, considerable misunderstanding of the operation and purpose of polls continues to exist. Many fail to distinguish between the many different types of polls, the scientific and the non-scientific.

Here are the questions and results:
"Have you, yourself, ever been questioned before in a public opinion survey such as this?"

Year	Per Cent Saying Yes
1965	12%
1975	15

"How do you feel about public opinion polls?"

Favorable	37%
Serve useful purpose beneficial	31
Give citizen chance to be heard	29
Other favorable responses (includes: results are interesting to read; polls stimulate and educate the public)	29

Unfavorable	10%
Don't believe they are accurate (no representative; samples are too small)	7
Nobody does anything about the results	2
Public is influenced by them ("bandwagon effect")	1
Infringement on privacy	2
No opinion	119%

(Total added to more than 100 per cent due to multiple responses.)

"Do you know how they (public opinion polls) work—that is, how they can reflect the views of the whole country?"

Year	Yes	No	Answer
1965	42%	55%	3%
1975	59	40	1

"What has been their record of accuracy in elections—excellent, good, fair, or poor?"

Year	Excellent	Good	Fair	Poor	No Opinion
1965	10%	36%	19%	2%	33%
1975	9	41	18	3	29

Those in the latest survey who indicate they know how polls work are far more inclined than are those who are uninformed to say the record of polls in elections is "excellent" or "good," as seen in the table below:

Group	Excellent	Good	Fair	Poor	No Opinion
Informed group	12%	50%	18%	2%	18%
Uninformed group	5	27	17	4	47

Leaders Should Pay Closer Attention To Public Opinion

Perhaps one important reason why most Americans appear to give a generally favorable attitude toward polls is seen in their response to another question asked in the current survey. A substantial majority of Americans (67 per cent) hold the belief the United States would be better off if the leaders of the nation were to follow the views of the public more closely.

Following is the question asked and the national results:
"If the leaders of our nation followed the views of the public more closely, do you think the nation would be better off, or worse off than it is today?"

TEMPERAMENTS
Thomas Carlyle, the English man of letters, one evening in a moment of frustration and depression looked up at the stars and said, "It is a sad sight." At almost the same moment a little girl, gazing upward, said, "Mother, if the wrong side of heaven is so fine, how beautiful the right side must be!"
We all look out on the same world and up at the same sky, but what we see is largely determined by our temperaments. One person will declare the weather ideal while another will grumble

To the editor:
A year ago I became ill and almost died. In my delirium I fancied I was allowed a peek on the other side. To my great surprise I found that the construction industry was (if somewhat differently) slowed on that side also.
In heaven throne-building was almost at a standstill. Many workers were idle because gold for thrones was in very short supply. Under these conditions there was just no room in heaven for newcomers. Hell was worse off. Housing was almost impossible to come by. Workers were many and willing but fireproof materials were almost unobtainable. Heaven and hell were both overcrowded.
Then I heard a Voice of Authority say, "Can't you see we're not ready for you? Go back to wherever you came from. And don't call us. We'll call you."
My momentary fancy vanished. I was back on this side ready to wait until called. Nobody goes a jot earlier or a jot later than he is called. Meanwhile my health improved.
I am a septuagenarian with (as some say) no future. But tomorrow is future enough here with eternity to follow.

To the editor:
Fantastic ECU Marching Pirates! If you have not attended the ECU football games this year, you have really missed a very exciting and moving experience.
The band deserves praise and admiration. Their musical arrangement and presentation of the National Anthem is a most moving and heart grabbing experience. I also heard them practicing for the Homecoming game Thursday, and their patriotism comes through loud and clear.
I have heard many people talking about the band and how much they enjoy the half-time show. It is apparent by the stillness in the stands during half-time, that everyone is enjoying the show.
Praise and thank you to the band.

Stock Exchange Survival Fight

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Is the New York Stock Exchange fighting solely for its own survival or, as its defenders maintain, is it fighting also in the public interest?
There is little question the exchange is fighting for its life. Its chairman, James J. Needham, says so. "This is all or nothing," he said in an interview. He equates survival with the national good.
The battleground is Washington, at hearings this week before the Securities and Exchange Commission, which must decide if it is best to retain, abolish or amend New York Stock Exchange Rule 394.
Could one rule be that important? "It's the cornerstone of the system," Needham has been quoted as saying.
The rule, with some exceptions, requires member firms to funnel most transactions in listed stocks to the floor of the exchange, where orders are matched and prices set.
"Most economists agree the most efficient pricing mechanism is one where buy-sell orders converge at one place," said Needham. There are 66 specialist units on the NYSE and each unit is assigned an average of 28 stocks.
When traffic gets disrupted — when there is an imbalance of buy and sell orders — they must act. That is, when a gap exists between the best price bid and the best price asked, they are committed to buying or selling from their own inventory.
Critics call this a monopoly; the exchange prefers to call it a franchise. The specialists must live up to a strict discipline, agree to an examination of conduct, and maintain an orderly market, the exchange says.
They have an affirmative responsibility, for example, to risk their capital so as to reduce price fluctuations between trades. Sometimes they work against their short-term interest. Long term, they generally come out with a good profit.
Critics would like to see the specialist ousted or his powers reduced. Too often, they say, he fails to keep prices ascending or descending in an orderly fashion. Too infrequently, they continue, does the exchange discipline them.

Parents Ask Daughter Be Allowed 'Die In Dignity'

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — "Take her from the machine and the tubes connected to her and let her pass into the hands of the Lord." Karen Ann Quinlan's adoptive father pleaded with the court.

Karen Ann's mother was to take the stand today to repeat that plea, urging the court to allow doctors to disconnect a respirator that has kept their comatose daughter breathing for almost six months.

Julia Quinlan, a petite, red-haired mother of three, who has watched her vivacious 21-year-old daughter lapse into a "vegetative state," has asked that "Karen be allowed to die with dignity."

Briefs filed before the trial indicated Mrs. Quinlan will testify that her daughter said weeks before she became ill that if she ever became terminally ill, she wouldn't want to be kept alive by artificial means. The comments were made during a family discussion about two friends who were dying of cancer, according to the Quinlan's attorney, Paul W. Armstrong.

It has not been determined what caused Miss Quinlan's illness, but doctors who first treated her in April suspected she had used tranquilizers and liquor together at a party.

Her father, Joseph, testified before Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. on Tuesday that he believes it is God's will that Karen should be removed from the respirator at St. Clare's Hospital so "nature can take its course. It's the Lord's will; for some reason he wants to take her."

"We had done everything possible to help her and now we had no hope," Quinlan said, recalling his feeling when doctors told him three months ago that his daughter's coma was irreversible.

Quinlan said that if the court grants his request, he will have a doctor remove the respirator as his family and parish priests watch at Miss Quinlan's bedside.

"If the court doesn't agree with me I don't know what I'll do," he said.

Two doctors who have cared for Miss Quinlan testified Monday that they would not disconnect the respirator, even if ordered to do so by the court. They said she is alive by all medical criteria.

The state has argued that it could be considered homicide to disconnect the respirator.

Dr. Julius Korein, a neurologist testifying for the Quinlans, said, "I and many of my colleagues do not believe in saving a life that will lie as a vegetable for 10 years."

And Korein said he believed the purpose of the Quinlan's case was to bring into the open and make legal what he termed "an unwritten practice among doctors," to withhold treatment from patients who have no hope of survival as normal human beings.

Korein said doctors treating terminally ill patients sometimes tell nurses such things as: "If this man stops breathing don't resuscitate him."

The Quinlan's action has been endorsed by priests at their local Roman Catholic church. On Tuesday, the chancellor of the Paterson Diocese endorsed the Quinlan's position.

Quinlan said he probably wouldn't have made the move had the church not told him it was morally correct.

Bill Opposed By Flaherty

RALEIGH (AP)—David Flaherty, North Carolina secretary of human resources, says he opposes a bill under which the federal government would pay 75 per cent of each state's costs in two welfare programs instead of varying it according to the states' per capita income.

Under the present system, poorer states receive a higher percentage of their costs for Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Medicaid programs than do richer states.

The new law, sponsored by Rep. Bellas Abzug, N.Y., would require the federal government to pay 75 per cent of the costs for each state. Sixty-eight per cent of North Carolina's costs in those programs is now paid by the federal government; 50 per cent of New York's costs are paid.

Flaherty said even though North Carolina would receive an additional $24 million annually, he said he opposed the bill because it would add about $4.8 million to the federal budget.

That, he said, would help wealthy states such as New York and California, but would also help bankrupt the U.S. Treasury.

In a news release received today, Flaherty said Abzug had asked for his support of her bill.

doing. They let us down. But we're not going to blame them. We're taking full responsibility for their actions, no matter how contemptible they were an no matter how much we disapproved of the illegal manner in which they carried out our orders. As President it was our job to see that they did not violate the trust we had given them in spite of all the other things we had on our mind during that momentous period in American history."

"I think Peoria will buy it," the New Nixon said.

"It will just be a matter of time, Dicky, before we're on top again," the Old Nixon said. "We'll take a trip to China, then to the Soviet Union and then to the Middle East. They love us over there, not like the creeps in this country who always had it in for us."

"The New Nixon was suddenly coming out of his lethargy."

"You know, you might just possibly swing it," he said. "Six months ago I wouldn't have given 18 1/2 minutes of tape for our chances of making a comeback. But now with the book and the TV and the Teamsters I'm starting to feel like a new man."

The Old Nixon slapped him on the back. "Atta boy, Dicky, Don't forget what they tried to do to Patton."

"Richard," the New Nixon said, "do you think they'll invite us to the Republican National Convention?"

"Invite us?" chuckled the Old Nixon. "Would you believe the keynote speaker?"

Safety Training 'Priority Item'

ROCKY MOUNT — Safety in both theory and practice is "a priority item" at East Carolina University, ECU Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins said today.

Safety education is emphasized in the curriculum at ECU despite the fact that many people tend to view safety as "a common sense item instead of a subject for academic study, Jenkins said. "Because of this situation, a concentrated effort is being made . . . to point out the necessity of being a safety conscious individual."

Addressing the annual workshop of the Eastern Carolina Safety Council, Jenkins said safety studies are included in courses in three separate schools at ECU. He said ECU's traffic safety center's work in instruction in emergency driving maneuvers is a pilot project sponsored by the Governor's Highway Safety Program and is drawing national attention.

Review Schools' Legal Factors Sees Risks In Low Radiation Dosages

A speaker from the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill and four local guest panelists continued the "Education in Transition" program sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters last night on the East Carolina University campus.

Second in a series of Three programs on education, last night's program centered on who operates the public school system in North Carolina. Speaker Ann Dellinger, a teacher of Public Law and Government at the Institute explained the legal composition of the North Carolina public school system.

Dr. Dellinger explained that on the state level the General Assembly, the State Board of Education, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction have controlling interest in the state's schools. In North Carolina, the superintendent is elected by the people while the 11 board members are gubernatorial appointees.

In addition to the State Board of Education, there are also 148 local school administration units comprised of board members and a superintendent. These local boards may request funds from the local governing group above what they are allocated from the state. While the local school boards are subject to the General Assembly and to the State Board, Dellinger said that they were a definite power source in the school system.

A 1974 breakdown of North Carolina public school funding, according to Dr. Dellinger, showed that 69 per cent of operational costs came from the State, 21 per cent from local governments and 10 per cent from Federal government. She pointed out that while the state contributed more to the system, it had willingly delegated much of its decision making power to the local agencies.

Dr. Dellinger noted an important part of the power structure in the school system is the local Superintendent of Public Instruction. It is his job to insure that all personnel under him understand all binding state, federal and local rulings concerning the schools. He hires, fires, interviews and mediates in disputes. She expressed surprise at the sophistication of local superintendents in matters of law and policy.

In closing Dr. Dellinger explained the current Commission to Revise the Public School Laws of which she is a member. This commission will make it recommendations for any changes to the State Board who will in turn make recommendations to the State Assembly. She said that a change may come in the area of group bargaining by teachers and that an Administrative Procedures Act to be effective in February 1976 will effect some change in the state's school system.

On the panel were Myra Cain of the ECU English Department, Fannie Jackson, Director of the Meadowbrook Daycare Center, Michael Logan of the ECU Department of Anthropology and Herbert Paschal of the History Department of ECU.

Pascal was alarmed at the increase of court intervention in school system matters.

The next program in the series on education will be held next Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in the Auditorium of the Allied Health Building. Speaking on the question "Why have schools?" will be James L. Smith, Associate Professor of Philosophy at ECU. The public is invited.

OES MEETING

Pride of The East Chapter 524 of the Order of The Eastern Star is having its Chapter of Sorrow meeting Thursday night at 8 p.m. at the Masonic Hall on West Fifth Street. The public is invited to attend.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Experiments show that low dosages of radiation emitted by microwave ovens and radar equipment may be dangerous.

Dr. Andrew Huang, principal investigator in a study by Duke University Medical Center, said his experiments used one-half the maximum safe dosage level allowed by federal law.

Huang says that while its been known for several years that high dosages of the radiation are dangerous, his is the first study to show that low microwave levels are also harmful to health.

The level used in the experiments, five milliwatts per square centimeter, is lower than that to which workers at radar installations are constantly exposed to, he said.

Dosages of less than 10 milliwatts per square centimeter are allowed by federal law and have been considered harmless.

Huang says he found two significant abnormalities while working with cells taken from hamsters which had been exposed to microwave radiation.

He said the ability of lymphocytes, a kind of white blood cell, to respond to immunological challenges was reduced. He said they also grew larger and changed to a form similar to one assumed before multiplication.

No chromosomal damage was observed, Huang said.

The study is sponsored by a $45,000 grant from the Environmental Protection Agency which is accumulating information for establishment of safe guidelines for radar operation.

Whither George Dickel?

With or without the rocks? Either way it's superb Tennessee Sour Mash Whisky.

Why? It's mellowed through charcoal. For a smooth, expensive taste.

What? The thought that quality always takes a little longer.

How? Tennessee Coffee. Add one jigger George Dickel to hot coffee. Sweeten to taste. Top with generous dollop of whipped cream and enjoy.

There's a little bit of Tennessee in every sip.

Pres. Ford Deposition Ordered In Fromme Trial

By STEVE LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Ford has been ordered to give a video tape deposition as a defense witness for Lynette Fromme, who is accused of attempting to assassinate him.
U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride issued the order Tuesday. He said Ford's deposition could be taken "at the White House or any other place convenient for the President."

The jury at Miss Fromme's trial then could view the taped deposition. The trial is scheduled to begin Nov. 4.

But MacBride refused to order Ford to appear personally at the trial to testify about what he saw Sept. 5 when Miss Fromme allegedly pointed a loaded pistol at him as he walked to the state Capitol.
The gun did not go off and Ford was not hurt.

MacBride ordered that Ford's testimony be taken within 10 days. Asst. U.S. Atty. Donald Heller said he expected to hear from the White House on the order by Friday.

Miss Fromme's court-appointed counsel, John Virga, said Ford might be able to refute statements by other witnesses that the gun clicked as the trigger had been pulled.
"One of the prosecution's main points is that the gun clicked," Virga told newsmen.

"Our contention is that it never happened."
"President Ford was one of the people who was in the best position to say. His testimony could be very significant on the issue of whether or not she actually intended to kill him."

Officers say they found a magazine containing four rounds in the .45-caliber pistol they took away from Miss Fromme. But there was no round in the firing chamber and the weapon could not have fired, they add.

MacBride noted that Ford said in an FBI statement that he could not remember hearing a click sound when the pistol was pointed at him.
But MacBride added, "He could be examined further on the subject."

Virga asked that Ford appear in court, but he said a video tape deposition was acceptable.

No president in office has appeared as a criminal trial witness. Thomas Jefferson sent a letter to a court in a civil case while he was in office, and Richard Nixon submitted written answers under oath to a list of court-approved questions during the White House plumbers' trial in July 1974.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said in Washington that Ford would have no comment on MacBride's order "because the matter is being handled by the Justice Department."

There was no immediate comment from Justice Department officials.

MacBride said Virga and prosecutors would question the President. He ruled out attendance by Miss Fromme, who has been allowed to act as her own attorney with Virga's assistance.

Ponder New York Loan Guarantee

By MIKE WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan being studied by a Senate panel would give New York

City $6 billion in federal loan guarantees, but the measure appears doomed because it would require reluctant officials to pass a special state tax.

The proposal, drawn up by the Senate Banking Committee's staff, would grant the federal loan guarantees for one year. It also would require that private investors purchase bonds in which up to 20 percent of value was unguaranteed.

The proposal would require that state officials impose a special tax of about $420 million to pay about half of New York City's expected operating deficit, but Gov. Hugh Carey voiced strong reluctance to go along with such a plan.

New York City and the State of New York will default on their financial obligations if federal aid is denied.

The loan guarantee proposal is one of three suggested to the committee. Another would have the committee take no action, and the third would provide for only standby assistance to maintain essential city services in the event of default.

Meanwhile, the House economic stabilization subcommittee resumes hearings today into the impact of a possible New York City default and is scheduled to hear witnesses from the investment industry.

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the House subcommittee, said he expects the panel to report some kind of bill to the full committee next week. But he said he expects it to be approved by only two votes. There are 15 members of the subcommittee.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said he expects any vote in his committee also will be close.

There was an indication of the Senate committee's sentiment Tuesday when the panel voted 7 to 6 in favor of considering the proposal. All the Republicans on the panel and Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.D., voted against considering the loan guarantee proposal.

The committee resumes work on the bill late today and Proxmire said he would hold hearings into the weekend if needed to finish work on it. Proxmire said he has "finally decided to come down as strong as I can" for the loan guarantee proposal, which he said would put the city on a "short leash."

But New York's governor told the committee he did not have the votes in the state legislature to impose any special state tax to aid the city. Proxmire said New York should not get the loan guarantees unless the state comes up with the new tax.

But Carey contended that federal assistance, not a state tax, should be used to bail New York out of its financial troubles, saying it would be the "ultimate immorality" if Congress allowed the city to default.

Strict Rules On Paddling Probing Drugs Sale In Prison

RALEIGH (AP)—A recent Supreme Court ruling permits school teachers to paddle unruly pupils, but lays some strict requirements before corporal punishment can be administered legally.

"In actuality, the court has upheld a lower court ruling which makes it extremely difficult for a teacher legally to paddle a student," said Dean Westmoreland, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

In its decision, the Supreme Court upheld a ruling issued several months ago by Judge J. Braxton Craven of the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Craven said North Carolina teachers would have to follow three guidelines in administering corporal punishment.

He said teachers must forewarn pupils of behavior punishable by paddling; another school official must be present; and parents must be furnished a written explanation of the paddling on request.

Westmoreland said there are questions of what constitutes forewarning. He said teachers might be liable to suits if they illegally paddled a child.

RALEIGH (AP)—Allegations that Craggy Prison guards sold drugs to inmates are being investigated by the State Bureau of Investigation.

Eight Central Prison inmates reportedly have said they will sign affidavits saying they bought drugs from three Craggy guards.

The prisoners were at Craggy, in Asheville, when it was the scene of a disturbance Sept. 9. Several inmates were injured then as two dormitories were damaged from a fire set during what prison officials insisted was an inmate conflict rather than a rebellion.

Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten acknowledged the investigation and his department is concerned about the prison drug problem.

"I have information that it is widespread throughout the state. I'm not saying that it is widespread for guards to be involved but inmates use every conceivable means to get drugs into prison," Edmisten said.

Acting SBI Director Haywood Starling said Tuesday that he could not comment concerning the investigation.

Fred Morrison Jr., who heads the North Carolina Inmate Grievance Commission, said he turned over to the SBI information he received about the inmate allegations.

Craggy Prison Superintendent J. Richard Smith said he "wouldn't think there is any truth to any of this." He said he has not been told of an investigation.

Corrections Secretary David Jones also said prison officials knew of no guards under investigation.

The Greensboro Daily News quoted sources as saying an allegation has been made that four break-ins at the prison pharmacy were not reported.

Arraigned

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—A Georgian charged with killing a Wilmington teenager and shooting a state highway patrolman has been arraigned on a long list of charges in Laurinburg and Wilmington.

Gregory Hudson Jones, 25, was then sent to New Hanover Memorial Hospital for examination for several abrasions officers said he had when he was arrested Saturday. After the examination, the hospital did not admit him as a patient.

The Georgia man is accused of shooting a Wrightsville Beach teenager, three Wilmington teenagers and Highway Patrolman Harry E. Stegall in three separate incidents last week. Peter Ferring, one of the Wilmington youths, died of gunshot wounds.

Jones was ordered held in New Hanover County Jail in Wilmington pending his trial there on the murder charge.

Confession Of Crew's Mutiny

MIAMI (AP) — An Indonesian sailor says he stabbed and clubbed his ship's four officers to death and sank the ship after he was cut on the eye in a shipboard accident involving one of his superiors.

"The last one was the captain," Gun Supardi, 23, said in a statement filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court. "I stabbed him with the knife in the hand, stomach and face."

The statement was introduced at a hearing on Indonesian efforts to return Supardi and three other Indonesian seamen from the ill-fated freighter Mimi to Indonesia.

Judge Peter Fay denied Indonesia's request and ordered Supardi, the other three seamen, and the Mimi's cook held for another hearing.

West Germany and Panama also have sought jurisdiction over the crew of the Mimi, a Panama-registered vessel operated by a crew hired in West Germany.

Supardi told U.S. Immigration officials he was injured in Miami when Chief Engineer Bernd Hesse cut a wire from a container.

"I didn't want to go back to the ship because my eyes were not good and I could not see," Supardi said. He said he was persuaded to return to the Mimi, which sailed that night, Oct. 9, with a load of fertilizer for Georgetown, Guyana.

"After the ship sailed that night I went to the captain and he told me to go to my cabin and sleep," Supardi said, adding that he stayed there about 25 hours.

Supardi said in his statement he found Hesse in the crew's mess, hit him on the head with an iron and stabbed him in the stomach.

He said he killed Second Engineer Horst Hesse and Chief Mate Manfred Schmidt before encountering Capt. Lothar Eckard on the bridge, where Hesse had managed to go for help.

Supardi said he stabbed Eckard and clubbed him and Hesse with a hammer before awakening the rest of the crew and ordering them into a lifeboat. He said he sunk the Mimi by smashing her seaconcs.

The next day, the five crewmen were found adrift in the Caribbean Sea amid debris from the sunken freighter. They were taken to Palm Beach, Fla., by another freighter.

The Mimi sank in international waters about 220 miles southeast of Miami. A spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office says the government is eager to turn the case over to another country's jurisdiction.

Will Continue Paddling Fight

GIBSONVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Mrs. Virginia Baker says she is trying to find a way to continue her fight against spanking in the public schools. It was the paddling of her son which led to the Supreme Court's affirmation Monday that corporal punishment is a legitimate means of enforcing discipline. Mrs. Baker said in an interview Tuesday that paddling children is archaic. She said it is among such punishments as a sea captain's beating seamen into line or a husband's use of brutality "to put his wife into place."

However, Norman B. Smith, a lawyer who pleaded Mrs. Baker's case for the American Civil Liberties Union, said the Supreme Court's action ended any possible outlawing of corporal punishment in public schools. "It's over. There's nowhere else to go," he said.

The Supreme Court affirmed without comment a three-judge federal panel which upheld corporal punishment and spelled out procedures to be followed. The panel ruled that teachers must forewarn students of behavior punishable by paddling, another school official must be present, and parents must be furnished on request a written explanation of the paddling.

Mrs. Baker said her son, Russell, was paddled for a shoving incident when he was in the third grade, and for disobeying instructions during a bounce-ball game while he was in the sixth grade in 1973.

She displayed an inch-thick wooden paddle which she said was the one used in the third-grade incident. "This is what they use on third graders in Gibsonville," she said.

On the back was an area designated as "signup" space for victims.

On the front was a painting of youths huddle in a group with their pants down in anticipation of a spanking. Also on the front were the words: "Pa is boss, as everyone knows, but what Ma says always goes."

Charges Dismissed In Bombing Crime

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Charges that he set a bomb which blew both legs and an arm off a fellow resident of Staunton, Va., have been dismissed against Charles A. Almond, 41, because he wasn't tried within 120 days of being extradited.

Almond has been returned to the Virginia state prison system to continue serving a breaking-and-entering sentence.

It was nine years ago that the bomb, apparently rigged to a door, went off as Amos Sensabaugh stepped out of a mobile home while he was working on a construction job near Charlotte. Sensabaugh, then 28, said at the time that he thought one of his wife's former boy-friends has set the bomb.

In 1973, police said they had a mystery witness. And Almond was indicted on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill by explosives, and unlawful discharge of explosives. He was extradited from Virginia in April of 1974. He should have been tried by August unless the state could prove there was a compelling reason for delay.

Dist. Atty. Peter S. Gilchrist III said Tuesday the trial wasn't held because he thought his office had an agreement with Almond's lawyer, Ed Cook, that would have allowed scheduling it later. However, Cook said no such deal was made.

Superior Court Judge Frank Snepp dismissed the charges.

Two People Injured In Auto Collision

Two persons were reported injured in a two-vehicle mishap late Tuesday afternoon at the intersection of Line Avenue and Farmville Boulevard.

Investigating officers said the drivers of the two vehicles in-involved in the wreck, Madeline Stanley Jones of 100 N. Warren Street, and Felice Olivette Streeter of 1211 Battle Street, were injured and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Local Students At Seminar

Three Rose High students, Ann Williams, Margie Snell and Debbie Warren, were among 76 high school students from 12 states participating in an Anchor Club Leadership Seminar for four days last week at Freedoms Foundations, Valley Forge, Pa.

The four day session focused on America's past, present and future through a series of lectures, group discussions and guided tours of historic sites.

Among lecturers were Richard V. Allen, President of Potomac International, Washington, D. C.; Allan C. Brownfield, Columnist; Father Gervase Cain, Assistant Dean at St. Francis College, Pa.; and Basilla E. Neilan, columnist and youth consultant.

Police, who charged Madeline Jones with a stop sign violation, estimated damage to her car at $900 and $1,500 to the Streeter vehicle.

The collision took place at 6:21 p.m.

Both drivers were charged following investigation of a Monday night wreck at the Belvoir Road-Memorial Drive intersection involving vehicles operated by Thomas Hurley Phillips of 1900 Barlow Road, Tarboro, and Iris Elaine Younger of Rt. Box 600, Grifton.

Phillips was charged with a safe movement violation, police reported, while Iris Younger was cited for disregarding a red traffic signal.

No injuries were reported and damage was set at $200 to the Phillips car.

The accident occurred around 10:30 p.m.

Psychologist Suggests Children Damaged By 'Pill'

BIRTHDAY BOYS—Casey Williams, 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Williams of Oakwood, Ill., and his dog Dudley celebrate their birthday with a ride in a toy wagon. Both boy and dog were born within the same hour of the same day. (AP Wirephoto)

By LIONEL BASCOM
NEW YORK (UPI) — Most controversy surrounding the birth control pill has centered on the side effects to the mother. A new question is whether children born to mothers who have taken the pill also face harm.

The government is sponsoring several studies to see if the use of the pill around the time of conception or during early pregnancy affects the fetus.

But a New York psychologist, using information from the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz, raises the possibility of intelligence defects in children whose mothers took oral contraceptives containing the hormone estrogen long before becoming pregnant.

Research pioneered by psychologist Jean Jofen suggests that intelligence factors in these children — memory, vocabulary, logical reasoning or motor coordination — may be damaged by the estrogen used in one of two types of birth control pills.

The Food and Drug Administration has approved two kinds of birth control pills marketed widely in the United States. One contains a combined dosage of the hormones progesterin and estrogen, the other only progesterin.

Prof. Jofen, a psychologist at New York City's Baruch College, stumbled upon her estrogen theory in 1955. It is far from being proved. But she believes there are indications that some children who can't read, spell or do simple arithmetic may be victims of the pill.

The specifics of her theory are contained in a largely ignored paper written in 1967 called "Long Range Effects of Medical Experiments in Concentration Camps." The paper, based on research financed by $6,050 in private grants, was presented to various government and research organizations, including the population division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Dr. Louis M. Hellman, a deputy assistant HEW secretary and director of family planning programs, wrote her last year, saying, "I found your paper interesting but scientifically unsupportable."

"All the evidence that I think that anybody has about the oral contraceptive is that children aren't affected by it," Hellman said in an interview in Washington. "We ought to know by this time whether people are being born with low IQs."

Dr. Jofen does not dispute the argument that her data are inconclusive, but says her findings indicate the need for more studies to determine if there is any validity to her concern.

Dr. Heinz W. Berendes, chief of the contraceptive evaluation branch of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, expressed interest when informed of the study last week. He said his division would explore the matter to see "if there is some evidence, even suggestive, that we ought to be concerned about."

A study was carried out by a University of Puerto Rico researcher last year on Puerto Rican families where the mother had children before she began using birth control pills and children after she began. It found no difference in the intelligence of the children.

But Dr. Jofen said that study, and a similar one she conducted earlier in Puerto Rico, failed to prove or disprove her theory because it is believed that due to schooling factors, younger children in Puerto Rico invariably are more intelligent than older children of the same family.

Dr. Jofen expands on her findings in a book she has written called "The Secret of the Salitrum Plant." Also, the New York State Department of Health has requested a copy of her original report to study.

Dr. Jofen's research grew out of a discovery she made in 1955 while giving routine intelligence tests to a group of 181 five-year-olds at a Hebrew private school in New York City.

She noticed a large group of the children had IQs below the normal 100. She said that in each of these cases of low IQ she found "the mother had been in a concentration camp."

Some of the children's IQs were exceptionally low and in each of those cases she said the mother had been in the same German camp during World War II — Auschwitz.

Further research turned up evidence that Nazis at Auschwitz had conducted experiments with estrogen.

German documents which Jofen found and translated said inmates at Auschwitz — both men and women — were fed daily doses of liquid estrogen in soup. She said the women stopped menstruation and the men lost their sex drive. She said her interviews with women who were in the concentration camps confirmed this.

She said since birth control pills had related effects, she thought there might be a possibility that the estrogen in the pill might lower intelligence of offspring of women who took the pill.

Oral contraceptives contain relatively small amounts of estrogen. She said there was no way to tell how much estrogen the Nazis fed Auschwitz inmates. "They just poured it in the soup, there was no dosage."

In the group tested, 73 children had mothers once imprisoned at Auschwitz, 20 had been in other concentration camps, 43 had mothers who came to the United States before 1938 and 45 children had mothers born in the United States.

Those children whose mothers had been at Auschwitz had scores ranging between 44 and 133. Those whose mothers had been in other concentration camps had IQs between 105 and 140. Children whose mothers came to the United States before the war had IQs ranging between 87 and 152 and those whose mothers were born in the U.S. scored between 90 and 159.

"My experience in the years during which I tested and followed the course of my findings, bear out completely the statistics from even this small group since I tested hundreds of cases and always obtained more or less the same results," she said.

"The Auschwitz sample hit the lowest range," she said. Only 2.7 per cent of 1 Auschwitz children had an IQ of 115 or higher while the other groups scored 33 per cent, per cent and 43 per cent respectively.

"Those children whose IQs were only were interned Auschwitz, but whose mothers belonged to the other group fell into the normal range IQ," she said in a paper presented to the Fifth World Congress of Jewish Studies Jerusalem on Aug. 5, 1969.

"Thus we can postulate that the estrogen administered the mothers in Auschwitz had an effect on the intelligence of their offspring born many years later," she said. "Lowered their intelligence."

"The lower the IQ was, the younger the mother had been when she was first introduced to the drug," Dr. Jofen said.

According to her findings, "not all facets of intelligence, (memory, vocabulary, logical reasoning, etc.) were affected equally." She says an analysis has to be made to show which part of intelligence is affected because of the drugs.

"My axiom is that among the women who have taken the pill we will find a larger number of lower intelligence (children) than among the mothers who have not taken the pill," she said.

"I feel that estrogen is the offending hormone," she said which somehow damages the woman's reproductive organs.

"I am not saying these children are retarded," she said. "I am saying that part of intelligence is made up of many things — logical thinking, auditory memory, visual memory, motor coordination."

"Therefore if this child has very poor coordination with the hand and eye movements, these will depress the whole intelligence score," she said. "Poor readers often have poor motor and eye coordination."

Patty's Attorneys Not Yet Begun Her Defense

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's attorneys have been too immersed in questions that will influence a ruling on her mental competence even to begin plotting her legal defense, says one of her lawyers.

"The major thrust of all our efforts has been to get her psychiatric aid," says Albert Johnson. "Because of that, questions of defense, of admission to bail, have all taken a back seat."

U. S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, who must rule whether Miss Hearst is competent to stand trial, is awaiting final reports today from a psychiatric panel he appointed to examine the jailed heiress. He has twice delayed the competence hearing because the psychiatric reports were not ready. As of Tuesday, the judge had received two final reports and postponed for at least one day a hearing date until remaining reports are delivered.

Three psychiatrists and one psychologist have been examining Miss Hearst for more than one month, seeking to determine whether her attorneys are right when they say she was brainwashed and driven mad by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

"It has never been my intention or that of any member of the defense to have her declared incompetent," said Johnson. "We have simply indicated as lawyers that she is presently not in a mental condition to aid in her own defense adequately."

Carter's ruling, which will be based on but not necessarily governed by the psychiatric reports, will solve one legal problem but is sure to inspire others.

If Miss Hearst is ruled competent, her attorneys may ask to have their own psychiatrists examine her. If the judge finds her incompetent, the method and location of her psychiatric treatment may be a subject of argument.

Miss Hearst is being held on federal charges of bank robbery in San Francisco and state counts of kidnaping, assault and robbery in Los Angeles. Johnson says he has no doubt she will one day go to trial.

Meanwhile, Steven Soliah, 27, a house painter charged with harboring Miss Hearst, asked in legal motions for access to "the reports of all physical and mental examinations which have or may be filed in the case of U.S. vs. Patricia Campbell Hearst." Soliah's trial is scheduled for Dec. 1.

In Harrisburg, Pa., the government planned new efforts to gain the testimony of two reluctant witnesses in another harboring case. Micki McGee Scott, 27, and Martin Miller, 28, have refused to testify before a federal grand jury probing reports that Ms. Scott, Miller and Ms. Scott's husband, sports activist Jack Scott, harbored Miss Hearst at a Pennsylvania farmhouse while she was on the run.

Seeking Political Role For Federal Employees

By MIKE MOORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's 2.8 million employees, banned since 1936 from running for partisan office or taking part in others' political campaigns, will have those restrictions lifted if a measure pending before the Senate becomes law.

The House overwhelmingly passed and sent to the Senate on Tuesday a bill that would make sweeping changes in the Hatch Act. That law limiting political activity by federal workers was passed when the federal bureaucracy began to burgeon during President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration.

The measure approved by the House includes provisions that seek to protect federal employees from pressures by superiors and others to contribute funds or to work in election campaigns.

The Ford administration opposes the bill, and Republicans said the President may veto it. The House vote was 288 to 119, however, more than the two-thirds needed to override a presidential veto.

It is widely believed that most federal civilian employees are registered Democrats, but no official figures were available.

The Civil Service Commission also opposes the bill, but it has received vigorous support from some labor groups, particularly government workers' groups.

The House Republican Policy Committee said the bill would "encourage the participation of federal employees in political machines ... (and) subject activities and pay ... to the demands of union bosses."

But proponents said it would restore first-class citizenship to government workers. They charged that the Hatch Act represented over-reaction to political abuses of long ago.

The House attached an amendment that would require employees who run for office to take a 90-day leave of absence from their jobs.

The bill, which also applies to employees of the semi-independent Postal Service but not to members of the Armed Services, prohibits campaigning during working hours, on government premises or while wearing any uniform or badge identifying the person as a government employee.

Employees would be forbidden to use official authority or influence to affect an election, to coerce anyone to vote or not to vote, or to contribute money or effort to a campaign. Solicitation of funds in government offices would be forbidden and employees would not be allowed to give campaign contributions, even voluntarily, to superiors.

The measure also would create a three-member Board on Political Activities of Federal Employees, appointed by the president, to hear cases of alleged violations.

Sanford Announces Campaign Manager

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Terry Sanford has announced the appointment of Dennis Shaul of Akron, Ohio, to manage his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

During a news conference in Raleigh Tuesday, the former North Carolina governor said he has qualified for over $200,000 in federal matching funds to bolster his campaign. An aide said he did this by raising at least $5,000 in contributions of no more than $250 in each of 21 states, although only 20 are required.

place Philip Hoff, former governor of Vermont, as his campaign manager. Hoff resigned several weeks ago. Shaul, in his mid 30s, was defeated when he ran in 1972 for mayor of Akron.

Sanford said his campaign is healthy, money is coming in at a better rate and he considers winning North Carolina's presidential primary next March as crucial. He indicated again he would withdraw from the campaign if he fails to defeat Alabama Gov. George Wallace in the North Carolina voting.

The states were listed as North Carolina, Kentucky, California, Oregon, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, Virginia, Maryland, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Nevada, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, which counts as a state.

Sanford said Shaul will represent

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—The North Carolina egg markets was one cent higher on small eggs and steady on others Tuesday. Supplies were moderate and demand was fairly good. Weighted average prices for small lot sales of consumer grade eggs in cartons delivered nearby retail outlets were 64.96 cents per dozen for a large white; 61.41 cents for a medium white; and 48.34 cents for a small white.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA)—Prices were sharply weaker on North Carolina's leading grain markets Tuesday. No. 2 yellow shelled corn was 2.57 to 2.60 in the East and 2.70 to 2.81 in the Piedmont. No. 1 yellow soybeans were 4.61 to 4.76 per bushel.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market struggled to a slight gain today in the face of profit taking pressures.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.73 at 848.55, and gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was relatively quiet. As the market opened, the government reported that its consumer price index rose at a 6 per cent annual rate in September, up from August's 2.4 per cent rate but still well below last year's two-digit levels.

Analysts said the figure was about what Wall Street had been expecting.

Market-watchers noted some positive response to further signs Tuesday from the Federal Reserve that it was loosening up a bit in its credit policy.

But the resultant buying interest was offset to a great extent by sellers cashing in on profits with the market at its highest level in three months.

Occidental Petroleum was the Big Board volume leader, down 1/2 at 15 1/2. The company reported that its third quarter earnings fell to 40 cents a share from $1.25 in the comparable period last year.

Most other issues showed only fractional changes.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .06 to 47.97.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .11 at 83.81.

Consumer Prices Up Half Percent

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices increased five-tenths of 1 per cent in September, largely because of higher prices for transportation, education, medical services, utilities and clothing, the government said today.

Despite the over-all increase in consumer prices, food prices at supermarkets declined for the first time since early this year, the Labor Department reported. The food prices dropped two-tenths of 1 per cent since August, with sharp reductions in prices for beef, fresh fruits and vegetables, the department said.

It said the decline in the buying power of workers' earnings resulted both from the rise in consumer prices and from a decline of six-tenths of 1 per cent in average weekly working hours.

But it said purchasing power still is one per cent greater than last year, the result of federal income tax cuts in May ordered by Congress.

The Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased three-tenths of 1 per cent in September, in part because prices of 1975 model cars did not decline as much as new car prices usually do at the close of the model year.

Prices of 1976 models will be reflected in the October price index, the department said. Prices of fuel oil and coal jumped 1.3 per cent in September, reflecting a steady upward increase of utilities costs.

The cost of services increased 1 per cent during September, the biggest increase in a year. The Labor Department said major causes were an increase in New York City transit fares, which helped pushed over-all transportation costs up by 3 per cent, and a rise of nine-tenths of 1 per cent in medical care.

The department said physicians' fees increased 1.1 per cent in September, the biggest rise in six months, while hospital service charges rose seven-tenths of 1 per cent.

In the food area, grocery store prices fell two-tenths of 1 per cent, but the decline was offset by a seven-tenths of 1 per cent increase in restaurant costs, which pushed the over-all food index up by one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Arrest Seven Persons In Larceny Of Tobacco

Seven persons have been arrested by the Pitt Sheriff's Department in connection with the larceny of approximately $4,000 worth of tobacco owned by Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that six of those arrested are charged with larceny of the tobacco while transporting the leaf from warehouses in Greenville and Farmville during the period between Oct. 1 and Oct. 17.

Arrested and charged with larceny of the tobacco were James William Ward, 19, of Rt. 1, Box 68, Walstonburg; Julius Thomas Evans Jr., 23, of Rt. 1, Box 70, Walstonburg; Otis Lee Evans, 19, Rt. 1, Box 56, Walstonburg; Raymond Michael Blount, 19, of Rt. 2, Box 344, Walstonburg; Henry Baker, 17, of Rt. 2, Box 344, Walstonburg; and Perry Lee Applewhite, 17, of Rt. 1, Box 74, Walstonburg.

Julius Evans, Blount and Baker were all charged with two counts of larceny with bond set at $2,000 each while Ward, Otis Evans and Applewhite are charged on three counts with bond set at $3,000 each.

Sheriff Tyson said that T. R. Beaman, 52, of Rt. 1, Box 211, Wilson, was also arrested and charged with receiving stolen property in connection with the tobacco thefts. Bond for Beaman was set at $1000.

The sheriff said that the tobacco was allegedly dropped off of transporting trucks after the leaf was picked up from Raynor-Forbes and New Independent warehouses in Greenville and Lee and New Blue warehouses in Farmville in separate incidents.

Some $3,000 worth of tobacco was recovered, it was noted.

Kidnap 2 Officials

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two American Embassy officers were kidnaped today at a street barricade manned by fighters in Lebanon's religious and political war between Christians and Moslems.

They were identified by an embassy spokesman as Charles Gallagher, 44, of Roanoke, Va., and William Dykes Jr., 50, of San Jose Calif., the director and deputy director respectively of the U.S. Information Agency printing facility in Beirut.

The two were grabbed about 7 a.m. as they drove to work in an embassy car with diplomatic license plates, the spokesman said. There was no indication who the abductors were, he added.

Kidnaping has been a frequent weapon of right-wing Christians, left-wing Moslems and radical Palestine guerrilla supporters of the Lebanese Moslems. The two sides have been locked in street battles for the last seven months.

Capture 3 Boys

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—A third teen-ager has been arrested in the robbery of a Rocky Mount bank.

Police report that 19-year-old Ronald Clark of Enfield was arrested early today. He is being held in the Halifax County jail.

Two 17-year-olds were taken into custody Tuesday, two hours after a branch of the Planters National Bank & Trust Co. was robbed of an undisclosed amount. They were identified as Julius Lee Lyons of Whitakers and William Harrison of Enfield, communities a few miles north of Rocky Mount. They have been charged with armed robbery, and are in jail at Rocky Mount.

Authorities report most of the money has been recovered.

Police said that Lyons and Harrison would be tried in state Superior Court, since under federal law they are considered juveniles.

Nightmare

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Two weeks ago, a car driven by 16-year-old Jimmy Harvey struck and killed a little girl when she pedaled her bicycle in front his automobile.

Police said Jimmy was blameless. Haunted by nightmares, Jimmy went for an evening drive last Saturday to ease his torment. Another car suddenly appeared in the road directly in front of him — and fate struck again.

"God, I've killed two people," Jimmy screamed. As in the Oct. 6 death of Tammy Tharp, 9, the Florida Highway Patrol said Jimmy was without fault in the death of Roger Weeks, 32.

"It didn't help. "They told me it wasn't my fault and said they knew I didn't mean to do it," Jimmy said Tuesday. "But all I could think of after the second accident was that I had killed two people. I still have nightmares."

Hospital Bd...

At the hospital. These included a study of myocardial infarction (heart attack), a study of pericarditis (heart inflammation) and one on cataract surgery. All three tended to show that good work is being done, but sufficient records are not being kept, he said.

Jean Owens, Director of Nursing, reported on a nursing audit which showed that good care is being given to the patients, but not enough teaching of how to take care of oneself at home is being done.

New Hospital Construction Manager Ralph Hall said the contractor has been granted an additional 97 days to have the building completed since it was so rainy just after construction began. The North Wing is almost complete, he said, and the towers will soon be ready. Once these are done, it's downhill all the way, he said.

Asked about the use of energy in the new hospital, he said, each of the boilers will use about 120 gallons of fuel per hour and may use natural gas or any of five grades of fuel oil. The electric bill will run about $25,000 a month, he said. A computer system is being installed, which will monitor usage of electricity and allow different systems to come on at different times, preventing a surge of usage which would run the hospital's rate higher, since it will be based on peak usage.

Chargers, Jaguars In Critical Clash

Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central, riding one game leads over the rest of Eastern Carolina Conference leads going into last weekend's game found themselves dazed Monday morning and wondering who they had run into Friday and Saturday night as the two fell out of a two-way tie into a four-way tie for first place in the loop.

RHS' Ricky Spruill

Farmville Central was upended by C.B. Aycock, 21-16. Elsewhere, Conley beat Southern Nash, 12-0, Roanoke made mincemeat out of North Edgecombe 79-0 and Jamesville lost its seventh, to Manteo, 49-0. Monday night, North Pitt dumped North Lenoir, 21-7, and Williamston lost to Ahoskie, 10-0.

The losses by the two leaders let Aycock and Greene Central move into the top half of the league standings, all four having 3-1 loop records.

Farmville Central will be hosting the Chargers in this important game but Jaguar coach Gene Brewer thinks his bunch will need a lot more than a home field.

"It won't make a lot of difference," he said. "We didn't play but one quarter against Aycock. Aycock played better than expected and they did a good job. I have nothing but praise for them. We weren't ready to play."

Brewer noted he doesn't know what type of game to expect this week. "I don't have any idea. We are capable of playing good defense but whether we will or not will have to be seen."

Ayden-Grifton's Mike Overton expects a defensive game. "It will be low scoring. It is an all important game."

Overton pointed out that the loser would be just about finished in the conference. Ayden-Grifton has yet to play Aycock but the Chargers are worrying about this week's game. "Both teams played a good game. Their line beat our line," said Overton about the Greene Central offense. "We had a chance to win it, we had it on the four and couldn't score we got a field goal. We had it fourth and four on their 15. Greene Central played a real good game."

Elsewhere this week, the ECC race could be shaken if D. H. Conley can win its second loop game in a row. The Vikings broke out of their four-week slump with a 12-0 win over Southern Nash completing a sweep of the Firebirds by the

JHS' Jerry Ange

Overton said his team was not preparing anything special for the game. "We just plan to block somebody and to tackle somebody this week." He, too, doesn't expect the home field to have much effect on the outcome.

Secondary Gets Player Honor

Terry Gallaher and the defensive secondary won plaudits from the East Carolina University coaching staff for their play in the game with Western Carolina last weekend.

Gallaher, who caught two 64-yard touchdown passes, was named the Offensive Player of the Week for the team, while the secondary of Bobby Myrick, Jim Bolding, Reggie Pinkney and Ernest Madison were collectively named Defensive Players of the week.

Gallaher who boosted his total touchdown catches to seven, has already posted the fourth best reception record in yardage among all-time ECU leaders. Many more games like last week's and he'll snap the season record of 512 yards held by Dick Corrada in 1970. Gallaher had 405 yards already. He's also just three short of the single season touchdown receiving mark of 10 held by Bobby Hodges back in 1953.

Bolding with his three interceptions, has tied the career record of 14 interceptions, and he still has the rest of this year and all of next year to go, so it seems certain that his name will go into the book as the new leader. Myrick, Pinkney and Madison each grabbed off one interception, with Madison returning his 29 yards for a touchdown. Myrick also blocked a punt to set up a touchdown.

Co-captains for this week's game with North Carolina were also named by the Pirate staff. They will be Ricky Bennett and Ken Strayhorn on offense, Cary Godette on defense, and Myrick on the specialty unit. Myrick, a senior, transferred from North Carolina to East Carolina after one season in Chapel Hill.

Tickets for this Saturday's game in Chapel Hill are still available at the East Carolina ticket office in Minges Coliseum.

over North Edgecombe. The Redskins scored the most points in one game in the school's brief history; the most touchdowns rushing, nine; the most TD's by kickoff or punt returns; the least yards given up in a single game rushing, minus 23; they intercepted the most passes in a single game, three; the most points in a single quarter, 32, and most shut outs in a season (so far) with four.

Roanoke set several school records in its Friday night win

Woodard this Friday night as the Redskins head toward a possible conference championship.

Williamston will take on Edenton at Edenton this week. The Tigers were shut out for the first time this season Monday night by Ahoskie. If the Tigers win this week it will insure them another winning season with a record no worse than 6-4.

Redskins Rampages Are Led By Ricky Spruill

By CHIP LAMBETH - Reflector Sports Writer ROBERSONVILLE — Before the football season began, Roanoke High School football coach Noland Respass had his doubts about the coming year. But after a couple of games in they were completely wiped out.

And with the likes of running back Ricky Spruill, Respass' worries were that much more relieved. Last year, under the name of Robersonville High School Eagles, Respass took his team to the state championship game. This year, Robersonville merged with Oak City to form Roanoke and the Redskins. The 'Skins are currently leading the area teams and their conference, the Eastern Plains, in nearly every statistic possible.

Spruill, along with fellow running backs Ricky Purvis and David Spruill and a host of others, have ground out 1,968 yards in eight games. They have run for 32 touchdowns and totaled 2,381 yards in total offense.

Spruill himself is the Redskins' leading rusher with 780 yards in 61 carries, for a 12.8 yard-per-carry average. He also leads in touchdowns with ten. He scored five times two weeks ago against South Edgecombe getting three rushing and one each on passes and kickoff returns.

Purvis didn't start out as a running back, however. He began playing organized football in eighth grade as a tight end but says he switched in high school. "When I got to high school I was a tight end. I moved to halfback when I was a sophomore. I like running back better because there is more action there in the backfield and I like the contact."

Spruill agreed that Coach Respass' doubts about the team have cleared up. "Mostly in his injuries (we were worried about). Most of the guys that played (defense) last year were seniors. Most of the guys have ability but haven't shown it yet."

Although he has gained more yardage than any three other backs combined, Ricky doesn't consider himself, to be the 'Skins main offensive weapon. "I don't consider myself a workhorse," he said. The other halfback, Purvis, is a good back; he is used for long runs and our fullback, a sophomore, is doing a great job."

Spruill said the Redskins, who run from the wishbone, go mainly with sweeps and triple options, "but mostly sweeps." Spruill also plays basketball and runs track. He is looking for the basketball team to have a good season this winter because of the merger of Robersonville and Oak City.

"What I hear is that we have

PIKEVILLE—Farmville Central's girls' tennis team slipped past Charles B. Aycock yesterday, 5-4.

Farmville won four of the singles event, then wrapped it up by winning the number one doubles event. Aycock, after winning just two of the singles, tried to fight back in the doubles, winning two, but it wasn't enough.

The Lady Jaguars close out their regular season, traveling to Greene Central, on Thursday, Oct. 30.

got some great guys coming from Oak City who can jump and shoot from outside," he said. "This will be a great help." Spruill expressed the hope to play college football somewhere. He had been contacted by schools including Chowan and Kansas but nothing definite has been set yet.

The Redskins have two games left and with good nights in both, Spruill could go over the 1,000 yard mark this year and help the 'Skins over the 3,000 yard total offense mark as well.

Tourney Nears End Of Play

Lyn Moore has captured the Pee-Wee Division Championship in the M. B. Massey Jr. Fall Junior Golf Championship at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Moore defeated Marvin Blount III on the first hole of a sudden death round.

In the championship division, Greg House will meet Jack Mann for the title on Sunday in a match starting at 2 p.m.

A Member-Member Tournament will be held at the club on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 15-16. Members wishing to play should sign up—as a team—as soon as possible.

A junior girls championship will be held Friday starting at 4 p.m. Two divisions will be held, regular, ages 11-15, and little ladies, ages 7-10. Prizes will be awarded to winners, and a small entry fee is being charged.

In the Ladies Match Play Tournament, the field is down to four players: Jean Creech, Betty Lou Howard, Bernie Raul and Sara West. A schedule of the remaining matches is up on the bulletin board.

Pro Gordon Fulp is participating in the North Carolina Pro-Pro Championship at MacGregor Downs near Raleigh this week. He teamed with pro Sam Higdon and amateurs Bob Bolyard, Bob Willard and Bob Abbott to take second place in the pro-am division on the opening day of the tournament.

UNC Rally Tied Bucs

The University of North Carolina rallied in the second half and pulled out a 3-3 tie with East Carolina University's field hockey team yesterday.

The Pirates women forged out into a 2-0 lead in the first half of the match, dominating play. But Carolina came back with an early second half goal, and the two swapped later goals to leave the Buccettes up, 3-2, late in the match.

Carolina finally scored with less than 30 seconds to go in the match to knot it at 3-3, and it stood from there.

East Carolina's goals were scored by Jane Gallop, Gail Betton and Carlene Boyd. Carolina got two goals from Bashie Buba and another from Laurie Gunter.

The tie left the Pirates with a 3-5-1 record. They travel to UNC-Greensboro on Monday.

Fisk Homer Finally Nips Reds By 7-6

JUMP HOME TO WIN — Boston's Carlton Fisk jumps on home plate after hitting the home run that won the sixth game of the World Series in the 12th inning this morning. Teammates and fans cheer him. The Red Sox and Cincinnati meet in the final game tonight. (AP Wirephoto)

BOSTON (AP) — After three days of rain, they finally played baseball at Fenway Park. And, boy, was it worth waiting for.

With all the drama of Broadway and the walloping of a Hollywood ending, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Cincinnati Reds 7-6 in 12 tension-packed innings Tuesday night and set the stage for tonight's seventh World Series game.

"They will be talking about that game for years to come," said Cincinnati's Pete Rose after the Red Sox tied this incredible World Series at three games apiece. "This game was the best advertisement for baseball you could have."

Rose, who never enjoys losing a game, nevertheless enjoyed playing in the "Green Monster" thriller.

"When he came up to bat in the 10th, Rose leaned over and said to me, 'Wow, this is some kind of game,'" said Boston catcher Carlton Fisk. "I agreed with him. You couldn't ask for a better game."

Fisk ended the wild affair as it should have been ended — with a leadoff home run in the 12th. The ball jumped off Fisk's bat and sailed into the left-field foul pole, bringing the roaring crowd at Fenway to its feet and the Red Sox players streaming onto the soggy field.

"It was a sinker down and in," said Fisk of the home run pitch from Cincinnati reliever Pat Darcy, the eighth Reds' pitcher of the game. "I knew the ball was either going to go foul or be a home run. Since the wind was blowing out, I was afraid the ball might hook around the pole. In fact, I bet the wind took the thing about 15 feet closer to the line than it should have been and it wound up hitting the pole just before going around it."

Fisk's blow was the most dramatic of the night because it was the final shot fired at Fenway. But there were many other moments of gorgeous high tension that kept everyone stuck to their seats and television sets.

Washed out of three straight starts by a long-winded storm, the Reds at last were poised for a knockout punch of the Red Sox in game No. 6. But it was Boston that got in the first punches, scoring three quick runs on Fred Lynn's homer into the right-center field seats in the first inning.

It seemed that it would be enough for Luis Tiant, the way Boston's ace was pitching for the first four innings. He gave up no runs and only two hits and appeared to be well on his way toward a third victory in the crazy, mixed-up series.

It wasn't to be, however. Tiant showed he was only human in the fifth when he gave up three runs, two on a triple by Ken Griffey. His imperfection became more obvious when George Foster unloaded a two-run double in the Cincinnati seventh and Cesar Geronimo laced a home run into the right-field seats in the eighth.

Geronimo's wallop finished Tiant and gave the Reds a 6-3 lead. With Pedro Borbon pitching overpowering baseball in relief, the Big Red Machine seemed to be driving toward its first World Series title since 1940.

But as everyone soon found out, the game was far from over.

Borbon gave up a leadoff single to Lynn and a walk to Rico Petrocelli. The reliever was taken out of the game in favor of Rawly Eastwick and the Fenway crowd of 35,205 buzzed.

Cincinnati's outstanding youngster quieted the Boston customers by striking out Dwight Evans and getting Rick Burleson on a fly ball. Then he went to a 2-2 count on pinch hitter Bernie Carbo before the former Cincinnati player blasted a game-tying homer into the center field stands, more than 400 feet away.

"It was a fastball over the plate," Carbo said of the key pitch from Eastwick. "I was just trying to make contact in that spot and not strike out, so I stepped out of the box a couple of times to help relax myself. All I was trying to do was just put the ball in play someplace."

The house came down when Carbo hit it out. And the benchwarmer had a ball running around the bases, applauding himself as he enjoyed every second of his journey toward home.

With the ardent cheers of the Red Sox faithful still ringing in the air, the Boston bunch came back with more fireworks in the ninth. They loaded the bases with none out. The noise level reached new heights.

"We thought for sure we should have won it then," said Fisk.

But Boston didn't. Lynn lofted a fly ball to Foster along the left field line and the Cincinnati outfielder gunned down Denny Doyle at home for a double play. Then Petrocelli grounded out and the game went into extra innings.

The Reds had the opportunity to put the Red Sox away but were turned back by an almost unbelievable play by Evans in right in the 11th. With a man on first, Joe Morgan hit a shot that appeared almost certainly headed for home run territory, but the graceful young outfielder speared the ball near the seats and fired back into the infield to complete a double play.

"It was the best catch I've ever seen," said Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

That catch saved Boston for the 12th, when Fisk delivered his sudden thunder. The broad-shouldered catcher leaped in the air when the ball hit the pole, and he joyfully streaked around the bases. When he finished his rounds, there was a mob of fans as well as teammates to welcome him home.

It was a fitting climax to a game that had everything — even a violent collision with the center field wall by Lynn that momentarily stunned the outfielder in the fifth inning.

Lynn, one of the best rookies to come along in the American League for many years, was hurt when he went back in an attempt to catch Griffey's triple. He cracked into the famous Green Monster and lay crumpled on the warning track for a few minutes, like a discarded rag doll. But he soon got up and tested himself, finding he could play.

"Lynn hit himself on the tailbone and it sure will be sore tomorrow," said Boston trainer Charles Moss. "Fortunately there is some tin on the wall where he hit himself and that may have cushioned the shock."

Pulling Out The Tough Ones Is No Surprise To Darrell Johnson

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — After 170-odd games, the Boston Red Sox still are playing the way they started the baseball season last spring: with a flare for drama.

Now the season comes down to one big game tonight in the seventh and deciding contest of the 1975 World Series with the Cincinnati Reds.

On the brink of elimination and down 6-3 going into the last of the eighth inning, the Red Sox pulled out another dramatic ic victory and squared the Series at three games apiece Tuesday night by edging the Reds 7-6 on Carlton Fisk's 12th-inning homer.

"It feels wonderful, but this shouldn't surprise anybody who knows this ball club," said Boston Manager Darrell Johnson. "We've been doing the same thing all year, only now it's in the World Series. These fellows don't know the meaning of the word 'quit.' Even when they're behind in the ninth inning, they believe they can win."

Cagers Out To Recapture Gold

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Sports Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — "We're definitely here to win the gold medal and to regain our morale. Therefore beating Cuba is a question of honor," said United States men's basketball assistant coach Jud Heathcote.

The question of honor was to be decided tonight in one of the feature attractions of the VII Pan American Games: the Americans vs. the Cubans in basketball. A victory would all but automatically give the U.S. a gold medal in the sport at these quadrennial Western Hemisphere games — a certain morale booster.

The U.S. prestige in basketball has dropped in recent years with defeats in the 1971 Pan Am Games, the 1972 Olympics, and last year's world championships.

A handful of important finals were scheduled today in other sports here, including swimming where the U.S. teams continue to rewrite the Pan Am record books. But the pivotal basketball game had the spotlight.

"We still have a chance to win the gold medal if we lose to the Cubans," Heathcote said. "They've lost to Puerto Rico and may still lose to Brazil." Heathcote expressed hope there would be no violence, as in some Cuba-U.S. encounters here, notably in water polo where three Americans were injured.

Going into tonight's swimming finals, the U.S. team has rebuffed its critics effectively, not only winning most everything in sight but also tearing up the Games' record book in the process.

With the help of a U.S. sweep in swimming events Tuesday and five gold medals from the American wrestlers, the U.S. gold-silver-bronze total bulged to 70-55-33 with 38-33-21 for runner-up Cuba. Other leading nations were Canada 15-25-27, Mexico 6-8-22 and Brazil 6-7-13.

The American swimmers not only won all of Tuesday's golds, but also set records in each event and added either a silver or a bronze in each.

The winners and their times, all records:
Doug Northbrook, Tucson, Ariz., 4:00.51 in the men's 400-meter freestyle, almost nine seconds better than the old record;

Kathy Heddy, Summit, N.J., who won her second gold with a 5:06.05 in the women's 400-meter individual medley;
Rick Colella, Seattle, Wash., 2:24.00 in the men's 200-meter backstroke;

Dan Harrigan, Mishawaka, Ind., with a 2:06.69 in the men's 200-meter backstroke;
Camille Wright, New Albany, Ind., with 1:03.71 in the 100-meter women's butterfly;

Greg Jacenburg, West Chester, Pa., with 2:03.42 in the men's 200-meter butterfly.

In wrestling Tuesday night, the U.S. took gold medals in five weight classifications, silvers in three and bronze in the other two.

Lynn Paces Major League All-Stars

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Lynn displayed his skills on national television Tuesday night, slamming a three-run homer and crashing into the center field wall in a futile effort to catch Ken Griffey's triple. It was typical of the Boston rookie center fielder's season, and a prime reason he was the top vote-getter on The Associated Press' 1975 Major League All-Star team.

Joining Lynn in the outfield are Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies and Reggie Jackson of the Oakland A's.

Lynn was the only rookie to make the squad, while Jackson and catcher Johnny Bench of the Cincinnati Reds were the only repeaters from the 1974 team.

Others picked by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters were first baseman George Scott of the Milwaukee Brewers, second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati, third baseman Bill Madlock of the Chicago Cubs and third baseman Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres was named the team's left-handed pitcher and Baltimore's Jim Palmer grabbed the right-handed pitching spot.

Lynn led the American League in runs scored with 103, doubles with 47 and slugging percentage with .566. He batted .331, second highest in the AL, and was third in the league in runs batted in with 105, polling 389 votes. The closest to the Boston freshman was Morgan, who received 320 votes.

Luzinski was the National League's RBI champion, knocking in 121 runs while slamming 34 homers. The other outfielder, Reggie Jackson, was the American League's co-home run champion with Scott. Both walloped 36 roundtrippers.

Bench easily captured the catching spot, getting 265 votes to 87 for runner-up Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cincinnati catcher was second to Luzinski in RBIs in the NL with 110. Palmer outdueled Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, 179 votes to 157, for one of the pitching spots. Jones polled 163 votes to beat out Vida Blue of Oakland, who finished with 103. Bowa had the second closest fight, beating out Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati 165-134.

Bowa batted .305 and scored 79 runs.

Scott also paced the AL in total bases with 318 and in RBIs with 109. Jackson was second in the junior circuit in doubles with 39, third in total bases and fourth in RBIs. Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, National League's Most Valuable Player in 1974, was runner-up to Scott at first base, some 49 votes behind.

Madlock won the NL batting title with .354 and finished far ahead of Cincinnati's Pete Rose, 320 votes to 93.

Morgan, who crushed Rod Carew, the major's leading hitter, 320 to 98 in the balloting, was fourth in the NL in hitting with .327, third in runs scored with 107 and second in stolen bases with 68.

Palmer, 23-11, and Jones, 20-12, posted the lowest earned run averages in their respective leagues among starting pitchers. Palmer threw 10 shutouts while coming up with an ERA of 2.09. Jones had a 2.24 ERA.

Morgan: Reds Don't Have To Sweat Luis

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Unshakable Joe Morgan sat amid a sea of gloomy faces, unwilling to concede that the Boston Red Sox are riding a wave of momentum going into tonight's World Series showdown.

"We're not down," said the intense Cincinnati second baseman. "We've got a Don Gullett going and they don't have another Luis Tiant."

As crushing as Tuesday night's 7-6 defeat in 12 innings was, the Reds refuse to quell their confident tones.

"They beat us," said scrappy Pete Rose. "Now Bill Lee has got to beat us. I'm not worried about him. I don't worry about any pitcher, I just take my hacks."

Boston catcher Carlton Fisk decided the superbly-played thriller with a leadoff homer in the 12th inning, victimizing young Pat Darcy for his first loss since June 29.

"I have no excuses," Darcy said through glazed eyes. "I tried to get the ball low — and it got up. I thought it was going to be foul. Then it hit the foul pole."

The game-clinching homer capped one of the most dramatic games in Series history.

"I couldn't believe it," said Rose, stirred by the pulsating duel that saw momentum reversed almost inning-by-inning. "Boston played like they have magnets in their gloves. That game had more ups and downs than any game I've ever been in. That was the only way that game could have been decided."

The rousing Red Sox victory sets the stage for tonight's collision between Gullett, Cincinnati's flame-throwing left-hander, and Lee, who was highly effective against the Reds in Game Two 10 days ago. The Reds, bridesmaids in three World Series in the last 14 years but denied a world championship since 1940, put it all on the line tonight.

"There ain't no more talking after tomorrow," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson. "Tomorrow is it."

Morgan likes the Reds' chances. "I think we're the best ball club and I think we'll prove it," said the feisty 5-foot-7 scrapper who watched Red Sox right fielder Dwight Evans run down a long Morgan fly ball the 11th inning, triggering a threatkilling double play.

"The best catch I've ever seen," said Anderson.

Grambling Atop College Group

By The Associated Press
Grambling, unbeaten in six games this season, has strengthened its hold on the No.

1 spot in the weekly Associated Press college division football poll.

The Tigers, who beat Mississippi Valley 38-22 last Saturday and visit Jackson State in their next game, received 34 of 45 first place votes from a nationwide poll of sports writers and sportscasters released Tuesday.

While Grambling drew 431 points out of a possible 450, second-place Western Kentucky landed two first place ballots and 353 points. Texas A&I, which polled three No. 1 votes and 339 points, was ranked third.

Eastern Kentucky, with 233 points, narrowly grabbed the fourth place despite a first place vote, only three points ahead of North Dakota and Boise State, who tied for fifth. North Dakota drew three first place votes while Eastern Kentucky and Boise State got none.

Western Kentucky and Eastern Kentucky meet this weekend and the result could break up the logjam in the second through fifth spots.

Wittenberg was rated seventh followed by Henderson State, Northern Michigan and Montana.

Rounding out the top 15 were Idaho State, plunging from fourth following a 19-7 setback to Montana; Ithaca, Kentucky State, Delaware and Lehigh.

Ithaca received two first-place votes and Delta State grabbed one No. 1 vote but failed to draw enough support to gain the rankings.

Lehigh, which downed Delaware 35-23 last Saturday, made its first appearance in the poll. Delaware was rated No. 8 last week.

him are only Don McCauley, 3-172 yards; Charlie Justice, 2-634, and Ken Willard, 1-949.

Sophomore Larry Tedder remains Betterson's backup. In addition, freshman Terrence Burrell, the leading rusher on the junior varsity, could be elevated to the varsity.

The Atlantic Coast Conference lost about $350,000 in television rights when the American Broadcasting Co. decided not to telecast the North Carolina at N.C. State game. The week before, the Tar Heels had lost 21-14 to Notre Dame, and the State Wolfpack had lost 37-22 to Maryland. Had either won, the area might have seen the close Wolfpack victory instead of Texas and Arkansas.

Maryland, leading the Atlantic Coast Conference with victories in its three league games, is idle this week. Besides North Carolina home to East Carolina, games for ACC teams on Saturday will be N.C. State home to Clemson, Duke at Florida, and Wake Forest at Virginia.

Clemson is pushing freshman Willie Jordan for All-ACC honors at quarterback. He has completed 37 of 62 passes for 701 yards. And he has not thrown an interception.

Betterson May Not Be Ready

By The Associated Press
The University of North Carolina may not have the "Boom Boom" of tailback James Betterson for third straight football game.

He has a thigh bruise. A decision on his playing status will be made shortly before Saturday's home game against East Carolina.

If he remains out, it will be the fourth week that the Tar Heels will have been without last year's tailback duo of Betterson and Mike Voight. They alternated, but gained over 1,000 yards each. Because of disciplinary reasons, Voight did not play against Ohio State four games ago, in the third game of the season, and Betterson did most of the rushing.

Voight has carried 75 times the last two games. When the Tar Heels were nipped 21-20 by N.C. State last week, he carried 39 times for 155 yards. He has 525 yard for the season, and if he keeps up his average of a little over 105 yards a game, he will have another 1,000-yard season.

He now has a career 1,840 yards rushing. He has passed Betterson and has moved into fourth place among North Carolina's all-time leaders. Ahead of

Tell Broker Real Wants

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
House shoppers "should level with real estate brokers." Concealing information on housing needs can be a waste of time for everybody.
That advice comes from Betty Ann Rake of Chicago who tries to find homes for employees who are transferred by 80 corporations. She and her staff locate about 700 houses a year, working with local brokers.
"Some people look at homes costing far more than they can afford. It doesn't condition them for the kind of house they can buy and it makes them unhappy. Then, too, some people do not want to throw money into a house — they might have children in college or perhaps they want to travel or do other things with their money. Understandable, but why not say so?"

About one out of three transferees is helped by employers, maintains Miss Rake, who is head of the home-finding department of the Employer Transfer Corp. Another 300,000 or so are on their own and can use all the help they can get.

"The first step should be to contact a boss or coworkers at the new location who could recommend real estate brokers. The broker can do a lot of advance screening for the transferee if he knows what is needed. A telephone call to the broker can set him straight."

But you don't want to stop there, she says. Your house hunting is just beginning. She makes these suggestions from her own experience:

"No matter how much you can spend it is important to find a community where you fit in. Even if you can afford to live in a particular area, it might have a closed set that will shut you out. Ten miles away might be the delightful spot that would make you happy. It is something the real estate person would know."

"If you are moving from a small town and your family relates to it, it may be important to find a community with small-town flavor. Even a lot of metros have small-town atmosphere in some neighborhoods — but you may have to dig to find it."

"Lifestyles continue to be important in planning a move. One man being transferred had two kids who were fantastic swimmers. They had to be in a community where there were swimming pools so their avid interest could be continued. It may take a while to find such a place."

"On your own, drive around town a couple of days looking at an area being considered. Visit shopkeepers and inquire how business is going — you don't want to move into an area that has depreciated. Knock on doors in a neighborhood being considered and ask prospective neighbors what they think of an area. You might turn up all sorts of things.

"Visit the schools in the community. Talk to the principal. Ask if you can sit in some classes. How is the school kept? The attitude of the teachers? Do the children look happy? Well-behaved? Would you want your child to go to that school?"

If the land looks low, visit the town hall and ask to see maps of flood plains.

"Visit a bank's mortgage loan officer. Ask what he considers a good area. In fact, he might be just the one to consult about a real estate broker," she advises.

Tell the broker what you need and how much you can pay. If you absolutely need a basement, you should relay the information. A lot of time can be spent trying to locate houses. You should look for a house that suits your needs. Most transferees want newer houses rather than old ones that require work. They should point out that fact, she suggests.

Some brokers can be very accommodating and useful, meeting an employee and his family at the airport when they arrive on a house-hunting trip.

"The broker should really talk to the woman as well as the man of the family," says Miss Rake. The man knows what he wants, but the woman will know many more things about the family's needs, no doubt, little bits of information that might not occur to her husband.

In addition to house prices, downpayments, interest rates and mortgage terms available in a community, a broker should have data on taxes, schools, transportation and general community information, she explained. There should be maps showing where the different types of houses are available.

If you've been referred to a broker who doesn't seem to understand your needs, you shouldn't hesitate to move along to another one, she maintains. And you should anticipate spending at least three days on your request for the house and your investigation of the community that has interested you.

Bolivia Dreams Of Sea Corridor

By CHARLES E. PADILLA
SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — For nearly 100 years Bolivia has been closed to the sea.

Now the Andean nation is demanding both Chile and Peru give it a corridor to the Pacific Ocean and Bolivia's military president Gen. Hugo Banzer has promised to resign unless he gets it.

Bolivia lost its coastline, in what is now Chile's northern province of Antofagasta, during the 1879 War of the Pacific. Chile defeated both Bolivia and Peru.

After the war, a treaty among the three nations granted Antofagasta and Peru's Tarapaca province, both rich in copper and other minerals, to Chile.

The peacemakers set the Peru-Chile border at Arica, now Chile's northernmost city. Bolivia was left landlocked.

Banzer said in a recent interview the Bolivian desire for a Pacific port had been in the past "nostalgia, a wish."

"But now it has become a necessity," he said. During his four years as president Banzer has often said that Bolivia must have an outlet to the sea in order to develop economically.

His campaign has intensified since last February when Chile and Bolivia reestablished diplomatic relations after a 13-year rupture.

Banzer said the solution to the problem is "territorial," meaning that Bolivia must get a corridor to the sea through Chile or Peru, or both.

"Bolivia has declared its position very clearly, (she wants) her own and sovereign outlet to the Pacific Ocean," Banzer said.

"The conversations are marching ahead. I believe that President (Gen. Augusto) Pinochet (of Chile) has shown good will to find a solution," he said. Banzer said Bolivia could offer Chile natural gas, petroleum, meat in return for a chunk of territory to get to the Pacific. "All that Chile needs we have here," he said.

He said he had "absolute confidence that Bolivia will have her outlet to the sea. If a solution is not reached, there is undoubtedly going to be a totally negative reaction."

Banzer set no date for settling the issue, but he has often been quoted as wanting the corridor by 1980 when he plans to hold elections.

"It is a prudent thing. One cannot say one or two years. We are not going to ask for the impossible," Banzer said. In the event Bolivia does not get the outlet, Banzer said "I will go. What else can I do?"

He said he told Pinochet, "we wanted a maritime coast with sovereignty, with territorial continuity. Where? When? How? It's a question of negotiation."

"But if the negotiations do not move ahead, I, at least, would want to leave," Banzer said.

He said that he believed a Chile-Peru border corridor would provide the most practical solution to the problem.

But whatever the solution, Peru must agree.

According to a 1929 treaty between Chile and Peru, any cession of territory by Chile to a third party — Bolivia in this case — of what was once Peruvian territory, would first have to be approved by the Peruvian government.

Survivors Of Andes Crash Hardly Noticed

EDITORS NOTE — The wild adulation and morbid curiosity that first attended their rescue has died down. Now the 16 who survived the plane crash in the Andes are hardly noticed in public, and the experience is fading from their own memories.

By MORT ROSENBLUM Associated Press Writer MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Fernando Parrado went back to the mountain he beat, and he wasn't particularly moved. He and the 15 other young heroes of the best seller "Alive" are over the experience.

The survivors gathered last Monday (Oct. 13) the third anniversary of their plane crash in the frozen Andes, but they talked more about rugby and girls than their 10-week struggle to live.

"It's the past. It's over," said Parrado, 25, home from rubbing elbows with Princess Anne and Jackie Stewart in the flurry of fame that followed their ordeal. Now he again sells nuts and bolts, running his father's "House of the Screw."

It was toughest for Parrado whose mother and 20-year-old sister were among the 29 persons who died on the mountain. They were two of the fans who were accompanying the "Old Christians" rugby team to a friendly match in Chile.

Roberto Canessa, 22, who walked down the mountain with Parrado for 10 days, says the same: "My life hasn't changed much ... sometime I leaf through the book and it seems incredible, but I don't feel like I was part of it." He is back in medical school and, like Parrado, still playing rugby.

When the group was rescued weeks after they had been given up for lost, and when they revealed they had eaten the bodies of their dead companions in order to live, some thought they would be permanently marked.

They were an international sensation. Parrado and Canessa did 247 interviews in a month-long tour of 25 U.S. cities. Nearly 3 million copies of "Alive" have been sold in the United States alone, and it has been the top seller in 24 countries.

"It hasn't changed us," says Parrado, who, if nothing else, is far less bashful as he scrambles motorcycles and races cars in local competition here. Friends note a new, easy confidence.

"I do the same job, I see the same friends, we drink in the same bars, and we play on the same team," he said recently. "We are all 100 per cent normal in every aspect."

Five of the 16 survivors have married, several of them buying Montevideo apartments with proceeds from the book. All work or study around here except Pedro Algorta, who is in nearby Buenos Aires. All are in their 20s.

The 16 have built homes for the families of three of the boys who died on the mountain, and they paid for three schools in the provinces.

"People think we're millionaires now," laughs Parrado. "After dividing it 17 ways — the author got some, too — there's not much left. I make more money at my job. We have no plan for donations, we just make them."

"What's left for each one may be enough for a small apartment or a European trip or a car, but stuff like that ... no yachts."

United Artist is expected to begin filming "Alive" in January. The film may put them back into the limelight and into the money, but few seem overly excited by the prospect.

"Yes, I suppose Robert Redford was interested in playing me," Parrado allowed, a trace of pride crossing his Robert Redfordish features. "Still, that's not my life."

He admits that much of the fame remains. Recently a California woman stopped by to say she got off her plane in Montevideo simply to see him. People still stop him for autographs.

But the wild adulation and the morbid curiosity that first attended their rescue has died down. Uruguay issued two stamps to commemorate the survival, and book sales approached riot proportions at first. Now the survivors say about the only difference is that they can sail through Uruguayan bureaucracy because people insist on stepping aside in lines to help them.

In February Parrado and his father went to the crash site, driving 50 miles from the nearest town to a small mountaineer's refuge and then climbing by horseback for two days to cover the remaining 10 miles.

"All I could think of was that it was a tremendously beautiful place. There was no other emotion. It was just a magnificent mountain scene. Of course, it is different seeing it with food and supplies than being lost and dying. That changes the aspect a little."

Parrado, disoriented and weak, had walked more than 60 miles before he stumbled upon a Chilean peasant who brought help.

Cite Savings In Car Pools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal highway administration has published a reference table showing the savings involved for motorists in car pooling programs. It says the annual cost of driving alone for a distance of 10 to 25 miles comes to $646 for an operator of a subcompact car to $1,868 for a standard size car. By sharing the expenses with one passenger, the driver can save up to 50 per cent in transportation costs, while the saving rises to 80 per cent with four passengers.

Name Given By Stranger

BY DANIEL A. CHISZAR
HOME ON THE RANGE,
 Wyo. (UPI) — The 113 miles between Rawlins and Lander on lonely U.S. 287 offer nothing but bleak, windswept prairie as they wend through Muddy Gap between the Granite Range and the Green Mountains.

For years the only refuge on the desolate highway was Beulah Walker's home on the range.

Mrs. Walker, crippled by polio, provided a haven for hungry truck drivers, oil workers with no place to stay and motorists stranded in fierce blizzards in central Wyoming from the homestead log cabin she built with her husband when they came from Nebraska in 1931.

Although never an incorporated town, Home On The Range had a post office for a while and was on the map briefly. The name often prompted a laugh from tourists but for Mrs. Walker it wasn't funny.

Mrs. Walker ran the filling station, general store, bus and freight depot, and post office all from her log cabin. The post office was official for only three years, but she operated it 16 years before that for 1,200 families in the area — without pay.

A stranger gave Home on the Range its name while it was being built back in 1931.

"We were draw-knifing the bark off logs when this man from Rawlins stopped in and wanted to know what we were going to call the place," Mrs. Walker said. "He said why don't you call it Home on the Range because its home to everyone who stops here."

"I'd put truckdrivers up in blizzards and feed 'em even though it wasn't a cafe, and when the oil workers were drilling wells in Crook's Gap and had no place to stay I had 'em here for a month or two."

"But when the workers told their families to send their mail to Home on the Range, some of the wives thought they were at a resort and brought the kids up. I couldn't feed them all so I had to let 'em go."

Mrs. Walker has been crippled since 1949, but she tended her dusty piece of Wyoming for years, limping, bent over with polio, and always there for stranded travelers. She remembers most of them, clearly.

Once in 1953 a masked gunman slammed her around the cabin and made off with $78, all she had.

"I thought it was one of my rancher friends pulling a joke on me," she said. "I knew when he shoved me up against the door it wasn't. He shoved me around a little bit and I told him he better get outta here."

"He couldn't find anything to tie me up with so he said just stay there. I waited until I heard the screen door slam and heard him drive away. I crawled from behind the counter, and drove to Crook's gap to report it."

Of all the strangers she helped on the road, Mrs. Walker got one thank you. A Nebraska family ended up at her door one winter so cold the father couldn't knock on her door — he just fell against it.

"They later sent a thank you letter out with the bus driver, and a box with chicken, potatoes, bacon, and homemade lard. It put my faith back into people."

Finally, infirmity and the march of progress through the discovery of uranium put another town on the map in central Wyoming instead of Mrs. Walker's Home on the Range.

"When they discovered uranium, people started moving in and they wanted to call it the Jeffrey City Post Office," she said. "I wouldn't call it Jeffrey City while it was in my home. I never even heard of Jeffrey City for 25 years."

Jeffrey City is still an upstart compared to Mrs. Walker.

"It had been Home on the Range to a lot of people around here," the 66-year-old widow said. "I finally got so crippled up though that I gave it all up. I was working myself to death and getting nothing out of it."

She closed the post office in 1959. Three years later she ended the rest of her operation and retired.

Last month, Mrs. Walker reopened the doors on the old cabin for a bicentennial wagon train, but the favor cost her an old friend. A post office official made her give up the hand-cancel she stamped letters with for 19 years.

"He said it was illegal for me to have it, but it's absolutely useless to anyone but me," she said. "I put in a lot of hard work with that hand-cancel. They didn't even know I had it until I opened my home for that bicentennial business."

Mrs. Walker is still there, but Home on the Range isn't.

Her home has been made a part of Jeffrey City. It's painful for her to walk these days. She has to undergo therapy in nearby Thermopolis occasionally, but always comes back.

"This is my home," she said. "They called it Home on the Range for a long time but they finally got it changed to Jeffrey City."

"They got a lot of new buildings and a new city there. I just sit up here on the edge and tend to my own business."

Pioneering College Study For Disabled

By NEIL BIBLER
 Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Cuyahoga Community College is pioneering a program through which severely disabled patients may enroll in courses that will be taught via television and telephone.

The state put up a $204,683 grant for the project that will serve three local hospitals.

Dr. Lynn Rosen, director for academic support services at the school's East Campus and the designer of the program, said the hospitalized patients will be able to participate in the college courses through live color TV transmissions and by using two-way phone hookups.

Dr. Rosen said that although there were programs for patient education already, they were similar to correspondence courses and didn't permit direct classroom participation while the patients remained hospitalized.

Dr. Robert E. Spepack, president of the school's eastern campus where the program will be conducted, said it "may serve as a model for other institutions trying to meet similar needs."

The initial offering will be a career program in accounting which includes classes in business, arts and sciences, Dr. Rosen said. She said accounting was chosen because patients could use the skills they acquire to earn money while still hospitalized.

And if one's educational goal changes, the liberal arts portion of the studies may be used toward the new goal, she said.

The telephone system accompanying the microwave broadcasts will permit the hospitalized patients to exchange ideas with the students and teachers in the classroom. It will also allow questions to be answered immediately.

Additionally, counselors and tutors will visit the hospitalized students, and libraries will send books to the hospitals to provide access to reference materials.

The hospitals involved in the program are Highland View, Sunny Acres and Veterans Administration.

Racing Tires For Race Cars

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — "Putting racing tires on a passenger car is like playing with a loaded pistol," warns Leo Mehl, Goodyear's director of racing.

Mehl said "the few motorists" driving the nation's roads and highways on such tires are endangering their own lives and the lives of others.

Mehl said those who watched the closing laps of this year's Indianapolis 500 saw a prime example of the danger. "Cars capable of more than 200 m.p.h. and driven by the best drivers in the world were reduced to uncontrollable monsters at less than 30 m.p.h. because they were hydroplaning on water and could give absolutely no traction."

Mehl said his company molds the words: "For Racing Purposes Only: Not For Highway Use" into every race tire it manufactures.

Recalling Newly Lost Art Of Making Wheels

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — George Dutton, one of the last of the wheelwrights, looked a bit lost in such distinguished company. The Lord Mayor of London was there to honor him. Dignitaries in ancient livery spoke glowingly of his craft, which once filled all the world's streets with the rumble of hand-made wheels.

The 74-year-old wheelmaker blushed through the opening ceremonies of an exhibition about wheels and how they were made. Dutton, a simple village craftsman, made most of the objects in the show.

First, you take a 10-year-old Elm. Then, you create poetry from wood. And finally, the heart of an Oak made the spokes. The result was a wheel.

For thousands of years wheelwrights played a vital part in villages and cities everywhere. They made wheels and the things that ran on them — carts, wagons, coaches.

Then, a mere moment ago, came mass production and the internal combustion engine.

"Henry Ford's masterpiece was everywhere when I was a boy," Dutton said shyly.

"There was still wheelwrighting to be done then, but one could see how things were heading."

"Within our working lives," said Sir Murray Fox, the Lord Mayor, "we have seen the decline and fall of the trade of wheelwright."

To mark its passing the Worshipful Company of Wheelwrights — one of nearly 80 surviving guild companies in the City of London — mounted the exhibition of Dutton's work the other day in a London church.

It holds some 30 models of carts and wagons, things Dutton made full size in his youth and recreated in miniature after his retirement. There are photographs of wheelwrights at work and of Dutton's strangely named tools — spoke-dogs and travelers, a buzz, a fellow crotch.

Dutton diffidently showed the Lord Mayor a partly-built wheel to demonstrate the complexity of his trade.

The central hub — the nave — was made from Elm seasoned for 10 years. Spokes of heart of Oak slotted into it at subtle angles, held by rims cut in sections from Ash, Beech or Elm.

All a good wheel's parts locked together as logically as a sonnet. A red-hot iron hoop was hammered onto the rim, then shrunk tight with buckets of water to fit the completed wheel.

Dutton learned a wheelwright's skills from his father and grandfather, both wheelwrights before him. He could not have learned them at a worse time.

Dutton, like most other surviving wheelwrights, had to turn his hand to jobs which were more in demand. He made farm equipment and five-barred gates. He even made coffins. At length he was forced into a job in railway workshops, but in retirement he returned to wheels.

After the ceremonies opening his exhibit Dutton was installed as an honorary Freeman of the Worshipful Company of Wheelwrights, whose splendidly gowned members are wheelwrights in name only.

Livery companies like theirs have an 800-year-long history in the City of London, the semi-independent square mile at London's center. Even now they elect its sheriffs and nominate the Lord Mayor — Sir Murray Fox was once master of the wheelwrights' company.

In 1630, the wheelwrights formed themselves into a powerful guild. Like other livery companies it regulated its own trade "like some super labor union," said W.R. Rogers, the company's clerk.

"But it also kept standards high," Rogers said. "We still have a court which, by our charter of 1670, has to meet quarterly to punish shoddy workmanship."

The power of the guild companies has greatly declined. But most continue as symbolic and social institutions, promoting what remains of their traditional crafts.

In this capacity the wheelwrights sponsored the St. Andrew's Church exhibition of George Dutton's work — one last chance to see the art of making wheels. Soon it will vanish from the list of things man can do with his hands.

Trying Traffic Signs Atop Cars

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — New traffic control devices are to be tested soon by the Washington State Patrol in the Seattle-Tacoma area.

The project, consisting of four of the new devices, is being funded by $14,000 from the Washington Traffic Safety Commission.

Each control system consists of a sign mounted atop a patrol vehicle. When not in use the sign rests flat on the vehicle's roof. When needed it can be raised to more than five feet for viewing from the rear of the patrol car.

The message viewing area measures 30 by 40 inches. Eight messages are printed on a scroll and can be changed from within the vehicle. The messages will include arrows and other instructions to direct motorists.

Plan Producing Own Newsprint

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina soon will be producing newsprint for its newspapers and magazines. Papel Prensa Inc. reports work is progressing on its newsprint plant on the banks of the Parana River, which will use local materials to produce 105,600 tons of newsprint annually — 38 per cent of internal demand.

Mudslide Is Threatening Hill Shacks

By JOHN VIRTUE
 CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Oil-rich Venezuela has a big slum population in its capital — and it's growing fast.
 Not only that, but mudslides during the July-December rainy season are increasingly washing away the hillside land on which the poor traditionally build their shacks.
 "With each passing day these marginal zones come closer and closer to catastrophe," said Jorge Azpurua, director of the Municipal Urban Planning Office.

According to Azpurua's office, there are 936,000 slum dwellers in Caracas, or nearly 40 per cent of the population. And statistics show that an even higher percentage of new inhabitants — 60 per cent — live in the "ranchos," the Spanish name for the slum shacks made of wood, rough building blocks or tin.
 "The problem of the 'ranchos' has reached an alarming level, especially because the number of inhabitants grows at a 10 per cent annual rate and because they already occupy a fourth of the city," Azpurua told an interviewer.

A study made for Azpurua's planning office by 80 experts revealed that the majority of the slum dwellers live in hillside areas of high danger because the removal of foliage and improper drainage have weakened the earth. Each heavy rainstorm touches off one or more mudslides which carry away shacks, often with a loss of life.

But attempts to move the poor to safer dwellings often meets with opposition from the residents themselves. When the municipal government recently expropriated some endangered shacks for eventual replacement by low cost apartments, some residents, joined by a Jesuit priest, staged a protest hunger strike.

The residents feared they would be forced to live outside Caracas, far from their working places. The interior minister and the federal district governor were forced to intervene in the case.

The government does plan to set up five satellite cities surrounding Caracas, not just to resettle the poor but because there's no space left for expansion in the capital. Caracas nestles in a long, narrow mountain valley, 3,000 feet above sea level, and its 2.3 million residents have already used up most of the available land.

Workshop Set For Oct. 24

One of four workshops to help hospital and nursing home administrators complete their 1976 license renewal forms for the State Division of Facility Services is being held Oct. 24 at East Carolina University.

The workshop is being sponsored by the Health Services Research Center. C. W. Sanders, Roberta Hardy, and Robert Dale are conducting the workshop here.

Fort Worth Offers FreTran

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Fort Worth has developed a formula to get shoppers to patronize downtown stores by offering free parking, free subways rides and free bus service.

The mass transportation package, which may be the first in the U.S., is known as "FreTran." It was instituted by the City of Fort Worth, Dillard's Department Store and Tandy Corp.

Frank Perry, president of Dillard's, said a shopper could drive to the western edge of the downtown area, park free, walk a short distance to one of four boarding gates for the "metroliner" — a five-car subway which operates on a three-quarter-mile track — and ride to the store. The shopper can then board a bus for free transportation within the downtown district.

BIG CHOICE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cranberries come in more than 100 different varieties, many with unusual names such as Potter's Favorite, Budd's Blues and Aviator. Four varieties account for most of the berries now grown in North America, principally in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Washington state and Oregon.

STRANGE OBJECT ON THE HIGHWAY—Motorists could have been quite surprised Monday as they drove down Island Avenue in Philadelphia and saw a smiling airplane sharing the road with them. Actually, the hull of the 707 jetliner was being moved from Philadelphia's airport to the Franklin Institute, and the painted face was an eye-catcher. (AP Wirephoto)

'Woman' Series Her Brainchild

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Four years ago, Sandra Elkin, a newcomer to Buffalo, N.Y., approached the management of public TV station WNET there with an idea for a weekly half-hour talk show for and about women.

This year, her idea, now bearing the series title of "Woman," began its fourth season on WNET and its third year on the national public TV hookup of the Public Broadcasting Service — PBS.

The series, which discusses topics ranging from rape to shared child custody, has had as guests some fairly big names in the feminist movement, among them writers Gloria Steinem and Susan Brownmiller.

It also has lesser-known guests, such as two women inmates of a prison in Missouri. And even a male midwife has appeared on the show.

All but two women-in-prison shows were taped in Buffalo. And one of Mrs. Elkin's biggest desires is to get enough money to take the show to other parts of America, showing the changing times for women as well as discussing them.

But the fact the series she produces and moderates even is on the air is a tribute both to her determination and WNET's willingness to give a chance to an idea of someone who'd never even worked in TV before.

Mrs. Elkin, who moved to the Buffalo area in 1969 from Vermont with her two sons and her husband, only had worked backstage in summer theater productions before she produced the show.

Seek Public Views On New N.C. Park

A meeting to receive public opinion about what recreation facilities should be put into Goose Creek State Park near Washington will be held October 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the Beaufort County Courthouse.

Goose Creek State Park adjoins the Pamlico Sound approximately 10 miles east of Washington. Last December the state acquired 1,200 acres for the establishment of the park.

The State Parks and Recreation Division will prepare a plan for facilities to be installed at the park. Late last month park planners requested written input from the public. The meeting on October 27 will be a second step toward receiving input from the public prior to preparation of the plan.

"This is the first state park in the area and it's important that the people let us know what type of park they want," said Brad Davis, chief park planner for the project. Development of the park will follow the plan that is finally adopted.

Predict Large Migration Of Snow Geese

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service predicts there will be more greater snow geese flying south this year than in any year since the early part of the century, and for the first time in 44 years hunting for the birds will be permitted in the Atlantic flyway.

Biologists said they used information gathered from satellite photographs and years of research to predict the increase in the number of birds.

A spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service predicted at least 200,000 greater snow geese will be flying south this fall. When the hunting ban was imposed in 1931, the spokesman said, there were only about 7,000 snow geese.

Favorable weather conditions in arctic breeding grounds and protection of winter feeding grounds along the Atlantic Coast resulted in the increased number of birds, wildlife officials said.

People like to cry." Braddock leans to the more offbeat, Roger Miller-type songs. His own include "Joe and Mabel's 12th Street Bar & Grill" and "Nothing Ever Hurt Me Half As Bad As Losing You."

So, Braddock writes a mock-serious song about a couple separating and takes it to Putnam, who slows down the melody a bit. Tammy Wynette records it and suddenly "D-I-V-O-R-C-E" is making a lot of money for both of them.

Except for a few noted teams, that's usually how a country song ends up with more than one author. Putnam recalls that he went to Sherrill and it was only 10 minutes later that "My Elusive Dreams" was ready for recording.

"Basically, I'm trying to be commercial. The average person doesn't care what I think," Putnam says, sitting in the plush office furnished by his publishing company. "Maybe you can be a little more inspired when you're hungry, but any strong emotion can inspire a song."

Braddock shrugs his shoulders and agrees that poverty might help some writers. "But the real inspiration is the opposite sex. That's behind at least 90 per cent of the songs."

"I've always hoped that I wouldn't have to go that route and I've found that I don't really have to," Putnam says. "I don't particularly like suggestive songs."

Both, however, agree on certain fundamentals, the biggest being the danger of trying to hitch onto a passing trend.

"Country has become a melting pot, anyway," Braddock says. "There's room for what you call the positive love song, the sad song and the more off-beat type that I personally like."

Most of the better songwriters have hopes of setting trends themselves, Putnam says.

"That's the thing about a hit song," he says. "It leads songwriters, then the industry and before you know it, there's a new trend set."

risk that partner, rather than declarer, may be fooled. Declarer does not labor under that disadvantage. He can manipulate his cards in whatever fashion he chooses, knowing that his partner, the dummy, cannot be misled.

Normally, you would not accept partner's invitational raise of a no trump opening without a maximum. However, South decided to push on to game, even though he held only 16 HCP, because his wealth of nines and tens gave his hand "body."

West led his fourth best spade, dummy played low and East contributed the jack. Declarer saw at a glance that all would be well if the club king was favorably placed. By using diamonds as entries, he could take three club finesses and score nine tricks in the minor suits in addition to two in spades. But what if the club finesse failed? It was too much to hope that the defenders would continue spades of their own free will and a heart switch would defeat the contract.

Declarer decided that his opponents needed some encouragement to continue spades should West hold the king of clubs. Therefore, he won the first trick with the ace of spades!

A diamond to the king put declarer in dummy for a club finesse. When West won the king, he was under the firm impression that the defense would prevail. After all, wasn't his partner "marked" with the queen of spades? So West continued with a low spade and was greatly surprised when declarer won the queen and cashed his minor suit winners for an overtrick.

Perhaps, at the very highest level, South's little subterfuge wouldn't succeed. After winning the king of clubs, West might cash the king of spades, in the expectation that his partner would unblock the queen—if he had it. But would you have done that?
