Alert In Spanish Sahara

EL AAIUN, Spanish Sahara (AP) — Spain has put its army in the Spanish Sahara on the alert, imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew and ordered native troops disarmed in an attempt to head off an uprising by Algerian-backed nationalists opposed to Spanish plans to transfer the colony to Morocco and Mauritania.

Spanish spokesmen said the government feared "terrorist attacks" by the Marxist Polisario Front, which wants independence for the phosphaterich, Colorado-size territory on the northwest coast of Africa.

The precautions were ordered after an anti-Moroccan demonstration in El Aaiun Monday by 6,000 persons. Spanish troops patrolled the streets of the colonial capital, searching everyone encountered after dark. Families of all Spanish personnel were grouped together in several sections of the town so they could be protected.

Spanish troops were ordered to occupy strategic positions scattered throughout the territory.

Officers May Be Reinstated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A regulation that Army officials failed to follow may force the Pentagon to reinstate more than 2,300 career officers who were turned down for promotion and told they must leave the service.

The Army is refusing to permit the officers to remain on active duty while the issue is decided. Some already have become civilians.

The career men are all captains, majors and warrant officers who were twice considered for promotion and passed over during an era of decreasing military manpower. An officer passed over for promotion twice must retire.

During his tenure as Army secretary, Howard H. Callaway pressed the service to cut back sharply on the size of its officer corps while simultaneously promoting younger men. Callaway resigned in July to head President Ford's election campaign.

Since then, an organization of about 500 Army officers has accused Callaway of ignoring federal law and Army regulations in the way promotion boards were convened from January 1974 through last summer.

Evacuation By Armored Cars

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Security forces in armored cars moved in under fire today and evacuated a dozen foreigners trapped in two tourist hotels engulfed in street fighting between Christian and Moslem gunmen.

People were still believed trapped in two other hotels.

The last dozen guests were removed from the 500-room Holiday Inn and the Phoenix Hotel next door. Security men also were reported trying to put out a fire at the Holiday Inn, apparently started by numerous rocket hits.

Officials said at least 91 persons were killed and 115 wounded in the civil war during the previous 24 hours. But there were many areas that security forces could not penetrate to recover casualties.

"Nobody is counting any more," said a policeman.

Moslem militiamen, using machine guns and rockets, moved to within 100 yards of the Holiday Inn, where Christian Phalangite party men were shooting back from positions they took Tuesday on the roof.

"I'm going to be sleeping in the Holiday Inn tonight," one of the Moslem fighters told Associated Press correspondent Edward Cody. "I'm going to have a bath and shave and sleep nice."

TRUCK ROUTE?

I have seen big trucks—log trucks, transfers, even these car carriers go past my house on East Fourth Street. Just for the curiosity I've followed one or two of them and learned they are cutting through Greenville going out onto Memorial Drive on Third Street. I know this isn't a truck route, but I don't know what to do about it. H. D.

WINNINGS LATE

Where I work we listen to the radio all the time. Five of us were winners in a recent High-Low contest on 15-Q Radio. It's been about three weeks now and we haven't received our differing amounts of money. J. H.

David Hedrick, Manager of the station apologized for the delay, but said your checks have been mailed. The master list of winners was misplaced temporarily, he said. Anyone having problems may call Hedrick at 752-1115.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford pledged today the federal government will help assure police and fire protection for New York City residents if the city defaults on its debts, but he said he will veto any bill that would bail the city out financially.

"I can tell you now that I'm prepared to veto any bill that has as its purpose a federal bailout of New York City to prevent a default," Ford said in remarks prepared for the National Press Club here.

But in a lengthy speech on the problems of the nation's largest city, Ford said he will submit legislation to Congress empowering federal courts "to preside over an orderly reorganization of New York City's financial affairs — should that become necessary."

Ford also said that in the event of default, "the federal government will work with the court to assure that police, fire and other essential services for the protection of life and property in New York are maintained."

The proposed legislation would amend the federal bankruptcy laws and would allow New York City, with approval from New York state, to petition the U.S. District Court in New York when and if it is no longer able to pay its debts.

The petition would be accompanied by proposals for "an adjustment" of the city's debts with its creditors. Once those conditions are met, the federal court then would be authorized to accept jurisdiction of the case and there would be an automatic moratorium on suits by creditors so that the essential functions of New York City would not be disrupted.

Ford said the court would be empowered to authorize issuance of new debt certificates for new loans to the city which would be paid out of future revenues before payment to other creditors on existing debt certificates.

Ford said his proposed legislation will not, by itself, put the New York City's affairs in order. A New York City default on its debts now could come as early as Nov. 14 when the next debt payments are scheduled, city and state officials say.

In State Employment

Boyles Denies Lack Of Equal Opportunity

RALEIGH (AP)—State personnel director Al Boyles has denied that North Carolina is dragging its heels on providing minorities equal employment opportunity in state government.

Boyles said Tuesday that the Holshouser administration was committed to equal opportunity and was making progress toward it without imposing quotas on state agencies.

"It's not just lip service. I am aware that we have a long way to go, but we are headed in the right direction," Boyles said.

His statements were made in response to a report released by a task force of civil rights organizations which said the state still practices gross discrimination against blacks.

The groups, which included the NAACP and the United Church of Christ's Commission for Racial Justice, threatened to file a federal suit against the state unless strong action is taken immediately.

Boyles said action has been taken in the year since an affirmative action plan was drawn up under the direction of Larnie Horton, Gov. Jim Holshouser's black assistant for minority affairs. Horton is the first black to hold such a post under a North Carolina governor.

He listed several areas, including revision of employment tests to insure that they are not culturally biased. That job is partially complete.

The state has hired a black recruiter and holds quarterly meetings with department personnel officers to advise and encourage them to fulfill the governor's affirmative action directives.

Boyles said the current economic slump has slowed the turnover rate in state offices, leaving fewer jobs to fill. "It is important for everyone concerned that we be given time to complete all these efforts," he said.

The study by the civil rights groups showed that blacks and women tend to be clustered in menial jobs with low salaries if they are employed at all by the state.

The statistics showed that less than 2 per cent of all top administrators in state government are black; almost 40 per cent of those in the lowest job categories are black. The total percentage of blacks in state jobs is 19 per cent; their proportion in the state's population is about 25 per cent.

The study showed that in the past year, slightly more blacks have been hired. But their percentages in top job categories have not increased as rapidly as the civil rights groups would like.

In Washington, a Justice Department spokesman said the federal government used no formal guideline in filing employment discrimination suits against state and local governments.

Spokesman John Wilson said, however, that in cases where suits have been filed, the disparity between the minority population and the work force of a governmental unit has been huge.

Wilson said the courts also take into account the job assignments for minorities, such as whether they are all in janitorial positions.

He said the courts have held that minority representation should be roughly proportional to the population at large but governmental units are given time to correct imbalances before legal action is initiated.

Jones Not Candidate

RALEIGH (AP) — Corrections Secretary David Jones today ruled out a bid for the 1976 Republican gubernatorial nomination.

In a news conference, Jones said he had no doubt he could win the nomination but feared his actions as corrections secretary would be viewed as politically motivated if he entered the race.

"I have no doubt in my mind that in a Republican primary that I would be the candidate for governor," Jones said.

"There comes a time in a man's life when he must ask himself what's most important and I think the Department of Corrections is more important than David Jones at this time of my life."

Jones had said he was considering a bid for the nomination and had promised a statement of his intentions this month. No Republican has formally announced for the nomination, although David Flaherty, secretary of Human Resources, and Revenue Secretary J. Howard Coble, Transportation Secretary Jacob Alexander are said to be considering a bid.

James Harrington, secretary of Natural and Economic Resources, has also ruled out a bid.

Higher Unemployment Insurance Rate Seen

Most employers in the Greenville-Pitt County area can expect to pay higher unemployment insurance taxes to the state during 1976. Local Employment Security Commission manager Jim Hannan said today that State law required higher tax rates because unemployment payments to jobless workers have depleted the State unemployment insurance trust fund by nearly $300 million in the past 12 months.

The trust fund was $367.5 million at the end of September, lowest amount since June, 1969. "During the recession," said Hannan, "unemployment doubled, then tripled in North Carolina and the amount of unemployment benefits to eligible jobless workers became the highest on record."

He said higher taxes are required to restore the fund. Explaining that covered employers pay a tax to the State on the first $4200 earned by each employee, Hannan said that tax schedule "E" will apply to liable employers' payrolls during 1976. This schedule sets a minimum tax rate of .3 percent to the standard 2.7 percent. Most employers can expect a tax hike of .2 percent of their payrolls during 1976.

If a high rate of unemployment persists during 1976 it is very possible that the tax rate schedule will advance again in 1977. On the other hand, as the economy recovers, tax rates for unemployment insurance benefits may be reduced.

Even with record disbursements to jobless workers, North Carolina's trust fund remains solvent. Twelve states have exhausted their unemployment insurance funds and are currently borrowing money from the federal government to pay benefits. Another 15-20 states are expected to run out of money soon.

ZIGGY DIES OF OLD AGE—Ziggy, a 6 1/2-ton bull elephant, shown earlier this year, died of old age Monday night at his Brookfield Zoo home in Brookfield, Ill. He once spent 30 years in solitary confinement as an alleged killer before being bailed out by a children's fundraising campaign. One of the largest pachyderms in captivity, Ziggy died peacefully at an estimated age of 58, comparable to nearly 100 years in human life. (AP Wirephoto)

First In Seven Months Economic Index Shows Drop For September

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's index designed to anticipate future economic trends sustained its first drop in seven months during September, contradicting other signals showing continued economic growth at least into next year, the Commerce Department said today.

The department said its index of leading economic indicators, a composite of a dozen statistics, dropped nine-tenths of 1 per cent in September, in contrast to an eight-tenths of 1 per cent advance in August.

The decline, however, was not a sure signal of a halt in economic recovery. Only 11 of the 12 items in the index were available for the September report, and the index is subject to later revision.

The August increase, for example, was initially reported last month as no change.

Most analysts consider a three-month trend in the indicator necessary to establish the foreshadowing of a turnaround in the economy.

In another report, the department said the nation's trade computed in its balance of payments accounts showed $2.3 billion surplus for the 3-month period ending in September.

That was off from the $3.3 billion surplus in the previous quarter and represented the third consecutive quarterly surplus.

The department reported Tuesday the foreign trade surplus for September was $976.4 million, compared to $1.04 billion in August. That figure was for only one month and included military trade, which was excluded from today's report.

The Commerce Department said its index of leading indicators was pushed downward in September primarily by a slower accumulation of liquid assets by business.

Liquid assets are cash and items which can be easily converted into cash. They indicate business's ability to meet short-term obligations.

Other factors pushing the index downward were a higher lay off rate in manufacturing, a smaller volume of contracts and orders for factories and equipment, lower stock prices, a lower volume of new orders of consumer products received by manufacturers and their suppliers and a lower money supply after adjustment for the effects of inflation.

The indicator unavailable for the September report was the change in the volume of business inventories on hand or on order.

First Year Girls Chosen Two Girls Nominated For Morehead Scholarships

This is the first year girls have been nominated for the John Motley Morehead Scholarship Awards in Pitt County and two females were chosen yesterday.

They are Lou Anne Baldree of Ayden-Gritton High School and Virginia Lynn Gantt of Rose High School. Both girls will advance to the district level to compete for $10,000 scholarships to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, regardless of need.

Miss Baldree is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin C. Baldree Jr. of Rt. 1, Ayden. She ranked number one in a class of 207 at the end of her junior year. She is editor of the school yearbook. She says she has planned since the fifth grade to be a pediatrician.

Miss Gantt ranks number one in a class of 417. She is president of the Rose High Math Club and is coordinating editor of the school yearbook. She has served in the Student Government Association and is a Keywanette, is head cheerleader this year, and has participated in track, powder puff football, and the City Swim Club team. She says she loves math, particularly probability and statistics, and would like to be an actuary. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Gantt of 3005 Pinecrest Drive, Greenville. W. W. Speight, a local attorney, is chairman of the Pitt County Committee of the Morehead Scholarship Foundation. Serving with him in picking the winners from among 14 nominees yesterday were H. L. Hodges Jr. and Dr. William S. Bost, both of Greenville.

Other school nominees interviewed yesterday are Florida Marie Daniels, Geneva Carol Holder, Paul Arthur James, and Andre Lee Perry, all of North Pitt County; Ned Ninnant Craft, Christopher Barden Howes, and Christopher Scott Riggs, all of Ayden-Gritton High School; Dawn Arlyn Branch of D. H. Conley School; Sheryl Rose Eason of Farmville Central School; and Edward Michael Connolly, Joseph Leroy Godette, and Clayton Lyle Shugart, all of Rose High School.

Don't Leave, Move Myna Bird To Other Area

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband retired recently and found himself with very few pleasures and interests, so he bought a myna bird. Now he spends all his time teaching the bird dirty words and vulgar phrases.

Needless to say, a foul-talking myna bird is a source of much embarrassment when I have my bridge club meetings here. Also, it's a very bad example for my grandchildren who visit me often.

I have asked my husband to please get rid of that bird, but he refuses.

Please help me before I move in with my daughter and her family.

SERIOUS IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR SERIOUS: Don't move. Instead, move the bird to the garage, basement, attic or some out-of-the-way place where its X-rated monologue will not offend tender ears.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday, I attended the third funeral in two months, and I promised myself I would not attend another whose services were conducted by this minister.

Each time I was trapped for over an hour with a preacher who started with the sins of Adam and Eve and worked his way through the New Testament.

He said nothing to comfort the family and made no mention of the deceased. Instead, he launched into a tirade, calling everyone present "sinners" and predicting that the world was going to hell because of its greed and selfishness. Then he wrapped it up with a pitch to raise money for the church's building campaign.

It was revolting! People come to a funeral to pay their last respects to the deceased, not to be bawled out by the preacher or to be solicited for money.

What is your opinion of a minister who would take advantage of a full house in the above manner?

REVOLTED IN ROANOKE

DEAR REVOLTED: I think he's a short-sighted opportunist who believes in shooting the ducks while they're flying.

DEAR ABBY: I have this very dear friend I'll call "Agnes." She's alone, so I invite her to my home for dinner occasionally.

Agnes is the sweetest, most generous person I know, but she weighs about 400 pounds, and when she plops herself down, she wrecks our furniture.

First she broke the springs in our new sofa. Another time, she broke my husband's favorite rocking chair. Fortunately, my husband is very handy, so he was able to repair the chair. However, he has instructed me to please invite Agnes OUT for dinner in the future because he's worried about our furniture.

I don't want to offend Agnes, but I don't want to take any more chances with our furniture.

Is there a solution?

AGNES' FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Of course. Lucky you to have a husband who's handy with repairs. Ask him to reinforce one chair to accommodate Agnes. Surely that isn't too much to do for the sweetest, most generous person you know.

Make Your Own Holiday Ornaments

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Living Editor
Recessions and depressions spur revivals in crafts because people have more time, but less money to spend on leisure activities.

Recent craft books indicate we are in for a long, busy winter, making everything from holiday ornaments and traditional pottery and jewelry to offbeat clothing, accessories and home furnishings from beverage can pop-tops.

If children's parties are on your holiday schedule, the $4.95 price on "The Potter's Primer" by Eleanor Chroman (Hawthorn) could be well-spent. The book is for adults, but directions for cookie-cutter Christmas tree ornaments are child's play that could keep little hands busy for hours.

"Cooking Crystal Craft" by Beatrice Heller (Chilton) also tells how to make decorations and useful items by fusing or molding crystals that look like large sugar granules. The author says the results are inexpensive, almost unbreakable and resemble fine stained glass. Molds include ordinary ovenproof glass and metal kitchen utensils and toy baking pans.

Now, about pop-topping: the materials are sharp-edged pull tabs from beer, juice and soft-drink cans.

"Pop-Topping! Pop-Top Terp" with Kenneth Patton (Chilton) makes the hobby sound so easy children could do it. Provided, of course, that they don't cut their fingers in the process.

Pop-top clothing may not be as easy on the wearer. Imagine how it feels to sit down in a chain mail maxicoat.

Author Terp is a native New Yorker and apparel manufacturer who conducts workshops in schools, hospitals, boys' clubs, parks and museums. He recommends recycling the metal tabs as a way of reducing litter on the grounds around ballparks and other sports arenas with beverage concessions.

In "Pirating Plants," Peter Tobey writes about one of the cheapest hobbies, propagating plants from cuttings, seeds, layering, dividing and grafting. If unread newspapers are piling up at your house, "The Newspaper Everything Book" by Vivienne Eisner and Adelle Weiss (Dutton) may help. It contains directions for making 150 useful objects, ranging from a money belt and bedroom slippers to waste baskets, plant stands, croquet mallets and wickets, mittens and sunglasses.

Would you rather work with felt? Elyse and Mike Sommer's "A New Look at Felt" (Crown) has interesting ideas for using this nonwoven fabric for applique, needlework and sculptures.

Francis Hagerty's "Make Your Own Antiques" (Little, Brown) is eminently practical, with designs the author says can be produced by moderately skillful adults with a table saw and a few other traditional tools. Considering the cost of so-called cheap unpainted pine furniture, this could save a bundle on home furnishings.

Many activities in "Traditional English Country Crafts and How to Enjoy Them Today" by Andy Pittaway and Bernard Scofield (Pantheon) seem far better suited to the English than Americans. Unless, of course, you want to take up silkmaking, beekeeping, home dairying, paper making, walking in the country and tracking animals in the snow.

"The Collector's Guide to Depression Glass" by Marian Klamkin (Hawthorn $7.95) reflects the wisdom of the squirrel complex. If I hadn't thrown out all those cheap colored glass dishes, glassware and bibelots we had around the house in the thirties and forties, I could be selling them right now to people nostalgic for reminders of an era that many of us would rather forget.

Cut Fat In State Government

Everywhere we turn now there seems to be the feeling that there will be less money to spend for state government services.

The Department of Transportation feels that between smaller increases in gas tax revenues and inflation running up the cost of projects, it will be able to accomplish less work in the years ahead.

Gov. Holshouser warned that there won't be as much money available for higher education program expansions in the future.

The governor last week told the UNC Board of Governors that they must make an "ongoing effort to eliminate the waste and duplication."

Holshouser said "the flow of money that seemed to increase endlessly and that we had come to expect simply isn't there anymore." Because of this there will be a balancing of the needs of higher education against the other needs of the state, he said.

He called for long range planning for higher education and a continuing study and review of the programs on the various campuses. "We have to recognize that there may be some programs that are sparsely used or that duplicate and overlap each other.

"This means we probably will have to face some tough questions as to whether we are putting our resources in the right place."

Well, the governor's advice to the board of governors isn't bad but it is a philosophy that we should apply to the entire state government.

The past decade has been golden years for state government revenues and as a result state agencies, salaries and benefits have grown tremendously.

One only has to look at the huge new government buildings going up in Raleigh to recognize that the number of employees has grown.

That is not bad in itself. North Carolina is now furnishing many services which were lacking to our citizens some years back. But with such rapid growth we have no doubt that there is some fat in state government. We still need to seek out the excess spending so that these funds will be available for more essential services. As administrative head of the government we hope the governor will see to this.

THIS AFTERNOON

Power Politics At Work

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—It is difficult to find anything more than power politics at work in behind-scenes maneuvering to revamp rules of the North Carolina Senate, stripping the lieutenant governor of appointive powers.

Presently, the lieutenant governor names members of all Senate committees, appoints the chairmen, and presides over the Senate, voting only in event of a tie.

A powerful body of senators are lobbying for a change which would place in the hands of a Committee on Committees, chaired by the president pro tempore of the senate, the appointments to committee memberships and chairmanships.

State Senator John T. Henley, a Hope Mills druggist, is currently president pro tem, a post held by election of his fellow Democrats to that position of leadership.

Action Coming

He is also chairman of the Committee on Rules and Operation of the Senate, the body which could make the change in senate procedure and push it through the chamber when the General Assembly reconvenes next May.

Henley plans to call a meeting of the Rules Committee in November to begin that process, and says he hopes to see the process completed before a new lieutenant governor is elected; that way, personalities will not become involved, he says.

Once admittedly interested in running for lieutenant governor himself, Henley now says he is out of that race, devoting his time and energy to legislative matters.

In an unusual shift of direction, Henley now appears to be in line for a repeat two-year term as president pro tem. Both Senator Kenneth C. Royall, D-Durham, and State Senator W.D. (Billy) Mills, D-Onslow, have been working for election as president pro tem for the 1977-78 term of the assembly. Both now privately agree to withdraw from contention in favor of Henley's second term to smooth the way for the rules change stripping the lieutenant governor of appointive powers.

"I will not run against either of them," Henley says of the development. "But I would accept the position if that would ease this approach."

Knowledgeable sources close to the debate see an almost even split in the senate's membership on the question of appointments.

A showdown is not expected until the waning days of the 1976 session, with any changes taking effect for the new assembly and a new lieutenant governor in 1977.

What Reason?

Royall, Henley, and others pushing for the change describe it as an effort to clearly define the basic difference between the legislative and executive branches of the government.

"Several of us feel that the legislature ought to run the legislative branch, and I don't feel any one man, whether it's the lieutenant governor or anyone else should have that much power," Royall says.

By his power to hand out the plums of who will sit on and chair the various committees, and the equal ability to withhold those appointments, the lieutenant governor gathers more actual power than the governor; effectively controlling the legislative process whenever he wishes.

The public role of presiding over the senate, voting only in case of a tie, carries with it no real power and that function would remain.

Henley believes that assigning the lieutenant governor more real executive authority such as membership on important state boards and commissions would more than offset the loss of legislative authority.

Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., opposes the shift, pointing to his circumstance of serving with a Republican governor as effectively eliminating any important role for him in the executive department. In this state, the governor and lieutenant governor do not run as a team to work together after election.

'Saturday Night' Guns

WASHINGTON—Jonathan Spear and Michael Petit have brought to my attention a statement from Harlon B. Carter of the National Rifle Assn. in defense of the "Saturday night special" handgun.

Carter told a House judiciary subcommittee on crime, "It makes no sense to me why possession of a finely made $200 handgun owned by a decent law-abiding man of means should be legal, but ownership of a $40 handgun (Saturday night special) by an equally law-abiding resident of the inner city, who can't afford anything better to protect his family and home, should be a felony."

It is a very interesting point and Spear and Petit have a solution to the problem.

The federal government should institute immediately a gun stamp program for the poor. The program would work as follows: A family of four making less than $6,000 a year would apply for gun stamps at the local post office.

All the head of the family would have to produce is his income tax return, and if he

INSIDE REPORT

Reagan, Headache No. 1

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. — After three days of fumbling and stumbling through the Northeast, Ronald Reagan finally showed here last week why he is political headache No. 1 at the White House: his ability to entrance regular Republicans whose loyalty to President Ford is watery.

When Reagan began addressing a $100-a-plate Suffolk County Republican dinner here at Long Island's eastern tip, the 2,000 Republican faithful seemed evenly divided between the President and his prospective challenger. After 35 minutes of Reagan rhetoric, the balance appeared to shift toward Reagan. Indeed, if Reagan wins some early primaries, he may collect delegates from this highly conservative county and elsewhere in New York — a state the White House counts as irreversibly locked up for Mr. Ford.

Thus, Reagan's Northeast swing reveals strengths and weaknesses one month ahead of his expected announcement of candidacy. He is still unprepared for the demanding change from banquet speaker to presidential candidate. Nevertheless, he is ideally suited to exploit discontent with Mr. Ford not far beneath the surface among Republicans.

That discontent was obvious as Suffolk County Republicans devoured a lavish pre-dinner buffet at the gaudy Colony Hills Inn. Asked their opinion of Mr.

Ford, the typical response was shrugged shoulders and outreached palms. Through two hours of speechmaking, the name of the Republican President of the United States was never mentioned (partly, to be sure, in deference to Reagan).

That Reagan even appeared here irritated state Republican leaders, still closely connected with Vice President Nelson Rockefeller. Rockefeller can still deliver New York's key Republicans and convention delegates to the President, but not with the near unanimity with which they backed his own presidential campaigns.

In this setting, Reagan repeated his "Let the People Rule" speech first given in Chicago Sept. 26 — proposing turning over to local government $90 billion in federal social welfare. The crowd listened attentively for the full 35 minutes. "That's the first time I've ever seen these guys keep quiet for anybody more than 10 minutes," said one Suffolk Republican (though substituting wine for the customary whisky on dinner tables, at the urging of Reagan aides, undoubtedly helped). Nor could anybody remember a political speaker here so mobbed for post-dinner autographs.

But this triumph followed a succession of stunningly inept performances by Reagan, revealing mainly organizational deficiencies but also some candidate problems.

To begin with, he learned belatedly he was supposed to open his Northeast trip with the major speech — in New York City at the state Conservative Party's annual dinner. While flying to New York, Reagan scribbled a speech — including a long section in praise of U.S. medicine which read like an American Medical Assn. handout and unpleasantly surprised Reagan's own aides.

Conservative true-believers liked it, but politicians present judged it most unimpressive on the eve of Reagan's great political adventure. Nor did Perry Duryea, influential minority leader of the State Assembly, seem pleased when Reagan called him "Dan Duryea" — confusing him with a dead movie actor. So, Reagan's Conservative dinner performance exhibited both poor preparation and abiding love for unpopular establishment institutions (such as organized medicine) that his advisers would like to dilute.

High point of the trip was

Other Editors Say A Ruinous Level

(Henderson Dispatch)

Hearings are being held, or will be, on a bill in Congress which would make a $3 minimum wage mandatory in industry. The present minimum is $2 an hour.

It is difficult to see the need or the justice for such a law. Repercussions would be felt in employment and probably also in the upward trend of inflation.

Small businesses cannot stand such a requirement, and even larger concerns which employ hundreds of individuals would find the going rough indeed. Many would find it necessary to lay off workers in order to reduce expenses. That could curtail production, income and payrolls.

Most employers prefer to pay their people as much as they safely can. In instances it is necessary at times for overtime work, which this measure would fix at two and a half times standard pay. Overall, the drain would be more than could be met. It is estimated that some would toss in the towel and cease operations. That would increase unemployment and create other problems.

It were far better for a small business to pay what it can afford and survive than for it to be crushed by new and unreasonable laws.

The $2 minimum pay per hour was made mandatory only a few years ago, and scarcely have adjustments been made to that regulation. According to reports, some have found it impossible to continue operations and have simply shut down, depriving workers of any income at all.

Such an imposition would be crippling in effect for untold numbers of small enterprises, some of which are already in none too sound condition. This could be the straw to break the camel's back for them, and a harassment for others.

Congress is docile in the face of pressures from labor leaders, who are supporting their proposal. It is vital, however, that they take a realistic look in this instance and act in the interest of survival of legitimate industry.

Strength For Today

HE WAITS TO GIVE US WELCOME
When the English author, Robert Louis Stevenson, was visiting the leper settlement on an island off the shore of southeast Asia, he had as his fellow visitors nursing sisters who were going to work among the lepers. One of them was crying quietly under her veil. She knew that in all probability she, after a few short years of service, would probably also contract the disease. At this time no methods of immunization against leprosy had yet been found.

Stevenson said that he wept a little too as he thought of the brave martyrs of this fine woman of God and her companions. So to encourage the group he said, "Ladies, God Himself is here to give you welcome."

And this is always true when we turn from pathways of selfishness into the straitened path of sacrifice and service. He who came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many, stands beside every man or woman who put himself or herself aside in the interest of others.

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — A unique self-examination seems to be under way among some of the nation's top corporations as they seek to re-identify their capabilities and goals in an age of drastic change.

To some extent the inner-directedness seems to be a reaction similar to that identified in individuals who seek to recover from traumatic experiences by redefining their identities.

The result of the introspection, predicts Eugene Jennings, an authority on business management, will be to make much stronger in the 1980s some of the companies that have suffered the most from, among other things, the shortages, market changes and governmental restraints of the 1970s.

"Corporations as well as individuals have to have faith and the 1970s have dealt a devastating blow to a corporation's sense of what it is and where it is going," said Jennings.

While Jennings is a professor at Michigan State University and the author of many books on management, he became aware of the development in his role as confidential adviser to the chairmen of blue chip corporations.

In emerging from previous recessions, he said, "corporations turned their attention outward again to exploit propitious opportunities of an expanding future." No longer is this entirely true, he said.

Corporations have always "tinkered" with some aspect or phase of their systems, but the pattern that seems to be developing today, he said, is for total corporate reassessment.

"The uncertainties and the record of the first half of the 1970s have caused corporations to lose sight of their purpose," he said. The extreme contrast with the free-wheeling 1960s seems to have added to the sense of loss.

"Corporations are asking themselves the tough questions," he said. "They were almost traumatized by the wild changes and uncertainties of the past five years and they kept looking outward for what was coming next — and when and where."

Now, he believes, many of the industries most severely impacted by problems—hamed autos, chemicals, mining, steel, energy, aerospace, electronics, information and banking—are readjusting their thinking, their goals, their techniques.

They are asking, said Jennings, if maybe the problem isn't with the world but with them. The inner probing, he said, is similar to what an individual sometimes discovers that if you have a continuing problem with another person the problem might be you.

The realization is settling in, he continued, that the world will never return to where it was and that a fundamental change, with an emphasis on capabilities and goals, is required.

British Trade Has 'If'

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Trade Minister Peter Shore says Britain would have a healthy surplus in its foreign trade account if it did not have to import oil.

"Our non-oil deficit has certainly been overcome," said Shore, whose job is to bring about an export boom. "And I expect to reduce the oil deficit too by virtue of our own production next year."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Shore said he expects 105 million barrels of North Sea oil, or 15 per cent of the nation's present yearly needs, to be landed in 1976.

Officials in the Department of Energy think the inflow could reach 140 million barrels. Thus $1.2 billion to $1.6 billion could be knocked off Britain's total fuel import bill, which this year is likely to be about $5 billion.

The government has predicted self-sufficiency in oil by 1980 with a production of 700 million to 910 million barrels a year.

Yet Shore expressed caution as he suggested Britain might at last be emerging from the economic doldrums of the post-war years.

"There's been a big improvement this year with the over-all trade deficit running at about 40 per cent less than in 1974," he said. "But we still have a long way to go because the oil deficit in itself is a very, very large one."

In the first nine months of 1975, Britain earned about $2 billion more than she spent abroad in non-oil trade including the sale of such "invisible" services as banking, insurance, shipping and the like. The comparable 1974 figure was a bare surplus of $190 million.

In the first nine months of 1975, British oil imports totaled $4.4 billion, $700 million less than in the same period in 1974. The volume of purchasing declined because of higher prices, but the oil bill for all of 1975 will be reduced by production of 14 million barrels from the North Sea fields.

"Our exports have held up very well against a background of the general recession in world trade," said Shore.

Carolina's potential Rose Bowl eleven will meet the greatest obstacle in its 1935 football path Saturday when it clashes with North Carolina State in State's Riddick Stadium in the South's biggest grid attraction this weekend.

The powerful Carolina team, fortified with victories over Wake Forest, Tennessee, Maryland and Georgia Tech and boasting some of the best players in Dixie, will rate as the favorite. But neither Coach Hunk Anderson or his his Wolfpack is willing to concede the Heels will take Saturday's game.

Most political observers in North Carolina feel that although businessmen, bankers and manufacturers have expressed dissatisfaction with President Roosevelt, the majority of the people in the state are still standing solidly behind him.

supposed to be Reagan's speech the next day in Philadelphia to the World Affairs Council. But the outside expert assigned to write a speech about the Third World failed to deliver, and the hurry-up substitute was pretentious and difficult even to read, much less listen to. Sight-reading it in Philadelphia, Reagan flubbed repeatedly and eight times referred to the Third World as "the Third World War" (describing his error as "Freudian").

Even before arriving in New Haven that night to address the Yale Political Union, Reagan needlessly angered Connecticut Republican leaders by not making an advance courtesy call. At a press conference there, he uncharacteristically was at a loss for words when asked this predictable question: How could he support federal aid to Lockheed Aircraft but not New York City?

However, Reagan's stumbling course should not overly delight the White House. Most of his errors are correctable, particularly when his staff is enlarged for the campaign.

Moreover, in answering questions from Yale students, he criticized detente, the Helsinki security conference and the President's snubbing of Alexander Solzhenitsyn — pointing up Mr. Ford's points of vulnerability with conservative Republicans. While not asked about it, Reagan does not like the $28 billion tax-budget cut at the heart of Mr. Ford's political domestic strategy.

These differences will be more pointedly articulated by candidate Reagan than by pre-candidate Reagan, aiming at these Republican regulars who shrug when asked their opinion of President Ford. Assuming, then, that last week's operational incompetency is corrected, the Republican party is in for a truly serious challenge to an incumbent President, its first since 1912.

went on I believe that poor people would accept gun stamps in the same way they accept food stamps—as a temporary way of providing their families with the basic necessities of life. They would no longer feel themselves inferior to the decent law-abiding man of means who can afford a $200 weapon. They will have the opportunity, that they have been deprived of so long, of using their guns to settle family arguments without resorting to knives and hammers.

Gun stamps will bring dignity and joy to their lives.

The next question is cost. Can the United States afford a gun stamp program? The answer is yes. For one thing it will be a big boost to the handgun industry in this country, providing hundreds of thousands of jobs for people. It will also encourage new ammunition factories to be built in depressed areas. A subsidized gun program in this country will give manufacturers an incentive to speed up production, and will guarantee them a profit in lean years when weapon sales are down.

No country can boast it has done all for its people until it arms every man, woman and child with a weapon. So if you really care for the plight of the poor, as Harlon B. Carter of the NRA does, write to your congressman today.

will sponsor Community Alcoholism Information and Education forums each Monday night, beginning November 3. Each program will begin at 7 p.m. and will last for two hours. All presentations will be held in the Willis Building at the corner of First and Reade Streets in Greenville. The forums will continue indefinitely.

In announcing the community alcoholism awareness forum, Pitt County Mental Health Center Director, Dr. Stephen K. Creech, said, "All of the programs are open to the general public and there is no charge. It is our hope that citizens in Pitt County will attend these presentations in order that they can become better informed and more knowledgeable about alcoholism and how each person can become involved in combating the abusive use and misuse of alcoholic beverages." Dr. Henrietta Williams, Director of Psychological Services, Pitt County Mental Health Center, said the knowledgeable alcoholism professionals will be speaking at each program. Mrs. Williams pointed out, "A person does not have to attend all sessions in order to benefit from the information provided. Each program is designed to give information on alcoholism that will be helpful to our citizens and how they can refer people to the Mental Health Center who have an alcohol problem. Each session will be different and complete in itself." Among those participating on the programs will be staff members at the Pitt County

Mental Health Center, the Alcoholism Training Program of North Carolina (ATPNC), the Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center, Probation Officers, the Pitt County Mental Health Association, the Alcohol Program at Cherry Hospital, Goldsboro, and others.

Hatch Act, Natural Gas Among Bills Voted On

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 20, when the Columbus Day recess ended, through Oct. 22.

Hatch Act Passed, 288 for and 119 against, a bill (HR 8617) amending the Hatch Act to enable federal employees to voluntarily take part in partisan politics. HR 8617 was sent to the Senate.

The bill would repeal provisions of the 1939 law, which prohibits federal workers' activities such as seeking elective office and soliciting funds for candidates. The Hatch Act was enacted in response to government scandals growing out of the Work Projects Administration in the 1930's.

Supporters said that political activity would not taint the federal work force, and pointed out that HR 8617 would strengthen the Hatch Act prohibition against politics-related coercion of federal employees by their superiors. Rep. John Moakley (D-Mass.) said HR 8617 "will enable federal employees to regain their citizenship." Opponents said that Hatch Act should remain intact to assure impartial handling of the public's business. They said HR 8617 would increase the likelihood of federal workers advancing their careers through political kowtowing. Rep. Robin Beard (R-Tenn.) said HR 8617 is "a careless grab for power by certain powerful organizations," such as labor groups.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7), W. G. Hefner (D-8) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."

Reps. David Henderson (D-3), James Martin (R-9) and James Brodyhill (R-10) voted "nay." CAMPAIGN REPORTS Killed, 257 for and 148 against, a proposed Federal Election Commission (FEC) rule requiring Members of Congress and candidates for Congress to file their campaign finance reports with the FEC. The FEC then would have sent the data to the House Clerk or the Secretary of the Senate. At present, such filings are made initially with the House Clerk or the Secretary of the Senate.

The FEC is a post-Watergate agency created to clean up and monitor campaign financing practices. Under the law which created it, the FEC writes its own regulations subject to veto by either chamber of Congress.

This vote, on a resolution (H Res 780) disapproving the FEC's proposed rule, centered on the degree of authority the FEC has over congressional campaign finance practices.

Supporters of killing the rule argued that the FEC had overstepped its statutory authority. Many said their vote was not against the proposed rule but based instead on the procedures followed by the commission. "If changes (in the law) are needed," said Rep. Thomas O'Neill (D-Mass.) "it is for the Congress to make them... it is not up to the FEC to change our intent."

Opponents generally felt that the resolution was intended to undercut the FEC's watchdog authority over members. Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R-N.J.) asked: "Why are politicians so despised? ... Because every single time we seem to be measuring up to some form of clean politics, to be willing to submit to dispassionate judgment of our actions, we dodge away from that."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Taylor voted "yea."

Andrews, Martin and Brodyhill voted "nay."

PRODUCT SAFETY RULES Adopted, 224 for and 180 against, an amendment giving Congress veto power over any rules established by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. The amendment would require the commission to submit any such proposed regulation to Congress for a 30-day review period during which either chamber could kill it by a simple majority vote.

The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 6844) amending the Consumer Product Safety Act. The thrust of HR 6844 is to curb the agency's regulatory power. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

Supporters said the amendment would help to correct the bad congressional habit of delegating excessive power to independent federal agencies.

Rep. Caldwell Butler (R-Va.), the sponsor, said these agencies must stop "issuing rules and regulations which go far beyond the intent of Congress, or which impose senseless restrictions on the public."

One opponent, Rep. Robert Drinan (D-Mass.), said the amendment would "turn administrative law on its head" and undermine the constitutional separation-of-powers mandate. He said that there are ample avenues to contest safety regulations, either during public hearings beforehand or via litigation after a new regulation takes effect.

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Brodyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Preyer voted "nay."

Senate

NATURAL GAS Adopted, 42 for and 37 against, an amendment keeping price controls on natural gas sold interstate this coming winter under the Natural Gas Emergency Act. The act (S 2310), later passed and sent to the House, is designed primarily to provide emergency supplies to the 14 northern and eastern states expected to be hardest hit by the impending natural gas shortage.

Other language attached to S

2310 would have deregulated the price of interstate gas during the emergency period, which ends in April, 1976. However, the 42-37 vote countered that measure and put controls back on. The ceiling price for emergency interstate sales is to be the highest wellhead price (as determined by the Federal Power Commission) at which gas was sold within a state between June 1 and Aug. 1, 1975. The ceiling does not apply to sales within a state.

Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio), the sponsor, said the amendment was necessary to prevent a "gold rush" whereby prices could skyrocket to $4 per 1,000 cubic feet, about eight times the present interstate ceiling of 52 cents.

Opponents said that amendment would thwart the bill's purpose of increasing the interstate supply of gas by letting its price rise in an uncontrolled fashion. Sen. Clifford Hansen (R-Wyo.) expressed faith that "inherent in the (free) market system are the safeguards that will insure" against unreasonably high prices.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea." Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

BIG OIL Rejected, 39 for and 53 against, an amendment prohibiting major U.S. oil companies from owning any interests in the production of coal, uranium, geothermal, solar or other non-oil energy sources. The Amendment was proposed to a bill (S 2310, above) which seeks to avert natural gas shortages this winter and calls for long-term decontrol of natural gas prices. S 2310 was passed and sent to the House.

The amendment was rejected on the same day that the Senate killed another amendment requiring the major crude oil producers to give up related oil assets such as refineries, transport facilities and marketing outlets.

Rep. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), the sponsor, said the oil industry's "amoeba-like expansion into every other competing area" should be halted. Opponents said that big business, including the oil industry, is the United States' economic backbone. They said the best way to increase energy production is by encouraging the oil industry to extend its expertise and capital into related energy sources.

Helms voted "nay." Morgan was present but not voting, he paired for.

Jones Opposes Releases

RALEIGH (AP)—Corrections Secretary David Jones said Monday that releasing inmates to relieve overcrowding would jeopardize the safety of all North Carolinians.

He was responding to a suggestion by Fred Morrison, North Carolina Inmate Grievance Commission executive director. Morrison had recommended freeing between 2,000 and 3,000 of the least dangerous prisoners who were jailed for victimless crimes that hurt no one but themselves.

"In my opinion, we must seriously look first at providing more facilities to house those people, so we do not fall prey to the more liberal and radical action proposed by some that these criminals be released back into the community before they have completely paid their debt to society," Jones said in a news release.

Visited Pitt County Schools

A group of Pender County reading teachers visited several Pitt County Title I reading laboratories and tutorial programs Thursday.

Included in the group were W. C. Blackmore, Title I Director of Pender County and Lucy Rivenbach, reading supervisor. Those schools visited included W. H. Robinson, A. G. Cox, Bethel Elementary, Stokes Elementary, Farmville Junior, H. B. Sugg, and Sam D. Bundy.

The purpose of the visit was to observe the Pitt County Title I Project. Diagnostic testing, teaching techniques, individualized planning procedures, and the evaluation process used by Pitt County Title I were viewed. The two counties interchanged ideas and teaching methods during the visit.

Leck Keeter, Pitt County Title I Director, Ray Parker, project coordinator, and Sue Branch, reading supervisor, accompanied the group.

Mrs. Ford Gets Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford has accepted a 200th birthday book to the nation from the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. The book, presented to Mrs. Ford in behalf of the nation on Sunday, contains materials on Bicentennial projects submitted by Girl Scout councils in 45 states.

Earlier on Sunday, Mrs. Ford and her husband made the first donation in the 1975 Trick or Treat Drive of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. President and Mrs. Ford each dropped quarters in UNICEF collection boxes held by costumed children in the White House Diplomatic Room.

Entertainer Danny Kaye, chairman of the drive, posed for photographs with the children and the Fords after the ceremony.

—A Review—

World Premiere Production At ECU 'The Flight Brothers,' Shows Great Promise

The world premiere of "The Flight Brothers" last night in McGinnis Auditorium gave every indication that it has the potential of becoming what it's obviously intended to be—a clean, tuneful, evening of entertainment attuned to a bicentennial celebration of the finest achievements of our nation's 200 years.

After a nearly disastrous overture—things picked up. Despite a number of ragged edges and a need for cutting and tightening, "The Flight Brothers" rates an A for initial effort.

The production numbers—If God Meant Man To Fly, which opens the show; Two For A Penny, a delightful childhood song about an industrious kid selling chewing gum; Go Peddle Your Bikes; We're Going To Kitty Hawk; and the reprise to Folly, concluding the show; are, at this point of early retrospect, the numbers that give this show its quota of lively action that a musical of this type needs to succeed.

Go Peddle Your Bikes, especially, which relies on the tried and tested device of building up to a full-fledged action packed situation, is quite successful in capturing the special mood of a blend of admiration and exasperation Dayton citizens felt for the single-minded determination with which the Wright brothers stuck to their folly.

Rodney Freeze and Sandy Miller in the roles of the young adult Orville and Wilbur Wright; and Larry Talbert and Mark Shank portraying the brothers as young boys admirably sustained the biographical orientation of their roles.

The absence—both in childhood and later in early manhood of any detectable romantic interest is a little disappointing... maybe it was true their dedication precluded any interests other than a flying machine; if so, a dash of fiction would help.

Dan Nichols as the Wright brothers' dumb but practical (if hero-worshipping) character anchoring the day-dream prone Wright brothers; and Barbara Richardson as the adult Sues, the Wright sister, give full measure to the best defined roles in "The Flight Brothers." Their duet It's Tell Charlie This and Charlie Do That is the finest thing in this show. The failure of their friendship to bud into romance also disappointed—though for a brief time the promise was there.

The beautiful singing of Ken Davis as Papa Wright gives credence to Davis' recent winning of a state voice competition. His It's All Up To You My Son is an excellent vehicle for his rich voice.

As always in the ECU Playhouse productions, there's solid professional support behind the production in Edgar Loessin's fine direction; John Boyt's sets and lighting; Mavis Ray's dance direction; and Carol Beule's costumes.

Bill Ries and Hub Owen's book, the lyrics by Frank McNulty, Hub Owen and Bill Ries, and the music by Frank McNulty collectively are a good working start to what can become a more varied, exciting piece of bicentennial entertainment.

With a little bit of luck, some revisions, and a few judicious cuts, The Flight Brothers can conceivably make it as a long time runner, a more recent page of history to complement "The Lost Colony."

With all its present imperfections, it has rare quality of being an evening of entertainment ideally suited for all ages.

Take the family to see it now. (its at McGinnis through Sunday)—then plan on seeing it again when it's polished and ready for its projected Kitty Hawk showing next year.

New Crime Prevention Site At Pitt Plaza

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said today that the department's Crime Prevention Bureau will operate a site at Pitt Plaza Friday from 5:30 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. to screen trick-or-treat goodies for foreign metallic items such as razor blades.

The chief explained that officers will use metal detectors to scan Halloween treats for parents wishing to have the goodies checked.

Four parking places will be reserved in front of the booth — to be located in front of the ice cream parlor at the shopping center — Cannon said, so parents may drive up, have the treats scanned, and leave in a matter of minutes with a minimum of effort.

Although there have been no problems in the Greenville area in the past, according to Cannon, foreign objects such as razor blades have been placed in Halloween trick-or-treat items in other parts of the country. "This is just a preventive measure," the chief noted.

He urged parents to accompany children on trick-or-treat outings, and cautioned against youngsters accepting gifts from strangers; suggesting that children visit homes in their own neighborhood where they know the residents.

Cannon also suggested that home-owners turn their outside lights on in an effort to prevent acts of vandalism and also to help prevent accidents involving trick-or-treaters.

The chief urged trick-or-treaters to wear light-colored clothing or costumes, to carry flash-lights, and to avoid walking in the street or darting out into the street. He also said masks that cover the face — particularly the eyes — should not be used because such masks might obstruct vision to the extent that a child might not see an approaching car or other hazard.

Farmville Market Now In 16th Week Of Sales

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market began its 16th week on Tuesday with prices about the same as on the previous sales day, according to sales supervisor Louis

Williams.

Williams said that the quality grades of all tobacco continued in strong demand yesterday with lower grades mostly steady. The demand for some grades of cutters and lubs was stronger than on opening week, he said.

The top price paid Tuesday was $1.45 per pound for several sheets of wrappers. Leaf and smoking leaf grades accounted for approximately 75 per cent of sales, the supervisor reported.

Volume of non descript grades was heavier than on the past ten sales days, Williams added.

Through Tuesday, the market had sold 1,847,668 pounds more than last year with the same number of sales days, he pointed out.

Stabilization receipts yesterday accounted for 3.75 per cent of gross sales.

The market sold 655,149 pounds Tuesday for $716,393, an average of $109.35 per hundred pounds. For the season, 32,394,668 pounds have sold for $33,101,369 in averaging $102.18.

Removed From Stamp Program

C. G. Phillips Grocery, Route 4, Greenville has been removed from the federal food stamp program, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service, for violations of regulations governing the types of merchandise to be acquired with food stamps.

The FNS said the store, owned by Mrs. Mary Estelle Phillips, was disqualified for six months, beginning October 14, after being charged with selling ineligible items — hair spray, light bulbs, diapers, bleach and detergents — for food coupons.

Paula F. Kermion, head of the Greenville FNS field office, said the store will not be allowed to accept food coupons during the six-month period.

Mrs. Kermion said food stamps, by law, can be used only to buy food. The only exceptions, she explained, are garden seed and plants to be used to produce food.

DROP OUT MAYOR—Skip Stewart, once the popular mayor of San Anselmo, a San Francisco suburb, left his town, his job and his family a year ago to "get his head straightened out". Now he's a part-time bartender and day laborer in Port Costa, a remote tourist community, "living each day for that day, doing whatever intrigues me." Stewart, 40, said he decided to make the change in the spring of 1974 when his term as mayor expired, his marriage was breaking up, and he was having trouble making a go of his business. 3rd LWV Forum Held

The last of three public forums on "Education in Transition" sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters was held last night on the East Carolina University campus.

James L. Smith, Associate Professor of Philosophy at ECU was the main speaker for this program on the question "Why Have Schools?"

Dr. Smith said that though the constitution does not explicitly include the right of an individual to develop to his fullest as a person; it is one of this country's most important personal rights and "fits well with our founding father's ideals."

In defending this right of the individual, Dr. Smith included a definition of "person." Dr. Smith explained, "We cannot answer the question 'Why Have Schools?' unless we consider what is attending them."

His definition of a person is a social one. "A person is an agent, in the image of a Divine Element, with the capacity for responding to salient elements of its environment in such ways as to achieve increasingly higher levels of apprehension and organization within that environment," said Dr. Smith.

The speaker stressed that since a person responds to elements in his environment, the home and the schools must be sensitive to that environment. "The Response Ability of the child is the Responsibility of the parent," he said.

Dr. Smith explained that in addition to providing environmental stimulation for a child parents must also "shield children from environmental noise." He said, "A child who is busy every minute is missing something. Our own need for 'Quiet Time' should convince us of our child's need for that elemental environmental quality."

In discussing public interests and rights in education, Dr. Smith said, "I don't know what the public's right is, but there is such a thing as public interest." He said that in education private rights should not conflict with public interest or public good. The speaker felt that education's limited resources should be spent in the public's interest.

In closing, Dr. Smith said that parents could not expect public school to provide all the essentials for a child's education. "We must begin at home," he said.

Responding to Dr. Smith was a panel of four ECU associates: Dr. Alvin Fahrner, from the History Department, Dr. Charles Garrison, from the Sociology Department, Chaplain William Hadden, Jr., and Donald Sexauver from the School of Art.

A Controversial Program

Fire Ant Spraying Is Resumed

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A controversial spraying program to control fire ants is being resumed on a limited basis in two Southern states, the Agriculture Department said today.

The program, involving a pesticide called mirex — known to cause cancer in laboratory animals — was suspended by USDA earlier this year after Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz decided that federal environmental curbs made it ineffective.

Officials said that a "memorandum of understanding" has been reached with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and that mirex applications will resume immediately in Mississippi and Georgia. A spokesman said Louisiana recently treated infested areas of one parish on its own.

Further, USDA said, a new method of mixing mirex bait used to attract the ants is being developed which will reduce the actual amount of chemical used per treatment by as much as 75 per cent from current levels.

Fire ants are a vicious type of insect one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch long and are reddish brown to black in color. They can inflict painful stings and bites on animals and humans.

In the past, the practice has been to treat infested areas once in the spring and again in the fall, ranging from 10 million acres each time. Last spring, however, only about 5.5 million acres were treated before it was decided to suspend the program.

Since 1957, when federal assistance began, USDA has spent about $43.6 million to help states carry out control programs. Mirex has been used since 1962.

Fire ants were inadvertently imported from South America in 1918 at Mobile, Ala., and since have spread to an estimated 129 million acres in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas.

When he announced last April that the mirex program would be halted on July 1, Butz said EPA restrictions "have finally made the program unworkable." Officials said the resumption this fall will be according to "present EPA environmental safeguards," including a rule against spraying an area more than once in a year.

Officials said the mirex program in Mississippi and Georgia is expected to cover about five million acres which were not treated last spring.

Meanwhile, the department said development of a new method of making mirex bait holds promise. Currently a bait called "4X" includes 15 per cent soybean oil, mirex and a base composed of corn cob grits.

The new mixture, called "10:5," involves soaking the ground corn cobs with 10 per cent of the oil and then adding the remaining 5 per cent of the soybean oil mixed with mirex. In that way, the pesticide is held to the outside of the corn cob grits without soaking into them as in the past.

This procedure, officials said, means that ants feeding on the bait need only to eat the outer covering of the grits to get lethal doses with, theoretically, none of the chemical left over in the corn cob residues.

The new mixture has undergone limited testing the past year. Officials said more extensive tests will be conducted next spring and that by the fall of 1976 full-scale applications in fire ant areas can begin.

The EPA still has under review for its impact on the environment. Officials said the "memorandum of understanding" between the two agencies under which USDA is resuming fire ant control in no way will affect the final decision EPA may reach about the use of mirex.

Cancer Society Awards Dinner

Actual proof of the way the "research dollar" is used was evident Sunday night at the Annual Awards Dinner of the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Walter D. Holder, Jr., Dept. of Surgery, Duke Hospital, in his address to the local gathering told of particular studies being carried out here and abroad seeking valuable life-saving information on the treatment of breast cancer. Dr. Holder is involved in breast cancer research which is partially funded by the American Cancer Society's research grants.

Following the invocation by Henry Groome, outgoing President, Mrs. Van Fleming, Jr., welcomed those present and encouraged continued support and dedication to the goals of the American Cancer Society.

William B. Chalk, treasurer, reported the local unit had overspent their 1975 budget in the area of printed material and visual aids but predicted the coming year would be well within the budget due to no rent being paid for office space this year.

Henry Groome, 1975 Crusade Chairman, reported a total of $14,111.92 was collected from Pitt County. This was below the goal set but well above any previous year's total.

Mrs. John L. Winstead, Jr., gave the report of the nominating committee resulting in the election of Mrs. Inez Martinez to 2nd Vice President and Mrs. Tillie Cullipher to Professional Education Chairman. Other Executive Committee members for the 1975-76 year are President, Henry L. Groome, Jr.; 1st Vice President, Dr. Emmett Walsh; Secretary, Mrs. Cherry Easley; Treasurer, William B. Chalk; Medical and Scientific Chairman, Dr. Steven R. Bartlett;

Service Chairman and Committee, Christopher B. Hargett, John Biggs, Mrs. Percy Pair, Mrs. Joseph Davis; Chairman Reach to Recovery Program, Mrs. Jack Kittrell; Publicity Chairman, Mrs. Carol Tye; and Public Education Chairman, Mrs. Thomas L. Scoopmire.

Henry Groome presented Certificates of Appreciation to a number of people who had worked diligently during the '75 Crusade. Those honored were: Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Waters, Mac Simpson, Steven Rodgers, Mrs. James Smith, Janet Johnson, Barbara Roebuck, Jane Laughinghouse, Martha Snowden, Mrs. W. G. Erwin, and the Rose High School Keyettes.

The American Cancer Society's silver bowl was presented to Christopher Hargett and John Biggs of Biggs Drug Store for their many years of service to the local unit's Service Program.

In addition to the larceny charge, Jones was charged with possession of marijuana and Hodges with public drunkenness, after being taken into custody on East Tenth Street where they had stopped to put gas in their car.

The theft of the pumpkins was reported at 10:50 p.m., Cannon noted.

Homosexual Couple Ruled Unfit For Foster Parent Role

SEATTLE (AP) — Sixteen-year-old Charles, forbidden by a judge to see his foster parents again because they are homosexual, "may never trust anyone again," says the boy's attorney.

Authorities say Charles, whose last name was not disclosed, showed homosexual tendencies and was ordered back to the state's Echo Glen Children's Home two weeks ago by a Clark County judge because the two middle-aged men who provided a foster home for him are homosexual.

Dr. Harold Johnson, a Seattle psychiatrist who interviewed Charles, said he feared the boy will become a permanent inmate of institutions because of the judge's decision.

"I do not believe that living in a gay foster home fosters homosexuality," Johnson said. "These men do not have a vested interest in seeing Charles develop as a gay...."

"A lot of kids are raised by gay parents. Of the four kids I know who have been raised this way, all have turned out 'straight' — heterosexual."

Charles' foster parents, who were not identified, gave him a room of his own, bought him clothing, took him on camping trips, taught him table manners and took him to church on Sundays, according to attorney Richard Blumberg.

It was the eighth attempted foster home placement for Charles.

"We're about the only people who ever really cared for the little fellow," said one of the two male foster parents.

Charles said neither of the men made sexual advances to him or attempted at any time to influence his sexual orientation.

"They were fathers to me," Charles said. "We talked it over. They told me that sex is something that I must decide for myself."

But Clark County Superior Court Judge John Skimas ruled that a homosexual home would have a bad influence on a child's sexual development and that homosexuals could not be considered qualified to provide a foster home.

"It is not a proper function of the state to encourage and foster deviant behavior in its wards," Skimas wrote. "If this were followed to a logical extreme, state action could be rationalized in placing promiscuous girls with prostitutes or psychopathic youths with the mentally ill and so on."

Rex Stout Created 46 Nero Wolfe Adventure Stories

DANBURY, CONN. (AP) — Novelist Rex Stout is dead at the age of 88. He was the creator of the witty, wide-girthed sleuth, Nero Wolfe, who relied on brain power to triumph over villains.

The goateed novelist, who delighted millions of mystery lovers with 46 Wolfe adventures, died of natural causes at his hillside home here Monday. His last novel, "A Family Affair," was published last month.

Beginning in 1934 with "Fer-de-Lance," the tales of the orchid-growing, 286-pound private detective sold more than 45 million copies in 22 languages. "I write for 39 consecutive days each year," Stout once said. "I figure on six weeks for a book, but I shave it down." He said he never rewrote or even reread any of them.

Explaining further how he went about his craft, Stout said: "Before starting I do put down in front of me a handwritten list of characters, but I've never written out a single word of a plot. The plots come when I'm shaving, watering the plants, putting around."

"Sometimes I think of them for three weeks, sometimes for three days. If you keep the main facts firmly in mind, and you don't let anything contradict you, you can move around freely."

Like his agile and intense creator, the sedentary detective owed his victory over villains — who in one novel included the FBI — to logical thinking and brain power. Handsome, scrappy Archie was his leg-man.

After Wolfe's debut, his pre-World War II fictionalized adventures such as "The League of Frightened Men," "The Rubber Band," and "Too Many Crooks" gave him a place next to Erle Stanley Gardner's Perry Mason.

His postwar novels included "The Silent Speaker," "If Death Ever Slept," "The Mother Hunt" and "The Golden Spiders."

Stout considered the FBI an "odious, overbearing and unprincipled" organization and in his most controversial novel, "The Doorbell Rang," published in 1965, the federal agency is the villain.

Stout was born in Noblesville, Ind. but grew up near Topeka, Kans. In true novelist tradition, he went through a series of jobs — bookkeeper, sailor, hotel manager among them — before settling down to writing.

He also prided himself on being the inventor of a school thrift program

The North Carolina dock-weighted average price is 45.60 cents per pound this week, for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers picked up processing plants. Estimated slaughter 1,094,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated today in apprehension over the resolution of New York City's money tangles and a downturn in the government's index of leading economic indicators.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 6.69 at 844.77 at 11:30 a.m., cutting into Tuesday's 12.98 point rise.

On the New York Stock Exchange, stocks declining in price led those advancing by a two-to-one margin in moderate trading.

Brokers said the slump in early prices reflected reports that President Ford would call for action to help New York City after it defaults on its financial obligations, but not prevent default.

Stock market analysts have tied New York City's troubles to recent day-to-day movements in prices. Tuesday's announcement of President Ford's speech today on New York City had fueled a steady gain on the market.

Other news that may have affected investor attitudes was the Commerce Department's announcement today that its index of leading economic indicators declined in September for the first time in seven months.

The 11 measures of business activity included in the index are thought to change before the general economy moves, and the index is thus considered a way to forecast future economic trends.

The New York Stock Exchange's composite index dropped 0.28 to 47.61 in the first hour of trading.

Citicorp, parent firm of First National City Bank in New York, was down 1 point at 27 1/2.

International Paper was selling at 56 3/4, off 1 1/2. The paper industry generally has faced weak markets and profit declines this year.

U.S. Steel was off 1 1/2 at 64 3/4, after a 2 1/2 rise on Tuesday.

Chrysler Corp., which reported a drop in third quarter earnings Tuesday, was down 1/2 at 10 3/4.

The American Stock Exchange's market value index after an hour of trading was down .06 at 83.42. Most active stock on the exchange was Kohlberg Corp., which was up 1/2 point at 15 1/2.

Greene Central Has The Inside Track

Say hello to the Eastern Carolina Conference's resident prognosticator: Mike Overton. Last week Overton, coach of the Ayden-Grifton Chargers made a couple predictions about his game with Farmville Central. One, Overton predicted it would be a low scoring game, and two, it would be a defensive struggle.

He was right on both counts as his Chargers edged the Jaguars, 7-0, to remain alive in the ECC.

Turning to the other games, Friday night, D.H. Conely knocked off C.B. Aycock, 12-9; Greene Central throttled North Pitt, 43-0; Roanoke dumped Lee Woodard, 35-0 and Williamston squeaked past Edenton, 6-0.

On Thursday night, Jamesville won its first, beating the Roanoke J.V.'s, 18-0.

After the game, Overton said he had felt it would take one big break for either team to win. That came true as well. With a first and ten on the Jaguar 29, the Chargers called a sweep with Roderick Nobles carrying the ball to his right. He took the pitch from Dennis Cristiano and headed for the corner but the Jaguars bottled him up.

Nobles did about the only thing he could do—turn and run for his life in the other direction, left. He caught the Jaguars going the wrong direction and outraced everybody to the end zone.

After that brief explosion of excitement, the contest settled once again into a defensive duel.

While the win keeps A-G's hopes a live, Farmville Central's have just about vanished. Now with two losses in the loop, the Jaguars will need a lot of help from everybody else if they are to get a piece of the ECC title. And that's just about impossible. A-G, on the other hand, remained tied with Greene Central for the loop top spot. Both are 4-1. If they should end the season tied, Greene Central would go to the playoffs because they beat the Chargers.

Greene Central might win it by backing into the title. They got off to an horrendous start losing four in a row but they have now won four in a row. Friday night was the first time the Rams really exploded and showed some of the experience that Coach Stewart Smith said was there. The Rams rushed for 277 yards against North Pitt scoring three times on the ground, twice in the air and twice by the defense.

The Rams should take a fifth loop win this Friday as they host North Lenoir, 2-4.

Speaking of help, A-G and Greene Central both got some from D.H. Conley as the Vikings edged Aycock by three points. Aycock had been in that four-way tie with A-G, Farmville Central and GC last week but the loss to the Vikes puts the Falcons in the same position as the Jaguars, doing a slow conference death.

Church Dunn said his defensive unit did a good job against the Falcons and said the game was the best the whole team has played yet. Runningback Curtis Clemons had his best effort scoring one touchdown, running for 192 yards and making a game-saving interception.

Conley may get to play the role of spoiler again this week as they travel to face Ayden-Grifton.

North Pitt travels to Farmville Central to tangle with the revenge seeking Jaguars in the FC homecoming game. North

Pitt has two more chances for a win before the season ends but the Panthers have still recorded the best record ever for a North Pitt grid team having three wins behind them.

The Farmville defense, which was burned only once, gave up just 106 yards in total offense to the Chargers, 75 rushing, 31 passing. The Jaguars defensive backfield batted away three long passes that could have given A-G three scores. They allowed Cristiano to complete just three of nine attempts. Donnie Perkins, who has probably thrown more passes this year for North Pitt than any other back in the ECC will have his work cut out for him.

Roanoke jumped up another step to a possible Eastern Plains title Friday beating Lee Woodard for the Redskins' second shutout in a row and their fifth of the season. Ricky Spruill led the ground attack with 138 of the 'Skins 253. Roanoke is idle this week, finishing next week against North Johnston.

Williamston, however, closes its season this week with a chance to finish 7-3 if the Tigers beat Plymouth. Plymouth scored 52 points against Roanoke Rapids Friday night so the Tiger defense will have to work hard to contain Plymouth.

Jamesville's Bullets can puff up their chests when they take the field against Creswell this Friday night. Creswell has not won a game but the Bullets have won one.

BY WOODY PEELE

They came from both near and far to say goodbye.

Yesterday, hundreds of people filled the pews and emptied out into other rooms and even the outside of the First Presbyterian Church in the final tributes to Clarence Stasavich.

Dotted among the people of Greenville who knew him not only as the athletic director of East Carolina University but as a valued friend as well, were those who perhaps were even closer.

They were the former football players, the Southern Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference leaders, newsmen, and fellow workers.

The official delegation was led by Southern Conference Commissioner Ken Germann, along with East Carolina Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins. Joining them in the pews were the athletic directors of William & Mary, VMI, The Citadel, Davidson, and Richmond. Appalachian's athletic director had been in Greenville earlier with the family, but had had to leave prior to the services. Furman was represented by former athletic director Lyles Alley, who was joined by another former AD, Tom Scott of Davidson.

Together these men had worked long and hard with Coach Stas in trying to mold the Southern Conference into a stronger and more respected one. Along with them were AD's from Duke, N.C. State, North Carolina and Wake Forest.

A large number of men who had once played football under Coach Stas were there—too many to identify, but their faces were familiar to those who have followed the Pirates over the years.

Former assistant coaches under Stas, Henry Vansant, Harold Bullard, Odell Welborn and Bob Gantt, joined the mourners, as did former head coaches Sonny Randle and Mike McGee.

Head coaches served as pallbearers, and appropriately were dressed in gold slacks and purple blazers. It was a touch Coach Stas would have appreciated.

The simple services were also something that he would have liked. A few hymns, a prayer and some scripture.

Many of those gathered joined the long line of cars that made its way out of the city to Pinewood Cemetery. They stood hushed and bowed in the sunlight as the coffin blanketed in gold chrysanthemums and purple ribbon was borne the last few steps.

"Sunset and evening star, and one clear call for me.

"And may there be no mourning at the bar when I put out to sea," the Rev. Dick Gammon recited.

A brass ensemble closed the rites with the East Carolina alma mater, and it was hard not to brush away a tear.

The old navy man had set out to sea, and those who stayed behind carried only a simple prayer: Goodbye, Stas, goodbye and Godspeed.

Eastern Gets Flag Victory

Eastern recorded its second win of the year yesterday in the Flag Football League, gaining a 12-0 win over Elmhurst.

Neither team could score in the first period, but in the third frame, Eastern began to roll. Matt Rose hit Dwayne Fisher on 15 and 30-yard passes to set up the first score. Sammy Hodges ran 12 yards for the score and a 6-0 lead.

Rose then passed to Fisher for the other touchdown in the fourth period.

Johnathan McGee, Jim Armstrong and Keith Stocks were listed as Eastern defensive leaders, while Chip Cayton and Roger Williams led Elmhurst.

Monday, the Green took a 6-0 victory over the White in the tackle league, finishing the year for White, now 4-2. The Green, with a win today could clinch the championship. A Blue victory over Green would give the title to the White.

The lone score came in the final period of play, when Calvin Nesbitt scored on an eight-yard run. An interception in the end zone then halted a late White drive.

William Frixell, Mark Shank and Norman Warren led the Green defense, while David Holley, Grant Stackhouse and Marshall Heath led the White.

Wahl-Coates also downed South Greenville on Monday, 6-0. The lone score came in the third period as Steve Holloman got it.

Steve Wysokowski, Billy Kittrell, Donald Russell and Dwight Garrett led the Wahl-Coates defense, while Horace Barrett, Ramon Bynum and Timothy Harris were leaders for South Greenville.

Coach's Inspiration Helped The Tigers

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

WILLIAMSTON—One of the things that has led to any success achieved by Williamston's football team this year is pride and seniors like Eric Godard. Godard, a two-year letterman at tight end for the Tigers said that some things his coach, Dink Mills said before the season, pumped the team up.

Mills said the group was the weakest he ever had at Williamston but the Tigers have a 6-3 record going into this week's final game. Those six victories include wins over Roanoke Rapids (Williamston was the first team to score on RR this year let alone beat them) and Edenton, the Northeastern Conference's leader.

"He said the same thing about the baseball team last year and we won the state," said Godard. "I thought that we didn't have the quality players, the superstars that some of the teams we've played had but we had good players. I could see his point."

The Tigers run a two-tight end version of the wishbone, an offense not noted for throwing many passes. But Godard leads the team in receptions with 16 and in most yards gained, 225. He has scored the only passing TD this year.

Godard began playing football in the seventh grade on the flag teams at Williamston Junior High. In ninth grade, Eric moved up to the J.V. at Williamston H.S. He began playing as an end but was moved to quarterback and remained there until he got to the varsity in 10th grade.

"I was third string quarterback and near the end of the season one of our ends got hurt. I moved in and have started there since."

"I was glad to get moved back," he said. "I like playing end better."

As it is with all wishbone ends, Godard noted his primary is being a blocker. "With the two tight end offense you have to be able to block. Blocking is the first thing and catching is second. Catching will come on the situation. The ratio is more running but sometimes we go to the air a lot."

When the Tigers got to the air, Godard says his routes are left up to him. "We have a set pattern and we go off it."

Some of the Williamston losses, Godard says, should have been wins. Like at Ashok: they lost on an 85-yard quarterback sneak.

Another major problem then that hit the Tigers before the season was the loss of their starting quarterback, Tim Hardison, to surgery. "It was kinda bad," said Eric. "Everybody got on everybody's case. Bemy Stevens took over and we got a lot of confidence in him. We were glad to see Tim get back."

Until he reinjured an ankle, Godard had been playing both ways.

Besides football, Godard plays basketball and was on the championship baseball team. While he likes them all, he leans toward baseball. "I like them all enough to spend time on them. Baseball was my first sport. I was brought up around baseball 'cause my brother and my father played." Eric is a center-forward on the basketball team and a pitcher and first baseman on the baseball team.

With the football season almost over for the Tigers Godard and several of his teammates will be turning their thoughts to basketball but they have one more football game left, and Godard and his fellow seniors would like to end on a winning note.

Younger Players To Work

By The Associated Press
Red Parker, coach of the disappointing 1-6 Clemson football team, says that for the rest of the season he will concentrate on preparation of the younger players for next year. But he won't forget the older ones "who have given a lot of their lives to Clemson University." "We don't want any senior to think we are leaving him out," Parker said. "Because if he has been putting his hat into the ring, he will be out there Saturday."

In a preseason poll, sports writers of the Atlantic Coast Conference area picked the Tig-gers to win the ACC championship. However, they have beaten only Wake Forest, by two points, while losing to Tulane, Alabama, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Duke and N.C. State.

And the outlook is not bright, because Clemson faces good teams for the rest of the season. The Tigers are home to the Florida State Seminoles on Saturday, then play at North Carolina, home to Maryland, and at South Carolina.

The Clemson offense is last in the ACC in rushing and the defense has stopped hardly anybody. The defensive line has been hobbled by leg injuries.

Parker was asked at his news conference Tuesday what is causing the poor play. "I would have to say the pressure we have been under since the start of the fall practice. Our people have expected a lot out of our football team, and I know we had a lot of problems. Before the season, I told everyone we had some problem areas, such as the running back, the offensive line, and the defensive ends. I never tried to blow any smoke, these areas have really hurt us."

He said he is especially high on two freshmen quarterbacks,

Steve Fuller and Willie Jordan. "I would like to settle on one of them, but not until one steps in and takes over."

"This has been a problem area in that we started three different quarterbacks in the first three games, and that is not a good way to be playing." The other starter at quarterback has been junior Mike O'Cain.

Offensive tackle Neal Jetton, a senior from Charlotte, N.C., says, "It looks like as much as we've lost, it would get the team down, but I don't think it has. I believe people here are keeping themselves together, although we don't know what the problem is."

"I believe it has everybody wondering. It seems like it's been a constant struggle. From my standpoint, we're all giving as much as we can."

"Things just haven't fallen in place. We just haven't gotten the breaks. If a few things had gone our way, we could have had a winning season."

"Everyone was expecting us to do well, and we had a lot of pressure. Being afraid to make mistakes could be the case. I really can't understand it."

Of Parker he said, "He's such a great coach. Even though it might be our fault, he'll take the blame."

Jetton also said he believed the Alabama game did not have that much affect on the team mentally. Alabama beat Clemson 56-0 in the second game of the season. Jetton did not play in that game because of a shoulder separation.

Three other ACC teams also will be playing at home Saturday. Fourteenth-ranked Maryland, will be host to ninth-ranked Penn State, North Carolina State home to South Carolina, and North Carolina home to Wake Forest.

Duke will be at Georgia Tech, and Virginia at Vanderbilt.

Russell Claims Officials Gave Game To The Chicago Bull Team

By The Associated Press
"The Bulls did not beat us tonight," said an angry Bill Russell, "it was (Jerry) Lober and (Lee) Jones, the two referees."

The Seattle coach was not amused after his Sonics got beat by the Bulls 101-90 in a National Basketball Association game in Chicago Tuesday night. Seattle outscored the Bulls from the field but lost it at the foul line, making 18 of its 25 free throws while Chicago cashed in on 33 of a whopping 51 attempts. Four Sonics — Leonard Gray, Slick Watts, Bruce Seals and John Hummer — fouled out as opposed to one Bull.

"I think the NBA is in for a rough time this season," said Russell. "As a matter of fact it was an out, and out disgrace tonight. I tell my players to do the things we ask them to do, but how can they when we get this kind of refereeing."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Los Angeles beat Milwaukee 99-92, Golden State whipped New York 111-94, New Orleans dumped Portland 99-90 and Buffalo walloped Houston 124-108.

There was only one American Basketball Association game played and San Antonio won it 108-103 over Virginia.

Seattle's Russell was not the only coach upset about the officiating in Chicago.

"What bothered me tonight was that I have never seen so many people in foul trouble so early," said Dick Motta of the Bulls. "When (Jerry) Sloan and (Norm) Van Lier each got four fouls, it made me change the tempo of the game and it became quite frustrating."

Bob Love scored 23 points and reserve forward Rowland Garrett added 22 for Chicago. Garrett collected five straight points late in the fourth period to stall a Seattle comeback bid. Watts led the Sonics with 18 points but high-scoring guard Fred Brown was limited to one basket in 14 shots.

Lakers 99, Bucks 92

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made his return to Milwaukee a success with 30 points and Cazzie Russell had 33, including a pair of clutch buckets late in the game, for Los Angeles. Rookie Dave Myers, who came to the Bucks in the Abdul-Jabbar trade, led the losers with 21 points.

Warriors 111, Knicks 94

Rick Barry netted 24 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 23 for the NBA's defending champs who broke it open midway through the third period and coasted home. Walt Frazier led New York with 19 points.

Jazz 99, Trail Blazers 90

Bill Walton to four points in the second half and Louie Nelson netted 19 points as surprising New Orleans won for the third time in four games.

Braves 124, Rockets 108

Bob McAdoo scored 34 points, Ernie DiGregorio had 22 points and nine assists and Randy Smith added 20 points as Buffalo led all the way.

Spurs 108, Squires 103

James Silas, hitting on 13 of 19 shots from the floor, scored 31 points and George Gervin had 20 as San Antonio handed winless Virginia its third loss of the season.

Lynn Thinks He Has Answer To The Jinx

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — From Rookie of the Year to Sophomore Jinx: it's such a familiar story. But 1975's best American League freshman, Fred Lynn of Boston, thinks he knows how to elude the jinx.

"I think the big thing I learned this season is the mental part of the game, which should really help next year," the center fielder said Tuesday after learning of his near-unanimous selection.

"One thing I want to do is take a day off once in awhile and make sure I go to a lighter bat."

Lynn came within one-half vote of becoming only the second rookie ever to win unanimous acclaim. He was named on all 24 ballots but split one vote with teammate Jim Rice.

He also has a good shot at becoming the first player ever to win Rookie of the Year and his league's Most Valuable Player awards in the same season.

"It's everything I worked for," said the 23-year-old Lynn. "I thought about the award a little during the season. As we went around the league, it was easy to figure Jim Rice was the fellow I'd have to beat in order to be selected."

Lynn follows Mike Hargrove of Texas as the AL rookie winner and is the fourth Red Sox player to win the AL rookie award since the Baseball Writers of America originated the award in 1947. First baseman Walt Dropo won it in 1950, pitcher Don Schwall took it in 1961 and catcher Carlton Fisk won it in 1972.

Fisk was the only unanimous winner but Lynn came as close as possible to matching that achievement.

The voting committee was composed of two writers from each of the league's 12 cities. They vote for one player each, but one writer split his ballot, saying he couldn't choose between the two young Red Sox.

Lynn wound up last season hitting .331, trailing only Minnesota's Rod Carew in the American League batting race. He hit 21 home runs, drove in 105 runs and led the league in slugging, runs scored and doubles.

Rice hit .309 and had 102 RBI. He and Lynn were the first rookie teammates in the AL ever to hit over .300 and drive in more than 100 runs.

Lynn credited consistency for his outstanding season.

"I'm not sure, but I don't think I ever went three games in a row without a hit this season," he said.

The National League Rookie of the Year will be announced Thursday.

Lineman Honored

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy's Chet Moeller says reaction time is the most important attribute for a defensive player, and Saturday he showed why.

Despite bruised ribs and two steel pins in the thumb he broke two weeks earlier, Moeller led Navy to a 17-0 upset of 17th-ranked Pitt with the following heroics:

On the game's first play, he prevented a touchdown by tackling Pitt's flashy tailback Tony Dorsett, who was in the clear after a lengthy gain. Later in the opening period he recovered a Dorsett fumble at the Navy 15 and the Midshipmen promptly drove 85 yards for the game's first touchdown.

In the final quarter, Moeller intercepted a pass at the Navy 17 and returned it 54 yards to set up a field goal. In between, he made tackles all over the field.

"The pins were popping out when I hit people," Moeller said after the game as he removed a protective pad from his injured thumb.

For his performance, the 6-foot, 189-pound senior rover from Kettering, Ohio, was named Associated Press National College Lineman of the Week.

"You must be able to recognize what the play is and react properly to that recognition," says Moeller, whose coach, George Welsh, calls him Navy's best player since the Roger Staubach glory days more than a decade ago.

"Naturally, speed, quickness and strength are fine qualities, but the ability to react correctly is the key. Desire can do a lot for you, but I could use some of Dorsett's natural ability."

Welsh, in his third year at Navy, called the triumph his best ever, better than last year's 7-6 upset of Penn State "because it came in the toughest part of our schedule and gives us five wins for the first time since 1967."

WTT Seeks To Lure Chrissie

By JOHN SHURR
Associated Press Writer
What will it take to entice golden girl Chris Evert away from the women's summer circuit and into the razzle-dazzle world of team tennis along with the game's other top female stars?

Does $160,000 a year sound reasonable?

That's the figure sources close to World Team Tennis were quoting Tuesday night to The Associated Press.

Earlier in the day, Jim Walker, president of the Phoenix Racquets, proudly announced he had acquired Miss Evert's draft rights. And in no uncertain terms, he said:

"We have made an offer which would be the best of any player active in WTT — and that includes Billie Jean King, John Newcombe and Evonne Goolagong Cawley."

If WTT nets Chrissie, who says she is tired of the summer circuit, it will have acquired virtually all of the sport's top female talent and, consequently, wiped out the summer tournaments.

Already on the league's bandwagon, aside from Mrs. King and Mrs. Cawley, are such names as Margaret Court, Virginia Wade, Betty Stove, Kerry

Melville, Francoise Durr, Rosemary Casals and Martina Navratilova.

Sources said Miss Evert was being offered $160,000 to play the 1976 WTT season, a salary that would put her ahead of Mrs. Cawley's reported $140,000 and Miss Navratilova's $100,000.

But Phoenix is not one of the league's most financially stable franchises. It does, however, have on its roster one of Chrissie's best pals, Kris Kerner-Shaw.

Two other clubs are also seeking Miss Evert's two-fisted backhand and almost faultless backcourt game — the Golden Gaters, who traded her draft rights to Phoenix, and the Indiana Loves.

Nevertheless, sources say the Racquets have the inside track and are "close to reaching an agreement."

The WTT executive committee met last Friday and discussed with Jimmy Evert, Chris' father, terms of a contract and the financial stability of the Racquets.

After winning the U.S. Clay Court Championships at Indianapolis last August, Miss Evert said: "I've played European and American circuits for four consecutive years, and it's not getting any more interesting. I'm supposed to win, otherwise it's a tragedy. Now I would like to relax a little."

Whether a WTT schedule could be called relaxation is open to debate, but tournament organizers aren't exactly thrilled about losing their last top draw.

Says Steve DeVoe, chairman for the Clay Court tournament: "If all the top women are playing WTT next summer, we'll have to look seriously at the type of tournament we'll have."

"If Chrissie goes, it's going to hurt the women's summer circuit and it'll put the women back at a real disadvantage against the men as far as getting good purses is concerned."

Oklahoma, Nebraska Get Big 8 Nods

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Courtesy of the Big Eight Conference, here are the front-runners for the Cliche of the Week Award: Coach Al Onofrio, Missouri — "Nebraska is the biggest game on our schedule. It's our next game, and we take them one at a time."

Coach Tom Osborne, Nebraska — "There's no danger of us looking past Missouri."
Coach Jim Stanley, Oklahoma State — "I don't think Oklahoma has played to its potential this year, but I expect they'll get it together for us."

Coach Barry Switzer, Oklahoma — "There's no way you can play well if you don't practice. You've got to be prepared. If practice wasn't important, you'd just play on Saturday."

Onofrio and Osborne hook up at Columbia, Mo., while Stanley entertains Switzer at Stillwater, Okla., in two of three games on Saturday's schedule between members of The Associated Press Top Twenty. The other is Penn State-Maryland.

Missouri continues its suicide schedule, which shows six opponents currently in the Top Twenty — Alabama, Michigan, Oklahoma State, Colorado, Nebraska, Oklahoma — and four in the Top Ten.

The Tigers, unranked at the start of the season but currently No. 12, opened with a 20-

7 triumph over Alabama, which Onofrio says "helped us overall because it gave us confidence."

Last year, Missouri handed Nebraska one of its three setbacks. Two weeks ago, Colorado beat Missouri 31-20, and last week, Nebraska routed Colorado 63-21. Ergo ... Nebraska 27-21.

Last week's score was 46 right, 21 wrong, a .687 percentage. For the season, it's 334-139-10—706.

Oklahoma at Oklahoma State: "I feel we've got an even chance with anyone we hook up with," says Stanley. "I think," says Switzer, "their greatest asset is their overall team quickness and speed. They've got people who can really run and chase the football. They kind of look a lot like us." And "us" is ... Oklahoma 35-21.

Penn State at Maryland: Terrapins have a week off to get their game faces on but we've learned the hard way never to pick against ... Penn State 17-10.

Indiana at Ohio State: "We go to Ohio State this Saturday and there'll be an upset," says Indiana Coach Lee Corso. Pause. "I didn't say there'd be an upset at Columbus, I just said there'd be an upset someplace this Saturday." Michigan beat the Hoosiers 55-7 last week.

and anything Bo Schembechler can do, Woody Hayes wants to do better ... Ohio State 56-7.

Southern California at California: Trojans could be ripe for an upset after their emotional high at Notre Dame last week. But John McKay won't let 'em forget Cal tied 'em last year ... Southern Cal 31-21.

Alabama at Mississippi State: A night game in Jackson following LSU-Ole Miss on regional TV in the afternoon. The same thing happened two years ago, and because the starting times and dressing rooms were all fouled up, 'Bama had to suit up in its hotel. Bears and Red Elephants never forget ... Alabama 34-6.

Michigan at Minnesota: It's November, traditionally the time Minnesota comes on strong ... Michigan 31-7.

Robinson Top Rookie

Jackie Robinson, a freshman offensive tackle who had a standout performance in Wake Forest's 66-21 football victory over Virginia, has been named rookie of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The six-foot-three-235-pounder from Freeport, N.Y., got his first starting assignment against the Cavaliers. And he was instrumental with his blocking as the Deacon runners racked up 401 yards.

Robinson received a grade of 79 percent from the coaching staff for his play. Three of the four touchdowns scored by the No. 1 offensive unit were run over his position.

"Jackie was outstanding in his first starting assignment," Deacon Coach Chuck Willis said. "He has good size and great attitude to go with his athletic ability. He could be one of the best offensive linemen in the country by his senior year."

Robinson is the third Wake Forest player to be honored for his play in the big victory over the Cavaliers. Earlier, a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association cited senior Lew Henderson as the offensive lineman and Ed McDonald as the defensive back of the week.

N.C. State freshman running back Ted Brown and middle guard Tom Higgins, also of the Wolfpack, were the other players honored. Brown was picked as the offensive back of the week, and Higgins as the defensive lineman for the fourth time this season.

Texas at Southern Methodist: Mustangs are home for the second time all season, but not home sweet home ... Texas 38-14.

Florida at Auburn: Last year, the Gators upset the Tigers and it was our Upset Special. This year, it's still our Upset Special of the Week ... Auburn 20-17. Navy at Notre Dame: Anchors aweigh — and some of Notre Dame's defensive linemen weigh about as much as a good anchor ... Notre Dame 21-10.

Arizona at Brigham Young: Cougars have no quarterback to rival New Mexico's Steve Myer, who passed the Wildcats dizzy last week ... Arizona 24-14.

San Diego State at Pacific: Aztecs finally made the Top Twenty this week and they're anxious to stay there ... San Diego State 34-14.

KINGSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Texas A&I Coach Gil Steinke heard the news then drawled: "Folks down here appreciate being No. 1. That means I get a discount at the coffee shop."

Steinke, who has had four national champions in 22 years at this Lone Star Conference powerhouse, said "This team compares favorably with the other title clubs we have had."

Texas A&I has won 20 games in a row and is the defending champion in the NAIA.

The top-ranked Associated Press team captured 24 of 45 first-place votes to take a narrow lead over Eastern Kentucky which bagged nine first place ballots.

The nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters voted North Dakota third, Boise State fourth and Grambling fifth.

"I think we might have a better defense than we did last year," said Steinke. "Of course, we miss ole 'Jaws' on offense."

Steinke was referring to running back Don Hardeman, who later became the No. 1 draft choice of the Houston Oilers of the National Football League.

Texas A&I plays relatively weak Tarleton State Saturday but Steinke said "being No. 1 is like having a target circled on your chest. Those teams don't look good on paper but you don't play 'em on paper, either. We know we'll have to ready every Saturday."

Other members of The AP small college elite included, No. 6 Western Kentucky, No. 7 Wittenberg, No. 8 Henderson State, No. 9 Jackson State, No. 10 Idaho State, No. 11 Northern Michigan, No. 12 Lehigh, No. 13, Kentucky State, No. 14 Ithaca and No. 15 (tie) Jacksonville, Ala., and Bethune-Cookman.

Giving Views On Blackouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Torbert H. Macdonald, D-Mass., chairman of the House communications subcommittee, wants the sports leagues to show him how the television antitrust legislation hurts them.

Macdonald's defiance is directed especially to the National Football League.

"Nobody thinks the football leagues are the bad guys," he said last month, but for them to resist making the law permanent is, in his opinion, "chutzpah at its highest."

Professional hockey and basketball give their views today during the first of three sessions on Macdonald's bill to make permanent the three-year-old law on the lifting of TV blackouts.

Don Ruck, vice president of the National Hockey League, and Simon Gourdin, deputy commissioner of the National Basketball Association, were the scheduled witnesses today along with Gerald S. Blum, station manager of WQXI, Atlanta.

Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner, was set to appear Thursday with Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn testifying Friday.

The antitrust law prohibits its home games of professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey from being blacked out on local commercial TV if they are sold out 72 hours in advance. Besides making the law permanent, the Macdonald bill would change the 72-hour cutoff for postseason games of baseball, basketball and hockey to 24 hours.

Last week, Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee, along with Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., introduced a bill to extend the current law for another three years.

Macdonald launched into criticism of the NFL, expressing amazement that the league is complaining it is harmed by the law.

"I shed no tears for the NFL and their financial plight," he said, condemning the NFL's claim that the antitrust law has increased the number of no-shows at games as "propaganda line" and a "frivolous complaint."

"I don't really see what business it is of the football team what (a ticket holder) does with the ticket — if he eats it or gives it away or sells it ... it doesn't seem to me that that affects the gate in any way," said Macdonald.

New Mexico Has Back Of Week

By JIM McELROY
AP Sports Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico quarterback Steve Myer missed practice last Thursday with the flu, spent Friday recuperating and then made Arizona coaches, players and fans sick on Saturday.

Myer, a 6-foot-2, 188-pound senior, ruined the nationally-ranked Wildcats' unbeaten season by passing the Lobos to a 44-34 upset victory. He broke four school records and tied two more by hitting 26 of 38 passes for 351 yards, including four touchdowns.

That performance earned him accolades as Associated Press National College Back of the Week.

"Obviously their offense was very effective," said Arizona Coach Jim Young after watching Myer riddle a defense that had given up an average of only 6.8 points a game in winning its first five outings. "We just couldn't stop them."

With a little luck, the Wildcats wouldn't have had to worry about Myer, the No. 2 passer in the nation with an average of 16.3 completions a game.

"I was really, really sick," Myer said of his bout with the intestinal flu. But he said he was never worried that he wouldn't play, "not until right before the game. It was weird, having butterflies and an upset stomach."

"I started to get real nervous, plus having an upset stomach. I started thinking I might go out and start getting sick and not get to play," Myer said. "So I just laid down and kind of rested and got my act together."

And what an act it was.

His four TD passes were a school single-game record and gave him 19 career scoring aeri-als and 12 this season, which also set standards. The 351 yards put him on the record books for the most total offense in a game and the 26 completions tied the school record, as do his 218 career completions.

"This had to be my best game ever," said Myer, who transferred last year from Mt. San Antonio Junior College in California. "I know it's got to be the greatest win. It was the greatest feeling I've ever had."

Robinson received a grade of 79 percent from the coaching staff for his play. Three of the four touchdowns scored by the No. 1 offensive unit were run over his position.

"Jackie was outstanding in his first starting assignment," Deacon Coach Chuck Willis said. "He has good size and great attitude to go with his athletic ability. He could be one of the best offensive linemen in the country by his senior year."

Robinson is the third Wake Forest player to be honored for his play in the big victory over the Cavaliers. Earlier, a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association cited senior Lew Henderson as the offensive lineman and Ed McDonald as the defensive back of the week.

N.C. State freshman running back Ted Brown and middle guard Tom Higgins, also of the Wolfpack, were the other players honored. Brown was picked as the offensive back of the week, and Higgins as the defensive lineman for the fourth time this season.

A Book About A Househusband

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dressed in a frilly white apron, scouring pad in hand, the dishwasher manages a brave little smile across the array of shiny pots and pans.

Mike McGrady's picture graces the cover of his book, "The Kitchen Sink Papers: My Life as a Househusband," a poignant, funny account of the year that he and his wife switched roles.

Corrine McGrady went out into the world to become the family wage earner. Mike stayed home to care for three children and tend the household chores.

He was 40 years old, a successful author (he masterminded the X-rated spoof, "Naked Came the Stranger") and a newspaper columnist earning $35,000 a year. But McGrady quit it all for chauffeuring the children, aged 15, 13 and 11 to dentist appointments, rushing home in time to make dinner, vacuuming and ironing.

"I wanted desperately to stop doing the same thing every day of my life," said McGrady, a boyish, witty charmer.

"And I had always said that what I really needed was a wife," said the woman behind the man.

Corrine McGrady was already a businesswoman before the switch. She has been juggling her housewife duties with commitments to her spare time career as a jewelry and graphics designer and manufacturer of such plastic classics as a cook book stand and a salad bowl.

"I was going crazy from all the responsibilities but I managed," said Corrine, 37, a tiny dynamo with black hair piled on top of her head. "But I always had this vision of my not being a housewife. I hated the deadness of being confined. I wanted another slice of life. I wanted to be self-sufficient. Money is power, and I wanted my own."

Then that mid-life restlessness hit Mike. Corrine's business was bringing in about $10,000, and she encouraged the switch. She had no doubts about her ability to expand the business and provide for the family. And she was confident of her husband's talent at wielding egg beater and broom.

Their friends could not take the role change seriously. Mike was repeatedly asked what he was really doing that year.

"To men, it was the sacrifice of a precious birthright. To women, it was insanity," said Mike. "At parties, women loved me for about 8 minutes and then thought about the ramifications — that their job was so easy and so dumb, any guy could do it."

"In the beginning, I felt very lost and threatened," said Corrine. "I felt outside the framework of my friends. I didn't belong anymore. I was a heroine of sorts but their envy was combined with hostility."

Mike got a contract to do the book after he quit. He kept a diary of his troubles:

The provider coming home late without calling resulting in a ruined dinner. Mike sneaking off to the local bar for solace where he invariably ended up giving out recipes for steak Diane and mayonnaise. Mike feeling pangs of jealousy as Corrine casually recounts luxurious lunches at chic restaurants. Familiar family exchanges with a twist — "Your mother will speak to you about that when she comes home tonight ... You never take me out anymore, Corrine ..."

Mike was a gourmet chef, producing such exotic dishes as Oysters Rockefeller, but he never did get the hang of housecleaning.

"I expected to come home to a well-ordered house. But it was in utter chaos most of the time," Corrine said. "I just couldn't kick off my shoes and forget about it because deep in my heart I still had that sense of responsibility about the house."

So Wednesday nights while Mike left for his basketball night off, Corrine tidied up. The experiment almost collapsed there.

"I felt he had not kept up his end of the bargain. I felt he didn't want to do it," Corrine said. "And then suddenly I realized no one would ever want to do it. He had never been conditioned to think that a spotless home was necessarily a good thing."

She was plagued with guilt when Mike slipped into occasional depressions about the monotony of his life.

But they survived. Corrine found the children respected her more. "Before I was just a housewife, a second-class citizen. Now they're very proud of me and it's wonderful to be respected for the right reason: what I can do as a human being."

"The marriage is better than ever. We don't con each other," said Mike. "It's much harder to role play. I don't have to be the strong, silent provider."

"I don't have to be Mother Earth, and I will never take housekeeping seriously again. I will become a slob," said Corrine.

Faulk Returns To Television

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—
John Henry Faulk appeared nervous as he sat in front of the television cameras for the first time since his rising career as a folksy humorist was shattered nearly 20 years ago by an anti-Communist smear campaign.

He eventually won a $3.5 million suit against Aware Inc. This was a self-styled anti-Communist group that accused Faulk and many other entertainers some 20 years ago of associating with "known subversives" and Faulk was unable to find work until he recently signed for 11 segments of Hee Haw, the syndicated television program which is taped here.

Throughout the two hours he was on the set last week, Faulk, 61, fiddled with his omnipresent pipe, while his legs danced up and down as he sat in a chair.

It was not a starring role, certainly not the equal of his own television program in New York City with several guest appearances a month on network game shows in the 1950s.

But it was his first chance to be cast in his once-familiar role as the front-porch philosopher, regaling the cast with stories of hometown friends and political humor.

"I'm really very excited about this... It's the first worthwhile television I've done since I was blacklisted," Faulk said. "Everyone is pulling for me. It's beautiful transition back into television."

Faulk's career first ended in September 1956 when his television show and guest appearances were cancelled.

"The networks wanted to avoid headaches, and it was hard to fight because the executives would deny anything like a blacklist even existed," Faulk said.

Faulk said he was blacklisted because he openly criticized the ideologies of Aware Inc.

"I brought suit against them to expose something that was literally destructive to hundreds of decent Americans' careers," he said. "It was after I brought suit that they brought enough pressure on the network to get me fired."

In 1958, Faulk said, Aware Inc. offered to settle the lawsuit out of court, but he turned the offer down.

"I felt an obligation to those generations to follow. This group embodied all the evil we had fought against in this country," he said.

In 1962, a New York court ruled in his favor. But by then, Aware Inc. was bankrupt and he had to settle for $175,000, about enough to cover his legal expenses.

The years in between were bleak. At one point, Faulk sold encyclopedias to get money to feed his family.

Finally, he returned to his hometown of Austin, Tex., where he opened a small public relations firm and later bought a farm.

"During those years, I went heavily in debt, borrowing from friends," he said. "But I was lucky. Many friends were kind in that desolate period."

Faulk said he never felt bitter, although he was depressed in 1958 when he realized his career was ruined, at least until there was a court settlement.

"I didn't personalize this thing. I felt it was kind of a privilege to be able to be a party in this case," he said. "I just regarded myself as one of many victims of blacklisting."

He wrote an autobiography, "Fear on Trial," which was the basis of a recent network television drama. It was this program that brought Faulk from the obscurity of his Texas farm to a second television career.

Frank Peppiatt, Hee Haw's executive producer, saw the program and decided to sign Faulk.

"We discovered with the show that Faulk was also a country humorist—a Will Rogers kind of humorist—who would really be perfect for the part in the show," Peppiatt said.

Find Fossil Of Ancient Lizard

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Three high school boys have discovered the fossilized remains of a lystrosaurus murrayi, a large lizard-like creature which roamed the earth about 150 million years ago.

The boys, Peter McQueen, 16, and Basil and Howard Mills, both 17, found the fossil on a farm owned by Colin Bowker in the Hofmeyr district of the Eastern Cape while on vacation.

Jaycees' House Of Horrors

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — The ancient house, dark and abandoned, rears up out of a patch of weeds in a gloomy, isolated hollow.

Empty windows glint dully in a moon filtered by the remaining leaves of two trees looming over the front door.

As a visitor approached the dismal site one recent night, the wind carried a brittle autumn chill.

And dogs howled.
The place was spooky enough as it was, but the South Hills Jaycees are adding a few ghouls, demons and horrors that would scare the socks off of Bela Lugosi.

While the Jaycees are not normally in the business of curdling blood, they have opened their haunted house in suburban Baldwin for nightly tours that will last until after Halloween. Proceeds will be used to help orphaned and handicapped children.

The group has worked since last June and spent more than $5,000 to transform the old structure into an entertaining chamber of horrors, complete with occupied caskets, a blood-drenched guillotine and things that go "bump" in the night.

The house already had an unusual history of its own. The deed for the two-story wood and brick structure dates back to 1789. History shows it served as a underground railroad depot for slaves escaping from the South during the Civil War era. In World War II, the Dupont Chemical Co. stored dynamite on its grounds and the famous Dupont family owned the house until 1960.

A sign outside warns visitors that they are responsible for their own heart failures and an ambulance will be standing by each night that the tours are given.

The Jaycees also had to take out a $1 million liability insurance policy. A nurse and security guard are on duty to calm anyone who might get nervous in between the beheading and the attack of the giant spider.

Upon entering, the visitor is greeted by a mortician in a parlor where a coffin lies surrounded by real flowers. Each visitor is asked to sign a "Last Will and Testament."

Elsewhere on the tour, doors slam randomly, and howling winds, fiendish laughs and screams fill the house.

For anyone who can still swallow, a refreshment stand has been set up out front.

discard. Besides, West just couldn't believe declarer would duck the opening lead when missing a cashing ace in a slam contract. So West elected to continue with the queen of spades. The defense was given no second chance.

Declarer won the ace, ruffed a spade in dummy and cashed the queen of hearts. He returned to his hand with the ace of clubs and ran his trumps. On the last trump, West was caught in a vice. He had to hold the ace of diamonds to protect against dummy's king, so he was forced to discard a club. After discarding dummy's king of diamonds, declarer scored the last two tricks in club, thus making his "impossible" contract.

On occasion you will find yourself in a contract that has no legitimate chance of success. When that happens subterfuge can be a powerful ally. Consider this hand from a recent rubber game at New York's famed Cavendish Club.

This department is not greatly enamored of North's free bid of three clubs at any vulnerability, and attaches no blame to South for driving to slam when, over his four diamond cue-bid, North was able to express some heart tolerance.

West led the king of spades, and declarer's first good move was to remain totally unperturbed when dummy appeared. The only legitimate shot for the contract was to find the clubs 2-2, in which case, declarer could simply draw trumps and claim all the tricks. However, since East-West had done a fair share of bidding on minimum high cards, declarer decided that he was unlikely to find a favorable club distribution. So he decided to resort to a "swindle."

Instead of winning the first spade, he ducked smoothly as East signalled with the ten. West was suspicious of this maneuver, but he was understandably reluctant to try to cash the ace of diamonds. If declarer were void, as his cue-bid strongly suggested, he would ruff the ace, establishing dummy's king for a

Expansion Not Viewed Favorably

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Aside from a bigger budget, network news executives have a dream: To expand their current 30-minute evening news programs on TV to an hour, or at least 45 minutes, each week night.

But a recent survey by Dr. Charles S. Steinberg, a former CBS vice-president for public information, shows the dream may remain just that unless network affiliates have a radical change of heart.

Steinberg, now a communications teacher at Hunter College here, sent a questionnaire to 235 network affiliates that sought, among other things, their views on a longer network evening news program.

He says of 124 stations responding, 80 opposed lengthening nightly network news shows, while only 44 favored expanding the programs.

The study doesn't say why there is such opposition. It's generally because the stations want the time for their own local news programs or for entertainment programs of their own.

Steinberg also queried the affiliates on a more controversial matter — the new, two-hour "family viewing" period intended to reduce sex and violence on TV early at night when young viewers are watching.

He asked if the affiliates thought the new period desirable and if they felt it would tend to "elevate standards of programming."

A total of 120 stations replied to the first question. Seventy-one thought the family viewing period of entertainment programming desirable, while 49 thought it wasn't.

Of 110 stations responding to the second question, 76 felt the family viewing concept wouldn't elevate programming standards, while the minority, 34 stations, felt it would.
