

Successor To Douglas Could Tip Balance

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
President Ford's choice of a successor to retired Justice

William O. Douglas could tip the ideological balance on the Supreme Court as it faces such crucial issues as the death penalty.

Douglas, 77-years old and partially paralyzed since last
Dec. 31 by a stroke, retired
Wednesday, telling President Ford what had become increasingly obvious to observers of the nation's highest court.

"I have been unable to shoulder my full share of the burden," he wrote after a decision which court officials said was reached alone in the privacy of his chambers. He said he was retiring effective immediately, bringing an end to history's longest Supreme Court career.

Ford, who as a congressman attempted five years ago to impeach Douglas, saluted him for service "unequaled in all the history of the court."

Douglas had been a Supreme Court justice since April 17, 1939, when he was sworn in following his appointment by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and nearly unanimous confirmation by the Senate.

His court service eclipsed by two years and two weeks the previous record set by Justice Stephen Field, a Californian appointed by President Abraham Lincoln.

His retirement could pave the way for appointment of the first woman justice, and feminist groups with avowed support of First Lady Betty Ford are expected to mount a strong drive for such an appointment.

Women who have been mentioned include Shirley M.
Hufstедler of Los Angeles, a judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals; Carla A.
Hills, secretary of housing and urban development, and three from Ford's home state of Michigan.

The Michigan women who have figured in speculation are former Rep. Martha Griffiths, U.S. District Judge
Cornelia Kennedy of Detroit and State Supreme Court Justice Mary Coleman.

Despite growing demand for a woman appointee, Atty.
Gen. Edward M. Levi is expected to be a strong contender also. Levi would give the court its first Jewish justice since Abe Fortas resigned in 1969. Before that there had been at least one Jewish member of the court continuously since appointment of Justice Louis D.
Brandeis in 1916.

Although he has long been reported to be interested in an appointment to the high court, Levi was discouraging such speculation Wednesday night. Another man who has been mentioned as a possibility is Sen. Robert P.

Griffin, R-Mich., but Senate sources said Griffin has indicated he would recommend naming a woman.

The constitutionality of the death penalty is the central issue in one of eight cases the court was unable to decide last term, apparently due at least in part to Douglas' illness.

Douglas voted with the majority in 1972 when the court struck down the then-existing capital punishment laws because they gave too much discretion to judges and juries. The question now is whether the 34 state laws passed since then suffer from the same defect.

SUGGESTIONS NOT ACCEPTED

How do you get a game patented and sold? H.J.

Hotline wrote to the Parker Brothers Game
Company in Salem, Mass. and to the Milton Bradley Company in East Longmeadow, Mass., asking how you would submit an idea for a game.

Andrea Donahue, New Products Director for Parker Brothers answered that her company has been submitted so many ideas that they feel they cannot give each one the individual attention it deserves. They've found that they are frequently faced with serious conflicts between submissions or with their own internal projects. Therefore, they have decided that they can no longer accept unsolicited suggestions from sources not associated with the company. "We recognize that we may be passing up some ideas that could represent real opportunities for us," Ms. Donahue said. "In spite of this, we feel that our decision is the only practical one for our company."

Judy Carroll of Milton Bradley's Customer Service Department, answered in much the same way. "Milton Bradley Company has an established uniform policy not to invite or accept ideas or inventions from sources other than those associated with our companies. Our policy of not considering unsolicited suggestions was adopted with the recognition that it might at times deprive us of an opportunity to obtain a useful idea," she said.

"READILY ACCESSIBLE"

There's at least one store in town that has a pay restroom. It's the only restroom for the public in the store that I know of and the store has a restaurant.
Is it legal for a store with a restaurant not to have a free lavatory for people to wash their hands before they eat?

Hotline directed your question to Willie Pate, Director of the Environmental Health Division of the Pitt County Health Department. He took the question to the N. C. Attorney General's Office, which sent him a copy of a 1964 ruling on the subject.

According to State Health Regulations any business which serves prepared food must have a public restroom in close proximity to the dining area and "readily accessible" for the diners' use.
The attorney general in 1964 interpreted "readily accessible" to mean free of charge. Pate has since talked to the manager or managers of the store or stores in question and the coin-operated device has been removed, at least from the lavatory section of each restroom, he said.

Premier Trapped By Mob

LISBON, Portugal (AP) —
About 20,000 striking hard-hats backed by Communist farmers surrounded parliament and trapped Premier Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo inside his official residence today.

A cabinet minister described the protest — sparked by wage demands of up to 44 per cent by the construction workers — as an attempted coup by the extreme left.

The demonstrators agreed to let the more than 200 assembly deputies leave the parliament building about 1 p.m. after a military policeman appealed the deputies' case through a megaphone. The workers paraded into a kind of gauntlet and the deputies walked through lines of angry protesters shouting, "Fascists, Fascists."

Azevedo remained trapped inside his residence behind the building, with two trucks from a construction site parked against the iron gate. The Socialist and Popular Democratic parties, Portugal's two largest, called for a nationwide mobilization of their followers to counter the siege.

The premier was reported by aides to be considering the use of military force to raise the siege, and was in constant telephone contact with President Francisco da Costa Gomes at the presidential palace, about three miles away.

"We are perhaps living through the last minutes of peace in Portugal," Foreign Trade Minister Jorge Campinos told the Associated Press. It was Campinos, a leading Socialist, who described the siege as "an attempted seditious seizure of power by the extreme left. We also hold the Communist party responsible."

The demonstrators covered the broad steps of the parliament building and spilled down into a deep bowl below where a hillside sloped away.

Moving Ahead On Park Renovations

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
With City Council approval in hand for $2,500 to make renovations at Jaycee Park, Recreation Director Boyd
Lee told Recreation Commission members on Wednesday night that work would move ahead at an early date.

The $2,500, Lee reported, is not to come from the regular Recreation Department funds, but will be taken from the city's contingency funds.

The renovations are to provide protection against sound and light for residents in the immediate area who earlier officially protested noise and light coming from the park.

Lee said fencing, shrubbery, and a screen were to be ordered and installed right away.

A full report on operations of the swimming pool was given commissioners by Lee.
Open from late June through August, the new municipal pool cost $9,990.87 to operate for the little more than two month period.

Total fees paid by those using the pool, including lessons and one-time admittance fees, amounted to $5,558.10, leaving a balance of $4,432.77 paid from city funds to operate the pool.

The biggest single expense was $6,015.78 in salaries to 12 full-time and part-time lifeguards, instructors and other personnel. Utilities, mostly water, cost $703.33, and chemicals to treat the water cost more than three times the water cost, at $2,386.48.

"All the experts told us
we'd never get anywhere near a 50 per cent return on our operational expenses," Lee commented, "so we're proud of the success of the pool and feel we'll be able to maintain this realistic figure of return on costs."

One of the most substantial achievements was the swimming lessons given, with 175 children and 67 adults signing up for the course.
This item alone brought in $1,210 in fees.

On plans for the proposed Recreation-Library building, commission members approved a motion to recommend that architects be hired at an early date to begin work on a design for the building and grounds. The recommendation is being submitted to the City Council for consideration at the December 4 meeting.

Lee reported that three sites have been looked at—
Green Springs Park, Elm Street Park and the Jaycee Park. Additionally, a committee has contacted local architects to get ideas on the type of building and space requirements.

"We need to move ahead quickly on this," Lee said,
"as ideas are due in by the end of January."

The proposed joint building is one of the projects being considered for construction with Community Development funds.

In non-agenda expressions, Mrs. W.R. Woolees asked that thought be given to the possibility of covering the municipal pool to permit its usage all-year round; and Thomas Foreman, Sr., expressed a hope that negotiations to purchase the Eppes School property can be concluded soon.

Raleigh-Durham Crash Landing Slightly Injured Four Persons

RALEIGH (AP)—Four persons were injured slightly when an Eastern Airlines 727 jet with 139 persons aboard crash-landed at Raleigh Durham Airport during a heavy rain Wednesday night.

The plane, headed to Raleigh from Atlanta, went partly off the runway and ripped open its belly as it skidded to a halt. The impact ripped off an engine and almost severed a wing.

Walter J. Roger, Eastern sales and service manager at the airport, said the plane's landing gear apparently collapsed on landing.
"It was a miracle that we walked away," said Charles Warren of Raleigh, a passenger. "We ran away, really,

through the rain."

"Ten minutes prior to approaching the airport, we ran into a heavy electrical storm," Warren said. "It sounded like lightning hit the plane once. The next thing I knew, I thought the pilot had made a bad landing. The rain was so heavy that the plane landed in about eight inches of water"

Warren said for about "six or seven seconds, there was some panic and screaming among the passengers."

The 131 passengers and crew of eight evacuated the plane through emergency chutes. At least one of the injuries resulted from the evacuation.

Rescue workers said the most serious injuries were a broken ankle and a dislocated shoulder. Two injured persons were taken to Rex

Hospital and two to Wake Medical Center.

One passenger said an Eastern official told him the pilot had misjudged the approach and brought the jet down in front of the runway.
Roger, however, said it appeared the plane had completed most of the landing run before the accident.

The flight, number 576, originated in Miami and terminated at Raleigh-Durham.

Ayden Board Adopts Policy For Operation Of Town Activity Bus

AYDEN—The Ayden Board of Commissioners Monday night adopted a policy concerning the operation of the town activity bus and held two public hearings to discuss zoning changes.

The bus operation policy adopted by the board of commissioners is as follows:

- vehicle may be used for all town sponsored and approved activities;
- organizations that may rent the bus for sponsored trips include civic organizations, churches, schools, Ayden fraternal organizations, Boy, Girl and Cub Scouts;
- Except for town sponsored programs, the mileage for use of the bus will be $9.60 per mile;
- trips will be limited to 250 miles round trip;
- forms must be completed by individuals wishing to use the activity bus before the bus can be rented;
- billing and collection of mileage fees will be the responsibility of the town clerk.

Following a public hearing, the board approved the issuance of two special use permits for self-service gas stations. They were issued to Charlie Hardee and Holton Dail.

The second public hearing concerned the amendment of the zoning ordinance to allow blend fertilizer operations in the I-2 District.

The following reappointments were made to the Ayden Recreation Commission: Billy Odham, Bud Carmen, Gay Blocker, Ralph Riggs and Paul Setliff.

Ralph Hardee was reappointed to serve another term on the Metropolitan Sewerage District.

The board signed an agreement with the North Carolina Department of Transportation to have the town's warning and regulatory signs upgraded.

ANNUAL PEANUT PROJECT—Dr. Trenton Davis, Kiwanis Club of Greenville, Jan Lowe and Ann Goforth, both of the Rose High Keywayettes, and Ronnie Tripp of the University City Kiwanis Club, discuss the annual peanut project of Kiwanians. Local Kiwanians will be selling two-pound bags of shelled peanuts at nine locations throughout the city on Saturday to kick off the event.

Profits from the sales go toward supporting many youth projects and activities in Greenville and Pitt County including Boy's Club, Little League, Circle K, Operation Sunshine, Boys Home, and N.C. Society for Autistic Children. The clubs hope to sell 4,715 bags during the next few weeks. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Grifton Board OKs Rezoning

GRIFTON—The Grifton Board of Commissioners Tuesday night approved rezoning a tract of land owned by George Saleeby from RA-85 to RA-6.

The property is located south of Queen Street and west of Patrick Street.

The board agreed to have a supper meeting on Dec. 9 for the outgoing board members, the new members coming on the board and all department heads.

The board accepted a bid from Wiley A. Gaskins in the amount of $6,185 for the installation of drainage tile on Tucker Street. The project will be paid from the Community Development Funds.

Board members authorized the payment of $590 for delivery costs of a surplus federal mobile home which was given to the town by the federal government.

In other action, the board accepted an acre of land from Sam Nelson. The property is located near the town cemetery. The board voted to begin picking up garbage behind the houses instead of in front of the homes, beginning Dec. 1.

Streets signs will be ordered for Forest Acres and Country Club Hills subdivisions.

John Groat was reappointed to a four-year term on the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District Board. Allan Roundtree and Gene Haywood were reappointed to three-year terms on the Grifton Planning Board. Four alternates named to the Planning Board were Margaret Harris, Max Scheetz, John Waters and John Smith.

Board members amended to extraterritorial zoning ordinance giving the town zoning board one mile jurisdiction outside the city limits.

Board members agreed to have the town water tank painted dawn blue.

Club's Gift To Hospital

A check for $500 for the New Pitt County Hospital Memorial Gifts Committee was presented to the committee's chairman, Harry Leslie, by the Greenville Kiwanis Club at the club's meeting last night.

Ed Yancey, club president, made the presentation to Leslie. The money is designated for use in equipping the intensive care nursery in the pediatrics wing of the new hospital.

The hospital grant is part of the Greenville Kiwanis Club's boys and girls service program. Funds for these projects come from the annual Kiwanis sale of peanuts.

At the meeting last night, ten new members were inducted by Colonel Dave Stevens, membership chairman, and Richard Farris, membership co-chairman.

The ten new Kiwanians are: Mayo Allen, Fred M. Byrd, Jr., Stith Harris, Ross Piper, William Y. Roberts, Charles J. Schwidde, Charles M. Vincent, Lionel Harper, Bill Fuqua, and Chia Ya Li.

Association Weighing Resolution By Jenkins

BOSTON—The American Association of State Colleges and Universities today considered a resolution expressing "concern" over proposals of the U.S. Office of Education which it said "goes far beyond" present mandates of Congress.

Specifically, the resolution being considered by delegates representing 450 state colleges and universities cited legislation and regulations which would:

1. "Broaden the language of the Educational Amendments of 1972 to make private and proprietary postsecondary vocational institutions eligible for student assistance funds by way of state approval and
2. Revise existing regulations to require that accrediting agencies agree to provide monitoring services in areas other than the academic quality of postsecondary institutions."

The resolution was offered by Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, Chancellor of East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C.

Jenkins' resolution said the proposed legislation would require the vast majority of states to invest large amounts of funds and provide for greatly increased staffing to match the job now done by non-governmental accreditation. He said it "raises the spectre of repetition of the poor performance of the state level agencies with the G.I. Bill in the post World War II era."

The Jenkins' resolution asked that AASCU take a stand that "education and the public interest are best served when the determination for Federal funding involves the appropriate, reinforcing role of Federal government, state government, and voluntary, non-government accreditation" when the role is "properly recognized as being that of evaluating and promoting educational quality." Such a mechanism exists in the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA) structured to represent all educational institutions, Jenkins said.

Quality Leaf Prices Steady

FARMVILLE—Quality grades of leaf and cutter grades were steady on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday.

According to Louis Williams, sales supervisor, some grades of smoking leaf and leaf grades were in less demand as compared with Tuesday's sales.

Nondescript grades and damaged tobacco accounted for a large percent of sales yesterday. Top price paid yesterday was $1.30 per pound for wrapper grades.

The market sold 857,585 pounds of leaf for $857,040, giving an average of $99.44 per hundred pounds. To date, the market sold 39,342,715 pounds of leaf for $40,495,263, giving an average of $102.93 per hundred pounds for the season.

Afraid Hubby's Habits Run in the Family

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The woman who is responsible for making my ex-husband a pervert now may be causing the same kind of behavior in my sons.

We were divorced after two years of counseling that didn't do one bit of good. When I was gathering my ex-husband's things to pack him up and get him out of the house, I came across evidence that he is a sadist, masochist, exhibitionist, voyeur and transvestite!

He has visitation rights to take our sons for weekends subject to my approval, and when he does, he takes them to see his mother, who has caused all of these abnormalities in her son. Now I fear that she will make perverts out of her grandsons!

Please, Abby, help me to stop all this. My psychiatrist tells me to talk to my lawyer. My lawyer tells me to talk to my psychiatrist. I am sick of talking to both these men. Every time we talk, I get a bill.

What is your advice? At least it's free.

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: My advice may be free, but I am neither a doctor nor a lawyer, and you appear to need the services of both. I advise you to listen carefully to both these professionals, follow THEIR advice and get your money's worth.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who plans to pursue law as a career. I am a straight A-student, and I'm neither pretty nor popular. I am somewhat anti-social, and I'm not domestically inclined, so marriage and a family for me are out of the question.

I really don't care about having a husband and a herd of kids, and there is no way I will spend my life being a housewife. I'd crack up.

My problem is my father. Every time I discuss my future plans with him, he says I am acting like a "lesbian."

I am not a lesbian, and it hurts me to hear him say it. How can I get my father to realize that I am not a lesbian just because I don't want a husband and 20 kids?

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: Unless your father is a very ignorant man, he surely realizes that every woman who rejects the role of wife and mother to pursue a career is not necessarily a lesbian.

But why make such positive statements now? It's possible for a woman to have both a career and a husband and children.

DEAR ABBY: We have been married for two years and are beginning to think about having a family. My problem is that I am not sure I would make a good parent.

I become impatient with children who throw tantrums when they don't get their own way, and I have to fight the urge to discipline them when their parents stand by and do nothing.

I know I'd be a very strict parent. Would that be good or bad for a child?

You can't take a child back once it's here, so before having one I want to be sure I would make a good mother. What do you think?

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: "Discipline" is a must. But a child needs love, too. If you have a lot of love to give, I'd say you have the two most important qualifications for parenthood.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

We've got what you want.

Popular T-Shirt Finally Attracts Paris Designer

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The once lowly T-shirt, now the fastest selling fashion item since the dungaree, has finally attracted Paris designer Yves St. Laurent.

Hot on the heels of other American and European fashion designers, St. Laurent has become the latest couturier to plunge into the somewhat of-beat market. Pierre Cardin, Givenchy, Ralph Lauren, Calvin Klein and others have been producing T-shirts for about two years. St. Laurent, one of the world's most influential designers, had been resisting.

"He just felt that now was the time for T-shirts," said Barbara Louis, president of Yves Saint Laurent Tricots, a New York company with exclusive rights to produce St. Laurent knitwear in this country. "He's thinking of T-shirts as a life-style. He doesn't worry whether he's on the tail end or not, because T-shirts can be so useful."

And they can be. In a variety of fabrics and trims, including fur and sparkling stones, the T-shirt can be worn by a beachcomber or an opera fan. It can be dressed up or down just by the simple addition of jewelry or scarves.

The St. Laurent T-shirt, emblazoned with the designer's name on horizontal lines, is expected to be in American stores beginning in December. St. Laurent is marketing the T-shirts only in America and did not show them at his recent spring line presentation in Paris.

The 100 per cent cotton short-sleeved version with rounded neck will sell for $18. The shirt also appears in long sleeves (for $20), V-neck, scoop neck and with broad stripes.

T-shirts first appeared on the market as men's underwear. Soon the white cotton shirt was dyed and batiked into a myriad of colors, women's sizes appeared and catchy sayings, names, motifs and designs began popping out on every street in America. That was about three years ago.

Some of the more commercial shirts advertise everything from the local car wash to a Broadway musical, from Catalina sunsets to marijuana leaves. The Superman logo, posters from old horror movies and the faces of famous, and not so famous people are but a few of the items that can be reprinted on shirts.

"T-shirts are an extension of painting," said Peter Ligeti, an actor and photographer who has designed his own line of T-shirts. Ligeti's body contour shirts of cotton interlock sell for about $13 at boutiques and department stores here.

The designs, he said, are his own. They consist of simple geometric patterns and the reproduction of some of his engravings.

Ligeti thinks T-shirts still have a few more profitable years on the American market. Ruth Hammer of Givenchy agrees.

"I think we're in a very confused fashion period," she said. "and during a confused period, a woman goes into a classic thing, whatever it might be. Jeans and T-shirts are a part of it."

"Practical they are. Fashionable they ain't."

To date, we have had declarations of the status of women, senior citizens, children, and even dieters. Today, I wish to speak on behalf of a group that cannot speak for itself, but nonetheless occupies a very special place in our world.

A Baby's Bill Of Rights

Article, the first: People who chew garlic shall not be allowed within three miles of a baby, under penalty of drowning by spitting.

Article, the second: excessive bail shall be set for turkeys who tickle a baby's feet until he faints or throw him up in the air after a full meal.

Article, the third: Where a crime of the kidneys has been committed, the accused should enjoy the right to a speedy diaper change. Public announcements, details, and guided tours of the aforementioned are not necessary.

Article, the fourth: The decision to eat strained lamb or not to eat strained lamb should be with the "feedee" and not the feeder. Blowing the strained lamb into the feeder's face should be accepted as an opinion, not as a declaration of war.

Article, the fifth: New and innovative ways should be sought to test whether or not food is too hot for a baby's taste. If God had meant for parents to test food with their tongues, he would have made tongues disposable.

Article, the sixth: Babies should enjoy the freedom to vocalize whether it be in church, a public meeting place, during a movie, or after hours when the lights are out. They have not yet learned that joy and laughter have to last a lifetime and must be conserved.

Article, the seventh: No person may be made to wear a sweater when the parentgrandparent is cold or run around nude under a cold garden hose when the aforementioned is hot.

AMENDMENT ONE: No baby shall at any time be quartered in a house where there are no soft laps, no laughter, or no love.

Fanning The Fires Of Hatred

The United Nations has taken a regrettable action in branding Zionism as a form of racism and racial discrimination.

The action was opposed by the United States and there is the possibility of financial retaliation by the United States against the UN and countries which supported the resolution.

The action caused much concern among high U.S. officials. Sen. Henry Jackson felt that U.S. aid should be withheld from nations which voted for the resolution.

Rep. Morris Udall said there might be a "full reappraisal of the United States' participation and its role in funding the U.N."

Sen. Edward Kennedy felt the vote represented a compromise of the principles on which the U.N. was founded.

The action was put through by a bloc of Arab, communist and other countries. While it has no real legal standing, it does show a strong anti-Israel sentiment among some countries of the world.

We think it is a sad time when the United Nations will take such an action against one of its member nations. The resolution fans the fires of hatred in the Middle East at a time when all Mankind should be doing all it can to bring about better understanding in that part of the world.

If such a resolution can be directed toward Israel at this time, then there is no reason that similar resolutions cannot be directed at other nations at other times. Whenever any country has an axe to grind, it can merely muster its friends and get its enemies declared racists. While all that has little meaning in itself, it does promote all the bigotry and hatred that has so characterized the world's troubles throughout the centuries.

The resolution actually affects Israel little, but it does reduce the United Nation's effectiveness in any future efforts toward bringing peace to the Middle East.

GOT TO ADMIT IT'S SORT OF SCARY!

Justice Draws Praise

By MIKE MOORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — William O. Douglas' retirement from the Supreme Court "brings to a close a career unique in the annals of this court," says Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

"His service spans the tenure of five chief justices and sets a record that may never be equalled," Burger said Wednesday after Douglas announced he was stepping down for health reasons.

The 77-year-old jurist, who served longer on the court than any other, suffered a stroke last December and said his doctors told him "there is no bright prospect in view" for relief from "this unabated pain."

Burger said, "Since January 1975, he has struggled valiantly to overcome the limitations imposed by illness. His courage and will power have earned him the admiration of his colleagues on the court."

"We devoutly hope that once relieved of the taxing work of the court, his health will improve and he will again be able to pursue the wide range of interests that have commanded his interests all his life and for the 37 years on the court."

Cathleen Douglas, the justice's wife, said, "I'm saddened that he's retiring in one sense because I think his contribution to the nation through the Supreme Court is a very valuable one. But on a personal level, I'm pleased because this will give him the opportunity to recuperate and enjoy himself much more than he has been."

President Ford, who as House Republican leader initiated impeachment proceedings against Douglas in 1970, praised Douglas in retirement.

"I want you to know first of all my warm admiration for your valiant effort to carry on the duties of your high office despite your recent illness, with the same courage and independent will that have characterized your long service to your country," Ford wrote.

Justice Potter Stewart said Douglas "stands uniquely alone in the history of our court and of our country. As one of his junior colleagues, I have long admired his intellect, his independence, his energy and his vision." Stewart has been a

The Issue: Spend Or Save

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The big battle of the state budget ultimately comes down to a reasonably clear and understandable issue:

Will we be able to pay all the bills out of this year's income, or will we have to dig into savings to pay current costs?

Many Tar Heel families are facing the same issue at home.

Gov. James E. Holshouser expresses confidence that state income will grow, and be enough to meet spending as we recover from the recession.

There could be, he concedes to critics, some short fall below projected income. "But, if less than $70 million, I have no doubt we can handle it under normal procedures. There is no cause to go beyond what we normally do," he says in emphatically explaining that management of the budget is his responsibility.

Nervous Nellies

He would, Holshouser says, be glad to have whatever advice the General Assembly might wish to offer, but it would be "premature to take any kind of nervous Nellie action" which might hurt the state's economic recovery.

Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., on the other hand, says there is "a distinct possibility that we may not collect enough money to balance this year's budget," and suggests immediate cost-cutting action by the governor—including a freeze on filling state job vacancies or adding new employees.

Hunt, a Democrat eyeing the governor's office, says pay raises for state employees and teachers must take top priority in next fiscal year's budget, beginning July, 1976.

The governor, a Republican, says it is too early to commit any money for next fiscal year.

How can the governor argue that he can live within a $70 million shortfall, while Hunt and others call for immediate action to cut spending so the budget can be balanced?

They are talking about the same thing, but in different terms.

State law requires a balanced budget — current income must pay current bills. Since the Depression, income has not only done that, but each year built up a surplus to the degree that Gov. Holshouser inherited some $300 million when he took office three years ago. It has been spent.

Whopping Surplus

Last fiscal year, for the first time in nearly half a century, those surplus dollars (about $18 million) had to be used to pay bills. Only $2 million was left over for "savings."

Now, this fiscal year's budget calls for building up a surplus between $50 and $70 million—to go into pay raises and "savings" held, traditionally, through the two-year budget period to become available for spending by the 1977 General Assembly and the new governor elected in November, 1976.

When Holshouser says he can handle anything up to a $70 million deficit, he means that the projected surplus can be spent this fiscal year to pay bills — using savings to live on, but not cutting back in a manner which he believes would put a damper on economic recovery.

When Hunt says the budget won't balance without cutting spending, he means that the savings pledged to provide salary raises for state employees and teachers is in jeopardy — and so is the savings account he would inherit should he be elected governor.

At this point, neither side is claiming a deficit large enough to chop into current revenues.

A balanced budget, then, can be achieved for far less than the 9 per cent revenue growth on which the budget is based. Each percentage point in growth yields some $16 million; so that is why the governor feels comfortable in predicting things will work out.

The debate, then, is whether to spend all you've got or put some aside for another year. Holshouser says he is "cautious, but not supercautious" like some of his critics.

Another 'Catch 22' Case

Reflect, if you will, on a couple of homely maxims. One copybook adage says that the road to hell is paved with good intentions. Another says that he who acts in haste repents at leisure. Both reminders apply to Congress as it gropes to make sense of the Flood Insurance Protection Act of 1973.

Almost no one questions the good intentions. Flood damage in the United States claims a terrible toll each year of homes, factories, schools, roads, bridges, and farm buildings destroyed. Without some form of Federal underwriting, which began in 1968, the cost of flood insurance would be prohibitive. Even the most dogmatic conservatives tend to support the concept of Federal flood insurance.

But the unusually severe floods of 1973, which caused damage estimated at $1.2 billion, had an unfortunate influence on Congress. Late in December of that year, when members were in a hurry to get home for Christmas, some drastic amendments to the 1968 act were called up for voice vote. With little debate and less comprehension, members voted for a new scheme of sanctions, prohibitions, and controls. What emerged was a classic example of bad legislation.

The amended act now affects an estimated 22,000 towns, cities, and counties across the nation. The law has forced property owners into a kind of Catch 22 situation. If their community refuses to come into the Federal program, the owners are helpless; they can't get insurance, and no Federally insured band or savings and loan association can loan them money. If their community agrees to come into the program, the owners can get flood insurance, but under such restrictive provisions that rebuilding after a flood could be prohibitive.

The 1973 act gives meaning to warnings that conservatives constantly have voiced about Federal legislation in the field of "land use." These critics have insisted that no Federal agency, even with the very best intentions, could draft regulations that could fairly be applied to communities across the nation. They have warned that Federal aid means Federal control. They have complained that "carrot and stick" policies involve small carrots and large sticks. And so far as the 1973 law is concerned, all this is true.

Thus the Department of Housing and Urban Development, through the insurance administrator, had to start with some uniform definition of a flood plain. It hit upon those areas subject to flooding at least once in one hundred years. As Senator Tom Eagleton of Missouri has complained, this is a "highly theoretical concept."

The 100-year line takes in communities that never have had a flood in their recorded history.

The regulation has caused consternation in parts of Appalachia, where the need for flood insurance is keen. In scores of mountain communities, elevations vary so abruptly that one building may be above flood levels and an adjoining building may be subject to risk. It is impossible, critics say, "simply to draw a circle on an old map." HUD officials say they recognize the difficulty, and they are constantly redrawing local lines to meet topographical exceptions.

The element of Federal control has raised

INSIDE REPORT

Fear And Anger In N.Y.C.

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — Delight in Wall Street and among the old Republican establishment over the follies of this liberal Democratic city has now soured to fear over the future and anger against President Ford.

While Mr. Ford's hard-line speech Oct. 29 against bailing out New York fit the national mood and was easily his most successful political venture in weeks, it has backfired here. Bankers, financiers and Republican politicians believe his hard-nosed language intensified the city's crisis. "I'm afraid," one New York conservative Republican told us acidly, "that the President got a little mixed up and thought the election is being held in 1975, not 1976."

Moreover, the hostility may soon deepen. Financiers headed by Wall Street wizard Felix Rohatyn spent the weekend trying to put together an eleven-hour package to avert default for the city and for state government agencies but requiring some federal support. Even before the weekend meetings began, however, the President reiterated to close associates that he would veto any such federal support on grounds it would wipe out all self-help efforts here.

Actually, Republicans and businessmen unanimously agree with Mr. Ford's assessment that the city's profligate Democratic leaders neither comprehend their misdeeds nor are truly repentant. But joy over the Democrats' nightmare here has been suppressed by a starker emotion: terror.

Besides the prospect of New York City default, the state housing finance agency may not be able to refinance $133 million in notes this week. That may be followed by failure of other state agencies to find lenders and by the ultimate catastrophe of default by the New York state government itself.

This terrifies the city's world famous banks which hold heavy amounts of city and state paper. The immediate result is scare talk about major businesses, both U.S. and European, rescuing their deposits. Even though the Federal Reserve System is pledged to prevent it, fear of a liquidity crisis runs rampant in New York today — in itself an unsettling economic phenomenon.

A post-default financial panic is generally viewed as improbable, but not remote. Even if it is averted, however, there is deep worry about long-term economic repercussions; one of Wall Street's brightest young economists sees default so tilting the balance toward personal saving and against spending as to threaten a 1976 recession. At the least, default would make permanent the severe difficulties of the tax-exempt bond market caused by New York's deepening problems over the last nine months.

Wall Street's chortling over city hall's nightmare has been stilled by voices of caution. Word has widely circulated that Dr. Arthur Burns, respected chairman of the Federal Reserve Board,

Other Editors Say Haunting Question

(Washington Daily News)

With 90 prisoners now on "Death Row" in North Carolina, the question is asked so often "what are we to do with these people even if the death penalty should be affirmed?"

That is a haunting question. Surely, if the death penalty is upheld by the United States Supreme court, not all 90 of the people now in "Death Row" will go into the gas chamber.

But how do we separate one from the other? Frankly, we must make some separations, and those decisions must be made by our courts. We suspect that those 90 persons there now are looking anxiously at both the high court decision which could be upcoming at any time, and also to the moves to be made by the state courts later.

This is a most serious matter. North Carolina has far more people legally awaiting execution than any other state in this union. The total of 90 persons is a most haunting sum. Yet, common sense tells us that something must be done somewhere along the line.

Now if the high court rules out the death penalty entirely, the decision will be much easier. In that event we suspect that all 90 of them will probably be given life in prison.

The real difficulty will come in the decisions to be made if the high court says states may exact the life of a person guilty of certain crimes. We must take it for granted that all 90 of these persons have committed very serious crimes. There hardly is any doubt about that fact.

Now we read with amazing interest the words of the people so strongly against the death penalty. And here in North Carolina today there are a lot of people of that opinion.

We still must look at the death penalty as very much needed in certain cases. From that position we cannot depart as of now. When a killing takes place while criminals are in the act of committing another crime, say bank robbery, or where an officer of the law is gunned down brutally while in the line of duty, then death in the gas chamber, we feel, is fitting.

But we again look at the 90 people and common sense tells us that North Carolina is not about to put 90 people to death if and when the decision is handed down by the high court.

Regardless of what the state does either way, some haunting questions shall still be with us for a long time to come.

40 Years Ago Today

November 13, 1975

E. F. Arnold, Pitt County farm agent, today reported that out of 2,785 tobacco control contracts in the county, only 16 growers have failed to sign the agreements, around one per cent.

Arnold explained that only a few of those who had not signed had deliberately refused to do so, blaming procrastination or some other reason for the non-signing.

The death of Huey P. Long, Louisiana governor who died from an assassin's bullet in September, may keep Pitt County from assuring a 100 per cent sign-up in the 1936-39 tobacco control program.

According to E.F. Arnold, at least one tobacco grower in the county had refused to sign the agreement saying that since Long was dead, "everything will go all to pieces in this country and I do not wish to be obligated in any way to the government."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

It comes to my mind that we, the citizens of Greenville, fail to appreciate the assets that we have in our growing city — not the least of which is an able and well prepared City Police Department led by a man who has been with this department and lived in our city for many years. He is a man well qualified to be the Chief of a well mobilized police department that is greatly needed in a growing city.

The affray of October 31st is greatly to be deplored and something that should never be allowed to happen again. Our people as well as the students of East Carolina University should realize that destruction of another's property is against the law and cannot be tolerated, regardless of who they are. Punishment should be swift and sure for these offenses. If these same people came to our homes and rent the destruction and havoc on our homes that was spent on our businesses — would we, as citizens, be so indecisive?

In this day and time it is so easy to criticize selected groups such as a police department. I feel it is high time we commended Chief Cannon and his officers for their untiring efforts of protecting a thankless society.

Strength For Today

PEARL OF GREAT PRICE

What is a pearl? It is a jewel which has its origin in the irritation and suffering of shell fish. When foreign matter gets into the shell and sets up irritation, the inhabitant thereof builds up something to protect himself from the pain which the intrusion causes. The result is a precious jewel.

There are many lovely things which have their origin in joy, but for better or worse in this world many precious things spring from suffering. Many a person has developed a serenity of spirit because for years he endured acute physical pain and was considerate enough not to inflict his trouble upon others. Those who cover the sorrows of their hearts with a cheerful smile and eagerly project their lives into the interests of others round about them, develop with the passing years a strength of character that is very unusual.

Peace of spirit is a pearl of great price which nevertheless can be acquired without an outlay of money.

Question Technology Benefits

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Does technology serve or does it command? Do we develop technology to accomplish our ends or does technology insist that we give it something to do?

Many financial executives at their convention here no doubt believe it serves, but a surprising number think the mere existence of techniques and processes is dragging them into something they don't really care for.

At issue are "third-party services," which probably doesn't mean much to you, but it does to every member of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members are the nation's major mortgage lenders.

"Those services are essential to our survival," said a spokesman for the league, which represents an industry of 4,325 institutions which handle 60 million savings accounts, 12 million home mortgage loans and $322 billion of assets.

They seek to be an intermediary, a third party, between you and the people to whom you regularly pay bills. A financial institution that seeks to be a third party says, "Give us your money; let us pay your bills."

They explain further, "Just send us your check and we'll take care of the rest — your electric bill, your mortgage payments, your rent. We'll do it efficiently; you won't have to worry about dunning letters."

At this point the survival argument might make sense, but it isn't necessarily compelling. Now, however, the electronic computers and magnetic tapes and automatic printing devices and the other paraphernalia of electronic funds transfer come into the picture.

The Social Security Administration wants to cut down paperwork and check writing. It has the equipment for transferring funds electronically, directly to the financial institution. Recently it began giving recipients the option of receiving benefits that way.

Some retirees already have their checks sent directly to banks. When they want money they simply withdraw it, often by writing a personal check.

Increasingly, it is expected, industry will join in the concept. That is, rather than issuing individual paychecks, businesses will transfer their entire payrolls to financial institutions. Financial men here believe it is inevitable.

They believe, in fact, that technology has given them an ultimatum: Join or perish. Some are eager to join and look forward to expanded business. Others are reluctant.

Now the big trouble for the savings institutions: Their business is largely restricted to offering savings accounts, from which they then make mortgage loans. This is the "thrift" industry; it doesn't offer checking accounts.

Money automatically deposited in commercial banks is readily retrieved. Retrieving it from a thrift institution, especially if you are homebound, or by contrast, away on vacation, is cumbersome.

Sterilization Law Closely Questioned At Hearing

Hearing On Ford Threat

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 31-year-old New Bern man will appear before a U.S. Magistrate today for a probable cause hearing on charges that he sent a letter threatening the life of President Ford to the White House.

Robert E. Rolison, arrested Tuesday, allegedly sent a letter to the White House in which he threatened to kill Ford. The alleged letter was postmarked Oct. 14 in New Bern.

U.S. Magistrate C. K. McCotter Jr. will determine whether there is enough evidence to hold Rolison pending submission of the case to a federal grand jury.

Rolison is currently in the Craven County Jail under $20,000 bond. Ford is scheduled to appear briefly in North Carolina Friday. However, Talmadge Bailey, special agent in charge of the Secret Service in North Carolina, said there was no indication that the alleged threat was related to Ford's scheduled appearance in Raleigh.

The maximum penalty for threatening the life of a president by mail is a $1,000 fine, five years in jail, or both.

was outraged by the strident tone of Mr. Ford's Oct. 29 speech. Similarly Wall Street has been quietly informed that Burns is considerably more concerned about the post-default conditions of New York banks than either the President or Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Simultaneously, previously solid New York Republican support for Mr. Ford's hard line has ended. Senate majority leader Warren Anderson, the capable up-state conservative, has made no ringing declarations. But he has privately pleaded with numerous Ford administration policymakers to ease their stonewall rigidity.

The exit of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller from the 1976 ticket reflects both cause and effect of the city's crisis. Opposition to the Ford policy by New York banking interests intimately tied to the Rockefeller family was the source of his break with the President. That break, in turn, contributed to establishment unease.

What is happening here confirms a private warning delivered Oct. 28 in Washington at the weekly meeting of Republican Senators by a Southern conservative, Sen. William Brock of Tennessee. Brock declared it was fine and dandy to flail the New Yorkers for their many sins, but added a Cassandra warning: if default does lead to economic distress, Republicans had better move quickly to prevent disaster. After the meeting, solicitous senatorial colleagues took Brock aside to explain that such talk would not go down well in Tennessee.

It probably will not. But in New York, Brock's warning is echoed daily by Republicans. Instead of those madcap politicians of New York City getting trapped by their own profligacy, a beleaguered President Ford may be the real political victim, blamed for national economic misery flowing from this bankrupt city.

Dr. Horace Wells, a dentist of Hartford, Conn., discovered the anesthetic property of nitrous oxide (laughing gas) in 1844.

By CHARLES C. HILL
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—In arguments on the constitutionality of North Carolina's involuntary sterilization law, the State Supreme Court questioned primarily who would be sterilized rather than if anyone at all should be.

The court did not indicate Wednesday when it would rule.

Arguing that the law is unconstitutional was Jim Armentrout, representing a 15-year-old mentally retarded Forsyth County boy. He said the statute discriminates against the mentally retarded, mentally ill and the poor.

One of the chief complaints lodged by the Winston-Salem attorney appointed by the court for the boy with an IQ of 45 was that the law is vague.

The justices questioned Associate Atty. Gen. Isaac Avery III repeatedly about who would be sterilized.

Armentrout attacked the law widespread objections. Hundreds of communities, suspicious of any involvement with the guvment, have voted flatly against participation. Senator Eagleton, who is leading a fight for further amendment of the act, cites the example of Lincoln County, Mo. Residents of the flood plain area three times have sought referendums on local participation, and three times they have been beaten at the polls. The fear of control is real.

And in the case of this act, the control itself is formidable. Controls are applied through the powerful mechanism of banks and other insured lending institutions. Property owners must comply with Federal requirements, or else. The "or else" can amount to something approaching the self-destruction of their property.

Senate hearings are being held this week on amendments that would restore certain elements of voluntariness to the program. Eagleton is joined in his effort by an unlikely coalition of co-sponsors—McGovern, Bayh, Hartke, and Abourezk on the liberal side, and Thurmond, Dole and Eastland among the conservatives. They are agreed on the need for a workable Federal program, but "too much control," says Eagleton, "is just too much control." The affected communities and the hard-put property owners doubtless would agree.

as being unspecific.

Avery said that the law provides for sterilization if the subject is mentally ill or retarded to the point that he cannot take care of himself and his offspring and that it is not likely that the condition would improve. It is also allowed if offspring would probably be retarded or mentally ill.

The justices, notably Associate Justice I. Beverly Lake, asked how that level of retardation was determined, what standards the law had and were there any tests to see if the person was able to take care of himself.

Avery said no, that it was to be decided by the court.

"What we're talking about is retarded children who can't bathe themselves or feed themselves," Avery said.

He said many parents had asked for the legislation to avoid their mentally ill or retarded children having children that would add to their burden.

The law was enacted in 1974 and went into effect January 1.

Armentrout represents a boy who signed a consent form for his sterilization, as did the boy's mother. Armentrout and others question whether the boy was able to realize what he was doing.

In the only other case Avery knows about in the state, two girls have filed a civil suit against the doctor who performed the operations, contending they weren't aware the surgery they were consenting to was permanent. That surgery was not under the new law though. The case is pending.

A district court ruled the new law unconstitutional in the boy's hearing in July. The same thing happened in Superior Court. The merits of the case have not yet been argued.

Armentrout says the law discriminates against the mentally ill and retarded because it doesn't apply to anyone else, even though there are others who are more likely to have genetically defective children.

He says it works against poor people because they are more likely to be referred by the county department of social services.

Avery said no, that social services departments also have access to mental health facilities.

In a friend of the court brief, the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union contends the sterilization law is unconstitutional, that it denies due process and equal protection under the law and is cruel and unusual punishment.

Avery said that all directors of county social services departments are required to notify local district attorneys if they know of someone who comes under the sterilization law.

The petition for sterilization must include psychological tests and a statement from a doctor saying there is no medical reason the operation shouldn't be performed. Then, written consent or objection must be obtained from the subject and the subject's next of kin or legal guardian. A district judge then hears the case and decides the case on the papers presented or demands an investigation. That decision can be appealed.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead in heavy trading today, riding continued hopes for a successful answer to New York City's money problems.

New York Stock Exchange volume surged to 7.84 million shares in the first hour—the heaviest total for that period in more than four months, but well short of the opening-hour record of 10.20 million set Feb. 13 of this year.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 4.17 at 856.42. Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 3-1 margin on the Big Board.

The New York State Legislature was set to reconvene a special session today to consider tax and debt-restructuring elements of a plan designed to stave off the financial collapse of New York City.

Gov. Hugh Carey indicated late Wednesday he had received no commitments of help from Washington.

But he said Treasury Secretary William E. Simon had told him President Ford might give new consideration to federal loan guarantees if the plans the state has outlined are put into effect.

Analysts said the latest turn in the New York City outlook appeared to have had the effect of lifting a weight off the market that had been holding it back for some time. In the burst of activity this morning, they also noted some profit taking by investors who had bought earlier on the hope that a rally like this week's might materialize.

Stocks of New York City banks, major creditors of the city, continued to rise. Citicorp was up 1/2 at 30 3/4; J. P. Morgan 3/4 at 54 1/2, and Chase Manhattan 1/2 at 28 1/2.

The NYSE's 11 a.m. composite index was up 30 at 48.52, and the American Stock Exchange market value index gained .56 to 85.84.

agents Curtis Douglas and Ray Eastman who posed as truck drivers might cause harm if taken by drivers, Dr. Bond said an individual's "ability to operate machinery might be dulled by these drugs." The Edenton physician also said Preludin and Ritalin — prescribed for SBI agent Martha Owens — could become habit forming.

Under cross examination by the defense, Dr. Bond explained the term "normal professional practice" as what is "accepted by most other physicians." He also said he did not know what was normal or customary for Dr. Best, because individual practices vary.

When asked if in his opinion the medical records of the three SBI agents contained enough information on which to base the issuance of drugs, Dr. Bond said "I think most physicians would add a little more."

Dr. Bond added, however, that he would not fill out a complete medical history for a cold or minor ailment.

The three SBI agents who obtained prescriptions for drugs from Best are black. Agent Michael Boulus, who testified earlier yesterday that he was refused a prescription when he visited Dr. Best's office in January, is white.

Boulus testified that he told the doctor "that I was a traveling salesman... did a lot of driving," and needed something to stay awake. "He told me that the FDA (Federal Drug Authority) was getting tough on these drugs" and that it was "illegal to do it and that someone in his profession could not do that."

Boulus said "his (Dr. Best's) exact words were 'A man in my profession cannot do that because it is unethical and the medical board would not sanction it.'"

This morning, Dr. Bond was again called to the stand where he remained for most of the morning undergoing cross examination by the defense.

Responding today to a question by Eagles, Dr. Bond told the court that in his opinion, it is "not within the usual customary practice" to prescribe Ritalin for truck drivers to stay awake.

Deregulating Of Truckers Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford asked Congress today to limit federal regulation of the trucking industry in an attempt to increase competition and lower consumer costs.

Ford said that the patchwork regulatory structure which has accumulated over the past 40 years "has not kept pace with changes in the industry and the economy."

"We have permitted regulation designed in theory to protect the public interest to become in practice the protector of special industry interests," Ford said in a statement accompanying proposed legislation. He added that his proposal would restore the federal regulatory system "to its original purpose of serving consumers."

Ford's legislation would remove much of the federal red tape that now keeps trucking firms from raising or lowering their prices quickly to meet changing market conditions.

It also would prohibit rate bureaus, which are trucking organizations that set common fares for their members, from discussing, agreeing or voting on any rate except joint or interline rates over the next three years.

Other major provisions are: —Agricultural carriers which are not regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission would be given new authority to carry goods which they are now prohibited from hauling.

Rampants Open State Play With 71st

In some ways, it'll be like the pupil meeting the old teacher when Rose High School meets Seventy-First High School Friday at 8 p.m. in Fayetteville.

It's the first round of the state 4-A Playoffs, and the loser will pack up his gear for another year. It's also the third straight trip to the State Playoffs for the Rampants, while Seventy-First is making its first.

The pupil, Rose Coach Dave Bumgarner, is hoping that the experience of having been there before will make a difference. The old teacher, Seventy-First's Henry Vansant, is hoping that the home field advantage will be the big thing.

Back when Bumgarner was an undergraduate at East Carolina, Vansant was a member of the ECU coaching staff under Clarence Stasavich. "You can see a lot of the things Seventy-First does in what Coach Stas did in the single wing," Bumgarner said of Vansant's veer offense. "It would be a reward for me to beat him from that standpoint." It is the first time the two have ever gone up against each other.

Rose gained the playoffs in a 27-6 victory over Northeastern last week, when just about everything seemed to go right for the Division I co-champs. Despite not being able to claim the top seeding, which went to Wilson, a tie by the Titans against Rocky Mount, pulled the two into a deadlocked position for the championships. Under state rules, two ties are equal to a loss and a win, thus in practice giving Wilson and Rose identical 4-1 record, although the Titans were actually unbeaten—but tied twice.

"We did everything we thought we should be able to do in the first half against Northeastern," Bumgarner said. "They did one thing that I was glad to see them do. They put Delbert Powell, whom I think is one of the best backs in the conference, out at end, and this hurt their offense. They tried to pass to him several times, but it never really worked."

Bumgarner felt that the Rampant defense did a good job, blocking one punt for a touchdown, and intercepting three passes.

"Henry Trevathan made a big play for us with a fake punt that picked up 41 yards," the coach pointed out. It was the third time this year Trevathan has run on fourth down, out of the kicking position. He's picked up a first down each time.

"Northeastern tried to stop Doug Paschal, and this left the outside with William Joyner, and our passing game open."

The Rampants go into the game in good physical condition, with no one expected to sit it out.

Bumgarner is especially proud of his team for making the playoffs for the third straight time. "Out of some 375 football teams playing on all levels, only 56 participate in the playoffs. To get there three straight times is really icing on the cake. Our players strive for it, and I think having been there before will be an advantage for us. Four of our players will be going for the third straight year, and some 30 will be going for the second time. They know how to conduct themselves."

Seventy-First is a strong team. They come into the playoffs with nine straight victories. After bowing to Jacksonville, 33-21, in the opener, they reeled off the next nine in a row, including a 20-7 triumph over Reid Ross, which destroyed Rose 39-0.

"They have a very good quarterback—a big Leander Green-type kid—and he's the key to their offense," Bumgarner said.

He's speaking of Herry Sydney, 6-0, 171-pound junior. He's carried the ball 126 times for 596 yards, a 4.7 average, and leads the team in that department. In addition, he's hit on 26 of 83 passes for 530 yards and four touchdowns.

Reggie Fairley, a 5-10, 166-pound senior, is the number two man in rushing with 534 yards, while Mark Polk, a 5-8, 173-pound senior, has 336 yards. Greg Fairley has rushed for 270 yards, and Kauzo Townsend, the backup quarterback, has 226 yards.

Sydney leads the scoring with 83 points, while Greg Fairley had 36. Polk and Reggie Fairley each had 30 points.

Overall, Seventy-First has scored 278 points, while allowing just 91. They have rushed for 2,457 yards, while holding their opponents to a mere 960.

"They have a team that works very well under pressure," Bumgarner said. "They've been able to come from behind on several occasions, including in their game with Hoggard that decided the championship."

The Rampants feel they have something to prove in the game.

"We've been in the playoffs twice before and lost out to teams in the southeastern part of the state, Hoggard two years ago, and Sanford Central last year. We also lost to Reid Ross this year. The kids want to prove that they can play better than this."

But it won't be easy, the coach admits. "We are going to have to go down there and really do the job right. If we do, I still think no one can stop us on offense. But we have to be able to run the option and we have to stop Sydney. We have to stay on offense and much as we can and keep them backed 'up on defense."

The winner moves on to the second round, next week, while the loser ends its season.

Winning Title Would Make Paschal Happy

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's been somewhat of a frustrating year for Rose High School running back Doug Paschal. He's had good games and bad, and he's helped the Rampants to another State 4-A Playoff berth, but it would take a state title to really cheer him up.

Paschal was listed at the start of the year as one of the best backs in the state, and in most ways, he's lived up to that reputation. But a pre-season injury cut into his playing time and robbed him of another 1,000-yard plus season.

Doug missed the first two games due to a sprained knee, but came back strong after that. He's rushed, in eight games, for just under 800 yards, proving his worth, but it hasn't been satisfactory to him.

"I haven't been as good as I would expect," he said. "The yardage really doesn't mean that much. I just want the team to do the best it can as a unit, so overall I guess I've had a pretty good year."

Last year, although he had a good sophomore year, Paschal really began to gain the publicity. Now, as a senior, he finds himself the target of many tacklers—even when he doesn't have the ball. "I think they (the opponents) key on me a great deal more than last year, so it's really harder to run now that they know who I am."

Paschal approaches this Friday night's game with Seventy-First with a feeling of revenge. The two teams have never met, but it's the area Paschal is interested in. Rose has lost to Hoggard, Sanford and Reid Ross, all from the Southeastern part of the state. "That area sort of looks down on us as not being as good as they are, thinking we're out of their class. It makes you want to have a real good game and beat them bad."

But the Rampant team hasn't been known for its intensity throughout a game. They've been involved in close games that they shouldn't have been in. "Sometimes, some of us feel that a one touchdown lead is all we need. But there's a different feeling on the team now."

Another factor was the game against Reid Ross. "We were beaten before we stepped on the field," Doug said. "It was the first time we'd played them, and even though we knew they were good, we weren't ready. We had loafed all week in practice. We just went through the motions. We didn't play like we're capable of playing."

Paschal expects no such problems this weekend. "We're really working hard. It's not that much fun to work hard all week long, week after week during the regular season. But we've gotten to the playoffs, and there is definitely more enthusiasm this week. We're working hard to get out the wrinkles."

It won't be an easy game regardless. "Seventy-First fires off the line awfully well," Paschal said after watching game films. "They're kind of like Jacksonville. They have a good quarterback and we've got to control him. We've also got to move the ball like we can do."

Looking ahead, there is a chance that Rose, if it survives the first two weeks, could meet Wilson in the Eastern finals. "I'm not thinking about that," Paschal said. "I really don't care who we'd play. Right now, I'm just thinking about Seventy-First."

In another four weeks for sure, Paschal's high school football career will be over. But he's looking forward to playing four more years. "I really want to play on a major college team," he said.

He'll probably get the chance, since he's highly sought after. While he declined to list the number of schools that have contacted him, it's believed to be sizable.

"The new recruiting rules (six campus visits, and a limited number of off-campus visits by coaches) are going to make it harder. But I haven't begun to narrow it down to six yet. I'm still looking."

Private Auction For ABA Teams

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Basketball Association is holding a private auction today and the Philadelphia 76ers are the special guests.

The Sixers, of the National Basketball Association, have been invited to bring suitcases of money and make a bid for Caldwell Jones, a 6-foot-11 center from the defunct San Diego Sails. Jones has signed a future contract with Philadelphia already, but he can't join the Sixers until the 1977-78 season because he still owes the ABA two years.

Philadelphia, which could certainly use the talented Jones, can get him immediately if the price is right. And the ABA, which has been less than successful at the boxoffice, can certainly use the money.

The Sixers say they don't much care for the meat-market approach to purchasing players but they'll show up anyway.

"We're going to New York. Since we want to avoid any litigation, we're not looking for any legal hassles," said Philadelphia General Manager Pat Williams. "We have signed him to play for us 1½ years from now. We're in no rush."

"We can wait that long but if we can get him now we'd like to get him now. But we're not going to engage in any auction bidding for him."

Jones was held out of Wednesday's dispersal draft of the Sails, which folded up Tuesday. The remaining San Diego players were put up for auction within the ABA with the league putting a price on their heads and clubs bidding.

Only three players were chosen — forward Mark Olberding by San Antonio and both forward Dave Robisch and guard Dwight Lamar by Indiana. Everyone else was bypassed and will be placed on waivers.

San Diego was the second ABA franchise to strike its colors this year, the Baltimore Claws having folded up four days before the season began. Three others — St. Louis, Virginia and Utah — are rumored in trouble.

All of which, according to Williams, puts Philadelphia in a strong bargaining position.

"It looks like the ABA is going under," said Williams. "They've already lost two teams. There's more pressure on the ABA than on us. The ABA wouldn't get anything for Jones a year from now."

"Maybe Caldwell Jones will go to a judge and say he doesn't like being treated like a piece of meat," he added.

Jones, who joined San Diego in 1973 from Albany State, Ga., averaged 20 points and 14 rebounds a game last season.

Buc Effort Is Best In Nation

East Carolina's school and Southern Conference record rushing and total offense performances may go down as the best single game performance by a team this season.

According to the NCAA, the Pirates' 633 yards rushing against Virginia is the best single game team effort of the year. Tulsa, which rolled up 694 yards in total offense against Drake Saturday, is the best single game mark in that category.

But a re-check of the ECU statistics in the game have revealed that Steve Greer's nine-yard touchdown run was not counted in the totals for the Pirates. Greer carried the ball six times for 40 yards, but Virginia's statistical crew only credited him with five carries for 31 yards.

East Carolina planned to check with Virginia to see if it would officially change the statistics with the NCAA. If so, that would up the rushing total to 642, and the total offense to 699, making the Bucs best so far in each category.

The first down total of 36 also was a national high to date.

Jim Bolding continued to hold down his number one pass interception position, still averaging 1.0 per game. He has nine in nine games, a new ECU record, and his 18 career total has snapped both the school and Southern Conference marks. He needs one more to tie the single season conference mark, and two more to break into the top 10 in career interceptions throughout the NCAA. He seems destined for that, having one more year of eligibility left.

West In Finals

West Greenville gained a 12-2 victory over South Greenville yesterday to move into the finals of the Flag Football League's post-season playoff.

Both of the West Greenville touchdowns came in the first half in the victory. The first score came when Keith Phillips connected with Christopher McLawhorn on a 15-yard pass, making it 6-0.

The second score came just prior to the end of the half, as Phillips hit William Battle for a 25-yard aerial. That ran it to 12-0.

The lone South Greenville points came on a fourth quarter safety.

Michael Davis led the South Greenville defense, while Randle Worsley, Vincent Murphy and Michael Spell paced West Greenville.

West Greenville will now meet Elmhurst for the playoff title today.

State Winds Up Season At Duke

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State, with upsets over Penn State and Florida this year, winds up its regular season Saturday at Duke in one of the two Atlantic Coast Conference football games scheduled for this weekend.

Maryland, which is two games away from its second straight ACC championship, travels to Clemson.

Although Duke, 3-0 and 4-5 overall, is unbeaten in league play and has the home field advantage, the Wolfpack is considered a scant six-point favorite to win its eighth game in eleven starts.

A shot at the conference title is out of the question for State, 2-2 in the league, but Peach Bowl scouts will be on hand and a victory will be the No. 1 priority of the day for Wolfpack coach Lou Holtz.

The game will be equally important to Duke coach Mike McGee. The Blue Devils are tied with Maryland for the conference lead and a win is necessary to stay in the race.

Duke ends the season the following Saturday in a conference game with North Carolina, 1-4 and 2-7, and Maryland, 3-0 and 6-2-1, entertains cellar-dwelling Virginia, 0-4 and 1-8, in its finale next week.

The Terps should have little trouble with Clemson and Virginia, but for Duke an uphill battle is expected against State, while anything can happen when the Blue Devils meet arch-rival North Carolina, 1-4 and 2-7.

"The State game is the fourth in the five steps required to win the conference," says McGee. "We were successful with the third step at Wake Forest." McGee's team drubbed the Deacons 42-14.

"State at this point must be considered a superior team to Wake Forest," McGee concludes. "We can't expect to have the same type of success against State that we enjoyed last week."

The Blue Devils have won seven of its last eight games at Wallace Wade Stadium at Durham, but have not beaten State since 1971, 41-13, the year before Holtz became head coach at State.

Duke, on the other hand, leads the series against the visitors from Raleigh — 32-15-3.

Meanwhile, all other ACC teams meet outsiders Saturday:

- Wake Forest at South Carolina
- North Carolina at Tulane
- Syracuse at Virginia.

With 12 Teams Dead, Pro Sports Obituaries Still Are Unfinished

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer
The worst economic crisis to confront professional sports in recent history has caused the death of 12 teams and one league in the past month, and the bloodletting is far from finished.

Escalating salaries, labor problems, legal challenges and the threat of intervention by Congress and federal agencies have combined with the pressures of inflation to produce an atmosphere in which more teams and perhaps another league or two will cease to exist.

Major league baseball, with its big stadiums, low ticket prices and numerous games, is generally in good financial shape.

The folding of the World Football League and of the San Diego and Baltimore franchises in the American Basketball Association are part of a trend that seems certain to continue: It is the shrinking of a professional sports world that is too big, too expensive and too complex to exist on reasonable economic terms.

When the 10-team WFL ended its 18-month life in which $30 million was lost, league President Chris Hemminger said, "We will not be the last to go." He was right. The San Diego ABA team ceased operations on Tuesday, and other teams in several sports are in trouble.

The expansionism of the late 1960s, when promoters such as Gary Davidson created leagues at will, is over. The structure of most sports is in question in the courts and their future is in question at the box office.

The average salary in pro basketball is $100,000. In pro hockey, it is $70,000. The National Hockey League lost its television contract and the National Basketball Association's ratings are weak. The other leagues — the ABA and World Hockey Association — are without TV income.

In the 1974-75 season, 25 of the 28 pro basketball teams lost money. It is estimated that 15 lost in excess of $1 million. An estimated 23 of the 32 pro hockey teams lost money.

Last year, each of the 26 teams in the National Football League received a record $2.2 million in revenue from TV contracts. Yet a record eight teams lost money.

One reason is higher salaries: for example, a spokesman for the Washington Redskins said the average Redskin player made $25,000 in 1970. Now, the average is $54,000.

The NFL is not likely to go under. The same can not be said for basketball's ABA or hockey's WHA.

The WHA held a league meeting earlier this week, and one official emerged to say, "I would not be surprised if two or three teams dropped out of our league before the end of the season."

The ABA's problems may be more critical. As league officials work on printing their third different schedule in a month, as many as three of the eight remaining teams are reported in some financial trouble.

Bird Flies High In Colonel Win

By The Associated Press
It's a bird, it's a plane ... well, actually it is a bird. Bird Averitt.

Kentucky's great shooter was flying high Wednesday night, scoring 31 points as the Colonels walloped the Spirits of St. Louis 98-81 in the American Basketball Association.

"I had a good night," Averitt said, "but I'm more glad we won the game — we have so much to prove, we're the defending champs."

Not only did Averitt contribute a season-high point total to the Colonels' victory, but Kentucky's Birdman also collected eight assists and held Spirits guard Freddie Lewis to just eight points — 11 below his average.

"I thought he did a tremendous job of applying pressure to Lewis," said Kentucky Coach Hubie Brown. "Freddie had an off-night, but I think that Bird had something to do with it."

In the other ABA games, the Utah Stars humbled the New York Nets 134-114 and the San Antonio Spurs drubbed the Virginia Squires 144-112.

Averitt and Louie Dampier sparked a Kentucky surge early in the second half, leading the Colonels to their easy victory. While the Spirits missed their first 17 shots of the second half, the two Kentucky guards picked apart the St. Louis defense as the Colonels won for the seventh time in eight games.

Dampier pumped in four long jump shots and Averitt hit three layups before the Spirits scored their first field goal 4½ minutes into the quarter.

Center Maurice Lucas scored 27 points to top St. Louis, which held slim leads in the first half before Kentucky pulled ahead for a 43-41 lead at intermission. Kentucky center Artis Gilmore contributed 14 points and a game-high 19 rebounds.

Stars 134, Nets 114

Last-place Utah snapped out of a five-game losing streak as Ron Boone scored 35 points to lead the Stars over New York. The Utah starting lineup played most of the way and all five starters ended up in double figures. After Boone, it was John Roche with 28, Steven Green with 21, Jim Eakins 19 and Randy Denton 18.

Julius Erving wound up with 30 points for the Nets and Rich Jones chipped in 24.

Spurs 144, Squires 112

George Gervin pumped in 26 points and seven other Spurs scored in double figures as San Antonio rolled past Virginia. James Silas scored 22 points for the Spurs, who held a 71-56 lead at halftime and then coasted to victory in the last two periods.

Cardiac Cards Going To Wire

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — "In order to win, we've got to have a fantastic effort by everybody in every game."

Coach Don Coryell believes his words and so, apparently, do his St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

Coryell's "Cardiac Cards," in keeping with a tradition they established in 1974, have waited until the final minute — and beyond — to decide five of their eight NFL games.

And, possibly through more than coincidence, in four of the five on which the outcome hinged on late heroics they have recorded victories in their 6-2 campaign.

"I don't know how you're ever going to be able to tell just what's going to happen," says Coryell, whose team last Sunday beat the Philadelphia Eagles 24-23 in the last second to retain a share of the lead in the National Conference East with the Washington Redskins.

"It's a two-way street," Coryell said. "You have to remember the Dallas game (37-31). They had the poise. They won in overtime."

"In the Washington game we played before, you have to give them the credit," said Coryell, referring to a 27-17 loss dealt the Cards in one of the few games decided prior to the closing seconds.

"In my mind, Philadelphia played one heck of a ball game," he contended. "They really played us off our feet the first half. We were fortunate to get some breaks."

Whether breaks, desire or talent plays the biggest role in continuing St. Louis victories is a question Coryell has not yet been able to answer.

"I wouldn't say it's more than talent," he said, but added: "I wouldn't belittle the talent of any of our folks."

"It's just that in this league

CORONET SEDANS offer more than enough room for a family of six. Plus a large trunk to match. And talk about economy, Coronet sedans come with a thrifty 225 Six. Teamed up with the manual transmission, this engine got 30 MPG on the highway and 18 MPG in the city in recent EPA estimates. Your actual mileage

Gowdy Denies Threat Blame

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Network sportscaster Curt Gowdy says baseball umpire Larry Barnett was unfair in blaming him for hate mail and death threats which followed a controversial World Series call.

"That play didn't create controversy just on television," Gowdy said Wednesday from his radio station here. "They really did a rip job in some of the papers."

Barnett, an American League arbiter, has said that 95 per cent of his mail mentioned comments by Gowdy and Tony Kubek during the telecast of the third game of the Series.

That's when Barnett refused to call interference on pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister of the Cincinnati Reds.

Armbrister bunted for a sacrifice in the 10th inning with the score tied. The ball bounced a few feet in front of home plate, Armbrister and Boston Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk collided, then Fisk threw wildly past second on an attempted force out. The play enabled the Cincinnati runner to continue to third and he scored the winning run a few minutes later.

Barnett, the youngest umpire in the majors when he joined the American League seven years ago, said the controversial play was just a breakaway from the plate.

"Armbrister broke for first base," he said. "Fisk broke for the ball. There was a collision. When Fisk fielded the ball, he was not obstructed on his throw to second base."

Greenville Art Center Awarded $2,000 Grant

The Greenville Art Center has been awarded one of 56 grants made by the North Carolina Arts Council at a meeting on Wednesday in Raleigh. The grants total $106,400, with many of them, including all the public school grants, requiring matching funds from the community involved.

The Greenville grant is in the amount of $2,000 and has been awarded to cover expenses of a one-man exhibit by Ed Reep at the Greenville Art Center in February 1976.

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, said the $2,000 was to be used to underwrite the costs of work during his six years as an artist-in-residence at East Carolina University.

The funds will provide for crating, transportation and insurance of paintings from private and museum collections at various locations, for the expense of preparing a catalog and-or posters, and for involvement.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The judge in the Patricia Hearst case has called a special hearing next Monday to decide whether to delay Miss Hearst's bank robbery trial after a related decision in the case of Sara Jane Moore, accused of attempting to kill President Ford.

One of Miss Hearst's attorneys, Albert Johnson, said Wednesday night that U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter possibly could delay the Dec. 15 trial date until mid-February.

The Hearst defense team has sought such a delay, claiming that the 21-year-old newspaper heiress was too traumatized by her 19 months as a captive of the Symbionese Liberation Army to stand trial immediately.

The chances for delay increased significantly Wednesday when the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruling in the case of Miss Moore, held that a judge need not count time used for psychiatric examinations in the 90 days required by the Speedy Trial Act to bring a federal prisoner to trial.

A final version of the Speedy Trial Act goes into effect in 1979 and provides for exceptions to a more stringent 60-day limit in the case of psychiatric testing, but the interim provisions of the act now in effect mention no such exception.

Both Miss Moore and Miss Hearst were scheduled to go on trial Dec. 15. The judge in each case set the early trial date to comply with the previously uncontested trial act, enacted Sept. 29.

Johnson said he spoke with Carter on Wednesday evening about the implications of the court ruling. He said Carter had decided to hold an "extraordinary" hearing Monday afternoon to consider postponement of the trial date.

Carter, reached in Long Beach, Calif., where he was attending a judicial conference, said, "I'll certainly listen to counsel. They're coming in Monday and I'll see them."

Johnson also said that he expected a psychiatrist would soon treat Miss Hearst at the San Mateo County Jail, where she has been held since her arrest Sept. 18, and that "as a result of psychiatric treatment and normal progress" she should be able to assist the defense by mid-February.

Meanwhile, prosecutors went ahead with plans to have more than 50 witnesses available for a mid-December trial of Miss Hearst.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning said Wednesday that the subpoenas were issued Tuesday to witnesses and he said more were expected. He said they would be kept secret until the witnesses appeared in court.

Acting on a petition by Miss Moore's attorney, the three-judge panel ruled that if "the demands of due process so require," a judge may exclude time spent to determine mental competency and related hearings from the 90-day requirement. The panel said, however, it saw no reason to set aside her arraignment and other pretrial proceedings, as requested by public defender James Hewitt.

Hewitt said that if Miss Moore is declared competent at a hearing next Monday, he will contend she was denied due process and ask U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti to reset the trial date to allow her to be examined by psychiatrists.

Miss Moore, 45, is accused of firing a shot at Ford while he visited the city on Sept. 22. She was returned here late last month after testing at a federal facility in San Diego.

More than $4,200 property damage was reported by officers investigating four traffic collisions here yesterday.

Police said heaviest damage resulted from a 1 p.m. collision at the intersection of Elm Street and Greenville Boulevard involving a truck driven by Samuel Mitchell Purcell III of Greenway Apts. and a car operated by George Alfred Pollard Jr. of 4003 South Elm St.

Officers, who reported no charges, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Purcell truck and $1,200 to the Pollard car.

Edward Dunn Chadwick of 109 Paris Ave. was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 10:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Forrest Hill Circle.

Investigators reported the Chadwick car collided with a car driven by Walter Joseph Arseneau of 102 North Ash St. causing an estimated $650 damage to the Arseneau car and $600 damage to the Chadwick auto.

Cars driven by Russell Edward Manning of Route 3, Washington and Charles Reynolds Kernan III of 107 Hawthorne Rd. were involved in a 7:28 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 250 feet West of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Officers, who reported Kernan was charged with following too close, estimated damage at $350 to the Manning car and $275 to the Kernan auto.

Walter Hendrix of Route 1, Windsor was charged with having improper brakes following investigation of a 5:39 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive a tenth of a mile south of the Sixth Street intersection.

Police reported the Hendrix truck collided with a car driven by Larry Mitchell Mewborn of Route 2, Farmville resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Mewborn car and $10 damage to the Hendrix truck.

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — James Salamites, whose 1968 Buick sedan was demolished in a collision with President Ford's limousine a month ago, says he'll accept a $600 insurance settlement if he can also keep the car. The insurance company says it has no objection.

"I want a written explanation that they won't take my car away," says Salamites, whose wrecked car is parked in the driveway of his home. It has been there since it went through a green light at an unguarded Hartford intersection on Oct. 14 and struck the President's armored limousine.

Scott Gerrish, claim supervisor of the Insurance Company of North America, said Wednesday the firm doesn't intend to retain salvage rights on the car. He said it will pay $600, the purchase price when Salamites bought it from his mother several weeks before the accident.

Hewitt said that if Miss Moore is declared competent at a hearing next Monday, he will contend she was denied due process and ask U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti to reset the trial date to allow her to be examined by psychiatrists.

Miss Moore, 45, is accused of firing a shot at Ford while he visited the city on Sept. 22. She was returned here late last month after testing at a federal facility in San Diego.

More than $4,200 property damage was reported by officers investigating four traffic collisions here yesterday.

Police said heaviest damage resulted from a 1 p.m. collision at the intersection of Elm Street and Greenville Boulevard involving a truck driven by Samuel Mitchell Purcell III of Greenway Apts. and a car operated by George Alfred Pollard Jr. of 4003 South Elm St.

Officers, who reported no charges, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Purcell truck and $1,200 to the Pollard car.

Edward Dunn Chadwick of 109 Paris Ave. was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 10:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Forrest Hill Circle.

Investigators reported the Chadwick car collided with a car driven by Walter Joseph Arseneau of 102 North Ash St. causing an estimated $650 damage to the Arseneau car and $600 damage to the Chadwick auto.

Cars driven by Russell Edward Manning of Route 3, Washington and Charles Reynolds Kernan III of 107 Hawthorne Rd. were involved in a 7:28 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 250 feet West of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Officers, who reported Kernan was charged with following too close, estimated damage at $350 to the Manning car and $275 to the Kernan auto.

Walter Hendrix of Route 1, Windsor was charged with having improper brakes following investigation of a 5:39 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive a tenth of a mile south of the Sixth Street intersection.

Police reported the Hendrix truck collided with a car driven by Larry Mitchell Mewborn of Route 2, Farmville resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Mewborn car and $10 damage to the Hendrix truck.

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — James Salamites, whose 1968 Buick sedan was demolished in a collision with President Ford's limousine a month ago, says he'll accept a $600 insurance settlement if he can also keep the car. The insurance company says it has no objection.

"I want a written explanation that they won't take my car away," says Salamites, whose wrecked car is parked in the driveway of his home. It has been there since it went through a green light at an unguarded Hartford intersection on Oct. 14 and struck the President's armored limousine.

Scott Gerrish, claim supervisor of the Insurance Company of North America, said Wednesday the firm doesn't intend to retain salvage rights on the car. He said it will pay $600, the purchase price when Salamites bought it from his mother several weeks before the accident.

Both Miss Moore and Miss Hearst were scheduled to go on trial Dec. 15. The judge in each case set the early trial date to comply with the previously uncontested trial act, enacted Sept. 29.

Johnson said he spoke with Carter on Wednesday evening about the implications of the court ruling. He said Carter had decided to hold an "extraordinary" hearing Monday afternoon to consider postponement of the trial date.

Carter, reached in Long Beach, Calif., where he was attending a judicial conference, said, "I'll certainly listen to counsel. They're coming in Monday and I'll see them."

Johnson also said that he expected a psychiatrist would soon treat Miss Hearst at the San Mateo County Jail, where she has been held since her arrest Sept. 18, and that "as a result of psychiatric treatment and normal progress" she should be able to assist the defense by mid-February.

Meanwhile, prosecutors went ahead with plans to have more than 50 witnesses available for a mid-December trial of Miss Hearst.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning said Wednesday that the subpoenas were issued Tuesday to witnesses and he said more were expected. He said they would be kept secret until the witnesses appeared in court.

Acting on a petition by Miss Moore's attorney, the three-judge panel ruled that if "the demands of due process so require," a judge may exclude time spent to determine mental competency and related hearings from the 90-day requirement. The panel said, however, it saw no reason to set aside her arraignment and other pretrial proceedings, as requested by public defender James Hewitt.

Hewitt said that if Miss Moore is declared competent at a hearing next Monday, he will contend she was denied due process and ask U.S. District Court Judge Samuel Conti to reset the trial date to allow her to be examined by psychiatrists.

At the beginning of next year, the American Contract Bridge League Charity Foundation will hand over a check to the American Cancer Fund that will bring organized bridge's latest series of contributions to that organization to over $200,000. You can join in this effort. On Tuesday night, November 25, at more than 400 sites in the 50 states, Canada, Bermuda and Mexico, a Continentwide Charity Game will be held. Contact your local bridge club to find out the location of the game nearest you, and help "trump out cancer."

Trumping out is the theme of today's hand. After South received support for his heart suit, he made a game try in diamonds. With a maximum for his original raise, North happily accepted by leaping to four hearts. This was an excellent contract, but declarer failed to utilize the full power of his trump suit.

West led the king of clubs, and South was pleased with his dummy. It seemed that all he had to do was capture the queen of trumps to make his contract, and with nine trumps in the combined hands he was a favorite to feel the lady. He won the ace of clubs and cashed the ace and king of trumps, but the queen did not come down.

All was not lost. Declarer could still make the hand if West held both high spades and something favorable developed in the minor suits, such as the queen of diamonds being guarded only twice. But this was not to be, and declarer ended up losing three spades and a trump.

Observe what would have happened had declarer taken the simple precaution of trumping out a loser at trick two. After winning the ace of clubs, declarer should immediately ruff a club in his hand. Now when he cashes the ace and king of trumps, the queen does not drop, he is a move ahead in the game. He follows with the ace-king of diamonds and a ruff, returns to his hand with a second club ruff and leads his last diamond. Since it does not help West to ruff in front of dummy, he discards a club. Declarer ruffs in dummy and scores his last trump by ruffing a club as West follows. In all, declarer makes seven tricks in trumps, plus three minor-suit winners, and in the process of the crossruff, telescopes his four losers into three.

Dramatization Of Cop Ambush Doesn't Quite Reach Its Mark

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS is airing tonight "Foster and Laurie," a somewhat glib, yet well-acted dramatization of the lives of two young rookie cops who were ambushed and killed here in January 1972.

The officers, Gregory Foster and Rocco Laurie, were shot from behind by several men while on foot patrol in the Lower East Side. A day later, letters signed "Black Liberation Army" claimed that BLA members did the shooting.

Foster was black, Laurie white. Tonight's movie shows that each initially distrusted the other, Laurie because he was uneasy working with a black, Foster because he suspected his fellow cop of bigotry.

In one scene, Foster says that to get closer to the people, cops have got to patrol on foot, not in a police car. Says Laurie, "That's a good way to get a brick dropped on your head — ghetto airmail."

How they become close friends, an effective team on their racially-diverse beat, and subsequently marked for death by a small band of black extremists is amply shown in tonight's two-hour film.

Dorian Harewood is superb as Foster and Perry King turns in a well-shaded performance as his white partner.

Alas, Albert Ruben's script doesn't equal their performances. While it points out that the two cops and their families never socialized with each other, despite the officers' closeness, it makes the Foster-Laurie relationship too simplistic, too pat.

It depicts the two cops as becoming tight, as the saying goes, only after each learns the other was a Marine and that they served at about the same time in the Vietnam war, albeit in different units.

Their common experience in the Corps and combat is portrayed as the magic bond that brings the two together, but it obviously was a lot more than that and this isn't brought out in the movie.

The telling of their stories as cops, on and off the job, comes in a series of scenes that shift from their family lives, their work and the feverish attempts to keep them alive after they're shot.

Amid this are sporadic scenes of the black extremists, one of whom is uncertain about the need to kill "a brother," planning to kill the cops as a revolutionary statement of "self-defense."

The movie starts with a re-enactment of the shooting in which Foster was killed outright and Laurie fatally wounded.

In the film, however, this is changed. Foster is depicted as also wounded, and he and Laurie are rushed by fellow officers to a hospital for emergency surgery.

It is there, at the end of the show, that they die on operating tables a few feet apart. And then Foster's widow consoles the widow of Laurie.

It's a dramatically tidy ending and that's what wrong with this movie. Save for a few effective scenes, it seems more an exercise in tight script construction than a real effort to recreate a real story about two cops whose killers still haven't been caught.

Organ Concert Open To Public

Dr. David L. Foster, will perform five solo organ music selections to be dedicated to three former Jarvis Methodist Church organists.

The organ concert will take place at 4 p.m. Sunday, at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, located in downtown Greenville. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

The three former organists of Jarvis Church, who will be honored Sunday are Mrs. G.B.W. Hadley, Mrs. Ray Tyson and Mrs. Paul Toll, all of Greenville.

Dr. Foster is minister of music of Jarvis Methodist Church. He holds the BM degree from Oberlin Conservatory of Music, the MM degree from Indiana University and his PhD in music from Northwestern University.

He was the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship at the Hochschule for Musik in Cologne, West Germany, and has studied under noted organists including Dr. Oswald Ragatz, Grigg Fountain and Professor Michael Schneider. He has also appeared as a recitalist in Bonn and Heidelberg and other major cities in Europe and at Duke University and other major cities in the United States. Before coming to Jarvis he was assistant professor of organ at Greensboro College.

Selections of Foster's music to be played include: Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major;" Mozart's "Fantasia in F Minor;" Pepping's "Concerto II;" Franck's "Priore"; and Liszt's "Prelude and Fugue on B-A-C-H."

A reception immediately following the recital in the ladies parlor of the church will honor the organists.

Mrs. Hadley played at the organ for 25 years, from 1911 to 1936. Mrs. Tyson for 23 years, 1925-1948, and Mrs. Toll for 26 years, 1948-1974.

The public is invited to attend the reception also.

Budget Battles Helped Push N.Y.C. Nearer Brink

By LEE MITGANG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An annual feature of New York City's rough-and-tumble politics has been the budget battle between mayors and the city's chief fiscal officers, the independently elected comptrollers.

The political stakes in those battles have always been the mayoralty, and Mayor Abraham D. Beame, when he was comptroller in the 1960s, fought long and loud with former Mayor John V. Lindsay over budgets.

But in June 1974, Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin opened a battle with Mayor Beame that became more bitter than any in memory.

Many now say the Goldin-Beame rift and the resulting blow to investor confidence in the city's management and candor, marks the beginning of a year-and-a-half chain of crises that has pushed the city to the edge of financial collapse.

In his opening shot on June 6, 1974, Goldin claimed that the 1975 Beame budget proposal was $87 million in the red, and criticized $700 million in questionable budget balancing tactics.

"Are you suggesting that $700 million be cut from the budget?" Beame responded angrily. "If so, where do you suggest we cut?"

Four days before Goldin's comment, state Comptroller Arthur Levitt had accused the city of using hundreds of millions of borrowed dollars improperly to fund expense items such as library books, architect fees, and even interest on other bonds. Those statements brought further uneasiness to the bond market.

The next time the city went to the market — which a year later would be completely closed to it — these comments led to an 8.58 per cent interest rate on its note, the highest rate in the city's history to that date.

Beame, meanwhile, more confident after getting state approval of his $11.1-billion budget plus $270-million in new taxing authority to help balance it, hinted there might be a deficit at the end of the year but added he saw no room for budget cuts.

The Goldin-Beame rift reached new heights on Nov. 30, 1974, when Goldin charged the city's budget gap was $650 million, $250 million higher than Beame's estimates.

Three days after Goldin's comments, the city was forced to accept a new-record 9.48 per cent interest rate to float a $600 million note.

Beame blamed Goldin for the high rate, saying: "It was poor judgment and unfortunate. Coming as it did before a note sale, undoubtedly it was reflected in the incredibly high interest rate."

Meanwhile Beame, prior to the note sale, ordered $100 million in budget economics including 1,500 layoffs. He rejected as "too harsh" proposals for 20,000 layoffs.

Later in December, Beame in a "Phase II" of budget austerity announced 3,725 city employees would be cut from the payrolls, bringing total job cuts in the 1975 fiscal year to nearly 8,000.

On Jan. 7, 1975, the city received one bid on a $620 million note issue, and Beame and Goldin termed the 9.4 per cent rate "unfair, unwarranted and outrageously high," adding that it "raises serious questions about the city's current treatment by lending institutions."

The city's unions, particularly the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association covering police, grew restive as Beame's austerities gathered steam. The PBA threatened strike action Jan. 15 if uniformed police were laid off.

Beame persuaded city unions to forego certain contract rights and announced no more layoffs were needed to balance his 1975 budget. But he warned on Feb. 15 that the 1976 budget due to be submitted in June would be $1.68 billion out of balance without new taxes and state and federal aid.

Meanwhile the market for city bonds on Wall Street was collapsing. Bond buyers, already jittery about the city's declining credibility, were faced on Feb. 25 with the default by the state Urban Development Corp. of $104 million in notes. It was the first major government agency to fail to pay its debts on time since the Depression.

Three days later, with big city banks demanding hard facts on the city's budget health, Goldin announced cancellation of a $260 million note sale. Goldin declined the banks' request for information, stating that it "could not physically be compiled, checked and certified in the short time available."

On March 6, the city floated a $537 million bond anticipation note at 8.69 per cent. It proved to be the last time the city successfully raised money on the bond market.

On April 2, Standard & Poor's bond rating service suspended its "A" rating on the city's general obligation bonds, because of the city's "rapidly deteriorating ability to raise money in the capital markets," and "the inability or unwillingness of the major underwriting banks to continue to purchase the city's bonds and notes."

Two days later, city officials admitted that only 2,000 layoffs had been carried out under the mayor's austerity program. At the same time, the state took the heat off the city's cash crisis temporarily by advancing $400 million in revenue sharing money. Attention shifted to the 1976 budget.

Up to the last minute in June, Beame practiced the customary brinkmanship in trying to sell the state government on a $12.8 billion budget with a $641.5 million deficit. The earlier $1.68 billion budget gap estimate was lowered by $880 million by a proposed property tax hike.

This year, an unsympathetic state legislature and financial community wouldn't accept that sort of budget. Meanwhile, President Ford rejected a city request for $1 billion in aid, the first rejection of many from Washington.

Beame responded by submitting an alternative "crisis budget" of $11.9 billion involving 51,000 job layoffs and raising fears of service cuts that might be dangerous to civil peace in the city.

On the night of June 10, with the city faced with default on $700 million in debts the next day, Gov. Hugh Carey introduced a new word and agency into the crisis — Big MAC, a nickname for the state-authored Municipal Assistance Corp.

The formation of MAC enabled the city and state to piece together enough cash to stave off default last June, through issuance of MAC bonds backed by sales and security taxes.

Weeks later, Beame agreed reluctantly to a $12.087 billion budget for fiscal 1976, which he said would "in one cruel stroke" end the jobs of 30,000 city workers.

MAC quickly ran into trouble on the bond market in July where despite an "A-plus" rating by Standard & Poor's, the agency's first $1 billion bond offering was sold at a high 9 per cent interest.

A five-month ceasefire between Goldin and Beame ended that month, when Goldin in a confidential report said the city's "hidden deficit" — the result of years of budget juggling and questionable accounting — was $1.8 billion. City and state officials later conceded that the true deficit accumulated over the year was $3.3 billion.

Reaction to the city's 1976 austerity budget was swift from the unions. Sanitation men, faced with 3,000 threatened layoffs, illegally struck the city for three days, and Beame agreed to reinstate them.

He also agreed to hire back 2,000 police and other city workers who had been cut as a result of the budget.

MAC officials and Gov. Carey, meanwhile, worked feverishly to convince banks and the nation's investors that the city would take the steps needed to restore fiscal integrity. Increasingly, that meant MAC and the state took over most of Mayor Beame's power over the budget.

Taxes and fares increased. Subway fares increased from 35 cents to 50 cents on July 31 and the famous nickel-Staten Island ferry ride was raised to 25 cents. Layoffs increased to approximately 36,000.

With many believing the city would default eventually without federal help, President Ford included the city's problems in his speeches in places as far away as Belgrade, Yugoslavia. New Yorkers "don't know how to handle money," he told that nation.

The city was saved from default again Aug. 14 when the city's banks agreed to buy any of the $275 million MAC issue that wasn't sold to private investors.

It fell to the unions to save the city from default several times in September. The unions' pension funds provided $100 million to the city to prevent a default on Sept. 5.

The state also began borrowing heavily on behalf of the city, beginning with $250 million.

The state's deepening involvement became a growing concern on Wall Street, which lowered the state's as well as the city's bond ratings several notches in September and October.

Oct. 17 was the city's narrowest escape from disaster, when hours away from default on $443 million in notes and other obligations, the Teachers Union president, Albert Shanker, agreed to spend $150 million in union retirement funds, triggering a state package that made up the balance.

Shanker, in return for the money, got the city's assurance that his union and others would not be called on to pour pension dollars into a city rescue again.

Southerners 'Satisfied'

By SUSAN AGER
Associated Press Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Most Americans are satisfied with their lives and Southerners are more satisfied in almost every respect than their counterparts in the rest of the country, researchers report.

However, the study showed blacks generally less satisfied with their lot than whites, and almost a quarter of the non-Southern blacks interviewed — 23 per cent — said they'd like to move out of the United States in what the researchers called the "ultimate expression of alienation and resentment."

Eleven per cent of Southern blacks and 8 per cent of whites said they'd like to leave.

In what they say is the first scientific study of how Americans evaluate their lives, the researchers reported Tuesday that on a national basis 63 per cent of white Americans and 51 per cent of blacks are generally "very satisfied with their life as a whole."

"There's a quality of positivity about our general psychology," said Angus Campbell, director of the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research (ISR), which did the study.

On a regional basis, the study said 67 per cent of whites in the South were very satisfied in general, compared with 57 in the East and West and 65 in the central states. Some 57 per cent of Southern blacks said they were very satisfied over-all, compared with 43 per cent of blacks in the rest of the nation.

Measuring the difference between rural and urban residents, the study found 67 per cent of white rural population satisfied with life, compared with 48 per cent of whites living in central cities.

While the South ranked highest in the ISR study, it was at the bottom in a study by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1973 based on external criteria rather than personal polling.

The EPA study was based on data about socioeconomic factors such as jobs, education, housing and income. Campbell said the procedure wasn't as valid as asking people how they feel about their lives.

The ISR study was based on survey data compiled in 1971 and involved some 40 questions asked of 1,881 whites and 223 blacks scientifically selected to represent characteristics of the American populace.

Among the other findings of the study:

—Some 79 per cent of Southern whites said their family life was very satisfying, compared with 60 per cent in the West, 71 per cent in the East and 74 per cent in the central states.

—Southern white housewives were more satisfied with housework than women elsewhere. Some 73 per cent said they were very satisfied with their lots, while only 58 per cent in the West made the claim, 60 per cent in the East and 70 per cent in the Central States.

Among black housewives, 54 per cent in the South said they were satisfied with housework, compared with 63 per cent in other parts of the country.

Advise Tune-Up In Early Fall

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Automobile Association advises that this early fall season is the best time to have your car readied for winter driving. It particularly advises motorists to check so-called permanent antifreeze solutions, which really aren't permanent and should be changed every two years.
