Gov. Of Maryland Faces 24 Counts From Grand Jury

By DAVID GOELTER
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, indicted with five others on federal mail fraud, racketeering and bribery charges, says he will remain in office as he attempts to prove his innocence.

"I will now have the opportunity to prove my innocence in a court of law, which I intend to pursue with every resource I have and to the fullest extent allowed," Mandel said after learning of the charges returned against him Monday by a federal grand jury after a 19-month investigation.

Mandel, a Democrat who succeeded Republican Spiro T. Agnew as governor in 1969, was indicted with five long-time political friends and business associates.

According to the 24-count indictment, Mandel, 55, the first incumbent Maryland governor ever indicted, traded gubernatorial influence and decisions for money and business interests from the day he became governor to the present.

A statement issued by U.S. Attorney Jervis S. Finney said the central charge in the indictment is that Mandel sought favorable legislation for a now-defunct horse race track after the other men named in the indictment secretly purchased the track.

In return, the statement said, Mandel received secret financial interest in other business enterprises controlled by the men.

Indicted with Mandel on 20 counts each of mail fraud and one or more counts of racketeering were three of the governor's closest friends and political fund-raisers: W. Dale Hess, 45, former majority whip of the House of Delegates; businessman Harry W. Rodgers III, 48; Irvin Kovens, 57, a powerful behind-the-scenes man in state politics.

Also named in the mail fraud and racketeering counts were William A. Rodgers, brother of Harry Rodgers, and Ernest N. Cory Jr., a Laurel, Md., attorney.

Thirteen of the mail fraud counts involve the mailing of letters, four involve checks totaling $22,619.50 and three involve the mailing of transcripts of Mandel press conferences.

Mandel and Hess were also accused of falsifying their federal income tax returns. Bribery counts were filed against Mandel, Hess and the Rodgers brothers.

Finney would not comment on the indictment and said he did not know when the defendants would be arraigned. If convicted on all counts, Mandel could be sentenced to up to140 years in prison.

Mandel, a member of the General Assembly since 1952, was elected governor by the legislature in 1969 when Agnew resigned to become vice president. He won election to the office in 1970 and 1974.

Firemen Slowly Contain California Brush Fires

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firemen moved today toward containing fires that have destroyed more than 57,000 acres of rural woodlands, forcing thousands to flee their homes and sending a thick pall of smoke over Los Angeles.

No major injuries have been reported.

More than 20 homes were destroyed, more than 30 others damaged.

The largest blaze, in the Big Tujunga Canyon in Angeles National Forest about 20 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, was reported about 50 per cent surrounded, mostly on the crucial residential front. Officials expressed optimism that the 1,800 fire fighters from throughout the West fighting the fire could surround it by nightfall, when menacing gusts are forecast to resume.

The Tujunga fire had charred 45,500 acres of valuable chaparral watershed, dried to near explosive flammability by six months of hot, nearly rainless weather.

"Everything looks good," said Jim Unterwegner of the U.S. Forest Service. "The wind is staying down, and the acreage is pretty stable. We're hopeful we can get a line around most of it before the wind comes up tonight. So far it has been less than forecast for this morning."

A second major fire was about 25 per cent contained after racing across 12,000 acres in the Mt. Baldy winter recreation area above the San Gabriel Valley suburbs of Claremont and San Dimas, 35 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles. Officials said the fire no longer posed a direct threat to isolated Mt. Baldy Village.

About 150 homes and cabins in the area were evacuated for a time, but as in the Big Tujunga fire area, most residents were returning to their homes as the flames burned away from populated areas and into back country.

The wind-fanned fires, about 20 miles apart on the slopes of the San Gabriel Mountains north of Los Angeles, destroyed more than 20 homes, damaged at least 30 others, and forced nearly 6,000 residents to flee the approaching flames.

At least 70 fire fighters suffered smoke inhalation or minor burns, but no civilians were reported injured.

A pall of choking brown smoke still hung low over the city, prompting continuation of a health advisory for persons with respiratory ailments to stay out of the soot-laden air.

Smoke from the blazes — swirled by strong northerly winds — rose to 10,000 feet, spread 200 miles out to sea and was clearly visible on weather satellite photos. Falling ashes spread more than 55 miles down the coastline.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency in the area, and Sen. John Tunney sent a telegram to President Ford asking him to declare it a federal disaster area, which allows federal recovery assistance.

A third smaller blaze — less than 100 acres — broke out overnight in the San Bernardino Mountains 60 miles east of Los Angeles and for a time threatened fringes of the San Bernardino suburb of Devore.

However the 280 men rushed to the scene were reported making progress in surrounding the fire and no structures were damaged.

Residents armed with water hoses guarded their homes as the Angeles Forest fire invaded. Police urged evacuation as the flames drew nearer, but George Mason stood on the roof of his Glendale home and waved his garden hose defiantly for three hours, sprinkling his house, his backyard and himself.

Mason, 61, watched as two houses on each side of his own burst into flames from the rain of hot sparks and crumbled into ashes.

DRY CALIFORNIA BRUSH GOES UP — Flames race through the dry brush in the hills north of Los Angeles as a huge fire continues out of control, destroying more than 50 homes. More than 1,000 men are fighting the blaze, fanned by winds and aided by warm weather. It was one of several brush fires in southern California. (AP Wirephoto)

Leftist Troops Seize Air Bases In Area Of Lisbon

By STEPHENS BROENING
Associated Press Writer

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Leftist troops seized four air force bases around Lisbon early today in what appeared to be a concerted rebellion against moderate civil and military leaders.

There were also unconfirmed reports that militant leftists of a light artillery regiment stationed at Beirolas, in the Lisbon area, had begun handing out arms to civilian leftists.

A communique from the general staff of the armed forces said dissident paratroopers first took over an air base at Tancos near their own base, 35 miles up the Tagus River from Lisbon.

An air force officer said leftist troops then occupied the Monte Real air base 60 miles north of the capital, the Montijo base just across the Tagus River from Lisbon and the Monsanto base in Lisbon, which is the air force's regional headquarters and communication center.

The government radio said there had been no fighting at any of the bases.

The general staff communique said the seizures of the bases were carried out by "victims of criminal manipulation."

It said units defending the bases had been ordered not to fire on the attackers in order to avoid "a grave situation."

"The situation is not yet perfectly clear," the statement added.

It said the rebels had acted "under the pretext of a struggle against" the commander of the air force, Gen. Jose Morais e Silva, "who could not be manipulated politically."

The communique was sent urgently to the state radio chain with an order that it should be broadcast immediately "to inform the Portuguese people of the situation."

The assaults were reportedly carried out just before dawn by former members of a recently disbanded paratroop regiment and leftist elements in the air force. The air force has often been described by Communists and other left-wing groups as "reactionary."

Informed sources said the paratroopers, who have been openly defiant of their officers, leaders of the armed forces and the government, moved into the bases in helicopters and in trucks.

INJUNCTION

Some time ago I sent $10 to BudgetMaster Cards for the issue of a credit card. The company is in Seabrook, N.H. I have written to them asking for either the card or a refund, but they have not even had the guts to reply. This was paid for by a Bank of Winterville Cashier's check, May 10, 1974. R.G.

Hotline wrote twice on your behalf. We attempted to call, but could find no listing. Then in October, we wrote to the Consumer Protection Division of the New Hampshire requesting any information it might have about the company. The reply was "Please be advised that in November, 1974, a permanent injunction was obtained against the further operations of this company in the State of New Hampshire. It is our understanding that the principals of this company are presently in the Hollywood, Fla. area."

We asked telephone information for BudgetMaster in Hollywood but there was no listing there. We hate to give up, but know of no other avenue to use in recovering your $10.

HOTLINE APPEAL

WRONG NUMBER

I have advertised for several weeks for the return of a antique gold sunburst pin which I lost at the Greenville Post Office. Last Monday night I received a call from a person who gave me his name and phone number. It was fairly late at night, so I told him I'd call him the next day. I apparently took the number down wrong, as it was out of service when I called. I wonder if Hotline could appeal for this person to contact me again. I'm offering a reward for the return of my pin. Mrs. L.S.

Would the person who has Mrs. S's pin, please either call her again or call Hotline, 752-6166.

Syrians Attach Strings

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations today said Syria wants "substantial progress" in Middle East negotiations before it will agree to extend the mandate of the U.N. peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights.

The mandate of the 1,250-man force manning the buffer zone between the Syrian and Israeli armies expires Sunday unless Syria agrees to extend it. Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon announced today that Israel approves a six-month extension "without strings attached, whether political or military."

Despite the absence of any sign of progress toward further peace negotiations, Waldheim said he hoped to find "means and ways to bridge the differences" between Syria and Israel so that the peace force could continue in operation.

The secretary-general has been conferring since Saturday in Damascus and Jerusalem. He flew to Cairo today and then was going to Beirut and back to Damascus.

He said the Syrians "want an over-all settlement, including all aspects of the Middle East question ... including the Palestinian question."

"They are not satisfied with the situation in which they continue to have peacekeeping forces on the Golan Heights and no progress in the negotiating field," Waldheim told an airport news conference.

Allon said an over-all settlement "is exactly what we would like to achieve, ... an over-all settlement which would leave no problem unsolved, including the problem of Palestinian self-expression."

But he said Syria in the past refused to negotiate with Israel, and "I don't know how we really can achieve an over-all settlement without negotiations."

Patrolmen Take Defense Steps

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Some North Carolina highway patrolmen are putting hollow-point bullets, deadlier than standard issue, into their pistols.

Others are installing citizens band radios in their patrol cars or arming themselves with concealed pistols.

All these actions violate patrol regulations. But patrolmen say that because of increasing violence against troopers, they are doing them even at the risk of being disciplined or losing their jobs.

Within the last three monthss, two troopers have been slain and another wounded.

And troopers say many other assaults and shootings never come to public attention because they are not reported by patrolmen or the news media.

Almost-Start On Executions

RALEIGH (AP)—All legal requirements necessary for the execution of three men came close to being met last week.

"Things got down to the wire," Asst. Atty. Gen. Jacob L. Safron, said Monday.

Petitions for stays of execution filed by defense attorneys did not reach the Supreme Court until Wednesday and Thursday, almost starting machinery for execution.

The executions had been scheduled for Friday morning in expectation of routine stays, but Central Prison officials didn't get word of the stays until Thursday afternoon.

Warden Samuel P. Garrison, said if the stay orders had not arrived when they did, "We would have prepared for execution."

The three men involved, all convicted of murder, were identified as Joe Lee Cobb of Blackburg, S.C., sentenced from Mecklenburg County; Robert L. Griffin, sentenced from Jones County; and Cardell Spaulding of Fairmont, sentenced from Halifax County.

North Carolina has not conducted an execution since 1961 and the U.S. Supreme Court is considering a case from this state that could decide the future of the death penalty.

Gov. Jim Holshouser, who could have spared the three men at any time with a commutation was unaware of the situation. Sam Long, his legal counsel, said "Obviously, there was a screw up somewhere."

Two Arrested As Marijuana Seized

BRICKS OF GRASS . . . These 18 bricks of marijuana — the one on top cut in half — were found by Highway Patrolman K. E. Sutton yesterday in a car he stopped because of a loud muffler on Tenth Street. The driver and a passenger in the vehicle were arrested by Sutton, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Greenville police officers with felony possession of marijuana. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

State Highway Patrolman, along with agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Greenville Police officers arrested two men here yesterday on charges of possession of marijuana.

Investigators said Trooper K. E. Sutton stopped a car driven by Robert Wesley Britton, 22, of 60 River Bluff Apts. on Tenth Street near the Forest Hill Drive intersection because of a loud muffler, about 4:30 p.m.

A search of the car revealed 18 "bricks" of marijuana. The SBI and Greenville police were then notified.

Officers said the 40 pounds of "grass" had a wholesale value of about $3,500, while street value of the marijuana was estimated at about $10,000.

Both Britton and a passenger in the car, John Arthur Ramirez Jr., 20, of 1300 South Charles St. were charged with felony possession of marijuana and placed under $25,000 bond each.

Trooper Sutton also charged Britton with having no operators license and with having an improper muffler.

Outside Group To Review Patrol Communications

CHARLOTTE (AP) - Faulty communications within the North Carolina Highway Patrol --which reportedly may have contibuted to the shooting of a trooper --will be investigated by the International Organization of Police Chiefs.

N.C. transportation secretary Jacob Alexander, the patrols' civilian chief, said an investigation into the Oct. 17 shooting of trooper Harry Stegall revealed that something is wrong with the organization's communication system.

And Alexander said he's asked the outside police group to help suggest remedies to the problem.

Stegall, recovering from the shooting at his father's home in Charlotte, said he should have been made aware that a red Volkswagen stationwagon bearing Georgia plates was the object of a highway patrol search.

The driver of the car, Gregory Jones, 26, or Decautur, Ga., allegedly is the gunman who pumped five shots into Stegall's head and chest and left him for dead on a road near Laurinburg.

At the time Jones was wanted for murder and two other shootings in Wilmington the night before, and the patrol's communications station had broadcast an alert for him.

But that alert went only to troopers in three adjoining counties, and was not relayed to the area where Stegall was working by the communications station at Elizabethtown.

"It was on TV and AM (commercial) radio. Everybody knew about him but me," Stegall said.

Broadcast reports said a fugitive was believed to have been riding a black morotcycle or driving a red sports car or red Opel or Volkswagen stationwagon with Georgia plates.

But when Stegall stopped a red Volkswagen stationwagon for speeding on U.S. 74 near Laurinburg he had no idea that the car was the object of a search.

The chief of the Elizabethtown communications station, Jack Thompson, said under present patrol proceedures, the alert from Wilmington would not be relayed unless there was a direct order to do so.

The patrol's internal investigation into the shooting reached the conclusion that there wasn't any negligence involved, but Alexander said it did reveal something amiss with patrol communications.

Preparing New 13-Cent Stamps

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional and legal efforts to halt a planned increase in postal rates, the Postal Service is busy printing new 13 cent stamps that will be needed on first class mail beginning next month.

"The 13 cent rate will go into effect Dec. 28 unless there is some law to the contrary in the meantime," said Postmaster Gen. Benjamin F. Bailar.

The House has approved a bill that would hold the rate increase to 12 cents, but there appears to be little chance that that measure will be used to halt the scheduled price hike.

Mailing a first class letter now costs 10 cents.

"Some people seem to think that because of a bill the House passed, the increase will only go to 12 cents. But that bill hasn't become law and we plan to put the 13-cent rate into effect Dec. 28," Bailar said in an interview Monday.

An aide to the Senate Post Office Committee said hearings are not scheduled yet on the House-passed bill. This makes it unlikely the Senate will act on the House bill in time to prevent the full increase to 13 cents on Dec. 28, the aide said.

"It looks like it will be next year before we hold hearings," he said.

Bailar said the Postal Service, which is losing nearly $7 million per day under present rates, needs the new revenue that the increase would bring in. The House bill "from a financial standpoint would just make a bad situation worse," the postmaster general said.

Bailar has announced a series of economy measures that he said would save money without affecting service. In addition, the Postal Service has said it is considering cutbacks in service, including elimination of Saturday mail delivery.

Youth Under $2,000 Bond

An 18-year-old Greenville youth was placed under a $2,000 bond last night after officers charged him with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a 9:40 p.m. break-in at the Goodyear Store at 729 Dickinson Ave.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers took James Harris of 711 Vanderbilt St. into custody after a chase that ended behind the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. on Pitt Street, a short distance from the Goodyear Store.

Officers, according to Cannon, saw Harris near the front of the store carrying a television set. When Harris saw the police car, he dropped the set and ran, the chief said.

Cannon noted that a second man, seen by police inside the store holding another television dropped the set and ran also. He was not apprehended.

Investigation of the incident is continuing.

No Fresh Approaches For Crime War From State, Local Officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most state and local officials are losers when it comes to good new ideas for fighting crime, says a former federal official who has dealt with them for two years.

"The original notion was that we would be flooded with all these great ideas. And lo and behold, they didn't come at all!" said Charles R. Work, who resigned last week after two years as deputy chief of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

"Local law enforcement officials just won't look around for the good idea, in part because they are as backward as they are, and in part because they are as poorly educated as they are," he said in an interview.

When Congress created the LEAA in 1968, the theory was that the federal government would put up the money to allow state and local governments to test new approaches particularly suited to their needs.

President Richard M. Nixon embraced the theory and soon began touting the LEAA as the prototype of a government-wide effort to let state and local officials decide for themselves how to spend the millions from Washington. He called it revenue-sharing.

President Ford now has taken up the argument that federal bureaucrats isolated in Washington should not make policy for local governments.

But Work said the LEAA is being forced to take a greater policy-making role because of "the paucity of innovative ideas" suggested by state criminal justice agencies in the annual plans they must submit to receive the federal grants.

In the first few years, he continued, the state agencies fell into the trap of keeping up with the Joneses. If Sheriff Shootemup got a new shotgun with LEAA money, then Chief Deadeye had to have one, too.

Work said it was easier for state and local officials to ask for money for hardware, rather than think up real innovations. Besides, he added, Congress perhaps unwittingly encouraged a heavy emphasis on hardware.

The law allows LEAA to finance an experimental program only temporarily, usually for three years. If state and local officials wish to continue it, they must find the money themselves.

This factor is crucial at a time when many cities are plunging into financial troubles, Work said. Buying police hardware is a one-time expense, unlike the innovations that will require local tax money when the federal largesse ends.

Students To Need Lodging

Fifteen Costa Rican students who are planning to spend the Winter Quarter at East Carolina University, will need places to live when they arrive Nov. 30.

According to Dr. Robert Cramer of the ECU Geography Department, the students will be seeking residency in private homes in the Greenville area.

He said that most of the students (12 girls and 3 boys) are seniors at the Universidad Nacional in Heredia, Costa Rica. They speak some English and they are particularly interested in residing off-campus so that they can learn about American culture.

Dr. Cramer asked that persons interested in providing a room for a Costa Rican student during the three month period, to please contact him at the ECU Geography Department.

Study Possible Effect On Ocean Movements

Studies are being conducted at East Carolina University and abroad in an effort to learn whether it is possible to measure mathematically—and therefore predict—effects of solar heating and cooling on the motion of ocean surfaces.

Of particular interest and possible practical application are methods of measuring effects of cyclonic storms believed to cause violent tidal flows and devastating floods in many rivers, sounds and bays of the world.

A cyclone is any large weather system characterized by rotating flow of air and oscillating barometric pressure and temperature.

A portion of the research conducted thus far was reported and discussed by Dr. Lokenath Debnath of the East Carolina University Department of Mathematics last weekend at a meeting of the American Mathematical Society at Blacksburg, Va.

Dr. Debnath's research described the problem as concerned with the unsteady flow near a flat plate with harmonically oscillating temperature in a rotating system. Both plate and semi-infinite expanse of fluid bounded by the plate are in a state of solid body rotation with constant angular velocity about the axes normal to the plate. Motion is caused by the action of oscillatory buoyant body forces on the fluid near the plate due to temperature oscillation of the plate with a determinable frequency.

The problem is solved, Dr. Debnath reported, as an initial value problem to investigate the structure of the unsteady temperature and velocity field together with associated multiple boundary layers.

It is shown, Dr. Debnath said, that the ultimate steady state solution is attained in a determinable mathematical limit consisting of eight boundary layers—six of which are of the same order of magnitude.

The work which has applications to the dynamics of oceans, specifically how the motion of oceans occur due to solar heating and cooling, involved construction of a model to simulate motion of ocean surface due to fluctuation of temperature.

Research was conducted by Dr. Debnath in association with Dr. A. J. Chatterjee, Hydraulic Study Department, Calcutta, India, Port Commissioners, and S. C. Ray, River Research Institute of West Bengal, Inaia. Dr. Debnath's mathematical research was conducted uner a National Science Foundation grant.

The two other research associates are working together on projects involving nonlinear mathematical models of tidal rivers including the effects of cyclonic storms to gain understanding of violent tidal flows and floods.

Mexican Crafters Try Best Of Old For New

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Mexican hand crafts are combining modern ideas and old-world know-how for a new look.

At a recent exhibition the idea was evident in everything from tinware to rugs.

"In combining new techniques and traditional materials with sophisticated designs, we are achieving more of a boutique look," explained Irma Rosado. She and Sophia Cozar were representing the Cottage Industries of Mexico at a show being held at the new Manhattan Art and Antiques Center in New York. They are planning a permanent exhibit.

The Mexican workers are guided so that their talents can be put to work making more marketable things, the senoras explained. In the past the workmanship was good but often the materials, colors or designs chosen by the rural handicrafters were not popular. In some instances the objects were crudely executed.

For example, a 24-year-old architectural student, Sergio Bustamante, has taken the tinny pie-plate look out of the tinware. New treatment and appearance that resemble wrought silver put it in a luxury category even though it is inexpensive. There are wastebaskets, tables, silver frames and mirrors bordered with owls, peacocks and pheasants with delicately detailed feathers. A headboard had hundreds of birds and animals individually carved into the piece. A great lamp was a tinware version of a Tiffany lamp design.

"In seven years he has developed his own technique," explained Miss Rosado. "He is more widely known in other countries, France, for example, than he is in Mexico or the United States."

Applying new techniques to traditional materials applies particularly to rugs, wall hangings and other articles made on the rustic looms. Newer ones include an adaptation of a Vasarely op art design. An area rug of pastel fish was tastefully done.

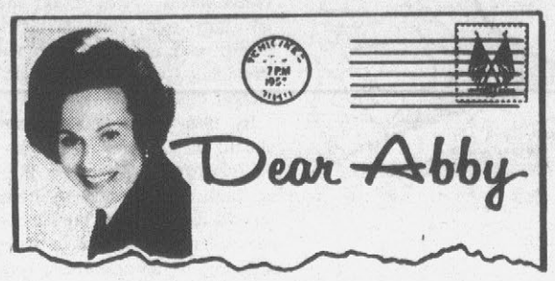
In the exhibit there were equipales, the traditional Mexican chairs, macrame holders for hanging plants, ceramics, black jewelry, hand-woven tablecloths, dresses, sweaters. Miss Rosado modeled one of the long bulky knit wool sweaters, the kind that are fashionable this season.

Delightful papier-mache pieces were done by several craftsmen. Some pieces by Abelardo Ruiz, 34, were ambitious projects such as a five-foot lady in beiges and browns wearing a pleated cape and a bowl on her head which was filled with flowers. There were cats, candelabras and wastebaskets. The show included the well-known black pottery from Oaxaca, parquet-topped tables, ceramics, yarn painting and embroidery.

Stretching from the border states to the Yucatan Peninsula, the cottage industries are part of a land reform program being developed economically by the Ejido Development Fund, a government agency. It is "attempting to model rural communities — ejidos — after the traditional pre-Colombian Indian villages, entrusting family heads with a share of the available land." Previously the ejidos were agrarian with families developing crafts for their own needs, and bartering with other communities for different crafts.

Arts and crafts are just one part of the movement, which includes products from forestry, mining, tourism and food.

PAPIER-MACHE decorative piece, five feet two inches tall, was created by Sergio Bustamante and crafted in Mexico City in gold, rust, brown and white. It is shown here holding an arrangement of dried flowers.



Learn To Tune Out Your Butt-In Mother-In -Law

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more mother-in-law letter? I hope so, because that's my problem. My mother-in-law lives quite close to me and is always popping in, which I don't mind because she never stays long. But when she gets home, she phones me, and here is a partial list of her comments and questions:

"Are you sure Albert (he's my husband) is feeling all right? He looks constipated to me."

"I think you are keeping your house too warm. The kids get overheated and might catch cold when they go outside.

"I noticed that your plants are dry. Aren't you watering them regularly?

"I saw nationally advertised brand canned goods in your cupboard. Why don't you buy the off-brand products? They are just as good and much cheaper.

"Don't you think you should tell Johnny (my son) to turn down his stereo? I read that today's teenagers will be wearing hearing aids by the time they are 40 because they play their records so loud they're going deaf.

"Why do you let June (my 17-year-old daughter) wear so much makeup? She looks like a cheapie."

I've asked my husband to please tell his mother to quit trying to live my life. He says he's tried, but it's hopeless. Have YOU any suggestions? She has already given me ulcers.

ULCERS IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR ULCERS: Learn to tune her out when she's reciting her list of comments, complaints and questions. Throw in an occasional "Yes, Mother," and when she's finished, say, "Thank you. Now I've got to run." Then forget it. And remember, it's not what you eat that gives you ulcers—it's what's eating YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I am a lonely, retired widow, and I am dating a man of the same status.

On several occasions he has lost control of his temper and has broken a few things. Also, when he drinks too much, he becomes very loud and insulting. Then, too, he has purposely tried to make me jealous by being overly attentive to other women.

I love this man, but would I be taking a chance on marrying him?

NEEDS COMPANIONSHIP

DEAR NEEDS: Yes. A big chance. Only you can decide whether his "companionship" would compensate for his faults. Me? I'd rather be sans-companion.

DEAR ABBY: Because I am a faithful reader of your column, three members of my family have become card-carrying kidney donors.

We would now like to know to whom we should write for information about how to donate our eyes after death.

COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR COLUMBUS: Your local Lions Club can help you. So can any eye doctor. And three cheers for all three of you!

DEAR ABBY: Anyone want a wife? I'm 24-years-old, and I can't find a guy. I haven't had one date since high school.

Let me state my qualifications: I can cook and bake really well. I can sew and make all my own clothes, and I'm told I'm the best-dressed girl at the office. I have nice skin and teeth, and I keep my hair in the most flattering style for me.

I own my own car, color TV, stereo and have money in the bank.

I love all kinds of sports and outdoor activities like camping, fishing and hiking. I am well-liked by everyone at work and have many close friends.

Know why I don't get dates? I was told (by one of the guys I work with) it's because I'm overweight! Now before you start condemning me, let me say I am not grossly obese. I have lost some weight, but my doctor says I can't lose any more because I am a large-boned girl. I am well-proportioned and can play tennis better than my thin friends.

Why do guys want thin girls? I am ready to give up.

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: I don't mean to be unkind, but plenty of overweight girls are dating up a storm. A young woman who has an attractive, outgoing personality and gets involved in activities (church, political or volunteer) is bound to meet a fellow who will want to see her again.

Instead of wondering what's wrong with YOU, forget about yourself and concentrate on doing something for someone else. It will add a charming dimension to your personality and enhance your chances.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Team Red Cabbage With Apples For Sweet-And-Sour Dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The fresh red cabbage and the fresh apple, both highly nutritious and comparatively inexpensive, make a savory team. Now is the time to let them bring out the best in each other. An excellent way to do this is in a sweet-and-sour rangetop dish that we find tastes wonderfully savory with meats and poultry — from everyday frankfurters to elegant roast duck.

APPLE RED CABBAGE

2½-pound head red cabbage
2 medium onions
2 to 3 medium apples
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup sugar
1-3rd cup red wine vinegar
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ cup raisins

Discard any frayed or extremely dark tough outer leaves of cabbage; rinse. Cut in half lengthwise. Shred into thin strands, discarding core. There should be 2 quarts (generous) firmly packed down.

Peel and chop onion fine — there should be about 1½ cups. Pare, quarter and core apples; dice medium-fine — there should be about 2 cups.

In a large saucepot melt the butter; add onion and cook gently, stirring often, until yellowed and wilted — 5 to 10 minutes. Add sugar and stir until it begins to caramelize. Add cabbage, apple, vinegar, salt, pepper and ginger. Simmer, covered and stirring occasionally, for 15 to 20 minutes — there should be plenty of juice from both the cabbage and apple, but if mixture seems dry, add a little water. Stir in the raisins; continue cooking uncovered until cabbage is tender-crisp, apples are cooked through and the juices are reduced — about 10 minutes more. (You can cook this dish ahead and reheat it.) Makes 6 healthy servings.

Teachers Can Get Serious About Stories

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Some teachers here are turning to those famous old tales about beautiful princesses, good fairies and wicked witches so kids in their class don't lose the ability to pretend.

Sister Francis Helen, a first grade teacher at St. Martin of Tours Elementary School here, said, "I've only met one child in four years who has been fairy tale oriented. That little girl wanted to be a princess. In fact, she still does."

She says there is some indication television is not presenting kids enough make-believe to preserve the ability in children.

Peter Charlier, principal of the Sabold Elementary School in suburban Springfield, says there's "very definitely a television orientation" for most children but "it's not all that bad."

"Their association with fairy tales is the Walt Disney variety. If we're talking about fairy tales from the big old book, they don't know them," he adds.

That's not true in the Sheppard Elementary, however, where principal Joan Hueges offers a read-aloud program "and our third graders gobble up the fairy tales — things like 'The Three Bears.'"

"It is something that has to be developed and taught, an appreciation for things like Rapunzel and 'The Three Pigs.'"

Dr. Jacqueline Shacter, a Temple University professor specializing in children's literature, says there is a split over the value of fairy tales.

"You can't take dreams and hopes away from people," Miss Shacter says. "But some teachers object to the bad name the word 'stepmother' has because of the influence of Cinderella."

And she says people take fairy tales too literally:

"I'm sick up to the gills sometimes that they are so concerned with royalty, and I get sick and tired of kings and queens and princesses. I'd like to see a Cinderella-type story where the poor good girl marries the farmer."

Household Hints

If you bake cookies for Christmas tree ornaments and plan to eat them later, wrap each cookie securely in transparent plastic and tie with colored yarn that can be used as a loop for hanging.

Before you spend money on new holiday decorations, look around the house for do-it-yourself ideas. Upside down wine glasses in varying sizes and shapes make pretty candlesticks for table settings. Secure candles to the bases with florists' clay and hide the clay with bits of real or plastic greenery.

Insulating exposed basement walls can save up to five and a half percent heat loss.

At Wit's End

Mayva and I had an attack of guts last week and decided to go into one of those posh boutiques that have one-of-a-kind designer clothes.

"I hate these places," grumbled Mayva. "They hover around like they think I'm trying to smuggle a pregnant moth in their fur storage."

"Stop being so insecure," I said. "They don't know if we're spenders or lookers."

"When they see the label in my coat they'll know."

"What does it say?"

"HAND WASH ONLY AT LOURDES."

"Look bored. Here comes a salesperson."

"What do we do if she wants to help us?"

"Buy a scarf. That's probably all we can afford."

"May I help you?" she smiled.

"Yes," I said. "I was looking for something to complement my pantsuit."

"How about one of our fun furs?"

"I just want to complement it . . . not tickle it to death. Maybe a scarf."

She whipped out a square of blue silk. "This one is exquisite," she smiled stiffly.

"It's beautiful!" said Mayva. "Buy it! What's the matter?"

"I don't know whether to buy it or make a house payment."

"How much is it?"

"EIGHTY-FIVE DOLLARS."

"Your're kidding."

"I could wear it around my head like Rhoda. Whatya think?" I asked, dragging it low on my forehead and knotting it on the side.

"With a drum and little blood you could be the spirit of '76."

"I could frame it and hang it over the sofa."

"It would make your entire house look shabby."

"I could run it up our flagpole and fly it on holidays."

"You don't happen to have a scarf by Fruit of the Loom, do you?" asked Mayva.

Is he Italian?" asked the salesperson.

"Don't be tacky," said Mayva as we swung open the door.

The Story Invites Incredulity

There are some points in the retirement story of that Philadelphia "granny cop" that invite incredulity.

Officer James McGrath says he averaged three or four arrests a week during the nine years he worked in disguise as a little old lady, and was mugged "about 50 times."

Incredulous item No. 1: if Officer McGrath encountered that many people subject to arrest in his guise as a woman, the number of victims in Philadelphia must total a terrifyingly high number . . .who'd risk living in those surroundings?

Incredulous item No. 2: Officer McGrath said he had a "100 per cent conviction rate." Where were the suspects' lawyers? Was there no one to plead misrepresentation? Entrapment? Insanity? Restraint of trade? Blame the social system?

And we'd bet there wasn't one protest march involving those cases in the nine years Officer McGrath was making those arrests.

Incredible!

County Welcomes New Industry

Pitt County formally welcomed another new industry, with the dedication of the Sonoco plant in Winterville Monday.

The plant will make composite cans for Pringle's Potato Chips which are manufactured at the Procter and Gamble plant in Greenville.

The Sonoco plant has a capability of 200 million composite cans annually, and the 45,800 square foot facility is already in production.

We would like to welcome Sonoco Products to Winterville. It is an outstanding addition to Pitt County's industrial base.

Education Merger Raised

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — While the idea of merging North Carolina's public schools and the community 'college-technical institution systems into one comprehensive unit is not politically popular, it is an idea whose time is near, a number of experts believe.

Vigorously argued against by the community college bureaucracy and by State Board of Education Chairman Dallas Herring, the merger is viewed by some as a realistic way to end the bickering and competition between the two units.

The result of such a merger would be a public school system providing education from kindergarten through grade 14. The final two years could be either at the junior college level for college transfer, or in occupational courses leading directly to work.

Competing Units

Presently, the public schools provide occupational courses in senior high schools. The community colleges and technical institutes provide similar occupational courses. The result, often is competition between high school principals and community college people for the students.

Further, many high school teachers resent their counterparts in the trade schools being paid more, and getting their jobs without the same state certification requirements the public school teachers must meet.

The students, ultimately, are the ones who suffer from the setup: a child may not want what his high school offers, but can't go to the technical school because of the rules; both courses and training facilities are duplicated when one such arrangement could serve all the students; to enroll in a technical institute the child must literally drop out of public school; a student may not cross over—taking part of his training in the public school, part at the community college; those trades teachers who can't qualify to teach in public schools may, after all, be the most qualified and helpful teachers a student could find.

In 1971, the State Board of Education adopted a policy urging cooperation, innovation, and coordination between the two systems which that single board oversees.

A recent study by staff members of the Legislative Fiscal Research Division concluded that response by the bureaucracy to that direction "is not a matter of high priority. Its implementation is minimal. . .in many instances."

The State Board of Education provides policy direction to the dual education system; the public schools are headed by an elected superintendent; and the community colleges by an appointed superintendent.

Wasteful System

That arrangement, researchers found "does not insure economy, effectiveness or cooperation . . . it leads to wasteful competition and duplication.

That same study by legislative staff dismissed as largely ignored the state board's idea of "articulation" between the competing school systems—articulation is supposed to be regular work together to help students get the best possible education by using facilities, personnel, programs to fullest advantage.

In sum, the present system "fails to coordinate planning and operation of programs on either the state or local levels," the researchers concluded.

A study commission of the General Assembly is currently studying the community college structure with an eye to change in the future. Public school people are pressing for a separate policy board to split community colleges away from the present State Board of Education, for a variety of reasons including the belief that the board's leadership favors the community colleges at times.

Critics of that suggestion say such an arrangement would mean even more competition between the two systems, and are urging that things be kept pretty much as they are.

Little importance is attached to another alternative under consideration—that a single state board undertake direction of all education including colleges and universities.

Better Living Ahead

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Real income of the average American family should increase between $1,400 and $2,000 by 1980, leading to a significantly higher standard of living, says a Brookings Institution economist.

Real income means the money left after adjustment for inflation and measures the true buying-power of income.

The economist, Charles L. Schultze, said Monday his calculations assume a continuation of the historical rate of increase in the U.S. standard of living of 2 to 3 per cent a year since World War II.

"There is no reason to believe that over the next seven years that it will be in any major way off" the historical trend, said Schultze, who was President Lyndon B. Johnson's budget director.

By 1980, he said, Americans should be enjoying a standard of living 16 to 17 per cent higher than in 1973. Since living standards declined during the recession, that means a sharp speed-up in the next four years, he added in an interview.

Schultze said that even a pessimistic outlook for the economy should allow for an increase of $1,400 in real family income. Median family income was about $12,051 in 1973, meaning there were as many families making less than that figure as there were making more.

There is no way to predict how Americans will spend their additional money in 1980, Schultze said, but he added, "you can be sure it won't be

Take Reagan Seriously

The most underestimated man in American politics last Thursday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination. Don't snicker. Ronald Reagan has a 50-50 chance of picking up the flag at Kansas City next summer; and depending on the mood of the country, he could go all the way in November.

By all the usual rules of the game, Gerald Ford should be a shoo-in. As President, he has the great advantages of incumbency: He can dominate page one; he can preempt the TV networks; he carries the power and the glory of his office wherever he goes. By all the usual rules, it would be unthinkable for a political party to deny nomination to its own sitting president.

But Ford's position, obviously, is unique in our political history. No one can say for sure whether the usual rules apply. He cannot be precisely compared to Truman in 1948 or to Johnson in 1964. As a sitting president, he has great assets; but he has heavy liabilities also. Reagan could take him.

I venture that observation chiefly from a lifetime of watching the game from the grandstand. The typical American voter is a natural-born aginner. People do vote "for" particular individuals or propositions; of course they do. Eisenhower comes instantly to mind as a president who won, not because the voters were so much against Stevenson, but rather because they liked Ike.

Yet the general observation holds. The last time around, Nixon got 47 million votes, McGovern 29 million, but two-thirds of the Nixon votes was probably anti-McGovern, and two-thirds of McGovern's vote was probably anti-Nixon. These things are not rational. Three weeks ago the people voted against 95 percent of the bond issues put to referendum; many of these surely were good propositions, but the people were simply against everything put to them.

Reagan will suffer from an "anti" vote, but unless I miss my guess, Ford will suffer more. In a two-way race, people will vote against Reagan, which is to say for Ford, because they dislike Reagan's ideas, or think him too reactionary, or don't trust actors, or don't like his looks. But contrariwise, many will vote gaainst Ford, which is to say for Reagan, for all kinds of reasons.

Some of the antipathy to Ford can be identified in more or less rational terms: Rockefeller, amnesty, the Nixon pardon, Ford's too-frantic campaigning, his bumbling shift of Cabinet members. Much of the hostility has no rational base. Gerald Ford, the individual, is no more responsible for inflation, recession, and high unemployment than he is responsible for the tides of Passamaquoddy, but as President he is the living, visible symbol of all the ills we happen to be heir to. He personifies Washington, and Washington — look at the opinion polls — ranks low in the public esteem.

Reagan, to repeat, has liabilities. He is 64. He has no federal experience. He is a stranger to foreign affairs.

Other Editors Say
The Best Testimony

(Washington, N. C. Daily News)

When the Pitt County jury convicted Dr. Andrew Best on two counts of illegally dispensing drugs, we honestly could not believe what we were reading.

To convict him on two counts and free him on four other counts is most inconsistent, to our way of thinking. The six counts were too closely allied to separate them one from the other. The six charges could have been thrown in a bag and two pulled out and labelled "guilty" and the other four left in the bag and labelled "not guilty." The charges appeared that closely akin. If he is guilty of one count, we would say he is guilty of six counts.

We are deeply concerned in many respects about this case. First of all, if everything we read in the newspapers and everything we heard on television could be called truth, then the very most Dr. Best could be guilty of is poor judgment.

When the District Attorney, Eli Bloom, stood up before the jury and told the12 peers "Dr Best is not a criminal," then were they not empty words? The jury turned around and made him a criminal. And that jury found him guilty of two felonies.

We do not say that Dr. Best was found guilty of the two counts because his skin is black. We want to make that clear. But in full truth we cannot in our own mind rationalize this case and we cannot say what was in the minds of the jurors.

When we read and hear that on a typical day Dr. Best served from "60 to80 patients," the wonder to us is that he did as well as apparently he did in prescribing drugs and treatment. The man absolutely was being worked to death. Any doctor trying to serve that many patients in a given day is under a terrific load and a terrific strain. When we consider that at any given time he must have several patients in the hospital, how could he do it?

It is not merely Dr. Best who is being punished. Surely, if his conviction is upheld, he will lose his license to practice medicine. But those "60 to 80 patients per day" are being tragically punished too. Where will they turn for medical treatment? We search our minds for adequate answers, but there are too many questions we find hidden in the dark clouds.

If news reporters, newspaper or television, did such a poor job here in this case as not to give all the evidence or to water it down or to miss pertinent presentations by the state, then the public ought to be told all the truth as soon as possible.

If we read all the evidence and put it all in the worst light for Dr. Best, we see only a case of poor judgment and not of criminal action. And even in the matter of poor judgment, that even might be doing him a grave injustice.

So we are concerned in this case that injustice might have been done.

The tobacco control sign-up in Pitt County is less than one half of one per cent from being complete, E. F. Arnold, Pitt County farm agent announced today.

Six of the 13 townships have signed up 100 per cent, he said, and growers in others where the sign-up is nearly complete have indicated in a number of cases they would sign up in the near future.

The individual contract sign-up for the potato control act will begin in Pitt County some time between now and December 15, E. F. Arnold said.

The county agent said that the application forms were being printed in Washington and would be sent here within the next 15 days. He added that the sign-ups would be started as soon as the forms are received.

INSIDE REPORT

New York, GOP Tarbaby

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The reality that New York City's crisis can only heap more political trouble on a beleaguered President Ford arrived at the White House last Tuesday afternoon when New York Republican leaders angrily pleaded with him not to bestow a political bonanza on Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey.

The message from Albany was given the President in typically blunt and cogent manner by Rep. Barber Conable, an upstate New Yorker who is chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee. By endorsing New York aid legislation in Congress, Conable said, Mr. Ford would play into Carey's hands by embracing his proposed tax increases.

Conable's warning, reflecting political cross-currents of the city's crisis, was a major factor — if not the decisive factor — in the President's statement the next day which effectively postponed action until Congress reconvenes Dec. 1 following the Thanksgiving recess. But the delay also postpones Mr. Ford's coming to grips with this political puzzle: how to retreat gracefully from his hard-boiled rhetoric on New York.

Indeed, New York City is a political tarbaby staining Republicans who once saw political advantage in it. It has produced the first widespread grumbling about Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona since he replaced Mr. Ford as House miniority leader. Not since the Nixon impeachment crisis has there been so much backbiting in the House Republican cloakroom. Worst of all, Mr. Ford again is seen zig-zagging on a nationally spotlighted issue.

In contrast, New York's misery was viewed as the President's opportunity Oct. 29 when he delivered his National Press Club thunderbolt against pre-default bailout of the city. Even then, however, some advisers feared that he had painted himself into a corner by indicating he would never aid New York. When some help was later necessary, he would seem to have retreated.

Moreover, the climate was soon markedly altered by two developments: softening toward New York in public opinion polls and concern within financial circles over default. That concern was reflected by the President's own economic advisers, newly apprehensive of default's economic consequences.

The changed climate affected Rhodes, who unlike Mr. Ford as minority leader feels no need to rubber-stamp a Republican President. Without checking the White House, Rhodes advocated legislation to help New York, provided that New Yorkers help themselves. Furthermore, Rhodes worked out a compromise with the liberal Democratic chairman of the House Banking Committee, Rep. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin. Inexplicably, Rhodes said nothing to the committee's Republican members.

Led by Rep. William Stanton of Ohio, those committee Republicans refused to back the bill without an endorsement from Mr. Ford. The result was a long intense White House meeting last Tuesday morning between the President, his economic advisers and Rhodes and Stanton. Treasury Secretary William Simon strenuously objected to aspects of the Rhodes-Reuss compromise. Nevertheless, Rhodes got the impression Mr. Ford would announce his decision following another meeting that afternoon and that the decision would be favorable.

But the Byzantine politics of Albany, which often makes Washington's seem like child's play, were intruding. Perry Duryea, minority leader of the state Assembly, was apoplectic over the President's being taken into camp by Gov. Carey. "I see a Machiavellian hand at work here," one state Republican leader told us, "and it belongs to Hugh Carey."

This argument was forcefully presented to the President by Conable and other New York Republicans at a 4 p.m. meeting Tuesday (attended by Rhodes). By approving Carey's package containing a state tax increase, Conable contended, the President was putting a

Strength For Today

TOO BUSY TO SAVE LIFE

Some time ago in California a child was drowned in one end of a swimming pool while a swimming class, oblivious to the child's plight, was practicing at the other end of the pool.

Sometimes Christian churches have been so interested in listening to ministers talking about life-saving, and holding classes in life-saving, and reading books about life-saving, that they have not noticed people who are drowning all around them.

We hear much about rap sessions and discussion groups. Certainly these activities should have an important place in the church's life, but unfortunately they all too often fail to have any results, In every community there are many causes which would benefit greatly if Christian people would take the leadership of them. The next time you get engaged in a church discussion, ask yourself, "How can this talk be galvanized into action?"

Premise Itself Is A Forecast

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—The energy for the economic expansion being forecast for 1976 will come from an improvement in consumer spending, residential construction and probably from business capital investment.

This is a typical explanation offered by the army of forecasters who regularly, if not profitably and accurately, put their reputations on the line at this time of the year.

On the surface, the explanation appears perfectly innocuous and hardly noteworthy, and it is by and large being accepted that way. Few critics seem concerned that the premise is itself a forecast.

At last reading, consumer spending was hardly enthusiastic, and consumer spending confidence was said to be declining. Personal income, which supports that confidence, was rising, but the rate of rise was slowing.

Consumer prices, meanwhile, were rising— and that is hardly a condition that encourages people to go out and spend. The improvement in retail sales, said a Commerce Department spokesman, has "slowed substantially."

It still seems a bit early to feel relaxed and assured about the level of retail sales in 1976. They could very well improve, as the forecasters expect, but the energy doesn't seem to be there right now.

Housing seems to offer more hope. Or does it? At first glance the 15 per cent month-to-month increase to a 1,458,000 annual rate in October seems to indicate a vigorous advance. Some housing officials doubt it.

They concede that the improvement is a substantial one but they question whether it can be maintained. Some call it an aberration. The number of permits issued for new construction demonstrate, they say, that it cannot be maintained.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development forecasts a range of between 1.4 million and 1.6 million housing units being built in 1976, compared with a 1975 figure that will probably total a bit more than 1.1 million.

No well-defined upward trend has yet been observed in capital spending plans either. In fact through much of this year manufacturers actually lowered their own estimates.

To some extent you might say that consumers, in curtailing their retail buying, and manufacturers, in holding back on plant expansion and improvement, demonstrate the same lack of confidence.

Manufacturers have been through a period of many months during which their facilities operated at only 60 per cent to 80 per cent of capacity, and they need a lot of convincing before they make plans to enlarge.

All three — housing, consumer spending and business capital investment — are being counted on to push the economy ahead in 1976, but it looks now as if they themselves could use a push.

DEMONSTRATE IN SUPPORT OF CITY — Thousands of New Yorkers filled Times Square Monday afternoon for a rally to demonstrate their unity in their efforts to polish up the image of the fiscally tarnished Big Apple. Mayor Abraham Beame was among those who spoke to a crowd estimated by police to total 10,000. (AP Wirephoto)

Higher Cigarette Prices Await Carolina Smokers

By MARY L. MYERS
Associated Press Writer

Smokers in North Carolina and South Carolina probably will soon have to pay about a penny a pack more over the counter and a nickel more in vending machines. Retailers will begin passing on increases from manufacturers.

"I don't know how long we can hold on to our same prices," said James Hiers, president of Hiers Vending in Columbia, S.C. "But we've got to do something."

Hiers' comment came Monday during a spot check of cigarette vendors in the Carolinas after R. J. Reynolds Industries, the largest manufacturer, announced a price increase.

David Fishel, a Reynolds spokesman, said the company raised its prices by about 1.5 cents per pack effective Friday.

Earlier, four other manufacturers increased prices, with American Brands initiating the action.

On Nov. 7, American raised prices by one cent a pack without announcement. Four days later, the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. and Lorillard, a division of the Loew's Corporation, hiked prices by 1.5 and 1.4 cents respectively. Phillip Morris Inc. joined the ranks the following Monday with a 1.5-cent increase.

Most of the cigarette dealers contacted in the Carolinas said they haven't started to pass on manufacturer increases, but all said they were considering doing so.

"We haven't done anything as of yet," said R. D. Coonen, regional vice president of The Macke Co. "But we're discussing it with our customers."

Macke, headquartered in Charlotte, operates six branches in North Carolina and three in South Carolina.

A spokesman for Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp., which also has several branches in the Carolinas, said his company "probably will go up on prices."

But some vendors have already changed their machines to require more money.

"We started raising most prices by five cents Friday," said Patsy Vaughan, a controller at White Vending Co. in Greenville, S.C.

And five cents seemed to be the amount most dealers are considering for an increase. That brings most cigarette prices in the Carolinas to 50-55 cents per pack.

However, some vendors said they will allow vending machine prices to remain the same on machines in companies that agree to take a lower commission to absorb the loss.

"We'll leave it up to our customers," said Bill Lowery, manager of Charleston Cigarette Service Inc., a branch of The Macke Co.

But most of the vendors believed their customers will opt to raise prices.

A New Ripoff In Antifreeze

ATLANTA (AP) — The antifreeze schemes are back, the governor's office of consumer affairs says, and distributorships for a powdered, instant "antifreeze" are being sold in "the biggest consumer ripoff to hit the state" since early this year.

Tim Ryles, administrator of the office, said Monday the plan involves selling distributorships in at least nine Southeastern states to small automobile shops.

Consumers in those states may have been taken in turn for "hundreds of thousands of dollars," Ryles said.

The product, labeled "Prestex," was described last August by Dr. W. Y. Cobb of the South Carolina Agriculture Department as "a blend of inorganic salts which are worthless as antifreeze." Cobb added that the product would corrode a car's cooling system.

Ryles said three men involved in the distributorship sales are under investigation in Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The Prestex company typically sets up a distributorship in an area, stays a few months and moves to another city, Ryles said.

He said his ofice discovered the operation when a southwest Georgia businessman complained to officials last July that he paid $5,000 for a product that was not the one demonstrated to him earlier.

Ryles said results of the Georgia investigation would be turned over to the state attorney general for possible prosecution.

Students On Caswell Tour

Ayden Grammar Student Advisory Counseling Committee has visited Caswell Training Center in preparation for sponsoring Operation Santa Claus with their fellow students.

Operation Santa Claus is a volunteer effort to provide a new personal gift for each of the residents of Caswell and for the patients at Cherry Hospital.

Robert P. Moody, assistant director for Community Outreach, gave the students a tour of the facilities at Caswell.

Douglas Worthington, volunteer parent, drove the bus for the group and accompanied them on the tour.

Students going to Caswell were: Angela Cannon, Amy Coombs, Vic Setliff, Christy Blount, Patricia Williams, Billy Phillips, Jackie Dail, Susan McLawhorn, Michael Bell, Lisa Steen, Penny, Butler, Angela Strong, Pat McDermott, and Debra Phillips.

Mrs. Elaine King, Guidance Counselor and sponsor of the group and Mrs. Wanda Reddick, Home-School Counselor accompanied the group.

More than $2,400 property damage resulted from a series of five collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a three-vehicle mishap about 8:11 a.m. on 14th Street, 25 feet West of the Evans Street intersection.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were listed as Edwin Burtis Aycock Jr. of 1405 Evergreen Dr.; Rachael Phillips Hardee of Route 3, Greenville who was reported injured in the collision; and Phillip Wayne Joyner of 104 Templeton Dr.

Officers charged Joyner with following too close, and estimated damage at $90 to the Aycock car, $500 to the Hardee auto and $800 to the Joyner vehicle.

Police estimated damage in a 3:20 p.m. mishap on Skinner Street, 75 feet East of the Smith Street intersection at $150 to each of the two cars involved.

Drivers involved in that mishap were identified as Mary Mayo Moore of Route 4, Greenville and Carolyn Whitehurst Jackson of Route 1, Winterville.

Police charged Mrs. Jackson with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Earl Webster Hardee of Greenville was charged with failing to yield the right of way following investigation of an 11:50 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Forrest Hill Circle and Tenth Street.

Officers reported the truck driven by Hardee collided with a car operated by Melanie Ann Hite of 1720 Circle Dr. causing an estimated $250 damage to the Hite car. No damage resulted to the Hardee truck officers reported.

No charges were reported following investigation of a 1:15 p.m. collision on Ione Street, 45 feet West of the May Street intersection.

Investigators reported a truck operated by Eli Francis Ward of Route 5, Greenville collided with a parked car owned by Hazel Harris Dail of Ayden causing an estimated $25 damage to the truck and $250 damage to the Dail car.

Wayne Ray Taylor of 200 Tyson St. was charged with exceeding a safe speed following investigation of an 8:15 a.m. collision on 14th Street, 50 feet West of the Rock Springs Road intersection.

Officers reported the Taylor car collided with an auto driven by Fred Douglas Joyner of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage was estimated at $50 to the Taylor car and $150 to the Joyner vehicle.

Republican stamp on an onerous proposal which would bail the governor out of budgetary excesses and reverse his failing political fortunes. In short, Jerry Ford was being mousetrapped by his old congressional colleague from Brooklyn.

Conable, a loyal Ford man, naturally made no threats. But warning did filter down from Albany that if upstate Republican concerns were ignored, well, there was always Ronald Reagan.

These rumblings bolstered advice given Mr. Ford by his longtime political aide, Robert Hartmann. Snapping that the economists were panicking, Hartmann argued that New York City had not gone nearly far enough down the reform road for the President to relent. Hartmann's hand was clearly visible in Mr. Ford's Wednesday statement, which put off action until after the latest congressional recesses.

Conable and other New Yorkers were relieved by the statement, but the cost was high. Rhodes was personally and politically hurt by his first serious difficulty with President Ford. The President was again seen, fairly or not, wavering on an explosive issue.

Furthermore, the President has not yet extricated himself from the New York tarbaby. The inescapable task still ahead will be how to provide federal aid for the city without appearing to make yet another retreat from past rhetoric.

concentrated on any one area."

"You can probably expect people will be buying smaller cars on the average than would otherwise be the case," he said.

He also said it's "entirely possible" the cost of a college education will increase faster than the over-all rate of inflation, which could mean that some families will be spending a greater portion of their income for education.

"An obvious determination of how people spend their income is the change in relative prices," he added.

Schultze said his calculations assume correct government economic policies and the absence of catastrophe.

He said a drop in the standard of living of about 2.5 per cent in 1974 and 1975 was due largely to the recession-induced high unemployment. If unemployment continues above the full employment level of 4 per cent in 1980, then the increase in living standards will be slowed.

Kilpatrick. . .

He has said some injudicious things, and he has alienated large chunks of an electorate that loves the welfare state. But Reagan is untainted by the big influences in American politics today. Recession, inflation, and unemployment are not his doing. He comes out of the starting gate with no handicap lead in his saddle.

Reagan is no lightweight. That bogus image ought to be dismissed out of hand. He served for eight years as governor of the largest state in the Union. Despite a hostile legislature, he set an admirable record of frugal management. His philosophical convictions are strong; he articulates them superbly. He has wit, charm, grace, a lively sense of humor. He will have enough money for a vigorous campaign. He has some exceptionally able people on his staff.

Reagan may not win in New Hampshire on February 24 or in Florida on March 9, but he will roll up one whale of a vote against the vulnerable Ford. The key to his nomination will lie in the convention delegates he wins in the inconspicuous states. In this regard, the old Goldwater types will be working for Reagan with the fervor of 1964. In their hearts they know Reagan's right. Remember? Those were the days.

In any event, the Regan candidacy is a healthy development. If he fails to win the nomination, his effort will have a constructive effect on the party platform; he could well wind up as Number Two on the ticket. If he wins the nomination, the country will have a choice, not an echo. That's worth remembering, too.

If you have regular checking, "free checking" is probably what your bank says you've got.

But you probably couldn't prove it from your bank statement.

Because, at the average bank, "free checking" is only free as long as you keep a $100 balance.

Otherwise, you have to pay a service charge on every check you write.

THE TROUBLE WITH FREE CHECKING.

If you're like the average person, these days, you're operating on a tight enough budget already.

And you almost certainly don't have an extra $100 to leave sitting idle in a checking account.

So you go right on paying service charges. And assuming they're just a fact of life, like death and taxes.

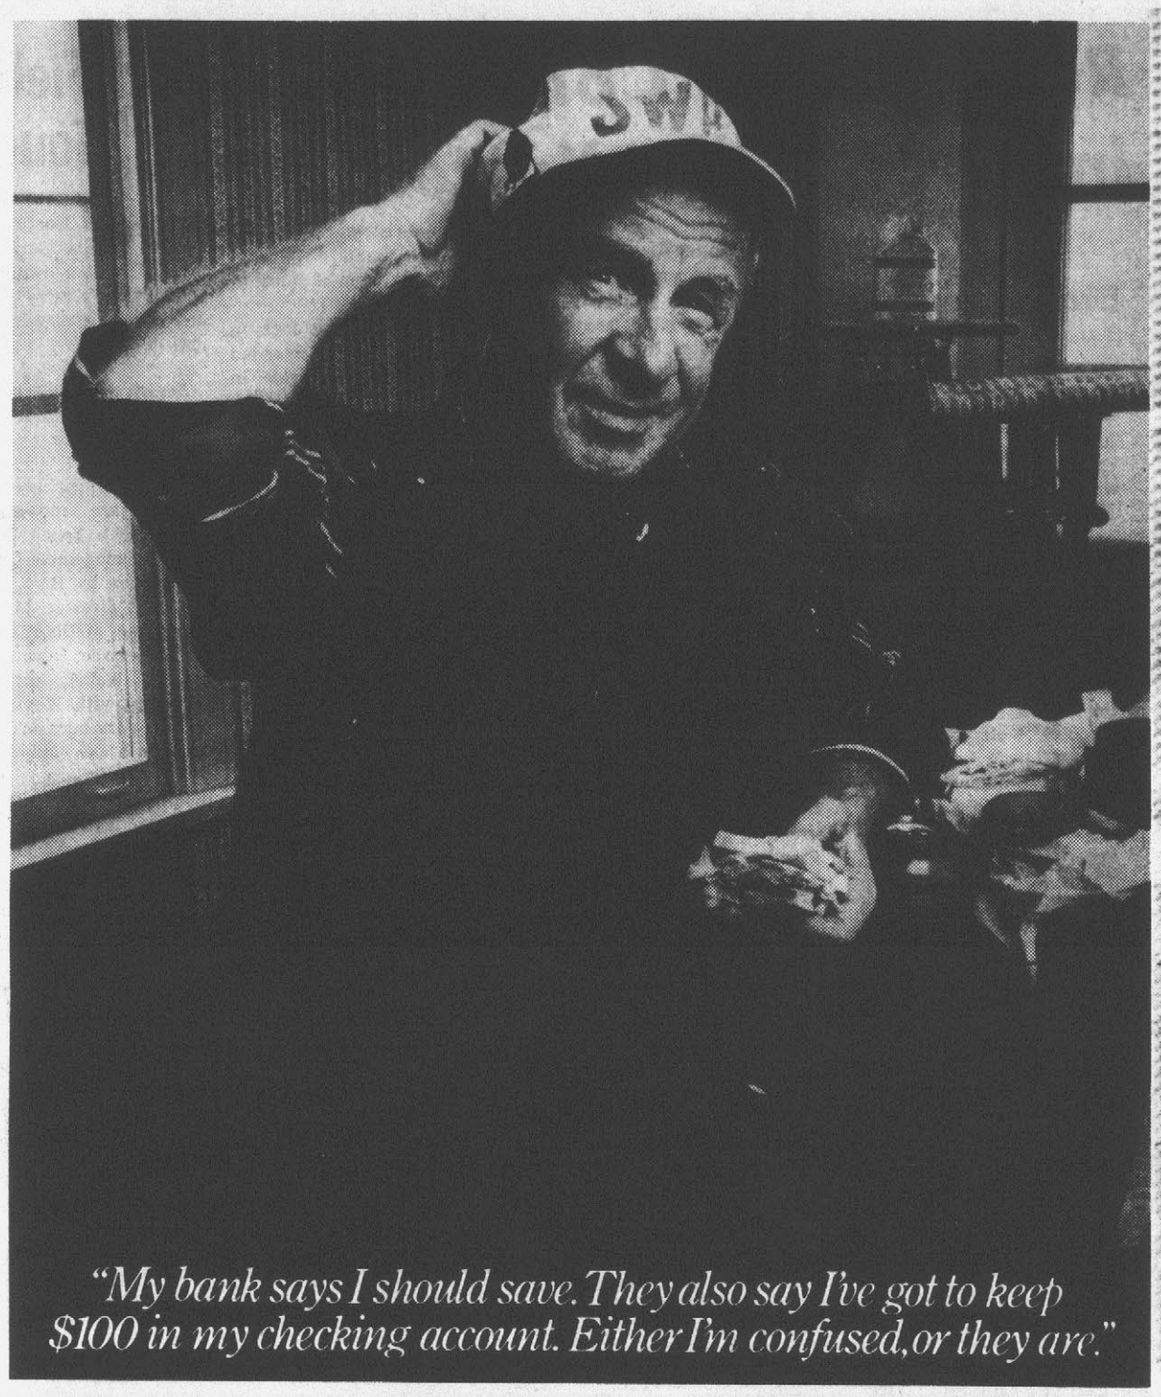
HOW THE TRIPLE OPTION HAPPENED.

Now, we offered "free checking" for a long time ourselves.

It was a step in the right direction. But it just didn't go far enough.

Too many people were still paying service charges. Or sweating out the last four days of the month with a balance of $101.98.

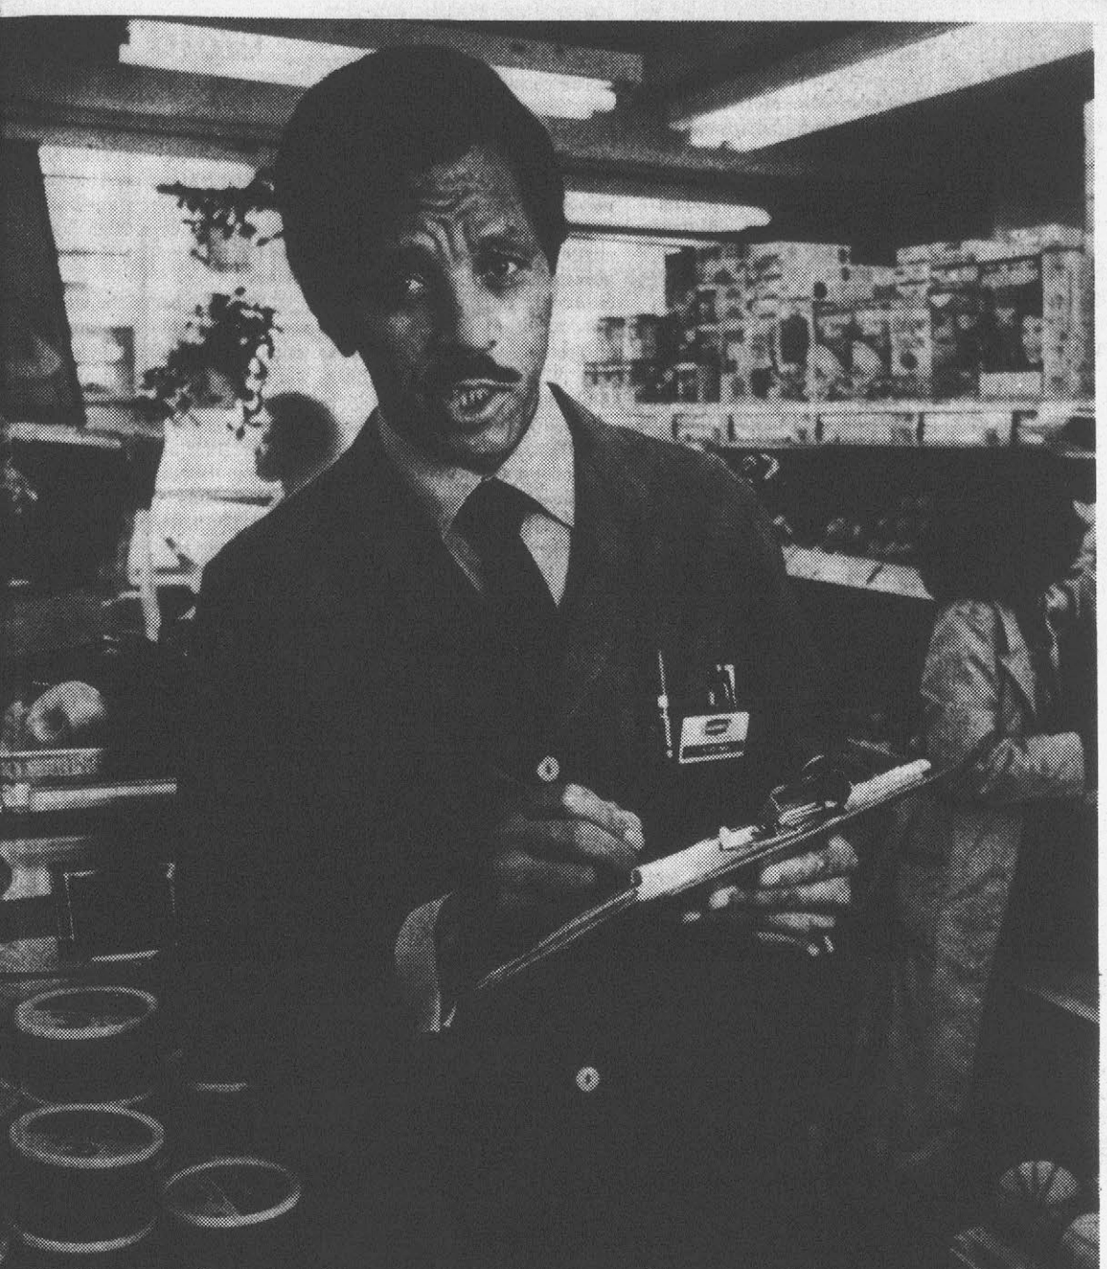
We decided there had to be a better way to give you a no-service-charge checking plan. Without the headaches



"My bank says I should save. They also say I've got to keep $100 in my checking account. Either I'm confused, or they are."

"Our balance dropped to $99.50 for one day, and we got a service charge for the month. That extra 50¢ we spent cost us $4.90."

PLE OPTION VS. F FREE CHECKING.



"I figure the service charges on my free checking account me to $17.22 last year. My bank may call that free, but I don't."

"My bank has completely free checking. But to qualify for it, I think I'd have to be listed in Dun & Bradstreet."

of the $100-minimum-balance account.
So we decided to find it.
We came up with the NCNB Triple Option account. Three new ways you can get no-service-charge checking.

THE NCNB TRIPLE OPTION

OPTION 1
Ask us to set up an NCNB Automatic Savings program for you, with deposits of at least $25 a month.

OPTION 2
Maintain a balance of $500 or more in NCNB Regular Savings.

OPTION 3
Add NCNB Cash Reserve to your regular checking account.

The Triple Option is offered in addition to our present checking plans.

When you set up an automatic savings program, with deposits of at least $25 a month, you don't have to pay a service charge.
When you keep $500 in regular savings, you don't have to pay a service charge.
When you have Cash Reserve, you don't have to pay a service charge.
Pick the option you like, then stop by and open your account. (If you bank with us now, and you want The Triple Option, just ask to have your account switched over.)

NO SERVICE CHARGE. NO MATTER WHAT.

We don't care if you write 60 checks a month. Or keep a balance of $1.59.
Just pick your option now, and you may never pay service charges again.
The NCNB Triple Option.
It's probably a lot less expensive than the free checking you've got now.

Ohio State Is Near Unanimous

By The Associated Press

Ohio State, which slipped past Michigan on a wing and a prayer 21-14 Saturday, was a near unanimous choice as the nation's top-ranked college football team in this week's Associated Press poll.

The Buckeyes, 11-0, were thoroughly handled by the Wolverines throughout most of Saturday's game and trailed 14-7 lte in the fourth quarter. But quarterback Cornelius Greene got a hot hand and passed Ohio State into position for the tying TD and then safety Ray Griffin intercepted a pass to set up the winning score.

All of which impressed the AP's national panel of sports writers and broadcasters enough to give the Buckeyes 56 of 59 first-place votes and a total 1,168 points.

Ohio State can clinch the national championship with a victory in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day against the Pacific-8 Conference winner — either California or UCLA.

Texas A&M, idle last week, picked up one first-place vote and 1,010 points in moving up one spot to second. The Aggies, 9-0, face Texas Friday.

Oklahoma, 10-1 and the defending national champs, jumped from seventh to third with two first-place votes and 904 points after stunning previously-undefeated Nebraska 35-10. Alabama, 9-1, moved up from fifth to fourth with 707 points after taking the week off.

Texas, 9-1, moved up one spot to fifth with 682 points.

Michigan, 8-1-2 after bowing to Ohio State, dropped from fourth to sixth; Nebraska, 10-1, plummeted from second to seventh after losing to Oklahoma; Arizona State, 10-0, remained eighth after an idle Saturday; Colorado, 9-2, stayed ninth after whipping Kansas State 35-7; and Penn State, 9-2, held the No. 10 position after edging Pitt 7-6.

California, 8-3, headed up the second ten, followed by No. 12 Arizona, 9-1; No. 13 Florida, 8-2; No. 14 UCLA, 7-2-1; No. 15 Georgia, 8-2; No. 16 Miami of Ohio, 10-1; No. 17 Maryland, 8-2-1; No. 18 Kansas, 7-4; No. 19 Arkansas, 8-2; and No. 20 San Jose State, 9-1. It was San Jose State's first appearance ever in the Top Twenty.

Greene Central Girls Will Be Much Better

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer
(One of a series)

SNOW HILL—Girls basketball at Greene Central High School has not been synonomous with winning basketball but this year may see the Ewes change that image.

Coach Becky McLawhorn has just five girls back from last year's team but she thinks that they give her a good nucleus to work with and there are things her players have that they didn't have last year.

"There are four seniors, Vickie (Shingleton), Teresa (Whitley), Vanessa (Hooker) and Joyce (Dupree) and Judy Merritt's back," the coach said. "Of the five that are back, three are starters, and Joyce Dupree was one that played right much, all five that are coming back played a lot. All five coming back are very experienced."

Mrs. McLawhorn said that while she had good experience in her five returnees, the rest of the picture looks grim. There is not much varsity experience but the girls have played in junior high giving them some knowledge of the game. It is not like in years past when Mrs. McLawhorn had to start from the ground and build up. Now she can add on to what is there.

"Shannon Brown is adding a lot already and Marolyn Yelverton has a lot of potential if she'll put it to use. Both of those are sophomores," she said.

"The girls I just mentioned have fit in really well with the two guards we have left. The only difference unit-wise is when I take out the two girls that are normally centers, Vanessa Hooker and Joyce Dupree, and try the other two centers who are slower and a little bit more timid because they haven't had to rough it up before," the coach said.

The Ewes are quicker this year because of several short girls. The big girls that are back have increased their speed and the others have had to be fast to make up for lack of height.

As in the past, the coach had trouble getting girls to come out for the team, which made the final selection process even harder. Production of a winner could help that aspect out next year.

The Ewes are not balanced when it comes to height. They have short girls and tall girls but no one in the middle. "Its a group where they are either tall or they're short. I don't have a 5-5, 5-6 girl. I look at it as an advantage. The short girls can field the ball and the tall can get the rebound," Mrs. McLawhorn said.

The tall girls, Lynn Griffin, Hooker, and Whitley will give the team good rebounding strength.

The coach noted that one big plus over last year is better balance. "We're going to be more balanced this year. Not meaning anything against the way the girls played last year but this year they don't look for any one individual. Last year, they tried to depend very heavily on Judith Tripp and when she was out it made a great big difference, we had to go back and totally reorganize their thinking.

"This year, it's more balanced. In other words, I'll shoot it, you shoot it which ever one of us gets the shot. It's going to make a better squad, I believe."

Defense has not been stressed much, most of the work being done on the offense. Mrs. McLawhorn said she had one defense she planned to add to the two the Ewes have.

The coach said she hopes that the depth she is expecting will show itself after the first six games of the season. "We play six non-conference games and then go into the conference games. I'm hoping by the time we've gotten through them that just about anybody could go on (the court). Definitely those that have been here before would have an advantage because they've played in the same basic patterns in years past."

The coach said the team to watch this year will be North Lenoir. "Ayden-Grifton will be a team either this year or next year that is going to materialize but I don't know which year. They have a group of sophomores that have a lot of potential. They're athletes, they're not just ballplayers."

Mrs. McLawhorn noted that Farmville Central would be hurt by the loss of Kathy Sugg who provided the spark and Darlene "Tree" Joyner who gave the Lady Jaguars height. North Pitt, she said, will be hurting for height also.

So for the Ewes, who have been down so long the bottom has looked like up, the upcoming season is a promising one and the Greene Central girls could pick themselves out of the lower reaches of the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Oddsmakers Betting Namath Will Retire

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath is a proud man. He is loaded. He has people standing in line bidding for his services in television, the movies and public relations.

He has been playing football on match-stick knees with a tired, 32-year-old throwing arm this season, not because he gets $450,000 a year — the highest salary of any football player in history — but because he thought it would be fun to play with a winner one more year.

The 1975 season has been neither. It hasn't been fun. It hasn't been a winner for the New York Jets. It has been a disaster.

Broadway Joe doesn't need to go down with a disaster. So, between today and sometime next summer, he will sit down with Jets' President Phil Iselin. Odds are Joe will retire after the 1975 season. Iselin can have his $450,000 for next year — all of it.

Joe can't afford to commit himself now. The Jets have four more games to play and he wouldn't pull the rug from under his teammates like that. But he does say: "There will be some heavy thinking about it — on my part and on management's part before next season."

He adds: "Anything can happen."

But there was something significant in what Namath said last summer, just prior to signing a two-year, $900,000 contract to play a couple of more years with the Jets.

"There are a lot of frustrations playing with a losing team," he said over a beer at a small pub near the team's Hofstra University training quarters. "It's tough coming up with failures week in and week out, some of them my fault. It gets to be a drag."

Namath acknowledged at the time that the only thing that could lure him to stay in the game was the prospect of a winning team. "I play football because I like it," he said, indicating that when it ceased to be fun he would quit.

The Jets provided that promise when they completed the 1974 season with six straight victories and whipped teams such as the Washington Redskins and Minnesota Vikings in preseason exhibitions. But it hasn't been fun since.

The Jets not only have lost games — seven in a row — but they have been humiliated. Most of the blame has to be aimed at the porous defense.

But Namath himself has failed to produce the poised, pinpoint passing of other years. In last Sunday's game against St. Louis, he was subjected to the greatest hurt of all — he was yanked in the third period for a sub, J.J. Jones, after hitting only eight of 21 passes.

Mauch Signs With Twins

By BRENT KALLESTAD
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Veteran Manager Gene Mauch has signed a three-year contract with the Minnesota Twins and says he is confident the American League team will be a contender in the West Division race in 1976.

"I promised myself four or five years ago, that if I ever took another job it would be with a club that had a chance to win," Mauch said at a Monday news conference. "It's pretty sweet to know you've got the best hitter (Rod Carew) in the world going to bat for you every day and potentially one of the best pitching staffs in the game."

The Twins went outside their own organization to sign Mauch, who had managed for 16 years with Philadelphia and Montreal in the National League.

"Baseball is baseball, but perhaps I'll notice some difference handling the pitchers," the 50-year-old Mauch said in reference to the AL's designated-hitter rule. "We won't be able to manipulate around and make opposing managers take their pitchers out of the lineup."

Twins' President Calvin Griffith said there were few managers in baseball who could match Mauch's experience and knowledge of the game.

"I had to concede that to get him I'd have to do something differently than I've done in the past," continued Griffith, who normally offers his managers one-year contracts. "I felt by giving him a three-year contract, he'd have more confidence in himself and our organization."

Mauch, who signed for an estimated $70,000 per year, is regarded as a disciplinarian by Griffith, who has gone outside his system for a manager only one other time. That was when he signed Bill Rigney to a two-year contract in 1969 after Billy Martin was fired.

"I think our team will make very few mistakes under Gene," said Griffith. "You can't deceive the fans in baseball by doing things wrong on the field day in and day out like we've done."

Mauch is familiar to fans in the area. He played minor league baseball at St. Paul in 1946 and managed the Minneapolis team in the American Association during the 1958 and 1959 seasons.

Mauch becomes the Twins' seventh manager since the franchise was moved to Minnesota from Washington in 1961. Frank Quilici was fired after 3½ years as manager following the 1975 season.

Mauch managed at Philadelphia for nine years and spent seven years at Montreal. His highest finish was second place in 1964 when the Phillies collapsed down the stretch and finished one game behind St. Louis.

Gamecocks In Tangerine Bowl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The South Carolina Gamecocks have accepted a bid to play in the Tangerine Bowl Dec. 20 against Miami of Ohio.

"I'm extremely excited about our bid to the Tangerine Bowl," said South Carolina football Coach Jim Carlen monday. "I'm especially happy for our players. They've worked hard all season and I think their performance this year justifies a bowl bid."

The Gamecocks enjoyed their most productive offensive season ever, rolling up 4,746 yards, a school record, and achieving a 7-4 season record.

"We'll take some time off from practice with our coaches out on the road recruiting and we'll start back to work Dec. 8 probably," Carlen said. "Our players will have to sacrifice some time in the next few weeks, but they're willing to make that sacrifice."

Jeff Clark, chairman of the Orlando-based Tangerine Bowl selection committee, said he was sorry that "we had to disappoint other fine teams."

"We were fortunate in having so many fine teams from which to choose, however only one team could be chosen, and we feel we have chosen one which will given a outstanding performance," Clark said.

Miami of Ohio won the Mid-American Conference championship with a 10-1 record this year. The Redskins, coached by Dick Crum, have won the Tangerine Bowl twice before, defeating Florida in 1973 and Georgia in 1974.

The Gamecocks were picked ahead of three other teams, all with better records. They were Virginia Tech, 8-3, San Jose State, 9-1, and Arkansas State 10-0.

Carlen was told of the selection committee's choice in a telephone conversation at 9:30 a.m. Monday. He then flew to Orlando for the official announcement of the choice Monday afternoon.

University officials announced Monday that ticket sales would begin Tuesday. They said tickets can be purchased for $8 each and a $1 handling charge if purchased by mail.

Indians Top Picks

RESTON, Va. (AP)—Jim Ryan, William and Mary's freshman linebacker from Bellmawr, N. J., today was named Southern Conference defensive player of the week for his part in the Indians' 31-21 upset last Saturday over Richmond's league champion Spiders.

His selection gave the Indians a clean sweep, for William and Mary quarterback Tim Rozantz was chosen the offensive player of the week Monday for his part in the victory.

Ryan had 13 unassistsd tackles and four assists and twice tackled Spider backs for losses.

Root Stays As Indian Coach

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—Jim Root, given a vote of confidence after a 2-9 record in his fourth season as football coach at William and Mary, says he feels as happy for his young players as for himself.

"Those kids have shown great commitment, dedication and faith, and I think it's only right that we react the same way," Root said Monday after Athletic Director Ben Carnevale said Root "wil continue as my footballl coach" and "has my wholehearted support."

Root, a graduate of Miami of Ohio, came to William and Mary in 1972 and posted a 6-5 record in his first year as successor to Lou Holtz after the latter moved to North Carolina State.

Operating under a recruiting austerity program that limited his number of scholarships to little more than half that of other teams in the Southern Conference, Root went 5-6 in 1973 and 4-7 last year.

But the college revised its athletic program late last fall, decided to embark on a full-time program and gave Root the green light to meet the National Collegiate Athletic Association limit on athletic grants in aid.

The Indians promptly went out the next day and routed Richmond's arch-rival Spiders 54-12.

Unfortunately, Root was forced to operate this year with mostly freshmen and sophomores, most of his talented veterans having graduated, and the Indians lost their first eight games before beating Virginia Military 13-7.

After a close loss to Colgate, William and Mary closed out Saturday with a 31-21 upset over Richmond, which already had clinched the conference championship and had gone unbeaten in its first five league starts.

"I'm happy, of course, after our Richmond encounter and the way my team has reacted all along," said Root. "We have a great future at William and Mary, and we have a great group of young kids.

"They hung with us forever. They could have died in there along the way. But they listened to me and believed. It was a great one for them last Saturday."

Carnevale said he felt Root "should have the time to get our football team on solid ground." He noted the Indians "showed steady improvement" as the season wore on.

"The program needs stability. We have to have another good recruiting campaign like we had last year," said Carnevale, who added:

"Combining a solid group of incoming freshmen with the present freshman and sophomore classes we now have should put us in good shape for next season and for the future . . . I believe we have a very positive ground to build upon."

Root, a former National Football League quarterback, came here from New Hampshire, where he had an 18-14-1 record in four seasons. He also had been an assistant at Miami of Florida, Dartmouth and Yale.

Gold In Victory

NEW BERN — The East Carolina Pirates closed out their preseason scrimmages last night at New Bern High School with the Gold rolling to an 89-62 victory.

Al Edwards paced the victory, scoring 24 points for the Gold unit. Wade Henkel added 22, while Buzzy Bramen scored 21, Louis Crosby had 14 and Tyron Edwards, 8.

Larry Hunt and Earl Garner each had 18 points to lead the Purple. Clay Windley and Reggie Lee each had six, Billy Dineen had three, Henry Lewis had five, Dean Hartley had four and Crosby, playing on that unit, had two more.

The Pirates open the 1975-76 season Saturday, traveling to College Park, Md., to take on the third ranked Maryland Terapins.

UCLA, Indiana Key Openers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Those old smoothies from UCLA and several pretenders to the throne open the annual college basketball show this week. "New Faces of 1975-76" has all the hoopla and could have all the magic of a brilliant season.

The curtain opens with a big act as the defending champions from Los Angeles meet critically-acclaimed Indiana in a game that could be a preview of the NCAA championship game. Indiana and UCLA are ranked 1-2 in the country and they meet Saturday night in St. Louis.

Minus Coach John Wooden, who retired after last year's championship season, and two of the starters from that title-winning club, the Bruins are as bullish as ever. They've got Richard Washington, one of the best centers in the country, and guard Marques Johnson among a basketful of talent.

"I suppose they're going to jump all over me when I lose two games," says Gene Bartow, an easy-going Missourian who is the Bruins' new coach.

He is, of course, referring to Wooden's nearly impeccable record at UCLA. From 1963 until 1975, Wooden's great teams only lost 22 times, capturing 10 national titles. And the Bruins don't figure to do too much losing this year, despite the presence of a strong Southern Cal team and other imposing squads in the Pac-8.

At Indiana, the bullies of the Big 10 present a big problem for their colleagues, as well as other teams around the nation. Scott May and Quinn Buckner take charge of a monster club that had the longest winning streak in basketball last season — 31 games.

The Hoosiers' only loss came by two points in the NCAA regional playoffs and prevented them from competing in the championship round at San Diego.

Along with the star-studded casts of UCLA and Indiana, teams such as Kentucky, Oregon, San Francisco, Louisville, North Carolina, Maryland, Arizona, Marquette, Notre Dame and Alabama must rate top billing this season.

Kentucky, beaten by UCLA in last year's heart-stopping finale, is the preseason favorite in the Southeastern Conference although the Wildcats must replace four seniors. Coach Joe Hall, though, still has plenty of thoroughbreds — including Rick Robey and Mike Phillips.

The Wildcats will probably be challenged hard in their own conference by Tennessee and Alabama.

Oregon and Southern Cal pose threats to UCLA's longtime domination of the Pac-8. The Ducks, an NIT team last year, boast guard Ronnie Lee and imposing height at all positions. The Trojans have lost some top players, most notably guard Gus Williams, but still have top frontcourt talent.

San Francisco is a team to watch not only this year but for a few years to come. Coach Bob Gallard picked off three of the nation's top high school players. Winfred Boynes, James Hardy and Bill Cartwright are considered among the top freshmen in the country and will make the Dons a popular choice to win the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Louisville, one of the four NCAA finalists last year, has joined a new conference, the Metro-Six. The Cardinals, always tough under Denny Crum while playing in the Missouri Valley Conference, have won 98 of their last 120 games. And they figure to keep doing that this year.

North Carolina and Maryland look like the glamour teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels return Mitch Kupchak and Phil Ford from a team that carved out a 23-8 record against stiff opposition. At Maryland, Lefty Driesell is blessed with one of the best backcourts in the country — a three-guard combination of John Lucas, Maurice Howard and Brad Davis.

Arizona Coach Fred Snowden has two of the top forwards in the country in Bob Elliot and Al Fleming and a strong backcourt leader in Herm Harris. The club figures to be the favorite in the Western Athletic Conference.

Bo Ellis and three other starters from last year's 23-4 squad at Marquette are returning this year and that means that the Warriors will be hard to manage and almost impossible to beat. It makes Al McGuire's club one of the top independents in the country.

And Notre Dame fits in that same group. The most notable of the Fighting Irish is forward Adrian Dantley, who opted for college ball after seriously considering turning pro on a hardship case.

Rutgers will challenge Syracuse this year for supremacy in the East. The Scarlet Knights are led by Phil Sellers, one of the top forwards in the country, and Syracuse returns Chris Sease, who helped lead the Orangemen to the NCAA East Regional title.

Syracuse lost Rudy Hackett and a few other players from its cinderella team last season, but Roy Danforth, one of the most capable coaches in the business, has his teams used to championship competition — either in the NCAA or NIT.

Princeton, last year's NIT champs, Providence, Penn, LaSalle and Boston College are among the other heavyweights in the East.

Among the other top teams in the country are New Mexico, which has recruited a couple of the best junior college players around in Larry Gray and George Berry; Nevada-Las Vegas, sparked by Lewis Brown, Eddie Owens and Jackie Robinson; Nevada-Reno, with superb shot-blocker Edgar Jones, and Houston, led by Otis Birdsong and David Marrs.

Other teams to watch this year: Arizona State, Pepperdine, New Mexico State, Long Beach State, North Carolina State, Pan American, Oregon State, Texas-El Paso, California, Oral Roberts, Washington, Detroit, South Carolina, Tennessee, Purdue, Stetson, Utah and Hawaii.

Bradshaw Passes Pittsburgh To Easy Victory Over Houston, 32-9

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, sworn to "hold the rope," came unraveled on nationwide television Monday night under the aerial assault of pressure-proof Terry Bradshaw and Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain defense.

Bradshaw flawlessly threaded 13 of 16 passes through the porous Houston Oilers defense to lift the Steelers to a 32-9 victory and give Pittsburgh a one-game lead over Cincinnati in the American Football Conference's Central Division chase.

Coach Chuck Noll was so impressed with his Steelers' handiwork that he pronounced them playoff ready. "Our offense is where it was at the end of last season, moving the ball well and taking the pressure off the defense," Noll said after Bradshaw whipped the Steelers to two touchdowns in a 1:28 span of the second quarter for a commanding 15-3 halftime lead.

"When you get the protection and the blocking from the offensive line that we did tonight, you're bound to move the ball," Noll said.

Despite the motto of "hold the rope" and 49,947 fans cheering them on, the Oilers wilted under the pinpoint passing of Bradshaw and the undeniable runs of Franco Harris, who gained 149 yards and scored two touchdowns.

The Oilers, who dropped to a 7-3 record and third place in the AFC's Central Division, took a 3-2 lead in the second quarter on a 27-yard field goal by Skip Butler but Bradshaw had the Steelers ahead 15-3 by the half with a pair of lightning-quick touchdowns in the second quarter.

The Steelers got a safety in the first quarter when Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini was tackled in the end zone after losing the ball from a shotgun formation.

Bradshaw keyed the first of two touchdown runs by Harris with passes of 18 and 10 yards to Lynn Swann in the second quarter. Harris, the first runner to gain 100 yards against Houston's defense this season, bulled four yards for a touchdown with 2:23 to go in the half for a 9-3 Steeler lead.

Cornerback J. T. Thomas returned an interception 11 yards on Houston's next series and Bradshw again went to the air with four straight completions, the last one 18 yards to Swann for a touchdown and the 15-3 halftime lead.

Bradshaw helped set up a 30-yard field goal by Roy Gerela in the third quarter with scrambling runs and a 25-yard pass to John Stalworth. Harris and Frenchy Fuqua iced it with fourth quarter touchdowns, both for 13 yards.

Houston's frantic fans got only one chance to shout in the second half. That was when Pastorini rolled to his left, waved wide receiver Ken Burrough deep and then hit him for a 59-yard touchdown bomb that meant nothing to the final outcome.

"I thought we were ready to play, but I guess we weren't and I guess it's my fault," disappointed Oilers Coach O. A. "Bum" Phillips said. "I guess it set the pattern for the game when we got early breaks and came up with nothing."

ABA Players Go To Court Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Basketball Association players' union is going into court — instead of onto the court — next Monday.

The players organization and their attorneys are headed for Southern District Court in New York, in front of Judge Robert Carter, where they will present a seven-count case against the National Basketball Association, the 18 NBA clubs and John Y. Brown, ABA president.

The Players Association, stirred by recent job losses by several of its members because of the folding of the Baltimore and San Diego franchises, and with its Virginia and Utah teams in wobbly financial straits, announced Monday it had filed an application to intervene in a pending suit between the ABA and the NBA.

The ABA players' litigation action had six major points.

One was to seek indemnification from its Denver and New York clubs for damages suffered by ABA players as a result of the Nuggets' and Nets' application for entrance into the NBA for the 1976-77 season. The association contends that Denver and New York conspired with the NBA to be taken into that league.

That move, and actions by Brown, the ABA players said in a statement, has "given rise to our belief that efforts are being made to drive the ABA out of business. This has placed ABA players in an untenable position."

Another point the players' union sought was to prevent anyone from applying outside pressures on ABA clubs to cease operations without possibly facing legal action.

A third purpose was to insure that ABA players are included in any negotiations involving possible merger with the NBA.

Other issues included preservation of the benefits to the players of the two-league system and judicial resolution of the legality of the college draft and the option and reserve clauses.

The statement was put together by Prentiss Yancey Jr., general counsel for the ABA Players Association. Yancey was present at a news conference, along with Julius Erving of the New York Nets, vice president of the players' union; Edwin McAmis, acting as attorney for the organization, and his partner, Doug Foster.

All stressed the importance of protecting the players' futures. When the Baltimore and San Diego franchises collapsed, nearly 20 players were left without jobs.

Erving said the Players Association had been assured that all present eight ABA teams would finish this season, but he added that he had heard there was some pressure being applied to fold the financially plagued Virginia and Utah clubs. That pressure reportedly was being applied by Brown.

Brown was quoted as saying that, "if the players and the owners don't get together and put the sport on some sensible long-term basis, professional basketball doesn't have a future and that's unfortunate for everybody."

Barnes Trial Nearing Jury

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A former Providence College basketball player's $1.5 million suit against pro star and former teammate Marvin Barnes neared a jury today, the sixth day of trial in U.S. District Court.

The defense rested Monday, but counsel for the plaintiff, Lawrence Ketvirtis, had one more witness to call. Closing arguments were expected to follow before the judge charged the jury.

Ketvirtis alleged in his suit that Barnes struck him in the face with a tire iron in 1972, several hours after the two players collided during a Providence College practice session.

Barnes, a 6-foot-9 former All-American now with the American Basketball Association's Spirits of St. Louis, contended he struck Ketvirtis with his fist. Barnes said he hit Ketvirtis outside a college cafeteria because he thought the 6-11 teammate was going to strike him.

Providence Coach Dave Gavitt, summoned as a witness by Ketvirtis, testified Monday the plaintiff "had a little trouble finding a medium line between what we call good aggressive playing and roughness."

Charles Crawford, a former Providence player, testified for the defense that Barnes struck Ketvirtis with his fist. Crawford, now a youth officer, also said Ketvirtis was unnecessarily rough on the basketball court.

Other defense witnesses were former Providence star Kevin Stacom, now with the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association, and the Rev. Walter Heath, director of residence at Providence College.

In 1974, Barnes pleaded guilty to an assault charge for allegedly hitting Ketvirtis with a tire iron. He now denies he used the iron.

Orders Guidelines For Prison Problems

RALEIGH (AP)—Guidelines on how to handle prison inmates who try to kill or mutilate themselves will be spelled out for guards, Corrections Secretary David Jones ordered Monday.

The call for guidelines was among several recommendations by the Inmate Grievance Commission that were approved by Jones. But, some other recommendations were denied.

In his order, Jones approved a recommendation that inmates at the Blanch prison unit have psychiatric care available and another that custodial supervision and treatment of prisoners be reviewed.

Those decisions by Jones resulted from a complaint by Larry Banks, an inmate at the Blanch prison unit, that he had been shackled naked to a bunk. Following its investigation, the commission concluded that Banks had repeatedly tried to mutilate himself and the action was aimed at protecting the inmate, but the staff at Blanch hadn't strictly followed department policy in handling the situation.

While Jones agreed that policy hadn't been followed, he ruled the deviation was not serious enough to require further action.

A recommendation that prison guards receive additional training in handling inmates was disapproved because the current training program is sufficient, Jones said.

A.G. Tate, a Central Prison inmate, had complained that a guard used excessive force and struck him with a blackjack. The commission said other forms of control would have been more acceptable and better training of guards would help limit cases of excessive force being used.

Jones said the guard's reaction was justified because Tate had made a threatening move. "An officer on the spot is not blessed with hindsight," Jones said of other restraining actions that could have been employed.

Tate is serving 25 years for first degree murder, 20 years for armed robbery and two years for assault with a deadly weapon. "It is clear from inmate Tate's record that he is quite capable of using and has in fact used deadly force when it suited his own purpose," Jones said.

Also disapproved was a request that additional nurses be assigned to Triangle Corrections Center, a minimum security unit. Jones said there are no staff openings available and noted that Triangle is adjacent to Central Prison which has a staffed hospital.

In another case, Jones ordered that an inmate be given incentive pay for labor he had performed. Jones said failure to pay the inmate apparently was an administrative oversight.

State Senator Insists On Copy Of N.C. Study

RALEIGH (AP)—A Democratic state senator has promised to sue the state's Republican administration unless he is given a copy of a controversial study that ranked North Carolina as the bottom state in average industrial wages.

Sen. William G. Smith of Wilmington has gained support from Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten who said he would refuse to defend the agency involved—the Office of State Planning—because he believes Smith is right. Edmisten's office presents the state's side in any law suit.

Spokesmen for the agency said they aren't trying to keep it away from Smith, but they don't want to release it until they finish with it, probably several weeks from now.

The study has been circulated through government agencies and has been reported by the news media.

Conducted by Emil Malizia, a professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the study concluded that a major reason for North Carolina's low wage rate was that the state has few unions and Tar Heel leaders taken an open anti-union stance.

Commissioned by the state, the study results were part of the data to be used in formulating a new state growth policy plan.

Smith said state law requires that state officers or agencies give the legislature or its members any information or data requested. That, he said, would be the basis for his suit.

A spokesman for the planning office said the policy is that documents such as that be held until the governor issues his report on the topic.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, also a Democrat, supported Smith's request. The planning office wrote Hunt that Smith is entitled to a copy of the study, but questioned whether the law actually requires an agency to stop work on a project and distribute copies of preliminary papers.

Mathematician Speaks At ECU

Dr. R. E. Chandler, graduate administrator of the N. C. State University mathematics department spoke at the Thursday colloquium sponsored by the ECU Department of Mathematics.

His topic was "After Infinity, What Then?" The presentation included an elementary demonstration of the intricacies of infinite sets, including some ideas which led Cantor to his discoveries in "Foundations of Mathematics."

Calls For Funds For Flu Vaccine

COLUMBIA (AP)—A vaccine could be ready for an expected influenza epidemic in 1978 if the government would provide the funds for research, says Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine.

"You can't do research with prayers," Sabin told the Second Governor's Forum on Health Information here Monday. "Unless Congress passes supplemental funding for the extra work needed there is no hope this vaccine will be available in massive proportions for the next epidemic which is a certainty in 1978."

Sabin, now a professor of biomedicine at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, said researchers have developed a "master strain of attenuated influenza virus" which can be used in formulating a virus vaccine for any strain of influenza.

The last flu epidemic was the Hong Kong variety in 1968. Sabin said the virus is constantly changing and at the end of 10 years has changed completely.

He added the master strain developed by researchers lives and multiplies in the upper respiratory tract of humans, but does not cause illness. It can be mated with any new incoming strain and the resulting virus will have the characteristics of the new virus, but without producing illness.

"It could be administered using an atomizer, and each person could breathe in the vaccine," he said. "It could be administered like the polio vaccine was in the 60's, people walking in, picking up the vaccine and walking out."

Little research on infectious diseases has been done in the past, while funding for killers like heart disease, cancer and strokes have received a higher priority, he said.

While the killer diseases cause a high number of fatalities, infectious diseases like influenza account for large numbers of days lost by persons too sick to do anything but stay in bed, he added.

The number of "bed disability" days during the 1968 Hong Kong epidemic was nearly 194 million, statistics show. The epidemic made 51,000 persons ill and cost the public almost $4 billion in medical expenses and days lost from school or work.

Celebrating In Surinam

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — Thousands of cheering Surinamese greeted their country's first moments as an independent republic early today with a midnight flag-raising ceremony at Paramaribo's sports stadium.

Crown Princess Beatrix of The Netherlands and her husband, Prince Claus, were the guests of honor as the red and green flag of the new republic replaced the old Surinam and Dutch flags.

The program included folk rituals and music by a visiting police band from Barbados.

Ailing Premier Chou En-lai of China sent greetings to Premier Henck Arron and included Peking's recognition of the Surinamese government.

The Netherlands had ruled the colony on the northeastern coast of South America, formerly known as Dutch Guiana, since the British traded it in 1667 for what is now New York.

The country is rich in bauxite and other resources, but nearly a third of the 400,000 people have fled to The Netherlands because of racial conflict between those of African ancestry, the Creoles, and those whose forebears came from the Dutch East Indies and India.

Police Probing Reported Rape

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said today that officers are continuing their investigation of a reported rape incident that occurred before dawn this morning.

The Chief said a young woman was allegedly raped in her home after she awoke about 4:45 a.m. and found a man in her kitchen.

Cannon said the intruder allegedly gained entrance to the house through a front window. The woman, he noted, woke up, heard a noise in the kitchen and went to investigate.

When she entered the kitchen, the chief continued, she found a man eating cake icing from a can with a knife. He then allegedly assaulted her, Cannon noted.

Studio Provides 'Spare Parts' For Wax Museums

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Henry Alvarez gets a lot of unusual requests — such as "Send me Louis Armstrong's left hand" or "we need Raquel Welch's eye."

But Alvarez' business is not as macabre as it sounds. He is general manager of a studio which makes wax figures for museums around the world.

Figures of Charles Bronson, Humphrey Bogart, Robert Conrad who is television's "Cannon," the Wolfman, Frankenstein's monster and George Washington were standing around the studio last week, waiting for costumes and trips to museums.

The Stubergh Wax Studios Inc., located in a nondescript, gray building, sends its figures to 15 or 20 museums each year, including the four Tussaud's English Wax Museums in the United States and Europe. Its figures have also been used in motion pictures.

Alvarez said the museum has turned out replicas of about 650 different persons — including celebrities and figures for Ripley's Believe it Or Not Museums. Currently being sculpted by Alvarez to be added to that list is actor Robert Blake.

"Depending on my feeling for the person and the charcater involved, I can sculpt some heads in a week," he said. "But someone with bland characteristics takes longer."

President Ford had to be sculpted twice but the toughest one to do, Alvarez said, was a wax figure of Olympic athlete Jesse Owens.

"We did him in a running stance and we had a problem with his balance," he said. "When we inserted the standard metal tube reinforcement in his body, he just fell over. We had to scrap his legs and use a different tubing altogether."

Elizabeth Taylor also was a problem.

"Photos of her are all made to look beautiful. It's hard to pick out form," Alvarez said. As a result he said the studio's 15 workers had to sculpt her four times before they came up with a head they felt satisfactory.

The most popular figures produced by the studio have been Martin Luther King Jr., Louis Armstrong, President John F. Kennedy and Jean Harlow, Alvarez said.

Currently, President Ford and Henry Kissinger are big sellers.

"Whenever we get a new President, he's always in demand," he said.

On order are Robert Redford, Paul Newman, Pele and Jack Nicklaus. Figures in production include Archie Bunker, Cher and President Abraham Lincoln.

"We're producing likenesses of all of the U.S. Presidents for the Bicentennial," Alvarez said. The likeness of Washington, which has been offered to the White House, is based on a life mask used to sculpt a bust of the first President while he was alive and "is as close to real as you can get."

When such masks are available — and Alvarez has several on file, including the only existing life mask of Amelia Earhart — they are used to make initial heads for the figures.

But, usually, Alvarez or another artist will sculpt a likeness based on photographic research.

The face is carved from plasticine or wet clay. A body is made from the many sizes, shapes and poses of human forms the studio has in its files and hanging from its rafters. Then a finishing is put on the sculpting and detail work begins.

Human hair is used on the figures. It is placed in their scalps hair by hair. A head of hair takes 17 hours to implant.

Two small holes are drilled in the eye sockets. Glass eyes are placed in the heads. The eyes actually focused for a distance of six-to-eight feet unless the character is to interact with another figure in a display.

Wax teeth are also placed in the head. Then it is stuffed with cotton to make it more damage resistant should it fall. Other details, such as eye lashes, lipstick and makeup are added.

After head and body are joined, the figure is costumed by the studio's seamstress. Phyllis Diller gave the studio one of her own costumes for her likeness. Liberace sent them the name of his tailor.

But before the figure is sent off to a museum, molds and photographs are made of the finished product so that the next time the figure is ordered, it will not have to be sculpted from scratch.

The firm produces about five to seven figures a month and makes repairs on others damaged by visitors to museum and other displays.

"People are always touching figures that aren't behind glass cases," Alvarez said. "They even get in bed with Abe Lincoln in one of the museum displays."

Justice Dept. Joins Suit To End Prescription Drug Ad Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has joined a fight to do away with the pharmaceutical profession's ban on advertising prices for prescription drugs.

The department filed suit Monday in U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids, Mich., to force the American Pharmaceutical Association and its Michigan affiliate to abandon a restriction prohibiting member pharmacists from advertising drug prices.

But the issue may be settled first in the U.S. Supreme Court, which is expected to rule soon on a case challenging a Virginia law prohibiting advertising of prescription drug prices.

Or it could be settled by the Federal Trade Commission, which last June proposed regulations overturning all state laws and professional restrictions on such advertising. The FTC invited public comment on the proposal and has not yet announced a final decision.

The FTC estimated that consumers could save over $130 million a year through the comparison shopping that advertising would make possible.

An Associated Press survey in 12 cities last April showed that the prices of three often-used prescription drugs vary considerably within a city. In Chicago, for example, a Darvon prescription sold for $1.90 at a cut-rate midtown drugstore, $3 at a drugstore in a low-income area and $3.90 at a suburban pharmacy.

The government lawsuit alleged that the 50,000-member national pharmacists association and the 3,400-member Michigan State Pharmaceutical Association violate federal antitrust law by including an anti-advertising clause in their code of ethics.

But the APA board of trustees voted last July to revise the section of the code which states that pharmacists "should not solicit professional practice by means of advertising," said an association spokesman.

The revised section says a pharmacist "should strive to provide information to patients regarding professional services truthfully, accurately and fully, and should avoid misleading patients regarding the nature, cost or value of pharmaceutical services."

The APA spokesman said members are expected to approve the change in mail balloting now in progress.

Awards To Professors For Coastal Research

Ten faculty members at East Carolina University have been awarded grants for coastal research projects by the ECU Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources.

Each award consists of about $4,000 and enables the project directors to conduct research that might otherwise not be possible, said Dr. Richard A. Stephenson, institute director.

ECU geologists selected for awards were Michael P. O'Connor, Richard L. Mauger, Scott Snyder and B.A. Bishop.

Dr. O'Connor received funding for the production of a film, "North Carolina's Expanding Estuaries." Dr. Mauger was funded for a study of trace metals in organic and argillaceous material found in estuaries.

Profs. Snyder and Bishop will investigate the effects of marine boring organisms on rock and other materials in coastal marine environments.

Dr. James E. Stembridge of the ECU geography faculty received funding to measure and map foredune growth at selected locations on tbe Outer Banks.

A history of North Carolina's ship and boar building industry will be produced by Dr. William N. Still of the ECU Department of History. Dr. Still is at present completing an annotated bibliography on the maritime history of North Carolina which previously received funding by the Institute.

ECU biologists Graham J. Davis and Donald B. Jeffreys will monitor ground water pollution at several Pamlico River locations. Dr. Charles W. O'Rear, also of the biology faculty, will establish the nutritional status and efficiency of food utilization in some estuarine fishes.

Dr. Stephenson, institute director, will investigate seasonal flushing rates of Bath and Durham Creeks.

Research reports of the funded projects may be submitted for the Empire Award for significant contributions in coastal marine research. The award consists of a certificate and cash prize and originates from a fund established by the Empire Brush Co. of Greenville.

Pinch-Hit For Ronald Reagan

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Last week, when Ronald Reagan announced his presidential candidacy, he had to quit his job as a conservative commentator on a nationally-syndicated radio show called "Viewpoint."

Otherwise, stations airing his daily five-minute program would have to provide air time sought by other presidential candidates under the Federal Communications Commission equal-time rule.

But Harry O'Connor, whose Los Angeles company syndicates "Viewpoint," says the program is continuing on the air with guest commentators until a permanent replacement for Reagan is chosen.

He said this week and the next the speakers will be the former California governor's daughter, Maurine, TV star Art Linkletter, and retired Navy Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher, ex-skipper of the spy ship Pueblo.

Starting Dec. 8, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., whom ABC-TV has hired to comment on the Democratic presidential convention next year, will be the "Viewpoint" commentator for three weeks, he added. O'Connor, who called the program a forum for the conservative point of view, said Reagan began it on Jan. 20 this year.

He said the show evolved from discussions he'd had with actor Effram Zimbalist Jr., who also does a radio show for him, about the need for a daily radio program of conservative commentary.

O'Connor said he felt there should be something to counterbalance what he considers "the strong liberal viewpoints that we're getting not only from commentators but also from the networks."

He said while mulling over possible commentators for the show, Zimbalist said Reagan was a friend of his and might be ideal for the program. The actor called Reagan and found him "keenly interested" in doing the show when his term as governor expired, he said.

O'Connor said the program now is carried by stations he has under contract in more than 300 cities, and that since Oct. 20 the Mutual Broadcasting System has aired it in other cities.

He said when it appeared Reagan would seek the Republican presidential nomination, there were reports — all erroneous — that former President Nixon might replace Reagan on "Viewpoint."

O'Connor said he'd met with Nixon last September at the latter's home in San Clemente, Calif., and that the former president told him "he very much admired what Reagan had been able to accomplish on a daily five-minute radio show.

"And he felt radio was the strongest medium for him."

Nixon, who resigned from office last year after the Watergate scandal, now is writing a book about his years in office and preparing for a series of TV interviews with talk show star David Frost.

O'Connor said he didn't directly ask Nixon if he'd like to do a radio commentary program some day. But when Nixon expressed interest in that possibility, O'Connor said, "I responded, 'I would like very much to work with you if you decide you'd like to do something like that.'

"We were just rapping about what might happen some day, that's all."

Howard Schenken's Bols Bridge Tip stressed the importance of third hand taking time to plan the defense before playing to trick one. Today's hand, from a match between the national teams of the United States and Switzerland, emphasizes that advice.

A contract of four spades was reached at both tables. The bidding shown is that of the Swiss team. North judged well in giving full weight to his distribution when he leaped to four spades over his partner's game try, despite the fact that he held a minimum in terms of high cards.

West led the king of clubs, and the "automatic" play with the East cards is to start an echo by following with the eight. However, sitting East was one of America's great players, Robert Jordan. He saw that it would be futile to encourage his partner, Arthur Robinson, to continue clubs. On the third round of the suit, declarer would discard dummy's lone heart while East ruffed, and the only tricks for the defenders would be two clubs and a ruff. Therefore, Jordan played the discouraging three of clubs to the first trick.

Robinson dutifully shifted to a heart. Jordan took the ace and now reverted to clubs. West won the ace and continued the suit, and declarer was a dead duck. If he ruffed with the ten of spades, East would overruff with the jack; if he ruffed high, the defenders would be sure to score a trump trick.

It would be pleasant to be able to report that this fine defense won a bushel of points for the U.S. team, but that was not the case. At the other table, North became declarer at four spades, and with the South hand exposed, the defense was considerably easier. East led the ace of hearts and when dummy appeared, it did not take a genius to figure out that there was no future in that suit. East found the obvious club shift, and three rounds of the suit led to the same one-trick defeat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find a better method under which to operate in the future and get better results. Make new allies who can be helpful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle your responsibilities well today. Some aim you have of a personal nature may not be worthwhile. Express happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) There are many fine opportunities for you to advance in the days ahead if you prepare for them now. Use your hunches.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be concerned with big ventures while not being practical, so teach to get feet on the ground. Give fine education and then life becomes a most successful one. Teach early to pay more attention to detail.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market put together a strong advance today, rebounding from recent losses on reports that further steps are being taken to help avoid a New York City default.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials claimed 6.85 to 852.49, while advances topped declines by more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The average was up 4.88 points on Monday following a four-day slide of 15.90.

Behind the advance was news that the New York State Legislature was set to impose $200 million in fresh taxes on New York City as part of a plan to avoid an impending default.

The hope has been that the tax package would impress Washington officials who so far have not responded favorably to calls for federal aid to the city.

Anaconda, the Big Board volume leader, added ⅛ to 17⅜.

Glamor and blue chip issues paced the day's advance. Point-sized gainers included U.S. Steel, up 1¼ to 61, Sperry Rand a point to 41⅞, DuPont a point to 129½, Eastman Kodak a point to 107, and Halliburton 1⅞ to 137½.

Most other issues scored fractional gains.

The NYSE composite stock index rose 0.27 to 47.74, while the American Exchange's market value index added 0.28 to 84.89.

Amnesty Action Taken By Spain's New Regime

By JULIE FLINT
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Fines levied against more than 30 Roman Catholic priests for sermons considered critical of the Francisco Franco regime were lifted today to celebrate the ascension of King Juan Carlos I.

The Spanish government also reportedly was about to grant a wide amnesty that would exclude only prisoners held for terrorism. Unofficial sources put at around 1,000 Spaniards serving prison terms for political and labor offenses.

Officials said those priests serving prison terms for failure to pay the fines will be released.

The fines, said to total $178,000, were imposed for homilies the priests made after the execution on Sept. 27 of five men convicted of killing policemen. It was not known how many of the priests went to jail rather than pay.

The Basque separatist movement, which had two followers among those executed on Sept. 27, claimed responsibility today for Monday's assassination of a village mayor and warned that further terrorist acts will follow "because the Spanish state has not changed" since Franco's death last Thursday.

A spokesman for ETA-5, the military wing of the movement fighting for independence for the three Basque provinces in northwest Spain, said in a radio interview in Paris that Mayor Antonio Echeverria had been shot "because he was a police informer."

Two men armed with submachine guns knocked Monday at the door of the mayor of the village of Oyarzun, 12 miles from San Sebastian, the Basque capital. They began shooting when the 33-year-old Echeverria opened the door. The killers escaped in a waiting car, and the mayor died in a hospital.

The unidentified ETA spokesman also claimed the mayor was a "property speculator."

"Our struggle will continue until a Socialist Basque state is constituted," he said. "You can expect further attacks in the Basque country."

The getaway car was found abandoned in a town near Oyarzun, and police closed the border between the Spanish and French Basque provinces.

Thailand-Laos Border Closed; Tensions Rise

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — About 50 Laotian Communist soldiers have slipped into Nan Province, in northeastern Thailand, in the past week, and the governor said today he has asked that troops be sent into the area.

Chokok Veerathampoonsawad, governor of the remote border province about 400 miles north of Bangkok, said Pathet Lao soldiers are entering his province every night and have moved heavy artillery pieces toward the border.

"The situation is very tense and some people are moving out of the border areas." he said.

News reports said hundreds of young Thais ransacked homes and about 100 shops of North Vietnamese refugees in northeast Thailand near the Mekong River border between Thailand and Laos, claiming the refugees supported Laos in an armed conflict with Thailand last week.

About 40,000 Vietnamese have lived in Thailand for the past two decades but are still considered refugees from Vietnam.

Thailand's envoy to Laos returned home after failing to initiate talks with Pathet Lao leaders on the clash Nov. 17-18 in which a Thai navy man was killed and a Thai patrol boat was damaged and grounded in the Mekong river. Laos charged the boat intruded into its territory.

Thailand has sent more troops and heavy weapons to the border areas, and both governments have ordered the border closed. Thai and Western sources in Vientiane said the latter action is causing economic hardship in the Laotian capital since most imported goods for the city must pass through Thailand.

Mishap Seen By Soviet Crewmen

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A Soviet warship was within camera range when the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and the missile cruiser Belknap collided in the Mediterranean, a U.S. Navy source said today.

The Soviet vessel, a destroyer of the Kotlin class, may have photographed the collision last Saturday, the ensuing fire and the entire rescue operation, the source said.

"If I were there, I would have done the same myself," he added.

The Soviet warship was keeping tabs on a routine night flight exercise of a seven-ship task force from the U.S. 6th Fleet when the 1,047-foot carrier and the 547-foot cruiser collided about 70 miles east of Sicily.

Fifty-five of the Belknap's crew were swept overboard, but most of them were rescued. The Navy revised the casualty toll today, announcing that five men were killed, two were missing and presumed dead and 21 were injured and still hospitalized. It said another 26 men were injured but had returned to duty after treatment.

Earlier the Navy announced that four men were killed and four were missing.

Ten of the injured had serious burns and were flown to the U.S. Army hospital in Landstuhl, West Germany, which has special facilities for treatment of burns.

The cruiser was badly damaged by explosions and fires that followed the collision. She was towed to Augusta, Sicily. The Kennedy was only slightly damaged and remained at sea.

Soviet and U.S. warships often shadow each other in the Mediterranean, and this time the Soviet destroyer was close enough for sailors in the American force to read its number. The U.S. Navy said it did not ask any help from the Soviet ship and none was offered.

The Navy said it would have no information concerning the cause of the collision until after completion of its investigation. But one of the injured sailors from the Belknap, Mack Leonard, 25, of Boston, Mass., said the cruiser was ordered to move from ahead of the carrier to astern of it and "about one minute before the collision we had a course change to avoid a worse disaster."
