Moslem Street Fighters Gain Ground In Beirut

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem street fighters advanced behind a hail of mortar fire through downtown Beirut today in a bloody drive to encircle their right-wing Christian opponents.

Young leftist gunmen from the "Ambushers" militia occupied the St. Georges Hotel — Beirut's most prestigious — and fought around the Phoenicia and Holiday Inn, where Christian gunmen held out against the onslaught, police said.

Witnesses said the Moslem left-wingers were led by Palestinian guerrillas.

They took control of the Wadi Al-Yahbud Jewish quarter and Parliament Square, forcing House Speaker Kamal Assad to postpone indefinitely a parliament meeting scheduled for Tuesday.

A police spokesman said scores of the street fighters were killed in the combat and their bodies "virtually littered scenes of the fighting." He said ambulances were unable to enter the area.

If the Moslem forces gain mastery of the seaside hotel area, that would effectively divide Beirut into clearly defined Christian and Moslem enclaves, with the Phalange Christian militia shoved into their Ashrafiya and Ein Rumanneh strongholds and Moslems controlling the remaining two-thirds of the city.

Jeeps with loudspeakers toured Moslem areas in western Beirut appealing for blood to aid hard-pressed hospitals handling the wounded.

Premier Rashid Karami, a Moslem, announced after a cabinet meeting that he would not order army intervention because "this will aggravate the civil war, not quell it." Most of the army officers are Christians.

He said the cabinet also rejected a demand for declaration of martial law, which would open the way for intervention by the 18,000-man army for the first time since hostilities erupted last April.

"The security situation is worsening daily," Karami told newsmen. "The government has done everything it can, but it failed to re-establish law and order because all parties insist on continuing to fight."

Moslem militiamen also reoccupied the 40-story Mour Tower, an unfinished office building that was their deadliest redoubt in the last big round of Lebanon's eight-month civil war, and fired rockets and mortars from it.

Security forces that had been occupying downtown buildings under a cease-fire agreement pulled out, leaving the way clear for another major struggle.

Face-Saving Compromise On Tax Bill Shaping Up

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fight between President Ford and Congress that could mean higher taxes for most Americans next month may be resolved in a way that would allow both sides to save face.

The answer may become evident Wednesday when the Senate Finance Committee begins work on a House-passed bill carrying $13 billion in individual tax cuts, mainly extensions of tax cuts in effect this year.

Unless that bill becomes law by the end of the month, most Americans will see their take-home pay reduced starting in January.

Meanwhile, as Congress begins what is expected to be the next-to-last week of the 1975 session, both houses will devote time to New York City's financial problems. The House will consider a bill to amend the bankruptcy laws to facilitiate handling of the city's debts in case of default. The Senate will consider an appropriations bill that includes $2.3 billion earmarked to pay for federal loans to New York already authorized by Congress.

Later in the week, the House will vote on the final version of an energy bill. Although the measure does not go as far toward U.S. energy independence as Ford has asked, his chief energy adviser, Frank G. Zarb, has urged that he sign it. Zarb told the Washington Post that he will remain in office even if Ford rejects his advice.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, is opening hearings into the nomination of Judge John Paul Stevens of Chicago to succeed retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. No senator has indicated opposition to Stevens, who is Ford's first nominee to the high court.

On the issue of tax cuts, Ford and Congress agree on the need for extending the cuts that went into effect last spring. But the President says he will veto any tax cut that is not tied to a lid on government spending in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

Democratic leaders insist it is not practical to set spending levels 10 months in advance. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has indicated he may go along with a plan that would extend the tax cuts for only three or four months, rather than for the full year. Then, at the end of that period, Congress conceivably could agree to the spending limitation and renew the tax cut for the rest of the year.

Such a compromise might be acceptable to Ford and thus avert another veto confrontation with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Pres. Ford Hints Middle East Trip

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford turns his attention to domestic matters this week after proclaiming his Asian trip "beneficial" and indicating that plans are in the works for a trip to the Mideast.

Ford returned to the White House early this morning after a 27,000-mile trip that he said contained "no minuses and many, many plusses." He climaxed his journey in Honolulu with a declaration of a six-point "Pacific Doctrine" for U.S. foreign policy and held out the possibility of future U.S. friendship with Vietnam and Cambodia.

Chatting with reporters just before his jet landed at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Ford was asked if he felt it had been necessary for him to personally make the long journey to China, he replied: "The discussions we had in Peking were mandatory at my level."

Ford said he felt the talks in Indonesia and the Philippines also needed to be conducted at the heads-of-government level.

A reporter, mindful of rumors that Ford now plans to travel to the Mideast early next year, asked about any such plans.

"There are no definite plans," the President replied. But he added that he probably would go to the Mideast "at some point."

Ford said he found his talks in Peking, Jakarta and Manila were "very substantively beneficial."

Ford flew home from Honolulu where he chose the anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor to reveal his "Pacific Doctrine" in a speech in Honolulu.

"The first premise of a new Pacific doctrine is that American strength is basic to any stable balance of power in the Pacific," Ford said. And, noting Japan's transition from enemy to friend, the President held out the chance of U.S. friendship for Cambodia and Vietnam, saying:

"Our policies toward the new regimes on the (Indochinese) peninsula will be determined by their conduct toward us. We are prepared to reciprocate goodwill — particularly the return of the remains of Americans killed or missing in action, or information about them. If they exhibit restraint toward their neighbors and constructive approaches to international problems, we will look to the future rather than the past."

Back in the capital, Ford is facing decisions on a variety of issues and is expected to sign a bill to provide emergency assistance to help solve New York's fiscal crisis.

Congress is still struggling with tax and energy measures which could draw another pair of presidential vetoes.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb has urged approval of the energy bill which would temporarily lower oil prices, but some conservatives oppose the measure and Ford's campaign director, Howard H. Callaway suggested Sunday that the President might be well advised politically to veto the measure.

Ford Compromise To Head Off Kissinger Contempt Vote Fails

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise offer from President Ford to head off contempt action against Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was rejected today by the chairman of the House intelligence committee.

Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said the House might vote on contempt resolutions against Kissinger as early as this week if the committee agreed with him Tuesday that Ford's new offer is unacceptable.

In a compromise from the administration's position Nov. 20, Ford's counsel offered to identify all U.S. covert operations abroad since 1961 that had been requested by the State Department.

Pike said the committee had subpoenaed all State Department requests for covert operations — not just a list of the ones that were approved.

He said the committee originally was told the State Department requested five covert operations during the 14 years since 1961, but that the number has now grown to 25.

Pike said he was filing the committee's three contempt citations against Kissinger with the full House today.

He said he will ask for a full House vote only if the committee decides he should.

In a letter sent to all House members last week, Pike said approval of contempt action against Kissinger would not "cause the earth to tremble nor the sun to stop in its tracks."

"No one is seeking to place Mr. Kissinger in jail," Pike said. "And the worst that can happen to him is that he might have to provide the documents subpoenaed to Congress."

Expand Control In Timor

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Pro-Indonesian forces in Portuguese Timor were reported expanding their control of the former colony today with the support of Indonesian troops.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik announced Sunday that factions friendly to Indonesia had captured Dili, the capital of Portuguese Timor, from Fretilin, the leftist Revolutionary Front for the Independence of East Timor, and declared the territory part of Indonesia.

Information Minister Mashur said Indonesian "volunteers" supported the attack on Dili, and a Fretilin broadcast said the Indonesians were pursuing the independence fighters in the hills.

Timor is an island the size of Connecticut and Massachusetts in the south central part of the Indonesian archipelago. The western half of the island is Indonesian.

The Portuguese government planned to give its half independence in 1978, but on Aug. 10 the UDT (the Timorese Democratic Union) attempted a coup against the Portuguese. Fretilin forces opposed the UDT and took over Dili, and the Portuguese colonial administration fled to an offshore island.

After weeks of sporadic fighting, the UDT and Apodeti (the Popular Democratic Association of Timor) joined forces. Fretilin declared the territory independent, and Malik in a speech last week in Indonesian Timor called on the UDT and Apodeti for an all-out war against Fretilin.

"It's all over. The area is now in the hands of the UDT and the Apodeti party," a senior Indonesian officer, Col. Sugito, said today.

Possibly Dug Own Graves

LAKE CITY, S.C. (AP) — A State Law Enforcement Division spokesman said today some of the six persons whose bodies were unearthed last week may have been killed in "execution style."

"It seemed to be the general opinion of one or two of the officers on the scene that it looked like the victims were made stand in the grave and then they were shot," SLED spokesman Hugh Munn said.

"We don't know if they were forced to dig their graves or what. We don't really know how they were killed. There's just no way to know right now," Munn said.

He said state investigators are "just dropping back and taking a look" at the case today. Munn said he knew of no plans to continue the search for more bodies in either Florence or Williamsburg counties today.

Spokesmen for both sheriff's departments confirmed that no search was under way today.

Earlier, police said the deaths may have been linked to a car theft ring. However, Munn indicated that theory may have been incorrect.

Police sources said that four of the six victims were shot and two others may have had their throats cut.

Munn said it appeared that the victims were either related or acquainted with one another.

He also said officers had dug between 40 and 60 holes in several locations before uncovering the three graves last week.

Search operations were suspended Sunday after a second fruitless day of looking in Florence County. Officers used metal detectors and a special vapor sniffing device borrowed from the Florida State Police in searching for more bodies.

Thornton Wilder Dies Suddenly

HAMDEN, Conn (AP) — Thornton Wilder, who wrote the theater classic "Our Town" and collected three Pulitzer prizes for his novels and plays, is dead of a heart attack at age 78.

The playwright, novelist, teacher and traveler died in his sleep Sunday while napping at the Hamden, Conn., house he shared with his sister, Isabel, a family spokesman said.

Wilder, who wrote numerous plays and eight novels in his half-century career, was brought to the Hospital of St. Raphael in nearby New Haven about 7:25 p.m. where he was pronounced dead.

Amos Tappan Wilder, a nephew, said Wilder had been in poor health for several years but had continued to travel occasionally.

Wilder won his first Pulitzer in 1928 for the novel "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." The others were for the plays "Our Town" in 1938 and "The Skin of Our Teeth" in 1943.

He also wrote "The Matchmaker" which was turned into "Hello Dolly," the longest running broadway musical.

Wilder received in 1963 the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian citation, and was the first recipient of the National Book Committee's National Medal for Literature, which was presented at the White House in 1967. The latter honor was for his novel, "The Eighth Day."

Wilder completed his last book "Theophilus North" in October 1973. It was the story of a young man's adventures in the 1920s in the seacoast resort of Newport, R.I.

Thornton Niven Wilder was born April 17, 1897 in Madison, Wis., the second of five children of Amos Wilder, editor of a newspaper. When he was 9, his father was named consul general in Hong Kong and later

THORNTON WILDER

Shanghai, and Wilder attended German and English schools in China. He later went to schools in California. His first literry effort was scribbled in an algebra book: "The Russian Princess, an Extravaganza."

Wilder studied at Oberlin College and spent a year in the Coast Guard before graduating from Yale in 1920. He taught French for several years before obtaining masters degree from Princeton in 1926.

He studied archeology in Rome and wrote his first novel, "The Cabala," about the city. It was published in 1926, the same year his first play, "The Trumpet Shall Sound," was produced.

In addition to his sister and nephew, Wilder is survived by a brother, Rev. Amos Niven Wilder, Hollis Professor of Divinity Emeritus at Harvard; three sisters, Charlotte of Brattleboro, Vt.; and Janet Wilder Dankin of Amherst, Mass.; and a niece, Katharine Dix Wilder of New Haven.

A memorial service will be announced later. Burial will be private.

DUMPING ILLEGAL

I have a complaint against some people from near Greenville. They dump their trash in our neighborhood on County Road 1134. We have the names and addresses of several of them and if they continue, we will turn them in to the legal authorities. Is there anything we can do about this? Mrs. E.D.

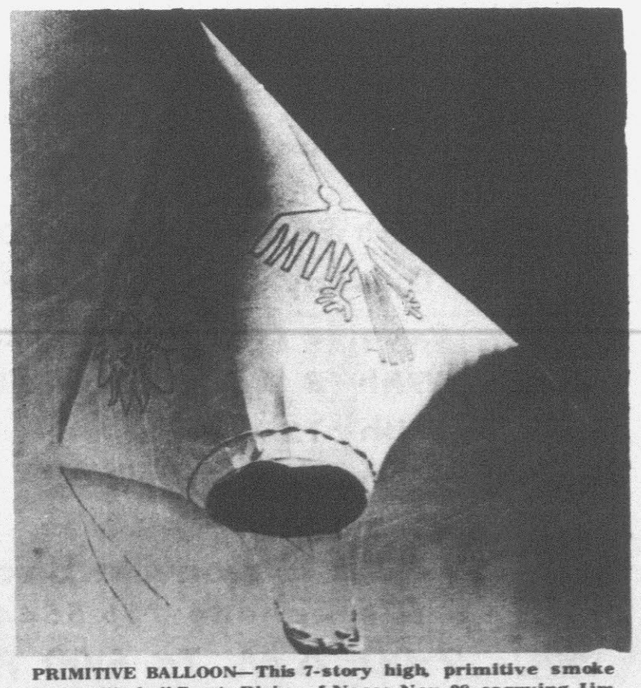

Pitt County Environmental Health Director Willie Pate said probably the best approach would be a direct one. Call the people whose names you have and ask them to come and clean up the trash they've left on your property. If they do not, let the Environmental Health Division of the Health Department know. They will investigate to try to learn who is doing the dumping. Then they'll make the same request—clean it up or face indictment. Dumping of trash anywhere except in the county landfill is a misdemeanor and violators can be taken to court. Your name would not be disclosed by the Health Department, Pate said, unless you did have to serve as a complainant or witness in court.

Pate said they have had occasions in which people paid to pick up refuse are dumping somewhere besides in the landfill. If this were found to be true, he said, the person's license to do business could be revoked.

WAKE-UP SERVICE?

Are there any telephone calling services around here to wake up a person in the morning. Mrs. J.M.

Pearl Bailey Says Hate Spewed

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan says his blunt U.N. speeches may be a new American style at the world organization but this is the way other nations normally behave.

"We think the United Nations matters ... We think that the only way to stay there is to stay there and fight ... Harsh attack ... is the order of the day over there," he said Sunday in a joint appearance with singer-actress Pearl Bailey, a special adviser to his U.N. delegation, on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

"It has been, perhaps, an American hope that if we didn't respond to attacks upon us, maybe they wouldn't be made," said Moynihan. "... It may perhaps unnerve some people that we are doing this because it's new.

"What we have said is ... we will respond to untrue charges against us. We will, when attacked, defend the good name of this democracy."

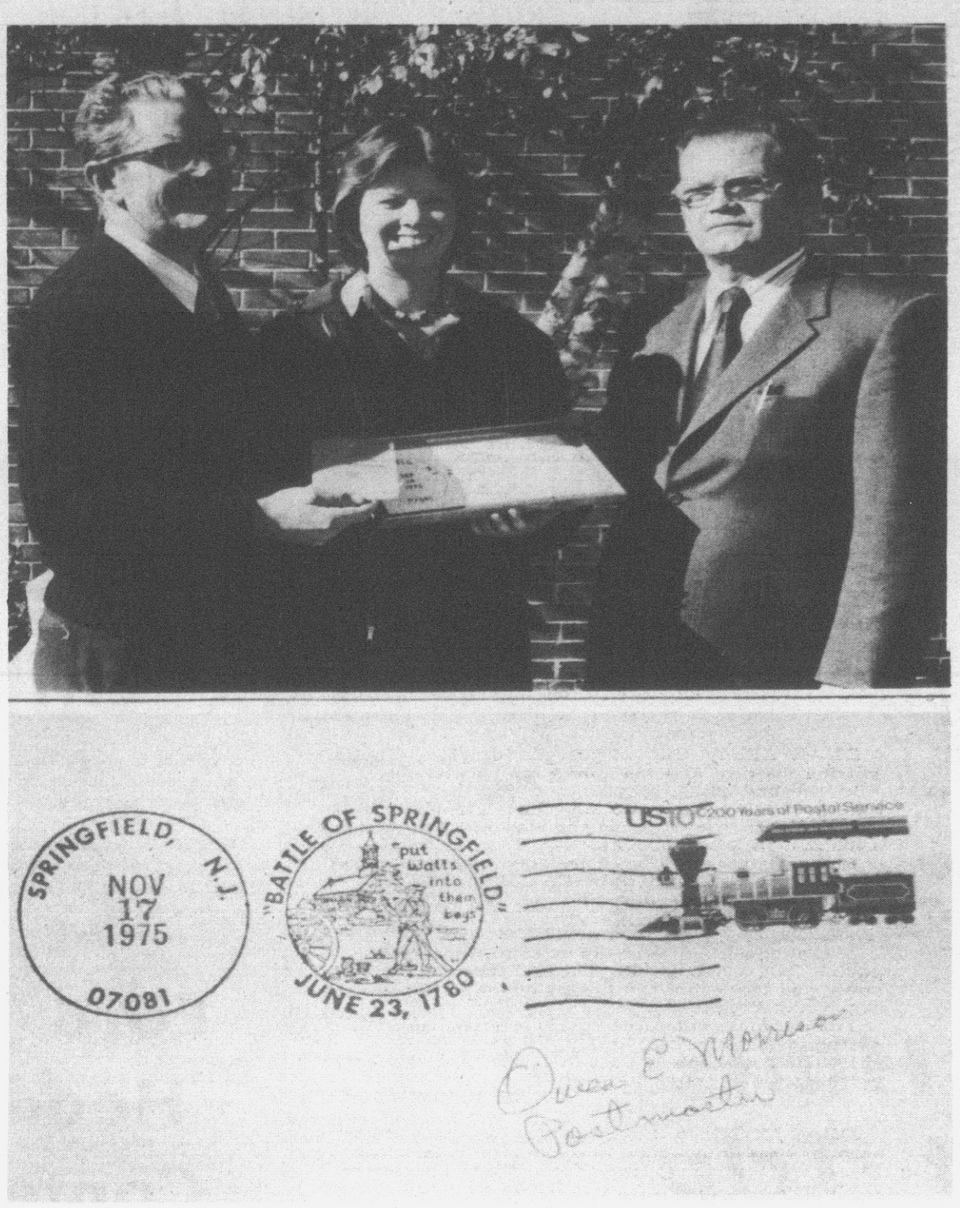

"Everybody is blunt in there," said Miss Bailey. "I would like to walk down the aisle sometimes and edit some of the speeches. The first time they say what they're going to say, and then they spew hatred for the next 45 minutes ... I do wish the American people and people of all nations could come and listen to how this world is getting torn asunder."

Miss Bailey, who is starring in a Broadway revival of production "Hello, Dolly!" said she had received "batches and batches" of letters from Puerto Ricans praising her defense of the island's U.S. Commonwealth status after the Cuban ambassador said it was an oppressed colonial possession of the United States.

A student majoring in art education at the School of Art, East Carolina University, has been honored by the U.S. Post Office in having a pictorial cancellation she designed used to commemorate a historic event.

Debra J. Morrison of Kenilworth, New Jersey, entered a design to mark the June 23, 1780 "Battle of Springfield" (New Jersey) which was chosen by postal authorities for use on mail postmarked at the Springfield post office. Ms. Morrison's father, Owen E. Morrison, is postmaster of Springfield.

Earlier, Ms. Morrison was also presented a copy of the Bicentennial Philatelic Passport covering the Original Thirteen States. Designed in the format of a U.S. passport, the Philatelic Passport is for collecting commemorative philatelic postmarks of especially designated heritage sites for each state represented in the passport.

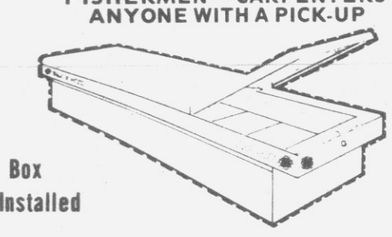

The passports are taken to an appropriate postoffice where postal personnel will place a stamp and hand-cancel the page for the collector. These are also available in three forms other than for the original 13 colonies—Ten Southern States; Twelve Central States; and Thirteen Western States. Price of each passport is $2 each. Information on their purchase is available at local post offices.

DEAR ABBY: This past year, my husbnd and I have entertained three couples for dinner in our home. Upon leaving, all have said, "We will have to have you over soon."

Well, "soon" never came with any of them.

When we accidentally run into them somewhere, they say, "We've been meaning to call you..."

Abby, these three couples get together often. We know because we see their cars parked in front of the homes of one or the other. However, none of them has made an effort to include us.

My husband says that I am foolish to stand on ceremonies—that as long as we enjoy their company (and we do) I should invite them back.

I think three invitations without being invited back is enough. I'd like your opinion.

ALWAYS THE HOSTESS

DEAR ALWAYS: I'm with you. One for one is the proper ratio, but two for none should be the absolute limit.

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, Phyllis, is getting married, and her plans are unbelievable.

In the first place, Phyllis and Rick have been living together for two years and they have a 4-month-old baby. Phyllis wants to walk down the aisle with the baby in her arms and Rick by her side!

Phyllis' father and I have been divorced for 14 years, but Phyllis wants us to walk down the aisle together. Then she's got my present husband and her father's present wife teamed up as a "couple" to walk down the aisle together. (Have you ever heard of anything so asinine?)

The wedding will be held in church and the kids are paying for everything. Phyllis and Rick wrote their own vows, and they claim the pastor approved all these plans. Can you believe it?

This wedding should take place in a zoo—not a church. I am happy that Phyllis is finally going to marry Rick, but do you think I should take part in this farce, or should I stay home with a migraine headache?

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: Unconventional as the wedding may seem, it's the bride's day, and she may do things her way. Please don't get a migraine. Your daughter needs you, and you'd be missing one of the most unorthodox weddings of all time.

DEAR ABBY: Eleven years ago, when my son was 5-years-old, I was financially unable to care for him so I placed him in a home where I knew he would be properly provided for. I had no choice, Abby.

Now he is 16, and when he visits me, he makes demands, uses abusive language and treats me in a most cruel and insulting manner.

I feel that this is his way of punishing me for having put him in a home.

What is the best way to cope with this situation? I don't appreciate this type of treatment from my own son. Thank you.

ABUSED

DEAR ABUSED: If you can't make him understand that you placed him in a home because you thought it would be best for him, perhaps a clergyman or counselor can. Your son desperately needs to be assured that he was loved—not abandoned.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a mail carrier, and I'm sure very few people know what their mailmen have to contend with. For example: With the crime rate so high, many people keep mean dogs to protect their property. That's fine, but these dogs should be tied up so they can't attack deliverymen.

My husband averages about one bite a week from dogs whose owners claim they "never bite anyone, but like to make a lot of noise."

Another problem: The mail carrier is charged for all postage due on mail on his route, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, the money comes out of the mailman's pocket.

You may say, "Two or 3 cents isn't all that much," but my husband has over 300 stops to make some days, and it all adds up.

Care to comment?

PHOENIX WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I am informed that mail carriers are not obligated to deliver mail at homes where watchdogs are allowed to run loose.

As for postage-due mail: True, the carrier is charged for all postage-due mail on his route. He leaves the mail and an envelope stating the amount due, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, he's out of luck.

Nearby Fire Hydrant A 'Must'

A Daily Reflector Hotline item last week discussed the fire hydrant situation on Greenville Boulevard.

The question was about the long distance that firemen had to lay hose in order to fight the fire at McDonald's Restaurant last week.

Firemen reportedly had to pull a hose some 1,200 feet down the highway from the nearest hydrant.

Fire Chief Ray Smith said he agreed that more hydrants were needed in the area and said that recommendations for the installation of three more have been approved and they will be installed by Greenville Utilities crews in December. More are to be installed as funds are available.

We hope there are not other areas of the city where fire hydrants are located such great distances from businesses and other property. Time can be an important factor in fighting a fire and obviously it takes some time to lay a hose 1,200 feet to the nearest hydrant.

We hope that all sections of the city will be surveyed to make certain that there are not areas where the fire hydrants are too sparse to protect the property in the area. If there are any such situations, then immediate steps should be taken to correct them.

Which Fish Is Doing The Swallowing?

The City of Fayetteville is said to be moving in the direction of annexing the huge Ft. Bragg military base and possibly Pope Air Force Base.

If the annexation is completed the city's population would be almost doubled to around 100,000 people. The military bases would continue to provide their own services, and the benefit to Fayetteville would be a boost in income from federal and state revenue sharing.

The move suits us all right, but the question has to arise—given the size of Ft. Bragg—of just which fish is doing the swallowing.

Critical Shoreline Wash

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Two million tons of soil from North Carolina's shoreline is being lost each year as cropland and other useful land, due to erosion of the banks along coastal rivers, bays, sounds, and estuaries.

This startling rate of land wash in the state was revealed in a 15-county survey just completed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service. Results are contained in an illustrated booklet on shoreline erosion now available.

Most of the erosion is what soil experts term "edge erosion" rather than "sheet erosion." That means the banks are actually caving into the water as opposed to topsoil washed off.

Conservationist John F. Rice, author of the survey booklet, says most of the erosion is the result of direct wave action on exposed banks along the state's waterways. The study does not include losses on shorelines directly exposed to the Atlantic Ocean, or to the sound side of the Outer Banks, although considerable additional erosion is occurring on those sections.

Compare Photos

Rice has compared recent aerial photographs of the area with available data from previous surveys.

As an example of the rate of land loss, he pointed to actual surface area washed away in two extreme cases: Beaufort County has lost 968 acres in 32 years; Hyde County has lost 2,136 acres in 25 years. Losses in other counties range from several hundred to the peak in Hyde County.

The land loss, serious as that is, is not the only concern. The soil is being deposited in coastal waters as sediment, narrowing the flow channels, filling creek beds, and ultimately clogging passageways.

State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks, who heads the Soil Conservation Service in North Carolina, said the study was undertaken because of "an increasing awareness of the erosion and sediment problem in this area of the state." He said local conservation districts and county Soil Conservation offices receive increasing requests for help in solving such problems.

The new publication entitled, "North Carolina Shoreline Erosion Inventory" is available without charge to the public, and gives specific characteristics and locations of the areas of greatest erosion. Maps outline the problem in detail for each county.

Land Washed

Comparing the aerial photos dating back as far as 1938 produced the information on areas which eroded from dry, usable land to water. Local conservationists carried out on-site measurements, and compiled data on soil type, land use, bank height, exposure, etc. An average weight of 90 pounds per cubic foot of soil material was used to reach the annual loss rate of two million tons.

There are steps landowners can take to protect the shoreline, and in some cases reverse the trend, Rice said. Ground cover crops selected to suit local conditions can do the job in some areas, while structural measures have been effective in others, Rice said.

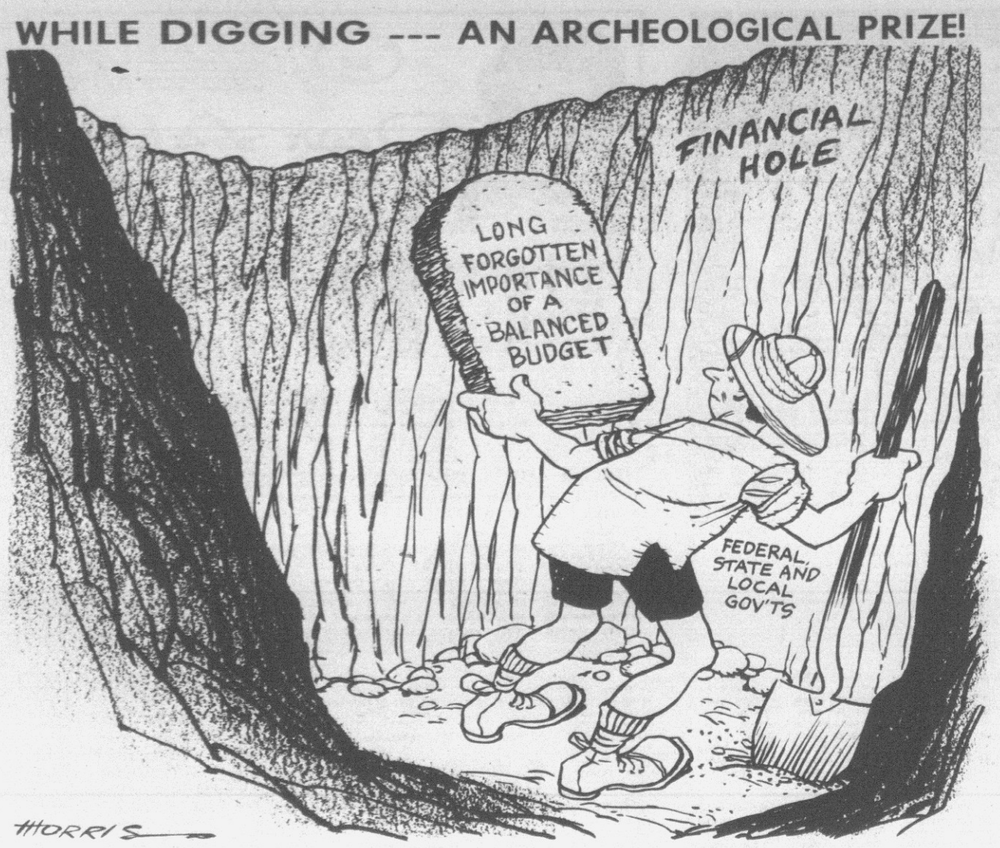

The most effective structure is a sloped rip-rap headwall of stone. Timber is used in the same way, but doesn't last as long.

Concrete headwalls are effective, but more expensive, and those methods only serve to hold and protect the soil from wave action.

In certain locations where sand and sediment in the water can be trapped, groins or jetties made from heavy timber can be built into the waterway to actually build up land area.

"The state has a real problem in the coastal regions on which we have compiled this data," Hicks said. "The Soil Conservation Service is ready to help landowners, local government officials, and other concerned individuals do something about this very real problem."

Why Johnny Can't---

WASHINGTON—There is increasing evidence that students are not doing as well in school these days as they used to. The national tests they take to get into college show that in most subjects this generation of scholars has taken a dive. Are the kids of today any dumber than those of yesteryear? I don't think so. I believe one of the reasons there's been such a letdown is that the parents of today's students are doing their kids' homework.

The phone rings in my office about six times a week, and this is a typical conversation.

"Mr. Buchwald, my name is Mrs. Thunderbush, and my son Gerald has to do a paper on freedom of speech and the First Amendment. I wonder if you could help him?"

"Where is Gerald now?" I asked her. "Why doesn't he call me himself?"

"He's very busy, and I said I would get the information for him."

"What good is it going to do him if you get the information? I assume the teacher gave him the assignment to instruct him in how to gether data for his paper."

"But I'm his mother. It's not as if he asked a stranger to call up up."

"Mrs. Thunderbush, you sound like a wonderful parent, but don't you think you would be doing Gerald a better service if you let him do his own homework?"

"Mr. Buchwald, Gerald is 15 years old. When a boy gets to that age there's so little a mother can do for him. He's so independent. I can't buy clothes for him any more. I can't tell him who to play with. I can't even tell him when to go to bed at night. The only thing he'll still let me do is help with homework. Believe me, if I didn't have that I wouldn't know I had a son."

ART BUCHWALD

"But," I protested, "someday when Gerald goes out in the cold, cruel world and he has a research assignment, how will he know how to do it?"

"I'll always be there when Gerald needs me."

"That's not the point. The idea of writing a paper is to learn how to gather facts and then put them down. The teacher doesn't care what you or I have to say about the First Amendment. She wants Gerald to find out about it, and the only way it will make an impression on him is if he does it himself."

"You can say that, Mr. Buchwald, because your son doesn't have the assignment. But, believe me, if you were Gerald's parent, you'd be whistling out of the other side of your mouth. After all, you don't have to sign Gerald's report card."

"Mrs. Thunderbush, I believe you're doing your son harm by working on his homework. What pleasure will Gerald get out of a paper he hands in which he knows is not all his own work?"

"He'll get pleasure out of knowing there was a mother who stood by him and cared enough about him to help him through the rockiest part of his life—which was school."

"Well, first of all, why didn't you look up the First Amendment in the encyclopedia instead of calling me?"

"Because all the mothers of the kids in Gerald's class use the encyclopedia. I wanted Gerald's paper to be more original."

"All right. I'm terribly busy now, but if you come by this afternoon I'll give you

Panel's Absent Voice

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Something was missing last week when Carolina Power and Light Co.'s Shearon Harris stopped in at the State Utilities Commission to testify in behalf of CP&L's latest rate increase request.

Hugh Wells was not there.

Wells resigned from the commission last summer to take a more lucrative job with the North Carolina Electric Membership Corp.

When he was a member, the usually soporific commission hearings were energized. One never knew when Wells would lash out at a utilities executive like Duke Power Co.'s Carl Horn. Once he said Horn expected the commissioners to be "waterboys who will bail him out on request." He often exchanged heated words with Harris.

Hugh Wells was nobody's waterboy. He was a man who felt—and stated that "when Shearon Harris and Carl Horn come to plead their cases, I figure it's my job to look them in the eye and say, 'Well, you say you did right, but that's your word. That's not enough for me. I want to see the proof you can back it up with.'"

Wells did just that. When he wasn't satisfied with the proof, he voted against the utilities' requests.

His influence went beyond his single vote. Wells could be persuasive with the other commissioners, partly because they knew he would not hesitate to take his case to the public in a critical dissent or newspaper interview.

His absence at the commission is reflected in more than the lack of questions from the bench to Harris last week.

With Wells gone, the two most influential commissioners have become George Clark and Marvin Wooten. Clark is the leader of the Republicans on the commission; there are now five of them among the seven members. Wooten is the commission's chairman. He was originally appointed by conservative Democratic Gov. Dan K. Moore.

The influence of Wooten and Clark is increased by the inexperience of the three newest members, Ward Purrington, Barbara Simpson and Lester Teal. All began serving in July.

The panel for the CP&L case, for example, consisted of Clark, Teal and Simpson. Clark is the only lawyer among them and the only one who has heard a major CP&L request before.

Attorneys who practice before the commission consider both Clark and Wooten men of firm integrity. But they say neither one has the viewpoint Hugh Wells brought to a hearing.

"There seems to be a feeling on the commission now that the men who manage the utilities are pretty capable and wouldn't be asking for a rate increase if they didn't need it," said one lawyer.

"The consumers are going to have to prove there's something wrong with a request before this group will deny it. The burden should be on the company," said another. Neither would speak on the record, since both must practice before the commissioners they were speaking of.

Since Wells' departure, there have been several decisions that indicated a change in the commission's attitude. It reversed a position argued by Wells and granted a higher rate increase in a Nantahala Power Co. case. It granted CP&L an

INSIDE REPORT

The Politics Of Blandness

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—While almost surely avoiding a Senate confirmation fight, the nomination of Judge John Paul Stevens contains subtle dangers for the Supreme Court and again exposes the limitations of Gerald R. Ford's bland presidency.

There is no secret why Stevens, a member of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago, was selected. President Ford and his justice-hunters were seeking the best qualified nominee likely to win quick confirmation. But in doing so, Mr. Ford furthered a trend toward capture of the nation's highest court by the organized legal profession which could convert it into a body of legal mechanics rather than lawgivers.

Moreover, the Stevens appointment reflects two characteristics at the Ford White House: a genuine desire to fill the Supreme Court with the best qualified justices, tempered by a timid inability to seize the challenge and opportunity of a coveted court vacancy. The end product comes over as the politics of blandness.

Whereas President Richard M. Nixon's court nomination strategy was crassly political, Mr. Ford may have gone to the opposite extreme. The selection process was conducted by Atty. Gen. Edward Levi and White House Counsel Philip Buchen, assisted by Richard Cheney, the new White House chief of staff. Cheney has little experience in party politics, Levi and Buchen none at all.

Mr. Ford, shaken by four non-judicial nominations shot down in the Senate recently, wanted no prolonged fight over William O. Douglas's successor. So Levi and Buchen quickly eliminated the favorite of hard-line conservatives: Solicitor General Robert Bork, superbly qualified but stigmatized, unfairly, by the Saturday night massacre.

In fact, the justice-hunters decided a sitting federal judge would both ease confirmation and expedite the court's backlog. That killed chances for a woman justice. District Judge Cornelia Kennedy of Michigan, the only conservative Republican woman on the federal bench seriously considered, was deemed unqualified for the Supreme Court.

Finalists for the seat were all male Republican conservative federal judges—a result bringing much joy to the American Bar Assn. (ABA). "A lot of us feel . . . that you shouldn't start your judicial career on the Supreme Court," said ABA president Lawrence E. Walsh.

Selecting Stevens not only means that five of the court's nine members now will be alumni of federal appellate courts but strengthens the new role in shaping the court exercised by the ABA, the legal profession's trade association. With Mr. Ford continuing the questionable Nixon precedent of submitting names in advance to the ABA, the legal profession's trade association. With Mr. Ford continuing the questionable Nixon precedent of submitting names in advance to the ABA, the high court could become the mere high point in a judicial escalator system.

Certainly Hugo Black, who as a Senator from Alabama lacked legal experience but proved a towering figure on the court, could never pass ABA muster today. No member of Congress would even be submitted by the Ford White House. Considerable conservative sentiment built up in recent weeks for Rep. Charles Wiggins of California. But Wiggins, while an indisputably brilliant lawyer, lacked long legal experience and was blackballed as "undistinguished." Respected conservative academicians, such as the University of Chicago's Philip B. Kurland, were scarcely considered.

That criterion would have deprived the court not only of Hugo Black and William Douglas but other famed justices lacking judicial experience—including John Marshall, Roger Taney, Louis Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter, Charles Evans Hughes and Earl Warren (plus Nixon appointees Lewis Powell and William Rehniquist).

Furthermore, some lawyers (including loyal Ford Republicans) worry whether the veto power of faceless lawyers in the ABA is inappropriate for a Supreme Court which, uniquely in the world, is not merely the highest appeals court but a separate branch of govern-

Highway 264

(The Wilson Times)

It is encouraging to read that a Highway 264 Association Executive Advisory Board has been named. As much time and effort has been spent on efforts to obtain four-laning of Highway 264 as any project we can recall. It makes no difference whether the efforts occur during a Democratic administration or a Republican administration, the object is the same and, to date, progress has been made.

Highway 64 has been four-laned to Zebulon and a new Highway 264, consisting of two limited-access lanes on a four-lane right-of-way, is under construction from Zebulon to Wilson. This should ease congestion because traffic to Sims, Bailey, Middlesex and Zebulon will utilize the old Highway 264.

It should not be long now before completion of the new highway from Zebulon to Highway I-95 west of Wilson and this will make travel from Wilson to Raleigh and points west convenient and pleasant. With only two lanes of Highway 264 the traffic was heavy and dangerous for a motorist cannot get around the tractor-trailer rigs which are becoming larger and heavier.

While some degree of success has marked efforts to obtain an improved highway between Wilson and Raleigh, little progress has been made to get Highway 264 four-laned from Wilson eastward.

Much time and effort has been spent on this project. Several years ago, there was a meeting at the Cherry Hotel attended by leaders of the area which a four-laned Highway 264 would serve. Since that time, there has been one try after another.

From the new advisory board, some progress should be made in four-laning 264 on down to Swan Quarter. This section is growing industrially and roads can either increase the growth or restrict it. With such a board, progress should be made and we are certain the board can get all the help it needs from those who live along the proposed improved highway.

MORE THAN WHITE PAINT NEEDED

In this town there stands a little old house which used to sag very noticebly. But recently the house received a new coat of paint, and strange as it may seem, the fact that the house does not stand four square is by no means so discernable.

But of course it sags just as badly as it ever did. It isn't possible to straighten up a crooked house with a coat of white paint. The situation regarding the house has its parallel in human life. A little white paint might make a sagging, crooker character look better, but the improvement is only in the appearance. Underneath the paint the habits, the selfish desires, the indifference to the welfare of other people is just the same. It takes a fundamental overhauling of the structure to straighten out both sagging houses and sagging characters. And until this task is done at the cost of sacrifice and labor, both house and character, even though freshly painted, are in danger of collapse.

Says Industry Irritating Wives

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An authority on corporate personnel matters says industry is irritating an increasing number of wives and the corporate world must seek a truce or face defeat.

As Eugene Jennings sees it, business is overmatched. It cannot meet its challenges if it continues to offend the wives. Literally, he feels, enough unhappy wives can undermine industry.

Jennings, a management professor at Michigan State University who is also an author and counselor to top corporate executives, says the reason is that future management men cannot be developed without the support of wives.

Basic to his argument is the observation, proven over the years, that industry best trains its managers, at least in part, by testing them in various jobs in many parts of the corporation. Usually this requires geographical mobility.

Geographical mobility means the uprooting of the family every few years — new homes, schools, churches, clubs, friends, activities. For the man, his career compensates. For the wife there are few personal rewards.

A mobile manager is most effective when he has a wife willing to make these sacrifices for his career. For many years this has been so; the wives have been willing to stay home and make the sacrifices.

"In the 1960s and before, the vast majority of mobile managers had wives who were homemakers," said Jennings, who began his pioneer studies of corporate mobility in the late 1940s. "Nine of 10 mobile managers in their early 30s had wives who were homemanagers."

Now, however, the ratio is down to 6 in 10. "The women are becoming less and less supportive of the husbands' mobility," Jennings explained. They are seeking their own identities. Many pursue their own careers.

Seeking the explanation, Jennings spent many weekends with managers and their wives. His conclusion: "The real issue, as the mobile wives perceive it, is social inequity."

The worst injustice encountered by the wife who stays home to take care of the family is to see her husband surpassed by a career woman who sends her kids out to a day care center..

"While the homemaker is pursuing the traditional responsibilities of giving tender loving care to the family and home, another woman captures the brass ring, even though neglecting her family responsibilities," said Jennings.

"There is no wrath like that of a mobile wife when her husband is beaten out by a woman of this type."

Adding to the homemanager's rage is the fact that some career women can obtain a tax deduction for child care costs. But, asks Jennings, can the homemanager, whose work is equally important, do so? No.

As the children grow older and often more expensive, the disadvantage of a single income becomes painful to the wife who stays at home. She sees her career counterpart able to afford a considerably higher living standard.

Aurora People Fear Their Town Will Be Devoured

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

AURORA, N.C. (AP) — Residents of this eastern North Carolina farming community have taken on a multinational corporation in a battle that they say will determine whether the town continues to exist.

Once lauded by town officials as Aurora's hope of salvation, Texasgulf Inc. is now considered a predator that will devour the town, Aurora Mayor Grace Bonner said. "Every indication is that they wish the town would not develop, that it would disappear. They keep trying things to erase the town, to remove the town," she said.

Company officials, however, deny the allegations.

Phosphate, a valuable mineral in fertilizer production, is at the heart of the issue. Texasgulf is digging the black rock about eight miles from Aurora and townspeople say it is only a matter of time before the behemoth draglines reach the town. Aurora is amidst some 100,000 acres of one of the world's richest phosphate deposits.

Fearing the company will eventually raze the town to get at the phosphate about 100 feet below, Aurora has adopted a land use plan that controls development within a mile of town limits. The plan rules out mining in all but a few parts of that area.

Among the 50,000-plus acres owned by Texasgulf in the county is a substantial portion of the section to be regulated by Aurora. Texasgulf says it won't mine Aurora. But, James Paden, manager of the mining operation, said at a town meeting last month that the firm would take whatever action necessary, "legal or otherwise," to oppose the plan, Mrs. Bonner and others at the meeting said. Paden denies saying "or otherwise."

Near the Atlantic Coast, Aurora is on South Creek, a tributary of the Pamlico River. It has a population of 671 and, until Texasgulf moved in, depended on agriculture for its economy.

Phosphate was discovered there in 1951 but little was done until 1958 when Texasgulf—then Texas Gulf Sulphur Co.—explored and found more than 100,000 acres of mineable rock. It is 100-200 feet underground and 30-40 feet thick. It is removed by stripmining and the supply may last more than 200 years.

Texasgulf began buying land about 1963. Farm profits were low at the time and local farmers said they were happy to sell. The company was offering up to $630 an acres, about double the going price.

"It looked like a tremendous opportunity to sell some of this land, pay for some equipment and get ahead," said Billy Thompson, a farmer and owner of a farm supply store.

Aurora and Beaufort County officials were also excited about the potential offered by Texasgulf. Mrs. Bonner's husband, Frank, was mayor then. He said he worked to bring the company in because it would provide jobs, keep young people from leaving and make the town grow.

Texasgulf dominates the area's economy. The county's largest taxpayer, it has invested some $180 million and pays $700,000 in state and county taxes, $300,000 going to the county. Employing 980 persons locally, the annual payroll is $13.5 million. Beginning pay is $3.62 an hour, about 30 per cent higher than the average industrial wage in North Carolina.

The company also donates $350 a month for a teacher aide, $100 a month to support a band director and provides an environmental science class for Aurora's schools. The company also has given a cash gift to each of the town's teachers at Christmas.

Beyond economics, Texasgulf has been influential in local affairs with its upper level employes serving on governmental and public service agency boards. One company official said upper echelon employes are virtually assigned to live in one of the communities near the plant and strongly urged to become involved in local affairs and get to know influential people.

For example, John Hird, a supervisor at the mine, is chairman of the county planning board, the panel which reviewed Aurora's land use plan. According to Mrs. Bonner, Hird refused to let the town present the plan at a meeting last month and stormed out when town officials demanded to be heard. The other board members listened to the presentation, however.

The land use plan created friction between the town and the company with Texasgulf being accused of trying to kill Aurora. There are also charges of economic sanctions being imposed against Aurora.

Whit Morrow, who heads the local office of the state Department of Natural and Economic Resources, commented in a telephone interview, "I know Texasgulf has put the squeeze on the town in the past few months." Morrow's role has been mediating, trying to help the town and the company resolve their differences. If it can't be talked out, he said, "it could really get ugly."

Scott Stidham, administrative manager for Texasgulf's agricultural division, and June Crawford, the engineering manager, said the company is not trying to kill the town and denied there have been economic sanctions against those favoring the land use plan.

Bonner, who said he built an apartment complex at the urging of Texasgulf officials, said a company employe recently told him his housing is being boycotted. Few Texasgulf employes rent his apartments, but when they do, they move out "as fast as lightning," Bonner said.

As to claims of boycotts, Crawford said, "We buy from the local hardware store, the local gas company and the local oil company if we can... It's just good business."

An Aurora businessman who asked to remain anonymous said his dealings with Texasgulf fell dramatically after the land use dispute erupted. He said the company gave no explanation.

Another factor causing the town to wilt is Texasgulf's farming activites. Some 1,200 acres are used for growing crops and there are several cattle grazing areas. Since the company has taken over the land, small farmers have been driven out.

Thompson said his farm supply business has fallen about 60 per cent because Texasgulf buys its supplies direct. Ten years ago he had 300-400 farm customers, but now has about 50, he said.

Several farmers who sold land to Texasgulf say they were deceived. They were led to believe they could farm the land until the firm needed it for mining, they said. Instead, the company went into farming itself.

Hiram Paul, who farms about 450 acres, is bitter about being evicted from land he was renting from Texasgulf. "If this keeps happening and they keep moving in on me, I'm going to get squeezed out," he said. Noting the company has provided needed jobs, Paul said, "As far as the farmer goes, they haven't done anything but slit his throat."

Farming the land before it is mined is just an effort to make a profit on it in the meantime, Stidham said.

A dozen years ago there was harmony. John Wilkinson, an attorney in nearby Washington, N.C., handled land acquisition and some legal matters for the firm back then. He and company officials were predicting a boom for Aurora with a population hitting 15,000.

It didn't happen. In the last 15 years, Aurora's population increased by only 242 persons. The downtown area is rotting as businesses close and no other new industry has moved in.

Town leaders are miffed. "We feel like we were misled," Bonner said.

Crawford said one reason the town hasn't grown is, "It's an out-of the-way place in the world." It's on a back road, far from a major highway.

Work on the controversial land use plan began two years ago. Randy Hester, a professor of landscape architecture at North Carolina State University, and several students drew it up after exhaustive studies of the town's problems and potential and what the people want.

Hester, who calls the dispute a "classic story of the small town versus the monster industry," said the noise and air pollution would drive residents away if mining were allowed closer than a mile of the town. Donna Palmer, a student on the project from the start, said townspeople have flatly rejected moving the town as a solution.

A $31,000 grant financed development of the plan, but those funds run out in May. Miss Palmer said additional funds are needed to help the town implement and enforce the plan as well as carry out civic improvements. But, Hester said, the governor's office and govermental agencies have refused to help.

Mrs. Bonner said the company is trying to force the town to deteriorate so people will move out and land values will plummet.

It won't work, she said. "I think everyone is in total agreement and everyone is willing to stick to their guns and stick together," she said, adding, "But no one outside of here really cares about Aurora."

Again Texasgulf officials disagree. "We can't control what happens to Aurora; we can't make Aurora grow or not grow," Crawford said.

"Our company has a real interest in improving the standard of living there and improving education," Stidham said.

INVOLVED IN STRUGGLE — These are the principals involved in a fight they say will determine whether Aurora continues to exist. From left: Grace Bonner, mayor of Aurora; her husband Frank, a former mayor; Randy Hester, a professor who directed development of the town's land-use plan; and Donna Palmer, a student, who conducted much of the project. ment that Alexander Hamilton called an "intermediate body between the people and the legislature" to protect their rights.

But even if limited to sitting federal judges, why did Mr. Ford not end the seven-year absence of a Jewish justice which is keenly resented by Jews? One finalist, Judge Arlen Adams of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, was in fact Jewish. Or, failing that, why not name an Italian or a Pole or a black?

Atty. Gen Levi pushed vigorously for Stevens as the best qualified among the finalist. Levi is supremely non-political and, although Jewish, would never let that influence him. The result is the court's fifth Midwestern WASP (four named in the Ford-Nixon years) — irrelevant if the court is viewed non-politically in European terms but perhaps inappropriate in the American tradition.

Nevertheless, the mood at the White House is one of self-congratulation over an apparently fail-safe nominee. "Everybody's poring over Stevens's record," chortled one presidential aide, "but they can't lay a glove on him." Considering the pummeling Mr. Ford has taken lately, that may be good news enough for the President's men today, despite the subtle risks of encapsulating the Supreme Court in a blandness never intended for it.

Discount Pesticide Buyers Complaining

RALEIGH (AP)—State Department of Agriculture officials say they have been flooded with complaints about discount pesticides sold to farmers by telephone.

Farmers have complained that the products they getare often watered down, overpriced, or toxic to livestock and valuable crops, chief pesticide specialist James Collins said.

The state Pesticide Board, itself chaired by a salesman for a major pesticide manufacturer, has revoked the license of one of the companies, Dartmouth Chemical Corp. of New York.

Department officials estimate that there are about 30 similar companies still operating in the state.

Board chairman John C. Williamson said his firm, Uniroyal Chemical, does not compete with the telephone firms' products. "They're a scourge on the industry. The agricultural chemical business has enough trouble as it is."

Collins said he knew of one farmer that nearly ruined his peanut cropland with chemicals he had bought as weed killers.

"They would have killed anything growing. It would have been like salting the earth," Collins said.

Another farnmer, A.P. Holtzman of Warren County, said he was called at night by a salesman offering him a herbicide for the weeds near his hog pen. Holtzman agreed to buy 10 gallons for more than $15 per gallon.

When he received the chemical he found that, contrary to the salesman's claim, it was dangerous to his hogs and to nearby grapes.

Cash Stolen In Local Break-In

The theft of $24 in cash from National Printing Co. at 715 Albemarle Ave. is under investigation.

Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves took the money from an office at the printing firm after forcing a door to the building open.

The break-in was reported at 12:10 a.m. Saturday.

The commission also decided not to make the internal audit of Southern Bell's political slush fund a matter of public record. And it announced a more lenient policy on advertising by utilities.

All of those things might have happened anyway if Wells had remained on the commission. But Wells would probably have opposed them and made his views known in no uncertain terms. If any of the present commissioners opposed them, they have kept their dissenting views to themselves.

Dolphins' Strock Denies Nervousness As Starter

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

He was just a kid, they said. In his first two years as a reserve quarterback, a third-stringer, he hadn't thrown the ball even once. In this, his third year, he'd thrown it only five times — and that in a game that was already decided.

How in the world, they wondered, would this lanky, raw kid take over as a starter and direct a team fighting for its life in the National Football League?

He did it just fine, thank you.

"It's not my nature to be nervous," Don Strock said after passing for two touchdowns and running for one to lead the Miami Dolphins to a 31-21 victory over the Buffalo Bills. "I wasn't scared. I slept like a log last night, but I probably won't sleep tonight."

In Sunday's other games it was Baltimore 21, the New York Giants 0; St. Louis 31, Dallas 17; Washington 30, Atlanta 27; Pittsburgh 31, Cleveland 17; Cincinnati 31, Philadelphia 0; San Diego 28, Kansas City 20; Minnesota 24, Green Bay 3; Los Angeles 14, New Orleans 7; Houston 27, San Francisco 13; the New York Jets 30, New England 28, and Chicago 25, Detroit 21. Tonight it's Denver at Oakland.

Strock, a 6-foot-5, 200-pounder who had warmed Miami's bench since coming out of Virginia Tech as the nation's collegiate passing champion in 1972, went from No. 3 to No. 1 in a hurry when Bob Griese and Earl Morrall were hobbled by injuries in successive weeks. If Coach Don Shula had any reservations about how his kid quarterback would do, he didn't give any evidence of it.

"He was on his own, play-calling," Shula said. "All he needed was an opportunity and he showed that in a big way." He showed his stuff in a big hurry, too. He hit 10 straight passes and staked the Dolphins to a 21-0 halftime lead on his TD run of five yards and scoring strikes of eight yards and one yard to Howard Twilley.

The Bills charged back in the second half. O.J. Simpson scored twice on a 14-yard run and a 62-yard pass from Joe Ferguson, who also hit J.D. Hill with a 31-yard TD pass.

But the rally was offset by Norm Bulaich's one-yard touchdown run. And for Buffalo, it was too little, too late. With the loss, the Bills fell out of the playoff chase. And with the victory, Miami remained a game ahead of Baltimore in the American Conference East and set up a first-place showdown in the Colts' corral next Sunday.

Colts 21, Giants 0

"The record means a lot — if we get into the playoffs," Lydell Mitchell said after rushing for 119 yards to give himself 1,008 for the season and become the first Baltimore running back ever to hit four figures. "But individual efforts don't mean that much if we don't make it all the way."

Mitchell scored the only TD the Colts needed to make the Giants their seventh straight victim with a nine-yard run. The Baltimore defense did its part by sacking Craig Morton eight times.

Cardinals 31, Cowboys 17

Jim Hart made up for the four interceptions he threw against Buffalo on Thanksgiving Day by throwing three touchdowns in St. Louis' victory over Dallas that restored the Cardinals' sole possession of first place in the National Conference East.

The Cowboys fell into a second-place tie with Washington, their foe next Saturday.

Redskins 30, Falcons 27

Once again, Washington seemed headed for overtime when Atlanta's Nick Mike-Mayer kicked a 44-yard field goal with 61 seconds to play, tying things at 27-27.

But Billy Kilmer, who had thrown three touchdown passes earlier, marched the Washington across the field and Mark Moseley booted a 39-yard field goal with five seconds to play, lifting the Redskins to victory.

Steelers 31, Browns 17

Pittsburgh, stung by two Cleveland touchdowns within 14 seconds in the first half, rallied behind two Terry Bradshaw touchdown passes to Lynn Swann and two Franco Harris scoring runs. They rolled to their 10th straight victory and stayed a game ahead of Cincinnati in the AFC's Central Division.

Bengals 3, Eagles 0

Ken Anderson returned from a week on the bench with an injury and completed 20 of 25 passes for 223 yards, including a 10-yard TD pass to Ed Williams, in Cincinnati's rout of the Eagles. Williams also scored on a one-yard dive.

Chargers 28, Chiefs 20

"I knew things were changing," San Diego Coach Tommy Prothro said, "when I beat a slot machine for the first time when our plane stopped in Las Vegas on the way to Kansas City." Prothro was right. The Chargers won their first game of the year behind rookie Rickey Young's 124 yards and two touchdowns rushing.

Vikings 24, Packers 3

Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton threw two touchdown passes to John Gilliam and another to Chuck Foreman to beat the Packers and move within one TD pass of Johnny Unitas' NFL career record of 290.

Rams 14, Saints 7

Defensive end Jack Youngblood tackled New Orleans quarterback Archie Manning in the end zone for a safety and linebacker Jim Peterson ran 67 yards for a touchdown with a fumble recovery to lead Los Angeles to victory.

Oilers 27, 49ers 13

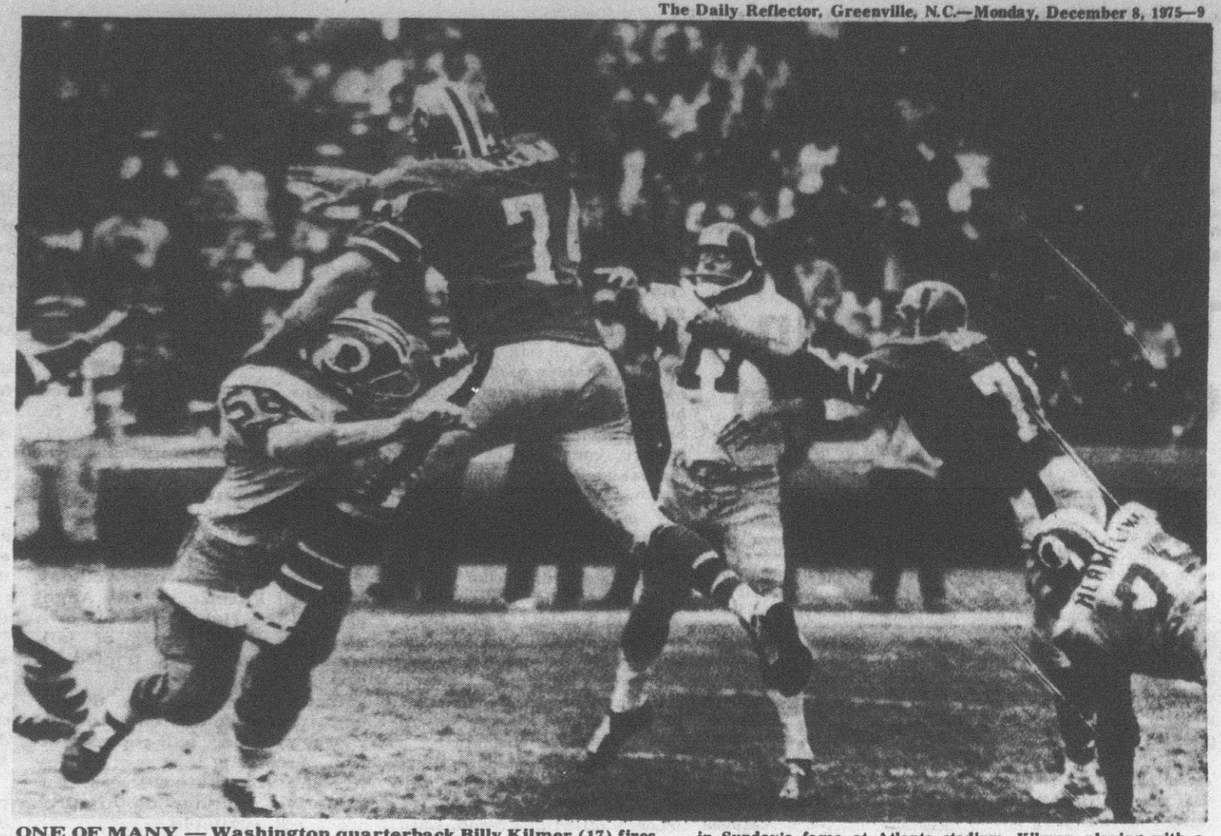

Houston's defense limited San Francisco to just five net yards rushing and Billy Johnson returned a punt 76 yards late in the game to seal the Oilers' victory over the 49ers.

Jets 30, Patriots 28

Joe Namath picked apart New England's defense, hitting on 14 of 18 passes for 160 yards, and John Riggins ran for 154 yards and two touchdowns as the Jets snapped an eight-game losing streak.

Bears 25, Lions 21

Roland Harper bolted 27 yards for a touchdown with 4:22 left to lift the Bears past Detroit. Harper's run came after the Lions had scored twice in a 69-second span on touchdown passes of 15 and 59 yards from Joe Reed to Marlin Briscoe.

Precision, Affection In Triumph

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — For love maybe, and money for sure: Chris Evert and Jimmy Connors displayed playful affection and precision tennis in winning $100,000 in their nationally televised challenge match against Marty Riessen and Billie Jean King.

After Saturday's much publicized mixed doubles, Miss Evert demurely gave most of the credit for the 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 triumph to her former fiance.

"Jimmy obviously controlled the match," she said.

Miss Evert said she was more nervous than usual before the first set.

"I'm known primarily as a singles player and haven't had that much experience in mixed doubles," she said.

But she said she soon relaxed as Connors played the dominant role in the match, making 80 per cent of the shots.

And following a typically slow start, Connors did dominate the $150,000 exhibition at the Caesars Palace indoor pavilion.

Connors used powerful forehand ground strokes, primarily at Ms. King. Afterward he said he was surprised with himself.

"I didn't think I'd go out and hit them that hard at the ladies," said Connors, who at 22 is the world's No. 1 men's singles player. "I've never done that before. But I guess for $100,000 I will."

Actually Connors was hitting shots at Ms. King for $50,000 since he and Miss Evert split the purse.

Riessen, 12 years older than Connors, figured the match turned in the third set when he and Ms. King missed an opportunity to break Connors' service and then lost service in the ninth game to give Connors and Evert the third set and a 2-1 advantage in sets.

There's talk already of another mixed doubles challenge involving Miss Evert and Connors, though nothing is set.

John Newcombe and Margaret Court issued a challenge to the winners of Saturday's match and Connors said he'd welcome the chance.

He's now picked up $400,000 in three exhibitions staged before national television audiences by Caesars Palace.

He defeated Rod Laver and John Newcombe in singles matches here before the doubles triumph.

World Cup Tourney In U.S. Seems Set In '76

By HARI S. MANIAM
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK (AP) — Next year's World Cup Golf Tournament appears headed for the United States, the country which headed home today with both the team and individual titles from the 23rd tournament.

"That will nicely coincide with the 200th anniversary celebrations," tournament director Fred J. Corcoran said after Johnny Miller rallied in the final round Sunday to win the individual title and teamed with Lou Graham for the team championship.

Corcoran, a former caddy who has arranged all of the Cup tournaments, said three states in the United States were bidding to host the 24th renewal. He did not name them.

The United States finished at 22-under-par 554 for four rounds over the 6,906-yard, par-72 Navatanee golf course, 10 strokes ahead of Taiwan. Japan was third at 565, followed by Australia, 566, and Argentina, 571.

"We played hard to try and win the honor for our country, but I did not expect to win the individual honor as well," said Miller.

The 28-year-old Californian shot a final-round 68 for a 13-under-par 275. That gave him a one-stroke victory over Bob Shearer of Australia and co-third round leaders Ben Arda of The Philippines and Hsieh Min-Nan of Taiwan. Shearer finished with a 69 while Arda and Hsieh each shot 73s.

Graham, the U.S. Open winner, finished with a 70 for a 279 total and fifth place.

Christy O'Connor Sr. of Ireland suggested that in the future the country that holds the World Cup should host preliminary tournaments so that golfers from various parts of the world could get used to the weather and other conditions.

For example, most of the Europeans had stoppped playing in October at the colder home grounds and suddenly they had to come here to play a world championship in tropical heat, O'Connor said.

"This is the first and last time I will be playing in Asia," said Brian Barnes of Scotland.

Juan Cabrera of Argentina suffered a dizzy spell in the clubhouse and Venezuelan Neal Machado stopped playing after getting a heat rash.

Jailhouse Lawyer Ranks Grow; Some Succeed

By RICHARD BENKE
Associated Press Writer

The odds are against them, the courts discourage them, and prosecutors and public defenders disapprove of their legal dabbling. Still, jailhouse lawyers are growing in large numbers.

They have something they want to say. They are broke and can't afford a lawyer. They don't like their court-appointed public counsel. They want to learn about the law. They have lots of time.

Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, convicted of attempting to assassinate President Ford, chose to represent herself "in propria persona," as lawbooks call being one's own attorney. The court heard her views on ecology and a variety of other subjects before the privilege was revoked.

Other notables handling their own cases have included Symbionese Liberation Army members Russell Little and Joseph Remiro, convicted of murdering Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster; and former University of California philosophy professor Angela Davis, who was acquitted of murder charges stemming from allegations she supplied the gun used in a San Rafael, Calif., courtroom shootout.

Judges prefer to keep such cases to a minimum, fearing too many will clog the court calendar with lengthy semi-competent legal wrangling.

"The court discourages it (self-representation)," said Joan McIntosh of the public defender's office in Fresno, Calif. "It puts the courts in the position of teaching defendants the law." In the past, jailhouse lawyers had to convince a judge they were competent to handle their own defense, but as a result of a ruling handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court last June, a defendant need only be warned of the possible consequences if he proceeds on his own without a lawyer.

"Now you can have it for wanting it," said Stuart R. Rappaport, chief of the trial division of the Los Angeles public defender's office. But he warned: "Almost anybody who represents himself is going to be convicted."

Since the Supreme Court ruled on June 30 that Anthony Pasquall Faretta of Los Angeles had the right to be his own attorney the number of jailhouse lawyers has tripled in Los Angeles County.

In other urban areas, the recent trend also has been toward more prisoner self-representation, according to a spot survey by The Associated Press. Cumulative nationwide figures were not available.

"It's very fair to say that more residents of state prisons are seeking (their own) court relief following their conviction than in past years," said a prison official in Massachusetts, where a prisoners rights suit three years ago resulted in the creation of law libraries in jails and prisons throughout the state.

Jailhouse lawyers interviewed complain that public defenders are overloaded with cases and go along too readily with judges and prosecutors in bargaining for a guilty plea by the client.

"A defendant is going to demand every right in court," said Los Angeles County prisoner Dennis Rutherford. "I fired my lawyer, got a new hearing on my own and I won the issue that he lost."

"The public defender assumed I was guilty," said Joseph B. Garcia, 27, of Santa Monica, Calif., who got part of the robbery case against him dropped after firing his court-appointed lawyer.

"I made a deal and went to prison twice at the suggestion of the public defender. Never again," said Roy Newsome, 31, of Los Angeles, now on trial for escaping from a courthouse.

Rappaport denies he helps "railroad" defendants but agrees court-encouraged plea bargaining can undermine a defendant's confidence in his lawyer. "It compromises our position," he said. But he maintains jailhouse lawyers bring most of their troubles on themselves out of ignorance.

Some increase in prisoners' filing petitions, especially habeas corpus legal briefs asking release from custody, has been noted in New York, West Virginia, Missouri, Ohio and Nevada, although apparently no formal statistics on such cases are being kept.

The incidence of jailhouse lawyers in Illinois "mostly comes in political trials where someone wants to get his message across," said Henry Sheffler, an official with the Cook County public defender's office.

"I would guess political activist types charged with crimes will try to represent themselves because they want to interject whatever political ideology they have into the case — a forum for their own political beliefs," said Kenneth Wells, head of the public defender's office in Sacramento, Calif.

Most prisoners interviewed said they act as their own attorney for lack of money to hire private counsel.

"It's money," said Barry Mintzes, spokesman for the Michigan Department of Corrections. "Most of the inmates are able to file as indigents, so they don't have to pay court costs in filing."

The number of jailhouse lawyers in Los Angeles peaked at 55 following several court rulings favoring "pro per" defendants, those who represent themselves "in propria persona."

The boom ended when the Superior Court issued a memorandum of understanding cutting back on pro per privileges in 1972. Since the memorandum the number of inmates asking to represent themselves had fallen off substantially until the Faretta ruling last June.

Tough Year In College System

RALEIGH (AP)—It has been a tough year for the North Carolina community college system.

Enrollment audits by the state Department of Education have found four schools that padded enrollments to gain an additional and unjustified total of $145,000 in state funds.

Presidents of two technical institutes have been fired; one vice president and one business manager have resigned under pressure.

The president of Piedmont Technical Institute in Roxboro was indicted last March on charges of embezzling and of authorizing the expenditure of state funds to rebuild a burned structure under the guise of conducting a course in brickwork and masonry. The building had burned during a barbecue.

Community college officials say the problems are an inevitable result of the 57-campus system's growth.

The community college system now spends nearly $100 million in state funds each year. It estimates that 500,000 North Carolinians take its courses.

"In a new and rapidly growing system, you're bound to get a few who just can't cut it. There are going to be some square pegs in round holes," said Ben E. Fountain Jr., the systems' president.

Dallas Herring, chairman of the state Board of Education, said the fact that the discrepancies were discovered internally shows that the system is working out its problems.

One state auditor, John Buchan, said he thought some campuses had hired inexperienced bookkeepers who lacked competence.

Buchan's State Auditor's office has yet to audit the enrollment claims of nearly half the campuses in the system.

Ten Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press

Ten persons died in traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend.

Three were killed in one wreck and two in another.

The toll for the year rose to 1,362, but was still 112 fewer than at the corresponding time a year ago.

A car hit a tree in Cumberland County, killing two teenaged boys from Fayetteville and Albert Benjamin Nunnery, 42, of Rt. 5, Fayetteville. The boys were Eugene Giberson, 14, and Walter Bryant Giberson, 13.

Both drivers were killed in the collision of cars near Pittsboro in Chatham County. They were Edward Holloway, 55, of Rt. 2, Wendell in Wake County, and Joseph Allen Keys, 29, of Rt. 1, Pittsboro.

Mildred Yokley, was struck and killed by a car near her home in Winston-Salem.

Tom Howard, 35, of Rt. 1, Bethel, lost his life near that Pitt County town. The Highway Patrol said he was riding on the front of a farm tractor, fell off on a curve, and was run over by the vehicle.

Tony Douglas McKinney, 2, of Rt. 2, Roxboro, Person County, died when a car in which he was riding overturned near Roxboro.

Samuel Wilson Stout, 58, of Rt. 2, Liberty in Randolph County, was fatally injured when his car hit a tree five miles south of Burlington.

Viola Wilkins, 69, of Rt. 1, Halifax, was struck and killed by a car near Tillery in Halifax County.

The count was kept from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Sunday.

Joan Little In 2 Courts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Joan Little's fight to stay out of jail continued in two courts today.

Miss Little and her attorney, Jerry Paul, were scheduled to appear before the Beaufort County Superior Court in Washington, N.C. to oppose a prosecution request that she be sent to jail to begin serving the rest of her 7-10 year sentence for breaking and entering and larceny.

Paul said he would also file a motion with the state Supreme Court to ask for a delay while it reviews a state Court of Appeals decision that upheld her breaking and entering and larceny conviction.

Miss Little is currently free on $15,000 bond. Paul said both courts would be asked to allow her to remain free until her appeals have been exhausted.

He said Sunday he felt it was unlikely that she would have to begin serving the sentence today.

Miss Little was in the Beaufort County jail as a result of the 1974 conviction when she stabbed and killed jailer Clarence Alligood during what she said was a sexual attack.

She was acquitted of murder charges after a celebrated trial earlier this year. But the Court of Appeals recently upheld her conviction on the initial breaking and entering charge.

Paul said the prosecutor who lost the Alligood case, William Griffin, was asking for the sentence to resume.

Under state law, he said, Miss Little had until December 15 to ask the Supreme Court to review the decision.

But state law also allows Griffin to ask that the sentence be resumed the first time Superior Court convenes in Beaufort County after the Court of Appeals decision has been certified. That occurred last week. The court convened today.

Kantor Sums Up Career Views

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — "I remember, I remember, 'tis a joy to recall," is the first line of MacKinlay Kantor's new novel about the American Revolution, "Valley Forge," but it also sums up the Pulitzer Prize-winning author's own feelings about his long writing career.

Now 71, the tall, erect Kantor smiles as he looks back over the years in which he wrote 43 books — mostly fiction — and says, "I've been very fortunate. Because of writing I've never had to worry about eatin' money or livin' money from the time I was 30 up to now, and I'm rapidly approaching 72."

Born in Webster City, Iowa, Kantor dropped out of high school after finishing his sophomore year and got a job with the state highway commission. "I tested soil samples," he recalls ruefully, pulling at his thick white mustache, "and one really gloomy day I decided that this was a hell of a way to spend my life. I wanted to be out in the woods looking at the flowers. I wanted it to be sunny and warm. And then, suddenly, I thought that if I tell myself about the way I want it to be I can make it true for myself. And then, I thought that if I write about it I can make it true for everybody.

"It was a marvelous idea! I went out, bought a big, lined notebook, took it home and started to write. I'd decided that from then on I didn't want to do anything else but write."

His love of writing took him into newspaper work, but while doing this he also wrote stories and poems in his free time, "sending them out and getting them back." He made his first sale, a short story, when he was 18. "I was paid $50 for it," he recalls happily. "I was just dizzy; I could hardly talk. I went on writing and sending out, but, do you know, it took five years before I sold another story."

Kantor sold his first novel, 'Diversey," when he was 24. "It was the first Chicago gang novel," he says emphatically. He published his books steadily after that, among them the works for which he is best known such as "The Voice of Bugle Ann," "Glory For Me" (a novel in verse on which the award-winning movie "The Best Years of Our Lives" was based), "Signal Thirty-two," and the Pulitzer Prize-winning "Andersonville," the absorbing story of a Civil War prison camp.

"Big A," as Kantor affectionately calls "Andersonville," probably "made me the most money of any single one of my books. I guess I got about a million dollars out of that book. But it was a long time coming. I did an enormous amount of research for that book. Why, I started taking notes for it when I was 29 it wasn't until I was 51 that it was published."

This compulsion for research, to get things right, dominates much of Kantor's work. To get the material he needed to write "Signal Thirty-two," a "novel about cops from the cops' point of view," Kantor served with the New York City police force two years, working out of "the busiest station house in town" because "I didn't feel I could tell the story of a policeman unless I had been one."

He served as a combat correspondent in World War II and the Korean War and "my combat experiences influenced much that appears in my books." During the Second World War, he recalls, "I got tired of the Germans shooting at me and not being able to shoot back, so I went to aerial gunnery school, qualified, went out in a B-17 and got my German plane."

To get the material he wanted for "Valley Forge," Kantor says, "I have friends who live near Valley Forge. I went up there and stayed with them and studied the territory for a long time. I also did a tremendous amount of reading. After that, I spent two years writing the book."

Kantor, who lives with his wife in Sarasota, Fla., says he is now putting the finishing touches on a biography that "I can't talk about except to say it's about a great yachtsman who loved to sail to Alaska.

"Naturally, since I'd never been to Alaska, I had to go up there and look things over."

("Valley Forge" is published by M. Evans & Co.)

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1096 ♡8 ◇KQJ6 ♣AQ1096
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Bid three diamonds. After a two-over-one response, a raise of partner's second suit is forcing. This hand might produce a slam, but any more drastic action would leave you awkwardly placed. If partner's next bid is three no trump, you will, of course, correct to four spades to complete the picture of your hand.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♡K85 ◇Q1076 ♣AKQ84
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◇	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	2 ◇	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. It might seem strange to take a preference into a suit where you hold a singleton when you have three to the king in partner's second suit, but he must have at least six good spades and only four hearts for his bidding. At a heart contract, the whole hand could fall apart if partner is forced to ruff a diamond early.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K ♡AKQJ95 ◇QJ83 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Five hearts. In view of partner's strong auction, slam should be odds-on if he has either first- or second-round diamond control. By raising beyond game after three suits have been bid, you draw partner's attention to the fact that you need a control in the fourth suit to contract for slam.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ ♡954 ◇A52 ♣AKQ62
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	3 ◇	Pass	3 NT

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Yes, we realize that by leading the king of spades, you are sure to beat three no trump. But what guarantee have you that if you double, the opponents won't escape into some makable spot like four diamonds? You know from the auction that partner must have a bust, so be happy with a small profit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♡AK752 ◇872 ♣10732
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Five diamonds. It sounds as if partner has six good diamonds and only four clubs, and a bad break in trumps might sink a club contract. We won't fault you greatly if you elected to cue-bid four spades, but that call seems rather optimistic with such weak holdings in the minor suit.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♡Q863 ◇AKQ54 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Five hearts. Your hand is too strong for a mere four hearts, and no other action is appealing. By jumping over game, you alert partner to your interest in slam while warning him that he needs control of the unbid suits to go on. Blackwood would be a very poor choice, for you might get to slam off two fast tricks in one of the black suits.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q10943 ♡J762 ◇QJ83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Four spades. This is a two-way action—you might make four spades, or by rasing the auction so swiftly to an uncomfortable level, you might succeed in keeping the opponents out of a good contract. One thing is sure—your length in spades has not improved partner's defensive potential.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ ♡ AJ1073 ◇ 6 ♣K976
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two clubs. The temptation to raise partner's suit is great, but it should be resisted. Your hand is too strong for a simple raise to two spades, and you don't want to jump raise with three trumps even if they are as good as these are. The best way to describe your hand is to show your second suit now, and then raise spades at your next turn.

Geneva Prizes Announced

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Geneva Competition this year awarded only one first prize, in its guitar section, to Dusan Bogdanovic of Yugoslavia.

William Westney of Forest Hills, N.Y., won the top prize, second, in the piano division. The cello and trumpet divisions had two persons sharing second prize and the voice division had three sharing second prize.

Westney will perform in the Swiss cities of Basel and Schaffhausen and Mulhouse, France, in a tour with winners from other divisions of the competition. He is a graduate of Queens College and the Yale School of Music and in 1971 was awarded a Fulbright grant for a year of private study in Italy.

Westney's recording of Leo Ornstein's "Piano Quintet" will soon be released on the CRI label.

Do TV Viewers Really Listen?

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Do viewers these days ever really listen to what's being said on television? Or do they simply watch, munch potato chips and doze off?

We began worrying about this the other day while watching, munching potato chips and dozing off. It made us wonder how many people actually would notice slight changes in oft-heard phrases on television.

Suppose, for example, a commercial stressing that the Widget compact car gets 41 miles per gallon on the highway and 30 in the city ended by cautioning:

"Actual mileage won't vary according to individual driving habits."

One wonders if there'd be an uproar if someone looked at the supposedly clean shirt of a man, then dismayed his wife by crying, "Square around the collar, square around the collar!"

Would you do a double-take if the TV announcer said, "'Chico and the Man' is taped in Hollywood before a dead studio audience."

What about: "Portions of this show were post-recorded."

Or: "'All in the Family' will be back in just one hour."

Watch an old movie about the U.S. Cavalry and the Indians. See if you'd feel something's wrong just before the big battle scene when the grizzled old scout tells the headstrong young officer:

"I don't like it, lieutenant. It's too noisy."

See if you'd wonder about that bath soap commercial where a handsome dude passes a young couple and the girl sighs and says he smells nice, whereupon her beau complains: "But I use a deodorant soap."

And she says: "That's the trouble. You smell."

On Sundays, who really listens to the audio portion of pro football games on TV? We defy you to find anyone who remembers that just before kickoff, the National Anthem singer sang:

'Ohhhhh, say can you seeee ... by the ah, um, er, light...."

We also doubt anyone would realize it if Al DeRogatis cried, "O.J. Simpson has just scored the 33rd home run of his career."

Television news seems to be a biggie when it comes to watching, but not listening carefully. Take President Ford's China trip, for example. Who'd really notice if the anchorman said:

"White House spokesman Ron Ziegler described the talks as frank, cordial and silly."

Well, maybe a few viewers would. But we'd bet they're so swamped with stories about Fun City's financial mess they wouldn't notice it if John Chancellor reported:

"New York City officials told President Ford today their city is on the verge of fiscal stability unless the government acts soon."

Maybe we should lay off this business about viewers who watch but don't listen carefully. Otherwise, Walter Cronkite may test such suspicions at the end of his newscast tonight by saying:

"And that's the way it is, Monday, December 8, 1941...."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 9, 1975

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to attend to the various tasks that need to be done and to get them in back of you by a stick-to-itive approach. You can now fine the answers that eluded you in the past.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care of the duties awaiting you without delay and the rest of the week can be more lucrative. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what your personal aims are and plan just how to attain them with relative ease. Be sure to accept a social invitation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Attend to any civic or outside tasks and do much to raise prestige you now enjoy. Iron out any differences you have with mate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Obtain all the data you need so that you can put a new project into operation. New associates can be helpful to you now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle all those duties ahead of you with vim and vigor. Know what is expected of you by mate and do your best to please.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you are not certain just what is expected of you by associates, ask directly and be sure. Don't neglect a civic duty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Organizing your work so that there will be more accord with co-workers is wise. Find new items for enhancing your wardrobe.

SCORPIO (Oct. to Nov. 21) Take time to make long-range plans for the future. Loved one is expecting something special from you. Do not disappoint.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to see that home conditions are improved. Make plans for the holidays ahead and take care of necessary chores.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure to keep important appointments today. Handling communications may take more time than you thought. Be patient.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handling finances should be first on the agenda today. Improve your surroundings and take care of repairs that should be made.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to improve your health and appearance. Take steps to make your life more meaningful. Evening is fine for sociability.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will handle duties in a very direct way, but can also add a flair to them, be it at home or elsewhere. Teach to be more modern since there's a tendency to be old-fashioned. Be sure to give spiritual training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Planting Black Walnut Trees

By KAY McCARTHY

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Across Oklahoma children and civic workers are bending over shovels and spades to dig up the ground in an ambitious, if nutty, Bicentennial project.

Their goal is to grow five million black walnut trees, which are native to the state but now scarce.

Their first assignment is Operation Squirrel. The second, Operation George Washington.

In Operation Squirrel the organizers plan to bury 50,000 walnuts by Thanksgiving to keep the walnuts moist and unfrozen. In Operation George Washington the walnuts will be dug up on his birthday next year and replanted.

"We're trying to spread the importance of getting civic and youth groups involved," said Leigh Nichols, executive vice president of the co-sponsoring Oklahoma Association of Realtors.

"The thing that impressed our board of directors about the program is it's so very seldom someone comes up with an idea that appears possible and at the same time is very unselfish."

Nichols said John Booth, Oklahoma Mortgage Co. senior vice president, thought of the project while sitting next to Gladys Warren, state Bicentennial Commission director, at a Christmas banquet last year. Booth, a woodworking enthusiast, knew that hardwood is becoming scarce and expensive, Nichols said.

The Realtors Association adopted the project to commemorate the Bicentennial.

"Unfortunately most of us working with the program won't be the beneficiaries," Nichols said. "The trees take 60-70 years to mature."

But if the trees grow to maturity "in theory it could make Oklahoma the hardwood center of the country," he said. In turn, Oklahoma could become a quality furniture manufacturing state, he said.

The state has been divided into 11 districts for the project with a chairman for each district as well as for each county within the district. The county chairmen are responsible for persuading groups to participate, procuring the walnuts to plant and finding out from county officials where the walnuts should be planted.

People have donated walnuts by the truckload but more would be welcome, Nichols said.

"We're eager to accept all walnuts we can get," he said. "I've been surprised. We have had a lot of calls even from people within three or four blocks of the office who brought sacks and boxes over.

"We checked with the forestry division of the state Department of Agriculture and they gave us some pointers on how to go about planting the black walnuts," he said.

"They told us that the best way to get a black walnut in shape to permanently plant is to dig a hole during the fall, put a layer of black walnuts into the hole and several inches of dirt onto that. Then put another layer of walnuts in and then more dirt."

Nichols said the process is called stratifying and is supposed to prevent the walnuts from freezing or drying out.

When the walnuts are dug up in early spring they are to be planted in areas where they are not likely to be choked by weeds and will receive some moisture, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market dropped lower today, adding to its steep slump of last week.

At 11:30 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 2.99 at 815.81, and declining issues held a 687 to 295 margin over those advancing on the New York Stock Exchange.

The closely followed Dow average plunged 41.87 last week in the market's sharpest weekly setback of the year.

Analysts said investors could find little encouraging news to offset the uncertainty of the business recovery's progress.

Although a slight drop in the nation's unemployment rate and word that wholesale prices had held steady in November prompted a brief upturn, the market had failed to generate little buying enthusiasm at week's end.

Analysts also attributed the slump to concern over the direction of interest rates and the absence of a rally over President Ford's acceptance of federal aid for New York City, a chief market influence recently.

Most active on the NYSE was Dow Chemical, unchanged at 88⅛. A block of 22,300 shares was traded at 87¾.

High on the active list was Bucyrus Erie, which fell 1⅛ to 36½.

Bucking the general downward price trend today were several oil service issues. Fluor Corp. was up ¼ to 32⅞; Halliburton rose ½ to 136½; and HughesTool was up ¼ to 38.

Speaks To Safety Body

Carl E. Whitfield, field representative for the Governor's Highway Safety Program was guest speaker at the Pitt County Safety Council meeting last week.

Whitfield, outlining the history of highways said the passing scene of highway history is not a pleasant one.

"It is littered with the accumulated wreckage of 75 years of accidents . . . strewn with bodies of more than 2 million killed," and 60 million to 65 million injured.

The speaker said that highway construction, safety belts, padded instrument panels, speed governors, electronic policemen, and higher licensing requirements could help reduce the accident toll, but he said the final answer rests with the individual driver.

He said that "violation of the rules of the road," by drivers "is a prelude to disaster. So are gross carelessness and willful abuse of highway etiquette."

Whitfield continued, "in most accidents, the guilty party is man and not machine . . . mind and not motor . . . reflex and not roadway.

"If the passing scene is to grow more peaceful and less deadly, the great change will have to come from the drivers and pedestrians who are now causing the accidents."

Safety council president Jan Vincent presided at the meeting.

Farm Scene

By EDWIN L. YANCEY,
County Extension
Chairman

Recently, North Carolina farmers had an opportunity to visit one of the state's most remarkable farms, the Swine Development Center at the Upper Coastal Plain Research Station, Rocky Mount. The occasion was a swine field day which dedicated the completion of feeding and nursery facilities at the farm.

The Swine Development Center is remarkable in that it is a research farm operated to be as near like a well managed commercial hog farm as possible. The purpose is to demonstrate a production and management system that will work for the average hog producer. It is a 100 sow swine facility, where pigs are produced and fed to market hot weight. Animals are sold through regular markets.

Facilities at the center represent the latest in design being recommended by the Agricultural Extension Service. Environmental control is the key feature. Sows and boars are housed in a slotted floor building that can be cooled in summer. The farrowing house is a totally enclosed, slotted floor building with zone air conditioning for the summer and heat for the winter. Nursery facilities and feeding floors feature slotted floors and the latest methods of controlling temperature and humidity.

All buildings are designed for proper ventilation. Research has shown moisture and extreme temperature variations to be major problems for hog producers. The ventilating systems remove moisture and provide draft free, stable temperature conditions.

In 1974 the Swine Development Center farrowed 202 litters with an average of 11.8 live pigs. The weaned average litter was 9.3 pigs. The conception rate was 93 percent. During the same year, when top hogs sold for $37.49 and corn averaged $3.10 per bushel, the center showed a return to labor and management of $32,165. (Changes in the value of inventory are included in the returns figure.)

Another remarkable feature of the Swine Development Center is that it is open to any person who wants to go and look. Officially, every Wednesday is visitors day. Dr. Charles Stainslaw, Area Extension Swine Specialist, is there on that day to talk with visitors. On other days, an appointment should be made.

For more information about the Swine Development Center or to arrange a special visit, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.
