

Schlesinger Said No Supporter Of Candidate Reagan

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger has given Ronald Reagan a short course in defense policy, but sources say he has no intention of backing Reagan against President Ford for the Republican presidential nomination.

Sources close to Schlesinger, who was fired by Ford more than two months ago, said he recently flew to California at Reagan's invitation and is available to discuss defense issues with any and all presidential hopefuls, Republican or Democratic.

So far as is known, no other candidate has issued any similar invitation to Schlesinger.

However, Schlesinger long has held views close to those of Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and there are indications they have been in contact since Schlesinger was ousted from the Ford cabinet.

Jackson is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

Schlesinger was wounded by his abrupt dismissal but has refrained from any personal criticism of Ford in public. At the same time, he has made it clear on the record that he fears Ford may cut the defense budget too deeply for the national good.

Schlesinger has told visitors he would resist any effort to identify him with any particular political faction or party and feels he can be most effective in promoting his views on defense and foreign policy if he remains outside partisanship.

Regardless of any disclaimers, it appears Schlesinger risked identification with Reagan's anti-Ford cause when he accepted Reagan's invitation to Los Angeles in late December. Such identification could be furthered if Reagan's speeches in the primary battles to come should parallel Schlesinger's widely known positions.

Schlesinger declined to discuss details of his talk with Reagan. But sources said Reagan, who was a two-term governor of California, displayed limited familiarity with complex defense issues.

Meanwhile, there were these campaign developments Tuesday:

—The United Auto Workers indicated support for former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter in his Florida campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. A union spokesman said UAW President Leonard Woodcock will campaign for Carter in Florida, where he hopes to defeat Alabama Gov. George Wallace in the state's primary.

—The New York Daily News said in today's editions that Ford will propose turning over to the states control of perhaps $10 billion in federally funded health-care programs, including Medicaid.

The newspaper quoted unnamed federal officials as saying the proposal was tailored to meet the challenge of Reagan, who is proposing that some $90 billion in federal programs be turned over to the states.

The News said Ford was expected to announce his block-grant proposal in his State of the Union message on Monday.

The still incomplete plan would give the states complete control over spending for almost all health programs that provide services directly to the public, beginning at the start of the next fiscal year, on Oct. 1, and phased to be completed over several years.

The programs include Medicaid, community mental health programs, child immunization, family planning, emergency care and programs that deal with venereal disease, the News said.

—Reagan campaigned in Wisconsin, where he continued to defend his plan to transfer many federal social and welfare programs to state and local governments. Reagan said he stands behind his proposal and charged in a statement that his plan has been "distorted."

The former governor said, "When I first made this proposal in September, I said there would be screams of anguish from all the carpeted ante rooms in Washington, as well as from some of the pundits who cover the Washington scene. I didn't have long to wait."

"When I first made the proposal, I pointed out that it was roughly about one-fourth of the 1976 budget, or about $90 billion. I did this only to illustrate the size of the programs we proposed transferring."

"Obviously, I was not suggesting a $90-billion instant cut in a budget which had already been adopted, and yet that is exactly what is now being charged, which is of course, a distortion, in some cases a deliberate one."

"Yesterday, in Bloomington, Ill., I said I regretted using the illustration; that it wasn't necessary to explain the plan. Today, I am reading that I regretted proposing the plan. Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

—President Ford appointed outgoing Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton as a White House counselor, naming him the chief presidential political contact man. Presidential spokesman Ron Nessen said, however, that Morton would not be exclusively involved in the Ford election campaign, picturing his political activity as more of a sideline.

Sec. Of Labor Dunlop Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — John T. Dunlop has resigned as secretary of labor, it was announced today. He quit despite a last-minute plea from President Ford to stay on the job.

In a one-paragraph letter to President Ford dated Tuesday, Dunlop told the President: "This letter records my resignation as secretary of labor and coordinator of the President's labor-management committee. 'I have appreciated the opportunity once again to try to be of service to the country and to you, Mr. President, to the best of my ability. Your willingness to listen to divergent views and numerous courtesies to me, I shall always cherish.'"

In a letter of reply dated today, the President told Dunlop: "You will be greatly missed by all who have had the privilege of working with you."

Ford said he received Dunlop's letter "with the deepest regret."

The announcement came one day after Dunlop met privately with the President to inform him of his decision.

Dunlop maintains that his position with organized labor was unworkable in the aftermath of Ford's veto of the controversial common-site picketing bill. The measure would have expanded union picketing rights at construction sites.

In the exchange of letters, released by the White House, the President told Dunlop: "Although I understand your reasons for making this decision and accept your resignation, you should know that I do so with very great reluctance."

Ford added: "You have demonstrated your strong devotion to public service and your deep understanding of labor issues in the country ... Your contributions to the development of a sound set of policies and organization for the Department of Labor have been both extensive and effective."

During the 35-minute White House session requested by Dunlop, the President tried unsuccessfully to talk him out of quitting, according to informed sources. However, Dunlop agreed to remain in the Cabinet until January 31, when he is expected to return to his teaching post at Harvard University.

The most frequently mentioned choice to succeed him is W.J. Usery Jr., director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who is highly regarded by both labor and management.

Dunlop's resignation came as no surprise. He had been reassessing his position since Ford announced Dec. 22 that he would veto the bill that would have broadened picketing rights at construction sites. The bill has been sought by organized labor since the Truman administration.

White House officials had described Ford as anxious to avoid any further shakeups in his administration. On Nov. 2, he fired Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger and Central Intelligence Director William E. Colby while stripping Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger of his post of director of the National Security Council.

Ford was warned before the veto that it could cost him the services of Dunlop, who has specialized in trying to improve labor-management practices in the construction industry. Dunlop, who had sponsored the bill, expected Ford to sign it based on earlier statements by the President that he favored the principle of the legislation.

The bill would have allowed unions to picket an entire construction site even though its dispute was with only one subcontractor. It also included a provision — strongly backed by Dunlop as a way of moderating the size of wage settlements — to coordinate the now-fragmented collective bargaining process in the construction industry.

But the picketing provision was strongly opposed by conservatives. Ford, according to aides, felt that signing it would have given GOP challenger Ronald Reagan a major campaign issue to use against him.

The veto triggered the resignations last week of the nine labor members of a presidential construction advisory committee headed by Dunlop. The union chiefs charged that Ford "caved in under pernicious political pressure, and, even worse, went back on his word."

Dunlop reached his decision after discussing his position with top leaders of organized labor, including AFL-CIO president George Meany and United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock.

Temporary Surcharge Is Adopted For Greenville Retail Gas Customers

Utilities commissioners approved a temporary gas surcharge of 18.5 cents per million cubic feet and were informed of an additional 3.72 cents per million cubic feet "tracking" charge for retail customers.

Director Charles Horne said the tracking charge—passing on an increase which GUC received from N.C. Natural Gas—was put in effect this month.

The surcharge, which was done by resolution, also passes on a surcharge from N.C. Natural Gas.

The commission instructed

Director Horne to look into legal questions concerning a request from developers of Red Banks Road-Arlington Boulevard for the utilities to pay the cost of tunneling under N.C. 43. The cost was set at $9,953.

The entire water and sewer project for opening the street from Greenville Boulevard to N.C. 43 calls for $28,341.63 for water, with the developers to pay $14,665.69 of this. For sewer the budget is $42,593.49 with developers to pay $35,999.21 under the current budget.

Van Fleming and Phil Carroll appeared before the commission concerning the matter.

Director Charles Horne reported that, while a recent news story said city school electric bills had increased by ten times in ten years, much of this cost was due to sharply increased electric usage. The actual rate increase over the ten year period has been 3.4 times, Horne said.

Horne also reported that the electric fossil fuel charge is expected to increase for January and then drop in February.

Horne reported to city officials that annexation of privately owned property along with the new hospital property will bring about a cost of an estimated $58,500 for sewer extensions when the land is developed.

Horne also reported that water system improvements under the community development funding includes replacement of two-inch galvanized main with six-inch main to upgrade the water system.

A bid of $8,199 from Westinghouse for a new electric meter test table was approved. The only other bid received was from General Electric at $8,233.25.

Candidate For Lt. Gov. Wants Parttime Job

RALEIGH (AP)—A candidate for Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor has promised to make the job parttime if elected.

At a news conference to announce his candidacy this morning, former state Sen. George Wood of Camden said, "I don't believe the taxpayers of this state should be burdened with a full time lieutenant governor."

Salary for the position is $30,000 a year plus $4,000 for expenses. If elected, he said, he would ask the legislature to cut the appropriations for lieutenant governor and provide a staff and salary only while the General Assembly is in session. The lieutenant governor presides over the Senate.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt's job has been more difficult and required a nearly full time status because the governor is Republican while Hunt and a majority of the legislators are Democrats, Wood said.

He also said the lieutenant governor position shouldn't "be a political waiting room for higher office at the taxpayers' expense." He said he has no plans to run for governor if elected.

Cutting the cost of the lieutenant governor's office would serve as an example of savings for other state agencies, he said. Wood called for a freeze on hiring new state employees so that the size of state government can be trimmed.

Wood, 49, served 10 years in the legislature, four in the House and six in the Senate. He is a farmer and businessman and said his support comes primarily from "the agri-business community."

On other matters, Wood: —Called for a pay raise of at least 5 per cent for teachers and state employees. It can be done without new taxes, he said.

—Supported higher taxes on whisky and possibly cigarettes if additional funds are needed. He also supported changing state income tax laws to make the tax more progressive, taxing higher incomes at a heavier rate.

—Supported the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

—Gave mild support to the death penalty.

—Said if it came down to a choice, he would prefer expansion of the East Carolina University medical school to building the veterinary school at North Carolina State University.

Hefner Will Run

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., announced today he would seek a second term from North Carolina's Eighth Congressional District.

Hefner, who unseated three-term Rep. Earl Ruth, R-N.C. in 1974, said he would press for "a good economy whereby everyone can have a job," adequate medical care for everyone, better programs for the elderly and more responsive government.

Hefner announced that Fred Corriher Jr., of Landis would direct his re-election campaign.

Supporters of Ruth, who was named governor of American Samoa after his defeat, say the former Catawba College professor may return to North Carolina to challenge Hefner later this year.

Hefner, 46, is president of Radio Station WRKB in Kannapolis and has been a gospel singer and entertainer for nearly 20 years.

FLIES TO N.C.

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Terry Sanford was released from a hospital here today and flew to North Carolina to enter the Duke University Medical Center in Durham for several days of rest.

HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

CAN THEY ACT?

Is it legal for a school board to take action on an item which is not on the agenda? I understand they can discuss something of which the public is not aware, but can they act? I don't think they should be able to. J. M.

County Attorney W. W. Speight said yes, that action on an item not on the agenda may be taken if the meeting is a public one that has been duly advertised.

BLIND MUST APPLY

Hotline published an inquiry Dec. 26 about whether blind persons should not be exempt from paying for Directory Assistance calls. Since this time, the N. C. Utilities Commission has reversed its stand on the issue and is providing for a trial period in which blind persons may be exempted from paying for the directory assistance calls over five that they must make. Carolina Telephones Area Manager Don Collier has provided us with the how-to information on applying for these exemptions. He said, "An application for exemption from directory assistance charges will be provided to each subscriber requesting an exemption and to those who have been designated by social agencies as qualified candidates for exemption. The application should be completed and returned to the local Carolina Telephone Business Office. The local telephone business officer will then review each application and appropriate exemptions will be approved."

The local telephone office phone number is 758-9111.

At Least Five Demos On Ballot In Primary

RALEIGH (AP)—State Elections Director Alex Brock says there are indications that at least five Democrats will be in North Carolina's presidential preference primary.

Brock said in an interview Tuesday that Jan. 27 is the deadline for candidates to inform the Board of Elections if they want to be listed on the Tar Heel ballot.

He said there were indications that Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., will ask to be placed on the ballot.

In the race are Democrats Terry Sanford, Duke University president; Alabama Gov. George Wallace, and Jimmy Carter, former Georgia governor.

William Brawley, a Jackson campaign aide in Washington, said in a telephone interview "we have not made up our mind" about the North Carolina primary. He added, "It's entirely possible."

Brock said Bentsen headquarters has expressed an interest in the Tar Heel primary.

The Board of Elections Saturday nominated nine Democrats and two Republicans, President Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, as possible candidates. Brock mailed letters to the list. The board selected all candidates who have qualified for federal matching funds for their campaigns.

"All those who are viable are qualified for matching funds," Brock said. "We're not qualifying any on our own this time."

Hearing

Greenville citizens are reminded that the first of two public hearings on the second year phase of the city's Community Development Program will be held Thursday, 8 p.m. at city hall.

The second hearing on the 1976-77 program is scheduled for Jan. 29 at 8 p.m. at city hall.

Women's Courses Scheduled To Begin Spring Quarter

Can you identify the following: Group A: Margaret Atwood, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Isabelle Archer, Tillie Olsen, Virginia Woolf, May Sarton, Mary McCarthy, Willa Cather, Mary Wollstonecraft, Kate Chopin, or Sylvia Plath. Group B: James Joyce, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Norman Mailer, Ken Kesey, Kurt Vonnegut, Graham Greene, or Joseph Conrad.

If you're an average person, you knew almost everybody in Group B and almost nobody in Group A. Both groups are comprised of modern America and British writers, but most college literature courses stress those writers in Group B.

That emphasis will change at East Carolina University in Spring Quarter 1976, when the ECU English Department will offer two courses by women about women.

English 394, Contemporary Women Writers, will be a study of novels and two films by women writers of the 20th Century on the subject of women's experiences.

English 393, Images of Women in Literature, will examine works by male and female writers in which a woman is the dominant figure.

Both courses will be counted as general college literature credits.

And both will be offered one night a week, in an effort "to attract students and community members who can't attend daytime classes."

So women often get the short end of the literary stick. Is that the only reason to teach these courses at ECU?

No, say the two women professors who'll be the courses' instructors, Ms. Marie Farr and Dr. Sally Brett.

"A course centered upon images of women in literature," says Ms. Farr, "makes students aware of stereotypes. We use these stereotypes every day, not just in literature but also in real life, to make our judgments. The nagging wife, the shrew, the mother-in-law, the bitter old maid—these are images of women that we confront in the pages of a book and on the television or film screen as well as in our real lives."

"Whether or not these images are fair, or real, or biased is something I hope the students will come to decide for themselves. Most of all, I just want the students in this course to become aware of the stereotypes—what they are and how we use them, consciously or unconsciously. A stereotype is made from a generalization and it can be helpful. The danger lies in operating solely on the given image and not on the real person."

Dr. Brett offers a similar rationale for her course, Contemporary Women Writers.

"It is generally assumed," she noted, "that the women's movement has brought women writers to a new frontier, so to speak. While it is true that women today are writing about being a woman more honestly than ever before, it is not true that women writers have never done this."

"We just have not paid very much attention to women writers, either in literature study or in popular culture. Almost everyone knows who Erica Jong is; equally well known are Joan Didion, Judith Rossner, and Jill Robinson—because all of these women have written frankly about women and sexuality."

"But sex isn't the only topic of interest to women and it certainly has not been the only subject of women writers today or yesterday. Edith Summers Kelley, for example, wrote in the 1930s about women tenant tobacco farmers. But no one heeded her realism as they did Upton Sinclair's—although she is probably the better writer."

"Women write about themselves as poets, professors, mothers, housewives, etc. As we become aware that our voices as playwrights, novelists, and poets are being heard, we also begin to understand that our individual situations and feelings can run counter to what we've been told we should think and feel. I think modern woman is becoming aware of more and more truths about herself and her world that have long been ignored or denied. And women's writings reflect this awareness. The old images just don't do any longer."

"The list of women who have written about women is a list of women who have been ignored by the bookseller and the teacher. This course is designed to rid students of that ignorance. We are going to read modern writers but we are also going to read writers from earlier years, like Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Kate Chopin, Edith Kelley, Emily Bronte, Colette, and Edith Wharton."

If all goes well, the instructors hope to obtain films for their courses from the State Library. Tentatively scheduled are Judy Collin's "Antonia," and the film version of Clare Booth Luce's play, "The Women."

Ms. Farr will use one central text, Images of Women in Literature, as well as Henry James' novel Portrait of a Lady. Also included in the 393 course are short stories and essays on images of women and the play by Edward Albee, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf.

Ms. Farr says at present she expects to require the usual final examination as well as a short critical paper, quizzes, and oral report. Dr. Brett plans midterm and final examinations, quizzes, and a report on "books and writers we can't include in required reading." Required readings will include novels by Sylvia Plath, Virginia Woolf, May Sarton, Grace Paley, Doris Lessing, Margaret Atwood, Jean Rhys, Tillie Olsen, Mary McCarthy, and Muriel Spark. "All the other works I would have liked to require will be in the reports," Dr. Brett said.

Both women say the reaction from students has been enthusiastic. They point out that ECU could do well to begin emphasizing women's studies courses, which are by definition interdisciplinary. "The subject is certainly appropriate for sociology, history, fine arts, foreign literature in translation, as well as for music and sciences."

Do Ms. Farr and Dr. Brett see their courses as "conscious-raising"? "All literature," they answer, "raises consciousness." Persons interested in registering for either course should contact the Division of Continuing Education this week at 758-6324.

Abby Advises Teacher Not To Hit Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: This is my second year as a school teacher. I teach third grade in a very good public school. At the beginning of the semester I received the following letter from the mother of one of my pupils:

Dear Ms. G—:

I understand that there is a rule at Danny's school stating that the teachers are not allowed to hit the kids. Well, I am giving you permission to hit my son, Danny, whenever you think he needs it. He is mouthy, stubborn and very mean, and the only thing he understands is a good hit. (Not in the head, please.) I know him better than you do.

Please keep this letter in case you hit him. It will relieve you of all responsibility in case Danny tries to get away with something. He told me he can do whatever he wants at school because if the teacher lays a hand on him she will get fired. Thank you.

Mrs. T.J. McD.

Abby, is the above letter legal and binding? And should I hit Danny if I think it's necessary?

MS. G—

DEAR MS. G—: A lawyer I'm not. The advice from here is: Do not hit Danny or any other child.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know why that lady was upset because her husband ate lunch at a topless restaurant. What difference does it make where he gets his appetite as long as he comes home to eat?

BROAD-MINDED BROAD IN YAKIMA

DEAR BROAD: Maybe she's afraid he'll work up such a hunger at the restaurant that he'll go back for dinner.

Young Careerist Chosen At BPW Club Meeting

The Young Careerist award was presented to Mrs. Linda W. Asbell, regional office secretary of the N.C. Division of Health Services, at the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Woman's Club held Thursday night at the Ramada Inn.

Mrs. Asbell will represent Greenville at the BPW District meeting to be held in Goldsboro. The Young Careerist chosen at each district meeting in North Carolina will then compete for state finalist at the BPW State Convention to be held in Winston-Salem.

Judges for the contestants were Mrs. Kay Whitehurst, director of secondary education, Greenville City Schools, Mrs. Janice Buck, owner of Buck Supply Co. and Pitt County Bicentennial chairman, and Dr. Robert L. Holt, vice chancellor and dean of ECU.

Chapter Members Hear Speakers

The Gamma Delta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha met Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Calais Sheppard with Mrs. Robert Barlow as co-hostess.

Mrs. Guy Mathews introduced the guests, Mrs. John Rachel and Miss Dusty Woodbury, who gave the program. They used slides to illustrate what is being done in the Pitt County School System to help children with learning disabilities.

During the business session, President Mrs. Lou Forrest reported on the Christmas party held for members and guests at the Candlewick Inn.

Mrs. Johnnie Cassick showed letters from her pupils to the members thanking them for Christmas stockings. Mrs. Helen Sermons reported on Christmas parties given the children at Wahl-Coates and Aycock Schools.

Marriage Announced

DAR School Program Discussed

FARMVILLE — Members of Major Benjamin May Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, heard Miss Elizabeth Lang speak about the DAR School Program at their meeting Saturday in the Chapter House here.

Miss Lang and Mrs. J. O. Pollard, of Farmville, were hostesses. They were assisted by Mrs. Allen C. Darden of Farmville and Mrs. John Riley of Raleigh.

After refreshments were served, the meeting was called to order by the Regent, Dr. Emily Farnham. Dr. Farnham introduced Miss Bert Sutton of Greenville and Mrs. Ray Long of Wilson as prospective members, and Mrs. Everett Ballengee as a visitor. Mrs. Ballengee, now living in Greenville, is currently State Vice Regent NSDAR in New Jersey.

Miss Lang was presented by Dr. Farnham. Miss Lang is now state chairman of the DAR School Committee and a member of Crossnore School Board of Trustees. She has held many offices in the local DAR chapter, including that of regent during 1960-1962.

Miss Lang reminded members that the objectives of the NSDAR are historical, educational, and patriotic: to perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence; to carry out the injunction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people, "to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge"; to cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

Miss Lang pointed out that the Daughters "are involved in several different schools in two different ways." She said that two schools have been established by and are owned by the DAR. These are Tamassee DAR School at Tamassee, S.C., and Kate Duncan Smith DAR School, located at Grant, Ala. Five other schools, she stated, are on the Approved School list. An Approved School means that the school has been endorsed by the Daughters of the American Revolution of the state in which it is located, has been investigated by the chairman of the DAR School Committee and has been approved by the Continental Congress. To qualify a school must be for underprivileged boys and girls who otherwise would not have the opportunity for education, or for Americanization of foreign-born students or students of foreign parentage, maintaining high scholastic standards and teaching Patriotic American Principles. Five schools are on the Approved School list.

These are Berry College and Berry Academy, Mount Berry, Ga.; Crossnore School, Inc., Crossnore, N.C.; Hillside School, Inc., Marlborough, Mass.; Hindman Settlement School, Inc., Hindman, Ky. and Northland College, Ashland, Wis.

Miss Lang concluded her talk with a reminder that the needs of the children and the schools "are great and always great." She said that help to maintain the DAR School Program could be given in the form of usable clothing to be sold, donations, and memorial gifts.

Mrs. F. McCoy Tripp, National Defense Committee chairman, explained a resolution being introduced in Congress to designate 1976 as National Bicentennial Highway Safety Year.

Mrs. Charles H. Carr, of the Bicentennial Medal Committee, reported that a recipient has been selected for the medal. The presentation will take place at the May meeting.

Mrs. Arch J. Flanagan,

Membership Committee chairman, announced that Miss Mary Henry of Farmville has been accepted as a prospective member.

Mrs. Flanagan and Mrs. Carr, members of the committee planning the Golden Jubilee celebration of the Chapter, reported that Sunday, Feb. 29, has been selected as the date for the commemoration, and it will take place at the Chapter House.

Dr. Farnham appointed Mrs. Troy W. Rouse chairman of the nominating committee for selecting a slate of officers for 1976-78. Other members of that committee are Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Ellen Lewis Carroll.

Mrs. Flanagan was elected to represent the chapter as its official delegate to the 1976 Continental Congress. The Congress will be in session April 19-23 in Washington.

The 1976 State Conference will be held March 9-11 at the Hyatt House, Winston-Salem. Delegates elected to attend this conference are: Mrs. Darden; Mrs. Flanagan; Mrs. Milton Barnett; Mrs. C. Reynolds Kernan; Miss Nancy Lewis; and Dr. Farnham.

Reports Given At CWU Meet Thursday Morning

Church Women United of Greenville held its first meeting of the year Thursday morning at Saint James United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Gene Lanier, chairperson for UNICEF for 1975, reported that $1,800 plus was collected in the fall drive and Mrs. Curtis Howell is the 1976 chairperson.

Mrs. R. S. Massner, chairperson, announced that Greenville's World Day of Prayer day service will be held March 5 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 10 a.m. The time and place of the night service will be announced later by Mrs. Massner and her committee. The theme for this year is "Education For All of Life." All citizens are invited to participate in the program with countries around the world.

The group voted to send a contribution to CROP to be used for the Diga-Well Project in Niger.

The May Fellowship covered luncheon will be held May 7 at Hooker Memorial Christian Church with Mrs. Ralph Messick as chairperson. Plans will be finalized at the April meeting.

Miss Lela B. Stancill urged all churches interested in participating in the Circle of Least Coin Fellowship to bring an offering to the April meeting and plans will be made for the dedication at the May luncheon.

Mrs. Charles R. Ross, chairperson for CWU of Greenville, announced that the 1976 State Assembly of CWU will be March 8-9 at the First Christian Church, Winston-Salem. Members interested in attending should call Mrs. Ross by Feb. 15.

All churches of Greenville are encouraged to join CWU and to send delegates to the April 8 meeting at 10 a.m. at St. James Church.

Department Holds Meet

The Arts Department of the Greenville Woman's Club held its first meeting of the new year Friday afternoon at the club building.

Dr. Emily Farnham, of the ECU School of Art, was guest speaker and was introduced by Mrs. Verna Dare Avery. Speaking on "English Art," Dr. Farnham showed slides of famous paintings.

"As evidenced in all archaeology, art history is the record man leaves behind," stated Dr. Farnham.

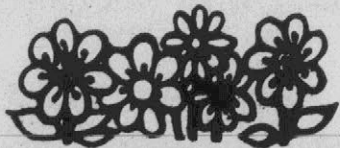

Mrs. W. E. Roseveare told of the new exhibit by art faculty members of the Greenville City Schools opening at the Art Center Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Avery reminded members and interested friends to view the local fine arts festival entries which will be on display at the club house Feb. 27.

Mrs. Sylvester Green gave the devotional.

Hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. J. L. Savage and Mrs. George Clapp.

Pirates Saw The Same Appeal

Following the seizure of 25 tons of marijuana on a trawler near Bayboro, authorities have said there are indications that North Carolina is a principal entry point for pot and other drugs.

"The SBI has received increasing amounts of information and evidence that North Carolina has become one of the primary states for importing large quantities of illegal drugs, SBI Director Haywood Starling said.

The reason that smuggling of drugs by water into North Carolina is so attractive is obvious. It is the same appeal that the North Carolina coastline had to the pirates and smugglers of olden days. There are 301 miles of coastline and innumerable inlets, creeks and rivers along the coast sheltered by the Outer Banks. There is also little population in the low lying area which minimizes the risks of detection and apprehension for the smugglers.

There are some minuses, though. Even in this day of electronic navigation, finding the way through North Carolina's Outer Banks to the havens of the sound area is treacherous, indeed. This is attested to by the graves of many ships which have sunk off the North Carolina coast over the centuries.

It is obvious that state and federal authorities are going to have to step up their surveillance of vessels entering the North Carolina waters if we are going to cut into the illegal drug trafficking which is affecting this and other states.

One of the advantages that the law enforcers will have is the limited number of channels through the Outer Banks to North Carolina's inland waters. It is at these points that vessels entering and leaving the sound areas can be most closely checked.

It is most important that the drug traffic be reduced in North Carolina and cutting off smuggling by water will be a big help in these efforts.

Something Definite To Say, And Soon

What the N.C. Board of Governors decides about political activity by its officials Friday will have a lot to do with whether or not Dr. Leo Jenkins seeks the governorship.

The board will consider a policy change which would allow officials to take a leave of absence to conduct campaigns.

Dr. Jenkins met with Sen. Robert Morgan earlier this week, and, while no announcements came from the meeting, Jenkins acknowledged that they did "talk politics."

Jenkins has frequently indicated that he wanted to run for governor, and it is likely that he will have something definite to say following the board's decision on the political activity policy.

THIS AFTERNOON

An Exercise In Futility?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There are those State experts close to the action as North Carolina struggles to create six Health Service Areas and the boards (Health Systems Agencies) to govern them who believe the whole process is an exercise in futility.

Unbelievably complex, the new federal regulations resulting from the 1974 Health Planning and Resources Development Act are effectively scuttling existing planning and program delivery activities in this state.

Decisions on where millions of dollars in state and federal funds will be spent on hospitals, clinics, equipment, service programs, rehabilitation activities, etc., will ultimately be made by the new Health Systems Agencies currently embroiled in controversy in three of the state's six regions. It is safe to assume controversy will erupt in the other three regions as more people find out what is going on.

East Carolina
Biggest fight so far has been in the sprawling 29-county Health Services Area covering most of eastern North Carolina.

In that area, a retired federal official, Dr. Louis Smith of Murfreesboro PhD, economics, career with U. S. Department of Agriculture, was involved in a 21-member board as a steering committee for health planning. Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., eventually named that steering committee as the convener group to set up the Health Systems Agency.

Smith talked the jargon, appeared to understand the program, and was elected chairman, as work got underway last March.

Then, things grew stormy, and some conveners complained to the governor that decisions were being ramrodded which would place control in one section of the huge area. Several conveners decided to resign to force restructuring of the group; and at one point a move to oust Smith failed by one vote.

Smith denounced state guidelines limiting the board to 30 and requiring consumer domination, and accused the state of making a power grab.

The governor seized on the issue of the board size (Smith wanted 100; the group pushed for 66) controversy to fire the entire convener group and set up a new panel. Smith's group decided to continue planning and apply for federal recognition as the Health Systems Agency.

Take Action
Privately, top state officials admit that the size of the board was only a handy issue with which to dissolve the group dominated by Smith.

Federal regulations do suggest 30 as the optimum board size, while permitting larger groups providing an executive committee is set up for action purposes. Federal rules do require consumer control, and as to the application by Smith's group, regulations say federal officials will confer with the governor before designating an agency.

The dust from that fight will not settle soon as a new convener group gears up. Meanwhile, in the western area with 26 counties running from Virginia to Georgia and eastward to Cleveland and Lincoln, trouble is simmering as Asheville interests emerge in control of planning. In the Triad Area, a clash is developing over fair representation for the urban centers of Winston, High Point, and Greensboro.

"Somebody in Washington dreamed this whole thing up... it doesn't work, and is doomed to failure," says a health expert who is not involved, but is an interested observer. The whole approach is based on a traditional federal mistrust of states, and the requirement for consumer involvement is a remnant of the War on Poverty in which it failed due to inertia and lack of understanding among the citizens, this source says.

North Carolina was moving well ahead with rural health clinics and Area Health Education Centers — approaches thoughtfully designed for the state's own peculiar needs and geography.

The federal guidelines impose a new direction, designed in Washington, and possibly deliberately written to fail so a federal takeover can follow, this expert believes.

INSIDE REPORT

Reagan-Schlesinger Link

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The long shadow of President Ford's Halloween massacre stretched all the way to California just before Christmas when Mr. Ford's ousted Secretary of Defense, James Schlesinger, flew there at Ronald Reagan's invitation to talk defense and foreign policy.

No deals were struck between the two Republicans, one the party's leading conservative politician and presidential candidate; the other perhaps its leading expert on defense—and a hardliner on the Soviet Union and American preparedness. But the half-day of conversation in the relaxed atmosphere of a Los Angeles hotel suite began a dialogue that could sharpen the political debate between Mr. Ford and his challenger, to the President's disadvantage. Reagan, no student of military or foreign policy, has a great deal to learn.

What he learned from Schlesinger just before Christmas, and what more he may learn in the coming months, is bound to emphasize differences between him and the President over such issues as military spending that caused Mr.

Ford to fire Schlesinger.

Participants in the nearly four hours of Reagan-Schlesinger talks included John Sears, Reagan's canny political manager and an old friend of Schlesinger from the earliest days of the Nixon administration when they worked briefly together in the White House. It was Sears who apparently arranged the meeting.

In addition to providing Reagan with facts and figures on U.S. military strength and weakness, gleaned from his more than two years as Defense Secretary, Schlesinger's tutorial for candidate Reagan could have great importance on such issues as U.S. policy toward Communist China. Reagan up to now has taken a rigidly negative position on Peking because of ideological commitment to Nationalist China.

Indeed, although the principals declined to give details, Reagan came away from this first tour d'horizon with Schlesinger far more aware of the importance of Communist China as a balance wheel in super-power (U.S. vs. U.S.S.R.) confrontation than he ever was before.

No second session has yet been scheduled and Schlesinger intimates carefully play down talk of a possible political alliance between him and Reagan, noting that Schlesinger has offered to brief other presidential candidates. Nevertheless, a new Reagan-Schlesinger link has now been forged out of the Halloween massacre of Oct. 26, with potential political danger to Gerald Ford.

Doctors' approval for full-time political work has now switched the odds dramatically toward outgoing Secretary of (Continued on page 5)

A BAD PERSON

How do you define "a bad person"?

Different people would of course give different answers to this question. One might say that a bad person is one who lies and steals. Another might associate evil conduct with immorality and loose living. Some would peer deeper into the problem and declare that pride and avarice are the source of wickedness.

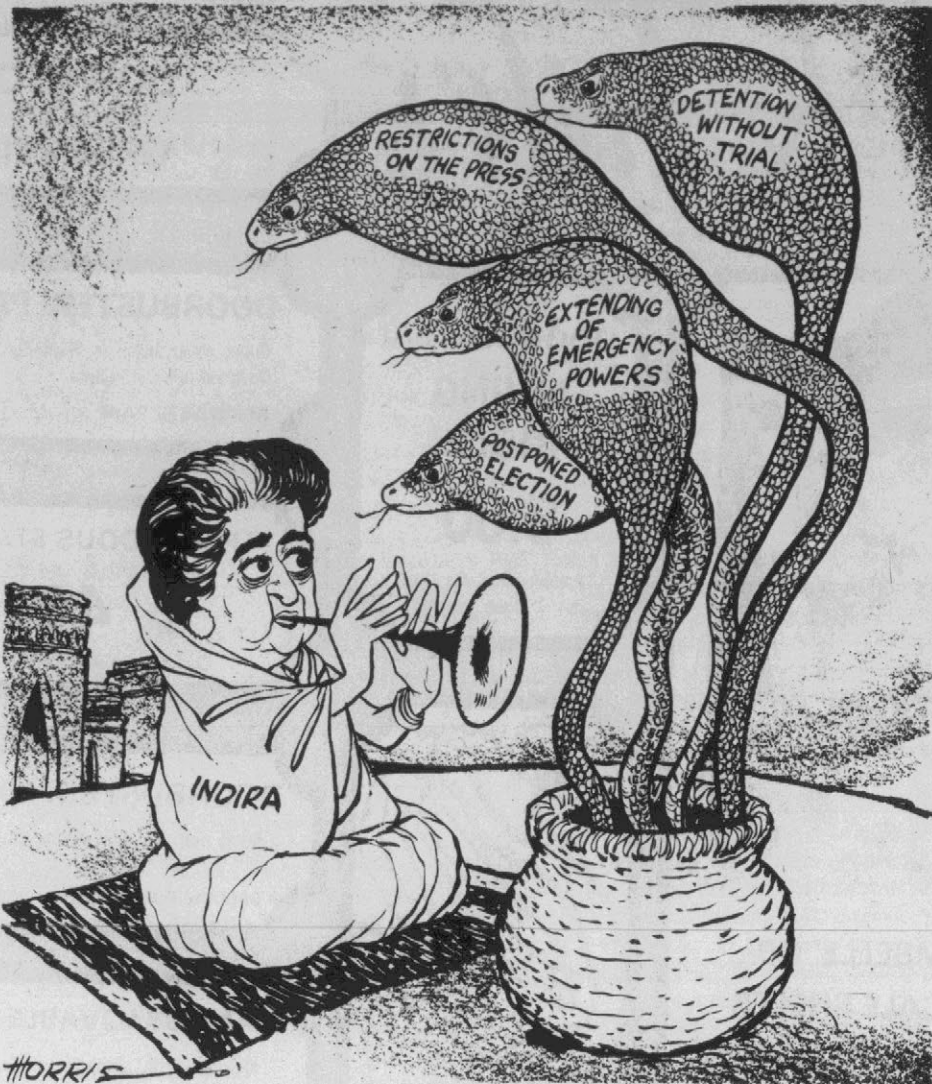

But how about this for a definition: A bad person is a person who does not want to be better?

No matter how bad a person may be, if he has left within him the vestige of a desire to be better there is one dim light shining on the dark windswept road along which he travels. But if he has no desire to do better, then indeed he is hopeless.

This was what Jesus meant when he said that publicans and sinners would enter the kingdom of heaven while the outwardly pious would be excluded. The only people morally hopeless are the self-satisfied.

Script For All Seasons

WASHINGTON — Under the new financial guidelines of national elections, it is very expensive to hire speechwriters for a candidate's primary campaign. Therefore, as a public service, I am submitting an all-purpose speech that any candidate can use in any state primary.

"My fellow Americans, I can't tell you what a pleasure it is to be here in the (cold) (warmth) of the great state of —, a state that has given us such great public servants as —"

and, of course, the greatest one of all, —. As I stand here on this —, I can't help thinking that 200 years ago your ancestors, then a scraggly rabble of colonists armed with nothing but muskets and hayforks, defeated the best troops that George III could send to the new world. This spirit of '76 still endures in the great state of —, and I can see on your faces the same love of liberty that must have shone on your ancestors' faces when they fought the bloody battles at — and —.

"But I am not here to talk about the past, but the future. I have traveled from one end of the state to the other. I have spoken to your people and I understand your problems. I know the unemployment rate in your state is — percent. If I am elected I intend to bring it down to — percent. I have heard your fears about —. I assure you, ladies and gentlemen, that your fears and mine are the same. And the first thing I intend to do after I am sworn in is to attack —.

"You have told me how you feel about big government destroying the American spirit. I want you to know I am against big government and I am for the people.

"The bureaucrats who sit behind their large desks in Washington do not understand the problems of the great state of —. They have lost touch with the needs of the people and I make a solemn pledge that, if you choose me as your leader, your voices will be heard in the halls of Congress and the federal agencies that are encroaching on your lives.

"We must turn big government around. At the same time we must have new federal programs that will serve the people. We must have better — laws, more —, higher — for the poor and greater — for the senior citizens. Our defense must be — to none. While we should not turn our backs on detente we must be prepared to meet the — from a position of strength. I intend to cut the fat from our defense budget, but not the muscle.

"In education I am for quality education for all our students whether or not they are —, — or red. I am — busing because I believe busing is —, — and —.

"The one question that the people of the great state of — have asked me is where I stand on crime. I can tell you today my stand on crime has never wavered. I am against it. And I promise you if I'm elected I will continue to be against it.

"The American people are entitled to be safe in their — and in the —. And I intend to do something about it with your help.

"As the date of your primary election comes nearer I can't help thinking of what (a) Thomas Jefferson (b) Abraham Lincoln (c) Franklin Roosevelt (choose one) said. He said, "(find

Grade Change Ahead

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning next month, shoppers buying "prime" and "choice" meat will be getting some meat that is less juicy and tender than Americans have been getting in those grades.

The Agriculture Department announced plans to put the new system into effect Feb. 23 after Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun last Friday denied a further bid to halt the new definitions. Initially planned for adoption last April 14, the grade changes have been delayed by months of court challenges from consumer groups and others.

The three top grades of beef commonly seen in retail stores are prime, choice and good, in their order of tenderness and juiciness. A prime steak has more marbling — flecks of fat — than choice or good.

Under the new rules, standards for prime and choice will be widened and those for good narrowed so more beef can qualify as top grade.

Although the use of federal beef grading by meat packers and retail stores is voluntary, it is common in the industry and labels designating prime, choice and good are familiar to shoppers.

Historically, the tenderest and most expensive cuts of beef are prime and come from cattle which have been pampered and fed grain during much of their lives, particularly in the final few months before slaughter.

But grain prices have risen so much in recent years that cattle feeding has been on the decline and many farmers and feed-lot operators, until recently, say they have lost money on their operations. By enlarging the prime and choice categories, producers will be able to feed less grain to animals and still have them qualify for the more expensive grades.

Among the opponents of the new grading plan is the Consumer Federation of America, which contends shoppers will be charged higher prices for meat that is lower in quality. A Consumer Federation spokesman said, "Consumers will wind up paying choice prices for good beef."

But the Agriculture Department says its new rules will not create any detectable change in the taste of beef at any particular grade.

40 Years Ago Today

January 14, 1936

America's newest speed king of aviation, Howard Hughes, a youthful daredevil from California, crowned his thrilling air achievements today by completing the fastest trans-continental flight ever made.

Hughes flew without a stop from Burbank, Calif. to Newark, N.J. in nine hours, 27 minutes and 10 seconds — smashing by more than half an hour the old record set by Col. Roscoe Turner in 1934.

The new record-holder flew most of the distance at 8,000 feet, breathing part of the time from a tank of oxygen.

"I've been wanting to do this for three years," said Hughes, erstwhile Hollywood film producer, "I feel pretty good about it."

The Subject Is Always Studied

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the age of the study committee. In business, government and academic life the phrasing is similar: "The matter was referred to the committee for further study."

If after due study the committee fails to reach a conclusion, it might hand off the problem to a subcommittee, from whence it might then be passed on for further "action" by a foundation or institute, where study is permanent.

Name the subject and it is being studied, but name the subject and the chances are you won't find the answers. Studies raise questions, like beating a rug raises dust, sometimes beclouding rather than clarifying.

And so, in the spirit of not expecting much, a few unanswered questions are hereby cast into this murky oblivion, offered as subjects that might be studied somewhere, sometime, without the least expectation of resolution.

—Is a gentlemen's club a social rather than a business establishment? There is an intriguing tax angle to this.

In some parts of exclusive city "social" clubs, in a taproom perhaps, you are forbidden from writing or shuffling papers on the surface of the table. Such conduct suggests business rather than socializing.

The rules are enforced too, and people so rude as to require reminding are watched carefully and might find themselves asked to leave if they persist in such crude behavior. The line has to be drawn somewhere.

Oddly, almost everyone at one such club on a certain day were gathered for the specific purpose of talking business. Their memberships, in fact, were obtained through business associations. Their firms paid the dues.

When they were through, their checks were offered to the Internal Revenue Service as business lunch tax deductions, and the waiters who enforced the "no business" rule gladly provided receipts for that purpose.

The questions for the study committee are many, of course, but an especially intriguing one is whether this cultural schizophrenia should be recognized by the IRS.

—Who is the mysterious "they," perhaps the most widely quoted alleged authority on everything and anything but who nevertheless remains unknown? A saboteur, perhaps? "They" always seems to have bad news.

One effort to find the elusive "they" led only to more "theys," suggesting the need for a multiple attack, such as can be launched by a committee, rather than a solo effort.

Referring to the economy, a casual informant commented, "They say we're headed for more bad times and..." The informant was interrupted by a question: "Who says we're headed for bad times?" The answer: "Oh, they all say we are."

Who is "they?" He or she must be found.

—Do high interest rates help cause inflation or do they help arrest inflation?

You think you know the answer, but can you prove it? High rates add to the cost of doing business, don't they? And we know that business passes on increased costs to the consumer, right?

Mrs. Sanford Raps Primaries

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — "Terry's a strong person, but I think the primaries are killing the candidates and we ought to do away with them," says Margaret Rose Sanford, whose husband is seeking the Democratic nomination for president.

The 58-year-old Terry Sanford, former governor of North Carolina and on leave as president of Duke University, has come down with chest pains while campaigning in New England. Doctors say the heart was not involved, and that his trouble is muscular, similar to a crick in the neck. He is to enter the Duke University Medical Center today for a few days of rest and observation. His news secretary says he definitely will stay in the race.

"Primaries are a heckuva way to elect a president," Mrs. Sanford said in an interview Tuesday. "The way they (the candidates) have to go about would kill a person."

"I didn't really worry—he's never been seriously ill—and he's the kind of man who can put up with the schedule," she said while her husband was in a hospital in Salem, Mass., before flying to Durham today.

But what happened was not really a surprise, either, she intimated.

"He came home from there (New Hampshire, where the first presidential primary will take place next month) last Friday night, and he was here all day Saturday. But you know how that goes, the phone, ev-everyone coming and going. And he left at six Sunday morning to go back. I thought he looked overtired, and the children did, too."

Sanford was hospitalized Sunday night.

"I talked with him from the hospital," Mrs. Sanford continued. "He said he felt he was ready to go back to campaigning, but the doctors have persuaded him to come back home and rest up."

Would the illness stop his bid for the presidential nomination?

"Oh, no. People like Terry have an extra gene that makes them seem to like campaigning."

Commerce Rogers Morton to become President Ford's desperately needed White House political aide, a job slated for former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton up to last weekend (Jan. 3).

Morton's medical clearance—he has a clean bill of health for cancer following extensive treatments but still suffers from diabetes—came last week after Mr. Ford tentatively settled on Scranton.

Morton had always been the President's first choice for a job gone begging far too long, but his doctors strongly backed by Morton's wife said no. That left Scranton the sole alternative, as we reported on Jan. 2, even though the liberal Scranton was certain to generate major opposition from Republican conservatives—the grass-roots strength of the Republican party.

The new White House assignment for old pro "Rog" Morton will make him the President's liaison with both the President Ford Committee and the Republican National Committee (which Morton himself headed in 1969 and 1970). In addition, however, Morton will be "available" for specific presidential assignments in non-campaign politics.

Khalid To Assad Well-informed intelligence sources have quietly passed word to the U.S. that King Khalid of Saudi Arabia used all his powers of persuasion in his late December meeting with President Hafez Assad of Syria to mute Syria's harsh criticism of Egypt for negotiating the Sinai agreement.

These reports, regarded here as credible, said that the new King of Saudi Arabia strongly urged Assad to diminish his attacks on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in the overall interest of Arab unity. This is in line with top-level Arab worry that every time the Arab world splits on a political issue, Israel profits.

Assad's venomous attacks on Sadat started with the signing of the Sinai pact (which restored the Sinai passes and the Abu Rudeis oil fields to Egypt) and increased in intensity for weeks thereafter. King Khalid strongly defended Sadat's domestic political rationale in making the deal with Israel, despite the fact that it broke the common Arab front. The communique (called a "press statement") issued at the end of the meeting ignored Sinai completely, indicating that Assad listened to the King.

suitable quote). Every night before I go to bed I repeat those words.

"I would like to close on a personal note. My wife — and I would both like to thank you for the great hospitality the people of the great state of — have shown us. We've put on — pounds eating your fine — and — your — which is the greatest in the world. As — said to me just before we went to bed at the motel the other night, 'If this primary lasts much longer and we keep eating more of those tasty — you're going to have to buy me a whole new wardrobe.'" (Wait for laugh and standing ovation. Then make wife get up and hug her as you both wave with one hand to the crowd.)

Okay, but high interest rates discourage borrowing, agreed? And when borrowing is discouraged there is less inflationary pressure, no? Isn't it true then that high rates arrest existing inflation?

While this really is a very important matter, one that is at the very foundation of the nation's fight for economic stability, can we ever hope for a clearcut, cleancut answer?

Probably not, and so it makes an ideal question to put to a study committee.

Kendall Col...

Some meat packers also oppose the changes, contending the new guidelines will cause production slowdowns, lead to mandatory grading and result in added transportation costs. The packers contend the added costs will have to be passed on to consumers.

Agriculture Department officials say the new system "should lead to a reduction in the amount of excess fat on beef cattle by providing a more direct means to encourage the production of meat-type cattle."

The department says the changes "will result in slightly leaner beef qualifying for U.S. prime and choice" by reducing the amount of marbling now required in those. Reducing the amount of marbling will also reduce the need for grain feeding, which should reduce grain use, the department says.

Tape Reveals Confession Of Six Murders

By EDWARD C. NICHOLLS
Associated Press Writer
NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — Erwin Charles Simants confessed an hour after his arrest that he killed six members of a Sutherland, Neb., family, a jury has been told.

In a taped confession played Tuesday for the jury in Simants' trial for murder, the 30-year-old accused man admitted shooting six members of the Henry Kellie family last Oct. 18 and sexually assaulting a 10-year-old girl and her grandmother, the latter after her death.

News reporters learned of the recorded statement prior to the trial but were barred from mentioning its existence, or several other facets of the trial, by a controversial "gag" order issued by presiding Judge Hugh Stuart. The issue of the gag order has gone to the U.S. Supreme Court.

About 150 spectators jammed the courtroom Tuesday as the 19-minute tape was played. Simants' attorneys, who are basing their case on a defense of insanity, objected to the playing of the tape and asked that it be stricken from the record. The judge overruled the request.

In the statement, Simants told how he shot his victims one by one. He is charged with six counts of first-degree murder while committing or attempting to commit sexual assaults.

Neither Simants, nor others in the courtroom, displayed any emotion as the tape was played.

Simants' ex-wife, Mary Olson, was the first witness called by the defense. She testified that Simants "went whole hog" with drinking after the death of his only child in 1970.

Mrs. Olson said she and her husband signed a document authorizing doctors to remove their 3-year-old daughter from a respirator. The girl had been born with a separated spine and was paralyzed from the waist down.

Mrs. Olson said she and Simants were separated in 1967 and later divorced. While still married, she said, on occasion "he'd just go blank. He'd stop whatever he was doing. He'd just go out of the house and wander." She said Simants' blackouts lasted from 15 minutes to an hour.

When her husband had been drinking, she said, "he'd come home and we'd get in a fight and ... I'd get beat up."

Simants' attorneys contend he is an alcoholic and a moron and should be found innocent by reason of insanity.

The defense said it plans to call only a few more witnesses and that the case should go to the jury of seven women and five men Thursday or Friday.

Speaking At Revival Here

The revival now in progress at the Church of God, Skinner and Spruce Sts., will continue this week with services each night at 7:30.

REV. ROB. WORTHINGTON

The Rev. Robert (Bob) Worthington, from Vanceboro, will be assisted by the Christianaires, singing group and recording artists, who will be singing as special guests for the music program.

The Rev. Worthington was formerly with the Grand Ole Opry, Nashville, Tenn., and worked with many of the big name artists prior to becoming a minister. He worked principally with the Jimmie Snow Gospel TV program and ministries.

The public is invited to attend the services.

Supplement Is Now Available

City Clerk Lois Worthington announced that the third supplement to the City Code is now available at city hall.

Mrs. Worthington said that the supplement, which serves to update the City Code with ordinance changes that took place during the past year, is available free of charge to persons who purchased a copy of the Code.

The loose leaf volume can be purchased for $25, she added.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can charm others and make rapid advancement towards building up greater harmony at home and with family in a.m. Later, you may become too emotional and feel you're not getting your share of whatever means much to you. Be philosophical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study home conditions to see what needs to be done to make them more satisfactory. Complete tasks that are necessary.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Morning is fine for communicating with others. Later you know what an unusual partner is driving at. Use care in motion.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle financial matters well, then improve property, assets. Use commonsense methods. Avoid one who keeps you worked up.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Morning is the best time to contact friends who can give you the backing you need now. Make decisions and follow through.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan future activities intelligently. Get needed advice from experts. Work at hand can be done efficiently. Relax in p.m.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Personal aims can be realized with help of those who have backing and know-how. Attend important social. Be courteous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get backing of a bigwig before proceeding with project that means much to you. Don't procrastinate about civic matter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get an early start at new activities for advancement. Contacts you have made recently can be of great help to you now if approached.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find right ways to fulfill promises. Carry through with new method started for better understanding with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Now that you understand what is expected of you by partners, work steadily to get things done and right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Tackle work early and by persevering you clear it up by 5 p.m. Take a little time for building up your health.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan early for the recreation desired, then you can work well on whatever is important. Use those fine, creative talents.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be a born psychologist who will comprehend the thinking and emotional nature of others. Slant education along such lines so humanity can be benefited by your fine progeny. Teach early to rise above any limitations and give the finest spiritual training that will lead to big success.

Coretta King
Terms Center
A 'Catalyst'

CORETTA KING, sitting in her Atlanta office, says the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change is a "think tank." (AP Wirephoto)

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Mrs. Coretta Scott King says the center named for her late husband is a "think tank," a catalyst for social change to continue his struggle against conditions that breed violence—such as hunger and unemployment.
"Hunger is violence," said Mrs. King in an interview a few days before ceremonies marking the 47th birthday anniversary of her slain civil rights leader husband, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"The center enables us to go out and struggle against the evils in our society," she said of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change. "Its programs are designed to speak to the needs of people, today and tomorrow."

The institution was established soon after King died at the hands of an assassin in Memphis, Tenn. nearly eight years ago, April 4, 1968.

"Enactment of a full employment law would be the greatest tribute to him," the 47-year-old widow said.

Mrs. King, the mother of four, said she frequently works until 3 or 4 a.m. on plans for "the need for massive outcry and massive mobilization...in support of full employment legislation."

"I know the politics of how you make change," added Mrs. King, sitting in her office filled with pictures and memorabilia of her late husband.

She called full employment "the make or break issue of 1976," and added, "Let it be clearly understood by those who seek the highest office in this nation that we will not compromise on this issue."

Through the tactics and strategies of nonviolence, she said her husband was able "to transform structures and allow injustices to be brought out into the open, to be dramatized at times."

New Yorker Is Blind Need
Bellman Of Year Phone Form

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who works in the "rude city" of New York, Donald Karabaich, 45, was named "Bellman-Bellwoman of the Year" here, competing against almost 1,000 hotel employees from all over the world.

Judges included Carolyn Bennett Patterson, president of the Society of American Travel Writers, Eric Friedman, editor of Travel Agent Magazine, and tennis star Arthur Ashe.

Karabaich grew up in Yugoslavia and emigrated with his family to the United States in 1947. He often uses his fluency in Polish, Russian and Croatian to assist foreign guests at the St. Moritz Hotel.

The competition, held for the 10th year, is sponsored by the American Hotel and Motel Assn., Samsonite Luggage and American Airlines.

BIRD PROBLEM

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Missouri Conservation Department officials say the state's blackbird problem increases in mild winters when unharvested crops are left in the fields.

"He raised the level of conscience until the nation was moved to enact laws that brought about sweeping changes," she said.

Mrs. King said the center is concerned with creating leadership.

"We are building an international center, a center that addresses itself to peace and teaching, dissolving conflicts, a kind of think tank...with the best minds coming together," she said.

"The center must address itself to the needs of all people, all nations and all religions," she said. "We don't see the center as doing all the work. We see ourselves bringing people together..."

Mrs. King expressed concern about the nation's obsession with conspiracy in connection with the assassinations of her husband and other leaders, such as former President John Kennedy and his brother, Robert.

"Why?" she asked. "Why was Martin killed? That's what the nation is not ready to face up to, why he was killed."

"If Martin was followed — and he was by the CIA whenever he went abroad — what they were looking for was something to discredit him," she said.

"Martin was trying to expose the evils and injustices in society which allow a few who control the wealth of this country to continue in power. They want to perpetuate the system because they have a vested interest in it."

But she feels there is a new system emerging.

"A new system is emerging in the hearts of people," she said. "A new spirit—this may be the darkest hours before dawn."

"There's been no moral leadership in the White House for the last eight years. Now is the time for leaders with compassion—who dare to dance to a different tune."

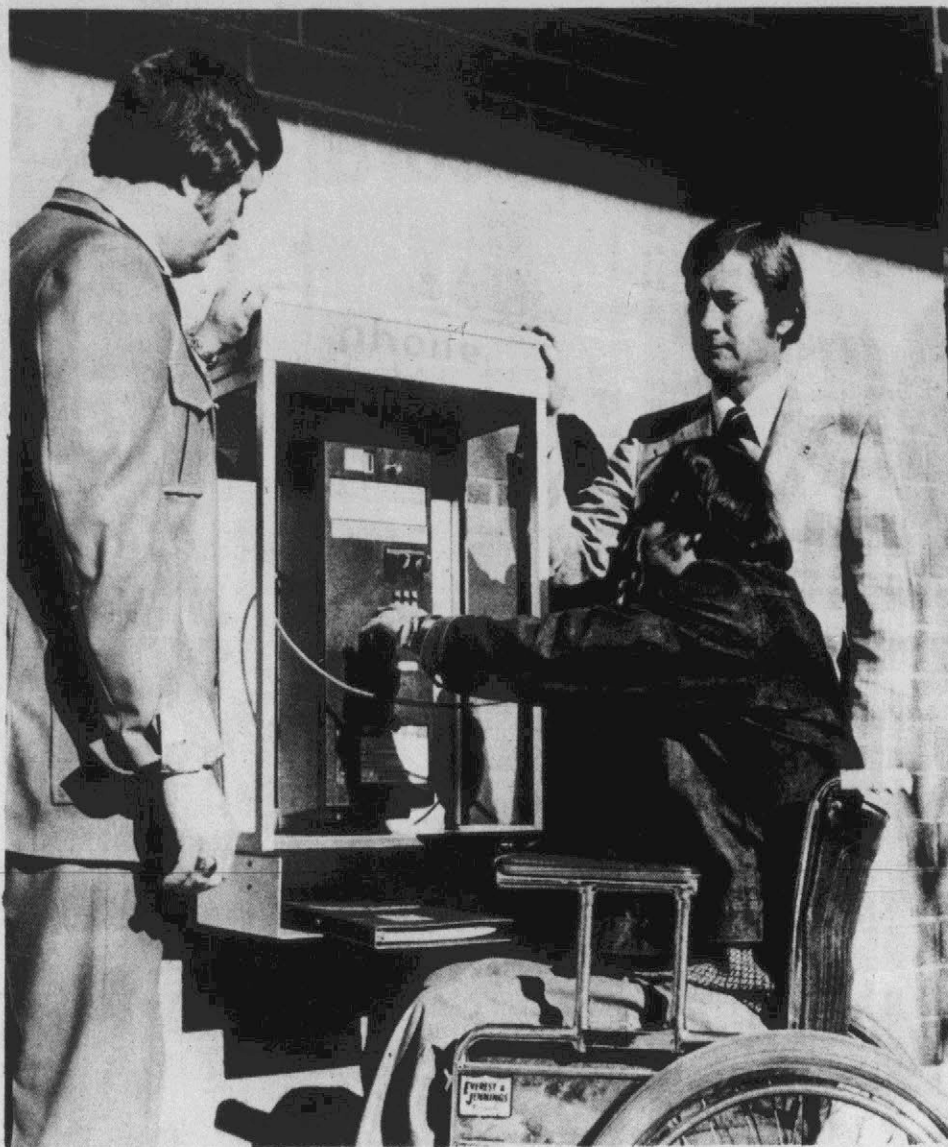

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Blind persons who want exemption from a 20-cent charge for directory assistance telephone calls must obtain a special form from Southern Bell Telephone Co., a company spokesman said Monday.

District Manager Roy King said Southern Bell will those seeking an exemption must supply the telephone company with the name of their doctor, clinic or social agency that can furnish details of the their disability, if needed.

The state Utilities Commission decided last week to reverse an earlier decision and exempt the blind and certain other handicapped persons from the directory assistance charge that goes into effect Friday. Other Bell subscribers will be charged for directory assistance, after receiving the first five such calls free.

King said persons who feel they qualify for the exemption can get the forms either by calling the telephone company business office and explaining their handicap or by picking up a form from the office.

New Type Public Phones

Carolina Telephone, recognizing their responsibility to serve the handicapped, began today placing new coin telephones at a lower height. The first installation was made at Pitt Plaza.

Coin telephones in the past have been installed at 63 inches from the coin slot to the floor. New coin telephones will be placed at 54 inches from the coin slot to the floor where they will be more readily available to wheelchair handicapped, children, dwarfs and others with limitations.

The new coin telephones are equipped with a 29 inch handset cord to provide more convenience for both wheelchair users and tall persons. People wearing hearing aids with telephone switches can use these handsets since they provide magnetic coupling capability. Older handsets will be replaced with the new type when maintenance is required so that all coin telephones will eventually provide magnetic coupling capability.

The height change requires a new type of booth equipment. Full booths will be seen less since a wheelchair cannot enter them. Open type shelter booths and polemounted coin telephones will become more generally used.

Carolina Telephone believes this action will make public telephones more convenient to the public it serves.

Fahrner Named To Commission

Dr. A. A. Fahrner of Greenville, was recently appointed as a member of the Historic Murfreesboro Commission by Governor James Holshouser.

Dr. Fahrner, one of five newly appointed members, is a professor at East Carolina University. He received his B.S. degree from Hampden-Sydney College and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina.

BLUE BELL, Pa. (AP) — The Taser electric dart gun, sold for protection against crime, was an instrument of terror for a Montgomery County couple in the hands of four masked bandits.

"The assailants used this dart gun to force the man and his wife to say where they had more money or valuable belongings," police Sgt. Joseph Stemple said Tuesday. He refused to name the man and his wife.

Stemple said a man appeared at the door of the couple's home at supertime and identified himself as a police officer. He said the bogus cop rushed in with three other men, all wearing ski masks.

The men carried the Taser — designed by a space technology engineer inspired by the weaponry of Buck Rogers and James Bond.

"The couple was tied up with clothing, handcuffs and telephone wires," Stemple said. "Apparently, the suspects knew there was money in the house."

"While the people were tied up, one of these guys shot them with this dart gun. They were both shot twice in the stomach," Stemple said. "The darts stuck in their flesh. It's like a needle, except it gives you a shock."

He added, "It's called the Taser Public Defender and it gives you a hell of a shock. They say it immobilizes you. I know it hurts, but it doesn't kill. Both the man and the woman were treated at a local hospital and released."

The four fled with $7,000 cash, $4,000 in jewels, the man's Mercedes-Benz and two .22-caliber rifles.

Taser Systems, Inc., manufactures the $199 weapon, which it calls "the alternative to the gun." It looks like a flashlight, though in California it is officially termed a gun and must be registered and bear a serial number.

The Montgomery County incident is not the first in which the Taser was used to commit a crime. Last September a Taser was used to hold up a gas station attendant in Miami.

Alvin Simon, president of Taser Systems, said:

"All of our information, research and data indicate that it's nonlethal. We've been working on it since 1968 and everything bears out the fact that it's not lethal."

Simon said that although the gun has a rating of 50,000 volts at the source, it has such low amperage and wattage that its shock is relatively harmless.

He said it has only three watts of power, less than in a Christmas tree bulb or an electric heart pacemaker.

Taser Systems has admitted that the weapon might cause serious injury to victims with heart or respiratory problems.

A dart is fired from the gun with a fine wire attached. Once the dart sticks in the target a button is pushed to emit the charge.

Williamston Signs Chief

WILLIAMSTON — The town board of Williamston on Tuesday officially confirmed the selection of a new police chief, Willie Rogers, a sergeant with the N. C. Highway Patrol, has been selected to fill the vacancy created when the board earlier this month ousted veteran chief John Swain.

Rogers will retire from the State Highway Patrol effective the end of January and assume his new duties as Williamston Police Chief on February 2.

A native of Dillon, S. C., Rogers first joined the N. C. Highway Patrol in 1956 and has since served in Kenansville, Goldsboro and Williamston. He has been at the Williamston station since 1967.

The annual salary for Rogers has been set at $13,500.

He is married to the former Faye Revelle of Warsaw. Mrs. Rogers is currently director of the Tideland Mental Health Center in Washington, N.C.

Arrest Suspect In Bank Holdup

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A man was arrested shortly after a gunman robbed a bank in Lumberton Tuesday and most of the money was recovered, the FBI says.

It said that Yates Byrd, 31, was arrested at his home in the Tolarsville community 10 miles from Lumberton. He was placed in jail at Fayetteville on a charge of suspicion of bank robbery pending a hearing before a U.S. magistrate.

The amount stolen from the Biggs Park shopping center branch of the Waccamaw Bank & Trust Co. was not disclosed.

Revival Series Begins Monday

Elder Lillie Boyd, pastor of Burning Bush Holiness Church, will conduct revival services at Pactolus Holiness Church on the Rock, beginning Monday evening, Jan. 19 and continuing through Jan. 23.

The public is invited to attend the services.

NOMINATED FOR ACADEMY — Senator Jesse Helms recently announced the nomination of Edward M. Connolly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Connolly of Greenville, to the United States Naval Academy for the class entering July 1976.

DIRECTORY ASSISTANCE CHARGING BEGINS JANUARY 15

On January 15, Carolina Telephone will begin charging for Directory Assistance calls in excess of five per month, per line. The charge will be 20c for each direct dialed call, above the five call allowance, to local Directory Assistance and requests for numbers within the 919 area.

The reason for this charge is simply to reduce the growing volume of unnecessary calls to Directory Assistance, and thus reduce the soaring cost of providing this service, which last year amounted to $1.5 million.

Based on studies made by the company, we feel sure that 90 per cent of our customers will never be billed for Directory Assistance.

These studies also shows that just a few — 8 per cent — of the company's customers make 51 per cent of the local Directory Assistance calls, and that 74 per cent of all local numbers asked for were listed in the telephone directory.

With this charging plan, those customers who choose to continue to call Directory Assistance frequently, will pay their share of the expense of providing this special service.

Because of anticipated economies, the recently authorized rates for basic local telephone service are approximately 20c per month less, per line, than would otherwise have been required.

Some of the features of the plan are:
1. In order to make allowance for a reasonable need for directory assistance including numbers not in the directory, directory inaccessibility, and other similar conditions, customers will be allowed five free direct dialed requests for directory assistance within their local calling area and 919 area per billing month.

2. No charge will be made for calls to directory assistance placed from coin telephones, or for calls to directory assistance outside the 919 area.

3. A request for two numbers at one time will be considered as one call.

Operators will continue to provide Directory Assistance without charge through January 14. This will give you time to make preparations that will help you cut down on your use of Directory Assistance.

EXEMPTIONS PROPOSED FOR BLIND AND HANDICAPPED

Carolina Telephone has been notified in a proposed order from the North Carolina Utilities Commission that blind persons and those persons physically handicapped to the extent that they cannot use a telephone directory, will be exempt from directory assistance charging.

The commission proposes to issue a formal order to this effect unless any party involved files exceptions prior to January 15, 1976, and requests to be heard on these exceptions.

Directory assistance charging exemptions for the blind and handicapped would be on an interim basis for the calendar year 1976.

Efforts will be made by the company to contact those individuals who may be eligible for the exemption.

Telephone users who believe themselves eligible for the exemptions should contact their local telephone business office.

Predicts Widening Of Doctor Slowdown In Calif.

Girl Scout Cookie Sale Will Begin January 16

The Annual Girl Scout Cookie Sale begins January 16. Selling cookies is a Service Project in which Junior, Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts and the adult members of the Girl Scout Council of Coastal Carolina raise money for campsites, buildings and equipment. In addition, the troops receive a portion of the profit for their own use.

More than 5,000 Girl Scouts in 26 Counties served by Coastal Carolina will take orders for cookies, January 16-26. Deliveries and collections will be made February 17. Cookies will sell for $1.25 per box again this year. Again five varieties, including chocolate mint, shortbread, peanut butter sandwich, vanilla sandwich cremes, and a new peanut butter pattie covered with chocolate, will be offered.

Proceeds from Cookie Sales since 1972 have purchased two new campsites, made major improvements at Camp Pretty Pond and some improvements at Camp Hardee and the Kinston Cabin. At the new Louisburg site a .7 mile road has been constructed, fields have been cleared and planted in fescue, old buildings have been removed with land cleared for projected building and an underground electric line has been run to the site. At Pretty Pond a winterized multipurpose building, primitive unit, storage - maintenance building and cook's cabin have been added. The dining hall was remodeled and pier and floating docks redesigned and enlarged.

Profits from the 1976 Cookie Sale will be used primarily for continuing development of the Louisburg site; installation of a water system, septic tanks, electric lines for the pump house, a picnic shelter with restrooms and fireplace, and a mobile home for the Camp Ranger will make the site ready for use in the spring.

The Cookie Sale also provides for year-round utilities and repairs at all campsites. In addition, Camperships are made available to girls who need financial assistance for camp fees.

Mrs. Dawn Rollins, Office Manager-bookkeeper, is serving as Council Cookie Sale Director. Cookie Chairperson is Susan Pittman. Anyone who wishes to buy cookies and is not contacted may call the local chairperson at 756-5288.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A spokesman for a physician's group has warned that the doctors' slowdown in the Los Angeles area could spread throughout the state when Travelers Insurance Co. raises malpractice insurance rates in Northern California Feb. 1.

At the same time, a Los Angeles County official said Tuesday, plans have been prepared to call a state of emergency as a possible means of combating the slowdown.

Officials drew up the plans in case no solution is found to the malpractice situation. The state has advanced a plan calling for a state-financed insurance company in return for a medical "Peace Corps" which would have doctors donate 20 days a year to caring for the poor.

The Los Angeles County Medical Association criticized the proposal Tuesday and protested what it said were statements by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. that doctors "do not act in a socially responsible manner to the needs of their communities."

Southern California physicians, mostly in the Los Angeles area, began the work slowdown Jan. 1 to protest an increase of 327 per cent in their malpractice insurance premiums.

By Tuesday, the 13th day of the slowdown, 98 of the 234 member hospitals in the Hospital Council of Southern California had experienced some degree of difficulty due to the protest.

Nearly 26,000 workers have been affected — more than 4,300 of them laid off — while hospitals are losing $700,000 a day from decreased patient loads, a hospital council spokesman said.

Dr. Gerald Glantz of the United Physicians of California told a news conference in Sacramento that Travelers — the insurance carrier for the 9,500 doctors in Southern California — would raise its rates for physicians in the northern portion of the state Feb. 1.

"It's going to be a statewide movement very rapidly," Glantz said, adding that Travelers insures 65 per cent of the physicians in the San Jose-Sacramento area.

Doctors in the northern part of the state staged their own slowdown last year to protest soaring malpractice insurance rates.

One Person Injured In Traffic Mishaps

Three collisions here yesterday injured one person and caused an $2,400 property damage.

Police reported heaviest damage resulted from a three-vehicle crash at the intersection of Elm and Fifth Streets about 2:55 p.m.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as John Thomas Johnson Jr. of River-view Est., Jean Chorlee Ramey of 1802 Rosewood Dr., and Becky Harris Harrell of 208 South Elm St.

Investigators estimated damage at $450 to the Johnson car, $500 to the Ramey vehicle and $300 to the Harrell auto.

Mrs. Harrell, who was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries received, was charged with failing to stop for a stop light.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 5:12 p.m. mishap on Charles Street, 200 feet North of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, involving cars driven by Deborah Georgetown McCrae of Durham and Marie Covil Horne of Winterville.

Officers charged Miss McCrae with failing to yield the right of way in the collision.

No charges were made following investigation of a 3:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Third and Greene Streets.

Police reported cars driven by Leonard Teel Jr. of 310B Paige Dr. and Retha Holliday Corbett of 121F Lakeview Ter. collided, causing an estimated $300 damage to the Teel car and $250 damage to the Corbett auto.

Shad Festival Meeting Set

GRIFTON — The Grifton Shad Festival committee will meet Thursday, January, 15 at 8 p.m. at the Grifton Library and each Thursday evening until Shad Festival time April 9, 10, 11. All Committee chairmen and any interested citizens who would like to give ideas or suggestions on festival plans are invited to attend. The souvenir brochure must go to the printer this month so definite dates and plans must be set in January.

Jury Told How Trio Caught In Soybean Field

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP)—A jury was told Tuesday how three persons charged with slaying a state highway patrolman were flushed from a soybean field with the aid of a helicopter.

Patrol Sgt. Willie Rogers said he spotted the suspects lying in the field when the wind from the helicopter parted the foliage enough to reveal the shape of a human body.

Frankie Jerome Squire, Faye Beatrice Brown and Joseph Seaborn are on trial for their lives in the shotgun slaying of patrolman Guy Thomas Davis Jr. of Windsor last Sept. 2.

According to testimony, Davis was shot to death when he stopped a car in Williamston shortly after the robbery of Branch Banking and Trust Co. in nearby Jamesville.

Vote To Pay Tank Costs

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board Tuesday night voted to pay an estimate of $30,119.07 to Brown Steel for installing the new water tank.

The board also voted to pay an estimate of $98,788.26 to F&G Construction for sewer improvements.

Steve Rogers was selected to be the principal representative to the Mid East Criminal Justice Commission. Jimmie Lewis was selected as Roger's alternate.

Board members voted to have a light installed on the Crime Prevention Car.

Installation of street lights at the corner of Casey Drive and Wall Street and at the lower end of Tucker Street was approved.

Turned $250 Into World's Largest Black Business

By POLLY ULLRICH
CHICAGO (UPI) — George E. Johnson parlayed a $250 investment into a company that grossed $39 million dollars in sales.

He says it could only happen in America.

Johnson is a black entrepreneur with a high school education. He founded a tiny company in 1954 by mixing up batches of hair straightening tonic in the back of a beauty supply shop on Chicago's south side.

The firm, Johnson Products Co. Inc., is now the largest black manufacturing company in the world, with over 400 employees. In 1971 it became the first black-owned company to be listed on the American Stock Exchange.

Johnson Products markets Ultra Sheen, Afro Sheen, and Ultra Wave hair products and cosmetics for black consumers.

"Only in America could the George Johnson story ever materialize," Johnson said as he surveyed the company's 23-acre grounds from his office window.

"I don't believe it is different to be a black businessman. The same ingredients go into success with a black man as a white man."

But he added, "A black man must be willing to work harder, and accept the hardship, and then maybe be more creative. If I've been forced to develop myself more, then I'm the winner, and that's great."

Johnson nursed his fledgling company through a fire in 1964 that totally destroyed the plant. He engineered shifts in company production and marketing that his associates say led to his success.

Johnson sold his first batch of Ultra Wave hair straightener to barbershops for $1 a jar in 1954. By the end of two weeks, Johnson Products had $750 in the bank.

In 1957, he saw a need for hair products in black beauty shops and developed a brand for black women called Ultra Sheen.

"I realized that beauticians were more numerous than barbers," Johnson said. "And I have an affinity for women and the competence of women."

By 1960, Johnson Products grossed $450,000 in sales.

"Then retailers began to take notice of our products," he said. "The demand for Ultra Sheen was created in drug stores by word of mouth."

By 1964, the firm grossed $1 million in sales, with a strong retail market. In 1969, sales hit $10 million.

In 1971, Johnson decided to sponsor a television show in Chicago, Soul Train, a kind of black American Bandstand.

"We wanted to find out how to take a magic medium, television, and make it effective for us," he said. "That has been the biggest payoff in terms of reaching our market."

In 1975, the company spent $5 million in advertising and grossed $39 million in sales. The 48-year-old businessman has several goals now.

"I believe we have the opportunity to be a $100 million company by 1980," he said. "This is my overriding goal at the moment."

Johnson's brainchild and special project at the moment is a nationwide setup to franchise beauty salons.

"It's exciting, it hit me one day," he said. "It was like someone lit a fire under me and I've been going ever since. It has potential for this company, and also will help out the black beauty industry."

As Johnson sees it, there are only two industries in the black community that are controlled by blacks. They are the funeral industry — "White people have not decided to bury us yet" — and the beauty industry.

He said he wants to "put a solid base in the black beauty industry, and that means organizing beauty salons."

"The Afro freed women from beauty salons, but it is a monotonous thing," he said. "Women want variety. The number of beauty shops are declining and we want to encourage consumers to return to the salons."

Johnson Products will build or set up the salons, train and hire the beauticians, provide equipment, and then sell the package to a franchise holder.

Franchise owners would be encouraged to sell Ultra Sheen products.

Johnson plans to build a "flagship prototype" of a franchise on company grounds by April 1. He has purchased a school for beauticians in Chicago, called Ultra Sheen U, to train staff.

He said the first franchise will probably not be sold until 1977.

Despite his expanding horizons, Johnson maintains he runs his business conservatively. He boasts he "didn't borrow a dime" to put up a $3 million dollar addition to the Johnson Products plant, completed in 1973.

"Every black man has the responsibility of being the best role model he possibly can, because all of our brothers and especially our youth are looking at us," he said. "Every black man believes he can do whatever any other black man can. I want to pull someone else along."

"I've always used the Christian philosophy as the basis for building a business. And that basis is the Golden Rule. I've never been to college. I've never really read a textbook on business philosophy, but I've read the Bible. I've found that's the best textbook."

Claims Product Failures Ending

MALVERN, Pa. (UPI) — According to an international scientist, product failures are on the way out, or should be. Dr. Felix Zandman, president of Vishay Interotechnology, Inc., says potential breakdown in products can now be detected in the design stage.

"Modern instruments and techniques for analyzing stresses," he said, "can pinpoint in advance whether any object or part, as small as a pin or as large as a jumbo jet, can function under stress as intended."

"Where it is underdesigned, the part can be strengthened accordingly. In many cases, however, overdesign is discovered," Dr. Zandman said. "When corrected, the reduced weight can provide the manufacturer — and eventually the consumer — with savings in money, materials and energy."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — In a 1970 census, 45 million blackbirds were reported in Missouri, but in 1975 only 74,620 were counted. Conservation Department officials said the reason is not fewer birds. The majority of the birds wintered in other areas of the nation.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved lower today in a continuation of the profit taking that sent most issues lower Tuesday in near-record volume.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off more than two points, and stocks falling in price outnumbered gainers by nearly 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts continued to believe that the rapid advance in stock prices witnessed in the opening seven sessions of the new year was a strong invitation to profit taking.

They also said however, that the extremely heavy trading of the past several sessions could mean that the public at large is participating in the market right now, taking the ball from the larger institutional traders at least temporarily.

Among today's prices, Procter & Gamble dropped 1 1/4 to 93, ASA Ltd. was off 5/8 to 27 1/4 and Johnson & Johnson lost 5/8 to 91 1/4.

On Tuesday, the second most active day in Wall Street history, the Dow Jones industrial average took its first loss of 1976, a 9.45-point decline to 912.94, following a 70-point run-up in the past seven sessions.

Volume was 34.53 million shares, second only to 35.16 million changing hands last Feb. 13.

Losers topped gainers 916 to 631 of the 1,929 Big Board stocks traded. The NYSE's composite stock index lost 0.38 to 50.61.

On the American Exchange, the market value index dropped 0.24 to 89.99.

MOSCOW (AP) — Western aviation sources say a Soviet TU134 airliner with 86 passengers crashed near Moscow Jan. 3, killing all on board.

The sources said the crash occurred as the plane was taking off on a flight to another point in the Soviet Union. The plane reportedly crashed into some houses near Moscow's Vnukovo airport, but it was not known if there were any casualties in the houses.

The sources said they did not know the destination of the flight.

Several Russians in Moscow have said they heard of the crash. After repeated inquiries, a spokesman of the Civil Aviation Ministry said, "I will not confirm or deny because such cases are our internal business. And you should not call us on that."

The Soviet government and press seldom report air crashes or such disasters.

Studied As Sub Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixty sites along the Atlantic coastline, including one in Camden County, Ga., are being studied by the U.S. navy for a possible submarine base, says U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn and Georgia Congressman Ronald "Bo" Ginn.

"The installation would be used initially to support a program to backfit Poseidon submarines with the Navy's new Trident missiles," said Nunn Tuesday.

Nunn and Ginn agreed that Kings Bay, Ga., an inactive Army base at Kingsland in south Camden County, would make an excellent choice for the base.

"Since I have been in the Senate, I have had several conversations with the Navy and have emphasized the many advantages and excellent facilities at Kings Bay," said Nunn, D-Ga.

Nunn and Ginn, D-Millenn, said they will visit Camden County, located in south Georgia, to discuss the impact and desirability of the base with local officials, if Kings Bay is among the final sites considered.

The legislators said a final decision on the site is expected in the fall.

PLAN EXPANSION

ATLANTA (AP) — Colonial Stores Inc. will spend $100 million over the next five years in an expansion operation in the Southeast, says the chairman and chief executive officer of the supermarket chain.

Arts Program For Grifton Is Readied

GRIFTON — Clogging classes for all ages, art classes for young people, and guitar classes will be starting this month as part of the Grifton Art Program. The program is sponsored by the Town of Grifton and the North Carolina Arts Council.

Anyone interested in any of these classes is urged to contact Mrs. Maxine Harker, 524-4681 or Mrs. Jane Lambert, 524-4418.

The classes will meet in Grifton's new mini-arts center in the Chapman Building on Queen Street. The building is being rented for six months until the old elementary school property purchased by the Town of Grifton is available. Art classes had been taught at Grifton School before Christmas.

The art classes for young people will be taught on Saturday mornings by Pat Crawford, art instructor at the Kinston High School. She has been working with Grifton arts coordinators to obtain teachers for the Grifton classes.

The clogging classes will be held one weekday evening, and will be open to all ages. A member of the Green Grass Cloggers of Greenville will be the instructor.

The Green Grass Cloggers will perform at the Shad Festival in April and persons who have learned to clog will dance with them at the festival.

Commercial Fishing Ban On Saturdays

TRENTON, N.C. (AP)—A U.S. Department of the Interior spokesman says the National Park Service will begin enforcing a ban Saturday on commercial fishing off Cape Hatteras National Seashore on weekends.

The statement came after Federal Judge John D. Larkins Jr. of Trenton ruled that the park service can prohibit commercial fishermen from using national seashore waters during weekends.

Larkins dismissed a temporary restraining order issued last year that suspended regulations prohibiting commercial fishermen from fishing in the seashore's waters on weekends from Oct. 1 to April 30 of each year.

David E. Thompson Jr., southeast regional director of the National Park Service, said Cape Hatteras rangers will have the authority to enforce the ban beginning Saturday.

Farmers Advised To Grow Plants

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina tobacco growers should plan to grow their own plants or buy locally, says state Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham.

Farmers could risk the introduction of diseases and insects by purchasing plants out of state, Graham said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

"By growing their own plants, farmers can have maximum control over the health and marketability of their crops," he said.

Ruling Forbids IRS Procedure

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A procedure used by the Internal Revenue Service last year in efforts to collect $7.9 million in income taxes, mostly from suspected drug peddlers, is no longer legal.

The Supreme Court ruled 5 to 3 Tuesday that the IRS must send a notice of deficiency when it attempts to collect income taxes before the end of the year. If it fails to send such a notice, the court said, the taxpayer may sue to prevent collection.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun, joined in dissent by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist, said the decision would deprive the IRS of "a weapon it has long possessed ... and a device it obviously needs in combating questionable tax practices and tax evasion."

The method generally is used to collect taxes from persons the IRS believes may leave the country or otherwise put their assets beyond the reach of the tax collectors.

What the IRS does in these cases is to declare the individual's taxable year terminated and levy an assessment for the amount of tax due.

In 1975, a total of $7.9 million in such assessments was levied against 338 taxpayers. An IRS spokesman said 304 of the individuals, owing $7 million in taxes, were believed to be involved in narcotics traffic.

The spokesman said it was not known how much of the money had actually been collected. He said the impact of the court's decision was under study.

In other Tuesday actions, the court:

—Ruled 6 to 2 that a federal law prohibiting ex-convicts and certain others from buying guns shipped in interstate commerce applies even though the gun was not sent directly to the purchaser but to a store where he bought it.

—Ruled 8 to 0 that an investor may buy more than 10 per cent of a company's stock and sell it at a profit within six months without running afoul of a federal securities law designed to control insider trading.

Suggests Wine For The Dieter

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. Sheldon Margen says a glass or two of wine with holiday meals can help dieters eat less and better.

Margen, a physician and faculty member at the University of California, told a symposium there that research by the Department of Nutritional Science at U.C. showed that a little wine taken with meals helps the body use significant human nutrients. He said wine with meals also helps eaters feel more satisfied without stuffing themselves.

The symposium was sponsored by the U.S. Malnutrition Panel, U.C., and the governments of the United States and Japan.

Perry Hopes Reserve Battle Can Be Settled

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Gaylord Perry, star pitcher for the Texas Rangers, is hopeful that some solution to the controversy over the reserve clause in baseball can be worked out prior to the start of spring training next month. Perry told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday that he felt the courts were going to uphold the end of the clause, long hated by players.

Commenting on the recent decision of an arbitrator that Andy Messersmith and Dave McNalley should be free agents, Perry said that a player usually had no recourse. "Once a team signed you, you are their property until you are released or traded. The rule has always been that if you play without signing a new contract, the club can make you play again or quit, but you have to take a 20-percent cut in salary. I think there is a good chance that the courts will throw out the rule. I believe that we'll get some kind of reserve clause that we can all live with."

Perry said that when he was player representative with the San Francisco Giants, the players were hoping for a clause that would bind a player to a club for approximately 10 years. "Then he would be free to talk with anyone, including his present club," he said. After signing a new contract, he would be bound for a certain amount of years to the new club, about five. "I don't know whether they are still working toward this idea," he said.

Perry said that his brother, Jim, who was released last year by the Oakland Athletics, is seeking to get a tryout from the Minnesota Twins. "I think he has a good chance at getting on with them," he said.

On the proposed move of the San Francisco Giants, his old team, to Toronto, Canada, Perry said it was a shame that baseball was leaving San Francisco. "Horace Stoneham (Giants' former owner) told the American League that the area would only support one team, but they moved in the Athletics anyway. He's been proved right.

But I'm glad to see the Giants have an opportunity to go into an area that wants baseball. Canada is excited about the game."

The Texas hurler said he was happy with the career he had in baseball. "I look at my no-hitter against St. Louis, while with the Giants; and my Cy Young Award (with Cleveland) as two of the big highlights. I'm also proud that I've averaged over 300 innings a year during my career. I've only missed two weeks altogether. I believe in earning what you're paid for. Another highlight was the 15-game winning streak in 1974. And I missed tying the record of 16 when I lost to Oakland, 3-2, in 10 innings."

His former American League Club, the Indians, is seen by Perry as an up-and-coming one. "They have good talent, and they are going to move up."

Turning to Texas, Perry spoke briefly of fiery Billy Martin, a man who frequently accused Perry of throwing the spitter. "He used to come after me with a bloodhound," Perry said. "But he should have known that my type has no smell." Martin was the Texas manager for about a month following Perry's trade there. "I got to respect him, He wants to win, and he'll do well with the Yankees."

Perry also cut down the idea of using instant replays as an aid to umpires. "They are good for the clubs in being able to show a player where he's making a mistake, but as far as helping the umpires, I just don't think it's practical. It would be too confusing."

Jack Edwards, president of the club, said the club would be opened to memberships beginning next week. Dues for the remainder of this year would be $10. Dues would go to help pay the cost of bringing in speakers. "We don't intend to close membership at any number, and the club would be open to everyone, including guests all along. But if we want to bring in some of the top people to talk to us, we have to have the money to do it."

Next week's speaker will be international boat racing driver Reggie Fountain. The meetings are held each Tuesday at the Ramada Inn. A buffet meal is served starting at noon, with the speaker scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

FARMVILLE—Last Friday night, free throws were D. H. Conley's saving grace in its victory over North Pitt. Last night, however, they were the Vikings' downfall.

Farmville Central's Timmy Ward sank two crucial free shots with 26 seconds left giving the Jaguars a three-point lead which helped them take a 57-52 victory over Conley.

The win was the second Eastern Carolina Conference victory in a row for Farmville Central but the first loop loss against a win for the Vikings.

Farmville Central had earlier won the girl's game beating Conley, 49-32. There was no J.V. game.

The Jaguars went a long way in proving their Christmas Tournament win over Conley was no fluke. Only in the last period, aided by a hot Rick Mobley, could the Vikings begin to threaten Farmville Central which at one point had taken an 11-point lead.

The Jaguars passed the ball with precision—the Vikings did not. Farmville Central hit the boards getting the second and third shots and kept Conley off its boards and the Jaguars stayed with their offense most of the time.

Still, there were some things Farmville Central's Mike Terrell saw that need improvement.

"We let them get the ball inside to Mobley too much. Our defense sagged more in the second half," he said. "We tried to hit the open man. We should have shot outside more to open up (Mitchell) Foskey under the basket. (Walter) Gorham was open in the corners but wouldn't take the shot."

The Jaguars began to falter in the final period but Jeff Fields pumped them back up again hitting two long field goals inside the three-minute mark. Conley closed the gap to one, 53-52, but Ward's free shots and a lay-up by Fields iced the game.

"That was his best game, offensively," Terrell said about Fields. "It put the icing on the cake."

The game started out tight with Farmville Central either trying to get the lead or keep it. The game was tied three times at 4-4, 6-6 and 8-8 before the Jaguars got it for good on a bucket from the lane by Foskey, 10-8.

Buckets by James Baker and Fields sent them out to a 14-8 margin and a field goal by Baker at the horn made it 16-9.

The Vikings pulled back within five in the second period, 24-19 on a basket by Johnny Streeter but Farmville Central outthit Conley 8-2 in the last three minutes of the half for an intermission lead of 32-21.

Mobley, cold in the first half, began to warm up in the third period and sparked Conley's come back hitting seven points in the third period.

Mobley hit the first bucket of the final frame cutting the gap to six, 40-34, but a three-point play by Foskey made it a nine-point difference with 7:10 left.

Farmville Centrals' defense did begin to open up in the next two minutes and the Vikings were able to catch up and take its their only lead on Mobley's 11 straight points, 47-46.

Farmville Central tied it, 47-46 on Baker's free shot and a bucket from the lane by Ward put FC back up, 49-47.

Fields hit two quick ones from the top of the circle to charge-up the Jags but buckets by Mobley and Byron Tyson made it a 53-51 game. Streeter added a free shot, 53-52, and the Vikings had a change to go back in front as Tyson went to the line with :32 left. He missed both free shots and seconds later, Ward drew a foul from Mike Cox. Ward made the shots to all but win the game.

Farmville Central hit 25 of 58 shots for 45.6 percent while Conley hit 22 of 55 for 40. Farmville Central also outrebounded the Jags, 34-23, with Foskey getting 10 and Gorham nine. Mobley had eight for the Vikes.

Mobley also led the scoring with 32 points. Foskey had 17, Baker 13 and Ward 12 for the Jags.

The Farmville Central girls took command in the first period of their game, 13-3 and did not have any trouble with Conley. Conley led only once, 3-2 and that came on a switch by Lillie Baker with 3:17 left in the period. Farmville Central got it back on a field goal by Wanda Phillips and never trailed again.

The Lady Jaguars ran off eight points in the first five minutes of the second period opening a 21-3 lead and at the end of the half they led, 26-13.

A three-point play by Jennifer Counterman gave the Farmville Central girls their biggest lead, 22, at 37-15. Conley cut it back to 37-24 at the end of the period.

Alice Costin led the Valkyries with 10 points. Wanda Phillips led Farmville Central with 10 while Counterman and Julia Moye had nine each.

Farmville plays Greene Central Friday night, while Conley hosts C.B. Aycock.

Aycock Handed First Defeat

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount Junior High School handed E.B. Aycock its first loss of the year yesterday, taking a 65-51 win over the Jaguars.

The loss evened the Jag record at 1-1 on the year.

Rocky Mount eased out in front during the first period, building up an 18-14 lead at the horn. They came back to hold onto that edge and add five more to it, upping the lead to 34-25 by the end of the half.

Aycock fell five more behind in the third period, as Rocky Mount moved out to a 49-35 lead with a period to go. Aycock was able to outthit them only 16-15, in the final period.

Mike Lewis led Rocky Mount with 25 points, while Raymond Williams had 12. Calvin Paige led Aycock with 17, while Curtis Little and Ronnie Chapman each added 14.

In the junior varsity preliminary, Rocky Mount took a 69-35 win over the winless Jaguar Cubs. Leading 15-12 after one period, Rocky Mount built that to 33-20 at the half. They continued to pull away, leading 50-28 after three periods. They outthit Aycock, 17-7 in the final period.

Dwayne Hill had 19 and Moses Battle had 12 for Rocky Mount, while no one hit double figures for Aycock.

Aycock opens its home season Friday, hosting Wilson.

To Meet Coaches

A meeting between the Pitt County Board of Education and the Pitt County Coaches Association will be held Thursday at 5:15 p.m., Superintendent Arthur Alford said.

The meeting was called at the request of the coaches group following the implementation of a ruling by the board requiring all members of junior varsity and junior high school basketball teams to be allowed to play a minimum of one quarter per game.

The coaches claim that they were not given an opportunity to present their point of view on the ruling, and that it subverts their authority over the team.

Alford said that the ruling would remain in effect for all games played prior to the meeting of the board and the coaches.

Bucs Face Mounties

East Carolina University's Pirates seek to climb back to the .500 mark tonight as they travel to Boone for an important meeting with Appalachian State University.

The Pirates are now 4-2 in Southern Conference play and need a victory to stay close to the top. Appalachian is 1-3 in league action and 3-7 overall.

The Bucs will be attempting to rebound following their 88-71 defeat at the hands of Richmond on Monday. Tip off is set for 8 p.m.

Davidson Latest To Add Furman To List

By The Associated Press
This may really be the year Furman's domination ends in the Southern Conference basketball race.

The Paladins, who've won the league championship the last three years, plummeted into the league basement Tuesday night in a 77-68 defeat at the hands of Davidson's Wildcats, who had been tied with Furman for last place.

Not only has Furman lost its first three conference starts, but all three games were played on the Paladins' home court, which will be the site for the second year in a row of the semifinals and finals of the championship tournament.

In Tuesday night's only other action, William and Mary's league-leading Indians fell to 6-5 over-all in a 77-73 defeat at the hands of Old Dominion's NCAA Division II champion Monarchs, who upped their record to 6-7.

One conference game is scheduled tonight with Appalachian State's Mountaineers, 1-3 in the league and 3-7 over-all, at home against East Carolina's Pirates, 4-2 and 6-7.

In the only nonleague action, The Citadel's Bulldogs, 4-9 after knocking Virginia Military's Keydets out of first place Monday night, go to South Carolina.

Davidson boosted its league record to 1-2 and its over-all mark to 4-9 by beating Furman, now 3-8 against all opposition.

Seniors Jay Powell and Eppa Rixey led the Wildcats with 15 and 14 points, respectively, as the Wildcats put four players in double figures.

But freshman Tom Jorgenson also played a key role, scoring all his eight points in a 16-3 burst over a five-minute span by which Davidson broke a 49-49 tie with 11:58 left.

The Paladins, led by Ray Miller with 30 points and 15 rebounds, pulled to within 71-68 with 1:29 left, but the Wildcats scored the last six points.

Jeff Fuhrmann triggered a 16-point run over a 6:09 span midway the second half that rallied Old Dominion from a 57-52 deficit to a 68-57 lead. With the score 70-59, William and Mary ran off 10 points in a row before Fuhrmann put a halt to the comeback.

The Monarchs' scoring leader, whose 28 points included 10 straight at the foul line, hit four free throws and a field goal in the last 1½ minutes to give Old Dominion some breathing space. Wilson Washington had 17 points and 16 rebounds for the Monarchs.

William and Mary, still playing without injured scoring leader Ronnie Satterthwaite, was led by John Lowenhaupt with 24 points and Jack Arbogast with 11.

Panthers Romp Past Greene Central Rams

BETHEL — North Pitt High School made a clean sweep of a set of basketball games from Greene Central last night. The Panthers took the boys game, 63-43, added the girls' by 46-23, and took the junior varsity, 39-35.

In the girls' contest, North Pitt's lassies won their first Eastern Plains game by shutting out the Ewes in the first period of play. At the same time, the Panthers were pushing through 14 of their own. North Pitt boosted that to 22-7 at the half.

Both teams tossed in six points in the third period, leaving the Panthers with a 28-13 edge going into the final period. North Pitt outthit Greene Central, 18-10, in that period.

Kathi Manning led North Pitt with 14 points while Joy Forbes added 11. Joyce Dupree led Greene Central with seven.

In the boys' contest, Greene Central almost had the same kind of luck in the first period. But they did account for two points, while the Panthers pushed in 10. North Pitt then upped the lead to 24-15 at halftime.

The Panthers continued to pull away in the third period, posting a 22-9 margin for a 46-24 lead going into the final period. They allowed the Rams a 19-17 comeback during the frame.

Andy Roberson led North Pitt with 14 points, while Donnie Perkins had 12 and Jackie Best hit 10. Ray Hill led the Rams with eight points.

North Pitt is now 7-1 overall and 1-1 in the league, while the girls are 3-5 and 1-1. Greene Central's boys are 2-6 overall and 0-2 in conference play. The girls stand 3-5 and 1-1.

Greene Central hosts Farmville Central and North Pitt is at home to Ayden-Grifton on Friday.

Ayden-Grifton Nips N. Lenoir

LITTLEFIELD—Ayden-Grifton High School had to battle through an overtime last night to outdistance North Lenoir, 56-53, and remain unbeaten.

North Lenoir took the junior varsity game, 57-52, and the Ayden-Grifton girls won, 41-36, also in an overtime.

The Chargers, who ran their record to 8-0 overall and 2-0 in Eastern Carolina Conference play, trailed by as much as 13 points in the third period, but battled back to take the lead late in the game. North Lenoir tied it up, however, and forced the overtime.

The Hawks pulled out to a 10-5 lead after the first period and upped that to 20-13 at halftime. In the third period, North Lenoir moved out to a 13-point edge, but at that point, the Chargers went to a full-court press and began to turn things around. They outthit the Hawks, 20-12, to slip into a 33-32 lead as the period ended.

The Chargers worked up a six point lead during the final period, then went into a four-corner offense. North Lenoir then fouled, but the Chargers missed on three straight one-and-one chances at the line, and each time North Lenoir answered with a basket.

The last one came with just 13 seconds left as Wynne hit to knot it at 46-46. Ayden-Grifton lost the ball on the in-bounds play, but with three seconds left, a traveling call turned the ball back to them. A desperation shot missed. In the overtime, however, the Chargers out hit the Hawks, 10-7, to take the lead, with Ogden Braxton leading the way with four points, and Vern Davenport making two crucial free throws that sealed it.

Paul Ricciarelli led the Ayden-Grifton scoring with 16 points while Braxton and Willie Forbes each had 10. Wynne led North Lenoir with 18, while Lee had 10.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir moved out to an 8-6 lead after one period. Ayden-Grifton came back with a 9-6 edge in the second frame, however, and led 15-14 at the half.

North Lenoir outthit the Chargerettes, 14-9, in the third frame to move out by 28-24, but Ayden-Grifton fought back to tie it up and force the overtime.

The Chargerettes behind Audrey McCarter shut out the Lady Hawks, 5-0, in the extra period. McCarter had four of her 13 points in the period. Beverly Faison led North Lenoir's scoring with 20.

Ayden-Grifton pays a visit to North Pitt on Friday in another key Eastern Carolina Conference game.

Realignment Is 'Most Important'

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Alabama's Coach Bear Bryant has promised a backdrop of strong emotion for issues facing today's opening of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 70th convention.

Bryant, commenting Tuesday night on proposed football divisional realignment, labeled the item "the most important issue that's ever come before this convention."

"I think we should all be willing to make some sacrifices," he added in respect to a proposed 91-school football "super division" he and the Southeastern Conference favor.

"But I couldn't speak for the SEC itself," Bryant emphasized. "As a matter of fact, I really can't even speak for Alabama, because I don't have a vote."

Neither confirmed nor denied by Bryant, who in September instituted unsuccessful legal action to rescind NCAA restrictions on football traveling squads, was a published report the SEC would bolt the organization if realignment fails.

"So what if we pull out?" Bryant was quoted by the Memphis Commercial Appeal as having said earlier Tuesday at an SEC pre-convention meeting.

"ABC wouldn't televise us," the newspaper quoted him as saying, "but NBC might come in, televise us and we will get all the money."

"I think there are institutions that have the same objectives within the NCAA and the same problems," Bryant later told The Associated Press in more conciliatory tones.

"I think we should join hands," he added, "but I don't think we should join hands at the expense of other institutions."

Until the realignment issue is resolved, there appeared only a slight chance that the convention's nearly 1,000 delegates will address themselves seriously to another issue: a proposed Division I football championship playoff.

Meanwhile, other stormy issues that may heat up sessions on the convention floor include

Nuggets Take Win

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Nuggets are earning a reputation as a team that knows how to rally when the pressure is on.

For the second night in a row, the Nuggets used a third-period scoring surge to carry them to an American Basketball Association victory.

The league-leading Nuggets downed the New York Nets 137-113 Tuesday night, earning the right to host the ABA All-Star game Jan. 27. Byron Beck and Claude Terry came off the bench late in the third quarter to help Denver break open a close game.

It was the only ABA game of the night.

Jamesville In Win Over Bears

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School grabbed an early lead and rolled to a 77-57 victory over Bear Grass in a Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference basketball game last night.

Jamesville also won the junior varsity game, 37-36, in an overtime. Bear Grass' girls kept it from being a perfect night for the Bullets by taking a 49-36 decision over the winless Lady Bullets.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass jumped out early and streaked to a 12-4 lead after one period. Jamesville made a comeback in the second period, 15-11, but still trailed 23-19 at the half.

The Lady Bears came back with a 14-2 margin in the third frame, and that put it out of reach, 37-21. Jamesville outthit them, 15-12, in the final period, to no avail.

Lou Rawls led Bear Grass with 16 points, while Patricia Taylor added 11. Edith James led Jamesville with 14, while Joyce Manning had 12.

The boys' game was just the opposite, with the Bullets taking the early lead and holding to it. They moved out by 14-7 in the first quarter, and held off the Bears in the second period for a 34-28 halftime lead.

The Bullets pulled further away in the third period with a 19-9 advantage, making it 53-37 with a period to go. The Bullets outscored the Bears, 24-20, in the final period.

Jerry Ange led the Bullets with 20 points, while Ricky Whitehurst had 18, Eric Davis had 16 and Rufus Simmons hit 10. The Bears were paced by Alan Crawford with 22, while Jerry Wynne had 12 and David Price hit 10.

Jamesville hosts Pantego on Friday, while Aurora visits Bear Grass.

Both Teams Know What They Can Expect

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
MIAMI (AP) — "It's like fine wine," Mel Blount said, a smile creasing his face as he savored the next sentence. "Every year it's got to get better."

For Pittsburgh's All-Pro cornerback, the National Football League's Defensive Player of the Year, Super Bowl X is indeed, like wine. He and the rest of the Steelers are back for another glass, having tingled their taste buds for the first time a year ago.

They're no longer novices. They're connoisseurs now, not overwhelmed by the attention and fanfare leading up to Super Sunday at the Orange Bowl. And, for a totally different reason, neither are the Dallas Cowboys.

"We know what to expect now," Blount said Tuesday before the Steelers began a practice session. "Before last year's game against Minnesota (won by the Steelers 16-6), some of us may have been a bit overawed by everything. Now we're all ready for it — and can put it out of our minds."

"Coming to the Super Bowl for the first time can be an unnerving thing. That's why, for the most part, teams that have been here before have beaten teams playing for the first time."

The only exceptions have been the Green Bay Packers, who won Super Bowl I, and Pittsburgh, last year's winner over the Vikings, a three-time loser. Why was that?

"Well," Blount grinned, "We were better."

And how do the Steelers rate against Dallas? Blount grinned again — and didn't say a thing.

None of the other Steelers would be so foolhardy as to predict a Pittsburgh victory, but a few of them seemed to agree that being in the Super Bowl for the second straight year gives them an emotional advantage.

Unlike last year's Vikings, many of whom were visibly uptight in the week prior to the game, the Cowboys appear as cool as the Steelers. And more high-spirited, too.

And why not? After all, they weren't even supposed to be here.

"This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for us," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, reflecting on his club's having been depleted by retirements and defections to the now-defunct World Football League. "Everybody was talking about how we were going to have to take a long road back — and at the start of the season I guess I believed that, too," Landry said. "But when we won our first four, my thinking began to change. And when we really started putting it together, maybe halfway through the year, I knew we had a shot at the playoffs."

Those playoffs resulted in upsets over Minnesota and Los Angeles and the unexpected trip to the title game for a team which had been to two others and which, a few years ago, was rated a perennial powerhouse.

As defensive end Larry Cole sees it, the rebuilding tag gave the Cowboys an edge this year. "We had one thing going for us besides the real good attitude of the team ... and that was that nobody really expected too much from us. It wasn't like other years, when the Cowboys always were favored to win. There wasn't a whole lot of pressure."

And that, he says, will help Dallas on Sunday. The Cowboys are seven-point underdogs, not expected to win — just like they were not expected to win in Minnesota and Los Angeles.

They're not newcomers to this biggest game of the year. It's the third Super Bowl for 13 of the Cowboys. But unlike his 12 teammates, Preston Pearson's appearing in the championship with his third team — Baltimore, Pittsburgh and now Dallas.

"We're not as new to this thing as it might seem," Pearson said. "It's not like I was going to call all the guys together and say, 'Now let me tell you what it's like to be in a Super Bowl ...' Sure, we've got a lot of rookies (11 compared to Pittsburgh's three), but we've also got the guys like Roger Staubach, Lee Roy Jordan and Larry (Cole) who have been here before."

"We'll handle the pressure. Maybe the pressure should be on the Steelers since they're supposed to win. We'll be up for the game."

And so, of course, will the Steelers. As Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll put it: "If a player has to work to get himself up for a Super Bowl, he's in trouble."

Maryland Meets State; Carolina Takes On Deacons In ACC Battles

By The Associated Press
Four of the nation's top college basketball teams play Atlantic Coast Conference games tonight. Second ranked Maryland is at North Carolina State, 13th, in a regionally televised game, and Wake Forest, No. 5, is at North Carolina, No. 7.

"We've scouted Maryland three times and they are every bit as good as they were last year," when they finished 24-5, says N.C. State Coach Norm Sloan. "With four starters back, they're a veteran club with super talent, and so explosive that you can't feel comfortable even with a 15-point lead."

N.C. State might have ranked higher had it not beaten Rollins by only 79-75 last Saturday. That same night, Wake Forest handed Maryland its first defeat of the season after 11 victories, 96-93 at the Greensboro Coliseum.

The victory for Wake Forest, which also is 11-1, boosted the Deacons two places in the poll. The North Carolina Tar Heels are 10-1, and so is N.C. State. Maryland's John Lucas scored a career-high 34 points trying to catch the Deacons. He may have to duplicate that total to offset N.C. State's Kenny Carr, the leading scorer in the ACC with a 28.9 average.

The other three ACC teams also play tonight.

Duke 7-4, will be looking for its first league victory on the road since 1972 when it visits Clemson, 10-3.

Virginia, 6-3, will play Virginia Tech in Richmond.

"We knew we had to beat Maryland to keep our hopes of winning the ACC championship alive," says Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy. "And now we must have the same kind of effort and execution against North Carolina."

Skip Brown of Wake Forest, who scored 22 points against Maryland, will match his backcourt artistry against that of Phil Ford of North Carolina.

The Deacons also have a strong inside game this season with center Darryl Peterson and forward Rod Griffin. That will work against North Carolina's Mitch Kupchak, who can't afford to get into foul trouble because there's no really strong player behind him.

Reserves could mean much. "I felt that in our loss to Virginia (63-58) I did not use our bench as much as I should have," Tacy says. "We have been getting good performances from our reserves, and they will play a key role in a game as intense as the North Carolina game."

Duke comes off a 91-71 triumph at Georgia Tech, the Blue Devils' first road victory since Bill Foster became head coach last year. Duke freshman Jim Spanarkel has scored 20 points in three straight games. Center Willie Hodge is averaging 19.1 and guard Tate Armstrong 18.9. However, Hodge will have to battle Clemson's 7-foot-1 center Wayne "Tree" Rollins.

Jabbar's Jumper Butchers Bulls

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar can beat you in many ways — but with a 25-foot jump shot?

Not a slam-dunk, a sky-hook, a turn-around jump shot or a tap-in — but a 25-foot jumper. That's what the towering Los Angeles Lakers center used to beat the Chicago Bulls 104-102 Tuesday night.

With three seconds to play and the score tied, Abdul-Jabbar came outside to take the inbounds pass from Cornell Warner, turned to the basket and fired. Who said the big guy was only good around the basket?

"I guess I tried to mimic Wilt Chamberlain's style," said Abdul-Jabbar with a smile. "I didn't hesitate. I used to practice that shot a lot in high school, but in the pros the skyhook has obviously been my bread-and-butter shot."

"I don't think the Bulls were expecting me to take the high, arching shot I took."

No, they weren't.

"We were ready defensively to play them and the ball," said Chicago Coach Dick Motta. "We were all in perfect position. They had good shooters on the floor, but we thought we had everything covered."

Everything, that is, except a 25-foot jumper by Abdul-Jabbar. Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, Boston beat Portland 106-94, Milwaukee defeated Seattle 114-108 and Golden State trounced Buffalo 127-101.

Celtics 106, Trail Blazers 94 Boston led by as many as 21 points in the third period, then saw Portland close to within four before putting the game away with an 11-2 burst, John Havlicek getting seven of the 11 points. Havlicek led Boston with 27 points while Bill Walton, turning in his second consecutive strong effort, took game honors for Portland with 32.

Bucks 114, Super Sonics 108 Elmore Smith's three-point play with 41 seconds left sealed the victory for the Bucks after Seattle had closed to within two points in the final minute. Bob Dandridge topped Milwaukee with 25 points.

Warriors 127, Braves 101 Charles Johnson hit seven of eight field goals attempts in the first quarter and finished with a career-high 26 points for the Warriors, who have won seven of their last eight and are 17-1 at home this season. Bob McAdoo topped Buffalo with 28 points, while Phil Smith added 25 for Golden State.

Drafts Await Suit Outcome

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The future of the National Football League's new Tampa Bay and Seattle franchises was clouded today after the league postponed its expansion and college draft following a federal suit filed by the two teams against the NFL Players Association.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced Tuesday the two drafts would be delayed pending the outcome of the suit filed jointly by Tampa Bay and Seattle, seeking a judicial green light for the stocking plan.

Rozelle said the veteran draft, which had been scheduled for Jan. 23-24 in New Orleans, would be delayed to give the federal district court time to rule on the Tampa Bay-Seattle suit. He also put off the college draft, which had been set for Feb. 3-4 in New York City, saying it would be "impractical to conduct it with the new teams participating and then find expansion to the two cities had to be postponed or abandoned because of their inability to receive the allocation of veterans."

At the heart of the issue was the suspicion by the new team that the NFLPA would seek to block the expansion draft. Tuesday's suit cites a Dec. 19, 1975, letter from Ed Garvey, executive director of the Players Association, to Sargent Karch, executive director of the NFL Management Council, in which Garvey is quoted as saying that the veteran allocation "is in all probability, a violation of the Sherman (antitrust) Act."

It also mentions an Associated Press story dated Dec. 30, 1975, in which Garvey is quoted as telling a news conference that the union "will take steps to void" the allocation "if it takes place."

Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa Bay and Herman Sarkowsky of Seattle, principal officers of the new teams, also cited the recent Minneapolis court decision, in which the controversial "Rozelle Rule" was termed illegal, as another reason for the suit.

They charged the Minneapolis decision had produced confusion and uncertainties in the application of antitrust laws and labor laws to professional sports leagues.

In Washington, Garvey declined comment on Tuesday's action until he can read the text of the suit, which was filed in Miami's U.S. District Court.

The Players Association has taken no action against the draft, but Culverhouse said he preferred not to wait for it.

"I don't take risks," said the Tampa Bay owner. "When someone threatens me, I take action."

Earth-Scrapers Replace Death Valley Prospectors

By WILLIAM J. STANFIELD
DEATH VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — The picturesque prospector with his burro, pick and shovel, seeking his fortune in silver or gold, is part of the legend of Death Valley.

The modern prospector is far from picturesque. Armed with giant bulldozers and earthscrapers, modern prospectors — giant mining firms — are strip mining the fragile desert environment for talc and borates at an unprecedented pace, and federal officials are powerless to do anything about it.

Environmental groups have decried the mining and legislation has been introduced to control it.

Recognizing Death Valley's scenic, scientific and educational value, President Herbert Hoover signed a presidential proclamation on Feb. 11, 1933, setting it aside as a national monument for enjoyment by future generations. The proclamation took Death Valley out of the Mining Location Act of 1872 and in effect barred any mining in the monument.

But four months later, on June 13, Congress extended the mining laws to Death Valley, subject only to regulation of surface activity, mostly road building, by the secretary of the interior.

Harold L. Ickes, then interior secretary, told Congress, "The picturesque miner is one of the characteristics which give the area the color of the early pioneer days, and his continuance there would be a very desirable feature of the area under national monument status."

But the typical prospector pictured by Ickes disappeared in the 1940s.

"The prospector now is equipped with jeep and bulldozer," Monument Superintendent James T. H. O. M. P. S. O. N. commented dryly.

From 1880 until 1940, the total production of ore from Death Valley amounted to only $3 million, Thompson said, and all of it came from underground mines, including the borax hauled out for many years by the famed 20-mule teams.

The first above ground mining occurred in 1971 when Tenneco Inc., a Houston, Tex., conglomerate, began open pit mining for colemanite in Furnace Creek Wash near the monument road leading to Dantes' View, a popular observation point with a spectacular view of the southern half of Death Valley.

About 18 months ago, Johns-Manville, which purchased several talc mines in Warm Springs Canyon in 1972, switched from underground to surface mining. Pfizer, Inc., which was mining for talc in Galena Canyon north of the Johns-Manville operation, and Cyprus Industrial Minerals, which was mining on the ridge between the two canyons, also switched to open pit mining about the same time.

Six months ago, Tenneco opened a second pit just south of its Boraxo mine and began digging for ulexite, but later closed the mine, at least temporarily. Like Boraxo, the new mine, Sigma, is plainly visible from the Dantes' View road.

But it wasn't until Tenneco filed 40 new claims near Zabriskie Point, another popular observation point, in September that the public became fully aware of the extent of mining in the monument.

A public controversy broke out and Tenneco withdrew the Zabriskie claims. But it then staked out 13 new claims across the road and in plain view from the monument visitors' center at Furnace Creek.

Thompson said all four companies have stepped up their surface mining activities in the last six months and have left scars in the fragile desert that may never go away.

"It is a problem that is becoming increasingly difficult to live with," the superintendent said.

The mining prompted the Western Regional Advisory Committee, a private group which advises the National Park Service, to take note at a meeting last month "of what appears to be a race by the mining industry to take over and strip or open pit mine large areas in the most scenic portions of the national monument before the government can act."

The advisory committee called for early enactment of federal legislation to halt mining activity in Death Valley. Several bills have been introduced in the Senate and House but no action has been taken. One bill, by Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., would repeal the June, 1933, law and impose a moratorium on mining in the monument.

The four companies say they have not escalated their mining activities and that their activities within the monument are permitted by law.

A Dec. 15 report by the monument said open pit and strip mining are permanently destroying more than 100 acres of land each year and exploration work is marring many more hundreds of acres.

"Surface disturbance accelerates both water and wind erosion, affects wildlife habitat for several rare species, including the desert bighorn sheep and fragile Death Valley plant life which includes 36 species which exist no place else," the report said. "Vanished species cannot be replaced."

Because Death Valley gets so little moisture, marks made on the desert floor by early-day miners and travelers in the 1850s are still there 125 years later.

The areas being mined now "will virtually never recover," Thompson said. "The work in Galena Canyon (Pfizer's mine) will never be obliterated because it is up on the side of a wall in a relatively small drainage canyon. Even restoration would not put it back in its original condition because of the lack of water. Revegetation is impossible."

The mining activity in Galena and Warm Springs Canyons can readily be seen from as far as 35 miles and is in plain view of the estimated 700,000 visitors who come to the monument each year to enjoy its pristine state. Clouds of dust swirl above the mining sites, obscuring the horizon, and the white talc uncovered by bulldozers stands out in sharp contrast to the darker background of the Panamint Mountains.

"And there apparently is nothing anyone can do," Lewis S. Eaton, chairman of the advisory committee, said. "A mining claim is a very sacrosanct right and there's nothing you can do to take a mining claim away. Maybe legislation might do it, but I'm not sure."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The blackbird, regarded in many states as a pest, is Missouri's most prevalent bird and its wintering populations have been estimated at 40 to 60 millions.

Many Students Held Taxable In Pitt County

January is the month each year that every individual in the state must list—for tax purposes—the property that they own with the local listakers.

In past Januarys there has been some confusion as to whether students are taxable in this county or not. Pitt Tax Supervisor Phillip Michaels said, "Most of the confusion seems to result from not knowing where a student has a taxable situs since frequently students will reside in more than one place during the course of each calendar year," Michaels explained.

The state law gives as a general rule the residence of the owner of personal property as the place in which he or she is taxable, Michaels explained. In addition, "it states that where a person has two or more residences within the state that tax situs is determined by the place at which the person has dwelt the longest during the past calendar year.

Michaels said, "Generally this law divides students into two categories: Those students who started school in September for the first time, and those who are from an instate location and have been here two terms or more."

Persons in the first category, he said, have not been in Pitt County long enough to acquire a tax situs here, since they came into the county in September. Those individuals who fall in the second category, according to Michaels, are taxable in the County of Pitt, since they have resided in the county six or more months in the last calendar year. There are 15 township listing places throughout the county, the tax official noted. Property must be listed in the township in which it is located.

For question about local listing places or tax situs call the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office at 752-4711.

Calypso's Hull Is Wearing Out

NEW YORK (UPI) — Capt. Jacques-Yves Cousteau's boat, Calypso, is not in shipshape. According to Compass, a magazine published by MOAC, the nation's largest commercial marine insurer, "the planks of her wooden hull are rotting, the wiring is wearing out and the plumbing is rusting away."

Calypso is a British-built, 140-foot, World War II minesweeper that Capt. Cousteau, French oceanographer, has owned since 1952.

NOT A FUELISH VEHICLE — A home-made car with a small engine is the possible solution to gas-rationing by this Vientiane couple. Marty Robbins Lets It Happen

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Marty Robbins wants to be remembered.

"It's hard to see where music is going," said Robbins, who popularized the country and western ballad 15 years ago.

"It's hard to know who to please. If you aim at the best buyers, you aim at the young people. So I may do some pop standards.

"It may come around to me again—when ballads are selling," he said in an interview at his Music Row publishing house. "You've got to have something they'll remember. Songs sound alike today."

Robbins, 50, has been one of the most enduring performers in the entertainment business. In the '50s, he was the idol of the teen-age set. Now, those same persons came to see him on the Grand Ole Opry.

"The people who liked me in the '50s have children now," he said. "I'd like to have a record appealing to the young and old; I want to include everybody on my records."

He said he has no animosity toward country-rock performers, but added that he's not ready to record that type of song.

"It's fine—it's making country music bigger," he said. "But I couldn't do it unless I went to Atlanta, lived there five or six weeks and really 'got into' that kind of music."

He confessed that "El Paso," a million seller in 1959, is still his favorite recording.

"It was the first of its kind—it told a story. If you listen to it, you can visualize what's going on. Cowboy music is really my favorite type of music."

In February, Robbins will host the Academy of Country and Western Music Awards in Los Angeles. He'll also be tapping the Dinah Shore television show, and driving the pace car at the Indianapolis 500 in May.

One definite commitment he hopes never ends is his association with the Opry.

"It's more of a thrill than ever; I'll never leave it unless they fire me; it's the greatest show in the world," said Robbins, who joined the Opry in 1953.

"If I had to take the Opry or a network television show, I'd take the Opry. On TV, you would be over exposed."

The biggest change he's seen is the style of dress.

"You used to wear fringe and a lot of sequins. But I'm glad you don't have to do that now. With the change in music came the different style of dress. It's the California look—I like it.

"I've been on the Opry in jeans and another time in a bow tie. They (audiences) don't care what you wear; I got just as much applause when I wore the bow tie as when I wore the jeans."

Robbins said he could cite no one factor behind his success.

"If I had a secret, I'd keep it to myself. But I've never pushed anything. I've enjoyed life and let it happen.

"You don't stay on top. You stay there as long as you can and do everything you can to stay there, but you can't. That's what I'd tell young people in this business.

"I've never had any goals. I just took what life has to offer. One thing I would like to do is be in a good western movie, but they are not making them any more.

"Maybe I could get a small part on TV, but it wouldn't really help me.

"I know I couldn't be satisfied if I retired. Entertaining is too much a part of me."

Wooden Check Paid The Bill

TENINO, Wash. (AP) — The town that gained fame by its issuance of "legal wooden money" in the early 1930s has again issued a piece of its hard-grained legal tender. This time it was a wooden check, 9 by 24 inches, for $30,000, presented in payment for work on the community's Bicentennial project.

The project involves moving a threatened historic railroad depot to the town's park and restoring the structure, before its scheduled dedication July 4 as the community's museum and activity center.

The town worked for more than two years to raise the money and the 322-ton stone depot was moved in one piece last Aug. 30. The project contractor was paid with the wooden check.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Biologists say 20 to 60 per cent of most blackbird flocks are starlings — a small bird imported in 1890 because a group of New Yorkers wanted the United States to have all the birds mentioned in the plays of Shakespeare.

Contribution By Eccentric

By Dr. H.G. JONES, Curator
North Carolina Collection
Written for the AP CHAPEL HILL (AP)—Of hundreds who have served as congressman from North Carolina, Lemuel Sawyer was one of the most eccentric and puzzling.

His record in Washington was undistinguished, his writings were neither profound nor popular and his grave is unmarked.

Perhaps it was Sawyer's eccentricity that held him to a mediocre role in politics; but even if so, it was his revelation of himself through his books that gave him the minor fame that his name possesses today.

Lemuel Sawyer was born in Camden County in 1777. His father by the same name, a prominent official of the Albermarle region, was able to give him the best in schooling.
Young Lemuel was tutored locally, then went to Long Island, N.Y., where he attended Flatbush Academy. After returning south, he attended the University of North Carolina.

Back in the Albemarle, Lemuel studied law, was admitted to the bar and opened practice in Elizabeth City. Already, he had become involved in politics, having been elected the youngest member of the House of Commons in 1800. He was a follower of Thomas Jefferson's Republican party.

In 1806 Sawyer defeated William H. Murfree for a seat in the United States Congress. He served six years then dropped out due to bad health.

He returned to Congress for six years from 1817 to 1823, then served again from 1825 to 1829. His health—or perhaps it was his disposition—kept him from participating in Congress for long periods of time, but his constituents usually preferred his absentee record to an alternate candidate.

During his 16 years in Congress, Sawyer was more of an amusing character than effective representative. Perhaps his single significant contribution was his proposal that the United States inaugurate a program of polar exploration.

It was between his second and third periods of congressional service that Sawyer published a book that gives him the distinction of being the first native North Carolinian to write a play on a North Carolina subject.

The book, "Blackbeard, a Comedy," is an autobiographical political farce, for the character named Candid is almost surely Sawyer himself. Candid, running for the legislature, suffers all sorts of indignities from his opponent, Turpis.

He is even accused of being so well educated that he speaks
"dead languages," a sure sign that he could not represent the common people. When one character notes that Candid could "chop logic," another thinks it would be more useful for him to "chop corn."

The title of the play is misleading, for the pirate, who lived over a century earlier, is mentioned only in search for his hidden treasure—a search that demonstrated the gullibility of the people of Currituck

County where the scene is laid.
Currituck always voted against Sawyer, so the congressman had little reason to think highly of its citizens.

Lemuel Sawyer wrote several other books. There appears to be extant no copy of his "Journey to Lake Drummond." His biography of John Randolph of Roanoke was so uncomplimentary toward the Virginian that it sold few copies.
A second play, "The Wreck of Honor," had a European setting.

A two-volume novel, "Printz Hall, a Record of New Sweden," is generally attributed to Sawyer, but literary critics are not convinced. Of his "Autobiography of Lemuel Sawyer," however, there is no doubt, for this slim volume lays bare the author's troubled life.

Sawyer alternately bemoaned his dissipation and boasted of his cunning. In the 1820s, he married a rich Brooklyn widow (his third marriage), and after he was defeated for reelection, he lived comfortably and unashamedly in New York on her wealth.

Finally, in 1850, Sawyer obtained a departmental clerkship in Washington and died there Jan. 9, 1852. He was buried beside his brother, Enoch, near Camden where a walnut tree has grown over his grave.

Fight Corn Blight Loss

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa.
(UPI)—Pennsylvania State University plant disease specialists have embarked on a research project designed to avoid future epidemics like southern corn leaf blight which cost American farmers $1 billion five years ago.

Purpose of the study is to find out what level of disease creates economic losses, said
Dr. Richard R. Nelson and Dr.
John A. Ayers, plant pathologists with the College of Agriculture at Penn State.

Using the southern corn leaf blight as a model, the researchers are now able to manipulate the degree of infection of the disease and the rate at which it spreads.

"To develop an effective corn blight management program, we need to know how long the disease has been in a field—since a short time infection should mean less crop damage than otherwise," Nelson said.

A team of Penn State plant pathologists has been working to develop tools to detect the presence of disease pathogens or races of blight existing at low levels in nature.

The scientists said several years are needed for new races of pathogens to increase and become widespread enough to cause economic losses.

French Pay For Quality Mail Service

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Mail is delivered twice a day — and sometimes three times a day — in French urban centers, and up to 85 per cent of first class mail reaches its destination the next morning.

But Frenchmen pay more to send a letter than Americans do — even with the new 13-cent stamp in the United States. There are other factors that differ from the U.S. Postal Service and one is that distances are shorter in France, which is about the size of Texas.

"If an industrialized nation wants a good postal service, it must pay for it," says Pierre Goursolas, director of French postal services. "We do, the U.S. public doesn't. That's the difference." When I was in the United States last May they were agonizing over raising the stamp price to 13 cents. Here, and in Britain and West Germany it's similar, we pay the equivalent of 18 cents for a letter."

U.S. Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar told a congressional subcommittee in Washington last month that the cost of a first class letter could go up to 23 cents by 1980 if American rates of inflation and other factors continue.

His French counterpart, Goursolas, said that the moment — "but not for much longer" — the French mail service is roughly breaking even at the rate of 18 cents for a first class stamp. Before the recent increase to 13 cents, the U.S. Postal Service was losing $7 million a day. The service now estimates, however, that the new rate will yield roughly $6.7 million a day in added revenue.

Goursolas was quick, however, to stress that given American problems "it is a constant amazement to me how well the U.S. service works."

"The distances are up to six times those in France, and even more importantly, the U.S. mail handles eight times as many items as we do, and has to service much larger urban centers — and all these factors increase the problems by far more than just simple multiplication," he said.

The French postal service employs around 200,000 people, 80,000 of them mail carriers. The U.S. Service has only 700,000, 250,000 of them carriers. This is a much more economical ratio, despite the relative high pay in the United States, Goursolas said.

Productivity is measurably higher in the U.S. service, because "Americans work harder than Frenchmen," he added. But direct comparisons are difficult, Goursolas noted, because France continues individual doorstep letter deliveries. French post offices also are generally bigger than their U.S. equivalents and handle many extra jobs, such as a post office banking service, bond sales and services for entirely different administrative branches which need the post office network to get to the people.

Held Meet On Title 1

Jamie L. Keeter, assistant superintendent in charge of federal programs, presented a review of ten years of activities conducted by the availability of Title I at the Pitt County Title I Parent Advisory Council Thursday, January 8.

Keeter explained that youths had received many benefits which otherwise might not have been possible without Title I funds.

Filmstrips entitled "Title I ESEA Orientation," were previewed and distributed to local Title I committee chairmen for use with their local committees.

Parents reviewed the revision of the council's bylaws prepared by Mrs. Willie Mae Carney, chairman of the Bethel Title I local committee. The council decided to study the revisions and discuss them at the next scheduled meeting, March 4.

Parents were presented a copy of "What Every Parent Should Know About Title I in Pitt County." The booklet, illustrated by Pitt County children, presents the basic facts about Pitt County's Title I program.

Comic Books A Multi-Million Dollar U.S. Business

Bionic Woman's Rough Beginning

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Bionic Woman," a spinoff of "The Six Million Dollar Man," premieres on ABC-TV tonight. It stars Lindsay Wagner, a very appealing actress, as Jamie Sommers, a bionic woman.

Jamie has one super-strong arm and super-strong legs. She didn't enter this world with them. They're sophisticated, realistic-looking electromechanical replacements for limbs she lost in a skydiving mishap.

She's a former tennis pro who grew up in Ojai, Calif., with Col. Steve Austin, the six-million-dollar man who also has bionic limbs which stem from injuries he suffered while test-flying a spacecraft.

In one scene in tonight's show, Jamie, newly hired as a teacher at a school for the children of Air Force personnel, is assigned a rowdy class of youngsters other teachers call "The Dirty Dozen."

They really give her a rough time. And while watching this show at an advance screening, I am worrying that she'll get mad, forget the power of her super-arm and belt a kid through a wall.

This might cause serious injury and lead to yet another spinoff called "The Bionic Urchin." Thankfully, it doesn't happen. Tonight's show, devoted to Jamie's recovery from the emotional trauma of her skydiving accident, is preceded by flashback shots of her and Steve bounding about in a mission assigned them by the Office of Scientific Investigation, a sort of CIA operation for whom he works.

OSI's dedicated scientists, who gave each of them their new limbs (Steve also got a super-powerful eye, while Miss Jamie got a super-powerful ear), are helping her return to normal life.

She can recall that her parents were killed in an auto accident, that Steve's parents raised her, that she has a degree in education and that she once beat Billy Jean King in a championship match.

But the closer her memories comes to the skydiving accident — Steve was with her at the time — the harder it is for her to recall what happened. She doesn't even remember they were to be married.

I know her problem in a way. I'm having trouble remembering the plot of tonight's show. But I think she gratefully promises to work for OSI if it needs her. Then she sets out for Ojai to attempt a normal life and live at the ranch owned by Steve's parents.

They gently tell her she once was engaged to Steve. She tells his mother: "I care an awful lot about Steve. But I don't know where my heart is." (If you think I'll touch that bionic line, you're nuts.)

Amid all this is some skulduggery by villains who secretly videotape a car crash they've arranged. She sees it and yanks the door off a blazing car to save a man trapped inside.

Heaven knows what evil things they have in mind for her, but the show ends with a mysterious white-haired man riding in a limousine near Ojai. Then there's a sign flashed that says: TO BE CONTINUED.

COMIC BOOK CREATORS — Stan Lee, standing, publisher of Marvel Comics, discusses a "Spiderman" book cover with artist John Romita at Marvel headquarters in New York. (AP Wirephoto)

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Antman is tuming. Not far away, Loki, God of Evil, is about to destroy an entire city and still he waits in his rocket car for the Wasp, his girlfriend.

"I don't know why you have to powder your nose every time we have a mission," Antman snaps as they finally speed away to defeat Loki.

In case you haven't guessed,

Antman, Loki and the Wasp are comic book characters, part of a stable belonging to Marvel Comics, the world's largest seller of comic books.

Comic books are big business. More than 200 million are sold in the United States each year at prices ranging from 25 cents for a single issue to $1.50 for multi-story editions. Comic book conventions attract thousands of collectors each year, and first editions of some comics sell for thousands of dollars.

Marvel publisher Stan Lee, whose Spiderman character has overtaken Superman as the biggest selling superhero, says the human qualities of his protagonists endear them to readers. Lee, who started in comics in 1939, cites Spiderman as an example.

"People can relate to him because he's so human. He means well but things go wrong. He's fighting a villain and his costume tears. He once was on the Ed Sullivan show and made a thousand dollars performing, but then realized he couldn't cash the check because he didn't have an account in the name of Spiderman and couldn't reveal his true identity."

Lee has written two books chronicling the increasing popularity of comic books, "Origins of Marvel Comics" and, of course, "Son of Origins of Marvel Comics." In them he explains such things as how he came up with the name "Thor, God of Thunder."

"It was short, easy to remember, and if you lisped nobody would know," Lee quipped in an interview.

Lee said the comic book craze began in 1961, when he was turning out such classics as "Xom, the Creature Who Swallowed the Earth" and "Thomgorr, the Anti-Social Alien." Lee created a squad of superheroes called "The Fantastic Four" and sales skyrocketed.

"The Fantastic Four heralded a new style of costumed superheroes — heroes plagued with the problems that torment us all: money worries, romantic hangups, feelings of inadequacy, jealousy, vanity and fear," said Lee.

Today, Marvel sells more than 75 million comics annually, with the antics of Spiderman, The Fantastic Four and Thor reprinted in 30 languages. Next is D.C. comics, with sales of about 45 million, much of it from Superman, and Archie Comics, purveyors of Archie, Jughead and other perennial adolescents.

Marvel licenses the use of their copyrighted characters to firms making T-shirts, toys, games, puzzles, soap and vitamins. The company, a division of New Jersey conglomerate Cadence Industries, is also producing a full-length movie on Spiderman.

Marvel has a permanent staff of about 40 people in its New York office, but uses scores of freelancers to turn out its 80 different characters. A single comic book takes about a month to complete, Lee said. An Illinois printing company produces virtually all of the comic industry's output.

Despite Marvel's success, Lee complains that people don't take comic books as seriously as they should.

"A comic can be a great artistic creation," he said. "The comic book is one of the great, unexplored mediums in the world."

Lee claims comics can help problem readers because the artwork keeps them interested and aids them in understanding the text.

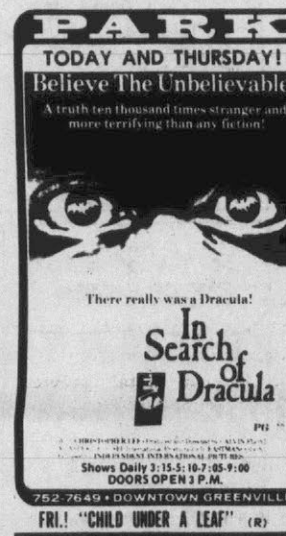

The 52-year-old publisher also dismisses complaints about violence in comic books.

"Violence is a subjective thing," he said. "Who would want to read about a terrible old lady who takes children and burns them in an oven? But that's the plot of Hansel and Gretel. We turn away from violence in our books."

In fact, Marvel is coming out with its own line of comic book classics, with "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" among the first titles.

Thirty-seven years in the comic book business has left Lee with a few personal preferences regarding his creations.

"One of my many pet peeves has always been the young, teen-aged sidekick of the average superhero," he said. "If yours truly was a superhero, there's no way I'd pal around with some freckle-faced teenager. At the very least, people would begin to talk."

Hickory School Remains Closed

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The superintendent of Hickory High School says the city school board "will be meeting in the immediate future to appraise the situation" in the wake of racial fighting which left the school closed again today.

Dr. Joseph Wishon, superintendent of Hickory's only high school, said members of the board concurred in a telephone poll to keep the school closed another day.

Racial fighting broke out during the lunch period Friday and again Monday, both times prompting officials to suspend classes for the rest of the day. No classes have been held since the closing Monday afternoon.

Wishon said Tuesday night he did not know when the school would be reopened, adding that the matter still was before the school board.

The board said after a Monday night meeting that school regulations, particularly in the area of class attendance requirements, would be strictly enforced.

Hickory Police Chief Melvin Tucker also issued a statement, saying some of his men were beaten by pupils. He added, "From now on we will use all the force necessary to control the situation."

Officials said Friday's fighting broke out after a white pupil tossed a bread roll at a white girl and the roll glanced onto a table shared by blacks. Classes were suspended for the rest of the day after the fracas but school reopened again Monday. It was closed again in the afternoon after two outbreaks of fighting.

Police detained six white pupils and five black pupils, releasing them later to the custody of their parents.

While the country's leading players fight for national honors in the major events at the North American Championships, thousands of lesser lights enjoy brisk competition in the secondary events at these tournaments. Today's hand is from a side game at the recent Fall North American Championships held in New Orleans, and the declarer was a law professor from the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, Thomas L. Hazen.

Despite the fact that he held only 13 points in high cards, South's hand was so powerful distributionally that it fully merited a jump rebid in the long suit. When North raised clubs at his second turn, Hazen decided that it would cost nothing to cue-bid his ace of diamonds on the way to five clubs, and North needed no further encouragement to contract for slam.

West led a heart, and declarer was well satisfied with the contract. At worst he would need to find West with one of the two spade honors, making him a 3-1 favorite for his contract. A glance at the full diagram, however, shows that had declarer relied on this chance, he would have gone down. Fortunately, he played for a partial elimination which enhanced his chances considerably.

Had there been another entry to dummy in trumps, declarer would have been able to guarantee the contract by eliminating both red suits. As it was, he won the opening lead in dummy, discarded a spade on the remaining high heart and ruffed a heart with a high trump. He cashed the ace of diamonds and ace of clubs, entered dummy with the queen of clubs and ruffed a diamond. He had completed as much of the elimination as he could, for he could not get back to dummy to ruff the remaining heart.

Now declarer ran the jack of spades. East won the queen, but he did not relish the prospect of being on lead. Since he was exhausted of hearts, East was forced to return a spade away from the king, letting declarer win both the ten and ace of spades, or a diamond, allowing declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding his spade loser from the other.
