Retirement Opens Race

RALEIGH (AP)—State Treasurer Edwin Gill's announcement that he will not seek reelection this year clears the way for a wide open race for the Democratic nomination to the post.

Gill, 76, told a news conference Thursday "the time has come for me to allow other hands to take the reins." He will retire next January.

Gill, who has been state treasurer since July, 1953, said health was not a factor in his decision although he had been hospitalized recently.

State Rep. Lane Brown, D-Stanly, has said he would be a candidate for the office. Rep. Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe, had said last year he would consider the race if Gill retired. However, DeBruhl said Thursday he had publicly committed himself this week to seek reelection to the legislature.

Deputy State Treasurer Harlan Boyles has said he would run if Gill decided to retire. Boyles was attending a meeting out of state and not available for comment.

Asked if he would endorse anyone as his successor, Gill replied, "I think it would be improper for me who has been treated so well by the people of North Carolina to tell them what to do."

Gill represented Scotland County in the General Assembly in 1929 for the first of two terms and has been in public life almost constantly since then.

In his announcement, Gill said, "The people of North Carolina have supported me by a substantial majority over quite a long period of time, and, I am told, would support me again. I believe they would."

He said that during his tenure "the rating on our state bonds was raised from AA, which, incidentally, is quite good, to AAA, the highest attainable."

Rep. Brown issued a statement following Gill's announcement. He said the state's financial stability and integrity of the office are "tributes to Mr. Gill's leadership." He promised to seek Gill's advice and counsel if elected.

DA Drops Charges Against R. Williams

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Union County authorities announced today that the 1961 kidnaping charges against black activist Robert Williams had been dropped because of the ill health of the principal prosecution witness.

In announcing his decision, Dist. Atty. Carroll Lowder attacked Williams, 49, as a man "who spent a lifetime speaking ill will, distrust and hatred among his fellow men."

However, Lowder said he had received a medical statement that Mrs. Bruce Stegall, 64, who was allegedly kidnaped along with her husband by Williams on Aug. 27, 1961, was too ill to testify.

"Her testimony, of course, would be absolutely essential to the state's case," Lowder said.

Stegall died last January.

Williams, former president of the separatist Republic of New Africa and a firebrand of the early civil rights movement, returned to face the charges in December after a six-year court fight to avoid extradition from Michigan.

On Dec. 1 the Michigan Supreme Court upheld a lower decision returning Williams to North Carolina.

He was freed under $10,000 bond.

Williams fled the country to avoid prosecution and lived in Cuba and Communist China before returning to Michigan in 1969.

In Durham, Williams' attorney, Karen Galloway, said she had not been notified of the decision but felt it was the only course "Mr. Lowder could have taken if he was truly interested in justice."

"I think it is the type of procedure that should have been done many months ago," she said.

Williams, who has been living in Baldwin, Mich., could not be reached for comment.

He had been scheduled to appear in nearby Charlotte on Saturday for a news conference and rally.

Williams said he was planning to appear in Union County Superior Court for a hearing on various defense motions.

However, Lowder said last week that the case had been postponed.

More Arms From Soviet For Angola

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia is reported landing more arms in Angola amid indications that Soviet-backed troops are winning against forces supported by the United States there.

Resistance against Soviet-backed forces in northern Angola has "all but collapsed," according to a U.S. cable sent to NATO. The cable said troops of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) supported by Cuban forces were advancing swiftly toward the border of neighboring Zaire and that virtually all U.S.-backed National Front troops and allied soldiers from Zaire were fleeing before them.

The MPLA forces are reported spearheaded by Cuban soldiers driving Russian-built tanks and backed by Soviet-supplied artillery.

The situation in other parts of Angola was pictured in less grim terms, but the American cable indicated troops of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) were not doing well. UNITA, a second anti-Soviet faction, has been supported by South African military units.

Meanwhile, U.S. intelligence sources said a Soviet merchant ship carrying military cargo arrived at Luanda on Wednesday and that a second Russian arms ship was in the Gulf of Guinea, bound for a landing probably Saturday.

According to the cable on the fighting, South African artillery and other units in Angola were pulled out of battle early this month in preparation for possible withdrawal from Angola.

However, the State Department cable said there were no firm indications whether South Africa intends to disengage completely from the Angolan war.

U.S. officials believe the South Africans probably would have moved to pull out entirely if the Organization of African Unity (OAU) had voted to censure South African involvement. But the split among African nations over the Angolan issue has left South Africa's course in doubt.

U.S. officials said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told African diplomats Thursday he hopes to visit Africa in March or April.

Community Development Plans, Requests Heard

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The public hearing process of the city's second-year Community Development Program application began in earnest last night as the City Council heard a variety of funding proposals and requests.

Mayor Percy Cox told the capacity crowd at city hall that last night's public hearing involved the 1976-77 program and he termed the current funding application a "whole new ballgame."

The city went through the same process last year in fulfilling requirements to receive $1.9 million in federal funds under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, signed into law in August of 1974 by President Ford.

Funds received for projects approved under the first year of the federal program can be carried over into this year and are considered as a totality different budget from the second-year funds.

City Planner John Schofield explained the CDP in brief to the gathering, pointing out the requirements that Greenville must meet in order to receive the funds and discussing both eligible and ineligible projects under the program.

Saying that Greenville is eligible to apply for community development funds because of its past participation in Housing and Urban Development programs, Schofield said that the CDP actually consolidates many of the previous HUD programs, such as urban renewal, model cities, water and sewer grants and loans, neighborhood facilities, public facilities and housing rehabilitation.

The city planner, noting that the new application is also for $1.9 million, said that local programs must be designed to eliminate and prevent blight and provide improved community facilities and public improvements. Congress, he added, intended for the money to be spent to solve problems that the Council and community feel are most important.

For the first time, the City Council, rather than the Federal Government, makes the decisions as to where the money is spent. The public hearings and neighborhood meetings scheduled by the city are an effort to gain citizen input and ideas, Schofield said.

The Rev. Roderick Randolph, chairman of the steering committee which drafted a proposal for funds to construct a senior citizens facility in Greenville, requested that consideration be given to a request for $493,568 to build the facility for the city's older citizens.

Randolph said that the funds would be used for site acquisition, building, site improvements, fixtures and furnishings, with none of the funds utilized for operating expenses.

Explaining that there are "many unmet needs of the older citizens of Greenville," the minister said that many counseling services are needed, as well as opportunities for social contact and person-to-person interchange.

Randolph contended that a "vast amount of talent, wisdom, judgment and moral counsel is gathered in the collective minds and spirits of these older citizens" and he added, "from bird feeding to child caring, from hospital work to tutoring in schools, these persons have much to offer."

Representatives from some of the 15 active senior citizens clubs in the area were introduced and numerous letters of endorsement were presented to the Council.

Speaking as vice president of the Newtown Labor Club, Robert White said that under the first year of the CDP, the Newtown area was "somehow forgotten" and he contended that the area should be one of the main target areas for improvement.

White proposed a Greene Street project calling for sidewalks, improved lighting, availability of grant applications for home repairs, clearing of vacant lots as a means of rodent control, and availability of relocation funds to residents in the area who have to move.

The spokesman also requested that Pitt Streets from Tenth to 14th be paved and he noted that improved lighting is needed as well as sidewalks from Evans Street to the new housing project, lot clearing on Clark Street extension off 14th Street, and attention to the rodent problem in the Pitt Street area.

More vigorous enforcement of the housing code is needed in the Clark Street area, he said, and play areas are needed between 11th and 12th Streets.

White said that citizens of the area can not understand why they are unable to get units in

Lawyer Talks Planned Suit Against City

By TOM BAINES
A law suit against the City of Greenville and its police officers alleging "violations of the civil rights of many people" as a result of the Halloween night incident here was discussed Thursday, according to attorney Jerry Paul.

Paul told newsmen at East

Carolina University that he was in town "in response to a request by some students here at the university to talk over . . . instituting a law suit . . ."

The attorney, who gained national attention recently as a defense counsel in the Joan Little trial, said that, "It's clear that there were violations of civil rights of many people and it is necessary in these types of situations to air this problem before an impartial body."

Paul reported that "we've talked seriously on probably pursuing to file suit against the City of Greenville, city officials and police officers, in the U.S. District Court, alleging the violations of civil rights in order to air these grievances and prevent this type of thing from happening again."

The former Greenville resident said that he attended "part of the session with the City Council that the students had and it was clear to me that that was not a receptive body, it was not really responsive to the students. It was mostly there to defend the police and that was not an impartial body," he added.

"It's clear that the action by the police and by the city of Greenville was unconstitutional, was unnecessary and created a risk and a danger to a lot of people," Paul contended.

Asked to be more specific concerning the violations of civil rights, Paul observed, "It is your civil right to sit and talk to your friends. It is your civil right to associate with whoever you want to . . . to congregate . . . to be in the downtown area . . . to be free from an unlawful arrest. It is your civil right, if you are arrested, not to be roughed up . . . not to be harmed in any way by actions of the state or the city." He acknowledged that civil rights is a "broad term."

According to Paul, the suit will be filed collectively . . . representing all people who had their civil rights violated." He said the number of people he had had contact with concerning the suit would probably total 20 to 30 students.

"It will be a class action against the defendants," he continued, "because there are many defendants who are unnamed, who will never be

Approve Leave Of Absence

The Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina system meeting in Chapel Hill changed its policy today so as to permit university personnel seeking to run for public office to get a leave of absence while they seek the office.

Previous policy had required such persons to resign.

The new policy would permit officials such as Chancellor Leo Jenkins of East Carolina University to run for office and retain his job. Dr. Jenkins has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor this year.

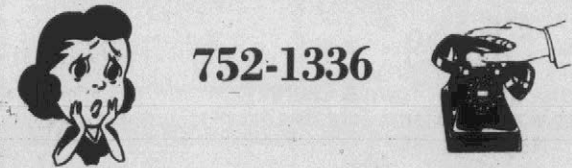

Dr. Jenkins said in St. Louis, Mo. this morning, "The new policy goes a long way toward clarifying the political rights of all university employees, not just senior administrators. By this action, the Board has guaranteed the right of university people to take stands on issues and pursue chosen goals by campaigning for public office if they so desire. It is, for this reason, I am most gratified that the Board has adopted such a policy."

"Of course, I am also aware that it may now be possible for me to enter the campaign for governor if the people of North Carolina want me to do so. I am not making a formal public announcement of candidacy today for I have every intention of following all of the regulations prescribed by the Board of Governors. At a later date, I should be in the position to make a final decision regarding any future political plans."

"If I should decide to become a candidate, I assure the people of North Carolina that I shall discuss openly and frankly the many issues confronting all of us."

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

HOUSING FOR THE RETIRED
Could you find out if there is desirable housing for retired people, compatible to income in Greenville or the nearest point? C. N.

Hotline cannot recommend specific apartments or rental agencies, but we suggest you call some realtors and tell them exactly what you're looking for. Investigating on your behalf, we did learn that the Greenville Housing Authority has had approval of a Housing Assistance Plan, part of the Community Development Program, that calls for 50 apartment units especially for the elderly. Four proposals, three by private developers, are now being studied by HUD so a choice may be made, hopefully within the next two months, Joe Laney of the Housing Authority said. Rent in these would be based on ability to pay and may be administered by the Housing Authority.

Another application for 117 units of conventional public housing is also underway. Thirty of the 117 would be one-bedroom units suitable for retired persons, he said.

Of course, there are many elderly persons already living in the four public housing areas in Greenville. To learn whether you might qualify you may call the Housing Authority, 752-3118.

WORK PERMITS
Do you have to have a work permit if you are 16 to get work? If so, where may I get one? P. D.

Work permits may be obtained from the Pitt County Department of Social Services (at the front desk). Anyone from at least 14 and younger than 18 must have such a form in order to hold a paid job. The Social Services Department is located at 709 Johnston Street, Greenville.

Special awards for continued outstanding service were presented to Don Parrott, Mrs. Etsil Gordon, Austin Britt, Ted Gartman and Mrs. Manon Moeller.

Robert M. Sykes, Regional Director of Boys' Club of America for the Southeastern Region with headquarters in Atlanta, was guest speaker for the evening.

Sykes, a frequent visitor to Greenville during the years 1965 through 1968, when the club was being considered and then established, was in Greenville for the first time in seven years.

The regional director said it was with "inspiration that I have seen the enthusiasm of the club's staff and board of directors" that has made possible the continuing growth of the club, both in membership, scope and financial support.

He mentioned that since 1973, when authorization was given for eight southeastern states to have their own regional headquarters, "The region has continually led the nation in Boys' Club growth."

"We are now sort of a testing spot for the rest of the nation in new ideas," he added.

According to Sykes, the eight southeastern states now have 165 Boys' Clubs with a membership of more than 150,000 boys.

He sounded a note of optimism in citing statistics applicable to the nation's youth. "Few people realize," Sykes said, "That 98 per cent of the youth in America have never gotten into trouble."

"Our job is to work with that two per cent, as well as with boys from the 98 per cent. For some boys the Boys' Club is the only hope they have to hang onto."

Saying that nothing can ever take the place of home life, church and school, Sykes remarked "we're really a good supplement to home, church and school."

In his report for 1975 outgoing president Don Parrott remarked, "It has been the best year ever, we have paid off the deed, paid for the van, and a bank note that has been outstanding since time began."

Parrott commended the area's civic organizations, local business and industrial firms, the United Fund organization, and all the citizens of Pitt County have made it possible to attain the high goals realized during 1975.

Membership for the two clubs are 202 at the Greenville chapter and 118 at the Bethel chapter for a total county wide membership of 320 boys. Average daily attendance during the year averaged 121 boys.

Afternoon speeches and a march to the Pitt County Court House yesterday, and a night-time dinner and awards program highlighted the celebration of the late Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday.

King, a civil rights leader who was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn. in April 1968, would have been 47 years old.

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox proclaimed January 15 "Martin Luther King, Jr. Day," in the city.

Opening a meeting at the old Roxy Theater on Albemarle Avenue Bennie Roundtree said that people must realize, in the light of King's death, that "you may be able to kill the dreamer . . . but you can't kill the dream. That dream still lives on."

Roundtree, active in the local chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference—an organization which King was the national president of—said "you're living today better" because of King's activities.

Roundtree said "America was built for all people . . . not just black or white. We must learn to live together . . . or perish like fools."

"All white folks ain't bad," Roundtree said, "just like all black folks ain't good." He noted that King was "a man not only for black people, but white people as well."

Irma Daniels, president of the Pitt County chapter of the Concerned Women for Justice, said that "We should be more concerned with one another . . . get together in unity, peace and harmony . . . just as King preached."

Dr. Andrew Best, who spoke, said, "Today is a time when we should stop and rightfully pay homage to a truly great American. We are here to stand up and say to the world we hear the voice of Martin Luther King crying from the grave, saying 'let freedom ring.' This is our fighting son, let freedom ring."

Dr. Best concluded, "As we celebrate this birthday, I offer a challenge, . . . carry on."

Golen Frinks, national field secretary with the SCLC was the principal speaker at the afternoon meeting. He said even though "racism exists in Eastern North Carolina, it is time all of us who believe in brotherhood and understanding and justice get together. Black and white have to get together," he emphasized, for a better life. "It's going to be a long time before we hear another voice like Martin Luther King," Frinks said.

After the early afternoon session, about 50 persons marched to the Pitt County Court House for a rally. There speaking to about 100 persons Frinks said King "stood for love and justice and non-violence," adding that there has been "injustice in this court house."

Frinks indicated that one act of injustice was the conviction of Dr. Best late last year on charges of illegally dispensing controlled drugs.

"Dr. Best was caught up in a political conspiracy," Frinks charged, explaining his view that politicians from outside Eastern North Carolina conspired to have the Greenville physician discredited in an effort to prevent Best from helping East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins in the event Jenkins enters the race for the Democratic nomination as Governor.

Greenville city councilman Clarence Gray, who spoke both at the early-afternoon meeting and at the Court House rally, said the nation "should not forget such a great man" as King. "He died for people like us who could not really help ourselves."

Gray said, "We must learn to fight for ourselves," charging "there is a conspiracy going around to degrade . . . destroy our black leadership."

The councilman charged, "Dr. Best is being destroyed by the system. We must do something about it. We can not sit by idle."

At a $10-a-plate dinner last night designed to honor King, awards were given to a number of local residents for their contributions toward better conditions and improved relations in the community.

Donovan Phillips, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union spoke at the dinner.

Grifton Votes Computer Funds

GRIFTON—The Grifton Town Board voted for an expenditure of $6,200.00 for computer upgrading Tuesday night.

Mayor Dave Bosley explained that the addition of a live printer and the increased memory capacity would add immeasurably to the efficiency of the computer in the town office. The Mayor also pointed out that funds for the additions would come from the Federal Community Development Grant now being used by the Town of Grifton.

Career development is taught by John R. Moore at North Pitt. The course is designed to help students explore a wide variety of career opportunities, and respond properly to the application and interview process.

The class is working on a project called "The Mini-Market" in which the classroom is divided into two parts. In one part, each student must successfully complete an application and interview before proceeding to the second section. The second section is a grocery in which the students become customers, cashiers and bag boys.

This project is a practical way of giving students first-hand knowledge about operating a cash register, preparing budgets, preparing job applications, and shopping wisely. This week North Pitt Notes features seniors Charlie Brown and Martha Little.

Charlie, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Brown of Stokes, is a wrestler and bus driver. He is a member of the Teen Dem Club, Senior Science Club, and the FFA. Charlie plans to attend East Carolina University where he will major in micro-biology.

Martha, the daughter of Mrs. Mary Little of Greenville, is a reading lab assistant. She is a member of the Teen Dem Club, French Club, Officers Club and FBLA. She is the secretary for the Senior Council. Martha is also an Honorary Sponsor for the JROTC.

Annuals are again available. They may be purchased from staff members and sponsors for $7.50.

Aluminum Said A Fuel-Saver

NEW YORK (UPI) — According to the Ford Foundation, the most effective way to save on gas is to replace steel with aluminum in the building of cars.

Chemical Week magazine reports that the foundation recommends several simple engineering changes which can raise auto fuel mileage from 1973's 12 miles per gallon to 20 miles per gallon. Among these changes are replacing 750 pounds of steel per car with 300 pounds of aluminum to produce an 18 per cent gain.

Cite $192,675 In ECU Grants

A total of $192,675 was awarded East Carolina University in grants from state and federal government agencies during December.

The N. C. Department of Social Services granted $82,686 to the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions for an in-service professional education program in social work.

The program will be administered by Dr. John Ball, chairman of the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services.

The remaining funds, totaling $109,989, from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and will support four projects under the UNC Sea Grant program, in biology, geology, business and continuing education.

The four ECU Sea Grant projects are a study of fungal diseases effecting aquaculture, directed by Dr. Charles E. Bland of the ECU Department of Biology; a study of the marketing channels for fresh seafood in the N. C. fishing industry, directed by Drs. John Summey and Roswell Piper of the ECU School of Business; an educational program for commercial fishermen directed by James A. McGee of the ECU Division of Continuing Education; and a process-response classification of shoreline erosion and accretion on the N.C. coast, directed by Drs. Michael P. O'Connor and Stanley R. Riggs of the ECU Department of Geology.

Announcements of the grants were made by the ECU Office of Sponsored Programs, a campus agency which coordinates proposals and grants for research and training programs at ECU.

Fire Killed 4 In Apartment

DALTON, Ga. (AP) — Four persons—three of them babies—died early today when fire broke out in an apartment building.

Dalton Police Chief Arnold King and Mrs. Patricia Ann Blackwell, 19; her two children, Angela, 1½, and Bradley, 5 weeks, and a nephew, William Clint Garcia, 2, died of smoke inhalation.

He said other residents of the building escaped without injury.

"We found the mother and her daughter in one bed, the other two children in another bed and their German shepherd lying in the middle of the floor," said King. "We brought them outside but they were already dead by that time. The smoke was just too thick."

The Blackwells, who lived in nearby Chatsworth, were staying at the apartment of Mrs. Blackwell's sister-in-law who was not at home.

The fire was discovered by the dead woman's husband, Bobby Ray Blackwell, 20, when he returned to the apartment after getting off his job at a Dalton carpet mill.

He was taken to a hospital for treatment for smoke inhalation and shock.

"I just got off work and went to my sister's apartment where the kids and Pat were asleep," he said. "As soon as I opened the door I could see all this smoke. I went in every bedroom and couldn't see anything. Flames were all over the place in one bedroom and I couldn't put it (the fire) out."

Blackwell called for help from a neighbor, who called the fire department.

According to Oglesby, the January 31 meeting will be the first of a series of scheduled Democratic sessions.

He said precinct meetings will be held February 12 at all polling places, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Then on March 6, the county Democratic convention will be held at the court house, beginning at 11 a.m.

The county meetings will be followed on May 8 by the district convention (the site yet to be determined) and on June 12 by the state convention at Dorton Arena in Raleigh. The National Democratic Convention will be held in New York City July 12-17.

Architect Sees Far-Out Ways To Build Homes

By HELEN SAM
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some 30,000 parts, held together with 70,000 nails, go into the making of a typical single-family dwelling.

Washington architect Roy E. Mason says labor-heavy building methods, essentially unchanged since the Middle Ages, are pricing most homes beyond the means of the average American family.

With all the space age materials and technology available to Americans, he asks, why has there been so little innovation in home building?

Antiquated laws and customs are part of the answer, says Mason, architectural editor for the World Future Society of Washington, a private, nonprofit organization studying "alternative futures."

In an interview, Mason said experimentation and perhaps some imaginative new solutions to the American dream of "a house for every family" are discouraged by:

— Restrictive building codes which stifle creativity.

— Vested interests who resist change, including labor unions and manufacturers.

— Difficulty in obtaining mortgages from banks for unconventional structures.

Mason was the architect and builder of one such structure, a futuristic vacation retreat atop a wooded hill near Dulles International Airport outside Washington.

The structure consists of urethane foam sprayed onto a framework of metal laths that wind their way around the trees and merge with the surrounding landscape.

Crushed aggregate embedded in the structure makes it almost indistinguishable at a distance from the rock formations of the Virginia hills.

Writing in the World Future Society magazine, Mason suggested some other possibilities for the future in mixing new materials with new technologies:

— The "extrusion process," developed by the Midwest Applied Science Corp., which allows the "spinning-out" of buildings using a plastic foam that hardens as it rises.

— The "fiberglass component system." Lightweight, prefabricated Fiberglas components are connected to a supporting structure, which is easily reset into a variety of designs.

— "Plug-in housing." A core structure containing all essential services is provided. Housing modules, completely furnished if necessary, are sold separately and plugged onto the core structure for fully functioning housing. The modules can be unplugged for moving. Conceived by Peter Cook of Archigram, London.

— "Floating cities" to utilize the water that covers seven-tenths of the earth's surface, or "underwater cities," perhaps starting with a resort facility built in the ocean depths.

Episcopal Deacon And Husband Nurse Share

By SANDY WELLS
Charleston Gazette

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — The nurse is married to the deacon — only he's the nurse and she's the deacon.

"People have a tendency to do a slight doubletake," said Keith Matthews, the state's first woman Episcopal deacon, who uses her maiden name.

"It's a fun thing to play around with when we meet people for the first time," said James Roeder, an emergency room nurse at Charleston General Hospital.

A Charleston native, she is in a training program at St. Matthews Church. She received her divinity degree in California and met Roeder there when she was in a ministerial intern program at the same hospital where he was working.

She is optimistic that the Episcopal Church will open the priesthood to women.

"People are beginning to realize that women have something to offer the priesthood, which is the only condition under which I'd consider it. I want to be sure it's something people really want, not just a response to a fad," she said.

Roeder became interested in nursing as a hospital corpsman in the Navy.

"I was the only man in my nursing school class," he recalls, "and I had some hassles, but nothing unbearable. I got talked over a lot. The textbooks all said 'she' and 'her' and occasionally I got memos addressed to Miss Roeder, but I didn't have any real problems."

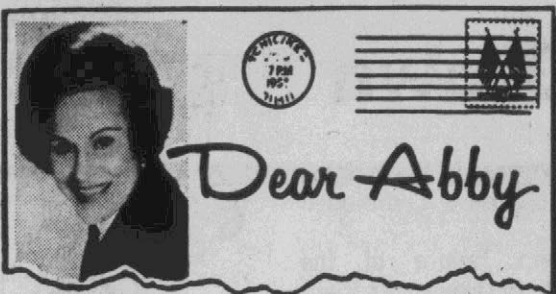

"I've never viewed her job as strictly a man's or mine as strictly a woman's. Both are people's jobs that have to get done. I see no sexual connotation at all," he said. "As a matter of fact, I've often said that a person should be at least 5-foot-10 and 160 to 165 pounds to even consider going into nursing. It's a physically taxing job."

The two also divide housework in their Charleston home.

"Neither of us feel that one is more responsible for running the house than the other," she said. "We share the housework. He's more mechanical than I am so he ends up fixing things. The job goes to the one with the necessary skills."

"I do the general cleaning and all the laundry and ironing because I'm better at it. It's an outgrowth of my life in the Navy, I guess," he said.

She points out that "I am a feminist only in the sense that I am for the liberation of all people. As long as people think out what they want to do with their lives and are doing it, they're liberated as far as I'm concerned."

See Physician Before You Try Strenuous Exercise Program

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Although I've always been in a good physical condition, for the last year I've been lifting weights regularly as a form of exercise. I want to keep my muscles strong and maintain a good physique.

I've had people tell me that weight-lifting is very hard on the heart. Others say it creates back problems, and I've heard that if I discontinue it in later life, I will become soft and flabby.

What do you say? Is weight-lifting beneficial to one's health? Are there any dangers? How does it compare with calisthenics such as push-ups, sit-ups, jogging and bicycling?

I've had so many different opinions. Maybe you can get the straight dope from someone who really knows.

WEIGHT-LIFTER

DEAR LIFTER: That's a heavy assignment, but I've polled some experts and the word from here is: Don't go in for weight-lifting without coaching from an expert. Weight-lifting alone will build muscles, but it won't keep you in shape unless you combine it with other forms of exercise. Before you undertake any strenuous exercise program, SEE YOUR PHYSICIAN to find out how much you can safely take.

DEAR ABBY: I understand that they now have a doll on the market that looks like a flat-chested pre-teen girl until you twist her arm. Then she "grows" an inch or so and sprouts a pretty little bust.

Abby, what kind of toy is this? Do you think children young enough to play with dolls should know about such things?

Where will all this end? Next thing you know there will be a boy doll that "becomes a man" when his arm is twisted.

I think toys of this kind should be outlawed. Please print your opinion in the paper. Maybe others would like to comment.

DISGUSTED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR DISGUSTED: I see nothing wrong with a child's knowing that pre-teen girls develop into shapely young women. I think you're making mountains out of molehills.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that I hope you won't think is too dumb to consider. It's my rotten mouth.

Whenever I get angry, I lose my temper and cuss a blue streak.

I am a 27-year-old housewife with average intelligence and two children ages 5 and 3.

When I use foul language, my sweet husband gets disgusted with me and says, "I wish you wouldn't use language like that."

I really want to stop it because I don't want to set a bad example for my children. I surely wouldn't want them to imitate me.

Please help me.

ASHAMED OF MYSELF

DEAR ASHAMED: Anger is an honest emotion. It's unhealthy to suppress it, so let it out! But instead of using foul language, substitute other words and expressions. ("Oh shoot!" and "Son of a sea cook" work very well.)

It's not easy to break lifelong habits. But it's not impossible.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were watching the news on television the other evening, and along came an announcement that a 41-year-old woman had just given birth to a full-term baby only a few minutes after learning that she was pregnant.

The newscaster said that the woman had gained 30 pounds in the last few months, but she didn't know why. But here's the payoff in case you're thinking that the woman was either uneducated or very dumb. She had been working in a doctor's office for the last 17 years!

My husband said it was probably just an attempt at humor on the part of the newscaster. I said it wasn't.

What do you say?

CURIOUS IN N.Y.

DEAR CURIOUS: I say truth is stranger than fiction. It actually happened.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WASHINGTON STAR READER: Figures DO lie. Just because a marriage lasted 50 years doesn't necessarily mean it was "successful." Not all unsuccessful marriages end up in the divorce court.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question I'll bet many secretaries would like to have answered.

In this day of no discrimination and Women's Lib, etc., how does one address a letter to an office of mixed sexes? It used to be correct to say, "Gentlemen," or "Sirs," even though the writer knew there were women in the office.

My boss suggested that I write to "Dear Abby" for a real good answer.

SECRETARY...OVER 40

DEAR OVER: Try "To whom it may concern." If that strikes you as being too impersonal, how about "Ladies and Gentlemen"? If that's too formal, skip the salutation (it doesn't mean anything, anyway) and get right on with the message.

Apricot Mousse Is For Guests

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Don't ask us how she does it. But Gunnel Teitel, who grew up in Sweden and married an American, manages to take part in an unusual number of activities. First and foremost she is a wife and mother. Her husband is a pediatrician and they have three children. She has a busy household to run.

But Gunnel's talents and interests are many. She's an expert cook, gardener, needle-crafter and weaver. She's a dedicated hockey fan — an interest she acquired from her Swedish family and now shares with one of her sons. And she spends a great deal of time on community efforts, whether it's raising funds for a school project or getting out the vote.

APRICOT MOUSSE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 1/4 cups dried apricots, from an 8- or 11-ounce package
3 eggs, separated
2-3rds cup sugar
Grated rind of 1 lemon,
1 1/2 teaspoons
Juice of 1/2 lemon, 2 tablespoons
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup heavy cream

In a small saucepan sprinkle the gelatin over 1/2 cup water to soften; set aside. In a 1 or 1 1/2-quart saucepan bring the apricots and 1 cup water to a boil; cover and simmer until fruit is very soft — about 10 minutes; do not drain; puree through a food mill. In large bowl of electric mixer beat egg yolks slightly; gradually beat in sugar until thick and ivory color. Fold egg whites into apricot mixture; add cream and fold in until no white shows. Turn into a 1 1/2-quart serving dish — preferably glass. Chill until serving time. Spoon into individual serving dishes and, if desired, top with extra whipped cream sweetened to taste and flavored with vanilla. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Someday A Line To Be Drawn

Failure of the African summit to cope with the civil war in Angola underlines how deeply divided that continent is between Marxist and anti-Marxist thinking in its governments.

Twenty-two governments, by their votes tacitly supported the Marxist faction (a minority group) in Angola which is being largely financed by the Soviet Union, and whose fighting on the northern front is described as being done by Cubans.

The votes of 22 other governments indicated at least a desire to let Angolans settle their struggle for power without outside interference.

Obviously, Moscow envisions a worthwhile return on its investment in the former Portuguese colony.

Just as obviously, our Congress in Washington does not see any reason to oppose a Communist take-over.

Observers freely predict failure of the Organization for African Unity to take a stand will result in broadening of the Angola conflict, whose outcome is almost predictable. No one in the free world is prepared or willing to intervene.

It is most disturbing to see Russia pick up another "chip" on the global poker table without a challenge.

Someday, somewhere, though—a line will have to be drawn.

Maybe Our Psychic Has Ulterior Aims

Official skepticism over a psychic's reported claim there'll be a severe earthquake next weekend near Wilmington can be shared by us all.

Not that one can afford to belittle psychic phenomena, and we wouldn't; but the overall picture is just too peculiar to suit us.

We have a woman out on the West Coast who needlessly climbs out on a limb, risking her reputation as a psychic to claim there's going to be an East Coast tremor. Not only that, but she injects a time element. It adds to her personal stakes in her career.

What makes it all the more intriguing is the predicted event will be taking place around the site of a nuclear power plant.

A coincidence?

As we've all learned, there are people who will say just about anything to discourage use of nuclear energy; just as there are people like Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme who will say anything or do anything to protect the environment.

Question: Would a West Coast psychic feel she had little to lose predicting a disaster 3,000 miles away from her field of operations, and something to gain?

Heart Traffic Light

By STEPHAN KETELE
BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — A "traffic light for the heart" may soon forestall thousands of heart attacks — the number one killer of persons between 40 and 55 years old.

The electronic "traffic light" was developed by Prof. Fred Kornreich of the Brussels Free University and a team of 14 cardiologists, electronic specialists, mathematicians, statisticians and computer experts.

Kornreich, head of the university's heart and blood vessel department, said the machine scans the patient's coronary condition and is not designed to detect or diagnose other heart diseases.

The machine uses basic traffic codes for its diagnoses:

— Green: everything is all right.

— Amber: a coronary attack may be underway and a specialist must be consulted.

— Red: there is evident damage resulting from an attack and hospital treatment is urgently needed.

The device gives an accurate diagnosis 90 per cent of the time and can be read by nonspecialists.

Traditional methods require a specialist and records of diagnoses and autopsies have established that at least one out of every four traditional diagnoses is incorrect.

"Our method reaches 90 per cent accuracy," Kornreich said.

"It would be wrong to call it a do-it-yourself diagnosis maker," Kornreich said, "but it will be simple to read for physicians and medical personnel without any special training in cardiology."

In a check of 4,000 persons who underwent coronary examinations in the United States without any specific symptoms, the "traffic light" yielded 94 per cent correct diagnoses compared to only 42 per cent with the classical method, Kornreich said.

The portable device will be formally presented at the Brussels World Congress for Cardiology in June 1976.

Initial estimates say it will cost less than a traditional cardiograph machine.

That Machiavelli Plan

WASHINGTON—The question of whether or not the United States should finance political parties abroad through the CIA doesn't seem to be a problem to the Administration. The only debate is about what parties should receive the money. Rumor has it that the CIA plans to give $6 million to the Christian Democrats in Italy to make sure the Communists don't get elected. But there are some people in Washington who feel that now that the cat is out of the bag, the contribution could be counterproductive.

One of them is my friend

Giulio Machiavelli who knows the political situation in Italy as well as anybody.

"I think we should give money to a political party in Italy only if we're certain it will produce results."

"You mean to the Christian Democrats?" I said.

"No, I mean to the Italian Communist Party."

"Have you gone mad?" I said to Machiavelli.

"Why would we give money to the Italian Communist Party?"

"It's very simple. If the CIA hands over the funds to the Italian Communist Party, everyone will say the Communists in Italy work for the CIA and the center parties will win the election."

"But that's Machiavellian," I told my friend. "The American people would never stand for it."

"Neither would the Italians," Machiavelli said.

"Look, right now every political party but the Communists are tainted in Italy because it is widely believed their politicians are on the CIA payroll. The only way we can reverse this is by putting the Communists on the payroll and cutting off everyone else."

"But you can't cut off non-Communist politicians from CIA funds," I protested.

"The Right, the Center and the Non-Communist Left depend on that money for their own personal expenses. They have villas to pay off, new cars to buy, Swiss bank accounts to keep up. You can't take money out of their pockets just to defeat the Communists."

"Ah, but that's just the point," Machiavelli said.

"They won't be cut off. When the Soviets find out the CIA is supporting the Communist Party in Italy, the KGB will have no choice but to support the Christian Democrats. If we're to believe our government, the Soviets pour in a lot more money for an election in a foreign country than the Americans do and, therefore, the Christian Democrats will have more funds to salt away for themselves than when they were financed by the CIA."

"It's an interesting proposal," I said. "But what happens if the CIA financing is so successful the Communists win in Italy?"

"There is very little chance of that happening. In almost all cases whichever side the CIA supports in an election loses. But we must make sure that there is a great deal of publicity that the Communists in Italy are being financed by the Central Intelligence Agency."

"How would you publicize something like that?"

"We'd get Director William Colby to brief a congressional watchdog committee in secret session that the CIA was going to give $6 million to the Italian

NCAE Endorses A Change

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Association of Educators has thrown its weight behind a proposal to have the state superintendent of public instruction appointed rather than elected statewide.

NCAE President Dean Westmoreland has told members of a legislative commission requiring school law that the organization of school administrators and teachers "would support the appointment of the state superintendent as such a change would, we feel, immediately clear up most of the disagreements which have been aired repeatedly in the press in recent years."

Westmoreland's prepared comments to the Commission on Public School Law were endorsed by A. C. Dawson, executive secretary of the educators' association, and represented the official position of that group which numbers some 57,000 members.

Has Plan

The legislative study group recently endorsed for favorable consideration the recommendation of a subcommittee headed by Charlotte Attorney William E. Poe, veteran chairman of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School Board.

Poe outlined a plan under which the State Board of Education would be selected from a list of nominees submitted by the 149 local school boards across the state; plus three nominated by the governor.

The state board would then hire (or fire) the state superintendent.

As Westmoreland critically noted in his remarks to the legislative commission, "the conflict between the State Board of Education and the State Department of Public Instruction has done damage to public education in recent years."

"That conflict, it seems to us, is endemic because of the unclearness of the statutes. Policy making authority is given to both the state superintendent and the state board in some cases, and in other the statutes leave themselves open to various interpretations as to who has the power to do what."

The NCAE supports changes that would "spell out clearly that the State Board of Education is the policy-making body for North Carolina schools, and the state superintendent the administrator of that policy."

The change would also make the state agency more nearly like local school agencies in structure and "to continue the cumbersome and controversy-provoking present structure is extremely unwise in the light of present day realities in education," the NCAE position concluded.

Public Notice

Elimination of the elective state superintendent has been proposed before, but interest has intensified in recent months as public attention turned to the open conflict between State Supt. A. Craig Phillips and School Board Chairman Dallas Herring.

An amendment to the State Constitution would be required, which would call for a vote of the people. Thus, endorsement by the state's educators would carry substantial weight in General Assembly consideration of the question. The staff of the legislature's fiscal research division concluded in a study delivered to the 1975 General Assembly that some change to define authority—such as an elected school board and an appointed school superintendent—was needed.

The current study commission, chaired by State Senator Edward Renfrow, D-Johnston, is conducting public hearings and studying education law in order to present a complete re-write for consideration in the 1977 session of the General Assembly.

The NCAE position paper also called for continuation of the teacher tenure law, endorsed the class limitation law and suggested closing some loopholes in it, suggested standards for private schools equal to those in public schools, and proposed that principals and other support personnel be allotted to schools independent of the teacher allotments based on population.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

In response to the article in the Tuesday, January 13, edition of the DAILY REFLECTOR concerning the school board's ruling on the minimum playing time for Junior High and Junior Varsity athletes.

Twenty-two coaches argue about discrimination against the best athletes. I argue about discrimination against the athletes whose potential is being held back due to lack of game-time experience.

Let's go back to the beginning. The students learn the basic fundamentals of sports in physical education classes and many then choose to refine these skills through participation in intramural sports and interscholastic sports. How much a student athlete is willing to sacrifice is usually the criteria for how much and on what level he/she participates.

In interscholastic sports, competition is keen. Here, the student athlete is testing himself-herself against his-her opponents to find out who is the quickest, strongest and the most level-headed. The latter is probably the most important. Through participation in strong athletic competition, the athlete must make quick reflex judgments in ordinary game situations and in tight, almost emergency type situations. Experience helps to make these judgments easier and better.

Experience is the word and with experience comes depth. You don't have too much depth in a team if an athlete going into a game is so nervous, anxious and excited about playing that he/she forgets a play or which way to go. This feeling is not overcome by practice or intersquad scrimmages, but in direct make-it-or-break-it, crowd-screaming competition. A good team needs depth, athletes need experience and these are achieved through playing-time experience during competition.

Coaches, it's time to stop thinking about YOUR win-loss record and to start thinking about WHO the program is for, the Student Athletes. Let them all play. The experience is for THEIR benefit.

The GALLUP POLL

Changing Name Of GOP?

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—With surveys showing Republican party affiliation at an all-time low, some GOP leaders have debated the merits of changing the name of the party in an effort to attract new voters.

The Republican party in Minnesota, as a matter of fact, recently officially changed its name to the Independent-Republican party, with the hope of drawing the support of the growing number of independents. The proportion of independents, nationwide, in fact, is at an all-time high, now far outnumbering Republicans.

When the question of changing the name of the national Republican party to the Independent-Republican party was recently asked of a sample of the nation's GOP voters, one in six voted in favor. The proportion is one in four when only the views of those expressing an opinion are considered.

Of equal significance, a similar proportion of independent voters in the survey believe a name change is in order for the GOP.

Here is the survey question:

"The Republican party in Minnesota has officially changed its name to 'Independent-Republicans of Minnesota.' Do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for the national Republican party to add the word 'Independent' to its name, making it the Independent-Republican party?"

Following are the results based on the total sample (including the "no opinion" group):

	Change Name of Republican Party To Independent-Republican Party?
	Good idea	Poor idea	No opinion
Republicans	17%	54%	29%
Independents	15	42	43
Democrats	9	48	43
NATIONWIDE	13	47	40

Following are the results, based on those expressing a choice (excluding the "no opinion" group):

	Good idea		Poor idea
	Good idea	Poor idea
Republicans	24%	76%
Independents	26	74
Democrats	16	84
NATIONWIDE	22	78

GOP Label Appeal At Low Point

The latest Gallup Poll study of political party affiliation, based on in-person interviews with 7,789 adults, shows only 21 per cent classifying themselves as Republicans, while more than twice as many, 44 per cent, classify themselves as Democrats and 35 per cent place themselves in the ranks of independents.

The results on changing the GOP label reported today are based on interviews with 1,543 adults, 18 and older. The sample includes 378 Republicans, 515 independents, 609 Democrats and 41 who indicate other parties. Interviews were conducted in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Dec. 5-8.

Strength For Today

DRAGGING ANCHOR

IN A GALE

Some people try to dismiss any concern they may feel about life after death by saying that there is no after-life. However, as a recent popular author has one of his characters remark, an assumption of this kind drags its anchor in a gale. He means by this sea-going metaphor that when the storms of life come upon one, the assumption that there is no after-life is not a sufficiently satisfying belief to hold one steady.

We can become very anxious sometimes about life after death when we think how unworthy we are to inherit it. But to deny that it exists leaves us without any adequate explanation as to why life exists at all and no confidence whatsoever that injustice will be rectified, pain assuaged, or patient endurance rewarded.

Immortality is not an issue upon which we can be neutral. It is either true or not true. It means too much to our peace of mind and to the moral purpose by which our life is directed.

Why A Pessimism In Industry?

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If prospects are so improved this year, as many a businessman has told us, why isn't industry willing to back that view with good hard cash?

Capital spending plans — that is, plans for new production machinery, larger plants and the like — remain pessimistic, according to the latest survey by the Commerce Department. In fact, the survey suggests no increase at all.

No analysis is required to determine that some of the same executives who have been talking publicly about improved sales and prospects seem to have private thoughts and plans that conflict with such statements.

This wouldn't be the first time that businessmen have told different stories to different audiences. To stockholders, for example, they tend to emphasize how high are profits. To the union, they talk of depressed earnings.

But this might not be the situation at all in regard to capital spending plans. There are indications that the survey, when taken, accurately reflected their views. But views change, and so do plans.

Investment analysts are inclined to believe that if the survey, taken in late November and early December, were repeated today it would tell a different, much more positive and encouraging story.

Businessmen are like most human beings in that, when times are bleak, they tend to project the future through a grey lens. A lot has happened in the past four or five weeks to bring a little color into the picture.

Retail sales picked up strength, for one thing. Inflation receded a bit. Interest rates fell. And in general, business activity began to gain strength. All this has undoubtedly lifted the hopes of businessmen.

But, while the suggestion exists that businessmen will spend more freely than is indicated by the Commerce Department survey, it is imprudent to ignore the evidence of caution.

Businessmen might have hoped and believed that their sales would improve, but they didn't put their money on it. They waited for a signal from the consumer; they didn't dare make any assumptions about his behavior.

Now that some signals have been received, it is likely that the 1976 projection of $119.68 billion in capital spending will be exceeded. But more good news must continue to pour forth if it is to be exceeded by much.

Large as it is, this economy of ours is a fragile and sensitive mechanism. No gear moves independently of any other. No defect in one gear can be isolated from the others. It is all one mechanism.

If the consumer doesn't join with the producer, neither can operate effectively. If the consumer doesn't have a job, he can't buy what is produced and the producer can't expand his plant to make jobs available.

A little momentum has been built up, and that's why capital spending plans today are probably a bit better than they were a month ago. The gears of the economy are beginning to mesh and do their job, but the whole piece of machinery still needs a lot of tuning.

Sen. Frank Church Counts On Late Primary Rush

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If all goes according to plan, Sen. Frank Church will enter the Democratic presidential race in March, counting on a strong showing in the late primaries to catapult him to the fore of a deadlocked nominating convention.

Church insists that strategy has real possibilities despite the admitted "serious handicap" faced by any late starter whose name is not Kennedy or Humphrey.

"If this election were like the last, it wouldn't be possible for so late an entry," Church says. But this year, he maintains, strict new campaign finance laws and an abundance of both candidates and primaries raise the prospect that the funds and enthusiasm generated by the early starters "will be rapidly dissipated."

"I'm told it takes a million and a half dollars even to look at New York," Church says of a primary he does not plan to enter.

While the 11 Democrats already in the field are exhausted, ing their money and themselves in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Florida and elsewhere, Church says he will be preparing for the later primaries — New Jersey, Ohio, Rhode Island, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and California.

"Those are promising primaries in places I have reason to believe I might do very well," Church says.

There are what an aide calls "natural openings" of geographic kinship in the Western states, while in Rhode Island, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R. I., has publicly urged Church to make the race. As for Ohio and New Jersey, aides seem to be relying on Church's liberal record.

As an indicator of his attractiveness to liberal voters, aides point to last month's convention in Massachusetts of the Citizens for Participation in Political Action where, with relatively little effort, Church finished in a virtual tie for second with Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., behind former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris.

Church has chosen to bypass the March 2 Massachusetts primary, citing his duties as chairman of the Senate intelligence committee, which is not scheduled to go out of business until the end of February.

Minding the committee while others are out campaigning has not been all sacrifice, Church concedes. Televised hearings and constant press coverage have greatly increased his visibility.

A poll taken in November by NBC News showed Church with a name recognition factor greater than all of the declared candidates except Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace. When that name recognition score was computed against the percentage of people who had a favorable image of Church, he came out with the highest "political potential" of all Democrats, including Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The chief disadvantage of keeping his pledge not to become an active candidate while heading the intelligence panel is reflected in fund-raising. Since its creation on Dec. 12, his campaign committee has raised approximately $100,000, according to finance chairman Henry L. Kimmelman. By comparison, Jackson has more than $2 million.

When Church declares his candidacy sometime between the Feb. 29 expiration date of the intelligence committee, and the March 14 filing deadline for the California primary, he says he hopes to have a campaign chest of $500,000. Kimmelman, Virgin Islands businessman who was chief fund-raiser for Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign in 1972, says "that's going to be difficult. That's a little beyond what I thought we could do."

Elsewhere there were these developments on Thursday:

—Outgoing Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton defended his appointment to a White House job paid by the taxpayers but involving at least some political chores for President Ford's campaign.

Morton said a president is "a product of the political system," and asked, "Can we sterilize and isolate him from the system and political parties after he's elected?"

Ford counsel Philip Buchen was to have met with the Federal Election Commission to try to settle a dispute over Morton's new job, but the meeting was postponed. FEC chairman Thomas Crutis had questioned whether some of Morton's salary should not come from Ford's campaign funds.

Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris filed a complaint with the FEC Wednesday, asking for an investigation of the Morton job.

—Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan returned his campaign to New Hampshire and again defended his plan to turn over some federal welfare and social programs to state and local governments.

In Keene, N.H., Reagan said the federal government could turn over to the states its authority for cigarette, liquor and other excise taxes so they could afford to pay for the programs. He said a portion of federal income taxes "could be earmarked and kept by each state."

—Alabama Gov. George Wallace carried his presidential campaign to Mississippi today in an effort to win grassroots support prior to precinct caucuses there Jan. 24. The caucuses, the second such presidential test in the nation, will select the state's delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Sen. Lloyd Bentson of Texas were in Mississippi Thursday. Although Mississippi has only 24 votes at the Democratic convention, candidates are concerned with making a good showing in the caucuses. "The rest of the nation is going to be looking to see which candidate has the strength to win," Carter said.

—The Federal Election Commission approved another $1.1 million in matching campaign funds for six presidential candidates, bringing to $3.68 million the total certified so far this year. The latest payments were to Jackson, $806,586; Ford, $118,485; Rep. Morris Udall, $72,443; Carter, $53,937; former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, $30,019; and Bentson, $18,993.

Avers Research Funds Diverted

RALEIGH (AP)—In the wake of being fired, the director of agricultural research at N.C. State University, has charged that research funds had been "diverted to other use" and poor management "is costing the public large sums each year."

J.C. Williamson Jr., who has held the post five years, said his dismissal is effective Feb. 1 and that he would continue as professor of economics in the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Dr. Joab Thomas, recently installed chancellor of NCSU, said a statement answering Williamson's charges would be made today. He said he had made a preliminary investigation of the charges and had decided that "in the best interest of programs in Agriculture and Life Sciences" that he would let the firing of Williamson stand and would recommend to the university trustees that the dismissal be approved.

Williamson told of his firing and made his charges in a letter sent to more than 100 North Carolina farm leaders and members of the General Assembly.

In his letter, Williamson said his firing "is punishment for having worked too hard within the university administration to bring about changes which would make your agricultural research program more effective in meeting your needs."

He said an accompanying memorandum "may also help you to understand why Dean (J.E.) Legates (of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences), Provost (Nash N.) Winstead Communist Party. He would make them all swear that they wouldn't reveal a word of it to anyone.

"Five minutes after the briefing was over, every newspaper bureau in Washington would know about it. The day after the story was printed the White House would deny it. As soon as the denial came out, everyone in Italy would believe it was true."

"It's brilliant," I told Machiavelli. "But if the CIA starts supporting Communist parties in other countries, won't it hurt detente?"

"It might," he replied, "but what better way to show the Soviets that we mean business?"

socation has already awarded its bi-annual prize for the system to Kornreich.

It also earned him election to the board of the American College of Cardiology and of the American Heart Association.

The breakthrough value of Kornreich's "124 Deduction System" is its ability to read immediately from nine electrode recording spots on a patient's chest and back.

A bulky computer using traditional methods would take three months to deduce as much from 200 spots.

Most cardiograms are now made on the basis of eight electrodes — because it is physically not feasible to apply 200 and most cardiologists have no access to computers for sophisticated interpretation of readings.

The method has been tested for several years. It has proved reliable in more than 1,000 cases in Belgium and in several thousand cases in the United States.

Since last year Kornreich's method has been tested in the "Mr. Fit" American campaign for the prevention of heart attacks.

Initial results of that campaign showed that the usually blamed causes of heart attacks — like cholesterol, high blood pressure, smoking and obesity — are not the only culprits.

Kornreich's method is also being tested in the United States as an alternative to the still tricky coronarographic examination for the early detection of heart and vessel lesions which occur unnoticed in young patients and become incurable at later stages.

Evangelist To Lead Service On Sunday

LaVerne Tripp will be the evangelist for a service of singing and preaching Sunday at 10 a.m. at the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church, Rt. 3, Greenville.

Raised on a farm outside of Chocowinity, Tripp began singing at camp meetings and in church when he was two and a half years old. After finishing Bible School, Greenville, S. C., he sang with several part-time groups before joining the Blue Ridge Quartet with whom he traveled for six years. He is now in full time evangelistic work, traveling throughout the country, preaching and singing.

In 1972, he was crowned "King of gospel music." He has had three songs in the top position in gospel music including "I Know," "That Day Is Almost Here" and "After Calvary."

The pastor, Rev. Bobby G.

Bazen, stated, "We are looking forward to a great rally day and we are happy to have such a man from so near our community with such talent and dedication to be in this service."

The public is invited to attend.

Charged In Two Deaths

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The bodies of a 61-year-old man and his wife who was 28 years younger were found in a wooded section Thursday after they had been missing for four days.

Police said they had charged a man with two counts of murder after allegations that he had made threats on the woman's life.

Police found the bodies of Clemmon White and Mrs. Rosalie White, 33, of Winston-Salem, near Winston Lake Park. Authorities said they had been shot in the back of the head, and the bodies were covered with old rugs, dirt, and other debris.

Charles Griffin, 44, of Winston-Salem, was arrested and charged with murder, police said.

Lt. T.J. Reavis said police were told by another woman that she and Griffin were in the White home Sunday night and that Griffin had made threats on Mrs. White's life. Reavis said the woman returned to the home the following day and reported the couple missing.

Hunt Vandals

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Louisburg police are looking for the vandals who turned on two fire hydrants Wednesday night and allowed nearly all the town's 500,000 gallons of stored water to flow down the drains.

As a result, most of the town's residents were unable to bathe, shave or even make coffee Thursday morning when they awoke to find their faucets dry.

Police said the vandals' trick could have been disastrous rather than a widespread inconvenience if a fire had occurred during the night or early Thursday. Town officials said the storage tanks had been refilled by Thursday afternoon.

The term "silent majority" first was used in an 1874 magazine article on funeral practices, National Geographic says.

Have A Home For Couple

SHARON, S.C. (AP) — Marilyn Sowell's mother and uncle have died in the last two years, before they could move into the nicely furnished mobile home she and her husband had prepared for them.

Now Mrs. Sowell and her husband want to care for someone else. They are looking for a couple to move into the place, at nominal rent, or rent-free in exchange for little chores.

The Sowells live next door, on a 28-acre homestead in the Sharon community six miles from York and 20 miles from Rock Hill.

Mrs. Sowell, in her late 40s, and her 52-year-old husband, operate Sowell's Meats and Services in Rock Hill.

She says she doesn't like to come home and see the two-bedroom trailer dark and cold looking.

So she and her husband have run a classified ad in South Carolina papers offering it "for very reasonable rent," to a retired, semiretired or partially disabled couple. The ad lists the Sowell's phones as (1-803) 327-7770 by day and 927-7254 after 8 p.m.

'Holy Spirit' Study To Be At Jarvis Memorial

Dr. Tommy Tyson of Chapel Hill, a former director of Oral Roberts University Department of Spiritual Life who is in full-time ministry through the North Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, will teach a course at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Sunday through fast on Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant. The public is invited to attend the breakfast also. Cost of the breakfast is $2.35 per person.

In addition to his full-time preaching and teaching missions with the Methodist Conference Dr. Tyson is the founder of New Life Inc. in Chapel Hill, a developing ministry of seminars, quiet days, counseling, circulating books and tape libraries.

He was educated in the public schools of the state and received his higher education at Campbell College and Duke University. His theological degree was received from The Duke Divinity School. He also holds the honorary Doctor of Divinity degree conferred upon him by Oral Roberts University.

Dr. Tyson is one of six living children of the late Rev. and Mrs. M.E. Tyson. All five brothers are ordained ministers of the United Methodist Church serving in the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences.

The study course at Jarvis Church was instructed by the Methodist Council on Bishops. Bishop Mack Stokes, a former professor of theology at Emory, was engaged to write the study book, "The Holy Spirit and Christian Experience."

Seminar Series Is Announced

A series of seminars on coastal resources will be offered at UNC-Wilmington on Thursday evenings between Jan. 29 and June 24.

The series is sponsored by the East Carolina University Environmental Education Program in cooperation with the UNC-Wilmington Division of Continuing Education and the UNC-Wilmington Marine Science and Environmental Studies Program.

Further information about receiving credit is available from Stephen Benton of the ECU Environmental Education Program, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

Gross tonnage is a volume measurement.

DR. TOMMY TYSON

His topic will be "The Holy Spirit" Sunday through Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on Monday at 10 a.m., he will talk about the Holy Spirit related to prayer and Tuesday at 10 a.m., he will discuss the Holy Spirit related to Bible reading. The services are open to the public and will be held in the sanctuary of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. A nursery for pre-school children will be provided. Free parking will be made available in the church parking lot.

Others taking part on the program will be Mrs. James W. Lee, soprano, who will sing "The Lord's Prayer" Monday morning, while Mrs. Joan Tyson of Grimesland, wife of the Rev. Eugene Tyson, a Methodist minister, will sing a solo selection Tuesday morning.

Dr. Tyson will also speak following a family-style break-

A Bible Believing Church. No Creed, but Christ. No Book but the Bible... No Law, but Love.

"The End Of Your Search For A Friendly Church"

Dr. Harold W. Deitch, Pastor

Our family Bible is a venerable volume. It has been passed from generation to generation, going to the oldest each time, and now, as long as I live, it shall be mine.

I have always been fascinated by this wedding picture of my Grandmother and Grandfather Harris, which has always been located at the page which records their marriage. I recall when this peppery, little gray-haired lady showed me the picture for the first time. Her fingers were old and wrinkled — trembling as she turned to it.

Notice that a church appears not once, but twice, in the drawings. I have always thought this symbolic because the Church was such an important factor in Grandmother's life. Her Faith upheld her through many dark times, and what was important was that she communicated it to all of us. Another priceless inheritance from my Grandmother — her Bible and her Faith.

CONCORDE DELIVERED—Ceremonies Thursday marked the arrival of the first Concorde supersonic jetliner for British Airways at London's Heathrow Airport. The $60 million, 1,400-mile-an-hour plane is to start the world's first supersonic service on Jan. 21.

There is still some doubt as to whether it will be allowed to use U.S. airports since environmentalists claim it creates excessive air and noise pollution. (AP Wirephoto)

Higher Cigarette, Liquor And Gas Taxes Predicted

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — You may be forced to pay higher state taxes on cigarettes, liquor and gasoline this year, but state income and sales tax rates are unlikely to rise.

raises," said James Martin, deputy director of the governors' organization.

Shannon forecast that the states would opt for higher levies on cigarettes, liquor and gasoline, and that they might also increase fees in such areas as higher education and motor vehicle licensing.

He said three factors would tend to work against any increase in income or sales taxes: the November elections, the recession and previous cumulative increases.

He said some exceptions may arise in the area of income taxes, and the most likely state to impose such a levy is New Jersey, which has depended for years on property taxes and, more recently, a sales tax.

"That's the one place where you might expect some big action," he said.

Martin predicted that the failure of Congress to renew revenue-sharing this year could force states around the country to increase broad-based taxes.

Revenue-sharing provides an average of 3 per cent of a state's funds.

He said 11 states have indicated they would increase personal income taxes by an average of 9 per cent if revenue sharing is not continued, five would increase corporate income taxes by a median of 30 per cent and nine would raise sales taxes by an average of 9 per cent.

Investigate 2 Accidents

An estimated $1,700 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street involving a car driven by Mildred Frady Hodge of 237 Churchill Dr. and a truck operated by Kittie Elizabeth Higgins of Greenville.

Officers, who reported Mrs. Hodge was injured in the mishap, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Hodge car and $450 to the Higgins vehicle.

No charges were reported.

Police said cars driven by Kim Annette Davis of Route 1, Ahoskie and Wiley Clark Sr. of 603 Gooden Pl. were involved in a 9:45 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Reade and Cotanche Streets.

Officers, estimating damage to the Davis car at $150 and placing damage to the Clark vehicle at $100, made no charges.

Observers of state government finances are predicting that governors and legislators will turn to the low-visibility taxes to raise money because they are afraid to boost the broad based-taxes in an election year.

States are also likely to look for ways to cut their spending, despite inflationary pressures.

"I don't see this as a revenue year. I see it as an expenditure contraction year," said John Shannon, assistant director for public finances on the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

He said the states "are really going to start slamming the brakes on expenditures."

The economic squeeze facing the states was highlighted in a financial survey of states conducted for the National Governors Conference. The survey indicated that the rate of increase of state spending has outpaced the rate of revenue increases. It estimated that 1976 sales tax collections may increase 11 per cent while individual income taxes would rise 9 per cent.

This trend can be reversed "by raising taxes, cutting services, delaying construction, putting a lid on personnel hiring and putting a lid on salary

Heart Institute's Surgeon Is In Trouble Over Operations

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dr. Edward B. "Ted" Diethrich arrived here in 1971 to open the $3 million Arizona Heart Institute with plans for 10 surgeries a day and heart transplants. Institute spokesmen called him "the heir apparent to Michael DeBakey's kingdom in Houston."

Since then, he has been sued seven times for malpractice, dethroned as director of the institute and faces state medical board action on charges ranging from performing unnecessary surgery to covering up a bungled heart-valve operation.

The board could take any action from dismissal of the charges to a reprimand to revoking his license.

Proposals to bring Diethrich, a protege of DeBakey's, to Phoenix in 1971 were opposed by Good Samaritan and St. Luke's hospitals, which already had cardiac units depending on community support. The Maricopa County Medical Society denied Diethrich membership for alleged advertising, and the state board admonished him in April for excess publicity. Asked why all the opposition against him, Diethrich said: "You make your own impressions."

Fellow doctors criticized Diethrich in county health planning council hearings repeatedly for having full say over who practiced at the institute. Officials at St. Joseph's Hospital, which houses the institute, did not dilute Diethrich's authority until last summer when the county medical society boycotted the hospital, and the hospital's patient load dropped by 10 per cent.

Having authority over hiring and firing of staff destroys peer review, hallmark of the medical profession, fellow doctors said. A hospital staff committee investigated and recommended successfully that Diethrich be removed as director and be allowed to operate only under supervision of a surgical team.

Included in the committee report were charges that Diethrich installed an artificial valve upside down in a patient who died after surgery to correct the error. The mistake allegedly was covered up by billing the patient's family for two heart valves without relating the circumstances, according to the report, which was forwarded to the state medical board.

Diethrich also is accused of having an extremely high number of patients die after surgery on valves that control the blood flow to the heart's upper chambers. Of 50 consecutive patients, the staff committee said 16 died within four months, and two others died of surgery-related causes.

Therefore the mortality rate was 36 per cent for surgery for the first 50 mitral valve operations, the report said. It said the death rate is higher than the national average and accused Diethrich of deception for reporting a 16 per cent mortality ratio.

Other charges include allowing surgery by physicians other than those authorized by the patient and failure to supervise his doctors and patients properly.

ly. Diethrich, who along with several of his surgeons has applied for staff privileges at other hospitals, said: "I have no immediate plans."

Put Sunshine In Beer Plant

MEMPHIS (AP)—Memphis State University is trying to put a little sunshine in the production of beer.

Faculty members at the university's Herff College of Engineering are designing a $1.2 million experimental solar power system for the Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. which operates a big brewery at Memphis.

The Schlitz project will be part of a federally funded program to develop solar energy, according to Dr. Gordon Hopkins, chairman of the mechanical engineering department at the college.

Memphis State engineers hope to use the sun's power to heat water for use in brewing beer.

"We plan to design a model system that will heat the water in one of five tanks at Schlitz," said Dr. Edward H. Perry, the senior scientist on the three-year project. "Each tank holds about 30,000 gallons of water."

The system will be capable of heating the water to 170 degrees.

John Stevens, plant manager of the Memphis Schlitz brewery, said his firm is hoping the experiment will provide a new and economic energy source.

"With the worldwide energy situation what it is today, we have to explore all areas, and solar energy is one area that has a lot of potential," Stevens said.

Memphis State has applied to the Energy Resources Development Administration for funding for the project.

Perry said his department is also asking for federal funds to finance a plan to heat part of the university's student housing with solar energy.

"We want to use sunshine to supplement the heating of six apartments in one unit of the married student housing as a demonstration project," Perry said.

Memphis State already has a solar power project funded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration underway.

Area Slogan Contest Set

Entries in a Volunteer Greenville Slogan Contest will be accepted Feb. 1-13.

The Greenville Jaycees have donated $50 to be presented to the winner of the contest. The slogan will be used by Volunteer Greenville, a new service of the City of Greenville which refers volunteers to various agencies throughout the city.

The referrals are made after an agency's need for help is matched with volunteer's needs, experience, and time available. Through the use of volunteers, the agencies hope to be able to extend their services to the people of the city. There is presently a need for 200 volunteers in nearly 55 agencies, Coordinator Susan Mescher said. These needs range from providing transportation to friendly visiting to tutoring to knitting at home. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer in any capacity and time slot may call Volunteer Greenville, 752-4137, Ext. 225.

Persons wishing to enter the slogan contest may send entries to Volunteer Greenville, Box 1905, before Feb. 13. Names, addresses, and phone numbers should be included, of course.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, overcoming some early profit taking with the help of a new prime rate reduction.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 1.26 at 925.77, erasing an early decline of about 3 points. Gainers took a slight lead over losers in the over-all count at the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was active, but well off the pace of Thursday, when a record 38.45 million shares changed hands.

As the market opened, New York's First National City Bank, second largest in the industry, announced it was cutting its prime rate from 7 to 6 1/2 per cent effective Monday.

The move had been widely anticipated for several days on Wall Street. But it nevertheless served to underscore the downward trend in interest rates that has played a significant part in the market's early-1976 rally.

Public Service Electric & Gas was the most active issue on the Big Board, up 1/4 at 19 1/2.

Western Airlines led the 10 to 10 after a delayed opening. An agreement was announced for the airline to buy the 2.5 million shares of its stock owned by financier Kirk Kerkorian for slightly more than $30 million.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks eased .06 to 51.13 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .04 at 91.36.

known."

Paul told newsmen that he had decided to pursue the case and he noted that, "I think we have some strong people who are firmly committed to it and I hope that some more people come forward and become committed to it. I'm ready, willing and able to file suit and I'm ready to go on with it."

He said "it is the kind of thing that takes some time but I think it needs to be done."

The suit will be filed independent of the student government at ECU, he explained, adding that he did not expect the SGA to get involved in the matter. Paul said that "they (SGA) would have too many problems in getting involved."

He continued, "That's why law firms like ours do exist, because we know that we can't depend on other people to do what is necessary. I know that any student government is not going to take on the town. They not only don't have the courage . . . they don't have the motivation to take on the town."

Paul said the suit could be filed within the next 30 to 45 days, and he asserted, "It depends on how fast we can get organized."

Asked if the city had been notified of the suit, Paul said that, "I'm not required to notify them."

All of the students involved in the suit were not arrested on the night of the incident, he reported.

"One of the things that interests me about this particular suit is that there were a lot of violations of civil rights that did not involve arrested students," Paul said. "A lot of people who were minding their own business and who were assaulted . . . were victims of indiscriminate use of tear gas and other things and really haven't been able to come forward because they weren't charged with anything. Their rights have to be protected too."

the Newtown housing project and he called for an investigation of the housing policy to determine whether or not there is discrimination in the assignment of individuals to local housing projects.

The paving of Railroad Street between Dickinson Avenue and 14th Street was proposed. He also requested that a fence be placed around the Newtown Project area to keep children from running into the streets. Playground areas were proposed, as well as improvements to the sewage and drainage system, lighting improvements, and odor control involving the fertilizer plant on 14th Street.

Annett Barnes of the Greenfield Terrace community requested that consideration be given to public works improvements in the area and she called for health care, recreational and educational improvements. She also asked that a social service center for the area be considered as well as lighting improvements for the area.

The spokesman asked why money is being spent on Green Mill Run when the canal behind Greenfield Terrace is unsanitary and in need of attention.

In response to a request for paving on W. Gum Road, City Engineer Charlie Holliday discussed the process whereby owner-participation petitions are undertaken for paving. Holliday said that there are 57,500 feet of unpaved streets in Greenville.

A request for Community Development funds to improve the Riverdale and Greenville Heights sections of Greenville was presented by John Bizzell who asked that: W. Fourth Street from Fourth and Nash to Memorial Drive be opened to traffic with improved lighting installed; sidewalks in the area be improved and added where they are missing; stop light be placed at the corner of W. Third and Tyson Streets; drainage problems corrected at Third and Davis Streets; and a caution light be placed at corner of W. Fourth and Tyson Streets.

Bizzell said that the area covered in the request involves Elizabeth Street west to Memorial Drive and from W. Fifth Street north to Park Drive. Jim Hix submitted a request that the city include funds in the Community Development budget to expand the program for bicycle paths initiated by the Council some two years ago.

Hix, who noted that under the existing program, a number of schools or recreational areas are interconnected by Class II bikelanes and Class III bikes routes, proposed that the city adopt a long range plan to interconnect all major subdivisions with city schools, recreational areas and shopping areas with Class I paths.

He said that at least $50,000 should be set aside to construct at least five miles of Class I paths along the major thoroughfares.

The Council also heard a request that additional land for use as a black cemetery be considered in view of the space problem at Brown Hill Cemetery.

It was pointed out that land surrounding the cemetery property might be available for sale. City Manager Jim Caldwell noted that the proposal would have to be discussed with HUD officials to see if CDP money could be spent for the cemetery program.

Council members were urged by representatives of the West Meadowbrook area to move along as quickly as possible with programs in that section.

Cox told the residents to be sure that they attend the Redevelopment Commission's hearing on West Meadowbrook, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall. He assured the citizens that the city is moving as fast as possible on the West Meadowbrook program and some evidence of the planning work that is currently underway should be seen by the Spring.

The second hearing on the 1976-77 program is scheduled for Jan. 29.

Mrs. Cathryn Cottle, a Mid-East Commission coordinator for the nutrition program at Moyewood Social Services Center, appeared before the Council to thank the members for working to provide transportation for residents participating in the program.

Cox said that the thanks should go to Council members Dr. Frank Fuller and Joe Taft Jr. as well as Schofield for their efforts in the matter.

Announcing a major development in fire fighting. Faster water.

Fighting a fire is fighting time. Every minute wasted may cost thousands of dollars in property destroyed. Every second saved may be a life.

And yet, a fire fighter can't always move as fast as he would like. Because his basic weapon, the 2 1/2-inch fire hose, when full of water, is about as hard and unyielding as a steel pipe. The only way to bend it around a corner is to shut the water off.

And to lug it up a flight of stairs is a test of any man's stamina. All of this makes it easy to understand why a Union Carbide product called UCAR Rapid Water Additive is revolutionizing fire fighting.

Rapid Water Additive mixes easily with water and makes it flow faster through a hose by reducing friction.

Because the water flows faster, fire fighters can get just as much water as before using a smaller 1 1/2-inch hose that weighs half as much.

The smaller hose makes a much better weapon. It bends around corners. It can be carried up a stairway fully charged. In short, it helps firemen get water to the fire faster.

At the same time, it makes their job safer and less strenuous.

Rapid Water Additive was invented by Union Carbide and perfected in cooperation with the New York City Fire Department.

It's already helping fire fighters do their job more efficiently in many American cities.

Yours may be one—now or soon.

Pirates Try To Rebound Against W&M

East Carolina University's raggedy Pirates hit the road again Saturday night, traveling to Williamsburg, Va., to meet the league-leading Indians of William & Mary. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

The Pirates, who a week ago looked like they might make a race for the Southern Conference title, now look like the survivors of the blitzkrieg as they attempt to gather their forces against the Indians.

Following last Saturday's TV game with Furman, the Bucs looked like they might have solved some of the problems that had beset them during the first weeks of the 1975-76 campaign. They were 4-1 in conference play, and had a chance to move into second place in the league standings with a Monday night win at Richmond.

Instead they were bombed by the Spiders, 88-71. They followed that Wednesday night with an embarrassing 50-48 defeat at the hands of Appalachian State.

So rather than in the thick of the race with a 6-1 mark, the Bucs were shaking their heads over a 4-3 record. And things don't look any brighter for them this weekend.

"We are mentally psyched out right now," a disgusted Coach Dave Patton said. "I think it all goes back to the way we started (losing the first four, three to ACC teams). We've lost all our confidence."

"I really can't understand it. After seeing us play against Marshall and Furman, I thought maybe we were ready. But I can't explain the way we played against Richmond and Appalachian State."

Patton added that if there was a bright spot in the ASU game, it was that Billy Dineen has emerged as the starting point guard for the Bucs. "He's had two straight good games, and we can't deny him the starting job."

The unhappy coach said that too many of the players are playing for themselves alone and not thinking about the team at all. "We haven't played well. We haven't done the things we should be doing. Our record indicates this. Now we can either feel sorry for ourselves and wallow in self-pity and give up, or we can get after it and make the rest of the season successful."

The coach added that playing 11 of the first 15 games of the year on the road hasn't helped. "After William & Mary, we'll have only three more road games, but I'm afraid the damage has been done unless the guys decide they want to change things."

Patton said he planned to make some technical changes that he hoped would improve the play of the team. "We're certainly going to do all we can to try and get things turned around and get them believing in themselves again. This is our major problem."

Patton is also hopeful that Dineen will take on the role of a leader, despite being a freshman. "Somebody has to become a leader out there, it could just as well be him."

The Bucs may be handicapped by injury, illness and other problems against the Indians. Buzzy Braman, who played the point for most of the season, is still handicapped by an ankle injury, and has missed the last two games. He is not expected to be ready to play Saturday. Ty Edwards is questionable, having what is described as a "touch of pneumonia." And Wade Henkel sat out Wednesday's game due to disciplinary reasons. "I just don't know about Wade right now," Patton said.

The Indians have not been beaten in Southern Conference play so far this year, and present a tough challenge to the Bucs. "They play very deliberately," Patton said. "They are a fine, fundamentally sound basketball team. They play great defense, and they play a lot of people. They have two of the finer players in the conference is Ron Satterthwaite and John Lowenhaupt."

Those two are the only Indians in double figures. Satterthwaite is among the top scorers in the conference with a 19.4 average, while Lowenhaupt is hitting 16.3 per outing. He's also the leading rebounder on the team, grabbing 6.3 per game.

"Satterthwaite controls their offense. What they do comes from him. They get on the boards well," Patton said.

Patton also doesn't feel that the Indians will take the Pirates lightly, regardless of their record. "Everyone seems to really enjoy beating us," he said. "And I think William & Mary especially likes to do it. They'll probably remember last year's game (won by the Bucs in overtime on dramatic shots) and that'll pump them up some."

The Pirates, now, 6-8, are led in scoring by Earl Garner with a 13.1 average, while Reggie Lee is hitting 13.1 per game. Larry Hunt, the leading rebounder, with over nine a game, has a 10.4 point average.

Following the Indian game, the Pirates will return home for a Wednesday meeting with Richmond.

County Board Withdraws Policy; Sets Up Study Of The Situation

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County School Board voted Thursday to allow coaches to determine player participation, as before the new policy stipulating that each player on junior varsity teams and middle school teams should play one quarter per game. The motion, however, allowed for the studying of the concept of increased player participation by the planning team which will be responsible for developing specific recommendations for a policy by July 1.

The board met in the Pitt County District Court Room, where an estimated 90 coaches, principals, and parents gathered to ask questions about the policy and to ask that the policy be rescinded.

The player participation policy was adopted at the January 6 meeting at the Pitt County School Board.

One other motion and a recommendation were suggested by board members. A motion to keep the policy but to decrease the minimum of playing time to two minutes, died for lack of second. A recommendation was made by Supt. Ott Alford, to keep the present policy but defer the implementation of specifics until the planning team could discuss and recommend specific guidelines concerning the policy. Alford's recommendation was not accepted in the form of a motion.

Voices Against

Shelley W. Marsh, representing the Pitt County Coaches Association, explained the discontent of the coaches because of the policy and asked the board the following questions:

What justification was there for making such a policy? Why were the coaches and principals not consulted? Why is Pitt County the only county in the state who should have to abide by such a policy? Why did the Pitt County School Board refuse to meet with coaches at first? Who made the motion to accept the policy?

According to Marsh "the Coaches Association met in Farmville and were in complete agreement that the rule is unjust." "This was a unanimous decision among the 22 coaches," he said.

Marsh gave the following reasons why the Coaches Association was against the policy:

A team member learns through both action and watching. A team member on the bench can assist the team through team spirit. Players are aware of their abilities. Would players work as hard during the practices knowing that they would automatically be allowed a certain length of time? Coaches know the abilities of their players and do not want to allow for interference of team organization. This policy is stifling the potential and skill of some better players. Complaints about not getting to play are selfish complaints and the coaches are not trying to develop selfish spirit but rather team spirit. Competition would be destroyed. Not all schools in the conference have the ruling.

Marsh asked that the policy be rescinded and that the board members respect the coaches decisions concerning the playing of as many members of the team as possible. He concluded by saying "If this policy is not changed, a meeting will be held for further action by the Coaches Association."

Joby Griffin, an Advisory Council member of Farmville Central said, "I think that it is only fair that we hear the other side of the policy. I've yet to hear anyone that is for the policy."

"There is a place for both participation and competition in athletics," said A.C. Turnage of Farmville. "People must learn to live in this competitive world."

Turnage continued, "The most serious things about the policy is that (1) it could deprive college scholarships to players because of lack of playing time and experience and (2) We are approaching a society that is expecting a hand-out and this type of policy adheres to the hand-out."

Thomas H. Patterson, who presided over the meeting because Chairman Mark Owens stated that he was personally involved in the policy and would rather not participate in the discussion or business, read several letters from County Advisory Councils expressing concern against the policy.

"For the last several years, the people of my community have spent both time and money to be proud of our school," said Charles Johnson, principal of Chicod School. "We've worked hard to make sure we could have as good as anybody at our school. I feel that the policy will create a hardship on the smaller schools and cause an embarrassing situation because we won't have a fighting chance," he continued. "Our community effort has been tremendous and I hope that the board will reconsider the policy," he concluded.

Ray Avery of Ayden was against the idea of taking away the decision from the coaches. "We hired the coaches and now we are telling them how to do their job. I think that it's wrong against the school, the kids and the public," he said.

Board Members Respond
"Our concern is for all students in Pitt County Schools," said Robert Stokes of Greenville.

"This is not a policy that has been brought about in haste," said Patterson. "There has been discussion throughout the years about the participation in the sports. We as a board felt we wanted the best for students and felt that participation would be helpful."

"Tonight I have been enlightened," said Kenneth Dews of Winterville. "Our judgments can be wrong. We are here to work with you and we want input from you. When we looked at the total program we didn't intend to disrupt the program, we are just trying to involve more students," he continued.

Dews received applause from the coaches when he said, "We are here tonight to hear you and to reconsider any decision."

Recommendations were made by Alford and a motion for two minute play was made by Bill McLawhorn. The coaches were dissatisfied with both Alford's recommendation and McLawhorn's motion.

J.O. Carson, of Grifton made the motion to revert to the practice prior to the policy change and Dews seconded it. The board passed the motion.

Brown Leaving Pirates' Staff

Watson Brown, quarterback coach at East Carolina University, has resigned, Coach Pat Dye announced today.

Brown has taken a position at Jacksonville State University in Alabama, where he will be in charge of the offense.

"Watson is a young coach who came and did a fine job for us. We hate to lose him from our staff," Dye said in making the announcement. "I have not made any decision on a replacement as yet."

Brown, 25, who served for two years on the East Carolina staff, came to East Carolina in Coach Dye's original staff, and was in charge of coaching the quarterbacks, as well as handling films and pro scouts.

Prior to coming to East Carolina, he had served as a scout and backfield coach under Steve Sloan at Vanderbilt University. As a high school student, Brown made the All-America team, and entered Vanderbilt University as a quarterback, where he made the All-Southeastern Conference Sophomore team. In 1969, he was named AP and UPI Back of the Week for his play against Alabama.

Brown is married to the former Brenda Arnold.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

At the conclusion of last year's basketball season, there were beams of high hopes for the 1975-76 season. The Bucs had a good number of veteran, proven players coming back.

Coach Dave Patton and his staff added three freshmen to these, all with impressive credentials. For most observers, it would look like the Pirate program was on its way. The rest of the Southern Conference took heed too, listing East Carolina as a co-favorite for the league title, along with Richmond.

Patton, however, warned that this year's team was a young one even with the experience it had returning. Most felt that this would quickly be overcome, and the Bucs would be on their way.

There was supposed to be more quickness, more speed, more ball-handling ability, more skill at shooting, more height, and thus more rebounding.

It all sounded too good to be true. Unfortunately, it has proven to be completely untrue. We wonder why.

There is no question but that there is talent there. Great talent, the best even gathered at East Carolina. But something is missing. We do not know whether the Pirates are trying to live on last year's reputation or what, but we do know they are not playing up to their abilities.

There appears to be no leadership on the team. There also appears to be no cohesiveness. Patton can't figure this out. He says there is no dissention on the team. "We're closer than we were last year," he told us.

Nevertheless, the Bucs, for the most part are playing as five individuals. There is little or no movement away from the ball. There is no help for the player who is forced to pick up his dribble. When the ball goes on the floor, some wait for others to go after it.

Of course, this is not true at all times. The Bucs have shown, both in spurts in nearly all of their games, and in the Marshall and Furman games almost throughout, that they can play the type of ball they need to win.

One would think that it would become embarrassing to the players. This apparently happened during football season, but the players picked themselves up and turned things around.

We do not want anyone to think we are criticizing the Bucs for losing. This is not the case. To lose when all effort has been given is one thing.

The Pirates, to this observer, really don't seem to be trying.

As we have said, the ability is there. They can play together as a team. They can hustle and show spirit. They can show heartbreak when they don't do the job they know they can do.

We, along with a lot of fans, are waiting to see what kind of men you are.

Bucs Hosting Indian Matmen

For the past four years, its been recognized as "THE MATCH" in the Southern Conference, and Saturday night's contest between East Carolina and William & Mary should be no exception. The two teams will square off in Minges Coliseum at 8:00.

Last year William & Mary took the Pirates right down to the wire before narrowly escaping with a 17-14 victory. And the same Indians came right back in the Southern Conference Tournament to give the Pirates all they could handle, before finally finishing only 16½ points behind in second place.

Despite the loss of All-American Mark Belknap and Southern Conference champ Rick Dixon, the Indians are still a dangerous team with some outstanding individual talent. "People seem to forget in a hurry that before we started winning the conference championship William & Mary was the conference champs for four straight years," said Pirate head coach John Welborn. "They have an outstanding program up there and their head coach Ed Steers, is one of the top collegiate coaches in the nation. We're going to have our hands full because they have some quality wrestlers and are strong from top to bottom."

William & Mary has a 4-3 overall record this year with an impressive 42-5 triumph over The Citadel. The Indians finished in second place behind East Carolina in the Monarch Open in November, but still managed two champions and another place winner.

Tom Dursee won the 118 weight class championship in the Neptune Tournament and boast a fine 15-2 overall record. Jim Hicks, who defeated ECU's all-time great Danny Monroe in the Southern Conference Tournament last year, will be wrestling at 134 and has a 15-3 record. The Indians other top performer is Max Lorenzo at the 150 weight class. Lorenzo is 14-2-1 for the year and lost a 9-8 decision in the finals of the Neptune Tournament to East Carolina's Tom Marriott.

"They're definitely going to give us another battle again this year," said Welborn. "How we come out in this match will give us a pretty good idea of what we will have to do in the conference tournament. We wrestled very well against The Athletics in Action and with a little luck we might have pulled it out."

Admission to the match for adults is only $1.00 and $.50 for children under twelve. Students are admitted free with their ID card.

Pittsburgh Will Regain Title On Basis Of Its Tough Defense

By BRUCE LOWITT

MIAMI (AP) — "The best of defense is a good defense."

How true. And how true. The Pittsburgh Steelers have a defense which would seem capable of stopping just about anything up to and including a runaway locomotive. It's virtually identical to the defense that stopped the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl IX.

And it's the defense that's going to slam the door on Dallas this Sunday and cause the Cowboys' shotgun to misfire. And backfire.

It will probably be a low-scoring game (Dallas has a good defense, too), as most of these games have been. The average score for the winning team through the first nine Super Bowls is 22 points. The average for the loser just eight.

If anybody's going to break open the game, though, it's going to be Pittsburgh, perhaps after the Cowboys, unable to move consistently with their more conventional offense, go for the gimmickry.

Now let's get down to specifics. Start with a line of Dwight White, Ernie Holmes, Joe Greene and L.C. Greenwood. Nobody's going to run on them very much — not Robert Newhouse, not Doug Dennison, not former teammate Preston Pearson, not even Roger Staubach.

Oh, an occasional draw play or sweep might work. But if the Cowboys get past that four-some, they've got to deal with Jack Lambert, Jack Ham and Andy Russell, the premier line-backing trio in the NFL.

So much for the short game. Now it's time to try for the bigger chunks of yardage via the pass route, perhaps with the shotgun as the trigger.

The maelstrom of Greene & Co. crashing into the Dallas backfield is only the first problem Staubach will have to overcome. Lambert and friends, clogging up the medium distances — or joining the line in a blitz — is the next. And in the distance, if Staubach has much time to survey anything but his own escape routes, he'll see J.T. Thomas, Mel Blount, Mike Wagner and Glen Edwards, one of the league's more proficient band of thieves.

Can the Cowboys' defense hold Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw in check? Maybe. But not for 60 minutes. Can it blanket Lynn Swann and the rest of the Steelers' receivers? Most of the time. Can it handle Franco Harris? Not likely.

What it comes down to is a battle of attrition. When it's all over, Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain will still be standing.

Dallas Will Be New Champion Because Of Its Confusing Plays

By HAL BOCK

MIAMI (AP) — Because they will confuse the Pittsburgh Steelers with a variety of offensive and defensive formations, the Dallas Cowboys will win Sunday's Super Bowl game. It won't be by much, but one point more is, after all, all the Cowboys need.

There is nothing extraordinary about the flex defense or the shotgun offense. They've been around for years, gathering dust in some outdated play books. And that's the very reason they figure to be so effective against the Steelers.

Pittsburgh is a very uncomplicated football team. "Blocking and tackling ... that's what wins football games," says Chuck Noll, their coach. "Basic football, no finesse and fooling around."

That's the Steelers' problem against the flare of the Cowboys. Another team playing on Pittsburgh's terms — head-to-head, basic football — would lose to the Steelers. Minnesota tried it in last year's Super Bowl and Fran Tarkenton was all but swallowed up and digested by the Steelers' front four of L.C. Greenwood, Ernie Holmes, Mean Joe Greene and Dwight White.

Now, if that Steel Curtain is interested in chopping up Roger Staubach, they'll have to chase through the shotgun offense that gives the Dallas quarterback seven yards of breathing room before the ball is snapped.

Minnesota's defense was nice and simple and Franco Harris shredded it for a Super Bowl record 158 yards rushing. But Dallas uses the flex, a little wrinkle that may not be as simple to solve.

Man for man, the Steelers have an edge on the Cowboys. But football is a team game. Man for man, the Vikings were better than the Cowboys and so were the Rams. But Dallas beat both those teams.

Those victories gave the Cowboys momentum, an element that could play an important role Sunday. Dallas isn't even supposed to be here. The Cowboys were ready for a rebuilding year with 11 rookies on the squad. Nothing was expected of them and so, if they lose Sunday, they can shrug it off and say they went much further than anyone could have expected.

But the Steelers are the defending champions. The pressure is on them, just as it was on Minnesota last year when the Vikings were trying to win the title for the third time. And you know what happened to them.

If the Steelers needed only to worry about playing a normal, typical team with routine offenses and defenses, they would win. But Dallas' unusual approaches will confuse the Steelers and by the time Pittsburgh figures it all out, the Cowboys will be in the dressing room, sipping championship champagne.

Pac-8 Leaders Post Victories

By The Associated Press

Washington, sixth-ranked and unbeaten, had to scrap to pull out a 77-70 victory over Oregon, but 17th-ranked Oregon State had an easier time disposing of Washington State 82-73 as the two winners kept their Pacific-8 records perfect Thursday night and set up a college basketball showdown Saturday.

"If I had to say one thing won the game for us," Washington Coach Marv Harshman said after the triumph over the Ducks, "I would have to say experience inside did it."

Washington's 7-foot center, James Edwards, scored 13 of his 20 points in the second half as the Huskies fought off a late Oregon charge.

The Huskies led 52-42 with 11 minutes remaining, but the Ducks cut the margin to 56-54 with seven minutes left. Edwards, however, hit a pair of free throws with two minutes left to give Washington breathing room at 69-63.

Washington, now 3-0 in Pac-8 play and 14-0 over-all, hosts Oregon State, 3-0 and 10-4, Saturday night in a battle for the undisputed conference lead.

Oregon State, with George Tucker scoring 19 points, overcame an 8-0 Washington State lead and never trailed again in its victory over The Cougars, now 2-1 in conference play.

In Thursday's other Pac-8 contest, Jay Young sank a free throw with 51 seconds left to give California an 81-80 victory over Southern Cal. California now has a 1-2 conference mark, while the Trojans have yet to win in three outings.

Fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, led by Eddie Owens' 32 points, kept its record perfect with a 129-114 victory over Portland State in a wild shoot-out Thursday night.

The victory gave Las Vegas a 17-0 record, and the Rebels have now won 33 straight at home over two seasons. Las Vegas took an early lead against Portland State, and continued to build the margin, moving ahead by 29 points late in the game before a Portland spurge closed the gap to 159.

Two other ranked teams were in action Thursday night as Northeast Louisiana upset No. 18 Centenary 59-57 and No. 19 West Texas State whipped Chicago State 99-69.

Elsewhere, Louisville beat Tulsa 78-68; Creighton stopped Oklahoma City 77-47; Weber State beat Oral Roberts 83-80; Richmond outscored Furman 106-96 and Alcorn State, the nation's No. 1 college division team, beat Mississippi Valley State 99-83.

Calvin Natt scored with five seconds left to give Northeast Louisiana its upset over Centenary. The basket climaxed a furious rally that saw NLU come from seven points behind in the final three minutes to win the game.

Jerry Jingles led Northeastern scoring with 21 points. Brad Schreck scored 20 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead West Texas State over Chicago State.

Louisville weathered a late rally by Tulsa on some free throw shooting by Ricky Wilson with only seconds remaining.

Maltbie Grabs Phoenix Lead

By BOB GREEN

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Trevino, who suddenly and dramatically found his putting touch, was one stroke back, and Johnny Miller, who just as suddenly found some problems, was four strokes off the pace after the first round of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"That's the best I've putted, the most confident I've been with the putter in a long, long time, maybe two years," the delighted Trevino enthused Thursday after his five-under-par 66 had left him one shot back of leader Roger Maltbie.

"I was feeling my oats pretty good," the heavily-favored Miller said after his birdie-birdie-par-birdie start on the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course. But he made bogey six on the relatively easy seventh hole, went stone cold and finished with a 69 that left him four strokes off the pace.

"I really don't feel bad about it," said Miller, who scored his fifth consecutive Arizona victory last week in the Tucson Open. "Usually, the first round after you win is a very hard one, very hard to score well. Usually you have a 73 or something like that. I'm not in bad position at all. You can't say I'm out of it."

Maltbie, winner of two titles and Rookie of the Year honors in 1975, shot his six-under-par effort early in the bright, sunny day, said it could have been better and predicted it would not lead when the day's play was over.

"It was an easy round," he said. "Someone could shoot in the very low 60s easily. It's

Arizona State's Frank Kush Is Honored As Top Football Coach

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "I love the Phoenix area and I'm positive I'll be at Arizona State for some time to come," Frank Kush said Thursday.

After 21 years at the same school, the only place he's ever coached, Kush's career reached its zenith Thursday night when he was honored as major college football's Coach of the Year by the American Football Coaches Association.

With a career record of 151-39-1, Kush, who will turn 47 next Tuesday, has come a long way from where he grew up around Mine No. 35 in Windber, Pa.

"We didn't have electricity until 1944," he recalled. "We were indigents, but we didn't know how to spell it."

Although he accepted the University of Pittsburgh coaching job a few years ago, only to back out after three days, Kush has no intention of leaving Arizona State.

"People say I've come as far as I can," he said, "but I don't really need that much recognition as long as the school and the team get it."

"I've had quite a few college and pro offers, but you know anytime you're dealing with youngsters, there's going to be something new every year. You get a kid for two, three years and all of a sudden there's a new Woody Green, a new Danny White. I get involved in their problems, and when you're involved with them you're kind of growing with them."

Thelife Kush now leads in sunny Arizona is a bit different, to say the least, from his childhood as one of 15 offspring of a Pennsylvania coal miner who died when Frank was 14, leaving him the oldest of a dozen children at home.

Perhaps his own rugged upbringing is the reason for Kush's football reputation as a tough taskmaster, a stern disciplinarian.

"My whole life has been geared around discipline and the basics. That's the way I coach. We were kind of forced into discipline and through that I acquired self-discipline."

"The difference in youngsters today is that they're unaware of their responsibilities to themselves, what it takes to get a degree."

"I think I've changed in many respects. I'm more aware from the standpoint of the limitations of the kids. I've learned over a period of years when a boy can't go any further."

"All our efforts are aimed at making each individual athlete realize his full potential. It takes a lot of sacrifice and discipline, but it pays dividends, not only now, but later in life."

Kush, who was line coach for three years before succeeding Dan Devine as head coach in 1958, has never experienced a losing season, either at Arizona State, in high school or as a 175-pound All-American guard at Michigan State. Arizona State's 12-0 record in 1975 included a victory over Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl and was capped by a No. 2 national ranking, the school's highest ever.

"Being Coach of the Year is the epitome," Kush said. "Bear Bryant told me the Fiesta Bowl was one of the finest games he's ever seen and he voted for me. And Bo Schembechler said: 'You must be some kind of stud as a coach.'"

Baker Not Favorite

By JERRY GARRETT

AP Motorsports Writer
RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Buddy Baker tends to discount any notion that he might be the one to beat in Sunday's Western 500 stock car race here.

"This isn't the kind of track I'm really comfortable on," said Baker of the 2.62-mile Riverside International Raceway road course, the only non-oval track on the NASCAR Grand National schedule. "It's hard for me to stay on the pavement all the way around."

No matter what he says, his fellow competitors will take him and his so far unbeatable new Ford very seriously.

Baker would normally skip this $117,000 race, except that he won the final two races of last season after he debuted the new Bud Moore-prepared racing machine, and the performance attracted a sponsor who wanted to run the full 30-race Grand National schedule this year.

"It'll be interesting," said the blond, 6-foot-4 Baker, who usually races only on the major oval tracks.

"I was doing better today than I have been," he added after practice Thursday. Qualifying for the pole position and top 25 spots in the field was scheduled today.

David Pearson upped the track record Thursday nearly three miles an hour to 113.570 m.p.h., and Baker was more than eight miles an hour slower at 105.174 m.p.h. But his speed was still 10th fastest over-all.

"We expect to improve our speed some by the start of the race," Baker said coyly.

Although Baker was driving a 1976 Ford, it wasn't the exact car he won with at Atlanta and Ontario, Calif., in finishing out last season. This is an identical, short track model that is lighter and is supposed to be more maneuverable on a road course.

Drivers turning in speeds faster than Baker in pre-qualifying sessions were in order Pearson, Allison, Richard Petty, Benny Parsons, Ray Elder, Sonny Easley, Darrell Waltrip, Dave Marcis and John Kieper.

Second baseman Dave Cash of the Philadelphia Phillies led National League in 1975 with 312 hits, three more than Pete Rose of Cincinnati and Steve Garvey of Los Angeles.

Historian Sees Bright Railroad Future

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Oliver Jensen, historian, author and editor who has had a lifelong love affair with the railroad, is nostalgic about its past, dissatisfied with its present and hopeful for its future.

"The energy crisis will forcibly call our attention to the fact that we must have a more balanced transportation system and make better use of the railroads' potential," says Jensen, who calls the railroads "the most efficient method of ground transportation ever conceived."

"For a minimum use of space and energy you get a maximum of transportation," explains the editor of American Heritage magazine and author of a new book, "The American Heritage History of Railroads in America," which traces the evolution from the first steam engine in 1830 to Amtrak.

"A railway train uses less energy because it moves a great many cars with one locomotive, whereas every bus or truck has to have its own driver and its own fuel," Jensen said in an interview. "One line of railway track can carry as much in any given period of time as nine lanes of modern highway."

Jensen, whose love of trains is apparent in everything from his enthusiastic recital of their virtues to the replica of "the General" locomotive of Civil War fame that he wears as a tie clasp, recalled the major role they played in the country's history.

"In the East there were towns loosely linked by water or horse-drawn conveyance, but a vast two-thirds of the country was crossed only now and then by hardy pioneers. Man had moved on land at the speed of his own legs or of a horse since the dawn of history. Then along came the railroads."

They not only were instrumental in settling the greater part of the United States, he adds, but they became the biggest business of 19th century America, helping create many other industries.

"Before the age of the auto the major demand for steel was the railroads," he says. "They made the prairie states the breadbasket of the world, carrying grain to Minnesota to be made into flour and then carrying the flour out again. Until the first little railroad thrust tentative fingers out, nobody shipped anything very far because it was too expensive."

The zenith came in 1916, Jensen says, when there were 250,000 miles of track in this country — more than in the rest of the world put together. Then the public forsook the trains for the automobile and later for the airplane, while in the Depression rail traffic fell off still more.

The railroads' greatest feat came during World War II's gas shortage, Jensen maintains. With a third less equipment and somewhat less mileage than at their peak, by "superhuman effort" they carried 90 per cent of both freight and traffic between cities.

"But this sudden taxing of equipment left a lot of people with bad memories of what it was like to travel by train. They couldn't wait for the war to be over so they could climb back in the family car," he says.

These people were the "snowbirds" of that day, says Jensen, comparing them to today's travelers who show up at train stations when the weather closes up airports and "pound on the ticket window and say 'where's that train I've been hearing about?' You can't expect railroads to stay geared up to handle the kind of thing that happens when the weather's bad."

"Amtrak has its faults but it's run by a vigorous new management and they're really trying. They're doing a very novel thing — going after business. The last time the railroads really tried was in 1950 when they made one last attempt by buying all that shiny equipment and going to diesel."

Jensen is against the government completely running the railroads but believes it should take over the right of way and maintain it as it maintains the highways and let the private companies operate both freight and passenger service.

"I would like to see a mixture, to see the private sector remain in passenger and freight business if they can get a fair shake. They should not be in a position of being taxed in effect to support subsidized competitors — competitors who are less desirable from an environmental standpoint."

Jensen, who travels by train whenever possible, is one of the founders, former president and now board chairman of the Valley Railroad Co. of Essex, Conn., a 21-mile-long steam line.

("The American Heritage History of Railroads in America" is published by McGraw-Hill.)

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make arrangements now for amusements, recreation for the future. Spend little for fun today. Tune up house for comfort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find better ways to handle any duties today without fail. Make sure wardrobe is in fine condition, neat, clean, streamlined.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find out what partners think about mutual projects, then you can combine efforts more intelligently. Compliments make friend of hostile one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do work promised, even though it is not now to your liking. Show devotion to mate, though you are under some pressure.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will only need the right education, guidance to have a successful life, since the talents here are potentially most pronounced. Give as much encouragement as you can also, or your progeny will lose the fine incentive. Slant the education along lines of the highest professions that will bring in the highest returns monetarily. Religion a must early.

Julius Rosenblum of New Orleans, president of the World Bridge Federation, was recently named the recipient of the Charles Goren "World Bridge Man-of-the-Year" award. He is the first American to be so honored.

In announcing the selection on behalf of the International Bridge Press Association, Charlton Wallace of Cincinnati, chairman of the IBPA selection committee for this award, praised Rosenblum for his diplomatic handling of crises that threatened the world body and for his efforts in promoting good will among the national organizations of the WBF.

Rosenblum has been a top-flight bridge administrator for so long that people tend to forget that for many years he was a leading tournament player. He held the West hand on this deal in a national tournament, and found the only lead to beat the contract.

We approve of North's decision to enter the bidding with a takeout double. His hand was worth a full opening bid, and if he did not take some action now, he might be awkwardly placed to do so later. East's jump to three hearts was preemptive, not forcing, but it did not deter South. Since North's takeout double showed spade shortage, South reasoned that the hands would fit well, so he bid the club game despite the fact that he had only 10 HCP's.

Before making his opening lead, Rosenblum reviewed the auction carefully. East's jump in hearts strongly suggested that South would be short in that suit, for North's takeout double guaranteed the auction carefully. East's jump in hearts strongly suggested that South would be short in that suit, for North's takeout double guaranteed the auction carefully. East's jump in hearts strongly suggested that South would be short in that suit, for North's takeout double guaranteed the auction carefully.

All signs pointed to a possible crossruff, so to cut down declarer's ruffing power, Rosenblum led a trump—and this lead was the death knell to the contract. Declarer needed three spade ruffs to make the hand, but the trump lead enabled West to lead a second trump when he won a spade, thus limiting declarer to two ruffs and only ten tricks.

Expecting more than four bridge guests? "Chicago Bridge" allows for extra players. For Charles Goren's "Chicago Bridge" rule book and score pad kit, send $1.50 in cash or check, payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648.

Push Search For Bodies

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Law enforcement authorities in North Charleston are to continue searching a landfill today, searching for bodies linked to a mass slaying in Florence County last year.

North Charleston Police Chief Linwood E. Simmons said, "We dug more holes Thursday than in Florence County, but found nothing. Once we are sure the digging will produce nothing, we will come in with bulldozers."

Officers were discouraged Thursday by their unsuccessful digging, and reportedly checked out leads that bodies were placed under cars in the landfill.

North Charleston police said Walter Leroy Neely, accused of murder in connection with the earlier discovery of bodies in Florence County, led police to the specific area.

Simmons said officers are searching the area for the possible burial site of the body of teenager Kim Ghelkins, who was last seen with Donald Henry Gaskins, also accused of murder in Florence.

Throng In 'Birthday March'

By The Associated Press
Americans by the tens of thousands marched and sang Thursday to mark the 47th anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King's birth, and issued demands including full employment, a renewed investigation into his assassination and making his birthday a holiday.

Observances were held from Atlanta to Hawaii.

The widow of the slain civil rights leader, Coretta Scott King, led a crowd estimated at more than 15,000 on a one-mile march in Atlanta, King's home town, to dramatize a call for full employment.

The marchers moved from Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King was copastor with his father, to the downtown business district, singing the anthem of the civil rights movement of the 1960s, "We Shall Overcome." But they soon changed the words to "We Want Full Employment."

It was the eighth annual celebration of King's birth since he was shot to death at a Memphis, Tenn., motel in April 1968. James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the shooting and is serving life in prison.

In Columbia, S.C., a column of blacks more than a mile in length marched two miles to the Capitol to support a demand that King's birthday be declared a state holiday.

In New York, a group calling for a new investigation into King's death demonstrated in front of an FBI office.

A double line of city police and private guards marched in front of Mrs. King in Atlanta. She joined arms with U.S. Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., a former aide of King's, and Murray Finley, president of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

"This is the first time we have marched for full employment on behalf of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change," Mrs. King told a rally in front of the Federal Reserve Building in downtown Atlanta.

"This is the first time we have an issue around which labor could rally—that issue is jobs."

Police in Columbia, S.C., said the marchers there numbered about 10,000.

"It sure is a lot different than back in 1968 and 1969," said an agent of the South Carolina State Law Enforcement Division. "There isn't the animosity there was then."

In New York City, pickets from the Research Action Group on Assassinations issued a statement saying, "We feel that the murderer or murderers are still at large because the case against his accused assassin, James Earl Ray, is clearly inadequate — in fact a frame-up. The federal agency most responsible for this frame-up was the FBI."

New York Mayor Abraham D. Beame attended the ceremonies in Atlanta and said, "Almost eight years ago, America trembled with sorrow and anger over the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Today, the nation trembles again — this time over the economy ..."

Civil rights activist Dick Gregory led more than 1,000 in a march in Louisville, Ky., and Florida Gov. Reuben Askew declared Martin Luther King Week.

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, who succeeded King as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, vowed in Houston, Tex., to continue his movement to have King's birthday declared a national holiday.

He also said he remains suspicious that federal officials were involved in a conspiracy to assassinate King.

In Montgomery, Ala. where King began his ministry and took charge of the civil rights movement 20 years ago, a crowd of 3,000 gathered outside his Dexter Avenue Baptist Church to hear songs and speeches about King.

The state House in Nashville, Tenn., approved a resolution directing that the day be proclaimed "Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Day."

In Knoxville, Tenn., scores of persons marched on City Hall to protest the city council's failure to declare the day a holiday.

About 300 city workers petitioned in Dayton, Ohio, for a holiday Monday in honor of King's birth, but Mayor James H. McGee said the commission can't meet again in time to grant the request.

A capacity crowd jammed the auditorium at Albany State College in Georgia.

"The shot in Memphis killed a dreamer, but not the dream," said attorney Mary Young, the first black female city commissioner in Albany's history.

In Memphis Tenn., about 250 persons marched 10 blocks in the downtown area and city schools and several businesses closed for what the school board called "Great Americans Day."

At a rally after the march, U.S. Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., told the crowd he would continue to urge that naming of Jan. 15 a national holiday.

House Speaker Can See No Money For Angola

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It would take a miracle to persuade Congress to go along with President Ford's plan for aid to Angola, House Speaker Carl Albert says.

The Senate has written into a $112-billion defense appropriation bill a ban on using funds in Angola's political and military struggle, where the United States has been backing two factions and the Soviet Union has been supporting a third group.

The White House has said Ford will urge that the prohibition be lifted. He is scheduled to make his State of the Union address Monday.

But Albert, who heads the Democratic majority in the House, said in an interview, "I think it would be a miracle if the White House could put through the Congress any kind of assistance for the Angola proposition."

On the contrary, Albert added, "I think almost any kind of a bill keeping us out of there, completely out, financially as well as physically, would probably pass the House."

Referring to the Ford administration, he added, "They haven't made themselves clear, they haven't told anybody what they are going to do that I know of."

Albert said average U.S. citizens "don't want to do enough to do the job. The Russians are not going to let us do enough to do the job. . . To do the job we would have to have a confrontation with Russia which we are now willing to have over that, I think."

Albert said the events which placed the United States on the same side as South Africa in the Angola matter "give Russia what it wants in the way of having ... a base of strong feeling coming out of most of the continent of Africa. Whether it is merited or not, it is a fact."

The speaker said he considers himself "one who generally supports bipartisan foreign policy."

But he added, "This is one that is so far removed and so remote and the basis of which is so hard to see that I just don't think the House will go along with it ... not unless they do a lot better explaining than they have up to now. I just cannot see this possibly going through."

Albert said there would be no political advantage to be gained by blaming Congress for rejecting Ford's Angola plans.

Visionaries Are At Super Bowl

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — This Sunday, when the nation pauses for its annual Super Bowl fixture on television, a small band of young video visionaries will be taping the final part of their own show about the Super Bowl.

They're members of Top Value Television — TVT — an independent production company. Their show, which will air in mid-March on public TV, won't cover much of the actual Pittsburgh-Dallas joust.

Nope. The TVT gang is approaching Super Bowl 10 as a kind of sociological phenomena, a big-money bash that mixes big business with big sport to produce a massively publicized event which this year is earning the National Football League $3.5 million for television rights alone.

For TVT, the event is the thing. The game is secondary. Spokesmen for the TVT workers the show is being done on a budget of $55,000 — or about $175,000 less than the maximum CBS is charging per minute for sponsors who don't normally advertise during CBS' regular season coverage of pro football.

CBS says it has more than 150 troops at the Orange Bowl in Miami to help cover Sunday's game, not to mention 18 cameras, four videotape machines, four replay machines and 60 microphones.

TVT, by contrast has but 42 persons working on its project, broken down into seven crews that are covering various aspects of Super Bowl activity, in the week preceding the game and during the game.

Allen Rucker, who is supervising the work, says six basic areas are being inspected for what will be edited to a 55-minute show.

Two concern how the cities of Dallas and Pittsburgh, their football players and how the players' wives are reacting to the game.

Then there's what Rucker calls "the media crew," covering the media covering the game. He says CBS "is their main story. We're looking at CBS' buildup, their preparation, how television affects football and how these people approach sports television."

There's also an NFL crew, covering various pregame NFL activities, such as its Bicentennial essay contest and assorted meetings.

After that, Rucker says, there's a business crew: "This is a businessman's holiday, the Super Bowl. But a lot of business also gets done here."

"It's my suspicion that it's as much a business event as it is a sporting event. So we have a crew working on everything from the Ford Motor Co.'s sponsorship of the punt, pass and kick contest for kids to the representatives of networks down here in Miami meeting sponsors and selling time."

Last but not least are the crews covering the fans, he says: "For instance, we'll be flying a crew in from Dallas with a real superfan who got 45 tickets and is flying all his friends in on a private plane."

Wants N.C. Fill Needs

RALEIGH (AP)—State Labor Commissioner T. Avery Nye Jr. says he is "unalterably opposed" to federal control of North Carolina's Occupational Health and Safety Act (OSHA).

"I am convinced that a state-administered program will be more responsive to the needs of North Carolina citizens," Nye said Thursday in answering recent criticism by a consumer group.

Changes were called for in the administration of the act by the North Carolina Public Interest Research Group, composed mostly of college students.

The group had urged federal, rather than state, administration of the program. The major disagreement between the group and Nye was the voluntary compliance concept, a program of gaining industry's cooperation in eliminating safety hazards rather than gaining compliance through fines. The consumer group had called for strict safety enforcement and heavier fines.

"The goal of OSHA is the establishment of safe and healthful working conditions. . . not enforcement and punishment," Nye said. He added the program's effectiveness should be measured in illness and injuries prevented, not by the number of fines levied.
