Sanford Move Ford Reports Economy Is Opening Door To Improving, But It's Slow Other Entries

By The Associated Press
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Terry Sanford's withdrawal as a presidential candidate Friday over the weekend injected a whole new series of equations into North Carolina's March 23 presidential primary, according to state Democrats.

The many national party presidential hopefuls spent the weekend giving the state a new look and in some cases decided to jump right into the race for the North Carolina's 61 votes at the Democratic National Convention.

For the national politicians, the primary here represents a chance to pick up some media attention and extra delegates at what many have speculated will be a "brokered" convention in New York.

Former Gov. Sanford's withdrawal is also causing state politicians a few anxious days of their own, as the national candidates press hard for commitments with a Tuesday deadline for getting on the ballot.

Some Democrats reported they've been getting calls daily from three or four camps searching for support.

But many of the state's Democratic leaders are already campaigning hard for state offices in the August local primary, or deeply involved in those campaigns.

And that may cause some reluctance to alienate potential supporters by endorsing the wrong man, they said, now that they have been cut loose from the protective umbrella of Sanford's favorite son status here.

Six national candidates including three already listed on the ballot now say they're in the North Carolina race, and spokesmen for others say they'll have announcements about possible entries today or tomorrow.

A press conference to announce the entry of former Oklahoma U.S. Sen. Fred Harris is set for this morning in Raleigh, and the last three days have seen U.S. Sen. Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash., and U.S. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz. say they're getting into the race.

Already on the ballot are Alabama Gov. George Wallace, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, and U.S. Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex. And all three of them are also taking a new look at their strategy for the Tar Heel primary since Sanford's withdrawal.

According to an informal survey of state Democratic leaders by The Associated Press over the weekend, Carter appeared to be benefitting the most from the withdrawal.

He got support from former Gov. Robert W. Scott, and other political leaders like state Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten said they think Carter will have the best shot.

But Jackson got strong support as well with an endorsement from long-time colleague retired U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. and was included in predictions about those who stood to gain from the Sanford decision.

U.S. Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., said his support would go to Udall, while state party chairman James R. Sugg of New Bern said he thought Jackson and Bentsen have the best shots.

U.S. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., was also reported to have some local support, and R. Sargent Shriver was also looking into the possibility of running here because of the strong support he got from black voters in Mississippi during weekend caucuses there.

Wallace aide Mickey Griffin said the Alabama Governor would also pick up some Sanford supporters, but a number of state Democrats discounted that possibility.

No prominent Sanford supporters would say they were backing Wallace, though most declined to back any candidate.

Wallace aides had originally counted on a repeat of the 1972 primary here, where he crushed a hastily-organized Sanford effort by more than 100,000 votes and left Shirley Chisholm a poor third.

But political pollster Walter DeVries of Wrightsville Beach said he believes that Wallace's popularity peaked that year, and that in 1976 he can only count on a hard core of about 30-35 per cent of the democratic vote.

And in Rocky Mount attorney Charles Winberry, who managed Robert Morgan's successful 1972 election campaign, said he doesn't see any plus for Wallace in the Sanford withdrawal.

DeVries predicted Carter would benefit the most from the new development, but added that Carter or any other Democrat who expects to win votes here is going to have to plan on being a regular visitor to the state during the next two months.

And Atty. Gen. Edmisten added in a weekend interview, "The main thing is that if they expect any support here at all, they're going to have to get down here in person and press the flesh."

SPRING TOUR
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford probably will undertake a five-nation tour of the Middle East this spring in a search for possible new solutions to Arab-Israeli disputes, a senior American official says.

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although unemployment remains high, almost everything else in the economy is starting to look good and Americans may be entitled to another major tax cut in 1979, President Ford said today.

"The underlying fact about our economy is that it is steadily growing healthier. My policies for 1976 are intended to keep us on that upward path," Ford said in his annual economic report to Congress. He also said, "Regrettably, a full recovery of the economy will take time."

Despite the prospect of job gains this year, Ford's economic advisers said "unemployment will almost surely remain distressingly high...."

"Even under the best of circumstances the return to full employment cannot realistically be accomplished this year or next."

Ford did not indicate how much taxes could be decreased in 1979, but he said the decrease would be on top of the $28 billion in permanent tax decreases he already has proposed for this year and next.

He also tied the prospect of future tax reductions to support for his spending recommendations, including the $394.2-billion budget he is proposing for fiscal 1977.

"If we continue in the years ahead to pursue the kind of budgetary restraint which I am recommending another major tax cut will be feasible by 1979," he said.

Ford's economic report, which Congress receives annually from the President and his Council of Economic Advisers, stressed that the worst is over for the economy. It said Americans can take satisfaction that the nation's economic system has come through intact.

There have been "appreciable gains" in reducing inflation, which declined from 12 per cent in 1974 to 7 per cent in 1975, with an additional slowdown expected this year, Ford said.

"While I do not regard the events of 1975 as fully satisfactory by any measure, we should find it reassuring that our economic system withstood severe strains and displayed inherent strengths during the year," he said.

Unemployment remains a serious problem, Ford said, but "it is slowly moving in the right direction." Any attempt to bring the jobless rate down quickly could ignite new inflation and make matters worse in the long run, he said.

Ford's economic report gave the following outlook for this year:

—Unemployment will decline to about 7.3 per cent by the end of the year, down from 8.3 per cent in December 1975. That means nearly 6.6 million jobseekers still will be unable to find work.

—Inflation will decline to about 6 per cent during the year, compared with 7 per cent last year.

—The economy will grow between 6 and 6.5 per cent, as measured by the nation's Gross National Product. The GNP declined 2 per cent in 1975 and 1.8 per cent in 1974.

The report said Americans will have about 5 per cent more money to spend this year, even after inflation is taken into account. Consumption purchases should increase about 6 per cent, because Americans are expected to save slightly less this year than in 1975.

Also in the 1976 economic outlook is an increase in business investment of 4 to 5 per cent, a rise in housing starts to a rate of about 1.75 million units by the end of the year, new gains for auto sales and a jump of 25 per cent in business operating profits.

Ford said that the unemployed will be cared for. He said programs in his fiscal 1977 budget will provide 3.6 million Americans with opportunities for training and employment.

He also said the best way to reduce unemployment is by creating jobs in private industry, and he said he will support steps to increase investment by industry in new job-creating plants and equipment.

Citizens' Watch Halves Break-Ins In Lincoln County

By MICHAEL J. HALL
Associated Press Writer
LINCOLN, N.C. (AP)

— A crime prevention program stressing citizen participation and community organization has halved the rate of break-ins in rural Lincoln County, North Carolina.

Lincoln County was selected several years ago by the National Sheriff's Association as part of a pilot project to get citizens actively involved in the fight against crime.

And now, along many of the back roads in this predominantly farming area, signs glisten from almost every mailbox warning passers-by that the household is a member of one of the county's community watch groups.

While Lincoln County Sheriff Harven A. Crouse readily admits there was some initial resistance to the idea from citizens, during the past year the idea caught fire and resulted in a dramatic drop in breaking and entering.

By late 1974, according to Sheriff's Department statistics, break-ins at homes and businesses in the 30,000 population county were averaging over 50 a month. But now, according to the same statistics, the number of break-ins dropped to an average of 24 a month during the last nine months of 1975.

Sheriff Crouse and participants in the program said in recent interviews that the main reason they have succeeded is that they have managed to get people genuinely involved in the program.

"One of the things we're really proud of is that we've done this without costing the taxpayers of the county any money," Crouse said.

Organizing in churches, volunteer fire departments, and even among the groups of men who lounge in country stores and garages has been one of the main tools of the effort.

In organized areas of the county neighbors keep a watch out for anything suspicious, manning watches on a regular basis and reporting anything unusual to the sheriff's office by telephone or citizens band radio.

In those areas, almost every mailbox along the road will carry a bright orange reflectorized sign warning that the occupant is a member of the neighborhood watch program. The only cost to the homeowner is a couple of hours a week in time and less than a dollar for a mailbox sign.

So far ten areas of the county have been organized into the program, and Crouse estimated that it now protects about 65 per cent of the county's residents. Four more communities in the county are about to be organized, he said.

One of the first areas organized was the Daniels Community, a cross-roads about five miles north of Lincoln.

There Bill Hampton, owner of Hampton's Garage, said only one break-in has been reported during the 18 months his community has been organized into the program.

At Helms Auto Service on U.S. 321 North—which has been organized as a citizen watch community owner Bud Helms said the program "has cut crime by 60 per cent at least."

When interviewed Helms was planning a hot-dog picnic for the next weekend, one of the ways members of the community organizations raise money to buy their signs and stickers they put in windows to ward off burglars.

Some of the basic materials for the program, such as pamphlets and the window stickers come from the Sheriff's association in Washington, which gets the money from a federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant.

As in other organized sections of the county, entrances to the U.S. 321 area not only have the mailbox signs, but also bright big warnings along the road which say "This Community is Patrolled by the North 321 Community Watch."

In Raleigh, an aide to Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt said the democratic gubernatorial hopeful—though a law and order advisory committee he set up as president of the state senate—was citing Lincoln County as a model for other counties in the state.

And in cities, aide Paul Essex said, the same effect could be produced through neighborhood and block associations.

Buses Rolling

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit today became the largest U.S. city to implement a court-ordered school integration plan as 203 buses peacefully transported thousands of black and white elementary pupils to classes.

Although only a few pupils were picked up at some stops, school board officials noted that only kindergarten through fifth grade children had classes today and middle and high school pupils were to report for class Tuesday. Nevertheless, drivers today followed routes that called for them to make stops at middle and high school boarding points.

No demonstrations were planned by the city's antibusing groups, but the organizations, which claim membership of 2,300 families, called for a "yellow flu" boycott of classes.

School officials said attendance figures would not be available until later today.

Detroit was experiencing freezing rain which made for treacherous driving on icy streets.

While the buses made their initial runs, scores of handpicked policemen stood at two staging areas. Hundreds of volunteers and paid monitors guarded bus stops, school hallways and cafeterias. Monitors also were assigned to each bus.

Police reported no demonstrations and no problems.

Launch Effort Of Separating Lebanon Rivals

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)

— Syrian, Lebanese and Palestinian army officers launched a 36-hour program today to separate the Moslem and Christian combatants in Lebanon's civil war.

Truce teams toured a six-mile front line bisecting Beirut, ordering militias on both sides to pull back. Using bullhorns, they announced that the leaders of the Christian and Moslem private armies had agreed that military equipment could be moved in to remove all street barricades.

A police spokesman reported Moslem militiamen kidnaped a Syrian and a Lebanese officer in the downtown business district but freed them after 15 minutes.

In the Moslem half of the capital, steel-helmeted troops of the Palestine Liberation Army stood guard at hotels, shops, money changers' stalls and street markets that reopened for the first time in two months.

PLA patrols also policed fashionable Hamra street and the seaside Raouche residential area.

With the new cease-fire in its fourth day, police reported five persons killed and seven wounded in sniping and other scattered incidents in Beirut during the night. But a spokesman said this was "minor, with no serious effect on the cease-fire or the steady progress toward resuming normal life in the country."

All Lebanon's international highways were declared open for traffic, and food and fuel shortages in Beirut eased. Truckloads of flour and vegetables rolled in from Damascus. Fuel trucks arrived from the refinery in Zahrani, 30 miles south of Beirut.

Murder Charged

BELVOIR — One person has been charged with murder and investigation is continuing by the Pitt Sheriff's Department into the shooting death of a Rt. 4, Greenville man.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that deputies arrested Eddie Lee Pollard, 21, of Rt. 3, Tarboro around 4 a.m. Sunday and charged him with murder in the death of 22-year-old Willie James Sharpe.

Sheriff Tyson said that Sharpe was shot in the back with a small caliber weapon around 10:30 p.m. Saturday on a rural paved road west of here.

According to the sheriff, Sharpe died at 11:28 p.m. Saturday at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The side windows were shot out of two cars during the incident, he reported, which apparently stemmed from an earlier argument.

A hearing has been scheduled for Pollard on Jan. 26 in District Court in Greenville.

Flood Hazard Report Highlights Planning Meet

Presentation of the long-awaited Flood Hazard Information Report by the Army Corps of Engineers highlights the business agenda for Wednesday night's meeting of the Joint City-County and Greenville Planning and Zoning Commissions.

Other items on the joint board's agenda include the request of Colonial Park Inc. to rezone 8.76 acres north of Greenville on the west side of US 13-NC 11 from RA-20 to R-6-MH in order to develop a modular home subdivision, and the request of Wilbur Harris to rezone 26 acres on NC 30 some 1.5 miles from the city limits from RA-20 to R-6-MH in order to develop the tract in mobile homes.

Greenville board agenda items include: West Meadowbrook Redevelopment Plan; revised final plat of Tucker Estates Subdivision to show two street name changes; revised preliminary plat of Section I, Professional Center in medical complex adjacent to the new hospital; and Request of Kenneth M.

Buck to rezone .97 of an acre located on the northwest corner of Hooker Road and Pendleton Street from R-6 to Neighborhood Commercial for use as an office location. The flood hazard report, according to the Corps, covers the area in and around Greenville that is subject to flooding from the Tar River and its tributaries, Hardee Creek, Green Mill Run and Parkers Creek. Also included in the report are the tributaries to Hardee Creek, namely Bells Branch and Meetinghouse Branch, and the tributaries to Green Mill Run, its north fork, Fomes Run and Reedy Branch. The report points out that, "Although large floods have occurred in the past, studies indicate that even larger floods are possible." Information in the report also deals with the history of flooding in Greenville and identifies areas that are subject to possible future floods. Maps, profiles and cross sections are utilized to report the flood data. "The report," the Corps (Continued on page 6)

Late Pre-Trial Maneuvers For Patty

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With the scheduled start of Patricia Hearst's bank robbery trial one day away, defense attorneys sought rulings today on five pretrial motions, including one claiming the newspaper heiress was brainwashed and another seeking dismissal of the charges against her.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter was scheduled to consider the defense motions, as well as two motions filed by the prosecution, at a hearing today.

Defense attorneys are also seeking to bar as evidence some samples of Miss Hearst's handwriting, prevent testimony from her jailers and fellow inmates and suppress a "log" of Miss Hearst's activities the defense says was kept by a deputy sheriff at San Mateo County Jail.

Another defense motion seeks approval for introduction of "stress evaluation" test results in the form of expert testimony.

The prosecution, meanwhile, is opposing the admission of lie detector test results as evidence and is asking the court to reaffirm its order that Dr. Harry Kozol, a Boston psychiatrist Miss Hearst claims bullied her, be allowed to interview the heiress in private.

A member of the defense team, attorney Thomas May, said before today's hearing that the motion for dismissal of the indictment is based on the con-group.

The start of jury selection was delayed one day when Judge Carter, 64, underwent minor surgery for a vascular ailment in his neck.

In a weekend interview, Hearst attorneys hinted that a key element of the defense will be to show that William and Emily Harris helped brainwash Miss Hearst and wrote the script for her declaration that she willingly took part in the bank robbery.

The Harris also were arrested Sept. 18, 1975. They are awaiting trial in Los Angeles on separate charges, and the Hearst defense is expected to link them to the bank holdup in opening arguments later this week.

Owner Upset: 'Energy Saving' House Electric Bills Are High

MEMPHIS (AP)—When Tony Barry bought his "energy-saving" home, the city utility presented him a certificate and a handsome doorknocker nameplate.

Four months later, the city utility presented him a bill for December — $98.49.

That's when Tony Barry nearly went through his extra-insulated ceiling.

"I couldn't believe it," he said. "I was told my bill should never run more than $30 or $35."

Barry was told the $42,000, three-bedroom home was built according to Memphis Light, Gas & Water Division and Tennessee Valley Authority guidelines.

"It has a heat-pump system, extra insulation in the walls and ceiling, dual pane windows with air gaps in between and insulated metal doors," he said.

He also keeps the thermostat at the recommended 68 degrees. "It's cold in there at 68 degrees," he said.

The first month he and his wife lived in the house he received a partial bill, which was all right. The second and third months, their utility bills were $50.00 each month, including water, which was less than all right, but they could live with it.

Then came the whopper.

Several phone calls later, MLG&W sent an engineer out to check the house.

"They could find nothing wrong," Barry said. "They told me to wait until I got the next bill and, hopefully, it would be normal."

What galls Barry still more is that for four days in December, he and his wife were on a Christmas vacation.

"We were gone out of town four full days," he said. "No lights, no heating, no stove, no dishwasher. The only electrical appliances left on were the refrigerator and some clocks."

Barry said he's been talking to other homeowners in the neighborhood.

"One neighbor said his (bill) was around $118.00 for a little over a month," Barry said. "But on the other hand, my best friend who lives out here had a $50.00 bill and his house is 50 or 75 square feet smaller than mine."

Utility officials were almost as upset as Barry over the bill.

"Mr. Barry's bill certainly appears higher than his neighbors, and we believe there must be some malfunction in the heating system," said James Stewart, MLG&W customer education representative who is keeping up with the "energy-saving" homes.

Meanwhile, the expensive utility bill has definitely rained on Barry's parade.

"I thought it (the house) would be something new and I would be among the first in the city to have one," he said. "Maybe it would have been better to let them get the kinks out first...."

May Be Ending Teacher Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A tentative agreement was reached early today in a nine-week-old strike by city teachers.

A ratification vote was set for 9 a.m. Pittsburgh Federation of Teachers President Albert Fondy was expected to recommend approval by the union's 4,400 members.

The agreement was reached after a marathon bargaining session that began Sunday morning and continued through the night. No details of the pact were released.

A spokesman for the school board said the city's 62,000 pupils would probably be called back to classes later today, following the union's ratification vote. Pupils have been out of class since the strike began Dec. 1.

A break-through apparently came after agreement was reached on how to distribute a reported $10.1-million wage package over two years. A spokesman for the board said talks progressed smoothly after that point was settled.

The tentative agreement came just hours before Fondy faced a possible jail term for contempt of court. A hearing to show cause why 17 union leaders should not be jailed had been postponed by Judge Donald Ziegler Friday after union lawyer Louis Kushner said an agreement was near.

Kushner told the judge the negotiations were at a "critical and delicate" point. Ziegler agreed to postpone the hearing on possible jail terms, but he fined the teachers another $30,000 for a total of $105,000 in contempt fines for ignoring his back-to-work order.

Pupils have been out of class for 31 school days, longest strike in Allegheny County's history. However, a few of the city's 104 schools were opened on a limited basis when almost 600 teachers and aides crossed the picket lines.

Six Escape Chowan Jail

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — Three brothers from Norfolk, Va., were among six prisoners who escaped from the Chowan County Jail Sunday night.

Three of the escapees, including one of the brothers, Arthur Kay Evans, 22, were quickly recaptured without incident. Sheriff Troy Toppin identified the other two, also taken in Edenton, as Paul Johnson, 22, of Minneola, Fla., and John P. Lawrence of Edenton. Evans was awaiting trial on a charge of breaking and entering and larceny. Johnson was to be tried on armed robbery. Lawrence was awaiting transfer to begin serving a sentence of 4½ years on conviction of breaking and entering and larceny.

Still at large were Melvin Shapiro Evans, 20; Wilbert Lee Evans, 19, and Sylvester Amstead of Edenton. These three were awaiting trial on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

The sheriff said that Melvin Evans and Amstead, who were in one cell, overpowered jailer Ray Boyce, 52, as Boyce brought a mattress into the cell for another prisoner who was coming in. Evans and Amstead did not seriously hurt Boyce.

Dorothy Kirsten Says Farewell

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dorothy Kirsten, who first sang at the Metropolitan Opera Dec. 1, 1945, in Puccini's "La Boheme," made a real prima donna's farewell to the Met on New Year's Eve, singing Floria Tosca, the prima donna in Puccini's "Tosca."

Miss Kirsten leaves the Met still getting rave reviews for her singing — and not out of kindness, but because she sings well — looking radiant and vibrant, with a wealth of memories and much for which she's rightfully proud.

She'll still sing. A "Giri of the Golden West" in Honolulu and "Tosca" in Cincinnati plus concerts are coming up. But she'll be able to spend more time painting, playing golf and "with my other love," her husband of 20 years, Dr. John Douglas French, director of the Brain Research Institute at UCLA.

Retirement isn't a word she uses. "I'll never retire." She explains that the Metropolitan Opera is so far from Los Angeles that to do a big season assignment just keeps her away from home too long. She was glad to be able to explain and say goodbye to the Met broadcast audience the Saturday afternoon before New Year's but was almost overwhelmed with emotion when she heard herself saying farewell. She walked straight from reading the speech she had written into a rehearsal for the "Tosca" and said, half joking, half in emotional turmoil, "What opera are we singing?"

She says, "Thirty years over the expanse of a life is a long time. It's been a wonderful 30 years I've had with this great company."

If her husband had asked her to, she says she would have left the Met sooner, but he never did. "As many times as I know he would have liked to have asked me to taper off on my career and not be away so much, he never did it. I just wish all other prima donnas the kind of man I have."

"I wanted to make 30 years. Because it is a record. I'm the first prima donna ever to celebrate 30 years at the Met. Furthermore, how many prima donnas last this long? Even furthermore, how many American singers have been known to be on top this long? I'm very proud of it. Really very proud."

The reason her voice has stayed good, Miss Kirsten says, is the technique taught her by the late Ludwig Fabri in New York. "He sang a high C, false-to of course, when he was 93 and he said, 'Dorothy, if you will take care of your voice and do the things I have told you, you will sing as long as you want to.'"

"Also a singer should keep in shape and the other important thing is learning to say no. I have said no to roles at the Met that other singers would have grabbed, but I knew they would harm my voice for the wonderful Puccini roles that I chose to make my career. I could say no because I'm a very disciplined person. Discipline has been the story of my career."

As for keeping in shape, she exercises every day and plays a lot of golf; she'll take her golf clubs along to Honolulu. Not only is golf good exercise, Miss Kirsten says, but in the midst of a few days of intense rehearsing, it takes your mind away from the opera for a time and "you come back feeling like gangbusters."

Two years ago she sang three Toscas at the Greek Theater in Los Angeles in which she jumped 12 feet at the end of the last act, onto the kind of mat used for athletes' landings in the Olympics. At the Met, the Toscas jump onto a large elevator, brought to one of two distances, depending on the temerity of the soprano. Miss Kirsten jumped the greater distance at her farewell.

She also wore her own costumes. "I didn't even ask the Met if I could. I just brought them. It is the old Tosca, with the feathered hat and train, the empire-style gown, which it should be."

Miss Kirsten's early mentor was American soprano Grace Moore, who died in 1947. They met when Miss Kirsten was in Manager Edward Johnson who had heard her sing at the New York City Opera. She is proud of having been signed by the Met without ever giving an audition.

She sang on other radio shows, too, two years with Frank Sinatra on "Light Up Time" and with Gordon MacRae on "The Railroad Hour," and she was in the movie, "The Great Caruso."

She knows that she'll feel a great letdown after all the farewell emotion and excitement wears off, Miss Kirsten says. But she has things to look forward to. And one of them is the dream she had when Dinty Doyle interrupted to introduce her to Grace Moore and the world of opera. She's hoping that somebody will offer her a part in a play.

Lettuce Is Ally In Fight To Stay Slim

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer
In the never-ending war so many of us wage against obesity, lettuce is a tried and true ally.

Long a lettuce buff myself, I was pleased to learn that a 1½-pound head of crisp iceberg runs only 65 to 70 calories and contains vitamins A, C and E to boot.

Lettuce, in case you didn't know, is good in soups and can be served braised or as the casing of a roll stuffed with chopped chicken, veal or lamb.

But the best way to eat lettuce is raw because of its delicate texture. Hence to most people lettuce means salad. To make good salads, it is as well to know the different kinds of lettuce and how they may be combined with other greens, herbs and foods.

There are five kinds of lettuce and each contains more than one variety. The Butter-head class, for instance, includes Boston and Bibb. Boston is good in tossed green salads and for garnishing. Bibb is a favorite served with French dressing and Roquefort cheese.

In the Cos class is Romaine, much used for garnishing salad plates of seafood or fruit. The Leaf class includes Simpson, which is suitable for nearly all salads.

Stem lettuce has no head but the stem grows long and may be eaten raw or cooked.

Finally there is the Crisphead class whose best known member is iceberg. It comes in very firm, closely packed heads which make good cups for seafood and other moist fillings. For chunky salads in which slices, quarters or cubes of lettuce are used, iceberg is preferable because of its firm structure. Its characteristic crispness allows it to be the foundation for combinations of many ingredients, like crab or chicken.

Here is a recipe for iceberg chunks and artichoke hearts we found particularly tasty.
1 medium head iceberg lettuce

- 1 can (15 oz.) artichoke hearts
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon dry sherry wine

- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon onion powder
- ½ teaspoon crumbled rosemary
- 4 cherry tomatoes
- Blue cheese

Core, rinse and drain lettuce, chill in plastic bag. Rinse and drain artichokes, cut into halves and chill. Blend mayonnaise, sherry, lemon juice and seasonings and chill. When ready to serve, toss lettuce cut into chunks and artichokes with dressing in salad bowl. Halve tomatoes and top cut sides with bits of cheese, then run quickly under broiler to melt cheese slightly. Place on salad. Serve with chilled dry white wine. Serves 4.

Birthday Party Held On Friday

Andrew Coghill celebrated his 80th birthday Friday. Coghill's family and friends joined in helping him celebrate at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Marvin Evans.

Coghill has five children, 13 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

If you can get fresh fennel in your vegetable market, it will make a lovely addition to a raw vegetable platter to be served with a dip as an appetizer. Cut off the fennel fronds and use for garnishing. Discard any very coarse or blemished part from the outside of the bulb. Cut into wedges and wash and dry thoroughly.

Dear Abby

Educate Husband Beyond Rules Of Yesterday

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I work 10 hours a day. I teach school in a poverty area and teach English to Vietnamese people after school.

When I get home to my large, four-bedroom house, I am tired, but I must resume my "housewife" role. Since my husband and I have no children, it is assumed by our friends that I have nothing to do.

My husband sometimes reluctantly "helps" me with the housework. Since I work as hard as he does, why doesn't he come home and automatically start the housework so I can "help" him?

We've talked about this, but he doesn't seem to understand. Do you? Thanks for listening.

BUSHED

DEAR BUSHED: If your husband doesn't understand, it's because he doesn't want to. He's still playing with yesterday's rules. Educate him.

DEAR ABBY: I wanted to start the New Year right, so I went to my doctor for a complete physical checkup. He told me I had to lose 30 pounds and I had to quit smoking.

Well, I wish you could have seen this doctor. His stomach was hanging over his belt. If he'd been a woman you would have sworn he was in his eighth month!

All the while he talked to me he was smoking up a storm. I noticed the ashtray he was using had about eight cigarette butts in it—all less than a quarter of an inch long.

Abby, this doctor is supposed to be the best. Can you tell me how a patient is supposed to have confidence in a doctor who can't do what he orders his patients to do?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Just because he lacks the willpower to lose weight and quit smoking does not mean he's a poor physician. It only means he's afflicted with the same weaknesses that some of his patients are.

DEAR ABBY: I just read where they are trying to pass a law in North Carolina to make all horse owners put DIAPERS on their horses in order to keep the streets clean.

I know it sounds crazy, but if you think about it, it makes a lot of sense. I hope they pass that law. And after that, maybe it will catch on and they'll do the same thing for dogs!

FED UP IN N.Y.

DEAR FED: And now let's hear it for pigeons!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

New Facility Is Taking Shape

Along with construction of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital and development of the ECU medical school, the Eastern Area Health Education Center is also moving along.

At present four modular units, which will contain 3,300 square feet are being installed as temporary facilities for the family practice residency program.

The temporary quarters will cost around $72,000 and will house $25,000 to $30,000 in equipment.

Ahead is a major capital improvements project which will eventually house the EAHEC program. A public hearing has been set for Jan. 27 in Raleigh concerning construction of a permanent family practice center.

That facility will be constructed north of the new hospital building. It will contain around 30,000 square feet of floor space and will cost around $1.9 million.

The Eastern AHEC family practice program will tie in very closely with Pitt Memorial Hospital, and the related ECU School of Medicine.

The state of medical care in North Carolina—and particularly in the east—has been much debated in the past decade. The Legislature has acted in several directions to alleviate the problem with the establishment of new programs and the appropriation of millions of dollars. We are beginning to see the actual construction underway, and we think results will soon be evident in better medical care for our citizens.

Seven Per Cent Rate Is Still Too High

The seven percent inflation rate for 1975 was reason for satisfaction in Washington.

That was because the inflation rate in 1974 was 12.2 percent and in 1973 it was 8.8 percent.

A seven percent annual rate, however is far too high for the nation. The rate of inflation has averaged two to three percent since World War II and it should be government policy to bring inflation down to a more reasonable figure.

THIS AFTERNOON

Friend Of Children Chosen

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—One of the most outspoken critics of North Carolina's training school system has been named director of that program, causing some nervousness among staff but promising that he prefers to work for change by "changing people", not by firing them.

Ray Shurling, a member of the Fiscal Research Division staff of the General Assembly, worked closely with a host of legislative study groups during recent years, several of them dealing with problems of children.

He was principal author of a proposal to demolish existing fractured programs for kids in favor of one super-agency for children. That idea attracted a lot of attention, but very little support.

The purpose, says the 46-year-old former Marine officer, was a "calculated effort to move dramatically... to get people's attention. From that viewpoint, it succeeded."

No Politics
A native of Asheville, educated at the University of Maryland and UCLA, Shurling's appointment to the post on the recommendation of Human Resources Secretary David T. Flaherty was a uniquely non-political move. He is a Democrat.

He had the endorsement of both Republican Gov. James E. Holsouser, Jr., and Democratic Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. Widely regarded as one of state government's more outspoken—but fair—experts, Shurling's appointment has drawn praise from legislators who have worked closely with him, and from state agency professionals who have come under his scrutiny as a legislative investigator.

The Youth Services Division of Human Resources, where the training school program is presently placed in the bureaucracy, has long been a political football. There have been six directors in five years, and the move from the Department of Corrections to Human Resources was hotly debated in the 1975 General Assembly.

Shurling comes to the post as a politically sensitive person, but without regard for standard party politics. He also enters the job as a man of varied experience with the strength to do what he believes right regardless of consequence. As one long-time associate observed: "He is one of the few men around with a secure enough ego to work hard at eliminating his own job."

And another, who is well aware of Shurling's philosophy (extremely conservative fiscally; extremely liberal as to people), says the legislative researcher "who helped dig the grave for North Carolina's corrupt youth training schools has been asked to conduct the funeral."

Key Role

Shurling has, in fact, played a key role—although a background one—in exposing many of the ills rampant in the system, and in pushing forth legislative remedies.

It was largely through such investigative work that public and General Assembly awareness grew of the fact that around half of the children in the system were not there for criminal conduct, but as "status offenders" who were school truants or discipline problems at home; that physical abuse and corporal punishment were routine in the training schools; that total funds provided as much as $10,000 per year per child ("and that's conservative," Shurling insists) but still permitted widespread failure; that children were often committed to the prison system at the age of seven; that school programs in the institutions were not geared to the peculiar needs of the kids committed.

Many of those ills have been corrected legislatively; others await action.

And Shurling says to expect action within 90 days as he sets about re-organizing and redirecting the juvenile system. He has promised no mass firings, but will depend upon changing people through job assignment and training. But past change has been resisted in some bureaucratic quarters, as the system sought to defend itself.

In a crunch, says Shurling, "My commitment is first to the children... I intend to get the job done, and look after the welfare of the system secondly."

Christmas Lingerin' On

WASHINGTON—You would think by now that Christmas would be over. But for millions of children in America, it isn't.

I discovered this when I visited the Carmichaels the other evening. As I walked into the house, Mrs. Carmichael was yelling at her 12-year-old son. "No, you're not going to any movie until you write your grandmother, thanking her for the lovely scarf she sent you for Christmas."

"Aw, Ma, I'll write her tomorrow."

"You've been saying that for three weeks. You haven't written one thank-you note, and you're going to do it tonight. And while you're at it, you can thank Uncle Arthur and Aunt Sue for the fruitcake."

"Who are Uncle Arthur and Aunt Sue?"

"They're not really your uncle and aunt, Uncle Arthur works in Daddy's office. He's Daddy's boss."

"Good grief."

"And don't forget to write a note to Uncle Lester who sent you the Washington Redskins wool hat that didn't fit."

"Should I tell him it didn't fit?"

"Don't you dare. Tell him it was perfect and just what you wanted."

"That's stupid. I didn't want it, and if it doesn't fit, why should I say I liked it?"

"Because when someone sends you a gift, you're supposed to thank him."

"Okay. If I write them, can I go to a movie?"

Mrs. Carmichael took out a list and said, "there are several more people you have to thank. Grandma Collins sent you a sweater, Aunt Harriet a pair of gloves, Uncle Jack and Aunt Arlene a Walt Disney cereal plate. Wait a minute—I think Aunt Arlene sent you the gloves and Uncle Jack the Walt Disney plate. I can't make out my own handwriting."

"Why can't I say 'Thanks for the gift'?" Tommy wanted to know.

"Because it's not personal enough. Relatives want to make sure when they buy something for Christmas that the gift is really appreciated."

"What am I supposed to say?" Tommy asked, taking out a yellow lined pad.

"Tell them it was the best gift you got all Christmas, and it was just what you wanted."

"You want me to say that about a Walt Disney cereal plate?"

"I don't care what they sent you," Mrs. Carmichael said. "It's what they want to hear that counts."

"How's this?" Tommy said as he was writing. "Dear Uncle Jack and Aunt Arlene. Thanks for the great Walt Disney plate. I really liked it and would have eaten from it except my sister Estelle stepped on it and broke it the same day."

"You don't have to mention Estelle broke it," said Mrs. Carmichael. "Just say you love it and had wanted one for three years."

"I thought you told me I wasn't supposed to lie."

"That's not lying. Well, it may be lying, but it's all right to fib where Christmas gifts are concerned. If everyone told the truth about the gifts he received, there would be no Christmas. While you're at it, don't forget to thank Aunt Ellen for the electric toothbrush and the Baxters for the woolen shirt which we had to exchange. But don't say we exchanged it, as you don't want to hurt their feelings."

"I'll never get to the movies," Tommy protested. "Start writing," Mrs. Carmichael said, "and be careful of your spelling."

"Boy," said Tommy, "adults sure take the fun out of Christmas. All they make you do is tell one lie after another."

Effort Left In Ashes

By ROBERT CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — In the end, not much was left for Terry Sanford. He did not even get the chance to tell people in his own time and his own way why he was dropping out of the Presidential race. That was one symptom of the state of his campaign.

When a news conference of "major national significance" was scheduled at Duke, reporters figured there was only one thing Sanford could be doing of that importance. Becoming the first to drop out was the only time he had moved to the fore of the Democratic pack.

Still, it would be too soon to write Terry Sanford's political obituary because he failed to cut it as a presidential candidate. He is too widely known and well respected by too many Democrats to preclude the possibility that one of them will project him onto the scene again through appointment to a major job.

Right now, Terry Sanford will say that he'd rather do just about anything than take a Cabinet job or some other appointment. No doubt he is sincere; the ashes are fresh in his mouth. But he might change his mind some day in the future, given the right opportunity.

But for the moment, Terry Sanford will stifle away. His departure will cause some scurrying and bustling as other candidates bid for his supporters and his supporters weigh their options.

Suddenly, the bright young man of North Carolina politics is in the advanced stages of middle age, not far from turning 60. Many people have forgotten, or never knew, that he once was thought of as the South's answer to John F. Kennedy. Tom Lambeth remembers.

"I think he was the product of three things. One was his mother; she was a high school teacher, the classic teacher with thousands of children whom she taught much more than what was in the textbooks. He got his commitment to education from her and his feeling of obligation to public service."

Carter's Clouded Victory

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's sweeping triumph in the Iowa Democratic precinct caucuses, more conclusive and therefore more influential than expected, is clouded by what made it possible: the abortion question.

Political newcomers flooding caucuses across Iowa Monday night to back the former governor of Georgia for President include heavy numbers of single-minded "pro-life" (anti-abortion) partisans convinced Carter was on their side. But that the moment of Carter's triumph, some of his pro-life backers were complaining they had received no commitment in return. Learning that Carter has publicly opposed an anti-abortion constitutional amendment while privately giving the opposite impression in Iowa, one Catholic priest told us the morning after the caucuses: "I think I've been sandbagged."

That suggests Carter's Iowa tour de force, capturing anti-abortion conservatives while not losing pro-abortion liberals, cannot be repeated elsewhere — for example, in the first primary state of New Hampshire, with its substantial Catholic anti-abortion vote. Long before the Feb. 24 balloting there, Carter will have to do what he avoided in Iowa: take an unequivocal position on abortion.

This points up an obstacle to Jimmy Carter's impossible dream of 1976 never encountered by George McGovern's Cinderella candidacy of 1972.

Actually, Carter is potentially stronger in early delegate contests than was McGovern. Carter may run first in Mississippi (Jan. 24) and Oklahoma (Feb. 7) precinct caucuses. Private polls show him near the top in New Hampshire. A strong showing against Gov. George Wallace in Florida March 9 could produce irresistible momentum.

But whereas McGovern's unexpected early victories energized a ready-made anti-Vietnam constituency, Carter has no such natural base. Rather, his triumphs could divide his support by forcing him to make clear where he stands, not only on abortion but in the general political spectrum.

That poses this question: is Carter's remarkable Iowa coalition — conservative farmers and small town merchants, fundamentalist Protestants, the United Auto Workers, the Polk County (Des Moines) courthouse crowd, some old McGovernites — held together not only by the candidate's superb campaign style but also because its elements really do not know what he stands for? That may be particularly true of his invaluable pro-life allies.

The anti-abortion movement made the difference between first and second place for Carter in Iowa. The only Catholic running for President, Sargent Shriver, was expected to win a rock-bottom 10 per cent; opposing any anti-abortion amendment, he fell short of 4 per cent — a humiliating performance carrying grave national repercussions — with the balance apparently going to Carter.

The pro-life network passed the word that Carter would support anti-abortion legislation. As reported earlier, we heard Carter tell anti-abortion leaders that "under circumstances, I would support" a constitutional amendment against abortion. Removing all doubt, the word to back Carter was sounded from Catholic church pulpits across the state last Sunday morning, the day before the caucuses.

A typical result was one Des Moines precinct where around 30 voters usually turn up for a caucus. On Monday night, an astounding 100 — one-fourth of the normal Democratic primary vote — attended to elect Carter delegates to the county caucus. "I think their hearts were with (Ronald) Reagan," one Democratic leader told us, "but they were for Carter last night."

To The Editor:

Your editorial on Angola in the Friday, January 16, 1976 Daily Reflector was interesting in that your summary suggested a disturbing concern over the likelihood another "chip" on the global poker table will be picked up by Russia if left unchallenged. When the most recent opportunity to confront Russia was available, our commitment was successfully eliminated by the constant hue and cry from every medium in this country. In fact, in Vietnam our ten-year attempted challenge resulted not only in 45,948 young Americans lost forever and 109.5 billion dollars "blown" but also a definite erosion of our national will to ever establish another clear rebuff to Russian expansionism. And regarding your inference that Russia needs to be contained somewhere, why should Russia be our national concern in Angola today where the diverse factions existing there provide even less distinctive loyalties than did the Vietnam Conflict? Personally, it's beyond rationale why it would seem necessary to challenge Russia anywhere on this globe while on the one hand we drool of detente continuously and on the other we sell grain to them below our own cost.

I would suggest the question is not whether a line should be drawn against Russian territorial success, but whether our national will to contend has been destroyed. Exiled Soviet author Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn in a Paris interview on December 27, 1975, referring to the West, said, "you have forgotten the meaning of liberty... Nobody is ready to die for it... Each time you have really showed your resolution—at Berlin, Korea, Cuba—each time the Soviet leaders have retreated. The battle is not between you and them, but between you and yourselves." Lawton H. Stock Investors' Decision Due

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial stock average has leaped more than 100 points so far this year, but relatively little feeling seems to exist that we are riding the bulls to greener pastures.

This might seem paradoxical at first glance, but a different picture gradually emerges as we place this latest rally in context. It's sort of like having to adjust your eyes after coming into the movie house.

In context, this straight-up surge is seen to be part of a pattern that has existed over the past 10 years, and which probably is most graphically described as resembling the Grand Teton mountain range. Up down.

Beginning 10 years ago, when a high of 995.15 was reached, the average is a series of peaks and valleys but almost no plateaus. And yet, if it had remained a plateau it would be at the very same height.

In 10 years there have been seven peaks of 900 points or more, and six steep valleys that brought the average under 800, the deepest being the 577.60 points in 1974.

With the market that volatile, you can understand why some potential investors remain observers, waiting for even more confirmation that this thing is real and likely to be around for a while.

The fact is that after a net gain of well over 200 points in 1975 and another 100 point so far this year, the market is still below the level of 10 years ago. And time after time it has turned down after reaching that 1966 high.

Plenty of people wonder if this isn't just another of those crazy bounces that always seem to bump off that 995 ceiling. Somehow, all these surges seem to provide their own momentum until they reach that height.

Then what happens? Something about the heights makes investors stop to think. In that rarefied atmosphere they ask questions, most of which relate to one consideration: Should we really be this high?

At that point the market's own momentum seems to insist on support, and that must come from the economic fundamentals, and so the question eventually is resolved when investors decide if the economy is with them. That decision could very well be before investors during the next week or so, and it won't be an easy one to face. At the very time they seek clarity the issues seem to be cloudy.

It is true that the economy is moving ahead, as measured by the statistics of industrial production and sales, but a lot less strongly than many observers, including government officials would like.

And while the statistics are improving, they tend to hide a relatively poor performance by the price and job sectors of the economy. The vast under-utilization of human skills is at the moment a terrible economic drain, a waste.

The stock market will give its own assessment very soon.

PURPOSE IN LIFE
A man was talking about the different between the attitude of young people seventy-five years ago and young people today. He said that his father and mother were married one day and on the next bought a lot upon which to build a house and another lot in the cemetery in which they would be buried.

generation that life was a serious matter to be planned for from beginning to end. To this end, therefore, they felt that young people should raise families, get settled in some sort of life work, and take a clear, long-range view of their lives right up to the moment in which they would be called to their reward.

Committee Would Abolish Big Intelligence Unit

Part-Time Inventor Is Thinking All The Time

By RANDY SMITH
The Anderson Independent
THOMPSON, Ga. (AP)—Darrell Johnson bent down, untied his shoe and threw the laces across the room to an onlooker.

"Tell me how I keep the laces even when I tie them up," he said.

Johnson barely waited for a response before saying, "That's right, I put a knot in the center, and it keeps the strings even when you lace them up."

Then the 70-year-old car dealer and part-time inventor replaced his shoes, stopping briefly to show how the knot kept his shoe strings even, and reached for one of his patented inventions.

It was a pair of square-shaped pouches, attached at the top by two looped pieces of leather. Johnson flipped it over his shoulder, put a book in one pouch and hung two hanger coats in the loops.

"Necessity is the mother of invention. I wore out a suit once by lugging some clothes onto a plane," he said.

"So I invented this and patented it in 1974. It leaves your hands free to carry other things."

He stretched his long arms out to prove they were free from any burden, removed the leather pouches from his shoulder, and then reached for another of his more than 15 copyrighted or patented innovations.

That is the way Johnson will show you what he has been up to in his spare time for the past 50 years. And he'll do it by lying on the floor, jumping around his office and patiently explaining his inventions.

His philosophy of life is "The world is open to a "thinker," or, as he often says, "The most neglected part of a human being is the training of the mind."

The Wilkes County, Ga., native is marking his 50th year in the car business this year, and he has done well with his Thompson, Ga., dealership. Time magazine honored him as the state's dealer of the year in 1972, and he was also president of the Georgia Dealer's Association.

"The problem with people nowadays is their conversation is either a golf score or how the football game went," he said.

"Nobody ever seems to have time to talk about city matters. Your mind is behind the scene. It can either create or it can devastate," Johnson said.

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP)—The staff of the House intelligence committee is recommending that a huge Pentagon intelligence agency be abolished and that stiff sanctions be imposed against government employees, including members of Congress, for leaking secret information.

Another recommendation calls for the House to create a permanent intelligence oversight committee and empower it to publicize secrets if the panel voted to do so by majority vote.

The recommendations are to be tacked onto a 338-page final report, approved by the panel 9 to 4 on Friday. It estimates that total U.S. intelligence costs are $10 billion a year, three or four times the amount listed in the annual defense appropriations bill.

The recommendations do not call for prohibitions against covert U.S. operations but would require that they be approved by the entire National Security Council.

The staff recommends that the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency be abolished and that its functions, including the military attaché program, be divided between the CIA and the secretary of defense's office.

ments:

—A 1973 CIA memorandum says Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., advised the agency on how to try to prevent a CIA official from testifying at a Senate hearing that was unraveling covert CIA operations in Chile. Jackson denied Sunday that he had done anything to protect the agency but said he merely gave procedural advice.

—U.S. intelligence failed to predict the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia largely because it lost track of an entire Soviet division in Poland. It also failed to anticipate India's explosion of a nuclear device.

—Kurdish rebels in Iraq suffered more than 100,000 casualties in their rebellion. The CIA supplied weapons to them only to withdraw U.S. support abruptly at the request of the Shah of Iran.

$3 billion annually.

The money in the defense bill also does not include intelligence spending for the FBI, the State Department and several smaller civilian units.

The report's details on secret operations were included in the final report after a majority on the panel voted last week to publish the material despite objections of the White House and some members who argued that the committee had agreed with President Ford to give him final say on what secrets to release.

The House intelligence committee source also said the report includes a letter from the director of the National Security Council saying that telephone conversations of American citizens had been monitored in the past but that the practice has since been stopped.

Criminal penalties are recommended by the staff against anyone who releases the names of intelligence agents or other secret information.

It also provides for censure and possible removal from committees of congressmen who disclose such information.

Last year, Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., was criticized by some House members for releasing secret information about the CIA's involvement in Chile. He was formally charged in a petition by another congressman who asked the House Ethics Committee to penalize him for violating House rules. However, the committee rejected the charge on a technicality.

While recommending such sanctions for improper release of information, the staff recommends that a permanent House intelligence committee be authorized to decide on its own to publicly disclose secret information.

Under another proposed recommendation, if the committee rejected any congressman's request to disclose publicly what he considers improper activity, the congressman would have the right to ask for a secret session of the full 435-member House to consider his request.

reduced the first place margin for Sen. Birch Bayh in Sioux City, his strongest area, thereby contributing to a so-so statewide showing for second place well behind Carter that did Bayh no good nationally.

But at the eleventh hour in Sioux City, Carter's contradictions on abortion began catching up with him — with ominous implications for the future.

Democratic national committee man, Don O'Brien, managing the Shriver campaign, desperately tried to convince anti-abortion forces they were being had — and finally succeeded with Monsignor Frank Brady of Sioux City. Given documentary evidence of Carter's public opposition to constitutional amendments, Father Brady telephoned Carter campaign headquarters in Atlanta.

In cold fury, the priest next wrote a statement asserting he had been "misinformed" about Carter's position and had learned from his Atlanta phone call that Carter opposed "any" constitutional amendment.

Although Father Brady's statement, read over local television just before the caucuses, had no effect, it could disenchanted some Carter delegates at the county caucus level.

But Carter cannot now be deprived of momentum gained from Iowa. His problem lies in the future, when he will be forced to choose between anti-abortion and pro-abortion voters. It will not be the only moment of truth confronting him as he emerges from the protective cocoon of anonymity.

Hunt Urges Vote 'Yes'

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina voters have been urged by Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt to vote "yes" March 23 on higher education bonds and a constitutional amendment to authorize industrial revenue bonds.

Hunt made the appeal in a talk to Mecklenburg County Jaycees.

He told the Jaycees the higher education bond issue would make $43 million available for what he described as "badly needed classrooms, laboratories, library additions and other facilities at 13 of the 16 University of North Carolina campuses.

"The industrial revenue bonds," Hunt said, "will enable North Carolina to compete with other states in seeking out... high technology, high-wage industries. "We are the only one of the 50 states that does not provide this industrial development incentive."

M.P. Bell Named Board Chairman

The Board of Directors of the N. C. Board of Water Well Contractor Examiners has elected Michael P. Bell Chairman and Worth F. Pickard Secretary-Treasurer for 1976. Willard A. Southerland, Jr. was sworn in as the newest member of the Board.

Bell is a Sanitary Engineer with the N. C. Department of Human Resources in Greenville. Pickard is a well driller of Sanford, and Southerland is a Pump Manufacturer's Representative of Raleigh.

he seldom talked about. I think he and others like him came back from the war determined not to have it happen to their children.

"The third was the University of North Carolina in the days when Frank Porter Graham was president. That's where he got the idea that North Carolina could be the best.

"If he heard me say this, he'd sit there and howl with laughter because he likes to think of himself as tougher than that sounds. I guess the most important thing I could say is that in the five years I worked for him, I was never ashamed of him for one moment," Lambeth said recently. He was Sanford's administrative assistant.

Hugh Cannon, now a Raleigh attorney, has similar memories of those halcyon days, when he was first Sanford's speechwriter and later his Secretary of Administration.

"I remember after his first legislative session, Sanford called about 20 people to the mansion and said to them, 'Okay, we've gotten nearly all of our program enacted. What do we do next?'

"People threw out ideas and he listened to all of them. I remember one result was that Buckminster Fuller came down to the state and flew around and told us we should build a monorail between Charlotte and Raleigh.

"That didn't happen, but it was very exciting to be around in those days. Terry Sanford was rocking the boat every day. And no one ever just said, without looking into something, that it couldn't be done."

Lambeth, Cannon and many others must have felt a certain sadness last week as Sanford faced defeat. To them, it seemed that he deserved better.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged ahead again today, preserving the momentum of its runaway early-1976 rally.

Trading was heavy. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 100 points from the start of the year through Friday's close, had climbed another 6.85 to 960.80 by 11:30 a.m. today.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's dramatic rise over the first 3 1/2 weeks of the new year was attracting further buying, especially with the Dow having held above the 950 level Friday after meeting some resistance at that point earlier last week.

They also noted that optimism about the economic outlook was fed by the weekend prediction from White House economic adviser Alan Greenspan that the recovery in business activity would continue for "a very long period of time."

Reserve Oil & Gas, among the Big Board volume leaders, was unchanged at 8 in trading marked by a 106,900-share block at 7 3/4.

Blue Bell climbed 2 1/2 to 43 1/2 and Levi Strauss jumped 3 1/4 to 44 1/2. Both apparel companies issued bright earnings reports.

First Pennsylvania slipped 1/2 to 15. The Philadelphia bank holding bank holding company posted a $13 million fourth quarter loss.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .37 to 52.96.

Jailed Wrong Man In Murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Los Angeles men named Ramon Flores were born the same day, closely resemble each other, have nearly identical Social Security numbers and each is married with five children.

But one of them — the wrong one — spent Christmas and New Year's in jail.

The wrong Flores, 36, a factory worker, was at home napping last Dec. 19 when police knocked on the front door of his modest apartment. He was told a warrant charging him with murder had been issued for his arrest in connection with the death of a 17-year-old boy in Fresno.

He was read his rights, handcuffed and led away just as his pregnant wife and children, aged 2 to 12, were returning from a church function.

Flores told investigators he had never been to Fresno and that on the day of the killing he was at work.

Police said if he was telling the truth, he would soon be released.

But Flores was taken to Fresno on Dec. 22. He was arraigned Christmas Eve and a public defender was appointed.

Mrs. Rosevare announced that the Pitt County Council on Aging will meet Tuesday night. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Bertie Gowans, Mrs. Elizabeth Hadden, Mrs. Louise Briley, Mrs. Lena Laughinghouse, and Mrs. Sam Whitehead.

A preliminary hearing was not scheduled until Jan. 7, and his own attorney did not even interview Flores in depth until New Year's Eve.

On Jan. 6, after witnesses said they did not recognize photos of the man in custody, police compared his fingerprints with those they had on file from the previous arrest record of a man named Ramon Flores. The next day, authorities admitted their error.

After 19 days in jail, one Ramon Flores was free. The other remains at large.

"I think sometimes they are always trying too hard to find the man," Flores said in halting English. Although born here, he lived in Tijuana, Mexico, for several years.

Deputy Public Defender Edward Sarkisian of Fresno said he didn't interview Flores immediately because of the holidays and a tight schedule.

"When I interviewed the guy, I was convinced he was innocent right away," Sarkisian said. "He was such a quiet, mild-mannered fellow. A gentleman with a capital 'G.'"

Positive identification of Flores as "the wrong guy" could have been made by his his work records and a commendation letter from his employer, Sarkisian said. But relatives insisted on bringing the documents personally and didn't get to Fresno until Jan. 5.

Driesell Looks To Return UNC Match After Loss

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Lefty Driesell sounded eager for a return match with North Carolina's Tar Heels. "They beat us and I'm looking forward to the game in Cole Field House," said Maryland Coach Driesell, referring to the Terrapins' home court. The second-ranked Terps were beaten 95-93 by fifth-ranked North Carolina in overtime Sunday. North Carolina, down by 10 points at the half, took a five-point lead in the overtime before the Terps pulled to within two. Then, with the seconds ticking away, Maryland's John Lucas stole the ball but couldn't get off a shot before the final buzzer. It was the third Atlantic Coast Conference loss for the Terps, described by North Carolina Coach Dean Smith as "one of the most talented teams ever in the ACC. They're the best team I've seen this year, except maybe us in the second half today." "I thought we had it and then it got away," said the dejected Driesell. "We were outplayed, outcoached and out-everythinged. I've been coaching long enough to know that one game doesn't mean a thing. "I thought we played well ... at times. We played very poorly at the end." A capacity crowd of 8,800 and a national television audience saw the Tar Heels catch fire in the second half. Tommy LaGarde hit two field goals to tie the score at 83-83 with 1:59 remaining in regulation. After a basket by Lucas, Walter Davies tied it again for North Carolina. Phil Ford then put the Tar Heels in front 87-85 on two free throws, but Steve Sheppard's basket in the final seconds sent the game into overtime. The first-place Tar Heels are 5-1 in the ACC and 13-2 overall. Maryland is 1-3 in the league, 13-3 overall.

Nevada-Las Vegas beat Nevada-Reno as Glen Gondrezick scored 21 points and picked off 16 rebounds. The victory was the 20th this season for the unbeaten Rebels. Adrian Dantley scored 30 points and Duck Williams sparked in a reserve role to lead Notre Dame's upset of UCLA. The Fighting Irish reeled off 11 straight points in the first half and withstood a second-half rally by the Bruins. "Notre Dame got out in front early and it seemed like we had to play catch-up the whole game," said UCLA Coach Gene Bartow. "We had to get over a hump but we never did. We were beaten by an awfully good team." Unbeaten Rutgers won its 15th straight game as Mike Dabney scored 22 points. The Scarlet Knights shot 55 per cent from the field. Clarence Ramsey's 20 points led No. 8 Washington past Hawaii. Princeton, the nation's top defensive team, played keep-away basketball and Barnes Hauptfuhrer scored 20 points as the Tigers handed St. John's only its second defeat of the year. The Redmen had previously been beaten only by Indiana. Ernie Grunfeld sank a foul shot with four seconds left to give Tennessee its victory over Mississippi. Bernard King, the leading scorer in the Southeastern Conference, was held to a below-average 20 points. Kenny Carr scored 44 points to lead North Carolina State's conquest of Duke; Reginald King and Kieth McCord led a second-half rally as Alabama came from behind to beat Mississippi State; Greg Ballard scored a career-high 29 points and Ron Lee added 26, leading Oregon over Oregon State; Jeff Wilkins and Roger Powell each scored 19 points to trigger Illinois State past Wake Forest; Bill Cook and Dexter Reed combined for 50 points to help Memphis State beat Cincinnati; Ricky Green's 27 points led Michigan past Purdue; Willie Smith and Jim Kennedy teamed for 55 points as Missouri stopped Iowa State; Eugene Smith scored 26 points and collected 11 rebounds to lead West Texas State past Bradley and Virginia beat Marshall behind Larry Cooke's 31 points.

Pro Bowl Stars Relaxed On Eve Of Game; This One Is For Fun

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jack Lambert is smiling, not scowling. Cliff Harris isn't talking about intimidating anyone. In fact, all 80 of professional football's brightest stars approach tonight's Pro Bowl kickoff in an amiable frame of mind. "It's the one time all year that you can play for the sheer enjoyment of the game," Lambert said. Lambert, middle linebacker for the Pittsburgh Steelers, will anchor the American Conference defense in the National Football League showcase of talent. "There's not nearly as much pressure to win in this one as there is during the regular season," said St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart, who is scheduled to start for the National Conference team. "We're here to have a good time — enjoy ourselves. It's party time," said Jack Youngblood, defensive end of the Los Angeles Rams. "Of course you want to win. It's a matter of pride," said L.C. Greenwood of the Steelers. "I'll get up for the game Monday. Meanwhile, I'm enjoying myself."

"I guess the adrenalin will be pumping by game time, but right now it's all fun," said Harris, the Dallas Cowboys defensive back. The squads worked an hour a day on the field preparing for the game and put about an equal amount of time into team meetings. Workouts — especially at the AFC camp — were lighthearted and punctuated by impromptu wrestling matches between giggling giants. Even talks of a player boycott didn't spoil the fun. After a week of rumors and meetings, the players decided Thursday not to take a strike vote. Any boycott would have been triggered by failure of the NFL to pay anything into the players pension fund during the time the league has been without a contract with the NFL Players Association. While the strike talk didn't sour the party atmosphere, it did spoil ticket sales. Henry Simoneaux, ticket manager for the contest, said he expects no more than 35,000 for tonight's game. He had earlier predicted a turnout of up to 60,000. Chuck Knox of the Los Angeles Rams coaches the National Conference team. John Madden of the Oakland Raiders is the American Conference coach. They've pared their normal playbooks down to pocket size, since the limited time available prevents installing anything sophisticated. "You'll probably see the ball in the air a lot," said Hart. "That's generally the easiest way to move it."

"We'll probably try for a balanced approach," said Ken Anderson, AFC quarterback. "When you have running backs like O.J. Simpson and Franco Harris, you don't want to pass too much." Hart will be supported by Terry Metcalf and Chuck Foreman at the starting running-backs for the NFC.

ABA Sets Out To Plot Future Course

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer
DENVER (AP) — Its hopes for a merger with the National Basketball Association stalled by lawsuits and its own foundation crumbling within, the American Basketball Association set out today to plot its future course. A Board of Trustees meeting, gathering on the eve of the ABA's ninth annual All-Star Game, was to discuss at length where the league was headed. "We're either going to end up with a super-league in the ABA, comprised of six, seven or eight teams next season," said John Y. Brown, league president and owner of the Kentucky Colonels, "or we're going to have a merged league with NBA teams, or we're going to have no league. I'd like to get it on or off. We have to quit kidding ourselves."

Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, grimly determined to clarify the league's course, said there would be "open and frank discussions among the trustees about the future of the ABA." He added, "We can't sit back and wait for the NBA to help us. We can't sit back and wait for more teams to die. We can't wallow around. We've got to have a plan to improve our situation."

The current situation of the ABA is bleak. The foundering league already has seen three franchises — Baltimore, San Diego and Utah — die this season, reducing its ranks from 10 to seven teams. And another franchise — Virginia — is in deep financial trouble. The Squires, with the worst record in professional basketball, 7-37, have encountered serious money problems this season and according to one club executive in the ABA, "have not met their league assessments in quite a while." While the trustees debated the league's problems, Tuesday night's All-Star game is expected to set an ABA attendance record of nearly 18,000 at new McNichols Arena. Because the league no longer has two divisions, the game has a new format this season. It matches the first-place Denver Nuggets against a 12-man team of all-stars of the other six clubs. The all-stars, coached by Kevin Loughery of New York, will have a starting lineup of forwards Julius Erving of New York and Billy Knight of Indiana, center Artis Gilmore of Kentucky and guards James Silas of San Antonio and Brian Taylor of New York. In reserve will be forward Marvin Barnes of St. Louis, Larry Kenon of San Antonio and Maurice Lucas of Kentucky, center Billy Paultz of San Antonio and guards Ron Boone of St. Louis, George Gervin of San Antonio and Don Buse of Indiana.

Two Shockers In Southern Conf. Play

Comeback Star

BLASTING TO VICTORY—Ben Crenshaw, 24, of Austin, Tex., blasts from the trap on 17 at Pebble Beach Sunday. The ball swept past the pin but Crenshaw one-putted to save par three and subsequently win the 35th annual Crosby National Pro-Am. He scored a seven under par 281 for the four rounds. (AP Wirephoto)

By The Associated Press
It wasn't hard to tell the winners from the losers in another Southern Conference basketball weekend in which the race took some more strange turns.

"The kids knew he wasn't going to be here, and they don't know if he'll ever come back. They've accepted it. Now that he's gone, I think they're digging in a little tighter."

That was William and Mary Coach George Balanis on the Indians' 80-68 romp over Furman's Paladins in their first start since All-Southern Ronnie Satterthwaite left the team for "personal reasons."

"If Clemson can go to Maryland and win, we can come to Richmond and win. We've been saying we are an improved team, and the only people who believed us were our players and coaches."

That was The Citadel Coach Les Robinson after the Bulldogs shocked Richmond 75-74 on Don Server's two free throws with 42 seconds left for their first victory on the Spiders' home court since 1970.

"Hey, we just blew them out of their own gym. We had several kids in foul trouble, but we never lost our heads. We've got a damn good basketball team. And if I don't mess it up, we could just win the whole thing."

That was Virginia Military Coach Bill Blair after his Key-

Donnie Defeats Bobby Allison

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Donnie Allison of Hueytown, Ala., beat his brother, Bobby, to win the Winston Series Winter 100 at Auburndale Speedway Park, a NASCAR Grand National event.

Bobby Allison, who won the race last year, fell back from second to fourth on the 70th lap Sunday, and Robert Hamke of Hialeah, Fla., surged ahead to take second place.

Ernie Bass of Orlando, Fla., took third and Leroy Porter of Orlando, Fla., placed fifth.

The race was the last time the Allison brothers will vie with each other before the 24 Hours of Daytona in Daytona Beach, Fla.

dets blistered East Carolina with 64 per cent shooting in the second half for 74-60 triumph, their second this season over the Pirates.

As a result of the three league games, William and Mary remained on top at 4-1, followed by VMI at 2-2, Richmond at 6-3, East Carolina at 5-5, Appalachian State's Mountaineers at 3-3, The Citadel at 3-5, Davidson's Wildcats at 1-4 and three-time champion Furman at 1-5.

Both Appalachian and Davidson were losers against outside foes, the Mountaineers bowing to Lenoir Rhyne 72-67 and the Wildcats falling to South Carolina 84-70 in a regionally televised game.

Furman, 4-10 over-all, tries to get out of the basement tonight at home against Appalachian, 5-9. The Citadel, 6-11, returns home for a nonleague test against Tulane.

With the score tied at 20, Balanis sent in a fresh unit he calls his "Gold team," which proceeded to outscore Furman 13-5 over a 3:24 span to give William and Mary a lead it never relinquished.

"We hadn't planned on letting them play that long, but they did so well, we decided to leave them in," said Balanis, whose team is now 8-7 over-all.

John Kratzer had 17 points, Mike Enoch and John Lowenhaupt 12 each and Jack Arbogast 10 to offset a 28-point barrage by Furman's Ray Miller, the league's leading scorer.

Richmond, which got a game-high 23 points from Jeff Butler, had two possessions after Server's free throws but couldn't overhaul The Citadel as the Spiders fell to 8-7 over-all.

"They played well and deserved to win. For us, it's back to the drawing board," said Richmond Coach Carl Stone, who has Mike Morton and Craig Sullivan hobbling on bad ankles.

Steve McCurdy had 18 points for the Spiders, but the Bulldogs got 16 from Chris Davis, 15 from All-Southern Rod McKeever and 13 from Richard Johnson.

VMI never trailed East Carolina after scoring six straight points early in the second half. Ron Carter fired in 27 points and John Krovic 23, hitting 10 of 12 from the floor. Al Edwards led the Pirates with 16.

"They were so smart and patient on offense and we were not. They did the job they had to do," said East Carolina Coach Dave Patton.

Five free throws in the last 1:20 broke a 67-67 tie and gave Lenoir Rhyne its victory over Appalachian, which got 21 points from Bob Pace and 15 from Calvin Bowser.

Alex English had 31 points and 10 rebounds for South Carolina against Davidson, which was led by John Gerdy with 19 points. Wildcat Coach Bo Brickets said "this is the first time in the last five times out I have not found some reason for optimism."

Foreman Hopes To Keep Busy

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Those George Foreman bombs have returned to the heavy-weight picture and the 22-year-old ex-Olympic and pro champion says he wants to keep busy and win back his title.

"I want to be the champion again," he declared after stopping Ron Lyle in the fifth round at Caesars Palace on Saturday afternoon.

What appears most probable for Foreman is a fight against Joe Frazier, the man he knocked out in two rounds to win the title on Jan. 22, 1973, in Jamaica. Muhammad Ali then stopped Foreman in Zaire, Africa.

"I was rusty," admitted Foreman who was knocked down twice in the fourth round before storming back in the fifth to down Lyle for the full count and at least a minute more.

"There is no doubt I can punch," Foreman added, "but I think this time I showed determination. This is the first time I ever fought off the canvas."

Although the ex-champ says he'd like to fight Ali as soon as possible, it appeared the current heavyweight king will choose Ken Norton as the foe in his next major title defense. Before that, Ali must fight Belgium's Jean Pierre Coopmans in Puerto Rico with the title at stake. But Ali will be a prohibitive favorite against the European.

Foreman, who now lives on a ranch in Livermore, Calif., weighed 226 to 220 for Lyle of Denver, Colo. The first round was slow but then the fight became a slugfest. When Lyle tagged Foreman hard, the ex-champ reverted to his previous style even though his new trainer Gil Clancy had been schooling him on cutting down the length of his punches.

A minute was cut off the second round because of a malfunction of electronic timing equipment, but it didn't make much difference. Foreman had landed a hard right-left combination just before the end of the abbreviated round. Had Lyle landed the punches and then lost, there would have been a major controversy.

Foreman registered his 38th knockout and put his record at 41-1 while Lyle went to 31-4-1 and at 33 could be approaching the end of his career.

Crenshaw Lives Up To Promise

By BOB GREEN

AP Golf Writer
PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — There was Ben Crenshaw, once again happily restored to the bright promise of his amateur years, now firmly implanted on one of history's youngest comebacks.

There was his bride, Polly, anxiously cautioning Ben not to mention her age (18) "because I won't be able to get a celebration drink."

And there was Jack Nicklaus, shrugging philosophically and then, almost in a comedy act, patting his pockets in a vain and futile search for a passport.

Those three pictures emerged Sunday from the confused, confusing and dramatic close to Bing's 35th Clambake, the $185,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

"I'm the only guy in the world making a comeback at 24," Crenshaw said after his solid, three-under-par 69 had staked him to a two-stroke victory, a triumph that ended almost three years of frustration for the young man who hit the game with the gaudiest credentials and the most impressive start in decades — only to follow will a fall to mediocrity.

"I don't have it happen very often, but I had it happen to me today," Nicklaus said after an all-but-incredible last round 82 — one of the highest rounds of his competitive career.

"It happened," he said before boarding a helicopter to San Francisco to make connections with a jet for a business trip to Tokyo. That's when he started his pocket-patting routine. A look of almost comic dismay crossed his face.

"I just remembered," he said. "I don't have a passport. That tops it."

It was a less-than-perfect close to a less-than-perfect day for Nicklaus, who was beset by a series of golfing misfortunes, misadventures and misjudgments normally visited only upon a weekend hacker.

Conference 'Hot Shots'

By The Associated Press
Jimmy Graves, Mars Hill junior, and freshman Dennis West of the High Point Panthers are the Carolinas Conference basketball players of the week.

Graves, all-conference last year, averaged 21.7 points and hit better than 50 per cent of his shots from the floor in leading the Lions to 70-71 victories last week. The resident of Cherryville also got 32 rebounds, 15 assists and blocked 15 shots in the triumphs over Elon, Presbyterian, Central Wesleyan and North Carolina-Asheville.

West, a freshman from Brooklyn, scored 32 points in the 95-94 victory over the league-leading Guilford Quakers.

The Guilford loss means there are no more undefeated teams in the conference. It was the first time in two years that High Point had defeated Guilford in a regular-season game.

Guilford is 5-1 in the conference and 10-3 in all games. Pfeiffer is in second place at 2-1 and 6-8, after a 97-61 victory over last-place Atlantic Christian, 0-5, and 4-9.

Mars Hill put its record on the winning side, 3-2 and 10-9, and moved into third place.

Catawba edged High Point 56-55 Saturday night, and is in a fourth-place tie with Elon. Catawba is 4-3 and 9-8, and Elon is 4-3 and 6-7. After Elon blew a 16-point lead and lost to Mars Hill, it nipped North Carolina-Wilmington 59-58 on the road Saturday.

High Point is sixth in the seven-team league at 2-5 and 7-10.

He started the bright, sunny day in first place. He was playing Pebble Beach, one of his favorite courses. He appeared in commanding position to win his fourth Crosby title.

But things started going badly almost immediately and he bogeyed the first hole. Then they went from bad to worse. And from worse to unbelievable.

He played his back nine in 45. He had a double bogey and two triple bogeys. He hit his ball into pine forests. He hit it over the craggy cliffs of the Monterey Peninsula. He plugged it under the lips of the yawning bunkers. He got it in the water of what Pebble Beach calls a lateral hazard and most people call the Pacific Ocean. He three-putted.

It was a horror show. From a one-shot lead starting the day, he went to a 291 total, three over par and 10 behind Crenshaw. It was one of the greatest, most unexplainable collapses of his career.

Journeyman Mike Morley, occasionally the leader early in the final round, held on to take second at 283 after a final 73. Dave Hill and rookie George Burns shared third at 284, Hill with a closing 72, Burns with 69. British Open champion Tom Watson, 71, and Australian David Graham, 75, were next at 286.

Harsh Terms Given MSU In Probation

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has slapped Michigan State University with one of the stiffest football probations in history.

Michigan State President Clifton Wharton scheduled a news conference today at East Lansing, Mich.

"The university acknowledges that some violations took place, but we regret that the NCAA council was unable to accept our proof of innocence in the matters appealed to it," Wharton said in a statement Sunday after learning of the three-year penalty.

The Spartans, cited for recruiting violations, were barred from appearing on television or playing in postseason competition for three years following the 1976 season.

The Big Ten school will be allowed only 20 new football scholarships next year instead of the allowable 30, and only 25 the following two years.

The NCAA also ordered Michigan State to "sever all relations between two representatives of its athletic interests and its intercollegiate athletic program."

In addition, Michigan State was ordered to prohibit one assistant football coach from any recruiting during the probationary period. A second assistant is restricted from recruiting off campus during the first year of the probation while a third was ordered admonished to guard against a recurrence of violations of NCAA regulations.

The NCAA's probe began last April when an unidentified school filed a complaint about Michigan State. The complaint concerned a reported 70 violations the university made in recruiting high school athletes, particularly in Ohio.

At the time, Coach Denny Stolz was quoted as saying, "We have done nothing that would constitute Michigan State being put on probation." He called the allegations "typical of what happens when a young program becomes successful."

In a written release, Arthur R. Reynolds, chairman of the NCAA committee on infractions, said:

"The committee on infractions believes the penalties imposed are meaningful in that they recognize the seriousness of the violations in this case, and are directed toward the institution as well as the staff members and athletic representatives involved."

Poor Probe Of FBI Activities

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation, its once-shiny image a bit tarnished of late, gets the once-over tonight in a one-hour CBS News special called "Inside the FBI."

Alas, the show, written and produced by Howard Stringer and reported by Dan Rather, doesn't live up to the hard-hitting reputation of previous "CBS Reports" programs.

One segment, a study of FBI agents in Atlanta trying to find a suspect wanted for questioning in a Florida jewel heist, would make even the most kindly city editor scream for some basic facts.

In it, Rather follows the FBI's search of the suspect's house after the man has fled the scene. He asserts that the man's alibi has collapsed and that "he is the Florida jewel thief after all."

The suspect is arrested a day later in Louisiana. But we never learn if he ever was charged with the jewel theft, let alone tried for it.

The show's premise basically concerns the damage done the FBI's reputation by post-Watergate revelations of what Rather calls its "massive domestic spying" and its campaign against Martin Luther King.

"We know the headlines," Rather says. "We wanted to know how these things could have happened."

First comes a look at the climate of the FBI, the sort of persons who join it, their training, their work, the ranges of cases they handle.

Eventually, we get to the nub of the show, the area of national security and domestic intelligence where, as Rather says in beginning the program, "most of the abuses (by the FBI) developed."

Only four cases are specifically cited. One involves an attempt by the late J. Edgar Hoover to get a Washington reporter fired because Hoover felt the man was out to discredit the FBI.

The reporter, Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times, quotes from and speaks about allegations contained in a file the FBI kept on him.

Chilling, yes, but why not an examination of whether and how such a file violates Nelson's constitutional rights? Just saying the FBI sometimes gathers poop on "anyone it dislikes" doesn't add much to understanding the problem.

A similar flaw lies in an interview with a former campus activist who supported Arab causes, later was a defense lawyer for Sirhan Sirhan and was the object of intense FBI scrutiny for eight years.

But we don't learn what, if anything, could justify such scrutiny.

The two other cases each involve a paid FBI informant. Each spied on and led dissident groups, one an anti-war group, the other a right-wing group opposed both to the left and the Nixon Administration.

Each spy says he was present at a clear instance of criminal activity — the trashing of a draft board office and a shooting that wounded a lady.

Yet the FBI took no immediate action, each spy says, even though it knew of the planned trashing and was informed of the shooting the day after it happened.

Why? And why no investigation into whether the FBI agents involved in each case themselves violated the law? There are answers, but I'm afraid you'll not find them in CBS' "Inside the FBI."

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ1076 ♥KQ72 ♦Q85 ♣K

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1♦ Pass
2NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid three hearts. Since we have full values for our third-hand opening, the one bid that is out of the question, as far as we are concerned, is a pass. The choice is between three hearts and three no trump, and since our hand is better suited to a suit contract, we prefer to introduce our second strain.

action. Since partner should have, at most, a singleton diamond, his high cards should fit in well with your hand. The danger with a pass is that partner may not be able to act again at this level.

Q.5—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠106 ♥K98 ♦AK1072 ♣862

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♦ Pass 2♦ 3♦
3♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. You have only 10 points in high cards and a doubleton spade, but partner has bid freely at the three-level. It sounds as if he has a reasonable hand with at least a six-card suit, and your good controls, especially the king of hearts, should prove to be useful assets.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♥A73 ♦10986542 ♣63

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
3♦ Pass 4♦ Dble.
Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's double of four spades is for penalties rather than takeout. However, it shows a good hand in high cards and not a trump stack. Our hand is ill-suited to defense because the diamond length might seriously detract from partner's trick-taking capabilities, so we favor a judicious retreat to five diamonds.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK652 ♥A8 ♦872 ♣643

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1♦ Dble. Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This is a very useful hand considering that you passed originally, so a jump bid is in order. Even had you not passed, this would not be a forcing bid. It simply shows a hand of some 9-12 points with interest in game if partner has better than a minimum takeout double.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♥762 ♦1052 ♣AQ10943

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1♦ 2♥

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. We would venture three clubs if we could be sure partner would pass. Unfortunately, in real life he will almost certainly bid again, and he isn't going to be happy when you put down this dummy.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK83 ♥Q8 ♦AK76 ♣1082

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♦ 1♥ Pass ?

What do you bid?

A.—Although partner merely overcalled, we would insist on game on the strength of our quick tricks. A cue-bid of two clubs offers the most flexible action. If partner has a second suit, he will introduce it, which may allow us to reach the right strain. Our second choice would be a direct lead to four hearts—a doubleton honor is adequate support for an overcalled suit.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ95 ♥83 ♦732 ♣1065

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♦ Dble. 4♦ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. This action involves some risk, but you cannot allow yourself to be cowed by the opponent's preemptive

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A102 ♥AQ ♦A87 ♣AK843

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 1♥ 1♦ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—In view of your very powerful hand, an immediate slam signal is in order. We suggest a cue-bid of two spades. This action is forcing to game and enables you to proceed with an orderly investigation of slam possibilities without fear of getting the bidding level too high or being passed out short of game.

Advices Women To Keep Name

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most treasured possessions of a woman is her identity, says Myrna Liebowitz, president of the Women Stockbrokers Assn.

"If they are in business and get married, they shouldn't use their married names," Miss Liebowitz contends. "By doing that, they are giving up their identity."

The attractive stockbroker practices what she preaches. She recently married Ken Beach, a successful manufacturer, but insists on using her maiden name in her position at Herzfeld Stern.

"It took me years to build up

Widows Prefer To Wear Rings

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey taken by Mrs. Beatrice L. Green, executive director of the Widows Travel Club, reveals that most widows prefer to wear their marriage rings.

"The ones who take off the rings soon after the death of the husband are the ones who were most unhappily married," she explains.

She adds that most of the widows wear the rings to keep thinking of their late husbands and the fine memories they had.

"Some widows wear their marriage rings for protection," Mrs. Green said. "They don't want men to meet to think they are single — right away."

Greensboro Up Front As 'Traffic Ticket Capital'

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

Raleigh, which has a reputation for being an easy place to get a traffic ticket, apparently deserves the state's "traffic ticket capital" award, but Greensboro has made a strong bid for the title.

An Associated Press survey of the state's largest cities showed Raleigh leading the pack in 1974 in its rate of traffic citations. But, in 1975, Greensboro moved into first place, nudging Raleigh by a 5-3 margin.

Greensboro grabbed first place last year almost by default, though. That police department cracked down on traffic violations when the city's fatality rate tripled. Raleigh, in 1975, spent much of the year without its normal supply of radar units because they were back in the factory for overhaul, a job that takes a long time.

On the other end of the spectrum, Charlotte is the undisputed champion for nonharrassment of motorists. For example, in 1974, figures show that Raleigh policemen were three times busier writing traffic tickets than Charlotte's policemen were.

Even with all that activity, Raleigh's fatality rate in 1974 was only marginally better than Charlotte's. On the other hand, Durham's fatality rate was the lowest in the state and four times better than Raleigh's though Bull City policemen were only half as busy writing traffic tickets as Raleigh's men in blue.

The city with the highest fatality rate in 1974 — the latest complete figures available — was Wilmington. The Port City's fatality rate was nine times worse than Durham's.

When it came to writing speeding tickets in 1974, Raleigh policemen were 3.3 times more active than Charlotte officers, 2.3 times busier than Wilmington, 2.4 times busier than Asheville, 1.7 times busier than High Point, 1.4 times busier than Winston-Salem and Durham and only slightly busier than Greensboro, 1.06.

The figures for citations issued for all hazardous moving violations give the same pattern as for speeding tickets alone. Hazardous violations include offenses such as improper turns, reckless driving, failure to stop for a red light or stop sign and failure to yield the right of way.

With the exception of Fayetteville, the state's nine largest cities were included in the survey. Fayetteville police were unable to provide the arrest figures because that department adopted a new record system in 1973 and hasn't yet been able to compile traffic arrest statistics.

While figures for both 1974 and 1975 were obtained, the 1974 statistics were used for comparison because of dramatic changes in some cities. Greensboro had a crackdown in 1975, Raleigh spent much of the year without all its radar units and Asheville policemen staged several arrest slowdowns which resulted in arrests falling by as much as 75 per cent at times.

One of the problems in comparing arrests is that raw figures — that is, the number of arrests made — are inaccurate because traffic volume and populations vary between cities.

To equalize the figures, average daily miles driven in each city were obtained from the state Department of Transportation. For example Charlotte has 4.6 million daily vehicle miles. That was divided by the number of speeding tickets written in 1974 — a total of 6,417 — for a result of 716.8.

Raleigh, on the other hand, had an average daily mileage of 2.1 million but there were 9,673 speeding tickets issued for a result of 217.1. What the resulting figures mean is that motorists in Charlotte drive 3.3 times more total miles for each speeding ticket issued than motorists in Raleigh.

Death rates were figured similarly. That is, the number of deaths were divided into the average daily mileage to get a rate for comparison. Wilmington, with 610,000 miles, had nine deaths for a rate of 67,777 while Durham had two deaths and average mileage of 1,230,000 for a rate of 615,000.

The survey also pointed out how widely philosophy varies from one city's police department to another. In Raleigh, Capt. C. H. Haswell said, "we feel that disregard for traffic laws in some cases breeds disregard for other laws," and added, "We're very concerned about serious accidents and we feel like strict enforcement will reduce those accidents."

Lt. Jack Pindergrass of Durham said officers there concentrate on fighting crime against people and property. If a stretch of road or an intersection is noted for an unusually high accident rate, officers will concentrate on enforcement there as much as possible, he said.

It's a matter of priorities and unless the death rate goes up dramatically, traffic enforcement is fairly low on the list, he said, noting that the city's death rate was up last year and traffic law enforcement was stepped up.

Maj. S. B. Martley of the High Point department expressed a similar view. He said High Point abolished its separate traffic division last year so that all of its officers could concentrate on more serious crime. It was one of the few cities to have an improved crime rate in 1975.

While High Point was shutting down its traffic division, Wilmington put one into operation late last year. The change resulted in a dramatic increase in tickets in November and December. Those two months accounted for 37 per cent of all tickets written in Wilmington in 1975.

Capt. Clarence Welbourne of Asheville said it's good to have policemen patrolling rather than waiting for traffic violations. "Just being seen is a deterrent (to crime)," he said.

Four Twisters Strike In South

By The Associated Press
Thundershowers in the South yesterday touched off four tornadoes. The most destructive one hit Donaldsonville in southeast Louisiana late in the afternoon. Two minor injuries occurred as the twister damaged a junior high school and numerous trailers and houses.

A winter storm spread a variety of precipitation across the eastern part of the nation overnight. Snow fell over the western Great Lakes region and portions of the upper Mississippi valley. Parts of southern Wisconsin received four to five inches from the storm. A heavy snow warning was posted for parts of northern Michigan. However, most snowfall amounts during the night were one inch or less in the area.

Some light snow fell over the eastern Dakotas and north central Nebraska. Snow also moved across southern Colorado and northeast New Mexico. Freezing rain hit the northeastern portion of lower Michigan and central Pennsylvania. Rain also fell over the Great Lakes region, the Appalachians, the Ohio valley and Tennessee. Showers and thundershowers rreached southward into the central Gulf states.

Freezing rain was expected to spread into New York and New England today, creating hazardous traveling conditions. Throughout the west the weather was clear, except for the northern Pacific coast where it was cloudy with some rain.

The coldest nighttime temperatures were below zero in portions of the northern plains and the northern and central Rockies.

Overnight temperatures ranged from 72 at Miami and Key West, Fla., to 13 below zero at Gunnison, Colo.

Hospital Role For Retired Men

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Some retired men here have gone back to work in a field long dominated by women. They are hospital volunteers at Akron General Medical Center. Their duties include greeting and discharging patients at the entrance to the hospital and helping with their baggage. The Visiting Volunteer program participants also visit patients to chat or listen to complaints, says Don Peabody, writing in "Modern Maturity," a magazine for retired persons.

"Following a review of vendor depositing activity, the state must take immediate corrective action in all cases when reporting points are not adhering to FNS deposit requirements," said Arvid Dopson, acting regional director of the FNS, said in a Jan. 15 letter to state Social Services Director Renee Hill.

Dr. Hill said the state would cooperate with an Agriculture Department task force formed to define the scope of the problem.

Pentagon Eyes Veterans Pool For Emergency Manpower Call

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials are eyeing a growing pool of peacetime Army veterans as a possible source of trained military manpower in any emergency mobilization.

They calculate that, unless some new system is developed for tapping this pool, the Army would find itself about 250,000 men short of its urgent needs in the first months of a rapidly developing, intense war in Europe.

Although Pentagon officials are not dismissing the possibility of a long war, they appear most concerned about the Army's ability to mobilize enough trained men quickly in event of a sudden, massive Soviet attack on Western Europe.

The problem grows out of the shrinkage of the Army's reserve since the end of the draft. That reserve manpower pool, drawn on in emergencies to fill out regular, national guard and reserve units to combat strength, used to receive a large and steady flow of young men who had finished two years as draftees and still had four years of military obligation to fulfill.

But now men who served in the peacetime volunteer Army enlist for three or more years. This means they spend longer on active duty and thus are subject to shorter periods of reserve obligation than were the two-year draftees.

As a result, officials predict the reserve will shrink by about two-thirds over the next three years, to a total of about 100,000 men.

Looking at the problem the Pentagon would face in event of a major Soviet attack on NATO at that time, military planners figure they would need an additional one million soldiers in the first four months after outbreak of the crisis. About 200,000 of these would be required to replace casualties in expected intense fighting.

But planners say a call-up of national guard and reserve units and mobilization of men from the depleted reserve pool, plus some other limited sources, would leave the Army about 250,000 men short.

In such a situation, the planners say, a fresh flow of draftees and volunteers would not help fill the deficit, because they would have to be trained for at least three months before being sent into combat.

"We have only one source of trained personnel to meet the deficit in the first months of conflict," Asst. Secretary of Defense William K. Brehm told the House Armed Services Committee recently.

Several North Carolina banks that sell food stamps are failing to turn over the receipts on time, state records reveal.

Such delays are a violation of U.S. Department of Agriculture instructions that require daily or, at the most, weekly deposits of the cash they collect from food stamp buyers.

Food stamp vendors should deposit in the Federal Reserve Bank all receipts of $1,000 or more within 24 hours, according to agriculture department's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS).

Seventeen North Carolina banks kept their December receipts until the end of the month and numerous other banks made only two or three deposits in December, according to records of the state Division of Social Services.

The practice of holding on to government money and getting free use of it is known as "lapping."

Ten Die In N.C. Weekend Toll

By The Associated Press
Ten persons died in traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend.

The toll for the year rose to 66. But it was still 15 fewer than at the similar time last year.

Robert Lee Howard, 27, was killed when the car in which he was riding hit a tree near his hometown of Lawndale in Cleveland County.

Ervin Andrew Brock, 33, of Goldsboro, died when the vehicle in which he was a passenger hit a bridge four miles south of Goldsboro.

Eric Childers, 15, of Connelly Springs, was killed in an accident a mile north of another Burke County town, Hildrebran. The car in which he was riding collided with another.

Vance Wesley Scott, 17, of Sapahaw in Alamance County, was fatally injured when a car hit an embankment near Graham.

Gary Clayton Harvey, 20, of Chesapeake, Va., died when a car overturned near Elizabeth City.

Donald McClellan Sanderson, 27, of Rose Hill was fatally injured by a car near that Duplin County town. The Highway Patrol said he apparently was lying in the road.

Ernest Melvin Hudson, 20, of Tarboro, lost his life when his car hit a bridge in Edgecombe County.

James Carr Newton, 25, of Rt. 2, Dunn, died when the car in which he was riding was in a head-on collision 12 miles south of Clinton.

James Newalis, 22, of Ft.

Bragg, died when the car in which he was a passenger hit a tree seven miles west of Fayetteville.

Nellie Clack, 17, of Rt. 3, Henderson, lost her life when a car in which she was riding was in a wreck three miles north of Henderson.
