Congressman Samuel Stratton

Will Seek To Cite Schorr
For Contempt Of Congress

By ROBERT W. NOBLE
AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (UPI) — Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said Saturday he would push next week to cite CBS news correspondent Daniel Schorr for contempt of Congress for releasing a copy of the House Intelligence Committee secret report on the CIA to the Village Voice newspaper in New York City.

Stratton, a nine-term Democrat, said in a statement from his Amsterdam home, "It is time for us to stop talking about protecting our nation's key intelligence secrets and procedures and start doing something about it."

He said Schorr had admitted providing the tabloid paper a copy of the report, parts of which were published Thursday.

"Mr. Schorr spends all day covering Congress. He knew as well as any one that the House had voted two-to-one to block any publication of the Pike committee report until top secret material could be deleted from it," he said.

"This is not a case of freedom of the press," Stratton said. "It is one thing for Mr.
Schorr to comment on the committee report on his own news program...But it is quite another thing for him to pass along the complete text of the report to someone else for publication in clear defiance of the mandate of the House of Representatives."

In Washington, Schorr said Saturday, "I don't understand the constitutional basis of what he is suggesting, but I have tried to do what I consider to be my duty under the Constitution."

He also said that CBS has already gone on record saying "full legal powers of CBS will support me in any challenge involving an attempt to discover my source."

In New York, CBS News said Saturday it was repeating its Friday refusal to comment "on any federal action until it is resolved or becomes clearer."

"At the same time, as we said yesterday, we will fully support Mr. Schorr against any action to force him to reveal his sources," CBS said.

CBS News has announced it will assign another correspondent to cover the controversy over the report "since CBS News policy requires that no correspondent may report a story in which he is personally involved."

Schorr did not say where he obtained the report, which was printed in part in the New York weekly newspaper this week.
He said he decided to make it available to the Village Voice rather than "cooperate in what might be the total suppression of a report originally meant for public distribution."

Stratton, himself a former television newscaster, said he was one of those leading the fight to temporarily lock all 2,000 copies of the report in the House safe after Pike released it.

"If I ever saw a case of contempt of the carefully considered action of one house of Congress, this is it," the ranking Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee said. "We would be derelict in our duty not to seek to punish such contempt properly."

From Lockheed Corporation

Top Executives Resign

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) —
The two top executives of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., shaken by bribery scandals rocking governments around the world, resigned Friday and were replaced by the former head of the New York Stock Exchange, who reportedly plans to be a temporary "conscience" for the defense industry giant.

Daniel J. Houghton, 64, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, and A.
Carl Kitchian, 61, vice chairman and chief operating officer, submitted their resignations at a special meeting of the board of directors.

Robert W. Haack, a director from outside Lockheed's management ranks, was named interim chairman.

York Stock Exchange from 1967 to 1972, is a 35-year veteran of the eastern securities markets, experience he will need to handle dealings with major banks over Lockheed's $600 million debt load.

A director since 1972, Haack already was a member of the special committee appointed to investigate Lockheed's payments of millions in "goodwill money" to foreign officials and influentials.

Revelation of the payments at congressional hearings rocked foreign governments, setting off investigations in Japan, Turkey, Italy and other nations, including the Netherlands, where the survival of the centuries-old royal House of Orange is threatened.

Queen Juliana reportedly may abdicate if her husband, Prince Bernhard, is found guilty of accepting $1 million from Lockheed.

The Los Angeles Times quoted sources within Lockheed as saying Haack earlier had begun to "assume the role of the board's conscience, and that he was partly responsible for applying some of the pressure that led to the resignations of Houghton and Kitchian.

The scandal gave Haack, who had been trying to change the management for some time
"the leverage he needed," The Times' sources said.

Auto Tag

hicles Commissioner Edward L.
Powell says next Monday at midnight is the deadline for motorists to have their new state automobile license tags or license renewal stickers.

Powell said that even though Monday is a holiday celebrating George Washington's birthday,
"the laws of North Carolina will not allow any extension of time."

Powell said there had been some misunderstanding about the deadline.

General Obasanjo Takes Power

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Nigeria's armed forces chief and hero of the nation's civil war took power Saturday, succeeding Lt. Gen. Murtala Mohammed slain in a foiled coup by young army rebels in the world's richest and most populous black nation.

Council appointed Lt. Gen.
Olusegun Obasanjo, commander of a Marines division that dealt the death blow to Biafran separatists in the 1967-70 civil war, as new chief of state.

The 22-member council also announced the instigators of the coup attempt had been arrested but gave no details.

Obasanjo was second in command to Mohammed, a hot-tempered northern Moslem who ousted Nigeria's nine-year ruler, Gen. Yakubu Gowon, in a bloodless coup seven months ago.

The council said Mohammed, 39, was assassinated Friday morning by rebel troops led by Lt. Col. B.S. Dimka, head of the army's physical training corps. It was believed the po-laying soldier had been cut down en route to his Dodan barracks headquarters on sur-ban Ikoye Island.

Obasanjo is the first member of the western Yoruba tribe to rule Nigeria, a nation of 250 tribal and linguistic groups. In 16 years of independence from Britain, the leadership has been drawn mostly from Nigeria's north and center.

Where Circumstances Warrant It Urges Death Penalty

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
MIAMI (UPI) — President Ford, declaring he has "had it" with terrorism, capped a two-day campaign swing through Florida Saturday by urging the death penalty in cases where circumstances warrant.

It was the first time Ford gave his views on capital punishment in a campaign speech, and he picked the South Florida Chapter of the Federal Bar Association as his audience.

Ford visited both coasts during his fast-paced Florida visit and concentrated his campaigning in retiree havens, warning senior citizens against Ronald Reagan's welfare programs. He also told them no candidate with a philosophy to
could be elected in November.

Later, turning to the capital punishment issue in remarks prepared for delivery to the Miami FBA meeting, Ford said: "Frankly, I have had it with terrorism of the kind that recently killed so many innocent people at LaGuardia Airport in New York City and has plagued the South Florida area."

"The FBI has just reported that bombings in the United States in 1975 killed 69 people.
The time has come for society to act in its own self defense."

Ford made clear he opposes the death penalty in cases where the murderer or terrorist had an "impaired mental capacity," or where there were other extenuating circumstances.

"I favor the use of the death penalty in the federal criminal system in accordance with proper constitutional standards," he said.

He also suggested that victims of crimes should be advised of their rights, just as suspects are.

Visiting the coastal Gulf town of Fort Myers in mid-afternoon, Ford drew an estimated 63,000 persons — almost twice the town's normal population of 35,000. He timed his arrival to coincide with a Festival of Lights parade.

Two early polls showed Reagan running ahead of Ford in Florida's March 9 primary.

The President, bidding for votes in Florida's March 9 primary and making his first campaign swing through a state that Reagan frequently has visited, addressed a crowd of 15,000 in St. Petersburg earlier — at that point, a record for his campaign appearances to date.

In warning against Reagan's programs, he told his St.
Petersburg audience no candidate with a philosophy to the right or left of his own could

From Fort Myers, the President's fast-paced campaign schedule took him across the state to the east coast and a nighttime speech to a local chapter of the Federal Bar Association in Miami.

During his speech at St.
Petersburg, some elderly men and women in the crowd set upon a group of chanting young demonstrators and drove the youngsters off. In another incident at St. Petersburg, police took into temporary custody a young woman dressed in black and wearing a toy pistol. The woman was not charged and agents said there had been no threat against the President's life.

Holiday
Closings

All federal offices will be closed in North Carolina on Monday in observance of George Washington's birthday.

State and county government offices, banks and schools will operate on a normal schedule.
In Greenville, city government offices will be open.

...Ribbons, feathers, flowers and lace Can't make amends for such a face....

RYDAL, Pa. (AP) — "Silk, satin, cotton, wool. Dressed, you look a perfect doll; Ribbons, feathers, flowers, lace.
Can't make amends for such a face."

The verse from an 18th Century "penny dreadful" is one of Diane Apfelbaum's favorites.
It's in her collection of 15,000
antique Valentine cards.

Mrs. Apfelbaum, 46, who is vice president of her husband's stamp firm in Philadelphia, collects old Valentines she finds on buying trips throughout the United States and Europe.

Most of the fancy, hand-made cards in her collection date from the mid-19th Century.

Some are decorated with lace, ribbons and flowers painted on silk. There also are three-dimensional "standup" Valentines, which unfold to reveal cupids, hearts, flowers and sentimental verses.

Besides the European "penny dreadfuls," or comics, of the late 1800s, Mrs. Apfelbaum is partial to sentimental Valentines.

"At the time of the Civil War, Valentines were lovely and flowery and often used as proposals of marriage by young men who didn't want to talk of such things.

"Then, late in the 19th Century, people changed and sentiment became uncomfortable ... which led to the sarcastic, biting comic Valentines," she said.

"Today, instead of expressing our feelings and taking time to make something nice, we have allowed Valentine's Day to become terribly commercial.

"Now most Valentines are purchased by the boxful by schoolchildren and handed out by a teacher in the classroom.
That makes me feel sad and disillusioned."

Reporters Return To Chappaquiddick Queries

EDITOR'S NOTE — Two members of the AP Special Assignment Team spent eight months investigating Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's involvement in the still mysterious Chappaquiddick Island drowning. They reviewed thousands of pages of testimony and conducted dozens of interviews, among them a rare discussion of the subject by Kennedy.

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
and
RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writers EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP)
— In his six years since Mary Jo Kopechne died in an automobile accident on tiny Chappaquiddick Island, questions, investigations, doubts and rumors have dogged the career of the last Kennedy brother.

Many of those involved insist that it was just an automobile accident, that the case should be closed publicly, as it was legally years ago.

But it wasn't just an automobile accident. It involved one of the most famous men in America, a man thought destined to pick up the fallen standard of his brothers and seek his nation's highest office.

Despite Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's repeated disavowals of intentions to seek the presidency in 1976, he remains an influential force in American politics and, potentially, the most powerful figure in the Democratic party.

His own account of Chappaquiddick does not depict a hero emerging from crisis but a man whose actions were, in his words, "irrational and indefensible and inexcusable and inexplicable."

Kennedy's early attempts to explain his conduct raised questions that begged for more answers — answers that were not forthcoming then and, in some cases, remain shrouded by conflicts, gaps and the long silences of the senator and those closest to him during the 12 hours of Chappaquiddick, July 18 and 19, 1969.

The Associated Press set out to seek answers to those questions.

The investigation discovered that a deputy sheriff, whose testimony most directly contradicted the senator, embellished his story at least three times and that each time it became more damaging to Kennedy. The new findings tend to support Kennedy's version, at least by implication.

But the probe also found evidence that suggests some events could not have occurred as they were described by Kennedy and certain of his associates in public statements and court testimony.

Freshly obtained information about tidal currents indicates the senator did not swim the harbor between Chappaquiddick and Martha's Vineyard at the time he says he did, or the current was not as he described. And the record leaves unexplained how Kennedy and two of his friends could have failed to encounter each other walking on a road shortly after the accident.

The AP's investigation arrived at a number of other findings, some tending to support Kennedy's story and others not:

—There is no evidence that the party attended by Kennedy, Miss Kopechne and 10 others was other than an innocent gathering, despite rumors and innuendos to the contrary.

—There is no evidence that Kennedy was drunk when he

pechne, not normally a heavy drinker, had at least two strong drinks in the hour before she died.

—The weight of the testimony
party about 11:30 p.m., within 15 minutes of the time he said he did and that the accident occurred only minutes later.

—Although there is no evidence that Kennedy and Miss Kopechne were romantically involved, several factors suggest the two did not intend to return immediately to Edgartown from the party as Kennedy claims.

—There is no evidence that
Kennedy was not in the car

ECU Senior Clinicians Hosting Two Day Event

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Senior Clinicians of the East Carolina University Speech and Hearing Clinic will host a Community Awareness Program Monday, February 16 and Tuesday, February 17.

A speech and hearing awareness lecture program will be presented Monday from 6:15 to 8:30 p.m. in Room 101 (auditorium) of the Allied Health Building.

"This program is directed toward informing teachers, nurses doctors, parents and anyone who works with the public about the different kinds of speech and hearing problems," explained Liz Lewis, a member of the class.

A hearing screening test will be held Tuesday, February 18 from 1 to 4 p.m. at St. James United Methodist Church, 2000 East Sixth St. and from 6 to 9 p.m. at the East Carolina Speech and Hearing Clinic at the Allied Health Building, ECU.

The hearing screening is free, said Nancy DeMeter, a student of the class. "We will detect speech and hearing problems and refer the persons with problems to doctors, hearing clinics and other medical facilities."

"Anyone who suspects that they have a hearing problem should come to the clinic and be screened," Ms. DeMeter added. Tours of the ECU Speech and hearing clinic will be available to persons who wish to see the facilities and the screening process.

The speech and hearing awareness program has become an annual event for senior clinicians at ECU. Students under the supervision of professional clinicians and speech and hearing specialists, presently serve 19 children and adults receiving speech and language therapy.

There are 28 undergraduates and 14 graduates providing speech and language therapy. Seventy speech and language evaluations were scheduled at the ECU clinic for the winter quarter.

The clinic has a full time audiology clinic which handles an estimated 16 evaluations per week. There is a waiting period of two weeks before one can get an appointment.

The clinic primarily serves the counties surrounding Pitt County, including Lenoir, Martin, Craven, Greene. It is one of the three speech and audiology clinics in eastern North Carolina. The other two clinics are located at Rocky Mount and in Craven County.

That Students Cannot Read And Write

Phillips Denies Faculty Claim

By DAN LOHWASSEN
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The state's top education official Saturday defended North Carolina's public school system in response to a claim by the University of North Carolina Faculty Assembly that more and more freshmen college students cannot read and write.

Dr. A. Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction, denied the public school system has "gone backward at all" and suggested a decline in literacy among college freshman, if one exists, could be due to a number of other factors.

At a meeting Friday, the faculty assembly representing the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina passed a resolution urging public schools to place greater emphasis on teaching basic reading and writing to halt "a decline in the level of literacy among entering undergraduates."

The five-part resolution presented to the University of North Carolina Board of Governors urges that elementary schools place more emphasis on "the fundamentals of reading and writing," and urges "thorough study in reading and composition."

It also asks that teachers seeking certification in grades one through nine be required to show proficiency in reading instruction and that English departments in the university system continue the emphasis on reading and composition.

Finally, the resolution suggested that English composition teachers not be required to teach more than 100 students a day.

Phillips said the resolution had been received by members of the Department of Public Instruction who are "taking a look at it," but added, "I don't know there's a whole lot more to do about it right now."

The growth of the university system which now accepts the student who "10 years ago didn't have the opportunity to advance their education" would cause a noticeable decrease in reading and writing abilities among freshman, Phillips said.

He also suggested that television, family changes and "more complex societal problems" could be reasons for a perceptible decline.

Phillips, a strong supporter of innovative education programs, denied that experimental programs such as career education have diverted resources which normally would have gone to teaching basic learning skills.

Takes Back $13.3 Million Capital Improvement Funds

RALEIGH (AP)—In an effort to help ease the state's budget crisis, the advisory Budget Commission has taken back $13.3 million in capital improvements money.

Items shelved by the commissioner included $5.9 million for a new state office tower near the Legislative Building in Raleigh and $2.6 million for a state office building in Charlotte.

The action was recommended by Gov. Jim Holshouser and state Budget Officer Kenneth Howard.

More budget cutting efforts will begin Monday when the General Assembly's Appropriations Conference Committee opens a week-long series of meetings to review current state spending.

The Fiscal Research Division has told the General Assembly to expect a $71 million revenue shortfall in the 1975-76 fiscal year and to prepare for reducing the 1976-77 budget by $42.5 million.

In addition, some legislative leaders are hoping to provide a pay raise for teachers and state employees beginning July 1. To give a 5 per cent across the board salary increase would require a $70 million appropriation.

By withdrawing authority for the $13.3 million in capital improvements spending, the commission was in effect building up "reversions"—meaning the the unspent money is returned to the state's general fund and can be used in some other way in the 1976-77 budget.

All of the projects involved had originally been approved more than 18 months ago. The budget commission and the governor took back the appropriations under their authority to allow funds for construction projects which have not gotten under way within 18 months to revert back to the treasury.

Other items withdrawn by the commission included:

- $600,000 reserve fund for unanticipated cost increases and another $1 million reserve fund dating back to 1971.
- $187,000 for a welcome center on Interstate 77.
- $521,000 set aside for a projected $5 million nursing wing to Memorial Hospital.
- $1 million for various civil works projects, mostly making dikes in connection with the U.S. Corps of Engineers channelization.
- By assuming the federal government will take over the Cape Lookout park as planned, $1 million placed in a special fund was returned to the general fund. Another $329,000 for an estuaries project was also included.

Utilities Commission Expected To Allow CP&L Rate Increase

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Utilities Commission is expected to allow Carolina Power & Light Co. "substantially all, if not all" of the 22 per cent rate increase it has requested.

Sources close to the commission say the three-member commission panel which concluded hearings on the $82 million rate case Wednesday is drafting an order it plans to release next Friday.

"They blew it. They didn't ask for as much as they could have," said a commission member who asked not to be identified.

"The estimates of our revenue needs were conservative," CP&L Executive Vice President Sherwood Smith Jr. said Friday. "And it's apparent that we've shaved it a little thin."

rates exactly as proposed by the company, the average householder's monthly bill would go up by about $3.

Currently a residential customer without electric heat using 1,000 kilowatt hours monthly pays $33.95. If the rates as proposed by CP&L were approved, the bill would go up $37.12.

The power company could cut virtually the entire rate increase into effect beginning Monday. That's the deadline for the commission to act on the case. Under state law, the commission has six months to decide on a rate case after it's filed. If it doesn't, the company can place an increase of up to 20 per cent into effect pending a final commission decision as long as it promises to refund any part of the request not eventually granted plus 6 per cent interest.

Last August the commission approved an interim 12 per cent rate increase for CP&L customers as part of the pending 22 per cent case. If the commission approves the new

Smith said Friday his company has agreed to hold off on raising rates Monday and is willing to wait for the commission's final decision.

Lebanese Program Announced

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — President Suleiman Franjeh announced a 17-point political reform program Saturday designed to end 10 months of civil war between Moslem and Christian factions, setting off a wild shooting spree as gunmen fired thousands of rounds into the air in celebration.

The reform package redressed the balance between the Moslem and Christian communities and paved the way for extending the 24-day cease-fire into permanent peace.

More Irish Violence

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Troops broke up a Catholic-Protestant battle in Belfast Saturday, rioters drove a bulldozer through a guard fence in Londonderry and terrorists attacked an army outpost with mortars.

Bomb blasts wrecked two shops north of Belfast and an explosion in London shook a high-rise building about a mile from Buckingham Palace.

Five persons have died in growing violence since IRA hunger striker Frank Stagg died Thursday in a British jail.

No Agreements Reached

ATHENS (UPI) — Greek and U.S. officials have completed a third round of talks on the status of American bases in Greece without reaching a final settlement, a government communique said Saturday.

"Although substantial progress was noted on the various topics under negotiation, further talks will be necessary to achieve agreement because of the complicated nature of the subjects," the communique said.

Nears 50 Per Cent

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace edged toward the 50 per cent mark in Mississippi's delegate selection process Saturday but almost 29 per cent of the votes cast were uncommitted as thousands of Democrats took part in county caucuses.

With 62 of the state's 82 counties reporting, including Hinds and other populous counties, Wallace had 48.9 per cent of the votes, several points ahead of the 45 per cent he captured in last month's precinct caucuses.

Four Die In Plane Crash

BLOUNTVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Three men were killed Friday evening when their twin-engine plane crashed during a rainstorm, the Sullivan County sheriff's department said.

Deputies tentatively identified the victims as Tom O. Metcalfe, 59; Al Cannon, 62, and Sam Cannon, 57, all of Bluefield, Va. The men were believed to be employed by a mattress firm in Bluefield and the Cannons were apparently brothers, deputies said.

Over $1 Billion Deficit

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Hugh L. Carey says discovery that New York City's budget deficit is more than $1 billion will force the city to ask Washington to extend the current three-year, multibillion-dollar loan program.

The $1.021 billion budget gap, announced Friday by Mayor Abraham D. Beame, is more than 40 per cent greater than the $724 million deficit projected Oct. 20. The city's operating budget for the fiscal year ending June 30 is about $12 billion.

Convicted Of Murder By Car

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A 68-year-old Montgomery man has been convicted of first-degree murder in connection with a death in a highway accident.

After deliberating for about an hour Friday, a circuit court jury convicted Heflin Mack Lankford of murder in the death of a high school student in a two-car collision last June.

Lankford was given a mandatory sentence of life in prison and was held without bond pending appeal.

A grand jury charged in an indictment that Lankford was drunk or under the influence of drugs when his car crossed the median of a four-lane highway last June 24 and landed on top of another car, killing 16-year-old Randall Holt.

Charged With Murder

WILSON, N.C. (UPI) — A Wilson man was arrested Saturday and charged with the shotgun slaying of a grocer during an attempted robbery, authorities said.

A spokesman for the Wilson County Sheriff's Department said Ray Bench was arrested about 12:30 a.m. by Wilson city police.

Two other suspects in the attempted robbery of a rural grocery store and the slaying of Shadow Holloman, owner of Holloman's Grocery on U.S. 117, were still at large Saturday.

Holloman was shot around 9:30 Friday night in an exchange of gunfire with one of three men who entered the store just as Holloman was getting ready to lock the door.

According to police reports,

Holloman and another man were in the store when one of the men asked for a headache powder. When Holloman gave the man what he asked for, police said, one of the three men produced a sawed off shotgun, demanded money and then fired.

Police reports said Holloman, armed with a .32 caliber revolver, returned the gunfire before he died.

The fourth man in the store, who later identified Bench as the man who shot Holloman, jumped to the floor behind a counter. He told police he heard at least one more shot before the three men fled the store in a car.

Bench was free on bond on armed robbery charges when the shooting occurred.

Bound Man Rescued

JACKSONVILLE, N. C. (AP) — A mobile home in the Onslow County community of Hubert burned Saturday night and authorities said the occupant of the trailer was rescued after being found tied and gagged.

Officers said a neighbor helped Richard A. Blackwell from the burning trailer. Blackwell was taken to the Naval Hospital at nearby Camp Lejeune where he was treated for minor burns, officers said.

Officers quoted a witness as saying three men were seen running from the trailer minutes before the fire was discovered.

To Consider Closing School

RALEIGH (AP) — A committee of the state Youth Services Commission will study the recommendation of Youth Services Director Ray Shurling that Richard T. Fountain Training School at Rocky Mount be closed.

In making the recommendation Friday, Shurling said the Rocky Mount facility is inadequate and its continued operation is not feasible.

Shurling said the school, one of seven the state operates for juvenile offenders, is costing the state $1.1 million a year and that it has a staff of 65 to care for 51 children.

The commission voted to appoint a committee to study Shurling's recommendations and report in two weeks. Named to the committee were Concord newspaperman John W. Kennedy, State Rep. Roy Spoon, R-Mecklenburg County, and Thelma Lennon of Raleigh.

Robert Atkinson, director of the school, told a reporter it had 200 children five years ago.

Shurling told the commission that in the 1971-72 fiscal year, the seven training schools had a population of 1,429 and that this had declined to 978 in 1974-75. In the same period costs per child had risen from $4,900 to $9,232.

Shurling told newsmen in an interview that courts are not sending as many delinquents to training schools as in the past.

The three-member committee scheduled a tentative meeting with the Fountain school staff next Saturday afternoon and will hold a public hearing in Rocky Mount that night.

We Endorse Amendment No. 2

On March 23, when voters go to the polls in the presidential primary, they will also vote on a constitutional amendment which would allow local governments to issue revenue bonds for private industries.

The proposal will be known as Amendment No. 2.

A similar proposal was defeated in November, 1974, but things have changed since then. For one thing the recession has brought about a slowdown in the establishment of new industries and therefore the competition is extremely keen for industries which can provide needed jobs in a community. At present every other state in the nation allows issuance of the revenue bonds for private industry, so it can be readily seen that North Carolina is at a decided disadvantage.

It should also be clear to the voters that the bonds would not be paid off with public funds, nor would their issuance in any way endanger state or local credit. If a company went under, local government credit wouldn't back the defaulted bonds. As an additional safeguard the bonds could be issued only for companies with high credit ratings. The advantage to the locating company is that the bonds can be issued at a lower interest rate.

So far there has been little organized opposition to the bond proposal and supporters express warnings that we will lose industries if the amendment is not passed.

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, sponsor of the bill said, "I think it would be very, very instrumental in attracting some diversified new industry to North Carolina and generating new jobs for North Carolinians."

Without it, I think you would continue to see a lot of industry that could possibly locate in North Carolina go elsewhere."

It is also possible that industries already here might expand in other states if the revenue bonds are not made possible.

We hope it is clear to all the voters that they will not be approving any new taxes or potential new taxes in voting for Amendment No. 2. Instead they will be improving the chances of North Carolina obtaining desirable new industries which will provide jobs and pay taxes themselves. In this competitive time of industry-hunting we are bound to all be better off with the approval of Amendment 2.

We urge all voters to cast their ballots favorably on this matter.

Answers Known Before Study Is Made

The N.C. Department of Transportation has allocated $3,200 in planning funds to Greenville for mass transit planning. The funds are to be matched locally. Another $25,600 will come from the federal government to finance a $32,000 study.

We have to wonder at the value of a $32,000 study which undoubtedly will tell us what we already know—that while there is a need for mass transportation, a system will have to be subsidized with public funds.

Nevertheless we hope the study will proceed as rapidly as possible so that the city can get on with the practical side of developing some form of public transportation.

THIS AFTERNOON

Sources For Local News

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Several recent studies both nationally and in North Carolina have tended to show that people are becoming more dependent on television for news, and reading newspapers less.

A study of library users and non-users in North Carolina completed recently sheds some important light on that subject.

"Television is the primary, but hardly the exclusive, source of information about public affairs for both groups," concluded Ray L. Carpenter, associate professor of library science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

But, when the questions go beyond simply asking where you get your news, "the newspaper is paramount and the radio quite important" when considering local public affairs, the survey of 1,000 North Carolinians showed.

Close To Home

"The more distant the affairs, the more important is television..." indicating that people tend to get their national and international news from the tube, but not those reports from close to home.

"Considering the fine calibre of some of North Carolina's metropolitan dailies in their national and international coverage, including syndicated columnists—the relative lack of depth in television coverage of nearly all events—the relative power of TV may tell us something about the orientation of even our library users toward printed materials," Carpenter writes.

The survey showed that library users depend on newspapers more strongly than non-users, and read editorial pages more, as well.

More than half the library users (53 per cent) said newspapers are the chief source of news on local public affairs, while 24 per cent named television. On state affairs, 42 per cent picked newspapers while 46 per cent named television. On National affairs, newspapers dropped to 24 per cent versus 58 per cent for television, and on international affairs, newspapers pulled 21 per cent compared to 62 per cent for television.

Among those who do not use the library, newspapers still outranked television on local news, but fell even more sharply compared to television on state, national, and international affairs.

Reader Profile
Overall, the study shows library users in North Carolina to be characteristically young, white, mobile, well-educated, and relatively well-to-do financially... active in politics, and community affairs, and very much in the minority.

On politics, library users tend to think of themselves mostly as conservative (34 per cent), with 22 per cent saying they are liberal, and 28 per cent saying "don't think of self this way."

How do library users and non-users compare in their attitudes toward local government? Carpenter asked people if they thought their local governmental officials would listen to them.

Nearly half (46 per cent) of the library users said they would listen; while 36 per cent figured they would not. Non-library-users strongly felt local officials would not listen to them (50 per cent), while only 27 per cent thought they would.

Carpenter concludes that library users feel more attuned to local government and are more influential... perhaps coming from the fact that library users are better educated and have higher incomes than non-users.

Sunday Morning Notes

Joe Jenkins of The Daily Reflector advertising staff was playing golf at the Farmville County Club recently.

He sliced a new ball into a tree.

As he headed toward the tree to retrieve the ball, a dog shot by him, picked up the ball and raced away.

Joe chased the dog which finally took refuge on a residential patio. The dog was joined by another dog which also sought to protect the pilfered golf ball.

Joe studied the situation and finally in exasperation gave a grotesque yell.

The surprised dog dropped the golf ball and both dogs took off running.

Joe sauntered over, picked up his new golf ball and returned to the game.

Your columnist wandered up in one of the gazebos on the downtown mall.

ALVIN TAYLOR

My sojourn was interrupted by applause. I looked back to see Pitt County's silver tongue orator, District Attorney Eli Bloom offering the one man ovation.

"I thought you were going to make a talk," he laughed.

"Not me," I answered. "I write for a living. This was put here for district attorneys."

Utilities commissioner Howard Gradis was complaining about undue restrictions by the Environmental Protection Agency.

"If they want perfection we can send them right up to the Pearly Gates and tell them that's where they'll find it," he said.

Not before the EPA instituted a few restrictions.

He noted the area where the "old radio towers used to be."

"You remember the old towers, Gene?" Gradis said to fellow commissioner Gene Prescott.

"Not if you keep using old, I don't," Prescott answered.

Lunch Hour Course

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the clerk worrying about the chattering cable machine to the high-level diplomats guiding the foreign policy of the Western world, the State Department is introducing a program for relaxation: transcendental meditation.

As part of its effort to encourage employees to improve their physical and mental fitness, the State Department Recreation Association is offering courses for those who want to learn about the meditation program popularized by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

At least 45 employees have expressed an interest in the courses, according to Bertram Knitter, a recreation association staff member.

The introductory courses are being offered free during lunch hours. If enough persons are interested, instructors from the Transcendental Meditation Institute will be engaged to run a complete, four-session program.

The fee for the complete program, approximately $125, will be paid by the individual participants.

"We're just making it easier for the employees to get into these things," said Knitter. "We put in TM under the umbrella of our health enhancement program. It's just a little piece of the puzzle."

"It is part of the over-all physical and mental fitness program that includes exercise classes, classes designed to help eliminate unhealthy habits, such as smoking, and a diet workshop for weight-reducing." The recreation association also includes an exercise course for persons who have had major heart problems.

As Knitter, a devotee of transcendental meditation, describes the meditating process, "you sit by yourself quietly in a room and let your mind go in its own direction."

An invitation to employees of the department, the U.S. Information Agency and the Agency for International Development said meditation "includes a simple mental technique practiced for 15 to 20 minutes twice

INSIDE REPORT

Toward A SALT Blow-Up

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—President Ford is moving toward approval of a new SALT agreement despite bitter opposition within his administration and threats of a major political explosion.

The Verification Panel, the administration's policymaking body on strategic arms limitation talks (SALT), met last week in a session that left "blood on the floor" (as described by one official) and produced no consensus. Shortly thereafter, the President was warned through senior aides that the prospective SALT II agreement would trigger a nasty Senate investigation and possible resignations of middle-level officials.

Nevertheless, Mr. Ford seems determined to support Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's quest of a climactic U.S.-Soviet arms control pact. In a campaign news conference in New Hampshire last Sunday, the President strongly defended the looming agreement—apparently believing that detente is still good politics.

Accordingly, one of two unlikely events must occur to avert a SALT II agreement and the accompanying political confrontation. The first would be Dr. Kissinger's inability to pin down an agreement with Moscow. The second would be Mr. Ford's political advisers prevailing on him not to supply heavy ammunition to Ronald Reagan's challenge for the nomination.

At issue are two new weapon systems: the Soviet Backfire bomber and U.S. cruise missiles which can be launched with uncanny accuracy from planes or ships. Negotiating at the Kremlin last month, Kissinger proposed that the Russians be limited to 275 Backfire bombers constructed over the next five years, while the U.S., in effect, would be permitted cruise missiles on only 34 bombers and 25 surface vessels and none on submarines.

Since this went beyond options approved by the National Security Council (NSC), Washington hardliners were outraged. The Soviet Union cannot build more than 275 Backfires in five years anyway, they argued, while Kissinger's limits would practically end development of the cruise missile—one new weapon where the U.S. clearly leads.

These objections were stated by Deputy Secretary of Defense William Clements, normally a Kissinger ally, and others at a Jan. 21 NSC meeting called to receive Kissinger's report from Moscow. Although the NSC did not formally reject the proposal, criticism was intense, to the displeasure of President Ford.

The President was spared an immediate decision by the Kremlin. Secretary Leonid Brezhnev again proved himself the hard Russian bargainer by demanding no limits at all on Backfire bombers but offering a public statement that the Backfire's range is only 4,000-5,000

Strength For Today

FULFILLING OUR LIVES

A man was once set a rare plant which he set in a big flower pot at the side of a fountain. But it never had a healthy growth. One day a careless workman broke the flower pot, and the plant—earth and all—fell into the water and sank to the bottom of the fountain.

A short time later a luxurious and unknown growth pushed its way up through the water. The plant knocked into the fountain was actually a water plant. It had pined away in the flower pot on the edge of the fountain. It was not until it fell into the water and got back into its element that it really began to fulfill its life.

We all have within us latent powers which are never used. Sometimes it is our fault. We lack application and diligence. But sometimes we have not put ourselves into the midst of circumstances which encourage the possibilities of growth within us. Happy for us if some unexpected event cast us into such circumstances.

Share Demo Field's Lead

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The latest nationwide survey shows Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama leading the field as the top choices of Democratic voters for the 1976 nomination.

Humphrey currently wins the support of 27 per cent of persons who classify themselves as Democrats while Wallace is the choice of 22 per cent. Those surveyed were asked to choose from a list of 16 men who have either announced their candidacy or have received a large share of the vote in earlier surveys of nomination choices.

Humphrey and Wallace far outdistance the others on the list. In third place is Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine with 9 per cent of the vote of Democrats, followed by Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota with 7 per cent, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington with 6 per cent, and Sargent Shriver also with 6 per cent. All others on the list receive 4 per cent or less of the vote.

The Democratic standings have been remarkably stable since last fall, when Humphrey outlook Wallace for the lead. Since that time Humphrey and Wallace have been in the No. 1 and 2 spots, respectively.

Jackson Unable To Build Momentum

Despite his active candidacy, Jackson has been unable to build momentum since his high point last spring when he was third in the standings, with the support of 13 per cent of Democrats.

Former George Gov. Jimmy Carter, despite his strong showing in the Iowa caucuses and heavy media coverage, has thus far failed to increase his vote in terms of the vote of Democrats nationwide.

Nor have other relative newcomers to the national political scene succeeded up to this point in building national support among Democratic voters.

In assessing the standings of these "new faces," however, it should be borne in mind that these men are far less well-known than are those who score highest in the current rankings.

It will be recalled that McGovern had a name awareness problem early in 1972. In a survey in February of that year, McGovern was the choice of only 6 per cent of Democratic voters, with Muskie and Humphrey far ahead of the field. By June, McGovern's support had climbed to 30 per cent. He led the field in a June Gallup survey and went on to win the nomination.

Although Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts has repeatedly said he will not be a candidate, his name was kept on the current list since speculation continues that he might accept a draft if the Democratic convention were to become deadlocked. When Kennedy's name is kept on the list, he continues to lead the field, winning 30 per cent of the vote of Democrats to 18 per cent for Wallace and 17 per cent for Humphrey. All others received 6 per cent or less.

Following is the question asked to determine current Democratic choices:

"Here is a list of people who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates for the Democratic party in 1976. (Respondents were handed a card with 16 names.) Which one would you like to see nominated as the Democratic candidate for President in 1976? And who could by your second choice?"

Following are the latest results and those from the previous (early January) survey, with Kennedy's vote distributed to the other candidates on the list on the basis of second choices:

Choices Of Democrats for 1976 Nomination (Kennedy not included)

	Latest	Early
Sen. Hubert Humphrey	27%	29%
Gov. George Wallace	22	20
Sen. Edmund Muskie	9	6
Sen. George McGovern	7	10
Sen. Henry Jackson	6	9
Sargent Shriver	6	5
Sen. Birch Bayh	4	5
Jimmy Carter	4	4
All others undecided	15	12

All other candidates in the latest survey receive 3 per cent or less of the vote.

kilometers (half the actual range, say hard-liners). Simultaneously, Brezhnev demanded no cruise missiles on surface vessels, plus the restrictions proposed by Kissinger.

Nobody believes this latest Soviet proposal is a last-ditch demand. Rather, in typically tough bargaining, the Kremlin predictably will pull back with a "concession"—a meaningless limit on Backfire bombers plus cruise missiles permitted on a few surface vessels.

In New Hampshire, Mr. Ford indicated he would accept any Backfire limit as better than none. But the real issue is the cruise missile, regarded by Kissinger mainly as a bargaining chip to gain new limits on strategic weaponry in SALT II. Disagreeing vehemently, his critics see the new weapon as a major breakthrough and view the prospective Backfire-cruise missile settlement as a huge Soviet gain in the European regional power balance. However, the President privately says that cruise missile development is not as far advanced as the Pentagon has claimed.

The overriding arguments are more political than military. Kissinger contends now is the time for agreement—before a new generation of Soviet hard-liners and U.S. dovish liberals takes over. Nor do Mr. Ford and Kissinger believe Congress will vote necessary money if there is no SALT II agreement. But Kissinger's critics dread the psychological impact on Western European governments of a Backfire-cruise missile agreement clearly in the Kremlin's favor.

That argument will detonate the political explosion resulting from a SALT II agreement. Sen. Henry M. Jackson would launch public hearings with testimony from James Schlesinger, more potent politically out of office than as Secretary of Defense, and perhaps officials whose resignations are now threatened. With Reagan talking about cruise missiles in New Hampshire, the political perils are obvious.

Only Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld seems able to avert the SALT explosion. Rumsfeld has been no Schlesinger taking a hard SALT line and feels open conflict between the Defense and State Departments hurts the President. But as a practical man, he may ponder the political cost of SALT II and so advise Mr. Ford. That is the last slender hope of the hard-liners.

A Conservative View

An Exceptional Duo Fighting The Bureaucrats

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

We will be hearing a great deal this year about the heroes who 200 years ago twisted the tail of the British lion. In keeping with the Bicentennial spirit, perhaps nominations are in order for contemporary heroes cast in the same mold. Two names come to mind: Ray Godfrey of Rapid City, S.D., and Howard Dearborn of Fryeburg, Maine.

These gentlemen are engaged in single combat with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, better known as OSHA. If they had been hanging around Boston a long time ago, they would have pitched the tea in the harbor.

Godfrey is proprietor of the Godfrey Brake Service at 110 Poplar Street in Rapid City. Back in mid-December, he was minding his own business at his own garage, when there came a knock on the door. It was a total stranger.

Godfrey asked who was he, and the stranger said he was an inspector for OSHA. Says who, says Godfrey. Says me, says the stranger. Izzat so, says Godfrey. And with that, Godfrey reached into his desk drawer and pulled out a handy-dandy form. Fill it out, says Godfrey to the stranger, and we'll see.

It was an "Official Public Servants Questionnaire." South Dakota has been plagued with phony Feds bearing phony credentials. Godfrey wanted to be certain whom he was letting on the premises. His prepared form inquired of the stranger's age, residence, race, sex, education, and whether he had a criminal record. It asked a lot of other questions—the same kind of damfool questions the government regularly puts to businessmen.

The stranger went away in high dudgeon, and a week or so later Godfrey found himself on the defendant's end of a suit in U.S. District Court. The Department of Labor was seeking a court order to compel Godfrey to admit the stranger to his shop. On December 31, Judge Andrew Bogue took the matter under advisement, and as of this past Monday that was where it rested. Meanwhile, 125 other employers in the Rapid City area have met at Godfrey's garage to see what additional OSHA tea they can toss in the harbor.

An OSHA inspector also came to call on the metalworking plant of Howard Dearborn, Inc., in Fryeburg, Maine. This was on June 24, 1974. The proprietor is a Yankee facsimile of the kind of character known in the South as an unreconstructed rebel. Dearborn's plant is engaged in highly sophisticated work. Even the bureaucrats have conceded that Dearborn's operation "is in good physical condition, is safety conscious, and does its best to comply with safety regulations."

Nevertheless, the inspector found a welding electrode cable with damaged insulation. OSHA hit Dearborn with a $25 fine, and Dearborn hit the roof. He said he was an honest businessman running an honest plant, and he refused to pay. He took it to the OSHA Review Commission. There the penalty was upheld. Dearborn still refuses to pay. His position is that nobody but nobody can track his way through the thousands of pages of OSHA regulations. If the inspector had merely asked him nicely to replace the cable, he would have replaced it on the spot. He long ago replaced it anyhow. The case has cost him $3,000 in legal fees, and he's directed his attorneys to appeal to the courts.

Godfrey and Dearborn are exceptional men.

Two Situations Raised Which Can Cost The Taxpayers A Bundle

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Old John Q. Public will do well, with his hand on his pocketbook, to give a little thought to a couple of situations involving federal employees. Either has the potential of costing him a bundle.

One is the unprecedented suit by a bunch of federal judges claiming their constitutional guarantee against pay cuts is being violated by the bite inflation takes out of the purchasing power of their pay checks. They want the courts to remedy this.

Should they win their case, with fellow judges passing on it, maybe to the Supreme Court, a real Pandora's box will be opened. What of others who have suffered inflation's cut of the dollar's buying power, say the holders of billions of Treasury bonds?

The other is the prospect of a cozy back-scratching alliance between members of Congress and a great horde of unionized federal civil servants. It was just that sort of arrangement between New York City and its employees that forced the Big Apple to the wall.

But, news reports say, unless President Ford can make a veto stick, the Hatch Act ban on federal worker activity will be lifted in what labor unions hope will be the first step to collective bargaining and right to strike legislation. Congress apparently is bent on ignoring a political lesson of 35-years ago. A little background on the "why" of the Hatch Act helps with the picture.

In the 1936 general election, President Franklin D. Roosevelt won a second term by a landslide and had huge Democratic majorities in both the House and Senate. FDR, often called a dictator in those days, became miffed when Congress rejected his scheme to pack the Supreme Court. So, when the 1938 Congressional elections rolled around, he decided to "purge" his party of some key House and Senate members who showed less than proper enthusiasm for some of his New Deal policies.

Roosevelt set out to beat Democrats on his black list in the party primaries. Challengers were handpicked and employees in the ballooning New Deal agencies were encouraged to participate by ringing door bells, giving money (lists were kept), lining up relatives and getting out the vote. The "purge" failed.

But Roosevelt's performance was a real shocker to members of the House and Senate, both parties. They were quick to see the danger of aggressive federal worker participation in campaigns. Properly organized, such a block could erect a real power over Congress.

The Hatch Act was the result. In return for the ban on active participation in politics, Congress gave the federal workers protection from any financial shakedown by politicians.

What's changed the picture? The answer is simple. Organized labor, the big unions, are making a bid for public employees at all levels of government and it wants these workers free to participate, as union members, in all types of political activity. The fact that this would give the government workers a tremendous advantage in bargaining on wages and fringes, which Congress sets, is brushed aside. The union weight would be felt "in" the executive branch as well as "on" the legislative.

The House approved the Hatch Act amendments last year and, news accounts say, the Senate will go along. A Ford Veto is expected. If it is upset, then next year the effort will be to put over a collective bargaining law for public workers with the right to strike thrown in.

If the day comes when federal employees can make trades with members of Congress—political help for pay raises—the cost is going to run high.

In bringing their suit over pay and purchasing power, the 44 district and appeals court judges may actually have taken their cue from Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger. For more than a year, Burger has been lobbying for higher pay for federal judges. He liked to raise the question of whether the intent of the constitutional pay guarantee of federal judges has been violated by inflation's erosion of the pay check. But he stopped short of proposing a test.

It may turn out that the suit is not a real constitutional challenge, but more of a ruse to pressure Congress to boost the pay of judges. But if it is argued to a conclusion, then the effort will have to be to place the blame for inflation squarely on government. The Constitutional protection against a pay cut was a guarantee against reprisal for rulings unwanted by government.

A ruling in favor of the judges would immediately raise the question of whether other long-running commitments of government can be satisfied with deflated dollars or require dollars based on a former purchasing power.

Southeast Becomes Magnet To Illegal Aliens

By KATHRYN JOHNSON Associated Press Writer ATLANTA (AP) — They are riding into the Southeast by rail, flying in by plane or jumping boat at major ports.

Some become highly paid engineers and college professors while others find jobs as kitchen helpers or garbage men.

Many of the Southeast's estimated 480,000 illegal aliens, most of them in Florida, came in legally and later became illegals, by violating the terms of their entry permits.

A crewman fails to reboard his ship at New Orleans, Mobile or Savannah. A Haitian rows a small boat to a spot in Florida. A foreign student, in the United States legally only to study, takes a job, thus joining the steadily growing influx of illegal aliens.

"The South is becoming more and more of a magnet for illegals," said Fred P. McCleskey, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Atlanta.

"And they have a pretty good chance of not being caught," he added. "We're badly understaffed."

There are an estimated 370,000 illegal aliens in Florida—the same number as legal aliens, says Edward Sweeney, immigration district director in Miami.

"That's quite a chunk of the national estimate—which is about 8 million as of 1975," Sweeney said.

"They have been swarming in, mostly from the Mexican border, at an estimated rate of 250,000 a year nationally—10,000 a year in Florida," he said.

"Worlds of Haitians are coming into Florida in small boats," another immigration officer said.

McCleskey estimates that most of Georgia's 25,000 illegal aliens came in legally and later became illegals when they violated their entry permits.

The southeastern director estimates Tennessee has about 25,000 illegals, Mississippi 15,000, Louisiana 10,000, Alabama 5,000 to 10,000, South Carolina 5,000 to 10,000 and North Carolina 10,000 to 15,000.

David Cole, head of the immigration office in Memphis, calls illegal aliens "one of our gravest national problems."

"An independent survey last year estimated that it cost the country $15 billion last year," Cole said. "That figure includes wages paid to illegal aliens who were filling jobs that could have gone to citizens who were on welfare or unemployment rolls."

McCleskey said an alien

Last year OSHA's 1,234 inspectors visited 88,800 establishments. They found 66,000 employers with an average of about five violations each. The inspectors proposed penalties totaling $9.5 million, or roughly $150 per citation. Only 5 percent of the cited employers appealed to the Review Commission; the other 95 percent figured it was cheaper to pay the penalty than to pay lawyers to fight it.

In the five years since its formation, OSHA has managed to become one of the most despised arms of the federal colossus. This is not because employers are opposed to safety. The notion is absurd. It is because the agency has delivered itself of a vast ocean of regulations that no employer can wade through, and because OSHA sends out inspectors who wouldn't know a brake shoe from a horseshoe. At any rate, that is the universal complaint.

A pessimistic prophecy is in order that the two mavericks will finally be corralled. The judge will order Godfrey to let the inspector in, and the inspector will penalize him 20 bucks for failing to provide a fur-lined cuspidor. Dearborn will spend another $1,000 in a futile appeal. But if we're giving out Bicentennial medals, marking revolution against tyranny, save a couple of silver ones for them.

MORE AND MORE AT HIS MERCY!

A Baby Picture Bargain Isn't To Be Overlooked

The only thing more hazardous than twins to the mental and financial health of a new mother is the "one 8X10 for 88 cents" photographer. Not only does the mother develop various nervous disorders from attempting to make an uncooperative baby smile for the camera, but she has to file for bankruptcy after she goes to pick up her 8X10 and ends up with the whole package.

Take me, for instance. A couple of weeks ago I spotted an 8X10 advertisement in the paper and decided to get the baby's picture made.

"Okay," Phillip said when I told him about my idea. "Just remember, it's an advertising gimmick. They want you to buy the whole package."

"Don't worry," I assured him. "After all, I'm a very strong-willed individual. I've got too much self-discipline to let myself get talked into something I don't really want."

He didn't seem entirely convinced, but I went ahead with my plans.

I dressed the baby in her prettiest pink dress, her fanciest booties, and her miniature lace stockings. Then we drove to the store where the offer was being made.

The only problem was that 25 other mothers had seen the advertisement, and they were all standing in line with their own dimpled darlings. By the time Meg and I reached the photographer, she had managed to stuff most of her dress in her mouth, to thoroughly saturate her stockings, and to work up a tremendous thirst.

GAIL MICHAELS

"Waaaa-aaa!", she exclaimed as we positioned her on the table.

It's amazing how one tiny infant can transform a group of well-adjusted adults. Thirteen other mothers rushed to the rescue - jangling keys, waving stuffed animals, and acting like a group of seasoned idiots. I was more sedate - all I did was tickle her tummy, make faces, and gurgle like a camel with a stomach condition.

Nothing helped. Even after I changed her, fed her, removed her wet stockings and booties, and stood in line behind another 25 mothers, Meg refused to cooperate. So we finally gave up and photographed her anyway. I was afraid that if I stood in line any longer, my knees would petrify.

Then came the day I picked up the picture. "Well, I'm glad in one way that she didn't smile," Phillip said that evening. "I know you wouldn't want more than one picture of her crying. Let me see it."

"First I need to explain something," I hedged. "You just can't imagine how cute a baby can look in a crumpled dress, bare legs, and a sweet little pout."

"Gail, you didn't!", he said in an ominous tone of voice. "I thought you said no one could talk you into anything you didn't want."

"They can't. But after I talked to the photographer, I realized that these pictures were something I really wanted."

"You're impossible," he signed. "Where are these irresistible pictures?"

"Right here," I answered, handing them to him. "And I did restrain myself. I only bought five wallet-sized. Don't you think she looks just like you?"

He gave them one hard look, and a fatuous grim spread over his face. "She sure does," he replied. "Why didn't you buy more?"

aliases." McCleskey said. "He was an engineer with a large construction company. He never went to college but he had a fraudulent degree and was highly intelligent and talented. We even found a plaque in his home from his company, citing him for being an outstanding engineer."

Florida's immigration chief says aliens "are becoming a bit more sophisticated and getting into counterfeiting of papers and documents."

Finding a Social Security card apparently is no problem for illegal aliens, McCleskey said. "We often find them with two or three Social Security cards."

An alien wishing to attend school in the United States must show before coming that he will not need a job.

For Pea Island Wildlife Refuge

Will Fight Buggies Ban

RALEIGH (AP) — A group of Outer Banks surf fishermen have pledged a fight against a proposal to close 90 per cent of the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge to beach buggies.

Supporting the stand of the North Carolina Beach Buggy Association is the North Carolina Wildlife Federation which decided last week to endorse the fishermen's call for hearings on the proposal.

Surf fishermen rely on beach buggies to get from one fishing hole to another as they follow schools of fish, said Donn S. Mitchell of Nags Head, vice president of the beach buggy group.

Refuge officials have asked the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to close 12 miles of the Pea Island beach from May 15 through Sept. 30 to protect nests of terns and loggerhead turtles.

Mitchell said his group opposes the plan because it would apply only to beach vehicles and not to those who might walk over the sand dunes.

Those who walk over the dunes pose a greater threat to the birds and turtles because the buggies get on the beach only by approved ramps, he said. "The proposed closure would affect only beach vehicles—not the walk-over-the-dune visitor who is bird watching, sightseeing or souvenir collecting; not the walk-in fisherman who may park his dear directly in front of a nest and not the rambunctious children and dogs who roam the dunes and vegetation," he said.

Mitchell said he believes the rule would be unfair to surf fishermen. In previous years, he said, refuge officials marked off areas where nests had been built and those areas were avoided by beach buggy drivers.

The association, which has 820 members from 12 states, would accept rules that forbid them driving too close to nests and dune vegetation, he said, adding that the association supports conservation efforts.

At the urging of the beach buggy group, the N.C. Wildlife Federation adopted a resolution asking for a hearing on the proposal so that views of beach buggy drivers could be weighed against any evidence of damage the vehicles might cause.

Anthony Ceremony

A brief ceremony honoring Susan B. Anthony will be held today at 3 p.m. in front of the Pitt County Board of Elections Office in Greenville.

Representatives of several women's groups will deliver readings commemorating Ms. Anthony's life. Ms. Anthony was instrumental in assuring the passage of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which gave women the right to vote. In fact, the 19th Amendment was known as "the Anthony Amendment".

Mayor Cox has proclaimed February 15 Susan B. Anthony Day in Greenville. This date marks the 156th anniversary of Ms. Anthony's birth.

and a spokesman says it is in the process of hiring a lobbyist.

The organization, which filed the papers Friday, has taken the name of North Carolina State Highway Patrol Trooper Association and the spokesman says negotiations are under way with the state's former governor, Bob Scott, to be the lobbyist.

Scott, of Haw River in Alamance County, currently heads a political consulting and government relations firm.

The new association, whose organization was announced some weeks ago, says it counts more than 500 of the state's 905 highway patrolmen as members.

Trooper Johnny Davis of Sanford, spokesman for the organization, says it is not a union and will not engage in work stoppages, strikes or enforcement slowdowns.

He says the association's constitution prohibits affiliation with any local, state or national unions.

Police unions have been organized in several North Carolina cities in recent months and they have been active in seeking higher pay, better working conditions and fringe benefits from local governments.

Davis says the trooper organization will lobby actively for similar benefits at the session of the General Assembly scheduled to get under way in May.

Transportation Secretary Jacob Alexander said Friday he was not aware that the association had formally organized. He said he had not discussed the association with patrol officials but he said he would not oppose the group.

N.C. Blue Honey
Said To Be Rare

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Honey lovers may someday find a new variety of the sweet substance on their grocery shelves—blue honey.

Blue honey is a rare type of honey found in North Carolina. Until recently, beekeepers thought blue honey was nothing more than a batch that had gone bad and discarded it, said Dr. John Ambrose, a North Carolina State University entomologist.

While other colored honey has been found to be discolored by impurities, blue honey is colored by a natural source, he said, adding, "It's very rare and good tasting."

To find out why some honey is blue, Ambrose plans to watch the bees this spring when the honey begins to flow to determine what type of plant they get nectar from. "There's a slight possibility that the nectar they're gathering is blue," he said, noting that no research has been conducted on blue honey.

If he learns the cause of blue honey, Ambrose said he hopes to help beekeepers increase production of the rare product so a market can be created for it.

Dead Marines Identified

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — Marine Corps officials Saturday identified three Marines killed Friday in the crash of a UH-1 helicopter on a training exercise in Puerto Rico.

They were identified as the pilot, 1st Lt. Francis D. Connell II, 27, of Middleville, N.J.; the copilot, 1st Lt. William S. Shannon III, 27, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and a crewman, Lance Cpl. Gilbert D. Polanco, 20, of Bagdad, N.M.

Their utility helicopter, known as a Huey, crashed in a remote area near Vieques, Puerto Rico, while taking part in the amphibious training exercise "Rum Punch '76."

All three men belonged to Marine aircraft group 29 at the New River Marine Air Station adjacent to Camp Lejeune but were temporarily assigned to the 38th Marine amphibious unit for the training mission.

Opposes Cigarette Tax

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., running in North Carolina's March 23 presidential primary, said Saturday he opposed Senate legislation to boost cigarette taxes because it would drive growers out of business.

In a statement issued from his Raleigh campaign office while he was campaigning in Florida, Jackson said the measure would "spell economic disaster for many thousands of families in North Carolina and elsewhere that depend on tobacco farming for their livelihood."

The measure, submitted by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-

Mass., and Gary Hart, D-Colo., has drawn criticism tobacco legislators in southern tobacco states. Tobacco is North Carolina's largest cash crop and it is a major cash crop in other southern states.

Jackson said he would work in the Senate to defeat the measure that would progressively boost cigarette taxes and levy taxes on brands on the basis of their tar and nicotine contents. The proceeds from the tax would go for health research and education.

Jackson charged the measure would eventually boost federal cigarette taxes by 250 per cent and called the measure "outrageously unfair and unwise."

Airport Grants

Three area airports have been awarded over $25,000 in grants under the North Carolina State Airport Aid Program, according to state Transportation Secretary Jacob F. Alexander.

The three are among 16 state airports which received grants under the program. The airports were recommended by the Aeronautics Council for the grants which totals $281,000.

Pitt-Greenville received the largest share of the local airports, an $11,500 grant for installation of lighting systems to make runway approach areas more distinct.

Williamston-Martin County Airport received $10,500 for expansion of the aircraft parking area.

Kinston-Stallings Field airport received $4,758 for setting up a crash-fire-rescue building. The airport's rotation beacon will also be moved.

Steven Weed's Book Draws Ire Of Hearst Defense Team

By MIKE DUNSTAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Steven Weed, Patricia Hearst's former fiance, was home "licking his wounds and trying to sleep" after drawing the ire of Miss Hearst's defense team, a close friend said.

Weed held a news conference Friday to publicize his new book about life with Miss Hearst. It was shortly before he was due to testify for the defense in her trial for bank robbery.

During the news conference, Weed said Miss Hearst had been "coerced" but not "brainwashed" by her Symbionese Liberation Army abductors. He later was dropped as a defense witness and was called "irresponsible" by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, while his publisher, Crown Publishers Inc. of New York, said the company was "embarrassed" by the incident.

Scott Swanton, who collaborated with Weed in writing the book, said Friday night the press conference had been set up two weeks earlier when Weed "had no idea he was going to testify."

"Steve didn't know until 2 a.m. Friday morning that he was going to be called to testify," Swanton said, "and we were only expecting about five people from radio and television who had requested interviews.

"But everybody showed up unexpectedly and it kind of blew up in our faces. We wanted to call it off, but by then the snowball was rolling and there was no way."

He said Weed was upset with the conference and wasn't sure whether to "hang up his cleats" and make no further public statements.

At the beginning of the press conference, Weed apologized, saying: "This was not intended to be anything resembling a press conference."

Asked whether he thought Miss Hearst was brainwashed by the SLA, he said: "She was 19 years old and did have a tendency sometimes to arrive at decisions that were a little unfounded. "But I think that if Patty had been the most together person in the world, and if she had been older and if her relationship with me and her parents had been absolutely solid, I think the net result would have been the same."

He said he believed Miss Hearst had undergone "direct coercion from the very beginning" of her kidnapping from their Berkeley apartment Feb. 4, 1974.

Bailey, talking with reporters Friday night in Tacoma, Wash., called Weed "a poor witness."

Said Bailey: "He's unable to contain himself to the subject matter and gives long speeches which we can do without."

Candidates To File Statements

RALEIGH (AP)—Steps to insure that candidates for the General Assembly file statements of their economic interests later this year have been taken by the Legislative Ethics Committee.

For more than two hours Friday the committee reviewed draft copies of forms that will be used by candidates and legislators once they are elected to disclose their business interest, large debts and major holdings in stocks, bonds and real estate.

Most of the discussion centered on minor questions, but the committee did agree to one change in wording that will prevent the opening of a potential major loophole.

The change will require candidates and legislators to list major holdings in stocks and bonds they own at the time they file the reports. The change cleared up some ambiguous language that would have permitted candidates and legislators to file out-of-date reports.

The law enacted by the 1975 General Assembly took effect last month. However, Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten issued an informal legal opinion which said that incumbent legislators would not be required to file statements of economic interest last month.

While several dozen legislators, including some who are running for state office this year, have voluntarily filed the economic statements, the first official disclosure reports won't be required until this spring.

The law requires candidates for the House and Senate to file their statements within 10 days after the deadline for filing notices of candidacy with county boards of elections. The last day for filing of candidacy is May 28 and the last day for filing economic interest statements is June 8.

Successful candidates must file reports in the January after their elections. An updated report must be filed the following January.

Sponge Diving Died As Old-Timers Moved On

By ORVAL JACKSON
TARPON SPRINGS, Fla.
(UPI) — A diver clad in a bulky diving suit and helmet slips below the surface of the water not far from the sponge docks here and before long sends to the surface one of the sponges for which this area is famed.

But the action is for the tourist dollar and not for the value of the retrieved sponge.

The sponge-harvesting operation on a volume basis is a thing of the past and one which seems unlikely to be revived, a veteran sponge dealer said as he sat in his office here and reminisced about the glory days of the sponge industry.

"There is very small production now, and although the market for sponges is pretty good I don't see any light on the horizon for the industry," said Stephen Katzaras, who now splits his time between his sponge business and real estate.

"The old-timers who were the ones who made sponging a big industry here are all out at the cemetery," Katzaras said.

"When the old-timers died the younger generation didn't want to dive.

"The old-timers had pride and were looking for the best sponges they could get," he said. "Now the government helps the people become lazy. They can sit around and draw unemployment for a year at a time so they have no desire to work," Katzaras said.

Katzaras said contrary to one popular belief it was not the development of synthetic sponges that sent the sponge-fishing industry into a tailspin; it was a disease that devastated the sponge beds just prior to 1940, followed by several outbreaks of red tide.

He said the industry made a brief comeback in the years immediately after the end of World War II, but the uncertainty of sponging because of weather, the red tide and other such factors, plus the ready availability of good-paying jobs in other professions sent the young Greek descendants into other occupations.

He said an effort was made several years ago to bring young divers here from Greece, but this failed because those divers also found it easier to go into other occupations.

Katzaras said in the heyday of the industry there were more than 80 boats employing divers and another 60 or so "hook boats" which plied the shallow waters and from which crewmen using hooks on poles snatched the sponges from the bottom.

The dive boats operated in the deeper water, up to six or more fathoms deep, and ranging up to 200 miles up the west Florida coastline.

"There would be 1,000 to 2,000 pieces of sponges at the twice-a-week auctions at the Sponge Exchange," Katzaras said. "We haven't had an auction now for about two months.

"Now there are only two or three sponge boats operating and they only go out once in

HELD TALENT SHOW

The G. R. Whitfield Student Government Association hosted a talent show Friday, February 6. The SGA planned, held auditions and coordinated the talent show. The show consisted of 26 acts including musical and comical acts.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, February 15, 1976—A-11

awhile, whenever the crew needs some money. And then the boats are only out a day or so, where the old-timers used to be gone one, two, three months."

He said the lack of an adequate sponge harvest here has led to the need to import sponges from Key West and the Bahamas to fill tourist needs.

Katzaras' views were echoed by Michael Koulianos, a gift store operator whose father was a sponge boat captain.

"With the tourists, we're always short of sponges," Koulianos said.

He too placed some of the blame for the lack of divers on government unemployment checks, which he said caused the potential divers to lose a reason to work.

Reporters Return To Chappaquiddick

when it plunged off the bridge, as theorized first in Jack Olsen's book, "The Bridge at Chappaquiddick," and adopted later by a number of other writers. Inasmuch as Kennedy was the only known witness to the accident, his account of the crash and his attempt to rescue Miss Kopechne must stand on its own.

Kennedy has insisted in every public statement about the accident that he does not know how he got out of the submerged car. But in an affidavit signed by a doctor who examined him, Kennedy is quoted as saying he escaped through a window.

Kennedy testified that, accompanied by two friends, he returned to the bridge, arriving there at 12:20 a.m., and that he thought he knew the time by looking at a car's dashboard clock. But the car had no clock, and there is no evidence to indicate how he could have known the time.

Kennedy and his two companions testified that, after failing in their own efforts to rescue Miss Kopechne, their primary concern was the need to report the accident to police immediately. Yet they did not use a telephone that one of them knew was located only a few feet from where they were talking.

Miss Kopechne probably died within minutes and, contrary to claims by some critics of Kennedy's actions, no rescue attempts after his initial try could have saved her.

Kennedy paid $90,923 from his own pocket to Miss Kopechne's parents in a financial settlement, but there is no evidence anyone was paid for silence about Chappaquiddick.

The Reunion

Joseph F. Gargan, a Boston lawyer who is Kennedy's first cousin and has been a close friend since boyhood, says it was his idea to throw a party for Kennedy campaign people during Edgartown regatta weekend on the island of Martha's Vineyard off the Massachusetts coast.

Those invited came from two distinct campaign corps. The women were the now familiar Boiler Room Girls, who had worked long hours during the brief presidential campaign of Robert F. Kennedy, assassinated 13 months before.

Of the original eight Boiler Room Girls, six arrived for what was to be the second reunion within a year. All single and in their 20s, the women had worked closely together but didn't socialize much with each other outside the office. What they had most in common was their devotion to Bobby Kennedy.

Four of the men, including Gargan, had worked in Edward Kennedy's Senate campaign. The senator was there, as was his chauffeur.

Questions have been raised about the propriety of this gathering of six single women and six men, all but one of whom were married. But there is no evidence that it was anything but a casual reunion of campaign friends.

The record is rife with conflicts and inconsistencies concerning time references and what persons attending the party recalled as having taken place. As with most such gatherings, no one was recording the precise times of the participants' comings and goings. Conflicts and inconsistencies also appear in the testimony of police officers and other witnesses who drifted in and out of the story of that weekend.

Memories faded with time, making it difficult to establish exactly what happened.

But much can be learned by a close examination of the voluminous record, and what follows are the best available answers to the key questions about how Mary Jo Kopechne died and how Kennedy and his associates behaved in the hours after the tragedy.

Drinking at the Party

Kennedy testified to having had two drinks — both rum and Coke — at the party on Friday night, the last one at about 9:15 p.m. No one testified to having seen him drink more than that or to having observed him in an inebriated state.

Most of the other partygoers testified to having had two drinks. Miss Kopechne, according to a postmortem blood test, had .09 per cent alcohol in her blood.

A chemist, John McHugh, testified she would have to have drunk at least 3.75 ounces (two generous drinks) of hard liquor in the hour before she died and quite possibly more, particularly if she had been drinking over a longer period of time.

Undisputed testimony by John B. "Jack" Crimmins, Kennedy's chauffeur, about how much liquor he brought to the cottage and how much he took away has led some investigators to suggest there was more drinking than was admitted to by the partygoers.

However, The AP discovered an obscure mention in the court record showing that eight people gathered at the cottage the previous night and drank from the same liquor supply. Assuming that generous drinks were poured both nights, the liquor consumed averaged slightly more than two drinks per person.

Kennedy's Departure With Miss Kopechne

The approximate time that Kennedy and Miss Kopechne left the party is crucial to the senator's account because of a conflict that developed later over when the accident could have occurred. And on the departure time, the testimony of the other partygoers is consistent. All placed the pair's departure between 11:00 and 11:45 p.m. The senator, who wasn't wearing a watch, said he left at 11:15 p.m.

The two witnesses whose recollection about the time was most precise testified that Kennedy and Miss Kopechne drove away from the cottage at about 11:30 p.m.

There is no evidence that Kennedy and Miss Kopechne were romantically involved, yet doubt persists about his claim that they planned to return immediately to their respective hotels in Edgartown.

One skeptic was District Court Judge James A. Boyle who, in his report on the inquest into Miss Kopechne's death, inferred "A reasonable and probable explanation ... that Kennedy and Kopechne did not intend to return to Edgartown at that time, that Kenedy did not intend to drive to the ferry slip and his turn onto Dike Road was intentional."

There are several factors pointing to such a conclusion:

Crimmins testified that Kennedy called him out of the cottage and asked for the keys to the Oldsmobile. The senator told him, Crimmins said, that he was returning to Edgartown and would drop Miss Kopechne back at her hotel because she wasn't feeling well, having had too much sun at the beach that afternoon.

But Miss Kopechne's friends at the party testified later that she had said nothing to them about not feeling well.

Kennedy did not mention any such statement in his testimony — only that "she indicated to me that she was desirous of leaving if I would be kind enough to drop her back at her hotel." In an interview with The AP during this study of the Chappaquiddick case, Kennedy said he had no recollection of Miss Kopechne saying she didn't feel well, nor any recollection of having told that to Crimmins.

Neither Kennedy, whose presence was the highlight of the party, nor Miss Kopechne said goodbye to any of the others when they left the cottage, supposedly for the night.

When Miss Kopechne drove away with the senator, she left her purse behind. It was found under a table in the cottage the next morning.

Miss Kopechne did not have her motel room key with her when she left the cottage. "I think I had it," said Esther Newberg, who was sharing a motel room with Miss Kopechne that weekend. But Miss Kopechne did not ask her for the key before she left.

Leaving the cottage, Kennedy and Miss Kopechne drove northeast along the two-lane blacktop road that is the main street of Chappaquiddick and the most practical route from the cottage to the ferry landing about three miles away.

But instead of following the curve, Kennedy made a sharp right turn onto Dike Road, a dirt and gravel road which runs seven-tenths of a mile to an old wooden bridge spanning Poucha Pond and ends before reaching the dunes and ocean beach beyond.

The isolated bridge area is used primarily by swimmers and fishermen by day and as a lovers' lane at night. Most of the partygoers, including Kennedy and Miss Kopechne, had ridden back and forth across the bridge once earlier that day to swim at the beach.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Council of California Growers has publicized a "ten most wanted" list in which it names the Mediterranean fruitfly as public enemy number one.

The Oriental fruitfly is number two, and the sugarcane rootstalk borer is in third place.

Attention Greenville Utilities' Customers with Electrically Heated Homes!

Our Budget Billing Policy will enable you to spread your electric heating costs over a 12 month period.

Budget Billing Policy

1. AVAILABILITY

Budget Billing will be available to all residential customers who use electric energy only for home heating, and upon specific request and execution of Budget Billing Agreement as follows:

(a) Customers who own and reside in permanent homes will be placed on Budget Billing upon request and execution of Budget Billing Agreement.

(b) Customers who reside in apartments will be placed on Budget Billing after 12 months continuous experience in the same apartment and upon request and execution of Budget Billing Agreement.

(c) Customers who reside in mobile homes will be placed on Budget Billing after 12 months continuous billing, and upon request and execution of Budget Billing Agreement.

2. PURPOSE

To assist customers in leveling winter heating cost by spreading payments evenly over an eleven month period.

3. DETERMINING BUDGET BILL

The monthly electric Budget Billing will be determined by one of the following methods:

(a) Where a customer has had 12 months experience under the Commission's Residential Electric Rate Schedule in his house, apartment, or mobile home, the monthly electric budget billing will be determined by dividing 12 months actual experience of electric billing, including fossil fuel adjustment charges, by eleven (11).

(b) If 12 months experience is not available, an estimated annual electric bill for the home will be made by the Commission's representative and the monthly electric budget billing will be determined by dividing the estimated annual electric bill, including estimated fossil fuel adjustment charges, by eleven (11).

(c) When a Budget Billing Plan is begun during any month other than the month of May, the Budget Bill will be an amount estimated by the Commission to fairly represent the anticipated average electric bill, including fossil fuel adjustment charges, until the next settlement date, and thereafter shall be determined by method (a) or (b) above.

4. ADJUSTMENT OF MONTHLY BUDGET BILLING

If at any time during the contract period the monthly electric budget billing is found to be in error, the Commission will, upon written notice to the customer, increase or decrease the monthly electric budget billing as necessary to more accurately reflect the annual bill. Every account will be reviewed at the time of annual settlement and adjustments made, as necessary, to the monthly Budget Bill.

5. BILLING AND COLLECTIONS

The electric meter will be read monthly in accordance with the Commission's standard procedures. The customer's monthly bill will show the actual kilowatthours consumed and the monthly electric Budget Bill. Billing of other utility services will be made in accordance with standard rates. The Commission's existing policies for collection of accounts will be followed. Where customers are cut-off for non-payment of account, service will be restored only after full settlement of account, including Budget Billing, has been made, and customers will be removed from the Budget Billing Plan.

6. ANNUAL SETTLEMENT

Annual settlement for the electric bill will be made in the April bill for each customer. The customer will receive an annual settlement form showing monthly electric consumption, monthly electric budget billing, and regular monthly electric billing, including fossil fuel adjustment charges. An account that has been underpaid will be billed for the difference on the April bill. An account that has been overpaid will be refunded by check during the month of April.

A customer may be removed from the Budget Billing plan at any time upon request and proper settlement of account to date.

BUDGET BILLING AGREEMENT

It is the understanding of both parties to this agreement that the only purpose of this agreement is to spread the cost of electric service as evenly as possible, on a monthly basis, over an annual period. Hence, billing under this agreement will not result in any greater or lesser payment to the Commission over an annual period, than would be the case with customary monthly bills.

For the purpose of rendering bills for such service, the Commission has found or has estimated the customer's annual bill for electric service, including fossil fuel adjustment charges, to be $_____. The Customer agrees to pay one-eleventh (1-11th) of his annual electric bill each month, or $_____, per month, as his electric Budget Bill. At the April billing, the Commission will reconcile the total of the equal payment amounts for the period with actual charges for electric energy used, including fossil fuel adjustment charges, and the difference will be billed, or refund made, to the Customer at that time.

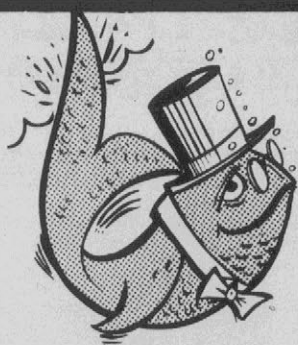

The Customer hereby requests that his bill for electric service be prepared in accordance with the provisions of this agreement and further agrees to abide by the Commission's adopted Budget Billing Policy.

Potatoes Assume Value Of Bullion

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — The thief before the bar of justice had stolen something very precious, and the judge was stern.

"Potatoes might be compared with jewelry these days," lectured Magistrate Mark Romer. "Due to the price of potatoes this offense of stealing them has become prevalent. A fine must be imposed to deter people like you."

And he slapped a 100 pound (7206) fine upon Andrew Curlin, potato thief.

Why on earth would anyone want to steal potatoes?

Why is Dennis Bradley, who normally guards payrolls and gold bullion, standing nightly guard with his gun and Prince, his fierce Alsatian, on 200 tons of potatoes in an English farmer's barn?

Why has Norman Higgins, who owns a north-of-England cafe, offered his $2,500 speedboat as a swap for 7 1-2 tons of spuds?

Because there's an aching hunger for potatoes in half of Europe, that's why.

Prices are sky-high, Common Market ministers wring their hands and some very complicated double shuffling is going on.

A United Press International survey of the Great Potato Famine uncovered one note of cheer for those who, like the British, demand chips with everything. Go east, young man, go east. Or south.

There's no potato problem in Poland or Russia, in Italy or Greece, in Ustrea and Switzerland.

Spain has fritos in plenty, but potatoes in neighboring Portugal doubled in price almost overnight. Finland mashes merrily away, but imports and prices in next-door Sweden and Denmark are zooming.

As in so many things European these days, Britain is worst off.

English housewives are paying 25 cents a pound for the lowly spud. Stocks on hand — a third of normal — will be gone by April. Grocers say the price will be 45 cents a pound by then.

Potatoes are almost as expensive in Germany, Italy and Yugoslavia and even worse in Denmark, the UPI survey showed. Only government subsidies, price ceilings and extra imports have peeled the price in Belgium, Sweden and Portugal.

The root of the potato problem grew in 1974. There was a great crop that year, so prices took a nosedive.

Naturally farmers planted fewer spuds in 1975. Then came a hot, dry summer the potatoes hated. Germany's crop, a third of the Common Market's potatoes, was down a quarter. Yugoslavia's down by 50 per cent, Europe's generally by 25 per cent.

Following the law of supply and demand, prices therefore went wild.

Government after government tried to slap a lid on them. Some results were almost comic. Take Belgium.

Belgium claims to have invented French fries. It serves them with everything. It sells them in paper cups in tiny "friture" shops which sell nothing else.

Thus potatoes loom large in the cost of living index. Trying to keep that index down, the government slapped on a ceiling price of 11 cents a pound on potatoes. Two things happened.

One, Belgian growers stopped selling potatoes in Belgium. Two, they shipped them by the ton across the border to Holland, where prices are higher.

Holland, meanwhile, merrily shipped its own spuds all over the place — about 100,000 tons to Sweden, what a Danish official called "very large amounts" to Denmark, 172,500 tons to Britain so far this winter.

Finland rushed into the Belgian friture gap with 147 tons of spuds, though a Finnish official pleaded, "Please don't tell everybody we have so many potatoes or we'll be swamped with requests."

Belgium raised its ceiling price. Common Market bureaucrats, spotting a vacuum, acted fast. Potatoes are the only major farm crop not covered by a Common Market policy, so they promptly proposed one — a Potato Common Market complete with quality norms for three types of tuber.

Ministers tried to scrap import duties on potatoes from North Africa. France and Italy blocked that to boost prices for their early spring crops.

But tariffs were lifted on old potatoes from Poland, a world power in potatoes, where Western spud-lovers sought salvation.

Poland, however, was hit like everyone else by the 1975 drought. Its potato mountain is more a molehill, leftovers from a crop of 46 million tons compared with 52 million two years earlier.

So school children in Lincolnshire, England's main potato area, are getting potatoes with only two school meals a week instead of five.

They're getting curry and rice instead, but according to one spokesman, "They seem to like the alternatives."

Cornerstone Reveals Change

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — When the cornerstone for Long Beach's municipal auditorium was uncovered its contents disclosed the cost of living in 1931 wasn't costly.

Butter sold at 32 cents a pound, a two-pound loaf of bread cost only 7 cents and a woman could get a permanent for $2.98. The big movie at the time was "Cimarron," starring Richard Dix and Irene Dunne.

Answers to Your Energy Conservation Questions:

Since home heating is the single largest expense in your family's energy budget, it offers the greatest opportunities for savings.

Q: Can insulation save me money?

A: Yes! Good insulation is the single most important factor in reducing the amount of energy needed to heat and cool your home. Adequate insulation can reduce your heating and cooling bill by as much as 50 percent.

Q: What if I can't afford insulation?

A: There are other low-cost energy-saving measures you can take. Seal cracks or leaks under eaves, and around windows and doors with caulking compound. Replace or install weatherstripping around door and window frames. Install storm windows. Sheets of clear plastic, available in hardware stores, and placed over windows and doors, make a great low-cost substitute for storm windows.

Q: Does turning my thermostat back really help?

A: You bet! Keep your thermostat as low or as high as comfort permits. Each degree over 70° in the winter adds about 3 percent to your annual heating bill; each degree below 70° saves about the same amount.

Q: Can I really use the energy from sunlight?

A: Sure. You can take advantage of this free energy source of heat and light by opening curtains or drapes when the sun is shining, and closing the drapes during overcast periods and at night to prevent heat loss.

Citizens Are Trained In Treating Heart Attacks

By WENDY WALKER
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — There are so many people in Seattle trained to deal with heart attack emergencies that David J. Evans had his life saved twice last year by those around him.

More than 100,000 people, 5 per cent of Seattle's metropolitan area population, have been specially trained to give first aid to heart attack victims in the critical moments before a doctor or an ambulance arrives.

So far, the citizen heart doctors have been credited with keeping more than 500 people alive — people who might have died if they hadn't received aid.

Food Service Growth Seen

NEW YORK (UPI) — The food service equipment industry should expand at an average annual rate of 7.3 per cent over the next decade, according to the market research firm of Frost and Sullivan. It says combined sales by 1985 should approach the $2.3 billion level, with a lion's share of the growth attributed to sales of microwave ovens.

seconds after they were stricken.

Evans collapsed one day last year at his office. He had no pulse. A colleague, Niels Hansen, was a graduate of the special training and recognized the coronary symptoms. He administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while another worker called the Fire Department emergency squad, then he showed another man the kind of chest massage that keeps blood circulating.

By the time the emergency squad arrived, Evans showed signs of life.

"It gives you a warm glow to save a life," Hansen said later. Four months after that.

Franchises To See Sales Jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales volume of franchised businesses will jump about $25 billion this year to a total of $200 billion, according to the International Franchise Association. The industry group points out there are 400,000 franchised outlets in this country, accounting for about a third of all nationwide retail sales.

Evans collapsed while shopping near a newsstand. News dealer Earl Patch was another graduate of the special training. Evans was revived again.

Koichi Sumida had a heart attack on the golf course but was saved by three teen-agers who had taken the training. Girl Scout Mary Ann Palkey revived her father. The wife of Harold Maxum saved her husband three times.

The training is in a three-hour course run by the Seattle Fire Department for anyone over 12 who wants to enroll. Doctors from the University of Washington's Harborview Medical Center serve as teachers along with specially trained firemen.

The training program, called Medic Two, started here in 1971. Since then, similar programs have begun in other cities and towns across the nation, among them Miami, Los Angeles and Columbus, Ohio.

William Landers, the Fire Department's deputy chief, says the program has more than doubled the long-term survival rate of heart attack victims in metropolitan Seattle. It said.

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson preaches black revolution these days, he is likely to begin by lecturing his young listeners on the courtesy of doffing their hats.

Jackson, campaigning for economic civil rights, is not content to blame all his people's problems on white oppression.

He believes some are problems of self-respect, morality and self-discipline within the black community.

"Nobody will save us from us — but us," he says, exhorting his audiences to return to the old-fashioned virtues.

"We have allowed death to change its name from Southern rope to Northern dope," he says. Too many black youngsters have been victimized, he says, "by pushing dope into their veins instead of hope into their brains."

Jackson, the Chicago-based "Country Preacher" from South Carolina and 34-year-old former lieutenant of Martin Luther King Jr., was in town recently to organize a Washington chapter of his Operation PUSH (People United To Save Humanity).

He was interviewed after an early-morning demonstration at the new FBI building, demanding more and better jobs for blacks.

Speaking privately with the same rhythmic, alliterative preaching style he uses so successfully before black audiences, Jackson spoke of the importance of challenging white institutions in behalf of "silver rights," the new economic civil rights.

But he also has a strong, distinctly conservative message of spiritual regeneration for the black community.

In that way Jackson is not the radical he appears to whites, but a moral conservative who abhors abortion, holds a traditional view of the family and strongly supports self-discipline in the schools and streets.

He says the black community has the same priorities as the Third World: "Discipline and fighting decadence come first, before the politics of liberation."

He sees the day when fathers will come to their children's schools to sign report cards and patrol the halls to end violence and eliminate drugs, and when children will be off the streets at 7 p.m. because "they're studying rather than mugging."

"We ourselves have to stop the flow of drugs into the community," Jackson said. "Nobody is going to do that for us; it's no one else's moral obligation."

Jackson still sees the churches as the primary institutional base in the black community and the reservoir for developing organizations such as PUSH. "The church is the only institution we have that is there 52 weeks a year," he said.

The PUSH symbol is a triangle. The base is discipline, and one side is moral regeneration. Economic gains form the third side.

"We have the right to take a vacation anywhere we want, but we can't afford it; we have the right to go to any school we want, but we can't afford the tuition," Jackson said.

Economic depression in the black community "is cutting away the substance of many of the rights that have been gained," he said.

"Having civil rights without silver rights is like having the right to swim in a pool without any water in it."

Jackson said Operation PUSH will focus on Washington as the center of a new, national poor people's lobby.

"We need to be influencing the shape of legislation before it hits the floor, we need to be on the Hill two or three times a week, we need to be monitoring government agencies," he said.

There's something about Appalachian State University that seems to bring out the worst in East Carolina in Boone, and the best in Greenville.

VMI Choking Second With Win

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP)—Virginia Military's Keydets, led by John Krovic and Ron Carter, took the lead almost at the start Saturday night and tightened their grip on second place in the Southern Conference basketball standings by beating The Citadel's Bulldogs 76-59.

The Bulldogs led 2-0 and never were in front again as the Keydets ran their conference

Spiders Defeat American

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Mike Morton scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to pace Richmond's hot-shooting Spiders to a 77-61 basketball victory over American University's Eagles Saturday night.

The Spiders hit 61.2 per cent of their field goal attempts in running their record to 12-10.

Richmond took the lead for good on Morton's two foul shots with 15:22 left in the first half.

Team Involved In Brawl

NEW YORK (AP)—Several members of the United States hockey team were taken to a police station late Saturday night after being involved in a brawl at a restaurant in downtown Innsbruck, ABC-TV reported.

The network said no arrests had been made—at least among members of the U.S. team—but that one player had been "detained."

Wolf said center Bob Miller of Medford, Mass., appeared the most seriously injured, having been taken to a hospital with facial cuts, ABC said. Wolf added that neither police nor the restaurant's proprietor would comment on the incident.

Terps Survive Tiger Rally, 98-89

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said it "was a big win" after his Terrapins downed the Clemson Tigers 98-89 Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

"It was an excellent win for our club. I didn't know how our ball club would react after the loss to North Carolina, but we were able to maintain our poise. We didn't blow the game and I was proud of that."

"Chris Patton and Lawrence Boston did a good job on (Wayne "Tree") Rollins. In the first half we played the "big team" for the first break but couldn't do it in the second half due to foul trouble."

Clemson coach Bill Foster said his team played their hearts out and he was proud of them.

"We missed too many easy shots. Tree and David Brown had good shots in the first half. We haven't gotten after anybody as well as we did today," he said.

"We hit a valley and now are getting back again come tournament time. The key plays were on three-and-one situations when we should have been getting a three-point play. Instead, we came up with nothing."

Maryland, ranked fifth in the nation, withstood a furious second half Clemson rally to take the victory.

Clemson was down by as much as 18 points, 70-52, with 15:21 left in the game. But the Tigers scored 11 unanswered points with four players sharing in the run to cut the margin to seven, 70-63, in a space of 3:17.

Last night, the two schools' basketball teams played in Greenville, and the Pirates romped to an 84-66 victory over the Apps, leaving ECU with a shot at home berth in the post-season Southern Conference record to 7-3 and their over-all mark to 14-9. The defeat dropped The Citadel to 5-7 in the league and 8-15 over-all.

Krovic scored 20 points and Carter added 19 while also pulling down nine rebounds. Will Bynum had 11 points and 11 rebounds for the Keydets, who built their margin to 38-25 at intermission and never were in trouble.

All-Southern Rod McKeever was the Bulldogs' only double figure scorer with a game-high 27 points.

Rampants Grab Five Firsts

ROCKY MOUNT—Rose High took five first place finishes out of 13 classes to wrap up the Division I wrestling tournament, last night.

The Rampants won an additional four seconds, one third, one fourth and two fifths for a total of 101 points. Rocky Mount, which had two firsts, was second with 79, Northern Nash had 65, Northeastern scored 27 and Wilson had 23.

Winning first places for the Rampants were John Lawler, Jessie Baker, James Cherry, Tyrone Perkins, and Jimmy Davis.

The next outing for the Rampants will be the sectionals Feb. 20-21 in Greenville.

Tournament.

The defeat knocked Appalachian State out of third place, back down to fourth, just percentage points ahead of the Pirates. ASU is now 6-5, while the Bucs are 7-6 in league play.

Both have two games left. For the Pirates to take fourth, it will be necessary for VMI to defeat Appalachian in Lexington next Saturday. If that happens, it doesn't matter what happens in tomorrow night's game here against Furman.

"I've got to give a lot of credit to our assistant coaches," Coach Dave Patton croaked after the game. Patton has been bed-ridden most of the week with a case of the flu. "Our assistants got the team ready to play and they did a super job. I'll stay sick if we'll keep playing like this."

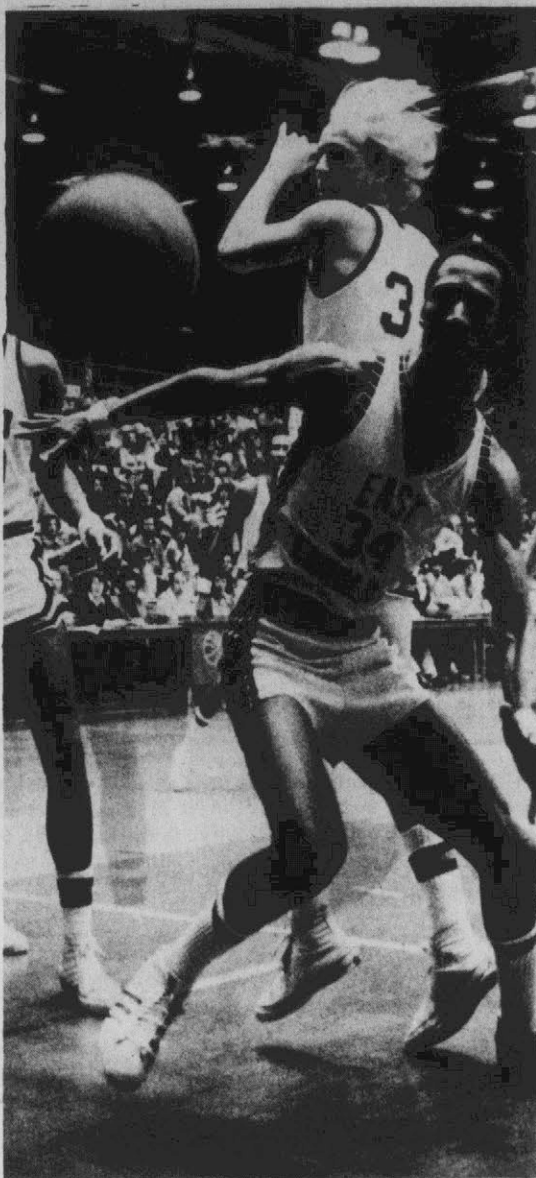

The Bucs played one of their better games of the year although their shooting was off somewhat in the second half. They fired in 50 percent of their shots in the first half, and 43.2 per cent in the second for a 46.8 per cent overall. But their sticky defense held ASU to only 40.3 per cent for the game, including 39.0 per cent in the second half.

The Pirates recorded only nine turnovers and had one steal against them. They forced 17 ASU turnovers and stole the ball six times from the Mountaineers.

East Carolina also recorded 20

Gerald Wiggins (RM) 3-1, finishes second. 158. Raymond Wooten (R) finished in fifth place. 170. Burney Fleming took fifth place. 188. Ronnie Goodall (R) defeated Russell Barcliff (NE) 6-1. Finals: Goodall lost to Mack Wiggins (RM), 3-2 for second place. 198. Willie Mays (R) finished in fourth. Heavyweight: Rocky Butler (R) lost to Tony Barnes (RM). boards. They recorded 46 captures as compared to 43 for the Bucs. However, East Carolina's Larry Hunt led the game with 14, Fouls appeared to be playing a role in the game until late, when ASU was forced to foul to try and get the ball. At one point midway through the second half, East Carolina had had two players to foul out, while a total of just nine fouls had been called against the Mounties.

ASU led just once, at 1-0, on a free throw by Darryl Robinson 40 seconds into the game.

East Carolina captured the lead as Reggie Lee hit during the second minute, and then added another for a 4-1 edge. Garner's first basket, followed by another jumper by Lee, upped the edge to 10-3, and the two teams swapped points for the next few minutes. Then, East Carolina ran off seven in a row, starting with a jumper by Hunt and ending on a three-point play by Lee for a 33-19 edge with 4:32 left in the half. After another swap time, the Bucs ran it out to 17 on baskets by Garner and Al Edwards. A three-point play by Calvin Bowser cut it back to 14 with seven seconds left, but a 40-footer by Buzzy Brame gave the Bucs a 44-28 halftime lead.

In the second half, the Bucs quickly moved out by 20 points at 50-30 on a jumper by Edwards

The Blue Devils, 12-10, used 11 of Spanarkel's points in a five-minute stretch to turn a 15-12 lead into a 30-17 advantage with 8:55 left in the first half.

After trailing 44-35 at halftime, St. Joseph's scored the first eight points after intermission to close within one point.

But Tate Armstrong and Mark Crow, helped by some splendid passing by Spanarkel, locked up the victory for Duke with 10 minutes still to play.

Jacksonville Wins In Overtime, 81-75

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Jacksonville University outscored Furman 12-7 in the overtime period after overcoming a big second half deficit in regulation time to claim an 81-75 victory Saturday night.

It was Furman's third overtime loss of the season and dropped the Paladins' record to 6-17 overall.

Jacksonville grabbed the lead for the first time at 69-67 with just over two minutes left on a jump shot by Marvin Lloyd, the game's leading scorer with 24 points. Neither team scored again until Paladin guard Ron Smith hit a layup with eight seconds left in regulation to tie it at 69-69.

Furman had lead throughout the game and was up by as many as 14 points late in the first half, 38-24. Its lead at halftime was 46-33.

Jacksonville began its comeback early in the second half, pulling to within three with just seven minutes gone. After Furman moved back out to what looked like a comfortable eight-point margin, the Dolphins began to close in again and stayed with the Paladins for the last five minutes of regulation.

North Carolina center Mitch Kupchak led the third-ranked Tarheels with 35 points, while Walter Davis had 26 and Ford added 22.

Phil Hicks became Tulane's all-time leading scorer with 36 points. Pierre Gaudin added 24 and center Jeff Cummings added 20.

North Carolina led 43-39 at halftime and took a nine-point lead late in the second half. But the Green Wave rallied to tie the game at 73-all with 4:13 left.

The game went into overtime at 79-79 as North Carolina's Bruce Buckley hit a short jumper.

Neither team led by more than two points in the first three overtimes. In the first, Ford's five-foot jumper with four seconds left tied it at 89-all.

In the second, Gaudin's driving layup at the buzzer made it 95-85, and in the third Cummings hit two free throws to tie the score at 99 apiece.

Finally, Tulane grabbed a quick three-point lead in the fourth overtime on a layup and free throw by John Bobzien, but Ford hit four of six free throws to give North Carolina a one point lead.

Spence Puts NCSU Past Wake, 87-85

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Phil Spence performed his last second heroics for the second time in two weeks Saturday afternoon. The senior center grabbed the rebound of a missed 28-foot Steve Walker desperation shot and put it in the basket at the buzzer to lift 12-ranked N.C. State to an 87-85 victory over Atlantic Coast Conference opponent Wake Forest.

Spence tapped in a missed shot at the buzzer against Virginia two weeks ago to enable State to beat the Cavaliers.

The highly-partisan Wake Forest crowd of 12,200 cheered wildly as Spence's shot went through the basket, a regional television audience saw the play repeated six times, but the struggling Wake Forest team was unbelieving. They thought the shot came after the buzzer.

"I didn't think it was good," said Deacon Coach Carl Tacy. "But it was the officials' decision."

Spence, who scored 14 points and pulled down 11 rebounds, said he was just playing the final seconds as he does the entire game. "I just got the rebound and then put it back up, hoping it to be good," he explained.

N.C. State's Kenny Carr led all scorers with 28 points, but was not in the game at the final shot. The sophomore forward fouled out with 48 seconds on the clock. He had played his last 9:50 with four fouls. The Wolfpack's Al Green added 22 points, his highest at State. The 6-1 guard was also responsible for nine rebounds.

Wake Forest was led in scoring by Skip Brown and Rod Griffin with 23 points each.

Wolfpack Coach Norm Sloan did not see his team's game-winning basket. "I was looking at the clock and hoping that Phil would take the shot," he said. "Phillip seems to be specializing in that kind of shot."

After a Wolfpack timeout with 14 seconds on the clock and the score tied 85-85, State players passed the ball around until it wound up in Walker's hands 28 feet away with just five seconds remaining. "I've made it from there before," the freshman forward explained. "but it was just a desperation shot. I knew the clock was getting low and someone had to put it up."

The game saw-sawed throughout with each team never leading the other by more than six points.

With 2:09 left in the game, N.C. State led 85-80. Griffin scored five straight points for Wake Forest to tie the score at 85-85 with 48 seconds left.

N.C. State controlled the ball from that point, calling a timeout with 14 seconds to go. When action resumed, the State players passed the ball until Walker made his shot.

N.C. State is now 18-4 overall and 6-2 in the conference while Wake Forest is 15-7 and 4-6.

Indians Hold On For 75-73 Win

DAVIDSON, N. C. (AP) — "Davidson is the best 5 and 18 team I ever saw," William and Mary Coach George Balanis observed Saturday after his team's 75-73 Southern Conference basketball victory over the Wildcats.

"They kept coming after us. They don't quit," he added. "Most teams with only five wins give up when they get behind."

Davidson's Wildcats obviously didn't as they fought right down to the game ending buzzer in losing to the conference-leading Indians in a regionally televised squeaker.

"We're lucky we made our free throws at the end of the game," said Balanis. Referring to Davidson's home floor, he added, "I can't see how anyone can win easy here."

Davidson Coach Bo Brickels, who was less than complimentary of the game's officiating, observed, "I get the impression sometimes we're not supposed to win."

Brickels took exception to several calls by officials Harry Bushkar and Dick Cook. However, the game went off without any technicals.

The Davidson coach also observed, "When we got our five-point lead in the second half, we started taking too many quick shots. We lost our pa-tiency." The Indians improved their record to 7-2 in the conference and 12-10 overall, while Davidson dropped to 1-8 and 5-18. It was the fifth straight loss for the Wildcats.

Davidson, which jumped off to a nine-point lead midway through the first half, trailed 74-73 with five seconds left in the game.

The Wildcats were then forced into a foul, and William and Mary guard John Lowenhaupt made one free throw but missed the second. Time ran out during the scramble for the ball.

The game was tied 71-71 with 2:19 left in the game. Then, with 1:40 remaining, forward Jack Aborgast hit on two free throws to put the Indians ahead 73-71.

Lowenhaupt, who scored 25 points, and forward Ron Satterthwaite, who added 22, were the leading scorers for William and Mary. Forward John Gerdyle Davidson with 18.

Coaches To Meet

LITTLEFIELD—The Pitt County Coaches Association will meet Sunday at 3 p.m. at Ayden-Griffith High School.

Shelly Marsh of D.H. Conley High School, chairman of the group, said one purpose of the meeting will be to follow up actions begun following the group's meeting with the Pitt County Board of Education. The board removed a requirement for specific playing time for junior high and junior varsity basketball teams at that meeting.

"There were still some questions that we asked which were not answered," Marsh said. "We plan to draft some letters to the board members about these questions to try and get their answers."

The board, in receding their action concerning the playing time, stated that it was their goal to give everyone out for sports on these levels the opportunity to play as much as possible, and appointed a study group to work toward this end, with the hope that it would be put in force prior to the start of the next school year.

Foyt And Parsons Head Daytona's Field Of Cars

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A.J. Foyt, the fastest qualifier, and defending champion Benny Parsons, starting in the 16th row from where the winner came last year, will battle the most competitive field in recent years when the green flag falls Sunday for the 18th annual Daytona 500, stock car racing's most coveted prize.

The $350,000 race is scheduled for a 1 p.m., EST, start, and an ideal weather forecast is expected to bring a record crowd of 120,000 or more.

No fewer than 18 drivers in the 42-car starting field were given an honest chance for victory in a poll Saturday of drivers, mechanics and newsmen.

Others in order were Dick Brooks, Lennie Pond, Earl Ross, Neil Bonnett, David Hobbs, Coo Coo Marlin, Ramo Stott, Terry Ryan and James Hylton.

Stott and Ryan were elevated to the front row when the faster cars of Marcis and Waltrip, the winners of Thursday's qualifying races, and Foyt had their original qualifying speeds disallowed for using "non-approved" equipment. When they qualified, Foyt ran 185.943 miles per hour.

Foyt and Parsons were relegated to row 16, from where Parsons came to finish first and Stott fifth last year, because both dropped out of the qualifying races.

"We don't really have any real strategy at this time—it's hard to tell starting in 32nd position," Parsons said. "I started 32nd last year and won. "I'd like to see an instant replay."

He added, "I think a lot will depend on how quick I can get up front. A.J. and I will have to draft real close to get up there as quick as we can."

The rest of the favorites are scattered through the first eight rows.

"It's anybody's race, row way engines last these days," said Stott, the reigning U.S. Auto Club stock car champion, who picked up $5,000 for his pole winning speed of 183.456 m.p.h.

Ryan, in his first NASCAR Grand National race—in fact the first race he's entered longer than 250 miles, said, "I surprised a lot of people, including myself, in winning the outside pole. I hope I can win the race and really shock everybody."

"If I don't spin out the last lap I might win," said Pearson, who did that while leading last year. "I believe my time to win is here."

"We won Thursday," said Marcis, who edged Pearson and Baker in the first 125-mile qualifier. "I don't want to end that streak."

"I can see the headlines now."

Waltrip, who outfoxed the competition on fuel strategy to win the second qualifier, said, "We feel we have an excellent chance of winning. That win on Thursday showed us that we're ready to go racing. The car is in super shape."

Yarborough, the 1968 winner, said, "It's been a long time since I won the Daytona 500. But I think I still remember how to win it."

Foyt, the 1972 winner who along with Yarborough is trying a new engine built by McLaren, said, "If we're up front on the last lap, I think we'll win."

US Hockey Team Ousted By West German Team

loss to West Germany that some cried, others cursed and many slammed their equipment around in the locker room. The truth of the matter is that they were outplayed, and in the waning moments of the game they took out their frustrations with hard, unnecessary checks against the West German players.

"We ran into a hot goalie and just could not put the puck behind him," said U.S. Coach Bob Johnson of West Germany's Anton Kehle. "The bounce of the puck was against us. The game was the fastest in tempo in the Olympic tournament."

Erich Kuenhacker, the 6-foot-6 West German center, scored one goal and assisted on the other three. Buzz Schneider of Grand Rapids, Minn., got the lone U.S. goal. The Americans could have won the bronze medal with a victory or a tie. Instead they wound up tied in the tournament with West Germany and Finland with 2-3 records.

In such a case, the bronze is decided by something called goals quotient. The goals scored and yielded by the three teams in competition against each other gave West Germany a narrow edge for the bronze with Finland fourth and the United States fifth.

It's like figuring baseball standings. West Germany scored seven goals and conceded six, a better mathematical percentage than the Finns' 9-8 or the Americans' 6-8.

The Italian skiers overcame squabbles over their equipment and other controversies to take the first two places in the slalom. Behind Gros, who clocked

2:03.29 for two icy runs, was countryman Gustavo Thoeni in 2:03.73. Willy Frommelt of Liechtenstein was third.

Thoeni, Italy's premier performer, was hoping to become the only men's alpine skier in history to win gold medals in two Olympics. Saturday, he was furious at first after finishing second, but then calmed down and said, "Everything is all right as long as an Italian skier wins."

Thoeni was awarded a gold medal by the International Ski Federation for having the best over-all performance in the three Alpine events. It is not an Olympic medal.

Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif., gave the U.S. a surprise bronze medal in the international federation's standings. Jones, 11th in the downhill and ninth in the giant slalom, wound up 19th in Saturday's slalom in 2:12.71.

"I am extremely pleased with Greg's bronze medal," said American ski Coach Hank Tauber, "even though it's not an Olympic medal. We aimed at a medal when we entered Greg in all three Alpine contests."

Said Jones of his slalom run, "The first run was extremely steep and icy. I was not feeling well today and that was why I did not place higher up. I have a cold."

Cary Adgate of Boyne City, Mich., had the best American finish in the slalom, taking 13th in 2:09.53. Phil Mahre of White Pass, Wash., was 18th in 2:11.77. Geoff Bruce of Corning, N.Y., fell during the first run and did not finish.

Adgate said he was "semi-satisfied" with his finish. "I could have done better. I did better on the second run. I had trouble on the first, which was extremely steep and icy with deep ruts."

The men's 10,000-meter speed skating event was held under terrible conditions in a snowstorm that gave Innsbruck a Christmas-card look. Kleine was timed in 14:50.59 for first place—within 28 one-hundredths of a second of the world record. It was an Olympic record. "I didn't think I could make it," Kleine said. "Under fairer conditions I most certainly would have broken the world record."

Sten Stensen of Norway, gold medalist at 5,000 meters, was second and Hans Van Helden of The Netherlands was third. America's Dan Carroll of St. Louis skated a personal best time of 15:19.29 but finished seventh. Michael Woods of South Milwaukee, Wis., was 12th in 15:53.42 and Charles Gilmore of Anaheim, Calif., was 19th in 16:26.35.

The 50-kilometer ski race gave Koch, the surprising 20-year-old who won a silver medal in the 30-kilometer race, another chance to show his credentials as an Olympic champion of the future.

This was only the second 50-kilometer race he had skied. He led at the halfway point but wound up 13th in 2:44:51.16. Stan Dunklee of Brattleboro Vt. was 36th in 2:51:26.28.

"I started to get suspicious at about 25 kilometers that I was going to run into a brick wall. I cramped up. Then all I wanted to do was finish. I was afraid of losing consciousness on the back end of the course and just lying there in the snow. There's nobody to pick you up. I don't know how or why I finished. Maybe a little bit of pride."

Twelve skiers passed him and Formo won it in 2:37:30.50. Dietmar Klaus of East Germany was second and Benny Soedergeren of Sweden was third.

Koch recovered and, after a shower and a nap, said he felt fine.

East Germany's Nehmer drove his four-man bob team to victory in a combined time of 3:40.43 for four runs. Switzerland was second and West Germany third. Jim Morgan of Saranac Lake, N.Y. piloted the top U.S. sled in 15th in 3:46.72.

Charleston Rolls To Victory Over Bucettes

ROCK HILL, S. C.—The College of Charleston rocked East Carolina's women out of the Winthrop Basketball Tournament Friday morning, rolling up a 99-71 score.

Charleston had a hot hand in the first half of the game, hitting 55 per cent of their shots. East Carolina shot only 26 percent and the end result of all that was a 55-29 lead by Charleston at the half.

With 13:58 left in the game, the two teams were tied at 10-10. During the next five minutes, Charleston pulled away, outshooting the Bucettes, 24-7, to built up a 34-17 lead. They slowly pulled away from there, moving toward the 26-point spread they had at halftime.

Debbie Bocknight and Scooter DeLorme each had 16 points to spark Charleston in the half. DeLorme hit eight of nine shots from the floor during the 20 minutes of action.

East Carolina's top shooters, Debbie Freeman and Rosie Thompson both had poor halves. Freeman hit only two of 13 shots, while Thompson hit two of 10.

Charleston also outrebounded the Lady Pirates, 31-21, during the half.

The second half saw the lead move to 31 at 78-47 with about 10 minutes left. East Carolina cut it to 80-59, but got no closer the rest of the way.

Thompson hit 18 points in the second half to end up with 24 for the afternoon. Freeman ended up with 14, while Susan Manning had 12.

Nessie Harris, who had 13 points in the second half; Sister Greene, who had 12 in the same period, and Bonknight each finished the game with 20. DeLorme had 18.

 The Rose High School Rampants came close Friday night, but they were never able to hit when they had the true opportunity, and Bertie's Falcons came away with a 63-60 win.

The victory kept Bertie in no worse than a tie for second place in Division I with a 5-2 loop record. The Falcons are now 14-4 overall. Rose dropped to 0-7 in the league and 2-14 overall.

The Rampants never led throughout the evening, but they had the chance to take the lead on several occasions. Nine times, all in the first half, they tied it up, but each time Bertie either answered with a basket to regain the lead, or the Rampants would miss until Bertie finally did connect.

As it turned out, the foul line and the rebounding were probably the keys to the game. Both teams hit on 25 of 59 shots from the floor, for 50 points. But Bertie made good on 13 of 22 free throws, while Rose hit just 10 of 21.

The Falcons cleaned the boards of 46 rebounds, while Rose picked off 42, mostly from the defensive end of the court. Not being able to follow up their shots hurt them.

The Rampants, after playing flawless ball in the first period, turned the ball over 18 times in the last three frames, including eight times in the third. Bertie had 16 turnovers.

Still, for the Rampants it was a fairly good showing. They stuck close throughout the first half, never allowing Bertie more than a four-point edge, and they rallied from as much as nine down in the second half to come within the final three-point edge.

Bertie took the lead after 14 seconds on a jumper by Johnny White, but William Barnes tied it up for Rose. It was again tied at 4-4 and Rose missed on three straight chances to go ahead before White again connected. Rose tied it up at 6-6, 8-8 before White hit and James Robbins followed for a 12-9 advantage. The biggest lead of the first period. Rose cut it back on a free throw by Mike Brewington and a basket by Barnes, tying it at 14-14. They again tied it at 16-16, and it was knotted, 18-18, at the horn.

Early baskets by Robbins pushed the Falcons into a 22-18 lead, but again Rose fought back tying it at 24-24 on a return shot by Brewington.

But again, Rose failed to connect when they had the chance to take the lead, and Bertie answered with four points for a 28-24 edge. Jeff Barber hit two in a row, however, to tie it once more, 30-30, before baskets by Dennis Wesson and John Mathewson gave the Falcons a 34-30 halftime edge.

A three-point play by White opened the third period, opening up a 37-30 lead. Then, Arthur Gaskins stole the ball to run it to nine, 41-32 with 6:01 left. Rose stuck with it, however, and slowly whittled away at the lead, trimming it to 45-42, then 49-46 before two free throws by Earl Gaskins and a steal by Arthur Gaskins made it 53-46 at the horn.

Rose cut it back to five, but Bertie chose to go into a four-corner offense, and killed the clock the rest of the way, forcing Rose to foul. Of Bertie's 10 points in the final period, six came at the line. Rose never got closer than five, however, until Greg Ebron hit two in the final 30 seconds to trim it to the final 63-60 margin.

White led Bertie's scoring with 21 points, while Arthur Gaskins had 16 and Earl Gaskins had 10. Derek and Mike Brewington each had 12 for Rose, while Ebron had 11.

Bertie also took the junior varsity game, 50-43, taking the lead in the second period after Rose held a slim 11-10 edge after one period. Bertie outshot Rose, 19-10, in the second to move to a 29-21 halftime lead.

Bertie boosted that to 41-31 after the third period, and held off a Rose rally, 12-9, in the final frame.

Hilton Thompson led Bertie with 18, while James Hardy had 12 and Jeane Williams has 10. Rose was led by Anthony Bryant with 14, while Lorenzo Owens had 11.

The Rampants travel to Northern Nash on Tuesday.

Farmville Central Gains 57-53 Victory Over Greene Central

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central took a pair of games from Greene Central Friday night. The Jaguars won the boys' game, 57-53, while the girls' took a 56-39 decision.

Farmville Central's girls eased their way to a 10-6 lead after the first eight minutes of play. Greene Central turned the tables on them, however, 15-10, in the second period and led, 21-

20, at the half.

Farmville took firm control in the third period, however, ripping through 21 points, while holding the Ewes to just four. That put the Lady Jags into a 41-25 lead. Farmville then outthit Greene, 15-14, to put it away.

Wanda Phillips led Farmville with 23 points, while Diane Barrett had 11. Vanessa Hooker led Greeneville with 11 points.

In the boys' contest, the Jaguars managed to inch ahead, 18-16, after the first period. They continued to hold a close edge, 37-33, after the first half of play.

In the third period, Farmville got a little more breathing room due to a 12-6 edge. That pushed the lead out to 49-39. Greene Central outthit the Jags, 14-8, in the final period, but never was able to catch up.

Kino Farrow led Farmville with 21 points, while James Baker had 16 and Tim Ward had 14. Marvin Rouse led Greene Central with 17.

LITTLEFIELD—With about thirty seconds left in the basketball game, the North Pitt cheerleaders unfurled a sign reading, "Now you see why we are number one."

And an apropos sign it was. North Pitt was in the process of beating Ayden-Grifton to move into sole possession of first place in the Eastern Carolina conference with a 63-53 win over the Chargers.

The Panthers have lost just two games, Ayden-Grifton three. Two of the A-G losses were to North Pitt.

The Panther basketball team took two other wins over A-G with a 68-46 victory in the J.V. game and the North Pitt girls winning an exciting game 38-35. A-G's girls coach Debra Pfeil and boys coach Bob Murphrey were disappointed in their teams' play Friday night. Pfeil said she could not get her players to move and Murphrey could not get his team to move enough.

"Rebounding was what hurt us," said Miss Pfeil. "My girls were just standing around. I can't get them to move."

"We played good defense. We guarded them pretty good. When we had our hands in their faces they missed the shot, but when we didn't, they scored."

Murphrey felt that most teams in the conference would have beaten the Chargers Friday night. "There aren't many people that we could have beaten tonight," he said.

Ayden-Grifton's girls had their chances to win the game. They took leads in the third period and fourth period but each time, North Pitt rallied to regain the advantage. A-G pulled within a point in the final minute but could not score again.

Things got off to a fast start as buckets were traded until Joy Forbes' outside jumper gave North Pitt a 6-4 lead and two field goals by Kathi Manning and another by Forbes ran the lead to 12-6.

The Chargeettes pulled within two in the early part of the second period and after Mabel James and Manning hit buckets for the Big Orange for a 16-8 lead, A-G cut it back to two, 16-14 at halftime.

Tena Smith started a rally in the third period with a basket from the lane and Cindy Potter scored twice sending A-G ahead, 24-22. But Manning hit two jumpers, the second with :18 left in the frame for a 26-24 Panther lead.

The Chargeettes tied it twice and went ahead 30-28 on a lay-up by Toni Smith with 4:55 left to play but Forbes put the Orange ahead to stay with three free throws. Ellen Dixon and Manning each scored to run the difference to five, 36-31, but two by Audrey McCarter narrowed it to 36-35 with :20 left. Forbes hit at the :10 mark for the clincher.

Manning led the Big Orange with 18 and Forbes had 14. Cynthia Barnes led the rebounding with 15. Potter led the A-G girls with 10 points and had seven rebounds.

North Pitt's Cobby Deans said the rebounding was a factor in the boys game. "It was when the tide was changing," he said. Deans also praised his bench. The Panther began getting into foul trouble late in the game and Deans had to go to his bench to keep out of a jam.

"Jackie (Best) probably played one of his best games for us," Deans said. Best scored ten points but they were from deep in the corners and they helped to open up the A-G triangle and one defense.

Deans spent a lot of time trying to slow his team down. "Jesse (Harris) is still a little weak, that's why he was reaching. (Harris fouled out) We didn't want to run on account of him but he did a lot better than I expected. He didn't have one of his better games." Harris missed Tuesday night's loss to Greene Central because of an illness but scored ten Friday night.

"We did what we said we would do," Deans said. "We were lucky. Wallace (Council) came in and did a good job on the boards."

North Pitt's Donnie Perkins had a off night scoring just seven points and spent some time on the bench. Deans said the Panthers were not affected by Perkins' absence; other players took up the slack. Virgil Pilgreen, for one, scored 20 to lead the Panthers and Kenneth Roberson dumped in several from the stripe getting 12.

While the Panthers passed the ball well and got long outside shots to go in and outbounced A-G, 34-31, the Chargers did not. And Murphrey was obviously displeased.

"Last time, they exploded. They didn't really have to (Friday night)," he said. "I was disappointed in the way we moved the ball and in some of our shots. We were standing around holding the ball."

"I think the defense was fairly good. We had opportunities to get inside but didn't go. We had the chance to move around outside, but didn't do it."

Murphrey said the Chargers tried the whole game to find that little bit of magic to make things click but missed it. "We needed that little something," he said, "but we couldn't come up with it. In the second quarter we got off to a good start but not in the second half."

The Chargers fell behind on the first bucket of the game, a tap-in by Pilgreen but Vern Davenport tied it, 2-2 with one from the corner. A-G fell behind by 6-2 but caught up on buckets by Willie Forbes and Paul Ricciarelli. North Pitt went back on top on a shot by Roberson, 8-6 and four-point difference stood at the end of the period, 14-10.

The lead went to eight on the second bucket of the second period but A-G struck back in the middle of the frame closing to one, 22-21, and then taking the lead, 24-23, with 1:55 left in the half. The lead changed hands until Pilgreen's bucket from the corner gave North Pitt a 27-25 lead.

Ricciarelli tied it to open the second half but it was the last time A-G saw North Pitt that close. A bucket by Pilgreen, a three-point play by Perkins and a lay-up by Pilgreen ran North Pitt out quickly to a 34-27 lead. A-G cut it to two, 34-32, but the Panthers pulled away again and led at the end of the period, 41-33.

North Pitt's lead increased to 12 at one point in the final frame, 49-37. Even though the Panthers lost some steam when Harris fouled out and Perkins picked up his fourth foul, the Chargers could not come back.

Ricciarelli led the Chargers with 15 and Ogden Braxton had 14.

Murphrey noted the Chargers are now in a battle for second place. "We beat ourselves," he said. "We can play better than what we showed. A-G faces Southern Nash Tuesday. North Pitt hosts Farmville Central."

Elm City Romps Over Roanoke

ELM CITY—Elm City Vikings were like the Norsemen of old as they pillaged the Roanoke Redskins, 105-67, Friday night in an Eastern Plains Basketball game. The Elm City girls also rolled to a win, 67-36, while the Baby Vikes came away with a 63-46 win.

It was not a good night for the Redskins, who were pumpeled from the start of the evening by their hosts.

In the girls' game, Elm City ripped off a 15-4 first period lead, then spanked the Squaws, 23-2, in the second frame. That left the Valkyries up, 38-6, at the half. Roanoke came back to play almost even ball in the second half, outthitting Elm City, 20-19, in the third period, and matching them, 10-10, in the final.

Angela Armstrong led Elm City with 16 points, while Linda Roundtree and Daisy Williams each added 15. Delores Stanley led Roanoke with 10.

With John Virgil leading the way, Elm City pulled out to a 24-14 lead in the opening period. The Vikings then set fire to the nets at their end of the court with 34 big points in the second frame, and rolled up a 58-27 halftime lead.

Roanoke outthit them, 21-20, in the third frame, but Elm City was still far ahead, 78-48. The Vikes finished off the Redskins, 27-19, in the final period, cruising past the century mark.

Virgil finished the evening with 34 points, while Chris Ladson added 26.

Gardnerville Native Kincy Reel Was There On A Recovery Mission Going South All The Way --- To The South Pole

SAFE AT HOME—Reel displays his certificate of membership of the South Pole which is given only to persons who set foot on the South Pole. Reel is a lifetime member.

GARDNERVILLE — When people in Eastern North Carolina think of someone going down south they are usually referring to Florida, Georgia, or Alabama. Kincy Reel, a resident of Gardnerville recently went way down south to the South Pole.

Reel was participating in Operation Deep Freeze, an airplane recovery operation at Dome Charlie in Antarctica. The mission included 16 civil service jet mechanics from Cherry Point.

The men of the team were given one month to complete the recovery of the two disabled aircraft which were at the National Science Foundation base.

After flying from Cherry Point, the group stopped at Point Muger, Calif. in Hawaii, at Paga-Pago, and finally in New Zealand, where they were issued special clothing and gear, before proceeding to McMurdo Station, Antarctica.

The recovery team was climatized for three days at the Geographical South Pole before they started work on the aircraft.

"The main problem was with breathing," Reel explained. "The clothing and gear they provided were warm but when you took your boots off you had to keep checking your sweaty-turned-frozen feet, for frostbite."

The temperature at Antarctica ranged from 10 to 50 degrees below zero during the two weeks that Reel was there. Since it was the summer season, it was daytime all the time that Reel and the team were at Antarctica. Antarctica only has two or three months of summer lasting from November to February. After February 1, everyone has to leave the region because temperatures drop to 100 or more below zero. No plant life or animal can withstand the deadly cold temperatures of Antarctica during winter.

Because of the low temperatures and high altitude, the men were fed a special high protein diet of steak and lobster.

Asked if the continuous daytime bothered his sleeping, Reel replied, "We worked 12 hours daily so we were tired when we finally got to bed. The only problem we had in sleeping was that it was so dry that you could wake up and be completely out of breath. To solve the dry air problem we would take cans of snow and set them on the heater and the moisture they produced helped make the air a little easier to breathe."

"There is really nothing there but snow," Reel said. "1,000 feet deep of snow made up the part of Antarctica where we were."

Reel received several salutations for participating in the Operation Deep Freeze. He received a medal for Antarctic service from Captain Eugene W. Van Reeth, Commander of the U.S. Naval Antarctica, a membership certifying that he set foot on the Geographic South Pole and is a life time member of the society.

Reel's wife, JoEllen explained that she was worried about her husband until he reached Antarctica. "I was on pins and needles until he called from the South Pole on a ham radio."

Reel left Cherry Point December 11 and returned January 11. During the 31 days he wrote his wife, but the letters took 11 days to be delivered.

"I don't think that I would ever like to go the South Pole again not because I don't like it, but because it never changes," Reel said.

Shortly after Reel returned to Gardnerville, eastern North Carolina received one inch of snow, but for Reel nothing could beat being back home, snow or no snow.

FACING THE COLD—Kincy Reel is dressed in a warm goose-down lined coat to protect him against the sub-zero weather of Antarctica.

Orientation Includes Unique Military Problems Army Reserve Chaplain Trains Other Chaplains

Text And Photograph By James Kyle

At the height of the U. S. involvement in Vietnam, Army Chaplain William L. Petcovic asked an airman stationed in Vietnam how he felt about the war protests going on back home.

"Well," the airman replied, "I figure that part of the reason I am over here is so the people back home will have the freedom to say what they think about things."

That man, Petcovic concluded, like most others in Vietnam, was fairly well adjusted as to their reason for being there. "Most of the guys figured that even if they didn't understand it, there must be a good reason for them being in Vietnam."

Petcovic, an army reserve major now on active duty with the First Army, was in Greenville last week to speak at St. James United Methodist Church. He is currently stationed at Ft. Meade, Md. and is in charge of chaplain training for U. S. Army Readiness Region III.

"My main job is to see that these units (Division III units of the Army Reserve and National Guard) have chaplains and to see that they get proper training," Petcovic said. "The chaplain has already had clergyman's training, we have to teach him how to function as a military chaplain."

Petcovic works with about 150 units which have chaplains assigned to them. His division covers five states: Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, along with the District of Columbia.

The chaplains' duties have changed in the last ten years, Petcovic said. No longer is the chaplain involved in just providing religious services, he must also be a counselor to troops and their families.

The soldier of today has more problems than just worrying about getting a weekend pass, according to Petcovic. More and more, today's soldier is married and has a family to worry about.

Petcovic said another big problem today is soldier morale when they read about pay and benefit cuts to the military. The soldier is dislocated, Petcovic said, and it costs more for him to talk with his family and go home for a visit.

Many military chaplains attend special schools and seminars to help them deal with problems such as alcohol and drug abuse, Petcovic said. And, a lot of reserve chaplains get involved in the affairs of their communities when they are off-duty. There is a big demand this year, according to Petcovic, for chaplains to speak at Bicentennial functions.

Military chaplains serve as an extension of their church, Petcovic said. To qualify, they must complete college and seminary work at accredited schools, they must then be endorsed by their denomination — which is not automatic, according to Petcovic. Every chaplain is a volunteer.

In order to get promotions, chaplains must also take a certain amount of military training, Petcovic added.

Petcovic said the problems of the chaplain are unique because he must function outside the four walls of a church. The chaplain sees things in the world as they really are, Petcovic said. Some young chaplains are surprised at some of the things they see.

One such chaplain, Petcovic said, was amazed at the prostitution which went on in Vietnam. "He had heard about it and read about it, but he had never seen it first-hand," Petcovic said.

It is Petcovic's job to make sure the chaplain has the training and know-how to deal with these unique problems.

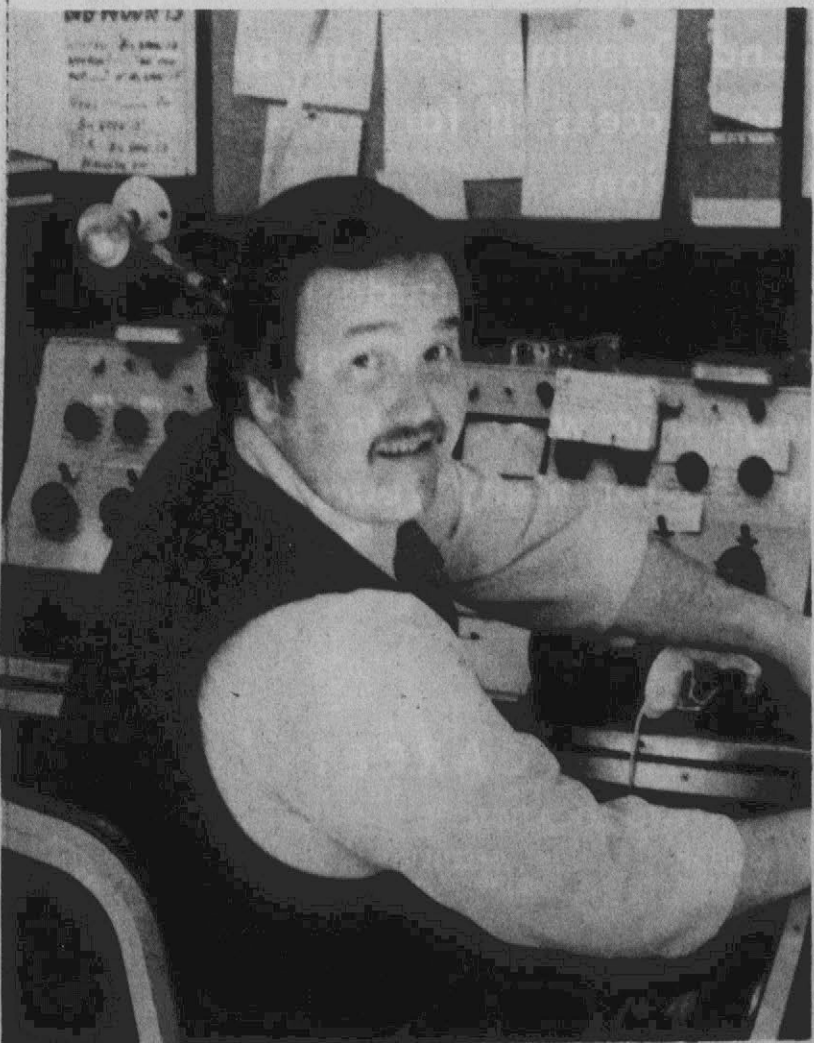

CHAPLAINS CHAT—U. S. Army chaplain William L. Petcovic (right) talks with the Rev. F. R. Randolph of St. James United Methodist Church. Petcovic was in Greenville this week to speak at St. James on the role of army chaplains. Petcovic is responsible for training all Army Reserve and National Guard chaplains in five eastern states and the District of Columbia. Randolph also serves as chaplain for an area reserve unit. (Reflector photo by James Kyle).

Featuring A Gallery Of Imaginary Characters

Radio Entertainer "Murphy The Morning Man"

"MURPHY THE MORNING MAN" ... is John Murphy of Roxboro, Radio Station WOOW's morning man on the microphones. Murphy, along with the familiar round of top tunes, features periodic airings of a Pitt County historian's "bicentennial" tid-bits, Mother Murphy's advice column and an occasional imaginary guest celebrity. (Reflector photo by Jerry Raynor)

Radio listeners in the Greenville area who happen to be tuned in to Radio Station WOOW at about going to work time in the morning may be surprised to hear, interspersed with the familiar round of Top 40 tunes, some odd-ball advice patterned on well known newspaper advice columns, some local bicentennial "you are there back when" nuggets of history; or imagined terse statements of the type that would likely be hurled from the lips of an outspoken crusader for one of the "in" contemporary causes.

The man behind the local radio spoofs is John Murphy, "Murphy The Morning Man," anchor man facing the microphones during WOOW's morning broadcast hours. Roxboro native Murphy, a stocky 27-year-old "proud father of a one-year-old son, Allen," has been fascinated by radio since he was a teenager back in 1966, though he majored in political science at N.C. State, where he graduated in 1971 after earlier attending UNC-Chapel Hill.

Murphy has been on the air in Greenville since October 20, 1975.

WOOW is not his first full-time radio spot. "At the time I graduated from N.C. State I starting working full time at Station WOOF in Oxford," Murphy said. "I was program director and air personality for one and half years until the station was sold."

Later, he was behind the mike at Raleigh's Radio Station WKBQ, "where I had the same positions as at Oxford." Then, for a while he operated his own advertising production agency, "organizing several advertising campaigns in the North Carolina-Virginia area."

But all the time, he kept thinking about radio and when Raleigh friends "told me about a couple of openings in Greenville, I came on down to see about it."

"It didn't take me long," Murphy explains, "to find out that for a town its size, Greenville is unusually

County Historian

Harry Lee Wiggins, Pitt County Historian, recalls a historic event from "200 Years Ago Today in Pitt County."

Harry: "Hi, there—this here's Harry Lee Wiggins, your County Historian, with another slice of 'history pie.'"

"Two hundred or so years ago, a young Pitt County schoolteacher by the name of G. Cauley Warless tried valiantly to strike a blow for segregation in eastern North Carolina."

"Mr. Warless was the headmaster, or 'governor,' if you will, of the all-male Montgomery Prep School, located in beautiful downtown Winterville."

"You see, 'Governor' Warless was determined and heck-bent (can't say hell on the radio, you know), to prevent the county school board from admitting young women into the hallowed masculine sanctum sanctorum of his school."

"In fact, when a crowd of young women and their parents arrived for school one morning, 'Governor' G. Cauley Warless stood defiantly in the doorway of his beloved Montgomery School. He screamed to the assembled multitude: 'I cannot allow the government to mess up my educational haven by taking these sweet, young girls out of the kitchen, (where they belong), and mixin' 'em in here, distractin' my bright, diligent, upstandin' young men. Why, I'd rather die than let that happen.'"

"At that point, 257 pound Ms. Ellie May Cumquat obliged Mr. Warless by beating him senseless with a seven-pound rolling pin—they buried G. Cauley Warless two days thereafter. (Pause for 'Reveille' to be sounded)."

"I'm Harry Lee Wiggins, and that's the way it was 200 or so years ago, give or take a few."

receptive to the kind of show I've been wanting to do, the kind of show I'm doing now. I think we'll all readily admit Greenville is by far the most literate city in eastern North Carolina, and that makes for a receptive atmosphere for something a bit different."

Now, a little less than four months since he first went out over WOOW's air waves, Murphy offers listeners periodic air columns featuring a variety of "air personalities."

There's the advice bit, "Ask Mother Murphy," with Rosie Murphy as the erstwhile advice giver. Murphy admits this air column is a roundabout tribute to his wife, Margaret Whitlow, also a Roxboro native.

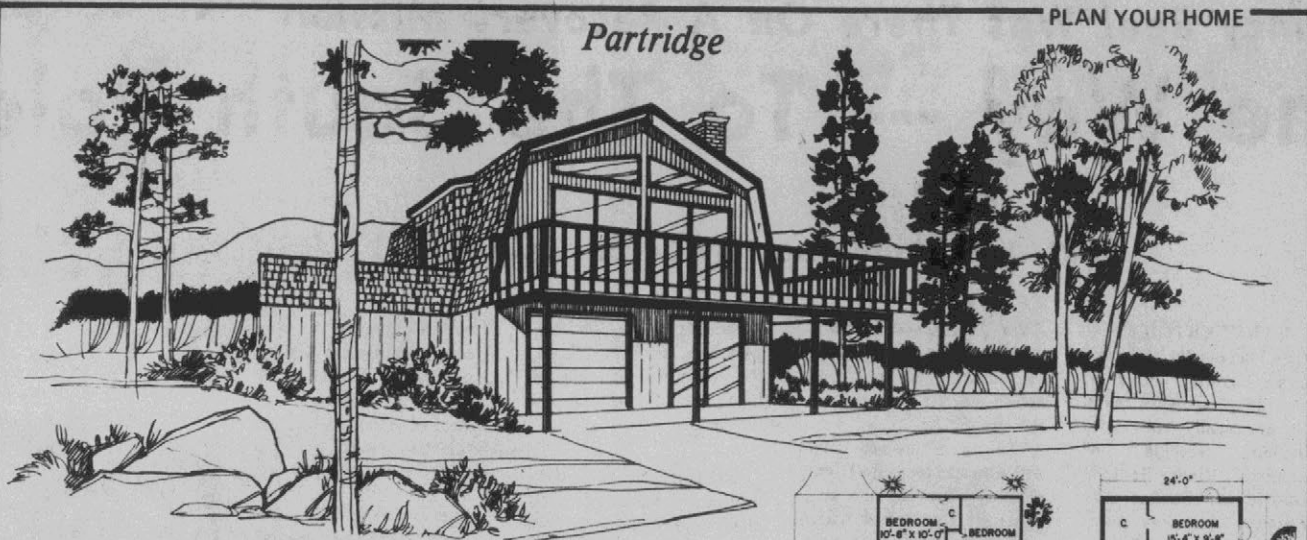

Then there's the bicentennial character—County Historian Harry Lee Wiggins, who from time to time relates relatively obscure (and of course fictional) facets on Pitt County's early history. Briefer air spots are devoted to Bicentennial dummy quizzes and thematic human quizes; and on occasion, a noted "in the news" personality like imaginary Gloria Germain is given an opportunity to sound off over the air.

The Piedmont man is finding the eastern area "the most pleasant place imaginable to live in. People are just naturally friendly in this area. One of the joys of being in this job is the way people will call and tell me they enjoyed this or that. It's a good feeling."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures
Q.—You told someone a few weeks ago that the sweating on his inside windows might be caused by ill-fitting storm sash, permitting cold air to get past it to the inside. Since several of the inside windows on my house were bothered by sweating, even though I have storm sash, I decided to refit all the storm windows. It worked on all but two of the windows. On these two, there is still sweating on the inside windows. What do you think can be causing this? The storm sash has wooden frames.

A.—There is no doubt that air must still be getting past the storm sash of those two windows even though the openings might not be visible. Get some of that putty weather-stripping that comes in rolls. Apply it all around the outside of the sash, pushing it firmly into the joints where the wood and the frame meet. Meanwhile, consider another possibility—that the putty around the edges of the glass in the storm sash is in need of repair or replacement and is permitting air to infiltrate.

Q.—I just took the finish off a cabinet with a varnish remover. I now find that the surface is what caused this and how can I eliminate it?

A.—Some types of varnish removers occasionally raise the grain of the wood, which is what happened in this case. Sanding the surface will take off the fuzz. Sand with the grain, using a fine grade of paper.

but I would like to make a complaint. It's about people who hire a handyman and then hold him off on the payment or, in some cases, don't pay him at all. When they hire a regular plumber or electrician or carpenter, they pay him immediately. I am retired, but do handyman jobs to add to my fixed income. Many times I have finished a job, only to be told a check will be sent to me. Sometimes I have to call four or five times to get it, and every once in a while I don't get it at all. Please, please, don't hire somebody to do work you unless you pay him on spot or at least within a week or two.

Manufactured Housing Is Tried

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
United Press International
The family that would build a home on its own lot but cannot afford the luxury of an architect and fears the vagaries of contractor building, may find a solution in manufactured housing.

The overall classification, manufactured housing, loosely defined comprises mobile homes, factory-assembled, transportable structures, used with or without foundation as a temporary or permanent dwelling; modular homes, permanent structures consisting of one or more modules assembled in a factory in accordance with a building code; prefabricated homes, components, factory-assembled in a variety of ways to be shipped to a site for assembly.

The three types, how to go about choosing, financing and building, are discussed in detail in a comprehensive new book,

Good Shelter, by Judith and Bernard Rabb (Quadrangle, N.Y. Times $7.95 paperback). Three good reasons — money, time and variety — make manufactured housing worth the consideration of a family who wants a custom home, the Rabbs say.

"Manufactured housing generally costs less than comparable stick-built homes. Manufactured housing can be ready for occupancy in a much shorter time than stick-built homes. With hundreds of manufacturers active in the country, the customer has greater variety to choose from."

The more you have to spend, of course, the greater the possibility of finding your dream house.

Of the three types, the most expensive and most flexible is the prefabricated, also known as "component" building, which most readily lends itself to "custom" design.

In the opinion of the authors, it "can better satisfy individual taste than so-called stick-built and custom homes built by local contractors. Many prefabs are superior homes which have won architectural design awards. Most fall within the $10,000-$50,000 price range, but many go much higher.

According to the Rabbs, advantages of prefabricated homes include:

Cost-cutting possibilities. The buyer can do some of the building work to cut costs. He can do some or all of his erecting and interior finishing. He cannot do this with mobile or modular units. On-site professional skilled labor requirements are less than for stick-built homes.

Materials cost. Materials are purchased in vast quantities and are precision cut for optimal fit and minimum waste.

Construction time. A prefabricated home will go up faster than a stick-built. A panelized home will go up faster than pre-cut prefabs. Modulars and mobile homes go up virtually overnight.

Construction quality. Quality control over materials is a result of factory production, but this applies only to the package itself. The quality of the erected home will depend on the quality of the on-site erecting and finishing crews.

Range of selection is wide — in materials and design, more so than with mobile homes or modulars, and in some cases more than a local contractor might be able to offer.

Site suitability. Design can be readily varied to adapt the home fully to its site.

Floor plan flexibility. A wide range of floor plans may be easily modified to suit virtually any lifestyle.

Code conformity. Construction techniques and materials, in many cases, may even exceed the requirements of local building codes, and where changes are required they can be made readily.

Delivery. The prefabricated house package can be delivered to almost any site with a minimum of land clearing.

On the other hand, there are disadvantages to prefabricated building. The Rabbs mention:

Cost. Prefabs cost more than mobile homes and modulars because of the on-site labor and, at times, substantially better materials.

On-site labor. A crew may be difficult to hire in remote areas.

Construction quality. Subject to the quality of the on-site crew, which may range from excellent to horrid.

For someone thinking of building from scratch, the book offers a wealth of information, including suggestions on community and site selection, selection of the home itself, design considerations, site placement, financing.

Sharing information from over 100 manufacturers who responded to inquiries from the authors, it covers everything from the least expensive, simple mobile home to domes and luxury prefabs, and includes helpful checklists and supply sources.

The 25th annual convention of the North Carolina Wholesalers Association is scheduled for Feb. 19, 20 and 21 in Pinehurst, it was announced by Cecil K. Henderson of Winston-Salem, president.

Henderson said the convention is expected to attract the leading grocery, tobacco, confectionery and sundry product wholesalers in the state, as well as many of the leading manufacturers and suppliers of goods sold by these wholesalers both from the state and nation.

Lyman Ormond Jr., of Ormond Wholesale Co. of Greenville is currently serving as third vice president to the association.

EARNINGS CLIMB

United Telecommunications Inc. 1975 earnings from continued operations and net earnings per share were up eight per cent to $1.67 from $1.54 in 1974, chairman Paul H. Henson reported.

Henson cited improved productivity, better expense controls and an easing of interest rates as factors contributing to the 1975 earnings improvement achieved on a marginal increase in total revenues and sales to $968 million.

The chairman said that the United Telephone System, which serves 3.4 million telephones and 2,900 communities in 21 states, had revenues of $737 million, up 13 per cent in 1975. Telephone earnings were up 14 per cent to $104 million, he added.

Carolina Telephone is a member of the United Telephone System.

TURNED UPWARD

Net income of Jefferson-Pilot Corp. turned upward for the fourth quarter of 1975 in a resumption of the corporation's earnings growth, president W. Roger Soles reported to directors recently.

Soles said that fourth quarter earnings from operations were up 7.2 per cent, bringing the total for the year to $2.44 per share, the largest in the company's history.

Total consolidated earnings from operations for the full year 1975 were reported at $58,619,000, compared with $58,126,000 for 1974.

New life insurance written in 1975 by Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. and Pilot Life Insurance Co. amounted to $2,246,000,000, compare with $2,025,000,000 for 1974, a gain of 10.9 per cent.

POOR TOM

He could have gotten the fireplace he wanted at CAMBRIDGE

Poor Tom:
Somehow marshmallows don't taste the same when they're cooked over an electric burner.
Tom knew that, but he thought fireplaces weren't available in moderately priced houses.
Then he found out about Cambridge where he would have gotten a fireplace and air conditioning and luxurious carpeting throughout.
Not to mention the choice of 3 or 4 bedrooms and a fully modern kitchen with dishwasher and disposal.
And at Cambridge, he'd have been close enough to dash out for those marshmallows on a moment's notice.
No wonder Tom is really burned.
Don't make the same mistake Tom did. Look into Cambridge before you buy your new home.

Is TV Violence Cultivating Fear Among Adults?

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shootings, bombings, the thud of fist against jaw ... Researchers are finding that these television staples may push not only children but adults toward aggressive behavior.

The case for adults is just forming. It is far less established than the generally accepted conclusion that children can be turned toward antisocial behavior by screen violence. But the results that have come out of a University of California at Los Angeles study of adults "are especially important," says the researcher, Dr. Roderick Gorney. "because adults, after all, are the ones who are making decisions, declaring war, voting for president, putting additives in our food..." Dr. Gorney and a few other researchers are finding that excessive viewing of cop and crime shows (they constitute 30 per cent of prime time television) apparently can stimulate aggressive behavior in adults and also can develop in them a distorted view of how dangerous the world really is.

Many researchers say they feel the cause-and-effect relationship in children has been well established. But this may make people forget, as psychiatrist Dr. Fredric Wertham points out, that "children grow up to be adults, incorporating into their psyches the thousands of hours of television they saw in their youth."

While Wertham relies mainly on clinical patient relationships for his research, UCLA's Gorney and his research partner, David Loye, represent a contrasting method — controlled experiments on groups.

In the UCLA study, still being analyzed, more than 200 couples were divided into sections and fed varying TV diets for two weeks.

One group spent each night watching programs filled with violence. Another viewed programs such as "Sesame Street" that encourage benevolence and humanitarianism. A control group watched no television.

The violence-viewers, Loye said, rated themselves as increasingly more hostile and aggressive in mood as time passed. They also were observed to be acting more aggressively — grouchy with their families, less tolerant of the child leaving his bike in the driveway, generally in "hurtful" behavior.

In contrast, those exposed to the "Sesame Street" type program generally became more charitable in mood. Of course, it's impossible to make generalizations based on one study, no matter how persuasive, Loye said, but it does suggest that there is a need for further studies of TV violence and adults.

Dick Kirschner, CBS vice president for program practices and standards, says there's concern for adults at all three networks, but there's special concern for children. The "family viewing hour," two hours of nonviolent programming during evening prime time, is an example of this concern, he notes.

The effects of television violence are emphasized by Dr.

George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania. Gerbner is best known for his yearly analyses, since 1967, of the amount and kinds of violence portrayed each season on television.

His latest publication, covering the 1973-74 season, showed an increase in "victimization" or the number of people on the receiving end of violent acts in TV programs. He also found, in a survey, that constant viewers of television believed there was a 50-50 chance of being involved in a violent incident in any given week. The actual statistics are one in 100, said Gerbner, but the viewers' distorted ideas about the world came from their immersion in the TV world of muggings, rapes and murder. Gerbner's view is that TV's effects on adults, while not as directly observable as those on children who may closely imitate actors' behavior, are far-reaching.

"The cultivation of fear among adults has social and political consequences in terms of demands for police protection, election of police commissioners and mayors. Underlying it is the general cultivation of exaggerated fear and danger in the world."

Couple Exchanges Vows In Ceremony

Miss Kathy Ann Briley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wooten Briley Sr. of Greenville, became the bride of William Alan Pittman Saturday at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Ralph G. Messick in the Hooker Memorial Christian Church. A program of organ music was rendered by David Winstead. Mrs. Herb Waldrop sang "More," "O Perfect Love" and the "Wedding Prayer."

Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gruver Pittman Sr. of Kinston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white mira mist organza designed with a high neckline encircled with a scalloped floral Venise lace. The V-shaped bodice featured tucked organza centered with tiny covered buttons and outlined in the scalloped Venise lace. The long full Gibson Girl sleeves were styled with fitted ruffled cuffs edged in lace. The full flared skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with a ruffle flounce of organza bordered in Venise lace.

The bride wore a bouffant illusion veil held in place by a Camelot headpiece designed in a lattice pattern of floral Venise lace interspersed with pearls. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white miniature carnations with clouds of baby's breath and white orchids tied with white satin.

Miss Susan Briley of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She was dressed in a formal length gown of romance blue tinesetta knit designed with an open V-neckline. The full capelet collar draped over the shoulder. A tie of self-fabric accentuated the modified empire waistline and the sleeveless gown featured a flared skirt. She wore a spray of baby's breath in her hair and carried a nosegay of red carnations, white pom poms and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Miss Jackie Dawson, Miss Kathryn Rowlett, Miss Lynn Briley, Miss Jan Kleinert and Miss Wanda Elks, all of Greenville, and Mrs. Susan Evans of Kinston. Their gowns and flowers were like those of the maid of honor.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length light blue knit dress with matching accessories. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal length mint green knit dress. Both were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

Mrs. Kathryn Barbee of Salem, grandmother of the bridegroom, wore a dark green formal length dress with a corsage of white carnations.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Mack G. Pittman Jr. of Greensboro, brother of the bridegroom, William Gatson of Greenville, Robert Vail of Wilmington, Randy Briley of Kinston and Dick Briley of Wilson, brothers of the bride, and Rod Evans of Kinston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and attended East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Kinston High School and attended Lenoir Community College and ECU. He is presently employed at A. J. Sutton's and Sons, Inc., Kinston.

The couple will reside in Kinston after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hawley invited guests to the reception where they were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kittrell.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Weston presided at the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. James A. Kleinert introduced the bridegroom's parents.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Leonard R. Briley, Mrs. J. Thomas Smith and Mrs. Milton L. Faulkner. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. William M. Murray.

Members of the wedding party were honored at a wedding breakfast Saturday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Kleinert.

They were assisted by Mrs. Leonard R. Briley, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Weston and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Kittrell.

Teenager Writes 'Found' Answer

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenager, and because so many adults keep asking us "ungrateful" teenagers what we want, I have finally found an answer that I think says everything:

I am a teenager and this is what I want:
I want time to be alone—alone with my thoughts.
I want to be accepted for what I am.
I want to be loved by those who brought me into this world.
I want a home that is rich in honesty, sharing and caring.
I want to be heard: I just might have something to say that you need to hear.
I want to know more about myself—my sexuality, my desires, my goals.
I want to know God and worship Him in my own way.
I want to live my life one day at a time; for only then will I know its fullness.
And as I would live my life for me, so would I have you live your life for you.

A TEENAGER

DEAR TEENAGER: Good. Did you write it? If not, I would like to offer my congratulations to the author.

DEAR ABBY: First there appeared in your column a letter from a woman who complained because her husband bought a myna bird and taught it to say dirty words and phrases. Then, John D. Maybe wrote in suggesting that the wife threaten her husband with arrest for contributing to the delinquency of a myna.

Now, I have a message for John: Dear John, why don't you myna your own business?"

JAKE SMITH, SAN DIEGO

DEAR JAKE: You're funnier than John (maybe).

DEAR ABBY: I met a young lady about six months ago. Our romance progressed to the point of marriage.

After some uneasy times between us, things got so bad that one night I lost my temper, and in a fit of anger, I hit her.

She had been married before, and she told me that her ex-husband used to beat her up. She promised herself that she would never let another man lay a hand on her.

Now that I have hit her once she thinks it will happen again and has therefore refused to see me again.

Abby, I love this girl with all her heart and am willing to do anything to make up with her, but she won't budge.

How can I get her to give me another chance? I have promised it would never happen again, but she doesn't believe me.

LOST IN HOUSTON

DEAR LOST: Sorry, I'm with her. Who knows when you'll lose your temper and in a fit of anger hit her again? Better start over with a new girl and a fresh slate.

Miss Donna Graham Weds James S. Jeffress In Ceremony Saturday

DENVER — The marriage of Miss Donna Garleen Graham of Rt. 2, Denver, and James Stanley Jeffress of Orange, Tex. was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 3:30 in the Enderly Park Baptist Church.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond Long. Prayers were offered by the Rev. Dewey Murphy.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Davidson Graham Jr., of Rt. 2, Denver, and Mr. and Mrs. William Horace Jeffress of Richmond, Va.

A program of muptial music was provided by Mrs. Ruth Richey, organist, and Mike Wallace, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of angel skin organza and re-embroidered alencon lace, designed with a high neckline and tapered sleeves. The bodice featured a sheer yoke. The neckline and bodice were ap- pliqued with alencon lace, as were the cuffs. The modified empire lines of the skirt fell into a champel length train, accented by lace and seed pearls.

The veil was a fingertip length mantilla edged in alencon lace and attached to a matching lace cap. Her bouquet was a white orchid corsage surrounded by white and pink carnations, red sweetheart roses, and baby's breath, with ivy and lace streamers. She carried the bouquet on a small white Bible.

Mrs. Johnny Wayne Graham of Simpsonville, S.C. served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Rosemary Hunt of Denton, Gail Y. Bennett and Mrs. Stephen Larking of Charlotte, and Coni Laskowski of New Jersey.

They all wore long, sleeveless, light pink dresses with empire waists and V-shaped necklines, with short, light pink capes and silver lace necklaces from the bride. The matron of honor carried three long-stemmed red roses with a pink and red bow. The bridesmaids each carried a single long-stemmed red rose with a pink and red bow.

Chris Graham of Simpsonville, S.C., served as flower girl. She wore a long, light pink dress with a white sheer overlay in an umbrella design and long sleeves with ruffles. She carried a white lace basket with red rose petals.

William Horace Jeffress

served his son as best man. Ushers were Johnny Graham of Simpsonville, S.C., Bill Jeffress of Washington, D.C., Charles Jeffress, and Dick Jeffress of Richmond, Va. Serving as ring bearer was Jonathan Jeffress of Washington, D.C.

A reception was held at the church following the wedding. Mrs. Jack Hough of Charlotte was in charge. She was assisted by Mrs. Harry Graham of Denver and Mrs. Harold Graham of Kannapolis.

After a Caribbean Islands cruise for their wedding trip, the couple will reside in Orange, Tex.

The bridegroom is employed by the DuPont Co., Orange, Tex. He is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnical Institute.

The bride was formerly employed by John Crosland Co. She is a graduate of East Carolina University School of Art.

Moore-Ferguson Vows Spoken

St. James United Methodist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Cynthia Jane Ferguson and Ronald Joseph Moore. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Lee and Dr. Will Wallace at 2:00 p.m.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Randy Buck, organist, and Terry Leggett, who sang "We've Only Just Begun," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Ferguson of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Linwood Ferguson. She was dressed in a formal length gown of white peau de sole fashioned with a high neckline encircled with white silk Venice lace threaded with white satin ribbon. The fitted bodice featured appliques of silk Venice lace flowers. The modified empire waistline was enhanced by the ribbon and lace trim. The full peau de sole sleeves featured fitted cuffs trimmed with lace and ribbon, which also edged the hemline and attached chapel length train.

She wore a tiered illusion mantilla edged in a flora silk Venice lace to complement her gown, held in place by a Camelot headpiece trimmed in lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of orchids, red and white carnations tied with red and white velvet.

The bride graduated from Rose High School and Pitt Technical Institute. She is employed by Dr. James M. Williamson. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Rose High School and attended Lenoir Community College. He is employed by Home Builders.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Moore of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The honor attendant was Evelyn Fuller of Rocky Mount, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Jo Ferguson, sister of the bride, Paula Toothman, of Greenville, and Becky Rhodes of Murfreesboro.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of red knit designed with an open V-neckline accentuated by a flared ruffle collar in the knit fabric. Short flared ruffle sleeves fell from beneath the wide collar. A matching silk rose centered the gathered panel that extended down the gown front.

They carried nosegays of red carnations and white pom poms tied with white satin.

The mother of the bride wore a long gown of aqua polyester enhanced with lace around the V-neckline and empire waistline. The mother of the bridegroom selected a long gown of blue polyester enhanced with white lace. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages. Grandmothers wore white miniature carnation corsages.

The church was decorated with an arrangement of white mums, pom poms, candelabra and greenery. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. James Lee. The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Glenn Moore, brother of the bridegroom, Edward Briley, Pat Clark and Joe Toothman, all of Greenville.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall given by the bride's parents following the ceremony.

Mrs. Ronita Cohen, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch and Mrs. Kathleen Dallas, aunt of the bride, cut the cake.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Respass.

Novel Ideas Will Be A Feature

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Erica Wilson's first needlework project depicted a woman in a garden. It was stitched at about age 5 with heavy needlepoint wool on organdy.

"Very lugubrious, very primitive," she said in an interview. "Clouds were bumping into her hat."

She said she chose organdy because she could trace the design directly on it. "There's nothing like the satisfaction of having done it yourself," she said.

Miss Wilson will introduce even more novel ideas on her new 30-minute weekly television series, "Erica," which recently premiered on Public Broadcasting Service stations across the United States: quilt-point, knit-point and plaid-point, for example.

She defined point as stitch. "Needlepoint is an imitation of (woven) tapestry done on canvas."

Using the same approach she has developed stitches that imitate the effect of knitting, quilting and woven plaids and tweeds.

She said plaid-point and tweed-point are great for clothing because they are reversible.

"You could do a patchwork design, leave the threads hanging on the ends, and you have fringe."

She recommends knit-point for pillows, sofa covers and anything that needs to be stronger than knitting, and quilt-point for rugs and pillows. She'll also demonstrate crewel-point, using crewel stitches on top of conventional needlepoint for a three-dimensional effect.

Her program on costumes was inspired by, among other things, Russian embroideries in the Brooklyn Museum, a Japanese kabuki robe and a Persian potentate's full-length, quilted, reversible robe.

"It took me quite a while to figure out how it was done," she said of the latter. "I had to make myself an evening jacket (in the process)."

She's convinced youth is no barrier to needlework. Daughter Vanessa, now 9, started before she was 2 years old, she said.

Her older daughter, Jessica, now 17, has been doing needlepoint for a long time. "Quiteslapdash — she's the creative one."

"Really, they're the shoemakers' children. I hadn't time to teach Vanessa, so I put her in a class in Nantucket, where I have a group of teen-aged girls who teach for me."

Using traditional blunt-pointed needles, tots are taught to lace threads through canvas stretched tight on a frame.

"It's just weaving. You can use both hands. I knot both ends of a double thread so they can't pull it out," she said.

In her summer classes in Nantucket, a 5-year-old boy designed and worked a house with a wavy pennant on top, a fishing worm weathervane.

"Six or seven is when they really do things," she added.

She said a boom in rug-making is part of the growing appreciation of hand work. "It's still less expensive than buying rugs ready made."

The new series will include blackwork and whitework techniques, which use embroidery on even weave fabrics, and Miss Wilson's special technique for embroidering towels.

A paperback book on blackwork and whitework is scheduled for publication this spring, and a hardcover book on the new series is due in the fall.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Philadelphia, Pa., will be the scene of the April 11 wedding of Wanda Dudley and Barry Tudor.

The bride-to-be is a GED instructor and teaches reading comprehension and mathematics in Philadelphia. She helped begin the program three years ago. She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro with a degree in mathematics.

Her fiancé, a graduate of Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, is a marketing representative for Scientific Time Sharing Corp., New York City.

Bridal couple Ellen Reithmaier and Gregory Nagode will exchange wedding vows May 29 in Milwaukee, Wis.

Ellen and Gregory are faculty members of the School of Music at East Carolina University.

Enthusiastic members of the N. C. Art Society and supporters of programs directed by the N. C. Museum of Art, will be found in Raleigh next weekend.

The drawing card will be the Bicentennial edition of the Beaux-Arts Ball to be held at the North Ridge County Club.

The evening will begin at seven o'clock with cocktails. Receiving will be Mr. and Mrs. Moussa M. Domit, Dr. and Mrs. Isaac V. Manly, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Sloane along with co-chairmen, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Lilly Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Urquhart Jr. Dancing to the music of The Ambassadors of Raleigh will follow dinner.

Proceeds received from the ball have been designated to supplement other funds to purchase for the museum Claude Monet's famous painting "Morning Mists."

Decorations for the evening will show the artist's colors and style. Tables for dining will have a "ribbon pillow" effect with woven shades of celery green, ice blue, deep Iris blue and peach and the flower arrangements will be reminiscent of a French Impressionist painting.

The weekend will end with a midday party Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The U.S. News and World report said recently that by 1990, 63 out of every 100 marriages will dissolve in divorce.

In examining the probable causes of divorce, someone pointed out that it is harder to get a driver's license than a marriage license and perhaps that's when they should lay a test on you, to see if you're fit to operate a marriage.

As far as I can see, only a little rewording is needed to turn a driver's manual into a marriage manual.

So You Want To Operate A Spouse

"The examination is nothing to fear. If you know the rules and can handle a husband-wife, you will pass. Applicants must be over 18 years of age or a parent or guardian must sign the application. A LEARNER'S PERMIT IS MANDATORY. Answer the questions below:

A bride is complaining she is sick and tired of separating her husband's shorts from his trousers every time she does the laundry. She vows the next time she has to peel them apart she is going to starch the shorts causing him great pain. Should the husband (a) ignore the warning light (b) yield (c) make a U-turn and separate the garments (d) plug up her muffler with a dish towel?

A misunderstood married woman has collared a husband at a party. This does not thrill his understood married wife who threatens to go home without him if he does not leave immediately. Does he (a) leave his spouse unattended and hope someone steals her (b) follow too closely behind the married woman and take his chance on a sudden stop (c) illegally park and prepare himself for Ped-X-ing?

A wife has packed the same cookies in her husband's lunch every day for the past six months. He has brought them home uneaten every day for the past six months. He has told her as tactfully as he knows how to "stuff the lousy cookies." Should he (a) cancel her collision insurance, (b) insist on his legal right-of-way, (c) use the Implied Consent law and check out old vanilla breath for a violation?

How would you (as a spouse) handle the following warning signals: MEN WORKING (overtime), SOFT SHOULDER (someone else's), SCHOOL (and other financial disasters), DOWNGRADE (one another), PAVEMENT ENDS (G.I. Bill runs out), DIP (In the stock market)?

I'm not going to tell you how my husband and I scored on the test, but there is every indication he'd be happier with a Ford pickup, and I could dig a little Italian number.

'Action Columns' Disclose Real Public Problems

EDITOR'S NOTE — When Americans are in need, do they call 911? Their congressman? The chaplain? Maybe. But the one ombudsman they can count on is the action column in their newspaper. A sampling of those columns also measures the national heartburn better than any pollster.

All right, all you politicians.

House Built By Numbers

NEWBURY, Ohio (AP) — The Bill Zappia family's new house arrived by truck, complete with assembly instructions almost of the "place tab A in slot B" variety.

In a sense, it brought the do-it-yourself trend full-circle.

Because what Bill and Cynthia Zappia had bought was a kit for construction of a three-bedroom log house.

The pair of flatbed trucks brought the logs, each numbered and treated to resist fungus and insects.

"If you can read, you can put one up," Mrs. Zappia says.

The kit included house plans, logs, spikes, doors, windows, insulation and spline. It is one of several styles offered by a Vermont firm, and its $11,000 price tag included four hours of technical assistance from the company, Mrs. Zappia says.

But construction was well under way by the time the company man arrived, she adds.

She also says the houses are designed so that it isn't necessary to stick to the plan provided. The Zappias say they made changes without problems.

Though the house could be built on a slab of concrete, the Zappias chose to have a full basement. Additionally, their home has two baths, living room with cathedral ceiling, combined kitchen and dining room, two full porches and a balcony overlooking the living room.

The logs are of white pine, poplar and hemlock.

It is the permanent residence for the family that includes Kim, 10, and Dean, 7.

"The project has been constant work since we began last fall," Mrs. Zappia says, adding: "It's a terrific feeling to know we've done it ourselves."

LIUTENANT GOVERNOR
ARRIVED IN 1926

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas did not have an elected lieutenant governor until 1926. Previously, the president of the Arkansas Senate had served in this capacity. Harvey Parnell was the first elected lieutenant governor.

You want to know what's bothering Americans? Here's what's bothering Americans.

How come there are no doors on the ladies' room stalls at the McCoy Pavilion in Ala Moana Park in Honolulu?

How come the U.S. Mint won't get off its dime and fill all those orders for Bicentennial coins? D.M., of Charleston, W. Va., ordered his last November. M.D., of Chula Vista, Calif., ordered hers even earlier and had to explain to her dad why he didn't get them for Christmas. So how come?

How come every time D.I. of Centerville, Ohio, phones her mama in Liberty Township she gets her uncle in West Chester?

And how come everybody who writes to Mrs. A.C. W. of Oklahoma City gets the letter back marked "unknown"? She's known, she's known.

Forget your expensive, nameless polls. You want to know what real flesh and blood people have on their minds, read the "action line" and similar service columns in the nation's daily papers. No "undecided" vote here. These folks want action!

Are you truly dedicated to public service?

Then send L.H. of Norristown, Pa., her 1973 income tax refund.

Explain to M.W. of Philadelphia why an honest American taxpayer should find a rock in his pistachio ice cream.

Outline for W.S. of Charleston, W. Va., if you dare, the procedure for impeaching a city councilman.

Find, for Mrs. J.B. of Inkster, Mich., the deed to her house which her lawyer kept when he took off for Arizona to become a crop duster.

Let's have no empty promises.

Instead, do something for poor A.E.W. of Oklahoma City, whose house has been burgled twice in ten months. Not about the burglars, but the insurance company which requires receipts for everything stolen.

Don't trouble yourself, Mr. Candidate, with finding solutions to cosmic problems, just find:

Some caffeine-free tea for B.J. of Whitesville, W. Va.

A three-cornered hat for John P. McKay of the House of Representatives of Dover, Del.

A copy of "One Who Cares" for M.H. of Talladega, Ala., who sent her check to one who didn't and never got the book.

And if you can find James Dean Walker, the folks in Little Rock would be obliged. Walker killed one of their cops, went to jail, got out on furlough and never came back.

Instead of all that impersonal handshaking at factory gates in New Hampshire, why don't eager office-seekers address themselves to the truly pressing needs of the citizenry?

Such as providing for J.B. of Charleston some false teeth — for his dog.

Such as locating for Mrs. C.H.C. of Belen, N.M., some gum of tragacanth and oil of bergamot, else how can a body concoct a proper hand lotion.

And will somebody get S.R.W. of Los Lunas, N.M., a size 19 mule collar? and E.H. of Detroit a musical beer mug?

Any statesman concerned about the unemployment problem, the real unemployment problem, might do something about getting checks to all those wretches who move to another town to find work. R.T. moved from Maryland to Michigan, M.R. from Illinois to Arkansas, Ms. F. W. from Georgia to California, J.R.K. from Louisiana to Oklahoma. All were told the states they left were to blame for their checks being stopped.

Speaking of buck passing, why does the Indian on that freight line have blue eyes? W.J.A. of Albuquerque wants to know.

Will anybody standing for election tell the electorate:

How K.M. of Portsmouth, Va., can get her maiden name back?

Whether it's dangerous if you don't brown a roast before cooking it in a crock pot?

Whether Mrs. J.B. is, at 31, the youngest grandmother in Norfolk, or whether a 14-year-old chicken belonging to J.O. of other town to find work. R.T. moved from Maryland to Michigan, M.R. from Illinois to Arkansas, Ms. F. W. from Georgia to California, J.R.K. from Louisiana to Oklahoma. All were told the states they left were to blame for their checks being stopped.

How K.M. of Portsmouth, Va., can get her maiden name back?

Whether it's dangerous if you don't brown a roast before cooking it in a crock pot?

Whether Mrs. J.B. is, at 31, the youngest grandmother in Norfolk, or whether a 14-year-old chicken belonging to J.O. of Akron is the world's oldest white leghorn?

And in this Bicentennial year, the politician who answers this poser will surely get the Arkansas vote:

Is the leek a Scottish or an Italian vegetable? It will ease the mind of I.S. of Santa Monica, Cal., to find out.

Such bureaucratic problems can ruin one's sleep. Mrs. X of Detroit has one. Her son was convicted of killing her husband. Her problem: How can she collect her witness fee?

Would someone tell P.M. of East Lansing, Mich., why the Cannonball Baker Sea to Shining Sea Memorial Trophy Dash has been discontinued?

Would someone tell F.L. of Los Angeles whether it's sacrilegious to open the library on Sunday? Well, is it?

Will any politician, running anywhere, take the time to hear out three particularly threatened citizens with problems in common? Probably not, and so into that breach This Great Nation's Courageous and Unfettered Press herewith steps:

To Mrs. W.P. of Charlotte, who wants to know how to keep the birds off her daughter's sundial; to J.R.B. of Valdese, N.C., who wants to know how to train security dogs; and to Mrs. D.J.H. of Charleston, who wants to keep critters out of her garden, your problems are solved. Say, in order: shoo, sick 'im, git.

Fun and festivities were a large part of the Rose High scene during the past week.

Members of the Rose High Wildlife Club feasted on a meal of fish stew Thursday night. The club is well known for this event which is held annually.

The Rose High Stage Band rocked the audience at their concert Thursday night. The production featured Leonis McGlohon, a well-known jazz pianist, as guest soloist. The Stage Band is a group of talented, young musicians specializing in big jazz sound. Assemblies, dances, and basketball games provide the band with opportunities to gain experience in their musical fields.

The Carousel cast was announced this week and rehearsals are scheduled to begin in the very near future. Pam Bath and Robert Wease were awarded the leading roles, while Joni Buck and Jackie Payton were selected as their understudies.

Other actors and actresses will include Terry Evans, Serena Matney, Robin Moore, Lauren Brehm, David Sowell, Paul Windsor and Sherry Lenzy.

Also, Patsy Cox, Eddy Hobgood, Mike Erway, Nita Raines, Dennis Winstead, Kathy Braxton, Shirley Best, Linda Lambeth, Nancy McGlohon, Douglas Coggins, Tim Caspar, Fred Hamblen, and Bill Hamblen.

Kathryn Hayes, Hank Dunbar, Rodney Randolph, Larry Bellis, Jim Kittrell, Mike Dixon, Jackie Robinson, Barbara Pinkston, Windy Gronert, Penny Buck, Jim Kirch, Janet Boyd, and Liz Smith were included in the Carousel roles.

Rounding out the cast will be Rosalyn Taylor, Leah Long, Dorene Rountree, Mary Lou Diener, Cindy Brinson, Margie Snell, Laurie Lucas, Ellen Crane, Willie Morris, Kent Phillips and Rita Ross.

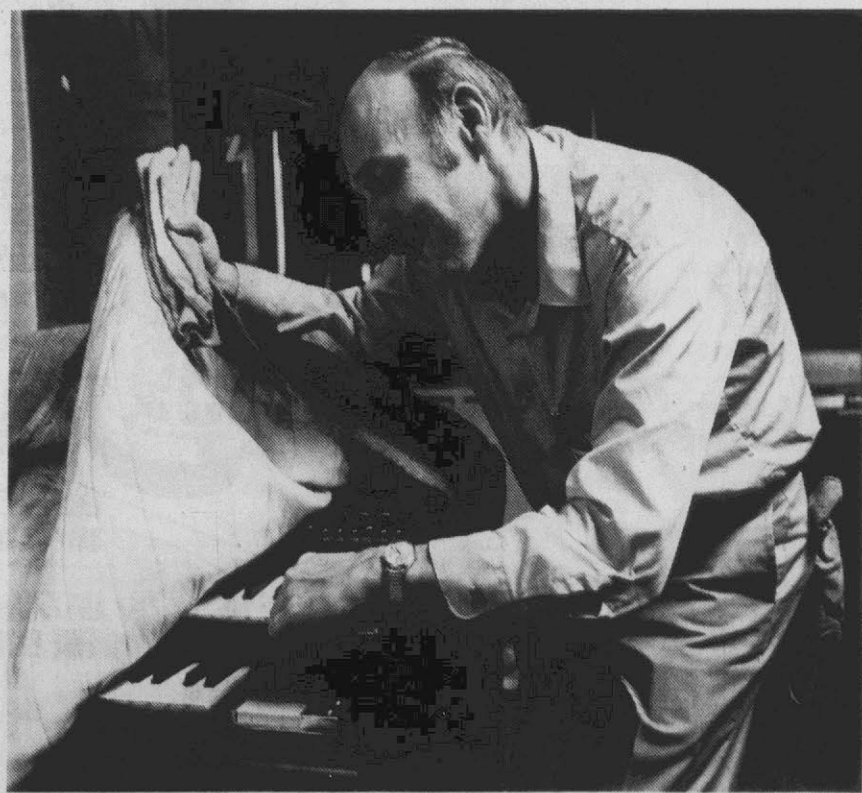

Members of the Health Careers Club celebrated Valentine's Day with a party. The club also visited the nursing home as an expression of Valentine "spirit."

A workshop was held Monday by the Student Government Association to introduce newly elected representatives into the school's system of government. The SGA provided speakers who acquainted new members with the policies and procedures of the Student Government Association.

Artistic talents were recognized this week when finalists were chosen for two cover contests. Sketches submitted by Kelly Graham, Lisa Clark, Pat Pleasant and Elaine Nichols were chosen as finalists for the logo contest sponsored by the Greenville Sports Club.

The finalists for the Carousel program cover are Dorene Rountree, Kathryn Haynes, Lisa Clark, and winners for both contests will be chosen in the near future.

Researching Possible Nuclear Station's Accident

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The federal government is funding research into a little-known theory about how an accident at a nuclear power plant might trigger a dangerous steam explosion.

Officials of the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission said that the $100,000 project at Sandia Laboratories at Albuquerque, N.M., is only one of many studies probing possible safety hazards. They say there is no evidence at this point to indicate the theory is valid as applied to nuclear power plants.

But critics of nuclear safety say the hypothesis raises the spectre of nonnuclear explosions that could rend the walls of any of the 58 currently licensed reactors and allow deadly radioactive materials to spread into the atmosphere.

"The kind of explosion we're talking about is not very big, just equivalent to a few tons of TNT," said Prof. Henry Kendall, a nuclear high-energy physicist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a founding member of the Union of Concerned Scientists.

"The hazard is that it could rupture all containment structures in the building and let radioactive material seep out into the wind," he said in a telephone interview. "If the theory is true, you could have a seemingly innocuous accident aggravated to the point of a major public catastrophe."

The theory, first proposed by astrophysicist Stirling Colgate in a study of volcanoes, tries to explain why surprisingly large explosions sometimes occur when molten materials come into contact with water. The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's 1974 Reactor Safety

Study cites four such explosions in small nuclear reactors and also a series of fatal blasts in industrial foundries.

In a paper in the August 1973 issue of Nature Magazine, Colgate hypothesized what he called a "dynamic self-mixing effect," in which an initial mixing of molten materials and water produces a high-pressure steam that in turn causes more mixing in a kind of chain reaction.

Colgate further speculated in an unpublished paper how such an explosion might occur at a light water reactor plant in the unlikely event all cooling systems failed and the uranium oxide fuel was reduced to a molten mass, an accident called a core meltdown.

The nuclear application of Colgate's theory is developed in an article in the February 1976 issue of Environment Magazine, published by a New York-based watchdog group called Scientists' Institute for Public Information.

Author Kevin Shea, a biologist and the magazine's editor, says Colgate speculated that following a meltdown, the molten fuel would come into contact with water and might produce a large-scale steam explosion sufficient to tear apart the steel and concrete walls of a power plant.

The Reactor Safety Study estimates the frequency of core meltdowns at 1 in 20,000 per year for each operating plant — so that with 200 plants in operation, such an accident could be expected every 100 years.

The study further calculates that only one in 100 meltdowns would lead to a steam explosion severe enough to release radioactivity into the environment.

Shea says that Colgate's theory challenges this last figure, by "postulating that in every case (of core meltdown) there is a potential for explosion by the dynamic self-mixing process."

Colgate, adjunct professor at New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology in Roswell and unofficial consultant to the NRC at Sandia, said he was pleased that research was under way on his theory. But he said he feared Shea's article — which he had not seen — might exaggerate the danger.

"I do not like to be an alarmist, because I feel there has been a significant response to my concern at the national laboratories," Colgate said in a telephone interview from his home in Ward, Colo. "Our knowledge of this dynamic self-mixing is not at the level yet to affect arguments pro or con nuclear power plants, because the probability of it occurring is so remote."

"These kinds of experiments are conducted — no matter how far out the accident could be — to give us an indication of what could go on," said Gary Bennett, technical assistant to the NRC's assistant director for water reactor safety research in Germantown, Md. "Usually nature's been kinder to us than we are in our own minds."

Ian B. Wall, chief of the NRC's Probabilistic Analysis Branch, said data from small-scale explosions indicated molten fuel and water probably "would not interact in an explosive way." But, he said, experiments up to now have not been able to rule out this possibility at a power plant, "because of unknowns associated with a potentially large-scale event."

Bennett said the project at Sandia on "steam explosion phenomena" was budgeted at $100,000 for fiscal 1975-76 and probably would yield no definitive results until later in the year.

Glee Club, Chorale In Joint Music Program

A stageful of singers will be on hand Monday at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center when two East Carolina University singing groups will appear in concert. There is no admission charge and the public is invited on a first-come, first-seated basis.

The ECU Women's Glee Club, under the direction of Beatrice Chancey, and the ECU University Chorale, Charles W. Moore, director, will appear in concert Monday.

The 38 member Women's Glee Club, with Leah Wiggins, accompanist, will sing songs by three composers. The first group includes three songs from Irving Fine's "Alice In Wonderland" using Lewis Carroll's texts. These are The Lobster Quadrille, Lullaby of the Dutchess, featuring soprano Claire Hurley, and Father William.

The second group is songs by Brahms. These are The Butterfly, Tears In The Forest, The Willow and The Churchyard.

The final group of four songs are from Karl Korte's 1966 work, "Songs of Innocence," based on poems by Williams Blake — Piping Down The Valleys, Infant Joy, A Cradle Song and Spring. Korte is composer-in-residence at the University of Texas.

For their part of the program, the 49 members of the ECU University Chorale will sing songs by two composers. Bela Bartok and Martin Mailman. For a number of years Dr. Mailman was Composer-in-Residence on the East Carolina University faculty.

Drew Cooke, pianist, will be accompanist for four Slovak folksongs by Bartok.

These are Zadala mamka (Wedding Song); Na holi, Na holi (Song of the Harvesters); Rada pila, rada jedla (Dancing song from Medzibrod), and Gajdujte, gajdujte (Dancing song from Poniky).

The three songs by Mailman to be performed by the chorale are Hark, Hark! The Lark; Take, Oh Take; and O Mistress Mine.

Symphony Concert Set

The ECU Symphony Orchestra will present its winter concert on Sunday, February 22 at 3:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. Robert Hause will conduct.

The program will feature works by American composers Leonard Bernstein, George Gershwin and Darius Milhaud, a naturalized American citizen born in France.

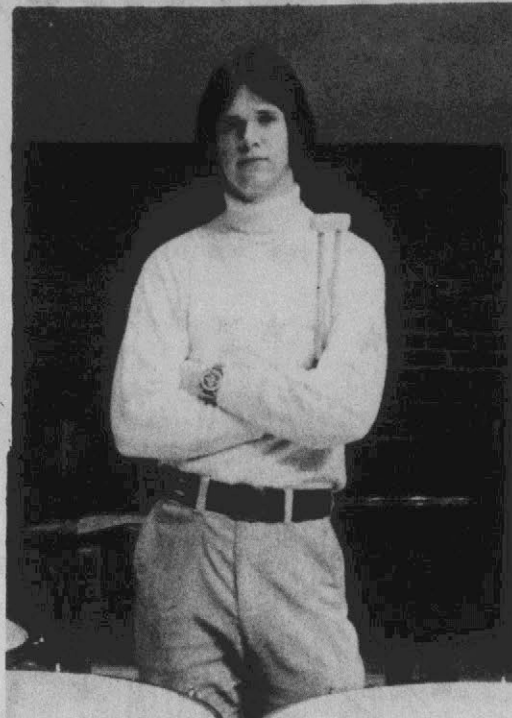

Bernstein's Overture to Candide will open the concert. This work captures the spirit of the musical which appeared on Broadway in 1956. Two works which have become classics in the symphonic repertoire will follow: George Gershwin's Cuban Overture and An American in Paris.

A junior in the School of Music, Rick Latham of Shelby will be the featured soloist in Concerto for Percussion and Orchestra by Milhaud. Latham is the winner of the School of Music Concerto Competition. His performance in both the preliminary and final auditions of the competition was judged by the faculty to entitle him to perform with the Symphony Orchestra. He is a student of Professor Harold Jones.

The program will conclude with A Symphonic Picture of Porgy and Bess, Gershwin's folk opera of 1935. The work was arranged by Robert Russell Bennett upon commission from the late Fritz Reiner in 1943.

Robert Hause, conductor, stated: "This program might well be classified by some as 'Pops'. Indeed, the works by Bernstein and Gershwin have been popular for some time, universally loved by people throughout the world. By offering them to the Greenville audience we hope to honor the American spirit in this Bicentennial year."

Rondo Dance Theater In ECU Residency

TWO DANCERS... from the Rondo Dance Theater. The company will spend a half-week residency at ECU and give two performances and a lecture-demonstration.

The Rondo Dance Theatre will start a half-week residency at the Department of Drama in McGinnis Auditorium on Monday. During the residency, the Rondo Dance Theatre will perform a lecture-demonstration on Monday evening at 7:30, a children's matinee on Tuesday at 1:30, and an evening performance on Wednesday at 8:00 p.m.

The Rondo Dance Theatre is a top-level, multi-racial company which performs a variety of dance forms—modern, classic, ethnic, and jazz—by some of America's leading choreographers.

A Rondo specialty is a piece called The Execution. The dance is about Mary, Queen of Scots and her fight for life. Another popular favorite is Duo. Of these dances, the New York Times said it was "...an engaging program... beautifully focused dancers... darting, taut intensity... The evening was one of pleasures."

Tickets for the children's matinee on February 17 at 1:30 p.m. are $1.00 for students and $2.00 for adults. Tickets for the evening performance on Wednesday, the 18th at 8:00 p.m. are $2.00 for non-ECU students and $2.00 for the general public. The lecture-demonstration on February 16 at 7:30 p.m. is free. All performances will be in McGinnis Auditorium. Call 758-6611 for reservations.

The Ed Reep Show At The Art Center

A Total Vision Of Nature

A little more than 30 years have passed since Ed Reep served his youthful apprenticeship in art as a GI artist recording in sketches and watercolors his fellow GIs on the battlefields of Italy in World War II.

In the intervening years Reep's work has been honored with numerous rewards. He has received several outstanding commissions — from Life magazine for paintings of the airports of the world; from Ford Motor Company; Selznick International Pictures; etc.

Since coming to Greenville, Reep received a commission in 1971 from the U.S. Government to record his impressions of the Berlin Wall. These are but a few of the highlights of a continuously fruitful painting career spanning more than three decades.

It has been six years since Reep left Southern California to join the faculty of the East Carolina University School of Art as an artist-in-residence and professor of painting.

A major cross-section of Reep's painting during these years is currently on view at the Greenville Art Center in a one-man show entitled "The Greenville Years 1970-1975."

The show is divided into four major divisions — the Greenville Series, large canvases in which Reep reveals his initial responses to a new environment in relatively bold, conventional terms; the Haiku series; the Dual Series; and most recently, the Reticular Series.

Each of the series are manifestations of an inquiring, versatile talent still seeking new levels to express the artist's emotions. Reep himself best sums up this evident inner flame that shows in these paintings in his catalogue note: "...my preoccupation with the majestic, the beautiful, the soulful and poignant remains impossible to conceal."

The Haiku series of 1970, first of the four series chronologically, are the smallest in scale and the most economically conceived.

As the name implies, these paintings, executed in oil pastels, are based on the deceptively simple Japanese verse form, Haiku. Reep's Haikus are sparse, poetic works of rare beauty that project the essential quality of Haiku in a framework of brilliant colors.

In the magnificent large scale Dual series of 1972 and 1973, Reep shows his mastery of complicated, formalized designs in dually repeated images which are totally satisfying as an entity. His surface treatment in this series ranges from a near-pointillism technique (as in Dual Series No. 6) to broad smooth areas of paint (Dual Series No. 3).

Perhaps the familiar affections I hold for most of Reep's work of the past few years make it a little difficult for me to respond immediately to the 1975 Reticular Series, most of which are hard-edged or precise geometric squares or circles of color. There is one exception, Number 8, a magnificently colored huge canvas.

This painting, along with Micro-Macrocosmos, a 1972 oil painting and Circumstance, a 1974 watercolor, are splendid examples of Reep's grasp of a total vision of nature.

In these paintings, he probes with the gift of a mature artist the marvels of nature. Each painting is different in concept — a veritable catalogue of insects, butterflies, trees, plants and soil stratas in Micro-Macrocosmos; the incredible patterns of life forms as viewed under a microscope in Circumstance; in Reticular Series No. 8, nature's intricate interlocking details are metamorphosed into a visual image of the intensity of nature's stark power.

The Greenville Art Center's exhibit of Reep's "The Greenville Years 1970-1975" was underwritten by a grant received from the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts. It is hoped that future grants will make possible future shows of this caliber. A number of the paintings in this show are being shown through the courtesy of various private owners, as well as four paintings loaned from the collection of the North Carolina National Bank.

A limited supply of catalogues of the exhibit are available for purchase from the Greenville Art Center. These are illustrated in color and in black and white.

Jerry Raynor

RETICULAR NO. 8... is one of the new series of paintings in a one-man show by Ed Reep at the Greenville Art Center. Underwritten by the N.C. Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts, the exhibit will remain on view through February. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to see the show from 9-12 and 2-5 daily Monday through Friday, and between 9:30-12 on Saturday.

—A Review—

The Art Of Selling Art

Artist's Market, '76. Edited by Kirk Polking and Liz Prince. Cincinnati, Ohio. Writer's Digest Publishing Company. 684 pps., illustrated. $9.95.

It might be asked, why two separate volumes to cover markets for creative people when so often the markets are inter-related; and in many instances a person who writes is a photographer or artist, or vice-versa.

smaller, more specialized segments.

But to return to the volume under review, Artist's Market '76 provides an artist with anything salable in intelligent time and money-saving leads on "where" to send the item, with best chances for a sale.

Artist's Market '76 is divided into seven market categories encompassing a total of 9,107 listings—"1,902 Illustration Markets;" "1,850 Cartoon Markets;" "678 Craft Markets;" "2,003 Design Markets;" "2,034 Photography Markets;" and "640 Fine Art Markets."

Stated without clarification, the idea of plowing through 9,107 possible marketing spots would indeed be so overwhelming that the very thought of making the attempt would be discouraging.

But the chief value of this volume, as in the Writer's Digest, is in the format. The editors of Artist's Market '76 have simplified arrangements in groupings and listings of markets so that information on any category of art work, i.e., a cartoon or a greeting card, can be readily found. It's then a simple process of comparing one market with another to determine the most likely one to accept for the best price the item an artist wants to sell.

It necessarily follows that in a listing of this multitude, even a generous 624 pages does not allow for excess details. But preciseness is not equivalent to skimpiness of essentials. Artist's Market '76 does provide the information any artist needs when searching for a market for his product—whether it's a photograph, a drawing, a gift wrapping paper design, a mechanical drawing, an entertainment display, or one of the thousand and one other types of commercial, decorative or fine art that some agency, magazine, firm or company may be waiting for.

The market listings are rounded out by a number of helpful supplements on subjects such as copyright information, clipping services, associations of interest to artists; notes on marketing, etc.

For any artist who has something to sell, this book is, in one word, indispensable.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MARGARET SHEERAN

A quickie Bicentennial quiz: This American revolutionary's house was crowded with children and he had to hold down odd jobs to make ends meet. He was a printer, dentist, silversmith, bell-caster, hardware salesman, copper manufacturer, and, not so incidentally, a post-rider. But on the night for which he is famous he unfortunately forgot his spurs, and had to send his dog home with a note around its collar asking his wife to bring them. Who? Of course, Paul Revere.

One of the rebels warned by Revere that night, quickly deciding that he was too important to the cause to stand and risk capture, resolved to escape—but unfortunately he did not know how to ride a horse, so he and John Hancock had to wait for a carriage to take them to the middle of a swamp until the coast was clear. (John Adams later convinced this man to take riding lessons by pointing out that all the other revolutionaries would be memorialized with fine equestrian statues). Who? Sam Adams.

This stemwinding orator became a lawyer (after failing at farming) by reading three books. He was bitterly against ratifying the Constitution and was known to give day-long speeches against it. Who? Patrick Henry.

This salad of irreverent detail is taken from a fine series of children's Bicentennial biographies by Jean Fritz. The books, aimed at the primary grades, are available at the library.

Ms. Fritz is careful about her facts and gives references for some of the more unfamiliar details. The overall effect is to make the historical figures charming and human; if less heroic, then more likeable. The titles are And Then What Happened, Paul Revere?, Why Don't You Get a Horse, Sam Adams? and Where Was Patrick Henry on the 29th of May?

June Jordan, who several years ago wrote an excellent biography of Fannie Lou Hamer, has made her first venture into fiction for the primary grades. New Life, New Room is a simple story of the excitement within an urban family at the arrival of a new baby girl. In particular, the three children help create and arrange a room for themselves, to get ready for the newest member of the family.

The emphasis is on strong family values, with everyone pitching in when there is work to be done. In the nicely understated final scene the children (including six year old Linda who has moved from sleeping on the sofa in the living room) discover that with their cots tied together, all in the same room, they can whisper and giggle to each other before finally dropping off to sleep.

For slightly older children Superworlds is an imaginatively produced new book by Joshua Strickland on the question "Is there other intelligent life in the universe?" The book is a pleasure simply to page through, the pictures are so carefully chosen and presented.

Strickland's answer to the question is "Yes" and he has managed to assemble a fairly convincing set of facts, though at some points his theories seem as barely credible as Erich Von Daniken, who wrote the introduction to this book.

Intelligent life in the universe will first be discovered, Strickland believes, not by space probes but by decoding radio messages. In a remarkably clear style, the author explains basic ideas on the formation of the universe, the distances involved, relativity, black holes and radioastronomy. This is a book full of facts to puzzle over, and fancies to spark the imagination.

Dairy Farm Uses Waste

ENFIELD, Conn. (AP) — While municipalities spend millions of dollars for waste treatment plants, two local dairy farmers have built their own system for a moderate sum and keep waste effluent from polluting the Scantic River.

The system of lagoons and leeching fields built by Ed and Jack Collins at their Powder Hill Road farm is typical of the movement by many Connecticut farmers to take advantage of federal aid for such projects, according to a state agriculture official.

The $8,000 system built by the Collinses, a father-and-son farming team, depends on two basins which collect both livestock waste and runoff from the milking operation area of their farm.

One lagoon collects all milking area effluent which contains soaps and other detergents that would otherwise seep into the nearby Scantic River.

The other lagoon holds manure runoffs from the farm's feedlot area. As the basins overflow, the waste is spread over a wide sandy area and eventually is absorbed back into the earth.

According to Jeremiah Wadsworth, executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, within the past two years some 50 state farmers have taken advantage of aid for such projects. Wadsworth says up to half of the state's 750 farms may require antipollution projects.

DAYTONA 500—ABC's Championship Auto Racing—ABC Sports will provide live coverage of the Daytona "500" Stock Car Race from Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach, Fla. The Race will be televised in two segments on Sunday, February 15. The first telecast (1-1:30 p.m.) will feature the traditional start of the race with the exciting finish scheduled from 3:30 p.m. to conclusion.

The Daytona 500 annually provides stock car racing fans with thrill - a - second, endurance - demanding races that often break speed records and contribute huge financial rewards for the top finishers. On Sunday, Feb. 15, ABC will have live coverage of this breath-taking sports event in two segments. The first portion, from 1 to 1:30 p.m., will feature the traditional start of the race, while the second portion, from 3:30 p.m. to conclusion, will highlight the exciting, checkered - flag ending to the race.

The '500' is only one portion of an action - packed Speed Weeks in Daytona that began Saturday, Jan. 31. Two other NASCAR events and a $100,000 24 Hours of Daytona endurance test are also run.

Benny Parsons, who drove his Kings Row Fireplace Chevrolet to victory in the 1975 event, will be back to defend his title. The Ellerbe, N.C. native predicts that this year's Daytona 500 could be the fastest stock car race in the history of the sport.

"If there are no caution flags — and there is a very good chance that there won't be — you might possibly see an average speed of 180 or better," declares the 34-year-old veteran.

Parson's victory in the 1975 classic was a stunning one, as it was the first super-speedway victory of his career. The former Detroit cab driver will be one of forty cars to start the richest event on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit.

Top competition will be provided by Donnie Allison and David Pearson, who both scorched the Daytona track in excess of 184 miles per hour in qualifying for the 1975 race. Richard Petty, king of the NASCAR circuit, will also be gunning for victory lane. Petty, of Randleman, N.C., will be attempting to capture an unprecedented sixth triumph in the Daytona 500; no other driver has won more than once at the event.

As added incentive, the '500' could be the richest in the history of the sport. The total purse will be $342,000, an all-time high. The winner could take home a record - breaking $56,500, while second and third place are worth a possible $40,000 and $30,000, respectively.

Racing fans from all over the United States will flock to Daytona International Speedway on Sunday, Feb. 15, while ABC-TV will provide a front - row seat for the most important segments of the race.

Telly's Pop, Kojak Appear On Special

Telly's Pop, the two-year-old racing horse owned by "Kojak" star Telly Savalas, will be among the guest stars when Telly, the man, hosts his own variety special, "Telly . . . Who Loves Ya Baby?," Wednesday, Feb. 18, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS ch. 9-11.

"We're going to show film clips of him," Telly said, a special sparkle of pride in his eyes, "and we're going to do a montage on racing and show the champions of the past. Then, I will be walking with Telly's Pop in the sunset saying, 'Kentucky Derby, 1976, and the winner is . . . I'll just say, 'Why not?'"

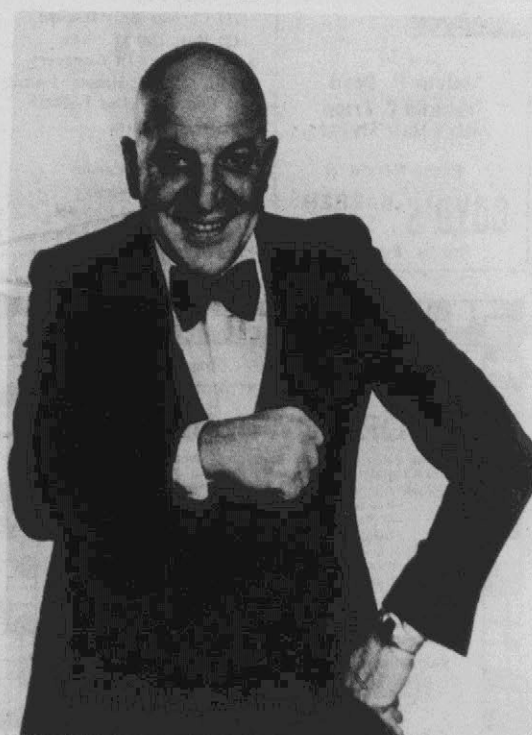

Savalas chuckles, for while the horse he owns 50 percent of has been a surprising winner this year, it was merely by accident that the actor became involved in horse racing.

"You can't talk about Telly's Pop without starting out with, 'Once upon a time,' because I promise you it's a total fairy tale."

The tale began when a business associate of the actor's told him of a horse whose trainer needed $6,000.

"I said, 'Why should I invest in a horse?' And the guy said, 'Just for the fun of it!' So I did," Telly recalls.

In its first eight races, Telly's Pop has won six and finished second twice. He won the triple crown of racing for two year olds which has never been done before, and according to his TV star owner, "We are going to the KOJAK—Telly Savalas, star of "Kojak," makes his musical-comedy television debut on "Telly . . . Who Loves Ya, Baby?" Wednesday, February 18 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3N, 9-11.

Awards Selected By The People's Choice

"The People's Choice Awards" differs sharply from the Oscar, the Emmy and the Grammy awards in this respect: it is the choice of the people.

While the Oscar, Emmy and Grammy are voted on by members of the motion picture, television and recording academies, respectively—that is, the winners' peers — the People's Choice Awards are determined by a scientific polling of the American public.

The awards will be presented to the nation's favorite television, film and musical performers on the second annual "The People's Choice Awards," a live, two-hour variety-entertainment special, Thursday, Feb. 19, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

Jack Albertson and Hollywood columnist Army Archerd will co-host the special which will be broadcast live from the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium. Robert Blake, Carol Burnett, Kirk Douglas, Henry Fonda, Bob Hope, Mary Tyler Moore, Valerie Perrine, Telly Savalas, Roy Scheider and John Wayne will appear as presenters.

Specific categories in which favorites will be honored are: comedy and drama television shows, specials, favorite new television show, favorite male and favorite female in a new television show, and favorite male or female television performer.

In the motion picture area, awards will be presented for the favorite actor and actress in the field and for the favorite picture. An award will be offered for the best new song, and one for a singer or musical group. Finally, the year's most popular all-around male or female entertainer will be named.

Appropriately, the award which will be presented depicts a pair of hands in an "applause" pose engraved in lead-crystal. The free-form sculpture is some 10 inches in height.

Robert Reed Plays Wolf

Those television fans who hold a popular image of Robert Reed are in for a real surprise. The nice family man of "The Brady Bunch" is about to become a wolf on the prowl.

Reed has the most important role of his career when he portrays a decadent playboy in "Rich Man, Poor Man," an

"ABC Novel for Television."

"When I was first contacted about the part I thought someone had made a mistake, or else a joke was being played on me," he admits. "After 'The Defenders' and 'The Brady Bunch' I was just not being offered playboy-type roles. I quickly realized, though, that if I could do this part I could do anything—and I knew I had to do it and do it well."

The major test of Reed's ability came almost at the beginning of the drama, when he introduced daiquiris and sex to a young girl portrayed by Susan Blakely.

Derby, and I promise you that racing will never be the same if Telly's Pop wins, and we expect him to. I mean, if you are going to dream you might as well dream all the way."

One of Telly's other dreams has been to host his own variety special, and in "Telly . . . Who Love Ya, Baby?," "Kojak" fans will be seeing the actor sing and dance with human guest stars Diahann Carroll, Barbara Eden and Cloris Leachman.

Child Views Remarriage

What about the children? How will they feel? Will they understand?

These are questions frequently raised when two adults reach the critical decision that they can no longer coexist as man and wife. And, no matter how delicately the situation is handled, in the end, only the children know the answers.

In "Me & Dad's New Wife," an "ABC Afterschool Special" airing Wednesday, Feb. 18, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., a glimpse into the life of one young girl who is caught in such circumstances is revealed through the character of Nina Beckwith, as portrayed by Kristy McNichol. In Nina's case, the situation is further complicated by the remarriage of her father.

The drama which unfolds, as Nina discovers that her dad's new wife is also her math teacher, has powerful impact for the 12 year old, who must not only accept the fact that her father has remarried, but that she must interact with the woman almost every day.

I believe the story of Nina Beckwith, which is both serious and filled with humor, is an important one for all youngsters — and adults — whether or not the situation is one with which they must contend, since there are few of us who have not been touched in some way by divorce, personally, or through the divorce of a friend or relative.

It is not a new phenomenon, but only in recent years has it emerged from the closet as a topic of open discussion.

With this exploration of the aftermath of divorce, I hope young viewers will comprehend the importance of allowing others to live their lives, unhindered by past relationships.

The pain endured by Nina, upon facing the reality of her father's remarriage is difficult for her to bear, but we also see that children are not the only ones who suffer in such cases, as Nina creates serious difficulties for her dad's new wife.

"Me & Dad's New Wife," a presentation of "ABC Afterschool Specials," stars Kristy McNichol (right) as Nina Beckwith a young girl struggling with inner conflicts sparked by her divorced father's marriage to Delores, played by Melendy Britt (left). The special airs Wednesday, February 18 (4:30-5:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Bob Crane Plays 'Superdad'

STILL WORRIED—Comedy cut-up Bob Crane, playing the role of Charlie McCready, as establishment father who finds himself in more zany trouble than he can handle when he tries to be one of the gang, isn't too sure that daughter Wendy (Kathleen Cody) is doing the right thing by marrying Bart (Kurt Russell) in the special two hour world television premiere of "Superdad" Sunday, February 15 on "The Wonderful World of Disney" on Channel 6-7.

When 40-year-old Charlie McCready tries to involve himself in his daughter's life, the results are a bent sacroiliac, a bruised ego and a bewildered teenager.

Charlie, played by Bob Crane, fumbles more than a football in "Superdad," a romantic comedy about an establishment father trying to steer his daughter toward the proper marriage.

The fun-filled comedy makes its world television premiere as a special two-hour telecast Sunday, Feb. 15, on "The Wonderful World of Disney," 7 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

Crane departs from his ever-winning "Hogan's Heroes" image to play the bumbling father of teenage Wendy McCready, portrayed by Kathleen Cody.

His attempts to be a 'modern' parent and join in her interests lead him to the beach and into the swells of the Pacific Ocean, while bewildered Wendy and her friends try to figure out what he's doing there.

After a near-disastrous bout with surfing, Charlie is rescued by his daughter's friends. Undaunted though waterlogged, he plunges into a game of football where he gets tackled right in the lateral pass. A quiet game of volleyball nets the hapless father another lump or two.

Finally, not to be outdone by his daughter's boyfriend Bart, played by Kurt Russell, McCready attempts waterskiing and in the wake of the activity, lands in bed, with lovely wife Sue, portrayed by Barbara Rush, playing attentive nurse.

The comedy also stars Joe Flynn, B. Kirby Jr., Joby Baker and Dick Van Patten. Bill Anderson produced and Vincent McEveety directed the film. Joseph McEveety wrote the screenplay from a story by Harlan Ware.

BYNER IN "THE PRACTICE"
Comedian John Byner will play the recurring role of Dr. Roland Caine in "The Practice," NBC-TV's new half-hour comedy series starring Danny Thomas as Dr. Jules Bedford, a general practitioner on New York's West Side.

Caine is the medical partner of Bedford's doctor-son, David Bedford, played by series regular David Spielberg. He is a golf-playing, dapper-dressing, name-dropping wheeler-dealer—the antithesis of what Jules Bedford is or what he wants David to be.

Delany Digs Antiques

Pat Delany calls herself a "junkie" but don't jump to conclusions! What the attractive actress who plays Martin Milner's wife in "Irwin Allen's Swiss Family Robinson" is referring to is her long-standing interest in collecting antiques and decorative "junk."

Pat readily admits her interest began one day when she was shopping for furniture. After looking at the prices of what was currently stylish, she decided, "If I was going to spend a lot of money on furniture I'd pay for something that looked like it was worth it."

With her husband, Rick, Pat began acquiring various period pieces and, in the process, increased their collective knowledge of period furniture and its restoration.

"Our 'bibles' are 'The Complete Encyclopedia of Antiques' and a reprint of the 1908 Sears Roebuck catalog. Usually, what happens is that I'll go through the books after I've bought something and discover I own an Elizabethan melon bulb table or something which sold for three dollars in 1908. How I wish I could buy some of these things at their 1908 prices," she says.

Presently, Pat and Rick are in the process of furnishing a California ranch-style home which they moved into recently. They are giving it a Pennsylvania-Dutch feeling, using blue and white as the dominant colors.

FROM ONE EXTREME TO THE OTHER

Robert Orben, a former comedy writer for Red Skelton and Jack Parr, has been put in charge of President Ford's speechwriting team.

VAN DYKE BACK AGAIN

Dick Van Dyke, who has starred in several TV series, has been signed for a weekly variety series starting next fall. The hour-long series will be based on his special which aired last fall.

One of the most successful series during the so-called "Golden Age" of television was "Peter Gunn," and the man who portrayed the dapper private eye has found that the series has lived on far longer than he ever thought or cared that it would.

It has been 15 years since the series went off the air, but Craig Stevens still finds that it is the Peter Gunn character for which most people remember him, despite his continuing active career in acting. His latest role, as a magazine editor in Parts III and IV of "Rich Man, Poor Man," is another in a long series of roles that he hopes will someday allow him to be someone other than Peter Gunn.

"I really shouldn't complain too much about 'Peter Gunn' since it was a break that any actor would have wanted," he said. "But 15 years is a long time to live with one character. I've done a lot of parts, but when people stop me on the street it's always 'Peter Gunn' they want to talk about. It's all very flattering, of course; I guess the quality of the show has kept it special all these years."

Stevens looks upon his role in "Rich Man, Poor Man," the "ABC Novel for Television" which is being presented in a total of 12 hours, as a turning point not only for him but possibly for the entire television industry: "My role in the film is relatively small, but it was so well written that it gave me hope that television might find a new 'Golden Age.' Stevens Is Done With 'Gunn'

A WINNER — Nick Nolte (L) plays Tom Jordache, winning for once in his life, as the ABC-TV "Novel for Television" airing Monday, referee (The Great John L. Cq.) (r.) lifts his arm in victory in "Rich Man, Poor Man" Part IV, the ABC-TV "Novel for Television" airing Monday, February 16 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3-5-12.

television was a new, fresh medium. Then, gradually, some of the best people left. Now, with projects like 'Rich Man, Poor Man,' they're beginning to come back. It was ironic, for instance, that one of our best directors on 'Peter Gunn,' Boris Segal, directed my segments of 'Rich Man, Poor Man.' It was a real case of deja-vu for both of us."

With "Rich Man, Poor Man" and other projects Craig Stevens may someday shake the image of Peter Gunn, but there is one part of that series he knows will be around a long time.

"We hired an unknown composer named Henry Mancini to write the music for the show,"

he recalled. "No matter what happens to me, Henry's music will remain a part of our culture."

Bond Movie Premieres

James Bond finds love and a load of trouble in the Swiss Alps when star George Lazenby gives the intrepid superhero a new face in "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," a television premiere on "The ABC Monday Night Movie," airing in two parts, Feb. 16, and Feb. 23 (both 8:30 to 10 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12).

Telly Savalas, pursuing the evil ways that made him a film star before he joined television's police force, brings the vicious Blofeld back to life, and Diana Rigg — who dined regularly on karate chops in "The Avengers" — plays Bond's first true love and bride-to-be.

The New York Times applauded the "authentic, truly spectacular Portuguese and Swiss scenic backgrounds, caught in eye-catching colors, and Variety saluted Bond's plunge down a mountainside by tramway cable, skis, stock car and toboggan as simply "the greatest and most imaginative chase sequence ever filmed."

The Independent Film Journal said that Lazenby, the successor to Sean Connery, "gives Bond a human side, with his vulnerable quality and the sense of fun in his performance. He throws lines away with easy comfort and seems to be having a helluva time." For Bond, being "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" brings both good news and bad news. The good news: the beautiful Tracy Ferzetti (Diana Rigg) is (a) crazy about him and (b) almost as intrepid as he is.

The bad news: before can marry the love of his life he has to deal with SPECTRE chief Blofeld, who is crazy about the idea of killing him.

Winkler Is Fired By His Hobby

Arthur "Fonzie" Fonzarelli, the ultra-cool highschool dropout, ladies man and motorcycle buff, of ABC-TV's "Happy Days" (Tuesdays, 8 to 8:30 p.m.), is hardly the type you'd expect to find in a pottery class.

However, the actor who plays Fonzie — Henry Winkler — a product of private schools and a graduate of the Yale School of Drama, is a man of esthetic and artistic interests, and his hobby of free-form pottery is one of them.

Winkler became interested in ceramics when he was living in Washington, D.C. and appearing in a play at the Washington Arena Theatre. "One of my neighbors was a pottery teacher. I got to asking her a lot of questions. Eventually she invited me to sit in one of her classes and observe the technique. After that first visit I was hooked," said Henry.

Although his hectic schedule does not permit him enough time to be a true professional of the craft, Winkler took time out recently between filming assignments, to visit The Pot Shop in Venice, California, where he wheeled and rapped

ARTIST — Henry Winkler, who stars as Fonzie, on ABC-TV's "Happy Days" Tuesdays (8-8:30 p.m.) is all fired up on pottery making as relaxation from his regular job of molding

with others who share his interest.

Henry explained that the first step in ceramics creation is to mold the clay on a potter's wheel into the form you desire. This may take a few minutes, or perhaps a few hours, until you get exactly what you want. After that, the object is placed into a kiln, heated to a temperature of 1800 degrees Fahrenheit and baked for several hours.

When the piece cools, it is then ready to be painted and glazed with a substance made from powdered glass. Again, it is placed in the kiln to dry.

Asked why he finds the hobby so relaxing, Winkler said: "When you are at the wheel creating, it is gratifying and the concentration is total. It takes your mind off everyday problems and pressures. . . It is complete harmony between mind and hand. And, no pun intended, it fires your imagination."

Co-starring are Brigid Bazlen, Walter Brennan, David Brian, Andy Devine, Raymond Massey, Agnes Moorehead, Henry (Harry) Morgan, Thelma Ritter, Mickey Shaughnessy and Russ Tamblyn.

"How the West Was Won" is the story of America's expansion westward, starting from the period right after the Revolutionary War with the movement of settlers down the Erie Canal to the lush and fertile lands of the Ohio River Valley. This was the land of Daniel Boone, the fur-trappers and the buckskin-clad explorers.

The Louisiana Purchase and the war with Mexico expanded America still further west, and by horse, mule and wagon train pioneers moved across snow-capped mountains toward the Pacific. Some were lured by the gold strike in California, others by tales of Oregon. Lewis and Clark had blazed the trail. Thousands were to follow.

Friend's Story About James Dean Dramatized

Stephen McHattie stars as James Dean in a dramatization by writer William Bast of his friendship with the late screen idol in "James Dean," an NBC World Premiere movie to be colorcast Feb. 19, 8 to 10 p.m., on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies," and airing on Channel 6-7.

Michael Brandon portrays Bast, who roomed with Dean when both were struggling for success in Hollywood 25 years ago.

The story describes their friendship from the time they meet as young acting students until Dean's death at the age of 24 — already a movie idol despite just three starring roles. And it follows them back to New York, where Dean pursues his acting career and has brief romances with an actress, Chris White, and a dancer, Dizzy Sheridan.

Bast, who wrote the teleplay and co-produced the film, calls the story "one man's recollection of James Dean, an image of the actor as seen through the eyes of a friend."

The movie-for-TV was directed by Robert Butler.

JAMES DEAN REMEMBERED— Stephen McHattie (left) portrays film star and cult idol James Dean and Michael Brandon co-stars as Bill Bast, Dean's Hollywood roommate, in the NBC World Premiere Movie, "James Dean," to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" February 19 (8-10 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

KAPLAN ON 'AWARDS'

Gabriel Kaplan, popular star of "Welcome Back, Kotter," is slated to perform on the second annual "People's Choice Awards" special.

'Unwed Father' Evokes Questions

Joseph Bottoms was asked: "What would you do if you were confronted with the situation you are faced with in 'Unwed Father'—being asked by your girlfriend to give up for adoption the illegitimate baby you have fathered?"

The 19-year-old father gave the question his full attention, turning it over in his mind, examining all aspects of it, and probing it in depth before he replied.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "It's something I can't answer with any degree of positiveness because there are too many things to consider, too many variables. All I can say is that I'm grateful not having to decide such a vital question in my own life."

The decision motivates the plot of "Unwed Father," the

"CBS Late Movie," on Monday, Feb. 16, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3N,9,11, with Bottoms and Kay Lenz starring as high school students (Peter and Vicky) who differ on how to solve their mutual problem.

In the story, Peter fights Vicky and her family in order to adopt the baby. Vicky, who refuses to marry the young father of her child, thinks it's only fair to the baby to have it adopted by a prosperous young couple who can give it the comforts and advantages that go with affluence.

'Adams Chronicles' Presented On PBS

John Adams ages from 23 to 91. Abigail Adams ages from 18 to 74. John Quincy Adams ages from an infant to an 81-year-old statesman. Ben Franklin has to look like himself. So does Thomas Jefferson. The street rabble in Boston must look properly disheveled. The delegates to the Continental Congress must wear hair in the proper fashions. So too the elaborately bewigged court at Versailles, the more single burghers of Holland, and the courtiers of George III.

None of the above was simple, and they were only some of the problems faced by a team of artists in makeup and hair and wig fashions during the nineteen-week videotaping of "The Adams Chronicles," seen Tuesdays, 9 p.m., on PBS. The series spans 150 years and four generations of the historic Adams family of Massachusetts.

Making characters grow up and age gracefully was an indispensable element for the authenticity of "The Chronicles." To accomplish transitions in age and hair and wig fashions, each member of the team in charge of these matters had specific assignments. Hair design was by Joe Turbens and Bob Grimaldi. Makeup was supervised by Margaret Sunshine, Joe Cranzano and Max Henriquez. Assistants were always on hand to process the large numbers of extras. Special aging and prosthetic work was primarily handled by Max Henriquez and Scott Cunningham.

With the exception of the special aging problems, makeup for the period was relatively easy. As Henriquez noted: "The only reason they look so different is the hair. Our real problem was to tone down suntans by putting on a thin pale green base, powder a bit, then apply the color you really want and pray that the actor does not perspire and bring his suntan out again."

Henriquez went on to say "there is no way that mascara or false eyelashes could be used and not look wrong for the period." For some actresses, pale to invisible lashes had to be eyed.

People Do-Elephants Don't

CLOWNING AROUND—Host Johnny Cash and his 5-year-old son, John Carter Cash, are surrounded by clowns, who appear in "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus," a "Bell System Family Theatre" special Wednesday, February 18 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

In this uncertain age, it may be reassuring that an old saying such as "elephants never forget," is based on fact.

At least that's what Axel Gautier, head elephant trainer of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, contends.

"They never do forget actually," the Swedish-born trainer asserts. "Once they are taught a trick they will always retain it. Many elephants perform for better than 50 years and are capable of recalling feats of elephant dexterity that, perhaps, they haven't used for some time. Just a little brushing up and they're back at it."

Gautier and his herd of talented elephants with some new tricks will appear on the all-new "Highlights of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus," a "Bell System Family Theatre" special to be colorcast Wednesday, Feb. 18, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

This 106th edition of The Greatest Show on Earth has as its theme, "200 Years of Circus in America," and consists of acts and attractions from more than 15 countries.

The circus is a Gautier family tradition. Axel's family began to perform in circuses during the early 19th century. Gautier is continuing the tradition with his own family. He is accompanied in the ring by his wife, Donna, and 11-year-old son, Michael, and waiting in the wings is 5-year-old son, Kevin.

Working with the crowd - pleasing elephants is exciting in the ring, but necessary drudgery outside. From dawn to dusk, the herd must be regularly fed and watered. Elephants have prodigious appetites and may eat up to 100 pounds of hay every day.

Above all, circus elephants must be supervised, according to Axel. "They are ingenious beasts and will scheme for hours in order to undo a leg chain or casually twist a mirror off of a nearby truck."

Singing star and circus buff Johnny Cash will display another facet of his versatility when he hosts the special.

Cash has performed on the stages of the Grand Ole Opry, New York's Carnegie Hall and European concert halls. He has starred in his own TV variety series including "Country Comes Home" and "Johnny Cash's Country Music," and performed a dramatic role in "Swan Song," a "Columbo" drama.

Cash starred with Kirk Douglas in the motion picture, "A Gunfight," and is author of the book, "Man in Black."

Who Is Black Dahlia?

Efrem Zimbalist Jr. stars as a detective in the true story of a Los Angeles homicide case in "Who Is the Black Dahlia?," a made-for-television drama to be telecast on "Wednesday Movie of the Week," Feb. 18, 11:30 p.m., on ABC Ch-3-5-12.

Zimbalist portrays Sgt. Hansen, a Los Angeles detective assigned to unravel the mystery of who killed 22-year-old Elizabeth Short, whose body was found in a vacant lot in 1947.

Soon after taking over the case, Hansen becomes obsessed with finding the killer of Miss Short, a star-struck young woman trying to break into the movies.

In a spoof of "The Bridge on the River Kwai," Sid Caesar is a cruel Japanese colonel and Joey Bishop the proud British officer; Milton Berle plays Blanche in "A Streetcar Named Desire," with Caesar doing a Brando-like Stanley Kowalski; and in "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre,"

TO HOST AWARDS SHOW—Television comedy star Jack Albertson will co-host (with Hollywood columnist Army Archerd) the second annual "The People's Choice Awards," Thursday, February 19 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11. The two-hour variety-entertainment special honors the nation's favorite television, film and musical performers, as determined by a scientific polling of the American public.

Jack Albertson Is Co-Host

Jack Albertson says he doesn't know where he is going, but he is having a good time getting there.

His next stopping-off place for a good time is the stage of the Santa Monica (Calif.) Civic Auditorium to co-host "The People's Choice Award," on Thursday, Feb. 19, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11. The two-hour, star-studded variety-entertainment special will let the public and the stars know who were the nation's favorite entertainers last year. The show will be broadcast live with Hollywood favorite entertainers last year. The show will be broadcast live with Hollywood correspondent Army Archerd as Albertson's co-host.

Albertson has been in "the business" for a long time, and never knew where it was leading him. "That's how I like it," he remarks.

The road has led him to burlesque, vaudeville, opera, motion pictures, television and the stage. Along the way, he has garnered Emmy, Oscar and Tony awards to show he has been on the right path, one which currently has him co-starring in the television series "Chico and the Man."

Albertson isn't letting any of the skills he has acquired during his long career get rusty. He returned from a starring engagement in Las Vegas to prepare for "The People's Choice Awards."

"An old vaudevillian is like an old fire horse," he says. "You never get it out of your system. When the music starts, the old legs start twitching, the vocal cords twang and you know there is no place in the world that matters except center stage." Fame has come relatively late in life for the now-popular singer-dancer-actor-comedian. For his role in "The Subject Was Roses" on Broadway, he won a Tony Award. He then played the same role on the screen and won an Oscar in 1968.

"I've always had a philosophical attitude about my career. When I was in vaudeville, I went to a doctor one day for a routine physical. He told me I had an ulcer. I couldn't believe it. I had always thought I was an easy-going guy with a sense of humor, but obviously I was a worrier. I stopped worrying. What will happen will happen. My ulcer has long since cleared up.

"I have the same philosophy about co-hosting 'The People's Choice Awards' next month. A live show can have so many things go wrong, and with some 50-million people watching, the prospects of making a fool out of yourself are enormous. But, am I worrying about it? Not me."

Auto Drama Airs On CBS

James Garner, Yves Montand and Eva Marie Saint star in "Grand Prix," a drama about automobile racing, to be colorcast on "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Feb. 19, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11.

Racing-car driver Pete Aron (Garner) finds himself in stiff competition with three other leading drivers for the Grand Prix world championship on a grueling circuit ranging from Monte Carlo to Mexico City.

Pike's Peeks

By CHARLIE PIKE
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD—Veteran actor Keenan Wynn, who'll be seen in the GE Theater presentation of "20 Shades of Pink" on CBS March 12, and son Tracy are celebrating 100 years of Wynn-family participation in show business. Keenan's father, Ed, and grandfather preceded the current father-son team.

As many predicted, Gregg Allman wasn't too pleased by the rapport his wife Cher and her ex-husband Sonny have on their new show. As Cher said when she and Sonny announced their business reconciliation, "He's not happy about it but he understands it."

Esther Rolle has been asked by President Gerald Ford to serve as chairperson of the opening session of the bicentennial meeting of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped April 28-30, in Washington, D.C.

The word is that if anyone could have a drama series and a variety series, it's Telly Savalas. When his one-nighter entitled "Telly...Who Loves Ya, Baby?" was taped at CBS studios, Savalas got a standing ovation at the end. When you think about it, it could have been embarrassing. He's not a dancer, and he's not a singer, but he brings to the show his special brand of warmth and charm.

Pat Harrington, Jr. of "One Day At A Time" makes no secret of the fact that his role as the superintendent promises to do more for his long-time career than anything he's ever done.

The rumor of Marv Tylor Moore's exit from her long-running series is apparently true. CBS has ordered a new half-hour series starring her newsroom editor, Ed Asner. A new comedy series to keep an eye on is "Laverne and Shirley." Its premiere ranked higher than any series' premiere on any network during the past 10 years.

Mac Davis' new weekly one-hour musical-variety series will premiere on NBC March 18, replacing "The Cop and the Kid" and "Grady."

Moore Plays Sherlock

Roger Moore has been signed to star in the title role of "Sherlock Holmes in New York," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie, David W. Tebet, Senior Vice President, NBC-TV, recently announced.

The film, now under production at Twentieth Century-Fox Studios, will be colorcast during the 1976-77 season.

"We are delighted to have been able to secure Roger for this role," said Tebet. "His elegant charm and talent are ideally suited to the role of Sherlock Holmes."

Moore, born and raised in London, began his acting career on the British stage and later went to New York where he began getting television and film roles.

Recently he starred as James Bond in "Live and Let Die."

He starred in the television series, "The Persuaders," and portrayed Simon Templar in "The Saint." He also appeared in "Maverick."

In "Sherlock Holmes in New York," the celebrated sleuth goes to the big city to aid his longtime love, a famous stage actress in jeopardy because of the evil Professor Moriarty.

The roles of Moriarty and the actress will be cast soon, Tebet said.

The teleplay, based on the character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was written by Alvin Sapinsky.

What's Ahead For Lamont?

One of the more frequent questions viewers ask about NBC-TV's "Sanford and Son" is why Lamont (Demond Wilson), a man in his 30s, still lives at home with his father.

The answer is somewhat obvious. If he moved out, there would be no Son with the Sanford, thereby eliminating conflict and the resulting comedy.

Lamont has had several girlfriends in the past four years. Each time, his father (Redd Foxx) has successfully thrown a wrench into the romance to keep Lamont at home running the junk business.

This season, however, Lamont will take one giant step in this week's episode, "The Engagement Man Always Rings Twice" (Fridays, 8 to 8:30 p.m.).

He gets engaged and announces that he and his fiancée, Janet, don't plan to live with Fred.

The producers of the series, Saul Turteltaub and Bernie Orenstein, are even talking about having the couple get married next season, perhaps changing the format of the series to a great extent.

Janet is played by Marlene Clark, who considers herself lucky to get the part. She competed with dozens of other actresses for it. She had roles in the motion pictures "Slaughter," with Jim Brown, "The Landlord" and "Putney Swope." On television, she has appeared in "Bonanza," "Mod Squad," "McCloud," "The Bill Cosby Show," and "The Flip Wilson Special."

Redford, Pollard Roar Through West

Robert Redford and Michael J. Pollard roar through the modern West on battered bikes and broken dreams in "Little Fauss and Big Halsy," a romantic adventure of motorcycle racing, making its television premiere on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Feb. 20, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12.

Sports Illustrated, applauding the choice of professional motorcycle racing tracks for the action sequences, called the movie "a with-it film . . . full of gritty realism." Playboy magazine, in a rare rave, said "the film's seedy, a sun-drenched atmosphere rings true. . . the bike sequences have whipcracking vitality. . . Redford, a fine actor getting even better, is all jock in a part akin to the beautiful heel he played in 'Downhill Racer.' His performance alone makes this movie a must." Cosmopolitan magazine found the film "completely fascinating to watch. . . total entertainment. Redford is nothing short of stunning."

Big Halsy (Redford) is a motorcycle bum with one eye on an easy dollar and the other on every pretty girl in sight. Little Fauss (Pollard) is a born loser, who admires Halsy and leaves home to travel with the arrogant hustler as his mechanic.

Their lives become a series of small wins and big near-misses — and many eager Misses for Halsy — until a beautiful and troubled girl (Lauren Hutton) joins them. Little Fauss loves her, Big Halsy abuses her, and both know that their relationship as leader and follower can never be the same again.

The entire movie was filmed on location, including the Willow Springs Raceway, Manzanita Speedway in Phoenix and the then-new Sears Point International Raceway in Sonoma, California.

Frosty Takes A Wife

"Frosty the Snowman," the enchanting holiday character who annually leads viewers into a fanciful winter wonderland of animated Christmas entertainment, will take a wife in a delightful new half-hour musical sequel being prepared by "Frosty" producers Arthur Rankin and Jules Bass for presentation on ABC-TV in the 1976-77 season.

Andy Griffith, who will serve as the narrator, will also sing in the special. Jackie Vernon as Frosty, Shelley Winters as Mrs. Frosty, Dennis Day as the singing Parson Brown and Paul Frees as Jack Frost will provide the voice characterizations.

In the new holiday special, Rankin and Bass, the master of animated holiday entertainment who have created such perennial television favorites as "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town," "The Year Without a Santa Claus" and "The Little Drummer Boy," bring Frosty back down from the North Pole and have him take a wife, but not without some amusing obstacles created by Jack Frost.

Writer for the special is Romero Muller. Music director is Maury Laws and design is by Paul Coker, Jr. The song, "Frosty the Snowman," was written by Steve Nelson and Jack Rollins.

ABC ASKS COLLEGES TO HELP

ABC-TV sent out bids to 500 U.S. colleges to conduct initial research projects into TV's effect on viewers, especially children.

The four schools selected will be given $20,000 each to conduct the studies, which will examine attitudes, emotions, learning, behavior and perception.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL '76—Wayne "Tree" Rollins the 7'1", 230 lbs., center for Clemson will see action against N. C. State Saturday, February 21. The ACC game will be televised on Channel 6-9-11 at 4 p.m.

Tigers Support Tree Rollins

It's a known fact that the best way to build a championship basketball team is by beginning with a big, talented center. Last season, Wayne "Tree" Rollins came to Clemson University as a promising freshman, and led the South Carolina school to a second place finish in the always tough Atlantic Coast Conference. Tiger fans are hoping that Rollins can provide more "big" heroics against N. C. State on Saturday, Feb. 21, at 4 p.m. on Channel 6-9,11.

With the departure of Skip Wise, who took his backcourt talents to the now-defunct Baltimore Claws of the ABA, Wayne Rollins emerges as both the leading returning rebounder and scorer for Clemson. "Tree" averaged 13 points a game last season, shooting at a .597 clip. He also grabbed 328 rebounds, number one in the ACC, that averaged out to 11-7 rebounds a game. Clearly, the 7'1" centers' presence made the difference in a season that produced 17 wins, the most ever for a Tiger team.

Rollins spent the summer months with a touring American team playing in Europe and Russia, and played with the U.S. Team in the Pan American Games. Playing against athletes like Alexander Belhou, hero for Russia in the 1972 Olympics, has surely sharpened the skills of the big center.

Many wondered whether Wayne could even play for the 1975-76 Tigers. At the last minute, he withdrew an application as a "hardship case" in the NBA draft to return to probation-plagued Clemson. Tiger fans, as well as Coach Bill Foster, breathed a sigh of relief upon his decision to return to the South Carolina campus.

"I decided I wanted to stay at Clemson and play here," Rollins indicated. "I want to graduate from Clemson and I want to play in the Olympics."

Although the Tigers got off to a slow start, they recently recorded an impressive victory over the Maryland Terrapins in College Park, Md., where the Terps seldom lose.

TO O. BROWN, LYNCHBURG, VA. (and many others, too): Good news! As of Feb. 2, Kathryn Hays is back in the role of Kim Dixon in "As The World Turns" after a 3-month absence for 'personal reasons.'

TO C. SEYMOUR, GOLDSBORO, N. C.: Here's the info you asked for about Mark Shera and Robert Ulrich, stars of "S.W.A.T." Shera, originally from Bayonne, N.J., is a graduate of Boston University. His theatrical career was launched when he landed the role of Jesus in "Godspell." Next came a starring role in the CBS pilot, "Nicky's World," and guest-starring roles in "Kojak" and "Gunsmoke." Mark lives in Hollywood and spend his leisure time at the beach or playing tennis. Ulrich, a native of Ohio, was 'discovered' by actor Burt Reynolds, who was impressed by his performance in a Chicago production of "The Rainmaker." Ulrich's first major TV role was in an episode of "Kung Fu," followed by guest roles in "The FBI" and "Marcus Welby, M. D." Recently married, he and his bride enjoy skiing and swimming.

TO A. MEEKS, FLORENCE, S.C.: Mac Davis was born and raised in Lubbock, Texas. Among the many songs this talented gent has penned are: "In the Ghetto" (for Elvis Presley), "Memories" (for Andy Williams), "Watching Scotty Grow" (for his young son) and "I Believe in Music." Davis lives in California—alone—he and his wife are separated. He'll be starring in a weekly variety series on NBC starting in March. Write to him in care of NBC-TV, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

TO MRS. V. WATKINS, MORGANTON, N. C. "The Edge of Night" switched from CBS to ABC. YOU switch to Channel 18. That's where it is now.

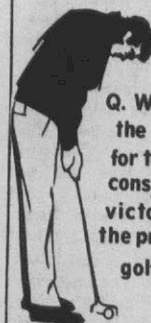

TO K. SMITH, KANNAPOLIS, N.C.: Bill Cullen walks with a slight limp because of a childhood bout with polio. FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV PERSONALITIES AND PROGRAMS, WRITE TO "MICHELE," P. O. BOX 30, HOPEWELL, VA. 23860.

Russian Film Is In Children's Festival

Six-year-old Aliosha, dog who reacts positively will be nicknamed Bag on Bag because he is about the size of two school bags on top of each other, and his dog Kitch, who is also small, but manages to get into nonetheless, are the main characters in "Bag on Bag," a film from Russia that will have its American television premiere on "The CBS Children's Film Festival," Saturday, Feb. 21, 1 to 2 p.m.

Kitch creates havoc in the apartment while Aliosha is at school, so one day he takes the dog to school in his bag, but little Kitch gets loose, disrupting classes and causing complete chaos.

While Aliosha is taking a nap one afternoon, Kitch wanders into the hall and is stolen by an older boy, whom Aliosha once reported for stealing mail. The police, aided by a German shepherd dog trained to track by scent, discover that Kitch has been sold to a research institute. A doctor there decides to perform a test to determine if their new arrival belongs to Aliosha. Gathering a number of dogs together, he lets each of them, including Kitch, sniff a note from Aliosha, saying that the

Laver Is Senior On Tennis Court

In a world championship tennis premiere match from Keahou-Kona, Hawaii, on Sunday, Feb. 15, at 1:30 p.m. on NBC-TV, Rod Laver will meet Ken Rosewall.

Both Laver and Rosewall are 'senior citizens' on the tennis circuit, having been world-ranked since the 1950s. Although they are not usually favored in the big tournaments of today, they are never taken lightly by the youngsters. These all-time greats can still be awesome at times.

Laver's greatest assets are his fitness and techniques. A left-handed player, he has a superb back-hand, a fine return of service, and a fast, deceptive forehand, especially when under pressure. Of course service, which won him the handle "Rod the Rocket," is still most formidable.

Rosewall has been around even a few more years than Laver, but his durability in the game is due to the skill of his early teachers and his own quest for perfection. His concentration is one of his strong points, and so is the accuracy acquired when he was very young. His service relies more on guile than pace, but his backhand drive has seldom been equaled. Fitness has always been a Rosewall trademark; his hard work with weights earned him the nickname "Muscles."

Winning the singles championship of Australia, France, England, and the United States in one year - for the second time at that - Rod Laver made tennis history. In 1962, he had become only the second amateur to achieve this feat, and his 1969 "grand slam" was the first since the inception of Open Tennis in 1968. These accomplishments alone strongly support the many experts who consider him the greatest tennis player ever.

Rosewall and Laver have been on opposite sides of the net on many occasions. In 1968, it was Rosewall who beat Laver in the French Open Championship Finals. The following year it was Laver who beat Rosewall in the French Open in three straight sets.

Both players enjoy tennis as a way of life and neither care to think much about retiring. In search of but yet another victory, these two masters tangle again.

MEETING A WINNER—Rod Laver, winner of 25 straight matches on the WCT tour in 1975, is the epitome of concentration as he fires a backhand shot across the net. Laver, generally considered to be the most formidable left-handed player in tennis history, will swap shots with Ken Rosewall, master of the backhand stroke, when the first of 10 WCT Challenge matches is telecast on NBC-TV, Sunday, February 15 (1:30-3:30 p.m.).

Collins Continues

Bud Collins, a pioneer in broadcasting tennis events on television, has renewed his contract with NBC-TV to do the play-by-play commentary of the WCT Challenge Cup, Wimbledon and the French and Italian championships, Carl Lindemann Jr., Vice President, NBC-TV Sports, recently announced.

Collins, whose first assignment as a tennis announcer for NBC-TV was the Nationals at Forest Hills, N.Y., in 1964, will be the commentator when NBC begins its colorcasts of 10 World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup matches Sunday, Feb. 15, from Hawaii. The match, bringing together two professionals of worldwide renown - Ken Rosewall and Rod Laver - will be telecast live, via satellite from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

In making the announcement of the signing of Collins, Lindemann said: "Bud Collins is the best of all the tennis broadcasters. He was the first to cover tennis on a regular basis. He has brought not only strong insight into what he accomplishes in the broadcast booth, but also a unique style of informality which registers with our viewers."

Collins, who also writes a sports column for The Boston Globe, acquired his tennis knowledge as a player and college coach.

Family Circle Cup Presented On NBC

The Family Circle Cup will be presented on NBC-TV for the fourth straight year Saturday, May 1, and Sunday, May 2, with coverage of semifinal and championship action telecast live for the first time.

The $100,000 event, one of the richest in women's tennis, features a top international field of 32 professionals. Chris Evert is defending champion in the Family Circle Cup, a tournament she also captured in 1974. Rosemary Casals was the 1973 titlist.

First prize in the Family Circle Cup, contested at the Amelia Island Plantation off the Florida coast near Jacksonville, is $25,000. Qualifying rounds begin April 24, with the actual competition getting underway April 26.

Carl Lindemann Jr., Vice President, Sports, NBC-TV, said: "In keeping with NBC Sports' philosophy of live coverage, we are delighted arrangements could be made that will enable us to present the Family Circle Cup - featuring such top women tennis players as Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova, last year's runner-up - to our viewing audience as the action occurs." Previously there had been a three-week delay from the time the tournament was staged until the results were actually telecast.

Tragedy On 'Go USA'

A poor family loses the land they believed was theirs and suffer death in their ranks because they cannot read a deed in "The Deed of Jose Diaz" to be colorcast on the NBC-TV Bicentennial series, "GO-USA," Saturday, Feb. 21, 12:30 to 1 p.m. Eduardo Diaz and his brother, Manuel, are arrested and sentenced to death before a firing squad when they plan to claim the land they believe was deeded to them. When the deed is partly burned by a police sergeant, young Jose Diaz takes it to the home of a lawyer, Rodriguez, and learns the man is dead.

Large Audience Supports Ali

When Muhammad Ali meets Jean Pierre Coopman in Puerto Rico on Friday, Feb. 20, for the heavyweight championship of the world, CBS expect an audience that may exceed 47 million. The Ali-Coopman bout will be televised live beginning at 9 p.m.

Since the days when a Dempsey fight would hold a nation clustered around their Atwater-Kents, the contest for the heavyweight championship of the world has been one of the best audience-grabbers for the electronic media. The boxing event ranks with World Series and Super Bowls. In recent years, to the disappointment of many fight buffs, championship fights have become a staple of closed circuit television. Thus, an appearance of a world heavyweight championship fight on regular network television inevitably draws a strong audience.

For example, the May, 1975 broadcast of the Ali-Lyle fight drew almost 50 percent of all the available sets, or nearly 20 million homes. Not the least of the contributing factors to the size of the audience is that remarkable showman-fighter himself, Muhammad Ali.

Is On Jeffersons

Carolinas have good reason to 'bust their buttons' each Saturday when "The Jeffersons" (8 to 8:30 p.m.) airs on CBS-TV. The vivacious actress who portrays Janny Willis — Lionel Jefferson's fiancée — is Berlanda Tolbert, a native of Charlotte. Berlanda attended high school in Charlotte, then received her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in dramatic arts from the North Carolina School of Fine Arts in Winston-Salem. She then attended The Buford's School of Acting at Stockwell College in London, England. Miss Tolbert's first professional role was in the Carolina Repertory Company's production of "The Wonderful O," in Chapel Hill, N. C. Subsequent appearances in Washington led to plays at New York's Lincoln Center and in off-Broadway productions. On television, she has appeared in guest roles on "Sanford and Son," "Streets of San Francisco," "That's My Mama" and "Mannix." She was also in the movie, "Airport 75."

Miss Tolbert is married to actor Ray Vitte, and they live in Altadena, Calif. Her hobbies include cooking, fencing and playing the violin. Playing the role of Lionel Jefferson is Damon Evans. Also an accomplished actor, Evans was primarily interested in a musical career before turning to drama, and he made his Broadway debut in the musical "The Me Nobody Knows."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR WILLIAM E. SIMON, Secretary of the Treasury
What happened to your great blunder, gas ration coupons? Will you tell the American people how much this brain child of yours cost them?—R.D. Reed, Martinsville, Va.

● No blunder—just preparing for the worst (and we've still got the stamps if rationing, heaven forbid, should ever come). Think back to the oil embargo, those long lines at gas pumps and all the demands for rationing. I was against rationing then and I still am. It's inequitable and costly. Still, if the embargo had continued, we might have been forced to impose rationing, like it or not. We were prepared. A three-month supply of coupons was printed under the authority of the Defense Production Act with funds appropriated by Congress. The cost, never a secret, was $10 million.

FOR HUGH O'BRIAN, star of "Killer Force"

Are you a confirmed bachelor? If you are, you'll never be a grandfather! Does that bother you?—Mrs. Julie Jordan, Nampa, Idaho

● I have every intention of getting married and have every hope of becoming a father. Whether I become a grandfather depends on how long the good Lord lets me hang around. In the meantime, I have about 1,200 adopted "kids" who have attended my foundation's annual leadership seminars. This year's seminar will be in Washington April 3-10.

FOR GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA

Is it true you have a weight problem?—K.B., Troy, N.Y.

● For 40 years I didn't, but I sure do now! You see, I don't know how anyone can survive without bread or pasta, and I've never learned how to diet sensibly. The only thing that works for me is a three-day fast. I don't eat a thing, just sips of water or juice. That way I drop five pounds. Anyone else—who doesn't have my strange metabolism—would lose 10 pounds that way!

FOR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Do you ever ask your sister, Ann Landers, for advice on letters you receive?—Lisa Lovin, Glendale, Calif.

● Yes, we do occasionally confer on questions we receive. In almost every instance we arrive at the same answer, and this is understandable because as identical twins we came from the same background.

FOR LADY BIRD JOHNSON

What was your greatest contribution to the nation?—R.J., Amarillo, Texas

● I guess it was helping create an awareness of the delights of our land, and the need to keep it clean and beautiful. But I don't like calling it "my" contribution. I was just one of a vast army of people enjoying nature (a park tucked into a crowded neighborhood, a rugged mountain wilderness, gently rolling farm country, a sparkling seashore), and I'll be forever grateful that our White House years made it possible for me to work with people who felt the way I did.

FOR MEL BLANC

Do you owe your success to Jack Benny, and what was the first voice you used on radio?—Bea Machi, Monterey Park, Calif.

● A great deal of my success was due to the "Jack Benny Show." Jack was a wonderful man and used me as many different characters (train caller, parrot, salesman at Christmas time, French violin teacher, even as a Maxwell motor). In 1927 my radio voice was first heard in a song, "Juanita—Wanna Eat, Wanna Eat, Juanita." They must have liked it because they called me back.

FOR DIGGER PHELPS, Notre Dame basketball coach

How did you get the nickname "Digger"?—Steve Wojciechowicz, Kenosha, Wis.

● My father is a funeral director, and Digger O'Dell was the mortician on the old "Life of Riley" radio show. So the nickname "Digger" was given to me.

FOR MICHAEL LANDON

Do you plan to star in any movies?—Elaine Marlowe, Chesapeake, Va.

● I did movies before "Bonanza." Now I don't have any strong urge to do movies. If a great one were offered to me, I'd like it. But, actually, I'm more interested in doing family entertainment. Some of today's movies are too strong, especially for children. I prefer acting in something that a family can watch together. And that means TV.

FOR MONTY HALL of TV's "Let's Make a Deal"

What do you do with all the animals you don't give away on the show?—Dan McCormick, Kennewick, Wash.

● They are rented from an animal farm. The owner brings them to the show and takes them back afterward. If anyone wins one via a "zonk," she can keep it. I try to persuade the winner it would be difficult to care for a tiger, lion or elephant in a home. (The winner can exchange the animals for other merchandise.) Some who kept their animals lived to regret it. When the cubs grew at an alarming rate, they pleaded with us to take them back.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've heard Sir Laurence Olivier is seriously ill, perhaps dying. Is this so? What can you tell me about him?—L. Straus, Dallas, Texas

● In recent years the 68-year-old actor has been stricken by cancer, thrombosis and dermatomyositis (a muscle-wasting disease). But he's ignoring it all and has just completed filming "The Marathon Man" in the U.S. He makes few concessions to his years, but he admits he's feeling his age; that his memory isn't what it used to be; and that he's still on the weak side. He and his wife, actress Joan Plowright, have three children, of whom the youngest is nine. One Christmas when Olivier dressed up as Santa Claus, the kids gave him his ultimate bad notice: "We know you're not Daddy Christmas. You're just Daddy."

JIM PALMER:

The Comeback King Who Was "Ready to Give Up Baseball"

Jim Palmer, right-hander for the Baltimore Orioles, is only 30, but he's already staged two major comebacks. In 1974 he suffered from arm trouble and posted a paltry 7-12 record. Then, last year, he led the major leagues with 10 shutouts and a 2.09 earned run average, the best of his career; and he tied Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the Yankees for the most victories, 23. His 23-11 record earned him his second Cy Young Award for the American League. . . . Jim was an early sensation. He posted a 15-10 record for Baltimore in 1966 and became the youngest man ever to toss a shutout in a World Series. But trouble arrived the following spring when Jim fell prey to back and shoulder miseries. "Things were so bad," he recalls, "that when the Orioles sent me to their minor-league team in Rochester, I couldn't strike anybody out at all. Since the team was fighting for a pennant in the International League, they decided I would be hurting them if I stayed around. So they shipped me to Miami." Finally, Palmer was sent to Puerto Rico to pitch winter ball in 1968. "I didn't think it would do any good," he recalls. "I was all set to give up baseball. I knew that was my last chance to show the Orioles I could pitch." But Palmer regained his touch in Puerto Rico, and when he rejoined the Orioles in 1969, he posted a 16-4 mark, then racked up 20 or more wins each of the next four summers. . . . Jim hopes that his 1975 success will trigger the same sort of winning streak. "I think everything's going to be fine," Palmer says. "I'm a physical fitness addict, so I always take care of myself during the off-season, and that's important once you're past 30. My only goal now is to stay healthy, and if I do that, I think I can win 20 games a year." —By Larry Bortstein

The Doctor Lets You In

Exercise: How Much Is the Right Amount?

It's simple but true: it's how many mets you burn that makes the difference. We all know that regular exercise reduces the risk of heart disease. Those who exercise have less body weight, less body fat, and better breathing while exercising. In one study, it was shown that, even for men 60 and over, seven weeks of exercise training usually restored fitness to the level of a person 10 to 20 years younger! But what exercise is best? And how much? Generally, active exercise (running, walking, swimming, cycling, etc.) is better than passive exercise (isometrics, moving furniture, lifting weights). Exercise is rated on energy expenditure. This rating is called metabolic equivalents or mets. Here is a sample of metabolic expenditure in mets: polishing furniture, 2; making beds, 3; showering, 3½; golfing, 4; gardening, 4½; walking downstairs, 4½; walking upstairs, 7½; shoveling snow, 7; bicycling, 9. Let your doctor decide how many mets you should burn. It will depend on your age, health and physical conditioning.

People and You

Truancy—The Dangerous New Statistics

Today high school absentee rates of 10 to 15 percent are not unusual and some city schools have up to 30 percent. The results: dramatic increases of daytime crime caused by truants. Those children who are absent and adrift during the school day are definitely exposed to increased temptation. There's also an obvious failure-cycle that days out of school can create. As the days increase, the youngster falls further behind and becomes more discouraged. In one study, almost 73 percent of school dropouts had poor attendance records the previous year. Parents themselves may unconsciously influence their children against school. When parents frequently criticize the school, young people are likely to act out parents' attitudes by deciding, "I don't want to go today." Parents who want to increase children's attendance can encourage them to participate in school-sponsored activities. Students who belong to clubs, teams, bands, etc., have shown lower absenteeism than non-belongers.

Isaac Hayes: My Ten Favorite Records

Isaac Hayes was born and raised in poverty in Covington, Tenn. After the day's work, his family would sit on the front porch and sing. Isaac continued singing through adolescence, and worked nights in local clubs as a piano player. Hayes's first major breakthrough came with the 1969 album, "Presenting Isaac Hayes." Today Hayes can look back on four Grammys and a 1971 Academy Award. His current album is "Chocolate Chip."

Jobmanship

The Lurking Failure That Lies Beyond Success

Psychiatry is discovering truth in the old saying: "The gods reserve their biggest disappointment for those who get what they want." Psychiatrist Frederic F. Flach explains why the risk of becoming depressed rises when people achieve their goals: 1) Many feel they do not deserve what they've achieved. Those individuals must guard against self-destructive ways that will undermine and undo their accomplishment. 2) Some people win career success at the price of sacrificing family relationships and friendships. Too late, they realize how few, if any, people care about them and their triumph. This awakening can turn their elation to bitterness. 3) And success means an ending of some kind, which may stir up temporary sad feelings of "It's over," and raise the perplexing question of "Where do I go from here?" If you do find yourself suffering from these feelings, consider that they're a natural reaction and not a sign that something unusual is wrong with you.

The Diet Watch

How to Stick to a Diet at Parties

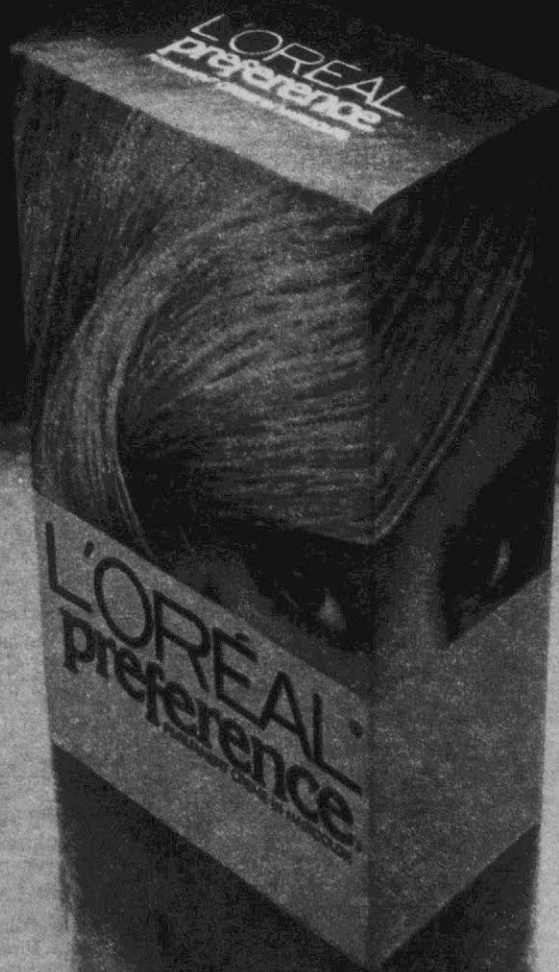

Many a dieter who has successfully slimmed down becomes tense and deathly afraid of going to parties—in fact, fears accepting any social invitations because he or she might regain a few pounds. But avoiding a reasonable social life can depress you and lead to food binges at home. Begin by allowing yourself one item of food at a party and weighing yourself the next day to test your tolerance; by trial and error, you'll find the right balance. One diet specialist's recommendation: "I discourage the dieter from drinking hard liquor, as it enhances appetite. I encourage wine because it is often an effective counter to a large appetite." Also, try a low-calorie drink that looks like a cocktail—club soda with ice and an olive or a lemon twist. Select only low-calorie hors d'oeuvres; or practice looking three inches above the hors d'oeuvres tray, never directly at it, when the hostess offers it.

Exclusively for FAMILY WEEKLY

She arrives at the Iranian Embassy party a little late and walks with husband David Eisenhower through the crowded interior courtyard toward their table, her head held high. Some guests pretend not to see the daughter of their deposed leader, Richard Nixon. Some guests look a little startled to see her and give her a mild hello. Only a few are as effusive as they would have been in the old White House days.

Julie seems grateful to those who reach out to her, cheerful but mildly vague with those who give cool hellos, and completely oblivious to old friends who suddenly can't remember her name.

"I'm making a whole new life," Julie Nixon Eisenhower said in an exclusive interview with this reporter. "For the first time, David and I are on our own and we are making our own way. It's a new social life, a new home, a new career. And there's one subject I don't want to talk about. You can guess what that is of course."

Yes—Watergate. But even so, when confronted with questions about the chain of events that led to the resignation of President Nixon, she does not hesitate to make a few bitter charges of her own—namely that the press was prejudiced against her father and that the Senator who conducted the Watergate investigation, Sam Ervin, was a hypocrite. But she refuses to prolong the discussion.

"I know it takes time for people to forget and for me to forget what has been a very painful era," she says, "but there is nothing to be gained by going over and over it." As proof of how she feels, Julie admits that when she passes the White House that was her home just a little more than a year ago, she averts her head and looks the other way.

"Everything is different now, except the way I feel about David." Actually, the two seem, if anything, closer than ever. They smile secretly at each other as they click their coffee cups together, and David makes a toast to "the survivors"—meaning themselves. "For the first time in our marriage, we are leading a normal life, just like anyone else."

John Neubauer

"They smile at each other as they click their coffee cups together, and David makes a toast to 'the survivors'—meaning themselves."

But whether it really is "just like anyone else" is a moot point. There is still much secrecy and protection, even though there are no longer those Secret Servicemen hovering around 24 hours a day. David and Julie Eisenhower maintain an unlisted telephone number, and the only number Julie gives out is one that gets to her husband at his part-time place of employment—a legal firm. They live in an apartment house to which there is no entrance except by key. Not only that—there is even a complicated way of getting into their apartment by way of a private balcony.

She seems a little nervous from the stares of the curious when she comes down to open that locked front door, which opens onto a street not more than a stone's throw from those burglarized Watergate offices that were her father's nemesis. Once she has closed the door and is safely in her own apartment, she relaxes completely and surveys her domain. Each object is made more precious by its donor. "That chair and the rug are from my parents' New York apartment," she points out. The beaded floral arrangement is from Tricia. "The 'God Bless

This House' plaque is from Mimi (Julie and David's pet name for David's grandmother, Mamie Eisenhower).

"My favorite thing is the painting I rescued from behind Mimi's door," Julie says. The painting is Mamie's portrait. "Ike painted it, and it was one of his early efforts—I think in 1949. But Mamie didn't like it and she hung it behind a door where it would seldom be seen because the door was kept open a lot. Even so, the door kept banging the painting until the frame was about ruined. I finally asked her if she would mind giving it to me. I think she was kind of glad to be rid of it." Julie laughs again. "I had it restored, and David and I hung it where we can enjoy it because we love her so much."

In Julie and David's living room are few family photos (and no glamorous official photos) such as abound in the living rooms of every member of the Kennedy family, for example. On a table behind the sofa, there are only a few small snapshots—one of her father, in a frame which has to be stood up carefully because the back leg is broken. The visitor gets the feeling that this is part of Julie's effort to look forward, not back.

The kitchen is full of happy memories of Tricia, her sister, who decorated the

The New Julie Nixon Eisenhower

cabinets and walls with decals. "I love Tricia's handiwork, and I love puttering around the kitchen, testing recipes."

Julie, of course, has gained quite a reputation as a cook. One of her first projects when she went to work for the Saturday Evening Post in Indianapolis was to help edit the "Saturday Evening Post Family Cookbook" (Curtis, $6.95). Frederic A. Birmingham, Julie's boss at the Post has fond memories of those times. "It was Julie's job to go through our archives in search of recipes that had run in the Post. She also arranged a contest to get additional recipes from our readers. One of the delightful things that impressed me were the ingenious chapter headings she invented. For example, we had a chapter on cheese and eggs which Julie insisted on calling, 'Shell Games and Wheys to Your Heart.' For our chapter on rice and potatoes, she wrote the headline: 'True Grits.'"

But if the folks at the Saturday Evening Post were satisfied with Julie's work, they were in awe of how she conducted herself. "Julie is a compulsive worker," says Birmingham. "While she was here, she never went out to lunch—she just nibbled snacks at her desk." Her coworkers watched uneasily as Julie bore up under the strain of Watergate. "She never broke down, she never complained. Now and then someone would take her hand and say, 'We're with you, Julie.' Or sometimes we'd call her on the phone when she was back in Washington and just tell her we were thinking of her. Julie never discussed the situation. All she would do is quietly and politely tell us how much she appreciated our concern."

Julie is proud that she cooks all the meals now and that she has done so well that a selection of her recipes has been made into her own cookbook—"Julie Eisenhower's Cookbook for Children" (Doubleday, $6.95). "But what do you feed David?" we asked. "Oh, just anything from the Children's Cookbook. Those are all the things he likes."

Many of the recipes in the book were supplied by the children of her girlfriends, and one of the little ones called to say he had a new recipe for her. "But I already have a Michael recipe in the book," she reminded him. "Remember, you gave me 'Michael's Porridge?'"

"Oh," said Michael disgustedly, "that was last-year's recipe."

What will Julie do with the money she will be earning from her cookbook? "I'm just not sure yet," she says, "but I may get myself some household help." For the time being, however, she likes the feeling of doing her own housework.

Julie may need more and more help as she becomes enmeshed in more and more projects. Last month she inaugurated the start of a little business of her own—"Stitchery by Julie"—the selling of children's samplers which can be framed or made into sofa pillows. Her 16 kits include yarn and a list of instructions on how to embroider the samplers. Stores everywhere will be carrying the samplers, one of which is the "Bless This House" poem that hung in the White House all during the Eisenhower Administration. [Her nine miniature samplers of flowers—5 inches by 7 inches—sell for $2.95.] She's also working on a book for children, which will be ready for next Christmas. Then there's a whole string of anthologies of short stories that will keep her busy far into 1976. And finally, there's the possibility of a radio talk show. The idea for that came when she did some radio work with Ronald Reagan, which was carried on some 300 stations. "I really feel I want to communicate. If I don't work in radio, maybe I'll have a TV program, though I'm not sure I want to be seen that much. I like the privacy of radio."

"Privacy is a very important word for Julie—'freedom and privacy.' She feels the 'joy of privacy' when she rides the bike trails on the way to Mount Vernon, George Washington's old home. Few of the cyclists she passes recognize her, and that pleases her."

Privacy is a very important word for Julie—"freedom and privacy." She feels the "joy of privacy," for instance, when she rides the bike trails on the way to Mount Vernon, George Washington's old home. Few of the cyclists she passes recognize her, and that pleases her. She likes the exercise and the chance to think her own thoughts, undisturbed by tourists or those once doggedly pursuing Secret Servicemen. David does not go along—"he doesn't like cycling. Sometimes he jogs with me."

David is still amazed by Julie's energy, and he teases her about taking her embroidery along on their honeymoon. Retorts Julie: "After all, what could I do when you had all your law books

David is still studying hard while holding down his part-time job at the law firm of Berry and Epstein. "But it will finally be over next spring," says Julie, "when David graduates from George Washington Law School, and then maybe we'll move away from Washington and all its memories."

Will David ever go into politics to follow in his grandfather's footsteps? "I wouldn't be surprised," says Julie. "He'd be a natural." ("So would Julie!" adds the Saturday Evening Post's Fred Birmingham. "She has a real gift for getting along with people. Once Watergate is behind us and forgotten, I wouldn't be surprised if Julie decides to enter public life on her own.")

But Julie still has a little "healing" to do. "Right now, all I'm looking forward to is a little more of that nonpolitical normalcy."

She recalls their recent trip to China, which was at the invitation of Ambassador Huang Chen, the People's Republic representative in the United States. "We were invited by the Chinese Government, but we insisted on paying for our own trip. We celebrated the New Year in China just like a couple of tourists. I mean just like any other tourists."

For the first time, Julie's getting to know people on a strictly-citizen level—her coworkers on her old job at the Saturday Evening Post, grocery clerks, now the Chinese. Before, people were so much in awe of her, it was impossible to start a conversation. The shadow of the Presidency lay between them. "These are all people I couldn't know before, just couldn't get close to them," she says. An object of her China trip was to begin finding out what ordinary people are thinking about all over the world. While in China, she and David were photographed surrounded by the young people there—who seemed to idolize them.

So, you might say everything's coming up roses for Julie. Also violets. And shamrocks for luck. They are the flowers that are on the miniature samplers, which are now appearing in stores across the country.

McCULLOCH CHAIN BRAKE

The most important safety feature a chain saw can have!

CHAIN BRAKE stops a moving chain in milli-seconds to reduce the hazard from kick-back.

If a chain hits a hard object, or the nose of a saw gets caught in wood, the saw might kick up and back. This can be hazardous if the chain continues to move. See how McCulloch's CHAIN BRAKE helps reduce that hazard.

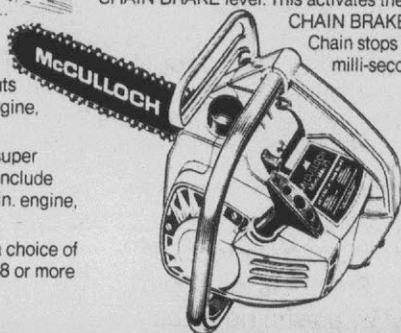

Left, CHAIN BRAKE disengaged, chain running.

Right, if kickback should occur, your hand on the saw's top front handle tends to hit the CHAIN BRAKE lever. This activates the CHAIN BRAKE. Chain stops in milli-seconds.

Two First-Rate Raitts

And Papa Says: "She Doesn't Owe Me Anything..."

John Raitt with his daughter Bonnie and wife Kathy.

"I give my parents credit for having great insight to counter all that L.A. plastic—most of the kids I knew grew up too fast."

By Noel Coppage

You can have fun with a son . . . but you gotta be a father to a girl." That realization set Billy Bigelow off on the climactic "Soliloquy" in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel."

And now here's John Raitt, the original Billy—the singer, it is said, for whom Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote "Soliloquy"—sitting in Sardi's restaurant in the thick of the lore and glitter of Broadway and saying, in effect, "Hogwash!"

"I never was much impressed with the idea of 'being a father.' I resisted pressure to 'assert yourself as a father.' I was a permissive parent, and I'm still turned off when I hear a parent go into the 'how can they do this to us?' routine. You get them started, love them, give them advice if they ask for it, try to set an example and kick them out of the nest."

We are talking about Bonnie Raitt, best known of his three children, a culturally privileged child who grew up to be a singer of down-and-out music, the blues, and, as she says, "to get to know the people whose records I used to study." She was a close friend of the late

Fred McDowell and had recently helped Sippie Wallace celebrate her 77th birthday.

"Bonnie and I have had our problems, mostly problems communicating," John Raitt says, "but not as father-to-daughter—as person-to-person. You just have to keep working on communication, but you have to respect each other as persons before you can even work on it."

"Bonnie must have felt like a prisoner at times. We always lived up on a mountain, with no other kids around. There was a piano, but Bonnie's mother was such a good pianist that Bonnie didn't want to play that instrument and invite comparisons. It was a great gimmick for her, picking up the bottleneck style of playing guitar."

Bonnie, I discover the next day in a conversation about her father, recognizes that reacting against the world one's parents made is inevitable to some degree.

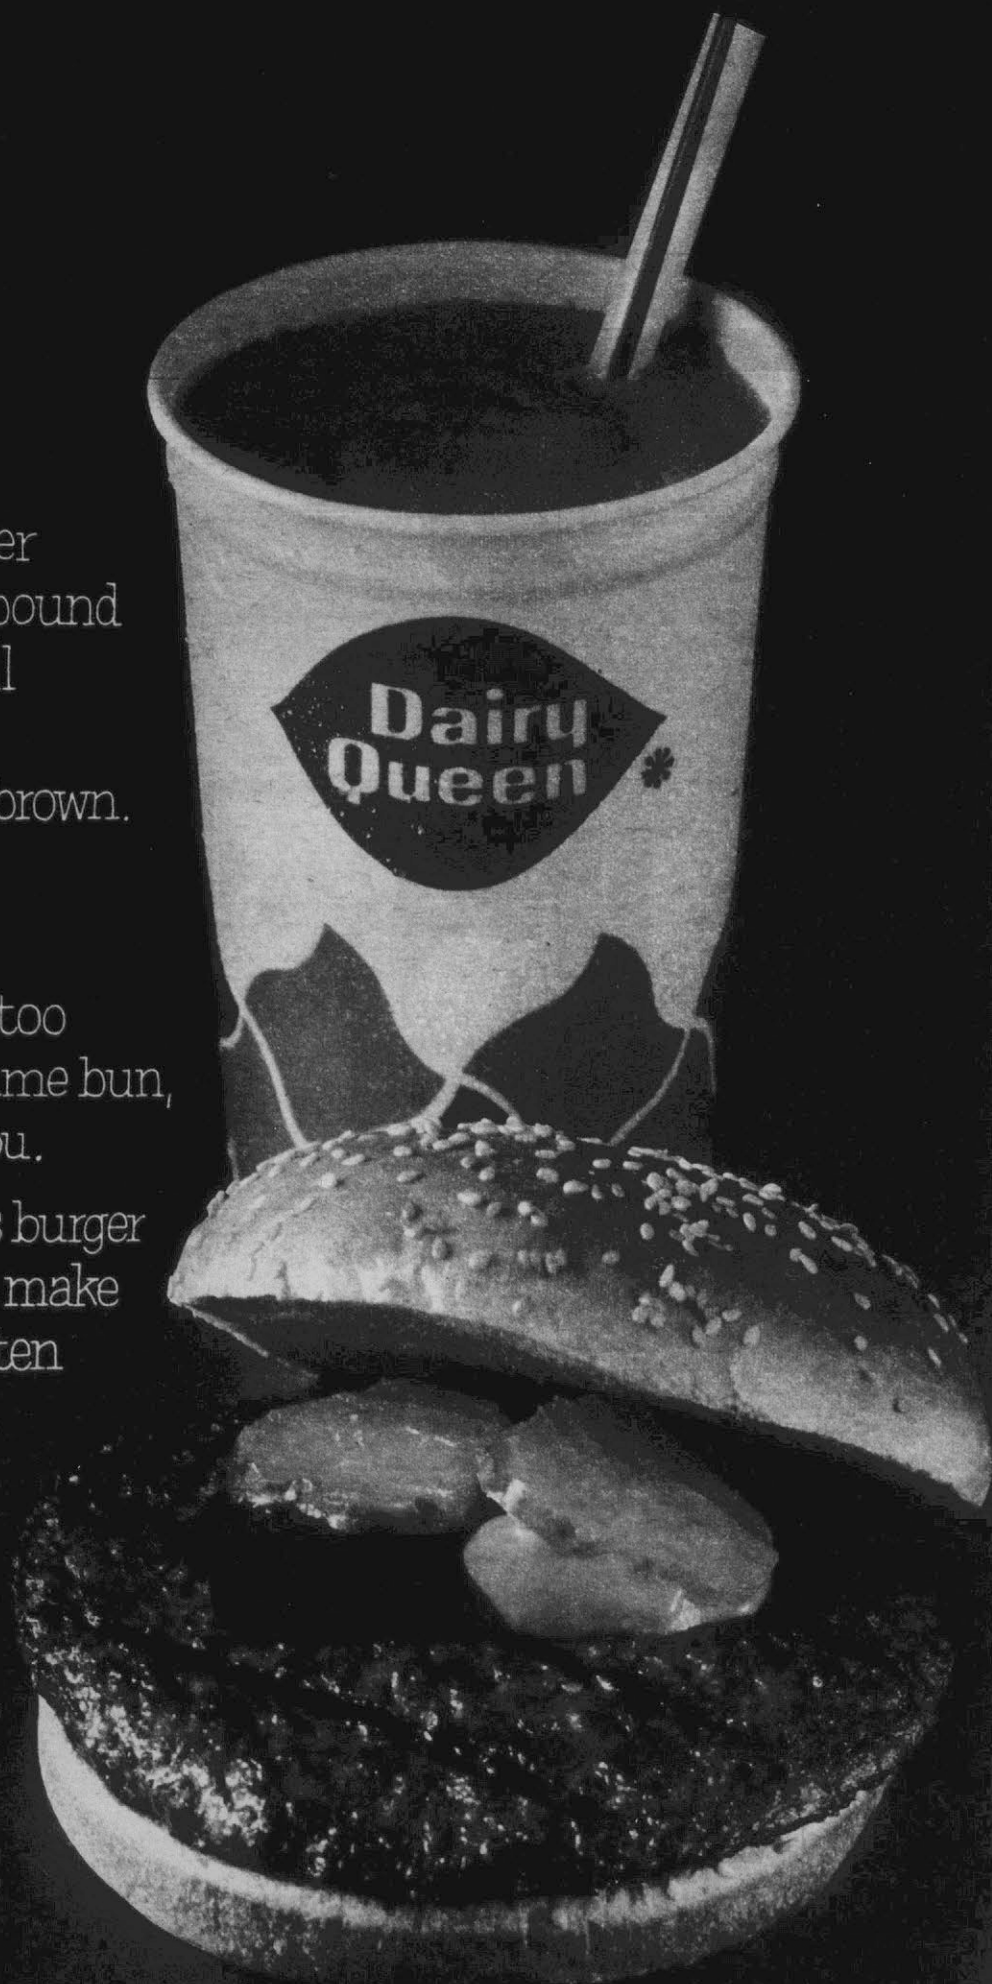

"We never had any religious structure because my parents were raised strictly and they just rebelled against it. I was raised as a sort of unstructured Quaker. I used to get upset about the way they lived, the kind of house they had. We lived in one of those canyons near Los Angeles. But eventually I realized my

The 56 great men who dared to defy the King of England.

"As there is not a more distinguished Event in the History of America, than the Declaration of her Independence—nor any, that in all probability, will so much excite the Attention of future Ages, it is highly proper, that the Memory of that Transaction, together with the Causes that gave Rise to it, should be preserved in the most careful Manner that can be devised."

John Hancock—1777

200 years ago...56 men from 13 different colonies came forward to sign the Declaration of Independence. They came from every segment of society to create a young and virile nation out of an old world.

Their action was decisive and they risked much. Should England win the Revolutionary War that was now raging, these 56 men could expect only to be hunted and executed as traitors to the royal crown of England.

Their faith and courage, however, was stronger than their fear.

AN HISTORIC COLLECTION!

Now...200 years later...The Hamilton Mint honors the memory of those 56 signers in a definitive, medallic art series. This is our bicentennial gift to the nation.

Every man who inscribed his signature on the Declaration of Independence will be portrayed in silver as part of this historic collection. "Bonnie and I have had our problems, mostly problems communicating, but not as father-to-daughter—as person-to-person."

dad felt obligated to live in a certain way—that was the way a star lived. And my parents were raised poor, so they liked having all those things. I wasn't, so it didn't mean much to me. . . .

"He liked to live on top of a hill and build things with his hands. My dad is quite physical. He held the shot-put record in the state of California for some time. It was broken by my bass player's girlfriend's father—isn't that weird? Anyway, we were always getting into work clothes for these great family projects—the kids all griping about it at the time, of course. We went camping a lot in the desert. I give my parents credit for having great insight to counter all that L.A. plastic—most of the kids I knew grew up too fast. Their parents would go to Palm Springs for the weekend, leaving them the house and a hundred dollars."

John, who was singing in "Musical Jubilee" with Patrice Munsel, Tammy Grimes, Lillian Gish and other such luminaries in 1975, seems to be in something big on Broadway every ten years. There was "Carousel" in 1945, "The Pajama Game" in 1955, and the revival of "Carousel" in 1965. When one or the other of those shows wasn't running on Broadway, he was in a road company. Summer stock was particularly intense for him, and Bonnie spent several summers at a Quaker camp in the Adirondack Mountains.

"Her associations there had a lot to do with the development of her social consciousness," John says. "Her interest in the blues surprised me somewhat, but the camp had a connection with it."

"Late at night," Bonnie says, "when I was supposed to be asleep, I would fiddle with the radio, discovering Jimmy Reed, Muddy Waters, trying to get away from that surfing music."

"I didn't teach her much of anything about music," John says, "although of course there was music in the house. If I've given Bonnie anything, it's been the notion that you don't have to bend yourself out of shape to get along, on the stage or off—that you can be yourself. She doesn't owe me anything, compared with what she owes herself. I was really impressed and pleased when she said to me, before her concert at Lincoln Center, 'Dad, I don't want you to dress down for this.' She wasn't behaving 'like a parent' to her father, you see, as sons and daughters sometimes do."

Alas poor Billy Bigelow. Think of the fun he missed.

From Heloise:

For years, Heloise has been both entertaining and informing homemakers through her popular household hints column syndicated by King Features. Here, exclusively for FAMILY WEEKLY, is her own selection of the "Best of Heloise."

What every woman wants is the quickest, most efficient way to accomplish what has to be done.

I should know. I have been writing my column and running a household for more than ten years—and sometimes it's a dead heat at the end of the day as to what gets finished. But somehow, everything does get done—thanks mostly, I think, to the theory that all the furniture polish in the world won't put a gleam in your husband's eye.

Lint: Many women complain about lint on their husband's dark socks and on corduroy pieces, but they never think that all they have to do is to turn the socks and corduroy wrong side out before washing. This way the lint doesn't attach itself to the fabric when washed with other garments.

Sugar: I have found that I can make my own super-fine sugar in an emergency by using my blender.

Nylon Net: Here's a suggestion for those people who just can't seem to find a scouring pad when they need it: Get a small sponge, a scouring pad (not steel wool) and some nylon net (you probably have some scraps around the house). Place the sponge and scouring pad together and sew the net around both of them. When washing pots and pans, all you have to do is turn the sponge over to the scouring-pad side.

Plumber's Friend: This is the thing that you ordinarily "plunge" the toilet with. Buy one with a short handle and use it to wash men's socks and all sorts of hand washing in the kitchen sink! Excellent for laundering curtains and heavier objects in the bathtub. You can use much hotter water than your hands could ever stand, and this method saves the "hands men love to touch."

Making Beds: Do not waste energy here! Never walk around the beds more than necessary to straighten sheets, blankets, etc. Make one side of the bed, completely straightening the covers, then walk around to the other side and pull wrinkles which have been left. If necessary—and it might be on a king-sized bed—go back to the first side and straighten once more.

Deep Freezes: Use empty milk cartons to freeze leftovers in. This is a great saving, and eventually you will have enough for an entire meal! Use a kitchen knife to "slice" off the top of the carton to the desired size. Place leftovers in cartons, cover with foil, use rubber band to hold in place and label with a marker. Save one carton and mark it "leftovers," and each day place that dab of peas, carrots, meat and all leftover vegetables in this. Soon you will have enough for a pot of soup.

My Own Most Helpful Hints

Dishwasher Film: Fill your dishwasher with glassware and china. (Don't put in silver, aluminum or brass.) Put bowl in bottom of dishwasher, pour one cup of Clorox into this and run dishwasher through the cycle, but do not dry! Fill bowl again with one cup of vinegar and let it go through the complete cycle. This will remove all film from your dishes—and the dishwasher, too!

Stains on Formica: Never clean Formica, Micarta, etc., with an abrasive of any sort. Steel wool ruins this type of finish. Pour rubbing alcohol on the drainboard, spread evenly, then pour Clorox over this after waiting one minute. Spread this mixture over all stains. The chemical reaction removes nearly all stains. Rinse off with clear water.

Heloise Sack Blouse: Grand for housework. Make a Heloise Sack Blouse from an old bath towel. Fold towel in half, sew up sides, leave opening for arms, make opening for neck. Don't forget the pockets! Needs no ironing.

Nerves: Don't try to wash every Monday, clean floors every Tuesday and iron on Wednesdays! Mix your schedule up! Forget your laundry some Monday—it will always be there. Or do it a day ahead of time; then you won't feel guilty. Relax and remember: no woman ever had everything done, so why should you?

The Best in High School Basketball

Our Third Annual College Recruiters' Poll

Recruiting by colleges of top high school basketball players has always been highly competitive, but now the campuses must vie with the pros for the cream of the talent. Since Moses Malone went straight from high school to the Utah Stars last year, things have changed. But, as one college recruiter says, "It's the very rare player who can play pro ball right out of high school," and the campus representatives are bird-dogging the talent as actively as ever.

For the third straight year, FAMILY WEEKLY has consulted with top college basketball people to compile a list of the top 30 high school senior prospects. We spoke with two head coaches, Jack Leaman of the University of Massachusetts and George Raveling of Washington State, and three assistant coaches who spend most of the winter checking out high school players. The three are Eddie Biedenbach of North Carolina State, Frank McLaughlin of Notre Dame and Marvin Owens of Kansas State.

There is one particularly intriguing result of this year's FAMILY WEEKLY high school basketball poll. The high school player judged the very best in America won't be playing either college or professional ball next year. The reason is that he'll still be in high school. Wayne McKoy, an awesome 6-foot-9 junior center at Lutheran High School in Brookville, N.Y., who averaged 28 points and 15 rebounds per game as a sophomore last season and shot 65 percent from the field, is labeled one of those athletic prodigies most likely to leap directly to the pros.

But there are many fine players among this year's high school seniors who are being heavily recruited. One of these is a 6-foot-9 product of Farmingdale High School in New York, named Jim Graziano, Graziano averaged 26 points per game last season and is rated a solid bet for future stardom as a strong forward.

Other great high school forwards include Glen Grunwald, a lanky 6-foot-9 performer who has averaged 25 points per game the past three years at East Leyden in Franklin Park, Ill. James Wilkes, 6-foot-7, of Dorsey High in Los Angeles, who was the only junior to make his city's All-Star team in 1975; LaVon Williams, also 6-foot-7, from Denver's Manual High; Albert (Slab) Jones, also 6-foot-7, from Worthing High in Houston; Johnny Parker, who stands 6-foot-8, of Central High in St. Louis; and 6-foot-9 Gig Sims of Redondo Beach (Calif.) High.

Grunwald has an excellent chance this year to become the first athlete in Illinois basketball history to earn All-State recognition for four successive years. He's also an outstanding student, with nearly a straight-A average.

bounds well in addition to having good shooting range." Johnny Parker from St. Louis's Central High, is labeled "a tremendous leaper with great quickness." Redondo Beach's Gig Sims is tagged as "a smaller version of Bill Walton."

College recruiters are high in their praise of several top senior swing men—players who are capable of playing either a small forward or big guard position. Among the best in this category are Mike O'Koren of Hudson Catholic in Jersey City, N.J., and Charles (Hawkeye) Whitney of DeMatha in Hyattsville, Md. Both are 6-foot-5, considered an "in-between" size for college ball, but each is expected to have a fine future.

Giant centers are always hotly pursued, and this year there are several outstanding "big men." The very best seem to be Ed Scheuermann from Pittsburgh's Baldwin High, Stuart House from Denby High in Detroit and Jawann Oldham of Cleveland High School in Seattle. Of the three, House is perhaps the most awesome physically. He stands 6-foot-10 and weighs 230 pounds. One college expert rates him the "top prospect in Detroit since Spencer Haywood."

Last year's poll of college basketball coaches and recruiters pointed up the fact that there were probably more outstanding forwards among the high school seniors than any other position. The guards seem to dominate this year. In fact, one guard, 6-foot-4 Darrell Griffith from Male High in Louisville, "has a chance to become the first backcourt man to go right from high school into the pros," says one recruiter. "I think he could even hold his own against many of the top pros right now."

Rated just behind Griffith are 6-foot-1 Ron Perry from Catholic Memorial in West Roxbury, Mass., and 6-foot-3 Rich Branning from Marina High in Huntington Beach, Calif. "Perry has amazing intelligence on the floor for a young player," says a college coach, "and this intelligence is obvious in the classroom, too, where Ron does very well." Branning is noted as a player who directs his team's offense—the equivalent of the quarterback in football.

There are four Southern Californians on this year's list, but the Washington, D.C., area also seems especially loaded. There's Anthony (Jo Jo) Hunter, a 6-foot-2 guard from Mackin High; Bill Bryant, a 6-foot-4 guard at Archbishop Carroll; and Craig Shelton, a 6-foot-6 forward at Dunbar High. (Hawkeye Whitney is also from the Washington area).

Among this year's crop of top high school seniors, probably none matches Clyde Austin of Maggie L. Walker High School located in Richmond, Va., for pure shooting skill. Clyde, nicknamed "The Glide," scored more than 40 points in five games last year. His overall norm was 31.6 points.

Our panel of college recruiters and coaches selected the following 30 players—listed alphabetically by position—as the best high school senior basketball prospects in the nation:

Meet The Creator The STS Method
Frank Rocco, R. H., a world-renowned registered therapist and his clinical success with people who had never before been able to lose weight has been phenomenal.

Mr. Rocco's contention is: "Any person can lose weight with this plan as long as they have the sincere desire to lose. This is the only prerequisite. They can lose as much as they want, five pounds to a hundred pounds, and there is no medication involved." He has proven this in countless cases, where he has given new hope and new happiness to people who have tried dozens of other weight-loss methods without lasting success.

Frank Rocco is recognized as a major authority in his field and has been the subject of many newspaper articles and television shows.

You can't be turned down for this Insurance if you're 50 to 80!

Here is a life insurance policy that can be yours for the asking if you inquire before February 29th. No ifs, ands, or buts! Not only is no physical examination required, but the policy is actually issued to you without a single health question!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is an individual life insurance policy that guarantees to accept every man and woman between 50 and 80 who applies during the guaranteed acceptance period—regardless of any other insurance carried.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is underwritten by Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, specialists in serving the specific needs of America's older population. This protection is recommended to their members by two of America's highly respected national nonprofit organizations of the mature: the National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA) and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

A Protection Breakthrough for Every Older Person!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is a distinctive concept of life insurance, achieved as a result of the years of effort Colonial Penn has devoted to meeting the insurance needs of mature people.

The goal was a life insurance policy we can make available to all mature people—a policy whose cost would be reasonable and whose benefits would be worthwhile. With PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS, the Colonial Penn Life Insurance Company has succeeded.

Here's How PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS Can Do This For You:

During the first two years that your policy is in effect, your coverage is reduced. If you should die during the first policy year, the benefit paid to your beneficiary is $100. If death occurs during the second policy year, your beneficiary receives $250. Once two years have passed, you are covered for the full face amount of the policy.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS enables the older person to obtain worthwhile benefits for his insurance dollar—and, at the same time, guarantees acceptance for all applicants—even those who ordinarily wouldn't qualify for life insurance.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS provides increasing cash values which begin after the first or second year.

As a matter of fact, after only ten years, you can even stop paying premiums and still receive paid up life insurance coverage of at least one-half the original face amount of your policy.

The Cost? JUST $6.95 A MONTH.

Why Women Baffle Men—And Vice Versa

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. It's hard for men to understand women, and vice versa, because they see themselves differently, they have different self-concepts and different goals where personality development is concerned.
2. Women constantly baffle men by their superior ability to understand others' attitudes and intentions without the need for words.

3. The more attractive a woman is, the harder it is for a man to get to know her.
4. How you feel when you've done something you know you shouldn't depends on whether you're a man or a woman.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a Louisiana State University study, men and women students were asked to describe their actual and ideal selves. Results: "For both actual and ideal selves, men described themselves as tough and women described themselves as tender. Men described themselves as more rational than did the women. (The men saw themselves as more practical, matter-of-fact, more disposed to think, to reason, and to be guided by intellect rather than emotion.) Ideally the men wanted to be tougher, more dominating; women wanted to be more relaxed, tender, imaginative."
2. True. At Harvard University, investigators administered a test to more than 130 groups of men and women. Results: It was found that women of all ages were definitely better than men at detecting non-verbal cues (tones of voice, facial expressions, etc.).
3. True. In psychological studies at two Southern universities, men and women students who did not know each other were paired for a given period with the objective of becoming acquainted. Subsequently, confidential questionnaires were administered on how well each subject got to know his partner and how much self-information each was willing to disclose to the other. The results of the study revealed interesting differences between the sexes: "To the extent that males viewed themselves as attractive, they revealed more information about themselves to their partners. On the other hand, the more favorable the female subject's self-rating of physical attractiveness, the less she disclosed about herself." Investigators suggest that perhaps those women who, in their own eyes, are physically beautiful are more willing to "let their looks speak for them."
4. True. Psychological studies show that if you're a woman and do something that you know you shouldn't, you're likely to react with strong feelings of guilt and a troubled conscience. If you're a man, however, your predominant emotion is likely to be fear—apprehension over the consequences of your act or concern that you'll be found out.

What in the World!

BILL BRADLEY
And he's smart, too

How Bill Bradley, basketball's superman and superscholar, changed the scope of the game: "The sportsworld never entirely trusted Bradley. He was not dependent on the kindness of owners, coaches and sportswriters. He obviously wasn't hungry in the way that promoters understand. He was so close to the model son that sportsworld promised to produce that he seemed an impostor. One thought of spy movies in which the foreign agent was unmasked because he spoke English too well to be native born. In the same way, Bradley was not real—a WASP from Princeton, a Rhodes scholar, a man whose business agent declared before his rookie season that Bradley would some day become President. The fact that Bradley spurned the pro game for two years while he studied at Oxford was unsettling for many sports fans, but eventually understandable. Bradley was already so rich, intelligent, handsome, well connected and famous—what could he gain by playing a game that at the time wasn't that popular a professional sport and was dominated by and attended by blacks? It was Bradley's presence that made the game acceptable even to the New York white woman and to the New York executive." From "SportsWorld: An American Dreamland," by Robert Lipsyte (Quadrangle, $10).

Happiness as a househusband: Over a year ago, Thomas Gregory concluded that he'd never make it as an electronics expert. Mr. Gregory, of East Windsor, N.J., had been laid off several times. So his wife Margaret went to work full time (she had only worked part time before because of their children), and Tom became a househusband. What was it like? "The change was more dramatic for me than it was for Margaret," says Tom. "I am part of that generation that believes a man's profession is all-important. When Margaret and I switched roles, my whole self-image collapsed. I also had to contend with the women in the neighborhood who found my daytime presence most disquieting. The biggest surprise was finding out how much time actually goes into housework. I imagined that I would have loads of free time, but no. What's my reward? What is my pay? Seeking and getting the approval of my wife and children for a clean house and good meals. I seem to enjoy life more, and I've earned the reputation as a great den mother!" (But wait until Margaret and the kids start taking him for granted.)

SUNFLOWER KING

Fairy tales do come true: How do you grow sunflowers as tall as trees? Thirteen-year-old Sigmund Schregelman found out but he's not telling his secret. "I've wanted to work with my father in his garden for some time now, but he said I'd have to prove I had a green thumb first. I knew that sunflowers aren't difficult to grow, so I decided to grow the tallest one ever," said Sigmund. He certainly succeeded: his flowers are 11 feet high and have stems that are an incredible 8 inches in circumference. Why won't he share his secret? "If I want to remain famous, I can't afford to tell others my methods. But I will say that talking to plants does work."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY By Richard Armour

PHONEY BUSINESS

We have a new telephone book At which I am casting a look. Its cover is brighter and slicker, The volume is notably thicker. The type is much smaller, or so I think, but my children say no, It's my eyes that have failed in their mission Since getting the former edition. Well, now I must write in the new

Some names and some notes, quite a few,
And underline persons I call Almost daily, at least most of all.
With a telephone book I'm a bold one
At making the new like the old one.

A youngster received a red wagon for his birthday and for days he went nowhere without it. But one afternoon he was happily rolling it along the front sidewalk when Dad called, "Take the wagon in back and play with it. Remember, it's Sunday."

The boy started to obey, then turned around with a puzzled look and asked, "Isn't it Sunday in the backyard, too?"

"Does your tooth still ache?"
"I'll ask my dentist. He kept it."

—Samuel J. Stannard

My doctor decided not to go out on strike. Someone reminded him that time is a great healer.

Recently we took our little four-year-old grandson out to dine. There happened to be a pistol mounted in a frame on a wall of the restaurant. He exclaimed, "Look, Grandma, that gun is dead!"

Talent is God-given; be grateful.
Fame is man-given; be thankful.
Conceit is self-given; be careful.

HI, GANG! GUESS WHAT I HAVE HERE?
 A SHORT GIRL?
 A TOMMY GUN?
 NO, IT'S A GUITAR! A FRIEND OF MINE GAVE IT TO ME FOR TAKING CARE OF HIS HOUSE WHILE HE WAS AWAY!
 TOO BAD HE DIDN'T GIVE IT TO YOU WITH NO STRINGS ATTACHED!
 ANY REQUESTS?
 YES - DON'T PLAY!
 REGGIE, DON'T PUT DOWN JUGHEAD'S GUITAR PLAYING!
 I WON'T PUT DOWN HIS GUITAR PLAYING IF HE PUTS DOWN HIS GUITAR!
 WOULD YOU LIKE TO HEAR ME PLAY "WHEN I'M 64"?
 GOOD IDEA! MAYBE BY THAT TIME I'LL HAVE MOVED AWAY!
 I COULD PLAY "TILL I GET IT RIGHT!"
 THAT COULD BE WHEN YOU'RE 64!
 CAN YOU PLAY "500 MILES FROM HOME"?
 HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS STRAIN?
 IT SOUNDS MORE LIKE A COMPOUND FRACTURE!
 JUGHEAD, YOU'LL HAVE TO PRACTICE YOUR FINGERING!
 YES, AND YOU'RE HOLDING THE PICK WRONG!
 HERE, LET ME SHOW YOU!
 I'LL ADJUST YOUR NECK STRAP - IT'S TOO SHORT!
 I CAN TEACH YOU SOME CHORDS, JUGGIE!
 HEY - I WANT ONE OF THOSE THINGS, TOO!

by MORT WALKER and DIK BROWNE

I'D BETTER DO THIS PAPERWORK BEFORE SOMEONE THINKS UP SOMETHING ELSE FOR ME TO DO...
 WOW! I JUST THOUGHT OF SOMETHING GREAT THAT DAD AND I COULD DO!
 DAD, CAN WE GO OUT AND SHOOT THE BB GUN?
 I DON'T THINK YOU'RE OLD ENOUGH, DITTO!
 LET'S PLAY CATCH THEN.
 I'M WORKING ON A REPORT, DITTO.
 HOW ABOUT AFTER?
 I'M TAKING MOM SHOPPING!
 HOW ABOUT WHEN YOU GET BACK?
 I WISH I COULD, DITTO, BUT THEN I'VE GOT TO WORK OUT IN THE YARD.
 HE'S GOT TO LEARN THAT THERE'S MORE TO LIFE THAN PLAY.
 HE OUGHTA LEARN THAT THERE'S MORE TO HAVING LITTLE BOYS THAN MAKING EXCUSES!
