Forced Busing Issue Kept Alive In Mass. Primary

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A rally scheduled for Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace tonight, the eve of the nation's second presidential primary, is helping to keep attention fixed on the volatile and divisive forced busing issue in Massachusetts.

The state's primary is scheduled for Tuesday, and the race is considered so divided and unpredictable that a relative handful of votes could change the order of finish among the eight major Democratic candidates.

Throughout the campaign here, candidates have either exploited or tried to avoid the busing issue. Today they were fanning out across the state for final campaigning.

The election here is attracting far more national attention than a simultaneous primary in Vermont. The major reason is that more delegates are at stake. But the busing issue in Boston is also a factor — the chance to measure reaction in a city that for two years has been divided over a court-ordered plan to integrate its schools.

Opponents of forced busing spent much of Sunday urging 3,000 marchers to vote for anti-busing candidates. Meanwhile, most of the candidates found themselves being questioned about the issue on television panel shows.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, who has tried to capture the antibusing vote here, was quizzed about Senate votes on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program.

He said he had voted against some legislation favored by anti-busing groups because "the Congress cannot by statute change a court order directing busing where that court order is based on an interpretation by the court of the 14th Amendment."

Much of the antibusing vote is expected to go to Wallace, the only candidate mentioned at an antibusing march on South Boston High School on Sunday.

Rep. Morris K. Udall said on the CBS program "Face the Nation" that he doesn't like to have judges running schools. "I think we're all being tested and the real question is whether we're going to have some presidential leadership on this."

Ford Sees A KO In Big Fla. Win

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says that if he wins the Florida primary and does so by a big margin, that will be a knockout punch to the presidential hopes of Ronald Reagan.

The President's campaign manager, Howard Callaway, says, however, that it will take a back-to-back Ford victory in Florida March 9 and in Illinois March 16 to convince Reagan that he can't win the Republican nomination.

These assessments in the Ford camp came after the President completed a weekend campaign trip to Florida and prepared for a swing into Illinois this Friday and Saturday.

Booned by a victory over Reagan in last week's New Hampshire primary, Ford headed into Florida with optimism on Saturday and addressed more than 80,000 people in two days.

Despite steady rain that drenched the President down to his bullet-proof vest, Ford attracted more than 60,000 during a 14-stop motorcade on a 40-mile stretch of Florida's south-east coast.

On Sunday, he attracted 10,000 to a barbecue in Sarasota and 8,000 at a Tampa rally during which the President perspired in a hot sun as he recited what he said were his accomplishments in office — reducing inflation and improving the unemployment picture.

Reagan, campaigning in another part of Florida Saturday, drew much smaller crowds. But most political observers feel the primary race in the Sunshine State will be very close.

Before returning to Washington Sunday night, Ford told campaign workers in Tampa: "I am absolutely certain we are going to win in Florida. Florida is really the key. If we can win, and win big, in Florida, they (Reagan's supporters) ought to know they can't win."

He also forecast victories next Tuesday in the Massachusetts and Vermont primaries. Both Ford and Reagan are entered in Massachusetts but neither has campaigned there. Reagan did not enter in Vermont.

Callaway was a bit more reserved as he talked with reporters. He said if the Florida primary had been held four weeks ago, Reagan would have won. But he said the momentum generated by two Ford trips to the state and the New Hampshire victory now moves Ford into good position.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners this morning appointed 14 persons — recommended by the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina — to terms as members of the Board of Trustees of Pitt Memorial Hospital. The 14 nominees from the Board of Governors were named to one, two and three year terms on the hospital board in accordance with the affiliation agreement which makes Pitt Memorial the prime clinical teaching hospital for the School of Medicine at East Carolina University.

Named to one-year terms (expiring February 28, 1977) were James T. Cheatham of Greenville, Dean Rich of Raleigh, Norfleet Sugg of Pinetops and Mrs. Donald Diechmann of New Bern.

Two-year term appointees (expiring February 28, 1978) were Henry G. Leslie of Greenville, Bill Neal of Roanoke Rapids, Mrs. Nancy Norwood of Goldsboro and Dr. Jesse Williams of Fayetteville, while three-year appointees (expiring February 28, 1979) included Raleigh Carver of Elizabeth City, Louis Renn of Jacksonville, William R. Robertson of Washington, Hal H. Tanner of Goldsboro, Mrs. Martha Walston of Wilson and Dr. Charles Watts of Durham.

Commissioners were expected to name two county residents to the hospital board later today. Hospital administrator Jack Richardson, reporting to commissioners this morning told the board that Pitt Memorial had more patients admitted during the month of January than ever before in its history. He added that the hospital was so full last week that 13 patients had to be turned away one day.

Ralph Hall, project engineer overseeing construction of the new hospital told commissioners that "basically the outside of the building is complete," and added that all the wall board has been installed in the acute hospital and that all the wall framing has been completed in the rehabilitation center.

It was reported, too, that architectural drawings for changes needed to accommodate the ECU medical program have been received and that officials are scheduled to meet Wednesday to determine

PLAY AREA NEEDS ATTENTION

In the Hillsdale area there is a small park that could use some fixing up. I think some of the equipment may be hazardous to small children. Would the city pay for its being fixed or would the people in the area have to pay? Mrs. V.S.

Recreation Department Director Boyd Lee said the Recreation Department has requested $50,000 through Community Development funds to replace equipment and generally improve five miniparks in the city, one of which is the Hillsdale Park. "As soon as the money is available, we'll go to work," Lee said. "In the meantime, there's little we can do but simply take down equipment if it does seem to be hazardous. All the equipment in these parks is at least 15 years old and most of it has had it, we know."

If the expenditure for minipark improvement is approved as part of this year's Community Development package, the money to begin work on Hillsdale and the other parks should be available in August, City Planner John Scofield said.

Comet Should Be Visible In Early Morning Hours

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those getting up before sunrise this week should be able to see a bright, newly discovered comet as it swings back into deep space following a rendezvous with the sun.

Comet West passed within 75 million miles of the earth Sunday on its closest approach and is in a position the rest of this week for good naked-eye viewing from the northern hemisphere. Dr. Brian Marsden of the Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass., says the comet will be best visible from Wednesday to Sunday about an hour before sunrise.

Comet West should appear like a bright, elongated streak of light just above the eastern horizon, slightly south of the rising sun. On Wednesday, the comet should appear about 5 degrees above the horizon, rising higher each day so that it appears at 14 degrees by Sunday.

Marsden said the planet Venus will appear in the general area but should not be confused with the comet.

"Venus will be brighter and, of course, won't have a tail," he said.

Marsden said observers using binoculars or small telescopes should be able to see the comet, the brightest in the northern hemisphere since Comet Bennett in 1970, for the rest of the month.

The sky show will not be for amateurs only.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says it and other scientific organizations will mount a major effort to study Comet West. NASA will study the comet from earth and in space, using telescopes, rockets and airborne observatories.

While their composition isn't specifically known, comets are thought to be "dirty snowballs" of ice, methane, ammonia and dust. Scientists say comets could be remnants of the material from which our solar system was created.

Comet West was discovered by — and named after — Richard M. West of the European Southern Observatory in Geneva, Switzerland. In November 1975, West noticed the comet on photographic plates taken two months before in Chile.

Rep. Wilbur Mills Says He Looks To Retiring

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., says he will retire from Congress because a re-election campaign would cause him to resume drinking. But politicians say Mills made his decision after privately financed public opinion polls indicated he couldn't be renominated.

The 66-year-old former grocer and probate court judge, once chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, says that barring the unforeseen, he will announce by March 9 — when the filing for political office opens — that he'll retire after 38 years in Washington, many of them as one of the capital's most powerful men.

"Whether I could continue to do the job and maintain my sobriety, I don't know," said Mills, who underwent treatment last year as an alcoholic. He told the Arkansas Gazette that "The doctors say the strain might affect me in some way."

Gene Goss, Mills' executive assistant, recently said Mills' strength in his home district "has been improving month-by-month." And Mills was quoted several times as saying, "The people will forgive you faster than you can forgive yourself."

But the polls apparently indicate that the people of the district haven't forgiven him for flings with stripper Fanne Foxe or for his extended absence from Congress last year while he battled alcoholism at hospitals in Maryland and Florida.

Arrest More Than 100 In Thefts

By IRA ROSENFELD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A fencing operation secretly operated by police and FBI agents did $2.4 million worth of business before the lawmen ended their ruse and arrested more than 100 persons, including 60 guests at a party to celebrate the ring's prosperity.

Those arrested included assistant U.S. Atty. Donald E. Robinson Jr., who was charged with accepting two bribes and fired from his post.

The bogus fencing operation, dubbed by police "The Sting" and based in a local warehouse, also resulted in the recovery of 1,500 stolen credit cards, 460 government checks, 225 typewriters and calculators, 700 savings bonds, 18 cars and trucks and an electrocardiac machine stolen piece by piece from a local hospital.

"is so proud of what you did for us."

One guest who did not have time to change for the party arrived in handcuffs having just escaped from the metropolitan police robbery squad. He asked an undercover policeman to be introduced to a room where they were introduced to helmeted police wearing flak jackets who advised them of their rights, placed them under arrest and herded them into rented trucks for a ride to the police station.

"They were stunned," said Police Lt. Robert Arscott. "They went into an abrupt shock."

Silbert told reporters that the stolen goods were kept with P.F.F. Inc., a warehouse in northeast Washington. The warehouse was secretly operated by District of Columbia police and FBI agents acting as out-of-town crime syndicate members. The name, "P.F.F. Inc." came from "Police-FBI Fencing Inc.," although none of its patrons were so advised, Silbert added.

Each transaction in the warehouse was videotaped and recorded, Silbert said.

The arrests at the party were followed by other arrests in the Washington area over the weekend. In addition, police said they were seeking additional suspects.

Easier Closing Of Day Care Centers Sought

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth, wants to change the law to make it easier for the state to close down a day care center when it is found to be substandard.

Davis wants to make it possible for the state Child Day Care Licensing Board to take civil instead of criminal action when it acts to shut down an operator whose license has been revoked by the board.

mit an inspector "immediately upon determining that the day care center does not meet legal standards, to place a sign on the door with large letters telling parents the deficiencies he has found and for the operator to write down any response desired."

"One of the problems is that during lengthy litigation and negotiation procedures, substandard day care centers continue to operate under dangerous conditions," Davis added.

Davis says it is difficult to get a conviction in the criminal trial of a day care center operator who may be an upstanding member of the community. It would be simpler for the board to seek a court order to close down a center found violating the law.

The Forsyth senator was thinking of a case in his home town of Winston-Salem two months ago when two children were killed and 11 others hurt in a day care center fire.

Placing a sign on the door would let the parents decide whether they wanted to leave their children in that particular center while the matter is being resolved," he said.

It turned out the licensing board had cited Mrs. Myrtle H. Head, operator of the center, for several violations of the law. The state agency lost the case and the center continued to operate.

Sokol said the board has tried to get a Salisbury woman to upgrade or close her center but cannot prove she receives a fee for her services. Parents won't testify against her.

Davis also wants to eliminate the provision of the law which says that to convict a day care operator the state must prove the center receives a "payment, fee or grant" for taking care of children.

Davis recalls that when the charges were brought parents came to her defense and presented petitions begging that Mrs. Head's center not be closed down.

"It's hard to believe that a person taking care of that many children was not doing it for pay," Davis said.

Police found the weapon in a restroom of the night spot a shot time after the shooting, Cannon noted.

Break-Ins At Three Sites

Greenville Police are continuing their investigation of three break-ins reported early this morning.

Officers said a 12:43 a.m. call sent officers to the Paek-A-Sak on Dickinson Avenue where witnesses saw three men break open a window and take a reported 15 cartons of cigarettes.

Cannon said an estimated $175 damage resulted to the window and estimated the value of the cigarettes taken at $36.

A break-in at Wainwrights Amoco Station at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut Streets was reported at 6 a.m.

There, according to Cannon, thieves broke in through the front door and took an estimated $60 in cakes and sandwiches while causing an estimated $50 damage to the door.

The chief reported an estimated $180 worth of carpet was taken from the Carpet Specialty Shop at 1211 West 14th St. by thieves who broke in through the front door of that business during the night.

The break-in there was reported at 6:10 a.m.

Clubbers Hired Out For Funds

FALKLAND — The Falkland Hustlers 4-H Club netted about $75 Saturday by hiring themselves out to do odd jobs in the community.

The group gathered downtown early Saturday morning, after having previously publicized that they would be available to work for anyone in the community who wished to hire them.

Some raked yards, some washed cars, some waxed floors and did other general house cleaning.

They plan to use their gains to finance a trip to Raleigh for any of their members who win in county 4-H competitions this spring, their leader, Mrs. Jean Bullock said.

There was no word whether Nixon would meet with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who was on the West Coast at the Palm Springs home of actor Kirk Douglas when Nixon returned on Sunday from the eight-day trip.

Two members of the Chinese mission to the United States were also on hand, and the former president chatted briefly with them before leaving in a limousine. He made no statement to reporters, however.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil-Edward Boyd Sr. of Grimesland, and Dr. and Mrs. J.E. Pruett of Bessemer City. Guests were invited to register upon entering the church by Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Lupton of Grifton.

The bride entered the sanctuary escorted by her father and was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal wedding gown of ivory silk organza over taffeta designed with a Victorian neckline encircled with antique lace. The empire bodice featured rows of lace forming a bib effect with a row of covered buttons down the center. The long full sleeves of tucked organza were cuffed at the wrist with rows of lace. The A-line skirt fell into a chapel length train with three rows of antique lace around the hem of the skirt and train.

Her bridal headpiece was a Camelot styled bonnet with antique lace edging and ivory illusion veil. The bride carried a nosegay of white starburst daisies and pink sweetheart roses with baby's breath.

Mrs. Henry Whitehurst of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Frank Dameron of Las Vegas, Nev., sister of the bridegroom, Miss Sally Brown of Raleigh, and Miss Kay Galloway of Greenville.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of dusty rose quana nylon designed with an empire bodice, V-neckline, flared skirt and long sleeves. The gowns were trimmed in antique ivory lace. The attendants each carried a long-stemmed med. fuji mum with greenery and long streamers of ribbon.

Miss Jessica Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Ray Boyd of Greenville, was the flower girl. She wore a long gown of polyester knit in a print pattern and carried a basket of mixed spring flowers.

Dr. J.E. Pruett, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Greg Boyd, brother of the bride, Price Heritage of Four Oaks, and Danny Stroupe of Winston-Salem. Honorary ushers were Donald Sisk, Ronald Smith and Chuck Haslett, all of Lincolnton.

For the wedding, Mrs. Boyd chose a cream knit street length dress and a corsage of cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Pruett wore a light green street length dress and a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

The bride's grandmothers, Mrs. Clyde Boyd and Mrs. Dellie Edwards, were presented corsages of white mums.

The wedding was planned and directed by Mrs. Donald Toler of Grimesland, aunt of the bride.

The bridal couple and wedding guests were entertained at a reception following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall hosted by the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will reside in Greensboro.

The bride is a 1972 graduate of D.H. Conley High School and a graduate of Hardbarger Business College with a degree in fashion merchandising.

The bridegroom attended N.C. State University, Raleigh, and Durham Technical Institute, Durham. He is presently employed by Greensboro Dental Laboratory.

A dinner rehearsal party for the bridal couple and wedding party was held Saturday night at the Holiday Inn, Greenville, hosted by the bridegroom's parents.

Abby Reports That Physiques Rate First In Female Survey

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Last week I published the results of my reader survey on what men first noticed about women. (Bosoms were out in front by a wide margin.)

Here are the results of what women notice first about men:

A whopping 58 per cent of the women who responded said, "His physique!" But nearly every female who wrote that it is the first thing she notices about a man also wrote that it was certainly not the most IMPORTANT.

One Beverly Hills reader who described herself as a "29-year-old liberated working woman," wrote: "I polled the opinions of the women with whom I work and came up with the consensus that it's wise to avoid the body beautiful-type man because men with great bodies and bulging muscles are usually conceited, dull or bi-sexual." On men's physiques: More than 50 per cent of the women wrote that they prefer to have their men at least as tall as they are. A 6-foot Syracuse woman, signed "Amorous Amazon," wrote: "Give me a little guy. They overcompensate in ways that more than make up for their size!"

An Indianapolis woman wrote: "I notice how a man is built first. The thin ones are usually penny-pinchers. Fat men are more generous, and better dancers, and they don't object to a gal who's a little on the heavy side herself."

A Las Vegas, Nev., woman wrote, "Now that men are wearing their clothing more form-fitting, they can't hide a beer belly or a flabby fanny as they used to." (From South Dakota: "I'm big, and I like the convenience of being able to wear my guy's clothes.")

Second to a man's physique (and a close second at that) came "grooming," with emphasis on the hair. Oddly enough, the women said they care less about whether or not a man has hair than what he does with what he has.

More San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego women wrote that they are turned on by men with FACIAL hair "if it's neat and well cared for." From Seattle: "I like my men bald—and the baldier the better!" There were any number of women who stated that they see nothing wrong with men who "touch up" their hair and wear hair pieces if it looks "natural."

The 23 per cent of the women who rated grooming No. 1 got right down to the nitty gritty: Mid-western women noticed fingernails, taste in clothes and general cleanliness. From every state came the comment that the men who "look" well-groomed have to "smell" clean, too. (From Tulsa, "Spare me from the man who reeks of perfume! I'd rather have the honest odor of perspiration.")

Immediately following physique, grooming and attire in order of female reader popularity were "the eyes." From every state in the U.S.A., and from Canada and abroad (including Belfast, Ireland and Rome, Italy, as well as Rio De Janeiro) came mail saying, "The eyes tell everything," or, "The eyes are the windows of the soul!"

From Eugene, Ore.: "Our women's club took a vote, and 20 out of 24 voted that a man's eyes are the first thing we notice about a man. You can tell more about a man's character from his eyes than from anything else. His mouth can lie, but his eyes can't."

Facing Near-Impossible Task

The state faces another apparently impossible task of quickly inspecting all the dams in the state. There are about 2,000 dams in the state and officials say that, with the small inspection staff, it would take five years to get to all of them.

And that's not all. There may be any number of dams throughout the state which are not even known to the inspection staff.

That was the case with a dam that broke near Asheville recently, killing four people.

"We never heard of it," Craig McKenzie, chief of the Land Quality Section of the State Department of Natural and Economic Resources, said.

The officials of the agency feel there are other such dams around which are not known to them.

But for those known 2,000 dams, James Harrington, secretary of the Natural and Economic Resources says, there are only seven inspectors available. At the rate of 400 dams per year it would take five years to inspect all 2,000 dams.

The state officials said that it is entirely possible for another such disaster to occur. It wasn't said, but a future dam break could be even more disastrous if more houses were located in the water's path.

Of course the limited number of inspectors can't be expected to find and study all the dams in the state in a short period of time. There is, however, something that average citizens can do to protect themselves from a dam break disaster. Those of us who live in a flood plain can search upstream for dams which might have been built in the past and perhaps forgotten. If one is found it can be reported to the proper state agencies, so that hopefully some action can be taken to assure that it is safe.

As with so many things, we depend too much on the government to look after us. This is a case where individual citizens can exert some effort to identify the unknown dams and report them to the proper authorities.

Sensible Steps To Reduce Spending

Gov. Holshouser last week ordered a partial freeze on hiring in state government and other cutbacks in spending.

Under the order vacancies won't be filled without approval of the state budget office. Exceptions were made for law enforcement positions and custodial jobs including prison guards and mental hospital attendants.

The governor banned out of state travel and non-essential in-state travel.

These orders seem very sensible to us. They will save millions of dollars and keep the state budget in the black during these times of slow revenue growth.

Ethics Law Looks Frail

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—In its purpose of providing the public with information about legislators, or candidates for that job, the state's fledgling ethics law falls short of the mark.

A careful review of the financial disclosure statements voluntarily filed by 51 of the General Assembly's 170 members reveals precious little information.

The 1975 General Assembly, largely under prodding from Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, adopted after much debate the ethics and financial disclosure law to apply to all members of the Legislature and candidates for the office, and to the presiding officers.

First filings were due January 15, but the ethics commission, acting on a ruling by the attorney general's office, voted to delay the law's application to current legislators. Instead, only those who seek reelection (along with new candidates) will be required to file. In future years, updated reports will be required for those serving in the assembly.

Some Filed
Despite the ruling by the ethics commission, a number of legislators filed statements, often accompanied by a letter explaining that the filing was made voluntarily.

Forms were prepared for the purpose, and many legislators used those pages; others simply cataloged the information with formats ranging from hand-scribbled notes on ruled paper to a notarized document in the style of a court brief.

Despite form, though, the wording of the law and the vagueness of phraseology have created loopholes of enormous size.

As one legislative staffer commented on the process: "they passed something with the title ethics... but it goes little beyond that."

Except for two who attached elaborate financial sheets showing liabilities and assets — not required by the law — the remainder followed closely the rules in divulging only the barest of information.

On the first two pages you can learn the legislator's name, his wife's name, and the names of their children. The home address, office held, and principal occupation are also listed, along with the occupation of the spouse.

For instance, those who might wish to learn precisely who a legislator or candidate works for will be disappointed to find that section reporting simply: "Lawyer; Nature of Business—legal services; Customers or Clientele—the public."

Some Answers
Hidden ownership of stock or control over a corporation would be considered a matter which might influence a legislator. Thus, it is frustrating to find on lines where one is to list such properties if worth more than $5,000, the response: "various investments, bank and real estate."

Who a lawmaker owes money to might also carry some influence in decision-making. So, a section is included for listing creditors, with the admonition that you don't have to name them. The result: most of those blanks contain the information "banks, savings and loans, individuals." No amounts, no further identification.

Then there is the section for "professional" people to enumerate their clients, listing sources of income. Here, the law makes it clear that lawyers mustn't list the names of clients. So, you will find legislators making money from "banks, insurance companies, farms, individuals, contractors, state government, etc." but that's about all you will learn.

Real estate owned in North Carolina is one section in which many specific sites are listed by various legislators, some giving street addresses and others simply reporting a lot or acreage in a given county or township.

Statements are filed in the legislative services office and are open to public inspection.

As the Republicans were giving their two candidates a pretty close shave... A bunch of Democratic hopefuls vainly tried to cut Samson's hair... while he slew them with their own jawbones.

Armed Forces Union 103

WASHINGTON—There is a lot of talk that American unions are seriously considering organizing members of the armed forces. Rumor has it that the unionization of military personnel will begin at the end of the year.

I can't see anything wrong with this, except that if the unions in the military get into job classifications it may be harder for our soldiers, sailors and marines to fight another war.

Had our fighting boys been organized during World War II this is what might have happened.

The scene is aboard a battleship. It has been hit by the Japanese and several sailors have been knocked out of action.

A chaplain realizes the seriousness of the situation and starts passing shells to the gunners as he sings, "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition."

The shop steward comes up to him. "I'm sorry, Padre, but you can't pass shells to the gunner. You're not a member of the Ammunition Carrier's Local No. 4."

"But," the chaplain says, "there aren't enough men to pass the ammunition so we'll all be free."

"That's the Navy's fault. They didn't hire enough carriers. By passing shells to the gunner, you are taking a job away from someone who needs it. The union rules specifically say that chaplains must pray and that's it."

"All right, give me my Bible and I'll start to pray."

"I can't touch your Bible. Only members of the Boat-swain's Union can move a Bible from one place to another."

"Oh, for God's sakes. All right, I'll sing, 'Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition.'"

"I'm sorry, Padre, if you're going to sing, you'll need at least 10 musicians, and since this action is taking place at night they will have to be paid overtime after midnight."

"We're at General Quarters. Where am I going to get 10 musicians?"

"You can use a phonograph, but you'll have to pay for a standby orchestra."

"It doesn't seem to make any difference," the chaplain says, "we're sinking. I'm putting on my life jacket."

"You can't put on your life jacket, Padre. Members of the Deckhand Dresser's Guild are the only ones who can put on your life jacket for you."

"When the ship sinks, is it all right to swim?"

"Yes, but if you get into a lifeboat you can't row. That job classification has been given to the Pastry Chef's Local 135."

The soldiers may also find themselves in trouble. Cpl. Barney McNeil is manning a machine gun at Bastogne. As each wave of Germans attack McNeil fires away, dropping them in their tracks. Sgt. Roy Bender, shop steward for the Machine Gun and Mortar Firer's Union, crawls over to him.

"What do you think you're doing, Barney?"

"I'm killing Germans," Barney says, letting another blast go.

"You're killing too many Germans!" Bender shouts at him. "Slow up or the other guys will think you're an eager beaver. Our contract says we're not supposed to kill more than 10 Germans a day. I can see a hundred bodies over there."

"But dammit, we have to win the war," Barney protests.

"Listen, you dope, if you kill 100 Germans in an hour the Army will expect us all to kill 100 Germans in the same time. Relax, go have a cigarette or get into a crap game somewhere. In an hour we'll go into overtime and

'Boiler Room' Tactics

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — With the exception of a paper shredder in the Ronald Reagan campaign office, there is not much visual difference between the campaign efforts of the two Republican contenders in the North Carolina presidential primary race.

Reagan and President Gerald Ford have both taken basically the same approach to winning on March 23. They want to identify their supporters and get them to the polls.

With GOP voters a distinct minority in the state, a campaign through the mass media is bound to waste money reaching registered Democrats who can't vote in the Republican primary. So each candidate has resorted to more traditional means.

Each has established 25-30 "boiler rooms" around the state. Each room has been equipped with telephones for use by volunteers, who are supposed to contact every registered Republican in North Carolina.

When a voter identifies himself as a Reagan or Ford supporter, the volunteer notes his address. He will receive a letter thanking him for his support and reminding him to vote. On Election Day, he will again be called. At least, that's what will happen if everything goes as planned.

Reagan is supplementing those efforts. His staff mailed 50,000 letters from Sen. Jesse Helms to a selected list of Republicans late in January; the letters described Reagan in glowing terms.

Reagan will also make a three-day appearance in the state in the week before the voting. Ford organizers are hoping for, but not expecting, a brief visit from their candidate. Both men will use some television advertising.

But in the end, the primary may hinge not on advertising or on mass mailings but on what happens in the boiler rooms.

Both camps feel the GOP electorate is closely divided between the two candidates. Both expect that 40 per cent or less of the roughly 550,000 registered Republicans will vote.

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:
The creeping socialism that is continuing to engulf our country and affect our economy is so slow and so painless that I am often reminded of many of the patients I am privileged to treat. Gum disease simply does not hurt until it is truly advanced and the loss of teeth is almost eminent. The gums bleed a little at first, but most people don't seem to mind.

The socialistic trend is similar in that we all may "bleed a little" at the high taxes we pay, but people still don't seem to mind enough to take action. Industry is finding it increasingly difficult to raise the money it needs for new plants and equipment. How could this be? Everyone knows industry is "making a fortune". Like Mother Hubbard, when industry looked in the cupboard, it was bare.

The government taxes away a huge chunk (about half) of the net income of big corporations. It also taxes away a huge piece of the incomes of people who make $25,000 a year or more... money that used to be available for investing in industrial common stocks.

To make matters worse, the government is also the biggest hog at the trough when it comes to borrowing money. It is borrowing so much to pay benefits... over and above the amount it already collects in taxes... that there isn't enough left for industry.

The capital shortage has reached the point where we will have to decide which we want, benefits or jobs. A lot of the money industry needs to create jobs, increase production, and raise our standard of living is now pouring over the dam in benefit payments.

Shall we clamor for more? Or shall we consider the advice of Paul in his second letter to the Thessalonians when he said, "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat."?

INSIDE REPORT

Syria's Star Seen Rising

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—The spectacular emergence of Soviet-linked Syria over U.S.-linked Egypt as the paramount Arab state in the Arab-Israeli struggle now threatens to undermine even further President Ford's fading prospects for a political settlement in the Mideast.

Syria has new standing as prestigious architect of the political settlement in Lebanon and champion of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). This forces the U.S. into a major reassessment of earlier hopes that Egypt and President Anwar Sadat would lead the Arab states surrounding Israel into settling the region's endless bloody warfare.

The sudden accession of Syria and comparative decline of Egypt within the fitful Arab world can be partially blamed on Mr. Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who are now stuck with this unpleasant new reality.

But they are not wholly responsible. Equally at fault is the Israeli government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, which flatly rejected Kissinger's appeals in the summer of 1974 at last to confront the Palestine question. Instead, Rabin insisted — eventually with U.S. support — on a new round of negotiations with President Sadat. This culminated in Kissinger's arrangement of Israeli withdrawal from the mountain passes and oil fields in the Sinai Desert.

Far from quickening the pace of political settlement, the Israeli withdrawal (completed last weekend) led directly to the spectacular shift of Syria for Egypt as the dominant Arab influence in the confrontation with Israel.

Syria is closely linked to Moscow, a link totally unaffected by Cairo's 1972 decision to break the Soviet connection. Although the Kremlin has long sought to nail down its Syrian relationship with a treaty, the Syrian strongman, President Hafez Assad, has always refused out of preference for arm's-length friendship. Treaty of not, immense Soviet arms shipments to Damascus are financed as they are received, without any semblance of the blither negotiations over paying off Cairo's huge arms debt to the Soviet Union.

Accordingly, Syria's emergent dominance gives Moscow a ring side seat it did not have during the protracted and eventually successful Kissinger negotiations between Egypt and Israel.

More important and steeped in irony is the ominous development for Israel which emerged directly from the Israeli-Egyptian Sinai deal: the astonishing new partnership between King Hussein of Jordan and President Assad of Syria, an unlikely wedding of conservative royalist and radical-socialist Bathist regimes.

That such a threat by the two Arab states on Israel's eastern border should result from Israel's unwillingness to deal with the Palestine issue for the past eight years is a painful irony. It raises at least the possibility of a new four-way Arab alliance led by Syria and including Jordan, the PLO and Syrian-dominated Lebanon, with far closer political coordination and planning than ever before.

This combination, unthinkable a year ago, exists today for one reason: Israel's refusal to negotiate on the Palestine issue in a way acceptable to the Arab states and Syria's refusal to negotiate on Israeli-Syrian problems until it does. Syrian

Strength For Today

HANDICAPS CAN HELP
What a terrible thing it is to have a severe physical handicap.

Yet men are mightier than circumstances. Some of the truly great have succeeded not in spite of their handicaps but because of them. Milton was blind, Beethoven was deaf. Both Keats and Robert Louis Stevenson had tuberculosis. Helen Keller was blind, deaf, and unable to speak save as she was taught by a faithful teacher. St. Paul had what he called a thorn in his flesh. He prayed that he might be relieved of it, but the answer God gave him was that His grace was sufficient.

We cannot choose what our circumstances will be, but we can always choose the spirit with which we shall meet them. Handicaps can stimulate our courage, develop hidden capacities, and throw us back upon God whose grace is always sufficient for our need.

The really debilitating handicaps which people have are those within their own characters.

Stock Market Continues Tense

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market tension continues, and if it lasts much longer, some enterprising producer of games might soon come out with a big seller called "Crack The Dow Thousand."

Week after week this year the Dow Jones Industrial Average has been tantalizingly close to 1,000 points. Last Thursday it was within four points — and then it took a dive.

There is magic about that level on the DJIA, make no mistake. It is indeed a barrier. It is intimidating. It is only a number, God knows, but to many people it seems to be either the wall of heaven or Valhalla.

Seven times since 1966 this average has headed toward the barrier, but only in late 1972 did it push through and remain there for at least a day. Within weeks it was far below that level again.

The stock market is suspicious, neurotic, guilt-ridden. Myths become realities because they are so totally believed in. And one of those manufactured realities is the 1,000-point barrier.

As the average heads toward that figure portfolio managers become suspicious of the intentions of other portfolio managers. They fear the others will dump massively, and leave them stranded with deflated stocks.

When, after vacillating and, as they say, backing and filling and consolidating, the market finally does penetrate through the barrier, many investors become unnerved. It's too high, they say; it has to fall.

Quite often you will hear the market described in terms of the tide, but it is not the tide. The direction and force of the wind and the position of the moon dictate the height of the tide. It is predictable.

The forces that move the stock market, however, are too various to even count. The marketplace is mass psychology. It is hauled and pushed by so many forces that to forecast its direction is to play a game.

One of the big factors in the game this week is interest rates. After DJIA average reached 996 last week it went into reverse. Seeking the most likely explanation, the analysts decided on the interest rate threat.

If interest rates rise, it was theorized, the stock market will inevitably be hurt. High interest draws investors into the bond markets. High interest cuts into corporate profits.

The fact is that interest rates are very low compared with a year ago. But the threat is as important as the actuality. Traders took their profits, and so proved that a threat is as potent as the actuality.

Another question that analysts of various persuasions are asking this week is whether the economy justifies a market this high. That consideration is inevitable whenever the DJIA comes close to 1,000 points.

While the market and its averages are determined by a psychological process that few people really understand, there does seem to exist feeling that the economy finally is in shape to support a 1,000-point-plus reading.

 refusal to consider a token Israeli withdrawal from the Syrian Golan Heights until Israel agrees to negotiate with the PLO shocked U.S. policymakers.
 Kissinger's plan was to arrange a token withdrawal from the Golan Heights immediately after Israeli evacuation of the Sinai mountain passes, then move his diplomatic road show for a long engagement at a reconvened Geneva conference.

All that went down the drain with Syrian-led ostracism of Egypt for "selling out" the Arab world by making a separate Sinai deal with Israel, while the Palestine issue festered. Now the prospect of moving the dangerous Mideast stalemate to a new Geneva setting is dimmer than ever.
 Strengthening of the new alliance between Syria and Jordan, two states on the verge of war less than six years ago, guarantees continuously rising pressure on the U.S. and Israel to force action on the Palestine question. Any restraining influence from Cairo, which has risked so much to help the U.S. tamp down Mideast passions, is conspicuously absent in the new constellation of Arab prestige and power.

Such is the nature of the chickens that have come home to roost on the stupefying folly of the U.S., under Israel's pressure, in conducting a Mideast policy that ignores the central question: What happens to the Palestinians?

Cullen Col . . . Plane Plunges Into Lake; Two Men Die

 Under those circumstances, it becomes crucial to get as many supporters as possible to the polls.
 It would do Ford little good to persuade 55 per cent of the voters that he was the better man if Reagan's organization got 60 per cent of its adherents to vote and Ford could muster only 40 per cent of his, for example.
 Which brings up the question of the little gray paper shredder in Reagan's office in Raleigh.
 Paper shredders were made famous by TIT, the Committee to Re-Elect the President, and other besmirched participants in Richard Nixon's last campaign.
 They were used to destroy written memos and other documents that might otherwise be obtained through a perusal of the office garbage and presumably become useful in some nefarious way to the campaign's enemies.
 Reagan's press secretary in North Carolina, Henry Cunningham, said the paper shredder was evidence of security consciousness on the Reagan staff. He did not say whether anyone from the Ford campaign has been found poking around in the Reagan garbage.

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two men, believed brothers who worked at a textile finishing plant in Lincolnton, died when their plane plunged into Lake Norman Sunday.
 Witnesses said the plane had been flying low and buzzing boats.
 The body of John Ross, 49, of Rt. 6, Lincolnton, was recovered.
 His sister-in-law, Mrs. Jerry Ross, said her 42-year-old husband also was in the plane.
 Divers found the second body in the wreckage in about 40 feet of water. They were unable to bring it to the surface when they discontinued operations at nightfall. They planned to bring it up today.
 A diver said the brothers worked at the H and S Processing Co.
 The Piper plane crashed about 4:30 p.m. in a channel near N.C. 150, six miles west of Mooresville.
 A man who reported the crash to the Iredell County Sheriff's Department told the dispatcher, Mrs. Evelyn Darby, that the plane had been flying low over the water.

Man-Like Ape Briefly Viewed By The Press

OLIVER MEETS THE PRESS — Handler Frank Burger keeps a tight grip on the neck of Oliver, the much-touted simian who can stand erect, as the primate was introduced to newsmen Friday. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Say hello to Oliver, who's being offered as the "missing link" between ape and man but who could be no more than a balding monkey's uncle who walks on his hind legs.

The much-touted simian went public for about five minutes Friday at a news conference, all the while in the care of his handler, Frank Burger, said to be a South African safari guide. Burger had a chain around Oliver's neck.

The creature's owner, attorney Michael Miller of New York, said he bought Oliver four months ago from Burger, and that Oliver is believed to have come originally from the West African Congo River area.

"This is an area that is inhabited by both man and chimpanzee," Miller said, leaving the suggestion that a mating of the species gave rise to the 7-year-old Oliver.

"He looks closest to me to a chimp," Miller went on. "But I also see things that to me are not chimpanzee. ... When I first saw him I said, 'My God! He is important! He is significant! This is different. This is extraordinary.'"

But another view of Oliver came from Dr. Sydney Anderson, chairman and curator of the department of mammalogy at the American Museum of Natural History, who accompanied an Associated Press reporter to Oliver's news conference.

"It's a chimp," Anderson declared. "No question whatsoever. Back in the wild, they'll sometimes walk on their hind legs. They can be trained to do it."

Oliver's no King Kong. He's a runty 4-foot-6, with something of a balding, pin head. But he may well have watched an old King Kong movie at some point in time, because he strikes a pose like Kong, arms raised above the head, chest outthrust.

In addition to blinking at the flash bulbs, Oliver mugged for the news cameras almost as though he knew what they were. He stuck his tongue out. He

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Two years ago, during Detroit's nightmare winter of fuel shortages and mounting inflation, the nation's auto makers began an unprecedented scramble to meet a sudden demand for small cars.

It was, as one Big Three spokesman put it, "the worst time of our lives. Everybody wanted a small car and there we were with big cars coming out of our ears."

Now Detroit is scrambling again, only this time it's cutting back small car production because of rising inventories overflowing with unsold little autos.

Has the consumer turned fickle?

"No, not at all. The problem is we goofed again," said an official at Ford Motor Co. "Our small-car sales are up a lot from a year ago, but we expected them to be up even more."

What's happened, industry officials agree, is that the small-car boom has leveled off as unexpectedly as it began with the start of the Mideast oil embargo and the end of auto price controls in 1973.

Small car sales — with the exception of imports — are up sharply from last year, as are all car sales. But some consumers who were thinking "small" for the first time because of skyrocketing gasoline prices, long lines at the pumps and the shrinking value of their dollars, are now thinking "bigger" — if not "big."

At the same time, worried fullsize car shoppers who sat out the market for more than two years are returning, their confidence in the economy and availability of fuel partially restored.

Additionally, sales of predominantly small foreign cars, which profited handsomely from the small-car craze, have fallen off now that Detroit has saturated the market with no less than 27 small cars, 12 of them hitting the showrooms within the past two years.

As a result, big-car sales are showing greater sales increases than little cars. The small-car share of the total market during the first third of the 1976 model year declined, the first time that has happened in three years.

Small cars — which include compacts such as the Chevrolet Nova, sporty compacts such as the Ford Mustang, subcompacts such as the American Motors Gremlin and virtually all imports — have accounted for less than 48 per cent of the market so far this model year.

That's a sharp contrast from the previous three years, when small cars were increasing their share by leaps and bounds. From a 37 per cent share in 1972, small cars seized a 41 per cent share in 1973, a 46 per cent share in 1974 and a record 52 per cent share last year.

There's strong agreement that the small-car market has ended its meteoric growth phase and will show only a gradual rise in the near future, assuming no new disruptive crises.

Until 1960, Detroit didn't even bother to distinguish between small and large cars. There were regular cars and later there were mid-size cars, both of which grew ever larger over the years.

It wasn't until imports started to make sharp inroads here — taking 10 per cent of the market in 1969 — that Detroit's makers took notice of a growing demand for smaller cars.

The domestic response in 1960 was the compact, and it proved a successful weapon against the imports, which were held to less than a 10 per cent share for the next eight years.

In the interim, Ford introduced the Mustang as a late 1964 model. It became an instant hit, logging sales of 418,000 in its first year and surpassing the one million mark within two years to become the alltime best-selling new car. Suddenly the sporty-small market was born.

Throughout the 1960s, consumer demand for even smaller cars continued unabated. Economic affluence led to a boom in two-car families, the second usually a small model. At the same time, the huge World War II baby population had become old enough to drive and developed into an equally huge market of young people looking for either simple and cheap or sporty and cheap transportation.

The imports capitalized on that trend, too, increasing their share of the market in 1970 to a then record 15 per cent. Again Detroit responded, this time with the subcompact.

Even with the proliferation of small cars — which continued this decade with the debut of more mini imports and the mini Chevrolet Chevette — the small car market share fluctuated between 20 and 30 per cent throughout the 1960s.

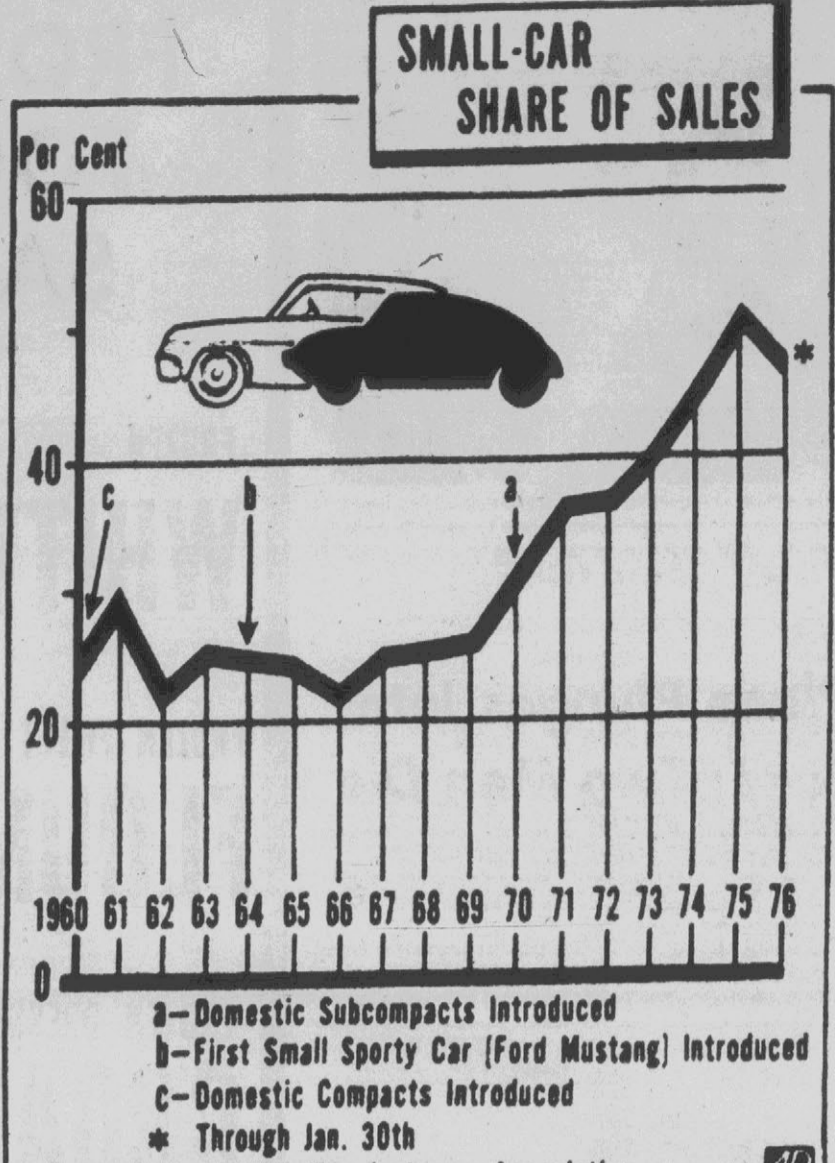

During the early 1970s, Detroit's auto makers were predicting a continued but slow growth in small cars. But they did not anticipate the oil embargo. Thus, they began a multibillion dollar plant conversion effort — the greatest since the industry switched from cars to tanks during World War II—to increase small car output.

By mid-1974, the industry, previously devoted only about a quarter of its plant capacity to small cars, had increased its small-car output capability to between 40 and better than 50 per cent.

The industry was convinced it made the right move. It was selling every small car it could make, even with greater competition from imports, and some officials were predicting the small car share would soon top 60 per cent.

Now those same plants, which were working at full steam while big-car plants were sitting idle, are going down. The big-car plants, meanwhile, are getting busier, as Detroit keeps increasing its production schedules for those models.

N.C. Traffic Kills Eleven

Eleven persons died in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, including three men from Sylva whose car plunged into the Tuckasegee River.

The toll for the year rose to 181, but was 19 fewer than on March 1 a year ago.

The three who drowned were Wayne Hutchins, 25; Gene Hoyle, 20, and Wilfred Ledford Jr.

Killed when cars overturned were Russell Malcolm Christmas, 29, of Greenville; Willie E. Hunt, 27, of Red Springs, and Curry Lee Forston, 26, of China Grove.

Victims of other accidents were 5-year-old Billy Chavis of Little Rock, S.C., struck by a car near Pembroke; Cuthbert Hartley Taylor of Interlachen, Fla., and Burnsville, N.C.; Mary Ellen Broach, 21, of Solomons, Md., whose car hit a tree in Sanford; and Louis Thomas, 67, of Reidsville, whose car hit a block building; and Virginia Ann Kellam, 27, of Reidsville, who was riding on a motorcycle that collided with another vehicle.

Farm Scene

By MICHAEL E. REGANS,
Asst. Agri. Exten. Agent

Internal parasites cost North Carolina pork producers approximately $1.00 per hog marketed. The most common parasites in swine are roundworms, nodular worms, whipworms, and strongyloides. Symptoms which may be caused by internal parasites include diarrhea, poor growth, coughing and rough hair coat.

A fecal examination will determine if parasites are present. It will also indicate the level of infestation and the type of parasite present. Some drugs are more effective against a specific parasite than others so select a drug that will be most effective in controlling parasites on your farm. Piperazine is effective against roundworms, while Atgard and Tramisol are effective against both roundworms and nodular worms. Atgard and Tramisol will also remove whipworms and strongyloides. For strongyloides, Thibenzole is very effective as is Tramisol for lungworms.

Gilts and sows should be wormed 5-10 days before breeding and 5-10 days before farrowing. Pigs can be wormed at 5-6 weeks of age and again 30 days later.

To prevent a parasite problem, avoid low, wet, wooded areas and use well drained lots, temporary pasture, or concrete confinement.

External parasites such as lice and mange mites are also a problem. Hogs infested with lice become restless and are constantly scratching and rubbing due to the irritation caused by lice puncturing the skin. The hogs eat less feed thus failing to gain weight. There is also a decrease in vitality and resistance to disease. Swine pox is transmitted by lice.

To eliminate lice, apply an approved insecticide with a pressure sprayer. All body surfaces, including the inside of the ears, should be thoroughly covered. With the exception of nursing pigs, all animals in the herds, including boars, should be treated. Complete elimination of lice on the farm is possible if two or more treatments are spaced two weeks apart. This breaks the life cycle of the lice as adults and eggs are destroyed.

Mange is caused by mites which burrow under the hog's skin. Infected hogs scratch and rub causing skin around eyes, ears, and top of neck to become raw and cracked. Mange spreads rapidly from hog to hog and should be treated as soon as it is observed. The treatment for lice is also effective against mange mites. Prevention is less costly to the producer than treatment, and profitable hog production depends largely on keeping hogs healthy and free of parasites.

bared his gums. At one point he opened his mouth wide in an exuberant laughter-like gesture.

Oliver made no sound although he is said to be capable of a warbling like noise from the throat which occasionally becomes a scream.

News reporters were required to sign waivers of any claims for injury should Oliver turn unkindly during the course of the interview. But he comported himself in gentlemanly fashion throughout.

Miller claims Oliver, at only 125 pounds, is stronger than a normal chimp. And the mustached, bespectacled owner makes much of the fact that Oliver stands erect.

Italy Opens Exchange As Test Of Lira

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Italy reopened its official foreign exchange markets today after a 40-day shutdown and the lira slipped further in what may prove a crucial economic test for Premier Aldo Moro's 19-day-old minority government.

Trading was quiet as the lira was quoted at about 778-779 to the dollar, a weakening from Friday's late quote of 770-771 to the dollar.

How the lira holds in official trading is expected to be a barometer of the durability of Moro's government. Italy's 34th since World War II.

The lira already has lost 12 per cent since the Bank of Italy stopped its support of the currency Jan. 21. The lira now has one third the buying power it had three years ago.

In the last 40 days, however, Italy hiked its reserves from $600 million to about $2 billion through a $750 million loan from the New York Federal Reserve and $500 million from West Germany's state bank.

Treasury Ministry sources say the central bank will intervene in favor of the lira if its tailspin continues, but its support will be "flexible" and nowhere close to the degree the bank resorted to in January, at times selling dollars at a rate of over 100 million a day.

This may also be one of Italy's last chances to recover the faith of its creditors. Treasury Minister Emilio Colombo has acknowledged that the nation's international debts amount to about $14 billion, with no immediate means to repay them and the bulk of new loans going to cover old ones.

Moro finds his administration too weak to resort to any major economic recovery program. Although his government obtained votes of confidence from both the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, they were gotten through the benevolent abstention of the Socialist, Republican and Liberal parties, which can bring down the government almost at will in substantive issues in Parliament.

If the lira falls, political observers feel Moro's government will be only a transitional one, kept in office mainly to see Italy through the congress of both the Socialist and the Christian Democratic parties this month.

The main theme in both gatherings is expected to be what is called "the Communist question." The Socialists, once allied with the Christian Democrats in center-left governments, have shifted to all-left alliances with the Communists in governing such major cities as Turin, Naples, Florence, Milan, Venice and Genoa.

The Christian Democrats, still dominant and backed by the Roman Catholic Church, have been dead set against Communist calls for a "historic compromise" between socialism and Catholicism and a grand alliance of the two largest parties.

Italy's Communists got 33 per cent of the votes in the last elections, two percentage points less than the Christian Democrats. Courting more votes, Communist party chief Enrico Berlinguer has pledged to seek power only through parliamentary means and follow a line independent of Moscow.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

Saturday night, those who went to Minges Coliseum to see the first round Southern Conference Tournament game between Appalachian State and East Carolina University saw something that was close to being unique.

Appalachian went through the entire game and committed only four fouls — at least that was all officials Dick Cook and Tom Fraim saw and called. It was enough to be the cause of Appalachian winning the game, 79-72.

East Carolina outthit the Mountaineers by 10 points from the floor, but Appalachian made up for it by scoring 17 free throws. East Carolina not only didn't score from the line — they never had a chance to do so.

Coach Dave Patton said he could not ever remember a similar situation. In 20 years of covering basketball, we cannot recall one like it.

A check of the Southern Conference record book and the Atlantic Coast Conference reveal that at no time in recent history (since realignment, anyway) has a team ever failed to have an opportunity to score from the line. In each league, the record would seem to be one — and in both cases, the games would also appear to be the slowdown type, where little action took place. Both, too, were in favor of the home team.

Such was not the case Saturday night. Most of the time, Appalachian either was in a zone defense or a combination type, using some zone and some man-to-man. Even so, only two of the four fouls called were defensive ones. In fact, neither of the two called in the second half were defensive — both were player-control.

Appalachian State was aggressive on the boards and in getting after the Pirates, several times pressing full court. We do not believe that there was any way only four fouls were committed by ASU. We do not argue that East Carolina did not commit fouls — of course they did, and some of these, naturally, are the type that could have gone either way.

They went one way, however — all night long. The shooting percentages were the same; the rebounding was not far enough apart (just three) to make a difference; and turnovers were in the Pirates's favor, and could in no way have helped ASU.

So it all went down to the free throw shooting. And when you never get to the line, you have to wonder.

There have been some observers who have said that the officiating took a turn for the worse, as far as East Carolina was concerned, after the proposed withdrawal from the league by the university was made public. We haven't seen all of the games, so we cannot comment on that.

But we can say that in those games we have seen this year, there was certainly no home court advantage as there has been in years past—at least not at Minges.

We do not feel that East Carolina is that bad a team. They had their problems, but Saturday night, they never had a chance.

Now the work begins to find out what can be done for next year. The Bucs lose only two players, Earl Garner and Al Edwards. They have a wealth of talent coming back. If Wade Henkel continues the improvement he showed this year, he'll be among the top players in the conference, while Louis Crosby should be among the best guards. Larry Hunt has a shot at the ECU rebounding record, while Reggie Lee is aiming for the 1,000 point club.

The right recruits could mean a great deal. But we feel that the chief problem is for those returning players to sit down and get things right between them, and to play more as a unit next year.

Kupchak Is Voted Player Of The Year

MITCH KUPCHAK, North Carolina's 6-10 center, was voted basketball Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference. (AP Wirephoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Mitch Kupchak, whose scoring and rebounding were big factors in North Carolina's 24-2 regular season record, has been voted basketball player of the year in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The 6-10 senior was named on 74 of the record 156 ballots of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association. As player of the year, he wins the annual Flucie Stewart Award.

Kenny Carr, 6-7 North Carolina State sophomore, was the choice of 50 voters. He led the conference in scoring and was one of the top rebounders.

Phil Ford, backcourt teammate of Kupchak, was third with 21 votes. Others receiving votes were John Lucas of Maryland, Tate Armstrong of Duke and Wally Walker of Virginia.

Kupchak was a dominating figure as North Carolina finished first in the regular season standings of the ACC. It earned the Tar Heels a first round bye in the championship tournament that starts Thursday in Landover, Md.

Kupchak and Carr lacked only one vote each of being unanimous selections on the all-conference team announced earlier. Ford, Lucas and Armstrong also were named to the team.

Of the players on the second team, Walker made the strongest bid for the starting five. He is joined by Skip Brown, Wake Forest backcourt act; Walter Davis of North Carolina; Wayne (Tree) Rollins, Clemson's 7-1 center, and Rod Griffin, 6-6 Wake Forest forward. Ford, leading scorer for the Tar Heels, was the outstanding player in last season's ACC tournament when he was only a freshman. He has been the key man in the four-corner delay offense that has worked so well for the Tar Heels.

Lucas has been outstanding at Maryland for four seasons. He is regarded by some talent scouts as the best backcourt players among the college seniors.

Armstrong scored a career high 42 points last week in Duke's 90-89 loss to Clemson.

In determining the teams, two points were given for a first-team vote and one point for a second-team ballot.

Deacs Provide ACC Tournament Preview With Win Over State

By The Associated Press
Rod Griffin of Wake Forest gave a preview of the Atlantic Coast Conference championship tournament when he said through the pain of a dislocated finger, "This team is back where it was at the start of the season. We're hell bent on winning."

He spoke after the Deacons, who had won their first 10 games and then slumped, beat North Carolina State 98-96 Saturday to finish at 5-7 in the league and 17-9 in all games. Griffin disclosed the little finger on his right hand with 14 minutes left in the game. But he continued playing and finished with 24 points.

Clemson also finished with a 5-7 conference mark and won fourth place in a drawing. However, that meant little because Clemson and Wake Forest will play each other at 5 p.m. Thursday in the final game of the first round of the tournament at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Clemson defeated Florida Southern 122-79 Saturday. In the opening game of the tournament at 1 p.m., Maryland, the No. 2 seed, will play No. 7, Duke.

N.C. State, No. 3, will play Virginia, No. 6, at 3 p.m.

Maryland and N.C. State each finished at 7-5 in the league. But the Terps were seeded second because they had beaten the Wolfpack twice in the regular season, each time by 18 points. Maryland closed the regular season with an 81-73 victory over Virginia Saturday.

North Carolina, the defending champion, won the regular season title on an 11-1 conference mark after beating Duke 91-71 Saturday. The Tar Heels have a first-round bye. Even if they lose in the tournament they are likely to get a bid to the NCAA tournament on the basis of their 24-2 regular-season record. The tournament winner—except Clemson—will enter the first round of the NCAA Eastern Regionals at Charlotte on Saturday, March 13. Clemson is in the first year of a three-year probation for recruiting violations and is not eligible for the NCAA tournament.

There will be two games in the first round at Charlotte. They will bring together the ACC and the Southern Conference champions against two at-large teams. The rest of the Eastern Regionals will be at Greensboro on March 18th and 20th, with the 19th an open date. The last two rounds of the NCAA will be March 27th and 29th in Philadelphia.

The first-round games at Landover will not be televised. But the semifinals at 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and the final at 8 p.m. Saturday will be televised regionally.

Crown Won By Quakers

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Guilford Quakers captured the Carolina Conference basketball championship Saturday night, defeating Catawba, 89-74. Guilford's Ray Branch scored 10 points while teammate Sam Kennedy hit for 15. Eric Harris led Catawba with 23 points and Henry Boyd added 21.

Branch also grabbed a game-high 13 rebounds and joined teammates Billy Highsmith and Kennedy on the all-tournament squad. Others on the squad are Jimmy Graves of Mars Hill and Harris.

Guilford led the game all the way, as they were able to hold Catawba scoreless for about the first five minutes.

The Quakers outshot the Indians from the floor by 51 to 37 per cent.

The game boosted Guilford to a 19-5 overall record and a 10-2 conference mark to lead the league. Catawba suffered its first loss in 16 outings to drop its record to 21-9.

Guilford meets Winston-Salem State Tuesday night in the NAIA District 26 playoffs. Catawba hosts Gardner Webb in the playoffs with the winners of the two games meeting at a neutral site Wednesday night to decide the district title.

Celtics Keep Pressure On

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
The Boston Celtics have served notice that they're going to be a force to be reckoned with in next month's National Basketball Association playoffs — as if there were ever any doubters.

The Celtics, running their fast break to perfection, exploded from the starting gate with 41 points in the first quarter and embarrassed the NBA champion Golden State Warriors 119-101 Sunday before a sellout throng at the Boston Garden and a national television audience.

The final margin was 18 points, but it wasn't even that close.

"We felt like we had to play them well to even the series between us," said Charlie Scott, who got the Celtics going with five baskets in the first 4½ minutes. The Celtics and Warriors, runaway leaders in their respective conferences, have split four meetings this season — and won't collide again until a possible match-up in the playoff finals.

"We were thoroughly beaten," said Warriors Coach Al Attles. "They got 41 points in the first period and we had to play catch up. That first period really did it to us."

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, it was Philadelphia 130, Seattle 115; Washington 110, Houston 108; Phoenix 109, Detroit 98; Los Angeles 108, Cleveland 97, and Portland 102, Atlanta 98.

Florida Kept Track Title

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Florida retained its Southeastern Conference track championship with Horace Truitt running a record 600 yards, finishing second in the half-mile, and running legs of two relays.

The rangy Florida sprinter ran the 600 in 1:09.4, cutting three-thirds of a second off the record set in 1974 by Darwin Bond of Tennessee.

Truitt also anchored the two-mile relay, which set a 7:39.2 record, and ran a section of the third-place mile relay.

Truitt was the meet's leading scorer, followed by Alabama's Steve Bolt who set records in the two-mile and the one-mile runs.

Bolt ran the two-mile in 8:41 Friday night, then came back Saturday with a 3:59.4 in the mile. It was his first mile run in less than four minutes in Louisiana and shattered the 4:03 mark set in 1973 by Tennessee's Dan Zoeller.

Mark Branch of Tennessee soared 7-2 in the high jump to break the old SEC indoor mark of 7:0¼ set last year by Les Whitehead of Mississippi State.

And Auburn's Harvey Glance tied the .06 record in the 60-yard dash. The mark was set in 1973 by Thomas Whatley of Alabama and tied last year by Clifford Outley of Auburn.

Florida finished Saturday night with 60 points, Tennessee had 40, Auburn 31, Alabama and Mississippi State 28, LSU 23, Kentucky 22, and Georgia 8. Ole Miss did not enter a team.

Eight Racers Involved In Carolina 500 Smash-Up

ALLISON'S ROLLED UP RACER — Stock car race driver Bobby Allison, of Huetown, Ala., emerged from this rolled up Mercury stock car racer Sunday with some facial lacerations. Allison and seven other cars tangled on the back stretch of the North Carolina Motor Speedway during the running of the Carolina 500. (AP Wirephoto)

By RICHARD WATERS
Associated Press Writer
ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — "For a minute it was pure hell on the backstretch," said Richard Childress, one of eight drivers involved in a massive wreck that marred the 11th annual Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race.

Richard Petty won the 500-mile event that left Bobby Allison hospitalized and two other drivers, Childress and Bruce Hill, slightly injured.

Allison, whose Mercury tumbled end-over-end down the back straightaway hitting at least two cars and spewing parts into the paths of others, was reported in satisfactory condition Sunday at Moore County Memorial Hospital in Southern Pines.

three — Childress, Allison and Hill. It occurred on lap 373 of the 494-lap event over the 1.017 mile North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Petty was about 50 yards ahead of the wreck and saw it through his rearview mirror.

"I saw a car airborne and then a bunch of them spinning," said Petty, who finished two laps ahead of the Chevrolet of Darrell Waltrip.

"Darrell and myself were the only ones that got through."

Allison was running second at the time when his car collided with Cale Yarborough, whose Chevrolet was running third. Yarborough managed to recover under the fifth caution flag and finish in the same lap with Waltrip.

Buddy Baker's Ford was fourth, five laps down, and Benny Parsons' was fifth, a distant 14 laps behind. Parsons' Chevrolet was also hit on the hood by Allison's car, but his crew was able to patch it up and keep it running until the end of the race.

"I was right behind the accident," said Parsons. "It looked like Cale caught the rear end of Allison's car and all of a sudden it became a big cloud of smoke and dust. I looked up and here came Allison's car through the air."

Allison's Roger Penske-prepared vehicle was so badly damaged it took two wreckers to tow it off the track. It looked like a skeleton.

Petty, who led five times for a total of 362 laps, collected $19,915 of the $130,735 purse. Waltrip got $14,055.

The race took a large number of casualties — 17 out of the 36-car field including pole-sitter Dave Marcis, U.S. Auto Club star A.J. Foyt, David Pearson and Lennie Pond.

Foyt left on the 57th circuit with a leaking rear-end seal in his Chevrolet. Pearson parked his Mercury on lap 186 after he lost his oil pressure. Marcis was forced out on the 263rd lap by engine failure, and Pond's Chevrolet was a victim of over heating.

Allison led twice for 72 laps before he went out, and Pearson also led twice for 28 laps.

Bobby Isaac, Grant Adcox, Coo Coo Marlin, Ed Negre and J.D. McDuffie completed the top 10 finishers.

The Huetown, Ala., driver suffered chest injuries but no broken bones, according to Dr. Eric Larsen.

Allison is scheduled to start from the pole in next Sunday's Richmond, 400. The Virginia race was postponed by rain.

From his hospital bed, Allison said in a telephone interview that his eyes were bandaged because dirt had been in them.

He said he thought the tumbling of his car was fortunate. Otherwise, he said, he probably would have been hit in the side.

Allison's car hit Childress' car.

"All of a sudden I saw Bobby Allison's Mercury flying through the air, coming right at me," said Childress.

"I caught the full impact of his car right on the hood of my car."

The wreck involved seven of the 10 leaders and disabled

Connors' Breeze

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Poor Manuel Orantes: he'll probably cry all the way to the bank.

He was humiliated in straight sets Saturday by powerful Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-1, 6-0 in a $250,000 tennis challenge match.

Connors pushed his earnings in four tennis challenges to $600,000 and for Orantes there was no purse money — but wait until the ancillary benefits are counted up.

Promoter Bill Riordan found six foreign countries interested enough to pick up television coverage of the match and when revenues from that are counted up along with other promotional items, Orantes is expected to share in a pot exceeding $200,000.

"I was embarrassed that I didn't play very well, but those things happen," said Orantes, dismissing his loss to Connors with a smile on his face.

For Connors, it was a day to breeze along. Everything he hit seemed to confuse Orantes, the man who upset him last year at Forest Hills in the U.S. Open.

"That's the way I would like to play forever," said Connors, 23. "I tried to hit hard shots and beat shots and take the net away."

That he did, and everything else he wanted during the 1½ hours of tennis that had a below-capacity audience squirming in their seats.

Connors broke Orantes' service in the very first game of the match and things got progressively worse. Orantes won only three of the 21 games, never coming close to breaking Connors' serve.

It was too much speed and power for Orantes, who beat Connors on the slower clay courts in the U.S. Open.

"It wasn't too fast, but I couldn't move as well," said Orantes. "I never put any pressure on him all day."

It was the 10th time the two had met, and the ninth win for Connors.

Next on the challenge circuit, being promoted as heavyweight tennis "bouts" by CBS-TV and Caesars Palace, could be a match between Connors and his arch rival Arthur Ashe.

Baseball Spring Training Time And Still Bargaining

By JOHN R. SKINNER
AP Sports Writer
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Baseball marked its traditional opening of spring training today with owners and players sitting around a bargaining table here and all but one training camp completely closed.

Major league hierarchy agreed to keep camps closed while negotiations are under way with the players association on the reserve clause, which binds players to teams for life unless traded, sold or released.

Only Bill Veeck has opposed the plan to keep camps closed, opening his Chicago White Sox camp in Sarasota to 25 non-roster players.

"This is as far as I can go,"

Veeck said Sunday night. "To do anything else would be subjected to who knows what unknown terrors."

Veeck, who got permission from fellow owners to buy the White Sox late last year, figures his move will give him an edge on other clubs.

"Of the 25 players, 10 had been invited to our regular camp," he said. "We felt those 10 had at least an outside chance of making our club or we wouldn't have invited them."

"If this thing is settled in a few days... then we will be able to put a team on the field to play scheduled exhibition games without risking starting fellows too early and the risk of injury."

He has created furor among fellow executives, such as Minnesota's Clark Griffith who called the action "stupid... very narrow-minded... self-serving."

But Veeck said, "I couldn't care less. How can you damage it (relationship with other owners)? Obviously, it was not very good to start with. It took two or three votes to get ownership."

"They say they want unity and to do what they want," he added. "I want unity too, but why not do what I want? If everybody started training, we'd have unity. What's the difference?"

Veeck is not a member of the owners' Players Relations Committee holding its 23rd session with players' representatives here, and, he admitted, "not privy to what they're doing."

What they're doing is the same thing they've already done in Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. The last session, in New York Friday, resulted in a cautious appraisal by both sides on the progress made toward a compromise solution on the reserve rules.

The owners apparently are waiting for a three-judge federal court panel to decide on their appeal of arbitrator Peter Seitz' December ruling, which was upheld by a federal court in Kansas City.

Seitz said the renewal clause, part of all players' 1976 individual contracts and the expired general labor pact, allows a player to become a free agent one year after he fulfills his contractual commitments.

Third TPC Championship Is Like Replay Of 1974's Event

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — It looks like a replay.

"I think we're lost in a time machine," one tour official said.

The third Tournament Players Golf Championship appears to be a duplicate of the first one.

J.C. Snead and Jack Nicklaus are fighting for the title — just as they did in 1974. There's been rain, storms and muggy heat — just as there was in 1974. And, just as in 1974, the championship of the touring players is ending a day late.

But there are differences. In Atlanta in 1974, the rangy

Snead ranked among the game's long hitters. Now, suddenly, mysteriously, he's lost 40 yards off the tee.

"I don't know what the trouble is," he said, a puzzled look on his face. "If I knew, I'd correct it."

"But I'm hitting my irons the best of my life. If I can just get it someplace that I can put some iron on it, I'll be okay."

He hit irons six feet or closer to the cup on six holes Sunday on his way to a 68 that gave him a share of the top spot with Nicklaus at 204, 12 under par on the 7,128-yard Inverrary Country Club course, a layout still partially flooded from the rains and storms that washed out Saturday's play.

Nicklaus, who beat Snead in that 1974 showdown for the title in this ambitious event, pulled his game together just at the close of Sunday's action and salvaged a 68 with some brilliant putting.

"I wasn't as sharp as I could be," admitted Nicklaus, who has had his problems in late rounds this season, "but somehow I managed to get it in the hole when I needed to."

His 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th gave him a share of the top spot, just one stroke in front of a couple of tour newcomers, Roger Maltbie and Mark Hayes, tied at 205. Maltbie, the 1975 rookie of the year, shot a blistering, seven-under-par 65 and the 26-year-old Hayes had a 67.

British Open champion Tom Watson was at 207 after a 70. Don January, the 46-year-old veteran who led at the end of two rounds, slipped to a 73 and a tie at 208 with Hale Irwin. Irwin shot a 70 despite a double bogey.

Lee Trevino had a 68—210. Arnold Palmer shot 68-213. Gary Player 71-214 and Johnny Miller 74-215.

NCAA Playoff Berths Await

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Indiana and Princeton have landed, UCLA, Arizona and Alabama are close, but just about everybody else is still up in the air in college basketball these days.

Those are the positions as the nation's best teams shoot for the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs.

With Indiana having won the Big Ten title last week, Princeton became the second team to secure an NCAA playoff berth by winning the Ivy League championship Saturday night with a 70-59 victory over Brown while Penn was losing 46-44 to Yale.

UCLA, meanwhile, clinched at least a tie for its 10th straight Pacific-8 Conference championship with a rousing 120-74 victory over Stanford. The Bruins could wrap up the title neatly this week by beating Southern Cal, even if runner-up Oregon State defeats Oregon.

Arizona, the pre-season favorite in the Western Athletic Conference, has clinched at least a tie for the championship. A victory in the finale next Saturday at home against Arizona State will give the Wildcats the title outright.

Alabama, a 93-90 double-overtime winner over Tennessee Saturday night, needs only one more victory to clinch a tie for the Southeastern Conference crown. Tennessee and Vanderbilt are barely in contention there since the Crimson Tide has a two-game lead in the loss column with three to play.

Here's the way the other conference races shape up:

—Mid-American Conference: Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio are tied for the lead with 13-1 records. They'll play Wednesday night at Miami. If Western Michigan wins, it's all over. Miami must beat Western Michigan, then defeat Eastern Michigan Saturday to clinch an NCAA berth.

—Missouri Valley: West Texas, 8-3, can clinch a tie by beating Southern Illinois, 8-2, Thursday in the Texans' final game. But Southern Illinois could still tie if it loses Thursday by beating New Mexico State on Saturday. Wichita State is a darkhorse and could throw it into a three-way deadlock with some help.

—Big Eight: Missouri and Kansas State are tied for the Big Eight lead with 10-2 records and each has two conference games left. They play each other Wednesday night.

—Southwestern Conference: Texas A&M has won the regular-season championship and is sitting out the SWC post-season tournament waiting to meet the winner for an NCAA playoff berth.

Veteran Hurler Signs Contract

CINCINNATI (AP) — Veteran left-hander Fred Norman, coming off his career-best record, has become the 24th member of the world champion Cincinnati Reds to sign his 1976 contract, a club spokesman said Sunday.

Norman, 33, was 12-4 last season and had a 3.73 earned run average.

He helped the Reds sweep the National League playoffs against Pittsburgh in three straight by winning the second game 6-1 as the Reds romped for a record seven stolen bases.

Father, Son Serve Same Court

By DAVE CLEMENS
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah 3rd District Court Judge Stewart M. Hanson Sr. looks across the desk at his fellow district judge and says of him: "He was so good as a kid, although I might have gotten on him sometimes for not cleaning up the horse manure."

The other judge, Stewart M. Hanson Jr., admits he did more riding of his father's horses on their Southern Utah ranch than he did sweeping stables.

The Hansons believe they may be the only father-son judges sitting on the same court in the United States. Hanson Sr. says a check of the Martindale-Hubbell law direct-ry did not turn up any like combinations.

The father, a solidly built, gray-haired man of medium height, is the senior judge of the 10-man 3rd District bench. The district takes in some 500,000 Utahns in Salt Lake, Tooele and Summit counties. Appointed in 1956 by former Republican Gov. J. Bracken Lee, he's now 65 and five years from mandatory retirement.

Hanson Jr., one of the elder judge's two sons, was appointed last October by Democratic Gov. Calvin L. Rampton at the age of 37. While Lee chose the elder Hanson directly, a Utah State Bar committee of attorneys, acting under a new procedure, nominated Hanson Jr.

and two others before he was chosen by Rampton to replace Judge Joseph Jeppson, who retired.

The younger Hanson stands well over six feet and wears a thick reddish-gold mustache with his modishly cut blond hair. He's the district's presiding judge until June under an alphabetical rotation that will change to an elective system at the end of his term.

Hanson Jr. — "Mick" to his father — stops by Hanson Sr.'s chambers at the city's Metropolitan Hall of Justice each morning about 7:30 for a short session of shoptalk before Hanson Jr. leaves for his courtroom in the Salt Lake City-County building across the street.

Hanson Sr., who is divorced, says he arrives for work just after 6 a.m., but his son — married and with three daughters — admits that starting time is a little early for him.

The judges were interviewed during their morning get-together.

While they have some similarities, father and son differ on more than the hours at which they arrive at work.

Hanson Sr., a Republican, calls himself a "conservative liberal."

He says he's strict in some matters — "The defendant who'll have the hardest time with me is a drunk with a gun" — and castigated the University of Utah College of Law for teaching "damned radicalism."

But he says he's liberal on some legal questions.

"For example, in this state, divorce law says that you must wait 90 days after a complaint is filed before it can be heard, although the 90 days can be waived if one of the parties can show good cause," Hanson Sr.

explained. "For me, it's good cause if they don't want to live together any more."

The elder judge has some firm viewpoints on women lawyers.

"With so many of them, it's 'I'm a woman and I should be first,'" he said. "They stamp their feet and so forth. I'd rather have male attorneys in my courtroom."

Hanson Jr., a Democrat, maintained: "It's exciting that women can be competitive in law and other professions and still be feminine."

He also said in the legal sense, "I think in terms of precedent. It gives members of society some sense of what they can and cannot do. In that sense I'm very conservative."

The judges also differ in their modes of recreation. Hanson Sr., who liked to fish and hunt ducks, now has no major hobby outside his work, his son says.

Hanson Jr. says he liked to ski as a lawyer, and now exercises by playing tennis with his wife.

Despite some differences of age and attitude, the two men say they influence one another.

"He's just out of law school and knows some things I don't, particularly about things like the new commercial code," Hanson Sr. said of his son.

Hanson Jr. praises his father's "very practical approach to the problems we deal with."

"He has phenomenal memory," Hanson Jr. said of his father's ability to quote sections of state and federal law.

Both Hansons said problems of mistaken identity have been minimal, although they acknowledged they sometimes got one another's mail. Clerks answer the telephone in their chambers with "Judge Hanson Sr.'s court," or similarly for the younger judge, to avoid mixups.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J982 ♥73 ♦AK87 ♣652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♥ 1 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—It is a choice between a raise to two no trump and a cue-bid of two hearts, probing for a possible 4-4 spade fit. We prefer the no trump raise. If you cue-bid and partner does not have four spades, you will not know whether to pass or raise his two no trump bid to three. Since partner could have doubled had he held a good spade suit, the no trump raise is more descriptive.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♥AKQ54 ♦AJ104 ♣965
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Two diamonds. It is incorrect to rebid your hearts to show that you have a good five-card suit. One of the attractions of your hand is its distributional feature, and you can show that best by bidding your second suit. A bid of two diamonds now strongly suggests that you hold a five-card heart suit.

♠10762 ♥A10 ♦AJ1062 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. Your bid of two diamonds has crowded the auction, and partner might have been forced to rebid a shabby suit. Also, he might have four spades but could not show them because he was not strong enough to "reverse." You should get a better idea of his holding from his next rebid.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J10762 ♥KQ ♦AQ876 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North East
Pass 1 ♥ Dbl. Rdb. 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?

A.—Generally, partner's redouble asks that you allow him the courtesy of the road—he might want to double the opponents. With your holding, however, you are not particularly interested in hearing partner double two clubs—your hand is more suited to offense than defense. We suggest you alert partner to this by bidding two diamonds.

♠AQ8 ♥K92 ♦AKJ1062 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♠ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Surely you want to commit this hand to game even if partner is minimum for his first response. Also, it looks as if your best contract could be three no trump if partner has something in clubs. The way to find out more about his hand is to cue-bid two spades—a jump to three diamonds does not come close to doing justice to your hand.

Unions Are Becoming More Involved In U.S.

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eight years ago, before Hubert H. Humphrey had even declared his presidential candidacy, George Meany called reporters in and announced that the Minnesota Democrat had the endorsement of the AFL-CIO.

Meany's political blessing, bestowed without the formality of a poll of individual unions within the giant labor federation, was regarded as big medicine for a candidate in those days.

In fact, organized labor is credited in some quarters with pulling Humphrey almost to victory over Richard M. Nixon in 1968.

Neither Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, nor his vaunted Committee on Political Education plans to be active in pre-nomination presidential politics this year. However, individual unions are getting into the game and their influence could be considerable, especially in the scramble for the Democrat-

Caucuses Beclouded Politics And Elections

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Political Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina's Democratic chairman says his party's caucuses proved very little as far as Southern sentiment for presidential candidates George C. Wallace and Jimmy Carter is concerned—and nothing on the national political level.

"I don't see how anyone can claim a clear cut victory or how the results in South Carolina could have any effect on other states," Donald L. Fowler declared after the precinct meetings Saturday.

However, Wallace got more grassroots delegates than Carter to the county conventions one week from today, although both of the Southern Democratic presidential candidates lost out to the uncommitted slate.

Returns from the precinct caucuses, if projected through the state Democratic convention on March 30, would show 14 or 15 of the state's 31 delegates going uncommitted for any presidential candidate.

Wallace, governor of Alabama, would have about nine and former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter would have about seven.

Wallace had 27.9 per cent of the incomplete total. Carter had 23.7 per cent and 46.8 per cent were uncommitted, with 88.3 per cent of the state's 1,644 precincts reported.

In delegate totals, Wallace had 3,505, Carter had 2,974 and 5,887½ were uncommitted.

None of the other Democratic presidential hopefuls made a sizeable showing.

Unions Are Becoming More Involved In U.S.

One union already involved is the 7.5 million-member National Education Association. Although not an AFL-CIO affiliate, NEA is part of an informal coalition of liberal-leaning labor unions which are playing an active role in both parties' selection of national convention delegates, and which intend to be in the thick of things after the conventions this summer.

NEA, which represents 1.7 million teachers and school administrators nationwide, is fairly new to politics but is compensating for its inexperience with enthusiasm and something else that candidates like most — cash.

Like other unions and corporations, forbidden by federal law to make direct contributions to candidates, the NEA is working through a "political action committee" whose operating expenses are underwritten by the union but whose funds come from voluntary contributions. Most of these are automatic "checkoffs" added to union dues by agreement of NEA members.

In 1972, NEA-PAC contributed $225,000 to 177 Senate and House candidates and endorsed, without contributions, 133 other congressional candidates in 44 states.

It claimed a success rate of 80 per cent, or 250 victories, better than any other labor or corporate political action committee. In addition, NEA says, its state and local subsidiaries contributed another $2.5 million to candidates at all levels.

Because NEA is a "white collar" union, it is not as firmly tied to the Democrats as some labor groups have been in the past. Its 1972 endorsements included about 30 Republican candidates, and it contributes to both the Republican and Democratic National Committees.

This year NEA-PAC expects to have $731,000 for politics, including $121,000 to help teacher delegates meet expenses at the national political conventions.

The union also expects to endorse a presidential candidate for the first time, but this will not be decided by NEA-PAC or its chief officers, president John Ryor or executive director Terry Herndon.

Instead, the question of endorsement will be decided in a mail referendum of the 10,000 delegates who will attend the NEA convention late in June. Because the union's national convention will be over before either party has nominated a candidate, the referendum ballots will go out late in August and the NEA endorsement, if any, will be announced in the second week of September.

The delegates won't be asked to vote cold. NEA-PAC already has begun talking to prospective candidates on issues of interest to teachers, and will have a series of video-taped interviews and printed articles on the candidates available to all members well in advance of the referendum.

In addition, presidential hopefuls will be invited to appear at the NEA convention in Miami Beach. This process will cost $264,000, all from union funds.

Herndon believes the teachers will endorse a presidential candidate, but that it probably won't be President Ford or Ronald Reagan because of their record on educational issues.

Thus far, NEA state and local units, encouraged by the national leadership, have concentrated on getting at least 300 teachers into the delegations attending both national conventions and aiding candidates of their choice in primaries and state conventions.

Plan To Fill Housing Need

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Housing shortages have forced many Czech families to cram three generations into a single housing unit, usually a not-too-large apartment in a prefabricated house. Now Prague architects are planning three-generation units which would fully respect the needs of all the generations, Czech youth daily Mlada Fronta reported recently. The pattern until now was that young married couples, unable to get an apartment immediately, stayed on with their parents, often even when children were born. None had privacy and stress situations developed, sometimes leading to divorces. When the young family was finally allocated a flat, new problems arose. Where grandparents were willing to give a helping hand to their employed daughter or daughter-in-law, and the young were willing to help their parents with heavier work such as window cleaning when they lived together, the trip to a new housing estate where the young family now lives made this mutual assistance impractical. The new idea is to build three-generation units. The unit designed for grandparents, though connected by a door with the flat of the children, would be self-contained and sound-proofed to ensure privacy. Yet the plan would foster mutual assistance, cutting down the need both for nursery schools and for old people's homes and creating a more favorable and stable climate for all family members.
