DIKING OPERATIONS— Heavy equipment moves earth along a dike holding back the swollen Sours River at Minot, North Dakota. Dike work is expected to be pressed for 24 hours a day for the next several days. More than 12,000 persons are being evacuated from the flood plains. (AP Wirephoto)

Dikes Raised, Evacuation Of Minot, N.D. Underway

By GARY W. CLARK
Associated Press Writer
MINOT, N.D. (AP) — The dust clouds billow high overhead as the dikes are raised. The evacuation has already begun. It's almost a spring ritual and most people here take it in stride as the Sours River threatens to flood Minot for the fourth time in seven years.

"You probably think we're all pretty stupid staying down here year after year," Jim Larson said as he packed his furniture into a truck. "But I was born and raised down here and once you've been living among the big trees and everything it's awfully hard to leave."

Minot is nestled between two hills and "down here" is the flood plain beside the river. There are 4,200 homes there, and officials said the people who live in them will have to evacuate by Thursday.

Eighty families were moved out this past weekend, although the National Weather Service said the river won't crest until next Sunday when it is expected to be about eight feet above flood stage.

"We're not trying to panic anybody," said Mayor Chester Reiten. "But when you have the chance of a dike breaking and having eight to 10 feet of water going over an area, you can see why we are concerned."

In the past, evacuation notices sometimes came only half a day before floodwaters poured into the city. This is the first time the flood warning has come so far in advance.

So a flood control headquarters has been set up and the time is being used to strengthen the earthen dikes on the river banks. Some of the dikes were 25 feet high Sunday and officials said they will go up another three or four feet.

As the dikes go up, the low-lying neighborhoods are under clouds of brown dust that leave cars, windows, houses and furniture caked with dirt. Heavy equipment is everywhere and furniture from many homes is being hauled to the Civic Auditorium for storage.

Despite the dikes, more than one-third of the city's 35,000 residents are making arrangements to live elsewhere until the river subsides. And a few of them said they are not coming back.

"This is it for me," said one resident. "I'm going to move uphill. I don't want to, but I'm going to. I can't take a big loss so I'll wait until the end of the summer when everybody has forgotten about it."

'Some Kind' Of Pay Raise For Teachers

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Jim Holshouser has told North Carolina teachers he thinks they'll get a pay raise next fiscal year along with other state employees, but the governor did not specify how much of a raise the teachers can expect.

"I believe I can say to you tonight that there will be some kind of salary increase for teachers and state employees next year," Holshouser told the North Carolina Association of Educators Saturday night. The Republican governor and Democratic legislative leaders have been talking in terms of 5 per cent pay hike while the teachers have called for a 16 per cent cost-of-living raise.

Before hearing from the governor the teachers had deleted a sick-in provision and then adopted a resolution empowering their board of directors to take whatever action it deems will be effective and appropriate to achieve a 16 per cent raise.

The resolution aroused some spirited debate before it was adopted by a 2-1 vote of the 2,500 delegates.

Holshouser told the NCAE delegates that a study published by a Raleigh newspaper recently showed that among 13 southeastern states, only teachers in Texas and Maryland are paid better than those in North Carolina.

Holshouser said the study "showed that this year's average teacher salary in North Carolina, slightly more than $11,000 a year, is several thousand dollars higher than the pay in most of the other southeastern states."

"We have worked hard together to build public confidence in our schools to its highest level in a long time," Holshouser said. He then warned the teachers that "if the day ever comes that our teachers seem to be concerned only with their own salaries, then all of that hard work and all of the progress we have made will be washed down the drain."

The governor said under his administration, "we have given North Carolina the greatest era of progress for public education that this state has ever known."

The teachers also decided to hold a rally in Raleigh May 1 to call attention to their cause. The rally will come two days before the legislature will meet in budget session.

Heading Stadium Drive

Tom Willis, Director of the Institute for Regional Development at East Carolina University, was named today to head up the campaign to raise funds for the enlargement of Ficken Stadium.

Roddy Jones, general chairman of the fund drive, made the appointment as his first move in the campaign.

Willis will take charge of the $2 to $2½ million fund-raising project, which is hoped to be completed by the end of 1976, with the construction of the 35,000 seat stadium finished by September 1977.

"It's a lot of money to raise," Willis commented on his appointment, "but when you think about what it will do for East Carolina, it becomes an insignificant amount. When you get a few people together with some $11 bills, and a few together with some $10 bills, it won't take long."

Willis said he expected to have an organization ready to conduct a nationwide campaign in about four to six weeks.

The stadium enlargement will involve completing the horseshoe with the current stands.

Taft Shuns Candidacy To Aid Hunt Campaign

Greenville attorney Tom Taft will become one of four field representatives in Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt's campaign for governor, rather than seek the Democratic nomination as Senator for the Pitt-Martin-Edgecombe-Halifax County Sixth District.

Taft, 30, had been expected to seek one of the two seats in the district now held by Vernon White of Winterville and Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids. But he indicated this morning that he has changed his mind, in favor of becoming a volunteer in Hunt's campaign for governor.

Taft worked on Hunt's staff for 2½ years as his legal counsel. Taft's responsibilities at that time dealt mainly with the State Senate, over which Hunt presided.

Taft explained that he helped various senators in the preparation of legislation; helped the lieutenant governor and other Senate members prepare strategies on certain packages of legislation; and kept Hunt informed on progress of various bills, such as the East Carolina University medical school legislation.

Taft said "I am going back on his (Hunt's) staff now on a volunteer basis," because "I have first hand knowledge of the kind of person that he is... and the high standards of personal conduct he is committed to."

Taft continued, "I feel like Hunt has the capacity to be one of the greatest governors North Carolina has ever seen."

"He understands the problems of the average North Carolinian, having come from a working background. And I'm particularly excited about his role as an advocate for agriculture if he is elected governor. It's been a long time," since we have had a governor who knew first hand the problems of agriculture and was committed to go to Washington (D.C.) in our support."

Taft said "an additional reason I am not running (for the Senate) this year is because of the high respect I have for the work Vernon White has done in the North Carolina Senate for this district."

Taft said "I observed him (White) for 2½ years in Raleigh, working in the State Senate, and have a respect for the hard work and skill that he has demonstrated on the issues important to Pitt County and this district."

Taft continued, "In addition to his intimate knowledge of agriculture, which this district needs in Raleigh, he (White) has shown great interest in the medical school and education in general."

As a field representative in Hunt's campaign, Taft said his responsibilities will cover 30 counties in the east. "It will put me in the role of consultant to the county chairmen and as a trouble shooter where problems arise, such as in the distribution of materials or other organizational problems."

Convention

The Pitt County Republican Party will hold its County Convention tonight at 7:30 in the Pitt County District Courtroom.

The purpose of the meeting will be to elect delegates to the District and State Conventions, which in turn will elect North Carolina's delegates to the Republican National Convention in Kansas City this August.

All registered Republicans are urged to attend.

Commuters To 'Frisco Facing A Bus Stoppage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bus drivers who haul commuters across the Golden Gate Bridge went on strike today, further complicating life in a city already hit by a walkout that has snarled public transportation.

Drivers employed by the Golden Gate Bridge District completed runs that began before midnight, but no runs began after midnight, terminals reported.

The new strike began as San Francisco supervisors prepared to consider a union request that Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery mediate talks in the 13-day strike of city craft workers.

City negotiator Patrick Mahler said the governing Board of Supervisors would consider the request at a meeting today.

The Golden Gate buses connect San Francisco to Marin and Sonoma counties. They carry 36,000 passengers — 9,200 of them commuters — on 248 buses every weekday. The District employs more than 300 drivers.

Officials expect the strike to add 7,000 cars to the Golden Gate bridge during rush hours, which have been commuters' nightmares since the city strike began. About 21,000 vehicles normally cross the span each day during rush hours.

An extra run was added to the district's cross-bay ferry in an attempt to relieve the congestion.

Members of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 122 decided to strike after rejecting a proposal which district officials said would hike average annual pay and benefits to drivers from about $26,000 to $28,500.

In San Francisco, meanwhile, leaders of 10 striking crafts unions sent Usery a telegram Sunday asking that he mediate negotiations in the city strike which has crippled all public transit and some other city services. Bargaining was called "hopelessly deadlocked."

New Welfare Families Smaller, But Costs Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average family that went on the nation's welfare rolls last year was smaller than in the past but the over-all welfare bill rose 21.4 per cent, the government says.

About 266,000 families with 479,000 members were added to the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program in 1975. That gave the program a total of nearly 3.5 million families and more than 11.3 million individuals.

The new welfare families averaged less than two recipients, while families that joined in the past averaged more than three, figures from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare indicated.

The over-all cost of the nation's welfare programs — AFDC, Medicaid and state and local relief — climbed 21.4 per cent last year to a record $24.8 billion, up from $20.4 billion in 1974. The cost is up more than 40 per cent from the $17.7 billion spent on welfare in 1973.

Medicaid, which provides health care for the poor, cost $13.9 billion and comprised more than 56 per cent of the welfare bill. It was up 23.7 per cent from 1974.

AFDC payments exceeded $9.2 billion, up 16.3 per cent. The average family received $220 per month in benefits, while the average individual got nearly $68. By comparison, they received $205 and $61 per month in 1974.

The general assistance programs, run by state and local governments without federal matching funds, grew by 27.8 per cent last year. They added 145,000 families for a total of 667,000 families with 965,000 recipients. Their cost rose 34 per cent to $1.5 billion.

The general assistance programs paid an average of $142 per family and $96 per recipient each month last year.

As unemployment soared in 1975, the number of jobless fathers heading families on welfare grew by 33.6 per cent. About 30,000 unemployed-father families joined AFDC rolls in 1975, HEW said. Overall, there were 120,000 such families in 28 states receiving benefits costing $43.9 million.

Mothers without husbands headed most families receiving AFDC.

The HEW issued the statistics for 1975 at a reporter's request. The department normally issues them in April, but sources said HEW did not plan to publicize them this year because of the political sensitivity of the welfare issue in an election year.

Russian Fashion Barriers Coming Down

By BARRY JAMES
MOSCOW (UPI) — Blue jeans in the West are a symbol of the restless, carefree young — the great levelers that make all men and women sartorially equal.

But in the Soviet Union a pair of blue "dzhinsy" is often prized as a status symbol by the few — and unavailable to the many. For years, it signaled someone if not Western in outlook at least having access to the forbidden fruits of capitalism.

Jeans and long hair used to be regularly assaulted in the press as being representative of capitalist decadence, but the ideological objections are fading.

The Soviet Union even makes its own jeans nowadays, although in insufficient quantity to satisfy demand.

But jeans are slowly becoming more generally available, thanks to imports from East European countries, and India.

Buyers prefer the imports because Soviet jeans look too much like jeans were originally supposed to look — like functional work pants. Two-tone, bell-bottomed Polish jeans are much more popular. An Indian brand called "vaquero," which has a made-in-America look, is very popular but hard to find.

The real thing from the United States still has definite snob value. A pair of authentic brass-riveted, leather-labeled denims from America is so sought after that people will pay up to 50 rubles ($65) on the black market for a San Francisco label rather than 12 rubles ($15.60) for a Bulgarian substitute in the Tsum Tsum department store.

Genuine Levis seem to be de rigueur among the sons and daughters of the ruling, military and police elite, whose fathers can travel abroad or have access to Western goods through special stores closed to the public. Jewish dissidents who get parcels from abroad also tend to sport them.

The West's tattered, frayed and patched jeans are seen here less frequently. Since dzhinsy are more expensive and hard to get, they tend to be worn more as an article of fashion than of protest.

Jeans suits are particularly prized, and are as likely to be the smartly pressed garb of a middle executive or scientist as the uniform of the wealthier college generation.

Dzhinsy are still a phenomenon of the big cities, where stores are better stocked than in the provinces.

Outside the major population centers, people must take what's available. The uniform for provincial Russians still seems to be black serge suits and plastic sandals for men and print dresses for women.

The fad of super-tight jeans may never catch on here, if only because Russians usually prefer comfort to fashion.

And though fashion barriers are coming down, there is still some residual official wariness about jeans and other western modes.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda last year warned its readers that bourgeois propaganda "under the slogan of 'modern style' tries to instill ways which are morally hostile to our socialist way of life." Jeans? It could have been.

But at the same time it said old people should not try to impose their habits "with regard to the fashion and appearance of our youth."

It told young people, on the other hand, not to impoverish themselves "by reducing all the problems of life to the question of your own appearance."

As an indication of the developing freedom in fashion, the young Communists newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda recently published letters from readers complaining about the shortages of fashionable clothing — and above all, jeans.

But the way the consumer goods industry works here, it could take years before supply catches up with demand, by which time jeans may be out of fashion anyway.

One young lady wrote to Komsomolskaya Pravda that "after seeing foreign films, we often discuss how people dress and come to the conclusion that we will never get clothes like that."

As fashionable clothes do become more generally available, one demeaning aspect of Soviet life appears to be on the wane — the practice of trying to buy clothes off the backs of tourists.

To anyone receiving an offer they can't refuse for their jeans — or anything else — the best word of advice is "don't." Soviet sources say secret police still make black market offers as a way of framing foreigners.

"Home Furnishings— Past and Present"

As a salute to spring a panorama of home furnishings will be presented on Tuesday, April 13, at 2:00 p.m. The program will be staged at the American Legion Building in Greenville and all interested persons are invited to attend free of charge. A slide presentation and actual furniture displays will be used to trace furniture trends from 1776 to 1976. Miss Charlotte Womble and Miss Wilma Scott, Home Furnishing Specialists with the Agricultural Extension Service from North Carolina State University will present the program.

Extension homemakers, who are hosting the meeting, will have several interesting quilts on exhibit. Other special displays will compliment the program by adding variety. If you are interested in a glimpse into the past history of furniture and furnishings you will want to take advantage of this special occasion.

"Somerset Place Tour"

A one day study tour, including a visit to historic Somerset Place, is scheduled for Saturday May 1. Somerset Place is a plantation home located in Pettigrew State Park where Washington and Tyrrell Counties meet. The history accompanying this plantation is colorful and the restoration being done by the State is interesting. The "Piazzas" with their southern exposure remind one of houses in the Charleston area and the canal running by the front door reminds one of the importance of water transportation in Colonial days. If interested in more information concerning this tour please call me at 758-1196.

"Treasure Trails" The national organization of Extension Homemakers has put together a book listing points of interest in every State in the Nation. This book includes maps and pertinent information which invite you to enjoy the beauty and heritage of our great country.

The aim of this publication is to help you travel through any state, finding points of interest to your own enjoyment and enlightenment. It does not intend to limit you to only the things in its pages, but to whet your appetite to further explore the treasured trails of our beautiful nation. More On Spouse's 'Surprise' Visit

DEAR ABBY—Your reply to that wife who "prettied herself up" and laid down on the sofa with nothing on because her husband called and said he was bringing her a surprise was silly!

Why shouldn't a man be furious with his wife for pulling such a stupid stunt?

Husbands often bring home unexpected company. To find his wife stretched out on the sofa without a stitch on when he opens the door accompanied by two business associates would embarrass any man with an ounce of brains.

In recent years it seems that more people are obsessed with the idea of parading around naked. I guess maybe they don't realize that most folks look a lot better with something on.

Sure, I think the husband should forgive her, but maybe he has taught her a good lesson for being so vain and self-centered.

I'll bet if the situation had been reversed, and the wife came home with two of her lady friends to find her husband stretched out on the sofa naked as a jaybird, that wife would have been furious.

PUZZLED AT YOUR ANSWER

DEAR PUZZLED: You could be right, but my mail has been running 50 to one in favor of the wife. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A wife wrote that her husband had called, saying he was bringing home a "surprise" for her and asking her to fix a pitcher of martinis. She thought it was the diamond earrings she had wanted for Christmas, so she prettied herself up and stretched out (sans clothes) on the sofa as a "surprise" for him.

Abby, that husband must be crazy! How lucky can a man be to come home with two business associates to a pitcher of cold martinis and a wife stretched out naked on the sofa! He must be the envy of his entire company. I can't understand why he should be upset with her. SHE should be upset with him for putting her in that embarrassing situation. That husband should hotfoot it to his local jeweler for those diamond earrings.

She gets my vote for being an ideal wife, and if you won't tell MY wife, I'll make her those earrings myself!

PENNSYLVANIA JEWELER

DEAR ABBY: I'm with you! That husband who came home to the wife who wanted to surprise him because he said he was bringing HER a surprise had no right to be furious with her.

He owes her not only the earrings, but also a matching necklace, finger rings and a Mediterranean cruise!

Antique Show Is Scheduled

NEW BERN — Antique lovers visiting here on April 23-24 for the Old Homes Tour will have an additional attraction in the form of a two-day antique show and sale.

Sponsored jointly by the New Bern Historical Society and the New Bern-Craven County Bicentennial Commission, the exhibition will feature collections by 25 antique dealers from North Carolina, Virginia, and Maryland.

The show, located in the Sudan Temple on East Front and Broad Streets, will be open from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

A display of Victorian toys will include two complete doll house room settings, doll dishes and other doll furniture. In this same group will be a miniature store, toy cannons, and early games. This selection is from Albert Potts of Jacksonville, who will also show early handmade fabrics and hand tools.

Another display will be a collection of chairs and a harp which once belonged to Marie Antoninette. Reginald Styers, A.S.I.D., of Kernersville, will show these and other 18th century antiques.

Dealers from the Greenville area are Jenny's Antiques and Susan Harvey.

NUTTY GROWTH

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — California's almond orchards have increased from 117,300 acres 10 years ago to more than 300,000 now, says Joseph C. Genske, an industry spokesman.

More than 230,000 acres currently are under cultivation. Another 74,000 acres are planted with nonbearing trees less than four years old.

Almonds are the number two tree crop in California, after oranges, Genske said. The state produces more almonds than any single country, sometimes as much as half the world's supply.

ECU Students Receive Awards

Approximately 95 women students at East Carolina University were recognized as Outstanding Women of 1976 at a special campus ceremony Thursday.

The awards were given in conjunction with ECU's annual Women's Awareness Week, April 4-10, and recognized outstanding women of various academic departments and in several athletic fields, as well as ECU's marshals and women nominees to this year's "Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Women's Awareness Week award recipients included students from 29 North Carolina counties, eight other states, the District of Columbia, the Republic of China and West Germany.

Among guests at the awards ceremony and a special reception were parents of award recipients and ECU administrative officials.

A special award and cash prize of $30 was given to sophomore Renate Weaver Thompson, daughter of Herta Weaver of Fayetteville, winner of a Women's Awareness Week Essay Contest sponsored by the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and the ECU Women's Residence Council.

Two honorable mention awards and cash prizes of $10 each were given to senior Anna Marie Finley of Brewyn, Pa., and freshman Linda Ann Kraus of Shippensburg, Pa.

Each contest entrant submitted an original essay on the topic, "How I feel the Feminist Movement in America Today Will Affect My Life."

Featured speaker at the awards ceremony was Dr. Sandra Thomas, vice president of student affairs at Meredith College, whose topic was "Beyond the Bicentennial."

Dr. Thomas, a U. S. delegate to the International Women's Year Conference in Mexico City last year, is a recognized authority on the status of women in the U.S. and other nations.

Women's Awareness Week, an annual spring event at East Carolina University, is observed each year with film presentations, lectures, discussions and art exhibits on the campus.

Names of other award recipients include:
Greene County, Snow Hill — Norma Ann Beaman (Who's Who), Route 4.
Pitt County, Bethel — Susan James Manning (most outstanding women in basketball, Who's Who), daughter of Benjamin James, Route 1.

Farmville — Connie Moore Nanney (political science, Who's Who), daughter of David and Pat Moore, 505 North Contentnea St.; Vivian Lee Pierce (economics), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Pierce Jr., North Waverly St.; and Sheila Turnage (anthropology), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Turnage Jr., Route 2.

Greenville — Frances Doyle (chemistry), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doyle, 3006 Pinecrest Drive, Brenda Ernest (child development and family relations), daughter of L. M.

Ernest, 120 North Park Drive; Thelma Lynne Dodds (clothing and textiles, marshal), daughter of Mary Jones Dodds;

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Several honors have been bestowed to the Maiden High School band and chorus and its director, Judy Hoell, who is formerly of Greenville.

On March 5, the group appeared at Disney World, Orlando, Fla. The chorus gave a 30-minute concert on the Space Stage of Tomorrowland. The band marched in the celebrated "America on Parade" through the streets of Disney World. Both groups were screened by audition tapes, pictures and information sheets filed with the Disney World Productions.

On Sunday, April 4, Judy's pastor, the Rev. Garland Elliott, invited her and the band to go to Oklahoma City, Okla., to be in the International Lifeliners Parade. Roy Rogers and Dale Evans and others will be in the parade scheduled for Aug. 12.

For two consecutive years, the chorus has received a rating of excellent in state contests. The band for two consecutive years has received the second runner-up trophy at the Carolina's Carrousel Parade, Charlotte. In 1974, they placed fourth at Myrtle Beach's Sun-Fun Festival parade and concert competition.

The band marched in the inaugural parade for Governor James Holshouser. It has won first place honors at the St. Patrick's Day Parade, Lincolnton, the Old Soldiers' Reunion Day parade, Newton, and the Claremont Jaycees' parade, Claremont.

Judy readily admits that teaching music on the high school level is a time consuming job that requires deep dedication. The hours are long with extra rehearsals, extra-curricular activities and duties. "The job," she stated, "is not a job when you love what you're doing, but if your heart is not in it, it could be a task."

When asked how the Maiden Music Department has grown as rapidly as it has, Judy replied, "The school day, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., begins the work for a music program. "We present the material for learning during this time. Then in afternoons and evenings the hard work begins. During football season, for example, the band may practice two or three afternoons a week plus be on duty at every Friday night game for 10 weeks. But besides extra work in the extra-curricular time, I have developed independent performance groups after school that have helped stir interest and offer opportunities for the talented. It is not salaried but it is rewarding. I have a group of 12 singers called the Madrigal Singers, a stage band, a pep band and solo rehearsals as well as in special months, ensembles preparing for all-state chorus or other such clinics."

"The support of the community has been a major factor in the department's growth. I had to sell the program by gradually presenting the performing groups in community activities—parades, church services, ground breakings, etc. The more the groups were exposed, the more the community became cognizant of the commitment and value of music on the lives of their children. Plus the feeling of pride of the community was helpful. When everyone turned on their televisions on Thanksgiving and saw their band marching in the Carrousel Parade, it had an effect. They were

Liberty Bell On Display At Greenville

GREENVILLE — Greenville is the second community in the state to get, on loan, the 2,080-pound replica of the Liberty Bell which has been housed in the State House in Raleigh as a 1950 gift from France.

The Liberty Bell replica arrived in Greenville Friday and was placed on the downtown mall. The bell will be on display April 12th through April 18th. It is being sponsored by The Downtown Greenville Merchants.

In what was termed a "spectacular lifting operation", the giant bell was loaded on a truck and hauled to Greenville. The loan of the state's bell is part of a Bicentennial project.

After its service in Greenville, the bell will be used across the state in various Bicentennial celebrations. Transportation of the bell was arranged by the downtown Greenville merchants.

Plans call for the bell eventually to be placed in Bicentennial Plaza, which will occupy the section of Halifax Street in Raleigh between the capital and the State Legislative Building (State House).

The seven and one-half foot bell was presented along with 52 others to the United States by France in 1950 and the U.S. presented the replicas to each of the states. There is no crack in the state's replica of the bell.

willing to support and boost the music department more," continued Judy.

"But beyond these reasons for growth, I feel that the music department has grown because it is geared toward the enrichment and enjoyment of the student. I have tremendous faith in my students. I respect them and treat them as mature young adults. I must admit that they feel like 'my' kids. They even call me 'mama' affectionately," she concluded.

Judy is a graduate of ECU with a Bachelor of Music in Education. She is currently working on her master's degree at Appalachian State University. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Hoell Sr. of Greenville.

The Danger Lies In Expanding

A couple of projects which could benefit the elderly were mentioned in news stories last week. The county commissioners were considering a proposal for providing bus service to the older people living in rural areas.

The Rev. Dan Earnhart explained that the service would be for persons 60 years old or over on a limited basis.

He said Pitt County would have to provide $1,000 which would qualify for a $10,000 grant from the Mid-East Commission to operate the system on a 12-month trial basis. A mini-bus owned by Jarvis United Methodist Church would be operated by volunteers from the church. It would provide transportation three days per week on an appointment basis throughout the county for those over 60 years of age.

Then the Greenville Housing Authority was considering a site for 50 apartments for the elderly. The apartments would be built with needs of the elderly in mind. Delivery of service for the elderly would be provided, including nutritional and other social and health services.

If there is one thing our strapped local, state and national governments have learned, it's that government can't do everything for everybody. But government should use the resources available for social programs for those who are least able to help themselves.

We see nothing wrong with either of these programs. We think the transportation program could be of tremendous help to many older people who are unable to find transportation to the towns. The elderly housing could keep some older people living independently for extra years.

The danger in any program comes as it continues to expand. It wouldn't be desirable, for instance, to extend the transportation program to provide free rides to everybody who happens to want one.

We would be in favor of both these programs for their benefits to the elderly but public officials should make certain that both of them are reserved for deserving elder people.

We'll Share Attention Given Bike Race

There were some doubts, but the City Council voted to appropriate $2,000 to the state-wide bicycle race which is scheduled for June 10-20.

The race will start in Murphy and end near Manteo with its route coming through Greenville.

Some council members questioned the appropriation, but we feel it is worthwhile. The race will be followed internationally, and its stop in Greenville will bring our city a share of that attention.

Checking Prison Industries

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Not only are some legislators concerned that the state's prison-industry operation is hiding funds in places which they cannot get their hands, but at least one of the operations is apparently in danger of competing with private industry.

In the furniture manufacturing program and the stainless steel fabrication operation, "the Prison Enterprise Division poses a significant threat to private enterprise," a legislative study group has determined.

After hearing extensive testimony, the study commission chaired by State Senator Glenn Jernigan, D-Cumberland and State Rep. Edward S. Holmes, D-Chatham, agreed that the furniture and stainless steel operations are valuable training for inmates in securing jobs after release, but that steps must be taken to protect "the private sector in each of these fields."

In Statesville Catawba Valley Technical Institute provides instructors for the furniture plant at Statesville and a training program at its campus in Hickory. Previously, the program operated without producing enough furniture to be a threat.

"However, the capacity exists at the Statesville plant to produce enough furniture to have a detrimental competitive effect on private industry," the commission determined.

So far, such production has not been reached. The commission is recommending to the May session of the General Assembly that controls be placed on production, with actual output determined by instructors only sufficient to train inmates, not to make profits.

As to the stainless steel operation, the commission determined that normally contracts with public agencies are the only outlets, and found that in at least two cases school cafeteria projects were not submitted to bids on the stainless steel equipment because the items were being bought from Prison Enterprises.

"The committee finds this type of intrusion by state government into private enterprise to violate the statutory principle against government engaging in business," the commission will report to the legislature.

Throughout its study, the commission was unable to determine specifically how much money has been earned by Prison Enterprises, and how much profit has been turned over to the Department of Corrections for use in other prison programs.

The financial report for the past fiscal year shows receipts of $23.9 million, and a profit of $1.5 million. Fixed assets are over $5 million, and inventory over $6 million. State law requires any excess to be turned over to the General Fund for use by the legislature in funding other programs. None has been delivered.

Lost Money

During the past fiscal year, eight of the agencies' 26 divisions actually lost money, although overall a profit is shown.

A reserve fund of some $4 million which legislators suggested be placed in the general fund was spent to set up an auto leasing operation.

That agency, leasing cars to the Department of Corrections, lost $104,743 last year. "This loss has serious overtones for the budgetary process," the study commission decided. The legislature appropriated funds for Corrections to spend on transportation, but that was overspent by more than $100,000 by using the in-house leasing agency. That is an example of an "autonomy" for Corrections "not enjoyed by other state agencies," the commission said.

A recommendation will be made to the General Assembly that the auto leasing business be dissolved and the cars transferred into the Department of Corrections for use under regular state rules.

In an effort to get a handle on the money flow, the commission is recommending that all revenues from sales be deposited with the State Treasurer and watched closely by the State Auditor and when the amount goes above the line needed for normal operations, the surplus be transferred to another fund.

Another legislative committee is going to recommend additional steps, including creation of a board of directors to run the prison businesses, and a new bookkeeping system designed by the State Auditor.

It's A Private Matter

WASHINGTON — House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona is fuming mad because he was listed by a group called "Environmental Action" as one of the "Dirty Dozen" congressmen who have consistently voted against environmental bills. He also got a very low rating by the "National Council of Senior Citizens." Mr. Rhodes was so angered he released a letter signed by 77 congressmen (mostly Republicans) calling on the Fair Campaign Practices Committee to "expose" what they called "the most flagrantly unfair and perverse of all campaign practices . . . the publication of ratings of public interest groups based upon votes of narrowly selected bills . . ."

Mr. Rhodes is, of course, right. There should be an investigation of any organization that monitors the voting record of congressmen. A congressman's vote is a private matter between him and his wife, and should not be revealed by any public interest group whose sole purpose is to defeat him in an upcoming election.

It is sad on the 200th anniversary of our country that private citizens feel they should hold their legislators accountable for the way they vote in Congress.

Our forefathers, who drafted the Constitution, never intended that organizations in this country would make up lists of congressmen who had opposed legislation affecting Americans.

Other Editors Say 'Brokered' Affair

(Jacksonville Daily News)

Gov. Brown has announced his candidacy for president, becoming the second Gerald in the race. He will run as a favorite son candidate in the Democratic primary election in California in June.

What this shows is that Gerald Brown's unconventional politics aren't that different from the old politics. As far as his own political ambitions are concerned, it is clear that he has not lowered any expectations.

He has been governor only 15 months. He faces enormous problems in California, most of them a long way from being solved. And yet he has acceded to urging that he become a candidate and seek to lead the California delegation to the convention in New York City in July.

This could divert attention — his own and the public's — away from his performance as governor.

It will also tend to make the California primary less decisive between the leading out-of-state contenders who are seriously waging national campaigns for the presidency. That will play into the hands of those who seek a brokered convention. If you are concerned at all with making the national primary system work in order to give the people a say over the candidate to the nominated by their party, anything that tends to a brokered convention is bad.

It must be acknowledged, however, that if Hubert Humphrey emerges from a brokered convention Gov. Brown would be a logical choice as his vice presidential running mate.

The track record of California governors at national conventions of their parties has been dismal. None has been nominated, and active pursuit of the nomination has brought all of them a measure of embarrassment, frustration and failure.

It was perhaps inevitable that Jerry Brown would heed the call, as others have before him. He will be lucky if he comes out of the convention unscathed. But he has had extraordinary luck so far in his political career. Right now it looks as though that luck is holding.

Ford's Connally Dilemma

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—John B. Connally, treated like a king instead of a pariah at the White House last week, left Washington with not the slightest intention of making the endorsement President Ford desperately seeks in Texas—a fact that points up the political forces and intrigues now swirling within the Ford camp.

Without Connally's endorsement, Mr. Ford may be unable to overtake Ronald Reagan in the May 1 Texas primary. But with the Ford campaign having ignored Connally as tainted merchandise these many months, it is probable that only Mr. Ford's offer of the vice-presidential nomination could win Connally's endorsement. Yet Ford advisers overwhelmingly oppose Connally as Vice President for reasons both personal and political and argue that a Ford-Connally ticket would be a loser.

The President's Connally dilemma is part of his larger Southern dilemma. Defeat in Texas could be followed by a chain reaction of primary election defeats in the South which could shatter the image of presidential prestige central to Mr. Ford's long-range strategy. But like a Ford-Connally ticket, other dramatic moves to placate the conservative Republican South—dumping Henry Kissinger, for instance—are feared to cost too much elsewhere.

Actually, the White House might well have recruited Connally long ago had it heeded private advice last August from state Rep. Ray Hutchinson, Texas Republican state chairman. Probably the closest Republican associate of neophyte Republican Connally, Hutchinson urged that the Ford campaign begin wooing Connally. But in those balmy days, the President's advisers were dead certain Reagan would never run. Why, then, should Mr. Ford consort with anybody ever indicted for bribery, even if totally vindicated by a jury acquittal?

Not until Reagan's North Carolina triumph set the stage for the Texas shoot-out did presidential interest in Connally perk up. It was then that Connally, here to be sworn in as a member of the Intelligence Advisory Board, was invited to a cozy family dinner at the White House. Although Connally was warned to keep mum about the invitation, a knowledgeable friend predicted the President's men would quickly spread the word.

The prediction was accurate, of course, but that did not make the belated courtship more satisfying to Connally. "Do they think he's a child?" asked one Connally insider. What bothers Connally is that he has had extraordinary luck so far in his political career. Right now it looks as though that luck is holding.

Strength For Today

THE SOURCE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

It is of course a matter of great importance that a Christian live a righteous life, but it is a matter of equal importance that his righteousness have a proper source.

The righteousness of some people has its source in expediency. They are honest only because they think it pays off in the end. Other people live a good life because it gives them a sense of superiority over individuals they consider less worthy. Fear of consequences to health and pocketbook keeps still others on the strait and narrow path. Some people are good because they have never had a chance to be anything else. The gospel makes it very plain that there is only one secure basis for right living, and that is a spiritual commitment of Jesus Christ. St. Paul often said that the source of his righteousness was not in himself, but in God.

A righteousness which begins in self will end in self. A righteousness which begins in Christ will carry on to eternity.

Gov't Spending Rate Soaring

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Spending by all levels of government is now at an annual rate in excess of $500 billion, which is only 25 times the amount spent as recently as 1940, and 311 times the total of 1902.

And what do you get for your money? Defense and health research and a system of justice, for example, but also, says an esteemed professor, you get inflation, shoddy goods and a lot of baloney too.

Roland McKean, an economist at the University of Virginia, insists that the nation's consumers should get as exercised about government goods and services as they have about the products of the private sector.

Government does come in for consumer criticism, of course, but it does seem that the thrust of the consumer movement has been focused on private enterprise, perhaps because its abuses are more evident.

Ever-vigilant and hopeful, despite some stunning statistical reverses, the economy-minded Tax Foundation forever tries to correct that situation by reducing — a questionable phrase — tax figures to something meaningful, to wit:

The average taxpayer this year will in effect be working for the government until May 1. It will take until that date to earn the money that Uncle Sam and his nieces and nephews in state and local government will spend.

Taxes, it has already reported, will require 2 hours, 39 minutes of the average taxpayer's day, by far the largest time expenditure in the personal budget, more than eight times the minutes needed to pay for recreation.

McKean thinks we ought not just read these figures once a year, when the foundation compiles them, but keep them in mind all year round, because the "products" of government often are inferior, wasteful and dangerous.

Public products, he maintains, should come under the same scrutiny as the products of private enterprise. What are these products? Tariffs, price-support programs, regulatory programs, housing, welfare, defense.

Electric Bills In Politics

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — As he announced his candidacy for governor recently, Republican David Flaherty made a statement that few would disagree with.

"It is absolutely essential that our citizens be provided an adequate supply of electricity at a price they can afford," he said. Democrat Jim Hunt tried to match him a few days later. He advocated giving "the consumers of electricity a fair shake before the state utilities commission and to give the people a chance to save money by conserving energy."

"We need some hard questions asked and some clear answers given," chimed in Democrat Edward O'Herron in a recent speech.

"The people are looking for a candidate to lobby on their behalf rather than a politician who is dictated by the visited interest groups," proclaimed Republican Coy Privette in another statement.

The gubernatorial campaign has just started and already it has become obvious that the candidates' pollsters are saying the same thing. North Carolinians are upset about the increases in their electric bills.

The candidates, in response, are rushing to get into the consumers' corner — or at least to give that appearance. The lone exception has been Sen. Thomas Strickland of Goldsboro, a Democrat who is promising nothing but fairness on every issue.

But while the candidates seem to be saying they are going to do something about rising costs, they are really promising nothing when their statements are analyzed.

They talk about getting the facts and asking tough questions. But they do not, for the most part, talk about specific changes in the laws or specific individuals they would appoint to the utilities commission.

The power of appointment is a governor's main chance to influence utility costs. The next governor, on July 1, 1977, will be able to appoint four new commissioners — a clear majority. Those appointments, more than anything else, will determine his administration's stand on utilities.

None of the candidates, however, want to talk about the people they might appoint. Hunt has hinted that at least one of his appointments might come from the ranks of the North Carolina Consumers Council, but he has made no definite commitment.

Nor have the candidates said whether they intend to ask current commissioners to accept reappointment. They prefer to say they will pick people who are "fair," "impartial," and "capable," as governors before them have said.

Another possible way to cut down power bills is to change the law to reduce the revenues that are guaranteed to the utilities now.

None of the candidates, thus far, have committed themselves to any specific reforms.

Hunt has talked favorably about the basic concept of a peak pricing system — giving people lower rates for using electricity at times of low demand and higher rates for use

nally is all this sudden warmth after his months out in the cold. "It rankles," one intimate of Connally told us. "Believe me, it rankles."
Indeed, Mr. Ford was cautioned by campaign manager Rogers Morton not to angle for a Connally endorsement over dinner. Connally was not about to make his move, the President was told. In private conversations with old friends during his Washington visit, Connally made two points clear: Reagan has a "substantial" lead over Ford in Texas, and Connally intends to stay neutral.

But these same friends are absolutely certain that Connally's realistic political goal for 1976 is the vice-presidential nomination. Accordingly, had the President over dinner in the White House privately offered the vice presidency, would Connally have entered the Ford camp?

Nobody will ever know, for the preponderance of Mr. Ford's advice was (and remains) against Connally as his running-mate. Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and longtime Ford crony Melvin R. Laird are vigorously anti-Connally. So is Connally's fellow Texan, Sen. John Tower, who has been the most steadfast of Ford supporters among conservative Republicans.

Beyond such personal dislikes and Byzantine rivalries, the President is given concrete arguments against a Ford-Connally ticket. Mr. Ford's polls show high negative attitudes against Connally around the nation outside Texas. The interpretation: though perhaps the nation's finest stump speaker, Connally remains suspect in the eyes of the nation, despite his acquittal.

Experienced Republican politicians in Texas agree that, considering the expected tiny turnout of Republican primary election voters there, Connally's endorsement could be decisive. Besides his considerable influence among rank-and-file Republican voters, he might well bring over old-line Tory Democrats to vote for Mr. Ford May 1. But lacking a Connally endorsement, Mr. Ford's managers must find some other way to stop Reagan's undeniable momentum in Texas, achieved on the foreign policy-national defense-Kissinger issues. The absence of any easy answer is reflected in deepening apprehension within the Ford camp about Texas and five other Southern primary states (Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas).

In short, there is today no Ford prescription for coping with a Southern ailment that conceivably could become a national contagion. Last week's events showed that winning and dining John and Nellie Connally is not even a start.

at a time of great demand. But he has not committed himself to a specific plan.

In the last few years, a number of other proposals have been floated in the legislature for changing the utilities law. Those proposals include banning interim rate increases and changing the way utilities' property is evaluated.

But none of the candidates has endorsed any program of reforms that would address the many legal complexities that utilities use to extract rate increases from the consumers.

The candidates, then are asking the voters concerned with utilities to pick them on the basis of little more than faith, a commodity which the electorate may be running out of.

Five Deaths Due To Traffic

By The Associated Press
North Carolina had a relatively safe weekend, with only five traffic deaths reported to the highway patrol.

The toll for the year rose to 339, but was 15 fewer than the similar time last year.

One of the victims was a woman whose car plunged through a guard rail and down a 50-foot bank, landing upside down. She was Martha Avery Phifer, 28, of Morganton. The accident happened on U.S. 321 about five miles north of Lenoir.

Dennis Leo Debose, 23, of Fayetteville, was killed when his car hit a tree in Duplin County, 11½ miles north of White Lake. The patrol said he was traveling at high speed.

Lacy Charles Kendell Jr., 55, of High Point, was fatally injured when his car collided with another, ran down a bank and hit a tree. The accident occurred on U.S. 29, two miles west of Thomasville.

Clint Alex Mauldin, 26, lost his life when his car hit a tree 20 miles from his home at Troy in Montgomery County. The accident occurred six miles south of Denton in Davidson County.

Earl Minshew, 49, of Fremont in Wayne County, was killed when his car collided head-on with a truck. The patrol said Minshew's car was headed south in the northbound lane of Interstate 95 about 2½ miles south of Smithfield.

contempt of Congress and lose all voting privileges for five years.

Not only should the people who revealed the vote be punished, but those who print it in pamphlets, newspapers or magazines must suffer the grave consequences of violating "congressional security."

I suggest that anyone accepting a list of the "Dirty Dozen" or a similar list be sentenced to read the Congressional Record from the first page to the last for one year.

If Congress does not want to pass a special bill they could include the penalties in the S-1 Bill, which is now being debated in Congress. S-1 is a 750-page revision of the Criminal Code, which includes harsh penalties for anyone in the government releasing confidential and top secret papers to an unauthorized source.

These measures may sound tough, but there is a serious credibility gap in the country now and people are very suspicious of their politicians. One of the reasons for this is that we are being told how they vote.

Any fair person can understand House Minority Leader Rhodes' indignation that his vote, which is the most personal thing a congressman has, would be exposed by environmentalists and senior citizens who are working for his defeat in the upcoming elections.

I usually don't like to take sides, but I hate to see anyone, Republican or Democrat, put on a list called the "Dirty Dozen." It makes you lose faith in the First Amendment and the whole principle of "the public's right to know."

Sees The Light After 42 Years

KANSAS CITY (AP) — After 42 years in a dark storeroom, a gigantic 1,200-year-old Buddha has seen the light.

The nine-foot Japanese statue is now permanently installed in the new Frank Grant Crowell Wing of Kansas City's Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum. The 300-pound Amida Buddha, purchased in Kyoto in 1932, had been relegated to virtual solitude since 1934 because of space limitations.

The new Crowell wing completes the Nelson nearly 42 years after it was first opened to the public.

How's The Weather?

By The Associated Press
Northerly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour today hampered rangers fighting forest and brush fires over North Carolina.

In addition, no rain was in sight today or Tuesday. And freezing weather was expected overnight in all but coastal sections.

It was sunny, breezy and cool today, with highs in the mid to upper 50s. Skies will continue sunny Tuesday, and maximums will warm into the mid 60s.

A cold front moved through early today. Winds shifted from the west to the northeast as it passed, and temperatures fell 10 degrees in an hour in some cases.

Small-craft advisories are up on the coast. The winds made sailing and low-level flying hazardous over the state.

Scattered rain will fall Wednesday and Thursday, and it will become fair Friday. Temperatures will be mild those days, with highs in the 70s and overnight lows in the 50s.

Temperatures Sunday reached into the 70s and 80s. It became cloudy as the day ended, and patchy showers fell in the evening. The rain was very light.

Allocation Of Gold Medal Goes In Effect

A statewide allocation of the official state bicentennial medal in solid 18 kt. gold went into effect today in the wake of unprecedented demand by collectors, according to Dick Ellis, executive director of the North Carolina American Revolution Bicentennial Commission.

Ellis reported that each of the state's 100 counties will be limited to two gold medals "in order to provide an equal opportunity for all state residents to purchase the few remaining medals."

The director noted that only 200 of the gold medals remain out of the original limited edition of 1,000 medals.

The medals, one inch in diameter, are available at the original issue price of $250 at Wachovia Bank and Trust Company's main office here. Interested persons should see Sandra White at Wachovia.

City School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for this week at Greenville elementary schools have been announced as follows:

- Monday—spaghetti and meat sauce, tossed salad, french bread, purple plums, milk;

Saudi Plane Subdued N.C. Democrats Intercepted Heard Appeal For Unity

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli jet fighters intercepted a Saudi Arabian military transport with three Americans among its crew and forced it to land at Ben-Gurion International Airport near Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command announced.

The communique said the American-built C130 Hercules was intercepted in Israeli air space near the Lebanese border.

The plane was carrying 23 civilians and Saudi Arabian soldiers, the announcement said. The senior pilot was a Saudi Arabian, it added.

"As far as we know there were no problems," said a spokesman, and the fighters did not fire on the Saudi plane.

A military attache from the U.S. Embassy was with the American crewmen while Israeli troops questioned the Saudi Arabians, the communique said.

Israeli jets last intercepted an Arab plane in airspace controlled by Israel on Feb. 21, 1973, when fighters shot down a Libyan airliner after the pilot refused to obey orders to land. Only five of the 113 passengers and crew survived the crash in the occupied Sinai desert.

It was not immediately clear why the Saudi plane had U.S. personnel aboard, but the United States is known to send military advisers to Saudi Arabia. It trains some Saudi air force officers at U.S. bases.

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Tar Heel Democratic leaders where joined Saturday night by Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., in calling for party unity.

Huddleston, featured speaker at the party's Downeaster fundraiser, warned against letting "failure to get the whole party in harness keep us from victory."

Despite election year politicking, the crowd was generally subdued and smaller in numbers than usual. Early in the evening, party leaders asked staff members of candidates and Democratic office holders to attend the dinner instead of eating at local restaurants.

"The need bodies," said one Council of State member. Huddleston, in an address filled with anecdotes from his home state, criticized the Republican administration of President Ford for lack of vision and insensitivity to the needs of the public in the nation's continuing economic problems.

Ford was also the target of a brief but strong personal attack by Huddleston.

Suggesting that the nation began its third century under a Democratic president, Huddleston said that in 1876, the U.S. began its second hundred years under Rutherford B. Hayes, a Republican "who was also a political accident."

Huddleston's reference was to Ford's appointment as vice president and elevation to the presidency upon the resignation of Richard M. Nixon.

Ford, Huddleston said, "is exceptionally undistinguished and is about as up-to-date as Rutherford B. Hayes."

Switching to a 1976-Revolutionary analogy, Huddleston said that Ford "is no George III...and there's no revolution now...The Republican administration does not oppress us but it does restrict us from reaching our full potential as a nation."

He said, "The people deserve the thinking of a party of vision to begin this country's third century."

"Ford has no glistening record of achievement, no power of leadership, no plan for the future, but he's the incumbent and the power of the incumbency is no small thing to overcome," he said.

Name Firms ECU Medical School For 'Audit' Adds An Anatomy Prof

RALEIGH (AP)—The state Utilities Commission has announced the selection of three management consulting firms to perform management audits on four of North Carolina's major utilities.

The commission said in a news release that Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. will be audited by Booz, Allen and Hamilton of New York. Auditing of Southern Bell will be done by Arthur D. Little Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., and Western Carolina Telephone with its subsidiary Westco Telephone Co. will be audited by Theodore Barry and Associates of Los Angeles.

The 1975 General Assembly authorized the audits to review the effectiveness and efficiency of management techniques and operations with written reports delivered to the commission. The utilities will pay costs of the audits.

In selecting the auditing firms, the commission had solicited proposals from large national consulting firms with those selected having been interviewed by the commission. The studies are expected to be completed by the end of the year.

The School of Medicine at East Carolina University and Dr. Michael R. Schweisthal, Chairman of its Department of Anatomy, today announced the appointment of Dr. R. Frederick Becker as Professor of Anatomy.

Primarily a neuro-anatomist, Dr. Becker will be coming to Greenville from his post at Michigan State University. A native of Methuen, Mass., he has previously held academic appointments at the School of Medicine, Northwestern University, the University of Washington, Jefferson Medical College, and Duke University. Dr. Becker has been involved in extensive research regarding the anatomy and physiology of the fetus and has published over 75 articles and books in his field; several books which he has co-authored have been considered to be classic textbooks in anatomy.

Dr. Becker received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Massachusetts and his PhD in Fetal Physiology from the Department of Anatomy at the Medical School, Northwestern University. He holds membership in several professional scientific and educational societies, such as the American Anatomical Association, the New York Academy of Science, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Southern Society of Anatomists, the Society of Sigma Xi, and the American Association of Medical Colleges.

An interesting comment, according to Dr. Schweisthal, is that several physicians in this community were students of Dr. Becker, and many others have studied his books during the course of their medical education.

Dr. Becker is married and the father of two children.

Purse And Cash Taken From Car

Officers are hunting for the thief who took a purse containing $25 from a car parked at the Post Office on Second Street last night.

According to Chief Glenn Cannon, Mrs. Ina Baker Wichard told investigators that she left her purse on her car when she went inside the Post Office. When she returned, the purse, valued at $20 and $25 in cash, was missing.

The incident was reported at 6:15 p.m.

Clothing Stolen From Parked Car

Chief Glenn Cannon said police are continuing their investigation into the theft of some $220 worth of clothes from a car parked in a lot in the 500 block of Evans Street Sunday night.

Cannon said Mrs. Fevronia Gregriou Prostinak of Jacksonville told officers a trunk, valued at $30, and containing about $220 worth of clothes was taken from the top of her car between 7:45 p.m. and 8:30.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—
The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady today with supplies moderate, demand good, weights trending lighter.

The North Carolina dock weighted average price is 39.33 cents per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,139,000.

NEW YORK (AP)— The stock market turned upward today in a technical rally paced by some of the big-name blue chip issues.

Trading was light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down nearly 36 points over the past four trading days, had rebounded 6.14 to 974.42 by 11:30 a.m.

Gainers took a slight edge on losers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market was mixed in the early going as some traders did a little cautious shopping for bargains after last week's sharp declines.

When it became apparent that prices had regained some support, additional buyers moved in.

Blue chips posting fractional gains included American Telephone & Telegraph, U.S. Steel, Du Pont and Eastman Kodak.

Kodak, which showed a 7/8 gain at 115, reported it would introduce its long-anticipated instant film products at press conferences in New York and Toronto a week from Tuesday.

Signal Cos. jumped 3/4 to 18 1/2. The company and Gulf & Western Industries announced a joint tender offer for 6.3 million Signal shares at $20 apiece.

Gulf & Western stock was unchanged at 22 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .05 to 53.46 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .17 at 101.91.

Residential Cancer Crusader Is Named

Mrs. Diane Duffus has been named chairman of the Greenville Residential Crusade of the American Cancer Society's 1976 educational and fund-raising crusade.

The appointment was announced by Charles M. Vincent, 1976 Crusade Chairman.

The '76 Crusade has its national chairman television personality Flip Wilson.

"In this Bicentennial year, we want to achieve the goal of a pap test for every adult American woman to eliminate death from cervical cancer," Mrs. Duffus said. "We will be calling on our friends and neighbors with life-saving messages, and we urge that they give as much as possible to advance the fight against cancer."

April is the month of the Cancer Crusade, which is using as this year's theme, "We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime."

"Programs of research, education, and service account for about 78 cents of each dollar spent annually by the American Cancer Society," Vincent said. "Some 29 per cent went for

$1,000 For Information

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that a $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of thieves who took a television set from a home at 300 South Pitt St. yesterday.

According to Cannon, thieves broke into the home of Mrs. K. W. Cobb through a basement window and took the television set while Mrs. Cobb was away from home.

The theft was reported at 2:44 p.m., the chief said, when Mrs. Cobb returned to her dwelling at the intersection of Third and Pitt Streets.

Cannon said Mrs. Cobb was taken sick about 3 p.m. and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital, where she died a short time later.

The chief said Mrs. Cobb's son, Charles D. Cobb Sr., this morning offered the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for the theft from her home.

Ray Floyd Wins Masters By Record-Tying Score

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — At the end, it was the man against the monster, and the monster fell.

Ray Floyd, bull-strong and bullwhip-tough, grabbed the sprawling Augusta National course by the nape of the neck and literally shook it into submission, winning the 40th Masters Golf Tournament by a record-tying score.

The great Nicklaus, like everybody else, wound up being a spectator, finishing 11 shots off the pace. Floyd led every round. The glamorous event became a dull one-man show. It was a one-man and a forty-three-man show.

Fans left the premises by the droves while the sun was still high. Newsmen deserted the course and repaired to the press room's lounge where they dozed, sipped cold drinks and waited for the margin of victory. Millions must have clicked off their TV sets.

Floyd's winning score was 65-66-70-70—271, 17 under par. It tied Nicklaus' 1965 record, which provoked the comment from the late Bob Jones: "Arnold Palmer and Gary Player played superlative golf but Nicklaus played a game with which I am unfamiliar."

Floyd was similarly unbelievable.

Only one man made a serious lunge at him and it proved too little too late. Hollywood-hand-some Ben Crenshaw, 24, brightest of the game's "Young Lions," charged in with a closing 67, highlighted by a gambling eagle on the 13th and a pirate-bold par on the long 15th from the water, to take second money with 279, eight strokes back.

Floyd collected $40,000, Crenshaw $25,000.

Nicklaus, recognized as undisputed king of the game with 16 major crowns, never mustered a rally in defense of the title he grabbed for the fifth time so dramatically a year ago. His birdie fire only flickering, he struggled in with a 73 to tie Larry Ziegler for third at 282. Only four other players bettered par.

Ziegler was asked afterward when he had ever had as much fun.

"When I had a root canal," he mumbled.

Floyd, a handsome, 33-year-old veteran of 15 years on the tour whose early years were wasted on what he called high living, said winning the 1976 Masters was the primary goal of his restructured life.

"I wish I had my early years to live over again," he said of the days when he trained on hard booze and all-night parties. "I would have won more. I got tired of being a mediocre player. Now my goal is to win golf tournaments and the apex, naturally, is to win the majors."

He won the PGA Championship in 1969.

Starting the final round with an eight-stroke lead after climaxing Saturday's round with a birdie, Floyd said he was convinced Saturday night that no one could catch him.

"Realistically, I knew it was over—I was sure no one could catch me," he said. "But I didn't want to finish sloppily. I wanted to shoot a good round. After I got that birdie on the 15th, I just wanted to finish and not get hurt. I was in control."

Nevertheless, Floyd's hands were shaking slightly when he reported to the locker room about an hour before his scheduled Sunday teeoff time and began opening stacks of telegrams from friends and well-wishers.

"More telegrams than I've had in the last two years," he remarked.

Asked later about his seeming nervousness, he replied: "I'll admit I may have been a bit edgy. I am not a robot. I am a human being. Sure, I get nervous but I thought I handled it well."

Indeed he did. At the very first hole, he hooked his drive behind a tall pine tree. Right off, he was staring at a possible bogey or double bogey.

"I was only about 2 1/2 feet from the tree," he said. "I had no line to the green at all. So I punched a hard hook shot out with a seven-iron and it rolled flag high on the green. I almost broke my club but I saved my par."

Floyd got his lone bogey on the fourth hole where his "marshmallow shot" in the wind missed the green but he recovered on the next hole, lashing a three-iron shot to within three feet of the cup.

"I knew then I had won," he said.

He got another birdie at the short 12th, sinking a putt from 30 feet, and then birdied the 520-yard 15th with a 15-foot putt that gave him a record of having played the four par fives 14 under par for the four days. Jimmy Demaret previously held the record of 13.

"It was then—and only then—that I started thinking about Jack's record," he said. "I had a good chance for a bird at the 17th and on the 18th I had that squirrely putt of 35 feet. I gave it a good try." The putt that could have shattered the record just slipped by.

Crenshaw, who tied for third in the U.S. Open last year, played about 45 minutes in front of Floyd and Ziegler, the last twosome on the course, and he electrified whatever gallery and TV audience chose to endure the runaway victory.

A New Millionaire Is With Atlanta Braves

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The new guy, the millionaire, sat on the bench next to some of his less affluent teammates. The attitude of these Atlanta Braves making a mere $50,000 or so might have been one of resentment toward the newest Brave, Andy Messersmith, but they welcomed him with open arms over the weekend.

"It was like a spiritual thing when we found out Andy was coming with us," said Lee Lacy, a teammate of Messersmith with Los Angeles last season.

"We had thought we were out of the bidding," said Lacy, who came to the Braves via the traditional route, a winter trade. "You can't believe how happy everyone is about our getting him."

"Andy's got to boost our morale and make us a better club."

Teammate Rowland Office agreed, saying of Messersmith, "He should give us another 15 or 20 wins this year."

The 30-year-old Messersmith, who'd been declared a free agent during the offseason after winning 19 games without a contract for the Dodgers last year, ended a long search for a new team Saturday when he came to terms with the Braves.

Messersmith, twice a 20-game winner, had rejected numerous bids—including an earlier one from Atlanta—before finally coming to terms with Braves' owner Ted Turner.

His three-year contract calls for $200,000 a year, plus a $400,000 bonus for signing.

Messersmith, who joined the Braves here Saturday and pitched batting practice Sunday, said that, despite missing spring training, his arm felt good.

"I'm not as sharp as I'd like to be, but I'll get there quickly," he said. "I've kept myself in shape, throwing against a wall. And one of my neighbors in Newport Beach used to play semipro, so he's caught me a few times."

Messersmith sounded as happy to be with the Braves as they were to have him.

Chowan Loses To Jamesville

JAMESVILLE — Doubles by Edward Lilley and Toby Holliday in the fourth drove in two runs for the margin the Bullets needed as Jamesville beat Chowan, 4-2, Saturday night.

Jamesville got two runs in the first at Larry Pierce walked and scored on Jerry Ange's triple and a single by winning pitcher Billy Brown drove Ange in.

Danny Lilley led off the fourth with a walk and scored on Edward Lilley's double. Holliday followed with his for a 4-0 lead.

Chowan scored once in the sixth and once in the seventh.

Ed Lilley had two hits for the Bullets.

Giants Find New Money And Fans

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The National League seems to have found both a new franchise and a new city in San Francisco.

The Giants, who all but put the final signatures on a transfer agreement to Toronto earlier this year, have found new money in owners Bud Herseth and Robert Lurie and now new legions of supporters from the Bay Area.

Rain washed out Saturday's game but Friday's and Sunday's games with the Los Angeles Dodgers drew a total of 6,920 fans. That figure represents nearly one-eighth of last year's dismal season turnout in San Francisco of 522,919.

And the fans, rewarded by a season-opening victory Friday and a come-from-behind 6-4 triumph Sunday, came despite a strike of the city's craft workers that brought pickets around Candlestick Park and virtually eliminated the stadium's concession stands.

Elsewhere in the National League, the world champion Cincinnati Reds stayed unbeaten with a 9-3 victory over the winless Houston Astros; the Pittsburgh Pirates, the unbeaten defending NL East winners, stopped the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3; the Montreal Expos edged the New York Mets 7-6; the Atlanta Braves beat the San Diego Padres 4-2, and the Chicago Cubs downed the St. Louis Cardinals 8-5.

This opening series between the West Coast rivals, who brought California into the baseball business, was the first since the pioneering days of 1958, when the national pastime first came to San Francisco. Pinch hitter Dave Rader slammed a two-out two-run double to cap a four-run eighth inning that made a loser of relief specialist Mike Marshall.

Pirates 8, Phillies 3
By just walking to the mound this year, Bob Moose may qualify for the "Comeback Player of the Year" award.

Moose, who saved Pittsburgh's victory over the Phillies Sunday, missed most of the 1974 season because of surgery for the removal of a blood clot under his right shoulder. Surgeons had to take out his top right rib to get the job done.

Moose, who spent part of the 1975 season in the minors working his arm back into shape, relieved starter Bruce Kison in the sixth inning and blanked the Phillies the rest of the way.

Richie Zisk and Rennie Stennett led the Pirates attack, each driving in two runs. Thus, the Pirates took the first two games of this intense Pennsylvania series between the two favorites for the NL East title.

David Pearson Seems To Be In A Rut; Keeps On Winning

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — David Pearson seems to be in a rut these days. No matter what challenges or adversities he encounters, he seems to wind up in Victory Lane.

The 42-year-old Spartanburg, S.C. millionaire has won four of the five NASCAR Grand National stock car races he's entered in 1976. The one he didn't win, at Rockingham, N.C., he didn't finish thanks to a broken oil pump.

None of his victories have been routine, however.

—In the Daytona 500, Pearson and old rival Richard Petty collided and hit the wall coming out of the final turn. But Pearson was able to keep the engine running in his crumpled Mercury, and he sneaked past the stalled Petty at about 15 miles an hour to victory.

—At Riverside, Calif., the Silver Fox had such a terrible head cold he could hardly drive. He decided to just stroke it, and hope to finish respectably. But his competition all broke down, leaving him in front.

—At Atlanta last month, Pearson lost a lap because of a flat tire, and spent nearly the entire race battling a viciously vibrating chassis. He won only after a providential late caution period and a fresh set of tires allowed him to close the gap on Benny Parsons. "I've never worked so hard to win," Pearson said, showing his blistered hands.

—In Sunday's Rebel 500 here, Pearson was dropped back early again because of a tire problem. He didn't catch up with frontrunner Buddy Baker until Parsons spun with about .20 miles to go, bringing out a strategic yellow flag. A new set of tires "specially selected" for such occasions by his Wood brothers crew gave him the edge to pull away from Baker for a five car length victory.

"Either it's your day, or it's not," concluded Pearson matter-of-factly. "Today was mine again. That luck is the important thing."

"I don't know if I could have caught up with Buddy without that last yellow. I lost a lap early when I cut a tire down."

"After I came in and got new tires, I went right back out and ran over the same darn thing and cut another tire."

"I was lucky, though. About that time someone crashed and I was able to pit again on the yellow with losing more time."

The luckless Baker was the one who crashed, running into a backmarker while leading the race. Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison, right on Baker's tail, also got in the tangle, one that may have cost Baker the race.

Baker and Allison were able to continue, though considerably damaged.

"I don't know if Buddy was faster before the wreck or not," Pearson said. "He was taking too many chances for me to want to run with him, that fast, that early."

"I don't really like to push my car any harder than I have to before the last few laps."

Asked if he felt in any way sorry about taking away Baker's sure victory, Pearson flashed a sly smile and said, "That's a crazy question."

Pole position starter Pearson, who collected $17,500 of the $144,580 purse, averaged 122.973 miles an hour in winning his record sixth Rebel 500. Baker got about $15,000 for his troubles, and Parsons took $12,000 for third and retained his lead in the season point standings.

A rash of wrecks knocked out several contenders, including Donnie Allison, who was making his first Grand National start this season.

Tragedy was narrowly averted in the most serious pileup,

Carter's Secret: Change His Political Emphasis

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

About 150 people were milling outside the Masonic Temple in Peekskill, N.Y. when Jimmy Carter arrived just after dark. He waded through outstretched hands into a room filled with people, smoke and an out-of-tune band tooting that Democratic standby, "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Then he talked to a family audience about his family.

"My wife and I have been married 30 years, 30 years in July," he said. "We have three sons. My first son was born in Virginia 28 years ago. My second son was born 25 years ago in Hawaii; my third son was born 23 years ago in Connecticut. And then my wife and I had an argument for 14 years and I finally won and we have an 8-year-old daughter in Georgia."

The crowd laughed and applauded. Jimmy Carter had won another audience.

It happens day after day in state after state. For it is clear from watching Carter's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination that much of his early success stems from the definitive political ability to size up an audience quickly and seize on its pet interests.

Carter's basic campaign promise is simple: "I'll never tell a lie." Try as they may, his opponents have been unable to catch him in one.

What Carter does instead is subtly change the emphasis in the same message from audience to audience, changing how he says it and what part of the message he chooses to emphasize.

One of his opponents, Rep. Morris K. Udall, told an audience recently: "In Boston, he got a good part of the antibusing vote and a mile away in Roxbury he was getting a lot of the black vote. That's a good day's work if you can do it."

An example of the way he works came recently before two different audiences in White Plains and Peekskill, N.Y. In White Plains, it was a suburban crowd, sprinkled with blacks. It was well-dressed, young, and middle class in an area where Democrats are basically liberal.

An hour later, in Peekskill, he spoke to workers, foremen, and small-business men and their families. Many were dressed in work clothes and several said they had voted in the past for George C. Wallace and were sympathetic to Ronald Reagan's challenge to President Ford.

In both places, Carter discussed welfare, and in both his basic position was the same: that welfare recipients who can work should be trained, taught to read, and offered jobs; that the federal and state governments should take the welfare burden off local agencies with a uniform nationwide payment to take care of their basic needs; that welfare workers should stop "shuffling paper" and "ought to spend their time dealing with the blind or the disabled or alleviating hunger or training people."

In White Plains, he finished his talk like this:

"But the other 90 per cent who can't work full time, we ought to treat them with respect, decency and concern and love ... There ought to be a work incentive aspect built in. So that if a mother, for instance, has two little children and she can leave those kids with a grandmother for 15 hours a week — her husband's dead — she ought to be encouraged to take a part-time job and not have her welfare payments suffer for it."

In Peekskill, it ended this way:

"We've got to take the welfare responsibilities off of local government; off of the property taxpayer. I hope that in the future we never have another property tax dollar go for federal welfare costs. That ought to come out of the state and federal treasuries."

He did not use the White Plains line in Peekskill and vice versa.

Carter does not go into specifics about his welfare revision plans, which involve having states pick up some of the cost. Nor does he say how much it would cost and how much it might diminish local property taxes. He responds to questions about it by saying he believes much of it could be financed by shifting costs and through his government reorganization plan.

Like most candidates running for any office, Carter has a standard speech and variations of that standard speech. Which parts of it he uses depends on the audience, the location and their questions.

To Jewish voters, he talks about the Mideast and his "personal friendships" with Golda Meir, Yitzhak Rabin and other Israeli leaders. At the Rockland County Social Services Agency headquarters in Pomona, N.Y., he talked about his health care program; in depressed Buffalo, he talked about his program for creating jobs; in Peekskill he got applause by mentioning he was the only one of 60 fellow naval officers to vote in 1948 for Harry S. Truman and played a variation on his "I'll never lie to you" theme by adding "And I believe Harry Truman never lied either."

There are parts of his standard speech that are used some places and not in others. In general, the less educated the audience, the folksier he gets.

In Peekskill, on the character of the American people — "a tremendous untapped reservoir of good sense, sound judgment, intelligence, ability, vision, a commitment to the work ethic, patriotism, religious faith."

To New York City blacks and again in Peekskill: "I was the first person in my daddy's family to go past high school."

In his early primary successes, Carter has gotten votes from interest groups normally in conflict: blacks and people opposed to busing; Chicago organization politicians and reform liberals who regularly oppose them; blue collar and white collar.

It's the same way as he campaigns.

In New York City, a talk to a roomful of black leaders ("65 per cent of my neighbors in Plains are black and we get along fine") elicited a constant background murmuring of "right on!" and "tell it like it is." He got sustained applause in Peekskill, where there were Wallace and Reagan sympathizers in the audience.

At Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., where Carter did graduate work in physics 25 years ago, the chapel was filled and there were about 300 people outside who couldn't get in. Local Carter workers said several local schools had been let out early so that the students could come, but nonetheless, the impression was that the former Georgia governor's reception was overwhelmingly favorable.

Again, he played to the crowd, emphasizing his complaints about what he called the "boss-dominated" New York primary system: "As an engineer and a scientist, I have not yet figured out the electoral process in New York State."

There is one Carter constant, usually as he is about to leave.

"I love my country," he says. "But it's just as much your country as it is mine and if you think something is wrong with it, do something about it. If you think I'm right, vote for me. If you think my opponent is right, vote for him. But our country should be a source of pride and inspiration instead of shame and apology and embarrassment."

It rarely fails to provide a buoyant exit.

High Court To Eventually Decide Overcharge Plaintiff

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Supreme Court is expected to ultimately decide whether retail customers of the state's three major electric companies have been overcharged to the tune of $35 million.

The overcharge came because of a gross misunderstanding of law, the state attorney general's office contends. That office has appealed the Utilities Commission order granting the $35 million total to Duke Power Co., Carolina Power and Light Co. and Virginia Electric and Power Co.

The commission and the utilities disagree. They claim that the companies were about to suffer a revenue loss of $35 million.

At issue is an Aug. 27, 1975, order allowing each of the three companies to impose a surcharge on bills for 12 months. The surcharge began Sept. 1 and is to cover excessive fuel costs in July and August that the companies paid but allegedly would never recover without the special levy.

The matter is before the state Court of Appeals but an appeal to the state Supreme Court is expected whatever the verdict. Here's how the surcharge came into being:

In late 1973 and early 1974, the prices for natural gas, oil and coal were climbing rapidly and the utilities were financially endangered. They requested a special charge to cover excessive fuel costs, arguing that they could not remain financially solvent without some help.

The commission agreed and the "automatic fuel adjustment clause" came into being. It allowed each utility to pass on to consumers the excessive cost of fuel and the charge was in no way intended to raise or lower the profits of the companies.

Under the clause, the fuel charge applied in one month was based on the actual cost two months earlier, the latest cost figures available. Thus, how much was billed in April depended on actual fuel costs in February, for instance.

Then the companies won commission approval of an accounting system that allowed them to carry on their books the excessive fuel charges for two months because they were to be collected then. That resulted in a two-month "lag" on the companies books from the time the fuel is burned to the time the cost is recovered.

Then, the 1975 legislature banned the automatic fuel charge and required the Utilities Commission to approve fuel costs passed on to consumers.

The commission, at the request of the utilities, interpreted the new law as requiring that the old system of book-keeping be dropped because beginning Sept. 1, the fuel charges collected that month be for estimated fuel costs in the same month.

The companies argued that they were collecting May fuel costs in July and June costs in August. Under the new law, they said, the September charge would be for September, leaving July and August costs uncollected. That's the $35 million their books showed to be uncollected and, consequently, a "loss."

Utilities Commission Chairman Marvin Wooten said in an interview that the companies were entitled to the money because the commission intended actual fuel costs be made up two months later, the earliest time the costs were known.

If that is so, the commission allowed the companies to collect fuel costs nearly two months before the utilities even requested the right to recover the costs. Commission documents show, for example, that CP&L requested the fuel charge Jan. 25, 1974. It was approved Feb. 5 to take effect Feb. 6.

The company began imposing the charge immediately. If the charges billed in February were intended by the commission to be actual recovery of December costs, then CP&L was allowed to recover costs two months before it even asked for such recovery.

While CP&L was used as an example, the same is true of Duke and Veeco, though the dates differ.

The attorney general's office argues in papers filed with the court that the Wooten's argument is wrong because that would amount to retroactive ratemaking, forbidden by state law.

Also, it was argued that the old fuel clause was a system of estimating costs based on the fuel costs two months earlier, the latest figures available. Thus, the April charge was for April fuel based on how much it cost to produce electricity in February.

Consequently, the companies did not stand to lose $35 million because they collected July fuel costs in July and August costs in August. The only loss, then, was an accounting loss because of the accounting method used by the companies.

In addition, the new law said, "all monthly fuel adjustment rate increases...as presently approved by the commission shall fully terminate effective Sept. 1, 1975..." That, plus the fact that no other law allows surcharges, forbids the surcharge even if it were otherwise justified, it was argued.

If the courts rule against the commission and the utilities, refunds may be ordered. To the average CP&L customer who uses 1,000 kilowatt hours a month, the charge is 89 cents for 12 months—$10.68. But to CP&L the total is more than $12 million.

The surcharge could have been avoided if the legislature had not passed the new law or if the law had been interpreted differently by the commission, those involved agree.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt has complained that the commission had a choice between helping the people or helping the utilities. The utilities were preferred, he said.

Hunt, a candidate for Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has agreed with the position of the attorney general's office and had tried to bring public attention to the issue. He has called the decision a $35 million "bonus" for the utilities.

He bitterly complains that the surcharge was allowed after the companies argued "that an accounting loss of revenue would occur—an accounting loss, mind you, not an actual loss."

In speeches around the state, Hunt says the reasoning of the commission was that "since the General Assembly may have caused the power companies some accounting problems, we'll dip into the pockets of the ratepayers to the tune of $35 million."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's oncoming Full Moon finds you getting along well with others. Associates are inclined to show more consideration for your wishes at this time. Reconciliations can be made now.

ARIES (Mar 21 to Apr. 19) An associate could give you trouble in the morning so be tactful with this person. Sidestep an opponent who is conning.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't argue with a co-worker in the morning. Take a little time in the middle of the day and restore your energies.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make plans for whatever you want to do and carry through in a positive fashion. Be with congenials in the evening and have fun.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may find it difficult early in the day to get started on important tasks. Later obstacles are removed and success is yours.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your assets and liabilities properly and make long-range plans for the future. Avoid a foe who does not understand you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The planets are most favorable in the afternoon, so you can get much done after careful preparations in the morning.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may feel stalemated in the morning but if you figure out the cause, you can soon rectify matters. Go after personal desires tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) The morning is not good for getting the information you need, but the afternoon is fine. Attend the social this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A friend who understands your problems can be of great assistance to you now. Make new acquaintances in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Morning is not good for handling a civic affair, but you can get good results later in the day. New appliances can help you in your work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21, to Feb. 19) Do not expect any comfort from a person whose views are different from yours. Be care of one who has an eye on your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to keep those promises you have made to others. Take it easy in the evening. Show more devotion to loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will need much affection early in life to pave the way for future success. There is fine ability at cooperating with others. Your progeny could do well in big organizations and in whatever requires neatness and precision.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

An Understated Title For Jazz

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Original Rompin' Stompin' Hot and Heavy, Cool and Groovy Jazz Show" is the understated title of a coming TV special that CBS hopes will be watched by the kids for whom it is intended.

The one-hour show, to be aired Tuesday afternoon at 4 p.m. EST, stars some well-known jazz folk — Count Basie, Dizzy Gillespie, Stan Getz, Gerry Mulligan and Herbie Hancock among them.

Hosted by singer Dionne Warwick, it represents a welcome break from the classical music-only traditions of the other fine shows CBS has aired under the title of "Festival of Lively Arts for Young People."

Looking at it from the standpoint of an Old People, I'd describe this hour as a well-intentioned but flawed tour of jazz and its origins, from the works of black slaves to today's thumping disco-jazz. The flaw lies in the fact that the producers, apparently worried the kids will flee unless the screen is busy all the time, have summoned a gaggle of dancers to illustrate the music played.

And, with the choreographer from the Broadway musical, "The Wiz," directing things, the gaily costumed dancers cavort for about half the show, starting with a cakewalk to illustrate ragtime and ending with a jitterbug to illustrate the swing hit, "Stompin' at the Savoy."

Were this a show about dancing, I'd have no gripe. But it's about jazz. And the first half hour may leave young viewers thinking of jazz as merely travelin' music, rather than a major American art form.

Fortunately, the dancers cool it in the second half-hour, letting singer Joe Williams have a ball reprising his time-honored version of "Every Day I Have the Blues" with Count Basie's big, roaring band.

Gillespie, the puckish trumpeter and one of the creators of the brand of jazz called bop, zips through a number called "Bebop" at top speed and further help et the show back on course.

Baritone saxophonist Gerry Mulligan, illustrating the brand of the so-called "cool" style of West Coast jazz, does it nicely on "Jeru," a song he wrote, and gets a good assist in a fine, if uncredited solo by trumpeter Joe Newman.

A bit of a script goof comes in the next set, when Miss Warwick discusses how the turbulence of the 1960s — war, revolution, assassinations — was reflected in the angry, dissonant music of such jazz greats as Ornette Coleman and John Coltrane.

But to depict the music of what she calls those "heavy" times, she brings on tenor sax man Stan Getz, whose music is as far from discord and anger as night is from day. To further complicate matters, he blows a soft, lovely and noticeably un-angry bossa nova number.

Which may mean Getz either was doing a little put-on or the writer of the show didn't know his subject too well.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
Agri. Exten. Agent

"United States farmers now are in one of the most unstable price situations in many decades," said W. D. Toussaint, head of the Department of Economics and Business at N. C. State University.

How did this situation develop, and what is the outlook for the next few years?

From 1954 to 1973, world food output increased 2.8 per cent annually, while population grew at a rate of about 2 per cent a year. The food supply per person increased 21 per cent during this period.

Demand for food has risen not only with population growth, but also as a result of rising incomes in most parts of the world, particularly Japan and Europe.

The current period of farm price instability dates back to 1972, when weather conditions were usually bad in many parts of the world, including this country.

In addition, United States farmers' ability to produce has been hampered substantially in the past two years by energy problems.

Energy costs "show up directly and soon" in the cost of fertilizer and other inputs which are essential to high farm production.

Along with higher farm prices came an increase in the price of food, and consumers began to feel the effect. For decades, food prices have risen or fallen relative to most other prices in the U. S. economy.

Four big "unknowns" will influence agriculture greatly in the next ten years:

Technology — Are we approaching the limits of production in much of the world? Some think so. "We need to invest carefully and substantially in agricultural research in this country and throughout the world, production of agricultural commodities can be increased greatly in the next couple of decades."

Energy — Higher prices for energy and the products of energy have had an influence on agricultural production and will have a big influence in the future.

Weather — Some observers see a long range cycle of unfavorable weather conditions over the next few years. This evidence is not all that convincing, that long term shifts have occurred," stated Toussaint.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ82 ♥AQJ8 ♠6 ♦A62
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
? What do you bid now?

A.—North's jump shift has shown the equivalent of 19 points, so you are in the slam zone. However, there is a possibility that you have two fast club losers. Blackwood isn't the solution; if partner has only one ace, you won't know what to do. The winning bid is five spades, which asks partner about control in the unbid suit.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠107632 ♥93 ♦62 ♠AQ107
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—Even though you have five-card trump support, we recommend a simple raise to two spades. You have a mediocre hand with a minimum of distributional features; your hand would be much better if you had a singleton somewhere. If partner can't take another bid, we doubt that you will miss a game.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK98752 ♥10962 ♠9 ♦A6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
? What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. Your hand is worth 10 points in support of spades (though you promote the jack of spades 1 point, you should deduct a point for your 4-3-3-3 distribution). That is the upper limit for a simple raise. The hand has little future if partner can't bid again.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

Launching New Outdoor Drama

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — "Hernando DeSoto, Conquistador," an outdoor drama, will premiere June 25 in the Mid-American Amphitheater near here.

The Hot Springs National Park Foundation for the Performing Arts is producing the drama based on DeSoto's 1541 discovery of the thermal waters here.

The American Federation of Labor was organized Dec. 8, 1886, at a convention in Columbus, Ohio.

"UNIQUE "RECESSION-PROOF" "DEPRESSION PROOF" BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY VALUABLE DICTOGRAPH DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW AVAILABLE FOR YOU IN GREENVILLE

When the economy is good, our business is always strong. But when the economy slides, we're even stronger. Why? Because when times are hard, crime goes up and the demand for our products increases, even in the face of rising costs. What's more, when times are hard, good manpower is available, so you can build a strong organization. Read on and see how you can fit in. Guardian Industries, Inc., manufacturers and distributors of Dictograph Fire and Crime Security Equipment and Systems, has a valuable distributorship available in your area. This rare opportunity exists because of changes in marketing procedures due to national growth. Our fire and smoke detection systems, burglary alarm and hold-up systems, camera and TV surveillance programs, etc. insure substantial income from all facets of the commercial, institutional, residential and industrial markets, and are endorsed by many fire and police officials throughout the nation. What's more, the concept and quality of Dictograph Security Systems are probably the most widely used and highly respected among business leaders and prominent individuals from coast-to-coast.

As an added "plus," any present accounts in this territory may be turned over to the selected distributor under a national policy under which our distributors supervise the accounts and share in the service and/or lease income.

Because of our unique and intensive marketing and training programs, our selections will be based more on sound business background and solid character rating rather than on previous experience in the security field.

You owe it to yourself to learn more about this unusual, lucrative opportunity when one of our Senior Vice Presidents visits your area to conduct personal conferences within the next few weeks. For details, or to set up an appointment for his visit, please write us, or call collect, without delay.
