Lebanese Parliament Elect Christian President

By MICHAEL KEATS
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Parliament members braved the bullets and mortar bombs of frustrated leftists Saturday and elected conservative Christian banker Elias Sarkis as the new president of Lebanon.

Leftists, answering a call to use "all kinds of methods" to prevent the election, failed to stop 69 members—three more than a quorum—of the 98-man parliament from attending the special session in a no-man's land between the warring Christian and Moslem sides.

Sarkis won the election on the second ballot with 66 votes. Three deputies cast blank votes. In the first ballot Sarkis held a 63-5 lead with one deputy arriving too late to vote.

The result was a blow to the leftist alliance of socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, who had supported Raymond Ede to succeed President Suleiman Franjeh and had launched a campaign of fighting to block the parliament session.

Within hours of the vote, a band of armed men attacked the Beirut Carlton Hotel where Sarkis is staying but were driven off by a joint force of pro-Syrian Saiga guerrillas and Palestine Liberation Army troops.

Mortars exploded around the Villa Essely where parliament met. One explosion ruptured a water main 50 yards from the villa, sending a fountain gushing high into the air.

Burning automobile tires blocked the main routes to the villa and machinegun fire raked the area as members of parliament, traveling in convoys protected by armed bodyguards, ducked their way to the election.

Some cars were hit by flying shrapnel or bullets but none of the deputies was injured.

30 Towns And Villages In Ruins Death Toll May Reach 1,000

By PEGGY POLK
UDINE, Italy (UPI) — Soldiers Saturday sealed nameless bodies in coffins and helicopters spread disinfectants over the ruins of 30 towns and villages, trying to avert epidemics in the wake of Italy's deadliest earthquake in 61 years.

the earthquake that hit northeastern Italy Thursday was likely to reach 1,000.

He said more than 600 bodies had been dug out in towns in the Dolomite and Alpine foothills—some of them dating from before the Roman Empire—that were the center of the quake felt in eight European countries.

More aftershocks rocked the area Saturday morning—scientists counted the 37th at 10 a.m.—but geologists said there were growing weaker and more infrequent and there were no additional casualties.

The stench of death hung over shattered towns and flower-filled meadows as a springlike sun sent temperatures into the high 80s. Soldiers from the crack Alpine corps quickly sealed bodies in coffins as soon as they were identified by villagers standing around in a circle.

Many bodies were buried unnamed.

"We cannot say how many are missing," Barillari said. "Each town has its own morgue and is trying to identify its dead. But many bodies are so crushed they can't tell who is dead or missing."

Army officials said an entire mountainside overhanging the main road and railroad to Vienna was slowly sliding and threatened to engulf the village of Portis.

Bear Would Get Award

LINVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — If awards were given for "Mother of the Year," Grandfather Mountain's Mildred the Bear would be a definite candidate for the honor.

Mildred gave birth to two cubs of her own this year and recently adopted another cub, something wildlife experts say is unheard of for bears.

In late January, Mildred's 4-year-old daughter Honey gave birth to a female cub in Grandfather Mountain's environmental habitat for bears. At the time, Honey and the cub were the only bears in the habitat.

But more adult bears were scheduled to be placed in the habitat, and Grandfather Mountain officials knew they would have to take the cub away, since all bears but the mother are hostile to cubs.

In a three-hour session, the district convention delegates chose four delegates and three alternates to the national convention. Two of the delegates are pledged to Jimmy Carter and two to George Wallace. Two of the alternates are also pledged to Carter and the other is pledged to Wallace.

The number of delegates pledged to each candidate was determined in this year's primary. No other candidates will be represented from the First District. The delegates are required to cast votes for the pledged candidates in at least the first ballot at the national convention. After that, they are free to vote as they wish, although most indicated they will stick with their candidate until they are released by him or he wins the nomination.

Delegates and alternates pledged to Carter and Wallace were voted on separately. The two Wallace-pledged delegates were elected on the first ballot. They are Davis W. Koonce of Jones County and Donald James Parrotte of Pasquotank County.

It took a total of four ballots to determine the two delegates for Carter. James Sugg of Craven County, who currently serves as chairman of the state Democratic executive committee was chosen on the first ballot and Charles L. McLawhorn of Pitt County was chosen on the fourth ballot.

In voting for alternates, Gertrude E. Salt of Craven County was elected on the first ballot pledged to Wallace.

Kidnaped Woman Freed

By VAN VANUCH
Associated Press Writer
PROSPERITY, S.C. (AP)—The kidnaped wife of a Prosperity bank executive was found tied to a tree more than 100 miles from her home Friday night. A woman was arrested Saturday and charged in the abduction.

Mrs. Margie Bowers, 56, was abducted from her Prosperity home Wednesday morning, FBI agent Joseph Loeffler told newsmen. Loeffler, special agent in charge of the FBI in South Carolina, said she was accidentally discovered by a fisherman near Cheraw.

Mrs. Bowers, wife of Jacob Bowers, vice president of Southern Bank and Trust Co. in Prosperity, was hospitalized at an undisclosed location. "For the ordeal she underwent, she is doing pretty well," Loeffler said.

Arrested was Rosa Lee Lewallen, 40, of nearby Chapin. Loeffler said Mrs. Lewallen was charged with violating federal extortion statutes and state kidnaping laws.

She was to appear before a magistrate for a bail hearing later.

The woman's husband, John Benjamin Lewallen, 45, was also taken into custody but was not charged in the abduction. Loeffler said Lewallen was charged with being "a federal probation violator."

The Lewallens were arrested at their Chapin residence and offered no resistance, said Loeffler.

The FBI agent said Bowers received "several telephone ransom demands" asking for $100,000. He said there were no attempts to pick up the ransom. Loeffler also said a ransom note was received through the mail on Friday. He would not elaborate further.

Loeffler said authorities had interviewed Mrs. Bowers but he would not comment on what she said. He said officers have not been able to determine how long she was tied to the tree.

He would give no further details on the case.

Loeffler, appearing at a news conference with Chief J.P. "Pete" Strom of the State Law Enforcement division (SLED) and Newberry County Sheriff L.L. "Slim" Henderson, broke a long silence by law enforcement authorities on the kidnaping.

Guilty On Five Counts

CORDELE, Ga. (UPI) — A 43-year-old grandmother Saturday was found guilty on five counts of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in the poisoning deaths of five members of her family.

A Crisp County jury of seven men and five women, which had deadlocked 11-1 late Friday, deliberated for about four hours before returning with the verdict against Janie Lou Gibbs.

Mrs. Gibbs' brother, Air Force Maj. J.E. Hickox, said he was "not pleased with the verdict but she's had her day in court." He said she would not appeal the verdict because of a lack of funds.

The jury had gotten the case Friday, but deadlocked 11-1 after deliberating for about seven hours. Duke told them at 2 a.m. Saturday to get some sleep and report back at 10 a.m.

Ocmulgee Judicial Circuit Judge Joseph Duke sentenced Mrs. Gibbs to five consecutive life terms.

She had been charged with the arsenic poisoning of her husband, Clayton; sons, Ronnie, who was in his 20s, Melvin, 16, and Roger, 13, and her five-month-old grandson, Ronnie, during a period of almost two years.

Mrs. Gibbs was declared insane in 1968 and committed to Central State Hospital in Milledgeville. Last week, she was declared sane and ordered to stand trial.

Two Wrecks Friday

Two cars were totaled and an estimated $2,200 damage was done to two others in wrecks investigated by Greenville Police Friday night.

Cars driven by Richard L. Keeting of Apt. 339 Old London Inn and Curtis Ray Corey of Ayden collided on Evans Street at around 7:50 p.m. Damage was listed as total to both cars by police and they charged Keeting with a safe movement violation. Minor injuries were suffered by Corey and members of his family.

A 7:00 p.m. Friday wreck involved cars driven by Trudy Earlane Whitehurst of 205 Patrick St. and Willie Mae Hammond of 314 Conley St. No charges were filed in the wreck which occurred at the intersection of Hooker and Fairlane Roads. Damage to the Whitehurst car was estimated at $2,000 and an estimated $200 was done to the Hammond vehicle.

Larcenies Investigated

Greenville Police are investigating two larcenies reported Saturday.

A bicycle was stolen sometime Saturday morning from the residence of Johnny Green of 700D W. Fourteenth St. It was valued at $100.

A battery valued at around $35 was stolen from a car parked at the residence of Alexander Baker of 612B Howell St. The theft was said to have occurred sometime Friday night or Saturday morning.

A CB radio was stolen from a car parked in an Evans Street parking lot Friday evening. The radio was owned by Ronald D. Weeks of Tarboro and valued at $300. Police are investigating.

IN MEMORY OF MY MOTHER MOLLIE S. "DARVIN" BARNHILL THIS MOTHER'S DAY

Oh, God, my God, You have taken my Mother away and I am numb with shock.
How quickly you called her, how mercifully.
She simply stopped what she was doing and looked up and You were there.

The arms of my friend's console me, the love of my family surrounds me,
The goodness and kindness of my neighbors sustain me like a staff.

Though I am prostrate with grief, I am supported, as by a great shining column that rises up within me. I can lift up my head, I can walk upright, yes, I can even smile. The ache of my heart becomes bearable and will, I know one day heal.

To the end, she loved us too, to the very end.

Help us, who were her children, to draw near to each other now, and near to her.

MY PRAYER,

New Note For Ford, New Support For Carter

By IRA R. ALLEN
 United Press International
 President Ford and Jimmy Carter Saturday each predicted victory in next week's Nebraska primary, Ford striking a new campaign note of "prosperity, peace and trust" and Carter still taking nothing for granted.

Ford and Carter campaigned in Nebraska, which with West Virginia and Connecticut hold primaries Tuesday.
 Tuesday balloting is important to Ford, who has lost four straight primaries to Reagan, and to Frank Church, the Idaho senator making his first primary challenge to Carter in Nebraska.
 The West Virginia Democratic primary pits favorite son Sen. Robert Byrd against George Wallace, and the Connecticut Democratic primary involves Carter, Morris Udall and Henry Jackson, who hopes a victory would resurrect his campaign.

 Carter, endorsed Friday by Leonard Woodcock, head of the United Auto Workers, and Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., won more labor support in Michigan Saturday.
 He was endorsed by the presidents of the Detroit and Metropolitan AFL-CIO Council and the United-Steelworkers Union of Michigan. Tom Turner of the AFL-CIO Council is one of the state's most powerful black labor leaders.

 Before heading to Missouri to dedicate a statue of Harry Truman, Ford met with campaign workers in Omaha and Lincoln and talked to the new graduates. At each stop he stressed his accomplishments, saying they can be summed up with "three pretty good words — prosperity, peace and trust."
 At the Nevada State Democratic Convention, delegates had to register their presidential preference, and Edmund G. Brown Jr. defeated Carter 30 per cent to 21 per cent, with Jackson, Church, Udall and Wallace well behind. The delegates will be bound by results of the May 25 primary.

 Brown, contesting in the May 18 Maryland primary, addressed a day-long conference on full employment at American University in Washington. He won the endorsement of Bob Petersen, president of the 200,000 member Greater Washington Central Labor Council, who had been a Jackson supporter.

Would Require One Year Notice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon would have to give Congress a year's notice before shutting down any major military facility, if legislation now in the Senate passes.
 The bill also would mandate that the Pentagon provide Congress with a detailed study on how proposed cuts would affect the local economy and would specifically prohibit 13 installation cuts already announced by the Pentagon without the one-year notice.

Assignment Stuns Top Lawyers

DETROIT (AP) — Three of Detroit's most prestigious and well paid lawyers have been appointed to handle the appeals of three convicted dope dealers who say they can't afford their own lawyers.
 The appointments Friday by Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Justin Ravitz stunned the lawyers. They may try to get out of the assignment.
 The appeals stem from a conspiracy trial of police officers and alleged drug dealers. The trial lasted seven months.

Maine Indians Become Eligible

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Indians in Maine became eligible this week for what may amount to $5 million a year in federal aid. Still unsettled is their claim that almost half the state was illegally taken from them.
 The aid will come through the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, acting in response to a court decision that Maine's Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes are entitled to the same protection and assistance that federal law provides for Indians in other areas.
 Until the court action became final recently, only Maine was considered responsible for the 4,000 Indians within its borders.

Clerks Being Honored

The week of May 10 through May 14 has been proclaimed as Municipal Clerk's Week by Mayor Percy Cox "in recognition of the vital services they perform and their outstanding dedication to the communities they represent."
 Cox pointed out that "the efficiency and order with which government carries out its public functions is strongly reliant on procedures and records." He added, "the municipal clerks administer the procedures and keep the records."
 The mayor maintained, "the strength of local government depends upon the citizens' opinion of it; and such opinion is formed largely by the image set forth by the municipal government employees."
 According to Cox, the municipal clerk is the "official most closely in daily contact with the citizenry, and therefore is a key position to mold sound public opinion."
 "During our Bicentennial observance," he said, "it is most appropriate that we recognize an historic municipal office which grew out of the traditions of our democratic heritage."

On FBI-Editor Relationship Investigation Expected

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — While government officials remained silent on the matter, there were indications Saturday there would be a full scale federal investigation of the relationship between a former newspaper copy editor and the FBI.
 Jacque Srouji, a 31-year-old copy editor for The Tennessean, was fired Friday by newspaper publisher John Seigenthaler because of her alleged relationship with the FBI.

Shortly after reports about her FBI link and firing surfaced, Mrs. Srouji dropped out of sight. Her husband, S.H. Srouji, an engineer with the State Highway Department, said she had gone into seclusion because of threatening telephone calls.
 "She called a staff member here before she left," Seigenthaler said. "She (the staff member) said she was sad and weeping."

Sources close to the story said both the Justice Department and a congressional committee would investigate allegations Mrs. Srouji fed information about two Tennessee staffers to the FBI.
 The FBI, under heavy fire recently for its use of reporters as sources, also is expected to conduct a its own investigation of the Srouji case, an informed source said.

Seigenthaler declined to elaborate on an earlier statement in which he said Mrs. Srouji was "separated" from her job after admitting she funneled information about Tennessee staff members to the FBI.

"The action regarding her has been taken as a result of certain information she gave me relating to her past and recent communications with the Federal Bureau of Investigation," Seigenthaler said in his prepared statement.

"The most important factor in my decision to separate Mrs. Srouji from the newspaper was that it appeared to me as the result of her conversations, the rights and interests of at least two other members of our newspaper's staff were involved."

Mrs. Srouji was described by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson as an "FBI informer" who "used her employment as a journalist to try to sidetrack a congressional investigation of the FBI."

Anderson referred to Mrs. Srouji's appearance before the House Energy and Environment Subcommittee on April 26 during which she said she had been given access to FBI documents unavailable to the subcommittee.

Spoke At Education Meet

Norfleet Sugg

Norfleet Sugg, Director of the Marketing Department of Planters National Bank in Rocky Mount was the guest speaker at the D. H. Conley Cooperative Occupational Education Department's Employee-Employer Breakfast Wednesday.

The breakfast was held to honor the 51 businesses and students who have participated in the World of Work Program this year.

Sugg explained that both parties in the working relationship benefit from the program.

Sugg spoke about the four stages of skills including unconscious incompetence, conscious competence, conscious incompetence, and unconscious competence.

Four points that Sugg urged the students to remember are as follows: know your job, believe in your firm, keep learning, and put yourself in another's place.

Carl Toot, Director of Occupational Education presented each firm a certificate of appreciation for allowing the students to work at their firms. Each student will be presented a certificate upon completion of the course.

The coordinators of the breakfast were Mrs. Annie Chappell of Business and Office Occupations, J. Milton May of Diversified Occupations and Mrs. Beulah Mebane Home Economics Cooperative Education.

Council On Aging Fund Drive Set

In coordination with Senior Citizen's Month, the Pitt County Council on Aging (PCCOA) will be initiating a fund raising drive during May.

PCCOA has secured a $10,000 grant to be used for transportation for the elderly in the county if it can raise $1,000 in matching funds.

According to Hugh Stanley, treasurer for the council, funds for operational purposes such as telephone, postage, and publicity are also needed in addition to the grant funds.

"We hope to establish an office with staff members similar to the senior citizen centers in Johnston and Durham counties. These counties, however have budgets of $30,000 and up and have much community support for their programs," Stanley said.

"During the past two years we have incorporated as a non-profit organization and have conducted a county-wide needs assessment survey."

"The No. 1 need expressed in the needs assessment survey by the senior citizens was transportation to public services and also the necessity of a center for senior citizens which would serve as a clearing house for information, services, and an activity center for senior citizens."

"If we collect the matching funds, the transportation system would be a demonstration project. A local church has offered the use of a mini-van as well the services of volunteer drivers and has donated office space."

"We are presently contacting individuals, civic clubs, churches and local businesses and industries to solicit support in the fund raising campaign. Also the senior citizens clubs will be aiding in the fund raising drive."

"We are hoping that a number of private citizens will make donations in support of our efforts."

Anyone interested in contributing or in helping with the fund raising drive should contact Rev. Dan Earnhardt, president, by calling 758-2030 or Hugh Stanley at 756-3130 ext. 53, or write Pitt County Council on Aging, P.O. Box 423, Greenville.

Other Disputes Drag On

Frisco Strike Ended

By United Press International
 A 39-day-old San Francisco city workers strike came to an end early Saturday and agreement was reached on a proposal to end a 5-week technicians' strike against the National Broadcasting Company.

Labor disputes involving the United Rubber Workers walk-out against four major tire producers; Anheuser-Busch beer bottlers; Teamsters against the United Parcel Service in 13 midwestern and western states, and apartment house workers in New York City, dragged on.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors capitulated to a demand of the city craft unions and removed from a June 8 ballot two proposals. One would have required dismissal proceedings against striking city employees, and the other would have locked craft workers pay cuts for two years. Agreements were reached on fact-finding committees to investigate the dispute.

Water and telephone services had been affected at times, but chief burden of the strike to San Franciscans was the disruption of city transportation. Motorists, some of them volunteers aiding persons without cars, managed to cope. Public transportation drivers voted Wednesday to return to work, and their action was regarded as a step toward bringing about the settlement.

Agreement on a proposal to end the NBC strike, called a "lockout" by the striking National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, was reached in Washington under federal mediation. The more than 1,700 striking employees must vote on the proposal before it becomes effective. Union officials agreed to its submission to vote, but made no recommendation.

Talks between New York City landlords and the Building Service Employees International Union were in a deadlock going into the weekend. The landlords Friday made their first new offer in months of negotiations, and union officials rejected it.

Sanitation department workers collected garbage which had begun to pile up, but only where a health emergency had been declared; otherwise they refused to cross picket lines. Extra crews were put on to cope with the smelly refuse, and garbage bags were left before Gracie Mansion, official home of Mayor Abe Beame, in tenants' protests.

Many Investors In Hospital

The Pitt County commissioners Monday moved things along last week for the ECU medical school use of Pitt Memorial Hospital by approving hospital change orders totalling $1.35 million.

The funds will be used for construction of additional facilities at the new hospital to accommodate the medical school. Included in this first phase of medical school construction are outside walls and interior floor slabs for an addition at the front of the hospital and also changes in the mechanical, plumbing and electrical systems of the new building.

Money for this and other changes in the hospital now under construction will come from the state. The medical school additions to the hospital proper will push the cost of the structure over $20 million. Once the family practice center, the medical school basic sciences building and other planned facilities are added the total cost of the complex will be well in excess of $50 million.

It is fortunate that funding for the medical school additions to the hospital came in time for basic changes to be made to the building before it was completed. The building, as originally planned, is now 80 percent complete and it is expected that the medical school additions can be underway to avoid major renovations after the building is occupied.

There will be a lot of county, state and money from other sources invested in the hospital complex when it is completed. But considering the multiple uses that will be made of the facilities, we can consider it a bargain.

"Okay, Reagan... so you got lucky again! Now, put me down and let's get on with it!"

Planning For Better Emergency Service

If the physicians can be found, Pitt Memorial Hospital will soon enter a new era of emergency room service.

Administrator Jack Richardson says that full-time staffing of the emergency room is expected to begin July 1.

One physician is already committed to join the staff and negotiations are underway with three others.

Previously the emergency room has been handled by staff physicians on a rotating basis.

The new arrangement will be more costly to those using the emergency room service, but the new arrangement should provide better emergency service.

Metric System Affected

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—In an election year, it seems everything that happens in state government is affected by politics.

Even the metric system. One of the brighter ideas developed by the State Department of Public Instruction was to have dual road signs around the state. Then, motorists could get used to the idea of having signs telling them the speed limit in kilometers per hour, and distances in kilometers as well as miles.

But Public Instruction is under the leadership of Democrat Craig Phillips, and the Department of Transportation has been under Republican rule for the past three years.

Such signs would cost too much, cause motorist confusion, create unnecessary work for highway crews, etc. A couple were posted in the vicinity of the Research Triangle Park, but not widely.

Then, educators needed a public boost to call attention to the upcoming conversion to metrics.

But Republican Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., couldn't break away from his busy schedule to proclaim this week Metric Week. Last week, he found time to christen a Republican retreat of the motorized history van into a Bicentennial display.

And while a high school band played the McDonald theme song: "You... You're The One" the governor regaled newsmen with a long-running, detailed description of the late movie he had watched on TV the night before.

Nonetheless, conversion to metrics is underway with the national law signed into effect last December, and with state textbooks and classrooms slated for full use of metrics by 1981.

The key to it, says Robert R. Jones, director of mathematics at the Department of Public Instruction, is to "think metrics."

Conversion should be avoided. Don't try to remember how many pounds make a kilogram... just learn to use metric scales and thermometers so the figures become comfortable, Jones says.

For youngsters, it will be easy. The hard part is for grownups who must unlearn the old in order to learn the new, Jones said.

That Mule

Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., has a Mister Clean image in personal appearance, personal habits, and politics. So much so that he was recently asked if he is really all that clean, or does he, perhaps, have at least one minor vice.

"You just get with me on that farm down at Wilson and follow a mule around for half a day, and you'll see what my vice is," Hunt joshed. His language, does, indeed, reflect that early training during very private moments.

A Cold Day

Hunt was on the receiving end of some good-natured ribbing from an opponent last week.

When George Wood was preparing to announce his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, he remarked: "Jim Hunt said it would be a cold day when George Wood runs for governor... well, the temperature in Raleigh this morning was the lowest recorded anywhere in the nation."

Political Muscle

Such has become the political clout of the organizations of state employees and teachers that even legislators who vote with the two powerful groups mutter privately about "turning the keys of the state vault over to them."

A representative suggested to a senator this week that perhaps a law giving the employee unions veto power over legislation would finally satisfy them. "Why do that? They already have it," the senator snorted. "Yes, but it would be nice if they had it by statute rather than simple understanding," the representative replied.

Sunday Morning Notes

Two college age boys were overheard talking on a street corner.

Obviously they hadn't seen each other for a while and one asked the other what he was doing.

"I'm living at home and doing my best to avoid going to work," the friend replied. Hang in there.

And a man ordered some dental floss in a local drug store. The clerk took his money and rung up the sale. "Do you want it wrapped?" she asked.

"No," the customer replied. "I'll use it here." All 100 yards?

Up in a mountain county a county commissioner chairman and a secondary roads councilman have been disagreeing in a series of newspaper statements about the adequacy of road maintenance.

The secondary roads councilman reportedly complained that adequate funds were not available, mentioning the money being spent in the Coastal Plains on the ECU medical school.

In a reply the county commissioner chairman said, "You mention... something about the East Carolina Medical School. Again I refuse comment on items about which I have no facts"... but he asked, "Do you want us to live in the mud and die without a doctor?" An interesting question.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wilson, Jr. visited their son, J. D. (Jeff) Wilson, III, at Selma, Alabama in April.

Jeff is a first lieutenant in the Air Force and an instructor-pilot at Craig Air Force Base at Selma. He has been attending First Baptist Church of Selma, a large church with 2,500 members.

On a Sunday the Wilsons all went to services at the First Baptist Church.

After services a friend who Jeff had met at the church came up and was introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson. The friend told the parents how much he had enjoyed knowing their son.

"By the way I've been calling your son a Yankee," the friend commented, "until one day I asked him his name."

"He looked me straight in the eye and answered, 'Jefferson Davis Wilson III'." The friend, recognized that this young man from North Carolina carried the name of the Alabama-born president of the Confederacy. He recalled that he laughed and commented, "You can't be no Yankee; that's for sure."

No, not with a name like Jefferson Davis Wilson III.

It was sighted over New York at 4 a.m., just as dawn was breaking. Thousands of early risers cheered.

After cruising over Manhattan for 18 minutes, the 803-foot ship circled south, directly for Lakehurst.

At 5:10 a.m., the Hindenburg for the first time touched soil in the United States—on the first of its 10 scheduled round trip commercial voyages from Germany during the summer.

Organic Garden A Boon

Other Editors Say Ominous Report

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

A gloomy forecast concerning the changing weather and its impact on the world economy has been made by the Central Intelligence Agency. Even while reading it, one must wonder how it is that the CIA, hardly the organization to forecast future weather conditions, would be issuing such a report.

According to the intelligence agency, millions in India face starvation, China will suffer a major famine every five years and Russia will lose a major wheat growing area because of catastrophic changes in the earth's climate.

The anticipated changes, which would return the climate on this planet to a condition similar to that of 100 to 400 years ago, would cause economic and political upheavals "almost beyond comprehension," the report says.

And that is why the CIA is involved. The CIA report basically was concerned with possible political and economic threats to U. S. security from such drastic changes. It did not go into detail about possible alterations in the U. S.

One entire section of the CIA report was kept secret. Under a section titled "recommendations," was only one word: "deleted."

Based on a climatic change study made by Reid A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin, the report says the world's climate is cooling and will revert to conditions centuries earlier.

"The change of climate is cooling some significant agricultural areas and causing drought in others," the report said. "If, for example, there is a Northern Hemisphere drop of one degree centigrade it would mean that India will have a major drought every four years and can only support three-fourths of its present population."

And it warned that China would have a major famine every five years. Canada, a major exporter, would lose over 50 percent of its production capability and 75 percent of its exporting capabilities. Food production in the U. S. would not be significantly affected. But the report arouses the curiosity of the reader about that part of the recommendations that were so secret that they were deleted.

THE INSIDE REPORT

San Francisco Says 'No'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
SAN FRANCISCO—History will record that the mighty municipal unions lost the great San Francisco strike of 1976—and perhaps much more—on April 23 when labor leader John Henning failed to persuade Democratic politicians to urge capitulation upon the city.

Except for one telegram sent the city-county board of supervisors by one obedient Congressman (Rep. John Burton), the Democratic silence was deafening. Henning, savvy executive secretary-treasurer of the California AFL-CIO, "is either going through the motions or out of touch with what's happening," according to one influential Democrat. What's happening is that the poisonous labor-Democratic cycle threatening America's cities has been cracked with potentially profound impact in towns far from the Golden Gate.

Nowhere has that cycle seemed more uncrackable than in San Francisco, rivaling even New York as a union town. Democratic politicians, bankrolled by labor, automatically acquiesce in bloated pay and pension packages for city workers, forcing taxes up and taxpayers into the suburbs. The cycle was cracked when the 11-member board of supervisors (including nine Democrats) said "enough" to labor's demand for "more." Henning, representing labor, was trying to restore the cycle. He failed because not merely because of nine Democratic supervisors but an entire city is saying enough. Even supervisors tempted to buckle would have risked severe political reprisal, so strong is public sentiment. At this writing, only bitter-end opposition from the plumbers' union prevents ending the five-week strike with a settlement which, save for face-saving aspects, would be a clear defeat for the unions.

Even when the most outrageous pay scales are trimmed as demanded by the supervisors (from $17,353 down to $16,178 for street sweepers), higher property taxes are still inescapable. Far into the future, the city remains burdened by a pension system that actually permits police officers to take home more pay in retirement than in work.

Nevertheless, if San Francisco can resist, so can mayors of less unionized towns. First-year Mayor George Moscone received a call last week from the mayor of Wichita Falls, Texas, with this message: Hang in there, podnuh: we're rootin' for you!

Ironically, political developments last year, connected with this historic confrontation, have largely insulated Moscone himself from the anti-labor union revolt. When the supervisors decided in 1975 they must stand firm to avoid bankruptcy, thereby triggering a police and fire strike, the old labor-Democratic cycle began to function. Outgoing Mayor Joseph Alioto, long backed by labor, intervened to overturn the board and grant the demands.

The ensuing public revulsion had multiple repercussions: The supervisors stripped down the mayor's power; voters adopted a cutback in municipal salaries; labor-backed Democrat Moscone barely nosed out his mayoral opposition, underdog conservative Republican supervisor John Bargelata.

Strength For Today

CONVICTION WITHOUT LOVE

The great jurist and philosopher of the nineteenth century, Oliver Wendell Holmes, once said that a bigot is like the pupil of the eye—the more light you pour upon it the more it contracts. A bigot is not out to learn the truth or to spread it. He is out to satisfy his overblown ego by forcing everyone to agree with him.

The men who put Jesus to death had strong convictions. So have all the persecutors in the history of the world. Nothing is so terrible as the cruel work of a man who believes that he alone has the truth. Bigots are often frustrated by external circumstances they cannot control. They lash out at other people often more in fear than anger, simply because they cannot come to grips with these circumstances which so oppress them.

It takes a fine sense of moral balance to keep from going to extremes in anything. Every virtue may become a vice, if pressed too far. Bigotry is in this category. It may be defined as conviction without love.

Individual Investors Sought Out

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)

Amidst lamentations over what is said to be the sad slow decline of the individual investor as a force in the securities market there comes an encouraging, contrary view from the biggest broker of all. "We disagree," said Thomas Sherman, vice president of Merrill Lynch, Pierce Fenner & Smith. "We've disagreed from the beginning."

In his firm, he said, the individual not only is welcome but is sought, encouraged and accommodated with special plans and even commission discounts. And the number is growing.

The indications of decline were contained in the latest New York Stock Exchange census of shareholders, which showed millions of small investors leaving the market in recent years. "We don't think they ever did," said Sherman.

Merrill Lynch bases its belief partly on its own experience. "The number of our individual accounts has grown every single year," said Sherman. Questioning the accuracy of the exchange census, he commented: "We never saw a drop."

The specific reason for the commentary was the recent decision by the N.Y. Stock Exchange to drop its Monthly Investment Plan, which afforded small investors the opportunity to purchase even fractions of shares.

That news fell into a context molded by years of growing indifference to small investor needs. After courting him during lean days, many brokers scorned him when business was good. Commissions also were raised.

Some commercial banks then stepped in, offering small investors the chance to purchase shares of a small number of blue chip stocks at the teller's window. But some banks have doubts about continuing in that business.

All along, says Merrill Lynch, it has maintained a commitment to the small fellow, and it offers the evidence of more than 400,000 clients of its Sharebuilder Plan, which it says is better than the MIP.

At the time the exchange discontinued the MIP earlier this year the various participating brokers had only 17,000 accounts, in part because of the poor market but also because they failed to aggressively promote the concept.

"As far as some brokers are concerned the MIP was dead for 25 years," said Sherman of the plan that was begun in 1951 by the exchange. But Merrill Lynch's plan, which broke away from MIP in 1974, has prospered, he said.

A customer opening a Sharebuilder Plan may invest any amount in any stock listed on the New York and American stock exchanges, as well as in more than 500 over-the-counter stocks, or stocks not listed on major exchanges.

After signing up at any Merrill Lynch office, the investor thereafter can simply fill out a brief form and mail it with his check to the company. The order will be executed on the morning of the next business day after receipt.

The big feature is the opportunity to invest by the dollar instead of only by the share. Instead of deciding how many shares to buy, the purchaser can instead plan on a set amount to be invested.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Keeping Cherokee Language

The Justice Department has issued a proposed regulation whereby ballots in Jackson and Swain counties must be printed in both English and Cherokee, based on the Voting Rights Act passed by Congress last summer.

Alex Brock, executive secretary of the N.C. Board of Elections, feels this is foolish, since almost all the Cherokees can read English.

The Lumbee Indians in Robeson and Hoke counties are in a little different circumstance, since they do not have a printed language.

The Cherokees often print documents in their newspaper, The One Feather, in both English and Cherokee. Some of this, we understand, is a matter of pride, and part of the program to preserve the language. The Cherokees take deep pride in their language, and the written word, and it is well to preserve it to the fullest.

And speaking of the Cherokee language, it was just several years ago that a legislator made the fatal mistake of saying in the General Assembly that the Cherokees had cussed words in their language. No such thing, and the lawmaker was severely rebuked for his unfounded remark, which he based on ignorance.

We are happy that the Cherokee language is being preserved. It is a beautiful language, and cannot be improved by white influence. The Mountaineer (Waynesville)

Bidding For Teacher Votes

Even the veteran General Assembly leader, Senator Ralph Scott, admits he is hopelessly confused by the budget commission hearings on a pay raise for state employees.

But there is one thing clear to Senator Scott and anyone else who is listening—come hell or high water the state employees will get a raise in the forthcoming bob-tailed legislative session.

How and how much are the questions that are smogging skies over Raleigh. The North Carolina Association of Teachers, which has the largest war chest on the scene, officially is sticking by its demands for a cost-of-living raise of 16 to 19 per cent. If it weren't politically inadvisable, members of the budget commission would be rolling around the floor in their mirth at such an implausible figure. Saner educational leaders are likely to settle for the best political bargain they can make.

Right now the best bargain appears to be in the neighborhood of five per cent but that's a very relaxed neighborhood. The promises appear to be on the rise as the August primaries near.

Jim Hunt, the leading Democratic aspirant for governor, has raised the ante to 6.5 per cent. This, of course, is 1.5 per cent better than the figure that most legislators, through some sort of unwritten agreement, had seemed to be striving for.

The united front to the teacher lobby may be falling apart. If so we can anticipate within the next few days, some competitive "bids" for the teacher vote from candidates Ed O'Herron and Tom Strickland.

Who'll say 6.75? 6.75 once, 6.75 twice... 6.97 thanks... now who'll say 7.2... —The Salisbury Evening Post

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Where are the ideals of common decency and fair play that America and the free enterprise system profess to display?

Big business and state agencies walk hand-in-hand in this state to try and coerce the small laborer into maintaining subservience and obedience in some situations where it is totally degrading to one's character.

In many instances, big business spends a good deal of its time and efforts in trying to stamp on the very apparatus that made them big in the beginning—labor.

Some of our state agencies lean over backwards to maintain them in this position. In my opinion, this shows a cheapness on their part and a total debasement of the whole free enterprise system.

Workers beware! Never let your pride stand in the way of opposing big business or state agencies for you may be the next victim to be walked over.

H.C. Pope
Rt. 2, Grifton

This year's strike started when the supervisors, obeying the mandate of the voters, cut back the most wanton pay scales (ranging up to 62 per cent above prevailing private wage scales). The unions, expecting Moscone to follow Alito's example and try to save them despite the mayor's loss of power, were sorely disappointed. He didn't even want to. "I have no intent to go in and grant them a settlement," Moscone told us last week.

Actually, Moscone has pushed for somewhat easier terms (a wage freeze instead of a rollback) but has been stonewalled by the supervisors, led by Barbagelata and chairman Quentin Kipp, a sensible, hard-line Democrat. Neither was budgeted by the fact that package-bombs, masquerading as boxes of candy, were mailed to their houses but, thanks to an alert Kipp aide, were discovered in time.

Behind their determination is a remarkable spirit in this most liberal of Western cities. Without the well-paid street sweepers, most city streets (except downtown) are cleaner than ever, thanks to citizen effort. Though the striking municipal bus drivers deprive some 250,000 San Franciscans of transportation, there are few complaints. A sense of sacrifice for a greater cause, akin to wartime, pervades the city.

Indeed, supervisors fear their own lynching if they bend even as much as Moscone wants. Barbagelata, picking up hitch-hiking hippies in business San Francisco last week, got the same admonition he gets from downtown merchants burdened with declining business: "Don't give in."

The public's attitude is reflected in the labor movement. When longshoremen and teamsters refused support, grandiose talk of a general strike ended. Non-striking city workers daily cross picket lines. Were it not for the plumbers' insistence on a 35-hour week at $23,843 annually (instead of $20,143, as set by the supervisors), the strike would be over.

Still, Jack Henning, a distinguished former Under Secretary of Labor, views this as a dispute between employer and union where the public has no say. "I don't believe in majority rule when the majority is wrong," Henning told us, pointing to the Nazi Reichstag and the Jim Crow South.

But those analogies hardly reflect the people of San Francisco, burdened by taxes and appalled by $17,000-a-year street sweepers. While Henning cites the old Samuel Gompers demand for "more," the people have said "enough" in a way that penetrates not only the rocco city hall here but echoes across a continent.

A Conservative View

Some Baloney—Not Too Much—From Carter

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Jimmy Carter to his credit, has begun to respond to demands that he come out of the clouds and get down to earth. In his first position paper, on economic policy, he descends from about thirty thousand feet to maybe five or ten. He has a way yet to go.

The paper, taken as a whole, is a reasonably good effort. It contains some baloney, but not a vast deal of baloney. As a moderately liberal Democrat, Carter reflects his party's traditional faith in the wonder-working powers of the federal government. Carter adopts and embraces Gerald Ford's program of incentives within the private sector, but he proposes various stimulative programs within the public sector also. There is nothing in this paper that is shrill, or doctrinaire—or very original, either.

In Carter's view, the major economic problem is not the risk of renewed inflation; it is "unacceptably high unemployment." He views the present situation, in the worst possible light, which is fair enough in a political campaign. With a flourish of italic trumpets, he states his own goal:

"We must give highest priority to achieving a steady reduction of unemployment and achieving full employment—a job for everyone who wishes one—as rapidly as possible, while reducing inflation."

The comment may reasonably be ventured that this is not Jimmy Carter's goal alone. It is everyone's goal. It is the trick of the week. Surely it is the goal of the Ford administration. The problem is how to put more people to work without incurring the monstrous deficits that would send the cost of living up again.

Carter's idea is to pursue "an expansionary fiscal and monetary policy in the near future, with some budget deficits if necessary." (Comment: A little baloney here. Carter knows deficits will be necessary under his program; there is no "if" about it.) Carter says that with a progressively managed economy, "we can attain a balanced budget within the context of full employment by 1979."

The foregoing sentence contains the gimickery that Carter elsewhere shuns. What he is talking about is the mythical "full employment budget." This is a legendary creature, like the unicorn, never observed on land or sea; it exists solely in the imagination of economists who observe that we could balance the budget if we had the revenues that we would have if everyone had a job. This is the dream of the two hungry hoboes: If they had some bread, they could make a ham sandwich, if they had some ham.

Carter would achieve his rapid reduction in unemployment, without reviving double-digit inflation, by first expanding the money supply, then creating incentives for private industry to hire the unemployed, and then enlarging the role of government. He says: The federal government has an obligation to provide funds for useful and productive public employment of those whom private business cannot or will not hire."

Pause: The federal government can provide such funds in three ways only—by taxing the people, by borrowing money outright, or by printing money. What "funds," net, is Carter talking about? How would he obtain them over what period of years would he provide these "meaningful public jobs"? What additional bureaucracy does he envision?

The entire statement can be obtained from Carter headquarters, P.O. Box 1976, Atlanta, Ga. 30301. Those who are interested in examining Carter's ideas will want to obtain a copy and make up their own minds. This is a carefully composed document, presumably expressing Carter's best thought on how to solve the nation's economic problems. As the probable presidential nominee of his party, he has an obligation to speak deliberately and explicitly; and the rest of us have an obligation to listen to what he has to say.

WHAT IS SO RARE AS THIS DAY IN MAY!

Back-To-Nature Pitch Reaches Make-Up, Too

America's marketplace has an uncanny ability to cash in on every new societal trend. For instance, Americans are now on a back-to-nature kick, and just look at the products that have suddenly become "natural." There's natural hair color that lets you be you—you can either use it to color your hair or to seal the banister so that you can slide down without getting splinters. And every mother knows that she's depriving her children if she doesn't feed them wholesome Twostess Hinkies—they may not have any food value but they are wholesome. But the newest thing to join the parade of natural products is make-up.

Now, I know all about natural make-up because a couple of weeks ago a friend of mine asked me to make-up party.

"Please come, Gail," she said. "You'll get a free facial, and, frankly, you could use it."

"Gee thanks," I said. "But Phillip likes the natural look so I don't use much make-up."

"Listen, there is nothing more natural than this make-up. Why, you won't even know it's there."

I wasn't quite sure about the reasons for wearing make-up if I couldn't even tell it was there, but I decided to give it a try. Besides, since I had hardly been out of the house since the baby was born, the idea of a party was exciting.

Unfortunately there seemed to be some disparity between my idea of a party and my friend's idea. When I got to her house, there were three people there—her, the make-up lady, and me. That left the make-up lady with time to concentrate her full power of persuasion on me.

"Welcome, she said. 'Tonight I'm going to introduce you to the complete line of Herb Moss Nature Products. First, I'm going to cleanse your face with a pore purifier blended exclusively for Mr. Moss by his special team of chemists. Now you'll notice that your skin is naturally a little acid," she continued, sticking a piece of litmus paper on my nose. "But watch what happens when I cleanse this area with soap."

She cleaned one cheek, then slapped on another piece of litmus paper. "Soap ruins your pH balance, but Herb Moss Pore Purifier protects it." She smeared some of that on the other cheek, then slapped on another piece of litmus paper. By the time she finished, my face looked like a Bicentennial confetti concession.

Then we got to the next phase of the facial. She peeled off the litmus paper and smoothed on some cream from a bottle the size of a thimble. "Now this is our new wonder product, Bee Milk Emollient. It's made exclusively from the milk of queen bees. No drone milk for us," she said proudly.

"But how do you milk a bee?" I asked.

"It's not easy. That's why this bottle costs $25.00. A real bargain considering our employee turnover."

Finally, we reached the makeup phase. She smoothed on Heavenly Herbal make-up, Blushing Berry rouge, Chalk Bisque eye cream, and Root Extract mascara. "Our make-up has no preservatives," she explained as she dabbed Nasturtium Juice on my eyelids. "And all the ingredients are 100 per cent natural. Why, you could even eat our products."

That did it. I bought some of everything except the bee milk. After all, she told me I looked beautiful, and although my eyes were glued shut, I took her word for it. Besides, I figured that if Phillip and I were ever camping and we ran out of food, we could eat my make-up.

When I got home, Phillip was waiting at the door.

"How do you like the new me?" I asked, being careful not to smear my Rose Petal lip gloss. "This is a new line of natural make-up I'm wearing."

"You're kidding!" Phillip exclaimed. "It looks more like a new product I heard they were marketing in honor of the Bicentennial."

"What's that?" I inquired innocently.

"War paint."

Harker's Island Has A Boat-Building Heritage

HARKER'S ISLAND. "There's a boat in every backyard on this island," says Clarence Willis, Sr. of Harker's Island, N.C. But why would island dwellers who fish for a living keep their boats in their yards?

Ask Willis. He's a middle-aged man who has been building boats since he was ten years old. Most men on the island, he says, keep one boat in the water and one, under construction, on their land.

"When I was coming up, there wasn't much education on the island," Willis said in an accent reminiscent of early England. "You'd go to fourth or fifth grade, then what you learned came from the boatyard."

Willis supports himself with his fishing and boat-building. He works in the shed next to his house, building 17 to 22 "footers" in the Harker's Island style, with flared bows, and if requested, round sterns. There are no blueprints for a Harker's Island boat.

"I'll build whatever a person wants," says Willis. "With proper care, my boats will last many a year. They'll last as long as you want them to last." He uses heart-pine framing and juniper planking; if he builds a cabin, he does the interior work also. The average 17-foot boat costs $2000.

Willis is also helping to build an 80-foot yacht in the larger boatyard of the Harker's Island Rose Bros. The cost of the big boat is $500,000; its owner, a New York businessman, has requested carpeting, formalica, a party room and five bathrooms, Willis says proudly.

Like many Harker's Islanders, Willis learned his trade from his father and is teaching it to his son. Though most of the young adults on the island have daytime civil service jobs at nearby Cherry Point Marine Base, they work at night on the boats. According to Willis, they even save their annual leave and sicktime until fishing season.

The island's youth are continuing fishing and boat-building traditions which can be traced to another century and another island. Across the sound from Harker's Island is Cape Lookout, an island in the string of delicately beautiful beaches called the Outer Banks.

In the late 1600's, Englishmen with names like Lewis, Rose, Guthrie and Willis landed in Maryland and Virginia, then migrated down the coast in search of whales. They built fishing shacks and boats on Cape Lookout; later, the settlement was called Diamond City because of the widely visible black-and-white diamond pattern on their lighthouse.

By summer, the Wilsons estimate they will produce as much as 90 per cent of their food.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson sees organic gardening as a "companionship" of man and nature that is becoming increasingly popular. His interest began six years ago, he said, and grew with an awareness of its environmental aspects.

Organic gardeners prefer manure, grass and leaves for a compost and avoid chemical fertilizers and toxic insecticides.

"We're beginning to understand our ancestors' practices and their use of natural fertilizers, mulches, and even insect and bacteria," the Rev. Mr. Wilson said.

He uses no commercial fertilizer, he said, because they "take away the initiative" of bacteria and may even destroy them.

The Wilsons have planted 30 vegetables, 15 fruit trees and bushes and grape vines. They raise chickens, keep a dairy cow, and are raising two calves. Only household products, citrus fruits, poultry and fish that they can't produce themselves are bought at the supermarket.

They plan to "put more little creatures to work" with a beehive and will go into honey production.

The Wilsons see themselves as "missionaries" spreading the word about organically grown food. The Rev. Mr. Wilson taught organic gardening at a community college in Columbus, Neb., and this spring is teaching a class in Fremont.

"People eat with us and say it tastes so good... so wholesome and fresh... so much better than what they've had," said Mrs. Wilson.

But the Wilsons realize organic gardening is "not for everybody."

"People in the city just can't do it," said the Rev. Mr. Wilson. "It's a very impractical kind of life for the civilization we live in."

Religion, The Courts, And Work On Saturday

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON WASHINGTON (UPD) — "My religion won't allow me to work on Saturdays."

That remark has generated a spate of federal lawsuits since 1972, when Congress obliged employers to make "reasonable accommodations" to their employees' religious needs, without "undue hardship" to the business.

The Supreme Court may decide whether the 1972 law is an unconstitutional breach of the wall between church and state, or it might establish some guidelines to help lower court judges determine what "undue hardship" means.

The court has accepted a test case initiated by Paul Cummins, a foreman at the Berea, Ky., plant of the Parker Seal Co., who was discharged after he had refused to work Saturdays for more than a year.

Cummins had joined the World Wide Church of God, a sect which believes God frowns on Saturday work.

The church's lawyer, Ralph Helge of Pasadena, Calif., said its 100,000 members believe in the Old Testament story of creation, in which the seventh day is a day of rest.

Even though Christian practice has shifted the seventh day to Sunday, the first day of the week, the World Wide Church of God regards Saturday as the true Sabbath, he said.

Members are forbidden to attend sports events or engage in other amusements on that day. It is a day for prayer, Bible study and doing good. Failure to observe the Sabbath results in expulsion from the church.

"We are not interested in just having names on a roll," Helge said.

The pastor general is Herbert W. Armstrong of Pasadena, father of Garner Ted Armstrong, the radio-television preacher.

Another case with an added twist was begun by a World Wide Church of God member, Larry G. Hardison of Kansas City. He sued Trans World Airlines and the machinists union, which said the law "creates an unhealthy and divisive conflict in the nation's work force."

Another appeal was brought by McCann L. Reid, a Seventh-day Adventist who said he was denied a job on the copy desk of the Memphis, Tenn. Press-Scimitar in 1967 because he insisted on having Saturdays free. The paper publishes six days a week and maintains a reduced staff on Saturdays.

In lawsuits against the U.S. Postal Service in Richmond, Va., and Tallahassee, Fla., lower courts have ruled against Sabbatarians.

In the Richmond case, U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige said it would be impossible to accommodate the religious needs of 700,000 postal workers, and would break the union contract to give a Seventh-day Adventist every Saturday off.

The federal government sued the city of Albuquerque, N.M., in behalf of a fireman who was a Seventh-day Adventist, but it lost.

Other World Wide Church of God members had similar experiences suing Hermitage Cotton Mills in Camden, S.C., and the Omaha (Neb.) Public Power District.

The 1972 law was an amendment to the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which bars discrimination in employment on the basis of race, sex or religion.

The majority of the 6th U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the law in the Cummins case, saying it was designed "to put teeth in the existing prohibition of religious discrimination."

In dissent, Judge Anthony J. Celebrezze said the law unconstitutionally grants preferences to some employees because of their religion but discriminates between religion and non-religion and among various forms of religion.

"Granting special privileges because of the exercise of one's religion is just as wrong as denying employment opportunity because of one's religious beliefs," he said.

Four-Day Wilmington Festival Set

THE BYNUM-WILLIARD HOUSE at 1850 Orange Street in Wilmington is one of 11 houses and buildings to be included in the second annual Tour of Homes sponsored by The Historic Wilmington Foundation on Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16.

River boat cruises, a country fair, games, book and plant booths, children games, and a tour of eleven historic houses and buildings are scheduled this year for the May Festival tour sponsored by the Historic Wilmington Foundation.

A schedule of events planned for the three day tour on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 14, 15 and 16 are:

—Friday, May 14—River boat cruises on the Cheerio will feature a two hour sight-seeing cruise from the Wilmington Hilton dock down the Cape Fear River and return, with tea served aboard. The tea cruise is from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., with tickets costing $7.50.

—Saturday, May 15—11:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Country Fair will be held in the garden of the Foundation Headquarters at the Governor Dudley Mansion, 400 South Front Street. Another event on Friday is an art show and sale at St.

John's Art Gallery. Children's games during the day will feature "go fishing," pillow fights and bean bag contests. Admission for adults is $1.00, and for children 25 cents.

—Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16—2:00 to 6:00 p.m. The walking history tour will include eight houses and three other buildings. The tour begins at Thalian Hall and will include the Burgwin-Wright House, Claude Howell's apartment, Larkins House, Julius Weil House, Bynum-Willard House, Latimer House, Northrup-Carr House, Warrock Cottage, Dudley Chadbourne House and Cameron-Holmon House. In conjunction with the tour will be an exhibit of antique and new silver by Samuel Kirk and Son, to be shown at St. John's Art Gallery, 114 Orange Street.

Proceeds will go for preservation projects in historic Wilmington. Additional information and reserved tickets can be had by calling 762-3800.

Parade In New Bern Thursday

The New Bern... Craven County Bicentennial Commission has announced that the Carolina Readers Theatre production of The Great American Fourth Of July Parade will play in New Bern on Thursday, May 13, at 8:00 p.m. in the New Bern High School Auditorium.

The play was written by the three-time Pulitzer Prize winner Archibald MacLeish specifically for the Bicentennial. In verse, utilizing the pessimism of John Adams and the optimism of Thomas Jefferson, the drama places the patriots' dream of a new nation in a modern context. The Carolina Readers Theatre is North Carolina's largest professional touring theatre. It was founded in 1972 with the goal of making professional theatre available to every Tar Heel community. Admission is 76 cents. Tickets can be purchased at the door or at the New Bern Chamber of Commerce office on Broad Street.

On WNCT Monday

At 7:10 a.m. Monday morning William Bunnell, Director, District 15 NCAE, will appear on "Carolina Today," WNCT-TV, Channel 9.

Bunnell's appearance will deal with teacher's viewpoint of the recent rally of teachers in Raleigh supporting a 16 percent pay increase.

On last Monday's "Carolina Today" program, two panel members, Tommy Payne and Hal Moore, made comments on the rally, including remarks they considered the teacher's action to be "rather unprofessional."

Cancer Crusade Progress Noted

Charles Vincent, Pitt County Chairman for the American Cancer Society's 1976 Crusade, reported on the progress of the drive.

"We have secured sound leadership throughout the county," he said. He named county leaders: Mrs. James E. Nelson of Ayden, Mrs. Alton Gardner of Swift Creek, Mrs. Bill Cherry of Stokes, S. J. Waters of Winterville, Mrs. Robert Young of Bethel, W. R.

Duke Jr. of Farmville, Falkland, Fountain, and Bell Arthur, and Mrs. John Condon of Grifton.

Vincent commented on a question he said Cancer Crusade volunteers hear often: why isn't the cancer drive a part of the United Fund campaign? He explained that the American Cancer Society is a national organization composed of volunteers and staff from every section of the country. "It is a temporary organization," he said, "whose entire purpose is to conquer cancer and then go out of business. And it is an emergency organization, seeking simply to obtain enough dollars to wage an unrelenting fight to help save the millions who will otherwise die of cancer."

"The United Fund, on the other hand," he said, "is a local organization, combining many community concerns in a single drive. It is permanent organization since there is little likelihood that all the social problems it seeks to alleviate will ever be eliminated. And it is basically a planning organization, tailoring its programs and allocations to the fast-changing needs of a complex society.

"We just don't feel that the needs of the people we try to serve could be met if we were part of the United Fund."

Need Volunteers

Volunteer Greenville is announcing the following volunteer opportunities:

—Two individuals to assist the Pitt County Council on Aging with various office work.

—Transportation to take a child two days a week from Mini-School to the Allied Health Building for Speech and Hearing Therapy.

—Transportation to take a child from Fountain five mornings a week to the Optional School on Third Street.

—A volunteer to tutor a student in the area of geometry and algebra.

—Boy Scout Unit Leaders to coordinate various Boy Scout program activities. These programs include— Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers.

Further information on these and other opportunities may be obtained by calling Volunteer Greenville at 752-4237 (Extension 255) or by visiting the office at 1710 West Third Street.

Thursday Dedication Set For Meadowbrook

On Thursday, May 13, at 10 a.m., Mayor Percy Cox, members of the City Council, city officials and neighborhood leaders will officially dedicate the improvements in the West Meadowbrook Redevelopment Plan.

Ground breaking ceremonies are expected to launch the $1.4 million project.

The plan will include paving all streets in the neighborhood, sidewalks, water and sewer improvements, and the development of a 33-acre park with neighborhood center.

Plans also include housing rehabilitation assistance to homeowners and relocation payments to substandard dwelling unit occupants.

The city has been working with the residents of West Meadowbrook for several years in the development and implementation of the Community Development Program effort. Completion of the three-year project is expected to solve the neighborhood's housing, health and recreational problems for its 500 residents.

The 40th annual Author's Luncheon, sponsored by the Greenville Woman's Club, was held Saturday. Dr. Thomas Williams, of the East Carolina University faculty, was guest speaker.

A highlight of the luncheon was the naming of winners in the Creative Writing Contest. Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage, president of the Woman's Club, made the following award presentations: Eva Berry Harris award, for best lyric poem other than a sonnet, to Hannah F. Warren;

Eunice McGee award, best children's poem, Caroline Desmond Lee; Janie Gold Starling award, best essay, Delphia S. Corbett; Helen Gay Perkins award, best high school lyric poem, David M. Rhodes;

Elizabeth Utterback Memorial, best story for children under eight, Judy James; Elizabeth Savage, best story by a child in primary grades, Ingrid Elizabeth Ross, who also won the Christine Johnston award for the best poem by a child in primary grades; Verda Holt award, best poem, junior high school, Kenneth Hartley; Frank M. Wooten, best story in grades four through six, Karie Lynn Seykora; Bessie Wade Wooten, best poem in grades four through six, Tracy Leigh Savage; and the Agnes Fullilove-Carolyn Jamea award, best essay, junior high, Jean Kim.

Mrs. William A. Shires introduced Dr. Williams, whose program topic was "The Writer's Life."

"The writer, like other artist and craftsmen, gives objective form to our common humanity, to our loves and fears, our triumphs and disasters. He is joyful that his way of life permits him to do this.

"The subject is vast and supremely important. For that very reason, he can never allow himself second best, an inferior effort. He is driven to achieve the perfect utterance—which, of course, always eludes his grasp. And so there is also despair," said Dr. Williams.

Mrs. Savage welcomed members of the Woman's Club and guests present for the luncheon. Mrs. Preston Cannon Sr. gave the invocation.

Mrs. David Middleton, soprano, presented a program of vocal selections accompanied by Dr. David Foster.

Book clubs represented included the Inter Se, Chatham, Clio and Inglis Fletcher.

Speaker Named For Graduation

Dr. Lloyd H. Elliott, president of The George Washington University, will be the speaker at 67th annual Commencement Exercises at East Carolina University on Sunday, May 30.

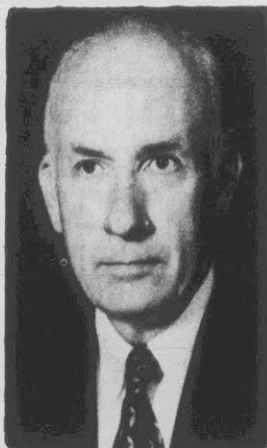

Dr. Elliott is chairman of the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation Inc. (COPA) and a member and former president of the National Council on Accrediting. He is a former president of the Association of Urban Universities and a director of the American Association of Independent College and University Presidents.

Prior to assuming the presidency of George Washington University in 1965, Dr. Elliott was president of the University of Maine for seven years.

From 1948 to 1958, Dr. Elliott served in a number of faculty and administrative posts at Cornell University and was executive assistant to the president of Cornell, 1956-58.

He is the author of more than 35 articles and papers in the field of education.

A native of Clay County, W. Va., he was educated at Greenville State College, West Virginia University and received the Doctor of Education (Ed.D.) from the University of Colorado. He holds LL.D. degrees from eight colleges and universities.

Sorority Honors Mrs. Savage

Mrs. Ada Bett Savage was honored Thursday night at the regular meeting of Alpha Nu Sorority. She was selected to the Second Wind Hall of Fame, a national non-profit society which honors the achievements of retired men and women in various occupations after formal retirement.

Mrs. Savage retired from the Pitt County School System a few years ago. She presently visits the Greenville Nursing Home and assists all interested patients to the Chapel for weekly prayer services. She also spends many volunteer hours tutoring students with learning disabilities.

Mrs. Savage was the first person in Greenville to be selected to join the Second Wind Hall of Fame.

Two Built Monumental Manuscript Collection

By DR. H. G. Jones, Curator North Carolina Collection For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL (AP)—By the time Dr. J. G. de Rouhac Hamilton retired from the directorship of the Southern Historical Collection in the UNC Library in 1948, he had accumulated the South's greatest reservoir of nongovernmental manuscripts—nearly two million documents in 2,309 separate collections.

Even in retirement, Hamilton's years of familiarity with the attics, basements, and closets of southern homes helped ferret out additional manuscripts, and he was an immense help to his successor, Dr. James Welch Patton.

Hamilton and Patton had several similarities: each was an outstanding historian of the South, each had a natural scent for tracking down collections, and each was as bald as a billiard. Patton, towering over his predecessor in height, good-naturedly heard himself from time to time called "Curley." His keen sense of news-worthy information—he was virtually a walking encyclopedia—also led some friends to call him "Whattayouknow" Patton.

Those were appropriate attributes for the craft of collecting manuscripts, and Dr. Patton traveled over 200,000 miles in the South in search of them. His task, however, was more difficult, for envy of Dr. Hamilton's accomplishments in making Chapel Hill the center of southern historical research had resulted in the emergence of a whole crop of collectors and repositories in neighboring states.

Thus Jim Patton faced keen competition especially in states like Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, and Texas. His own record of adding more than two million items to the Southern Historical Collection in his nineteen years as director was, under those circumstances, almost as remarkable as that of his famed predecessor.

Jim Patton was born in 1900 in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, received his under-graduate training at Vanderbilt, and earned his master's and doctor's degrees at the University of North Carolina. He taught at several colleges and universities, including eleven years at Converse College in South Carolina. From 1942 until his move to Chapel Hill, Patton was chairman of the Department of History and Political Science at North Carolina State University.

Dr. Patton wrote widely on southern history, and his "Unionism and Reconstruction in Tennessee" remains a standard work on that state. Long before women became a popular topic for historical study, he and Francis Butler Simkins wrote "The Women of the Confederacy." He also authored many articles and edited several works, including the public addresses and statements of Governor Luther H. Hodges.

In addition to his collecting and writing activities, Patton was a popular teacher of history at the university. His wry humor and penetrating questions were hallmarks.

Active in historical organizations, he served as president of four: the South Carolina Historical Society, Historical Society of North Carolina, Southern Historical Association, and North Carolina Literary and Historical Association. He was elected a fellow of the Society of American Archivists.

During Patton's directorship, 1948-1967 the Southern Historical Collection more than doubled in size. In 1952 he moved the massive accumulation of papers into new quarters in Wilson Library, but soon additional materials led again to crowding. When he retired from the collection in 1967, the number of manuscripts had grown to over four million in nearly 3,800 individual groups, ranging from only a few to many thousands of items each.

Med Tech Students Attend Convention

Students and faculty members from the East Carolina University Department of Medical Technology attended the recent spring convention of the N. C. Society for Medical Technology in Winston-Salem.

The ECU delegation attended lectures and workshops and sponsored a student to compete with five other medical technology student teams in a Student Bowl competition.

ECU won both a preliminary round and a playoff round to become the 1976 state champions. Team members included Marilyn Boyette of Faison, Jennifer Duzan of Vanceboro, Deborah Mayo of Smithfield, Rick Maute of Burlington, N. J. and Dale Mills of New Bern. The team will represent the state at a regional competition in Atlanta June 5.

During a student section meeting, attended by about 150 NCSMT student members, ECU student Deborah Topping of Littleton was elected state student chairman. Carolyn Hodges of Bear Grass, also an ECU student, was elected secretary-treasurer.

ECU student Marie Whitehurst of Plymouth was elected state student delegate to the convention of the American Society for Medical Technology later this year.

Saturday Work...

 Attorneys for the Sabbatharians say the law's requirements would not inconvenience other workers because it calls only for "reasonable accommodations."

Because Orthodox Jews do not work on Saturdays, the American Jewish Congress told UPI it intends to submit a brief in the Cummins case urging the Supreme Court to uphold the law and its broad interpretation by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The Supreme Court has ruled in cases dealing with religion that state laws must have a clearly secular purpose, with a primary effect that neither advances nor inhibits religion, and must avoid "excessive government entanglement with religion."

They are Bernard Francis Lambe and Donald Michael Riddle of Goldsboro, Steven Reid Warren and Howell Courtney Sharpe of Lumberton, Mark Anderson Snyder of Kannapolis, Ronald R. Rouse of Greenville, George H. Whitaker of Sanford.

Spirit Of Independence Conceived In Virginia

EDITOR'S NOTE — Independence was proclaimed in Philadelphia, but conceived in Virginia. Although neglected by history, a document drafted in Williamsburg 200 years ago this week is the foundation stone of American independence and democratic, constitutional government.

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
American nationhood was conceived in the spring of 1776 in Virginia, near the spot where American democracy had first been practiced almost four centuries earlier.

It began on a warm day in May of 1607 when the first settlers at Jamestown opened their sealed instructions and learned the names of the London Company's resident council in Virginia.

But the company had neglected to designate a chief executive. So, in the first democratic election on American soil, Capt. Edward Maria Wingfield was chosen president of the colony.

In 1619, a year before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, the first elected representative assembly in the future United States met in Jamestown.

It was not real democracy. The colonists were still subject to the parent company and later to the crown as a royal colony. But it was a beginning. And having once tasted of self-government, Virginians were not going to let it go.

By the 18th century, Gov. Alexander Spotswood was complaining that Virginians would submit to "no jurisdiction, civil or ecclesiastical, but what is established by law of their own making."

"Damn Virginia," said the Earl of Dunmore upon learning he had been posted there as governor. By the spring of 1776 Dunmore was a refugee on a British ship off the Virginia coast.

And it was another warm day in May when the House of Burgesses, oldest legislature in America and last instrument of royal government in Virginia, quietly expired.

"We met in Assembly yesterday," wrote Edmund Pendleton, "and determined not to adjourn, but let that body die — and went into Convention."

The Convention was Virginia's homegrown replacement for royal government. Already four had been held in defiance of governors who had dissolved the Burgesses to squelch their dissent.

Elections for the Fifth Virginia Convention had been held in April, with Dunmore's burning of Norfolk fresh in the minds of the voters. The timid patriot was lucky to retain his seat.

"Our freeholders are all mad," said Josiah Parker, "determined to have a new house altogether ... strange times indeed."

The people of this county almost unanimously cry aloud for Independence," wrote William Aylett from King William County.

As the counties elected their delegates, many bound them to serve the rising will of the people. Charles Patterson and John Cabell of Buckingham County were instructed "to cause a total and final separation from Great Britain to take place as soon as possible."

From Augusta County came the demand for "making the Confederacy of the United Colonies the most perfect, independent and lasting, and of framing an equal, free and liberal government that may bear the test of all future ages."

"Your constituents," Cumberland County told John May and William Fleming, "instruct you positively to declare for Independence; that you solemnly abjure any Allegiance to his Britannick Majesty, and bid him a good night forever."

Cumberland County also asked "that you promote in our convention an instruction to our Delegates, now sitting in Continental Congress, to do the same."

The convention met on May 6, 1776, the day the old House expired. The first order of business was to elect Pendleton, esteemed attorney and leader of Virginia conservatives, as its president in a contest with the radical leader Patrick Henry. If this thing had to be done, Virginia wanted it in steady hands.

"We are now met ... at a time truly critical," said Pendleton in acceptance, "when subjects of the most important and interesting nature require our serious attention ... Permit me to recommend calmness, unanimity and diligence, as the most likely means of bringing them to a happy and prosperous issue."

But Henry became the reluctant one as Virginia moved toward its great decision. He counseled caution, advised waiting until America had assurance of foreign allies, and said that by no means should Virginia go it alone.

Pendleton, moving slowly, became the leader for independence. In his own hand was written the compromise resolution which emerged on May 15, 1776, 200 years ago this week.

"Resolved unanimously," it began proudly, "that the delegates appointed to represent this colony in General Congress be instructed to propose to that respectable body to declare the United Colonies free and independent states, absolved from all allegiance to, or dependence upon, the crown or parliament of Great Britain ..."

North Carolina already had instructed her delegates to support any independence movement which might develop, but Virginia was the first to order her delegates to start one.

The Virginians also sent their support for "whatever measures may be thought proper and necessary by the Congress for forming foreign alliances, and a confederation of the colonies ... provided that the power of forming government for, and the regulations of the internal concerns of each colony, be left to the respective colonial legislatures."

The Convention further resolved that "a committee be appointed to prepare a Declaration of Rights, and such a plan of government as will be most likely to maintain peace and order in this colony, and secure substantial and equal liberty to the people."

There, reflecting the hopes and fears of the people of Virginia, was the blueprint for a nation, and Congress followed it in creating the United States of America.

First, independence, not for 13 colonies, but for a country. And the country should be a federal union, states acting in unison but preserving control over local affairs.

There should be a written constitution and provisions to secure the individual rights of the people.

Virginia followed through on her resolutions and before the month was out had drafted a constitution and elected Patrick Henry as her first governor of a free state.

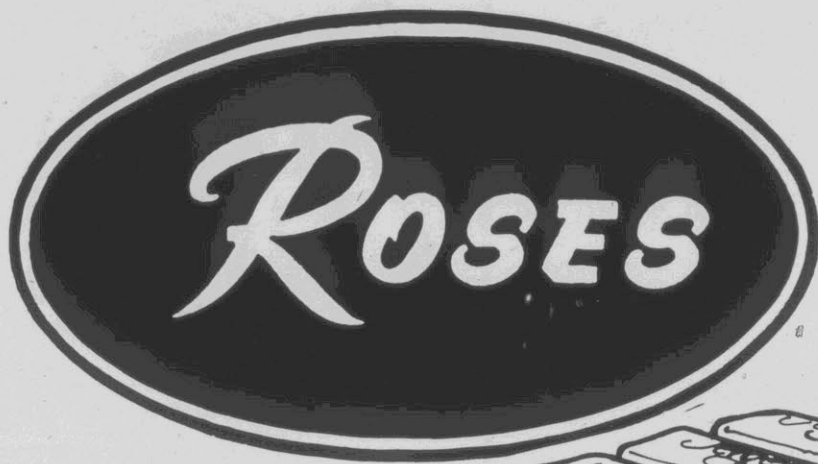

She also adopted the Virginia Declaration of Rights, the model for the U.S. Bill of Rights.

The Virginia resolves were rushed to Philadelphia, and on June 7 Richard Henry Lee of Virginia rose from his seat in what would become known as Independence Hall, and on instructions from his state, moved:

"That the united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states ..."

It was in approving this motion on July 2 that Congress voted a new nation into being and produced the formal Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776.

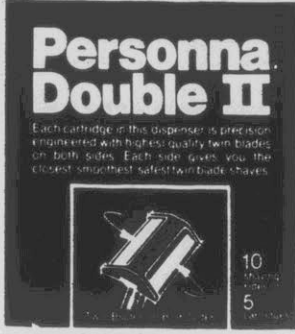

A few days later Congress appointed a committee to draft the Articles of Confederation which would become the nation's first constitution.

Exhibit Recreates Philadelphia Expo

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION curators have created a microcosm of the gigantic international "centennial" exposition in Philadelphia's Fairmont

By MIKE FEINSILBER WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Smithsonian Institution's Bicentennial gift to America is a loving reproduction of the way the nation celebrated its 100th birthday a century ago.

Smithsonian curators have created a microcosm of the gigantic international "Centennial" exposition in Philadelphia's Fairmount Park. It was the pride of the nation in 1876, and attracted 10 million visitors from home and abroad.

The new Centennial, one of the Smithsonian's most ambitious projects, fills an acre and a quarter of floor space in the huge, gingerbread Arts and Industries Building, a Victorian structure of red and blue brick, skylights and stained glass windows on the Mall.

The site is appropriate, because the building was erected to store 42 freight cars full of objects given the Smithsonian when the "Centennial" closed.

Some of the 25,000 objects on display were also displayed in 1876. All could have been.

The free exhibition opens at noon Monday, May 10, exactly 100 years after the 1876 show opened, and will run for two years.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, arriving in a horse-drawn carriage, will speak. A choir will sing and 400 borrowed homing pigeons will be released, presumably to fly home to Baltimore.

On May 10, 1876, President Ulysses Grant, accompanied by the emperor of Brazil, led a march of 4,000 dignitaries into Machinery Hall in Philadelphia and gave a speech.

Grant mounted the platform of the largest steam engine ever built and turned two silver-plated cranks. This started the engine, which drove a system of gears, shafts and belts that set into motion countless machines on display.

Painstakingly restored by Smithsonian curators, the gigantic old machines will be put in motion again, roaring, whining and thumping.

Also on display are sculptures made of soap, a Liberty Bell woven of wheat, crops grown from the same kinds of seeds used in 1876, an early telephone (Alexander Graham Bell demonstrated his new invention for a few days at the 1876 Centennial), a shiny 100-year-old locomotive, a 51-foot model of the naval sloop-of-war Antietam, gilded eagles and an enormous totem pole.

Also, there's the lens of a Boston harbor lighthouse, a stuffed bear from California, cannon, an early Otis steam elevator machine, a machine which advertised itself as "the 'New' Otto Silent Engine working without boiling, steam, coal, ashes or attendance." And much, much more.

The 1876 exposition was chiefly a trade fair. Costumed Smithsonian volunteers will play the role of salesmen explaining their wares.

A hand-fed press, borrowed from a Californian who collects old presses, will print a tabloid newspaper, "The Centennial Post," dated Dec. 31, 1876 and reviewing events of that year.

A one-ton, 451-pipe mechanical organ, salvaged at Lake Chazy in upstate New York from a building about to be bulldozed, will play from 133 rolls of music. It sounds like 1876.

The Nicolo Marionettes of New York City will put on a 50-minute show adapted from one that played at "the Centennial."

Outside, there will be a Victorian garden and occasional concerts of music originally played in 1876, sometimes on the original instruments.

In the Women's Pavilion in 1876, an attractive young woman named Emma Allison stood at the controls of a steam engine which ran six looms and a printing press, as evidence that a woman's "place" was not necessarily in the home. It was a women's salute to women's achievements.

But the pavilion was controversial among suffragettes, according to Smithsonian curator Debora Warner, who helped supervise its restoration here. The 1876 feminists thought their cause should have been championed at the exposition.

Typically, the pavilion displayed a Bible newly translated into English by Julia E. Smith of Glastonbury, Conn. But what the feminists wanted shown were the liens imposed when Miss Smith and her sisters refused to pay their taxes to protest the nation's refusal to let them vote.

"Susan B. Anthony thought the pavilion was a disaster," says curator Warner, who studied the history of science at the University of Chicago and Harvard.

Warner drifted into restoring the women's pavilion, she says, because the Smithsonian's male curators weren't much interested.

"The men were more interested in steam engines," she says. "They thought the women's pavilion was filled with dollies."

Fictitious, 'Impossible' Machine Runs In Shed

By DONN DUGHY
MADISON, Fla. (UPI) — Writing a science fiction novel for his own amusement eight years ago, Bob Teal dreamed up an "impossible machine."

Today it's working in a shed in his yard. The 53-year-old retired electronics engineer has invented a motor run by electromagnets. He calls it a "magne-pulsion engine" and believes it could set the world of propulsion on its ear.

"The first reaction of everyone is: 'Hey, it can't work,'" Teal said. "But here it is, and it works. You've got to see it to believe it."

Teal flicks the switch. Pulsating direct current electricity from a small motorcycle battery travels through his secret timing device to six electro-magnets, only an inch in diameter.

The magnets, in turn, start a 75-pound flywheel whirring. The working model of Teal's magne-pulsion engine can spin the flywheel at a maximum of 800 revolutions per minute.

He doesn't have the equipment to measure its horsepower but says "if you try to hold the crankshaft it'll tear up your hand."

To demonstrate its usefulness, Teal has his 100-pound machine hooked up to run a table saw.

Teal's invention requires no fuel, emits no gases and is very quiet in operation. It has few moving parts and needs little maintenance.

Teal's model is a crude piece of equipment held together by a wooden frame of two-by-fours and two-by-sixes.

"You should have seen my first model which worked," Teal chortled. "It had wooden shafts, wooden rods and wooden bearings. I powered it with a flashlight battery."

He makes a "way out guess" his engine could be mass-produced to propel automobiles at a cost of about $300 to $400 per unit. It also could be adapted to run airplanes, boats, power plants, and many other devices, he said.

On the surface, Teal might seem an improbable inventor. He is about to publish his first book of poetry and he writes a column for the weekly Madison Courier entitled "Is Justice" in which, he says, "I spend about 90 per cent of the time criticizing government giveaways."

"I write for my own pleasure," he explained.

But the native of Chesterfield, S.C., is solidly based in things electric and mechanical. He retired from the U.S. Coast Guard in 1962 after 20 years service. Afterward he worked in turn as an electronics engineer for Ling-Temco-Vought, RCA and finally in the U.S. Air Force civil service before permanent retirement in 1972 at age 49.

Teal has letters from the U.S. Navy crediting him with inventing a technique of phasing radio frequency cables.

"Because I was working for RCA on a Navy project, I didn't get a penny for an invention that has been estimated to be worth about $50 million," he said.

Teal hopes he can collect on his second invention because "I've poured our savings into this."

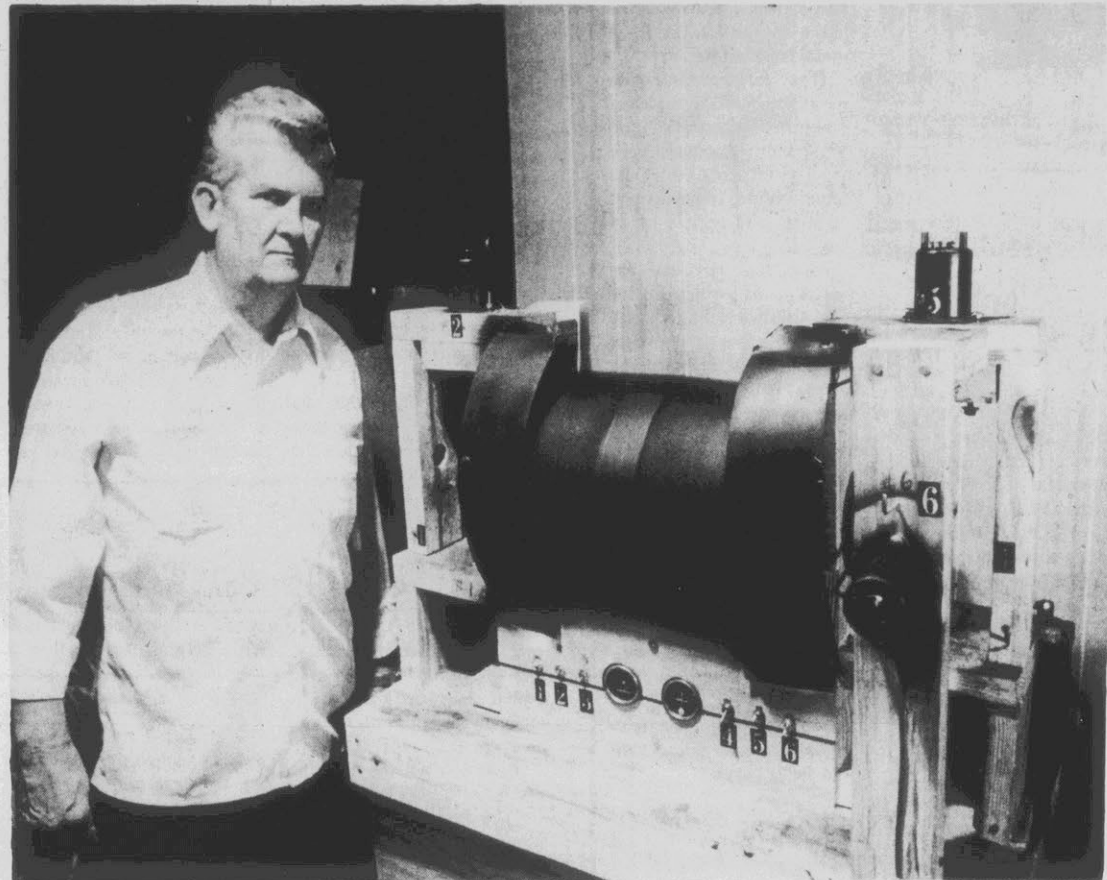

He said scientists have already heard about his magne-pulsion engine by word-of-mouth and contacted him mostly in disbelief because propulsion by means of electromagnets has been a dream of inventors for many years. "There are many problems to solve," Teal said. "One of the big secrets is the timing — to break the electric pulse before it reaches the sealing point of a magnet."

"Another problem is that pulsating DC current builds up a residual (magnetic holding) field and you need to know how to break that field."

"Really and truly, the engine is impossible," he exulted.

Teal and his wife live at 611 W. Marion St., Madison, Fla. 32340.

Wagon Train Not Target

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported on April 22 that San Diego's chief humane officer said horses and mules harnessed for the Bicentennial wagon trains are suffering at the hands of inexperienced wagonmasters.

The humane officer, Bill Viridon, was referring in remarks that day to the removal of a white burro with eye cancer and an underweight mule from a privately sponsored packtrip from Phoenix, Ariz. to Canada.

He also cautioned against mistreatment of animals elsewhere during Bicentennial-oriented events, but said that "small, independent, fringe groups are the ones that will require watching."

His specific reference was to a privately organized event which has no connection with the five wagon trains organized by the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission, generally recognized as a major part of the celebration of the nation's 200th birthday this year. They are heading for Pennsylvania from various parts of the country and are scheduled to arrive in Valley Forge July 4.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission have denied there has been mistreatment of animals on any of their trains.

Drug Users Age Faster

NEW YORK (AP) — Old before their time is the way physicians describe young persons who use "hard" drugs from three to five years.

"In fact, you can't trust your eyes," said Dr. A. Everette James, chairman of the department of radiology, Vanderbilt University Hospital, Nashville, at a science writers' forum here on "The X-Ray Picture on Drug Abuse."

"One has to inspect their records and medical history," said Dr. James, "because the physical appearance of amphetamine addicts often suggests that they are much older than their chronological age."

It isn't only in outward appearance that addicts prematurely age, pointed out Dr. Nalvin Rumbaugh, professor of radiology at Harvard. He cited a 17-year-old boy on methamphetamine who collapsed "and bled just like a hypertensive patient in his 60s or 70s."

The X-ray view of the blood vessels in such patients, Dr. Rumbaugh said, leaves "the impression that some of these vessel changes are almost like you see in senile patients."

Phone Project Meets Tonight

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company's manager, Don A. Collier, said today a $44,250 program has been engineered and scheduled for completion during August, 1976.

A program includes additional cable facilities along N. C. Highway 42 South and Secondary Road 1774 in the Greenville exchange.

County NAACP Meets Tonight

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP will hold its monthly meeting tonight (May 9) at 7:45 p.m. at the Morning Star A.M.E. Zion Church, Ayden.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Denison Garrett Jr., counselor of the Pitt County Migrant and Seasonal Farm Workers.

PLAN YOUR HOME

DESIGN OFFERS FOUR BEDROOMS, AIRY INTERIOR

Cayman

CONTEMPORARY PLAN EMPHASIZES SPACE

By Jerry Bishop

Cathedral ceilings crown the array of windows that marks the Cayman, a generously proportioned contemporary plan with an interior bursting with light and space. Four full-sized bedrooms, a handy utility room, two and one half baths, and well-defined living areas meld to create this airy plan. Fronted by a small covered porch, entry is into the foyer, open to the formal dining room at right and formal living room ahead. Carefully placed to offer a cozy welcome is the wood-burning fireplace, clearly visible from the foyer. The living and dining room, both private and sizable, promise a natural setting for entertaining, while the sprawling and casual family room-kitchen sparks informality. With access to the basement and terrace, the family room is a hub of family activity and is linked to the kitchen by a useful breakfast bar.

Three entrances maximize the efficiency of the bordering utility room. A logical location for laundry equipment, the room also functions as a mud room, joined to the garage and outdoors, and edges a handy half bath.

Four large bedrooms are lodged in the left wing of the plan, with two baths, each with towel closet, neatly tucked at the end of the hallway. The master bedroom is favored with a private bath and double closets, as well as a liberal splash of natural light.

Storage problems are solved by the basement, another 1817 sq. ft. of useful space. In addition, the oversized garage allows a storage area with an outside entry for convenient storage of bicycles and garden equipment.

For large families, or families who prefer plenty of room, the Cayman provides an appealing combination: light and space.

If you are the type who regularly ignores or gives only passing attention to the instructions on the container labels of do-it-yourself materials, forget about using a varnish-paint remover.

The varieties of such removers are so numerous that attention to the directions on the label of the kind you purchase is almost certain to get you into trouble of one sort or another. It is imperative also, if you are using a remover for the first time, to consult with the dealer to be certain you get the right kind for your particular job.

There are flammable and non-flammable removers; those with toxic and non-toxic emissions; liquids and semi-pastes; some which require the use of a scraper or putty knife and some which are wiped off; and those which do or do not need certain fluids after the varnish or paint has been removed.

Except in an unusual case, such as when there is a single finish coat that yields easily to the chemical, the removal of varnish (everything said also applies to paint) is a messy job. The varnish gets bubbly, peely and slushy and, as you remove it, may fall on the floor or splash on your workbench or squirt on the walls. That's why it is important to wear gloves and other protective materials. Never forget that you are using a chemical which is strong enough to affect hardened varnish and therefore strong enough to damage your skin and clothing.

The most common mistake made in varnish removal is a failure to let the product do its work. The container tells you how long to leave it on the surface before scraping it off. Many persons fudge a little, attempting the removal in, let us say, 15 minutes if the directions say 20 minutes. The result is that the remover hasn't had time to take effect. Better to err on the side of waiting a little too long. In any case, if you begin to scrape and the varnish doesn't yield readily, wait a few more minutes. If it still doesn't come off, apply another coat of the remover right over the old. Wait the required time, then begin scraping again.

Since a putty knife is usually used for the scraping, be sure not to hold it in a vertical position. There is too much danger this way of gouging the wood. Hold the blade so that it is almost horizontal, or as much as required to get off the old finish without digging into the wood.

If any color remains on the surface after the removal is completed, steel wool or sand the material. Should that not work, you will have to use a commercial bleach obtainable in hardware and paint stores. This bleaching operation is not necessary if you plan to paint the wood rather than apply a clear varnish.

A first-time user of varnish remover usually has a predictable reaction. When halfway through the job, he will wish he hadn't started the whole thing. When he is finished — especially if the wood turns out to be more beautiful than he thought — he will be glad he attempted it.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable material in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

Q — I am in the market for roofing shingles. Those I am inclined to select have a marking on them that says "UL Class C". Can you tell me what this means?

A — Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., an independent testing outfit, determines the relationship of various materials to fire. With the assistance of fire authorities, it establishes safety standards for materials made by companies which request this advice. The UL Class C label is awarded to all roofing which protects against basic fire danger. To comply with the Class C standard, the roofing should not spread fire over the roof area, should not be easily ignited and should not add to the fire hazard by emitting burning brands which can create new fires.

Q — I soon will be putting up patterned hardboard panels in an extra room. Should the panels be butted closely together?

termine how much space to leave between the panels is to use the thickness of a matchbook cover as a spacer.

Q — Can I use latex foam padding under some old carpeting I plan to install on a concrete floor in our basement? There is no sign of dampness on the floor. I got the idea from a motel I stayed in. Will it work in a house?

A — Yes. It is often used that way because it conforms to the configuration of the floor.

Q — In making a dry well, using drain tile to carry the water to the well, can I use an old steel drum I have had around our property for some time? If so, how do I go about using it?

A — A steel drum is fine for a dry well. Before placing it into the hole you have dug, remove the bottom of it. The drain tile should enter the drum near the upper part of it. Fill the container with stones, cover with a heavy board and pack in the sides and top with earth.

Bring The Bugs Under Control

By VIVIAN BROWN
 AP Newsfeatures

When is a moth not a moth, and when is it a good moth or a bad moth? Good questions to ask before you flail away at household and garden pests.

Spraying at random isn't the way to attack these problems. You might wipe out some good bugs and make some bad ones resistant to eventual control, says Dr. Richard B. Dominick of McClellanville, S.C., president of the Wedge Foundation which is involved in entomological research.

Household insects — carpet, clothes and meal moths — should really be controlled by prevention, he advises. Counterattack early with garment bags, cedar-lined closets, that sort of thing. Corn meal and other grains could be put into glass crocks or jars. Prevention could extend to the dry cleaner where household effects of animal fibers could be treated. Old-fashioned methods, but they are better than drastic solutions.

"We should know what we are dealing with before we can determine the method of control," Dominick explained. That's what his research is all about.

A medical doctor who turned to research after his internship in New York, he and his wife are engaged in collecting, photographing and classifying moths for scientific evaluation. Color plates, microscopic anatomical features and line drawings are passed to economic entomologists everywhere who are trying to find solutions to environmental problems.

In some eight volumes — a ninth is due soon — Dominick and four other members of the foundation have put together text and photographs of "Moths of America North of Mexico" that are being used by biologists and serious laymen to identify moths in the United States, Canada and Greenland. Work, begun in 1971, aims to classify more than 15,000 species of moths.

Even species in the same genus often respond differently to the same insecticide, he points out. Biological chemists are spending large sums on hormone control and chemical companies are trying to formulate products that will zero in on the right targets. They need to know exactly what they are dealing with.

"We are more into pest management now than pest control. The Environmental Protection Agency suggests standards that require every pesticide be labeled with information about the particular insects it can target," Dominick says.

An example of the problem was recently pointed out, he says, at a Senate committee meeting on the subject where Dominick and others made statements about pest control. Cotton industry spokesmen pointed out that "they were getting control of the boll weevil by massive spraying, but they were killing off the parasites that kept moth pests in control."

Seven hundred of the more serious pests in the United States have gained entry in the last 82 years, he contends. The destructive gypsy moth was accidentally thrown into the environment from a laboratory in the United States, but its natural parasites, flies and wasps, are in Europe. While he has begun to import natural parasites, it all requires careful testing, he says, "or it could get out of control."

"In the garden it is more complicated and the kind of work we are doing is really necessary. Common pests are not known or understood. There are 100 different kinds of cutworms and the garden variety pest is a whole complex of different species that will respond differently to a given pesticide or different method of control."

For example, in agricultural areas where you now have monoculture, the growing of one crop, hedgerows (which might harbor parasites) have disappeared. A moth that has not been a pest before "can cut loose."

In small gardens, one solution could be to plant for the pests if you know they will attack. For example, "plant a bean garden early, let the pest go at it, and then spray it like crazy. After that plant another crop of beans."

Sex attractants are being used in apple orchards, and monitoring provides information about "when caterpillars are expected to chew trees so that far less spray can be used." This method provides an opportunity to control pests without damaging other creatures or contaminating the environment.

Although moths are responsible for one-quarter of the $10-billion-worth of damage done by insects annually — a Department of Agriculture estimate — they are ecologically important. Moth larvae are biodegraders which feed on rolling vegetable matter, dead leaves, excrement. Moths are pollinators, probably second to bees, and they are food for night-hawks, bats, chickadees, crows and even trout, Dominick says.

"The economic entomologist gets a worm, grows it to a moth and then refers to our volumes where he learns as much about the species as is known," he explains.

Mrs. Dominick, who assists her husband with his photography, would like to see more companion planting in home gardens.

"More people should learn what to plant with their vege-

"Moths of America North of Mexico" is published by the Wedge Foundation, E. W. Classey, 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y.)

 Answers Timely
 Gardening Questions

Q. Many of the buds on my peonies turn brown and fall off. Also some of the foliage wilts and dies. I've been spraying with Bordeaux mixture. (L. R., Durham)

A. Root knot nematode is a serious problem on peonies in North Carolina. I would suggest treating the plants with DBCP (sold as Nemagon) according to label directions. (R. K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. My apple tree has a large growth that has erupted at the base. What can I do about it? (B. F., Burlington)

A. It is not uncommon for an apple tree to have an enlargement near the soil line where the tree was grafted (named variety put on root stake). If you feel the condition was not caused by the graft, call your county extension agent and ask him to stop by to view the tree. If the condition is very unusual send a picture of it to the Plant Disease Clinic, Williams Hall, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C. 27607. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. The roots on my maple and elm trees have surfaced. Can I remove them without harming the trees? (H. V., Raleigh)

A. Removal of the roots most certainly would harm the tree. Leaving them exposed subjects the tree to mechanical damage and provides entrance points for insects and diseases. The best alternative is to add enough topsoil, no more than six inches, to cover the exposed roots. Then stabilize the area with grass or some other ground cover. When fertilizing such areas, thoroughly irrigate so that the fertilizer is not too near the surface. (Bill Stanton, extension forestry specialist)

Q. I understand that old fashioned fly paper is a good way to control whiteflies in a greenhouse. Is this true? (G. F., Gastonia)

A. Fly paper will trap many whiteflies in a greenhouse because it is yellow, a highly attractive color for whiteflies. However, only a fraction of the population will be caught. The best method of control is to avoid bringing in plants which are infested with whiteflies. Carefully inspect any plant purchased for adults or immature stages. The most effective pesticide for whitefly control contains resmethrin (SBP 1382). Resmethrin is very safe but does not have a federally established tolerance for use on vegetables. (Dr. J. R. Baker, extension entomologist)

La Traviata Next At ECU

The East Carolina Playhouse, in cooperation with the ECU School of Music, presents La Traviata Wednesday, May 12 through the Saturday, May 15 in McGinnis Auditorium. Giuseppe Verdi's masterpiece has never before been produced east of Raleigh. One of the first grand operas written in the realistic style, La Traviata is based on the novel by Alexandre Dumas, fils, Our Lady of the Camellias. It deals with the tragic life of a popular Paris courtesan, Violetta Valery, who falls in love with Alfredo, a young man of good family and moves with him to the country. Because of her past, Alfredo's father approaches her and requests that she break off her relationship with his son. Unwillingly, Violetta denies to Alfredo that she ever loved him. Brokenhearted, he leaves to travel aimlessly through Europe. He eventually learns that Violetta contracts a fatal illness and rushes to her bedside. There she declares her eternal love for him and dies in his arms in one of opera's most famous tragic scenes.

The part of Violetta will be played by Claire Hurley and Sherry Miller on alternate nights. Alfredo will be played alternately by Sandy Miller and Stephen Miller. The opera will be sung in English.

Albert Pertalion directs, with a dance sequence choreographed by Mavis Ray. Vocal and chorus music preparation is by Clyde Hiss. Robert Hause will conduct the ECU orchestra. Scenery and lighting was designed by John Hoyt, and costumes are by Brooks-Van Horn and Eaves of New York.

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. nightly. Tickets are on sale at McGinnis from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Phone reservations, call 758-6390. Tickets are $3.00 each.

TEATRO FEMINISTA... a comedy about women who want to be actresses, is the East Carolina University production that won the Best Actor Award (for Jeff Rollins, in striped coat) at the Clemson Drama Festival. The Spanish language play, along with a French play, will have two local productions on Wednesday, May 12. These will be at 2 p.m. and again at 7 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center. The public is invited to attend and there is no admission charge. (ECU News Bureau Photo).

Chorale And Glee Club In Free Concert Today

The University Chorale and Women's Glee Club is presenting a joint concert at 8:15 p.m. today in the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher School of Music building on campus.

Dr. Charles W. Moore directs the chorale, which will be featured on the first half of the evening's program. The program will be highlighted by the performance of Frank Tirro's An American Jazz Mass.

Instrumentalists accompanying the singing of the Mass will be Alex Holton, trumpet; Charles Plisco, alto-saxophone; Ron Turbyfill, baritone saxophone; Larry Dowdy, bass; and Mike Carney, drums.

Also on the chorale's program is a group of spiritual songs to be sung by Mike McDonald, baritone, with Roberta Alexander as accompanist.

Beatrice Chauncey will direct the Women's Glee Club, with Karen Pratt serving as accompanist.

Compositions on the program include Purcell's How Pleasant Is This Flowery Plain and Grove, featuring Nancy Beavers and Claire.

Compositions on the program include Purcell's How Pleasant Is This Flowery Plain and Grove, featuring Nancy Beavers and Claire Hurley, sopranos with Teresa Watkins, harpsichord; John McLellan and Kenneth Hubbard, alto recorders, and Cliff Bellamy, cello. Terry Leggett, soprano, accompanied by Debra Hardy, pianist, will sing Howard Wells' Everyone Sang; and Patricia Douglass, soprano will sing a medley from Sound of Music.

Other selections are songs from Jack Beeson's The Model Housekeeper — Strawberries as a Dentifrice; Plumpeening Cream For Hollow Cheeks; How To Tell When Lard Is Hot Enough; and Milk to Fatten, to be sung by four sopranos, Claire Hurley, Jacqueline Rausch, Patricia Douglass and Nancy Beavers. Ms. Rausch will also be the soloist for Schubert's Serenade.

Other compositions on the Glee Club program are by Eric Thiman, Bach, Charles Ives, Paul Schwartz, and John B. Kennedy.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend. Seating is on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Charleen Whisnant Tar Heel Poet To Be Here

Greensboro native Charleen Whisnant, poet, author, and publisher, will be a special guest of the East Carolina University Poetry Forum in three appearances on Thursday and Friday under the joint sponsorship of the forum and the N.C. Arts Council.

At 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 13, she will read some of her poetry and talk about some of her experiences. This will take place in the Biology Auditorium, 103 Biology Building.

On Friday, Ms. Whisnant will be in two workshop-discussion sessions. The first, on "Children's Poetry," will be at 10 a.m. Friday in 308 Austin. The second session will be devoted to the topic, "Publication of Poetry" and will be held at 11 a.m. in 206 Brewster.

There is no admission charge to any of the three events and the public is invited to attend.

Among her publications are Word Magic, published by Doubleday in 1974 and an Anthology of American Women Poets published by Harper and Row, also in 1974.

Poems by Ms. Whisnant have appeared in numerous magazines and in several anthologies of verse. She has edited The Carolina Quarterly and Red Clay Reader and is now poetry editor of Southern Voices and editor-publisher of Red Clay Books.

Inconsistency Mars Book Student Shows On View

The Underwater Dig: An Introduction To Marine Archaeology. By Robert F. Marx. New York, N. Y. Henry Z. Walch, Inc. (Distributed by Dutton). 249 pps illustrated. $9.95.

The Underwater Dig is a valuable addition to the library of any underwater archaeologist, particularly that of the amateur and the student. Its breadth of information and readability contribute toward making this book essential reading for those persons interested in or actively pursuing underwater archaeology, but not professionally trained in the subject.

The author's goal is to give the amateur a solid ground in the basics of method and theory in underwater archaeology. He does this with the hope that, armed with this knowledge, amateurs will become more concerned with their work and the care with which it is undertaken.

To this end, Marx includes very detailed chapters on background research, systematic underwater site search, excavation techniques, dating and identification of artifacts recovered, and preservation and publication of the results. These chapters are preceded by a discussion of the history of underwater archaeology and some of the theory of modern archaeology. The book is of value for the chapters on methodology alone.

Each of the methods chapters is written from the standpoint that all archaeological work is basically destructive, and that a "find" is enhanced through careful recording of each artifact recovered. That is, once an artifact has been removed from a site—underwater or land—it can never be replaced in exactly the same position. As more of a site is excavated without the use of proper techniques, more information (value) is lost.

Marx feels, justifiably, that the more information recorded before and during the excavation, the more important each recovered artifact becomes and the more of human behavior that can be interpreted from the remains. This is the central point of archaeology as a modern social science.

However, Marx seems strangely inconsistent on this very point. On several occasions he classifies the various types of underwater archaeological sites into levels of importance to archaeologists. For Marx, intact ship-wrecks are the most important sites. He feels that they should be dealt with in as careful a manner as possible, because they can yield datable "single period time frames." They show artifacts which were in use at a single point in time. Second in importance would be disturbed ship-wrecks, again because of the limited time frame. Third, and least important according to Marx, are habitation sites which have slipped, for various reasons, below water level. Marx argues that these sites are the least important because counterparts can be found on land.

As a result of his "leveling" of sites, one could conclude that the lowest level sites can be excavated with the least care. It is for this conclusion that Marx should be criticized. From the viewpoint of a professional archaeologist, all sites are equally important until after they have been excavated and a determination made as to whether or not artifacts were recovered in context (intact). No two sites are ever going to be identical, which removes the argument that there will always be counterparts on land. Underwater habitation sites may well be more intact than land sites and, consequently, yield even more information. Marx's cavalier attitude concerning their "lack of importance" is unfortunate in the least.

Thus, from a professional standpoint, this book is useful only for its explanation of the various methods used in underwater archaeology and for its history of the field.

Marx's classification of sites, however, detracts from the overall usefulness of the book. It is possible that amateur underwater archaeologists may follow his advice, based on this classification scheme, and that much valuable data will be lost.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The first of two monthly meetings in May of the Greenville Writer's Club will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. The place is the office of the "New East" magazine, on the first floor of the Wilcar Executive Center, 223 West 10th Street.

The meeting site is reached by parking in Wilcar's rear parking lot and entering the building through the rear entrance.

All persons interested in creative writing are invited to attend.

It's a full-hall and cases show now up at the Kate Lewis Gallery and in the show cases at Rawl Hall on campus. The occasion is the annual Students Show, where students in all levels and from all departments of the School of Art, East Carolina University are having their annual show.

A wide variety of media and art styles are represented in this colorful show which encompasses work in the categories of fine and commercial arts.

Sculpture, interior designs, ceramics, jewelry, textiles, stuffed soft sculpture, robes, prints, paintings—you name it and it's likely to be found in this show.

While the 1976 spring student show may not provide many surprises, it is one with lots of things to see and to enjoy.

This spring's art exhibit by Rose High students is one of the most rewarding in several years.

There's an abundance of good design, color and craftsmanship coupled with some highly imaginative ideas and approaches.

One noticeable trend is the small number of paintings and drawings as opposed to the increasingly large representation of art in what is loosely labeled as "the crafts"—batik, fabric items and macrame, wood and string compositions, ceramics.

There's even one example of an art form seldom encountered today, that of twilled paper.

Because of the quick succession of school art shows, there's little time left to see the Rose High Annual Art Show. It's a fine show and again proves there's an amazing amount of talent ready to be developed through art programs in the schools.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By ANN NOBLE

Science fiction fans will be delighted to learn of several new arrivals at Sheppard Library. Norma Fox Mazer, author of award-winning A FIGURE OF SPEECH, has created SATURDAY, THE TWELFTH OF OCTOBER. In it, Zan, a teenaged girl, is swept away by a "storm" to an unknown world. She is eventually accepted into the community of cave dwellers, but she clings fiercely to her memories of home. An old wise woman realizes that Zan poses a threat to her people, and she takes it upon herself to rid the people of Zan.

THE WORD FOR WORLD IS FOREST is from popular science fiction writer Ursula LeGuin. Now a single volume for the first time, it was the 1973 Hugo Award winner for the best short novel. The Athsheans lived on a beautiful planet; their culture based on a stable ecology. Then Earthmen moved in. They called the place New Tahiti and captured the natives as slaves. A confrontation between the two forces was inevitable.

IN THE SPACE VAMPIRES by Colin Wilson, astronauts discover a derelict spaceship in which are thirty humanoid forms. Three are taken back to England. Only then it is discovered that terrible force has been unleashed—vampires. Wilson links modern scientific discoveries about energy to age-old beliefs of the occult. This is a powerful and frightening novel for hard-core science fiction fans.

Top ECU Talent Involved In New Outdoor Drama

Some of the top dramatic talent at East Carolina University will be involved in a new American Kermit Hunter outdoor drama, Hernando DeSoto, Conquistador opening on Bull Bayou Road near the heart of Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas on June 25.

Edgar Loessin, Mavis Ray and Carol Beule are the three from the Department of Drama and Speech at ECU who have instrumental roles in the new outdoor summer play by playwright Kermit Hunter depicting the story of the expedition of Hernando DeSoto.

Loessin, chairman of the ECU Drama Department, is the director of the new historic drama. In addition to his work with numerous productions at ECU, he has been associated as stage manager with Broadway productions such as Gypsy, Show Girl, The Boy Friend and others. He has directed many major outdoor dramas of the South, as well as one in Illinois with a cast of 650.

Loessin received the master's degree from Yale

University, and has been honored by UNC-Chapel Hill as the recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Carolina Playmakers.

British native Mavis Ray is the choreographer for the new play. She began her dancing career in London, and has since performed in musicals such as Carousel, The King and I, Kismet, etc.

In addition to her regular faculty duties at ECU, Miss Ray has served as associate choreographer for The Lost Colony and has assisted Agnes de Mille with the formation of a company for the American Heritage Dance Theater. She has also worked with the Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera, the St. Louis Opera and other groups in staging dances.

Carol Beule, Costume Designer for Arkansas' new outdoor drama, has received acclaim for costuming a varied number of productions at ECU, including The Boy Friend, Flight Brothers, and Who's Happy Now?

Miss Beule received the Master of Fine Arts in Costume from the University of Wisconsin in 1972. In addition to her work in this field, she also has experience in scenic design, properties, choreography and lighting.

Kermit Hunter, dean of the Meadows School of the Arts at Southern Methodist University, is one of America's leading playwrights in the field of outdoor drama. Among his achievements are Unto These Hills and Trail of Tears, both dealing with Cherokee history.

Music has been composed by Frank Lewin, who has written original scores for the TV series The Defenders and The Nurses. He teaches composition at the Yale School of Music and is also on the faculty of Columbia University.

David Weiss, professor of drama at the University of Virginia, is the drama's designer; and John E. Blizzard of The Lost Colony staff, is the general manager.

Hernando DeSoto, Conquistador will be performed nightly from the June 25 opening through August 28 except on Sundays. Seating capacity for the amphitheater is 1,600. Reserved seats will be $4.50 and $3.50 for adults, and $2.50 and $1.50 for children. More information is available from Conquistador, P.O. Box 1259, Hot Springs National Park, Ark., 71901.

Band Boosters Meet Tuesday

The Greenville City Band Booster Club will meet at 8:00 p.m. on Tuesday in the Band Room at Rose High. This final meeting for the school year will be conducted by the newly elected officers: John Connelly, president; Phil Peoples, vice president; Marilyn Houlik, secretary; and Marcella Bullard, treasurer.

Representing individual school bands for the coming year will be Connie Morris, Rose High School; Bill Byrd, Aycock Junior High; and Martha Banks for Agnes Fullilove School.

The Tuesday meeting will be devoted to plans for the coming school year and the organization of committees for an early start in September. This meeting will bring to a close the first year of the Band Boosters as a city wide organization.

The city-wide approach has proved successful in meeting fund raising goals and completing several projects.

Persons interested in supporting the band program in the city schools are invited to attend.

1984 Is Only Eight Years Away

By ALINE MOSBY
 "From the age of uniformity, from the age of solitude, from the age of Big Brother, from the age of doublethink — Greetings!" — George Orwell, "1984."

PARIS (UPI) — In eight years it will be 1984.

In 1949, British author George Orwell wrote a savagely bitter book on a future world where individuals are controlled by numbers, computerized information and the TV spies of an all-pervasive government which called itself "Big Brother."

Will Orwell's book "1984" come true?

The industrialized nations — admitting alarm — met quietly in Paris last June to discuss what's left of the privacy of the individual at a special conference on "Data Protection and Privacy."

The delegates from 19 countries conferred on possible laws to regulate the collection of computerized information on individuals, the use of personal identification numbers and the "wired city" of television surveillance of individuals.

"It is approximately 10 years before George Orwell's famous book '1984' comes up on our calendars," said U.S. delegate Alan Westin of Columbia University, New York.

"If we move ahead with vigor and insight in the drafting of regulations in all the advanced nations, we should be able to say when 1984 arrives not, with regret, how terribly prophetic Orwell was but to note with satisfaction that Western societies had the wisdom and made the commitment to avoid the abyss."

A report on that conference, organized by the Western world's economic watchdog, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, has just been issued.

The world can still avoid "1984," delegates from OECD's member nations — from Western Europe, North America, Japan, Australia and New Zealand — agreed, but immediate steps must be taken to stop the erosion of privacy.

Public alarm over the loss of individual privacy is justified, according to the report.

The idea that privacy is the right of an individual not to give anybody information about himself has gone down the drain, it said.

Industrialized nations "are witnessing a rapid increase in the amount of data on individual citizens collected by public and private institutions ... an expression of the growing complexity of our developed societies," said one report distributed to delegates.

"Innovations in computers ... have sharpened public awareness of the human value 'privacy'."

Although the public outcries are raised in Western societies over each erosion of individual privacy, the fuss dies down quickly and the new regulations or forms become a part of everyday life.

The individual now accepts the fact he has to give information about himself to obtain credit cards, open bank accounts, buy life insurance, apply for a job, get a driver's license or passport or visa, the report said.

(New Yorkers — once notorious for rebelliously punching holes in those computerized cards that warn "do not bend, fold, spindle or mutilate" — have grown philosophical over the idea that they've "become a number.")

"I don't mind so much what the government knows about me because I think the more the government knows the better they can meet all our social needs," said Jane Necol, a New York art historian.

"I'll start getting worried when I find out that little man following me isn't just trying to get a date," she said.

(But New Yorkers still get indignant over reports the U.S. government opens their mail and listens to their telephone conversations.)

"It makes me very nervous, it violates my sense of privacy," said Philomena Houlihan, a bookkeeper at a New York stationery firm.

"I want to feel like an individual not a thing," she said. "Why should the government always be checking up on me when I'm perfectly innocent. I obey laws. I vote every year. I'm a good citizen. If I want the government to check up on me I'll go to Russia.")

The delegates also agreed on the growing possibilities of the "wired nation" — the constant electronic surveillance like the "telescreen with its never-sleeping ear" that haunted Orwell's hero in his apartment.

"Any sound that Winston made, above the level of a low whisper, would be picked up by it; moreover so long as he remained within the field of vision which the (screen) commanded, he could be seen as well as heard," Orwell wrote.

"There was of course no way of knowing whether you were being watched at any given moment. How often, or on what system, the Thought Police plugged in on any individual wire was guesswork. It was even conceivable that they watched everybody all the time."

Klaus Lenk of the University of Frankfurt, West Germany, said surveillance of traffic by radar and of factories, banks, shops and apartment entrances by television is already common.

"Experiments with cameras mounted at street intersections have been conducted in New York State," he said.

"From street to home door surveillance involves no technological differences, so the main question is where surveillance stops before complete knowledge of individual behavior is attained."

The problem now is to pass laws to control and protect that information recorded about an individual, OECD said.

(In London, once a fierce bastion of the right to privacy, most Britishers seemed to agree that if the government has got to know their secrets it should at least control access to them.)

"We start giving information the day we're born — date, sex, parents, etcetera, so there's really no way to stop it from accumulating as the years go by," said writer Brian Oliver.

"What we can do and almost certainly will do in this country before 1984 is control access to it."

The report predicted that during the 1970s all OECD countries will pass laws or codes of ethics to control and protect data banks crammed with information on citizens, from their credit ratings to their traffic fines.

"Individuals should be informed of the existence, purposes and use of personal information about them stored in data banks," seminar chairman Per Svoneius of Sweden told delegates.

"Access should be provided to any individual to correct errors and challenge disputed information."

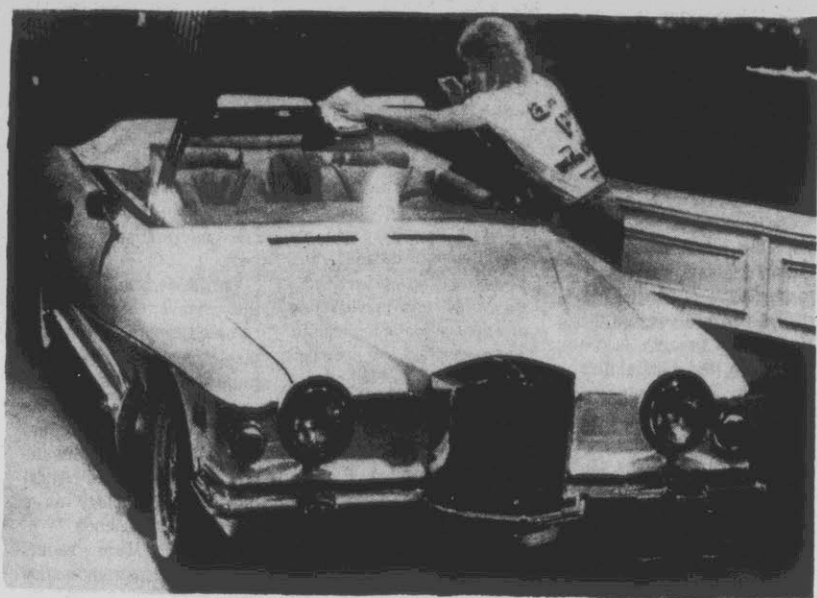

So far four countries have some form of regulation protecting information:

— Swedish and West German administrative boards supervise the operation of data banks and provide ombudsmen to whom citizens can complain of misuse or mistakes in the information.

— Britain has delayed national legislation but relies on self-regulation by local authorities to protect citizen's rights.

— Somewhere between the two is the U.S. system of state-by-state legislation. Legislation is pending in several states dealing with criminal records, including traffic fines.

In addition, Italy has a unique "workers' statute" which prohibits surveillance by bosses of employes with electronic devices.

Van Show Set For May 22

A van show featuring about 200 customized vans will be held May 22 at Pitt Plaza from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with eight prizes being awarded in individual classes and a grand prize for the best overall van.

Trophies are being provided by Bill Haddock Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge Co. and by Hasting's Ford Co. Both companies will have ten vans each in the show and will have members of their sales staff on hand to answer questions.

The show is being organized by the J.C. Penney Automotive Center, which opened a van shop in March. Participating clubs include the Carolina Truckers, based in Greenville, the AmeriVan Club from Fayetteville and the Central Carolina Truckers from Goldsboro.

Most of the vans are individually owned. They are classed as factory vans if they are sold complete with all interior and exterior designs. Individually customized vans have been designed completely by the owner.

Awards will be given for best paint (exterior), best interior design and most original design (overall) in the factory customized class. Individually customized class awards include best paint, best interior design, most original design, worst wrecked or most badly designed van and most sophisticated Citizen Band radio system.

Judges for the show will be Eddie Cavasas, sales promotion manager for Good Times Machines, Jim Taylor, president of Taylor Radio Co. (a CB manufacturer), and Pistol Tingen, owner of a local Corvette shop.

The vans will be displayed in several areas at Pitt Plaza. No registration fee will be charged for van entries.

Squires May Try Courts

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Squires were reported Saturday to be considering legal action to block a merger of the American Basketball Association and the National Basketball Association unless they are readmitted as members of the ABA.

The Norfolk Ledger-Star said it was told by a source close to the team the Squires had hired an unidentified New York law firm, whose representatives met Friday afternoon with ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere concerning the team's dismissal from the league.

At a meeting Thursday in New York, the ABA booted the Squires for failure to pay their bills but said the franchise could be readmitted if the team's owners came up with approximately $100,000 by 5 p. m., EDT, Monday to pay off their debts.

The Ledger-Star said it was told the Squires claim to have in the Chemical Bank of New York a $100,000 letter of credit, the amount each team is required to deposit before admission to the ABA.

The representatives of the law firm were reported by the paper to have told DeBusschere the money was to be used by the league to pay off debts and for other uses.

If the Squires are not allowed to use the letter of credit to pay off the debts, the paper said it was told, the team's owners have threatened to go to court seeking an injunction block any merger of the two basketball leagues.

Neither General Partner Van Cunningham nor General Manager Jack Ankerson of Squires would comment Saturday on the reports.

DeBusschere, in announcing the action Thursday dismissing the Squires from the league, was not optimistic about a merger any time soon between the ABA and NBA and said the ABA was proceeding on the theory it would operate as a league again next year.

Officials of the Squires also say they have been given no assurance the Virginia franchise would be included in a merger if one materialized.

But the approximately 20 die-hards among the team's 100 investors, who have sunk about $2 million into the franchise in the last two years, reportedly are trying to keep the Squires alive either to be included in the merger or for indemnity payments.

The Squires have missed their last two payrolls, reportedly amounting to about $85,000, and also are said to owe the league approximately $20,000.

Alvan Adams Top Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Alvan Adams of the Phoenix Suns was a landslide winner of the National Basketball Association's Rookie of the Year Award for 1975-76, Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien announced Saturday.

Adams won the 24th annual balloting of writers and broadcasters in the 18 franchise cities with 16,646 points out of a possible 18. Gus Williams of Golden State was a distant second with 0.596.

The only other vote-getters were Lloyd Free of Philadelphia, 0.417; Lionel Hollins of Portland, 0.250, and John Schumate of Buffalo, 0.091.

Each NBA city received one full vote in the balloting. Actually, Adams received 101 of the 110 votes cast, indicating the value of the 6-foot-9 center from Oklahoma, who helped Phoenix qualify for the playoffs for the first time since 1970.

Adams averaged 19 points per game and led all NBA centers in assists with 450. "He's the best passing center since Johnny Kerr," said Al Bianchi, Phoenix' assistant coach. "He's the most popular guy on the team because he'll give the ball up."

He was the leading write-in candidate in the fan balloting for the the 1976 All-Star Game and was chosen for the team by the West coaches, the first rookie since Sidney Wicks in 1972 to be so honored.

Adams was the fourth player picked in the first round of the 1975 college draft. He had a 3.8 grade index as a pre-med student at the University of Oklahoma, but passed up his senior year to turn pro. He was the Big Eight Player of the Year and MVP of the conference tournament three straight years.

Yet, at 210 pounds and the lightest center in the NBA, it was not until he faced top pro competition that the word spread—Adams is a player.

"He's by far the best pick we ever made, no question about it," said Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Only one World Series ever has been decided by a home run in the bottom half of the final inning. Bill Mazerolis hit it to give the Pittsburgh Pirates their seven-game victory over the New York Yankees in 1960.

Little Holds Onto Lead With A Birdie

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—South Africa's Sally Little had to birdie the 18th hole Saturday to maintain her lead in the third round of the Women's International Golf Tournament by one stroke over Australia's Jan Stephenson.

Miss Little had four birdies and two bogeys in carding her 34-37-71. Miss Stephenson, like Miss Little a striking blonde, went out in 38, two over par,

Cost Is Climbing

MONTREAL (CP) — The main Olympic stadium now is expected to cost $825 million, up from the last official estimate of $580 million, according to a report in The Star.

The newspaper said it has learned that the new cost is attributed to frost, technical problems and a winter heating bill of $500,000 per day.

Close to $700 million will have been spent on the 70,000-seat facility by the time the Games open, the Star said. The additional $125 million would be required to complete the stadium's mast and folding-membrane roof after the Games.

Keeping workers warm during four winter months of construction has cost $60 million alone, the newspaper reported, adding that this is almost the entire cost of the Houston Astrodome.

The Star said the new stadium estimate would bring total cost of staging the Games to $1.5 billion, and would bring the deficit to $1.1 billion from $900 million.

The $825 million, almost seven times the original estimate, does not include financing costs, the newspaper said. Victor Goldbloom, Quebec minister in charge of the Olympic installations board, had said last March that estimated daily operating costs for the massive facility would be $50,000, compared to $37,000 for the recently-opened New Orleans Superdome.

These costs remain constant regardless of whether events are held in the facilities.

The 550-foot mast and folding roof were to have been completed in time for the July 17 opening date, but Olympic Organizing Committee officials have said numerous working days were lost because of construction-worker walkouts last year.

but caught fire on the back nine with five birdies, one via a 30-foot putt on the 18th. Miss Little, who held a two-stroke lead at the beginning of the third round, has a 54-hole total of 211, five under par. Miss Stephenson is one stroke back at 212.

Their closest rivals for the $10,000 top prize in the $70,000 tournament are two other professionals who, with an amateur, are knotted at 215, one under for the 54 holes. They are pros Muriel Breer and Judy Rankin, and Debby Massey, a member of the U.S. Curtis Cup team and the first-round leader.

"I putted so well it was unbelievable," said Miss Little. Asked how many putts she had, Miss Little said, "I didn't count—but not too many."

Due to a mixup in cars, Miss Stephenson had to scramble to get to the Devil's Elbow at Moss Creek Plantation and did not arrive in time for warm up shots prior to teeing off. "I was so shaken I missed three birdie putts on the front side and also had two bogeys," she said.

Shirley Englehorn, a professional for 16 years, scored the first hole in one of her career when she aceed the 147-yard 17th hole with a seven iron. She said she "flipped" when the ball rolled in the cup.

She had a 35-36-71 and is tied at even par total of 216 with Betty Burfeindt, who was 36-35-71 for the day. Veteran Carol Mann had a five-under par 67, which will earn her the $1,000 prize for the lowest round of the tournament unless someone betters that in Sunday's final round. Miss Mann is three over for the 54 holes at 219.

Dropping out of contention with a 77 Saturday and a 54-hole total of 221 was Hollis Stacy, the touring pro of Moss Creek plantation. She had par 72s the first two days.

Kusick Leads Twin Victory

By MIKE O'BRIEN

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Craig Kusick drove in four runs, one with his second homer of the year, while Dave McKay and Bob Randall knocked in two apiece in a six-run Minnesota second inning as the Twins pounded the Milwaukee Brewers 13-2 Saturday.

McKay and Rod Carew slammed three hits apiece and Larry Hise scored four times in a 15-hit assault on five Milwaukee pitchers. Joe Decker, 2-2, and Bill Campbell checked the Brewers on four hits for the Twins' fourth victory in five starts.

Singles by McKay and Danny Thompson triggered the big inning and Randall followed with a two-run double. A single by Hise and a walk filled the bases, chasing starter and loser Bill Travers, 2-2.

Reliever Bill Champion fanned Dan Ford for the second out but hit Kusick with a pitch and walked Butch Wynegar to force in two runs, setting up a two-run single by McKay.

Kusick singled home a run in the first inning and tagged Bill Castro for his homer in the fourth. Ford and Wynegar singled home two more runs against Tom Hausman in the sixth.

A walk, a triple by Carew, a hit batsman, Kusick's run-scoring infield out and an error produce the Twins' final three runs in the eighth.

Oil Leak Keeps Janet Off Track Saturday

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie, wearing a borrowed racing outfit, made her debut at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Saturday but was kept from driving because of a leaking oil line in her racer.

After fixing a clutch problem that had kept the Vollstedt car in the garage all afternoon, veteran Dick Simon, Miss Guthrie's teammate, brought the racer onto the track with just 25 minutes left in the opening day of practice for the Indy 500.

But five laps later, as Miss Guthrie anxiously watched from the pits, Simon came in—due to the leak in a line from the scavenger pump to the blower.

It was a minor problem, but it ended Miss Guthrie's hopes of making her first try at the Speedway until Sunday.

"The line can be repaired in 30 minutes," Simon said later. "It'll be ready for a rookie test Sunday. I'm quite proud of the car. It checked out well other than a line, and you can't detect that until you get out there."

There was a late flurry of activity at the track in the final hour after it reopened following a lengthy cleanup of an oil spill by Steve Krisiloff.

Thirteen drivers managed practice laps, with Mario Andretti's 178.077 miles an hour the fastest speed of the day. Jim McElreath managed a lap at 170.293. The limit on opening day was 180 mph for veterans and 160 for rookies. Miss Guthrie, 38, the first woman to enter the Indianapolis 500, had to use the borrowed equipment because of an airline mixup that left her belongings in Chicago.

"I arrived with the clothes on my back and that was it," she said. Her problem, she said, stemmed from a late arrival at New York's La Guardia Airport on Saturday morning.

"I ran up, gave the skycap a couple bucks and told him to send the bags to Indianapolis," she laughed. "They just found them an hour ago in Chicago. I want my money back."

Among the missing items were her helmet and driver's suit.

"We purchased some new gear here," she said, "except for the hat and driver's suit, which I am proud to say Billy Vukovich loaned me. I think that exemplifies a very high level of sportsmanship, because he was one of the earliest critics of women drivers."

Only six drivers made it out on the track by mid-afternoon as a crowd of several thousand persons, many of them waiting for Miss Guthrie's first appearance, watched the opening session of practice for the May 30 race.

Three of the early cars out for practice were driven by rookies, including Bob Olivero, Lakewood, Calif., who was the first to attempt his rookie test and sailed through 20 laps at 160 miles per hour with no trouble. Two other drivers, the youngest and one of the oldest, were not as fortunate.

The first casualty was 21-year-old rookie Spike Gehlhauen's McLaren, which blew a piston coming down the main stretch shortly after taking to the track. The racer was wheeled back to Gasoline Alley and the engine from a backup car was quickly substituted.

Not long after that, veteran Roger McCluskey, 48, blew his engine coming off the straightaway and scattered parts along the track as he coasted through the second turn.

Neither driver was injured, but the yellow caution light was on briefly as U.S. Auto Club officials cleared and inspected the track before further activity was permitted.

The first driver out on the track was Larry Cannon, hoping for his second start in the 500.

Cannon, 39, drove in the 1974 race but lasted just 49 laps and finished 24th.

Other drivers out early in the day were veteran Jim McElreath and rookie Billy Scott, who made a qualifying attempt here last year, but crashed coming out of the fourth turn and missed the race.

Three-time winner A.J. Foyt and brothers Al and Bobby Unser, who have won here twice each, arrived at the Speedway about noon, but stayed in the garage area.

Divisions Get Okay

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — The NCAA Classification Committee Saturday was ordered by the NCAA Council to proceed with its plan to divide the 467 football-playing members into four divisions.

The committee was given until June 1 to make a tentative classification and appeals will be heard by the classification committee June 30, at which time it will reach its final classification decisions.

Further appeals will be by the council August 11-13 and the conclusions will be subject to ratification by the 71st NCAA Convention Jan. 10-12.

The NCAA membership is currently divided into Divisions I, II and III but the plan would create a fourth division in football, dividing Division I into I and IA, with some members of the present Division II becoming members of IA.

Among the Classification Committee recommendations was the appointment of a committee to develop a plan for a Division IA Football championship to be presented at the January convention.

The committee said under its proposal when considering legislation pertaining only to football, Divisions I and IA would vote together except on matters concerning membership criteria for either division in football, number of financial aid awards in football and establishment of a football championship.

Rookie Stars In Red Win

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Santo Alcala, making his first major league start, limited Chicago to two hits in seven innings Saturday while Dave Concepcion, Tony Perez and George Foster rapped out three hits apiece to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 14-4 romp over the Cubs.

Alcala, 1-0, a 23-year-old right-hander from the Dominican Republic, was nicked for three runs in the first inning on a single and three walks but settled down after that and allowed only one other hit—a solo home run by Bill Madlock in the fifth inning.

Concepcion had two doubles and a single, driving in two runs, while Perez had three singles and two RBI and Foster had a single, triple, double and three RBI. Joe Morgan also drove in three runs for the Reds with a double, single and sacrifice fly.

Cincinnati kept hammering away with what wound up as a 16-hit attack and failed to score only in the third and seventh innings. Six of their hits went for extra bases. The Reds closed out the scoring with three runs in the ninth on a walk, a single by Griffey, Morgan's double, a sacrifice fly by Dan Driessen and Foster's RBI double.

Initial action in the Babe Ruth Prep League was postponed Saturday because of wet grounds.

Saturday's opening games were to have pitted Auto Specialty against Pitt Plaza, while Cox Realty was to have met the Graniters.

These games will be made up later in the season. The league will now open Tuesday at Jaycee Park with a 6 p.m. game between the Graniters and Auto Specialty.

Mattamuskeet Upsets Bullets

MATTAMUSKEET—Jimmy Burrus scored an unearned run in the bottom of the third and his run was the only one across as Mattamuskeet temporarily stopped Jamesville's chase of Bear Grass, 1-0.

Jamesville was a game back of Beaufort-Martin-Hyde conference leader Bear Grass going into the game but the Bullets could not get a run across. Instead they fell two games back of the Bears at 9-2. Bear Grass is 11-1.

Burrus had reached on a single in the third, stole second and took third when Danny Harris reached on a fielder's choice. An error let Harris score.

Jamesville got out of a bases-loaded jam in the sixth. The Lakers filled the sacs with none out but Duke Stone struck out the side. Jamesville came back to load the bases in its half of the seventh with two out.

The Bullets had a chance of catching the Bears. They were scheduled to play Chocowinity Saturday. They are to meet Bear Grass in Jamesville Tuesday night.

Tigers Roll By Washington, 9-4

WASHINGTON—Butch Davis had three hits and Lee Pearson two to lead the Williamston Tigers to a 9-4 victory over Washington, Friday night.

Tommy Gardner won the game in relief for Williamston. He replaced starter Artie Rodgers in the bottom of the fourth and finished the game. Alston Daniels started and lost the game for Washington.

Williamston put three tallies up in the first on three-scoring singles by Davis and Pearson. Washington countered with two in its half of the inning as Doug Whitehead drove in Bo Stevens with a double and Whitehead later scored on Fred Cherry's single.

Ken Herman opened the Tiger third with a single and after being sacrificed up, he scored on another hit by Davis. Cherry had a second RBI single in the bottom of the frame for the Pam Pack.

The eventual winning run came over in the fourth as Eric Godard homered for the Tigers. Williamston scored twice in the sixth and twice in the seventh.

Stevens and Cherry had two hits each for Washington.

William & Mary Captures Award

RESTON, Va.—The College of William & Mary regained the Commissioners Cup which it had lost to East Carolina for the past two years. The Indians last won the cup in 1972-73 and previously won the two preceding years.

The cup is awarded annually to the school compiling the most points in all sports in which the Conference declares a championship.

William & Mary finished three points ahead of the defending champion, East Carolina accumulating 68 points. In third place was Appalachian State with 62 points.

The Williamsburg school won Conference titles in cross country and indoor track and finished second in soccer, basketball, wrestling and outdoor track. They finished fifth in football, rifle, baseball and golf; fourth in tennis and sixth in swimming.

Champions in other sports were: Richmond in football, Appalachian State in soccer and rifle, VMI in Basketball, East Carolina in swimming, wrestling and outdoor track. Furman won in baseball, golf and tennis.

Sports Medicine Conference Set

The seventh annual Sports Medicine Athletic Trainers and Coaches Conference will be held on the East Carolina University campus May 14-15 at the Allied Health Building. This conference is jointly sponsored by the East Carolina Sports Medicine staff and the Department of Continuing Education.

The purpose of the conference is to aid high school trainers and coaches in their methods of treatment and rehabilitation of injured athletes through various discussions and demonstrations.

The program of speakers and topics includes: James Bowman, MD—shoulder problems; William Monroe, MD—eye problems; Bill Jones, MD—skin problems; Richard Evans, DDS—dental injuries; Hubert Burden, PHD—anatomy of shoulder; Larry Graham, JD—mediclegal considerations; Rod Compton, ATC and Ronnie Barnes, ATC—treatment and rehabilitation of shoulder problems; Ronnie Barnes, ATC and Liz White, ATC—heat stress.

Coordinating the conference is the Director of Sports Medicine for East Carolina, Rod Compton; his assistant, Ronnie Barnes; and the only certified female trainer in North Carolina, Liz White.

The conference is approved by the State Department of Public Instruction and endorsed by the National Athletic Trainers Association.

Greene Central Takes ECC Track Championship

FARMVILLE—Greene Central High School took an overwhelming victory in the Eastern Carolina Conference track meet Friday at Farmville Central.

The Rams piled up 160 points, nearly doubling the output of the second place C.B. Aycock Falcons, which had 84. Farmville Central finished with 78, while Southern Nash was fourth with 75. North Lenoir had 48, Conley, 33, and North Pitt, 15.

Greene Central won first place in six individual events and in one of the relays. C. B. Aycock was the closest to them in firsts with four, while Farmville Central won a pair of events. North Lenoir and Conley each captured one event, while Southern Nash took a relay event.

Greene Central's Waters was a triple winner in the meet, BETHEL—Donnie Cox kicked down the door with a two-run homer and the D.H. Conley Vikings pushed two more runs through in the fourth to rally past North Pitt, 5-4, Friday.

North Pitt had put together a 3-0 lead in the first and made it 4-1 in the third. But Cox blasted a long fly to deep left center scoring another Viking runner and four hits later the Vikings had the lead.

Kevin Adams won the game but his performance was anything but outstanding. He gave up four earned runs, seven walks and five hits while striking out four. Jay Bedworth got the loss. He gave up eight hits, walked one, struck out four and all the Vikings runs were earned.

North Pitt came out swinging after setting Conley down in order in the first. Eddie Hemingway doubled to right and moved to third on a mental error on Dwight Verelson's grounder to first. Noel Whitley doubled Hemingway across and a single by Lee Andrews scored both

Roanoke Runs Past Johnston

ROBERSONVILLE—Roanoke High School scored early and gained a 7-3 victory over North Johnston Friday night in an Eastern Plains Baseball game.

The Redskins pushed over two runs in the first inning. Charlie Smith singled and Ricky Jenkins got a hit. An error on the play allowed Smith to come around and score the first run, while Eddie James then got a hit to score Jenkins for a 2-0 lead.

Roanoke added three more in the second. Doug Lane singled and Willie Spruill ran for him. Donnie Weaver walked and both Weaver and Spruill scored when Ken Gurganus tripled. Reid Bullock hit a sacrifice fly to score Gurganus.

North Johnston got its only runs in the fifth inning. Jerry Stancil reached on a two-base

Two Wrestlers Sign With ECU

East Carolina University wrestling coach John Welborn announced today the signing of two outstanding high school stars to grants-in-aid. They are Frank Schaeede of Fairfax, Va., and Mark Furst of Columbus, Ohio.

Schaeede is a two-time state champion from Robinson High School, winning the state title at 138 his junior year and at 145 his senior year. Over a three-year period, Schaeede compiled a record of 66-5.

As a senior, Schaeede was 25-0, won the District, Regional and State championships and was voted his team's Most Valuable Wrestler. As a junior, he was 22-1, won the District title, was third in the Regionals and tops in the State Championship.

"Frank's being a two-time state champ makes him a definite blue chipper," said John Welborn. "He was very highly recruited, has great potential and could become a starter his freshman year which is hard to do. He's one of five top Virginia wrestlers, we have one other already in Steve Goode and we hope to get one more of those five."

Messersmith's Record Drops To 0-3 As Pirates Hand Him A Loss

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Atlanta, Andy Messersmith's present team, has lost 11 straight games. Los Angeles, Messersmith's former team, has won 12 straight games.

Even with a $1 million contract in his pocket, Andy Messersmith certainly knows the score.

"Winning or losing. That's what it's all about," Messersmith said Friday night after his 1976 record fell to 0-3 when the Pittsburgh Pirates dealt the Braves their latest defeat, 3-1.

Meanwhile, the Dodgers keep rolling along without Messersmith, who was 19-14 last season but left Los Angeles for the greener pastures of free agency and Atlanta. The Dodgers are in first place in the National League West; the Braves are in last.

The Dodgers have given their pitchers the luxury of 33 runs over the past three games, including Friday night's 10-8 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

But Messersmith, a millionaire on paper, is still a pauper on the mound.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds trimmed the Chicago Cubs 3-1; the New York Mets tripped the San Diego Padres 6-2, and the Houston Astros stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1. San Francisco at Montreal was postponed by rain.

John Candelaria was the latest mound wizard against Atlanta as he yielded five hits while striking out 10.

Mets 6, Padres 2
Dave Kingman belted his 11th and 12th homers of the season and drove in five runs to power New York past San Diego. Jerry Koosman, who pitched a six-hitter, was the beneficiary of Kingman's muscle.

"He's beautiful," said Koosman. "He can look terrible striking out, but when he hits the ball...he's beautiful."

Kingman is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the major league homer lead and is tops in the majors with 29 runs batted in.

my third win of the season, maybe I'll get my second hundred in a softball league down in Florida. I'm not going for any record book. What I'm going for is wins this year."

Astros 3, Cards 1
There was good Cruz and bad Cruz for Houston's J.R. Richard, who hurled a six-hitter to beat St. Louis.

Jose Cruz cracked a pair of run-scoring singles to help Richard to his fifth victory in six decisions, while Jose's brother, Hector Cruz, slugged a homer to spoil Richard's shut-out bid.

Angels Win To Snap Cleveland Domination; Yankees Pound A's

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Who says you can't win them all? Well, Bobby Bonds and Bill Melton relayed that message to the Cleveland Indians Friday night.

In their previous 13 outings in Anaheim since July 17, 1973, the Indians had enjoyed themselves more than the tourists at nearby Disneyland, beating the California Angels each time to match the American League mark for most consecutive road victories against one club.

Cleveland came to town for the first time this season and a record No. 14 was six outs away with Jackie Brown breezing along behind a 4-1 lead. But Jerry Remy opened the bottom of the eighth with a single and Rusty Torres walked. That brought Bonds to the plate with Melton on deck.

Neither slugger was with the Angels last year or in 1974 when the Indians swept all six games in Anaheim both times. Bonds promptly smashed a game-tying homer and Melton slammed Brown's next pitch for the winner, forcing the Indians to settle for a share of the AL mark with the 1939-40 New York Yankees, who won 13 consecutive games in St. Louis.

"Well," said Remy, "that's what we got those guys for, wasn't it?"

Elsewhere, the Yankees flattened the Oakland A's 14-4, Ray Bare fired a one-hitter as the Detroit Tigers blanked the Chicago White Sox 5-0, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Minnesota Twins 4-3 and the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Kansas City Royals 4-3. The Texas-Boston game was rained out.

Yankees 14, A's 4

Rookie Willie Randolph and veteran Thurman Munson drove in two runs apiece as the Yankees combined 16 hits with six Oakland errors. Vida Blue, Jim Todd and Paul Lindblad were the Oakland pitchers while third baseman Sal Bando, who hit a two-run homer, committed three errors and catcher Larry Haney added a pair.

The Yankees scored two runs in the first, second and fourth innings and wrapped up their fourth consecutive triumph with four unearned runs in the seventh, two on a bases-loaded single by Randolph.

Tigers 5, White Sox 0

Chicago's only hit off Bare was an infield single by Ralph Garr leading off the fourth inning. Second baseman Gary Sutherland made a diving stop of Garr's hit but couldn't make a throw. There were only two other White Sox runners, both on walks, but Bare faced only one batter over the minimum 27 since one was erased on a double play and another was picked off first.

Brewers 4, Twins 3

Don Money's two-run single keyed Milwaukee's decisive four-run second inning and Ed Rodriguez notched his seventh save of the season to preserve Jim Slaton's fourth triumph. The Brewers loaded the bases with one out against Jim Hughes on singles by Darrell Porter and Sixto Lezcano and a hit batsman. After a walk to Charlie Moore forced in one run, Money singled home a pair and Robin Yount singled in what proved to be the winning run.

Orioles 4, Royals 3

breaking two-out home run in the ninth inning after Kansas City reliever Marty Pattin had retire 11 consecutive batters. Brooks Robinson homered in the third inning for Baltimore and the Orioles took a 3-1 lead with two runs in the fifth. Paul Blair doubled home one run and scored the other on Lee May's sacrifice fly after stealing third.

Powers was named All-Conference and All-City-County in the Fayetteville Holiday Classic his senior year, while averaging 18.6 points per game and 10.6 rebounds per game. Both his junior and senior year, Powers was co-captain of coach Glenn White's club. He started for three years and was named third team All-State by the North Carolina All-

Bucs Ink Track Star

Bobby Phillips, brother of East Carolina trackster Sam Phillips, has announced his signing with the new Southern Conference track champions.

The Union Pines High School star entered last year's high school meet as his school's only representative and scored enough points to finish tenth among all the schools entered. He was second in the high hurdles, finishing behind ECU star Marvin Rankins, third in the low hurdles and fifth in the long jump.

Thus far this spring, Phillips has recorded the following times or distances: 14.0 in the high hurdles, 20.7 in the low hurdles, 9.8 in the 100 yard dash, 22.0 in the 220 yard dash and 22'6" in the long jump.

"Bobby is an outstanding athlete," said ECU head coach Bill Carson. "In fact, he is of national calibre. Bobby will be a great asset to our program."

Phillips is from Carthage, 6-0, 165 pounds, and has been voted the last two years as his team's MVP in track.

Earlier this year, Carson also announced the signing of Fayetteville track stars Al Tillery and Otis Melvin.

The filly Top Flight won all seven of her races as a two-year-old in 1931. She earned $219,000 that year.

Patton Signs Another Cager

Another fine shooting forward has been signed by East Carolina University basketball coach Dave Patton.

Kyle Powers, a 6-5, 185 pounder from Pine Forest High School in Fayetteville marks the fifth signee this year for the Pirates in basketball.

Powers was named All-Conference and All-City-County in the Fayetteville Holiday Classic his senior year, while averaging 18.6 points per game and 10.6 rebounds per game.

Both his junior and senior year, Powers was co-captain of coach Glenn White's club. He started for three years and was named third team All-State by the North Carolina All-Basketball Annual this year.

"Kyle is a tremendous shooter and a very fine passer," noted Patton. "He comes from a good program which will give him a head start in being a good college basketball player."

"Kyle wants to play the game and wants to play for East Carolina, which I like."

Players signed earlier by the Pirates are: Don Whitaker from Louisiana State University, a guard; Herb Krusen from Silver Spring, Md., a forward; Jim Ramsey from Cary, N. C., a guard; Herb Gray from Seat Pleasant, Md., a forward. Also eligible next season is transfer Greg Cornelius from New Albany, Ind., a forward.

Girl Ruled OK For Baseball

KNOXVILLE (AP)—Jo Ann Carnes, a senior at Wartburg Central High, is eligible to play in post-season tournament contests for the school baseball team because of a baseball-loving federal judge.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Robert L. Taylor, a former collegiate baseball player, ordered Morgan County school officials Friday to allow her to play on the then all-male team of that East Tennessee school. The ruling came the same day as Wartburg's final regular season game was cancelled because of wet grounds.

Miss Carnes had alleged she was not allowed to play on the team because of her sex.

Her lawyer, James Ramsey, said she wanted to play high school baseball in hopes of qualifying for a college baseball scholarship.

The Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Association, in a letter to school officials, had suggested they keep her from playing because baseball is a contact sport.

Taylor, who played baseball at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, issued a court order saying, "If the plaintiff is denied the right to participate in baseball, her injuries would be greater than those incurred by the defendants if she is permitted to participate."

Taylor also directed the TSSAA not to impose sanctions against the school for allowing her to play.

Golden State Take 2-1 Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—The Golden State Warriors have forced the Phoenix Suns into a "must-win" situation with a 99-91 National Basketball Association Western Conference playoff victory.

"They forced us into having to win one game down here," said the Warriors' Rick Barry after the Friday night contest. "Now, they're forced to win Sunday or be in trouble."

Golden State took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. The playoffs continue Sunday in a nationally-televised contest.

The other NBA semifinal playoff series resumes Sunday at Boston, with the Celtics holding a 1-0 lead over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Jamaal Wilkes led the victors with 22 points while Paul Westphal was top man for the Suns with 24.

Phoenix scored 31 points in the second period to take a 53-48 intermission margin as a record stadium crowd of 13,306 watched.

The Suns were on the favorable end of a 57-49 spread with 9:41 showing in the third quarter, but went scoreless over a 3:57 span and the Warriors moved into a 58-57 lead.

Before that third period, the Suns hammered away at the Warriors, allowing neither Clifford Ray nor his alternate, George Johnson, a first-half rebound.

Phoenix finished the game with 52 rebounds to the Warriors' 39. Alvan Adams led the Suns with 14 with Curtis Perry grabbing 10. Adams finished the night with 17 points.

The loss was the first at home for Suns in 15 contests. The last defeat came Feb. 24.

In tires, it's not the price you pay. It's how often you pay it.

This steel-belted Radial Tire carries the Michelin Warranty* for 40,000 miles on the original tread. (Many owners get much more.) Puncture resistantMichelins give precise steering, and smooth driving comfort. So stop in and start saving today.

40,000 MILE WARRANTY
*Michelin's Warranty for X Radial Highway Passenger Tires shown here covers tread life, normal road wear (excluding separate puncture and defects in workmanship and materials) for 40,000 miles, when tire is used on passenger vehicles in normal service in continental United States, except Alaska, Canada or Ireland. See Michelin's official literature for complete details and limitations. Actual mileage may vary.

Think Radial... and Look to the Leader
MICHELIN

The Gas Savers

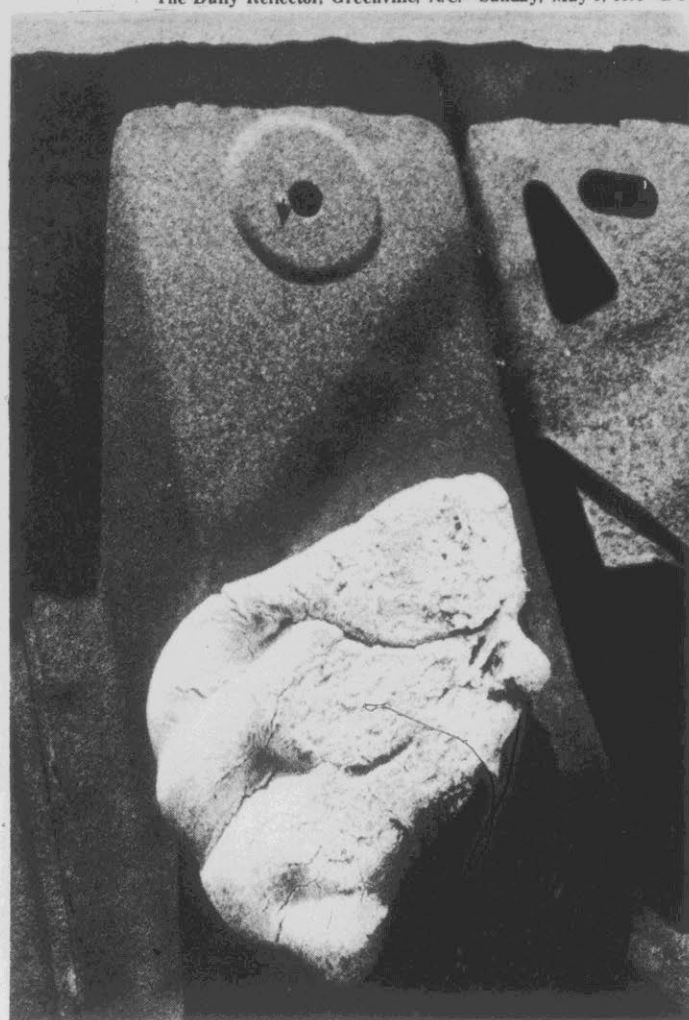

Because of the lower rolling resistance of Michelin "X" radials over conventional bias-ply tires, you might get as much as 10% savings over your present gas consumption. This means more miles per gallon of gas. It means extra dollars in your pocket.

Salvage Yard Art

Not unexpectedly, the nation's salvage yards offer one of the richest of all sources for the sculptural forms—those created accidentally and beautiful, intricate internal engine designs usually not seen except by assembly personnel and mechanics.

Unfortunately, smashed and crushed metal and splintered glass resulting from vehicle accidents create a number of the most dramatic forms. (Perhaps a periodic visit to salvage yards by drivers of all ages might be the most effective of all possible driver safety education courses).

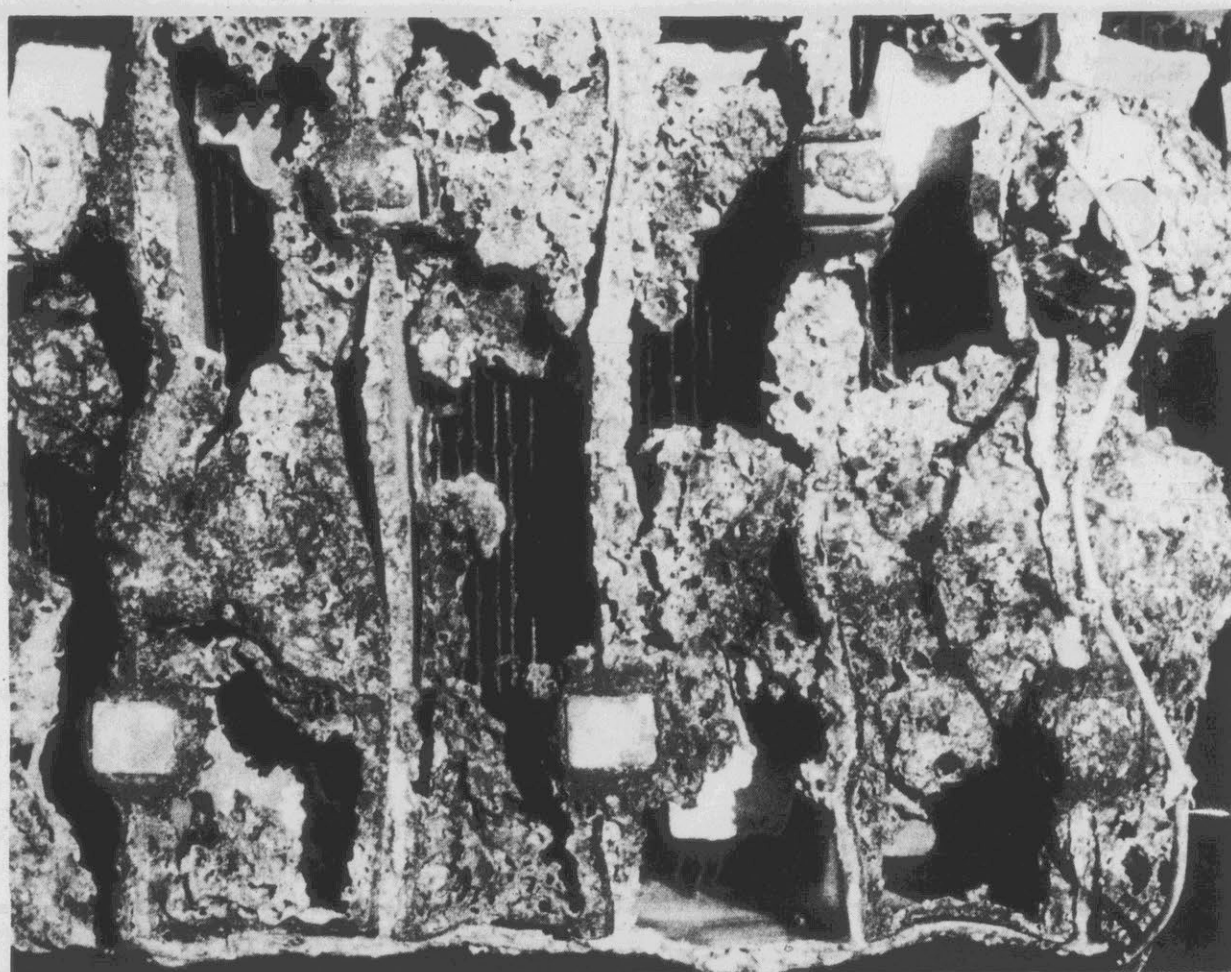

Looking at the more pleasant, though secondary reason for viewing wrecks in a salvage yard, the photographs on this page reveal numerous parallels to many contemporary forms of sculpture.

Each viewer will equate these photographic details with images of their own. For example, in the photograph at the upper left, the rusted areas on the paint of a wrecked auto may evoke a scrawny rooster rushing furiously across a field of snow; while an uncovered wedge of putty on a metal frame (upper right) could be a pale and battered fist.

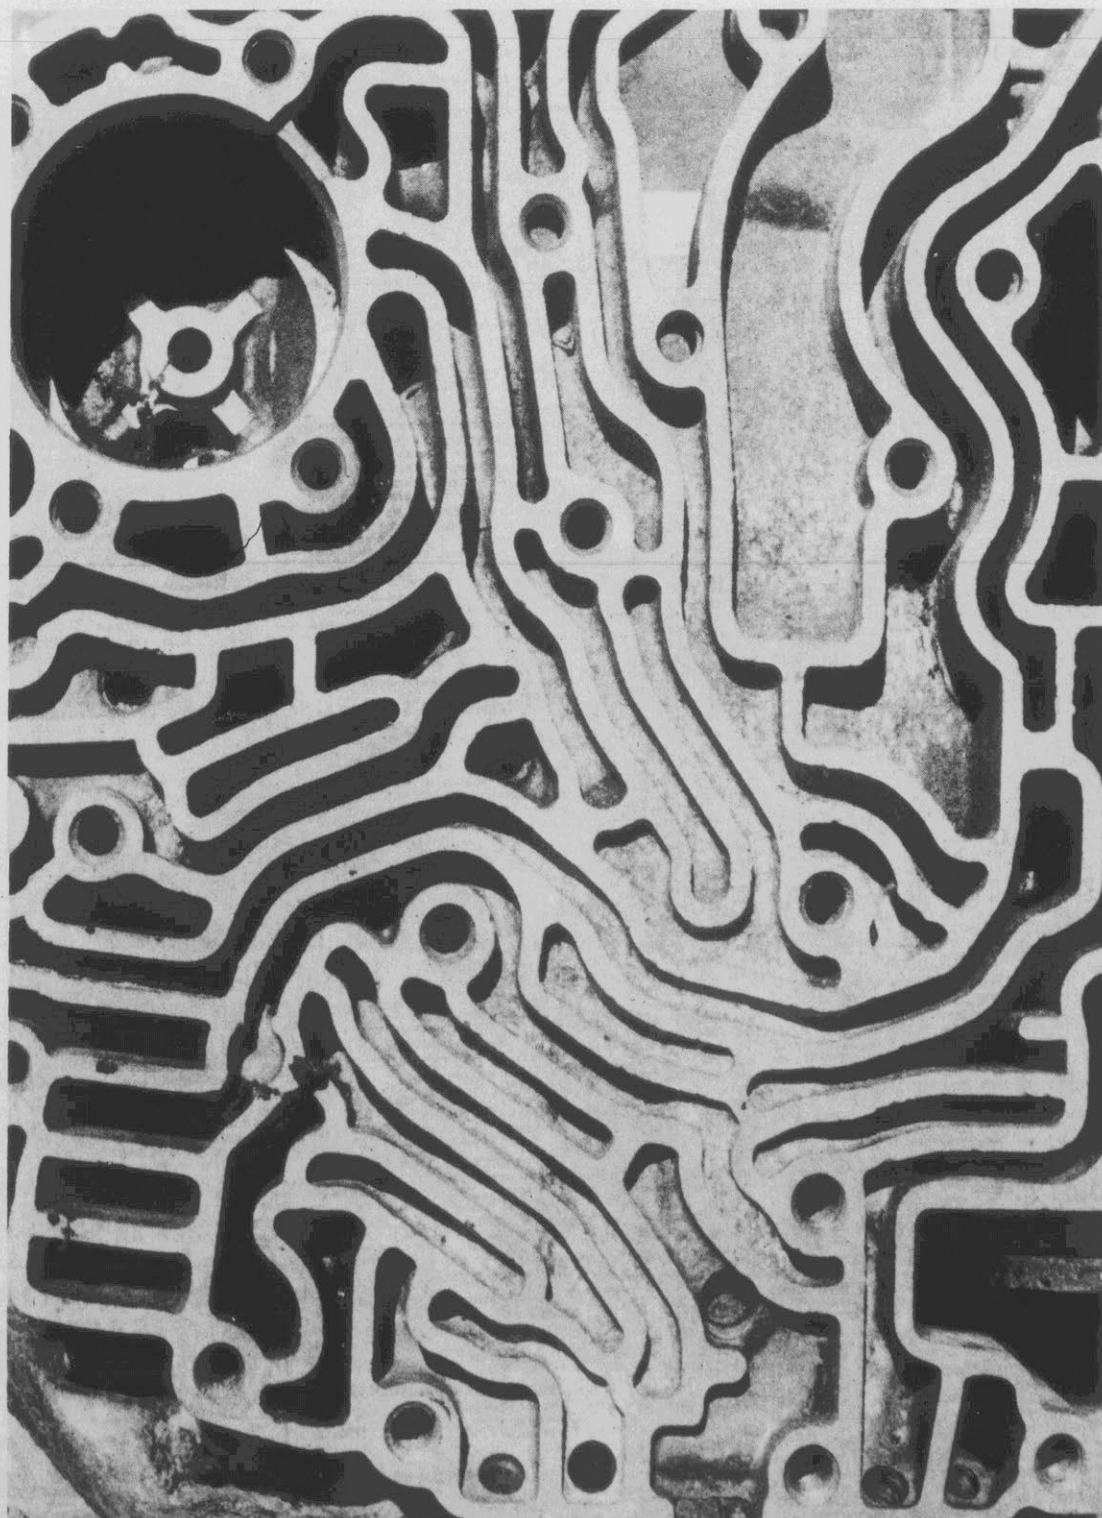

The central photograph, one of the top of a battery in an advanced stage of corrosion, bears a strong resemblance to a far-out stage set for a Wagnerian opera; and it's possible to see in the photo at bottom left the untidy eating habits of a pig with chapped lips.

Hopefully, local residents will not confuse the photograph of the revealed complexities in the design of an engine block with a proposed plan for future Greenville bypasses.

These photographs were taken at Carlton's Salvage, located between Pactolus and Washington. Any salvage yard, however, will yield numerous variations of designed and accidental forms which clearly demonstrate that modern sculptors and artists do indeed accurately reflect the technology of our times in their works of art.

WHY IT'S GOOD BUSINESS TO KNOW AS MUCH AS YOU CAN BEFORE YOU MAKE A MOVE.

AN ANALYSIS BY GAYLORD PERRY.

Before I throw a pitch, I want to know all I can about the batter I'm facing. And I'll listen to advice from my manager, my catcher and other teammates on the best way to get him out. I go about my banking business the same way. Before I make a move, I'll ask for advice from the professionals at NCNB. Whether it's the number of months to pay off a loan or which certificate of deposit to buy. Sure, they're glad to get my business, but they're just as eager to help me make the right financial decisions. That's why I do all my banking at NCNB. They always give it to you straight. Churches Own Most Of Henderson County Land

By JOHN C. DILLS
Hendersonville Times-News
Written for The AP
HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Henderson County in the mountains has ample proof that it lies near the heart of the so-called Bible Belt.

The churches have the land to prove it. Of $21,981,312 in tax-exempt property (excluding government-owned property, which is not listed), churches, associations, conferences, synods and other religious groups own $18,509,550 worth, or 84.2 per cent.

Baptists vastly outnumber all other groups. Of a total 127 churches in the county, 79 are Baptist (either Southern, Independent, Missionary or other) and three are Holiness Baptist.

One church alone, Hendersonville First Baptist, owns $1,726,000 worth of property. The North Carolina Baptist Convention owns the Fruitland Baptist Bible Institute, valued at $1,153,070.

United Methodists, with 18 churches in the county, own a fair amount of land. An equal number of Associate Reformed Presbyterian churches also own property in the county, mostly in small plots at Bonclarken, the denomination's assembly grounds at Flat Rock.

Episcopalians own six properties listed for tax exemption. But one of the largest and most valuable properties in the county, Kanuga Conferences Inc., operated by the Episcopal Church, lists 2.08 acres of non-taxable land, valued at $904, while taxes are paid on the rest of the large complex.

The Methodists have a camp valued at $400,000 on which no taxes are paid. But the camp is legally tax exempt. Roman Catholics have only two listed churches but own Our Lady the Hills Camp at Highland lake, which they have renamed Madonna Lake.

The rest of the churches—smaller groups such as the Church of the Nazarene, the various Holiness churches, Churches of God—own relatively small amounts of property, including cemeteries and parsonages.

The relatively little remaining untaxable land is owned by families for cemetery use, or by cultural organizations. This excludes land and buildings owned by the city of Hendersonville, Henderson County, the town of Laurel Park, and state and federal governments.

The General Services Administration owns a small amount of federal land and one building, the old post office, now a federal offices building.

Part of the Blue Ridge Parkway runs through Henderson County, and part of the Pisgah National Forest is in the county.

The last home of famed poet Carl Sandburg at Flat Rock is no longer subject to taxation. It has been acquired by the Department of the Interior as a national historic site.

Land valued at $771,960 is owned by the 11 volunteer fire departments. Community club and Home Demonstration Clubs property is valued at $426,000.

Other organizations account for tax-exempt properties valued at $2,218,802. These include charitable, educational cultural organizations such as the Elks, Masons, Boy Scouts, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, a rural hospital, a youth camp, a sheltered workshop for the retarded, and two private, religiously oriented schools.

Hearing On N.C. Plan May 26

A public hearing on the FY 77 State Plan for Titles III and VII of the Older Americans Act of 1965 as Amended will be held at Martin Technical Institute here Wednesday, May 26, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

This is one of six hearings being held throughout the state by the Office for Aging of the N.C. Department of Human Resources. The purpose of these hearings is to give citizens the opportunity to comment on the provisions of the proposed new state plan.

To get on the agenda, one should contact the State Agency directly. Comments should be limited to 10 minutes. Time left over after scheduled speakers will be given to persons not on the agenda. Inquiries may be directed to N. C. Office for Aging, 213 Hillsborough St., Raleigh, N. C. 27603; phone, 829-3983.

SEND COMPLAINTS DERBY, England (AP) — CAREER OPPORTUNITY . . .

We are looking for someone to represent our company through the Farmer Funeral Home in the Ayden area. Our company will give a complete on the job training program to help the agent learn this job well. This position offers prestige and financial security. Plus liberal fringe benefits, including major medical hospital, free life insurance, paid vacation and all expense paid convention trips. We will pay a good starting salary with the opportunity to earn much more in the future. You must be neat, aggressive and be able to meet the public well and be over 21 years of age. This is a fine opportunity for a good insurance man or woman who would like to make a change or for a person with drive, who would like to better his future. For further information and a personal interview, please contact:

FIAT 131 RATED NUMBER 1

By one of the nation's leading consumer reports. The Fiat 131 was rated higher than the Audi Fox, Mazda Cosmo, Ford Granada and all others in the "compact field."

FEATURES OF FIAT'S MODEL 131

Smoother and quieter ride	Excellent fuel economy
Excellent visibility	Fully equipped with extras
Handling	(That don't cost extra)
Braking

To sum it up... the Fiat 131 is an excellent example of the Italian practice of adopting race car suspension and handling to passenger cars.

TOYOTA FOR PRECEDENT
ALL NEW TOYOTAS ON SALE PLUS
OUR USED CARS ARE GUARANTEED
12 Months or 12,000 Miles.

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop.

Most good used cars, if they're guaranteed at all, are only covered for a month or two. At Tarheel Toyota, we're just as willing to back our good used cars as our good new cars. So we guarantee the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for $1000.00 or more on a 50-50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4-speed transmission (except economy cars). If you're in the market for a BETTER USED CAR, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed.

"THE DUFFUS TEAM"

Deputy U.S. Marshal Fastest Man Alive With Gun

By JAMES V. HEALION CROMWELL, Conn. (UPI) — Deputy U.S. Marshal Tom Loughnan has never used his revolver in the line of duty. He thanks God for that.

So do some suspects when they learn Loughnan is the fastest man alive with a pistol. In the wink of an eye — or, more precisely, in a quarter of a second — Loughnan can draw, load and fire a .45 caliber automatic from a buttoned, flapped G.I. holster strapped to his thigh.

He's known as "Pistolman."

He practices before a mirror in his Cromwell home each night for 30 minutes. "Even when I'm tired," says Loughnan, now 45 and holder of the "fastest gun in the country" title since 1961.

Nobody has been able to beat the time he made 15 years ago at a Lincoln Park, N.J. target range when he hit six life-like silhouettes in one and three quarter seconds from seven yards with his trusty .45.

Loughnan came by his speed the hard way.

He was an 18-year-old military policeman from New York City serving with the Air Force in Nome, Alaska, and was checking a warehouse on a midnight round. He heard a noise, got out of his jeep, but forgot to turn the headlights off.

He was an easy target. The suspect grazed him with a slug in the side and escaped.

"I had never been shot before. I fainted," he recalls.

A few days later, he was shooting tin cans off the surface of the frozen Bering Sea.

Loughnan has given more than 500 demonstrations through the years and likes to average a dozen annually. His exhibitions are free and the audiences range from law enforcement groups to father and son banquets. And, in one case, a United States Attorney, who requested a private showing.

Loughnan says he tries to keep the "fastest gun" title low-key on the marshal's job where he uses a government issued .38 caliber revolver. He calls prisoners "Mister."

Sometimes people recognize him from old television panel shows, as one federal prisoner from Pennsylvania did recently.

"I couldn't believe it. I thought it was a put on. That show was back in 1963," said Loughnan. Panelist Peggy Cass guessed his skill saying, "He looks like he'd shoot you."

That may be, but friends say nothing could be further from the truth. Loughnan has handled more than 1,000 people in custody.

"But, thank God I've never had to use my gun," he says.

Navy's Antenna Scheme Fought

By DANIEL F. GILMORE WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was born on the drawing table in 1958 as Project Sanguine, a mind-bending U.S. Navy scheme to bury a monster antenna under 20,000 square miles of land for communications with deeply submerged submarines at sea.

The hangup: not just any 20,000 square miles of desert or unused land would do. The subsoil had to lie on granite of the pre-Cambrian age, a geological period extending back 500 million to 600 million years.

This bedrock would provide low conductivity so the signals would bounce up into the ionosphere and then down to below the surface of the sea thousands of miles away.

Ideal sites were located in Texas, but the Texans didn't want the giant aerial.

Other possibilities were in Nevada, Mexico, northern Wisconsin and Michigan's upper peninsula, where the Navy is now concentrating its efforts because it would be cheaper to build there.

Project Sanguine has been scaled down to Operation Seafarer, with a more modest requirement of about 3,500 square miles for burying the cables and erecting transmitters.

Rep. Philip E. Ruppe, R-Mich., himself a Navy veteran, and many of his constituents are against the project. They are opposing not only the Pentagon but a vocal group of Michiganders who see Operation Seafarer as a welcome source of jobs and money. The project would cost an estimated $220 million.

Opponents say the aerial's environmental impact on life and property has not been studied sufficiently.

The Navy promises a full impact statement by October and plans a final site selection some time next year. Its tentative timetable calls for construction to start in 1979, with Seafarer going into operation by April, 1981.

Ruppe meanwhile is suspicious that a recent $4.65 million appropriation for the Navy is meant for construction of a Seafarer test station. He has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate.

Begin Revival On Monday

STOKES—Revival services will begin at the Stokes Christian Church Monday night and continue through Friday night with services nightly at eight o'clock.

Evangelist for the services will be the Rev. Willis W. Wilson, pastor of the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville.

Wilson was born near Stokes and graduated from Stokes High School in 1951. He attended Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn., was ordained a minister in 1954 and has pastored all of these 22 years within 15 miles of his home.

REV. WILLIS WILSON

He served as president of the State Convention of Free Will Baptists for three years and was named "minister of the year" by his denomination in 1969. He has served and is now serving on various boards and committees of the state convention.

At present he is serving as Pastor of the Reedy Branch Church and has been there for 13 years.

He is married to the former Betty Jean Warren of Roberstonville.

The public is invited to attend the services.

An area workshop for Reach to Recovery volunteers will be held in Greenville Thursday, May 27.

Sponsored by the American Cancer Society, N. C. Division Inc., the one-day meeting will begin at 9 a.m. Pre-registration for a no-host luncheon is essential and reservations must be received by May 21. Miss Kay Ball, R. N., Nursing Consultant for the Southern Area of the American Cancer Society, will conduct the day-long training sessions for counselors of persons recovering from breast surgery.

Couple Weds Saturday Afternoon

The marriage of Miss Amelia Carolyn Doyle and Delvin Roy Minton was solemnized Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in a double ring ceremony held in the Candlewick Inn gardens. The Rev. John T. Woodley officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady B. Doyle of Zebulon. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Minton of Greenville. A program of nuptial music was presented by Bill Gradis and Lee Davis, guitarist and vocalist.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by both, wore her mother's formal wedding gown of white chiffon over taffeta. The long sleeved gown featured a boat neckline and gathered bodice which extended to a V-shaped empire waist edged with small flowered lace. Twenty-six grey pearl buttons adorned the closure of the dress and extended into the gathered skirt and chapel length train.

The full length veil dropped from the Juliette headpiece which was covered with lace and pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, baby's breath statice and ivy, centered with an orchid for lifting tied with white satin ribbons ending in love knots.

The bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary T. Doyle of Wake Forest, served as matron of honor and Mrs. Caryn McCue of Greenville was maid of honor. Ms. Charlotte Lynch of Greenville was bridesmaid. The attendants wore formal length sleeveless gowns of kelly green jersey knit with V-necklines and gathered empire bodices. They wore yellow picture hats with contrasting chiffon scarves and carried white baskets filled with variegated summer flowers.

The flower girl, Miss Carolyn Raynor, cousin of the bride, wore a white full length dress accented with kelly green and lace trimmed empire waist, a round neckline and short puffed sleeves accented with green trim. Yellow ribbon streamers with flowers adorned her hair.

The mother of the bride wore a pastel blue formal gown with a pink and blue long sleeved bolero and the mother of the bridegroom wore a salmon colored full length gown with sequined bodice and voile long sleeves. Both the mothers and the grandmothers wore multi-colored floral corsages similar to the bridesmaids' baskets.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Ted Minton of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Tim Smith, of Greenville.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Marie Cox.

The walkway leading to the improvised altar was outlined with standards of flowers and bows with long streamers centered with white aisle cloth leading to the altar. At the altar was a prie-dieu flanked with candelabra with bouquets of summer flowers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Blue Room of the Candlewick Inn. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Rochelle Gay.

The serving table was centered with an arrangement of mixed summer flowers designed in a silver candelabra. Mrs. Lynda Raynor assisted in the serving of the wedding cake and refreshments.

The bride is a graduate of ECU School of Nursing and is employed by Edgecombe County Hospital, Tarboro. The bridegroom is a ticket agent employed by Carolina Trailways, Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

White-Hodges Vows Solemnized Saturday In Morning Ceremony

LA JOLLA, Calif.—Miss Anne Palmer Hodges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rex Hodges of Farmville, N.C., and Charles Howard White were united in marriage Saturday at 11:00 a.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Honorable Norbert Ehrenfreund in a garden ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Joseph Mayers of La Jolla.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Broughton White of Cumberland, R.I.

The bride was dressed in a

Molly Parnise floor length periwinkle blue knit ensemble with a matching coat. Pearl buttons accented the belt. She wore a white silk blouse which tied at the neck. She wore an amethyst necklace, which belonged to her paternal grandmother. The bride carried a bouquet of varicolored daisies.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Joseph Francis Rice of La Jolla, Calif. The bridegroom's best man was Alan Someck of Ocean Beach, Calif.

After a wedding trip to San Francisco, Calif., the couple will reside in La Jolla.

The bride is a graduate of Meredith College, Raleigh, N.C. and is attending Western State University College of Law in San Diego. She is administrative associate at Spin Physics, Inc.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of California at San Diego with a M.A. in music composition and is attending Western State College of Law in San Diego.

A reception followed the ceremony held in the garden, given by Mr. and Mrs. Mayers.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. Berry Bostic of Greenville and the late Mr. Bostic, and Mr. and Mrs. John Royal Hodges of Greenville.

When a recipe calls for a "small" eggplant, it's usually safe to use one that weighs about one pound; for a "medium" eggplant you can usually use one that weighs about 1½ pounds; for a "large" eggplant, you'll probably need one that weighs about 2 pounds.

Courses Aimed At Emptiness

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP)

Women haunted by the "Is that all there is?" feeling are turning to courses designed to put them in touch with their personal needs at Indiana-Purdue University here.

The program was instituted for women over 40 who experienced "the emptiness syndrome" after their children were grown, said Maureen Prevost, director of the IUPUI Center for Women.

But planning for life begins at a much earlier age now and younger women are seeking to avoid a haphazard future, said Ms. Prevost, who prefers that designation.

At least half the 600 women who have taken courses or had private counseling at the center since it opened last September have been middle-aged; the rest were young.

Career decision-making courses, as well as those in personal growth and assertive training, emphasize self-awareness, she said. There's a need for women to get in touch with their own potential and realize where they want to be.

"So many people are looking at the grass greener some place else. They need to decide they need to be here. I have a hunch in the next few years this will be a life-planning center."

The center is part of the uni-

Pitt County homemakers who want to learn new sewing skills or wish to improve on their old ones will find the sessions beneficial, Mrs. Spangler believes. Women who buy garments ready-made will also get helpful ideas from the specialists, the agent adds.

The workshop will be held at the American Legion Building, on St. Andrews Street, Greenville, May 12 from 9:30-11:30 a.m. The public is invited and there is no charge.

Dear Abby

Advice To In-Laws: Don't Butt In

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Sunday, May 9 is Mother's Day. Many suspect that it is just another commercial holiday dreamed up by florists and merchants to stimulate business.

Not so! Mother's Day was actually conceived by Anna M. Jarvis of Philadelphia who in 1907 persuaded her minister to have a special church service the second Sunday in May to honor all mothers. Those with living mothers wore red carnations, and those without mothers wore white carnations. This custom is still observed in some areas.

Mother's Day is a day of gladness to most mothers. But not for all. I should know. For weeks following Mother's Day, my desk is covered with the tear-stained letters of mothers who have been snubbed, slighted or forgotten.

Two typical Mother's Day letters:

DEAR ABBY: Ever since my son got married, he forgot that he has a mother. Every holiday—including Mother's Day—his wife drags him to HER people, and he goes like a little puppy without even putting up a fight.

DEAR ABBY: My son lives in the same city with me, but I'm lucky if I see him six times a year for 10 minutes. Then on Mother's Day he sends me a bouquet of roses. Big deal!

Each year, disappointed mothers send me the verse: "A son is a son until he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all her life."

My mail constantly reaffirms the fact that one of the most sensitive of all human relations is the one that exists between a woman and her mother-in-law. (There is far more friction between a woman and her husband's mother than between a man and the mother of his wife.)

Recently, I published a letter from a young wife who asked, "Who should sit in front with my husband when we take his mother out for a drive?"

I said, "Out of respect for her age—his mother."

Well, the brickbats started flying at me from all directions. Readers quoted scripture: "And a man shall leave his father and his mother, and cleave unto his wife."

One mother wrote to remind me that the Ten Commandments say, "Thou shalt honor thy mother and thy father,"—and it doesn't say one word about the mother-in-law!

You don't have to be a Dear Abby to know that being a good mother-in-law is one of the most difficult roles in the world.

Now that I am a mother-in-law to both a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law, I have resolved to abide by two simple rules:

Never offer advice unless it's asked for.

Never ask questions that are none of my business.

I am trying earnestly to be the best mother-in-law possible. And I must say that my chances for success are excellent, because for 36 years, I have had a wonderful teacher—my own mother-in-law, Rosie Phillips. May God bless her!

NO COOKING

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — The next generation of Americans may live on frozen heat-and-eat dinners and instant breakfasts, says Marion Bennion, professor of food sciences and nutrition at Brigham Young University.

She said convenience foods are here to stay, and that food scientists and nutritionists are concerned about their nutritional content.

Such foods can be important in America's diet if their essential nutrient content is equal to or greater than the nutrients in the foods they replace, the professor said.

Highly fortified formulated and fabricated foods can contribute to nutritional imbalance if their vitamin fortification is out of proportion to their other nutrients and calorie content, the professor said.

Simple Recipes For Children

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Two young school teachers from Los Angeles use cooking to teach a lot more than the three Rs to kindergarten through fifth grade pupils.

Georgia Johnson and Gail Povey developed simple cooking centers where children can work in pairs on simple recipes in a corner of their classrooms at Clover Avenue Elementary School and UCLA's Fernald School.

Most of their recipes require no cooking or adult supervision. All the recipes and supplementary teaching materials are in their newly published book, "Metric Milk Shakes and Witches' Cakes" (Citation Press $4.95). Although it was written for teachers, it could just as easily be used at home by parents as rainy day or vacation projects for children.

In an interview, Ms. Johnson said she and Mrs. Povey planned the programs to help children develop independence and self-confidence, among other things.

Children learn geography by planning a round-the-world trip and preparing food from the countries involved, she said. They learn spelling by reading recipes, develop motor skills by preparing food, learn arithmetic, budgeting and even the metric system and consumer awareness when they talk about ingredients and their cost.

Mrs. Povey is a reading specialist and Ms. Johnson, an early childhood teacher.

At Clover, Ms. Johnson organized Les Petits Gourmets, a restaurant run by pupils and with pupils as guests as a role-learning, role-playing tool.

"It represented real life to them," she said. They ate there, they learned about money transactions both by figuring the cost of food products in stores and the prices on menus.

"They had to decide between buying food at stores or eating at their restaurant. They learned how to entice customers to the restaurant (even though the same food was cheaper prepared at home)."

"The school is really a melting pot. It's not too far from UCLA, and married students' housing is in the area. We have foreign students from Africa, Turkey, Israel, South America, Germany, France and Korea.

"In my classroom I use food as a way of getting to know where they came from."

She made a mythical trip around the world as one assignment. Her pupils chose the states and cities they wanted to visit. They learned how to apply for a passport. They learned geography mapping out their route around the world.

"They had to decide what (food) to order in each country.

Using a map, they cooked their way around the world: tortillas in Arizona and New Mexico and potato pancakes in Germany. Crepes in France became their specialty.

"There are so many ways a child can cook. Why can't they cook by themselves, without heat, help or special ingredients? They can be independent, develop self-confidence.

"We tried to stress nutrition, and teach by example. Breakfast isn't always cereal or eggs."

Ms. Johnson said the children took great pride in their cooking centers. She said eating food right after they prepare it is a great incentive.

They also learn from their mistakes. One team that put two tablespoons instead of two teaspoons of sugar into an eggnog complained that the beverage was too sweet, and found out why.

Ms. Johnson currently is on leave to finish work on an advanced degree. She is in New York City following several months work in Paris, visiting schools for young teachers, elementary schools and creches — French day care centers for children of working mothers.

"The problems and concerns (there) are exactly the same," she said.

Musicians' Competition To Honor Its Founder

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The Leventritt International Competition, a major event that may skyrocket some unknown, talented musician to fame in early summer, will be dedicated to its founder, Alabama-born Rosalie Leventritt. But the event, the 29th, had not been planned that way. In fact, shortly before her recent sudden death at 84, the grand old lady of the music world had explained in an interview what the competition was all about. She had pointed out, too, that this year would be the 25th anniversary of Young Audiences, the national organization that brings musical arts to millions of youngsters. She had founded both.

"I really didn't do anything," she had said with her usual modesty, in explaining how the competition had achieved world prestige. "We just led the way. It is really a judges' competition. They are the finest and can recognize real talent even if a performance isn't perfect."

Her New York apartment always had been like a music salon. It was there that great musicians had practiced on her pianos, where the Casals Festival had started and where Lillian Fuchs had conducted a class of chamber music for 25 years.

Founded in 1939 in memory of her husband, Edgar, an attorney and pianist, the Leventritt Competition is held alternately for violinists and pianists and has no set time. The last one was three years ago.

"How could it have a set time? Talent does not grow on trees. There is a difference between someone who plays an instrument and an artist and we are always looking for an artist," she had explained.

In fact, six times there have been no winners. "Many artists have wonderful talent but if you give prizes too soon after they reach maturity, it may not be good for them," she had pointed out. On the other hand, on two occasions two winners were chosen.

The major award includes engagements with leading orchestras, a recording contract and $10,000. Finalists get $1,000 plus three years of management with appearances at recitals and solos with orchestras, a big boost up the musical ladder. Applications for this year's competition have so far included some from Japan, Thailand and Yugoslavia. It is open to contestants between 17 and 28 years of age.

"Above all, artists are treated as artists, not as numbers behind screens," Mrs. Leventritt had emphasized, an attitude that reflected her husband's interest in young musicians to whom he gave advice, financial and emotional support as they sought to be heard.

In recent years the music reins had been shared with her daughter, Rosalie Berner.

"Actually mother put on her hat one day at an audition and said, 'It is your turn now,'" explained Mrs. Berner, who is the wife of T. Rowland Berner, president and chairman of the board of Curtiss-Wright.

"Rudolf Serkin helped me establish the competition and it really is a lot of work. Nobody can appreciate how much time it takes," Mrs. Leventritt had said in the interview, looking at her daughter, who has now assumed her mother's role.

"We don't have any flops at the auditions, even though what they play is difficult. Each contestant must play three concertos; one must be Brahms, Beethoven or Mozart. The program includes one thing they want to play."

Mrs. Leventritt had explained that she did not like to play up such outstanding winners as Van Cliburn, who won in 1954.

"It might discourage some applicants" — but she recalled "riding with him and being showered with confetti a year later when he won the Tchaikovsky Festival in Moscow."

As for Young Audiences, which brings visual arts to schools — dance, mime, theater — it now reaches more than three million children in 34 states with 1,460 professional artists and 292 ensembles.

"It was planned to teach children about music as you might teach them about arithmetic and to keep in mind we are not trying to teach virtuosos, we are teaching young audiences."

"I stole $2,000 out of the foundation to start it, and it spread," she had said, laughing, "but the idea was difficult to sell to boards of education."

"Men experience much of the versity's continuing education program.

Ms. Prevost, a social worker, said Americans are moving to a stage of self-actualization, rather than just survival, and people are free for self-fulfillment.

"People are working to get in touch more than before. We're now a very self-interested people. College students in the late '50s and '60s were interested in serving humanity. Today they're interested in their personal freedom, their honesty and identity."

She said women's problems weren't new, but in the past there hadn't been enough time to dwell on them. Now women are attempting to define themselves.

"Women are apt to report themselves as being depressed without saying why." The courses are designed to help pinpoint those reasons.

Men aren't excluded from the programs, and some have enrolled in classes to get feedback from females for their own development.

"Men experience much of the same 'Is that all there is?' feeling. Many men change their career patterns drastically. They want to be involved and we want them to be involved."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A very spooky conversation took place between my mother and me last week.

Every time I said something to her, I heard an echo from my childhood.

"Mother! Aren't you ready yet? ('Erma! Don't dawdle!') You know how cold the stores get with that air-conditioning turned up. Maybe you'd better take along a sweater. ('Trust your mother! Don't you think I know when you are cold?')

"What are you doing rolling down the car window, Mom? ('Do you want your hand to blow off, Missy? Then just stick it out of the car window.')

It'll be cooler when we get moving. I'm going to make a sudden stop. I know you don't like my putting my hand in front of you but it beats going right through the windshield. Crazy drivers! Close your ears. I don't want you to hear what I'm about to say. ('Don't do as I say—or do—as I tell you.')

"Where do you want to eat? It's your birthday, so you get to pick. Did I tell you how nice you look today? I mean it. You look so young. ('How nice you look so much older in that dress. Almost grown up.')

"Let's see what bad news the menu has. The tuna looks good. Don't go on what I order. I'm on a forever diet. If you want the crepes with the wine sauce, just say so. But remember, it's rich and the last time you couldn't finish all of it. ('I know a little girl whose eyes are bigger than her tummy.')

"Are you tired or do you feel like shopping a bit? ('Don't you think mother knows when you are ready for a nap?')

"Mom, do you really want my advice about buying that juicer? Okay, I think it's flimsy. Won't last a year. They have an appliance sale in the fall and if you're patient, you can get a better deal than this. ('Not a farmyard with 186 plastic animals! Those things will be lost in two days, you mark my word. That birthday money is going to burn a hole in your pocket.')

"You're always good about remembering things. Where did I park my car? You know something? I think I'm getting old. The mind is going. Mother! The man in the booth just said good-bye to you. Didn't you hear him? Wave good-bye. ('Say thank you to the nice man, Erma.')

Oh, the sadness. When did the child become the mother and the mother become the child?

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

The featured event of the spring at Rose High was the Junior-Senior prom held Thursday night. Shangri-la was the theme selected for the dance this year.

The Band of Oz provided the music in a "paradise atmosphere" for the seniors, juniors, and their guests. Several faculty members chaperoned and helped with decorations and refreshments. The Prom Committee worked diligently for weeks to help make the dance a success.

Election results for the Student Government Officers for 1976-77 were announced Tuesday. Bobby Kim will serve as president of the SGA other officers are Dave Middleton, vice-president, Janet Gantt, recording secretary, and Vanessa Teel, treasurer.

Senior class officers are Freager Saunders, president, Lynn Calder, vice president, and Hope MacMillain, secretary-treasurer.

Serving the junior class for the coming school year will be Sandy Abbott, president, Cornelius Satterwhite, vice president, and Sandra Savage, secretary-treasurer.

Congratulations are extended to these students.

Art Show
The Art Department at Rose helped to sponsor a sidewalk art show at the Greenville Art Center. Rose participants garnered several awards at the affair.

Those honored with first places were: Ellen Crane, sculpture; Dorene Rountree, drawing; Mary Lou Little, painting; Melinda Haynee, jewelry; and Elaine Nichols, crafts.

Also receiving ribbons were Lisa Clark, third in painting; Jeff Barber, second in sculpture; Janet Boone, third in sculpture; Sandy Alfors, third in drawing; Elaine Nichols, second in drawing; and Pat Pleasant, second in painting.

The Aero-Space Science Class visited the Cherry Point Air Station Tuesday. The group toured the various facilities of the base from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Different jets, including the Intruder and the Harrier, were demonstrated for the Rose High class. The group also toured the radar control room, weather station, and engine test cell. The trip ended with a talk by a Marine Corps recruiter.

Those visiting Cherry Point were Ronald Clark, Melvin Johnson, Don Lancaster, Linus Martinez, Cliff Nelson, Jimmy Pace, Stephen Simonowich and Hubert Smith.

Our Public Service Jobs Cost About $8,500 Each

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jeanne Buckley, a junior clerk typist in New Bedford, Mass., two ballet dancers in Maryland, 600 Detroit policemen and the only fulltime fire fighter in Maytown, Ala., have one thing in common.

At a time when seven million Americans are unemployed, these people are working, thanks to "public service jobs" created with federal tax money at an average cost of about $8,500 each.

The future of the program is in doubt. It has become a focal issue in the national election-year debate over how to deal with unemployment now and for the rest of the decade.

In 1974, Congress started a permanent program of financing 50,000 public service jobs in state and local governments and in nonprofit organizations across the country, primarily for the hard-core unemployed.

As unemployment soared during the recession, Congress added a temporary program which raised the total to 310,000 job slots annually.

President Ford wants to phase out all but the original 50,000 jobs by Sept. 30, 1977. He says they are costly, inflationary and economically non-productive. Besides, Ford says, most of them won't be needed after 1977 because unemployment is falling anyway.

Most Democrats in Congress say Ford isn't reducing unemployment fast enough. The House has passed a bill that would roughly double the number of public service jobs this year and next to 600,000.

Looking further ahead, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., would use public service employment as one tool in their proposal to guarantee a job to every adult American who wants work.

They have set an interim goal of reducing unemployment — now 7.5 per cent of the labor force — to 3 per cent within four years, which the administration says is unrealistic. Ford calls the proposal "a vast election-year boondoggle."

In all this debate in Washington, public service jobs are mentioned mostly as an abstraction. The reason is that Congress and the Labor Department deliberately left much of program's operation for localities to decide, according to their particular needs and imagination.

The federal money, about $2.7 billion this year, is sent to 431 state and large city and county governments which exceed 100,000 population and meet certain unemployment criteria. Within some broad rules, the localities determine how the money is used, and they send some of it on to thousands of smaller communities.

The Baltimore, Md., metropolitan area has designed many of its 2,500 public service jobs for specific civic improvements:

— Teams of laborers are building ramps for the handicapped at hundreds of city traffic intersections.

— One group, equipped with a boat, is cleaning debris out of Baltimore harbor.

— Social service teams help elderly persons maintain their homes so they don't have to enter institutions.

— One crew goes around the city streets patching potholes. Others fix up playgrounds, rehabilitate vacant housing and maintain public housing.

Jay Harrison, spokesman for the Baltimore program, said the aim always has been to select projects the city otherwise would have to do without.

Baltimore has put part of its money into the arts, hiring a director of volunteer activities for the symphony orchestra, two dancers in the Maryland Ballet Company and 20 artists who have painted more than 30 murals on the insides and outsides of buildings.

"A lot of people say 'how can you take public service employment funds and spend them on the arts?'" Harrison said. "Unemployed people represent a cross-section. Artists are unemployed as well. They're feeling the pinch along with everyone else."

Rhode Island has used public service jobs to winterize homes of the elderly poor, set up a veterans' counseling service, hire six boating safety inspectors and establish a consumer affairs unit in the state attorney general's office.

West Greenwich, R.I., population 2,000, had only a part-time police force. With public service funds, it hired three new policemen and put the force on a 24-hour day. Other small Rhode Island communities hired their first fulltime welfare officers.

In Alabama, the city of Tarrant hired a mayor's assistant. Maytown, which has a volunteer fire department, hired its first fulltime fire fighter to man the station. Jefferson county schools got five fine arts consultants.

Bob Craig, manpower planner for metropolitan Birmingham, said jobs range from laborers to a substantial number of white-collar professionals, some of them in nonprofit organizations dealing with community action, legal aid, child development, housing, alcoholism and multiple sclerosis.

By contrast, only 4 per cent of the 700 jobs in New Bedford, Mass., have gone to professionals, said Daniel Rodrigues, the city's public service employment director. Unemployment there stands at 14 per cent, and the average person has only eight years of education.

Nationwide, the Labor Department says, jobholders range from 18 to 65 years old, 43 per cent completed high school and 32 per cent have had more than 12 years' education, 24 per cent are black, 44 per cent previously had incomes below the poverty level, nearly 13 per cent had been receiving unemployment compensation, and nearly 14 per cent had been on welfare.

In Detroit, New York and some other cities with high unemployment, swollen welfare costs and big budget deficits, the federal jobs money has been used to rehire laid-off city employees.

Half of Detroit's 3,700 public service employees are in that category. (The 3,700 includes 600 policemen.) The practice is legal, but the Labor Department says Detroit has gone too far, and is opposing the city in court.

One of the Labor Department's few rules is that a city cannot use public service job money to rehire any more laid-off municipal employees than their percentage of the city's total unemployed.

By that yardstick, the department says, only 10 per cent of Detroit's 3,700 public service jobholders — not half — should be rehired city employees.

"Our contention is that in view of the city's very drastic situation and in view of our labor agreements, we really didn't have much choice," said Allan Becker, Detroit's deputy manpower director.

Detroit claims the department is misinterpreting the law and that the program should be allowed to vary according to a locality's needs. Until the courts decide, the department has told Detroit it cannot carry out its plan to rehire an additional 700 laid-off city employees.

William H. Kolberg, assistant labor secretary for employment and training, said in an interview he would favor permanent but limited public service employment as a job training device.

But as an antirecession tool, he said, the system has these major drawbacks:

— Government studies indicate that after two or three years, the federal government winds up paying for services of which 70 to 90 per cent otherwise would be financed by local governments. Baltimore's Harrison said that isn't true with his city's projects.

— Once started, public service jobs are hard to phase out when a recession ends. All those small towns which got their first fulltime police and fire fighters want to keep them, so they either apply enough lobbying pressure on Washington to preserve the jobs or they raise local taxes.

— While the jobs might be productive, they do not necessarily justify the expense. Residents might not be willing to pay higher local taxes to put artists to work, for example, but would let the federal government increase its deficit doing the same thing.

Kolberg says the test should be: "Is it the kind of thing you and I would be willing to pay for in local taxes on our houses?"

Moreover, he said, any future public service program should offer wages somewhat lower than the present $8,500 average — which is creeping up toward $10,000 — as an incentive for jobholders to keep looking for private employment.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite some minor annoyances, today generally is excellent for whatever you want to do that requires conscientiousness and exactness. Think in terms of those who have been helpful to you and show your appreciation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study basic matters to get your life on a more even keel. Take exercise or treatments to improve health, appearance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Improve your appearance early so you can make an excellent impression on others and communicate better. Enjoy inexpensive but satisfying recreations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Focus on your home; entertain a select group of friends. Some new interest can be investigated and good results obtained.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get out early to spiritual teachings that can help you. Then make contacts for an interesting afternoon and evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study ways to better yourself materially via new outlets. A financial expert can be contacted while at leisure for advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Go after true personal desires early after studying them. Become part of social affairs that are worthwhile. Make new contacts of note.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Meditation in early a.m. will show you how to gain your most cherished aims. Do whatever will make your mate happier. Give understanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact good friends and gain their backing for some important aim. Attend some social affair where you can get excellent results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into any possible charitable work with good friends. Then contact that civic group that can be helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact the most brilliant person you know and gain the ideas and advice you need. Make arrangements for trip.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your hunches are good and should be heeded so you can handle all your affairs much better. Divulge plan to mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact associates and talk over new project to iron out any bugs, then carry through intelligently. Handle some civic affair wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have feet squarely on ground, so be sure to slant the education along practical lines. Give the moral and spiritual teachings early necessary to keep this progeny from becoming so materialistic that the idealistic will be lost and little true happiness achieved. Fine ability also to understand both the big issues and the small ones.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAY 10, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An unusually good day and evening when relations with other persons turn out as you would like them to be. You can easily establish a more harmonious set of circumstances with others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contacting associates and talking over present operations can yield fine benefits at this time. Show that you are a capable person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Schedule your time and work wisely so that you get the maximum accomplished in the minimum of time. Don't overspend when out shopping.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan time for amusements that you like. Higher-ups can help you commercialize on the fine talents you possess. Relax at home tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make it a point to improve conditions at home in every way you can. Avoid one who is likely to put a dampener on your activities.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact allies and state your ideas. You can easily gain the cooperation of co-workers now. Exercise extreme caution in motion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Ideal day to handle monetary affairs in a most intelligent way. Make the evening a charming one from a social standpoint.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are feeling magnetic today and should contact many persons who can help you advance. Show that you have good manners.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study conditions that are puzzling and come up with the right solutions. Plan to spend more time with the one you love. Strive for happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Time spent with good friends today can yield fine benefits after your work is done. Your personal aims can easily be attained now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get an early start on those activities that will improve your status in the outside world. Show your finest talents to higher-ups.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) New ideas you have should be put in operation without delay. Make any changes that are necessary later. Obtain the data you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to come to a better understanding with mate, even if it takes spending more time with this person. Don't neglect your duties.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will want to cooperate with others, so direct the education along diplomatic lines. A fine artistic and musical talent here. Give spiritual and ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Rose Show May 15-16

RALEIGH—Plans have been announced for the twenty-eighth Annual Rose Show of the Raleigh Rose Society. The Show will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16 in the lower mall, North Hills Shopping Center.

Details of the Show were outlined by Mr. Astor Perry, President of the Rose Society and Mrs. J.C. Barbot, General Chairman of the Show.

As a part of the celebration of the bicentennial year, one section of the show will be devoted to old garden roses. Growers of old roses are especially invited to enter them.

Another feature of the show for those attending will be the opportunity to register for prizes which will be drawn each hour. Winners must be present.

Raleigh Rose Show officials emphasize that the public is invited to submit entries in the specimen and artistic classes and it is not necessary to be a member of the society in order to exhibit. Entries may be brought to the lower mall between 7:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

CAR SERVICING
RADNOR, Pa. (UPI) — Servicing of U.S. automobiles this year will cost more than $55.5 billion, according to Motor Age magazine, which notes that people are keeping their cars longer because of the high prices for new ones. Much of the projected expenditures will go to brake service because more and more states are concentrating on tightening the requirements for brake inspections, it adds.

For The Week Of May 9-15, 1976

Pageants No Longer Predictable

MISS USA — Summer Bartholomew, Miss USA 1975, will crown the new titleholder on the 25th annual "Miss USA Beauty Pageant," to be presented live from Niagara Falls, N. Y., with Bob Barker and Helen O'Connell as hosts, Saturday, May 15 (10 p.m.-12 midnight) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

There was a time — not too many years ago — when beauty-contest winners were as predictable as they were beautiful. Certain questions were sure to elicit the inevitable response; for example, the question, "How have you enjoyed your year as Miss Cow Queen of Green Pastures?" The answer, accompanied by gushes of delight was always the same: "Oh! It was the greatest thrill of my LIFE! If only it could go on forever!"

For contrast, consider the response to this same question by a recent Miss Universe: "It was exciting, but it was also tiring. My favorite moments came when people saw me away from that title and related to me as a human being." Another beauty queen put it this way: "The year broadened my horizons — it's not until you travel that you realize what a big world it is out there — but a year is long enough. I don't know if I could keep up the pace much longer."

These are human responses, and they're indicative of a new trend which is noticeable among girls who enter today's beauty contests. They are no longer wide-eyed with the glamor of it all.

After all, an intelligent face is considerably more beautiful than a vacant one, and the fact that the pageant officials and judges are recognizing this is an encouraging sign.

Should you doubt this turnabout, watch the 25th annual "Miss USA Beauty Pageant," in which 51 of the most beautiful young women in the United States will compete for the coveted title of Miss USA 1976, to be broadcast live from Niagara Falls, N.Y., Saturday, May 15, 10 p.m. to 12 midnight, on CBS Channel 9-11.

Television personality Bob Barker and singer Helen O'Connell will co-host the final competition at the new International Convention Center in Niagara Falls.

After judging of the selected finalists, Summer Bartholomew, Miss USA 1975, and several former titleholders will make special guest appearances. Miss USA 1976 will represent the United States in the "Miss Universe Beauty Pageant" which will be broadcast on the Network July 10 from Hong Kong.

Englebert Humperdinck, the internationally popular singer who is often referred to as "the most romantic singer in the world," will be the special guest entertainer at the pageant. The Air Force Academy Cadet Chorale will also entertain.

'Beauty And The Beast' Presented

George C. Scott and Trish Van Devere will star in "Beauty and the Beast," a new drama special based on the classic tale, which is to be colorcast on NBC-TV during the 1976-77 season.

This marks the first time Scott and Ms. Van Devere (who are husband and wife) will jointly headline a TV special.

"Beauty and the Beast" is currently being filmed on location in England — on the outskirts of London and at Sudeley Castle in Gloucestershire.

"Beauty and the Beast" is one of the most enduring love stories in literature. It concerns Belle, a beautiful young woman who is forced to live in a castle inhabited by The Beast, a creature who seemingly has human characteristics.

Junior Miss To Be Selected

Across the nation there are 50 girls, all high-school seniors, who have been daily going through the paces of their lives — attending classes, eating three well-balanced meals a day, doing their assorted chores around their homes. All the while dreaming — and hoping — and asking themselves the same question over and over: "Will it be me?"

The count-down is here now, and soon they will get their answer, for the girls — all attractive, beautiful and talented, are vying for the title of America's Junior Miss.

The 19th annual "America's Junior Miss Pageant" will be broadcast live from Mobile, Ala., Monday, May 10, from 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

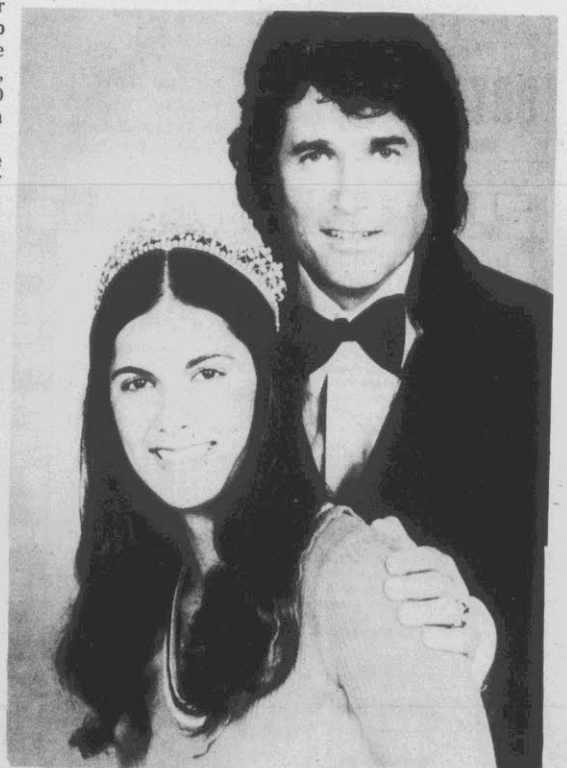

Host of the third consecutive year is Michael Landon, star of the popular TV series, "Little House on the Prairie." Among the judges of the event are Cathy Rigby, Olympic gymnast; John T. McGarigal, secretary-treasurer of the National Education Association; Cleo Paturis, editor of American Girl magazine; and Jackie Benington, a former Junior Miss.

Julie Ann Forshee, America's Junior Miss of 1975, will crown the new titleholder. During the three nights of preliminary events in Mobile, judges will rate the state winners in scholastic achievement, poise and appearance, youth fitness, and creative and performing arts. The winner receives a $10,000 scholarship award, and other awards include $6,000 to the first runner-up, $4,000 to the second, and $2,500 each to the third and fourth runners-up.

Little girls, almost from the day they are born, dream of someday winning a beauty contest. And a good dream it is, too. For frequently this dream inspires them to reach beyond goals set by their contemporaries. Hours are spent on dancing lessons, piano and voice instruction, and magazines are poured over in search of the right hair style. All done with one objective in mind — winning the coveted title. Now, 50 young ladies who dreamed their dreams, practiced their dancing, piano or whatever their talent may be, have come this far.

One of the entries will be chosen. The others will pack their bags, board a plane that will take them back to the state where they will reign as queen. Some will be content with this. Others will continue to dream their dreams and begin to formulate plans to enter another contest someday. And the chosen one? She has an exciting year ahead. Travel, new faces, places she's never seen before. But, most of all, the thrill of experiencing a dream that has now become a reality.

JUNIOR MISS — Julie Ann Forshee of Fayetteville, Ark., America's Junior Miss 1975, will relinquish her crown to the new titleholder on the 19th annual "America's Junior Miss Pageant," to be presented live from Mobile, Ala., with television star Michael Landon as host, on Monday, May 10 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

Daytime Emmys Awarded

The nominations are in, the jury is out, and preparations are underway for the 1975-76 "Third Annual Daytime Emmy Awards."

Emcee Bob Barker will host the live broadcast on Tuesday, May 11, 3 to 4:30 p.m. (on CBS-TV), from the Vivian Beaumont Theater at New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. The special's producer, Robert Precht, no stranger to nighttime awards shows (he has produced "The Grammy Awards" and "Entertainer of the Year") is in the midst of working on his first daytime presentation.

"As far as a daytime awards show is concerned," Precht says, "the process and elements are as involved as in nighttime production. It's just as complicated. It still has to be written well, directed well, and be entertaining."

It will be entertaining, Precht says, if viewers can follow what's happening, since they could become very confused about who is getting what award. "With the Daytime Emmys on May 11 we'll be trying something different," he says. "Instead of presenting a few awards, then saying, 'here's some entertainment,' we're planning to tie in the entertainment with the awards in various categories."

"We're able to do this," Precht notes, "because there are four basic areas in Daytime programming — children's programs, dramatic serials, talk-variety shows, and game-audience participation series — plus an added category of special daytime features."

Precht points out that in the children's category, for instance, a special opening number will feature guest Rita Moreno and children and characters from various shows, and be followed by the presentation of the awards.

COSTLY SANDWICH — A delirious Donald Duck holds up his prize while being attended for various bumps, bruises and broken bones, all because he foolishly attempted to use the wrong tools to make his latest creation in "Duckling Disaster With Donald and His Friends," an hour of animated fun airing Sunday, May 9, (7-8 p.m.) on Channels 6-8, on "The Wonderful World of Disney."

Duck Ducks Disaster

Airing on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, May 9, from 7 to 8 p.m. on NBC Channel 6-7, is "Duckling Disaster With Donald and His Friends."

After setting himself up as the world's foremost authority on human psychology, Professor Ludwig Von Drake explains that folks get themselves into trouble because they seldom use their brains properly. Von Drake demonstrates how we are controlled by two forces basically, reason and emotion, with one hopefully balancing the other.

However, according to the learned professor, "emotion takes over under stress or in unusual situations, such as when encountering an attractive girl."

To further illustrate what can happen when one acts without first engaging the brain, the professor tells the classic story of Chicken Little and how Foxy Loxy trapped all of the chickens by preying on their emotions.

Next Von Drake introduces J. J. Fate who explains that when man doesn't think, he has accidents. With Donald Duck's help, he shows how to have an accident at home and at work. Then J. J. and Ludwig call on Goofy to portray the good citizen who wouldn't harm a flea until he steps behind the wheel of his car, when he suddenly becomes a demon of the highways.

Born Tone Deaf?

"No one is born tone-deaf," says acclaimed Japanese violinist Toshiya Eto. "And there is not a human being, musically talented or otherwise, who, if subjected to early enough training, cannot be imbued with the power to distinguish between the ring of back and front doorbells."

This refutation of a popular belief that people are either born with the faculty of perfect pitch or can never acquire it has been established scientifically by Eto, who is the subject of "Lamp Unto My Feet," Sunday, May 9, 10 to 10:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

"People still have such an emotional attachment to 'The Yearling' that it's difficult for them to accept the fact that 'Jody Baxter' is now the father of his own children," relates Claude Jarman Jr., who portrayed Jody in that classic film, based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawling.

"The Yearling" will be presented as a special family film on Sunday, May 9, 7 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

Jarman, who portrayed a young boy growing up in Florida's rough scrub country with his cherished pet fawn, has long outgrown the role, of course, but he retains the head of blood hair and boyish looks that helped make him a young folk hero in the classic film.

As a child actor, Jarman made 11 films, but none were as difficult for him as his first, "The Yearling."

"We started filming in April of 1945, and I worked on the picture for about a year," he recalls. "I was 10 when we started and 11 when the movie was finally released.

"We worked in Florida for three months in the summer, in the days when there was no air-conditioning. After filming there, we found much of the sound was no good because of forest noises — twigs snapping and brush rattling — and I spent about a month just dubbing."

The role was taxing, physically and emotionally, for the child actor.

"I had to do a lot of running in the film and kept losing weight," he remembers. "That's unusual in a growing boy. Many scenes took tremendous emotion, and the drain was incredible."

Jarman was working with a director, Clarence Brown, who was clearly striving for perfection.

"We did at least six takes of each scene, and one I did over 160 times," Jarman says. "This was because I was inexperienced and the animals were difficult to work with. Also, Brown wanted things letter perfect. He would always say, 'Once more for Paris.'"

"Then, after being wrapped up in the film for so long, when it was over everyone just split and I was left wondering 'Now what?'" Jarman notes. "It was a little heavy. I never really recovered from that, and didn't push my career as an actor."

THE YEARLING — Claude Jarman Jr. portrays a young boy whose devotion to his pet fawn leads him towards maturity on the American frontier, in "The Yearling." The winner of three Academy Awards, it will be shown as a special family film presentation on Sunday, May 9 (7-9 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

'Anything Goes' Holds Contest

A team of determined celebrities will take on the 1975 and '76 "Almost Anything Goes" national champions in the series "Supergames I," a battle royal at Boulder City, Nev., to be seen Sunday, May 9, 7 to 8 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-12.

The competitors on the celebrity squad will be Ruth Buzzi, Rosey Grier, Arte Johnson, Carol Lawrence, Robert Reed and Leslie Uggams.

And, coaching the stars in a mentor who combines traits of such legends as Knute Rockne, Leo Durocher and Marie Antoinette — the incomparable Phyllis Diller.

The Hollywood standard-bearers will be going up against the host team, Boulder City, winners of the 1975 "Almost Anything Goes" summer series, and the 1976 champions, Chambersburg, Pa. Reporting on this first-of-its kind celebrity "Almost Anything Goes" competition will be play-by-play announcer Charlie Jones, color commentator Sam Riddle and field announcer Regis Philbin.

The following are capsule descriptions of the "AAG" events for "Supergames I":

Pass the Pudding — Players from each team attempt to pass along large containers of real pudding, bucket-brigade fashion, but three competitors from each squad are soaring back and forth on playground swings. Along the way, some of them are bound to get their 'just desserts.'

Saloon Slide — Team members dressed in "Gay 90s" garb whisk down the "AAG" slide and try to snare "Mugs of Beer" hurled "down the Bar" toward them. Any fluid making it to the bottom container counts.

Spring Cleaning — A "housewife" must complete her annual cleanup — laundry, sweeping, etc., then rush off to meet a friend at a restaurant. Fastest time wins.

Platterball — Male team members balance a female team member on a mini-trampoline and carry her from center court to where a group of basketballs is suspended. Her job — to bounce up, pluck a ball and score a basket.

Back Seat Driver — Two players from each team navigate a tricky obstacle course in a golf cart. But, the driver is blindfolded, and the passenger must guide him to the finish line.

Circus Ball Crawl — Players leapfrog down the golf course to a giant ball which their 'designated crawler' amounts. The scrambler on top must keep from falling off as they roll it back to their goal.

WCTI-TV-NEW BERN

'Gemini Man' Series To Air

Usually when a network comes up with a real 'loser' in the ratings, they stay far, far away from any pilot that even remotely resembles the 'lemon.' Not so with NBC-TV and a series they plan to air next season — "Gemini Man." Remember last year's Fiasco, "The Invisible Man"? It last but a few months and was one of the first of several new series to be stricken from the schedule. Well, hang onto your hats, gang, here comes another series, almost identical to it — "Gemini Man."

Airing on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 10, 8 to 10 p.m., on Ch. 6-7, "Gemini Man" is the forerunner of the new series of the same name which will be colorcast Monday nights starting in the fall.

Ben Murphy stars as special agent Sam Casey, who becomes capable of invisibility as a result of the after-effects of an explosion during an underwater salvage operation.

Co-starring are Katherine Crawford as computer specialist Dr. Abigail Lawrence and Richard Dysart as Casey's boss, Leonard Driscoll.

When friend and co-worker "Abby" Lawrence is able to perfect a means to control his invisibility, Casey, an agent and chief troubleshooter for the think-tank facility known as Intersect, becomes a valuable secret weapon for the firm and is given the code name minus one. Convinced the explosion was the work of saboteurs, Casey, Abby and Driscoll uncover a plot to execute wealthy Charles Royce, head of one of the country's largest industrial complexes who has hired Casey for the salvage job. Ironically, Casey's invisibility almost proves to be his own undoing.

Going with a theme that has already 'bombed', is, to say the least, not the normal avenue to follow when it comes to network programming. But, remember ABC's "Toma"? It was a 'loser,' but the execs took the theme, created "Baretta" around it, and came up with a real 'winner.' Needless to say, this is what NBC had in mind when they put "Gemini Man" in their fall line-up.

UNSEEN SCIENTIST— Ben Murphy stars as a researcher who develops the power to make himself invisible after being accidentally exposed to nuclear radiation in "Gemini Man," a world premiere science fiction drama to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 10 (8-10 p.m.) on Channels 6-7. The film is the forerunner of NBC-TV's new fall series of the same name starring Murphy.

Buddy Taken As Hostage

In the episode of "Joe Forrester" airing Monday, May 10, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV, "The Best Laid Schemes," Sgt. Bernie Vincent, portrayed by Eddie Egan, is taken hostage by a gang of thieves. Starring as Joe Forrester is Lloyd Bridges.

Egan's acting career was interrupted by a 20-year stretch as a detective. Eddie, at age 10, was playing baseball in a street near New York's Yankee Stadium. The movie "Pride of the Yankees" was being filmed and they needed some kids in a crowd scene, so Eddie and his pals were hired. That was Eddie's last "acting" job for many years.

In 1955, following a hitch in the U.S. Marines, Egan joined the New York Police Department and soon became one of the best narcotics detectives in the country.

During one 18-month period he made three arrests involving $142,000,000 worth of heroin — an exploit that is the basis of the Oscar-winning motion picture, "The French Connection." Egan had a small role in the film, but he was portrayed under the fictitious name of Popeye Doyle by Gene Hackman. Eddie also appeared with Hackman in the movie, "Kansas City Prime,"

WOODY'S NEW FRIEND

Walter Lantz introduces a new character in his "Woody Woodpecker" series for NBC, "Col. Seward Willoughby." The Colonel acquired his name from the street corners Lantz's studio is located on — Seward and Willoughby.

and had a role in "McCloud," "Mannix," "Police Woman" and "Police Story."

They Keep Rockin' And Rollin'

"Rock and roll will never last. The music isn't really music and the singers don't have any talent."

These were some of the favorite rallying cries from rock's detractors 15 or 20 years ago. Such talk isn't heard much today, when a quick turn of the radio dial in any town in the land is enough proof that rock has grown into the most dominant and creative musical force of this century as well as the most financially rewarding. Rock is the 'fad' that has lasted 20 years.

As to the "no talent" performers, we'll have the chance to hear, see and meet nine artists who hit the top of the rock pile in the late '50s and early '60s, on "American Bandstand's 23rd Birthday Special," to be presented as a "Wide World: Special," Monday, May 10, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

And we'll discover that all of these artists are still active and successful.

Remember Chubby Checker singing "The Twist," Connie Francis moving through "Who's Sorry Now?" and Jackie Wilson's dynamic "That's Why"? How about Fats Domino's New Orleans blues in "Ain't That a Shame," or Fabian's "Hound Dog Man" and Pat Boone's "Too Soon to Know"? Remember Annette Funicello's "Tall Paul," Dion's "Teenager in Love" and Jimmy Clanton's "Just a Dream"?

Well, all of these artists will be singing these songs during the birthday party (as well as lots more). We'll be able to talk to all of them and find out what they're doing today. And we'll see some vintage "at home" interviews with Connie Francis and Fabian taped back in 1960. And we'll also see that each and every one of these artists has outlasted his or her credits.

Chubby Checker, Connie Francis and Jackie Wilson are still packing in fans at concerts and in nightclubs.

Fats Domino, the man who had too many hits to count in the early days of rock, is one of the most popular performers in the history of Las Vegas and Reno. Fabian, who moved into a successful acting career following his initial record ex-posure, is singing again in clubs across the country and gathering rave reviews.

Pat Boone, who never really left the pop music scene, has teamed up with his wife, Shirley, and their four daughters to form one of the most popular acts in clubs and fairs today. Recently, he entered the country charts.

As for Annette, the girl who went from Mousketeer to singing star to actress before deciding to take some time off to raise a family, she has been introduced to a whole new generation of kids as the "Mickey Mouse Club" reruns are now seen in more than 120 markets.

Dion, considered to have one of the classic rock voices of all time, he turned out hit after hit over the past 15 years and expanded his audience to appeal to folk and easy listening fans as well as rockers.

And Jimmy Clanton, the teen idol from Louisiana, still performs from time to time, although he seems to have found a permanent home as a popular disc jockey in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Cinderella

In fictional show-business cliches, a glamorous career has its start when the young, talented, pretty, unknown heroine steps on stage to substitute for an ailing star, wins a standing ovation from the audience, and overnight becomes a star.

Sometimes, it happens in real life.

It happened to Roberta Peters, whose Cinderella story was set at the New York Metropolitan Opera House on Nov. 17, 1950. She was 20 years old, had never sung on a professional stage before and had never had a rehearsal with the orchestra. Five hours before curtain time, she had been called upon to sing the lead in Mozart's "Don Giovanni," before a sold-out house.

In 1776, Ben Franklin was a member of the committee (with John Adams and Thomas Jefferson) that chose the bald eagle as the emblem of the Great Seal of the United States. Later, he had second thoughts about it: "I wish the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country," he wrote. "He is a bird of bad moral character; he does not get his living honorably; he is generally poor and very lousy." Franklin went on to say, probably with his tongue firmly planted in his cheek, that he preferred the turkey.

Franklin was right about a great many things. About this he was dead wrong. The eagle is as upstanding, honest and free of lice as any bird of prey. Besides, can you imagine a turkey clutching arrows and an olive branch, with a ribboned "E Pluribus Unum" fluttering from its beak? Can you imagine calling a flop play an eagle?

"Eagle Come Home," a Survival Anglia Ltd. film about the natural history and conservation of this endangered species — now so rare that most Americans have never seen one — will be presented Tuesday, May 11, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11, and will be narrated by Gene Kelly.

In Franklin's time, the bald eagle's range extended to every corner of the North American continent. Now there are only about 7,000 pairs of bald eagles left in Alaska and about 700 pairs in the continental 48 States, rearing their young against the great odds imposed on them by the expansion of the very nation they represent.

EAGLE—The American bald eagle is the subject of "Eagle Come Home," a look at the bird's habits and habitat and a survey of conservation measures which have saved it from near extinction, to be broadcast, Tuesday, May 11 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11. Gene Kelly is the narrator for this special.

Eagles mate for life. There is no difference between the coloring and markings of males and females, though females are considerably larger. They may grow to 40 inches long, weigh upwards of 16 pounds and have a seven-foot wingspread. With luck, they may survive for 40 years.

During the 35-40 day incubation period, both parents share the work of warming the eggs. The nest, or aerie, may last for decades and be used by several successive generations. The largest nests on record were about 20 feet deep, 8 to 10 feet wide and weighed two tons. As a predator which feeds by choice mainly on fish, the eagle is skillful and strong enough to catch and lift a 10-pound salmon. Soaring effortlessly on the wind, an eagle looks deceptively relaxed. It's nothing of the kind. An eagle is a finely tuned agent of death, the ultimate in predatory birds.

Its deep yellow eyes are among the keenest in nature, and because of the unique structure of its retina, the eagle's visual acuity is as sharp as that of a human looking through six-power binoculars.

'World Of Magic' Airs

"The World of Magic," the widely viewed and acclaimed special starring magician Doug Henning, will be colorcast again Tuesday, May 11, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Ch. 6-7.

Henning shares the stage with host Bill Cosby, special guest star Gene Kelly, actress-dancer Julie Newmar, singer Lori Lieberman and Japanese magician Shimada.

The special, highlighted by Henning's execution of Houdini's famous Water Torture Escape, had a viewing audience of 60 million — 50 of the audience for the time period — who watched all or part of the first presentation last Dec. 26, according to figures based on the Nielsen Television Index.

John J. O'Connor, of The New York Times, wrote: "Henning proved to be properly appealing and astonishing... He is so masterly that he could confidently share the spotlight with superb competition in the person of a Japanese magician named Shimada."

Campanella Story Retold

"It's Good To Be Alive," a drama focusing on Roy Campanella, the great Brooklyn Dodgers catcher whose brilliant career was brought to a sudden halt in a tragic auto accident in 1958, will be seen Monday, May 10, on "The CBS Late Movie" at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Starring in the film are Paul Winfield, Ruby Dee and Lee Gossett.

Winfield portrays Campanella, with Ruby Dee as his wife Ruthe, and Gossett in the role of Sam Brockington, Campanella's hospital attendant who goads him back into a productive career. Campanella himself appears briefly in a special introduction and epilogue filmed at his home in White Plains, N.Y.

The film traces the life of the famed athlete through two most significant events. First, on a fateful winter night, Campanella was crippled in an auto accident. Then another very special and emotion-filled night when the Coliseum in Los Angeles was dedicated to the catcher. The time between the two events saw Campanella battle fear and hopelessness and rise to the challenge of his new restricted life.

Paul Winfield's portrayal of Roy Campanella is not a carbon copy of the original. It's uniquely Paul Winfield.

"I read whatever I could about Campanella," Winfield said, "including his own book.

Camel Stumps 'Quest'

A Hollywood cameraman can tell you that camels — at least one in particular — are downright uncooperative.

The script for the film "Quest," to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the MOVIES" May 13 (9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7), called for a scene with one of the humped quadrepeds.

The animal was to dash through the swinging doors of a saloon, tear things up inside, and then leap head-first through a big glass window to make its escape. (The 'window' was made of sugar-water so the camel would not be injured during the scene.)

The director managed to get the animal inside the saloon and it was happy to kick over some tables and chairs. Then came time for the big scene, when it was supposed to leap through the window.

The camera was set up in the street, pointed at the window. And then the camel decided it didn't want to play anymore.

For three hours the crew begged and pleaded with the animal to jump through the window, but it just "smiled" at them.

It was perfectly willing to make a run at the window, but for five straight 'takes' it came to a dead stop just inches away from it. The camera was rolling during each take and the film was getting low.

"Reloading," yelled the camera operator after the fifth take. Just as he removed the film magazine and reached for a fresh one, the camel leaped through the window — and spit at him.

But the feat was finally accomplished and the scene is now part of the film, the forerunner of the new NBC-TV fall series also titled "Quest."

'Ice Station Zebra' To Be Rebroadcast

Rock Hudson, Ernest Borgnine, Patrick McGoohan, Jim Brown and Tony Bill star in "Ice Station Zebra," the adventure-drama about the perilous Arctic voyage and mission of a U.S. nuclear submarine, which will be rebroadcast in two parts on "The CBS Late Movie" Wednesday, May 12, and Thursday, May 13, at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11.

The crew of the USS Nuclear Submarine Tigerfish, under the command of Cmdr. James Ferrady (Rock Hudson), is sent on a perilous voyage under the Arctic ice cap to the North Pole. Their mission is to rescue survivors at a weather station shattered by an explosion and fire and enveloped by a winter storm.

STREETCAR—Milton Berle (left) dons female garb to portray Blanche, with Sid Caesar as Stanley, in an unusual version of "A Streetcar Named Desire," on "Tony Orlando & Dawn," Wednesday, May 12, (8-9 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

Milton Berle, the gagman known for 25 years as Mister Television; Sid Caesar, master of sketch comedy; and Joey Bishop, quick-witted deadpan artist, are a formidable combination when they get together.

"It's not that they try to top each other," said an appreciative Tony Orlando; "it's just that they can't help it."

The three comedians provide inspired foolishness in demonstrating their varied comedy styles when they appear as guest stars on "Tony Orlando and Dawn," to be rebroadcast Wednesday, May 12, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

During rehearsals, they traded good-natured insults but worked hard polishing skits, suggesting bits of business for themselves and each other.

Berle joined that his more than 60 years in show business gave him seniority and entitled him to proper respect from his fellow guests. Television's "Uncle Miltie" commented that their individual acts appear spontaneous but represent literally years of preparation. "We can all do the sight gags and ad libs," Berle said, "and we can also do characters. Sid, in particular, excels in comedy-skits scenes — the farther out, the better."

DIRECTOR TO STAR IN MOVIE

Gordon Rigsby is a director who does not confine his talents to the behind-the-camera action. In addition to being one of the directors of the daytime series "One Life to Live," the handsome six-footer recently stepped in front of the cameras to take a little direction himself.

Rigsby has the starring role in the feature film, "Five Billion and Six." The director-turned-actor plays a geologist in the soon to be released film which was shot on location in the Mojave Desert.

The Prince Takes A Princess

There was a certain bit of irony in the timing of the segment entitled "Ms. Liz" which will be rebroadcast on "Chico and the Man" Wednesday, May 12, at 9:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

As the storyline unfolded, Chico (series star Freddie Prinze) returns from his vacation and announces to Ed (co-star Jack Albertson) that he has met the girl he plans to marry.

Ed decides that the young man is wrong and he schemes to cool the romance. On the advice of the Rev. Bemis (Ronny Graham), Ed tried reverse psychology to bring Chico to his senses.

The irony appears in the fact that the show reached the television screen on Oct. 31, just about three weeks after a big event in Prinze's life: on Oct. 13, 21-year-old Freddie was married to Kathy Cochran, a former travel agent, at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas.

Freddie met Kathy, a native of Webster Springs, W. Va., at a resort in Jackson Hole, Wyo., last March — just after he had completed the first and highly successful season of "Chico and the Man." Both were vacationing at the time, and after a growing romance, they decided to marry. The happy event took place three days later.

The bride and groom spent several days in Las Vegas, then traveled to Lake Tahoe where Prinze fulfilled a nightclub engagement. From there, it was on to a new home the actor recently bought in Hollywood Hills, Calif.

So, the outcome of the "Ms.

Liz" segment all become academic; while Chico may still be a free man, Freddie Prinze is happily spoken for.

'Go-USA'

The members of a poor pioneer family are robbed of all their possessions when they book passage for a river journey in "River Raft," rebroadcast on NBC-TV's Bicentennial series "Go-USA," in color, Saturday, May 15, 12:30 to 1 p.m.

Widowed Ruth Baxter resolves to take her son and two daughters down the Ohio River to a new life in Kentucky, but on the way the raftsman robs them of all their belongings and leaves them behind.

Co-starring as the Baxter children are David Dean, Susanne Lawrence and Susan Jayne Jacoby. Jake Prestwick portrays the raftsman and John Kellog appears as Beaugard, a frontiersman who befriends the family.

FAMILIES — Featured in "The Land of Hope," a world premiere drama about turn-of-the-century immigrant families in New York City, to be broadcast Thursday, May 13 (9-10 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11, are: (upper left) Anthony Cannon, Maria Tucci and young John Dunn; (lower left) Roy Poole (foreground), Carol Williard (standing) and Adriane Munker and Donald Warfield; and (right) Marion Winters, Roberta Wallach and Richard Lieberman (standing), Philip Fisher (seated), with Robert Stinga on his lap, and Joseph R. Miller.

'Land Of Hope' Premieres

"I'm almost always cast as an Italian 'heavy,'" says Michael Lombard, who guest stars in "The Land of Hope," a world premiere drama about New York's Lower East Side at the turn of the century, to be broadcast Thursday, May 13, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV.

"Oddly enough, in this drama I portray a Jewish gangster," Lombard notes. "You don't see that often. However, the human qualities of the story, which takes place in the early 1900's, almost makes the ethnic aspect unimportant. These people could have been anything. We all come from parents and grandparents who have roots in other parts of the world."

"As the heavy in a string of daytime dramas," Lombard continues, "I've been called upon to kidnap the leading lady and shoot the doctor, among other reprehensible acts. In 'The Land of Hope,' I portray an uncle who comes to claim a long-lost nephew - replete with threats of violence."

Lombard's theatrical career, incidentally, includes roles of a non-violent nature, on and off Broadway. He appeared in "Gingerbread Lady" with Maureen Stapleton and in "Mert and Phil" with Estelle Parsons, for example.

"My first job in the New York theater was as a spear carrier in 'Becket,' which starred Laurence Olivier," Lombard recalls. "I wasn't paid much, but for the chance to watch him work every night, I would have paid them."

"Working as an actor in New York is very exciting. I've had the chance to work on projects that began way off Broadway, and because a group of us actors were willing and able to work for no money we had time to develop the property. Of course, I could never have done that if it weren't for the income I derive from television commercials."

"It may seem like a far cry from playing heavies, but I'm the apple in an underwear commercial, and I also talk about cat food, shave creams and rubber gloves, among other things. It's all acting, of course, but I prefer the heavies."

Film Is Forerunner

Tom Matheson and Kurt Russell star as two young men searching the western frontier for their sister, who is living with Indians, in 'Quest,' a program development project to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the movies" May 13, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

The film is the forerunner of the new fall series of the same name starring Matheson and Russell.

Starring with Matheson and Russell are Brian Keith, Keenan

Wynn, Will Hutchins, Neville Brand and Cameron Mitchell.

Quentin Baudine thought his entire family had been killed during an Indian raid, but now, eight years later, he learns that the "white Indian" captured by the army is his younger brother, Morgan. Reunited, the brothers set out to find their sister, who is living with Indians, despite Morgan's warning that she likes her new life and may not want to be rescued.

HOLLYWOOD—Cher Allman gave husband Gregg and traveling friends quite a scare when she started having labor pains shortly after her arrival on vacation in Honolulu. She was admitted to a hospital as a precautionary measure.

Speaking of Hawaii, a tourist to the Islands can go to a luau hosted by Al Harrington of "Hawaii Five-O," can see a cattle ranch owned by Jimmy Stewart, or can even buy a tract home built by Richard Boone! Not to speak of seeing Don Ho's very entertaining hour-and-a-half show.

Michael Douglas has apparently broken off his long-standing romance with Brenda Vaccaro. When Mike left for Mexico and South America to promote his Oscar-winning film, "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," he was escorted by Nancy Phister, a girl he met while skiing in Aspen, Colorado.

Doris Day, newly married and as beautiful as ever, is contemplating a return to the TV series wars as the star of a new show in which she'd portray the dean of college.

Bill Hayes of daytime TV's "Days of Our Lives" has created a very unique Mother's Day card. Inside the standard-sized card in a 45 RPM record with his recording of "You Were Always There."

When Daren Kelly is not busy playing Dan Kennicott on "All My Children," he can be found on Manhattan's West Side pursuing his other creative ambitions. The energetic young actor is producing two plays, as well as acting in one of them.

The expectant Elaine Joyce (Mrs. Bobby Van) will play a mama-to-be in the next-to-final segment of Joyce's "City of Angels" series.

Ingmar Bergman has left Sweden for Paris, and reports are that he will make all future movies abroad. Reasons for the exit from his native soil are the tax fraud charges levied against him.

'Five-O' Looks For New Studio Home

If CBS can't soon find a suitable location for a studio in Hawaii, it looks like network will have to change the name of the long-running "Hawaii Five-O" series (seen Thursdays) to "L.A." or "Taiwan Five-O."

and the series found itself on the streets.

Last November, Gov. George Ariyoshi announced that the studio would be relocated on five acres of state land about a half-mile from the old site.

The search - for - a - studio situation has now reached the critical stage for the series which has already sunk about $64,000,000 into the state's financial "kitty" during the past eight years. This, of course, doesn't include the millions of dollars spent by tourists who came to the islands as a result of the worldwide exposure the series gives Hawaii.

The problem began in 1969 when an environmentalist group, the East Diamond Head Association, was formed and began legal action to close down 'Five-O's' studio that had been built on state land without a building permit. The environmentalists won the battle

'State Fair' To Be Rebroadcast

Vera Miles stars in the world premiere drama presentation of "State Fair," based on the hit movies, to be shown for the first time on Friday, May 14, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9. The drama is the story of a talented farm boy whose dreams of becoming a country music star are sidetracked by a pretty face. Taken from the novel by Philip Strong, the story is set against the colorful and exciting background of a country fair.

Also starring in "State Fair" are Tim O'Connor, Mitch Vogel, Julie Cobb, Dennis Redfield and Jeff Cotler.

In the film, high school sophomore Wayne Bryant finds himself and his chores on the family farm suffering when he is smitten by Bobbie Jean, a fellow competitor in the state fair music contest, who wants him to run away with her for a try at the big time. But Wayne is torn between Bobbie Jean's appeal and his love for his family.

The original film version of "State Fair," which was released in 1933, starred Will Rogers. The second film, with stars Jeanne Crain and Dick Haymes, appeared in 1945, and the most recent, made in 1962, had Pat Boone and Ann-Margret in leading roles.

Vera Miles (Melissa) is one of Hollywood's best known actresses; her talent has been used in widely varying roles by directors John Ford and Alfred Hitchcock. She has appeared frequently in major television guest roles.

Tim O'Connor (Jim) starred in "Peyton Place" as Elliot Carson and has been in virtually every television dramatic series, more recently moving into comedy roles on "All in the Family" and "MASH."

Mitch Vogel (Wayne) played Jamie for three years on "Bonanza." He has had a recurring role in the "Little House on the Prairie" television series.

Julie Cobb (Wayne) is the daughter of the distinguished actor, the late Lee J. Cobb. She appeared with her father on "Gunsmoke" in 1975 and her recent credits include "Petrocelli" and "Cannon."

Dennis Redfield (Chuck) has had roles in a variety of movies, including "Summer Run" and "The Wild McCullochs," and "Mannix" and "Hawaii Five-O." appeared on "The Waltons" where his older sister, Kami, is a regular cast member.

Introduces Cast

Danny Thomas, who stars as Dr. Jules Bedford in the comedy series "The Practice," personally introduces all members of the "Bedford Clan" to the studio audience immediately before filming each episode of the Friday night show (8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7).

Excerpts from a recent gathering of the clan:

"My pride and joy on this show is my son, Dr. David Bedford," Danny said, preparing to introduce actor David Spielberg. "I worship his children, I adore his wife and I love him — but I can't quite bring myself to tell him."

Danny picked Spielberg for the role after seeing him in the Broadway production of "Thieves," which starred his daughter, Marlo Thomas.

"David is just like my own son — everytime he passes me he ducks," Thomas continued. "Once I brushed my hair back with my hand and he ducked. Come to think of it, until I was 19 I never passed my own father without ducking."

(Spielberg enters the stage through the door of Dr. Bedford's office, bows to the audience, plants a kiss on 'dad's' cheek and withdraws.)

"We kiss a lot, that's the Mediterranean way," Danny explained. "David is a doctor like me, but he doesn't really practice, he prescribes and plays golf," he commented.

Introducing his daughter-in-law, David's wife, he said:

"You've all known Shelley Fabares since she was kid-sized on 'The Donna Reed Show.' Now she's grown up — and she's a lovely lady — and we've given her a couple of kids for the show and she plays my favorite daughter-in-law, Jenny."

Gator McKlusky

Burt Reynolds stars as Gator McKlusky, an expert auto driver who bargains with federal authorities for his freedom from a penitentiary by offering to go undercover to help break a moonshining operation in "White Lightning," an action adventure drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" May 15, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

McKlusky is serving time for running bootleg whiskey when he learns that his younger brother has been slain.

'Hawk'

Trying to spot today's stars when they were yesterday's hopefuls could become a favorite pastime of viewers on "Hawk," starring Burt Reynolds (seen Wednesdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV). The casts of the New York-based detective series, which was made in 1966, are replete with talented actors who subsequently achieved stardom.

Gene Hackman, who appeared in the April 21 episode, "Do Not Multilate or Spindle," later starred in the 1971 film "The French Connection," for which he won an Oscar.

Martin Sheen, who later starred on Broadway with Patricia Neal and Jack Albertson in "The Subject Was Roses" and in the award-winning television drama "The Execution of Private Solvik," guest-stars in the May 12 telecast, "Death Comes Full Circle."

Bernard Hughes, who stars in the title role of the TV series "Doc," also appears in this episode.

GUEST STARS

Actress Dina Merrill has a guest-starring role in "The Newspaper Game," a two-hour World Premiere dramatic program development project of NBC-TV.

Raymond Burr stars in the film as R.B. Kingston, executive chief troubleshooter for a chain of newspapers and television stations. Kingston uncovers a plot to use nuclear power plants as the means of taking over the world.

KING—Comedy star Alan King will join an all-star roster of celebrities and great tennis pros for the "Alan King Tennis Classic" from Caesars Palace, Las Vegas, Nevada on Saturday, May 15, beginning at 3:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

King Hosts A Tennis Classic

Comedian Alan King, whose fifth annual tennis classic will be telecast May 15 by ABC-TV, thinks the future of tennis is virtually limitless and will at least match the popularity of golf.

The Alan King Tennis Classic, one of the richest tennis tournaments in the world, originates from Caesars Palace, Las Vegas, with ABC Sports covering the final rounds Saturday, May 15, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Included among the celebrities who will be competing in the pro-am division are Paul Anka, Lloyd Bridges, Oleg Cassini, Chad Everett, Roosevelt Grier, Buddy Hackett, Steve Lawrence, Neil Simon and host Alan King.

Highlights of the pro-am action, as well as the men's professional singles competition, will feature such leading stars as Jimmy Connors, Arthur Ashe, Roscoe Tanner, Brian Gottfried, Dave Stockton and John Newcombe.

King says there are a number of reasons for his optimism about the future of tennis. The celebrated topical humorist is also enthusiastic about his tournament.

"Basically, tennis is going to be more popular because the game is being slowed down for the better enjoyment of the fan as well as the player," King explains. "Two things are being done — a switch to clay courts and the use of a heavier tennis ball. Clay courts, which definitely slow the game down, are used in European countries and it's not just a coincidence that more Europeans are now playing tennis in the United States.

"Our courts have been cement in the Southwest and grass in New York," Alan continued. "This makes for a fast power game of tennis, a serve and volley competition. By using a heavier ball and a synthetic substance on our existing courts to simulate clay, the game is slowed to allow more rallies. This is far more entertaining to the fan, particularly the TV viewer, and I think more satisfying to the player. The fan will see more plays and more strategy at work."

Michele Will Tell

TO MRS. H. BOST, KANNAPOLIS, N.C.: "Marcus Welby, M.D." has, sadly so, been cancelled. However, there will be re-runs through the summer months.

TO S. NORRIS, STAUNTON, VA.: Why does Esther Rolle wear so many orange outfits on "Good Times"? "I like the color," she quips.

TO R. INMAN, SHARON, S.C.: Why do celebrities change their names? Well, Henry John Deutchendorf, Jr. changed his name to John Denver. D'you blame him?

TO LINDA Z, LITTLETON, N.C.: Acting is a lifelong dream for Lawrence Jacobs, who plays Washington in "Welcome Back, Kotter." A native New Yorker, his interest in high school was art and design. Singing, playing the piano and organ are some of his interests besides acting. He's involved in all kinds of outdoor activity, is an avid reader and lives in a West Los Angeles apartment. Write to him c-o the show, ABC-TV, 1330 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019.

TO A. WEST, DURHAM, N.C.: Randolph Mantooth (John Gage on "Emergency!") is the son of a full-blooded Seminole, whose career as a construction worker took him across the country. Randy attended 18 high schools. It was in one of these that he did his first acting, and - since he enjoyed it - he became a professional.

TO DANNY, ROCK HILL, S.C.: In real life Henry Winkler (Fonzie on "Happy Days") is the exact opposite of the TV character he portrays. He's soft spoken, well-mannered, educated and extremely intelligent.

TO MRS. R. KERSCH, VERONA, VA.: Why do they take characters out of a TV series? When a show's ratings sag, new writers are usually hired who immediately change the plot lines and 'clean house' where the cast is concerned. That's what happened with "General Hospital."

Dunnock Is Shopper

Mildred Dunnock, veteran Broadway and motion picture actress, stars in "The Shopping Bag Lady," an award-winning film from the United States that will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival," Saturday, May 15, 1 to 1:30 p.m.

"The Shopping Bag Lady," the third film from the United States to be presented on the series in its nine years on the Network, centers on Annie Lewis (Miss Dunnock), an old woman who lives in Central Park, carries her few precious belongings in old shopping bags, and depends on the discards of others for survival. Annie is a familiar sight to three teen-age girls who frequently visit the park, and unfortunately she is also a target for their childish mischief. But one girl's cruelty turns to compassion, and Annie finally finds a friend to warm her empty existence.

"The Shopping Bag Lady" was produced and directed by Bert Salzman, who won an Academy Award this year in the short subject (live action) category for "Angel and Big Joe."

Preakness Televised

All of the beautiful stateliness and colorful aura of "the sport of kings" will be in full blossom as the finest thoroughbred in the world enter the starting gate for the 101st running of the Preakness, second leg in the coveted triple crown of horse racing. CBS will televise the sporting event on Saturday, May 15, at 5 p.m.

The race will take place at the Pimlico Race course in Baltimore, Maryland, and will extend to the full one mile and three-sixteenths length. Jack Whitaker, Heywood Hale Broun, Frank Wright and Chic Anderson provide the commentary.

Perhaps no sport in the world has the celebrated and royal pomp of horse racing. Since medieval times, horse owners have received various silver and gold ornaments as prizes for having the winning thoroughbred. Back in the days of James I of England, the custom was established of awarding the silver bell to the horse winning certain important races. Legend has it that on one occasion the silversmith failed to produce the flawless bell until his third attempt, and thus began the practice of awards for the horses finishing second and third.

One of the more colorful of today's trophies is the Woodlawn Vase of the Preakness Stakes. During the American Civil War, the vase was buried for safekeeping, and later dug up. In 1917, it was presented to the Maryland Jockey Club as a permanent trophy for the Preakness.

This year's Preakness appears to have it all, from an almost-perfect thoroughbred of peerless blood lines to a western 'dark horse' who is owned by several celebrities.

Honest Pleasure, the colt of What-a-Pleasure, is ridden by champion Braulio Baeza. He has won almost all his races in record time, and is the clear favorite in the field. In fact, Honest Pleasure has raced faster than Secretariat or Citation or Count Fleet in key races this season.

Part of the intense excitement of sports, especially tennis, is the unpredictability that can occur from day to day. On any given afternoon, a professional may look unbeatable, and then fail to win a game the next time he plays.

Such is the playing character of Virginia Wade, the curious Englishwoman who can destroy an opponent one day, and be destroyed the next. In fact, her play is as erratic as a slick clay surface.

Virginia will be one of the tennis greats competing on a special Mixed Doubles Match that will feature Billy Jean King, Victor Seixias and Tony Trabert. The matches will take place on Sunday, May 9, at 4:30 p.m. on NBC. The sight will be the La Costa Country Club in Carlsbad, California.

Born in Bournemouth, Hampshire, Miss Wade developed her powerful service and forehand and competed in the finals of the Junior Covered Courts singles. In 1965, she made her debut in the Wightman Cup in Cleveland, and took three events in the 1968 event to lead England to victory.

But her volatile temper has often kept the intelligent tennis pro from maintaining a steady stream of victories. In 1968, she crushed Billy Jean King, 6-4, 6-2 in the U.S. Open Championship, but has only reached the semi-finals of Wimbledon once, often losing to seemingly inferior opponents.

Miss Wade appears to perform better in the United States, possibly not feeling the pressure of playing in front of her countrymen. At Forest Hills, she has three times been a quarter-finalist and twice a semi-finalist. She has also won the Italian Open in 1971 and the Australian Open in 1972.

She is particularly adept at doubles play, pairing with such partners as Margaret Court, Rosie Casals and Ann Jones. All of this indicates that she should perform well in Sunday's outing.

But half of the excitement is in seeing just how well she will play. With Virginia Wade, that's as dangerous as predicting the weather.

TENNIS — Unpredictable Virginia Wade brings her doubles' ability to the La Costa Country Club in Carlsbad, Calif. for the Mixed Doubles Championships on Sunday, May 9, at 4:30 p.m. on NBC-TV. Also featured are Billie Jean King, Vic Seixias and Tony Trabert.

Heard Wants Stardom

"Who ever heard of Jerry the end of the world." Heard?"

A bad pun, especially if you are Jerry Heard — especially if you have made it very clear that you want to be one of golf's superstars.

"That's what I'm working toward," the Californian says. "I want to be as good as I can get. I want to win them all."

Actually, those who follow golf know that the easy-going Heard is one of the most competitive members on the tour, winning in excess of $81,000 each year for the past five seasons.

Jerry will be competing in the Colonial National Invitational Tournament, a $200,000 PGA event being played at the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth, Texas Saturday, May 15. The tournament will be televised at 4 p.m. on CBS. He won this tournament in 1972 with a then-record 202.

"The only goal I've ever set has been to win $100,000 a year," he says in a matter-of-fact way. "If you win that much, you usually have to win a tournament or two. Yes, I want to win one of the major tournaments. My game has come along to where I can win one of them, and I believe one will come in time."

He isn't going to be overly concerned if he doesn't win one soon, though. Heard simply isn't the worrying kind. He seems to be loose and tension-free in a tournament.

"Yeah, I am real loose," he says. "I don't get nervous. Sure, I want to win, but if I don't it isn't Too casual, you say? Heard doesn't think so. He believes attitude helps to keep him loose.

Since he joined the PGA tour Heard says the biggest improvement in his games has been in striking the ball. "I used to be a poor driver," he says. "Now, I'm one of the better ones. It's just experience."

Sure, this easygoing fellow practices, but not too much. "I never really practice," he says. "Every day I hit about 20, just to loosen up. That's all."

Although he started golfing when he was 11-years-old, the first time Heard saw a professional tournament was in Nov., 1967. "I was like a duck in a new pond," he says. "It was the first time I'd ever seen people like Billy Casper and Doug Sanders."

Heard was graduated from the 1968 Qualifying School, and since that day he says a number of pros have helped him. "With most of the players, if you ask them an intelligent question, they'll give you an intelligent answer."

But Heard put together his own putting stroke merely by watching others. Now, he says, "I have Dave Stockton's grip, George Archer's stroke and Bob Charles' set-up position." Obviously, that's a winning combination.

MAC DAVIS IN 'SPECIALS'
 Mac Davis will star in two specials a year for the next two years on NBC-TV.

West Is Behind Mike

For 24 years of his life, Jerry West provided fans all over the country with some of the most exciting basketball ever seen. After fourteen years in the pros, four in college, three in high school and three in junior high. West epitomized the hard-working athlete who succeeded on sheer desire.

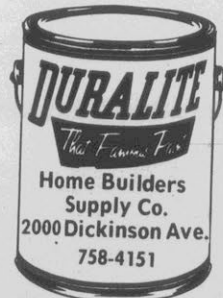

Jerry has now taken off his jersey for the last time, and is one of the expert commentators on CBS. The former Los Angeles Laker will lend his expertise when CBS broadcasts an NBA Playoff Contest on Friday, May 14, at 9 p.m.

In 1974, when the West Virginia graduate retired, he indicated what kind of a ballplayer and man he is.

"The biggest reason I am retiring," he explained, "is because I have set high standards for myself that I'm not willing to compromise. What bothers me most about a decision like this is that I'm leaving the team and the fans that have been so loyal, not only to me, but to my family."

The key to West's success in the NBA can be attributed to two major factors. One, he kept improving every year he was in the league. Always a fine shooter, he became an outstanding defensive guard. By the time he retired, or at least in his last season as a full-time performer in 1973, he may have been the best in the league. He sharpened his passing and ball-handling skills as time went on.

Perhaps the real key was the second factor — West's ability to score under pressure.

Double Feature Night

Romance, masterful sword-play and political treachery in 17th century France provide the excitement in "Panache," a 90-minute motion picture to air as the opening attraction in a double feature presentation on "The ABC Saturday Night Movie," May 15, 8 to 9:30 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12.
 "Panache" will be followed (9:30 to 11 p.m.) by "High Risk," a heist adventure concerning six former circus performers turned master thieves.
 Rene Auberjonois, David Healy and Charles Frank star in "Panache," which is also a pilot for a projected series. Charles Seibert, John Doucette, Amy Irving, Harvey Solin and Joseph Tuskin co-star.

 "Panache" unfolds as master strategist Cardinal Richelieu (Ruskin) plots the demise of King Louis XIII's strongest ally — the musketeer Panache (Auberjonois). In doing so, he hopes to weaken the structure of the king's government and open the way for his own well-timed takeover. With the aid of the commander of his guards, the wily Rochefort (Seibert), he plans to lure one or both of Panache to come to their aid. If Panache loses in combat, he will die by the sword. If he wins, he will be hanged for dueling, an activity proclaimed illegal by the King.

"High Risk," a tale of the derring-do of six former circus performers who race against time in stealing a priceless artifact from a foreign embassy in broad daylight in Washington, D. C., makes its world premiere as the second attraction on "The ABC Saturday Night Movie."
 Starring in "High Risk," another pilot for a potential series, are Victor Buono, Joseph Sirola, Don Stroud, Joanna Kara Cameron, Ronne Troup and Wolf Roth, with guest stars Rene Enriquez and John Fink.
 In "High Risk," the six view a mask encrusted with emeralds of over 40 carats each at a public showing at the embassy.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JANE ALEXANDER,

Eleanor Roosevelt in ABC-TV's "Eleanor and Franklin"

When you played Eleanor Roosevelt on TV, did you learn any surprising things about her life?—J.R.G., Washington, D.C.

● Many things surprised me concerning her life in the shadow of her mother-in-law, Sara Delano Roosevelt. For example, when the family vacationed in Sara's Maine house, the rule was that each member of the family could have only three inches of water in the bathtub. Eleanor humbly conformed. On the other hand, her mother-in-law could be excessively generous with her grandchildren. When Franklin Jr. wrecked his car, she gave him a new one the next week, over Eleanor and Franklin's objections.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of "Barnaby Jones"

Is there a side to you that the public doesn't know about?—E.C., Scranton, Pa.

● There sure is. The first time someone said to me, "You're so self-assured," it was ironic. Inside I was scared to death from nerves! As Miss America, when I traveled so much, I felt I ought to be very mature and "with it." Underneath, I was the exact reverse. When I came to New York, I was a complete oddity, unschooled and untried. I've come a long way since then, but I still get very jittery before a show or a public appearance.

FOR ROD STEIGER, star of "W. C. Fields and Me"

What's more important to you, the role or the money?—M.W., Lowell, Mass.

● The role. I won't take any part, regardless of what I'm offered, if I don't believe in it. As long as I can put bread on the table for my family, nothing could induce me to act in a film that's badly written or ill-conceived. Before I did "The Pawnbroker," I waited 18 months for a good script. It was an expensive gamble, but I'm glad now that I held ground and didn't accept any of those lesser parts.

FOR WILLIAM E. MILLER,

1964 Republican Vice-Presidential candidate

Did Nelson Rockefeller jump off President Ford's 1976 bandwagon or was he pushed by the President?—P.N., Brockport, N.Y.

● All I can offer is an opinion. I believe President Ford did not make Rockefeller leave. As I see it, Mr. Rockefeller felt that his presence on the ballot in 1976 could divide our party. Believing he could best serve his President and party off the ballot, he announced his unavailability.

FOR KATHRYN CROSBY

Do you share Bing's love of golf?—B.G., Pueblo, Colo.

● Until last spring, I hadn't played since high school. I'm out to prove golf is possible after 40! That's when I shot 84—for nine holes. Golf is a great family game, and the boys (Harry, 17, and Nathaniel, 14) are such good players that I felt a bit left out. Kidding aside, my lowest round to date is 110, but Bing thinks I show promise.

FOR FLORENCE HENDERSON

I've heard you have a hearing problem. Is that true?—K.P., Santa Fe, N.M.

● Yes—otosclerosis, a disease of the inner ear. Women get it more than men, and it's aggravated by childbirth. I've had an operation on one ear, and it looks as though one of these days I'll have to have the other one done, too.

FOR CHUCK KNOX, coach of the Los Angeles Rams

How do players from warm climates, such as Southern California, adjust to playing games in freezing temperatures?—Marjorie Littler, Caldwell, Idaho

● They don't. Experts tell us that it takes at least two weeks for the human body to adjust to a different climate. So all we can do is try to forget about the weather and concentrate on playing football.

FOR JOHN CHANCELLOR, NBC-TV news anchorman

Some people say that the anchormen on the three networks form an "Eastern elite." How do you answer that?—H.B., Tonawanda, N.Y.

● Harry Reasoner of ABC, Walter Cronkite of CBS and I were born within 400 miles of each other in the Midwest. We're in New York City because that's where the network headquarters are.

FOR GINGER ROGERS

What's the biggest change in the movie business since you started?—M.P., Muncie, Ind.

● It's quite obvious—the subject matter. Some of the degrading movies now forced on us sadden me. I don't go to the movies much these days. Apart from the time, I don't have the desire. There aren't any more Cecil B. DeMilles or George Stevenses making wonderful films. What was wrong with those great comedies we used to have? Also, we don't have as many big women stars now.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've heard that Wayne Rogers is a financial wizard. Correct?—J. Moreland, Santa Fe, N.M.

● Yes. He says he got into real estate because "Actors come and go, but there's always a need for land. People have to live and work somewhere." Rogers first invested in a foreclosed building, after borrowing the down payment from a bank. Now he has expanded into commercial and residential complexes, has a California vineyard, oil wells, Canadian forest land, a computer company and more. He's a self-taught tax expert and lecturer, and his business advice is sought by some top financiers and other stars, such as James Caan, Jack Webb and Peter Falk. (Falk and Rogers were roommates once in a run-down New York apartment when they were both struggling actors.)

Happy Rockefeller: An Old-Fashioned Mom Who Rules With Love

"When things are sometimes too hard to accept, you have to just put your head down and hang in there and keep on going..."

think one has to be approaching 50 before one begins to see the patterns. Then you can see the repetition of things from generation to generation."

I asked her whether she agreed with George Sand who once said that, at 50, a woman must look more to the future and less to the past.

"To an extent," she replied. "But I don't think you should block off the past and all that you have experienced. You should use this as a reference library, as a challenge and as a means of avoiding past mistakes. I think that, at 50, one has to bring the mind and reason into play more than the emotion."

When I asked how the Vice President compared with other public figures, she replied with a grin: "He's a combination of Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt. No! Make that Robert Redford instead of Churchill."

Our conversation turned easily to her favorite topic—the Rockefeller boys and Happy's ideas about bringing up children. The Rockefellers' own two children, Nelson Jr., 11, and Mark, 9, are seldom written about or photographed. Listening to Mrs. Rockefeller, I got the impression that they are bright, straight-forward, athletic and well-mannered, but occasionally mischievous youngsters. They have much in common with preteens everywhere—if you can forget that their father is the Vice President and one of the world's richest men. They live in New York where they have attended the same private school since kindergarten. "In New York they have their own personal identity, whereas in Washington they would be a curiosity," she says.

Young Nelson is the reader in the family, mostly novels, while Mark, the mathematician, enjoys sports books. Both are rock-music fans (The Beatles and The Beach Boys are among their favorite performers). Both are also well-rounded athletes who go in for football, ice hockey, baseball, golf, tennis, boating and skiing. At present their chief aim in life is to become professional athletes. Neither has political ambitions. "They equate politics with their father being away," Happy says half-jokingly.

Mrs. Rockefeller has four other children by her first marriage: a son, James, who is with Time-Life books in New York, and three daughters: Wendy and Carol, both college students, and Malinda, who is in boarding school in Washington. All are frequent visitors at the Rockefeller homes in Washington, Manhattan, Pocantico Hills, N.Y., and Seal Harbor, Maine.

Mr. Rockefeller had five children by his first marriage. He lost one son in New Guinea. The other four are adults with their own careers and families.

Happy and Nelson Rockefeller could have spoiled their two young sons, but they apparently believe that firm and consistent parental guidance produces the happiest children.

Mrs. Rockefeller's answers to some wide-ranging questions illustrate the point:

Are you a permissive or an old-fashioned parent?

"I don't think either, because one feels one's way along with each child. Each child is different, each child is an individual. I try to help my children find their own identities; I try to teach them consideration for others. It's also important for parents to watch each child grow and sense when to give and when to take rein. We try to provide an atmosphere of freedom with a framework that allows each child to develop a sense of self-worth, a sense of responsibility and—of great importance—a sense of humor."

How do you discipline the boys?

"I don't like punishment. Punishment is negative. Discipline with love is positive. If parents live a positive life, the discipline they give their children will be positive. But stress the child's good points so that he will feel good about himself. I am also a great believer in manners. I think manners are very attractive. Children are great mimics, and if their parents use proper manners, they are apt to do the same: having respect for their parents, for older people, for institutions, for teachers, for ministers. In the past they got this training within the family, but somewhere we've gotten off the track. I think the most important thing is to be aware of

Family Weekly asked Mrs. Rockefeller whether she would share some of her inner feelings about life and destiny with readers. She hesitated a moment, then remembered a poem from Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" titled "Me Imperturbé." Here are some lines from that work which Happy Rockefeller picked as expressing her personal philosophy:

Me imperturbé, standing at ease in Nature, Master of all or mistress of all, aplomb in the midst of irrational things,
Imbued as they, passive, receptive, silent as they,
Finding my occupation, poverty, notoriety, foibles, crimes, less important than I thought . . .
Me wherever my life is lived, O to be self-balanced for contingencies,
To confront night, storms, hunger, ridicule, accidents,
rebuffs,
As the trees and animals do.

Once you have been confronted with a life-and-death situation, trivia no longer matter. Your perspective grows and you live at a deeper level. There's no time for pettiness. I had cancer and they caught it in time. I'm just grateful to be alive."

The speaker was Happy Rockefeller, and we were talking about how her outlook toward life has changed since her surgery for breast cancer. Our conversation, held in The Vice President's House ranged over a variety of subjects. By the end of it, I had gained a new insight into the nation's Second Lady—and a new appreciation of her warmth, her articulateness, her sensitivity.

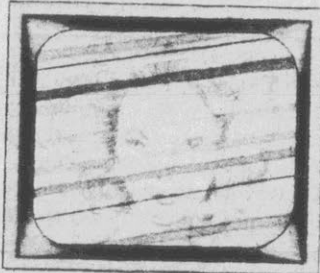

Listen in:

"When things are sometimes too hard to accept, you have to just put your head down and hang in there and keep on going. But I'm basically in good health now. I was able to play a pretty mean game of golf with Nelson recently. But I don't want to give the wrong impression to other women. It takes time to build up those muscles again. Swimming is the best exercise for rebuilding muscles and relieving tension. . . ."

Recalling a conversation with the Shah of Iran, Mrs. Rockefeller told how they had talked about life and its purpose. "The Shah used the word God. I was hesitant to do so, so I used the phrase 'Grand Design.' I feel there is a design, or a sense of order, in all life: in the stars, in the flight of geese flying in formation, in a colony of ants, in the miraculous ability of the cells of our body to regenerate themselves. It's not just the mind, body and brain; there is a sense of order in all life. I Feed your plants for up to 6 months in 12 seconds.

New ORTHO® Timed Release Plant Food formulas make feeding and growing healthy plants easier than ever. You just spoon on the clean, odorless granules and mix into the soil.

It takes only seconds to start plants on a steady, uniform diet that lasts from three to six months, depending on plant variety.

Each granule of these scientifically formulated fertilizers provides the balanced combination of nutrients needed by specific plants. The slow release of these nutrients lets you feed whatever you grow indoors or outdoors, from seedlings to mature plants, without the danger of overfeeding or burning.

Look for the family of ORTHO Timed Release Plant Foods at your Ortho dealers: African Violet Food 6-9-5, feeds 4 to 6 months; Pot and Planter Food 5-10-5, feeds 4 to 6 months; General Purpose Plant Food 12-6-6, feeds 3 to 4 months; Tomato and Vegetable Food 10-20-5, feeds 3 to 4 months.

You'll know they're better because they're from Ortho.

What kind of disciplinarian is Mr. Rockefeller?

"When he speaks to them, he means it, and he's effective because he has a presence. But he doesn't nag. Nelson Jr. remarked recently that his father has spanked him only three times."

Do you spank the boys?

"Yes, when I want to make a point and they won't listen any other way. I don't give them a whalloping, but rather than indulging in emotional pressure, I just cuff them like a grizzly bear mother. The last time I gave them a swat, they were horsing around in bed and wouldn't go to sleep."

What about TV—do you impose any restrictions?

"I've never been one to deny TV because it has never been an issue with us. Nelson Jr. and Mark have too many other interests. But under normal circumstances, I don't believe in forbidding or censoring TV programs because children will learn about them anyway. The attitude of the parent will subconsciously let the child know what one approves or disapproves of, and this helps them shape their perceptions.

Children have such a fascinating variety of experiences today. The narrowness of the sheltered life I led was a little boring." (Mrs. Rockefeller, the daughter of a millionaire, grew up in Bryn Mawr, on Philadelphia's Main Line, and was educated at the exclusive Shipley finishing school there.)

Are your boys good students?

"Mark is an excellent student, and young Nelson is working on it. They are both bright. Nelson is more easily distracted from the classroom by thoughts of the outdoors, but he is learning more and more to concentrate."

"I'm proud to be the wife of the Vice President . . . but I'm not going out to make speeches unless I decide to run for office."

Do they get an allowance?

"Yes—Mark gets $1.25 and Nelson, 75 cents a week, and they must account for this to their father. He has them keep records so they will learn the value of money as well as how to use it wisely."

Mr. Rockefeller used to get 50 cents a week when he was a boy. Doesn't he realize how much the

Sports Mini-Profile

Shortstop DAVE CONCEPCION:

How the Reds Got the "Best Bargain in Baseball"

As a rookie in the Reds' training camp in 1970, Dave Concepcion was so frail that the muscular Pete Rose told him, "Kid, you'll never pull a muscle. You ain't got any!" But when Concepcion took to the field, his fluid motion and accurate arm more than made up for his shortcomings. Manager Sparky Anderson was impressed. "Put on 20 pounds," he told Concepcion, "and we'll make a hitter out of you, too." Dave did put on the 20 pounds, and baseball fans know the results. Not only has Concepcion twice won the Golden Glove Award for fielding, but he batted over .300 in the 1970 and 1972 World Series, batted .455 in the home stretch of last year's pennant race and became one of the Redlegs' many dangerous base runners (41 steals in 1974, 33 in 1975; and Sparky Anderson predicts he can steal 60 this year). . . . Concepcion's salary is close to six figures now, but he was once the best bargain in baseball. A Reds' scout spotted him in Venezuela and gave him a contract. But, instead of a bonus, the scout gave Dave a baseball glove and a pair of spikes—then deducted the cost ($44) from his first paycheck. . . . Dave's father, a truck driver, wanted Dave to have a profession—preferably banking, but if not, law or medicine. Dave did work in a bank for awhile, but his heart wasn't in it. . . . In the off-season, Concepcion works with the young players in his native Venezuela and devotes much of his time to the little leagues there. "I never had the luck to be around a big-leaguer when I was a boy, and I want to give today's Venezuelan kids what I didn't have," he says. "I want to see more Venezuelans come up here and make good in professional baseball. It's worth my time and money to work for that."

—By Barry Abramson

cost of living has gone up?

[With a laugh] "This is being brought to his attention. Of course, I give them money for movies and special things. Their allowance is more a matter of learning to keep records."

In this age of sexual permissiveness, who should handle the child's sex education?

"It's mothers and daughters, fathers and sons. Whatever questions the boys ask me, I try to answer maturely, but essentially the males will emulate the father, and the females the mother."

As they grow older, do you think your sons will do things like experiment with dope?

"I hope they will be sufficiently prepared and secure enough not to have to resort to that. Once, Nelson Jr. and his dad were watching a "Kojak" TV show about a drug addict. When it was over, Nelson Jr. said, 'Dad, I give you my word, I'm never going to touch that stuff.'"

What did you mean when you said you are concerned by some of the modern trends in child-rearing?

"Things are made too easy today in this push-button world we live in. I think children need more challenges—all of us do. I also think it is very important that children grow up within the framework of a family structure, with love."

What old-fashioned values could we hark back to?

[With another laugh] "Honor thy father and thy mother, for one day you may be a parent, too."

Is Happy Rockefeller "disinterested" in backroom politics, as she's appeared to be all these years?

"Not true," she said, smiling. "I've always been intrigued by the intricacies of behind-the-scenes politics—it's the charade up front that gets boring."

Would she campaign on the off-chance that Mr. Rockefeller should run again for high public office?

"I'm very proud to be the wife of the Vice President and to play a supportive role," she said. "But I'm not the kind of woman who is going out to make speeches unless I decide to run for office myself."

Jobmanship

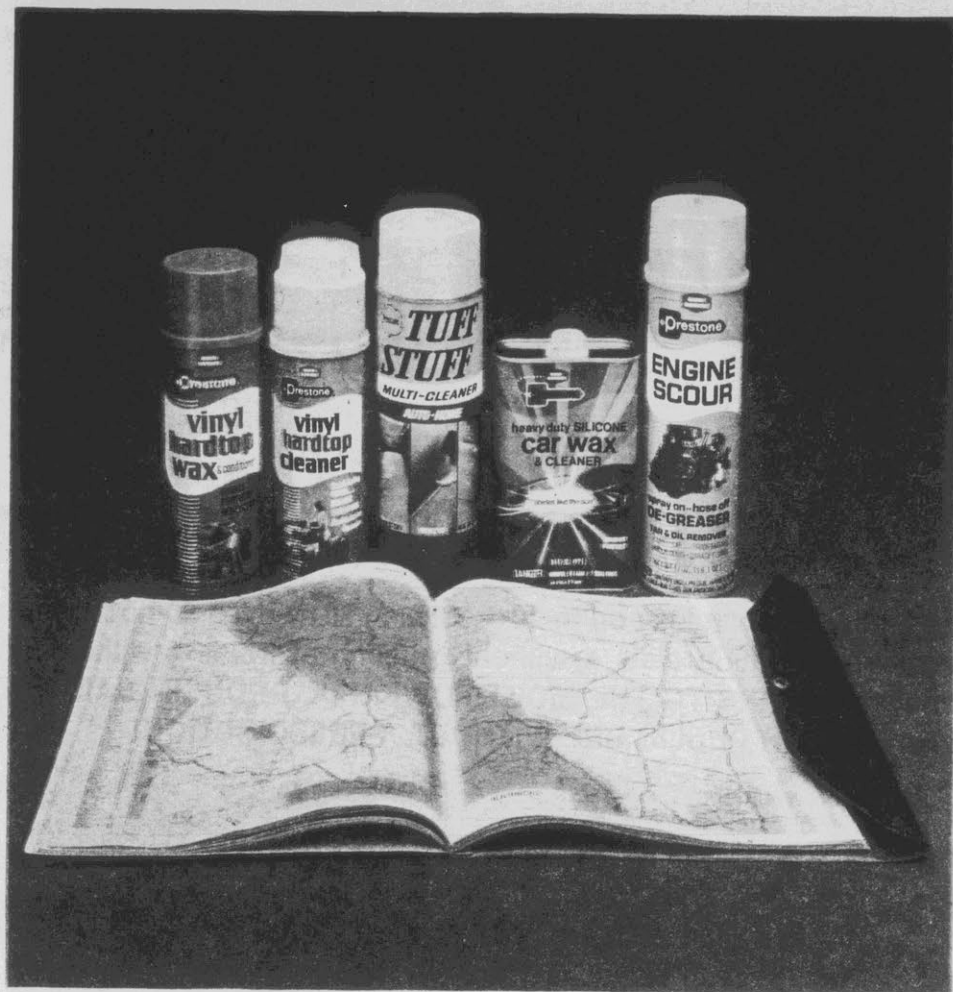

Are You Being Loyal To a Dead-end Job?

Job ruts can be comfortable and practical. They can also be dangerous. In evaluating your position, ask yourself if you're in any of these hazardous job ruts: 1) Are you working hard for a notoriously low-paying employer? If you stay long enough, your salary will be out of synchronization with your achievements and responsibilities. You will then have a hard time convincing future employers that you really are competent. The feeling will be, "If you're so good, why were you willing to take such low pay for so long?" 2) Are you being channeled into a tiny specialty which has little use outside your present company? You can be the best butter churn designer in the world, but if your employer stops making churns or refuses to pay you reasonably, where will you find another position? Butter churns may seem far out, still the peril exists for any narrow specialty. 3) Are you a good salesperson who manages to make a living with a so-so item? You could latch on to a more attractive commodity from which you can get better results with less anxiety. 4) Are you letting inertia overwhelm you? Perhaps the people you work for are an unimaginative, just-get-by group that's going nowhere. It's possible they'll change as you've been hoping and you'll get that chance. More likely they'll stay as they are and you'll be stuck. While too much job hopping may weaken your employment record, loyalty to a dead end is not sensible either.

DOCTOR'S THRILLING REDUCING PROGRAM HELPS BURN AWAY FAT BY THE HOUR

...TURN IT INTO FLUID THAT YOUR BODY FLUSHES AWAY!

Yes, now you can lose up to 10 . . . 20 . . . 30 — even 50 pounds or more • without starvation diets • without grueling exercise • without ravenous hunger THANKS TO THE MOST POWERFUL REDUCING AID EVER RELEASED FOR PUBLIC USE WITHOUT A PRESCRIPTION!

SHRINK YOUR BODY'S FAT CELLS . . .
TRIM AWAY POUNDS AND INCHES!

First came the ALL DAY cold tablet. Then the ALL DAY allergy pill. Now, from medical science comes the latest GIANT-STEP in the conquest of fat . . . this incredible ALL-DAY time-release capsule and fat-melting program, developed by a medical doctor . . . and guaranteed to work like nothing else you've ever heard about, read about, or tried before in your life. Because when in your life did you ever dream of a weight-loss method so effective, that without starvation diet, without grueling exercise, without gnawing hunger you can transform your body into the sleek, streamlined figure you've always longed for . . . even if at this very moment you are as much as 50, 60, or even 100 pounds overweight!

CONTINUOUS ROUND-THE-CLOCK ACTION ATTACKS THE BASIC CAUSE OF FAT
BUILD-UP DAY AND NIGHT

Unlike every other weight-loss method that has failed you in the past, the COUNTDOWN once-a-day capsule and reducing program works in a completely different way. Not by pitting your will-power against some "inhuman crash diet". Not by wracking your body with torturous exercise. And most certainly not by the use of high-powered "speed" drugs that leave your nerves shattered and shot.

Doctor's New All-Day Triple-Action
FAT-MELTER PROGRAM Works All Day To:

1. Transform fat into fluid and flush it right out of your system.
2. Attack the basic cause of overweight — overeating — and convert the food you do eat into burned up energy instead of into fat.
3. Break down those bulges of flab as you lose weight from your entire body . . . that up to now seemed impossible to budge . . . and force them to be consumed — oxidized — by your own body chemistry — without ravenous hunger — thanks to this thrilling new ALL DAY TIME-RELEASE FAT-FIGHTER PROGRAM.

COUNTDOWN with Mira-thene-12

Before starting this program, consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is obesity. Individuals with high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, or thyroid disease should use only as directed by a physician. As a matter of fact, we urge you to show this entire program to your own family physician and see if he doesn't agree that this is a medically sound approach to the problem of obesity.

Instead, this NEW TOTAL APPROACH TO TOTAL SLIMNESS actually helps shrink the fat cells in your body ALL 24 HOURS A DAY . . . even while you sleep. Yes, literally burns and oxidizes those bulging pockets of flab as you lose weight — all over your body — as it melts down into liquid that your body flushes away daily, in a completely natural, gentle manner.

And it's all so easy with this wondrous ALL-DAY CAPSULE that helps set the stage for the fat-burning process to be triggered into action.

A DOCTOR EXPLAINS . . .

No matter how many fad and crash diets you've run through in the past . . . there is only one effective weight-loss method known to medical science. It is simply this: in order to burn off fat there are 2 things you must do.

1. You must decelerate the rate of calorie intake.
2. You must step up your body's rate of fat burn-off just like you step up a furnace, so that you actually convert the food you do eat into burned-up energy instead of into piled-up fat.

And this is precisely why COUNTDOWN is so effective. Because the moment you launch yourself on this doctor's "Lifetime Slimness" program, here's what happens in your body:

1. Gnawing hunger pangs disappear as tiny grains of the most powerful reducing aid ever released for public use without a prescription are gradually released into your system to constantly calm your appetite and help you decelerate your body's caloric intake.
2. The food you do eat on this doctor's fully satisfying eating program instead of being stored up as fat, is now converted into a source of energy that your body burns away.
3. And even though you may lose as much as 20, 30, 50 pounds OR MORE . . . you never miss a meal . . . never deny yourself sensible snacks and desserts . . . never for a single moment starve yourself the very least bit.

NOW! ALL THE ECSTASY OF SLIMNESS WITHOUT THE AGONY OF HUNGER!

That's because with the COUNTDOWN no-hunger way to slimness, you arm yourself with the most modern and effective way to weight control known to medical science. This medical doctor's all-out assault and VICTORY OVER FAT BUILD-UP . . . due to excess calorie intake and lack of fast calorie burn-off (the basic cause of overweight). The COUNTDOWN once-a-day, continuous action, time-release capsule and program works all the time . . . all day . . . Transforms your body fat into "flush-away liquids" . . . it is by far the easiest, most pleasant way to achieve that slim, trim body of your dreams.

WORKS SO FAST YOU START TO GROW SLIM IN JUST DAYS — IN FACT, EVEN WHILE YOU SLEEP!

Best of all, not once are you asked to pit your hunger against a cast-iron willpower. All you are asked to do is simply this: Take one of these new ALL-DAY time-release capsules each morning . . . then following the doctor's satisfying eating program and his simple nightly bedtime toneups (that are actually fun to do), you literally eat your way to slimness as you shed pounds and inches like never before.

Naturally, you can't expect to gorge and stuff yourself silly on all sorts of over-rich, high-fat foods . . . and in unlimited quantities. BUT — and this is the whole key to success — if you will simply replace all those zany, half-baked fad diets of the past with this high-powered ALL-DAY capsule and this doctor's sane, satisfying eating program . . . YOU without gnawing hunger . . . YOU without grueling exercise can lose up to 10 — 20 — 30 — even 50 pounds OR MORE thanks to the latest, most effective doctor-developed ONCE-A-DAY reducing program in AMERICA . . . COUNTDOWN with Mira-thene-12.

SEE DRAMATIC RESULTS IN JUST 72 HOURS . . . OR IT COSTS YOU NOTHING!

JUST ONE CAPSULE A DAY HELPS YOU DISSOLVE FAT AWAY as this doctor's 3-way action program

- breaks down bulging pockets of fat while it burns away fatty tissues from your entire body
- shrinks your body's fat cells
- turns fat into liquid that your body drains away

Yes, you step up fat burn-off as you decelerate calorie intake . . . meaning pounds and inches melt away starting in just days!

So effective you'll lose up to 6 pounds of fat and fluid the very first 72 hours!

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Stress: Keeping This Side Of the Breaking Point

True or False? If you dream in vivid colors, the odds are that much of the anxiety you feel in social and work situations is unjustified. (See number 2.)

TRUE OR FALSE

1. If the pace of modern living is getting you down, the best way to keep from going off your rocker is to get as far away from other people as possible.
2. If you dream in vivid colors, the odds are that much of the anxiety you feel in social and work situations is unjustified.
3. If the stresses and strains of everyday living are beginning to burden you, you should put off whatever you feel you should be doing and just take it easy.
4. When you're so filled with free-floating anxiety that your nerves jump at the slightest sound, don't let it throw you—just slip on your brightest red or yellow clothes and go out and face the world.
5. If your nerves feel continually frazzled and frayed by the everyday situations, the odds are that you sleep without relaxing and don't take it easy even when you're resting.

ANSWERS

1. False. Getting away from people isn't the answer—and may create more emotional problems than it solves. Psychological studies show that people under pressure especially need to cultivate meaningful relationships with others and the mutual understanding and interchange of problems and ideas which go hand in hand with them. As university studies have shown, what psychologists call interpersonal isolation (cutting oneself off from people) is likely to increase emotional agitation and "be detrimental to psychological well-being."
2. True—if you're a man, not so if you're a woman, as evidenced by psychological studies at the University of Hawaii, which showed that: "High anxiety males and low anxiety females tend to dream in more vivid colors." So if you're a man whose dreams have this characteristic, you can do much to increase your peace of mind by simply realizing that many of the "mountains" you tend to worry and fret about are actually molehills.
3. False. There's a good chance that putting things off is at the root of your problem. Studies show it to be a chief cause of the feelings of anxiety and hopeless oppression that make a person feel like "climbing the walls." As behavior specialist Dr. William J. Knaus observes in reporting his study on the subject, the procrastinator's hope that somehow the avoided task will "get done," is usually accompanied by feelings of nagging guilt, self-denigration and, ultimately, feelings of hopelessness. "As the work load builds up, he tends to 'catastrophize' about his situation and to become increasingly more anxious and overwhelmed. He may view himself as a helpless victim, doomed to failure, for whom the requirements of living are too tough and unfair."

4. False. In psychological studies at the University of Southern Mississippi, subjects were exposed to various colors (red, yellow, green, blue) while tested on scales designed to show the degree of anxiety present. Results: the red and yellow colors produced "significantly higher anxiety-state scores than blue or green." These findings suggest that when you're feeling worried and apprehensive, you'll benefit by wearing "calmer" colors.

5. True—and this can easily assume the form of a neurosis. Such people, as one leading authority has observed, simply do not know how to take it easy; they do not know how to lie down, or to sit comfortably in an armchair, but twist about while they continue to keep their muscles tense. When they are in bed, motionless and idle, their mind still knows no rest, but continues to whirl at top speed, conjuring up new concerns, threats and fancies. A University of Pittsburgh study shows that such persons markedly benefited by being taught "to lie motionless, while tense muscles are concentrated on one at a time, until eventually they are all completely relaxed." It's also pointed out that the mind will stop whirling with vagrant thoughts and conjectures as soon as the speech and eye muscles are finally relaxed "since tension in these muscles is necessary for thought and imagery."

At Home Extra

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Last month you learned how to decorate with plants. Now here's advice on the care and feeding of plants and tips on "recoverable cost" remodeling.

The Indoor Gardener

Humidity and Light—Some Tips for Plant Growers

Before you choose from the profusion of available indoor greenery, first determine where the plant will go. Then consider what the conditions are in that spot. If you are depending on natural light instead of artificial light, you'll need to know in what direction your house faces. Then select plants which do well in that type of sun exposure.

A key to whether your plants thrive or wither is the amount of humidity in your home. Since central heating and air-conditioning deplete humidity, you might buy a portable humidifier designed to sit on the floor. (To avoid water damage from fallout spray, it's wise to place a piece of carpet just in front of the unit.) A do-it-yourself humidifier works almost as well as it did for Grandma—just place a pan of water on a radiator. Notice how quickly the water evaporates.

Homemade Sunshine

Growing plants under artificial light has sprouted a greener thumb for most who've tried it. Fluorescent light works best for the majority of plant arrangements. It's cooler, more even and uses less electricity than incandescent light. A table lamp does give sufficient light to foster growth of foliage plants such as philodendron, English ivy or pothos if the lamp is kept lighted four to five hours a day.

For larger displays or a length of hanging baskets, where natural light is deficient, the newly improved agricultural or "growth" lights provide in a single tube the right amount of lighting needed for plant vitality. Duro-Lite's "Vita-Lite" is one available type. If incandescent is preferred, Duro-Lite also makes a special balanced light in 60-, 75- and 150-watt intensities, with a built-in reflector. It can be plugged into your current fixture or mounted on a track. (The average plant collection needs 16 to 18 hours of light per day. An automatic timer is often used to keep the system running smoothly.) When gardening under lights, it's smart to remember that since the light is constant, a daily water check is needed, as well as regular applications of fertilizer.

If, despite our advice, you still have "green-thumb jitters," you can call for a one-time plant consultation. In many cities across the country, for a small fee or a fee applied against a future purchase, a plant retailer will come to your home and advise you. Inquire at your local nursery or plant shop.

The Home Remodeler

How to Get Your Money Back From Home Improvements

Tip No. 1: If you expect to sell your house in the foreseeable future, make sure you can recover all or most of your remodeling costs. Generally, you can recapture 100 percent or more of your costs on added space (for instance, a new bedroom or bathroom), 75 percent to 100 percent if you modernize an existing room (such as a kitchen), and about 50 percent if you add luxuries, such as a patio or pool. There are exceptions: If you add a fourth bedroom, you're approaching the limit of what most people need. If you add a fifth bedroom, chances are you won't get all your money back on the sale. The cost of a second bathroom is usually recoverable, but a third is doubtful, and a fourth, probably not. The addition of special hobby rooms

(such as a potting shed, photo lab or greenhouse) will bring little return unless you can sell your house to someone who shares the same hobby.

Tip No. 2: Don't hesitate to improve insulation with thermal windows and doors or by adding wall insulation when you re-side your house. It will quickly pay for itself in fuel savings. If you sell, you can show prospective buyers your before-and-after fuel bills, along with proof of the improvements.

Tip No. 3: Don't upgrade your house far beyond the level of your neighborhood. If you have a $50,000 home in a neighborhood of $70,000 homes, you'll probably recover a $20,000 remodeling investment if you should sell. But a $20,000 investment in a $70,000 home located in a neighborhood of $50,000 homes would be hard to recover.

These tips are from the National Remodelers Association.

EACH BELL TRIMMED IN 22 CARAT GOLD, HALLMARKED AND SERIALLY NUMBERED AND COMES WITH CERTIFICATE

Here's one of the most exciting offers we've ever made . . . the very first in a series of beautiful genuine porcelain bells to be issued by American Treasury! It's the very first masterwork in Copenhagen Blue Bells honoring Currier & Ives.

The entire lifelike surface of this lovely bell depicts the Currier & Ives original of "Homestead in Winter". Each limited edition bell is trimmed in 22 carat gold . . . and bears the American Treasury Hallmark number on its inner surface! The handle has a 22 carat "gold band", our exclusive design. Each issue in this rare series will illustrate a different Currier & Ives classic!

This valuable limited edition "collector's choice" bell is 5½ inches high, can be displayed to beautify your home on table, glass case, etagere or bookshelf.

Buy-Back Guarantee for 5 Years!

You know your Limited Edition Currier & Ives Bell can't go down in value, for we put in writing that we will buy it back anytime within the next 5 years, and you will receive a certificate guaranteeing this with your bell!

A Truly Limited Edition — Act Now!

Hurry — your order must be received by July 4, 1976. All orders received after that date will be returned, since only enough bells to satisfy the orders received before the cut-off date will be manufactured.

Your order qualifies you to collect other bells in the series as they are offered. Your order is for this bell only — you will not receive any others unless you specifically order them. There is a good reason for this — Your bell is not finished, hallmarked and numbered until your order and payment are received! It is literally made to order for you!

Hurry . . . order yours right now for the unheard-of low price of $9.95 plus $1 postage, insurance and handling!

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen borrows from the past. Says Marilyn: "One taste of Salmagundy Salad, and I knew you would love it!"

A Huge, Cool Salad—From Our Long-Ago!

Canteen Corporation

SALMAGUNDY

- 3 heads salad greens (Boston lettuce, romaine, endive)
- 1 bunch watercress
- 1 lb. smoked, fully cooked ham, sliced thin and cut in 2-inch wide strips
- 1 lb. chicken or turkey, sliced thin and cut in 2-inch wide strips
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- 16 sweet gherkin pickles
- 24 black ripe olives
- 4 small celery hearts, quartered
- 3 (4 oz.-size) sardines in oil, drained
- 2 cans (2 ozs.) anchovy fillets
- 1 can (4 ozs.) sliced mushrooms, drained

1. Arrange the greens and watercress (piling them high in center) on 8 large, individual salad plates or on one large platter.
2. Roll ham and chicken strips and place over greens. Garnish with hard-cooked egg slices, gherkins, black olives, celery hearts, sardines and mushrooms, and serve 18th-Century Dressing on the side. (Dressing should be stirred thoroughly before pouring.) Makes 8 servings

18th-CENTURY DRESSING

- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon celery seed
- ¼ cup honey
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon grated onion
- ½ cup tarragon vinegar
- 1 cup vegetable oil

1. Mix dry ingredients together.
2. Add honey, lemon juice, onion and vinegar.
3. Pour oil into mixture slowly, stirring constantly. Makes about 1½ cups

CYDER SHRUB

- ½ cup chopped apples
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 qt. apple cider, chilled
- ¾ pint lemon or orange sherbet
- 8 mint sprigs

1. Mix chopped apples with lemon juice. Divide mixture into 8 (6-oz. size) glasses.
2. Pour 4 ozs. cider in each glass. Place a scoop of sherbet in each glass. Garnish with a sprig of mint. Makes 8 servings

Cigarette Market Bombshell.

New 'Enriched Flavor' discovery for 9 mg. tar MERIT achieves taste of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

"Low tar, good taste."

Others have made the claim. Philip Morris just made the cigarette.

MERIT. Only 9 mg. tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

Yet MERIT delivers extraordinary flavor. Flavor normally found only in higher tar cigarettes.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

'Enriched Flavor' Boosts Taste—Not Tar

After twelve years of intensive research, Philip Morris scientists isolated certain key ingredients in smoke that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

The discovery's called 'Enriched Flavor.' It's extra flavor. Natural flavor. Flavor that can't burn out, can't fade out, can't do anything but come through for you.

We packed 'Enriched Flavor' into MERIT and began a series of taste tests.

The results were startling.

Smokers Report MERIT Delivers More Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

The results were conclusive:

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar than MERIT, a significant majority of all smokers reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough.

MERIT. Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar.

PAUL NEWMAN
Advantages of being Paul

His outspoken political views landed superstar Paul Newman on Nixon's now famous Enemies List, but he doesn't foresee a career in politics. Newman told FAMILY WEEKLY: "I've been asked to run for political office on numerous occasions, but I don't think I have the patience for it. Anyway, my platforms would be too outrageous. I'd never get elected. Why should I compromise myself and my family by becoming a politician when as an actor I can make all my political views known and have just as large an audience? I'm better off as an operational cynic." But what about the compromises any famous person has to make? "Being famous means you're not anonymous any more. Nobody realizes or can come to respect and love anonymity

THE MAN WHO COULDN'T SLEEP INDOORS
A rare phobia prevents this man from sleeping with a roof over his head.

For many years, Tony Anthony was an incurable insomniac. "I would toss and turn all night long. I tried pills, keeping the windows open, hot milk, you name it. I was a wreck and so was my wife. My doctor suggested that I try sleeping in a different environment as a last resort, perhaps outdoors. Well, I've been doing that with my German Shepherd, Jack, for two years now, and I've been sleeping like a baby every night." Anthony's doctor told him that he suffered from a rare form of claustrophobia—some people just can't stand a roof over their heads. How does Mrs. Anthony feel about this arrangement? "I have no objections. My only concern is to make Tony happy, no matter what strange actions that necessitates."

until they've lost it. No, I don't like standing in the middle of a big crowd of giggling and hysterical fans—I'm not a very public person. But I'm a realistic one. There are advantages in being a popular and successful actor. It's nice to live comfortably and travel when you feel like it and make sure that your children go to schools where you want them to go. And of course, there's my 911S Porsche, for which I have great affection," Newman said with a big grin. To what does he attribute his many years of popularity on- and off-screen? "People like me for three reasons—for my acting, the left-of-center stands I take on a great many political issues, but for the most part, people like me for a very superficial reason—because my eyes are a God-given blue. Those are the people I don't like very much."

Adolescent pregnancy, a crisis and its hazards: The proportion of adolescent mothers increased from 12 percent of all mothers in 1950 to 20 percent in 1973, even while the birth rate was plummeting. Pregnancy is the single greatest cause of school dropouts among young women. Nine percent of adolescent mothers attempt suicide—seven times the national rate for adolescents who have no children. Aside from the social and economic consequences of a teenage pregnancy, consider these alarming health hazards, as reported by Dr. Theodore Cooper of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare: "A baby born to a teenager is more than twice as likely to be born underweight than a baby born to a woman over 19. Babies who are underweight are less likely to survive, and they are more likely to have birth defects. A baby born to a mother age 14 or younger has four times the chance of being born with a problem in the brain or nervous system when compared with infants born to older women. When a second pregnancy occurs before the mother reaches the age of 20, these ill effects are multiplied." ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

RIDING HIGH

What triumph when a little tyke
First learns to ride upon a trike.
Great as this is, a greater thrill
Is when he gains bike-riding skill
And goes from three wheels down to two.
There's much applause and much ado.
Next comes the motorbike that roars
And shakes the windows and the doors,
And after that, of course, the car—
Two wheels to four, and four is par.
From three to two to four he goes,
And I would say his age one knows
By years but also (this appeals)
How fast he goes, how many wheels.

My 5-year-old and I were talking, and he suddenly said, "When I have a baby it's going to look just like me, a little boy." He became silent for a while, then said thoughtfully, "It's got to look like me, or somebody will think I stole it!"

Gemfire

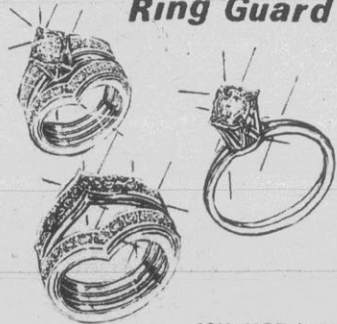

The Unique Simulated Diamond That Improves On Nature

Have you always wanted a big, beautiful sparkler for your finger, but thought it would be too expensive? Then you want the amazing GEMFIRE—SIMULATED DIAMOND OF THE FIRST WATER.

Just as genuine diamonds, GEMFIRES are created under thousands of degrees of heat. However, in nature, the brilliance of the stone is sometimes dulled by defective crystal lattice. But every GEMFIRE is perfect—without cracks, bubbles or specks to mar its fiery beauty. For GEMFIRES are created in the laboratory under controlled conditions. They are cut and cleaved by master gem cutters and polished with diamond dust to a sparkling brilliance—just as genuine diamonds. In fact, GEMFIRES are so radiant you will be able to make your friends think you are wearing a genuine diamond if you want to—unless they carry around a powerful magnifier— or happen to be diamond experts!

Compare Gemfire Simulations With Diamonds

Crown Galleries Offer Glamorous Bargains-by-Mail

We specialize in extra-ordinary values. Check our prices. They are unbeatable - - anywhere. Our Gemfire collection is one of the best values in simulated diamonds - - and one of the most beautiful. All have 58 facets to provide diamond-like brilliance and beauty. Some of the stones in our fashion rings are simulated - - some are not. When we can offer a genuine stone that is beautiful yet relatively inexpensive - - such as the Tigers Eye we do it. Diamonds, rubies, etc. are very expensive, so we use simulations. BUT EVERY RING SHOWN HERE THAT HAS A SIMULATED STONE IS A TOP QUALITY SIMULATION - - NOT CHEAP PLASTIC OR PASTE. All are handsomely-crafted in elegant mountings that you will be proud to own and give to others. YOU CAN'T LOSE. Glossary Of Terms

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE) - - this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designation "gold electroplate".

STERLING SILVER (SS) - - the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

CARAT (CT) - - a measure of weight for a diamond - however, Gemfires are given approximate carat values based on size (not weight). In other words, a 1 carat Gemfire is approximately the same size as a 1 carat diamond.

GOLD FILLED (GF) - - a lamination of base metal placed between sheets of gold.

MOUNTING - - MTG.

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

Our Story: WHEN PRINCE VALIANT'S EYES GET ACCUSTOMED TO THE GLOOM OF THE CAVE, HE NOTICES THE NICHES CARVED IN THE WALL, AND DIGS OUT SOME OF THE DIRT-ENCRUSTED CONTENTS.

"HERE, ZILLA, EXAMINE THIS. WE HAVE EITHER FOUND THE TREASURE VAULT OR A STINKING BAT ROOST!"

THE PIECE IS ENCRUSTED WITH BLACK MUD, BUT ZILLA GOES TO WORK WITH HIS KNIFE SCRAPING, SCRAPING, UNTIL AT LAST COMES THE DULL GLEAM OF GOLD!

"SO YOU HAVE FOUND THE TREASURE!" THEY LOOK UP, STARTLED. IT IS THE OLD WATCHER-ON-THE-HILL. "SHERIF KARMISH HAS GROWN SUSPICIOUS OF YOU AND HAS SENT ME AS A SPY. HE IS NO LONGER SATISFIED WITH THE TRINKETS I PLACED TO KEEP HIM BUSY.

"ONLY THIS MORNING HE FLEW INTO A RAGE: 'IF THAT FOREIGN KNIGHT AND HIS FRIEND FIND IT BEFORE YOU DO, I WILL HAND YOU OVER TO MY TORTURER! NOW GO AND SPY ON THEM!'"

IN THE DARK OF NIGHT THE CREW COMES TO THE CAVE TO DIG OUT THE TREASURE. THERE IS NO GLEAM OF GOLD OR SPARKLE OF JEWELS, JUST TARNISHED LUMPS ENCRUSTED WITH MUD.

The PHANTOM

By Lee Falk

17TH CENTURY PHANTOM TALE ...

SORRY, YOUR MAJESTY ...

NOT AT ALL ...

IS THIS ... DIFFICULT?

"PLAYED CHESS TOGETHER ..."

SNEAKY!

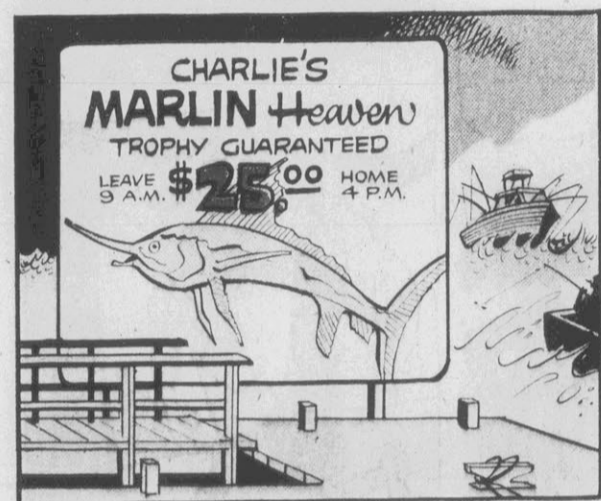

I THINK HE DID IT!

by Chester Gould

HE NEVER RECOGNIZED ME. HE FIGURED I WAS JUST ANOTHER DAME ON THE MAKE.

WHAT A FIND! WAIT TILL I CALL TRACY.

PONYTAIL BY LEE HOLLEY

ME TOO!

HMM! THIS IS GOOD PIZZA!
YEAH... I COULD EAT A DOZEN OF THESE!

YOU KNOW SOMETHING...

IT'S GOING TO BE AWFUL TO BECOME AN ADULT!
HOW COME?

WHAT?!!

NOT ME! I'LL ALWAYS LIKE THIS KIND OF FOOD!
I DOUBT IT... AS YOU GROW OLDER YOUR SYSTEM CAN'T TAKE IT!

HEY! THAT'S A SCARY THOUGHT!

COME ON!
WHERE ARE WE GOING?

LET'S NOT WASTE ANY TIME!

HÄGAR The Horrible

BY DIK BROWNE

MY SON, IN CHOOSING A MATE THERE ARE THREE THINGS YOU SHOULD LOOK FOR...

FIRST - STRENGTH - THAT'S THE MOST IMPORTANT THING! BIG FAT MUSCLES!!

I DIDN'T TELL YOU HOW TO PICK THE REST OF THE CREW!
