

Adopt County Schools Budget

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education adopted a $17 million proposed budget in a special meeting Monday night. Contained in the proposed budget is a current expense budget totaling $7,162,984.35, a capital outlay budget totaling $2,574,149.69 and state public school funds totaling $7,579,383.80.

Salary supplements for elementary and high school teachers totaling $446,277.32 was one of the major supplemental items included in the proposed supplemental budget. Salaries for new positions including a media specialist and a cultural arts coordinator were also major points included in the proposed supplemental budget. Included in the capital outlay budget are the following:
-Water and Sewage System at Belvoir-Pactolus-Stokes Middle School totaling $7,000.
-Additional construction projects included in the Belvoir-Pactolus Stokes Middle School totaling $44,000.
-Furniture for the media area, dining room and classrooms at Farmville Middle School totaling $40,000.
-Furniture for the media area, dining room and classrooms at Belvoir-Pactolus-lunchroom and land totaling $220,000.

-ROTC Firing Ranges (3) totaling $100,000.
-Ayden Gyden Grammar School construction project totaling $1,325,000.
-Heating Plant Conversion totaling $15,000.
-W. H. Robinson construction project totaling $120,000.
Capital Outlay Part C
-Drainage and paving projects at 3 of the elementary schools using current expense funds totaling $106,000.
One deletion and one addition were made to the capital outlay budget. An indoor firing range to be built at North Pitt High School totaling $30,000 was deleted from the budget and an air conditioning project totaling $30,000 was to be added to the budget.
The firing range was deleted from the budget because the board has not determined yet whether the firing range is a mandatory part of the ROTC program. Supt. Ott Alford had requested information from the district office of the ROTC concerning whether the firing range was a mandatory part of

REDISTRICTING RECOMMENDATION . . . proposed by the administrative staff of the Greenville City Schools is shown on the school district map above. The recommendation will be considered by school board member at the regular monthly meeting on Monday, May 17. Action on the redistricting plans is scheduled to be taken at that meeting. If action is not completed at that time, a special call meeting will set for Thursday, May 20, for the sole purpose of reaching a final decision. Supt. of City Schools Glenn Cox said plans are to send out individual assignment letters before the end of May, if at all possible.

Assembly Adding More Issues

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative session originally called solely to discuss the 1976-77 North Carolina budget is becoming a forum for action on several other issues.

After the House voted Monday to add an automobile liability insurance proposal to the agenda, Rep. Ruth E. Cook, DWake, said she would again ask the House to take up legislation aimed at strengthening day care center regulations.

And, the issue of medical malpractice insurance was admitted to the agenda last week, with one of three bills already enacted into law and debate continuing on the others.

Among budget actions by the General Assembly Monday was abandoning a bill to give state employees and Highway Patrol members additional pay raises in 1976-77 for experience. Also, brakes may be put on two highway projects speeded up at the request of Gov. Jim Holshouser.

The Automobile insurance proposal that the House agreed to consider was spurred by Rep. R.W. Beard, D-Cumberland. Beard and about 30 other agents were no longer able to write some types of auto insurance after companies they represented stopped doing business in North Carolina.

His legislation would help agents tie in with companies still operating in the state.

Because of House action on auto insurance, Rep. Cook renewed her attempt to get the day care issue admitted to the agenda. She had introduced her resolution to the House last week, but it was rejected.

The medical malpractice package moved closer to enactment as the House voted 104-1 Monday to tentatively approve a bill to create a North Carolina Health Care Excess Liability Fund. It would provide health care workers with malpractice insurance coverage for amounts in excess of $100,000 if they were covered for the first $100,000. The fund would cover claims up to $2 million.

Ratified into law Monday was a bill to allow Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill to insure itself. The two houses continued to work out differences in a bill which would shorten the time in which malpractice insurance suits may be filed, and make other changes in law relating to malpractice.

An attempt to increase pay raises for next fiscal year was defeated in the House Appropriations Committee. The action leaves all state employees with a 4 per cent plus $300 pay increase.

The House committee had once approved spending an additional $1.5 million to pay more to experienced troopers, but it was dropped at the request of the leadership. The smaller pay raise was worked out two weeks ago after a series of huddles by House and Senate leaders.

At the urging of Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, the House money committee agreed that Holshouser's stepped up construction schedule for two highways should be overruled. Huskins said that if N.C. 194 is upgraded and part of U.S. 321 near the governor's hometown of Boone is four-laned ahead of schedule, the state would lose $10.5 million.

Speeding up the projects would require bypassing public hearings and environmental impact statements.

GEORGIA DEAD

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Georgia Skelton, former wife of comedian Red Skelton, was found Monday dead from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, sheriff's deputies say. She was 54. The Skeltons were divorced in 1971 after 26 years of marriage.

Rountree Removes Self From Atty. Gen. Race

RALEIGH — Horton Rountree, eighth district General Assembly representative, removed himself from the state attorney general's race today and announced that he would seek re-election to the General Assembly.

Rountree, a leader in the Legislative fight for the ECU Medical School, said, he was "removing my name as a possible candidate as attorney general of the state."

"In analyzing my candidacy I find that the attorney general's office has a built-in organization with its own administration assistants and public relations experts."

"A candidate to overcome this advantage must have name identification and an organization. To do this it would take in the neighborhood of $150,000. Unless a person has statewide exposure by way of having held a state wide office, it is almost impossible to raise this amount of money.

"In withdrawing my name I wish to thank the many people throughout the state who contacted me and offered their support. I will be a candidate for reelection to the N. C. General Assembly."

Rountree has served in the Legislature for five terms and has been in Raleigh last week and this week for the special session of the Legislature dealing with the budget and other matters.

His name was mentioned as a possible attorney general candidate shortly after the session convened. Rountree at one time served on the attorney general's staff.

The possibility of Rountree's seeking the state office set off a flurry of speculation locally about potential candidates for the House seat.

NOTICE NOT HONORED

I would like to know if there is a U.S. or N. C. labor law which obliges an employer to let an employee work out a reasonable notice. I gave a two weeks' notice out of courtesy to a local grocery chain and was prepared to do my best work during the remainder of my employment. They terminated me after only two days and paid me for only two days. Now my student husband and I are without income until my new job begins. It's wrong, I believe, when an employee is penalized for doing what he believes is right. L. S.

Almon Barbour, Publications Director for the N. C. Department of Labor, said there is no notice period required by N. C. law. The employee and the employer may abide by whatever the company policy is, he indicated.

Wilma G. Johnson, Compliance Officer in the Raleigh Federal Wage and Hour Office, said there is no federal law requiring notices on the part of either the employer or the employee, and therefore no way of governing whether an employer honors his employee's notice.

You say you are contacting our state legislators about the matter and are encouraging other people affected by or concerned about similar employment practices to do the same.

HIGHWAY MEETING . . . William S. Pollard, head of a consulting firm studying the major highway needs of eastern North Carolina, addresses a meeting designed to inform citizens of the study. The meeting was held in Greenville's City Council chambers last night. (Reflector Photo by James Kyle)

Highway Study Plans Reviewed

By JAMES KYLE
Reflector Staff Writer

Around 70 persons attended a preliminary meeting here last night on the proposed construction of a major highway between I-95 and U. S. 17 in eastern North Carolina.

The meeting was sponsored by the Department of Transportation to (DOT) introduce the firm of William S. Pollard Consultants, Inc., a Memphis, Tenn., company which will conduct a feasibility study for DOT to determine the best route for the new highway.

William H. Riggs, from the Raleigh office of DOT, said a contract had just been made between the state and the Pollard company and the study should take about six months to complete. Following completion of a first draft in October, which will be reviewed by DOT, another 60 days will be required before the final draft is issued, Riggs said.

The study will be centered on the best route for a major highway connecting —95 and U. S. 17 either on or somewhere between the present U.S. 64 and U.S. 264. Although it could be that one of the present routes will simply be widened, there is a possibility that the study may show a completely new route would be the best answer.

Much of the 90-minute meeting was conducted by William S. Pollard as he outlined the manner in which his company will conduct the study. He said the study will try to project traffic needs in the area 25 years from now. This is done mostly through socio-economic and demographic data which is used to project the distribution of population in 25 years.

"The goal (of the study) is to find the best, or two or three best" routes for the highway, Pollard said.

This is done, he said, by taking the traffic projection in 25 years and subtracting the traffic-handling ability of the present roads to determine the "traffic deficiency."

Then, by evaluating this deficiency along with cost, economic projections and other data, the alternatives can be determined. These alternatives, listed with their good and bad points, will be presented to the DOT, Pollard said.

It is the DOT which will make the final decision on the new highway.

About 15 citizens from cities along U.S. 264 made statements at the meeting to urge the consulting firm to consider the widening of U.S. 264 carefully. They represented the govern-

Grant $75,000 Bond in Slaying

WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) — Sandra Dupree—the white Scotland Neck woman charged in the March shooting death of a young black man—has been granted $75,000 bond, an action that has aroused the ire of area black leaders.

A demonstration at the state Supreme Court in Raleigh was planned for this afternoon to protest her release on bond today. The rally was organized by civil rights activist Golden Frinks.

Superior Court Judge George M. Fountain ruled Monday that Mrs. Dupree, who had been denied bail earlier, should be released because a psychiatrist's report said her health was in danger if she remained in jail.

Fountain also ordered that her trial be moved from Halifax County to Vance County. The case has attracted considerable attention in Halifax County where whites have demonstrated in support of Mrs. Dupree and blacks have charged that she received preferential treatment.

Mrs. Dupree, 34, is married to the Rev. Harvey Dupree, a Free Will Baptist Church minister. They have four children.

The two rulings came after Fountain conferred with attorneys from both sides in his chambers for about two hours late Monday afternoon. Frinks complained that Fountain acted beyond his authority because the state Supreme Court had earlier denied an appeal for bond in the Dupree case. He also said Fountain should have conducted the hearing in open court rather than in his chambers.

versed the bond decision and had Mrs. Dupree jailed.

Prosecuting attorneys asked Fountain Monday to delay a decision on bond until a judge is named in the trial, but he said that because of the psychiatrist's report, "I don't think we'd better delay it."

Because bail could not be arranged until today, Mrs. Dupree remained in jail Monday night.

Mrs. Dupree is charged in the March 11 shooting of Harry Lee Dickens, 21. He was murdered with a .22 caliber pistol in his front yard. Earlier that day, Mrs. Dupree had asked local police to take action against a man she said had been harassing her son as he delivered "Grit" newspapers on his route, according to testimony at earlier bond hearings. She told a police sergeant, that if the department couldn't take care of the problem, she would.

The Spring Fashion Scene
Soft and tubular sum up this spring's theme. The fabrics are easy, almost floating. Colors are clear—a lot of white that's spiked with brights.

The big skirt slims down to the easy tube, with wrap-and tie versions popular. In dresses the easy tube is a relaxed vertical column with ease and freedom. . . starkly simple or softened when drawn in at the waist. The dropped-torso shape, the slightly blouson knit, and the tank-topped T-shirt dress are also newsworthy.

The slim suit is strong in cotton gabardine and crisp poplin. The blazer shows up in linen-look fabrics. Some of the newest suits are opting for the short cropped jacket.

The tunic continues its takeover of pants and skirts. Another look this season is not short of is Bermuda shorts, sometimes translated into a Bermuda-shorted jacket.

Stripes stand out above all other prints and patterns. From pinstripes to bold awning stripes, to "no-repeat" stripes. Tucks and pleats are the details that are softening up the spring story. They're showing up on shirts and skirts for day and on the most romantic looks for evening.

The drawstring is everywhere—at the neck, the waist, and on the bottom of the new fatigues.

Spring '76 Road Show

Misses Harriet Tutterow and Judy Walker, Extension clothing specialists at North Carolina State University, will be conducting a clothing workshop Wednesday morning. They will be discussing the new spring fashions as well as sewing tips.

The workshop will be held at the American Legion Building on St. Andrews Street in Greenville from 9:30-11:30. Time will be allotted for questions. The public is invited. There is no charge.

Lectures On Computers

There will be a series of two lectures on computer systems technology offered as a community service at no charge. Students and the public are invited to attend. Beginning Thursday, 7-9:30 p.m. and continuing May 19, the location will be Room Number 55, in the Administration Building at Pitt Technical Institute.

The lectures will include topics concerning the architecture of computer systems that can control the following applications: business, power generation and distribution, inquiry-retrieval, factory automation, hospital automation, communications, scientific computation, laboratory automation, host processing and high speed telemetry systems. Essentially these computer systems will be those which are not listed to a certain job. Block diagramming will be presented on the concepts of computers to members of the profession and community that are interested in seeking information in the site layout, operation, maintenance, design and programming of computer systems.

The lectures will be conducted by William C. French, formerly a product engineer and presently a field service engineer in Greenville, with Modular Computer Systems Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Charge Driver In Car Collision

Police yesterday charged Cornelius Thomas of Route 1, Winterville with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9:08 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street.

Officers reported the Thomas car collided with a car driven by William Woolard Gaston of 1604 Beaumont Dr. causing an estimated $350 damage to the Gaston car and about $200 damage to the Thomas vehicle.

Margaret Moye Evans of Route 8, Greenville was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9:46 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Third and Greene Streets.

Investigators reported the Evans car collided with an auto operated by Gornzella Mitch Cobb of Greenville resulting in an estimated $150 damage to the Evans auto and $125 damage to the Cobb vehicle.

Pointing To Friday Film

"A giant step for mental health will take place Friday night," says Pitt County Mental Health Association President Carl Blackwood, "when a movie about Astronaut "Buzz" Aldrin's battle with mental depression is televised nationally.

"Return to Earth," based on the book by Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin, will be the Friday Night Movie on ABC-TV (Channel 12). It will begin at 9:30 p.m.

The film focuses on the personal experiences of Aldrin following his historic first moon landing — his serious bout with mental depression and the resulting strain on his personal and family life. "The film is filled with accurate messages about depression and about getting help for an emotional problem," Blackwood said. "It reminds us that anyone might, at some time in his or her life, need professional help. It is an open, honest account of how one of the U. S. astronauts, often seen as almost superhuman, needed help, sought it, and is not ashamed to talk about it."

Aldrin has served as National Mental Health chairman for the National Association for Mental Health and is currently a board member of this organization.

Additional State Pay Hike Hopes Went Glimmering

RALEIGH (AP)—Hopes of state highway patrolmen, state employees and school teachers for an additional pay raise went glimmering in the General Assembly Monday.

The House Appropriations Committee first voted approval of a $1.5 million appropriation for an additional pay hike to experienced highway patrolmen. It later changed its mind at the urging of the House leadership.

The House Finance Committee voted to reject a proposal by Wake County legislators to require corporations to pay their state income taxes on an accelerated schedule. The proposal would have brought a $120 million windfall to help raise salaries of state employees and school teachers.

The committee actions means that teachers and state employees will receive a pay hike of 4 per cent plus $300. This is far short of the 16 per cent the teachers had asked to catch up with advances in the cost of living since 1974 when they last received a general pay boost.

The highway patrolmen, who have retained former Gov. Bob Scott to lobby for them, appeared on their way to getting more money when Rep. Kitchin Josey, D-Halifax, the House majority leader, intervened.

After the House Appropriations Committee had approved an additional $1.5 million for extra patrol raises, Josey asked it to reconsider. It did and referred the matter to a subcommittee. Indications now are the question of patrol pay will be studied by a special committee which will report to the 1977 General Assembly.

When questioned about his action in calling for reconsideration of the patrol raise, Jo-sey said, "It appeared to me it was a rather substantial change in the whole pay structure. I felt we had bitten off more than we could chew."

Meanwhile, Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, had little success in an effort to provide additional pay raises to be financed by another windfall. Raises now in the budget will be financed through a $67 million windfall that will result from requiring large corporations to pay the state their employees' state income tax withholdings on a monthly instead of a quarterly basis.

Adams' bill would have required corporations to pay estimated income taxes periodically throughout the tax year. Under present law, they pay no income taxes until after the year is over when they file their income tax return. Even then, they can delay payment for an additional nine months if they are willing to pay 6 per cent interest on their tax bills.

Adams told the committee corporations should pay as they go, just as unincorporated businesses and individuals do.

The bill would have produced a windfall of $120 million through earlier payment of the taxes. The measure stipulated that $40 million would be spent immediately to give employes and teachers an additional raise. The other $80 million would be held in reserve against the possibility that the windfall might lead to trouble next year.

The committee killed Adams' bill after Reps. Glen Morris, D—McDowell and Larry Eagles, D—Edgecombe, said it would hurt the textile and tobacco industries.

Arrested 6 In Gambling Raid

Six Pitt County men were arrested Saturday night at a Rt. 2, Ayden residence and charged by Pitt deputies with gambling.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, deputies arrested Joseph C. Worthington of Rt. 2, Box 337, Ayden; William Dunn of 1006 W. Second Street, Ayden; David Sellers of Grifton; James Moore of Rt. 1, Box 515, Kinston; Kelly Butler of Rt. 1, Box 120, Grifton; and L. G. Parrish of Grifton on the gambling charges.

Sheriff Tyson said that the charges were leveled following a raid at the home of Edward Dunn at Rt. 2, Box 312, Ayden. Hearings were scheduled for May 27 in District Court, Ayden, the sheriff said, and all six men were released on $100 unsecured bonds.

HSA Meet Set Tonight

The regularly scheduled meeting of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will be held today in the Greenville Holiday Inn, beginning with a dinner for board members at 6:30 p.m.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m., the business session will include several topics, relating to the continued organization of the HSA for Area VI.

Board members will hear a report from the Site Committee on the availability of office space in Greenville, the chosen location for the permanent HSA offices.

One, two and three year terms for the board members will be determined on the basis of drawing lots, and the governing board will take action on the establishment of a project review committee.

In final business, the board will determine an appropriate time for the advertising of positions within the ECHSA.

Replacing Bridges

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Twenty-six unsafe bridges have been added to an original list of 17 marked for replacement by the state Department of Transportation.

The first contracts for the 26 probably won't be let for almost a year. It takes months to survey, buy right of way, and draw plans, says Henry Clegg, a highway official.

Some of those needing replacement are low-water bridges that become flooded during heavy rains. Two examples are the Long Creek bridge on N.C. 138 in Stanly County and the Richardson Creek bridge on State Road 1631 in Union County.

The biggest project among the 26 will be a $1 million bridge on N.C. 126 crossing Lake James spillway in McDowell County. Nearby, in Burke County, another N.C. 126 bridge, crossing Lake James Canal, will be replaced. The existing bridges are high, narrow, steel-truss spans.

Another of the longer steel-truss bridges to be replaced is 429-foot long Rocky River bridge on N.C. 205 in Union County.

Gaston County will get a new bridge crossing the Catawba River on secondary road 2302. It also will get one crossing the Southern Railway on secondary road 2209.

Iredell County will get new bridges over Hunting Creek and over the Southern Railway.

Retraining Course Set

A water safety instructor retraining course will be taught at Memorial Gym on the campus of East Carolina University, beginning Wednesday (May 12) from 4-6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt County Red Cross, said that the course will continue on Thursday from 4-6:30 p.m., on Friday from 4-6:30 p.m. and 7-10 p.m., and conclude on Saturday with an 8:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. session.

The course will be taught in Room 105 at Memorial by Miss Nell Stallings, water safety trainer and safety representative for the Pitt Red Cross chapter.

Mrs. Taylor, who noted that persons needing further information should contact her at 752-4222, said that the course is open only to currently authorized water safety instructors who have not had previous retraining.

Museums Provide Design Ideas Obviously Food Junkies Aren't All Bad

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you can't get to a museum to see your favorite art subject, don't despair. It may eventually turn up on your bedsheet. Real art — some of it ancient — is being dug out of museum archives for that purpose.

In fact, $360,000 in royalties was paid to the Metropolitan Museum of Art last year, under an exclusive contract, says John O'Donoghue, president of the Consumer Division of Spring Mills. But that is not the reason flat sheets will now cost more, he explained.

"The scale of activity is so big — sheets are a 30-million-dozen market — that design becomes a small percentage of the total cost. But sheets are now a big fashion item and lots are being bought for the yardage. Six yards of fabric by a good designer can be bought in a flat sheet for $8.

"When we were selling white sheets, flat and fitted, they were bought in equal proportion. Even though it cost more to make flat than fitted, both were sold at the same wholesale price to make it easier for merchants."

After designer sheets were introduced the fashion explosion changed the ratio of sheets sold to 60-40 — more flat sheets than fitted are sold and they are used for everything from wall covering to clothes. Yet the designer flat sheets have been sold on the white sheet price basis, he explained.

Most people assume fitted sheets cost more to make. Even New York stores "are embarrassed about the price change" because they've been charging more for fitted than flat, O'Donoghue maintains.

"There are surprises in the museum archives," he explained, fingering one new sheet. "This Greek key design was found on a fabric woven in the Pre-Incan period, 600 to 900."

They had to work with a small piece of cloth — it was too fragile to unfold. One of three Peruvian sheets adapted from ancient designs, it is part of a new museum series which includes Empire Florals and Costume Laces.

The 17th- and 18th-century lace reproductions are a new look for the bedroom. Filigrees, bobbin laces and drawwork (taken from designs on mantillas, costumes and samplers of Northern Italians and Dutch of the period are printed on dark brownish backgrounds. With real pull-through ribbons or wide border appliques of real lace trim, textural dimensional effects give the illusion of real lace sheets, bolsters, cases. One printed pattern, drawwork lace patches, is an all-over reproduction of an unusual, 18th-century Dutch sampler.

The company made its designer debut in 1967 with Pucci towels, but the vivid colors presented printing problems. About five years ago they were swept into fashion in a big way when fashion designer Bill Blass began designing sheets for them.

"Good design is lasting. Our first pattern printed in 1964 on no-iron sheets — Fresh Daisy — is an example. It still sells at more than 100,000 dozen sheets a year," he said.

Spurred by success of the sheets, new ideas have emerged. Quilt making has been changed by a new technique of quilting pinsonically, a thermostatic process that gives the illusion of stitches, O'Donoghue says. Regular quilting goes through a machine at two feet a minute; the new technology lets it go through at 25 feet a minute.

Translating quilts into big business meant an investment of $130,000 for a machine that has such a "voracious appetite" that a half-million dollars has already gone into the care and feeding necessary to production.

"Quilts are popular again because the young singles group has made the bedroom a focal point, and now, in addition, the quilt cover is upon us," O'Donoghue explained.

The quilt or comforter cover is "kind of a sheet envelope" that matches a fitted sheet. Used like a slipcover, it can coordinate an existing comforter. The acceptance of comforters and their covers may also be a reflection of the energy crisis. In any event, the quilt cover is already being hailed as a success by store buyers, he said.

Final Meet Held By Delta Kappa Gamma Society

The final meeting of the year of Beta Alpha Chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International was held at the First Christian Church Thursday.

Mrs. Anna H. Cartner, president, presided at the dinner and at the meeting which followed. Mrs. Cartner spoke briefly of the Eta State Convention, which was recently attended by a group from the chapter.

After dinner there was a ceremony of initiation for the following new members: Mrs. Elizabeth Anne Briley; Mrs. Bertie Fearing; Mrs. Jacqueline Jones; Mrs. Joann Jones; and Mrs. Sallie Mann.

Mrs. Antionette Jenkins, chairman of the State Committee on World Fellowship, reported on the work and achievements of Eta State Committee on World Fellowship. A memorial tribute to the late, Miss Alice Strawn was given by Mrs. Betty Turner and Dr. Alice B. Scott.

An installation ceremony of new officers for the next biennium was held at the close of the meeting. The new officers are as follows: President, Mrs. JoAnn Leith; First Vice President, Mrs. Jessie McDonald; Second Vice President, Mrs. Irma Worthington; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Nell Everett; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Natalie N. Grady; and Treasurer, Dr. Mildred D. Southwick.

HAPPY SNACKS—Deviled ham and mozzarella sandwiches are French-toasted.

1 large egg beaten with 1/4 cup milk just until blended
1/4 cup fine dry breadcrumbs
3 to 4 tablespoons butter or margarine

With a 3-inch cutter, cut rounds from the bread. With a 2 1/2-inch cutter, cut rounds from the mozzarella. Spread 1 tablespoon of the ham over each of 4 slices of the bread to within 1/2-inch of the edges. Top ham-spread bread with the mozzarella and remaining bread rounds. Dip each sandwich into the egg mixture; gently press edges of bread together to cover mozzarella — this is messy but it works. Coat both sides of the sandwiches with some of the breadcrumbs. Roll the edges, cartwheel fashion, through the remaining crumbs.

Note: Thin (but not very thin) sliced non-crumby bread was used. If bread is thicker, more egg-wash and breadcrumbs may be needed.

Decoding The Earring Symbol

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: That Montana husband probably wears a gold earring in his left ear for the same reason I have a gold tooth in front with a ruby in it. I like it!

AN INDIVIDUAL

DEAR INDIVIDUAL: I'm with you. A person's right to be himself is one of our cherished freedoms, so why should a person have to "explain" his reason for it? It's HIS ear and HIS business, and as far as I know, wearing an earring is neither immoral nor illegal. But there seems to be a variety of opinions. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: A Montana wife asked you why her husband suddenly started to wear a tiny gold earring in his left ear. (She asked him and he refused to tell her.) You said you didn't know, but if she ever found out, to let you know. I'm surprised that you didn't know, Abby. It means that he has become a member of the gay community.

HEP IN OAKLAND

DEAR ABBY: I'm a man who had his ears pierced four years ago, and you wouldn't believe the static I've had from people because of one little speck of gold the size of a pinhead!

I've been accused of being a homosexual, a latent transvestite and just plain weird. I assure you I am as average as most men.

I attend college and see more and more macho guys wearing earrings on campus. I don't know if there is any significance to wearing only one earring in the left ear. I wear mine there because I am right-handed, and it's easier to put on. My buddy wears one in his right ear because it's not seen by the police if he's stopped for a traffic violation. Sign me...

PIERCED AND PROUD

DEAR ABBY: A sailor who has sailed three years on the coast of China wears a gold ring in his left ear to prove that he has been there.

RETIRED CAPTAIN—AGE 80

DEAR ABBY: Men have worn earrings for centuries—Shakespeare, Rembrandt and King James II, to name a few of the more prominent of them.

Ancient Greeks and Romans borrowed the custom from the Persian and Indian men. And our own American Indian braves also wore earrings. And how about the early African warriors? And the pirates?

Men wore earrings long before women did, so why all the ruckus?

LIVE AND LET LIVE

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who wears a little gold earring in my left ear because of my religion.

I am a Buddhist, and all Buddhists wear one gold earring—and always in the left ear.

I am surprised you didn't know that, Abby.

A BUDDHIST

DEAR BUDDHIST: And if you are really a Buddhist, I am surprised that you don't know how to spell "Buddhist."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My face was once described by a beauty expert as one of the new miracle complexions: Perma-wrinkled wash and wear.

Of course, that's before I took advantage of a beauty offer that came last month with my charge account. The deal was, if I bought $7 worth of cosmetics at the regular price, I got a clutch bag full of goodies absolutely free.

The regular priced cosmetics were all listed at $6.95, so I was in hock for $13.90 at the offset, but what the heck. With the clutch bag thrown in, it was still a bargain.

The bag was a treasure. It contained, among other things, an astringent for removing make-up from ear boxes, a moisturizer for my throat (my throat always looks like it belongs to another body), back-of-the-knee creme, and a tube of navy blue lipstick.

"Are you really going to use all that stuff?" asked my husband.

"Of course I am," I said. "For years, I've let the back of my knees go to pot. It's time I started pampering myself."

"What's this little stick?" "Oh, this is great," I said excitedly. "It's called, 'Live a Lie.' You just stroke it on your face to erase those little bags and blemishes, see? What's the matter?"

"Your face just disappeared."

I went into the bathroom and slammed the door.

"Oh, c'mon, I was only kidding. The bags are still there."

For the next several hours, I was like a little girl playing grown-up. First, the cleanser, then the mask, followed by moisturizers and astringents. Then I dipped into little pots and spread base all over my face. (It took three coats, but it was worth it.)

On to the eyes, the cheeks, the elbows, the nails, the feet and finally the navy blue lipstick.

I have to admit my face was so tight, I couldn't blink my eyes without my lips baring my teeth, but a look in the mirror reassured me. I looked terrific.

Slipping into my duster and scuffies, I padded out to the living room to make my entrance.

My husband looked up and said, "You missed Bareta."

The kids said, "Where did you get the grape gum?"

The dog stood with his nose in the crack of the door barking to be let out.

If the back of my greased knees hadn't slipped me right out of the chair and onto the floor, I honestly don't think anyone would have noticed me.

COPPER MISSING

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A medical officer of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service says diets low in copper may be intensifying the risk of heart disease.

In a speech at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Dr. Leslie M. Klevay said the copper content of many foods may be lower than it was in the 1940s. He said this and other studies raise the possibility that Americans now may be consuming less than the optimal dietary copper.

Poor Timing On Road Project

The Department of Transportation held a public hearing on road improvements in the vicinity of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital last week.

The plan calls for four and five laning of N. C. 43 from N. C. 11 to beyond the Alcoholic Center. The Stantonburg Road would be improved similarly from the west city limits to Memorial Drive. SR 1267, which runs in front of the new hospital would be improved.

Total cost of the project was set at $1.6 million. There was little opposition at the hearing so there is no reason why the work can't move along.

What concerns us is why things couldn't have been better coordinated so that the road work could already be underway. The hospital has been in the planning and construction stage for nearly a decade and it would seem that with a little dialogue the planning for the road work could have been done sooner so that completion of the roads would coincide with the hospital opening. Now it appears that the road construction will get underway around the time that the hospital opens and we can expect to see some monumental traffic jams.

That, of course, is water over the dam and the important thing now is to get the highway improvement work underway just as soon as possible, since there will be still further construction at the hospital complex and even more congestion in the future.

We would hope, though, that in the future when a project of Pitt Memorial magnitude is planned there can be some thought given to coordinating road construction work so that both can be completed at the same time.

Basis For Optimism For Williamston

The closing of Jefferson Mills in Williamston was a blow to the people of that city and Martin County.

But, as an article by Daily Reflector writer Jerry Raynor indicated, the people of the area are hopeful, even in the face of a major industrial employer closing operations.

We think there is every reason to be optimistic. The building occupied by Jefferson Mills is a modern industrial facility, and with the nation's economy rapidly picking up, we think that major industries can be attracted by this available plant.

We don't believe there is any cause for alarm about the economy of Williamston and Martin County.

Prisons Talk Roadblocked

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., has thrown a roadblock before legislative leaders who are seeking his cooperation in relieving overcrowded prisons.

Repeated efforts to set up a meeting with the governor have been ignored or rebuffed. Now, with the General Assembly in session and able to follow up on the executive action with funds, Holshouser has delayed to the point that critics believe it is too late.

Only through executive action can immediate steps be taken to relieve the tensely overcrowded prisons. The Commission on Correctional Programs chaired by former State Senator Eddie Know of Charlotte has outlined several alternative ways to move prisoners into other state-owned facilities.

No Response
Knox asked Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., and House Speaker James C. Green to seek a session with the governor. A letter was sent, but no response was heard.

A spokesman for Hunt says repeated calls were made to the governor's office in efforts to arrange the meeting. Finally, the legislative leaders asked for a response from the governor in writing.

"It is our belief that the prison situation is getting so critical that we stand a chance of having an eruption this hot summer. We wanted the governor, in writing, to turn down what we see as the only immediate solution," Hunt's aide Paul Essex explained.

The requested meeting would have called together with the governor representatives of the Knox Commission, the legislative leaders, Secretary of Corrections David L. Jones, Secretary of Human Resources Phil Kirk, and Prisons Director Ralph Edwards to explore the alternatives drawn up by the Know study group, and urge executive action.

The governor has the authority to demand cooperation from the various state agencies to put into immediate use vacant or little-used state property for prison housing. Over a year ago, Knox sought similar cooperation from prison housing. Over a year ago, Knox sought similar cooperation from Holshouser and was rejected.

This time around, he had gained pledges from legislators that some $2 million needed to prepare the buildings and move the prisoners would be made available. Some thought is being given to going ahead with the money appropriation in hopes the governor will see fit to cooperate later. Other lawmakers are mulling various ways of forcing the proposed population changes over the governor's head.

Several Shifts

While still fluid and in discussion, the moves would involve closing two juvenile offenders. The Women's Prison in Raleigh would be turned into a men's prison, and the women transferred to an abandoned school for the blind near Raleigh.

Honor-grade prisoners could be housed in less secure facilities; while Dillon and some of the Women's Prison could be used for gun-grade prisoners.

Central Prison, the state's maximum security facility, has 1,322 gun-grade inmate in space designed for 900. The most critical need is for secure space to house those.

An earlier proposal was that the Western Correctional Center at Morganton, a high-rise building designed for 400 prisoners and used for youthful offenders, be turned into a secure facility for hardened criminals. The Knox group has backed away from that idea in light of the major impact such a change would have on the youthful offender program overall.

The governor's leadership is required to gain cooperation between Human Resources, which owns the training schools and other available space at hospitals, and the Department of Corrections. The former school for the blind has been assigned to the State Highway Patrol for a rookie school and training center, but has not been developed for that purpose as yet, and exclusive action would be required there, also.

Meanwhile, Holshouser has been on a visit to Ireland and unavailable for comment or further contact regarding his intentions.

A Sell-Out Of Rhodesia

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger delivered his 10-point statement on Rhodesia in Lusaka on April 27. A text became available the following day. I am not a man who yields easily to the anger that passes into rage, but that contemptible statement did it. Shame! I would cry shame.

We must assume that President Ford approved the speech in advance. Any other assumption would leave him a mere dummy on Kissinger's lap. This was a major policy statement. For good or ill, the responsibility for it rests squarely on Gerald Ford.

Why did Ford do it? To put the best possible face on this ugly business, let us suppose that his purpose was to deter further Soviet adventurism in Africa. By denouncing the Smith regime in Rhodesia, and by declaring our "unrelenting opposition" to it, the administration may have hoped to curry favor with some of Rhodesia's neighbors. Very well. The Ford administration will have purchased that favor at an awesome price. Hypocrites of the world, unite! Messrs. Kissinger and Ford have joined your ranks.

What has Rhodesia done in these past ten years to earn our "unrelenting opposition"? It has kept the peace. It has exported no terrorists. It has preserved Western traditions of law. It has provided for its own people, both black and white, the highest standards of education, health care and general well-being in the whole of Africa. And it has done this despite the terrible handicap of the United Nations' economic sanctions.

But what else has Rhodesia done? It has failed to provide "majority rule." It has denied its six million blacks "self-determination." It has not provided such civil liberties as universal suffrage. For these offenses, we are urged to believe,

Rhodesia merits our "unrelenting opposition."

What monstrous hypocrisy is this! We are very selective, it is evident, in our "unrelenting opposition." Would the President and his secretary examine a map of Africa? Would they name those nations characterized by majority rule, civil liberties and universal suffrage? They will find very few. On the contrary, they would observe a ragtag, bobtail assemblage of military dictators, petty despots and one-party rulers.

Kissinger was tenderly solicitous toward Mozambique. He would give Mozambique's new rulers $12.5 million in money taken from American taxpayers. The new rulers of Mozambique are a gang of Marxist terrorists led by Samora Machel. They have confiscated private property, suspended civil law, made children the wards of their proto-Communist state, and obliterated every vestige of "self-determination."

The secretary chose Zambia for the deliverance of his pieties on moral principle and human dignity. President Kenneth Kaunda was at his side, and there was a splendid irony in this. If memory serves, and memory serves exceedingly well, it was Mr. Kaunda who four years ago evidenced his dedication to these principles by jailing his opposition. Zambia is a lovely model, it is not? A model of one-party rule.

In the Ford-Kissinger view, Rhodesia's present status is "illegal." If so, then Rhodesia must still be lawfully a part of the British Commonwealth. But if that is so, by what right does the United States pronounce its presumptuous position on a British dominion? What business is it of ours how a "negotiated solution" is worked out? Who clothed Messrs. Ford and Kissinger with authority to lecture the people of Rhodesia on their responsibilities?

This was effrontery. By this statement, the Ford administration

Liddy Has A Friend

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
OXON HILL, Md. (AP) — James A. Gavin had no trouble enlisting a neighbor to be editor of the Indian Queen Elementary School PTA newsletter. Only one thing might get in the way, the neighbor said. "I might have to go back to prison."

That was 1½ years ago. The neighbor, G. Gordon Liddy, did go back to prison to serve the longest term of any of the 58 men convicted of a Watergate or Watergate-related crime.

Gavin said Monday he thinks Liddy has been a prisoner far too long and his five children are suffering because of it.

Gavin is heading a petition drive to get him out. He first tried the idea on 75 people. "Maybe two of the 75 said they would sign such a petition," he said. Of the others, "One said he never signed anything, another said they ought to throw away the key."

Liddy was the architect and field marshal of the Watergate break-in. U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica sentenced him to six to 20 years for his role and another 18 months for his obstinate silence before the grand jury. He has now served three years and is not eligible for a parole hearing until May 1981.

"I lived in the neighborhood for eight years and never knew the Liddys," says Gavin, assistant director of the Washington office of Tenneco. "But our children play on the same teams — baseball, basketball, Boys' Club."

Gavin was elected president of the PTA. One day, while Liddy was out on appeal, Gavin saw him in his backyard. Later, he telephoned Liddy, asked him to serve on the PTA executive committee and got his agreement to edit the newsletter.

"We were supposed to meet on Wednesday," Gavin recalled. "But he was returned to prison on Monday."

Liddy asked Sirica to reduce the sentence. The judge refused. Liddy appealed. The U.S. Court of Appeals turned him down. Now he has a petition pending before the Supreme Court, claiming his sentence is disproportionately higher than that of six break-in co-defendants.

Gavin said he got Mrs. Liddy's enthusiastic okay for the

THE INSIDE REPORT

Rank And File Favor Ford

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—Having undergone primary election humiliations not experienced by a President since William Howard Taft in 1912, Gerald R. Ford is being braced with this stern advice: You will lose the nomination unless you place your house in order, starting with the sacking of Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State.

Dr. Kissinger's African safari, blamed for transforming defeat into catastrophe in Texas, has expanded the dump—Kissinger chorus into a howling mob. Party leaders are also calling for pro-Ford campaigning instead of anti-Reagan counterpunching, which hit counterproductive bottom with demands for release of Reagan's 1975 tax returns. Therefore, these politicians want an experienced wise man to travel full time with President Ford to protect him from the noxious gimmicks dredged up by press secretary Ron Nessen, author of the Reagan tax ploy.

But the President may ignore such pleas, particularly if he sticks with his political operatives who publicly and privately attribute Reagan's stunning victories to the "cross-over" Democrats rather than basic Ford campaign problems. They seemingly fail to comprehend the full gravity of the President's crisis, threatening him with the repudiation of an incumbent President, last suffered by Chester Arthur, if the contagion of primary defeats spreads.

That contagion began with the May Day massacre in Texas, a many-sided disaster for Mr. Ford. The landslide generated not only an estimated 10 per cent vote turn around in Indiana which led to Mr. Ford's stunning upset there but also brought his lavishly financed campaign to virtual bankruptcy. On the road to defeat, Mr. Ford's agents engaged in profligate spending of nearly $1 million (four times Reagan's spending) in Texas. The result is not only job layoffs at the Ford campaign committee here but a parity of poverty between the Reagan and Ford campaigns.

Perhaps the most critical aspect of Texas, however, was the point of no-return for Henry Kissinger. His championship of black majority rule in Rhodesia is blamed for the magnitude of Reagan's win by Ford partisans who are publicly describing the Ford-

Kissinger relationship in extraordinarily blunt terms. An example is Rep. Ed Derwinski, a conservative Republican and Ford delegate from Illinois.

"You don't go down to Africa and promise away the federal treasury four days before the Texas primary," Derwinski told us. "I think the President is a captive of Henry K. The subordinate is controlling his chief." Derwinski months ago urged Mr. Ford to fire Kissinger, but that idea is generating new disciples—such as conservative Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, once an ardent Kissinger fan, but also including some moderates.

Besides a new Secretary of State, Mr. Ford is being pressed to name a cool head to travel with him and provide instant wisdom of the kind given Reagan by Dr. Martin Anderson. That became clear the day before the Indiana primary when Nessen talked the President into demanding that Reagan release his 1975 income tax

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:
How do we define police brutality and harrassment? To some, a policeman is being brutal if he makes an arrest. To some, the officer is harrassing them if he stops them for questioning.

Having been tied up in crime on a rather large scale, I have met and been questioned by several officers, both of state and federal levels. As yet I haven't been mistreated.

I didn't like the idea of being locked up or questioned or taken away from my wonderful family. But I realized the officer was only doing the job society hired him to do, trying to serve and protect society.

My idea of brutality is seeing a little girl or boy crying because their bikes have been stolen, seeing and feeling for an older person who has been beaten up or robbed, seeing a sad congregation because their church has been vandalized and the organ and piano and such stolen.

To me, this is brutality and harrassment. So if an officer is being brutal in trying to stop it, I pray, Police, please be brutal.

Be brutal especially for my children's sake. If you see them doing wrong, teach them at an early age respect for law and order. Don't let them end up as I have, serving a prison sentence.

Strength For Today

ENDURE TO THE END

Everyone is familiar with the story of Lot's wife. Led from the city of destruction by the strong hand of an angel who would save her from ruin, Lot's wife looked back and became a pillar of salt. The Greeks have a similar story. Orpheus, plunged into unconsolable grief because of the death of Eurydice, besought the gods to restore her to life. It was finally granted that he should lead her back to the light, provided that he went before and did not look even once behind until the two had passed out of the underworld. Estatic with happiness, Orpheus started out, but as he neared the surface of the earth, doubt tortured him to such an extent that he turned to see if his loved one was following. She was, but even as he clasped her, she died in his arms.

So often we lose all that we had long hoped for because we lose faith in the final hour, or even in the final minute. All of which gives point to the injunction, "Endure to the end."

Capital Spending Outlook Is Up

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Encouraged by some of the heftiest profits increases since the 1960s, corporations now appear ready to raise their commitments to invest in new plants and equipment this year.

Until recently, those plans were generally considered by economists to be disappointing and even to suggest that corporate America remained unconvinced about the future of the recovery.

As late as this March, the Commerce Department estimated capital spending would increase only 6.5 per cent over last year, but a more recent survey now points to a 13 per cent increase.

The latter percentage would bring spending to $127.3 billion, much of it in the second half of the year. It was found in a survey by McGraw-Hill Publications, whose findings are heavily relied upon by economists.

While as much as 9 per cent of this gain must be disregarded because it represents inflation, the 4 per cent real gain is a decided improvement over earlier estimates, in which no real gains at all were foreseen.

The McGraw-Hill findings were released almost simultaneously with a report from Citibank that the after-tax earnings of 770 manufacturers jumped in the first quarter of the year.

The bank said the earnings of these manufacturers rose 20 per cent over the fourth quarter, on a seasonally adjusted basis. And for 1,149 concerns of various types, the year-to-year gain in the first quarter was 44 per cent.

It commented: "Corporate after-tax earnings in '76 are eclipsing last year's wildest forecasts. And they are much less distorted by inflation-bred inventory gains and inadequate depreciation charges."

At the same time, wage settlements are proving to be less costly than some corporations had anticipated. The Labor Department reports first-year settlements averaged 8.8 per cent in the first quarter, and 7.4 per cent over the life of contracts.

These and other factors are causing some economists to consider reassessing their forecasts, although few prominent ones have so far raised their sights. Caution is still very evident in the fraternity.

An example is provided by a current report to clients by Rinfret-Boston Associates. Noting that the Gross National Product grew at a 7.5 per cent annual rate, Pierre Rinfret commented:

40 Years Ago Today

May 11, 1976
Italy's envoy to the League of Nations walked out of a council session in Geneva today when the council took up the question of the conquest of Ethiopia.

The representative announced that Italy could not negotiate in the presence of the "so-called delegate from Ethiopia."

His dramatic exit followed a bitter protest from Haile Selassie against Mussolini's annexation of the African kingdom and Italian hints that Italy would withdraw from the League rather than discuss Ethiopia in the presence of an agent of Selassie, Ethiopia's dictator before the Italian takeover.

Members of the council said later they were facing a most delicate problem.

Up For Grabs

RALEIGH (AP) — A $1.2 million contract to handle the state's tourist and industrial promotion advertising is up for grabs.

Advertising agencies officially have been invited by George Little, head of the Department of Natural and Economic Resources, to apply for the contract.

A citizens advisory committee is to review the agencies applying for the contract and make a recommendation. Little is to make his decision by July 1. A firm run by Jerome H. Louchheim, a political associate of Gov. Jim Houshouser, recently had its contract, awarded in 1973 without competition, retracted.

Louchheim's firm has been under investigation by the state auditors and the state attorney general's office. They are investigating inaccurate payments to his firm that reportedly amounted to more than $100,000.

petition drive and talked it over with Liddy in the Danbury, Conn., prison.

His petition asks President Ford to commute the sentence. Liddy and his lieutenant, E. Howard Hunt, are the only Watergate convicts still in prison. Hunt becomes eligible for parole Jan. 10.

Gavin calls himself a liberal Democrat, and says he has only the welfare of the Liddy's five children — all teen-agers — at heart.

He plans to ask each signer to get five others to pass petitions and says so far he has 60 people lined up around the country.

David C. Stephenson, a pardon attorney in the Justice Department, says procedures require a formal petition filed by the prisoner himself and no amount of outside signatures will change that.

And nothing is done until a prisoner has exhausted all legal remedies. So, until the Supreme Court takes some action, a petition appears futile in Liddy's case.

returns. When Reagan released the gross figures but not the actual returns, Nessen moralized that Reagan had not learned the lessons of Watergate.

That helped not at all in Indiana but generated instant outrage at the Treasury, where Secretary William Simon—a steadfast Ford loyalist—sent word to the White House that Reagan's personal income tax is nobody's business but his own. Other Republican politicians were appalled that the President had joined in county-level politicking.

Nessen's ploy was but a particularly maladroit aspect of the Ford campaign's dominant theme: undermine Reagan. In the wake of Tuesday's triple defeat, pro-Ford Republican politicians outside his campaign organization feel he must try to forget about Reagan and concentrate on positive issues.

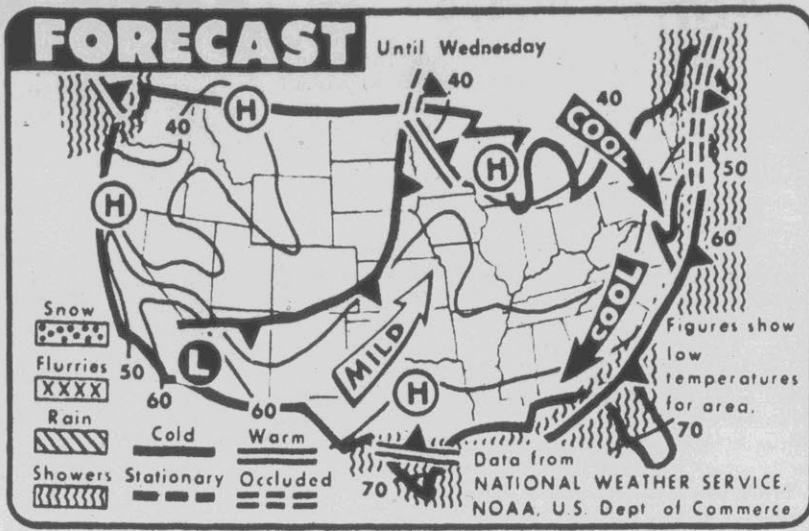

Whether Mr. Ford will take any of this advice, beginning with the easing-out of Dr. Kissinger, is by no means certain. Far more than the public generally realizes, the President is strong-minded to the point of stubbornness—as is reflected by a strange incident while campaigning in Indiana last weekend.

Winding up his Hoosier campaign, Mr. Ford asked an Indiana Republican Congressman, Rep. John Myers, for helpful hints. Myers had two: first, don't mention the Panama Canal; second, stop promising to keep Kissinger at the State Department. The President nodded, then did exactly the opposite on both points at his next stop.

Jerry Ford's ability to take advice may become critical over the next three weeks when he could well lose eight out of 10 primaries. Such losses conceivably could cost him the nomination, not in terms of delegates but in shredded prestige.

Accordingly, the President's supporters who regard Reagan's nomination as a limitless disaster are frantic that Ford heed their counsel, not to move right but to assume the presidential pedestal and shift attention to the booming economy. He cannot do that by applauding Henry Kissinger, defending the dictator of Panama and thrashing about with inuendo about Reagan's taxes.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are due today in the coastal areas of the Gulf and Atlantic states and Washington. Cooler temperatures are expected in the eastern portion of the nation with milder weather moving into the central states. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Showers moved into the western North Carolina early today. They spread westward across the state throughout the day.

A weak upper-level disturbance, together with a moist, unstable air mass, caused the showers, which in some areas were accompanied by thunder and lightning.

High temperatures today were mostly in the 70s. Skies will continue to be considerably cloudy tonight, with the showers confined to the coast.

A weak cold front will enter the state's northern and western borders tonight. It is not expected to be strong enough to set off additional showers.

Lows tonight will be in the 40s in the mountains, near 60 on the coast and the 50s elsewhere.

The cold front will pass through late tonight and early Wednesday. Sunny skies are expected in the west Wednesday. Clearing will take place in the east, with showers ending on the coast early in the day.

High temperatures Wednesday will be little changed from today's, despite the passage of the cold front. This is because the cold air behind the front is not expected to settle this far south.

The extended outlook calls for fair skies Thursday, another chance of showers Friday, and partly cloudy skies Saturday. High temperatures will be generally in the 70s. Overnight lows will be in the 50s, except 40s in the mountains.

Winds were south to southwest on the coast today, with waves of one to three feet. Visibility was five miles or more, except between one and three miles in showers and thunderstorms.

Deficiencies In Services Cited

Ron Atkinson, Director of the Governor's Council on Child Advocacy, discussed the inadequacies and deficiencies in children's services in North Carolina before the annual meeting of the Pitt County Mental Health Association Thursday night.

He urged that Mental Health Associations keep in touch with our legislators to urge their support of new and improved services and facilities.

CARL BLACKWOOD

Officers installed for the new year are Carl Blackwood of Farmville, president; Dr. Charles Mitchell, vice president; Mrs. Janice Buck, secretary; Mrs. Mike Kachmer, treasurer; and Dr. Frank Fuller, assistant treasurer. They were installed by Cecil Merritt, a Goldsboro attorney who is Eastern Regional Vice President of the N. C. Mental Health Association.

New members of the Board of Directors were recognized. They are Mrs. Jerry Bailey of Fountain, Mrs. L. H. Ellis and J. L. Keeter, both of Interville, Mrs. L. L. Kittrell of Ayden, and the Rev. Dan Earnhardt, Mrs. Ray Evans, Mrs. H. Clarence Galloway, Mrs. Roger Mann, and the Rev. F. Roderick Randolph, all of Greenville.

All past presidents of the PCMHA were given special recognition. Dr. Clinton R. Prewett related briefly the history of the Association and introduced Dr. Ray Minges, Mrs. Ellen Carroll, Dr. Malene Irons, David Reid, Dr. Ray Evans, and Mrs. Ed Warren, the last representing her husband. Those past presidents of the Association not able to attend were Charles D. Cobb, Dr. Frank Fuller, and Dr. Joe Pou.

Pres. Blackwood presented service awards to Leland R. Moore, treasurer of the Association for seven years, Mrs. Carol Tyer, staff writer of The Daily Reflector for "outstanding cooperation and encouragement in helping the Association to tell the Mental Health story." Awards also were presented to Mrs. C. G. Garrenton, 1975 Operation Santa Claus chairman, Ms. Elizabeth Laney and Ms. Bertha Darden, volunteers from the Farmville area for outstanding service. Mrs. Mabel C. Blount was recognized as 1976-77 membership chairman.

Draws Sentence In Tax Case

RALEIGH (AP) — Margaret White Hicks, a former Warren County schoolteacher, has been sentenced to a one-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty to one count of altering federal tax documents.

Federal Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. also ordered Mrs. Hicks to pay the cost of her court-appointed attorney.

An Internal Revenue Service spokesman said she pleaded guilty Monday to offering 28 false documents to verify itemized deductions during an audit of her 1972 tax return.

Zoning Ordinance, Subdivision Regulations Voted By Ayden Bd.

By SUSAN QUINN

AYDEN — A new zoning ordinance and subdivision regulations were passed at the Ayden Town Board meeting Monday night. A public hearing concerning the ordinance and the regulations was held at 7:30 p.m. June Lockemy, Ayden Town Planner read the regulations and the new ordinance to the board.

According to Ms. Lockemy thenew zoning ordinance changed a few districts slightly and incorporated a few new districts. The new changes also included provisions for fencing, street signs, and measurement regulations within a district. The board adopted new electric rate schedules of Residential, Commercial Housing Authority, and School rates. These rates include a fossil fuel charge and will become effective with the June Residential are as follows: Summer rate — June-September $5.25 plus 3.435 cents per kilowatt for the first 600 kilowatts then 4.105 cents per kilowatt for the next 900 kilowatts. Winter rates — October-May—$5.25 plus 3.435 cents per kilowatt for the first 600 kilowatts, 2.585 cents per kilowatt for the next 900 kilowatts and 2.115 cents per kilowatt for the next 1500 kilowatts.

According to the Commissioner Elliott Dixon the basic electric rate will be slightly increased while the fossil fuel rate is decreased.

The board also adopted new sewer rates. The board adopted a flat rate of $1.19 per 1,000 gallons usage. A graduated rate of $1.27 per 1,000 gallons for the first 4,000 gallons; $1.11 per thousand for the next 6,000 gallons; $1. per thousand for the next 20,000 gallons, etc was not accepted by the board.

"This sewer rate with the flat rate will best serve the average consumer," Mayor Ross Persinger said.

ministration has shouldered its way into the middle of negotiations to which we were not invited. The President will take the lead in new efforts to crush Rhodesia's fragile economy; he will "approach other industrial nations to insure the strictest and broadest international compliance with sanctions."

The President thus commits the American people to the overthrow of a small, friendly, pro-Western government whose only real offense is that it is not black, but white. He would prefer to see power transferred to an unelected faction of guerrilla terrorists who have imposed unspeakable atrocities on innocent blacks who want only to live their primitive lives in peace.

This is our "clear and unmistakable position" on Rhodesia. It merits our unrelenting scorn.

Library Opens After Damage

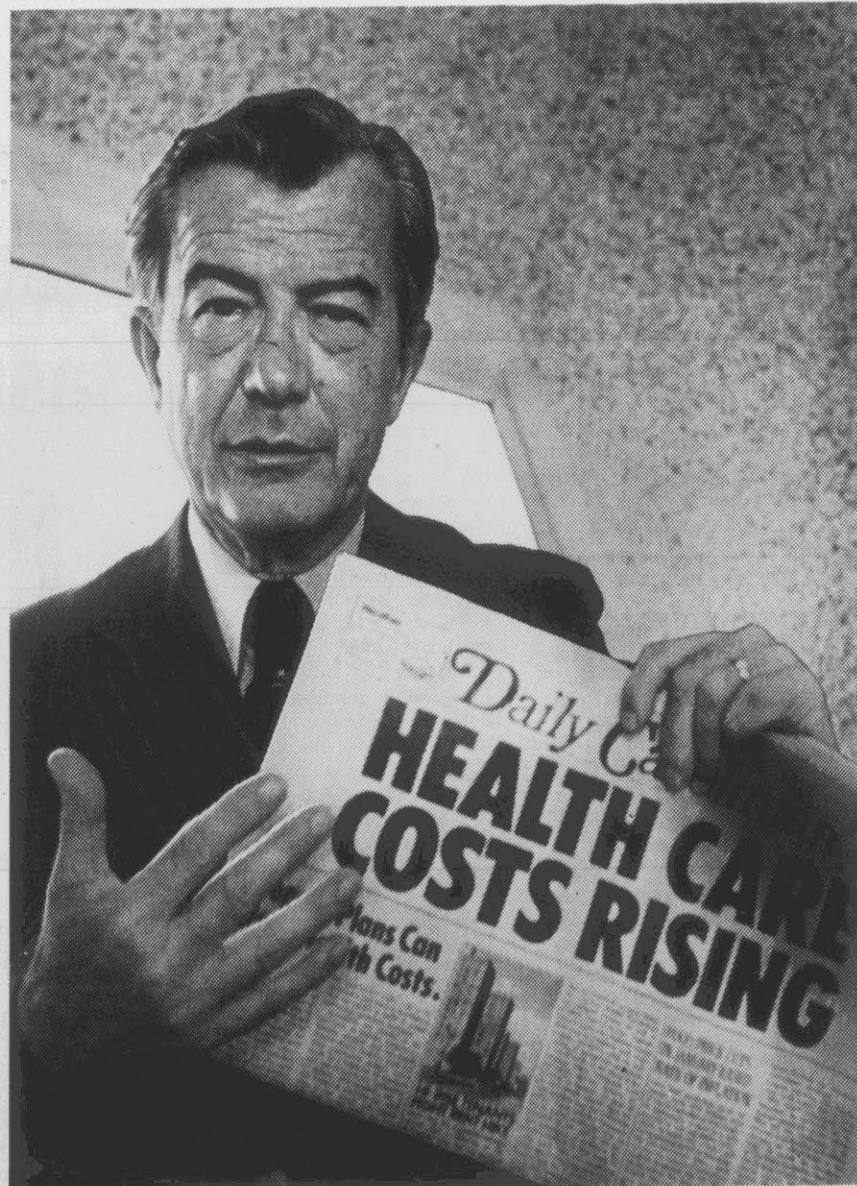

Sheppard Memorial Library has reopened following a two day closure Saturday and Monday as the result of structural damage caused by lightning striking the north chimney on Friday night.

Elizabeth Copeland, librarian, announced that effective today, regular operating hours were being resumed.

"Health care costs rising? That's no news to me. At Burroughs Wellcome Company, we manufacture medicines, and we feel the effect of spiralling health care costs just like everyone else. Anyone who does something to contain those costs is taking on a big job.

"Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina is doing something. We have Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage at our company. And one of the things that sold me on their program was their total commitment to cost containment. "Health care costs have been going up even faster than the consumer price index. They now account for more than 8% of the GNP. Blue Cross and Blue Shield is addressing this problem...by developing a new contracting agreement with hospitals and other institutions, monitoring utilization of health care facilities, and educating the consumer about his own health care responsibilities. And they are working hard to keep rates as low as possible by screening and validating claims and monitoring hospital and physician's charges. "Now I know this doesn't mean they can lower their rates to us. But it does help them hold down future increases and pay back more dollars in benefits. I know they're working for better utilization of hospital facilities and area-wide planning to avoid duplication. "They're also paying three outpatient claims for every inpatient claim...another way of saving expensive hospital beds for people who really need them. "All these things help, now and for the future. And before you know it, the future will be today. I say, good going, Blue Cross and Blue Shield. You've got my dollar—I'm glad you're spending it wisely."

Boyles Sees Treasurer Role As Big Business

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The big issue Harlan Boyles said yesterday, is for North Carolina voters to choose the next State Treasurer "on the basis of (the candidates) experience and understanding the responsibilities of the office."

HARLAN BOYLES

Boyles, now deputy treasurer, is seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed Edwin Gill in the post.

Boyles became a Treasury employee more than 20 years ago and since 1960, has served as the state's deputy treasurer, the number two job in the management of North Carolina's finances. And, since 1968, Boyles has served as secretary of the Local Government Commission, with direct responsibility for the approval and sale of local government bond issues and as financial counsel to all the State's cities and counties.

"State government is big business," Boyles said, suggesting that voters "look at candidates as applicants for an important position. The State Treasurer in effect is the State's banker. He has $3.5 billion a year under his care."

Voters, Boyles suggested, should "elect a candidate with experience. Unwise management, to the extent that there is any inefficiency, is picked up in the form of higher taxes."

Boyles explained that last year, earnings on investment of state funds by the treasurer earned $97 million. "That constitutes the fifth largest source of revenue for the state," Boyles said, following behind income, sales, gas and franchise taxes.

"To the extent that the Treasurer is not alert and systematic in his investments, reduced earnings are picked up in the form of fewer services or higher taxes," he explained.

The State Treasurer is also "the guardian of the State's credit," Boyles explained. The interest rate on state and local government bonds is directly affected by his actions. Improper actions, he said, can "cost us additional dollars in interest on the money we borrow."

"My objectives," Boyles said, "are to continue and build upon the non-partisan and unbiased policies" which have "made North Carolina the envy of the nation in terms of public credit. North Carolina is on the top level."

Boyles said, "my admonition to the voters . . . look to the motives of the candidate."

The candidate said if the treasurer uses the position of the office "for ulterior purposes as a stepping stone to another position," the result could be "costly to the State's good name and long tradition of responsible government."

Boyles emphasized that he has no desire to serve in any other public office. "I consider myself a career public servant and I think that's what this office needs — someone who is totally dedicated to the job."

Boyles said the next treasurer will be charged with overseeing the recently-passed industrial and hospital construction revenue bond programs. He said the treasurer should "look upon the (new) duties in a very cautious and judicial manner."

"Misuse and abuse" of the programs, he said, could "easily affect the state's credit" and the state's "ability to borrow for traditional things . . . for schools and roads . . . made more difficult."

Boyles, 47, was in Greenville yesterday for an afternoon reception and a Pitt County Young Democrats Club meeting last night where he appeared with his opponent for the Democratic nomination, Lane Brown, in a question-and-answer session.

At that session, Boyles said the industrial revenue bonds can be used as a tool by the Treasurer to "insure a viable full employment economy . . . an incentive to attract high wage and financially solvent industry . . ." into the state.

Since the treasurer has "the final say in who can issue the bonds," Boyles noted, "he, perhaps more than anyone else, can work toward more job opportunities for all Tar Heels."

Boyles, a Vale, N.C. native, was appointed last year by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission as one of 15 members to a new national rulemaking agency for the municipal bond industry.

"I still do not feel that Level II credits should not be received for a service course, but do not see how we can make a change in the class ranks now," said Supt. Alford.

The board voted not to grant the request of the deletion of the credits received in the library science course. Supt. Alford explained that the Planning Team will be studying the Level II courses and hopefully revising them this summer.

Boyles said the next treasurer will be charged with overseeing the recently-passed industrial and hospital construction revenue bond programs. He said the treasurer should "look upon the (new) duties in a very cautious and judicial manner."

Brown Sees Treasurer Post Of 'Many Hats'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

State Treasurer candidate Lane Brown views the key Council of State post as one that requires a person to wear many hats and serve not only as the state's chief banker and fiscal officer but in a more versatile capacity.

LANE BROWN

Brown, former Democratic representative in the North Carolina General Assembly, said here Monday that the State Treasurer's function covers a board perspective and is not the ceremonial position that many people attach to the office.

The Albemarle native pointed out that the Treasurer has a hand in a variety of matters logically affecting the state's economy and he cited the Treasurer's "final veto" as one which can "make or break a revenue bond issue."

Brown said that the recent voter approval of constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of industrial revenue bonds "imposes additional responsibilities" on the office holder and requires that the new Treasurer develop expertise in the area of bond issuance.

The candidate, who is seeking the post now held by retiring Edwin Gill, pointed to other ways the Treasurer makes an impact on the state's economy. He said that by utilizing "thrifty institutions" such as savings and loan associations in the investment programs of the state, the ability of those institutions to provide low interest money for the residential housing market is enhanced. Currently, certificates of deposits are used as a vehicle of investment for the state.

An area that "still has not gone to market yet," he continued, is the N. C. Housing Finance Agency which would be subject to the general supervision of the State Treasurer. Brown said that if the Treasurer carries out the legislative intent for the agency, it could acquire tax exempt bonds and make the money available through savings and loan associations which could in turn make available more low interest money.

The Treasurer, by investing in federally insured mortgage programs such as VA and FHA, has still other means through his investment authority to "stimulate the economy" in a "legally permissible" way.

He said the General Assembly has "seen fit to impose extra departmental duties" on the office of the State Treasurer and although the statutes require the office holder to be on the job a certain number of hours each day, "there will be no such thing as a 40-hour week if he is properly handling his functions." Brown said the post will require "25-hour per day" involvement.

The attorney said that North Carolina "came out of the recession well" and he asserted that the state has a "long way to go, but it has come a long way."

He said the state's fiscal condition reflects an outlook of optimism but he warned that the "state should not commit its resources beyond what can be reasonably expected in revenues . . ."

Brown said that the next State Treasurer should "urge that the U. S. Congress seriously consider" adopting legislation requiring a balanced federal budget.

The Treasurer, one of two popularly elected voting members of the State Board of Education, has direct input with public school finances and in sitting on the board has the "unique opportunity" to lobby on behalf of the board on budget and policy recommendations, he observed.

Brown said the state needs an "aggressive fiscal watchdog" who will be committed to the practices and policies that have been the backbone of the state's fiscal success. He said he intends to practice a "working fiscal conservatism" through the active conduct and management of the office.

Appearing last night with his opponent in the Treasurer's race, Harlan Boyles, at a Pitt County Young Democrat Club meeting at East Carolina University, Brown pointed out several other duties of the State Treasurer, including the administering of the state's retirement systems, advising the governor and the legislature on the state's fiscal welfare, serving as chairman of the banking commission and tax review board, as well as serving as the "people's banker" with the authority to invest state funds.

Brown, who served in the House of Representatives for three terms beginning in 1970, 1972, and 1974, resigned from the legislature in January to devote full attention to his campaign for the Treasurer's post.

ACTING DIRECTOR
RALEIGH (AP) — Tom Broughton, 53, of Raleigh will become acting director of the Division of Economic Development June 1, George Little, Secretary of the N.C. Dept. of Natural and Economic Resources announced Monday.

Boyles said the next treasurer will be charged with overseeing the recently-passed industrial and hospital construction revenue bond programs. He said the treasurer should "look upon the (new) duties in a very cautious and judicial manner."

Boyles emphasized that he has no desire to serve in any other public office. "I consider myself a career public servant and I think that's what this office needs — someone who is totally dedicated to the job."

Lebanon's War Again Relaxes

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Another temporary cease-fire halted savage tank and artillery battles for four mountain towns 35 miles northeast of Beirut today. And President Ford's peacemaking envoy expressed the belief that the election of President-elect Elias Sarkis opens the way to an end to the Lebanese civil war.

"I think we have finally arrived in this country at the process of sanity, rationality and reconstruction of the Lebanese state," Ambassador L. Dean Brown told a farewell news conference.

"I've talked to the new president. He's a fine man. I think if he asks us, I have no doubt the United States will join other countries, other institutions, in the task of reconstruction."

Brown, sent to Beirut by Ford in March, said his contribution was to shuttle between Christian and Moslem leaders with suggestions "when they couldn't talk to each other."

His first priority, he added, was to persuade them to stop the "mad shelling" that rocked Beirut almost nightly. Second on his list, Brown continued, was to shift the leaders' attention from fighting to ways to end the fighting.

Brown left for Washington with plans for an overnight stop in West Europe.

Meanwhile, Sarkis claimed credit for the agreement by Moslem and Christian warlords to stop the fighting in the mountains northeast of the capital.

PLEASURES AND PAINS IN ROLE
LONDON (AP) — Mary Wilson, whose husband Harold was Britain's longest peacetime prime minister this century, says a prime minister's wife should be "as wise as a serpent, as harmless as a dove."

Mrs. Wilson recalled in a signed article in Monday's Guardian newspaper the pains and pleasures of being a British prime minister's wife. One of the best, she said, is meeting children. One of the worst is having to make small talk with strangers.

Her husband was prime minister from 1964-1970 and from 1974 until he retired a few weeks ago.

Dr. Douglas Jones made a motion to delete the firing range from the proposed budget with the understanding that should the firing range be mandatory that the ROTC office allow the board sufficient time to fund the project.

Dr. Jones made a motion for the deletion of the firing range from the proposed budget and the addition of the air conditioning for A.G. Cox School in the Winterville schools. They are as follows: (1) Completion of air conditioning at A.G. Cox. (2) Continuing the position of assistant principal at A.G. Cox. (3) Purchasing furnishings for the media centers at W.H. Robinson and A.G. Cox schools. and (4) Considering the space requirements for an all day kindergarten program at W. H. Robinson.

The board had included $25,000 in the proposed capital outlay budget for the furniture and added the air conditioning project to the proposed budget.

In other business the board heard students and parents from Ayden-Grifton High School discuss the possibility of deleting quality points received from a library science Level II course in the 1972-73 school year.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft, who heads the highway 264 Association, a lobby group formed to speed the improvement of the highway, issued a statement to the Pollard company.

"The highways in eastern North Carolina are among the most neglected in the country," Taft said. He added that U.S. 264 is the most neglected road in eastern North Carolina, saying it has "turnpike traffic moving on a horse and buggy road."

Taft cited the rapid growth of the cities and town along U.S. 264 as evidence of the importance that it be improved. He mentioned Beaufort County's "billion dollar phosphate industry," and other industries there which have a $40 million a year payroll.

Taft also told Pollard of Pitt County's growth in industry, agriculture and education. Farmville and Wilson have also grown greatly, Taft said. Wilson is the "largest farming center in the southeastern United States," he said.

Taft called for the feasibility of a modern, limited-access turnpike along the route of U.S. 264 to be carefully studied. He also said he would support the efforts of any other road in eastern North Carolina which might also be built.

Other speakers basically reiterated Taft's comments, concentrating on growth and needs in their specific areas. In addition, representatives of the students and administration of East Carolina University told of the school's need for a better east-west highway. Some speakers also offered their assistance in the study.

Pollard said another meeting will be held here in about three or four months to let people know how the study is progressing. Data that has been gathered will be presented then, he said.

Another meeting, similar to the one held last night, is being conducted today in Tarboro, Pollard said. Input and suggestions from the two meetings, will provide the consulting firm with some additional directions to take and considerations to make in their study, he said.

Taft called for the feasibility of a modern, limited-access turnpike along the route of U.S. 264 to be carefully studied. He also said he would support the efforts of any other road in eastern North Carolina which might also be built.

Other speakers basically reiterated Taft's comments, concentrating on growth and needs in their specific areas. In addition, representatives of the students and administration of East Carolina University told of the school's need for a better east-west highway. Some speakers also offered their assistance in the study.

Pollard said another meeting will be held here in about three or four months to let people know how the study is progressing. Data that has been gathered will be presented then, he said.

Another meeting, similar to the one held last night, is being conducted today in Tarboro, Pollard said. Input and suggestions from the two meetings, will provide the consulting firm with some additional directions to take and considerations to make in their study, he said.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft, who heads the highway 264 Association, a lobby group formed to speed the improvement of the highway, issued a statement to the Pollard company.

"The highways in eastern North Carolina are among the most neglected in the country," Taft said. He added that U.S. 264 is the most neglected road in eastern North Carolina, saying it has "turnpike traffic moving on a horse and buggy road."

Taft cited the rapid growth of the cities and town along U.S. 264 as evidence of the importance that it be improved. He mentioned Beaufort County's "billion dollar phosphate industry," and other industries there which have a $40 million a year payroll.

Taft also told Pollard of Pitt County's growth in industry, agriculture and education. Farmville and Wilson have also grown greatly, Taft said. Wilson is the "largest farming center in the southeastern United States," he said.

Raleigh Man Is Decapitated

RALEIGH (AP) — A man working on a crew tearing down an old downtown hotel was decapitated Monday when he stuck his head into an elevator shaft, Raleigh police reported.

A spokesman for the demolition company said the victim, Sylvester Pemberton, about 55, of Raleigh, apparently had stuck his head into the hole to see where the elevator was.

The accident occurred about 20 minutes before the workmen were to quit for the day.

WON'T GIVE UP CINCINNATI (AP) — Attorneys say they will take James Earl Ray's case to the Supreme Court because, they contend, lower courts have missed the thrust of his efforts to reverse his conviction for killing Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Offer Reward In Killing Of Youth

RALEIGH (AP) — A $2,500 reward has been offered by the state for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who killed Carl Anthony Holt, 17, of Mecklenburg County.

Holt died Feb. 17 after he left his home to walk to a restaurant. He was found lying in a nearby road with head and chest injuries.

Information may be given to the Mecklenburg County Police Department or the State Bureau of Investigation.

Cites Speed In Accidents

Carl E. Whitfield, field representative for the Governors Highway Safety Program told the Greenville Optimist Club last night that speed was the leading cause of highway accidents that killed 1,583 persons in the state last year and injured another 10,648 individuals.

Whitfield said a total of 24,820 accidents were reported in North Carolina last year. People were killed in 1,382 of those collisions.

"During the Vietnam war, 45,000 service men... lost their lives," while during the same period of time in the U.S., "274,000 lives were lost on our streets and highways."

He theorized the "biggest problem as it relates to each individual is that some people allow their subconscious to operate an automobile instead of controlling their thoughts and emotions behind the wheel."

Few deaths, the speaker said, result from mechanical failure. "Most of them are due to human carelessness."

Commissioners Accept Bid On Demolition Job

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
A bid submitted by Landscape Contractors Inc. of Greenville for a two-phase demolition contract in the Central Business District was accepted Monday night by the Redevelopment Commission.

The $17,500 bid was the low offer among five submitted for the demolition work involving seven structures in the CBD area.

Deputy Director T. I. Wagner

Invitational JROTC Meet Wednesday

The Pitt County Invitational JROTC Drill Meet will be conducted Wednesday at the Assembly of God Church by the pastor, the Rev. Maurine Johnson, and the Rev. Raymond Hoggard, pastor of Ebenezer Assembly of God in Aulander. Burial will be in Pamlico Memorial Gardens in Washington. The body will be taken from the Wilkerson Funeral Home to the Church one hour prior to the time of services.

Mr. Woolard was a native and life long resident of Beaufort County and was a farmer.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Mizelle Woolard; three sons; H. Linwood Woolard of Washington, Carson Woolard of Chocowinity and R. S. Woolard of Ayden; a daughter, Mrs. Bobby Harmon of Washington; a foster son, L. Raeford Mizelle of Washington; two foster daughters, Mrs. Ashley Gurganus of Robersonville and Mrs. Grant Bullock of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Danny Hollis of Williamston; nine grandchildren, and seven foster grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Commissioners Accept Bid On Demolition Job

told commissioners that the demolition work will be handled in two segments with the first to be done immediately involving Rogers Warehouse on Greene Street and the Sam Pollard building at the corner of Third and Cotanche Streets.

The second phase of the contract will be done at a later date, according to Wagner, and involve the buildings along Dickinson Avenue from Five Points down to the alley north of Taft Furniture Store.

In addition to the bid submitted by Landscape Contractors, other bids opened on May 3 included offers by W. W. Pike of Winston-Salem, $18,000; A. L. Cobb, Greensboro, $18,000; D. W. Griffin, Greensboro, $18,888; and Bill Harrelson of Greensboro, $43,200.

Wagner reported that the Redevelopment Commission was able to dedicate five parcels in Newtown to the city for street right-of-way at no cost to the city. The parcels, used to provide for street improvements including widening and also construction of sidewalks, totaled 21,452 square feet. At 30 cents a square foot, the total value was set at $6,435.60.

The right-of-way was dedicated to the city along 14th, Ridgeway and Short Streets.

Commissioners approved an amendment to the appraisal contract of Les Turnage for work in Southside and authorized the director to enter into a new contract with Eddie Dozier for second appraisal work in the area.

Ed Cobb, Commission rehabilitation officer, said that contractors have completed the first residential rehabilitation of the West Meadowbrook area and the second property undergoing rehabilitation in the neighborhood should be finished in approximately ten days.

According to Cobb, three bids are out for additional work in West Meadowbrook and proceed orders should be signed soon for that rehabilitation work to begin.

He noted that all inspections and revisions have been completed in West Meadowbrook and maps will now be revised to reflect specific properties designated for rehabilitation or acquisition.

The first rehabilitation job in the Southside area is nearing completion, he added.

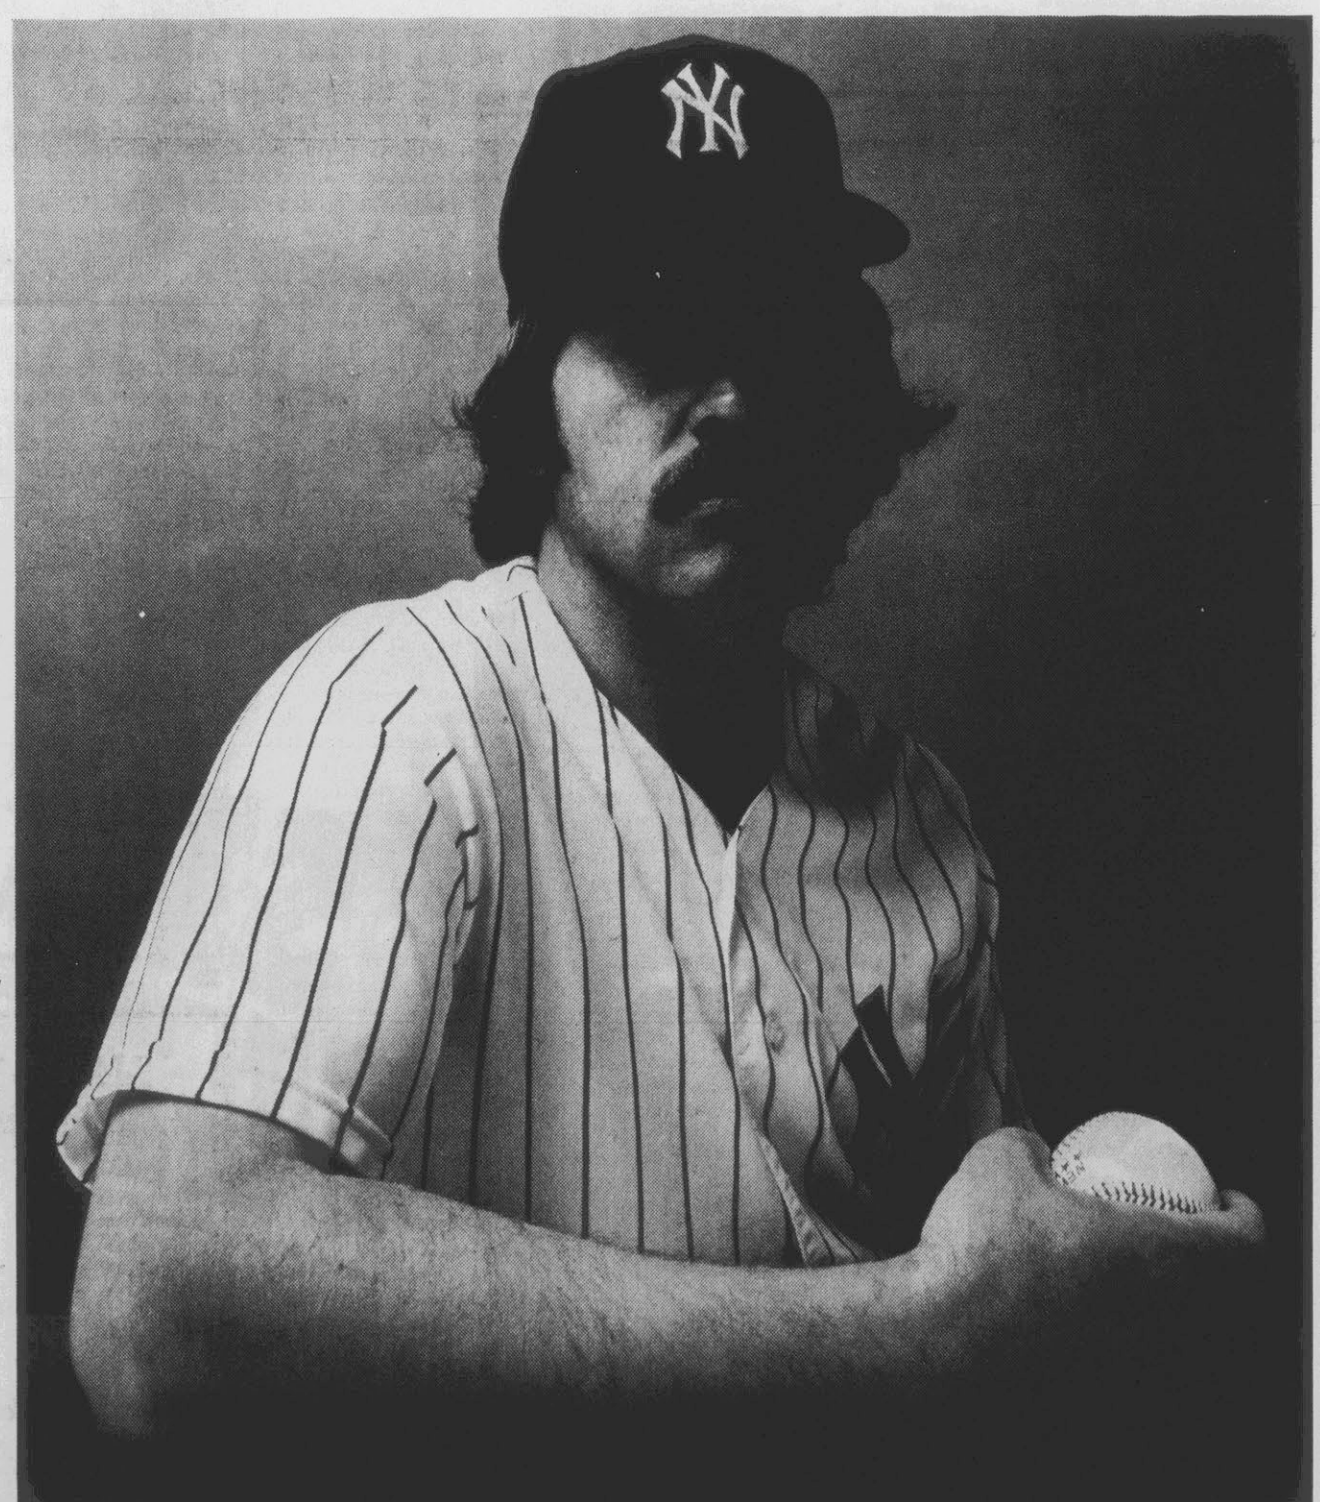

No acquisition or demolition activities took place in the CBD area since the last meeting, according to Dan Sullivan, assistant project manager, while two relocations, involving Julianne Card & Gift Shoppe and also a tenant from the duplex at 901 Evans Street, were handled.

Two parcels were acquired in Southside, it was reported by project manager Faye Brewington, with no demolition work taking place in the area since the April meeting. One family was relocated from the area, she reported.

Mrs. Brewington said that no acquisition took place in West Meadowbrook but offers were made to five homeowners there and three were accepted. The two other offers, she noted, are pending as the owners seek new housing.

Some people would give their right arm for more cash in hand.

The right arm you see above belongs to Jim "Catfish" Hunter. It put a lot of cash in his hands last year. Unfortunately, most people can't rely on their right arms to earn them that kind of money. So now and then, they need a loan. If you have a good reason to borrow, Planters National Bank has money to lend. Oliva's Limp Takes Twins Over Royals

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

After seven knee operations, Tony Oliva can still hit but he can't run. Monday night he learned that if he hits the ball far enough, he doesn't have to run very fast ... or very far. The 34-year-old Oliva, a three-time American League batting champion, spends most of his time these days as Minnesota's first base coach, with only an occasional trip to the plate.

Several times in road games he has been listed in the line-up as the leadoff hitter and second baseman to give him one hopefully productive turn at bat, but when the Twins take the field someone else takes his place. Manager Gene Mauch is hesitant to use him with runners on base and less than two out because a ground ball — almost any ground ball — means a certain double play.

But Monday night Oliva was sent up as a pinch hitter to start the 10th inning. He belted a drive off Marty Pattin that would have been a triple for even an average runner — and Oliva was once very much more than average — but he could only limp as far as second base in his bulky knee brace with his first hit of the season. One out later, Lyman Bostock came through with a pinch single that scored pinch runner Jerry Terrell from second base and gave the Twins a 5-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Oliva said his knee brace is "like the one Joe Namath wears. 'I can hit on it, but running ... there's just no way.'"

Elsewhere in the AL on a light baseball night, the Chicago White Sox ended the Texas Rangers' club record eight-game winning streak 7-6 in 11 innings and the Oakland A's trimmed the California Angels 6-3.

In the only National League contest, the Los Angeles Dodgers shaded the St. Louis Cardinals on Ron Cey's two-run homer in the ninth inning.

The Royals sent the game into extra innings with a run off Bert Blyleven in the bottom of the ninth on Fred Patek's triple and Al Cowens' double. The Twins blew leads of 1-0, 3-1 and 4-3 before protecting their 10th-inning advantage. Craig Kusick slammed a two-run homer for Minnesota and Amos Otis connected for KC.

White Sox 7, Rangers 6
Ralph Garr's hit-and-run double with one out in the 11th scored Pat Kelly from first base and snapped the Rangers' winning streak. Garr also belted a two-run homer in the ninth to give Chicago a 6-3 lead before the Rangers rallied for three runs in the bottom of the ninth. Kelly and Jorge Orta also homered for Chicago.

A's 6, Angels 3
Paul Mitchell, just back from the minors, pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10 and Sal Bando walloped a two-run homer as the A's defeated Nolan Ryan. It was the first victory of the season for Mitchell, who came to the A's as part of the trade that sent Reggie Jackson to Baltimore. Ryan fanned 12 but blew a 3-0 lead, built partially on Bobby Bonds' two-run homer. The A's took the lead on a two-run single by Bert Campaneris in the sixth inning.

Dodgers 4, Cardinals 3
Cey's game-winning homer came with one out after Dusty Baker opened the ninth with a single. Joe Ferguson hit a two-run homer off Pete Falcone in the seventh for the Dodgers' first two runs.

Denver Needs Basics To Catch NY Nets

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Nuggets feel they must get back to the basics if they aim to recapture their regular-season form tonight in Game Five of their American Basketball Association championship series with the New York Nets. "Since I've been here, our concept has been that we don't worry about what the other team does, we go out and play our game," said Denver Coach Larry Brown. "We've abandoned that, especially in the last game, and it's not going to work like that."

The Nuggets, who breezed to the ABA regular-season title with a 60-24 record, face extinction unless they can get their fast-break offense and pressing defense in operation.

The Nets, behind brilliant performances by Julius Erving, have taken a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven series. In Saturday night's 121-112 victory at Uniondale, N.Y., Erving tossed in 34 points, guards John Williamson and Brian Taylor had 24 and 23, respectively, and center Jim Eakins came off the bench to score 17.

"We may lose this thing, but we're going to lose it with the methods that got us this far, not with what we've been doing in this series," Brown promised.

Brown was so upset with his team's effort in the Saturday night loss that he scheduled a practice for today only eight hours before game time.

"We're going to get back to the basics of defense, with every man working hard and not begging for help," he said. "Our offense depends on our defense, and you cannot run if the other team is scoring almost at will."

At the same time Brown called for his team to re-establish its identity, he wondered if the Nugget players were simply too nice to compete for a league championship.

"We need a bully, don't we?" he suggested.

"Our guys have taken a few elbows, but we can't let the Nets get away with shoving us completely around," said Brown.

"I'm going to pick out seven or eight players who want to truly play and go with them. We'll find what our people are made of."

Despite the dressing down he gave his team, Brown is confident the tide of the series can be reversed. He pointed out that the Boston Celtics fell behind Philadelphia 3-1 in the National Basketball Association playoffs in 1967-68 but rallied to win.

"Unfortunately," he added, "we aren't playing like the Celtics."

If Game Six is necessary, it would be played in New York Thursday night. Game Seven would be in Denver Sunday.

SC Honors Accorded

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richard Wieters of The Citadel, who drew votes at three positions for the all-league team, has been named Southern Conference baseball player of the year, giving the Bulldogs what may be an unprecedented sweep of such honors.

The selection of Wieters by league coaches Monday came on the heels of the choice last fall of linebacker Brian Ruff of The Citadel as football player of the year and the naming this spring of the Bulldogs' Rod McKeever as basketball player of the year.

Wieters, who led the league in batting with a .418 average and who had a 6-4 record and 1.60 earned run average as a pitcher, was named to the all-conference team at first base but also received votes as a pitcher and designated hitter, where he was all-league a year ago.

He received three votes for the outstanding player to two for Furman pitcher Chris Mensing and one each for Furman outfielder Randy Howell and Richmond shortstop Kevin Harvey.

Tom Wall of conference champion Furman was a run-away choice as coach of the year, receiving seven of the eight votes. The other went to Chuck Boone, who coached Richmond to a second-place finish.

Graniteers, 6-2

Lance Searle and Tony Ellis, with two hits apiece, led the Graniteers to a 6-2 win over Big Value in a Little League game played at Guy Smith yesterday. The Graniteers scored their winning runs in the fifth inning when Isaac Smith singled and went to second on the left fielder's error. A wild pitch moved him to third, and he scored when Mike Tucker singled him in. Tucker scored on Bubba Briley's triple. Three insurance runs scored in the sixth when John Byrd walked and moved up on Searle's second single. Ellis cleared the bases with a home run.

Big Value took an early lead in the second when David Sneed reached on a fielder's choice, was wild pitched to third, and stole home. The Graniteers countered in the third when Stevie Holloman doubled moved to third on Ellis' single, and scored on a passed ball.

Big Value scored their other run in the fourth. Emmett Walsh reached second on a pitcher's error, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored on an infield out.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas senior left-hander Richard Wortham set an NCAA record for career wins Monday night as the Longhorns blanked St. Mary's of San Antonio 9-0. The win was No. 48 for Wortham against six losses. The record had been held by Arizona State's Craig Swan, who went 47-16 over his career.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are expected to be without the services of catcher Johnny Bench for a two-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates, who invade tonight.

Bench underwent an examination of his injured knee Monday and it was determined he has suffered a sprain, though not a serious one.

Optimists, 2-1

The Optimists scored twice in the third inning and made the runs stand for a 2-1 victory over the Lions at Elm Street Park yesterday afternoon.

With two out in the inning, Andy Hollomon reached on a fielder's choice, and scored on a single and two-base error by Ken Kirkland. Kirkland later scored when he stole home.

The Lions lone run came when leadoff batter Scott Galloway walked in the fourth, stole second, reached third on an infield out and scored on the first baseman's error. The Lions got a runner as far as second when Ed Frazier walked and stole second, but two strikeouts ended that threat.

Jeff Porter took the win for the Optimists, striking out 15 in the process. Roger Williams was the loser, though he fanned 13.

Squires Now Just Memory

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Basketball Association, which started the 1975-76 season with 10 franchises, is now down to six following the demise of the long-suffering Virginia Squires.

The ABA officially folded the troubled Virginia franchise on Monday, the Squires joining the Baltimore Claws, San Diego Sails and Utah Stars, the year's earlier casualties.

The death pronouncement was terse. "The Virginia Squires have failed to secure their obligations to the ABA and to the players," said Commissioner Dave DeBusschere. "As a result, the franchise has been terminated."

However, Squires General Manager Jack Anderson said he expected the team's owners to continue fighting for the club's survival. "Dave called me and said the franchise had been terminated," Anderson said from the team's headquarters in Norfolk, Va., Monday night. "As yet, I have not been able to relay this to our people (the owners of the Squires). I think tomorrow or the next day I'll have a heck of a reaction ..."

"In the next day or two, everybody will have to get together and see if we have any course of action available to us."

Janet Guthrie of New York City talks to teammate Dick Simon in the cockpit of the championship race car in the pits of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Monday. (AP Wirephoto)

Janet Guthrie's Runs Get Costly

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie's debut at the Indianapolis Speedway so far this week has been historic, somewhat disappointing, a little mysterious ... and very expensive.

Miss Guthrie, gaining notoriety as the first woman to try for a spot in the Indianapolis 500, made a couple of shakedown laps in her Ofenhauser-powered Vollstedt in practice Monday and was just about to start on her rookie test when the engine failed.

It was the second engine failure for the team in as many days, both problems being traced to the No. 1 cylinder. Her teammate, Dick Simon, was testing the car Saturday and Sunday when other problems cropped up.

"I've gone years without burning up cylinders, and now I've got two in a row and both the same one," said car owner Rolla Vollstedt. "We don't know if it's just a coincidence or what."

"Either way, it sure is getting expensive." Vollstedt estimates his bill for broken parts alone so far at Indy this month is at least $5,000.

"You can add $1,000 to that for labor. But I'd gladly spend $10,000 if I could just have the lost time back," Vollstedt said. "It's getting our whole program way behind schedule."

"Right now, I'm trying to beg, borrow, buy an engine from someone. I've got another engine, one of the new Ofenhausers, but that's a matter of putting it together. And we don't have the time for that."

"In fact, if we lose much more time, if it rains or something else breaks, we're going to be in real trouble on time." Vollstedt is not going to put his 1976 design machine, to be driven by Simon, on the track until the problems with Miss Guthrie's 1975 model are straightened out.

"I've got problems on my hands already, and I've put all my men on getting Janet's car together. We'd like her to get her rookie test out of the way before we start sorting out Dick's car," Vollstedt explained.

The car assigned to Simon has never been on any track before, and in fact, was only shipped in from Vollstedt's Portland, Ore., shop to the speedway Monday. Sorting out of new cars is vital, and time consuming. It has taken Vollstedt's team almost a year to refine the car to which Miss Guthrie is now assigned.

The design, when introduced last year, was so radical, so different, it could not be sorted out in time for the 500, so it was parked.

"That's the problem with this race," Vollstedt said, "it comes too soon. Of course, no matter how much time you have to prepare, it comes too soon."

Meanwhile, Vollstedt said Miss Guthrie is weathering the pressure well, although she has been the target of almost incessant media attention.

Teamwork Pays

The ECU Karate Club recently took 44 trophies from a tournament in Goldsboro, then went down to Tampa, Fla., to take top honors again. According to their coach, their success is due to their lack of individualism.

"Our club competes as a team and not as individuals," said coach Bill McDonald. "When one student loses, he or she is then rooting for a teammate. If the teammate wins, then the losing student is just as happy. Another reason for our success is just hard work," he added.

Cavs Must Score Points To Beat Boston

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

You can't score points if you don't shoot the ball, and you can't win basketball games if you don't score enough points. It sounds simple, but the Cleveland Cavaliers' failure to adhere to those basics is a major reason they trail the Boston

Celtics 2-0 in their National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series, which resumes tonight in Richfield, Ohio.

The Celtics' defense has had something to do with it, too. "Defense has been our best factor over the first two games," said Boston captain

John Havlicek, who will be in the lineup tonight despite reinjuring his left foot Sunday. "When the other team shoots 52 per cent and you still win, you must be doing something right. That something was defense — holding them to 75 shots."

The other NBA semifinal series resumes Wednesday night in Oakland. Surprising Phoenix tied that set at 2-2 by posting a 133-129 double-overtime victory over the defending champion Golden State Warriors Sunday behind reserve Keith Erickson's 28 points.

The Celtics limited Cleveland to just one basket over a stretch of 6½ minutes in the second half of Game Two in Boston Sunday, coming from behind to win 94-89. To turn things around, says Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch, his team has to stop bouncing the ball so much and take its shots.

"We dribbled too much," Fitch said of the second-game defeat. "Nobody wanted to shoot, and once again we weren't very considerate of the basketball. We're going to hold on to a practice session and the ball ain't gonna touch the floor at all."

Fitch became the focus of controversy over the weekend when it was reported he was planning to leave his dual post of coach and general manager after the playoffs because of a rift with club owner Nick Mileti. The Cleveland Press quoted Mileti as saying Fitch, despite having gained a three-year contract at $75,000 a year, had asked to be released so he could become coach of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Fitch refused comment, saying he was interested only in "winning games." But he denied ever having asked to leave to coach the Lakers or any other NBA team. Lakers owner Jack Kent Cooke also denied he had been in contact with Fitch.

Fitch is known to be unhappy with Mileti because he wasn't consulted on such matters as ticket sales in the quarter-final playoff series with Washington, some of the plans for televising games and the raising of next season's ticket prices.

"Second Round" Set For Flyers, Canadiens

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — The first round of the National Hockey League's championship prize fight is over, with the Montreal Canadiens holding a slight edge over the Philadelphia Flyers entering tonight's second round at the Forum.

As two boxers spend the first round of their fight seeing what tactics will and won't work, so did the Canadiens and the defending titlist Flyers spend Sunday night's opener.

"It was just a game of feeling each other out," said Flyers goaltender Wayne Stephenson, who lost the 4-3 decision with 1:22 remaining when Montreal's Guy Lapointe blasted home a 20-footer.

But Stephenson, like the rest of the Flyers, was anything but depressed over the defeat.

"How can you be down just because of the fact that they got the break and we didn't?" he asked. "We just made too many mistakes," added Philadelphia right wing Gary Dornhoefer. "We got caught too often on two-on-one and three-on-two breaks."

Flyers Coach Fred Shero agreed. "We can't have two wings floating against one defenseman all the time like we did Sunday. In the second period we weren't pulling back with them right away, and that gave them an awful lot of chances."

Montreal capitalized on two of the chances after falling behind 2-0 in the first period on

Philadelphia goals by Reggie Leach and Ross Lonsberry. But, settling down from a messy first session, the Canadiens charged back with tallies by Jim Roberts and Larry Robinson to tie it in the second.

Larry Goodenough restored the Flyers' lead early in the third period, but Jacques Lemaire beat Stephenson with a backhand that glanced into the net off the goalpost and Lapointe scored the winner in the closing minutes.

"The guys were a little tight," said Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer in explaining his team's slow start. "We've got six or seven guys who have never been in the Stanley Cup final and they were nervous."

"Part of the problem early on was we played nervous hockey," added Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden. "When that happens, you're more tentative with your plays; you're thinking more slowly, and consequently the other guy is on you more."

"In the second period, we were more assertive. That made it harder for the Flyers." And tonight Montreal will concentrate on being more assertive from the start against the two-time Cup winners. "We know what we've got to do," said Cournoyer.

Schmidt Talks Singles, Playing

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt doesn't talk like one of the most prolific home run hitters in major league baseball.

The Philadelphia Phillies' slugging third baseman has won two consecutive home run titles and has a good start on a third, but he'd rather talk about hitting singles and being a complete player.

"Home runs are fun to hit, but I'd rather hit four singles," said the talented Schmidt, who has 12 homers this year, including a record-tying 11 in the month of April. He is tied for the major league lead with Dave Kingman of the New York Mets.

His blasts represent exactly half of his total 24 hits. He has three more homers than he has singles, and Schmidt has a simple philosophy at the plate. "I just try to make contact and hit the ball somewhere, and I'll take what I can get," he said. "When I forget about the home runs, I swing easier at the ball ... hit more consistently. The home runs will come."

Consistency is an attribute Schmidt brings up when he talks of the complete player. "That's exactly what I'm going to be," he says firmly. "I want to be remembered as a guy who does everything well. I helped win a game with my glove and my ability to run bases," he said, remembering one of Philadelphia's victories last week.

"Every day I want to fit in somewhere, to help the team. My name's going to be in the papers for something different," he added. Schmidt takes a lot of pride in his fielding ability and his prowess on the basepaths. And rightly so.

He finished one vote behind Kenny Reitz last year for a Golden Glove award for a third baseman, and he enjoys making a great play in the field or starting a double play just as much as seeing one of his line drives clear the fence.

In addition, he doesn't hesitate to steal bases. He had 29 last year in 41 attempts. He's been successful in his only try this season.

Any conversation with the 6-foot-2, 195-pound Schmidt, however, leads to home runs.

A gifted athlete with tremendous upper body strength, Schmidt could talk for an hour on his home run hitting technique. The secret is simple, though.

"It's in the forearms and wrists, and popping right through," he said, giving a visual demonstration at an imaginary pitch.

Many sluggers are plagued by strikeouts, and Schmidt leads the pack in that distinction too. He was the major league strikeout king the past two years, fanning 180 times last year.

It was whiff or home run for Schmidt in April as the home runs and strikeouts came in bunches. "I wasn't hurting anybody in between," he said. "Just try to make contact. That's all you can do," he repeated.

"Lately, I've been hitting the ball better," he continued. "I was up to .324 but now I'm back down. It fluctuates a lot early in the season." But the talk of hitting for average brought out his one big desire. "I want to hit over .300," he said. "That's my personal goal." Schmidt wouldn't say if he could keep up his early pace. "I don't know what I'll do the rest of the year. It's impossible to say," he said. "I just go out there and do my job, try to have some fun, and let the chips fall where they may."

Injured Jockey Returns For Shot At Preakness

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Less than three months after he suffered multiple injuries in a serious race track spill, jockey Tony Agnello will compete for the first time in the $150,000-added Preakness Stakes.

"I never really went away, but it really feels good to be back," the 27-year-old jockey said at Pimlico Race Course, site of Saturday's 101st running of the 13-16 mile classic.

Agnello has won three races and finished second twice while accepting only eight mounts since resuming riding last Thursday. He will continue to be selective with his assignments this week as he prepares gradually for the ride aboard Cojak in the Preakness, second jewel in thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

As Cojak's regular rider last year, Agnello won four races including three stakes with the colt who went on to become the Maryland-bred 2-year-old champion of 1975.

Without Agnello, Cojak hasn't won in five starts this year and has resumed an old habit of lugging in.

"He used to lug in with me, too," Agnello recalled, "and he got beat doing it the first time I rode him. But I kind of got him straightened out. He was off for awhile early this year, being freshened up, and I guess that's when he got back into the habit."

Cojak bore in at the start of the Swift Handicap, finishing second by a nose, and had the same trouble in the stretch before losing by a head in the Gotham Stakes and finishing fifth in the Wood Memorial. He has no problem in the Kentucky Derby, but he wound up sixth.

Agnello was a patient at Doctor's Hospital in Lanham, Md., for a portion of that time, but he wasn't up to following races. Agnello tumbled to the ground at Bowie Race Course on Feb. 21, and then was struck by three following horses.

He suffered a punctured lung, 11 fractured ribs, a fractured left shoulder and a separated right shoulder. His ruptured spleen was removed in one operation and then he had to undergo more surgery after developing gangrene.

Even so, Agnello was told by doctors that he might be back in time for the Kentucky Derby on May 1. He didn't quite make it, but now he's ready for the Preakness.

"I'm feeling fine now," Agnello said. "If I felt any better, I couldn't stand it."

The 1-2-3 finishers in the Kentucky Derby, Bold Forbes, Honest Pleasure and Elocutionist, and eighth-place Play The Red will compete in the Preakness. The other starter in the six-horse field will be Life's Hope, who will be coupled with Bold Forbes as a Laz Berrara trained entry.

Whalers, Aeros Face Off

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) —

The surprising New England Whalers and the World Hockey Association champion Houston Aeros face off against each other tonight in an important game No. 4 for both teams.

The best-of-seven series between New England and Houston for the U.S. Division title stands at 2-1 in favor of the Whalers. They stunned the powerful Aeros in the series opener last week and then won 4-1 Sunday night behind rookie goaltender Cap Raeder in a game marked by strong Whaler forechecking.

A victory tonight for New England would increase the pressure on Houston as the series switches back to Aeros' ice for game No. 5 on Thursday. If needed, the sixth game is scheduled for Hartford on Saturday and the seventh for Houston on Sunday.

Both teams have suffered injuries in the current series and each will be without at least one player for the duration of the playoffs.

Houston's Larry Lund is out of action with a shoulder separation suffered Sunday night when he was checked late in the second period by New England's Ron Busniuk.

Squires

The Squires, on the verge of collapse all season because of inadequate financial support, had their franchise suspended by the ABA on Thursday. But the team's owners, headed by Van Cunningham, were given until Monday to come up with some last-ditch plan to save the franchise.

They had hoped to use a $100,000 letter of credit to pay off $85,000 in overdue payrolls and $20,000 in delinquent ABA assessments and regain admission to the league. But that bid was turned down.

DeBusschere said a decision on the dispersal of the Squires players would be made "in a few days."

Two of the team's top young players, guard Ticky Burben and forward Mel Bennett, said recently that since they had not received their salaries on time, they were now free agents. Burden was drafted one year ago by the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association, Bennett by the NBA Philadelphia 76ers.

The Squires had been owned by about 100 stockholders with Cunningham, the general partner, and about 20 others owning the vast majority of the stock. Cunningham and the other investors sank about $2 million into the Squires, trying to keep the team alive in hopes of a merger with the NBA.

In a preliminary merger proposal submitted to the NBA 10 days ago, the ABA had sought to have six of its franchises included in a consolidated pro league. Virginia's demise leaves the ABA with precisely six franchises: Denver, Indiana, Kentucky, New York, San Antonio and Salt Lake City.

HOW CAN A BANK ASK YOU TO SIGN A LOAN AGREEMENT ONLY BANKERS UNDERSTAND?

Most banks talk a lot about loans, but they don't talk much about what happens before you get the money.

Maybe it's because, in that sea of fine print and mumbo-jumbo that you sign, there are some "details."

"Details" that most people don't bother to read because they look complicated. And sound complicated.

But at NCNB, we think that you should know just what we expect from you and, more important, exactly what you can expect from us.

So we've rewritten our forms in plain English. Here's an example:

BANKER TALK VS. PEOPLE TALK

Debtor has good, indefeasible, marketable title thereto and will warrant and defend same against all claims. Debtor is not to, and will not attempt to transfer, sell or encumber the Collateral or use it for hire or in violation of any statute or ordinance.	You guarantee you have good and clear title to the Collateral and won't sell or dispose of it.
--	---

We don't have to do this, but we think it's something a bank should do.

WE HAVE $25 MILLION A MONTH TO LEND AND WE'RE GOING TO LEND IT.

So, instead of looking for ways to turn you down on a loan, we look for ways to make you the loan.

Which may be one reason why we lend money to more people than any other bank in North Carolina. Here's another:

WHEN YOU NEED A LOAN YOU NEED MONEY, NOT A RUNAROUND.

Most of the time, the bigger the bank, the longer you wait for an answer.

Because the person you ask has to ask someone else (who, often, may have to ask yet another someone else.)

But not at NCNB. The person that you talk with about the loan can give you the answer.

So, if you've got the idea that all bank loans are just one big hassle, come see us. At NCNB, we're in the business of making loans. Not hassles.

Find Discrimination In Trade Unions Prevalent

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission said today that widespread racial and sex discrimination prevails throughout the nation's building trades and trucking unions.

Despite numerous federal laws, court decisions and government programs, these unions "continue to restrict the employment opportunities of minorities and women," the commission said in a 291-page report issued today.

The commission said the discrimination "is less frequently caused by clear intent than it was a decade ago and more by apparently neutral, but still discriminatory, institutional practices."

The report contained 15 recommendations for strengthening federal employment opportunity programs, including one that would require unions that have agreements with federal construction contractors to set goals and timetables for the hiring of minorities and women.

N.C. Alcoholism Plan Is Available To Public

The 1976-77 North Carolina State Plan for the Prevention, Treatment and Control of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism is now available for inspection and inputs from interested individuals and groups.

The Department of Human Resources, Division of Mental Health Services, Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Services Section is the designated State Agency for the administration and maintenance of this State Plan and the Formula Grant Program described in the Plan. Some $1.3 million in formula grant funds are available for the 1976-77 fiscal year.

Any citizen or group may inspect this document and make suggestions for additions, deletions or amendments. Various groups may be eligible to compete for funds made available through the plan, in the manner specified in the plan.

The plan is available for inspection in Eastern North Carolina at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, any of the 13 Area Mental Health Centers or the Eastern Region Office of Mental Health, Alcohol Program. Anyone desiring to inspect the document at the Regional Office at 404 St. Andrews Drive, Greenville, should contact Overton.

Learned Marijuana Eyedrops Can Relieve Symptoms Of Glaucoma

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
RESTON, Va. (AP) — Marijuana eyedrops effectively relieve symptoms of glaucoma and are ready for tests on people suffering from the eye disease, researchers say. But those taking the drops will have to put up with a side effect — "getting high."

A Medical College of Georgia researcher said Monday that animal tests show liquid marijuana "is as good or better than any anti-glaucoma medication currently available."

Dr. Keith Green, associate professor of ophthalmology, said research emphasis was being placed on substances related to or derived from marijuana "that hopefully won't have the euphoric side effects."

Addressing a science writers' seminar sponsored here by Research to Prevent Blindness, Inc., Green said a new anti-glaucoma drug would give patients a valuable alternate treatment to the few drugs now available for this purpose. Glaucoma is a condition in which the fluids of the eye do not drain properly, causing a buildup of pressure within the eyeball. This pressure can damage the optic nerve and distort the structures of the eye, leading to loss of vision.

The condition is the third leading cause of blindness in the United States and affects an estimated two million persons.

If detected early, drug treatment can slow down or arrest glaucoma. But if this fails, frequently surgery is the outcome.

Green said he became interested in marijuana as a possible glaucoma drug in 1971 after a report by researchers at the Jules Stein Eye Institute in Los Angeles. That study found that volunteers who smoked marijuana showed a drop in pressure within the eye.

"The clinical potential of this finding was immediately obvious, although my approach was rather skeptical at first," Green said.

The researcher found that a single drop of marijuana's most active ingredient, called THC, dropped eye pressure in rabbits for five hours. The rabbits also got a marijuana "high."

In the latest studies, rabbits were given drops of THC-like substances twice a day for four months. The treatments dropped pressure within their eyes by 30 per cent or more, Green said.

The marijuana causes blood pressure in the eye to lower, he said. Reducing blood pressure causes less fluid to be forced into the eye.

Green said some marijuana derivatives do not cause as much of a "high" as others.

Nuclear Energy: your powerful servant.

Nuclear energy is one of the most abundant—and economical—sources of power available. Together with coal, it offers the best hope to meet America's growing need for electricity.

Consider the energy from one thimbleful of uranium. It would take 1,100 gallons of fuel oil to generate an equal amount of electricity. When you think about the way the cost of imported oil has risen, you can see the tremendous promise nuclear power holds.

How nuclear energy makes electricity.
What does fuel have to do with electricity?
Vepco uses large quantities of fuels, such as coal or oil, to make the steam that turns the generators that make electricity.

With nuclear power, however, small amounts of relatively inexpensive uranium can be used to generate electricity, saving a tremendous amount of fossil fuels for other uses.

How nuclear energy saves.
In 1975, Vepco's Surry Nuclear Power Station saved the nation at least 588 million gallons of oil. A comparable amount of electricity generated from oil would have cost Vepco's customers $125 million more. Even though nuclear power stations cost more to build today than fossil fuel plants, they produce electricity at less cost. Vepco's two nuclear generators at North Anna will mean additional fuel savings over coal or oil when they go into operation in 1977.

Nuclear power: a giant step for energy independence.

Foreign suppliers control the price of the residual oil used to generate your electricity. By developing our own energy sources at home, we can lessen our dependence on this costly foreign oil. And we can help assure America dependable, affordable electricity.

Nuclear power is a giant step toward this independence. But it's not the only way. Vepco also has converted its plants from oil to cheaper domestic coal wherever it will save our customers money. Plans for generating electricity from pumped storage hydroelectric power are being developed. And Vepco is encouraging conservation of electricity in every way possible.

Economical energy is a necessity.

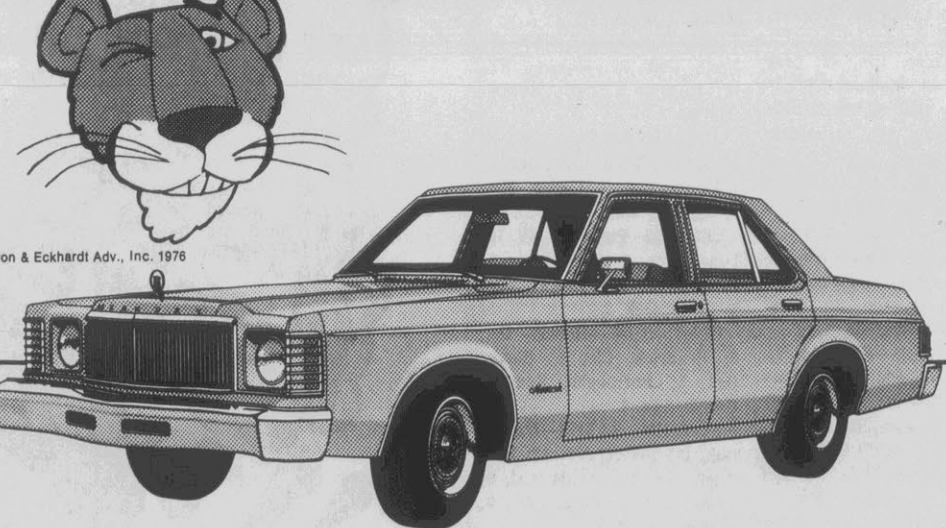

America depends on an adequate supply of electric energy. This energy provides jobs, food, conveniences—a standard of living that is the envy of hundreds of millions throughout the world.

By taking steps today to bring about energy independence, America can extend that standard of living to those of our fellow countrymen and women who do not share it today, and help all of us toward a more self-sufficient tomorrow.

America is a powerful idea. Let's keep it that way.

Root Beer Stand Leaps Into Amusement Park Field

By MARK L. KAUTZ
Associated Press Writer
SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP)
— In 1927, J. Willard Marriott opened a nine-stool root beer stand in Washington, D.C., financed mostly with high hopes. In the 49 years since then,

Marriott's Hot Shoppe has grown into a three-quarter billion dollar worldwide conglomerate of hotels and resorts, restaurants, airline caterers and cruise ships.

Now Marriott has taken a $140-million leap into the amusement park business. Two identical 65-acre parks, both called Great America, will combine peaches-and-cream, turn-of-the-century nostalgia with dozens of thrill rides, restaurants and gift shops.

The first park, which includes a reproduction of Marriott's original root beer stand, opened a month ago 45 miles south of San Francisco where a pear orchard once flourished. It's expected to attract 2.8 million visitors and gross $33 million over a 140-day season this year.

The second park will open north of Chicago on May 29, and a third is planned for the Washington area.

The parks are a seeming departure for Marriott Corp., second only to Holiday Inn in total lodging dollars and McDonald's in total food dollars. But J. W. Marriott Jr., president and chief executive officer, says he "couldn't be more optimistic about this new business of ours."

"We know, for instance, that about 40 per cent of Disney World's revenues come from food services and lodging. As successful specialists in these fields, Great America ... fits well into our policies and abilities."

With 19 restaurants inside the park, "we have more food service than any other park of this kind," he said. A Marriott Inn also is going up nearby for visitors who want to stay overnight.

Another good reason for entering the field, said Marriott, is that theme parks like Great America and Disneyland "are one of the real growth segments of the leisure time industry."

"Attendance has grown almost 400 per cent in 10 years. Last year, it was 40 per cent greater than the combined number of spectators at professional football, baseball and basketball games. Family entertainment is coming back in full force."

Visitors are bound to compare Great America with Disneyland, and Marriott officials believe this will work positively for them.

"It's good if people think we're of the Disneyland quality," said Bruce Burtch, the park's public affairs manager.

Like Disneyland, Great America is divided into sections or "themed areas." Disney has Frontierland and Mainstreet, U.S.A. Great America has Yukon Territory and Hometown Square, among others.

Marriott also has purchased the rights to Warner Bros. cartoon characters so that Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, Daffy Duck and 21 others can roam the park, just like Alice in Wonderland and Donald Duck at Disneyland. There are Bugs Bunny T-shirts for sale at Great America, and Bugs Bunny hats and even a Bugs Bunny watch.

"Our answer to the Mickey Mouse watch," said Burtch. "Although Bugs Bunny is sometimes referred to as 'Great America's host and spokesperson,'" Burtch said the cartoon characters are primarily "merchandise ideas that work well in amusement parks."

"Mickey Mouse is the symbol for Disney, but Bugs Bunny will never be the symbol for Great America. It's just an aid in marketing, merchandising and entertaining."

The decision to build an amusement park apparently scared some stockholders —

the stock plunged from about $28 a share to $6 after the plans were announced. It has since rebounded to about $17.

Earnings in 1975 were 68 cents a share, and so far are up 26 per cent in fiscal 1976, the company says. Sales are expected to reach nearly $900 million this year, up 15 per cent from fiscal 1975.

When Marriott decided to enter the amusement park business, corporation executives conducted a search of competing parks and recruited a management team with more than 500 combined years of experience in the business.

Hired as general manager was Truman Woodworth, a Disney cameraman in the depression who later rose to director of facilities at Disneyland. Marriott gave Mel Miller, a former curator of the Ringling Bros. circus museum, responsibility for Great America's atmosphere and authenticity.

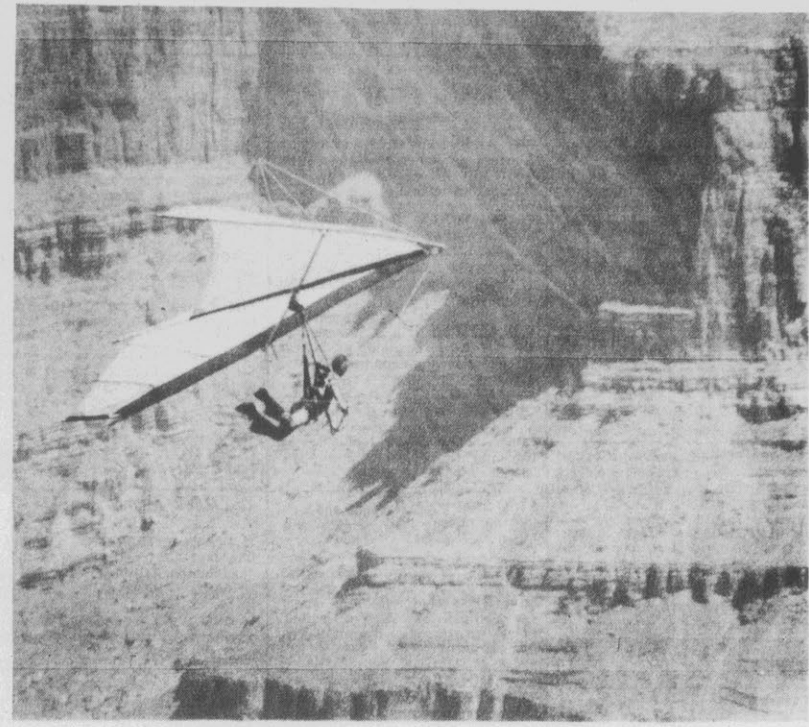

To design the park, Marriott hired Randall Duell, a former Hollywood set designer who was also the architect for Six Flags, the Carrows and other major theme parks.

Marriott also hired a research company to conduct demographic studies and find the best available park locations. The final sites were chosen for two reasons — no major competition within 200 miles, and when all three parks are completed, 70 per cent of the nation's population will be within a 500-mile radius of one of them.

Unlike Disneyland, which is a worldwide tourist attraction, Great America will advertise primarily on a regional basis. Burtch predicted that 80 per cent of the visitors here will be from Northern California; the rest from Southern California and conventions in San Francisco.

While Disney uses an hour-long television show to advertise its parks each week, Marriott executives are organizing a massive campaign throughout the Marriott empire, from the biggest inn right down to the local Bob's Big Boy restaurant and Farrell's Ice Cream Parlor.

"We can turn on an entire service industry conglomerate," said Burtch. "Every Marriott employe in the world (46,000) will be wearing a 'Visit Great America' button."

SOARING—A youth in a hang glider soars off the South Rim of the Grand Canyon Sunday. Five members of the Arizona Hang Glider Association received permission to test the feasibility of the sport in the canyon, although officials made it clear the activity is not open to the public. The five took turns spiraling 3,000 feet into the canyon, making the 15-minute floating descent from Maricopa Point, near Grand Canyon Village, to Plateau Point near a trail. (AP Wirephoto)

Bankers Look Back On Surviving Major Test

SOUTHAMPTON, Bermuda (AP) — The banking industry has successfully come through its most severe test since the depression 1930s—the last two years of recession and losses on some real estate loans—North Carolina bankers have been told.

The problems "were spawned by unrealistic economic and social policies in the nation," John F. Watlington Jr. of Winston-Salem, chief executive of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. said Monday.

"There is an obvious cause and effect relationship between the federal deficit spending we have had in the last decade, and the corrosive inflation, erratic economy and volatile money markets of the same period," he told the 80th annual convention of the North Carolina Bankers Association (NCBA) in the keynote address.

The banking industry has an obligation to speak out on the issues which affect it, and to take an active role in shaping the kind of sound and stable economic and social system on which it depends so heavily, Watlington said.

The strength of the banking system today is reflected in capital, loss reserves, earning power and liquidity, he added. He said one thing has remained constant throughout banking history, "the absolute necessity of public confidence and trust."

John F. McNair III, executive vice president of Wachovia, was elected president of the bankers association. His father, the late John F. McNair Jr. of Laurinburg, was president in 1948-1949.

Also elected were John A. Forlines Jr. of Granite Falls, president-elect; H.L. "Jack" Ruth Jr. of Lumberton, vice president, and L. Vincent Lowe Jr. of Wilson, treasurer.

Electronic banking, in which your paycheck will be deposited automatically and you will have little need for checks or cash, will present problems, but not unsolvable ones, to small independent banks, the bankers were told.

"Many people are now arguing that the hardware expenditure required for electronic banking technology is prohibitive for small, independent banks, and as a result they will not be able to compete."

"Attendance has grown almost 400 per cent in 10 years. Last year, it was 40 per cent greater than the combined number of spectators at professional football, baseball and basketball games. Family entertainment is coming back in full force."

Visitors are bound to compare Great America with Disneyland, and Marriott officials believe this will work positively for them.

"It's good if people think we're of the Disneyland quality," said Bruce Burtch, the park's public affairs manager.

Like Disneyland, Great America is divided into sections or "themed areas." Disney has Frontierland and Mainstreet, U.S.A. Great America has Yukon Territory and Hometown Square, among others.

Marriott also has purchased the rights to Warner Bros. cartoon characters so that Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, Daffy Duck and 21 others can roam the park, just like Alice in Wonderland and Donald Duck at Disneyland. There are Bugs Bunny T-shirts for sale at Great America, and Bugs Bunny hats and even a Bugs Bunny watch.

"Our answer to the Mickey Mouse watch," said Burtch. "Although Bugs Bunny is sometimes referred to as 'Great America's host and spokesperson,'" Burtch said the cartoon characters are primarily "merchandise ideas that work well in amusement parks."

"Mickey Mouse is the symbol for Disney, but Bugs Bunny will never be the symbol for Great America. It's just an aid in marketing, merchandising and entertaining."

The decision to build an amusement park apparently scared some stockholders —

the stock plunged from about $28 a share to $6 after the plans were announced. It has since rebounded to about $17.

Earnings in 1975 were 68 cents a share, and so far are up 26 per cent in fiscal 1976, the company says. Sales are expected to reach nearly $900 million this year, up 15 per cent from fiscal 1975.

When Marriott decided to enter the amusement park business, corporation executives conducted a search of competing parks and recruited a management team with more than 500 combined years of experience in the business.

Hired as general manager was Truman Woodworth, a Disney cameraman in the depression who later rose to director of facilities at Disneyland. Marriott gave Mel Miller, a former curator of the Ringling Bros. circus museum, responsibility for Great America's atmosphere and authenticity.

To design the park, Marriott hired Randall Duell, a former Hollywood set designer who was also the architect for Six Flags, the Carrows and other major theme parks.

Marriott also hired a research company to conduct demographic studies and find the best available park locations. The final sites were chosen for two reasons — no major competition within 200 miles, and when all three parks are completed, 70 per cent of the nation's population will be within a 500-mile radius of one of them.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 12, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to refuse to get involved in entanglements that require you to be forceful with associates. You can quietly formulate a better set of circumstances under which to operate in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care not to argue with your mate or there could be unpleasant results following. Go over debits and credits and make sure there are no errors.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Associates may not see things as you do, but listen to their views. One who opposes you could cause trouble if you are not careful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan time to work out an intelligent schedule so that you can tackle the work ahead of you and make headway. Take health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure not to overspend where pleasure is concerned or you could regret it later. Show increased devotion to loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid ticklish subjects at home or you could start a severe argument. More study is required on a new plan before putting it in operation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study written reports carefully and make sure they are correct. Find a better way to do your shopping and get better results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) First analyze your monetary position well before going ahead with a plan you have in mind. Consult a business expert for advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good day to go after that personal aim. Take time to improve your appearance. Take no chances with your good reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Attend to confidential affairs quietly for best results at this time. Show more devotion to family.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may want to contact friends for backing of a new plan you have in mind, but this is not the day. Relax tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try not to irk one who has power over your affairs. Handling credit matters wisely is most important at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make certain you study every detail of a new plan before taking action. Complete routine duties so you'll have more free time later.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have an indomitable will, so be sure that your progeny has the right training and that this fine quality is used in right directions. A fine leader here. Be sure to give ethical and religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

The bidding:
South West North East
2 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

The holdup play is an effective measure, both on defense and offense. But at times, there are ways to counteract it. Observe declarer's technique on this hand.

We are not overenthused with South's decision to open two no trump with one suit only semi-stopped. No doubt he feared the danger of North passing a one club opening bid. As it turns out, his decision did not affect the outcome, for a one-club opening bid would have drawn a one-heart response from North, enabling South to rebid three no trump with confidence.

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer could count eight top winners once the ace of hearts was forced out. The chances of establishing a ninth trick in clubs evaporated when East discarded a diamond at the first trick. Declarer now was forced to turn his attention to the heart suit in search of his fulfilling trick.

There was a temptation to lead the queen of hearts, but declarer realized that this would gain little, for capable defenders would allow declarer to win the first heart. As the cards lie, this would have doomed the contract. East would win the second round of hearts and return a diamond, and declarer would be short of entries to dummy to both establish and enjoy a second heart trick.

The secret of success was to prevent the defenders from holding up on the first heart trick. After winning the king of clubs, declarer led a low heart and finessed the eight! East was helpless. If he held up the jack, declarer would simply lead a heart to the queen, and the king of hearts would be set up while the king of spades was still in dummy as an entry. To counter this, East won the jack and shifted to a spade, but to no avail. Declarer won in his hand with the ace and led the queen of hearts—overtaking with dummy's king. Whether East won the ace now or later, declarer would have to come to two heart tricks and his contract.

Promoted, Transferred

Jacob Crandall, Soil Conservationist, has recently been promoted by the Soil Conservation Service and transferred from the Durham Field Office to the Greenville Field Office to join personnel in assisting the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District. Crandall's principal duty will be helping people prepare conservation plans for farms and other tracts of land.

Crandall first served with the Soil Conservation Service as a Student Trainee at Halifax, in the Summer of 1972. After graduating from A & T State University in 1973 with a BS degree in Agricultural Education, he served a year as a Soil Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service at Wilkesboro.

Crandall was born in Pactolus and lived at Conetoe. He was graduated from Conetoe High School in Edgecombe County. He is married to the former Rejoice Davis of Tarboro. The couple plans to make their home in Grimesland.

Ovid Pierce To Speak Thursday

East Carolina University novelist-in-residence Ovid Pierce will speak in Room 244 of Mendenhall Student Center Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

This appearance will be the noted writer's last public appearance before he retires from the faculty of ECU, says Vicki Shaw of Sigma Tau Delta English Honor Society, which is sponsoring the program. A question-and-answer session will follow his "remembrances." The public is invited.

Suit Demands Earlier Paroles

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A class action law suit has been filed in U. S. District Court seeking early release and stepped-up paroles for North Carolina's prisoners to end "unconstitutional overcrowding."

The suit also asks the court to enjoin the Division of Prisons from accepting any more inmates "until inmate population is reduced to the point where minimum constitutional standards are met."

Two volunteer Asheville attorneys, Russell P. Brannon and Allen H. Wellon, filed the suit Monday, saying they are taking the case without fee while petitioning the court not to impose court costs since prisoners have no financial resources.

State correction officials declined immediate comment on the suit except to acknowledge that prison overcrowding is serious. They also doubted that early release would be a solution.

A spokesman said state prison facilities were designed to handle 10,200 inmates. A recent count set the prison population at 13,200.

"There are 39 named plaintiffs but the suit was filed on behalf of all prisoners in the state," said Brannon. "There is no financing. The lawyers are providing their time for free."

However, he said the suit has the backing of the Yokefellow Ministry, a national group, and the Craggy Prison Support Group. Both are nondenominational, with local church members, and offer help, counsel and services both spiritual and personal to prison inmates.

Some members of the Craggy Prison Support Group were at the Asheville prison last September when a riot broke out and a woman member of the group was held hostage for a time.

Brannon said the suit has the backing of the two organizations and one, the Yokefellow Ministry, will attempt to raise money. If successful, Brannon said, the money will go toward court costs.

D. P. Torppa, deputy secretary of the Department of Corrections, conceded that state prisons are overcrowded. But he said he did not consider that an early release program was a viable step.

"Our No. 1 priority is really the security of the public," said Torppa. He added, "The effect would be very minimal. It would be a one-time thing. Then you would soon fill up again."

The suit charges that the prison overcrowding violates both state and federal constitutions by undermining education and rehabilitation programs, and creating "other equally significant failings."

The suit further asks the court to enjoin prisons from accepting more inmates until "constitutionally acceptable" programs are funded and developed.

Entry Time For Musicians

Local fiddlers and bluegrass musicians planning to enter the Eighth Annual Old Time Fiddler's and Bluegrass Convention competition to be held June 17, 18 and 19 at Chilhowie, Va. are urged to register before June 1 in order to have their names on the program.

A total of $1,930 will be given in awards in 13 separate individual and group categories. Registration forms can be obtained from Vance M. Yeary, 214 Huldale Avenue, Marion, Va., 24354.

Gravesite Theft Is Charged Man

Greenville Police Sunday night arrested a 42-year-old local man on charges of larceny from a cemetery after he allegedly took flowers from a gravesite.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Octobus Anthony Rogers of Greene Street was observed by police about 10:45 p.m., walking from Cherry Hill Cemetery at the intersection of Second and Pitt Streets with a white vase and flowers.

He said Rogers was charged with larceny and placed under a $200 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Woman Facing Fourth Straight IRS Audit

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte woman's income tax returns have been audited for three straight years and now she's facing her fourth straight audit.

Mrs. Katherine King, 38, says she cannot understand why the Internal Revenue Service keeps auditing her returns. She says she is especially mystified since the three previous audits turned up nothing wrong.

Mrs. King says her returns were audited in 1971, 1972, and 1973, and just last month she got word to appear for audit No. 4 on her 1974 return.

She said the 1971 and 1972 audits proved her returns were filed correctly and in 1973, the auditor discovered the government owed her $180 more than she had claimed.

"I feel like there is something going on. I can't believe that year after year I would get audited and it would be clear and it would happen again," she said.

At the IRS district office in Greensboro, public affairs spokesman Glenn Jones says it is unusual for a taxpayer to be audited even two years in a row. He said Mrs. King may be the victim of a persistent computer.

When told about Mrs. King's situation — involving a 101-year-old aunt she claims as a dependent — Jones said that might be the hangup.

"Sometimes when the relative is not immediate, it is questioned. The computer kicks out returns with a high potential for error," he said.

Jones said it was surprising, however, for Mrs. King to be audited four years in a row.

Mrs. King said the audits are upsetting and a time-consuming inconvenience.

"I love my country, but I'm really angry to think I, a middle class, tax-paying, law-abiding citizen, get singled out every year while hundreds of high-income tax evaders never get checked," said Mrs. King as she wondered what she could do to protest the IRS treatment.

Jones suggested she write to the director of the IRS Service Center in Memphis, Tenn., which handles North Carolina returns.

Announce Gift For Collection

A gift of $850.00 to the East Carolina Manuscript Collection by Dr. H. A. I. Sugg has been announced by the Manuscript Committee at East Carolina University.

This is the second substantial gift to the Manuscript Fund in recent weeks, intended to provide support for the Collection's expansion and development.

Dr. Sugg is a professor in the Political Science Department since 1967 where he specializes in international relations and comparative government.

The ECU Manuscript Endowment Fund established so that interested persons could contribute financially to the support of the Collection, established in 1965, which now contains over half a million manuscripts.

Infestation Of Lamprey Eels

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — An infestation of chestnut lamprey eels has been reported on the Niangua River arm of the Lake of the Ozarks.

The Department of Conservation says the eels are no danger or threat to other wildlife in the lake.
