Employment Issue Keys Demo Planks

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The programs the Democratic party is proposing on welfare, national health insurance and education can be financed without additional cost to the tax payer if the nation returns to full employment, party officials say.

The party was making full employment the central issue in the campaign platform that its 153-member platform committee was taking up today. A 15-member subcommittee completed work on a proposed draft Sunday.

Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, chairman of the platform committee, said Sunday that he expects the final platform to be "much more practical, much shorter, and much more general than the kinds of platforms that we've had in the past."

Speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," Anderson said the Democratic nominee undoubtedly will be Jimmy Carter. He said he hoped Carter would support the platform but that Carter should not be held responsible for implementing every plank if he is elected president.

Carter earlier had said the platform should be "a binding contract with the American people." A representative of opposed an antiabortion constitutional amendment, opposed deregulation of natural gas prices and would prohibit oil companies from owning other energy sources, such as coal mines.

It stopped short, however, of calling for a break-up of major oil company operations.

It supported mandatory busing of children to achieve school desegregation as "a judicial tool of last resort," but said other measures are preferable. There would be pardons for Vietnam war-draft-dodgers, but nothing was said about deserters.

The platform would prohibit covert or illegal operations by the nation's civilian and military intelligence agencies "except when there are compelling national security reasons."

Detente with the nation's "traditional adversaries" should be pursued while maintaining a "strong American military deterrent."

Dukakis said the government would pay much of the cost of the new programs out of the increased tax revenues and other savings that would be generated by the creation of new jobs in the economy.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, chairman of the drafting subcommittee, estimated the cost of programs in the platform at $30 billion, excluding national health insurance. The income guarantee program might cost about $15 billion, he said.

Among other things, the draft proposed a $5-billion to $7-billion cut in defense spending,

Tornadoes Strike Suburb Of Chicago

By The Associated Press
Four persons were killed and 23 injured when tornadoes ripped through the Chicago suburb of Lemont Sunday evening, flattening an eight-block residential area, police said.

Officials said they feared the death toll would rise when cleanup crews are able to search the remains of homes in the path of the twister.

"If there were people in those buildings, they may still be buried," State Trooper Dan Wicklund said. "We're afraid we'll be finding more fatalities." A spokesman for the Lemont Police Department said four persons were confirmed dead.

The eight-block area hit by the twister in Lemont, southwest of Chicago, was "completely leveled," police said. About 75 homes were reported damaged.

The National Weather Service said funnel clouds also touched down in the Chicago suburbs of Willow Springs, Lockport, Justice, Thelamont, Lombard, Downers Grove, Naperville, Hickory Hills and Palos Heights.

In Iowa, 20 tornadoes were reported during the weekend, and heavy winds, rain and hail battered the state.

Authorities said no deaths were reported in Iowa but that scores of cattle were killed. Farm houses near Jordan, Iowa, were demolished.

A winter-like snowstorm was reported in northern Utah, where a foot of snow on Monte Cristo Summit closed a highway near the Wyoming border.

Snow was also reported at Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Pocatello in Idaho, at Evansville, Wyo., and at Ogden, Utah.

Chicago was hit by torrential rains that prompted police to issue an emergency weather plan in case tornadoes moved into the city.

Chicago police reported that nearly 40 cars were stranded by high water along the Dan Ryan Expressway and other city thoroughfares.

Some motorists, they said, resorted to turning their cars around and driving the wrong way down the expressway to escape the water.

Syrians Resume Attacks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces fractured the cease-fire in Lebanon again today with a sweep into southern Lebanon and artillery attacks on Sidon and Moslem hill towns north of Beirut, the Palestinians and their leftist Lebanese allies charged.

Iraq, at odds with Syria, sent more troops to the Syrian border, the Iraqi radio said.

Kamal Jumblatt, leader of the Lebanese Moslem leftists, accused the Syrians of "laying an air, sea and land famine siege on Beirut and all Moslem ports in northern and southern Lebanon to try to subdue us."

He claimed that Syrian warships were intercepting food ships bound for Sidon, Tyre and Tripoli, the three Moslem ports. Although gasoline and flour were scarce in Beirut, fruit and vegetables were readily available, indicating they were coming in from farms in southern Lebanon.

In Tel Aviv, the daily newspaper Maariv reported that hundreds of Lebanese civilians have received treatment from Israeli army medics along the Israel-Lebanon border in recent weeks.

It was not clear if the civilians were treated for diseases or wounds from the Lebanese war.

Some Stranded Motorists Are Gang Victims

CHICAGO (AP) — Bands of youths roving over Chicago's South Side late Sunday night and early today attacked motorists stranded by torrential rains on flood roads and at viaducts.

A Buffalo Grove woman was shot to death and an Indiana man was attacked with a baseball bat, police said. Authorities said at least 15 assaults were reported by 2 a.m. today. Extra police officers were pulled into the Brighton District to help control the situation which was created when motorists left the Dan Ryan Expressway, which was blocked by flood waters between 75th and 69th streets. Their cars stalled in flooded areas and at viaducts on side streets.

Phyllis Anderson, 51, of Buffalo Grove was shot to death and her husband, Leo, 51, was critically wounded in the head when they refused to allow a gang of youths to push their car through a viaduct at 69th Street and Harvard Avenue for $10. Their three children were cut by flying glass when three shots were fired from a handgun into their car.

In an attack in a viaduct at 75th Street and Steward Avenue, police said Edward Rosen, 35, of Schererville, Ind., finance director of St. Francis Hospital in Blue Island, suffered a broken jaw and wounds to the left cheek when attacked by youths carrying baseball bats. Rosen was listed in good condition.

The Illinois Department of Transportation closed the Dan Ryan in both directions for several hours during the early morning, but by 6 a.m. three of the four north bound lanes were open.

Fire department scuba divers and pumping equipment were at the scene trying to clear clogged inlets to drainage sewers. More than three inches of rain fell on Chicago within an hour Sunday night.

The Dan Ryan rapid transit trains were working only to 69th street due to flooding, but full service was restored by rush hour. About 40 viaducts were flooded on the south and southwest sides of the city, interrupting bus service and auto traffic.

One state official says at least 15 cars were under water on the Dan Ryan between 87th and 39th streets.

Six, two-car trains were stalled in the flooded area with several hundred passengers aboard late Sunday night. A Chicago Transit Authority spokesman said the trains were evacuated several hours after they stalled.

A spokesman for the Department of Transportation said the flooding of the Dan Ryan may have been caused by a broken watermain. The fire department scuba divers were reportedly going to enter the sewer system in an effort to relieve the flooding.

Refuse Review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to review the scope of court-ordered busing in the racially troubled Boston school system.

The justices left undisturbed a plan adopted by U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. of Boston under which 21,000 pupils are being bused to achieve desegregation.

Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, the Boston School Committee and the Boston Home and School Association had appealed to the high court from a decision of the U.S. Circuit Court in Boston upholding Garrity's order.

The Justice Department considered intervening in the case to seek curbs on the power of federal courts to impose busing. However, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi announced on May 29 that it would not do so.

Colleen Gardner Broadens Scandal

By G. EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colleen Gardner, who has accused a congressman of paying her a high salary to provide him with sex, said today some men on Capitol staffs have told her their jobs required homosexual activities with congressmen.

Mrs. Gardner, a 28-year-old divorcee, refused to say how many congressmen or staff members are involved in the alleged homosexual activities. She also refused to identify them.

She said in an interview with The Associated Press she is prepared to provide federal investigators with copies of tape-recordings documenting her allegation that Rep. John Young, D-Tex., pressured her and other women on his staff into providing him with sex.

In addition to Young, other lawmakers embroiled in accusations involving sex with women include Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska, Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio and retired Rep. Kenneth J. Gray of Illinois. All are Democrats. All deny knowledge of any criminal wrongdoing on their parts.

Meanwhile, a source said Elizabeth Ray, the 33-year-old blonde who claims Congressman Hays was paying her $14,000 a year in government salary to be his mistress, is willing to take a lie detector test and give federal investigators her secret, handwritten diaries.

The source also said Miss Ray is keeping other documentary material in a safe deposit box, expected to be opened sometime this week in the presence of FBI agents. The diaries describe Miss Ray's activities in 1975 and part of 1976, when she was Hays' mistress, the source said. The other material was not described, but the source said it could include some earlier diaries or fragments of diaries.

Miss Ray returned to Washington Sunday after visiting England to promote her new book, described as a novel about sex in the capital.

In a separate development, Rep. Allan T. Howe, D-Utah, arrested by Salt Lake City police who said they caught him propositioning two policewomen posing as prostitutes, denied any wrongdoing.

Howe, 48, said he was "lured to the scene of the incident under the false pretenses of an invitation to a political gathering." He declined to give other details.

The Utah congressman, who could be jailed for up to six months and given a $299 fine if found guilty, was released on personal bond. He returned to (Continued on page 6)

ROUTE QUESTIONED

When the public transit system is set up, will there be a route in the Lakeview Terrace area? When the schedule was published in the paper, this area was not mentioned.

City Planner John Schofield answered your question. "That closest the public transit route, as presently formulated, comes to Lakeview Terrace is Glendale Courts. It doesn't seem possible to set up a 59-minute schedule and include Lakeview Terrace at the present time. However, we know there are about 100 families living in this complex and that many of them would probably use city buses. We're hoping that the schedule can be revised somehow to service this area. Once the section of street to connect Arlington Street and Arlington Boulevard is completed, it will be more easily done," he said.

REFUND

I mailed a personal check for $18.95 Feb. 26 to Haband Company of Patterson, N.J. for two pairs of pants for my husband. I got the check back in my March Bank statement, but no merchandise. I wrote them two letters and have got only one card saying that that pants shipment supply was out. I wrote again requesting a refund, but have heard nothing. Please ask them for my refund. Mrs. H. We wrote the company for you June 1 and June 7 you reported that you received a refund check from the company.

A Different 'Mix' In N.C. Demo Delegation

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is sending a delegation to the Democratic national convention that is substantially older, wealthier and better educated than the population as a whole.

The delegation is also disproportionately white and male.

An Associated Press survey of 59 of the 61 delegates found that they have more in common than an overwhelming intent to vote for Georgia's Jimmy Carter on the first convention ballot.

More than two-thirds of them are men. There are 16 women in the delegation, representing a sharp drop from the 1972 figures, when 30 of the 64 delegates were female.

A women's caucus Saturday laid the blame partly on changes in the party rules that eliminate the 1972 quotas for minority groups. Other women said that they had failed to band together to elect female delegates.

The same might have been said at a black caucus. They form another group with less representation. Blacks hold eight of the 61 posts this year, compared to 13 of 64 in 1972.

Young people also lost ground. Nearly 20 per cent of the 1972 delegation was under the age of 30. This year, there are seven under 30. Two of them are students.

Of the other delegates, 13 are in their 30s, 16 are in their 40s, and 18 are in their 50s. At the other end of the spectrum, senior citizens are few. Four of the delegates are in their 60s and one, F. Piercy Carter of Asheville, is 74.

The delegates pursue a wide range of occupations, but most of them wear white collars when they work. Seven are lawyers or doctors; 18 are businessmen or managers; seven are teachers; four are housewives, and four are farmers. Six of them say they do blue collar industrial or clerical work. Only two belong to labor unions.

Educational levels are also high. In a state where less than half of the young people get any education beyond high school, more than half of the delegates are college graduates. Many of the 33 in that category have post graduate training and degrees.

Their incomes reflect their education and occupations.

More than half, or 32, say they live in households where the annual income exceeds $25,000. Twenty-five list their annual household income between $10,000 and $25,000. Only two say their household income is less than $10,000.

The delegation's ratio of women and blacks increased dramatically over the weekend at the state convention, where 15 at-large delegates were added to the 46 chosen at district conventions.

The party nominating committee, seeking to accommodate the dissatisfied groups, proposed a slate of 15 which included 10 women and four blacks. It was approved by overwhelming votes.

The proportion of blacks might have been higher except that Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace had to approve the nominees for the 25 spots he won in the March primary. Wallace approved no blacks.

After the convention, the delegation held its first caucus. With the solid support of the Wallace bloc, state party chairman James Sugg defeated Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., for the post of delegation chairman. The vote was 46-42.

Prefers 'Mary Hartman,' Phone to Homework

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 15-year-old daughter. Here is her routine: The minute she comes home from school, she turns on the TV and watches it until suppertime. Right after supper she calls her girlfriend, and they yak for about an hour. Then her boyfriend calls her, and they yak for another hour.

Then she takes a bath and washes her hair. After that, she watches "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." When it's over, she calls her girlfriend, and they discuss it.

THEN she starts to do her homework. By that time she is all tired out. Her grades are barely passing, and she complains that the teachers give her too much homework. I tell her if she'd start her homework earlier, it wouldn't be "too much."

Abby, how does a mother get through to a 15-year-old with habits like these?

TALKING TO A WALL

DEAR TALKING: You are about 10 years too late to change the work habits (or more appropriately "non-work habits") of your 15-year-old, but try anyway. Insist that she do her homework as soon as she comes home from school. And if she heads for the TV say, "Nothing doing. Nothing doing!"

DEAR ABBY: I know you've had some pretty far-out problems in your life, but this one will surely take the cake. I am a 16-year-old boy, and to put it bluntly, I've fallen in love with one of my teachers. You may think that's normal for a kid my age, but the teacher happens to be a male, and he's a priest as well.

Although I've never considered myself completely gay, I know love when it happens, and believe me, this is love. I've even considered going into the priesthood just to have more in common with him, but I'm not sure I'd make a good priest.

When this teacher talks to me, I just clam up, so he probably thinks I'm just quiet, so we don't have the greatest relationship. I don't know many girls because this is an all-boy school, but I've dated some.

I know I need some kind of help, but don't suggest a school counselor. I could never face one. I know I'm all mixed up, but I'm not crazy. I keep thinking about this teacher night and day, and that's not normal. Please help me.

MIXED UP

DEAR MIXED: You DO need help, and the best available near you is a school counselor. He's heard your story before (and so have I), so there's no reason to be ashamed. You must talk this out frankly with a professional. You may not even be gay (it could simply be a phase you're going through). I urge you to see a counselor.

DEAR ABBY: Can Cub Scouts join the Brownies now? LUKE IN SALEM, ORE.

DEAR LUKE: Not to my knowledge. If you're a Cub Scout, you'll have to make brownie points in your own den.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Water Supplier Wants To Quit

LANDIS, N.C. (AP) — D.C. Linn, who has operated a small, private water system near here for 25 years, says he can't make any money with only 65 customers and wants out.

The state Utilities Commission agrees, saying no one can make any money with a water business that small, but Linn must continue the service anyway.

The reason, the commission says, is that Linn's customers have nowhere else to turn.

"I don't know what they're going to do," said the 50-year-old contractor, and he nonetheless intends "to completely drop my interest in it Aug. 1."

Linn's system gets its water from the town of Landis, but Mayor Gene Beaver says Landis does not want to add Linn's system to the 1,000 water and sewer customers it already serves.

Linn began his business in the 1940s, buying what was then only a couple of meters from the previous owner.

The lots served by the system were part of the Linn family estate and were sold at auction.

He charges the average customer about $15 for three months, based on what Landis charges him for the water. Town customers get water and sewer service for an average minimum of $7 a quarter. The rate is doubled for town customers living outside the town limits.

Linn's customers say their service is good and rates are low compared with other places.

"We have explained that he can't just abandon the system without some alternative," said David Creaey, who heads the Utilities Commission's water and sewer division.

Thirteen Killed In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Two Gaston County men were killed Sunday night, sending North Carolina's weekend traffic death toll to 13.

The Highway Patrol said the weekend fatalities raised the toll for the year to 594, compared with 597 for the corresponding period of last year.

George Lee Groner, 20, of Cramerton and Marty Eugene Adams of Gastonia were killed instantly when their car ran off a rural paved road east of Gastonia and crashed into a tree, the patrol said. Groner was listed as the driver of the car.

Teri Smith Woodruff, 17, of Spring Hope was killed early Sunday when her car ran off the road and hit a tree on N.C. 98 one mile east of Franklin in Franklin County. Two other persons were injured in the accident.

The patrol said Louis Fuller, 28, of Lincolnton, died Saturday night when he stepped into the path of a car traveling on Main Street in Lincolnton.

A 90-year-old Reidsville man, Edward Steward, was killed Saturday afternoon when he was hit by a train as he walked across a railroad crossing in Rockingham County.

Eleven-month-old Tomekia G. Nixon of Route 1, Wilmington, died about 5 p.m. Saturday when the car in which she was riding collided with another car at an intersection on U.S. 17 7 1/2 miles north of Wilmington. Seven other persons were injured in the wreck, according to the patrol.

A Winston-Salem woman, Mary Helen Archie, 24, died when the car in which she was riding went out of control and hit a tree on a rural road in northern Davidson County. The accident occurred at 8:25 p.m. Saturday.

The patrol said Charles Linburg Taylor, 31, of Woodland was killed Saturday afternoon when the car he was driving ran off a rural road at a high rate of speed and hit a tree. The accident occurred near Potecasi in Northampton County.

A Hickory youth, Rickey Eugene Hoke, 16, died Friday night when a car hit the motorcycle he was riding. The accident occurred in an intersection in Hickory.

The patrol said James Moody Osborne, 16, of Scotland Neck, was killed Friday night when his car ran off the road and hit a tree one mile south of Scotland Neck in Halifax County.

A Hazelwood man, Jack Anthony Rogers, 19, was killed early Saturday when his car ran off the road and hit a tree one mile south of Waynesville. Joseph Richard Smith, 19, of Tarboro, died Saturday afternoon when he was thrown from his car after it ran off a highway near Tarboro in Edgecomb County.

A Henderson woman, Alice Allgood Coghill, 23, was killed Saturday morning when a car crossed the center line and hit her car on a highway near Henderson.

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Seeing Jimmy Carter as the probable Democratic nominee, southern Republican leaders have begun working on a strategy that they hope will at least stop a Democratic bandwagon in Dixie.

At a weekend conference of the Association of Southern Republican Chairmen, the former Georgia governor was the main topic in a closed meeting and most private discussions. Robert Shaw, North Carolina chairman, said the No. 1 topic discussed during the meeting was how to stop Carter.

There was no discussion, he said, of the ongoing battle for GOP nomination between President Ford and Ronald Reagan.

Some of those who attended the closed meeting said the Republican leaders reached general agreement on some points in a strategy for fighting Carter if he has the Democratic nomination, but they would not give details.

The chairmen said they have two problems: delivering votes in their states for the Republican presidential nominee; and, if Carter wins southern states, keeping that from having any effect on state and local GOP candidates.

Overall, the chairmen expressed optimism that they would do well with state and local races. While there was still some uncertainty about how to deal with Carter, some spokesmen said an effort will be made to make Carter appear to be a liberal.

Now that Carter is the undisputed Democratic frontrunner, the national media will focus on him and show him in greater detail, some Republican leaders said, adding that such attention would help their candidates.

Ed Weldon, the Alabama chairman, conceded the GOP has "a long way to go," but if Carter wins the nomination, "It couldn't be any worse than having to run with (Alabama Gov.) George Wallace on the other ticket."

North Carolina Gov. Jim Holshouser, host for the meeting, refused to comment on what took place in the closed meeting. But, his aide, Gene Anderson, said he found the chairmen "in a lot higher spirits than I would have thought."

The chairmen, he said, "see Carter as vulnerable... (with) support a mile wide and an inch deep. In these states they've got four or five particular issues they plan to zero in on already."

Meeting with the southern chairmen were national GOP officials and representatives of the White House and of the campaigns of Ford and Reagan.

er temperatures across most of the state, especially the northern sections.

This morning, the frontal system weakened and just about disappeared from the weather map. However, a ridge of high-pressure continued over North Carolina and produced a moist east and southeasterly flow of air. This moist flow will be enough to continue cloudy conditions across the state and there will also be a chance of showers or thundershowers over and near the mountains.

Around the state Sunday, the cloud cover and east to northeasterly winds kept daytime temperatures well below Saturday's readings. The one exception was Fayetteville, which had a high of 89 for the highest reading in the state.

In the mountains, afternoon highs were in the mid 80s, which was not much cooler than Saturday. Elsewhere, afternoon highs ranged from 68 at Greensboro to 84 at Wilmington. In general, Sunday's highs were anywhere from 10 to 20 degrees cooler than Saturday.

A few thundershowers developed over western sections of the state Sunday afternoon and night and spread as far east as the southern coastal plain. Rainfall amounts ranged from less than .10 inch at Greensboro to .86 inch at Hickory.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Sunday Afternoon

Miss Francine Elks and Thomas H. Cooke Jr. were united in holy matrimony Sunday at 4:00 p.m. in the Trinity Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Jack Paramore performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Redding B. Elks of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Cooke Sr. of Kinston.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Eloise Jagkson, organist and Sammy Pittman, who sang "Whither Thou Goest," "More" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal length gown of candlelight angel skin peau de soie. The high neckline was encircled with the peau fabric outlined in a roccaille pearl bead trim. The sheer Elizabethan yoke featured scalloped beadwork of pearls. The yoke was edged in the pearl trim. The fitted modified empire bodice was appliqued in pearls. The pearl edging accentuated the waistline and trimmed the short peau sleeve. An undersleeve of sheer organza featured a fitted cuff of peau de soie edged in pearls. The full skirt extended to an attached chapel length train.

The bride's headpiece was a cathedral length mantilla of illusion edged in Venise lace attached to a Juliet cap centered with pearls. This was an original design by her grandmother, Mrs. George W. Darden Jr., and a gift from her. She carried a cascade bouquet of white miniature carnations, orchids and yellow sweetheart roses tied with white satin. Miss Anne Dail of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of maize flocked sheer over maize taffeta designed with an open squared neckline defined by white applique lace. The sleeveless gown was styled with a wide Bertha collar of the flocked sheer. The full gored skirt fell from the raised waistline which was encircled with a band of the applied white lace. She wore a maize garden hat to complement her gown.

Bridesmaids were Miss Susie Cooke and Miss Judy Cooke of Kinston, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Nancy Barnhill of Charlotte, cousin of the bride, Miss Kim Norville and Miss Sarah Edwards of Greenville, Miss Sheila Sasser and Miss Gail Daniels of Mount Olive. Their gowns were styled identical to the honor attendant in Nile green flocked sheer with Nile green garden hats. The attendants carried semi-colonial bouquets of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath tied with bridal satin to complement their gowns. The attendants wore a cultured pearl necklace, a gift from the bride.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Groomsmen were Neil Elks, brother of the bride, George W. Darden III, uncle of the bride, both of Greenville, Chris Thompson, Eddie Maroules, Ricky Barrow, Ervin Clark, all of Kinston, and Mike Corbett of Farmville.

The flower girl was Miss Heather Joe Whitford, daughter of Mrs. Judy Whitford of Morehead City, cousin of the bride. She was dressed in a maize flocked sheer over maize taffeta floor length gown. She wore a maize garden hat and carried a white basket filled with rose petals and yellow and white daisies.

George W. Darden IV, cousin of the bride and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Darden III, served as ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow with a spray of yellow daisies and a bow of yellow satin.

The mother of the bride chose a pink knit formal dress with chiffon cape sleeves. She wore an orchid corsage to complement her outfit. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal gown of blue and a white orchid to complement her outfit.

Mrs. Hildred Darden and Mrs. Nancy Elks, the bride's grandmothers, Mrs. Laura Privette and Mrs. Mary Cooke, grandmothers of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church, with parents of the bride as host. Guests were greeted by Mr.

Miss Ginger Brock Weds Thomas A. Jamieson Jr.

Our Redeemer Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding Sunday of Miss Ginger Kaye Brock and Thomas August Jamieson Jr., both of Greenville. The double ring ceremony was performed at 3 p.m. by the Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wade Brock of Fayetteville, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cavanaugh of Warsaw. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas August Jamieson Sr. of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Eugene Horne of Fayetteville. She wore a white formal gown of quiana and pearl trimmed Venise lace, fashioned with a high neckline and pointed lace yoke over the empire bodice. Lace details were repeated on the long fitted sleeves. The A-line skirt featured a built-in chapel length train.

Her Juliet cap of matching lace and pearls was attached to a lace bordered, two-tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a bouquet of red rosebuds, baby's breath and white asters.

Miss Gail Costin of Warsaw served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Kathy Spell of Clinton, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Suzanne Soeder of Franklin, Tn., Miss Patricia Chase of Beulaville, and Miss Cynthia Jamieson and Miss Barbara Jamieson of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom.

The attendants all wore halter type gowns of blue flowered print on a candlelight background, accented with blue bows and long streamers, with fitted bodices. They wore matching blue picture hats and carried bouquets of multi-colored spring flowers with blue streamers.

The flower girl was Miss Laura Jones of Raleigh, niece of the bridegroom. She wore an A-line dress of blue flowered print on a candlelight background, with a square neckline, puffed sleeves and accented with a blue bow. She wore a matching bow in her hair and carried a basket of spring flower petals.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Dennis E. Brock of Wrightsville Beach, brother of the bride, and Gregory M. Pace of Hendersonville, Greg McLeod of Kinston, Stacy Evans of Greenville and Larry Bissette of Bailey. Alton Murdoch of and Mrs. Robert Norville of Greenville.

Guests were served wedding cake by Mrs. Walter Arsenneau and punch was poured by Mrs. George W. Darden III, aunts of the bride. Miss Yvonne Aman of Kinston presided at the register. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Edwards of Greenville.

Rice bags tied with green ribbons were distributed to the guests by Rita Jo Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dill Cooke of Dover, and Kelly Privette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Privette of Kinston, both cousins of the bridegroom.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of J. H. Rose High School and a 1976 graduate of Mount Olive College. She is presently employed at Mini-Skool, and plans to enter East Carolina University in the fall. The bridegroom is a 1974 graduate of Bethel Christian Academy, and attended Lincoln Memorial University in Tennessee. He is associated with Southern Life Insurance Co.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The couple was honored Saturday night at a dinner party for the wedding party, honoraries and family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arsenneau. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Arsenneau, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Barnhill, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Elks and Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Nethercutt.

Mrs. Billy Dail honored the bride and her attendants, mothers and grandmothers at a luncheon in her home Saturday.

Morehead City, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer. The church was decorated with an array of greenery and flowers featuring two standing baskets of gladioli, chrysanthemums and carnations of white and blue, flanked by two

Briefly Put: A Deal Is A Deal

North Carolina has told Health Applications Systems, Inc. that it will not increase the fixed monthly payments for administering the Medicaid program.

HAS entered in a contract with the state to meet Medicaid payments for a fixed amount. The program grew beyond expectations and the firm has asked for relief from the state.

Secretary of Human Resources Phillip J. Kirk said of the HAS request, "North Carolina will not substantially amend or change the current contract because it would void an agreement which the state finds workable and viable."

There is a 120-day cancellation clause in the agreement which HAS can resort to.

North Carolina's position on this matter is sound. The state made a business agreement for handling of Medicaid payments and changing that agreement now wouldn't be acceptable to the taxpayers.

Secretary Kirk should stick to his guns.

Natural Beauty Should Be Preserved

A long awaited day arrived last week when the Cape Lookout National Seashore was created on a 58-mile section of the Outer Banks.

The occasion was the turning over of the land by the state to the federal government. U. S. Parks Service officials said the land will be preserved in its natural state as much as possible.

That's fine with us. North Carolina's Outer Banks is one of the nation's unique shore lines and we hope its natural beauty can be preserved.

THIS AFTERNOON

College Costs Still Rising

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—A college education in North Carolina can cost you anywhere from $362 to $3,060 per year, depending on choice of school—and that's for tuition and required fees alone, not figuring room, board, and other essentials.

That wide range is seen in a complete listing of public and private colleges contained in the student costs section of the 1975-76 edition of "Statistical Abstract of Higher Education in North Carolina" published by the University of North Carolina. Study of the figures proves one thing—the cost of higher education is steadily going higher. With two exceptions, tuition and fees at all public four-year, private junior colleges increased this year over last.

Some Cuts
Queens College in Charlotte was one of those exceptions. That private school trimmed costs downward from $2,270 to $2,160 in an effort to attract more students. The other college which cut was Elizabeth City State University which went from $601 to $391; but continued among the more expensive public institutions.

The sharp difference between public and private school costs continues, with the average at a public campus running $500 compared to $1,374 at a private four-year school, and $1,346 at junior colleges.

That low rate at public institutions is for in-state students; the average cost for out-of-state students runs $2,004.

Among public schools, the N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem is most expensive, with tuition and fees of $681, followed by Elizabeth City at $591, Fayetteville at $581, and N.C. A&T in Greensboro at $544. The two latter schools had the biggest increases this year of all public colleges, jumping 18.3 per cent and 17.5 per cent respectively. The two largest universities charge $468 (Chapel Hill), and $324 (N.C. State).

Duke University at Durham is North Carolina's most expensive college, with annual tuition and fees totaling $3,060, up 10 per cent over last year's $2,780. Salem in Winston-Salem is second, charging $2,949 per year, followed closely by Davidson, Wake Forest, Guilford, Queens, St. Andrews, Warren Wilson, and Catawba—all above $2,000.

St. Mary's in Raleigh is the most expensive junior college, charging $1,784 per year for tuition and fees; but must be compared to Peace, also in Raleigh, which has a comprehensive charge of $2,780 for tuition, required fees, room, and board.

Junior Colleges
Most of the 10 junior colleges are fairly close to the $1,346 average, unlike the four-year schools which range from Duke at $3,160 down to the lowest (Barber-Scotia) at $1,045.

Overall tuition and fee increases this year over last averaged out this way: junior colleges up 10.1 per cent; private colleges up 8.6 per cent; public colleges up 5.5 per cent.

The big bargain in higher education in North Carolina continues to be the Community Colleges and Technical Institution system. Costa actually came down across the board for students taking college transfer work (junior college) in the 17 community colleges providing that service. Previously, those preparing to transfer to a four-year school were charged more tuition and fees than those in technical courses. That difference has been eliminated.

Thus, the community college tuition reflects an average drop of 18.4 per cent. The cost for an academic year at a community college ranges from a low of $102 at Central Piedmont in Charlotte to a high of $127 at College of the Albemarle. Isothermal, Lenoir, and Wilkes. The average is $120.

Located strategically across the state to provide driving access to almost any area, the system was designed to provide education and job skills at a price easily affordable.

ACADEMIC PECKING ORDER

Inequality In The Funding

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—The report presented recently to the University of North Carolina Board of Governors showed statistically that there has not been discrimination against the state's black campuses for some years.

The report did not, however, show that there has been no discrimination. On the contrary, it demonstrated that there is an elite group of two or three schools which receive disproportionate shares of the available dollars.

There is a rough equality, for example, between the state support of Appalachian State University and North Carolina Central University. One is white and one is black. In the 1974-75 school year, the combination of state aid and tuition money gave ASU $2,002 and NCCU $1,995.

The real disparity lies between schools on the level of Appalachian State and North Carolina Central and one of the two major research institutions, UNC-Chapel Hill. The combined amount of state aid and tuition per student at Chapel Hill is $4,054, or roughly twice the money spent on ASU and NCCU.

And the rich get richer. Because of its status, UNC-Chapel Hill gets federal grants and contracts. It has an endowment income. When all funding sources are taken into account, the per capita spending at UNC-Chapel Hill amounts to $10,382. That's about three times the amount spent per student at schools like Appalachian and N.C. Central.

There are reasons for the discrepancies. It is impossible to educate a doctoral student in physics for the same amount an undergraduate secondary education major requires. The physics student needs more equipment and more library books. The person who can teach him will demand a higher salary.

It may not be fair to the black engineering student at North Carolina A&T or the white English major at East Carolina, but there simply must be better teachers and better facilities at UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State to support the programs there.

Five years ago, when the unified university system was being debated in the legislature, there was fear in the ranks of the Chapel Hill loyalists. Some of them made dire predictions that the state was headed toward a homogenized university system in which everything would be exactly the same and no special provisions would be made for excellence.

It's now obvious that those fears were unfounded: From the beginning, the majority of the Board of Governors has consisted of people with ties to the elite schools—either as alumni or as former trustees.

"Those Chapel Hill people are running things," State Sen. Ralph Scott, observed recently. Symbolically enough, board chairman William Dees has a picture of Chapel Hill's Old Well on his office wall.

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

I read the June 8 article on the proposed county budget with alarm and a feeling that I'd read the article before. While not clearly stated, the County Commissioners propose to increase county property taxes by a whopping 20 per cent. 14 per cent for those who reside in the Greenville school district. The reason this all sounds familiar is because four years ago I transferred to Greenville from Buffalo, N.Y. Property taxes in Buffalo were four times as high as Greenville taxes. Others there were much higher, also. Every year it was the same story—property taxes "must" increase 15 to 20 per cent. When I left Buffalo in 1972 a lot of other people and businesses were leaving, too. They simply could not stand the tax burden. They were heading south to towns like Greenville, where the taxes were lower.

I wonder if the residents of Pitt County realize the implications of the proposed county budget. Sure, a 20 per cent increase in property taxes in one year doesn't amount to many dollars—only $31 for a property valued at $20,000 and $62 for one valued at $40,000. But suppose the trend continues, say a 20 per cent increase per year. Then, in five years our taxes will double and in 10 years they will be five times what they are now!

It's time for county residents to speak. Can you afford a 20 per cent property tax increase—not just this year, but in future years, also? In 10 years will Greenville have become the Buffalo of the South?

IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL

Many people profess to disbelieve absolutely the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. They point out that no scientific proof can be adduced for the existence of the soul, and that even if it does exist the dissolution of the body means the dying with it of any spiritual qualities which accompany life.

Many answers could be made to such a statement, and one is that life continues to exist although our bodies are in a perpetual state of decay. There is not a particle of our bodies which was in existence a decade ago. All of us have died in the past ten years, and every particle of our physical bodies has been replaced by something new. Yet something has persisted while this decay and replacement has been going on. This thing, if we call it a spirit, has not only survived but has appeared to grow wiser and better. Why, therefore, should we believe that when the final decay of the body comes, the spirit will die?

An Awful Lot To Expect

WASHINGTON—The Board of Education of the State of Virginia has issued an edict that in order for a student to receive a high school diploma he will have to be able to prove he can read, write and perform basic arithmetic computations.

If other states follow suit this radical step could eventually affect every high school student in the country. Although the Virginia board won't put the rule into effect until 1978, many students are already claiming that the decision violates the Constitution as cruel and unusual punishment.

"Like," a Virginia high school student told me, "I think that's an awful lot to expect of someone going to school. I mean they're asking us to prove we can read and write and also figure out decimals. How do they expect any of us to finish high school if they're going to make it that tough?"

"It does seem rather harsh," I admitted, "particularly since for 10 years high school graduates have not been required to prove they could do any of these things."

"It's not that we can't do any of them," he said. "Like in my class some kids can read, and I know some can write and others can add and subtract. But there's only about six that can do all three, ya' know?"

"I guess this will put more pressure on the teachers," I said.

"Yeah, they'll probably ruin the best years of our lives. I think a lot of kids will dropout of school if they're going to be expected to read and write and multiply and divide to get a diploma."

"Why do you think the board got so tough at this time?"

"They probably don't like kids. They're jealous of us because we have so much fun in high school. They're trying to turn us into robots."

"Perhaps," I said, "the colleges and universities have been putting pressure on them. I've heard that most universities are complaining that they have to spend so much time teaching high school graduates the fundamentals of reading and writing that they don't have time to devote to higher education subjects."

"What do they expect of us anyway?" he said. "After all, we're only kids. I'm not saying reading and writing don't help you in some situations, but I think it should be optional until you get to college. A lot of kids don't want to go to universities, so why should they be required to learn skills if they're never going to use them?"

"I don't have the answer," I said frankly. "Perhaps there are some taxpayers who feel that for all the money they spend on high schools in this country they would like to see the students come out of them with just three basic skills."

"Like maybe they feel that way, but a high school shouldn't be a prison where they tell you that you have to do this and you have to do that. It's a place where you should be able to expand your mind, ya' know. You're not going to learn about life out of books. A high school is a place where you make friends and learn how to drive a car, and go to concerts and stuff. A high school is where you root for the football team and the basketball team and have school spirit. That's what it's all about. Now they're going to load us up with homework and make us read books and write compositions and do math problems, and we're not going to have time for any of the things that really count."

I said, "The only thing I can say in the board of education's defense is that they have the decency to give you until 1978 to learn to read and write."

"They had to," he replied. "The class of 1977 never would have been able to do it."

Offer CB'ers A Role

By JERRY BAULCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government is encouraging CB radio operators to organize a nation-wide network of high-way safety broadcasters.

Sponsors of the program think CBers in emergencies might want to find "smokies" rather than avoid them.

The program, financed by the Transportation Department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, is based on concern that "many of those injured in highway crashes die needlessly or are permanently disabled because they do not receive prompt and proper emergency care," according to an agency booklet describing the program.

States would be encouraged to coordinate local governments in dispatching emergency personnel and equipment and to educate CBers on how to receive and report emergency information.

The program, using CB Channel 9 or other emergency channels, would broadcast highway safety information on an organized basis "to save lives, lessen the severity of injuries, protect property, restore the movement of traffic, provide information to the motorist relating to personal safety and enhance citizen participation in highway safety."

The CBers already get credit in many places for helping the police and people in trouble on the highways, but this is mostly on an individual basis. Few states or communities employ an organized effort.

There are an estimated 15 million to 20 million CB radios on the air.

The program is called "NEAR," meaning "National Emergency Aid Radio," and has the slogan "Help Is NEAR."

"Our goal is 100 per cent coverage, 24 hours per day," says a manual on the subject to be issued soon "When that is achieved, you can travel anywhere in the United States and obtain help and information relating to high-way safety through your CB set at any time."

A Formula For Oil Price-Fixing

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Several nations in the oil cartel reduced some crude oil prices this past week, apparently because of their earlier resolution of a sticky problem.

The dilemma for the cartel was how to set distance from markets, without touching off competition that would weaken its control on world prices.

The solution agreed to by the 13 nations in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries at their meeting in Bali, Indonesia, late last month was the adoption, at least in principle, of the so-called Algerian formula.

The formula takes into account the prices of the products that are ultimately refined from crude oil. For instance, higher gasoline prices in the United States and other countries could be used to justify higher prices for light crude oil, from which gasoline is refined.

Such was the case this past week. Libya said it will raise its price for light crude by 10 cents a barrel or more. "The heavy demand for light crude allows us to raise our prices now," oil minister Izzedin Alu Mabrouk said.

While gasoline consumption has been rising rapidly this year, particularly in the United States, the use of industrial fuel oil has remained low. Industrial activity declined during the recession, and relatively mild weather during the winter reduced the need for heating oil

The markets for heavy crude oil, used to make industrial fuel, have been correspondingly soft. And Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iran announced price cuts of about seven cents a barrel for heavy crude oil this past week.

These price changes are not likely to be noticed by U.S. consumers, oil experts here agree.

"They're just too tiny for anybody to take any notice of," said Prof. M.A. Adelman, an economist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

There were more price reductions for heavy fuel oil in the United States this past week, however. Exxon USA temporarily reduced the price on some of its products by as much as 40 cents a barrel, although a spokesman said the cut was not triggered by the OPEC reductions in crude prices.

Despite their reductions, some OPEC oil ministers were talking of higher overall crude prices later this year as the economic recovery perks up industrial activity.

"The impact of this new (Algerian pricing) system will not be felt in the major consuming countries in the short run," said Anthony Copp, an energy economist with Salomon Brothers, investment bankers in New York.

"Hence, the immediate impact of the Bali meeting is to forewarn industrial economies of impending price adjustments as demand gains strength."

A Lot Of Bad Days Face Book Salesman's Dream

By ROSEMARY YARDLEY
Greensboro Daily Record
Written for the AP
GREENSBORO, N.C. — The dog tried for a piece of his ankle as the young man walked up the front steps to ring the doorbell. The lady of the house, harried and frowning at the door, nearly chewed him up before he lauded his sales pitch.

"Hello, I'm Sherwood Hatfield. . .," he said in a mid-western grain-belt accent.

"Listen, I don't want to buy a thing, whatever it is you're selling," snapped the woman, glancing down at the heavy case he was carrying and the city map protruding from his shirt pocket.

"I've got hamburgers burning on the stove while I stand here talking to you," she complained, wiping her hands on an apron.

"I don't need any more Bibles, encyclopedias, magazines, dictionaries or whatever it is you've got in there."

"Well, if I could just step inside and show you. . .," tried Sherwood.

"I told you no. I don't want a thing, and you're making me burn up the hamburgers."

"Well, have a nice evening, anyway," said Sherwood as he stumbled down the steps, dodging the dog.

He'd been warned about her type at his one-week sales school, he thought as he slogged on to the next house, his face showing a weariness that comes on after a long day.

It had been a bad day for the 18-year-old University of Wisconsin student, who with six buddies had hit town a week earlier with bulging suitcases of books for sale and heady notions about making a mint.

The lousy day was a perfect ending for a lousy week, during which Sherwood had not sold a single book.

Nobody promised that Goldsboro would be a gold mine. In fact, his employer, the Southwest Publishing Co. of Memphis, had warned of a tough summer.

But nobody said it would be this tough. He'd walked the bottoms off his shoes, fended off rude dogs and collected blisters from lugging around a 21-pound book case.

"Sometimes I get really depressed," he said. "Today I got so tired I stopped at a gas station, grabbed a Coke for lunch and went around back to a tree and took a snooze. I felt a little better."

"But, you know, people tense up when they find out I'm a book salesman," he continued. "and that makes me kind of sad."

"I'm really not very good at the selling business yet," he said, displaying his wares — a book of children's Bible stories, a Bible encyclopedia and student study guides to history and math.

"The only selling I ever did was back home at Shultz's Market and it wasn't the same thing."

Sherwood's sales schedule is brutal. He helps wake the town at 8 a.m. when he starts knocking on doors. He finishes around 9 or 10 p.m. and thumbs back to his downtown motel room.

"I'll get used to the long days. They told us at sales school it takes 21 days to make a habit, and I've only been at this a week," he said, as if to reassure himself.

Sherwood got into the book business for two reasons. The oldest of four children, he wanted to help out the folks with his college bills.

Besides that, he thought it would help him handle a case of shyness.

"I have a hard time talking to people face to face. It makes me kind of nervous. So, I thought this kind of business would help me overcome it. And it is helping me."

Despite his less than spectacular sales record thus far, Sherwood says Greensboro is a good city with friendly natives.

"Nobody's been rude to me yet," he said.

But, what about the woman with the burning hamburgers? Wasn't she rude?

"Rude is when they knock you off the front porch," he explained.

Sherwood says he plans to stick it out here this summer through thick or thin sales. Once his commissions start rolling in, he says, he'll be in good shape.

Ordained 5 At Meeting

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Five men were ordained Sunday at the close of the 172nd annual convention of Lutherans in North Carolina at Lenoir Rhyne College here.

A congregation of nearly 1,000 persons, including 500 ministers, witnessed the ceremony.

The men were Charles T. Britton of Greensboro, who is going to serve in Malvern, Penn.; Kenneth W. Fink of Faith, going to Crouse, N.C.; Ronald C. Grunke of Durham, going to Kannapolis; Carl M. Pope of Statesville, going to Richfield; and Gary A. Weant of Salisbury, going to Dallas, N.C.

Two others, who were approved for ordination by the convention, will not be ordained until they accept calls to service in a church, according to a convention spokesman.

The convention also continued approval for ordination from last year for Dr. Inez Seagle of Lincolnton. She is the first North Carolina woman to be approved for ordination by the convention. She will be ordained when she accepts a call, the spokesman said.

The convention approved a $2,055,000 budget for 1977 and authorized a fund-raising drive for Lenoir Rhyne College, which will begin next year. Leaders hope the drive will net $2,000,000 for construction of a classroom building and an increased endowment for the college, the spokesman said.

The convention's business meeting abruptly Sunday morning because there was no quorum, the spokesman said. He said many ministers and delegates felt they should be in their home congregations for Sunday services.

way, they have established an academic pecking order that creates three or four relatively rigid classes of institutions.

The upper caste consists of UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State, and to a lesser extent, UNC-Greensboro; they are the schools which can grant the Ph.D. The middle caste has East Carolina, UNC-Charlotte, Appalachian State, Western Carolina, North Carolina Central and North Carolina A&T. Bringing up the rear are Pembroke State, UNC-Wilmington, UNC-Asheville, Elizabeth City State, Fayetteville State and Winston-Salem State.

Any school will be encouraged to seek improvement, as long as it stays within its class. None will be allowed to step out of class without the board's approval.

It used to be that a school like East Carolina could get an aggressive chancellor like Dr. Leo Jenkins, lobby independently at the legislature, and get itself moved up a notch in class by the addition of a medical school.

Those days are gone. Campus chancellors are now appointed by the board. There are rules that prohibit them from vigorously dissenting from board policy. There will not likely be any more end runs around the board.

Under the new setup, the East Carolinas, N.C. Centrals and UNC-Charlottes will have a better chance to surpass the elite schools on the basketball court than in the classroom.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The trend on the North Carolina hog market was mostly 25 to 50 cents higher today. Wilson 50.50-51.50; High Falls 49.50-50.50; Rocky Mount 51.00-51.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg, Benson, 52.50; Kinston 51.50-52.50; Tarboro and Bethel 48.50-49.00; Salisbury 49.00.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady today, with supplies adequate, demand good and weights desirable.

The North Carolina dock weighted average price is 42.15 cents per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,283,000.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market pushed ahead today in a carryover of buying from Friday's sharp advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed more than 3 points in the early going, and gainers outpaced losers by more than a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted that the market's upsurge late last week seemed to have attracted additional buyers.

They also cited encouragement over recent signs that interest rates were steadying after a substantial rise from their lows earlier in the year.

Today's early prices included RCA, up 1/4 at 26; Honeywell, 1/8 higher at 43 3/4; Chrysler, up 1/4 at 19 1/2, and Purex, ahead 3/4 at 15 1/2.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 14.41 to 978.80 for its sharpest gain in more than seven weeks.

Gainers outpaced losers by better than a 5-2 margin among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index rose 68 to 53.73.

Big Board volume stepped up to a three-week high of 19.47 million shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.02 at 102.77.

Scandal...

Copies of tapes made by Mrs. Gardner were obtained by The AP. One tape, of a discussion between Mrs. Gardner and another woman, described how the other woman felt she was coerced into sexual acts with Young. The other woman wept as she spoke.

Tapes of conversations between Mrs. Gardner and others contained more discussions of alleged coercion.

In her interview, Mrs. Gardner told The AP that women staffers dreaded rotating assignments to work in Young's office on Saturdays because frequently they would be left alone in the office with the congressman.

Young called women assigned to this duty "Lucky Lulu," she said.

Mrs. Gardner also said she was an eyewitness to a sexual encounter between Miss Ray and Sen. Gravel on then-Rep. Gray's houseboat on the Potomac River four years ago.

A knowledgeable source said Saturday that Miss Ray has told investigators she provided sex for Gravel on Aug. 10, 1972, after Gray, her boss at the time, told her to do so. She said Gray wanted to influence Gravel's support for a public works project, the source said.

According to the source, Miss Ray recalls Gray telling her at the time, "That was for the National Visitors Center." The center, a $44-million parking and information facility at Washington's Union Railway Station, was one of Gray's pet public works projects.

Gray, who retired from Congress last year, flatly denies the account. Gravel says he does not recall ever meeting Miss Ray.

Other sources say Miss Ray has told them much the same story.

Mrs. Gardner said she was aboard because Miss Ray invited her, telling her "it would be a social gathering, a normal, regular party like a million other people go to."

BULLOCK
RICHMOND, VA. — Mrs. Idella Willoughby Bullock, formerly of Fountain, died at her home Friday morning in Richmond, Va. Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. at Reids Chapel Missionary Baptist Church in Fountain with the Rev. J. L. Farmer officiating. Burial will follow in the Hemby Family Plot Cemetery, near Greenville.

Mrs. Bullock was a native of Pitt County. She was a member of Reids Chapel Baptist Church. Surviving are her husband, Eddie T. Bullock of the home; three daughters, Mrs. Catherine Williams, Mrs. Vivian Parker and Miss Idella Denise Bullock, all of Richmond, Va.; one son, Larry D. Bullock of the home; her mother, Mrs. Margaret H. Pitt of Fountain; her father, James T. Willoughby, Sr., of Richmond, Va.; three sisters, Mrs. Arie W. Wooten of Huntington, N.Y., Mrs. Annie W. Harrison of Tarboro and Mrs. Graceteen Palmer of Stanford, Conn.; three brothers, James T. Willoughby, Jr., of Fountain, Simon Willoughby of Keonville and James Earl Harris of Brooklyn, N.Y.; and three grandchildren.

Family visitation will be Tuesday from 8 to 9 p.m. at Hemby Memorial Funeral Chapel. The family will assemble at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Willoughby, Jr., in Fountain.

HOOKS
Mr. Pete Hooks, 509C Sheppard St., died Saturday at Pitt Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Mrs. Lillian Langley Hooks and a veteran of World War II. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Norcott and Co. Funeral Home, Greenville.

SAVAGE
Mr. Arthur Savage, 73, died Sunday morning in North Carolina Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill. He resided at 103 Hollywood Blvd., Havelock.

Funeral services will be conducted at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. John Aycock, his pastor. Burial will be in the Winterville Cemetery.

Mr. Savage, a native of Pitt County, was a resident of Winterville for many years while he was a member of the Pitt County Schools maintenance staff. In 1943 he moved to Havelock where he was employed at the Cherry Point Air Facility and following his retirement he entered the retail hardware business, retiring from it several years ago. He was a member of the First Methodist Church, Havelock.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Inez Oglesby Savage; a daughter, Mrs. F.F. Pyne of Mankato, Minn., a brother, Hubert Savage of Rocky Mount; and one grandson.

The family will be at the home of Mrs. Willie Mae Clabaugh, 215 West Main St., in Winterville and will receive friends at the funeral home from seen to nine o'clock tonight.

The key figure in gasoline consumption is the rate of annual growth. Federal officials have always expected gasoline usage to grow each year, given a growing population and more cars on the road.

Prior to the embargo, gasoline consumption was growing at a steady 5 or 6 per cent a year. It was the government hope that through voluntary conservation, the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and smaller cars, this could be held down to about 3 or 4 per cent. But with consumption for this year already estimated at more than 7 per cent ahead of last year, the country seems to be heading back to its old gasoline guzzling ways.

The result of the increase in consumption is increasing dependence on foreign oil and a stronger bargaining position for major foreign oil exporters. Imports now account for 40 per cent of the nation's oil consumption compared with 36 per cent in 1973, FEA says.

No one knows how much motorists are traveling now that warm weather is here, but the Federal Highway Administration says automobile travel totalled 313.4 billion vehicle miles in the first quarter of 1976 compared with 298.2 billion vehicle miles in the same period of 1975. A vehicle mile is a measurement obtained by multiplying the number of vehicles times the number of miles traveled.

If the 5.1 per cent increase recorded in the first quarter holds true for the remainder of

Little Old Ladies, Too

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Two Charlotte policemen who spend their off-duty hours watching for shoplifters have arrested persons ranging from an assistant bank vice president to a little old lady.

Patrolmen Jeff D. Ensminger, 31, and Chuck E. Pennington, 34, have been watching customers in a downtown drugstore since March when store manager William McCutcheon "got fed up with shoplifters."

From their perch on a plywood catwalk atop the shopping floor, they spotted 77 shoplifting incidents in the store during April and May. That was one-fifth of the shoplifting arrests made in Charlotte during the two months.

"The range of people is so wide that anyone who comes in the store is suspect," says Ensminger.

"Some of those little old ladies will walk off with the store if you're not careful. One said she thought the stores charge too much and she was entitled to the merchandise without paying."

The assistant bank vice president that the two arrested was charged with unlawfully concealing a 79-cent box of aspirin and $4.58 worth of razors. Two weeks after the arrest, the man died in an apparent suicide.

The offers also spotted a 19-year-old secretary who had taken about $1.50 worth of candy. She said she knew she shouldn't do it but she couldn't stop herself.

Ensminger said since he and Pennington have been working, the store has recovered about $520 in stolen merchandise. The officers say they arrest anyone they see shoplifting, no matter what the price of the item.

Persons arrested for shoplifting are usually prosecuted under unlawful concealment statutes that carry maximum sentences of six months and fines of $100.

Grave Diggers Uncover Fourth Of His Victims

By JOHN W. ZUCKER
Associated Press Writer
CANTERBURY, Conn. (AP)

A cross-country grave-digging expedition led by a parolee convicted of a sex crime has unearthed another body, the fourth person the man claims to have sexually molested and slain, authorities say.

The body of a 21-year-old woman was found Sunday in a grave near a lovers' lane after Robert D. Carr III pointed out the spot, police said.

Carr was not present during the digging after being flown here from Florida where he had been arrested. Authorities there said he told them of killing a teen-age girl, two youngsters and the woman here.

Last week, Carr led authorities to the graves of a 16-year-old girl and two 11-year-old boys in Louisiana and Mis-issippi. All three were from the Miami area, authorities said.

The latest burial ground pinpointed by the 32-year-old Norwich, Conn., man was a back road in this peaceful farming community of 3,000 persons in east-central Connecticut, authorities said. The body was described by officers as being in good condition, though they did not say how or when she died.

Police said they were withholding identification pending notification of the woman's relatives. An autopsy on the body was scheduled today.

Carr has not been charged in the woman's death. State police said Carr arrived in Connecticut late Saturday with two detectives from Dade County, Fla., where he was arrested two weeks ago.

Police said the woman had been reported missing in Hartford in early March. Carr was paroled from a Connecticut prison in October.

A state police spokesman refused to say if Carr had told authorities of more than the four bodies already unearthed.

Carr was paroled after serving less than three years on a sexual contact charge. The Norwich resident was arrested in Miami on May 31 and was charged with involuntary sexual battery, kidnaping and assault with intent to commit murder.

Under questioning after his arrest, Carr told sheriff's officials of the four graves and then led police on a grisly tour to a pair of graves near Bay St. Louis, Miss., and another in Gramercy, La.

Police said the two boys were killed in the fall of 1972, while Carr was free on bond after his Connecticut arrest. They were identified as Todd Payton and Mark Wilson, both of North Miami Beach.

Officials indicated that the girl, identified as Tammy Huntley of Miami, and the Hartford woman were killed after Carr was paroled.

Pitt Given Relief Quota

The Pitt County Red Cross recently received a requested quota of $1.171 as part of $5 million that the American Red Cross is sending to assist victims of Typhoon Pamela which destroyed parts of Guam and surrounding islands May 20-21.

The typhoon created extreme damage on the islands of Guam, Wake, Truk, Tinian, Saipan, and Rota according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Executive Secretary of the Pitt County Chapter of the Red Cross.

"Current information indicates that more than 13,000 families of Guam will require immediate assistance from the American Red Cross. In addition at least 2,000 from the island of Truk and an unknown amount from the other islands," Mrs. Taylor explained.

The United Fund of Pitt County supported the Pitt County Red Cross' quota by contributing $1,000. Citizens interested in contributing to the local Red Cross quota may send contributions to Pitt County Red Cross, P. O. Box 586, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

Beauty 'Often' A Disadvantage

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Beauty is often a disadvantage in pageants, says the new Miss North Carolina, Rutherford County's Susie Proffitt.

"If you're pretty, you're labeled a certain type of person," she said, adding that attractive persons often have to disprove the assumption that they are conceited.

Miss Proffitt, 22, a Western Carolina University graduate, was crowned Saturday night in the 1976 pageant at Winston-Salem's Memorial Coliseum.

Blood Supply 'Wiped Out'

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A weekend equipment failure at the Red Cross' blood bank at Charleston wiped out a 300-pint supply, officials said today.

Emergency shipments from other Red Cross blood banks were begun, with the first coming from Charlotte, N.C., at midmorning. Red Cross spokesman Dick Anderson said that would not even be enough for a disaster.

The Charleston center serves 26 hospitals in an 11-county area.

Anderson said the cause of the equipment failure was not immediately known. He said the refrigeration system, perhaps the compressor, failed sometime early in the weekend and the alarm also failed.

The loss was not discovered until Sunday night.

Indira Gandhi Concludes Her Tour Of Soviet

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India has left the Soviet Union after a six-day tour. She visited Yerevan, the capital of Soviet Armenia, and the city of Tbilisi in the Georgian republic.

During the visit no major new agreements were made public, but Mrs. Gandhi was accorded lavish hospitality and extensive publicity.

The visit ended with the Soviet news agency Tass reporting a declaration which said Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin would return the

Lee Supporters Will Organize

"Citizens-for-Lee" will hold an organizing meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in St. Gabriel's School.

This group is being formed to assist the candidacy of Howard Lee for lieutenant governor. Lee is the mayor of Chapel Hill and visited Greenville June 5 to encourage the formation of a Pitt County support committee.

Mrs. Lorena Warner is director of the Lee campaign and is assisted by Shirley Watson, a member of the City Council in Chapel Hill.

All Pitt County voters are invited to attend.

Conducted Home Dedication

The Senior Ladies Auxiliary of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church held a home dedication service at the home of Thaddeus Phillips in Whitakers Sunday.

Mrs. Flora Phillips Joyner of Greenville acted as hostess and Mrs. Launa Brewington, president, Mrs. Beatrice C. Maye conducted the dedication service and the group was given a tour of the home. Dinner was served.

Guests were the Roderick Phillips family, the Rich sisters, Mrs. Imogene Dupree and Danny, the Brother Blackwell and Dallas Mayo, all of Greenville; Mrs. Caludine Allen of Ayden; and Mrs. Mary Boddie of Tarboro.

Inman 'Scared To Death' On 16th Hole

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Joe Inman was in trouble. He had a two-shot lead, Tom Weiskopf was threatening, Inman had hit it crooked and, in his own words, "I was scared to death. I was absolutely petrified."

It was on the 16th hole in the storm-delayed final round of the Kemper Open Golf Tournament and the talkative Inman was trying to win his first pro title.

He had an awkward shot from the right rough, pulled his next one and was talking to it — "Aw, I hit it left. Come down. Come down."

Then: "Look out left." That's when the ball sailed over the heads of the drenched, umbrella-toting gallery and Inman was thinking of the water. "If it hits the cart path it goes in the water and I'm hitting four and I'm stony dead."

But the ball came to rest behind a tree near the 15th tee. Inman missed the green with his next shot but managed to salvage a bogey "and I was tickled to death, happy as a pig in slop, to get that five."

It left him with a one-shot lead and he brought it home, a winner with a closing, one-under-par 71 and a 277 total, 11 under par on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course. It was the first victory in three years of four-activity for the likeable, outgoing guy who grew up in nearby Greensboro, N.C., went to school at Wake Forest and now lives in Clover, S.C. The victory was worth $50,000 from the total purse of $250,000.

Inman, 28, became the fifth first-time winner on the tour this season and his triumph, he said, proves "nothing is impossible."

He won it by a single stroke over Weiskopf and Jones, the third-round leader. Weiskopf shot a 70 in the final round that was interrupted by a storm, was played partly in a drizzling rain and finished in a down-pour. Jones had a 73 for a tie at 278.

A group at 280 included U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, J.C. Snead, Charles Coody and Roger Maltbie. Coody, Snead and Graham had last round 71s, Maltbie a 70.

Mark Hayes missed that group by a stroke when he bogeyed the last hole. And by missing that tie for third, he missed a spot in the elite field for the World Series of Golf. The position, instead, goes to the absent Lee Trevino, who had to withdraw from this tournament and next week's U.S. Open because of an aching back.

Sixth Win For Pearson

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — David Pearson has captured his sixth NASCAR grand national win of the year with a 105.256 mile per hour win at the Riverside 400 after leading for the last third of the race.

The race wasn't quite as long as its title might suggest, however, since it was 400 kilometers, not miles.

"I like the shorter race a whole lot," Pearson said Sunday after his sixth victory in 10 Grand National races this year.

"I had to drive hard all the way but it sure beats four or five hours in that hot car. All the drivers have been talking about running shorter races for years, but this is the first time anyone has done anything about it."

It was the first American stock car race run at a metric distance.

Bobby Allison finished second in the Grand National series event at the Riverside International Raceway, only one and one-sixth seconds back of Pearson.

Racing in his Wood Brothers '75 Mercury, Pearson collected $15,000 for his "second straight win at Riverside. His total NASCAR earnings for the year are now $162,000.

Cale Yarborough led during the middle of the race. But Allison caught up in his '75 Mercury and a wheel-to-wheel duel followed until Yarborough's Junior Johnson '76 Chevrolet developed motor problems.

Sprinters Score In Meet

CHARLESTON, W.Va.—Four East Carolina University sprinters and four others who are ECU bound this fall did well in the National Track Hall of Fame meet here this weekend.

Members of the ECU track squad participating in the invitational meet for high school, college and open division runners, included Carter Suggs, Calvin Alston, Charlie Moss and George Jackson.

In addition, four high school participants from North Carolina who have signed to attend ECU took part in the meet. They included William Joyner from Rose High in Greenville, Billy Eitchenson from Mocksville, Bobby Phillips of Carthage, and Otis Melvin from Fayetteville.

Suggs placed second in the 100-yard dash with a time of :9.4 while Alston finished third in the 220 dash with a time of :21.3. Moss placed fourth in the 440 with a :48.8 time and Jackson took fourth place in the long jump with 22 feet, two inches.

Melvin placed first in the 100-yard dash with a :9.5 time and also recorded a first in the 220 with a time of :21.3. Both the 100 and 220 times are meet and track records for high school and represented the fastest times ever recorded on the Charleston track.

For his efforts, Melvin was voted the Most Outstanding Male Athlete at the meet.

In addition to Melvin's efforts, Joyner finished second to Melvin in the 100 with :9.8 and second to Melvin in the 220 with :21.8. Eitchenson was third in the long jump with 22 feet, eight inches, while Phillips finished second in the high hurdles with a time of :14.2.

Three Hits Led Chicod Effort

CHICOD — Louie Dixon's three hits led Chicod to a 3-2 win Saturday over Farmville in Pitt County Babe Ruth action.

Dixon, who had a triple among his trio of hits, was the only person to get more than one hit for Chicod while no one for Farmville had more than one safety. Tyson had a double for Farmville.

Bobby Orr Has New Security
BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr's new $3 million contract with the Chicago Black Hawks will give him lifetime security and cut his taxes by spreading the payments over 30 years, says the Boston Sunday Herald Advertiser.

Orr, for the past decade the premier defenseman for the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, joined Chicago last week after becoming a free agent. His attorney, Alan Eagleson, disclosed few details.

Orr, 28, played little last season because of injuries to his left knee.

NBA Weighs Additional Clubs

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer
HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — National Basketball Association owners were pondering today whether to admit four, five, six — or no — American Basketball Association teams for the 1976-77 season.

In an attempt to end pro basketball's costly war that has existed since the formation of the ABA in 1967, the NBA's top brass, headed by Commissioner Larry O'Brien, invited the younger league's leaders, including Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, to their annual summer meeting.

Under the four-team package, the NBA would take in Denver, Indiana, New York and San Antonio. If the five-team plan was accepted, Utah would be the added club. And should the NBA decide to increase its membership from 18 teams to 24, then Kentucky would be the other club.

That would mean the entire ABA — or what was left from the league which began with 10 franchises last season — would join the NBA, giving the 30-year-old league its largest enrollment in history.

O'Brien and his five-man merger committee were studying all aspects of the complicated plans today before submitting their suggestions to the 18-man Board of Governors for a vote. The decision was expected to be announced Tuesday, with 14 votes needed for passage.

"There are so many facets to the plans," said Mike Burke, president of the New York Knicks and a member of the merger committee. "The issues are players, politics, financial, legal and competitive, and they are so intertwined that none of the plans can be approached in a simplistic manner."

Ironically, it is the ABA which has submitted the plans, and it is the ABA's Players Association which could block some aspects of them.

The players' group would fight back, however, only if all six ABA teams were not included in the so-called merger agreement.

Prentiss Yancey, an Atlanta attorney who is executive director of the ABA players union, said that if only four clubs were accepted the group would take the case to court immediately.

If four teams were accepted, each would be charged an initial fee of $4.5 million to be paid over five years.

But their costs would go beyond that, because each team also would be required to reimburse the Utah and Kentucky teams, plus the ABA itself. The Nets still would even have an additional charge — territorial indemnification to the Knicks.

That would make the payments for Denver, Indiana and San Antonio between $6.5 million and $8 million, and for the Nets it could go as high as $12 million.

The high cost, of course, is one of the major stumbling blocks. The ABA has been talking big money, but it has yet to prove that it can afford it. And NBA owners are waiting to see it up front.

"The money has to be guaranteed," said Alan Rothenberg, representing Los Angeles owner Jack Kent Cooke.

Patriots Sign Wide Receivers

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Three wide receivers drafted by the New England Patriots have signed with the team on one-year contracts, the National Football League club announced.

They are David Quehl of Holy Cross, who caught 63 passes for 959 yards last season; Ricky Feacher of Mississippi Valley State, who snared 54 passes for 1,062 yards over two seasons, and Bernard Coleman of Bethune-Cookman, his school's top receiver.

OFF TO BIG START
NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Lou Piniella of the New York Yankees got off to a great hitting start this season. In his first five games he had nine hits in 16 trips to the plate.

Braves Add Hitting Power By Acquiring Giants' Montanez

ATLANTA (AP)—The Atlanta Braves added some punch to their weak-hitting lineup early today when they obtained first baseman Willie Montanez in a five-player deal with the San Francisco Giants.

Signed Son Of Scout Director

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Rick Peterson, son of Pittsburgh Pirate scouting-minor league director Harding Peterson, is among five recent draft picks signed by the Pirates.

The younger Peterson, 21, a student at Jacksonville University, is a left-handed pitcher. He was the Pirates 21st draft pick last week.

The other Pirate signees announced Sunday were all from Tennessee: sixth pick Charles Rouse, infielder, Knoxville; 13th pick James Rodgers, pitcher, Chattanooga; 17th pick Rick Honeycutt, first baseman, Knoxville; 24th pick, Robert Long, pitcher, Chattanooga.

WBL Announces 2 Exhibitions

SUDBURY, Mass. (AP)—The World Baseball League, organized three years ago, will present its first organized action with two all-star exhibition series against a team from Japan, says league President Marv Adelson.

He announced plans Sunday for a $100,000 winner-take-all, best-of-three games series scheduled in Hawaii Nov. 24-26. Two weeks later, the teams will move to Tokyo for a similar series.

The Braves also received shortstop Craig Robinson, who had been peddled by Atlanta to the Giants last season, and minor leaguer Mike Eden in exchange for first baseman Darrel Evans and second baseman Marty Perez.

Evans and Perez each were starters last season but were relegated to the bench this year.

"This trade adds punch to our lineup and helps our infield defense," said Atlanta General Manager John Alevizos, who announced the deal shortly after 1 a.m. today.

Montanez, 28, who had asked to be traded to a warm-weather city, was reportedly en route to the St. Louis Cardinals last week before the deal for the slick-fielding seven-year veteran fell through.

He is currently hitting .318 with 20 runs batted in. He batted .302 with 10 home runs and 101 runs batted in last year with the Giants after being obtained from the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Willie Montanez is one of the top hitters in the National League," said Alevizos, whose club is last in the league in hitting. "His track record proves that he is the type of offensive player you can build an offense around and he is having an outstanding season this year."

Evans, an eight-year veteran, had his best season in 1973 when he slammed 41 home runs, drove in 104 runs and batted .281. Last season he slipped to .243 with 22 homers and 73 RBI and was hitting only .173 with one home run and 10 RBI this season before being benched two weeks ago.

Perez, who like Evans is 29 and an eight-year veteran, was hitting .250 in limited playing time this season after coming off his best season in 1975 when he batted .275 with two home runs and 34 RBI.

Robinson, who saw little action in San Francisco, will be used in a utility role in Atlanta, Alevizos said.

Ted Turner, president of the Braves, was delighted with the deal.

"I have been talking to Willie Montanez' agent all day and we have come to a mutual agreement that Atlanta is a town where Willie wants to complete his career," said Turner who earlier in the season signed free agent pitcher Andy Messersmith to a multiyear contract in excess of $1 million.

"The Braves have the type of ball club that Willie wants to play on," said Turner. "He likes what we are trying to do with the Braves in Atlanta and wants to be part of our efforts to bring a pennant contender to the town."

Montanez and Robinson are expected to be in a Braves' uniform Tuesday night in St. Louis.

Randy Jones Notches 12th Win Against Philadelphia

By KEN RAPPOPORT
 AP Sports Writer

What does Randy Jones want this year? A 30-game season? Christy Mathewson's no-walk record? The Cy Young Award? No, all Jones wants is his next game. Really.

"The future," he says, "will take care of itself. There's no need to think about anything except winning No. 13."

The way Jones is pitching, the future seems to be here already. The San Diego left-hander is by far the hottest thing in baseball this year — and Sunday put victory notch No. 12 on his belt.

"I guess I'm just hot against them," said Jones after shutting out Philadelphia 5-0 in the first game of a doubleheader, the second time he's done that to the heavy-hitting Phillies this year.

The Phillies had no better luck in the second game, losing a 4-3 decision to the Padres.

The Phillies were able to manufacture just six singles and came away with the frustration of having failed to get an extra-base hit in a game for the first time this season. Incidentally, Jones has been the only pitcher to shut them out this year.

"They're a tough lineup and you have to be careful with them," said Jones, who raised his record to 12-2 and lowered his ERA to 2.10.

Jones not only didn't give up many hits but also didn't issue one base on balls, giving him a string of 55 innings of no walks.

That leaves him 13 innings shy of Mathewson's monumental record.

"I haven't given that record a thought," said Jones. "All I'm concentrating on is winning and remaining consistent."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos 6-3; the Chicago Cubs trimmed the Houston Astros 8-3; the Pittsburgh Pirates nipped the Atlanta Braves 6-5; the New York Mets took a doubleheader from the San Francisco Giants 4-2 and 4-1 and the Cincinnati Reds whipped St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 before dropping the second game of their twin bill, 12-9.

Tito Fuentes led the Padres' nine-hit attack with two hits and two RB while Dave Cash paced the Phillies with three of his team's hits off Jones. In the second game, the Padres completed their sweep over the National League's East Division leaders as Doug Rader hit a two-run single in the sixth inning and Butch Metzger provided strong relief pitching.

Dodgers 6, Expos 3

Tommy John, 34, scattered nine hits and hurled his first complete game in more than two years to lead Los Angeles over Montreal. Ron Cey slammed a two-run homer to pace a nine-hit attack against loser Woodie Fryma 7-4, the first of three Expos pitchers.

After giving up two runs in the first inning on four singles, John shut out the Expos on five hits the rest of the way.

Cubs 8, Astros 3

Manny Trillo's three-run double capped a four-run fifth inning and Pete LaCock hit his second homer of the season to lead Chicago over Houston.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Cubs, matching their previous high this season. Ray Burris, 3-8, was the winner but needed sixth-inning help from Paul Reuschel, who gained his second save. Larry Dierker, 6-5, was the loser.

Pirates 6, Braves 5

Dave Parker lashed a two-run triple with two out in the ninth inning capping a three-run rally and lifting Pittsburgh to a comeback victory over Atlanta. Parker's blast hit a post off the right field fence and rebounded 50 feet back toward the infield, allowing Richie Hebner and Al Oliver to score.

Jerry Royster had driven in three runs for Atlanta, sparking the Braves to a 5-3 lead before the Pirates rallied.

Mets 4-4, Giants 2-1

Mickey Lolich and Tom Seaver, 1-10 in their last 11 decisions, pitched New York to a doubleheader sweep over San Francisco. Lolich, with relief from Bob Apodaca, snapped a personal five-game losing streak in the opener, allowing five hits in six innings. Apodaca threw one-hit relief to gain his first save.

Seaver, who had dropped five of his last six decisions, had a no-hitter until Dave Rader lined a one-out single in the sixth. Seaver gave up five hits, three of them in the ninth when the Giants scored on Gary Matthews' RBI single, and needed last-out relief help from Skip Lockwood.

Reds 4-9, Cardinals 0-12

Bob Bailey delivered a two-run homer to lead Cincinnati over St. Louis in the first game of their doubleheader.

Don Kessinger drove in three runs as St. Louis won the second game and halted Joe Morgan's RBI streak at 10 games, one shy of the National League record. Morgan's string was the longest in the major leagues since 1969 when Rick Monday of Chicago drove in runs in 10 straight games.

Gives Credit To Putting Lesson

By GERRY SUTTON
 For Associated Press

TORONTO (AP)—A month ago Donna Caponi Young was thinking about quitting the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour because of putting problems.

That's when Jerry Barber, once a regular on the men's Professional Golfers' Association tour, stepped into the picture and gave her a free putting lesson.

Mrs. Young credited that lesson for playing a major role in her sudden-death playoff victory on the first extra hole over Judy Rankin in a $60,000 LPGA tournament here Sunday.

Mrs. Young parred the 47-yard, par-five 16th hole, the first in the playoff, and Mrs. Rankin — top money winner on the tour this season — bogeyed.

The par was worth $12,000 to Mrs. Young. It was her first tournament victory this year, although she finished first in a non-tour event, the Australian Open, late in March.

Third Straight For Net Team

Roanoke Tennis League action here Sunday saw Greenville defeat Tarboro 5-1 for its third straight League win.

In turning back visiting Tarboro, the local netters captured all but the number four singles to run their season record to 3-0.

The next match for Greenville will be at Ahoskie.

The summary:
 Ron Hignite (G) defeated March Smith, 6-1, 6-1.
 Wes Hankins (G) defeated Nathaniel Laws, 6-1, 6-0.
 Steve Post (G) defeated Ken Thompson, 6-2, 6-2.
 Norman Bryant (T) defeated Butch Ricks, 6-1, 6-4.
 Hankins and Walter Jones (G) defeated Laws and Smith, 6-4, 6-1; and John Hill and Bob Irwin (G) defeated Bryant and Steve Watkins, 7-5, 6-3.

Newsman Learns Phony ID Easy To Obtain In U.S.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press newsman Richard T. Pienciak set out to find out how difficult it is to become another person by acquiring false identification. It wasn't difficult. The federal government says the false ID problem is so serious and costly that it created a panel to find solutions and reforms.

By RICHARD T. PIENCIK
Associated Press Writer

The phony ID game costs Americans an estimated $20 billion a year, and anyone can play.

The players simply cast off their identities and take on those of others, sometimes innocent, persons. The most publicized players are mobsters and political radicals on the run from the law.

But the game is also played by con artists, illegal aliens, drug and gun runners and those who cheat on welfare, food stamps and Social Security payments. And don't forget runaway kids, husbands and wives.

Even a newsman like myself can do it, and I did.

For the losers, it's no game. They are the government and its taxpayers, banks, credit card companies, businesses and ordinary citizens who pay higher prices to cover the losses of false ID.

The federal government says the phony ID game is a serious national problem which is mushrooming as credit cards proliferate and the country's population gets increasingly mobile.

To cope with the players of the phony ID game, the government created an 80-member federal panel to study the problem and make recommendations. The task force — the Attorney General's Committee on False Identification — is made up of representatives of dozens of agencies, including the FBI, Justice Department, Passport Office, Social Security Administration, Immigration and Naturalization Service and Customs.

Its report is due this summer. Meanwhile the head of the panel says its investigation shows that fraudulent ID's cost businesses and the government $20 billion a year; $10 billion in government fraud alone.

The Immigration Service estimates there are 8.2 million illegal aliens in this country, many of them hiding behind phony ID's.

Owen Lyons, a New Jersey immigration official, says the service's investigation of false ID's shows them connected to a variety of crimes, including counterfeiting, bribery, fraud, smuggling, narcotics, extortion, robbery — and even murder.

He says alien smugglers are so confident of the phony ID's they sell that they offer illegal aliens a money-back guarantee if they are caught within five days of entry.

Frances G. Knight, director of the U.S. Passport Office, says that people who obtain passports by fraud fall into several categories: drug traffickers, militant groups, confidence men or swindlers, illegal aliens, fugitives from justice and imposters.

She says the American identification system is a jumble and needs reforms, especially cross-referencing of birth and death certificates.

It's easy to play the phony ID game. With less than $20, a little time and a lot of nervousness, I came up with a birth certificate, a Social Security card and a driver's permit — the essential ingredients for becoming a new person.

For those who have up to $2,000 and some criminal contacts, a new identity can be bought instantly, federal authorities say.

The more common method is one I used. The government calls it the "Tombstone Theory," and it could literally involve picking a name off a cemetery tombstone.

You find the name of a dead person, someone born about the time you were but who died before applying for a driver's license, Social Security card, etc. Using the dead person's name, you write for a copy of "your" birth certificate.

"It's no secret. Everyone who wants to do it already knows how," said David Muchow, the Justice Department lawyer who heads the federal task force investigating the "false identity crisis."

I picked from news files the name Frederick Budd Jr., a native of Newton, N.J., because he was born Feb. 6, 1952, only 17 months after me. Budd — not the real name — was killed in a car crash in 1953.

An application to the state for his birth certificate, sent through the mails and signed in his name, gave me a start on a new identity.

When New Jersey received "Budd's" request there was no reason to doubt he was alive.

No proof of identification was required — just payment of a $2.50 fee.

With that vital document, thousands of people are on their way to the other ID's needed to give them new identities. And in most cases their purposes are not so innocent as mine. For example:

—At one point during their flight from the law, Patty Hearst and William and Emily Harris all used new identities, authorities say.

—John L. Spillane, a 31-year-old New Jersey engineer, recently admitted he got 1,000 credit cards and $660,000 in loans by creating 300 phony ID's. His rise reportedly collapsed when he tried to get loans from two branches of the same bank on the same day. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $1,000.

RICHARD PIENCIK

—In Pulaski County, Ark., a study of the food stamp program uncovered 57 false ID's. They cost the county of only 287,000 residents about $17,000.

At the Social Security office in Newark, I got me an application for Budd's Social Security card. Three weeks after mailing the application, I got a form letter entitled "Request for Evidence."

It said the government has two lists, one for evidence of age and citizenship, another for evidence of identity. One document from each list was necessary.

Budd's birth certificate satisfied the demands of the first list.

But for the second list, I needed a driver's license, state identity card (New Jersey doesn't have one), voter registration, school ID card, work badge, draft card, military ID or Selective Service card, U.S. Passport, credit card, library card with signature, or any other document showing name, signature and a photo.

A library card seemed easiest, so I went to Newark's main library.

I read the sign: fraudulent application for, or use of, a library card is punishable by up to 90 days in jail and a $500 fine for each day of said violation.

For an address on the application I gave the street address and room of The AP Newark office, located in a downtown hotel. "That's a hotel, isn't it?" the elderly clerk asked.

"Yes," I said. "I just moved in. I'm looking for a permanent place now."

"Well, you're not a resident of Newark then," she said. "You can get a temporary card but it'll cost you $5."

She said a postcard would be sent when the card was ready.

Remarkably, I was never asked for ID during either visit to the library. Even more remarkable was that the "library card with signature" was accepted by Social Security. It had been signed by the library clerk, not me, and her signature for Budd was entirely different from mine.

Three days after mailing the birth certificate and library card to Social Security, I received the documents back and a note saying the card would arrive in six weeks. It did.

Then it was on to the motor vehicle department for a learner's permit. For proof of ID, I used the birth certificate. It took a lot to convince the clerk that I had never had a driver's license.

I stopped in my paper chase with the driver's permit, since I knew I would only need to take the road test to get the license. It seemed clear that I could easily have gone on to get a checking account, credit cards, a passport — anything I needed. Total cost of birth certificate, Social Security card and driver's license, had I taken the road test: $17.50.

Muchow said the FBI recently determined that 500 people on its fugitive list had used at least 1,100 aliases. He also said most federal statutes applying to false papers are weak.

The federal task force hopes to call for additional legislation, but it has run into several problems. Recommending cross-referencing of birth and death records would solve the problem only for people who were born and died in the same state — not someone born in Iowa who died in California, for example.

"Somehow the states have to get together to notify each other," said Lynn Peterson of the U.S. Passport Office.

Questions on the rights of individuals already have caused the committee to reject the idea of a national identity card such as used by some European and South American countries.

The real problem, Muchow said, is that states are doing little about the false-identity crisis. The Associated Press took a survey of states and found almost no action at the state level and, in many cases, little concern.

Apparently only Nevada — which has problems with organized crime, illegal aliens and casino con artists — has a strong law on false birth certificates. Use of such a document during commission of a felony is punishable by up to six years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Fraudulent use of Nevada's state identity card can lead to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Most states indicated penalties of up to six months in jail and $500 fines for fraudulent use of state documents like driver's licenses, birth certificates or ID cards, but prosecutions for such offenses are minimal.

regulations as well. At the motor vehicle office, Lt. Louis M. Pannucci said: "We're in the business of issuing driver's licenses, not identification cards. If society accepts them as ID, that's their problem."

Footnote: All the phony ID's accumulated were returned to the agencies they came from.

William Fogarty, district manager for the Newark Social Security office, said the card would be deactivated. "Apparently there are no safeguards against this kind of thing," he said.

Bernard Schein, director of the Newark Public Library, said: "We're going to tighten up our security immediately. It'll be impossible if someone tries it after this." He said he hoped libraries across the country would tighten application

TV Network And Affiliate's Relationship Fragile

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's a delicate and complex thing the relationship between TV network and affiliate. Says CBS News President Richard Salant: "If either side were to go all the way in asserting its rights, the whole thing would fall apart."

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — This is the time of year when the three major television networks lay out huge sums of money to praise themselves and push their products to a small-but-very-special audience.

CBS-TV recently spent more than $250,000 to impress and entertain a few hundred of these people for two days. Buses carried them from their fancy hotel to CBS Studio Center, where three big sound stages were furnished and decorated for their use. Chasens, a posh, expensive restaurant, catered three-course luncheons. And the concluding dinner banquet featured snail and oyster appetizers, filet mignon and entertainment by Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme.

Who is it that merits such attentiveness from the mammoth television networks? Their affiliates, of course — the local TV stations throughout the country that carry network programming. NBC has 219 affiliates, CBS 218 and ABC 185.

There is a curious and complex marriage.

Without its affiliates, each network would have only the handful of stations it owns to display its news, entertainment and sports programs. That would make it impossible to generate the advertising revenue needed to pay for the programming — much less make a profit.

Without its network, each local station would have to put up its own money to produce and buy programs to fill its entire schedule. But the affiliates are paid by the networks to run their programming — about 30 per cent of what the network believes the station would get in advertising revenue if it were programming that particular time period itself. The station reaps less money but is freed from any capital risk and at the same time is airing top-quality shows that draw big audiences and boost the ad rates the station can charge during its own program time and the periods between the end of one network show and the beginning of another.

There are commercial television stations that exist independently of the three commercial networks, filling their schedules with reruns, syndicated programs and local productions. But according to 1974 statistics from the Federal Communications Commission, 81 per cent of the affiliated stations were profitable while only 38 per cent of the independents were.

Yet the affiliates don't always want everything the network has to offer. Either because they don't like a particular show or have something else they would rather run instead, they can refuse to telecast the network offering, or move it to a different time period.

Such an act immediately hurts the network by reducing the potential national audience for the program in question. If the ratings go down, so do the revenues that the network extracts from sponsors. If many affiliates decline to carry the same program, they can doom it.

About 30 per cent of the CBS stations opted not to broadcast the network's "Three for the Road" series on Sunday nights last fall. Most felt they could do better with local news. The program sank to the bottom of the ratings charts and was canceled at midseason.

owners, managers and programmers aren't dining and drinking, they are being briefed by top network executives on each aspect of the network schedule. The past season is assessed and the coming one is previewed — rorily.

There also are private meetings at which the affiliates can gripe about network practices if they want to, and they have wanted to increasingly in recent years.

As with any personal relationship, the network-affiliate marriage relies on give and take all year. "It's a delicate and complex thing," sums up CBS News President Richard Salant. "It's like the Constitution: if either side were to go all the way in asserting its rights, the whole thing would fall apart."

"You can have the best program in the world, but if it's not watched by the public because it's not cleared, it's really no good," says Robert Wood, director of affiliate relations for CBS.

The network can terminate its affiliation if a station doesn't clear enough of its programs — as CBS did with KXLY-TV in Spokane, Wash., recently — but that is a rare occurrence.

Reduced Energy-Use Is N.C. Program's Goal

RALEIGH (AP) — If state officials are successful in seeking a federal grant, North Carolina will begin an aggressive program to cut total projected energy consumption in the state with the goal being 5 per cent by 1980.

The state is hoping to get up to $1.5 million a year for three years to use for the energy conservation efforts.

The Federal Energy Administration will establish the state's energy consumption projection, and using that figure, the program would be to hold actual consumption to at least 5 per cent below the projection.

Carson D. Culbreth, head of the conservation branch of the Energy Division of the state Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, said the state will use mandatory and voluntary means to reach the goal. Mandatory measures would include state laws limiting lighting levels and requiring materials that conserve energy be used in new buildings. In the voluntary portion, citizens would be urged to use public transportation and car pools, for example.

"In some way or other, every person's got to be affected," he said of the program.

As a first step in getting the federal money, state officials plan to apply this month for a $100,000 federal grant to use in setting up the energy conservation program. The grant application for the program is due in November.

In addition to limiting lighting in all buildings except those owned by the federal government, the program may restrict operating hours of public buildings and the use of decorative or non-essential lighting.

Also in the program would be public education with an emphasis on young people, he said.

"If you educate the youth, it'll be with you in the future. These kids will grow up with energy efficiency as a way of life. They won't see it as a penalty," he said.

Whatever the FEA sets as North Carolina's projected energy use for 1980, Culbreth said he's confident the state will be able to hold itself at least 5 per cent below the estimate.

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
? What action do you take?

A.—Pass. You have a very fine opening bid indeed, but the hand has all the earmarks of a misfit. Don't even think about bidding two no trump. Since you have a singleton in your partner's suit, it is probable that he has one in yours, so you have no source of tricks at no trump.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q10 AK93 ♠KQJ92 ♣K8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
? What action do you take?

A.—This is a close decision between two hearts and two no trump, and we have a slight preference for the latter. Although the hand is a point short in high cards and slightly off shape for the jump in no trump, your honors in partner's suit should be upgraded and you do have a good five-card suit. In addition, the chances of finding partner with four hearts have been reduced, and you want to be declarer at no trump with the lead coming up to your doubleton king of clubs.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AK873 ♠AQ95 ♦A8 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid five diamonds. Despite the fact that partner passed originally, we would make one move toward slam. His jump to four spades shows a hand which revalues to a full opening bid, and ours is worth 20 points at a spade contract. Blackwood won't answer our questions, so the only alternative is to initiate a cue-bidding sequence. If partner can do no more than return to five spades, that's it.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQK9 ♠KQ10873 ♣AKJ
What is your opening bid?

A.—Two no trump. We would not criticize an opening bid of two diamonds, but, in general a demand two-bid in a suit shows a very strong suit or an unbalanced hand. Despite your six-card suit, this hand is really balanced. Had one of your low diamonds been a spot card in a major suit, a two no trump opening would have been clear-cut, so we see no reason not to go ahead anyway.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KQ7 ♠K8 ♦AQ10743 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
? What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. By now you are getting the idea. Again, South has a hand which is balanced with stoppers in every suit. With 18 HCP and a six-card suit, it was too strong to open one no trump. The alternative rebid would be three diamonds, but that is not nearly as descriptive as a jump in no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQ10943 ♠7 ♦AJ62 ♦AK
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
3 ♠ 4 ♠ Pass 6 ♠
Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid seven spades. Partner cannot have less for his leap to slam than the ace of hearts, king of spades and a singleton diamond. Not to go on to the grand slam would be the height of cowardice.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q1076 ♠8 ♦A1093 ♣8762
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
Pass Pass Pass 2 ♠
Pass 2NT Pass 3 ♠
Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—In view of partner's rebid your hand has improved dramatically. With four good trumps, an ace and a singleton, slam is a very real possibility. You must hoist the flag to alert partner to your aspirations, and the first step is to cue-bid the ace of diamonds. Naturally, you will support spades strongly at your next turn by bidding at the five-level, if necessary.

Q.8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦984 ♠72 ♣KQ107 ♦QJ93
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ Pass INT 2 ♠
What action do you take?

A.—Bid five diamonds. You have a classic hand for a sacrifice—no defensive values and sufficient length in partner's suit to weaken defensive prospects. Partner must have a useful hand to overcall at the two-level, so chances are good that you can get out for a loss of no more than 300 points. Even better—opener may not be satisfied with such a small profit and push on to five spades, where your chances of defeating him are improved.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make plans in the morning for recreational activities later in the day. Expressing your finest talents is easy now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Showing more devotion and thought for those who live with you brings more harmony and happiness. Engage in favorite hobby tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Engage in affairs that can bring you greater happiness. Study a new investment you want to make before coming to a decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) An important business matter needs your immediate attention. Take time to improve your surroundings. Relax tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Cooperate more with associates instead of being so independent and you make big headway. Be careful of strangers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Comprehend exactly what your financial assets and liabilities are. Make long-range plans for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact friends who are loyal and they will cooperate with you to gain your fondest aims. Take needed health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Think over what your personal aims are and take steps to attain them, but don't confide in those who could spoil it for you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to get along well with others and success can be easily attained early in life. The education should include foreign languages since it will be necessary to travel a great deal. Be sure not to neglect spiritual training early in life.

Poultry Income Figures Rising

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Texas poultry farmers reported income of $343 million in 1975, an increase of $39 million even though statistics show Americans are eating fewer poultry products.

The Lone Star State ranked sixth in the United States in cash receipts from poultry production.

Dr. David Mellor, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said the average consumer ate nine fewer eggs in 1975 than in the previous year and also consumed less broiler, chicken and turkey meat. Mellor predicted poultry meat consumption will rise this year.

NASA Process Said Applicable

HOUSTON (UPI) — Scientists at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration say new techniques developed to detect micro-organisms in water systems on manned spacecraft can be used to spot harmful bacteria in municipal water supplies.

Officials plan to incorporate the new processes in a system NASA is developing to monitor water quality electronically.

Pandas Not So Cuddly Today

By MINDY YOCHESON WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ling-ling and Hsing-hsing, the giant pandas that China gave to the United States when former President Richard M. Nixon visited Peking in 1972, are alive and well at the National Zoo.

"We haven't had any serious problem with them," said William Xanten, the zoo's curator of north mammals. "They've been a fantastic drawing card for the zoo and are still extremely appealing to the public."

While the 5-year-old pandas might look cute and cuddly, zoo employees no longer enter their cages to feed them. "They're fully adult now and while they're still cute and they like to be played with, they're not the cuddly animals we got 3½ years ago, and they can be dangerous," Xanten said.

The zoo has a problem providing them with enough bamboo, a staple of their diet. Ling and Hsing each gets about 20 pounds a day, in addition to other foods, and most of the bamboo is cut from Washington area backyards.

"We're constantly looking for new sources," Xanten said. If the pandas do not get enough of the fiber, they will suffer digestive upsets.

Pandas are found only in central China at altitudes up to 12,000 feet. They live in dense bamboo forests amid heavy clouds, torrential rains and snow until June. At the zoo, their cages are air-conditioned at a steady 60 degrees.

"Our major project right now is to breed them," Xanten told UPI.

Pandas, like other animals, learn about sex by observation and experimentation, but Ling and Hsing, who were only two years old when captured, have had no other pandas to observe. Zoo officials have arranged three breeding encounters. The next one is expected in late April.

"Last spring it looked very promising but the male (Hsing) was still too inexperienced," Xanten said. "It was like two teenagers fumbling around on their first date."

By watching the pandas closely, the zoo can determine when the female is ready to breed. Ling loses her appetite, Xanten said, and "gets cranky at times." Both male and female mark the walls and other objects with gland fluid, and increase their bleating.

At this time, the animals are allowed outside where they can see and smell each other. Indoors, they usually are kept separated, for pandas are solitary animals who come together only for breeding.

So far, no pandas outside China have been bred in captivity. Besides Ling and Hsing, there are 18 pandas in Chinese zoos, two each in Mexico City, London and Tokyo, one in Paris and a trio in North Korea.

"If by any stretch of luck we should get breeding in this pair and a pregnancy, it's going to be really hectic out here sometime in the late summer," Xanten said.

"But I don't want to count my pandas before they're hatched."

Good Profit In Buffalo

MITCHELL, S.D. (AP) — Livestock Mahoney might advise ranchers who are troubled by high operating costs and low prices to raise buffalo.

"For one thing, buffalo are a lot more profitable," said Mahoney, of rural Mitchell.

Not only does buffalo meat bring about double the price of regular beef, Mahoney said in an interview, but buffalo take much less feed.

"We can feed three buffalo for about what it takes to feed one regular cow," he said, adding that buffalo gain weight at about the same rate as regular cattle.

"Buffalo is identical to beef in cooking," Mahoney's wife noted. "It doesn't have the wild taste some people expect it to have, but it is a little coarser."

Mahoney says the unpredictable nature of the buffalo is his greatest concern.

"After a while you get too used to working with them, and you let your guard down," he said. "But buffalo are not animals to be trusted."

Mahoney works fulltime with the South Dakota Air National Guard and farms the family's 1,400 acres.

He recalled that 13 years ago he read an article about a man who raised buffalo. "I made up my mind right then to make the call to buy some," he said.

His first purchase was five buffalo. The herd now totals 150 head.

Mahoney has tried crossbreeding between buffalo and other cattle.

"It is rather difficult to always get a good cross," he said, but the crossbred calves that do result are pretty interesting to study to see which traits are carried over."

He said there is more demand for pure buffalo than for meat from the crosses. Most of the buffalo he sells goes to organizations that hold special buffalo barbecues, or to restaurants in the area that feature the meat on their menus.

Odd Stories In News Clippings

By SUSAN J. REIMER Associated Press Writer MONACA, Pa. (AP) — William Kreust is a newspaperman and has 20,000 story clips to prove it.

Kreust didn't write any of the stories. He just collects them. "I started, oh, maybe 20 years ago, clipping every newspaper I could get my hands on," said the 62-year-old retired janitor.

"First it was on the UFO's, which I was really interested in. But now I got 'em on a variety of subject matter."

That is an understatement — Kreust has copies of some of the strangest news stories. The headlines offer a glimpse into the oddities recorded in the columns beneath.

"Man Owns 50,000 Horse-shoes; Has Pile of Best Luck." "Loch Ness Monster Sighted in Alaska." "Feather Checker has World's Softest Job." "Love Child Locked Away 10 Years in Boston; Mother wanted to Hide Sin from God." "Bird Flies Into Manhattan Skyscraper."

Kreust says one of his favorites is a yellowed clip from a 1952 Pittsburgh Post-Gazette about a "talking" horse that told a missing boy's parents that the mute child was safe.

According to the article, the horse pecked out answers to questions on a giant typewriter, knocking over the letters with his nose.

Kreust's tolerant wife, Eva, says she doesn't mind that boxes and boxes of clips are scattered all over the second floor of her home.

"It's something he likes and it makes him happy. I can't complain about that," she said.

Say Sentences

Aren't Unequal

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A report by the Texas Judicial Council refutes contentions that blacks and minorities receive the death sentence more often than whites.

According to the report, state courts have sentenced 42 convicted killers to death under the new Texas death penalty law passed in 1973.

The report also said the chances of a defendant receiving the death sentence are substantially greater if he is represented by a court-appointed attorney instead of a lawyer he himself has hired.

BIRD COLONY—Part of Jerve Harmon's 4,000 quail cluster in a corner of a building on his farm. As chicks, the quail are only slightly larger than bumblebees. (AP Wirephoto)

Quail Farm Outside Statesville Provides Delicacy On N.C. Menu

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The next time you're lucky enough to eat at a fancy restaurant, check the menu. Chances are you will find some sort of quail dish, such as northern quail casserole, barbecued quail or even braised quail with bacon.

And, if the restaurant is in North Carolina, chances are the bird that went into making the dish may be one of the thousands of bobwhites raised each year on Jerve Harmon's farm on Chipley Ford Road, north of Statesville.

Harmon, with the help of his son Jerry, 22, owns and operates Carolina Quail, Inc., one of 11 quail farms in Iredell County. His is one of only five farms in the state licensed to process — dress, clean and package — the birds.

Last month, Harmon was named president of the Southeastern Game Breeders and Hunting Preserves Association at its annual convention in Jackson, Miss.

Besides selling his birds to restaurants, Harmon also provides quail for the poultry shelves of supermarkets and for tourists at some state resorts.

Most of the birds, however, are sold "on the foot," for stocking game preserves. Some even end up on the Harmons' dinner table.

"I eat my share," Harmon said. "It's white meat and tastes a lot like turkey, only the meat's got a finer texture."

He occasionally has a few pheasants at his farm, but he sticks mainly to the Northern Bob White Quail. He has about 4,200 on his farm now and has had as many as 14,000.

Harmon said he found breeding the quail to be too much trouble, so now he buys them as young chicks.

"They look more like bumblebees when they're young than birds," he said. "They're just a little bigger."

Despite their size, the birds grow fast and, at six months, Harmon said, 4,000 of them will eat 100 pounds of feed daily.

Harmon said the birds are raised much the same way as chickens, except there is no need to separate the roosters, or bobs, from the hens.

Until the birds are almost full grown, it's almost impossible to tell which is which, he said, and there is no difference in the taste.

Some breeders have problems with their quail fighting and are forced to debeak them, Harmon said, but he hasn't had that problem.

"Some play and pick with one another," he said, "but they don't hurt each other and it's not really fighting."

Between 14 and 16 months, the quail usually leave the farm, either alive and heading for the hunting preserves, or dead and wrapped in plastic.

Killing them is a simple task, Harmon said. "We use scissors and just clip their heads off."

One bird escaped both the hunters and the scissors — Jerry's five-year-old pet quail, Goober.

"Dad put him in once with 900 other quail and I picked him out of all of them," Jerry said. "It took three days, but I found him."

Harmon said the birds are relatively easy to tame and keep as pets. They are only slightly larger than the bobwhites that run wild, he said.

Harmon is only able to process a small part of the quail, but he plans to open a large processing building this fall.

The future for quail raises looks bright, he said.

"Quails haven't been promoted much around here," Harmon said. "People don't know much about them, and women don't know how to cook them."

"But, I wouldn't be trying to expand if I didn't think there is a future in it."

Industrialists Turn Teachers

MIDLAND, Mich. (UPI) — Scientists and engineers from 10 Michigan chemical companies became high school science teachers for a day recently as part of a 19-year-old exchange program.

Some 70 high school teachers and about 7,500 students from the ninth through 12th grades in the Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Holland and Grand Haven areas of Michigan were involved in this year's "Frontier's in Science Day" program.

Among the major companies participating were Dow Chemical, Upjohn Company and B.A.S.F. Wyandotte Corp.

Charge Driver In Accident

Christine Godley of 1502 Dickinson Ave was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9:45 a.m. mishap here yesterday on Tenth Street, 72 feet East of the Washington Street intersection.

Investigators reported the Godley car collided with a car operated by James Lewis Hardee Jr. of Route 3, Greenville causing an estimated $600 damage to the Hardee car and $150 damage to the Godley vehicle.

UNWELCOME SIGNS—Los Angeles City Traffic Dept. has ordered the erection of confusing road signs to motorists entering the city where they are located in 90 different intersections along the rim of the city. The experimental signs were inspired by more hospitable ones found in Scotland, but the city traffic engineer thought they lacked the more "punchy" quality of those erected here. (AP Wirephoto)

Corolla Residents Primed To Fight Federal Govm't

COROLLA, N.C. (AP) — Just 28 miles to the north, Virginia Beach is where Corolla's citizens attend church, shop, go to the dentist and doctor and socialize. Some of them work in that area.

If they cannot go through the refuge, Corolla residents must go south around Currituck Sound, a 100-mile drive.

The dispute has been simmering since 1973 when the government decreed that access through the refuge would be limited to permanent residents of Corolla. They were allowed access daily from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Local feelings became more heated when, on June 3, access hours were cut to 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. What's more, the new rules limit access to those Corolla citizens who owned their homes as of last Oct. 6.

Most of the drive through the refuge is on the beach as only 1.2 miles of the refuge has paved road. Interior officials said they were moved to limit access because the number of persons crossing the refuge rose from 10,000 in 1961 to 348,000 by 1971, causing "environmental degradation" that was blamed on vehicles.

Corolla residents believe the action is unfair and have unsuccessfully sought help from Congress and state officials.

Thanks to the new rules, some Corolla residents are now denied access altogether. Examples are:

—Danny Carlin, a U.S. mailman in Portsmouth, Va. He stays in a Portsmouth hotel during the week because the refuge is not open early enough for him to get to work on time if he stayed at home.

—Charlie Robinson, a part-time fisherman, moved to a new home last winter, 50 feet from his old home. He doesn't qualify for access because he was not living in his new home last October.

—Currituck County Sheriff's Deputy Lanky Griggs O'Neal, a Corolla native and lifelong resident, can cross the refuge only on official business because he doesn't own his home.

—Gene Austin, the Currituck lighthouse keeper, has the same problem. "This is where we live. It's our life," his wife Shirley complains. "Who is the government to say we can't come and go to our own homes?"

Bowles For Geo. Wood

RALEIGH (AP) — Saying "what you see is what you get," one-time gubernatorial candidate Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles has endorsed George Wood's candidacy for Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

At a news conference Saturday, Bowles said, "I can believe what he says. George is a straight shooter. What you see is what you get."

He also praised Wood for being "his own man...not part of any political machine or the captive of any other politician—including me." He noted that Wood is not an attorney and said he would govern with a new perspective.

Bowles, a Greensboro businessman, was defeated in 1972 by Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser. He was planning to make the race again this year but dropped out because of poor health.

It was Bowles' decision to withdraw that prompted Wood to run for governor rather than lieutenant governor. He was in the race for the No. 2 spot but switched races before filing with the state Board of Elections.

Other democratic candidates—Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, Tom Strickland and Ed O'Herron—had each expressed hope they would win Bowles' backing.

Poaching Fell Off, But Loss Runs High

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Despite a crackdown on illegal hunting of black bears in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, as many as 100 of the animals are bagged by poachers each year, according to park rangers and federal Fish and Wildlife Service agents.

Agents began the crackdown in 1972, when the kill estimate was about 200 bears per year. Working at night, poachers were often brazen in their work, entering the park in groups and hunting with dogs, runs and 55-gallon oil drum traps.

Thirty-five persons were arrested and fined up to $1,000, when the crackdown hit its peak in 1974, agents said. One person was sentenced to four months in prison.

"It (poaching) has dropped considerably," said ranger Bill Burke, 30. "When I first got here in 1974, I knew of at least three bears that were taken out of one area in a three-week period."

The park's bear population has been estimated at between 500 and 800. Rangers say part of their poaching toll estimate is based on counts provided by poachers themselves.

"One poacher admitted that, in his lifetime, he had killed 243 bears, and he was in his early 50s," Burke said.

Most poachers now operate one or two miles inside the 800-square-mile park, Burke said, and most are off-season bear hunters.

Some poachers sell their trapped bears to hunting clubs at prices ranging between $300 and $500, he said.

Interior Undersecretary Kent Frizzell established the new regulations after recently visiting the refuge, though he didn't visit Corolla, a spokesman said.

Dennis Holland, manager of the refuge, said he admires the Corolla residents. "These are tough people, independent people," he said.

Hunt Body Of Neuse Victim

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Rescue workers were still searching the Neuse River near here Sunday night for the body of a 13-year-old youth believed to have drowned Saturday.

Preston Parker of Seven Springs was one of two drowning victims who became trapped in a swift current while swimming, according to the Lenoir County Sheriff's Department.

The other victim, whose body was recovered Saturday, was identified as Willie Barnes, 24, of La Grange.

Authorities said a third youth swam safely to shore.

Same Output By Fewer Cows

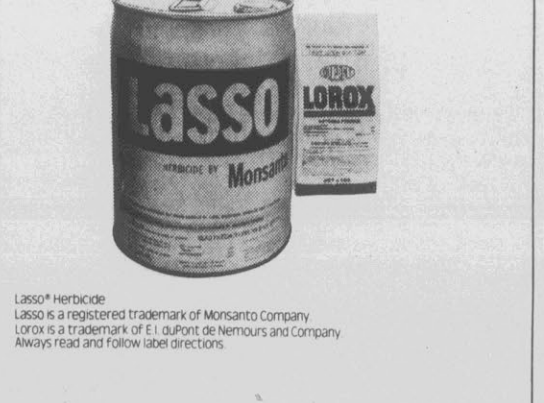

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — An agricultural economist says dairymen in Texas have produced about the same amount of milk as during the same period last year, but this year they did it with about 25,000 fewer milk cows.

Charles K. Baker of the state Agricultural Extension Service said the main cause of the increase is heavier feeding of concentrated dairy rations. He said the average cow is producing about 75 pounds more milk per month this year than last.

"The one ray of HOPE in the darkening skies of this age is the BRIGHT promise of Christ's RETURN."
