

No Hitch In Evacuation Of Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Navy evacuated some 300 Americans and other foreigners from Beirut without a hitch today while President Ford and top Pentagon officials stayed up most of the night in Washington to monitor the operation.

The 16,900-ton amphibious transport ship Coronado anchored off Beirut's seafloor before dawn, and by 10 a.m. 3 a.m. EDT all of the evacuees were aboard. The Coronado was to land them in Athens on Thursday.

Among those leaving was U.S. Ambassador Talcott W. Seelye, whose departure was a closely guarded secret until the last moment. The embassy said he was going to Washington for consultations and would return to Beirut.

An embassy official said 160 Americans and about 390 others signed up for the evacuation, but closer to 400 — "less than half" of them Americans — showed up this morning. However, to persons watching the departure it looked more like 250 and 300 persons, and the White House said there were about 300.

About 1,000 other American citizens remained in Lebanon despite warnings from the White House and the embassy that it was the last evacuation the U.S. government would organize. Most of those remaining are of Lebanese birth and have dual Lebanese and American citizenship.

President Ford kept abreast of the evacuation in a White House

William E. Ready of Washington, D.C., a businessman departing with his wife. "My bank has burned down three times. And all these killings, and nobody ever does anything about it."

The evacuation was preceded by a night of heavy fighting in Beirut and the hill villages overlooking the capital. Security sources and hospitals reported more than 130 persons killed and 160 wounded.

The Christians claimed their forces were mopping up in the Nabaa Moslem slum quarters and heavily shelling the nearby besieged Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp. These are the last Moslem strongholds in Beirut's Christian sector, and the Christians want to overrun them because they overlook the highways to the Christian hinterland northeast of the city.

A Palestinian spokesman reported some 400 civilians were dead in the wreckage of a bunker in Tal Zaatar that was hit by an artillery shell on Saturday.

Arab League mediator Hassan Sabri Kholi announced Monday that Christian President Suleiman Franjeh had given his personal guarantee that a Red Cross convoy could enter Tal Zaatar to evacuate more than 1,000 wounded.

Former President Camille Chamoun, whose Christian Tiger militiamen have blocked previous attempts to evacuate the wounded, was reported at the meeting between Kholi and Franjeh. But it was not clear whether he would let the wounded be taken out.

The Moslems' Beirut Radio reported that a Palestinian delegation and Syrian officials had tentatively approved a peace blueprint sponsored by the Soviet Union.

Arafat Power Slips

WASHINGTON (AP) — The civil war in Lebanon has forced the Palestine Liberation Organization into derelict, and direct U.S. contact with the PLO over the evacuation of Americans from Beirut apparently will not reverse the downward course.

This is the assessment of top U.S. officials who have closely followed the ebb and flow of fighting, and supervised daily exchanges between American diplomats in the Lebanese capital with Palestinian commanders who controlled parts of the evacuation route.

"There were no political discussions — period," one official said.

The PLO has been in a tailspin since June when Syria's army moved into Lebanon. Along with military setbacks has come a decline in political standing in the Arab world. Only Libya, itself somewhat an outsider, has provided effective support for Yasir Arafat's group.

This could improve prospects for U.S. peace efforts between Israelis and Arabs — an assessment Israel and the United States share.

There are at least three reasons for this view:

—If current trends continue, Lebanon will not be under control of a Palestinian-ledist Moslem coalition, threatening Israel's security with guerrilla forays and the ominous presence of a radical, confrontation state.

—Israel's refusal to negotiate with the PLO, which it holds responsible for years of bloody terrorist attacks, would no longer be an impediment to further negotiations.

—As the PLO's stock dips, Jordan's rises, increasing chances that King Hussein will once again have authority to deal with Israel about the future of Jordan's West Bank and its Palestinian inhabitants.

Oil Imports Hike Deficit

By G. DAVID WALLACE Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil imports surged about 34 per cent in June to meet growing American demands and pushed the U.S. foreign trade balance back into deficit after a one-month surplus, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said imports exceeded exports by $377.3 million in June, compared with a $395.6-million surplus of exports over imports during May.

For the first half of the year, the trade deficit now stands at $1.05 billion. At this time a year ago, trade accounts were in surplus by $5.05-billion on the way to a record $11-billion surplus for the year.

Since the 1975 surplus was registered, the economic recovery has stimulated industry and consumer demand for fuel and for imported automobiles, television sets and other consumer products.

Imports increased by 9.9 per cent in June to a record level of $10.09 billion. Exports, meanwhile, rose 1.4 per cent to $9.7 billion.

The continuing rise in exports — the fourth straight monthly climb to a record in June — has been the factor which prompted most trade analysts to say that the shift into deficit in the trade accounts appears to be a healthy thing for the U.S. economy now.

The deficits help our trading partners pull out of their recessions and thus build the foundation for future demand for American products overseas. And the imported products provide competition for American goods and help hold prices down.

Chess Expert Seeks Asylum

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — Soviet chess grandmaster Viktor Korchnoi requested political asylum in the Netherlands today, Dutch radio reported.

The radio said Korchnoi checked in at the aliens department of Amsterdam police headquarters to lodge his request.

Korchnoi, who is about 45, shared first place last week with British player Anthony Miles in the annual IBM chess tournament staged in the Netherlands.

Korchnoi lost to present world champion Anatoly Karpov in the world challengers final in 1974 for the chance to play Bobby Fischer.

Confirm Nitrogen Is In Mars' Air

By RICHARD SALTUS AP Science Writer PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An automated "sniff" of the Martian air has confirmed the presence of nitrogen, eliminating what had long been considered a major obstacle to the possibility of life on the Red Planet.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here said Monday that a device aboard the Viking 1 lander, called a mass spectrometer, tested the atmosphere on Mars and found that 3 per cent of it is nitrogen.

The same measure had been found by a simpler version of the instrument as Viking descended to its desert landing site last week.

Nitrogen had never before been detected on Mars, and scientists said its presence increased the chance that life will be found.

The search for evidence of life, Viking's main mission, begins Wednesday with a scoop of the surrounding soil.

Dr. Leslie E. Orgel of the Salk Institute said that before Viking's discoveries many scientists had believed life could not exist on Mars because no nitrogen had been discovered.

"What this does," Orgel said, "is to show that there really isn't a problem there at all."

Project Scientist Dr. Gerald Soffen said that the finding does not mean life necessarily exists on Mars. But he declared, "The search goes on."

The mass spectrometer is a miniature laboratory which will also be used to study the gathered soil for signs of organic compounds that might indicate life. It weighs about 41 pounds and is about the size of a breadbox.

"It worked like a charm," said Dr. Klaus Biemann, head of the molecular analysis team. The device also confirmed Viking's earlier finding of argon gas in the atmosphere. The argon finding helps determine what the Martian atmosphere — now more than 100 times thinner than earth's — was like in the past.

"I have to say that at the present we don't see any evidence for an early massive atmosphere," said Dr. Tobias Owen. But he said it might have been one-tenth as thick as earth's long ago, with an atmospheric pressure which would have allowed water to flow.

Viking's cameras continued to send back pictures Monday, including three more color photos. For the first time, they showed a pinkish Martian sky. It had looked blue in the first color views.

Dr. James Pollock said the hue was due to reddish dust particles borne aloft by Mars' fierce winds.

Most of the mechanical problems that arose aboard the robot lander have been cured. But the marsquake-measuring seismometer was still jammed, and one radio receiver was not working properly.

Charged In Fire

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A Morehead City man charged with setting fire to his jail cell only minutes after being locked up has been charged with an additional count of malicious damage to property.

Carteret County Sheriff Ralph L. Thomas said Lawrence P. Rowe, 26, a Morehead roofer, will be served with the second warrant Tuesday when he is returned from the Pamlico County jail. He has been held there since the fire.

Rowe was arrested Friday night for sniffing glue and for using lewd and profane language. Thomas said five prisoners and four sheriff's department workers were overcome by the fire's heavy smoke. They required hospital treatment, but were not seriously injured.

Rowe is being held on $20,000 bond on the first charge and an additional $3,500 for the second. No dates have been set for hearings on the two charges.

"DEGREE OF DISABILITY"

My brother came back to Pitt County from a neighboring state after he became so disabled by rheumatoid arthritis that he could no longer work. He has a wife and a child and has been paying Social Security since he started holding responsible jobs at 14. He was turned down before he came back here for "insufficient degree of disability," yet no rehabilitation person can tell him what kind of work he can do with his spine, his hands and arms, and his feet and legs affected. It's been since last September now that we've been waiting for an answer from the Greenville office and in the meantime he's desolate and the rest of us are spending all we can spare to help keep him going. Mrs. D. H.

Hotline did very little but put you in touch with the right people to help your brother. City Human Relations Director Jessie Harris located a job for your brother's wife that would allow her benefits accrued with a company in the other state to be continued. Your brother's family was certified for food stamps, and Congressman Walter B. Jones was made aware of the long delay with disability certification. One of his staff members learned that your brother's file had been sitting for months on a desk in the city from which he had come, when he had been led to believe it had been sent to the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals in Nashville, Tenn. It was promptly forwarded, but again was rejected. A hearing before an administrative law judge in North Carolina was then in order.

After some more time had passed and you had not been informed of a hearing date, we asked that the local Social Security office tell us who to call to check on the hearing date. They offered to call themselves. When this call was made, it was learned that records of some of your brother's latest hospitalizations still were not in his files as they should have been. These were forwarded. Walter Jones' office checked again, also, and you called today to say that, in view of the latest medical evidence, your brother's case has been reconsidered and that he has been approved for benefits, without the hearing.

Schweiker Selection Could Be Factor In Pennsylvania's Votes

By DOUG WILLIS Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Ronald Reagan's strategists say the selection of Sen. Richard S. Schweiker as vice-presidential running mate has strengthened Reagan's presidential campaign and broadened his political base.

But backers of President

Ford called the Reagan announcement a desperate play for delegates by a losing candidate.

Reagan named the Pennsylvania lawmaker — one of the most liberal members of the Senate — in a surprise move Monday.

Just three weeks before opening of the Republican National Convention, Ford is 36 delegates away from the nomination with 1,093, in The Associated Press survey. Reagan trails with 1,025 and 141 delegates were uncommitted, including 28 in Schweiker's home state.

Nearly all Northeast delegates contacted in the first hours after Reagan's announcement Monday adopted either a wait-and-see attitude toward the move or said it would have no effect on their vote for a presidential nominee.

One Pennsylvania switched from Ford to uncommitted, and the President lost Schweiker's vote. The senator resigned as a convention delegate. He had said previously he would vote for Ford.

Another Pennsylvania delegate, who previously favored Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. Tennessee, said she now is uncommitted.

The AP count in Pennsylvania following Reagan's announcement gives Ford 69, Reagan 6, with 28 currently claiming uncommitted status.

Among the Pennsylvania uncommitted delegates surveyed, James A. Stein, 21, said he thought Schweiker "is playing the position of a political whore" moving from his support of Ford.

But Thomas J. Twine Sr., also uncommitted, said: "I think it will sway some members of the delegation."

David Christopher, who had earlier expressed a preference for Ford, said "in light of what has happened, I would probably be in the uncommitted category. My interest is in who would be the best to beat Carter in the fall, and this seems to improve Reagan's chances."

There was some negative reaction elsewhere to Reagan's selection of Schweiker. Ray Hutchison, Republican state chairman in Texas, said Reagan's choice could cost him the election if nominated.

Hunt Campaign Here Is Halted

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt was treated and released at Pitt Memorial Hospital here this morning after suffering an attack of kidney colic, a spokesman for the hospital confirmed.

The Democratic candidate for governor arrived at the hospital emergency room at 8:15 a.m. after being stricken with kidney pains, said Riek Gilstrap, associate director of the hospital.

Hunt was treated for the ailment and discharged sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 10 a.m., Gilstrap said. Hunt was not admitted to the hospital as a patient.

Gilstrap described the ailment as painful, but not serious.

"He had kidney colic. There's a possibility in the future sometime of having kidney stones. It's nothing serious," he said.

He declined to say what kind of treatment Hunt received. "He was given some kind of medication, and will probably be slowed down for a couple of days," Gilstrap said. "It's kind of like having a sore throat. It's kind of painful when you have it but there's no lasting effect." Hunt could not be immediately reached for comment, but a campaign spokesman at Hunt's Greenville headquarters said Hunt was to return to his home in Wilson for a checkup with his family physician.

By The Associated Press
The eastern North Carolina flue-cured tobacco market was steady to a slightly stronger Monday.
The Federal-State Market News Service reported that about half the grade averages registered gains of $1 per hundred over the previous sale. Volume was reported heavy at all points.
The percentage of primings dropped to 60 per cent of sales; lugs increased to around 17 per cent; cutters made up about four per cent; nondescript 16 per cent; and no-grade about two per cent.

The Stabilization Corporation received 40.2 per cent of sales last week compared with 55 per cent last season.
In the third week of sales on the North and South Carolina border market, prices were holding steady to slightly higher Monday over last Thursday's sale.
Most increases amounted to only $1, the news service reported. Quality showed improvement as more leaf and cutters appeared with less primings and nondescript being offered. Volume ranged from medium to heavy.
Gross sales in the belt Thursday totaled 4,352,210 pounds and averaged $97.04 per hundred—an increase of $1.61 from the previous day. Season sales rose to 37,700,692 pounds, returning $92.57.

Moose Looking To The Future

Coming events dominated attention of the Greenville Moose at Monday night's meeting.
"Family Day" activities headlined the report by Entertainment Chairman Paul Rasberry. Scheduled for August 18, Rasberry reminded that hundreds of members and their families customarily attend the event and large number of workers would be needed to assist in the games, picnic and entertainment provided at the gatherings.
Rasberry also called attention to the Luau, floor show, supper and dance on August 7. He said reservations were moving fast and advised those planning to attend should get their tickets soon because only a relatively few more couples would make for a full house. Entertainment will be by The Pearls of the Pacific. The next regularly scheduled dance is booked for August 28.
Governor Thomas Jamieson read to the membership a special dispensation from Mooseheart that permits Secretary Arthur Sisk a dual membership. Sisk is a lifetime member of Gastonia Lodge 1303, and the dispensation permits him, as required by the fraternity's laws, to hold membership in the Greenville Lodge.
Attention was called to a District 11 meeting on August 8, hosted by the Washington Moose. All members who could attend were urged to do so.
Sec. Sisk reported all rooms at the headquarters motel for the State Convention at Greensboro had been taken. He said convention-goers who had not yet made reservations could be housed at a nearby motel.
Sports chairman Bill Pilgreen announced the Greenville lodge softball team for semifinal play in the N. C. Moose tournament, and the games would be played in Greensboro at an unspecified date in August.
Nine new members were enrolled into Lodge 885 last night. They are: Lonnie Thomas Baker, Hugh Garris, Arlie Lawrence, Clarence W. Mills, Jos. H. Bridgen Jr., Art Tyndall, Kenneth N. Walter, Michael Charles Hayes, and Donald R. Helms, who served as Class Representative.

White House Intruder Continues A Mystery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chester M. Plummer Jr., the intruder who was shot and killed by a White House guard, was described by a psychiatrist five months ago as being inclined to act impulsively.
That report was as close as police were able to come Monday to explain why Plummer, after stalking nervously for 45 minutes on the sidewalk outside 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, climbed a White House fence clutching a three-foot lead pipe and dashed toward the executive mansion Sunday night.
A guard dropped Plummer with a single bullet when the husky former high school football standout ignored repeated commands to stop. He died 90 minutes later in a hospital. His cab was parked nearby.
There were no notes or other clues to shed light on what triggered Plummer's fatal run. He harbored no known political grievances, and was never involved in any previous intrusion at the White House.
One man who worked with Plummer noted that he refused to stop and commented, "There's a possibility that it was a suicide."
His father, Chester Sr., said he spoke well of President Ford during a Fourth of July celebration with relatives here.
His mother said Chester, one of nine children, was a decorated Army veteran who "had no intention of doing anything to anybody."
But court records spoke of a troubled man who lived on the edge of anger. His father filed, but later dropped, an assault charge against Chester in 1972. The records indicate he used heroin at the time, although he was not known to be an addict. He was checked at a local mental hospital and released.
In February a judge placed him on one year's probation for the indecent exposure incident, which took place last fall.
Plummer allegedly walked up nude to two women on a city street, grabbed one and asked her to perform a sex act. She broke away and later identified Plummer from police mug shots.
Dr. James L. Evans, the psychiatrist who examined him recently, wrote, "There was no indication that he suffered from a mental disorder." He suggested that Plummer's problems grew out of marital anxieties.
He said Plummer "has a number of immature personality characteristics. He might be inclined to behave impulsively on occasions when he feels frustrated or inadequate to handle a conflict or situation in his life."
Plummer was divorced from his wife in March after a long separation and a month ago he reportedly left another woman by whom he had a 15-month-old son.
Co-workers at the Red Top Cab Co. in Arlington, Va., used the same adjectives to describe him: a quiet, nice guy who kept to himself. His boss, Ken Crosley, mentioned the possibility that Plummer was looking for a way to kill himself.

Revise Procedures On Redesignation

Two revisions in the procedures for the redesignation of warehouses at which flue-cured tobacco growers will market their tobacco were announced July 23 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.
Under one revision, the effective date of redesignation period will be the second Monday following the end of the monthly five-day redesignation period. The second revision stipulates that a grower may change the farmer's warehouse designation only once during the redesignation period. Under the flue-cured tobacco program, growers may designate by May 31 each year the warehouses at which they will sell their tobacco during the marketing season. The selling time at each warehouse is based on the amount of the tobacco designated to the warehouse.
Warehousemen will be notified of changes in designations. Any tobacco marketed prior to the effective date of redesignation will be ineligible for government price support. The revisions announced today make no change in the redesignation procedures for leased quota or for redesignation when a warehouse closes.
The assessments were those of Evelyn Budd-Michaels, a graphoanalyst from Sherman Oaks, Calif., and V. Peter Ferrera, president of a Chicago group called the "International Graphoanalysis Society."
The society, with about 500 shareholder-members, is holding its 47th annual meeting here this week.

Water-Use Still High

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh-area residents apparently are ignoring the pleas of city officials to conserve water.
The officials are asking for help because the Neuse River, from which Raleigh obtains half its supply of water, has reached its lowest level yet. The normal daily flow of the river is 400 million gallons per day. By Monday, that flow had shrunk to 12.28 million.
City Public Utilities Director J.S. Goodman said figures showed that despite a well-publicized call to conserve water over the weekend, the same amount of water was used last Sunday as on the previous Sunday—about 19.50 million gallons.
The level of the city's four southside reservoirs remains good, officials said. They are fed by creeks which have received more rain than the Neuse River basin.
But a broad, saturating rainfall is what Raleigh really needs to rectify its water shortage, officials said.

Greene Grant Sales And Use Tax Take Is Up

Greene Grant
Congressman Walter B. Jones announced Monday that the Farmers Home Administration has approved a loan of $727,500 and a grant of $989,000 to the Greene County Regional Water System, Snow Hill.
The loan is to be repaid in 40 years at five per cent interest.
These funds are to be used to consolidate eight non-profit systems and three municipal systems to provide a regional water system plan for 692 users. Initially the county will install the required well and storage facilities to support the master distribution system for the central system.
Sales And Use Tax Take Is Up
Net sales and use tax collections in Pitt County during June amounted to $183,768, according to the collection report issued by J. Howard Coble, secretary of the N. C. Department of Revenue.
The county's June figure compared with net collections of $182,467 recorded for May of 1976.
Neighboring county collections included: Greene, $11,867; Martin, $53,534; Beaufort, $94,047; Lenoir, $144,774; and Martin, $53,534.
Total collections in the 96 participating counties, according to Coble, amounted to $11,604,869 for June.

$31,360 In Federal Funds For Studies

A total of $31,360 has been awarded the East Carolina University School of Home Economics and the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions to expand ECU's coordinated undergraduate program option in dietetics.
The funds originate from the U. S. Public Health Service and will be used to continue a program begun at ECU during the academic year 1975-76.
The ECU dietetics program involves nutrition study at the graduate and undergraduate levels and sponsors workshops for the continuing education of teachers, dietitians and school food service directors.
An important aspect of the program is provision of clinical education and training in

Cooking-Each To His Own Taste In Alaska

By NAN ELLIOT
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — For centuries, native Alaskans have tapped the bounty of the land and ocean, savoring delicacies enjoyed perhaps nowhere else in the continental United States.

Depending upon the season and regional preferences, a sampling from the festival table might include fermented whale blubber, rotten fishheads, raw seal flipper, frozen bone marrow, moosehead soup and caribou meat dipped in seal oil.

While such a menu might send some stomachs spinning, four women at the Cook Inlet Native Association in Anchorage made themselves so hungry one afternoon reminiscing over foods from their home villages they nearly had to place a moratorium on the discussion.

If Millie Neher, an Eskimo from Point Hope on the Arctic Ocean, could return home at any season she said it would be in late spring when the hunters push their boats into the open leads between the ice floes in search of bowhead whales.

"Mmmmm ... the meat of a whale is so sweet," she said, rolling her eyes heavenwards and patting her stomach.

"It is best when it is cut into thin strips and left in a tub of blood to ferment for a week or so. That's what you call pickling in your own juice," she said.

Mrs. Neher often mixes her ambrosia with "muktuk," the native name for chunks of whale skin and blubber.

Muktuk is also good dipped in seal oil, "but then almost anything is good with seal oil," she said.

Yet, Mrs. Heher cautions against developing a craving for the meat of a whale's head.

"We never take the head home. We believe that you may take from the sea, but you must also give something back. The head is sunk into the ocean. Drastic things happened when two whalers once took parts of the head for themselves. They soon died very tragically."

Henrietta Hansen grew up in Unalakleet, which lies to the south of Point Hope on the Bering Sea.

"We eat different foods for each season. In the winter we eat a lot of frozen fish, sliced thin and dipped in seal oil. My father used to tell me that if the weather is bad, and you feel like you are going to freeze, you must eat frozen fish. Then you will wake up warm. And it's true," she said.

Summer is her favorite season, when the foods are plentiful. As the midnight sun melts the last of the winter ice from the tundra, and the salmon swim upriver to spawn, villagers begin to put on weight they have lost during leaner months of the year.

The children scramble over rocky crevices on a nearby island in search of puffin and seagull eggs. The men go out whaling, seal hunting and fishing. The women fill their buckets with green roots and berries.

A special treat is "agootuk," sometimes called Eskimo ice cream.

"We take reindeer or caribou fat and dice it very thin," Mrs. Hansen said. "It takes forever to make because you must fluff the fat with your hands, until it is very light. Then you add seal oil, sugar and berries. Sometimes we squeeze the liquid out of whitefish and add the meat flakes."

Mae Stanley always looked forward to moose-hunting season in the fall. An Athabaskan from interior Alaska, Mrs. Stanley spent her childhood in Tanana on the Yukon River.

"One of my favorite things is moosehead soup," she said, with a twinge of nostalgia. "We eat everything but the horns. I think that's why we never got scurvy in the winter when there were no greens to be found, because we could eat the stomach of the moose which still had the flavor of the twigs and greens the moose had eaten."

Her father was partial to moose jawbone, the first thing he would eat after the kill, Mrs. Stanley said. He would stick the bone by the campfire, eat the cooked meat and gum, then break the bone open and eat the marrow.

"Stinkheads," she said, are a mouth-watering bonus in the summertime. Fishheads are stuffed into a gunny sack and sunk into the river to deteriorate for two weeks. After they are pulled up, villagers eat them raw.

Janice Gregory is a Tlingit Indian from Angoon on Admiralty Island in Southeastern Alaska. Now living the cosmopolitan existence, she said the taste she misses most is ground seaweed.

"We would dry it in the sun, then soak it in salt and sugar water. After grinding it until it is thready, we would eat it dry or simmer it with fish. But you don't find many people these days who still make it, because it takes a long time," she said.

Even with the advent of the white man, the diet of Alaskan natives has remained virtually unchanged. Most of Alaska is accessible only by air.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

So many people have been asking me if I am playing better tennis this year.

Mainly, they have been the people who played me last year.

I am happy to report that although my form is much the same, I have picked up a few tricks of the court that I have seen professionals use, which is bound to improve my game.

I have finally mastered what to do with the second tennis ball. Having small hands, I was becoming terribly self-conscious about keeping it in a can in the car while I served the first one. I noted some women tucked the second ball just inside the elastic leg of their tennis panties. I tried, but found the space already occupied by a leg. Now I simply drop the second ball down my cleavage, giving me a chest that often stuns my opponent throughout an entire set.

Next, I have learned how to stall, thus throwing my entire opponent's game off. It's called the old tie-the-shoe-trick. When your opponent is ready to serve, simply drop to your knees, untie your shoe, rearrange its tongue, and tie it again. Baseball players use the old stall all the time. (Cincinnati Reds pitcher Pat Zachry recently swallowed his chewing tobacco and threw up against a dugout wall. I haven't mastered at what hour I can throw up. Sometimes, it is during a return.)

Another play is the rearrange-the-strings number. Never take the rap for a bad return or no return. Whenever you hit a ball into the net or miss it entirely, bring the game to a drizzling halt by checking the strings of your racket, spending sometimes as much as five minutes separating them and testing their strength.

This absolves you of any of the responsibility for a bad shot.

Forget all you have been told about concentration. It is overrated. Often, when there is time during one of my lobs, I yell across the net, "Your zipper is open," and have not only been ignored, but soundly punished for my good deed.

Probably my greatest accomplishment this year has been my skill at learning to play the game called, "Run Around the Backhand."

Early in my tennis career, I used to think when a ball landed to the left of me I had to use my backhand to return it. I have since learned that anything is better, including straddling a 15-foot cyclone fence.

No doubt about it — every day in every way, my game grows stronger. I saw one enthusiast the other day playing with his racket out of the press. I'll have to try that.

Innocent Lunch Date Beginning Of Trouble?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your viewpoint and that of other executives' wives on the subject of husbands taking their secretaries out to lunch would be appreciated. The claim that there's nothing "wrong" in it makes me bristle. I disapprove, but am almost ashamed to say so because I am called absurd, insecure and just plain childish.

I am married to an executive and this is my problem. I was formerly a secretary (not his) and never found "business" to be the topic of conversation when my boss invited me to lunch.

I wonder what the silent league—the secretaries' husbands—have to say?

NOBODY'S FOOL

DEAR NOBODY'S: Lunching with one's boss is not in itself morally wrong, but the attendant gossip can do much harm. Circumstances differ, however, and one must consider the boss, the secretary, the place and the frequency of such dates. And who's feeding whom what.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a wonderful person, but my husband thinks her husband is a terrible bore. This friend has had us to her home for dinner several times, and I've been able to persuade my husband to go. But now he says, "No more!"

I have had this couple for dinner, and although my husband wasn't rude, he didn't urge them to stay longer when they said, rather early and halfheartedly, "I think we'd better be going."

Abby, I have entertained some of my husband's business friends, many of whom are bores, but I don't complain. So is it asking too much of him to do the same for me once in a while?

EQUAL PARTNER

DEAR PARTNER: You shouldn't. And many don't. Why don't you play "let's make a deal"? As an equal partner, your husband should do as much for you as you do for him.

DEAR ABBY: The man signed DISGUSTED, who was wondering how to signal a waitress in a restaurant, should use a little common sense.

I've been a waitress for five years, and the first thing I do is let the customer know my name. If the waitress doesn't do this, the customer should ask. It saves a lot of confusion when he needs something if he knows exactly who waited on him.

I don't know any waitress who likes to be called "Hey, Girlie," or have someone whistle or snap his fingers to summon her.

Thanks for hearing our side.

C.S.

DEAR C.S.: Not all waitresses want to be addressed by their names. Some feel it is too familiar. So unless the waitress is wearing a name pin, or introduces herself, I recommend calling her either "Miss" or "Waitress."

DEAR ABBY: Please explain in easy pool-hall language just what people mean when they say they are "born again" or "twice-born." Thank you.

B.H.: CLAY CITY, ILLINOIS

Women Urged To Branch Out In New Program

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — A program designed to help and encourage more women students to train for and apply for positions in traditionally male careers is being undertaken by St. Olaf College here.

College officials hope the $100,000 three-year effort, funded by the Mellon Foundation, will convince men and women — students and faculty — that women can and do function effectively in such fields as medicine, law, the ministry and executive-level administration.

The heart of the program is a series of seminars, panels and informal conferences to acquaint women students with the problems and rewards of careers that have been considered "for men only." It also deals with the difficulties women face in trying to break into these fields and in working with men once they are in.

Included are a lawyer, a pathologist, a pastor, an engineer and several corporate administrators. Their work with students and faculty is coordinated by a woman hired by the college specifically to help women graduates with the problems they face in finding employment.

A research program is being conducted concurrently with the career attitude change program to determine its effectiveness.

Olympics Need An Overhauling

There have been times when it was wondered if the 1976 Olympics would be held in Montreal. Now we wonder if the 1976 Olympics should have been held, period.

The ancient Olympiads are the idealistic tradition for the modern Games. City-state animosities were shelved temporarily and the emphasis was on individual athletic prowess. The spectacles were downright simple as compared with today's elaborate multi-billion dollar settings.

These days, some countries have turned the Games into a propaganda outlet, using the Olympics as expressions of non-sports idealism.

The practice has gone to such extremes that in at least one country six-year-olds are chosen for development into future stars of the athletic world. And there are governments that threaten, and in some cases actually do, withdraw because of political differences.

The world fears those twisted minds who pose a threat of terroristic attacks at the Games as an expression of "protest," and extreme security precautions are an absolutely necessary measure.

Add to that, reports of attempted bribery and cheating, the questionable amateur standing of so many entrants, and the prevalence of national pride over feats of the performers.

We like none of it. It's time for the International Olympic Committee to do some real housecleaning.

Veterinary School's Way Is Cleared

The final hurdle may have been cleared for the state's planned veterinary school, with a recent federal court ruling.

The federal judge ruled that it was not the court's role to determine where the school should be located. The suit was brought by proponents of the location of the school at N. C. A&T State University.

It appears now that development of the school at N. C. State University can proceed. We hope the work of building the vet school can proceed without further delay.

No System For Juveniles

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH—Out of sight, out of mind. A trite expression, but one filled with implications for North Carolina's troubled youngsters who come into contact with the state's "nonsystem" of juvenile justice.

For a nonsystem is surely what the state has, despite best efforts so far to correct the ills exposed by the 1972 study committee report from the N.C. Bar Association Penal System Committee.

That publication—"As The Twig Is Bent"—put the spotlight on the problem:

—Half the 2,400 children in training schools should not have been there;

—The training schools were "dumping grounds . . . for mentally retarded, the uneducable, the runaways, pregnant girls, the neglected, and in many instances, simply the unwanted child."

—North Carolina put more children, per capita, in training schools than any other state;

—The training schools were generally isolated in rural areas so as to be out of sight and mind.

Much Progress

In four short years, following the lead of that Bar Association report and its recommendations, North Carolina has taken some giant steps: population has been cut to less than 1,000; average time children spend in training schools has been reduced from 12 months to five months; peer group counseling to help children define and solve problems are in operation; training school education has been revamped to put emphasis on basic reading, writing, ciphering.

The General Assembly has tackled the situation with a will, responding to much of the material in "The Twig Is Bent," and with more change upcoming:

By July, 1977, the non-criminal child is supposed to be kept out of training school; local resources are being planned and developed to provide counseling, group home settings, runaway homes, and wider use of local rehabilitative resources.

juvenile justice problems within the state. The several state agencies that have a role in juvenile justice need improvement in these areas," he writes in the current issue of the Institute of Government publication "Popular Government."

Reviewing the various problems now existing and developing for the future, Thomas concludes that the "juvenile justice system will continue to be fragmented and to operate as a non-system in the near future, with a gap between legislative intent and capacity to implement.

"One important issue is how to convert state funds from support of institutions to support of community-based programs."

Thomas believes a key to bringing about positive change would be "to increase the visibility of children on probation, in community programs, and in training schools. . . . If the public were made more aware of them . . . (it) would demand better programs, more accountability, and secure funding. . . ."

Yet, gaps continue to exist, according to a survey of the current situation by Mason P. Thomas, Jr., a member of the faculty at the Institute of Government whose specialties include juvenile law.

Thomas points to the state effort to provide juvenile detention facilities other than local jails as an example: enacted in 1974, the law allowed one year for setting up state-operated detention homes in rural areas. None have been established, and juveniles are still put in local jails in violation of state law and policy.

Gaps Remain

Another gap exists between state insistence upon local community programs and facilities to treat juveniles, and the availability of local, state, or federal funds to accomplish the goal.

Thomas found that intensive work in the field in recent years identifies the problem of fragmentation—but no solution. "No single unit of state government is responsible for planning or coordination in relation to

WHO'S THAT IN THE HOWDAH?

Reagan Action Argued

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Ronald Reagan's strategists say the selection of Sen. Richard S. Schweiker as vice presidential running mate has strengthened Reagan's presidential campaign and broadened his political base.

But backers of President Ford called the Reagan announcement a desperate play for delegates by a losing candidate.

Reagan named the Pennsylvania lawmaker — one of the most liberal members of the Senate — in a surprise move Monday.

Just three weeks before opening of the Republican National Convention, Ford is 36 delegates away from the nomination with 1,094, in The Associated Press survey. Reagan trails with 1,025 and 109 delegates were uncommitted, including 26 in Schweiker's home state.

Reagan backers were generally mum about the announcement. Spokesmen for the Reagan campaign emphasized points where Schweiker agrees with the former California governor's conservative philosophy.

The consensus was that Reagan stands to gain in the Northeast, where he is weakest. But he may suffer in the South and West, where his support rests in large part with legally uncommitted delegates.

"I think it broadens our base noticeably," Lyn Nofziger, a close political confidant of Reagan, said of the Schweiker announcement.

"This is a guy who has won elections statewide in a tough state for Republicans. He undoubtedly is going to go up there and work hard to win those delegates. Schweiker will work throughout the Northeast into the Ohio Valley.

"I think it's much too early to tell whether it's going to hurt us in the South or the West. I think by the time many of those delegates in the South have looked the situation over and looked at Schweiker, I'm not sure there will be any hurt there."

Ford's backers initially were cautious in their reaction. But

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

To Heather At Age Six

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
Dear Heather—

Your sixth birthday is at hand. Our unmanned space vehicle has just landed successfully on Mars. Jimmy Carter has won the Democratic nomination for the presidency. That strikes me as a fair ranking of notable events in the order of their importance.

The Mars landing really is important, and the coming election has much meaning also. Come to think about it, if Mr. Carter wins in November, and gets reelected in 1980, you would be 14 before he left the White House. That's nothing very special for you to think about, but it is something for your Grandfather to think about. The thought makes him turn purple. Grandfathers look pretty funny that way.

But the truly important thing is being six. How about that! Some birthdays are better than others, and a sixth birthday comes first class. This is the birthday just before you go to school in September, when you will become a really-o, truly-o first-grader. That is ten times as much fun as being President.

Actually, you will be going back to school, for this summer finds you in a four-week "pre-school experience" at Rappahannock County Elementary School. You have been catching the big yellow bus every morning at 8:20 and riding grandly back home a little after noon, and I asked you the other day how you liked the pre-school experience and you said "guh-reat." That's the old affirmative outlook.

Thinking about the bus: Your Grandfather understands, from sources that cannot be revealed, that you raised so much ruckus in the back of the bus, bouncing up and down on the seat, that you have been summarily assigned to the front of the bus. Seat-bouncing is a no-no, but if that is the worst mischief you get into at six, we all will be greatly surprised.

This has been a good year, my love. You have grown up maybe two or three years in one. Last summer you were writing your name in large block letters that ran up a hill and slid back down again. Now you have your letters under remarkable control. Last summer you could hardly read at all. Now you are tackling all kinds of hard words, and because your parents are hipped on phonics, you are learning to sound-it-out, syll-a-ble by syll-a-ble. Before long I am going to get you on Con-sti-tution, which is a nice grandfatherly word you ought to master soon.

In this past year you also have learned to swim like a guppy, though you still belly-flop something awful when you dive. You have been canoeing with your father on the Shenandoah. A couple of summers ago, the big discovery was fireflies. Now you're discovering the Big Dipper and the Evening Star—and Mars. You had

Other Editors Say Same Old Answer

(Washington Daily News)

"Why do we not exact a promise from gubernatorial candidates regarding improved roads for far Eastern North Carolina?"

We have heard that question many times, and the truth is that we have been unable to get any candidate for governor to come out clearly and say definitely that he will give us a four-lane highway to the coast or that he will four-lane present Highway 17. We cannot get a candidate for governor to say that he will give us a bridge across the Pamlico river.

The various candidates talk about improving our highways, and the typical candidate will say "well, I'm going to take a good hard look at the highway situation in far Eastern North Carolina, and I'm going to do what I can to remedy that situation."

As a result so often we feel that we have been half-promised but not really assured. We are often a bride's maid but never a bride. And getting any gubernatorial candidate to promise conclusively that we will get what we have been denied so long is just impossible.

We have said so many times that we believe one can get on a four lane highway around Zebulon, N. C. and ride to California on a four-lane road. But East of Zebulon, on Highways 264 and 64, four-laning has been more of a hit and miss proposition for several years now.

We are told so often that we do not have the population which is necessary to get such a road. We are told too often that this state builds certain highways after the need has been shown and not in order to develop an area. In short we are told too often that we shall have to wait.

We've been waiting long enough, but we suspect that in the eyes of state politicians and even gubernatorial candidates of both political parties, "long enough" makes little impression.

This is not to say that we should give up. Rather it is to say that we should redouble our efforts. When there is a fight to be made, let us go into that fight with all the strength, all the facts, all the truths, all the numbers, and all the enthusiasm we can muster. Let us work together with all the allies we can induce to join us. Let us neither be afraid nor bashful. We have waited long years and the fact has not been accomplished. We have lived under Democratic state rule and now under Republican rule, and the story is the same.

Maybe we have not worked hard enough. Maybe our fight has not been great enough. Whatever the reasons — or the alibis — let us join together now in one great common cause.

A four lane highway to our coast is necessary today.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Suspicious Of PLO Trap

By ROWLAND
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) is under high-level suspicion here of fabricating its warning that it could not guarantee safe evacuation this week of U.S. diplomats from Beirut in order to turn them into virtual hostages.

If so, this raises profound policy implications for the Ford administration, which has a special task force working around the clock on the evacuation plan. If the administration decides that the PLO is blocking the pull-out to gain leverage over this country, U. S. military involvement to evacuate the Americans is not ruled out.

Contingency plans for possible drastic action, which the Pentagon calls "evacuation in a non-permissive environment," have been readied for months. They may never be used, but the mere suspicion by high officials that embassy personnel and other Americans may be targeted by the PLO as hostages has introduced a dangerous new element to Lebanon's bloody civil war.

When the U.S. embassy in Beirut reported to Washington that the scheduled evacuation last week had to be postponed because the PLO would not guarantee safe passage, the telegram contained no hint of PLO plots or ploys. But a later cable raised that possibility directly — precisely fitting suspicions privately voiced here.

The basis for these suspicions is twofold:

First, when President Ford decided on the earlier evacuation of Americans from Beirut in mid-June, the PLO tried to coerce the U.S. to use an airlift, which would have meant reopening the Beirut airport under U.S. pressure. The reopened airport would then have been available for shipments of arms and medical supplies for the beleaguered PLO forces in Beirut. The U.S. flatly refused, choosing evacuation by sea.

Second, PLO chief Yasser Arafat is in deep trouble for having failed thus far to enlist Arab help in his losing military struggle against the Lebanese Christians and their Syrian allies. That failure, following Arafat's arduous journeys through Arab capitals, has weakened his political base and threatens his overall control of feuding factions among Palestinian nationalists.

What Arafat wants today is obvious: serious U.S. pressure on Syrian President Hafez Assad to withdraw from Lebanon leaving the PLO intact to negotiate a political settlement with other major factions in the civil war.

Since President Ford has no intention of attempting any such thing, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has ordered maximum pressure to be brought not against Syria but against Arafat (through the good offices of friendly Arab countries, principally Egypt and Saudi Arabia).

The U.S. message: please inform Arafat that the U.S. insists on a PLO guarantee of safe passage for the overland evacuation by convoy from Beirut to Sidon to Nabatiya and, then, with a similar guarantee from Syria, up and over the Lebanese mountains to Damascus.

If Arafat either fails to get this message loud and clear or disregards it under pressure from more radical Palestinian leaders, Mr. Ford faces a situation filled with political opportunity at home but bristling with danger in the eastern Mediterranean.

A successful evacuation of 155 Americans (including about 25 embassy officers and secretaries) from Beirut in what the Pentagon calls a "non-permissive environment" evokes the Mayaguez affair, which brought Mr. Ford a rare taste of glory. But the dangers in attempting withdrawal from Beirut in a hostile atmosphere are immense.

Strength For Today

TIME FOR RETIREMENT

There are many who say, early. The best things in life, they argue, are acquired only in periods of detachment and leisure. If a person by the time he or she has reached the middle fifties or sixties could give up the routine connected with making a living, how rich the remainder of life might be when given to cultural pursuits and the unselfish serving of fellow men.

There are others who dislike retirement in principle. They point to the many people, who, forced to retire early, become restless and dissatisfied and quickly fall ill and die. Opponents of retirement believe that constant, purposeful work is necessary to health.

It would be certainly unwise to attempt to derive a general principle from one or the other of these points of view that would be applicable to everybody. The important thing is for senior citizens not to feel that they are drifting out of life and have nothing more to offer the world.

Hungry For Land To 'Preserve'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — To the people who run The American Land Trust, the nicest thing you could do to observe the Bicentennial would be to give the public a nice piece of land, like a swamp, a bog, a creek or the side of a mountain.

The trust, working with The Nature Conservancy, will guarantee not to develop it, but instead will seek to preserve its "ecological integrity" for the nation's third century.

The conservancy, outgrowth of an organization begun in 1917, is aptly named. "The highest and best use for much land is to leave it alone," says Patrick Noonan, president of the organization, based in Arlington, Va.

The trust is a two-year effort by people prominent in government, business and finances to sell the conservation idea to the public, including the executives of land-rich companies. It seeks donations to the conservancy.

Says Dan Lufkin, cochairman of the trust and a founder of the Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette securities firm, "It's one of the few ways that the corporate citizen or individual can participate rather than be a spectator in the Bicentennial."

Two of the first donations the trust obtained for the conservancy were gifts of thousands of forest and farmland acres in the Great Dismal Swamp of Virginia and North Carolina that had attracted developers since colonial times.

The gifts, by Union Camp and Weyerhaeuser, two of the nation's biggest timber companies, will be deeded by the conservancy to the U.S. Department of Interior, to be preserved as part of the Great Dismal Swamp Wildlife Refuge.

Perhaps to assuage some not so conservative stockholders, Alexander Calder Jr., Union Camp chairman, commented at the time that the gifts were financially as well as emotionally sound.

Explaining, Noonan observes that many companies carry land on their books as a "dead asset," when they could seek out the conservancy, have the land impartially appraised, donate it, and obtain an income tax deduction.

Noonan and George Wells, executive director of the trust, are now calling on insurance companies, manufacturers, natural resource concerns and others who might have unique acreage or, just as acceptable, money to give.

Possessed of a zeal for their cause — Noonan is a convert from real estate development — they work with the nation's garden clubs to raise small cash donations, and more than incidentally, influence corporate executives through their wives.

The trust has set a commitment of no less than $200 million in "donations of land itself or in contributions that will be used directly to save significant natural and wilderness areas."

By the end of 1977 the trust hopes to have encouraged donations in all 50 states. The conservancy will carry on with the work, accepting more gifts, managing some (Continued on page 6)

Flaherty Avoiding A Backlash

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate David Flaherty does not like to meet people as much as he likes to hug them. Men, women, children—if Flaherty is glad to see them, he lets them know it.

Nor is Flaherty the type to let his anger simmer quietly inside. Though he was born in Boston, he apparently never learned the credo of the Massachusetts politico: "Don't get mad, get even." Flaherty's style is to blow his stack and forget about it.

Flaherty has met a lot of people thus far in his campaign, although he realizes that most of them are probably not Republicans and won't be able to help him against Coy Privette and Jacob Alexander in the GOP primary.

Still, Flaherty figures that everyone he's hugged or shaken hands with is a potential vote in November, and he is confident that he'll do well enough in the primary to be around in November.

Flaherty's political problem is to put enough distance between himself and his battered patron, Gov. James E. Holshouser, to avoid catching some of the backlash against Holshouser from the party's right wing.

Flaherty appointed Worth Coltrane, an Asheboro attorney with strong ties to the conservatives, to be his campaign manager. And he has stayed neutral in the presidential race.

But Flaherty still has many trappings of the moderate wing that currently is the underdog in GOP politics.

He entered public life with the backing of the Broyhill family, the furniture manufacturers from Caldwell County who have been the leading name in North Carolina Republicanism. J.E. Broyhill was the state's national committeeman for 28 years. James T. Broyhill is a Congressman; son-in-law William Stevens ran for the U.S. Senate in 1974. They are supporting Flaherty this year.

Flaherty came to North Carolina to work for Broyhill Industries after spending his youth and getting his education in his native Massachusetts. In 1969, he was elected to the state Senate where he worked closely with the leader of the GOP delegation, Rep. James E. Holshouser.

In 1972, the Broyhills and Flaherty backed Holshouser for the party's gubernatorial nomination in a bitter battle against conservative James C. Gardner.

After Holshouser, won, one of his first appointments was the selection of Flaherty as Secretary of Human Resources.

Flaherty was responsible for a sprawling, bureaucratic organization that has control over programs ranging from welfare to aid for the blind. Few of the programs are particularly popular with conservative Republicans.

Flaherty has painted himself as an administrator who, if he had to deal with things like welfare, at least dealt with it efficiently.

He cited a having of the error rate on welfare cases, which had been one of the highest in the nation. He disputes one reporter contention that state budget documents show spending in his department increasing 51 per cent—about average for state government—from 1973-76.

Flaherty says that figure is misleading because it does not take into consideration such things as federally funded jobs and the transfer of the youth development division from the prisons department to his bailiwick.

He said there had been an increase of 2,500 employees in his department during his tenure, but he said most of them were the result of the transfer of the youth development program (722 employees) and the deliberate effort to increase care in mental hospitals.

The most controversial element of Flaherty's record, however, is the contract he signed for $405 million under which a private firm agreed to handle the state's Medicaid program.

Shortly after Flaherty left office this year, the firm announced that it could no longer handle the program on the money allotted to it. It began negotiations with the state to either increase the amount of the contract or terminate it.

Meanwhile, the federal General Accounting Office issued a report challenging Flaherty's claim that the program saved money and was useful to the state no matter what the outcome of the contract negotiations.

Flaherty cannot understand why anyone would criticize his decision. "This is a great contract and I'm overwhelmed by the lack of logic on the part of some people in the press to appreciate what is going on."

"This is an effort on the part of the contractor to get a better deal. In effect, we have 342,000 people for less than we thought it would take to pay for 312,000 people. Now when the hell do you have to apologize for that?"

"I think when it's all over, we'll come out looking like heroes. HAS (the private firm) would like to get out of the ceiling. But to me, the whole secret of the contract was the ceiling," he said.

Flaherty still talks about using the same concept in other state agencies—letting highway maintenance be handled by private firms, for example.

He has also taken detailed stands on utility regulation, opposition to new taxes, crime and education. He would like to see the state superintendent appointed by the state school board, which he would like to see elected. "Now you've got two captains of the ship."

To get those positions across, Flaherty has been forced to borrow money for a statewide program of paid advertising prior to the primary.

Retirement For ASCS Veteran

Mrs. Blanche Clark Jones has retired from the Pitt County office of the US Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service after 23 years of service.

At the time of her retirement, Mrs. Jones was head of the agricultural conservation and tobacco programs for the ASCS here.

A native of Pitt County, she graduated from Greenville High School and East Carolina University. Following graduation, she taught high school in the Pitt County school system until her marriage and then did substitute work in the city schools for 25 years prior to accepting a job with the federal government.

Mrs. Jones and her husband, Leslie, have one daughter, Mrs. Lesley Meekins of Greenville, and one granddaughter, Leslie Jones returned from Atlantic Coastline in Greenville after 51 years with the company.

Mrs. Jones is a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and is a member of the Pilot Club of Greenville. She is a charter member of the National Association of County Office Employees, the national organization of ASCS workers, and holds membership in the state COE association.

A good part of her retirement, she noted, will be spent at the Jones' summer cottage at Bayview.

Stacy Evans, manager of the Pitt ASCS office, said that Mrs. Jones is the first person in the office to fulfill voluntary retirement requirements.

Donations of securities or money — as little as $10 qualifies the donor for a year's membership in the conservancy — are an especially important part of the program because a good deal of the land must be bought rather than begged.

Thus the conservancy, with backing from the trust, recently put up $1 million to help buy a 76,000-acre tract of prime ranch land in the Mt. Haggin area of the Rocky Mountains in Montana.

A description of the land by the trust and the conservancy attests to its appeal:

"Cresting to more than 10,000 feet in places, the Mt. Haggin area land acquired is a 119-square-mile tract along the Continental Divide. It is comprised of snow-capped mountains, Alpine meadows, pine forests and lush river valleys which provide refuge for a variety of wildlife — elk, mountain goat, moose, deer, bighorn sheep, mountain lion and greater sandhill crane, as well as the endangered peregrine falcon."

Honorary chairman of the trust, which like the conservancy is based in Arlington, Va., is Nathaniel P. Reed, assistant secretary of the interior. Cochairmen are Lufkin and Thomas McCall, former Oregon governor.

Some officials here, counting on Ararat not risking a confrontation of the superpowers, overlook the fact that down that perilous road may lie his own political rehabilitation. It is just such ephemeral political equations that make a mockery of forecasting the Lebanese civil war, and which have raised the simple act of evacuating a few dozen Americans to the level of high and dangerous statecraft in Washington.

Killed Self In Gun Play

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — Police said a 17-year-old Roxboro boy killed himself early Monday while playing Russian roulette at the home of a friend.

Officers said witnesses told them Edwin Wayne Winstead put one bullet into a .32-caliber pistol and placed it to his head, pulling the trigger three times. The gun fired the third time, police said.

He was dead on arrival at Person County Memorial Hospital.

Investigating officers said Winstead was listening to a tape player with six companions on the porch of a friend's home around 2:30 a.m. when he went to his van and took out the pistol.

The companions told officers that Winstead asked them if they wanted to play Russian roulette. When they said no, he went through the process of extracting and replacing the bullets in the gun twice before finally leaving one bullet in the chamber, police said.

Officers were unable to explain why Winstead shot himself, noting that he had no history of irrational behavior.

Farmville Mart Has $93.20 Day

FARMVILLE — Offerings Monday at the Farmville Tobacco Market were the best of the season according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"Several sheets of lugs and color grades were responsible for the highest average of the season. Some quality grades of lugs and color grades sold as high as $1.19 per pound with a practical price of $1.13 per pound," Williams said.

"Stabilization receipts were the same yesterday as last year on the same sale day. The Farmville Market Monday sold 396,606 pounds for $369,633 at an average of $93.20 per 100 pounds," he said.

The Farmville Tobacco Market has to date sold 1,959,396 pounds for $1,774,295 with a season's average of $90.55.

"It appears to be an effort to exchange the second highest office in the land for a handful of delegates," said Ford campaign manager Rogers C.B. Morton.

Florida State GOP Chairman Bill Taylor, a Ford supporter, said Schweiker is farther to the left than Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota, the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

"The people I've talked to are aghast. I sense that in the South it will have an adverse effect," Taylor said.

The announcement marked an abrupt about-face for Reagan on several counts.

For weeks, Reagan has been telling supporters that it would be "presumptuous" and possibly illegal for him to name his vice presidential preference prior to the national convention.

And he repeatedly assured supporters that his choice would be someone compatible with his own conservative philosophy. "I don't believe in the old tradition of picking someone at the opposite end of the political spectrum because he can get some votes you can't get yourself," Reagan said as recently as July 9 in Colorado.

Community Wants To Stay Small, Unpolluted

PINE KNOLL SHORES, N.C. (AP) — Many coastal residents are clamoring for economic development. But residents of this community of mostly retired people, and others who own retirement and recreational land, want to stay small, unpolluted, and close to nature.

So land planning has become Topic A on the coast.

Pine Knoll Shores, a planned community of 1,000 residents, voted overwhelmingly last year to strictly limit growth and to place a ceiling on population after 25 years.

Phil Green of the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill said their fears of possible uncontrolled growth were well-grounded. He said the eastern third of the state could become the economic growth center of the state...as the Piedmont and the cities get more and more crowded and polluted.

There is no downtown in Pine Knoll Shores. There are tentative plans for a shopping center. That, apparently, is all the economic development the resident of the town near Atlantic Beach care for.

The Coastal Resources Commission, created two years ago, has been successful in that "it has focused attention on the problems," Green said in a telephone interview.

"There has been a very noticeable modernization of local government throughout the coastal area — counties hiring managers and planners," Green said. "There's a whole lot more rational concern with growth."

Pine Knoll Shores was owned until the mid-1950s by Alice Hoffman, who forbade development. When development did come after her death, it was low density.

Town planner Paul Foster of Wilmington took a survey of the residents of Pine Knoll Shores last year. He said it showed they want to live "in a coastal environment with its natural beauty protected from damage and commercialism."

A restricted growth plan based on the survey has been drawn up, Foster said.

Two Wrecks On Monday

An estimated $3,100 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a three-vehicle collision on Tenth Street, 60 feet West of the Washington Street intersection that involved cars driven by Mable Anderson Lancaster of Route 1, Grimesland; Patricia Franklin Adams of 1909 Forest Hill Dr. and Ricky Harrell Garris of Route 2, Gritton.

Police, who charged Mrs. Adams with exceeding a safe speed, estimated damage at $550 to the Lancaster car, $1,000 to the Adams vehicle and $1,250 to the Garris auto.

No charges were reported following investigation of a 4:15 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 125 feet South of the Forrest Hill Drive intersection.

Drivers involved in the mishap were identified as Terry Jage Rose of Route 1, Pantego and Nancy Spain Elks of Route 2, Greenville.

Damage was estimated at $250 to the Rose car and $50 to the Elks auto.

Fugitive Said Turned Away On Border

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — A young man who is among those being sought in the nationwide hunt for the Chowchilla kidnapers was turned away from the Canadian border four days after the abduction because he was carrying firearms.

James Schoenfeld, 24, who was not a subject of the investigation at the time, tried to cross the border from Washington state at Cascade, B.C., according to Constable Ken Yaeger of Grand Forks, B.C.

Yaeger said Monday that authorities found a rifle and three handguns in Schoenfeld's car. Canadian authorities checked to see if Schoenfeld was wanted by American authorities and if the guns and auto were stolen, Yaeger said. Then they escorted him back to the U.S. customs office in Laurier, Wash., where he was released.

Yaeger said Schoenfeld was traveling alone.

He said Schoenfeld was carrying his own identification cards, plus those belonging to Frederick Newhall Woods IV, the other person sought in the kidnaping, and a Ralph Lester Snyder, 22, a new name in the case.

Yaeger said Schoenfeld also carried California and Montana license plates in the beige 1962 Chrysler he was driving. The automobile matched the description of a car Schoenfeld was known to drive.

According to Alameda County, Calif., Sheriff Tom Houchins, Schoenfeld told customs officers he was going to the Olympics.

Schoenfeld and Woods are named in local and federal arrest warrants in connection with the kidnaping. Both are sons of wealthy San Francisco Peninsula families. Schoenfeld's 22-year-old brother, Richard, surrendered to police last Friday.

The school children and their bus driver were abducted at gunpoint July 15 and held captive in a moving van buried in a Livermore rock quarry, 100 miles northwest of Chowchilla. The quarry is owned by the Woods' father.

The children and their driver were imprisoned in the van for about 18 hours until they escaped by digging their way out after the kidnapers had left.

Houchins said Monday that deputies would serve a search warrant somewhere in Marin County, across the Golden Gate from San Francisco, but he refused to say what deputies would be looking for.

No new arrest warrants have been sought, said Houchins, despite persistent reports that some investigators believe more than three men were involved in the elaborate kidnaping.

Meanwhile, Madera County Dist. Atty. Charles Hoffman rejected a request from Richard Schoenfeld's attorneys who sought to stop their defendant from being taken from Oakland to Chowchilla for the formal reading of charges. The attorneys argued that Schoenfeld was not safe in Chowchilla because "of the emotional climate in Madera County" where the kidnaping occurred.

Attorney William Gagen said Schoenfeld will plead innocent Thursday. He added that he believes the trial judge eventually will agree to a defense request to move the case out of Madera County.

Ex-Prime Minister Of Japan Is Under Arrest

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, the rags-to-riches political maverick who resigned under a cloud 19 months ago, was arrested today on charges of being involved in the Lockheed payoff scandal.

The public prosecutor said Tanaka and Toshio Enomoto, his secretary when he was prime minister, were accused of receiving $1.7 million (500 million yen) from an official of the Marubeni trading company, Lockheed's agent at the time.

The arrests stunned Japan's closely related political and business worlds. The yen dropped 55 points, from 293.55 to the dollar to 294.10. Prices also dropped on the Tokyo stock exchange, but they recovered before the market closed.

Prime Minister Takeo Miki, who succeeded Tanaka at the head of the conservative government, told a news conference the arrest of his predecessor was "the greatest trial faced by the Liberal-Democratic party" since its formation in 1955. He said his job was to reestablish public confidence in the government.

The arrest was also a godsend to Miki personally. Tanaka headed one of the numerous powerful factions in the ruling party and had joined forces with the party vice president, Etsusaburo Shiina, Deputy Premier Takeo Fukuda and Finance Minister Masayoshi Ohira to try to oust Miki, charging him with indecisiveness. Tanaka's arrest was expected to shatter this opposition movement.

Tanaka, 58, and Enomoto, 50, were charged with violating the foreign exchange control law.

The former premier was arrested at the prosecutor's office, where he had gone voluntarily for questioning. He was taken to a house of detention.

Four hours after his arrest, he submitted his resignation from the Liberal-Democratic party. He is also still a member of the lower house of the Diet, the Japanese parliament, but there was no indication whether he would resign from it also.

Enomoto, who was ill, left his hospital bed to submit to arrest.

A total of 16 Japanese now have been arrested in connection with the $12 million which Lockheed officials told a U.S. Senate subcommittee the aircraft corporation paid to promote the sale of its planes in Japan.

Tanaka is the first leader of the Liberal-Democrats to be arrested, although Yoshio Kodama, an influence peddler and backroom power in the party, is accused of getting more than $6 million in Lockheed money. He has not been arrested because he is bedridden following a stroke.

The others arrested were officials of Marubeni or of All Nippon Airways, the country's largest domestic airline.

Lockheed payoffs were made to get the government to buy the company's P3c Orion anti-submarine patrol plane instead of having a plane produced in Japan, and to get All Nippon Airways to buy the Lockheed TriStar Airbus.

Tanaka was believed involved in the decision to buy the Orion. He was prime minister from July 6, 1972, until he resigned Dec. 8, 1974, and a spokesman for the prosecutor's office said the payoffs to him and Enomoto allegedly took place between Aug. 9, 1973, and Feb. 18, 1974.

No Brownout In These Hot Days

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite the high demand for electricity during these 90-degree plus days, Duke Power Co. officials say there's no danger of a brownout or blackout.

"We're in good shape as far as our reserves are concerned," said a Duke spokesman Monday.

Last week, when readings hit the high 80s and 90s, the utility said electricity consumption exceeded by some 30 million kilowatt hours the amount of power used during the previous hot spell last August. Electrical consumption then and last week both exceeded one billion kilowatt hours.

But this wasn't a record. The highest amount of electricity ever consumed by Duke customers was during a cold spell in the week ending Jan. 10 of this year.

The situation wasn't always this rosy, and it might not be in the future, Duke officials caution.

Four years ago, recalls Walter Campbell, Duke's systems operating engineer, the utility would have been surrying around trying to borrow as much electric power as they could from other companies. Things were so bad in 1972, Duke had to get electricity from as far as Oklahoma.

Campbell remembered when generating units broke down and "we had to stay up half the night seeking help from our neighbors and reducing voltages because we couldn't generate enough electricity."

But that was before Duke's Oconee, S.C., nuclear plant began operations in 1973, and before its Belews Creek coal-fired plant started up in 1974. These and other Duke plants generate all the electricity Duke's 1.13 million customers need, officials say.

Now, should a particularly hot day tax even the reserves, relief is just a microwave away. Microwave radio transmitters can start and stop 27 hydroelectric plants on the Catawba River, plants which on most days are not needed.

Duke Power can now generate 12,500 megawatt hours of electricity.

N.I.H. Funding For ECU Medical Study

Drs. Irvin E. Lawrence and Hubert Burden, faculty anatomists in the East Carolina University School of Medicine, have received $38,975 from the National Institutes of Health to continue their study of ovarian nerves and the reproductive function.

The Lawrence-Burden project was begun last year, with an initial grant of $45,631 and is expected to be funded for a total of three years.

According to Dr. Lawrence, he and Dr. Burden have observed and analyzed the role of ovarian autonomic nerves during the cycle and during pregnancy.

Research on the role of peripheral autonomic nerves in the reproductive function has been largely overlooked because of interest in the hormonal aspects of reproduction.

"Most, if not all, aspects of female mammalian reproductive physiology are subject to control by neural or hormonal influences," said Dr. Burden.

The ECU study involves chemical or surgical denervation of ovaries and physiological study of the resulting cyclic activity, pseudopregnancy and pregnancy.

Drs. Vernon Gay and J. Hotchkiss, physiologists at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, have been contracted to do hormone assays relevant to the ECU ovarian nerve project.

Cagers Going After Basketball Gold Medal

By BOB GREEN
AP Sports Writer
MONTREAL (AP) — The United States, which now appears to have very little chance of leading the Olympics in either gold or total medals, looks to its basketball team for the restoration of misplaced prestige tonight.

"We came here to play for the gold medal, and that's what we're doing," said All-American Scott May of Indiana. "It doesn't matter who we're playing. We didn't come here to play Russia. We came to win the gold."

The Russians, controversial winners over the United States in the 1972 Olympic final — which Americans regarded as an enormous blow to their prestige — will be missing this time. They lost to tough Yugoslavia 89-84 last night shortly before the Americans advanced with a convincing 95-77 decision over Canada in the other semifinal.

"The psychological edge is with Yugoslavia," said American Coach Dean Smith, who observed that several of their players "belong in the NBA."

"I think our players were looking forward to playing Russia, but I told them not to talk about that. I just hope we can play as well against Yugoslavia as we did tonight."

It may have been the Americans' best game. They blew out to an early 22-8 lead and cruised in. They never trailed and led by 17 or more most of the time. May led the balanced American attack with 22 points.

The American women, meanwhile, gained the silver medal with an 83-67 victory over Czechoslovakia while gold-medal winner Russia beat Japan 96-75 in the final games of the round-robin tournament.

The Americans were shut out of victories yesterday, at least partly on Dave Roberts' rain-drenched, unsuccessful gamble in the pole vault that turned gold to bronze. The Yanks now appear destined for a placing behind Russia and possibly East Germany in both gold and total medals.

With the Games more than half over, the United States now holds 21 gold, 23 silver and 17 bronze. Russia has a 27-26-20 count and East Germany has solidified its position as a world athletic power with a 27-17-14 total.

The Americans could make up a little ground — maybe just a little — in today's light schedule.

In addition to their favored basketball team, the Americans have a gold medal possibility in Greg Louganis, a 16-year-old phenom from El Cajon, Calif., who qualified first in men's platform diving.

The United States could gain a medal from its equestrian team in Grand Prix jumping, but seemed unlikely to finish higher than second in any of the five yachting classes that are due to end today. The Russians are well-placed in a couple of those events. Russia also figures to gain ground in the team saber fencing, super-heavyweight weightlifting and light-heavyweight judo. Americans are not expected to score in any of those events.

Track and field athletes have an idle day.

It is in that sport, along with its boxers, that America's slim hopes rest. The boxers have nine men alive with the competition moving into the quarter-finals, but Cuba and Russia also are strong. The prospects in track and field aren't overwhelming.

With 11 men's events completed, the Americans have won only two.

They had a shot at gold in the seven-hour pole vault competition Monday, but Roberts' strategy backfired and the world record-holder at 18 feet, 8 1/4 inches had to settle for the bronze medal.

Roberts, a medical student from Gainesville, Fla., trailed two men on misses when he chose to pass at 18-2 1/4, figuring he could clear the next height, 18-4 1/4, easily. The five men who vaulted at 18-2 1/4 missed all three tries. As they finished, the drizzling rain became a steady shower. And Roberts missed all three times at 18-4 1/4.

So it went back to the last height cleared, 18-0 1/4. Tadeusz Slusarski of Poland won on fewer misses at that height, with Antti Kalliomaki of Finland second and Roberts third.

The only other American medals gained in track and field were a silver by 20-year-old Millard Hampton, San Jose, Calif., and a bronze by Phoenix, Ariz., schoolboy sprinter Dwayne Evans, who finished 1-2 behind Jamaica's Don Quarrie, the 200 meter winner in 20.23.

Miklos Nemeth of Hungary set a world record at 310-4 in winning the javelin and Russia's Tatiana Kazankina set another standard with a 1:55.0 time in the women's 800 meters.

Lasse Viren of Finland, winner of the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs in 1972, made a rare repeat in the 10,000 and now has a chance to become the first man ever to win both the distance races in consecutive Olympics.

Siegrun Siegl led an East German sweep in the women's pentathlon. She and teammate Christine Laser each finished the two-day competition with 4,745 points, and Miss Siegl was declared the winner on the basis of better performances in head-to-head competition.

Al Coage, a bouncer in a bar at Plainfield, N.J., provided the United States with a surprise bronze in the heavyweight judo competition. Sergei Novikov of Russia won the gold.

In the only other medal events, Bernd Johansson of Sweden won cycling's individual road race and Valentin Khristov of Bulgaria took the heavyweight weightlifting with a total hoist of 880 pounds.

Garvey Leads Offense As Dodgers Win By 6-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Don Sutton cooled the heat, ended the pressure and beat the Atlanta Braves, despite a slow start Monday night.

He recorded his 2,000th career strikeout in the Los Angeles' 6-2 victory.

"It's a big thrill. I don't really know exactly how big," he said. "I'll have to kind of look back and decide later. But to know only 27 other guys have done it, well, it's kind of a shot in the arm."

Sutton scattered five hits and struck out nine, as he got his 11th victory of the season. He admitted thoughts of that 2,000th strikeout had been with him some time.

Dodger Manager Walt Alton said his pitcher "was fighting control early in the game. He was running the count full in the first inning or two and it was a hot night to be doing that."

During Sutton's shaky start, the Braves got to him for their runs, on a walk to Rod Gilbreath, Jim Wynn's triple and Willie Montaner's single, all in the first. But Carl Morton couldn't hold the lead as he allowed 10 hits in four innings and took his eighth loss in nine outings.

Steve Garvey led the Dodgers' 13-hit attack with four hits and a pair of runs batted in.

Garvey singled in the second, moved up on a walk, then scored on Sutton's bad-hop single over short.

The Dodgers took the lead in the third. Reggie Smith was safe on a fielder's choice. Ron Cey, Garvey and Bill Russell all singled to score a pair of Phil Niekro, 10-6, goes against the Dodgers' Rick Rhoden, 9-0, tonight.

Five umpires who began last season in the minor leagues are 1976 major league umpires.

NCNB, Dairy Post Wins

Mark Shank scored three times leading NCNB to a 8-0 win over Pepsi-Cola and Carolina Dairy rallied for four runs in the last night.

NCNB got all the runs it needed in the first picking up one run. Shank reached on an error and moved to second on the play. He stole third and scored on an error.

Shank made it 2-0 in the third after singling and stealing around scoring on Glenn Moore's hit.

NCNB added three in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Moore pitched the two-hit win for NCNB walking four and fanning eight.

Carolina Dairy scored first getting two in the first. George Wilson singled and stole up. Marshall Heath reached on a passed ball letting Wilson score. Heath later stole home.

Home Builders made it 2-1 in the third when Daryl Allen was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded. Carolina Dairy out the game away scoring four times in the fifth.

Mitch Meeks walked and Skip Hill singled. David Carroll reached on a fielder's choice and Howard Tucker on an error scoring Meeks and Hill. Carroll scored on a wild pitch and Tucker on a bases loaded walk to Heath.

Blyleven Throws Rangers To Decision Over Twins

By HERSCHEL NIESENSEN
AP Sports Writer
Bert Blyleven still finds Minnesota a nice place to visit, even though he wouldn't want to live there any more.

In his first trip back since Minnesota traded him to Texas almost two months ago, Blyleven silenced the Twins' bats and their jeering fans by pitching the Rangers to a two-hit 3-0 victory.

"I am growing up now," said the 25-year-old right-hander, who was sent packing after he failed to come to salary terms with the Twins and issued verbal blasts at their management and supporters, as well as saluting the fans with an impolite gesture in his final appearance before the deal.

"I am a Texas Ranger and not a Twin," he said. "I was light-headed all day and couldn't wait to get going. I had a feeling I would pitch a shutout."

In other American League action, the Kansas City Royals blanked the California Angels 4-0, the Oakland A's shaded the Chicago White Sox 3-1, the Baltimore Orioles cooled off the New York Yankees 3-1, the Cleveland Indians drubbed the Boston Red Sox 9-4 and the Detroit Tigers nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 in 13 innings.

The only Minnesota hits off Blyleven were an infield single by Steve Braun and a clean single by Craig Kusick. Blyleven struck out nine.

He was booed throughout most of the game and responded by tipping his cap and bowing to the crowd after each inning.

Minnesota's Rod Carew was ejected by umpire Jim Evans for the first time in his 10-year career after he was called out trying to steal second base in the fourth inning and slammed down his helmet. After returning to the dugout, Carew showered the field with bats before being restrained. Then, after things quieted down, Carew tossed a baseball toward Evans, missing the umpire by a few feet.

Royals 4, Angels 0
Al Fitzmorris hurled a six-hitter and Kansas City got maximum mileage from four scratch hits to hand Norm Sherry his first loss in four games as the Angels' new manager. California's Nolan Ryan, who suffered his fourth loss in a row and 13th in 20 decisions, walked George Brett and John Mayberry with two out in the first inning and Amos Otis drove them both home with a double. In the third, Brett was safe on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home on Mayberry's broken-bat single.

A's 3, White Sox 1
Sal Bando hit his 20th home run and Bert Campaneris drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly, giving Paul Mitchell his fourth straight victory with relief help from Rollie Fingers.

Orioles 3, Yankees 1
The Baltimore Orioles jumped on Catfish Hunter for three early runs, one a solo home by Al Bumbry, and beat the Yankees on Ross Grimsley's six-hit pitching. Hunter yielded two first-inning runs on doubles by Bobby Grich and Reggie Jackson and a single by Lee May. Bumbry homered in the third.

Indians 9, Red Sox 4
Rico Carty drove in four runs with a pair of doubles, Duane Kuiper collected three hits and Rick Manning homered as the Indians handed the staggering Red Sox their sixth consecutive setback. The Indians shelled Luis Tiant, who allowed seven hits and five runs in 11-3 innings and failed to finish the second inning for the second game in a row.

Tigers 4, Brewers 3
Jim Crawford, who replaced starter Frank MacCormack after three walks in the first inning, retired 22 consecutive batters and came within three outs of a combined no-hitter. Milwaukee didn't get a hit until George Scott opened the ninth with a single. Crawford allowed three hits in 10 innings but lost a chance at his first triumph of the season when John Hiller allowed a game-tying single to Hank Aaron in the 11th.

Jason Thompson and Rusty Staub homered for the Tigers, who scored the winning run on 13th-inning singles by Staub, Thompson and Ben Oglivie.

Seniors Are Ousted

KINGS MOUNTAIN — Western Carolina got only four hits off Kevin Adams but managed to score five runs off him and beat the Greenville Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars, 5-1 and eliminate them from the state tournament, Monday.

Greenville lost its first game but won the second Saturday then rallied around Randy Nelson's sixth inning, bases-loaded triple to beat Union-Anson, 6-5. Nelson's blast tied the game and a double by Eddie Taylor scoring Nelson got the winning run.

Sutton Gets Big Lift Striking Out Morton

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When Carl Morton struck out Monday night, he just wanted to forget it.

Don Sutton wanted to remember it, though. It was the 2,000th strikeout of his career.

"I've been thinking about it since last year," said the Los Angeles Dodger pitcher after reaching the milestone during a 6-2 decision over the Atlanta Braves.

"It's a big thrill — to know that only 27 other guys have done it. It's a shot in the arm and it's nice to get it and have it behind me."

Joining the "2,000 Club" gives Sutton a needed lift. His season has been nothing to write home about so far.

In the other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds beat the San Francisco Giants 9-3; the Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the New York Mets 4-1; the Houston Astros blanked the San Diego Padres 7-0 and the Montreal Expos took a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs 2-1 and 3-1. The Pittsburgh-St. Louis game was called by rain.

Sutton, 11-8, fell behind by surrendering two runs in the first inning. But after giving up a harmless leadoff double to Biff Poceroba in the second, he retired 19 of the next 20 batters. He struck out nine and walked four, finishing with a five-hitter.

Morton, 1-8, was tagged for the loss and was the victim of Sutton's 2000th strikeout in the second inning.

"He was fighting control early in the game," said Los Angeles Manager Walt Alton of Sutton. "He was running the count full in the first inning or two and it was a hot night to be doing that. But he straightened out and pitched a heck of a game."

Phillies 4, Mets 1
Mike Schmidt blasted a triple, double and single and scored the winning run on a wild pitch in the sixth inning to lead Philadelphia over New York. Larry Christenson, 9-5, was the winner with relief help from Tug McGraw.

Astros 7, Padres 0
Larry Dierker, making his first Houston appearance since his July 9 no-hitter, fired a two-hitter, leading Houston over San Diego.

Dierker, 10-9, rode a three-RBI performance by Bob Watson in fashioning his third shut-out of the season. San Diego starter Dan Spillner, 2-10, absorbed the loss.

Expos 2-3, Cubs 1-1
Ellis Valentine's two-run homer in the sixth inning backed Don Stanhouse's seven-hitter as Montreal beat Chicago in the first game. Steve Dunning, an American League castoff, and Dale Murray combined to hurl a three-hitter as Montreal stopped Chicago in the second game.

Reds 9, Giants 3
Pete Rose hit his third lead-off home run in a week and Fred Norman pitched a seven-hitter as Cincinnati beat San Francisco. Rose lined the second pitch of the game from John Montefusco, 9-9, over the right field wall to trigger the Cincinnati scoring and George Foster and Dan Driessen paced

Many Things Are Rocking The Olympics

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

MONTREAL (AP) — Hey, what's happening to the Olympics?

A respected Russian fencing star is caught double-wiring his blade. A Soviet coach is accused of trying to fix the diving competition. Canada boots little Taiwan out of the Games because it doesn't want to blow a fat wheat deal with Mainland China.

Some 30 nations, most of them black African, pined at New Zealand's sports ties with segregationist South Africa, say "New Zealand goes or we go." The International Olympic Committee says New Zealand stays. So Black Africa, en masse, says "to hell with it" and goes home.

A 65-year-old trapshooter from Monaco is disqualified for taking amphetamines. Maybe he just had the gout. And a Canadian yachtsman is hauled in like a bank robber because he squirted some antihistamine up his nose.

An American discus thrower wins a gold medal, then announces, "I won this medal for myself — not the United States." He proceeds to rap the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Some of his less successful teammates take their defeats with a "So what?" attitude — not what the late Vince Lombardi would have ordered. Remember? "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing."

Shot putter George Woods said, "The Olympics don't seem the same any more." Al Feuerbach, who also tosses the iron ball, called the Games "insane" and said they were just a big carnival staged for the news media. Kathy Schmidt, a javelin thrower, commented, "I'd rather be competing in an all-comers meet at UCLA."

An air of disenchantment and disillusionment is sweeping the time-honored Games. The erosion of principles — permitted if not promulgated by the sacrosanct IOC — is being followed by a deterioration of spirit.

What's happened? Before the women's javelin competition, Miss Schmidt walked over to introduce herself to Ruth Fuchs of East Germany, the ultimate winner, to congratulate the husky blonde on her world record.

"I'm Kathy Schmidt of the United States...."

That's as far as she got. Miss Fuchs gave her a stare that penetrated like a stiletto, wheeled and walked away.

Shirley Babashoff, the California water whiz who brought along an extra bag to hold all the medals she was supposed to win in swimming, was completely overshadowed by Kornelia Ender and her East German teammates.

Afterward, Shirley, her pique showing, commented that she didn't envy her conquerors and that she would hate to look like all those muscled German girls, anyway.

This attitude wasn't exactly what Baron Pierre de Coubertin had in mind when he conceived the idea of resurrecting the Olympic Games in 1896.

How much more decay in the foundations of the great spectacle before the massive columns start tumbling, leaving the Games looking like a hillside in ancient Greece, where they were born?

How many more principles can be compromised by the weak-kneed IOC? How much more doping, political squabbling and flagrant cheating can the Games endure? How much more money must be spent, how much must the event be hyped by commercialism to keep the Games floating on an unrealistic cloud?

Are the Games really facing — as some high-placed Olympic chiefs predict — possible early destruction? If not, where is there a soul as strong as that of de Coubertin or the late Avery Brundage to apply the brakes?

Some of the competitors' disenchantment is understandable. The Games are too big, too expensive, too politically diseased. They have become hassles for everybody — the organizers, the athletes, the press. They are not fun any more.

Give Feuerbach points on one of his arguments. The Games have become a giant television enterprise — a world-wide spectacular in which millions of dollars change hands.

The competitors' rationale — the rationale apparently of Feuerbach, discus champ Mac Wilkins and Kathy Schmidt, among others: "Why should we go through all this turmoil on a $5 per diem so that TV can sell more automobiles and razor blades?"

The gold medal has lost some of its lustre. Some call the Olympics "just an oversized track meet." There has been a definite decline in the old patriotic fervor.

Americans are bothered because the Russians and East Germans are state-subsidized and are technical pros. They resent losing medals to the East Germans, who turn out champions on an assembly line the way we turn out Fords and Chevrolets.

Yet nothing is ever said about the development of American athletes on free scholarships, costing between $20,000 and $30,000 for four years.

Open Olympics isn't the answer. The answer is less extravagance, less politics, less jealousy, more understanding, more "live and let live," more strong-willed leaders.

Truck Driver Is Not Nervous About Fight

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — Big John Tate, heavyweight hope of the U.S. boxing team, admits he's inexperienced. But that could be a plus.

"I didn't feel nervous out there," said the 21-year-old Tennessee truck driver after he opened his challenge to defending champion Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba by pounding out a unanimous decision over experienced Andrzej Biegalski of Poland Monday.

"The man who feels nervous is the man who fought four years to get here. I've been fighting 19 months."

Tate suffered a cut under his left eye but it didn't require stitches, and Tate said, "A little cut like this won't stop me."

Should Tate beat East German Peter Hussing of West Germany, 1972 Olympic bronze medalist, on Wednesday he probably will fight Stevenson in the semifinals Thursday.

The Cuban, the glamor boy of amateur boxing, did almost nothing against Mamadou Drame of Senegal in the first round Monday, then knocked him out with 58 seconds gone in the second. He is not expected to have any trouble against Pekka Ruokola of Finland Wednesday.

Tate was the eighth American to reach the quarters and Marine Cpl. Leon Spinks became the ninth Monday night when he overwhelmed Anatoly Klimanov of the Soviet Union with head punches and gained a unanimous decision.

The powerful Cuban team and the Romanian squad, led by the Cutov brothers—lightweight Simion and light welterweight Calistrat—each have eight quarter-finalists. Poland has seven while the struggling Soviet team has five.

The Russians got a victory from their world champion 165-pounder Rufat Riskiev, who scored a decision Monday night. But they lost Klimanov and heavyweight Victor Ivanov, who was upset on a decision by Bulgarian Atanas Souvandjiev.

Five U.S. fighters are scheduled to fight tonight.

—Leo Randolph of Tacoma, Wash., meets David Larmour of Ireland at 112 pounds.

—Left-handed Army Sgt. Charles Mooney, stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., has his fourth bout of the competition at 119. And his opponent is tough Chulsoon Hwang of South Korea who upset defending Olympic champion Orlando Martinez of Cuba.

—Davey Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., who got one of the toughest draws in the tournament—he opened against a Russian and then had to beat a European champion from Hungary—is matched against Angel Herrera of Cuba.

—Howard Davis Jr. of Glen Cove, N.Y., who could face Simon Cutov in the final, is pitted against rugged Bulgaria Tsvetkov Tsvetan at 132 pounds. Davis, who prefers fitness to power, has been knocked down in each of his first two victories.

—Sugar Ray Leonard, who could fight Calistrat Cutov for a gold medal, will fight Ulrich Beyer of East Germany. The U.S. team collected one gold and one bronze in the 1972 Games at Munich.

Roth Wants Things Clear

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — Count all the Tuesdays, four years of Tuesdays and today is the bad day when all the memories flood back, the day when they killed all her friends, the day when they killed Amiruz.

It is four years more or less, the second Tuesday of the Olympics, when they came into Munich, stockings over their heads, shooting through the door at Connollystrasse 31. And then in the space of hours, everybody was dead, or almost, and she never wanted to run again, never to get near to anything that had to do with the mindlessness of sport.

"They killed my coach," says Esther Roth, with the voice of someone who will reconcile nothing, let nothing get explained away. "My coach," she says, in her fractured English that always seems so much closer to the truth for all the crushed grammar. "For him the Olympics was the top."

"I never wanted to run again and now I am here and running. At first it was a very great shock. My coach is killed. What is sport after this? It is nothing. But if I stop, I know I do what the terrorists want. So I am here, for you to see, in Montreal. Running. So nobody should make a mistake. So everybody should get it clear."

Esther Roth is the only survivor of the 1972 Israeli Munich Olympic team and she is the greatest athlete — a relative notion — in Israel. Her coach, Amiruz Shapira, was killed. Her friends, the wrestlers, the shooters, the weightlifters were killed. And now she is back, running the 100-meter hurdles faster than she ever has in her life. And that, she says, is the ness to power, has been knocked down in each of his first two victories.

—Sugar Ray Leonard, who could fight Calistrat Cutov for a gold medal, will fight Ulrich Beyer of East Germany. The U.S. team collected one gold and one bronze in the 1972 Games at Munich.

point.

"If I don't run good, if I don't keep trying, then they have won. 'No!' I say."

So she cut her best time of 13.09 seconds in Zurich a couple of weeks ago, and if things go right she would win.

Esther Roth is a small person — thin wrists, a waist that disappears. Her eyes are black and hair is dark and wavy, snakes moving, ropes twisting as she runs. Her husband, Peter — blond and controlled, where she is dark and intuitive — watches as she stretches in her green sweat suit, taking notes, checking his wife's stride, her arm thrust.

"After some months, I mean after Munich, we were married," she says. "I'm so sad and I do nothing. So he take me a little to the track. All the time I remember my coach. I come a little, a little more. Then I am training again. It happens like that."

In the meanwhile, Esther Roth had a son by Caesarian section. Three months later, she won Asian Games gold medals in the 100 meters, 200 meters and the 100-meter hurdles. "I bring my baby to the track. My husband is my coach and my babysitter."

Roth, a physical education teacher who didn't know very much about hurdling other than what he could read or watch on tapes, became expert and critical. "It was that I wanted her to continue," he said. "This is the only reason I became a coach."

Try Different Daytime Shows

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC-TV is taking another whack at giving daytime audiences something besides game shows, soap operas and reruns of situation comedies.

The network tried and failed to attract big ratings with "Take My Advice," a program styled after the "Dear Abby" newspaper column, but now is back with "The Gong Show" and "The Fun Factory."

Producers of both new weekday series hope their shows are the "something different" that many viewers are said to be looking for.

"Daytime needed something new and I think 'The Gong Show' is it," proclaims producer Gene Banks. Ed Fishman, one of the executive producers of "The Fun Factory," said his series fills the need in daytime for "something that didn't have a structure that says here's where we're going, either with a bonus round or a storyline."

On "The Gong Show," amateur performers are given a chance to display their talents to the TV audience and a panel of three celebrities, and if one of the three stars thinks the act stinks, he or she sounds the gong and ends it. Otherwise the performers continue and are awarded points, with the big winner each day walking off with $516.32.

One recent show featured four tap dancing sisters, a clown who juggled, a mime who did magic, a woman doing a Shirley Temple imitation and a man trying to sing. The latter two got the gong.

"The emphasis is on sheer fun and entertainment," says Fishman. "It's not a school for talent. The celebrities do it with the idea of having fun, and the acts know beforehand they could get gonged."

Obviously, fun is also the goal of "The Fun Factory." It is a game show in the sense that prizes are given for answering questions, but that aspect shares the spotlight with comedy sketches, singing and dancing. There is no structured format and the pace is frenzied.

"It's like doing a different variety show every day," says Fishman. "It's completely different each day except for the opening and closing songs, which takes up a total of about a minute. We thought it was time to see if the daytime audience would find a change refreshing."

Unfortunately, a sample viewing of the two programs merely reaffirms that different is not necessarily better. Neither was any more engaging than its more traditional competitors.

"The Gong Show" had a few good moments, thanks to those performers who either were very good — or very bad. But the format of the show, with its reliance on witticisms from the celebrity guests and obnoxious comments from host Chuck Barris, precluded the chance for much development along those lines.

And "The Fun Factory" turned out to be a combination of the worst elements of comedy — deadly dull material — with the worst elements of game shows — giving expensive prizes for answering insultingly simple questions.

The two shows may mature in time. In any case, it's nice to see NBC making an effort to find something at least slightly different.

Uncertainties Plaguing Italian Nat'l Airline

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — With the tourist season at its peak, Italy's national airline Alitalia should be flying high. Instead it is in danger of being grounded because of conflict between rival unions and government uncertainty.

The problems of the airline that flies to 56 cities around the world are regarded as unique in civil aviation.

Every day about a fifth of its flights are canceled because of strikes, inflicting a daily loss estimated at $2.1 million. Twenty-four planes of its 82-jet fleet are up for sale. To save money, the company plans to do away with some in-flight services, such as free beverages and newspapers, on domestic runs.

The airline has been embroiled in disputes both with its owner — the government — and its unions.

The airline still doesn't know whether it is a permanent company or not. Its concession, granted by the Italian government, lapsed two years ago and has yet to be renewed, thus reducing Alitalia's operation to a provisional basis that prohibits long-range planning, company officials say.

The government did not spell out why it failed to act on the franchise, but industry sources say it was a combination of customary bureaucratic delay, the feeble nature of Italian governments and the continuing labor strife plaguing the airline.

"Unless the government finds a way to stop the strikes and renews our concession, we are condemned to die as an enterprise," says Alitalia Managing Director Umberto Nordio.

The nose-dive of Alitalia — it lost $60 million last year — is more than a mere reflection of Italy's general economic malaise.

The airline, which employs 17,000 persons and hauls six million passengers a year for a respectable 15th spot among 110 major carriers, is also caught in a crossfire of rival unions, equally militant and striking the company in a dispute over which it has no control.

One union, representing the pilots, is resisting incorporation into a larger federation that speaks for all the airline personnel and is associated with Italy's chief labor confederation which is under heavy Communist influence. Their dispute often leads to conflicting strikes catching the airline in the middle. The carrier canceled 10,000 flights last year because of labor agitation.

"The tragedy of it is that we may sink just when we were turning the corner toward a balanced operation," one airline official said. Alitalia puts its revenue in the first quarter, before the onslaught of the current wave of walkouts, at $127 million, only $2.4 million below its projection. While abandoned by foreigners, Alitalia still is the favorite of Italy's nostalgia set returning home for visits and its jobless fanning out abroad.

Anpac, the union of about three-fourths of its 1,700 pilots, resists being taken over by the powerful labor federation.

One of our associates of many years, Harry Lane Siegel of Atlanta, celebrates his 70th birthday today. At a time when most men have been retired for years, Siegel has just undertaken a new and onerous task—organizing the 1977 Fall North American Championship, to be held in his home city in November of that year.

Siegel's successes at bridge are not dependent on his playing skill—he has cause to be modest about his at-the-table bridge achievements. It is in the field of promotion of the game that Siegel has made his mark. However, when pressed for a hand, Harry is fond of recounting this story.

He sat East and held what, for him, he claims is a typical hand—the sort that has prevented his bridge skill from becoming more universally recognized. Defending against four hearts, West led the king of spades, won by declarer's ace. It was obvious that West, for his opening bid, had to hold almost every missing card, so declarer tried for an endplay. He cashed the ace and queen of trumps, noting the fall of the jack from West, then exited with the ten of spades, leaving a trump at large.

Dr. Lao and Weunsch will report on studies done in the area of personality-social psychology, and Dr. Bolen's paper is concerned with school psychology.

West won the jack of spades and continued with the queen. If we are to believe Siegel, he had forgotten that hearts were trumps and on this trick he "discarded" his remaining heart. He waited for West to lead to the next trick, when declarer reminded him that he had trumped his partner's high spade!

Naturally, East led up to weakness—he shifted to a club. Two club tricks for the defenders meant down one.

Note that the contract would have succeeded had East not ruffed the third round of spades. If West exits with either a spade or a club, he can be squeezed in the minor suits for the game going trick. If, instead, he leads from the queen of diamonds, declarer would run it to his jack and score four diamond tricks to go with one spade and five trump tricks.

Engaged On Scoreboard

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Bernhard, 20, got engaged to his girlfriend, right on the scoreboard at Comiskey Park.

The board said: "Mary Siler, will you marry me? Love Mark."

The fans at the White Sox doubleheader with the Minnesota Twins on Sunday were in suspense.

"Will she or won't she," the scoreboard said. "We're laying 2-1 odds. Aw, come on, Mary."

The whole thing was cooked up by Bernhard, a student at St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa, and Bill Veck, owner of the White Sox.

Veck, the self-proclaimed hustler who would do almost anything for a laugh, was ready for a disappointment. Waiting in reserve was the message, "Mary says no. Sorry Pal, we tried."

But Veck didn't have to use it.

"Mary says yes," the scoreboard said and a roar went up from the fans.

It was about the only thing they had to cheer about. The Sox lost 13-8. But that was okay. When the Sox are losing, Veck always thinks of something.

"I was shocked speechless," said Mary, 20, an education major at Clarke College in Dubuque, Iowa. "There was no question about it. I said yes immediately."

Carter And Mondale Import Experts For Briefing

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Another busload of high-powered experts arrive here today — hopefully on time — to brief Jimmy Carter and Sen. Walter Mondale on economic issues.

The first group of experts to participate in this week's issues briefings for the Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominees arrived almost two hours late because of bus problems, to the annoyance of the punctual Carter.

The subject was defense, and the briefers, several of whom were Pentagon officials under Lyndon Johnson, agreed with Carter and Mondale that the United States and Soviet Union are roughly equivalent in strategic nuclear strength, Carter said.

He added that he would consider using nuclear weapons against the Soviet Union "if I felt that the security of our own nation or the security of a nation with whom we had a binding alliance was threatened."

As president, Carter said would never allow the Soviet Union to acquire an acknowledged superiority in nuclear weapons. "It might be an encouragement to them to try to overwhelm us with their strength," he said.

Although he reiterated his support for nuclear arms reductions, Carter said that maintaining a rough equivalency in weapons "is the best deterrent to possible nuclear war."

The candidate has often warned that the Soviet Union was getting most of the benefits from detente. But his warnings to the Soviets about trying to outbest the United States in the arms race or to threaten U.S.

security or that of an ally were considered among the strongest he's delivered.

However, when asked if he thought the United States should develop a first strike nuclear capability against the Soviet Union, Carter answered: "I don't want to answer that question because I don't know the answer."

The defense briefing was held at a house in the pine woods outside Plains owned by the mother of the presidential candidate.

Carter and Mondale emerged from the house midway through the four-hour briefing to tell reporters what was going on. Mondale, however, didn't say a word.

Carter acknowledged that "quite a heated debate" was raging among the briefers about how to best conduct defense policy.

Differences of opinion between two of the experts are well known. Paul Warnke, an assistant secretary of defense under Johnson and a Vietnam dove, is known to disagree extensively with Paul Nitze, a former undersecretary of defense, who thinks the United States is losing strategic ground to the Russians.

The third prominent expert of the eight who came to Plains was Cyrus Vance, secretary of the Army and deputy secretary of defense under President's Kennedy and Johnson.

The three men, all of whom are on Carter's foreign policy task force, have been mentioned as a possible secretary of defense or state in a Carter administration.

Carter said he solicited the broad range of opinion on purpose.

"I've deliberately throughout my own public life gotten advice from a wide and disparate group of experts," he said. "The more I learn about the background and am able to assess differences of opinion, the better off I am to make the right decision."

The purpose of the briefing was simply to inform him and Mondale of the issues, he said. He added that he and his running mate would later use that information in developing strategy for the fall campaign.

Other topics under discussion were priorities to be established in the defense budget, possible ways to cut the budget, prospects of success in the current Soviet-U.S. arms limitation talks and treaty obligations of the United States to other countries, Carter said.

He maintained his position that the Pentagon budget could be cut $5 billion to $7 billion through more efficient management techniques and a limitation of the Pentagon's responsibility.

Carter and Mondale had to wait almost two hours for the defense experts to arrive because of a snafu in transportation plans.

The Carter organization had planned to transport the briefers from Atlanta to Plains in a minibus, to give them time to prepare for the discussions.

The 150-mile trip takes about three hours. Monday, Carter staffers in Atlanta discovered that the minibus was too small and had to wait 1 1/2 hours for a larger one.

The experts finally arrived, their suitcases off and ties askew, to be greeted by the candidates, both in sportclothes.

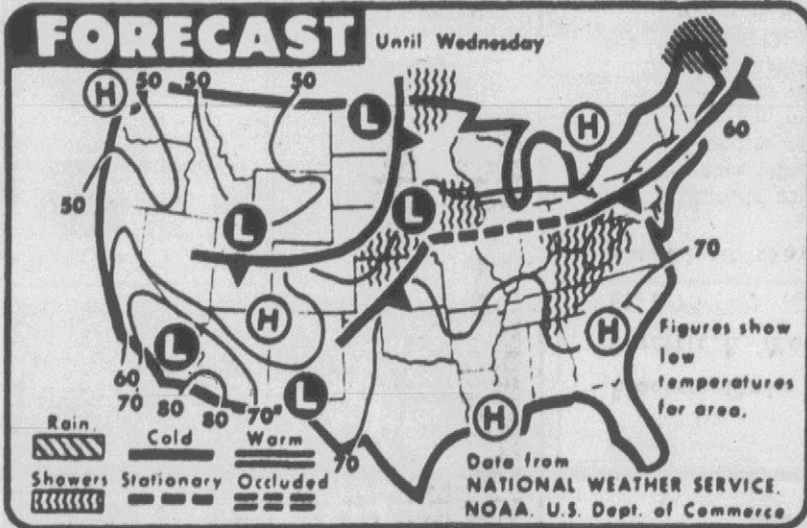

Before their arrival, Carter told Mondale that the reporters covering him "know how short-tempered I get when people are late."

But there were no public signs of irritation.

Those briefing Carter and Mondale today on economic policy include Charles Schultze, former director of the Bureau of the Budget under Johnson; Arthur Okun, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors and Lawrence Klein, Carter's chief economic advisor and professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Democratic ticket was to receive a national security briefing from CIA head George Bush on Wednesday and a foreign policy briefing Thursday.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is due today for most of the country. The northern Rockies are expected to be cooler. Sunny skies should prevail for most areas but some showers are expected in the Midwest and from the Ohio Valley to the Great Lakes. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The Duke Power Co. says it has ample reserves of electricity and anticipates no brownouts or blackouts despite heavy consumption these 90-degree plus days.

The agricultural situation is termed critical in the north-central Piedmont, which hasn't had a good rain in six or seven weeks.

Horace Hux, Rockingham County extension chairman, says, "Everything is dry. The tobacco and a lot of late corn are suffering. A lot of our farms are irrigated, and we don't know how long the water will hold out."

The drought has caused some cities and towns to urge water conservation.

It was mostly cloudy and warm today, with highs in the mid 80s. Scattered showers fell in the south and southeast.

Winds were southerly and and southwesterly, carrying the chance of thundershowers and increased humidity.

It was cloudy in western and southern North Carolina Monday, and sunny to partly sunny in the east. Black mountain reached 90 degrees and Canton 89. The Raleigh-Durham Airport got to 88.

Thundershowers moved into the state from South Carolina early this morning, giving Hickory and Charlotte measurable rain by 2 a.m. Radar indicated the storms were moving east and southeast.

Cape Hatteras reached 82 degrees by midnight, a new low record for July 26th. The old record was a 64 set in 1973.

The extended outlook for Thursday through Saturday is for a chance of scattered thundershowers and little change in temperatures.

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION NEW CUSTOMER DEPOSIT POLICY EFFECTIVE AUGUST 1, 1976

1.0 Purpose

1.1 The purpose of a customer deposit is to prevent loss to the Commission from non-payment of utility bills. The requirements set forth in this policy are based on historical revenue loss factors affecting the Commission's operations.

2.0 Residential Customers

2.1 Residential customers moving into their own permanent type homes and/or residential customers moving into owner occupied mobile homes located on land owned by the occupant will not be required to provide an initial deposit at the time of application for service, except where Commission records indicate the applicant's utility bill payment history at any previous residence on the Commission's system was determined to be "not good," as defined in Section 5. Where prior history indicates pay history, "not good," the initial deposit required shall be as stated for rented dwelling and deposits so made will be refunded with interest after twelve (12) consecutive months of "good" pay history. Customer deposit accounts will be reviewed only once each year, on the anniversary month of the deposit, unless otherwise requested by the customer.

2.2 Residential customers moving into rented dwellings, either house, apartment or mobile home, shall pay an initial deposit at time of application for service as follows:

	With Electric Or Gas Space Heating	Without Electric Or Gas Space Heating
Electric Only	$75.00	$50.00
Electric & Water	$80.00	$55.00
Electric, Water & Gas	$80.00	$55.00
Electric & Gas	$75.00	$50.00

Deposits so made shall be refunded, with interest, after twelve (12) consecutive months of "good" pay history. Customer deposit accounts will be reviewed only once each year, on the anniversary month of the deposit, unless otherwise requested by the customer. Should a customer change service location in less than twelve (12) months, the twelve (12) month period will begin from the date customer moves to new service location.

2.3 A residential customer with a "good" pay history on the Commission's system for the prior twelve (12) month period, in a rented dwelling or otherwise, will not be required to provide an initial deposit.

3.0 Commercial Customers

3.1 Commercial customers shall, at the time of application for initial service, pay a deposit equal to two (2) months average bill, as estimated by the Commission. After six (6) billing periods following initial deposit the customer's usage and billing will be reviewed and (a) additional deposit may be required, or (b) a partial refund may be made to correct deposit to two (2) months average billing. Cash deposits so made shall be refunded, with interest, after twelve (12) consecutive months of "good" pay history.

3.2 In lieu of cash deposit, commercial customers may provide the Commission with a surety bond in the amount of the specified deposit, written by an insurance company authorized to do business in North Carolina.

3.3 Commercial customers with "good" pay history on the Commission's system for the prior twelve (12) month period will not be required to provide an initial deposit for subsequent service accounts.

4.0 Industrial Customers

4.1 Industrial customers, manufacturers or processors, shall at the time of application for initial service, pay a deposit as specified for commercial customers, except that when the Commission can verify, from evidence provided by the customer, that the customer's general credit rating is high enough to warrant waiver of deposits.

5.0 Credit History

5.1 The Commission will maintain a confidential credit history on all customers based on payment of utility bills. A customer's credit history shall be classified "good" unless the customer has appeared on the cut-off list, though not necessarily cut-off, twice during any preceding twelve (12) month period. If the customer has appeared twice on the cut-off list during any preceding twelve (12) month period, a credit history of "not good" shall be recorded. The cut-off list will be prepared each month by the Commission from customers who fail to pay utility accounts by the final payment date or within five (5) days of the second notice mailing.

6.0 Interest Payment

6.1 Upon refund of any cash deposit made to the Commission on or after August 1, 1976 and held in excess of six (6) months, the interest will be added at the annual rate of 5 per cent, applied to the total period the deposit is held.

7.0 Deposits And Service Disconnect

7.1 Notwithstanding the initial deposits specified in Section 2, 3 or 4 above, any customer; residential, commercial, or industrial, whose payment history becomes "not good" shall pay such deposit as required to protect the Commission from loss of revenue, which deposit shall be held for twelve (12) months and refunded only as specified above. Any customer who fails to make deposits so required, or provide surety bonds when specified, within ten (10) days written notice, shall be subject to disconnection of service, until such deposit has been made or surety bond provided.

7.2 Any customer whose service has been disconnected because meter, wires, or other apparatus have been tampered with in any manner shall pay such deposit, in addition to penalties and reconnection fees, as required to protect the Commission from loss of revenue.

Effective: August 1, 1976

Note: Customer deposits are in addition to non-refundable service charges (7.50 electric and/or water, plus $7.50 for gas) for cutting on and/or setting up new service accounts.
