

Readying Greenville Town Meeting Plans

By BARBARA MATHEWS Reflector Staff Writer

Plans are now being made for a Greenville town meeting to be held September 25, according to Rev. James H. Bailey, chairman of the steering committee for the event.

The town meeting would be a part of Town Meeting '76, a program sponsored by the Institute of Cultural Affairs and adopted by Congress for the Bicentennial.

Town Meeting '76 consists of 5,000 one-day community forums attempting to address local problems through a cross-section of the population.

"The specific intent of the town meeting would be to provide direction and planning for Greenville and to set its priorities for the next ten years," said Rev. Bailey.

"It would be a brainstorming session to find reasonable, rational plans to implement in solving community problems.

"The people set their own goals, and devise proposals to reach them."

The steering committee held its third meeting last night, and heard progress reports and a presentation on the program.

The program will consist of five sessions, including two workshops. The morning workshop will be devoted to finding the obstacles that are impeding progress, and the afternoon workshop will be held to make proposals to eliminate these barriers.

According to Rev. Bailey, the Town Meeting '76 program was inspired by colonial town meetings in New England.

"Most of the Bicentennial has been nostalgic rejoicing about the past," he said.

"But where do we go from here?"

"In the colonial days, the town meeting experience gave the citizens some input into their government and their community's goals.

"This is an attempt to re-activate some of that."

Participants in the town meeting will be given workbooks, and a bound book of the day's accomplishments.

"IBM trucks will formulate and bind the plans while the participants wait," said Rev. Bailey.

"They'll have a copy of what the sessions accomplished to work with in the future. That would give us some continuity."

In addition to IBM, the National Jaycees and other groups are contributing towards the effort.

Pitt Council On Aging Receives $10,000 Grant

The Pitt County Council on Aging has received a $10,000 grant from the Mid-East Commission after raising $1,000 in matching funds for a transportation program to serve senior citizens in Pitt County.

The transportation program will begin August 9. A 15 passenger van will go into the county on Monday, Wednesday and Friday to pick up persons over 59 years old and bring them to the Greenville bus stop on Fourth and Evans streets so they can use the city transit system to get to needed services and facilities. Persons who wish to ride the van must call one day in advance to make a reservation. The telephone number to call for reservations is 752-1717.

On Mondays the van will service people who live in the vicinity of the following route: Winterville, Ayden, Grifton, Calico, Black Jack, and Bells Fork. On Wednesdays the van will transport persons who live in the following areas: Grimesland, Pactolus, Stokes, and Bethel. On Fridays the van will transport senior citizens who live in the areas of the following route: Falkland, Fountain, Farmville, and Bell Arthur. The van will leave Greenville at 8:15 a.m. and have the passengers picked up and delivered to the bus stop in Greenville by 10:30 a.m. The riders will be responsible to be back at the bus stop by 3 p.m. and will be returned to their homes.

Although the Council on Aging van service is free to senior citizens, the city transit system costs 25 cents each trip and only collects correct change.

Mystery Disease Takes 21st Life

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Researchers say they don't know when they will be able to identify the mystery "legionnaire's disease" that has claimed 21 lives in Pennsylvania and sent more than 140 people to the hospital in three states.

There were no signs the outbreak was abating, and officials planned a statewide check of Pennsylvania hospitals today for a more accurate picture of the situation.

"The disease has not leveled off," state Health Secretary Leonard Bachman said Tuesday. "Apparently both the number of deaths and the number of new cases have increased and are increasing."

More than 1,000 federal and state medical researchers have been mobilized to identify the disease. At the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, researchers planned today to examine the first cultures grown from tissue samples taken from victims of the illness.

The cultures could provide a clue.

"We are ruling out nothing," said Dr. Walter Dowdle, director of virology at the center. "This could be anything from an infectious disease to a toxin."

All of the known victims of the disease — including two hospitalized in New Jersey and one in New York — attended or were in some way connected with a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia that ended 11 days ago.

It was earlier reported a Connecticut man also had the disease, but Connecticut health officials later said he does not have it.

The 21st victim, James Sykes, 79, of Pittsburgh, died early today at Presbyterian Hospital in Pittsburgh. Hospital officials said he had attended the convention and showed the same symptoms as other victims.

There has been no confirmed evidence of secondary spread of the disease, Bachman said, but he added that it was still too early to discount the possibility that the disease may be spread to others.

Ravaged Canyon To Need Lengthy Reconstruction

By BILL PARDUE Associated Press Writer

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — The flood-ravaged Big Thompson Canyon "looks like a capricious god danced amok in the place," Gov. Richard Lamm said after seeing the area where nearly 100 persons died.

"There is movement. The people are coming back. The healing process has begun."

Lamm flew by helicopter over the once majestically beautiful vacation area Tuesday and said while the devastation was great, the scene was more encouraging than it had been the morning after the rain-spawned flooding.

A 12-foot wall of water barreled its way through the twisting river canyon on Saturday, floating houses away, smashing mobile homes against the towering rock walls and burying the dead under silt and slime.

While some who survived the flood returned to their washed out homes, others waited for word on the fate of their loved ones.

An unused hospital was set up as a morgue where identification was attempted for the battered and torn bodies recovered from where the rushing river had deposited them.

Seventy corpses were at the makeshift morgue here and Larimer County Sheriff Robert Watson said more bodies were waiting to be removed from collection centers at each end of the canyon.

National Guardsmen, volunteers and search and rescue teams began a fourth day of searching today among logjams of twisted metal and splintered wood for more dead.

Watson, who earlier predicted an eventual death toll of 200, scaled down the figure to 100-150. But he admitted to reporters, "Your guess is as good as mine."

With an airborne evacuation of survivors completed, the list of injured stood at nearly 300, the missing totaled 250.

The federal government estimated property damage at up to $100 million. Robert Roseheim, regional administrator of the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, said that much money had already been set aside for relief and reconstruction, with more available if necessary.

Watson estimated it would take a year just to clear out the tons of debris. Reconstruction, he said, won't come as quickly. One of the first priorities for cleanup crews was Drake, the largest town in the canyon. Reporters, given access for the first time since the flood, described on Tuesday a scene of almost complete destruction, bodies partially buried in the mud and furniture half-submerged.

Twelve-foot boulders torn loose from the canyon had tumbled into the area, crushing anything in their path.

"Broken necks, broken backs, you see, the violence of the water was so great that we have a feeling that most of them probably died before they had a chance to drown," said Michael Charney, deputy Larimer County coroner.

Military helicopter pilots flew along the canyon walls again on Tuesday to make sure everyone was out of the disaster area.

Viking Arm Is Jammed

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A balky robot arm on the Viking 1 lander has jammed for the second time, thwarting scientists' efforts to make an organic analysis of the highly active Martian soil that could determine if it holds life.

A decision on how to get the arm moving again was expected today.

Viking officials reported Tuesday night that the mechanical arm used to collect soil for experiments in the lander's sophisticated automated laboratory had not completed its programmed mission after digging into the Martian surface.

One of the laboratory instruments, a gas chromatograph mass spectrometer, "did not receive a soil sample today," said Viking spokesman Larry King.

FUTURE TRANSIT ROUTES

I would like to know why buses don't run in Greenfield Terrace. It would be very helpful to a lot of people that don't have a car or a way of getting to town and to the shopping centers. C. P.

City Planner John Schofield said that eventually one of the GREAT (GREenville Area Transit) buses may have a route to Greenfield Terrace but that is at least a month or two away.

"There will probably be no route changes for at least one and a half months," Schofield told HOTLINE. "We will evaluate transit service in the individual neighborhoods."

"The possibility is there (of a route)," he said. "We know the residents of Greenfield Terrace would like to have transit service. We have had a number of calls from residents there."

The drivers' daily count sheets will be studied to see which neighborhoods are using the GREAT system and which aren't, according to Schofield. If service is taken out of one area, service will then be provided to a new area on a route taking the same amount of time. Greenfield Terrace may get on a route as a replacement for a current service area if transportation to and from there takes about the same amount of time as for the present service area.

Anyone wishing to comment on the transit system or get further information may contact Schofield or Robert Tallo, transit manager, at City Hall, 752-4137.

Crash Death Cancelled A Victory Celebration

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Jerry Litton, his wife and two children and two other persons were killed when their small plane crashed as they headed toward a celebration of his victory in Missouri's Democratic senatorial primary.

Livingston County Sheriff

Kelsey Reeter said the plane had apparently just taken off from Chillicothe airport Tuesday night bound for Kansas City and was banking for a turn when it nosedived about 75 feet north of U.S. 36. The wheels of the plane caught on a barbed wire fence and the aircraft burst into flames on impact.

Litton, 39, was killed outright, as was his wife, Sharon, 38; their two children, son Scott, 12, daughter Linda, 13; and pilot Paul Rupp Jr. and his son, Paul Rupp III.

A few hours after the tragedy, Litton was declared winner of the election for a Democratic nominee to replace Sen. Stuart Symington, who is retiring.

With 76 per cent of the vote counted, Litton had 291,908 votes, or 45 per cent, to 165,866, or 27 per cent, for former Gov. Warren Hearnes and 157,754, or 25 per cent for Rep. James Symington, the senator's son.

Late into the night, residents were sitting on the hoods of their cars around the courthouse in Chillicothe, many crying.

Reeter said he would order an autopsy on Rupp.

The Missouri Democratic State Committee announced it would meet to choose a replacement for Litton from among the other candidates, including James Symington and Hearnes.

Symington said he and his family were "stunned beyond words by this tragic news. It is unbelievable. It is horrifying."

Litton, a millionaire farmer and businessman who was born in a three-room house near Lock Springs, Mo., was first elected to Congress in 1972, where he was considered a moderate.

He had watched the early election returns at his Chillicothe home before heading for the airport.

Crash Kills Three

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Three persons have died as the result of a two-car collision near Kinston Tuesday night, according to the Highway Patrol.

Trooper Ray Early said 41-year-old Malcom Glenwood Farrell of Kinston and 5-year-old Edward Earl Whaley Jr. of Route 2, Grifton, were killed in the 7:40 p.m. accident. The boy's sister, 13-year-old Glenda Whaley, died early today at Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville.

Early said Farrell was headed north on N.C. 58 about two miles north of Kinston when he ran off the road. Farrell's car came back across the highway and hit the car in which the Whaley children were riding, Early said. Their father, Edward Earl Whaley Sr. of Route 1, Pink Hill, was driving.

He was in fair condition at Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston today.

Reese To Head UF Division

Tom Reese of Greenville has been named chairman of the "200" Plus Division of the 1976-77 Pitt County United Fund drive.

The selection of Reese to head the key division in the upcoming drive was announced by Don Parrott, overall campaign chairman.

"Tom brings the enthusiasm and experience to the United Fund that we need to reach the goal of the fund drive for the year," Parrott observed in naming Reese.

"As he was last year, Tom is in one of the key positions of the fund drive and with him as head of the '200' Plus Division, we should have another successful campaign," the chairman added.

Reese, who serves as chief inspector in the Quality Control Department at Union Carbide Corp. here, has been associated with the company's Battery Products Division for some 13 years in Charlotte and Greenville.

A Rocky Mount native, the division chairman is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in business administration.

Female Guard Lessens Tension

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A female correctional officer, trained to handle a pistol and a carbine at a men's federal prison here, has had "a mellowing effect on the whole institution," a prison psychologist says.

"The guys respond to her sensitivity and concern for their welfare," said Dr. George Steinfield, a psychologist at the medium security Federal Correctional Institution (FCI).

One inmate says that Gloria Pappajohn of Danbury is "the greatest thing that ever happened to us."

"No one says anything derogatory to her, everyone respects her. When you see a 'hack' in uniform, you think of the cop on the street who suppressed you, searched and seized you — there's hostility. But no man's gonna let anything happen to her in this place."

Mrs. Pappajohn worked in the FCI's mental health department for 2½ years before switching to the correctional officer job.

When the federal government said women were eligible for correctional officer jobs except in maximum security prisons, she traded in her typewriter for a ring of keys and rotating shifts patrolling prison grounds.

She learned to use a carbine and .38-caliber pistol for duty in the prison's tower where she stood watch for fires, unusual movements in the nearby woods and escape attempts.

She's also worked the yard, unarmed at the time, overseeing cleanup details and following the garbage truck on its rounds to make sure inmates don't stow away in the trash and escape. At night she patrolled the yard with her flashlight, checking doors and probing corners looking for the unexpected.

Mrs. Pappajohn says the hardest thing for her to get used to is the five bed counts for prisoners she must be on hand for.

"I'm not frightened but I feel as if I'm intruding on what little privacy they've got left," said Mrs. Pappajohn, whose husband and two sons have had to get used to her overnight hours.

She says she is not terribly anxious to work in "receiving and stripping" but thinks "they're going to skirt around that."

"But I took the job as a firm believer in equal opportunity and I'm not going to be treated any differently than the men,"

she said. "I don't know if it's to prove to them a female is able to do it or what."

They did kid me a little bit, but they really have helped me, steered me right. I was talking to a friend of mine who just took a job in an all-male factory and she's had a much harder time."

Number Two Feels Like Substitute

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I married a childless widower. He had been happily married for over 20 years until his first wife died five years ago. I was a widow with grown children. Everyone told me how lucky I was to get him because he was very well-to-do.

He is a good husband, but I feel like a substitute for his first wife. He still carries her picture in his wallet instead of mine, and on my birthday and at Christmas he presents me with a piece of her jewelry. I feel uncomfortable wearing her things in the presence of those who remember seeing them on her.

I have made a very nice home for him, but I almost feel as though I am working for my room and board—and bedroom privileges. I'm not a mercenary, but I long for some identity of my own.

I've always kept the memory of my first husband from intruding into this marriage. Why do I feel like an intruder myself?

NUMBER TWO

DEAR NUMBER TWO: Because you don't have the courage to tell him that (a) it hurts you that he carries his deceased wife's picture in his wallet instead of yours, and (b) you don't enjoy hand-me-down jewelry.

DEAR ABBY: There is a divorcee in my husband's office who has a small child and lots of problems. I really blew my stack when Paul told me that he lent her $1,500 so she could have (are you ready for this?) silicone implants to increase the size of her breasts!

This girl told Paul that a psychologist told her that her feelings of insecurity stemmed from the fact that she had always been flat-chested, and the silicone implants would make her feel more womanly and self-confident.

Abby, I don't want to appear unreasonable, but I can't see where the size of this girl's breasts are anything my husband should be concerned with. What are your thoughts on the subject?

SHORT FUSE IN LONGVIEW

DEAR SHORT: At least your husband made a clean breast of his uplifting generosity. Ask him what the terms of the loan were—ALL of them.

DEAR ABBY: Although my wife is reasonable most of the time, she refuses to acknowledge that it is her duty to hop out of bed first in the morning and get the coffee going.

We have a double bed and established routines make it impractical for us to arise simultaneously.

I hope you will admonish my spouse for her unwifely and stubborn non-action.

VICTIM OF FEMALE CHAUVINIST

DEAR VIC: You rattled the wrong cage. By whose decree is it your wife's duty to hop out of bed first? I think you should compromise and alternate.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Tentative World Trade Step

A highly important step for Eastern North Carolina was taken here last week when around 40 business, industry, agriculture and government leaders voted to organize a Coastal Plains World Trade Club.

The club will be associated with the N.C. World Trade Association, and it will be the fifth regional chapter of the Association. Other chapters are in the Hickory area, Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area, the Piedmont Triad and the Charlotte area.

Dr. James Bearden, dean of the ECU School of Business called the Coastal Plains Club "an idea whose time has come." He cited Eastern North Carolina's role in helping to alleviate the world food shortage.

Dr. Leo Jenkins pledged the support of the university in the effort. "We have a philosophy of a two-way street of communication with the public," he said. "If we can make a contribution, come to us."

A committee was appointed to recommend a charter and bylaws, as well as a slate of officers.

It can't be emphasized too much how important the work of the Coastal Plains World Trade Club can be to the economy of North Carolina. We are already exporting phosphate from the rich areas of Beaufort County. Our tobacco industry is heavily involved in the export trade and many of our industries have international interests.

Often concern is expressed about the agricultural future of our area, and yet we should soon be able to sell everything we can grow to overseas markets.

One of the concerns expressed in the current political campaigns is about building our state ports. That is something we won't have to worry about if we build our overseas markets for farm products and other Eastern North Carolina produced goods.

Indeed, the Coastal Plains World Trade Club is an idea whose time has come. The activation of this organization can mean much economically to all of us.

Expanded City Bus Service Is Likely

GREAT—the city's new transportation system—has gotten off to a good start and the Greenville Chamber of Commerce has recognized its value to both merchants and shoppers.

The Chamber's board of directors endorsed the system and voted to ask the City Council to extend the service to Saturdays.

This would be desirable because "Saturday is the largest shopping day," Don Collier, Chamber president said.

We expect to see expansion of the public transportation system and certainly Saturday service would be valuable.

THIS AFTERNOON

Children's Special Needs

By BILL NOBLITT (Second Of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — In response to continued pressures from a host of interested people over the year, the General Assembly created the Legislative Commission on Children With Special Needs.

Special needs—as generally understood — were departures from the "norm;" things like mental retardation, learning disabilities, physical handicaps, mental or emotional problems. But the deeper that legislative commission goes into its field of study, the more complex the situation becomes. When the North Carolina Task Force on Early Adolescence made a recent presentation, some members were moved to seriously suggest a name change.

Rather than the Commission on Children with Special Needs, it was suggested, it should become the Commission on the Special Needs of Children.

An Alliance Duke University Psychiatrist Hal Harris led the presentation by the Adolescence Task Force, generally describing conditions for the 10-to-15-year olds as deplorable and not getting much better, and especially denouncing the unavailability of information about this age group. An alliance was formed to produce more information, and proposed legislation.

There are some 640,000 children in the early adolescent years, who vary enormously from one another in physical, mental, and social development.

About one-third of them go through adolescence "rather serenely in continuous growth." But for 70 per cent, the early teen years are filled with either tumultuous growth (frequent and intense difficulties), or surgent growth (occasional difficulties), Dr. Harris finds.

Most adults worry about the normalcy of the children; and that further frustrates the child's effort to grow out of the stormy period. The children, too, generally worry about their own normalcy.

The Task Force on Early Adolescence was created by concerned individuals who were involved in preparation of a report to be published nationally this fall jointly by the Learning Institute of North Carolina and the Ford Foundation.

Problem Areas The Task Force report touched upon many of the problem areas:

HEALTH — Drug and alcohol abuse, unwanted pregnancies, venereal diseases and diet problems peak; yet the state has only six adolescent pediatricians and no hospital residency in adolescent medicine.

MENTAL HEALTH — Last years, 18 adolescents in this committed suicide and 1,800 attempted to take their own lives, runaways are growing alarmingly as are other indicators; yet there is a critical lack of mental health services.

JUVENILE JUSTICE — Figures show arrests of juveniles for violent crimes increased 216 per cent between 1960 and 1970; yet the state moves slowly in providing group homes, counseling, other aids, leading the Task Force to "suspect that many adolescents are experiencing a social injustice that propels them towards delinquency."

SCHOOLS — Junior highs are mostly "a watered-down high school organization and curriculum" with few specialists and most teachers just waiting on a vacancy to move to a high school; they get last choice in facilities, have the highest teacher-pupil ratio, have the least supportive personnel, and little special training for teachers.

SOCIAL — Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Girls Clubs, Campfire Girls, YMCA, YWCA report enrollment drops; churches report dropouts; schools lose the children intent on physically dropping out at age 16. "The only bright star... is the 4-H Clubs in North Carolina" where membership is growing.

Just Sheer Coincidence

WASHINGTON—One of the big surprises of last week's dramatic political events was the sudden decision by John Connally to come out in support of President Ford.

Mr. Connally visited Mr. Ford on Tuesday, the day after Ronald Reagan announced he had chosen Sen. Richard Schweiker as vice presidential candidate.

There were some cynical people in Washington who thought that Connally, who had remained neutral until that moment, made the hurried trip to Washington after he was eliminated as running-mate on the Reagan ticket.

This, I have been assured by Connally's people, was not the case. Connally has always been "secretly" for President Ford, but he was just waiting for the most opportune time to come out for him publicly. The timing of it was sheer coincidence.

This is what really happened.

On Friday, three days before Reagan dropped his bombshell, Mr. Connally said to his wife, "Honey, I think we ought to fly up to Washington and tell Gerry Ford we support him."

"That's fine, John," his wife said. "But one of the calves is sick and we can't leave him today. Can't we go tomorrow?"

"All right," Connally said. "I don't imagine one day's delay in coming out for Ford will make any difference."

On Saturday Connally said, "Honey, are you packed so we can go to Washington and tell Gerry that we have decided he would make the best candidate for the presidential ticket?"

"My dress hasn't come back from the cleaners," Mrs. Connally said.

"Well, take another dress." "I will not," Mrs. Connally said. "I selected this dress especially for the moment that you would announce your support for the man who could lead the Republican Party to victory in November."

"Daggonnit," Connally said. "I want to come out for Ford in the worst way and the cleaners are holding up my endorsement."

"We can go tomorrow," Mrs. Connally said.

"There are no reporters at the White House on Sunday," Connally said. "They're all in church."

"Well, then we'll go Monday. What's the big rush? You've been sitting on the fence for so long a couple of days won't matter."

"I guess you're right," Connally said. Monday morning the Connallys took off from Houston. But when they got to Washington their plane was stacked up over National Airport for two hours.

When they finally landed a reporter told the former Texas governor that Ronald Reagan had just announced that he had selected Richard Schweiker to run with him if he was nominated on the Republican ticket.

Connally was furious. "If it wasn't for that sick calf and your dress," he told his wife, "we could have come out for Ford on Saturday. Now it looks like I'm coming out for Ford just so he'll make me this Vice President."

"Nobody who knows you would dream that, John," Mrs. Connally said soothingly, "leastwise the President. In his heart he knew you were for him all the time."

Connally immediately called the White House and asked to see the President that afternoon.

One of the President's aides told him, "I think you better see him tomorrow. If you saw him today people would think that you were too anxious to get on the Ford bandwagon. By tomorrow they'll know your endorsement of Mr. Ford was sincere."

Well, the rest is history. Connally and the President came out of the White House arm in arm on Tuesday and despite snickering from the White House Press Corps about the timing, President Ford believed everything Connally told him. That's the kind of man Gerry Ford is, and that is why Connally made his decision long ago to support him 1,000 percent. —

Early Paper Maker

By DR. H. G. JONES, Curator, N.C. Collection Written for Associated Press CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Victory over Great Britain stimulated the manufacture of paper in the colonies, but North Carolina was without a really successful paper mill until after the state ratified the federal constitution.

The story began on September 8, 1789, when the Salem diary recorded, "With the approval of the Aeltesten Conferenz and Aufsenner Collegium, Brother Gottlieb Schober plans to build a paper-mill and employ Brother Christian Stauber as paper-maker."

A week later, Schober announced his plans in the Fayetteville Gazette and offered a generous price for clean cotton and linen rags. Noting that "without rags paper cannot be

40 Years Ago Today

August 4, 1936 A crisis in the Spanish insurgents' fight for possession of Madrid appeared to be approaching today as at least two European capitals experienced new pangs of anxiety over the maintenance of European peace.

London and Paris looked anxiously toward the cauldron of family unrest in Spain - a civil war now in its 18th day - and diplomatic activity to obtain a general European hands-off agreement respecting the insurrection heightened.

Charging that strong-arm threats were used to force trade unionists into the John L. Lewis camps, the prosecution today pressed the "trial" of Lewis and 11 other American Federation of Labor chieftains accused of rebellion.

John P. Frey, Federation prosecutor, announced he would present documentary evidence that men had been threatened with beatings to induce them to vote for industrial unionism.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Reagan's Self-Destruction

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Once it became apparent this week that the Schweiker ploy was juring no delegates to Ronald Reagan, President Ford's political operatives breathed deeply of a heady new reality: they were suddenly free from the spectre of Reagan losing the nomination but dictating everything else at Kansas City next month.

The Ford campaign had privately resigned itself to swallowing vice-presidential demands of some 1,000 Reagan delegates, even if that meant a Ford-Reagan ticket. Within 24 hours after ultra-liberal Sen. Richard Schweiker was unveiled as Reagan's running mate, emancipated Ford agents were brainstorming about unlimited vice-presidential possibilities — a woman, a black, maybe even a Democrat. That reflected their belief that Reagan, in a single stroke, had destroyed his influence over the Republican present and future.

This looms for conservatives as the bitter fruit of the Schweiker gamble. Even in defeat, Reagan had seemed likely to emerge from Kansas City as the party's dominant figure, armed with reputed adherence to principle and a fiercely loyal legion of admirers. Today he has neither, thanks to his futile bid for a handful of delegates.

Accordingly, the prospective post-convention outlook is changed radically. Until Schweiker's selection, Reagan at worst figured to emerge narrowly defeated from Kansas City with even more influence over the nominee than Robert A. Taft wielded after Chicago in 1952. Now, however, whether narrowly or badly beaten (and it may well be badly), Reagan becomes irrelevant in Republican affairs.

Non-ideological campaign manager John Sears, designer of the Schweiker gambit, was interested only in winning — not in exercising authority as a loser. It is now clear that those 40-odd Reagan delegates supposedly sequestered by Sears in Northeastern state delegations were but phantoms. Feeling unable to compete with the White House in piecemeal courtship of delegates, Sears saw a desperate gamble as the only alternative to defeat.

While overestimating Schweiker's impact on Northeastern delegates, Sears erred more seriously in believing the loyalty of Reagan delegates would withstand the Schweiker shock. Loyal to a cause rather than a man, the Reaganites in fact are incomparably less tolerant of ideological deviation than are the practical politicians backing Mr. Ford.

Nor did other key figures in the Reagan organization, carrying much better conservative credentials than Sears, either understand the quality of Reagan's constituency or seek to preserve the candidate's credibility. Incredibly, there is no evidence of a strong fight against Schweiker waged within Reagan's high command. Even Reagan chief delegate hunter Anderson Carter, nationally renowned as a hard-nosed conservative, made no protest.

What is truly astounding, however, is that Sears sold Reagan himself on Schweiker — apparently without much difficulty. Although Reagan's desire to influence the party was a genuine reason for challenging the incumbent President, that motive was forgotten just as he was about to realize it.

Sears is a skilled political mechanic who prefers his operations veiled even from

Strength For Today

A HUMBLE MAN MADE GREAT

What would Simon Peter have thought as he sat in his fishing boat on the Sea of Galilee if someone had come to him and said, "Peter, in future generations you will be one of the most famous characters in history. The greatest church in the world will be built over your grave. Men will have a regard for you that they have for almost no one else who has ever lived."

If anyone had said this to Peter, can we suppose that the humble fisherman would have regarded him with anything but disdain and incredulity?

Yet all these things have happened. One day Jesus, standing on the shore, called to Peter in his fishing boat and said, "Come ye after me and I will make you a fisher of men."

The point of the story is that Christ made a world figure out of a very humble man. Can and what did Peter do for us in some measure do for us if we but trust him and follow him.

Inflation Hit Free Road Maps

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

The millions of road maps traditionally given out free at the nation's service stations are changing these days. They are often smaller, there are fewer of them and, in some cases, they cost money.

The problem goes back to 1973. First there was the energy crunch. Service stations no longer needed maps to attract customers. Then there was inflation. Costs rose, and the free map became an expensive proposition for the oil companies.

Today, according to a spokesman for one manufacturer, a consumer looking for a particular type of road map may have to try several places before finding exactly what he or she wants. There are no nationwide statistics available on how many oil companies still distribute the maps free of charge. "I do know it's not like it once was," said a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute.

He said some oil companies charge their dealers for the maps, leaving it up to the individual station owner to decide whether to pass the cost on to the consumer. A few stations have installed vending machines and are experimenting with 50-and-75-cent maps.

Conroy V. Erickson, a spokesman for Rand-McNally Inc. of Skokie, Ill., the largest producer of road maps in the country, said the "free road map is not dead. But he said many of the oil companies have cut back. "They have gotten out of city maps and...have less ambitious map programs." Regional maps are replacing state maps.

Erickson said one company, which he declined to name, experimented last year with a kind of "minimap," but was dissatisfied and returned to regular maps. He said other companies are buying pads of maps which are smaller and cheaper to produce since they do not require the complex folding of the standard map.

Rand-McNally does not disclose sales figures, but some industry sources have estimated that $11 million worth of road maps are distributed by oil companies each year.

Erickson said between 225 and 250 million maps were given out in 1972, the latest year for which he had complete figures. The number declined sharply in 1973 and 1974, he said. It has started rising again, but the 1976 total still will be less than the 1972 figure.

Americans tend to think of the free map as a universal fixture. Service stations abroad do not give out maps, however, and never have, Erickson said. Even in the United States, the concept of free road maps was not introduced until the late 1930s.

Erickson said Rand-McNally has kept down the cost to oil companies by introducing technological improvements to make manufacturing more efficient. "But of course paper is more expensive," he said, and distribution costs for the oil companies have risen sharply.

Jones Col. . .

made," he wrote, "The economical house-wife, who supplies the paper mill with rags, serves her country in her sphere, as well as the soldier who fights for it does in his."

Indicating its eagerness for the establishment of a paper manufacturing plant in North Carolina, the General Assembly advanced Schober a loan of three hundred pounds clear of interest for three years.

The Moravians were apparently relieved over Brother Schober's decision to go into papermaking, for in one cryptic entry they observed, "We think that it would suit best for him, and if it can be put through it might keep him from speculations of which we cannot approve."

Christian Stauber had planned to go to Pennsylvania to study the trade of papermaking at Ephrata, but the Brethren declined to allow him to go until he could instruct a successor "in cutting out and making leather breeches."

When he finally got to Pennsylvania, Stauber wrote back that he could not build the mill without assistance of someone who knew more about "such things" than he did. So the Brethren sent Johann Krause after reminding him "to make his will before he leaves." Traveling in those days was indeed perilous.

Schober and his associates selected a site on the Petersbach (Peters Creek) near Salem. Long before the modern term "environmental protection" was known, the Brethren worried about building a dam which would flood a large area. They decided, however, "We do not think that this will be a menace to the health of the town, for it is fairly far away and there is a hill between, but care must be taken that no wood is left standing in the water."

By April, 1791, the mill was making blotting paper. Philip Transou and his family of Bethania moved into the mill building for several months, and on June 30 the first writing and printing paper was finished. Later in the year Schober invited Stauber to become master and partner in the operation of the mill, and a contract was signed. Problems arose, however, and the partnership was dissolved a couple of years later.

An interesting development resulted when in 1801 Schober appealed to the church fathers for help in obtaining an operator for the mill. The Brethren observed that the widow Anna Wagemann, the housekeeper at the mill, would make a very nice wife for the widowed Brother Joseph Gambold. They even agreed that such a marriage of convenience could be approved without recourse to the lot—a traditional Moravian way of determining God's wishes. Gambold, with three motherless children, and the lonely widow gladly accepted the suggestion and the mill soon had new occupants.

The need for labor led Schober to buy additional slaves, and the Aufseher Collegium worried that his action "may easily be injurious to use" because he had failed to ask permission for his purchase. Finally, in the 1830s, the mill was sold to Christian Blum.

The mill was rented by Franz Fries in 1847 and continued to operate for many years. Thus the industrious Moravians pioneered in the manufacture of paper, an industry that in the twentieth century has grown into a major contributor to North Carolina's economy.

Officials Okay Pet Cemetary

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—After descendants of persons buried in a local cemetery opposed requests that pets be buried there also, city officials approved a pet cemetery on part of the city landfill.

At the same time, the McMinnville Mayor and Board of Alderman gave initial approval to an ordinance making it unlawful to bury bodies other than human ones in city-controlled cemeteries.

Stringent Security At Arraignment For Three

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Stringent security ringed this small farming community today for court appearances by three young men accused in the abduction of 26 school children and their bus driver.

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said deputies would be posted on rooftops along the two blocks of main street. Outside help was available, and the entire 12-man Chowchilla Police Department was on duty.

The precautions were taken for the arraignment of Frederick N. Woods and James Schoenfeld, both 24, at Chowchilla's tiny Justice Court.

Judge Howard C. Green said he would arraign the pair first "and then let the lawyers take it from there as to what we do next." At some point, Schoenfeld's brother, Richard, 22, who pleaded innocent last week, planned to argue for reduction of his $1 million bail.

The elder Schoenfeld, arrested on a San Francisco Peninsula freeway July 29, and Woods, captured in Canada five hours later, are expected to plead innocent to 43 felony counts of kidnaping and robbery.

They are also held on $1 million bail each.

The younger Schoenfeld surrendered nearly a week before the other two were apprehended. All three are jailed in Alameda County, 95 miles to the north.

Defense attorneys have hinted that a request to hold the trial outside Chowchilla is a virtual certainty.

The July 15 mass kidnaping and the arrests of the three young men, members of families living in the affluent suburbs south of San Francisco, have kept tension high in Chowchilla.

Nearly three weeks after the abduction of the farm children and bus driver Ed Ray, no motive has surfaced, and speculation is rampant.

A gag order has barred disclosure of evidence, but published reports quoting unidentified sources have said a rough draft of a $5-million ransom note was found at Woods' home in Portola Valley on the San Francisco Peninsula.

The sources were quoted as saying the handwriting appeared to be James Schoenfeld's and that the draft note bore the words "We are Beelsabub" — apparently a misspelling of Beelzebub, one name used in the Bible for Satan.

Bates expressed skepticism that money alone triggered the bizarre kidnaping on July 15.

"I'm not satisfied with that, and most people with an inquisitive mind wouldn't be, either," Bates said. "I intend to develop psychological profiles of these three men to see what makes these people go."

The Oakland Tribune reported Tuesday that searches of the homes of the three suspects turned up material dealing "with satanic theory." The Sacramento Bee and the Fresno Bee earlier quoted sources as saying evidence of a "devil cult" had been found.

The 26 children were snatched from their school bus and imprisoned for 17 hours in a buried moving van in a Livermore rock quarry owned by Woods' father. They have been sheltered from most of the activity surrounding the capture of their accused abductors.

his own staff, much less outside reporters — duplicating Reagan's own inclinations. That blocked any preview for Reagan of the shock and disillusionment that Schweiker would generate.

Reagan would have quickly learned the truth had he checked in advance with one of his earliest and most ardent champions, Rep. Phillip Crane of Illinois. A 45-year-old author and Ph.D. in history, Crane is typical of Reagan's zealots in preferring principle-without-victory to victory-without-principle.

When Reagan telephoned Crane after the fact to defend his move, Crane responded in untypically harsh invective attacking Schweiker's rampant pragmatism. Reagan "seemed kind of stunned," Crane reported, and appeared unaware of just how liberal Schweiker's voting record is. Bloodied but unbowed in braving the monolithic Illinois Republican party apparatus all year, Crane suddenly lost heart for future battle.

So has Tom Ellis, the tough Raleigh, N.C., lawyer who saved Reagan's candidacy last winter by overriding the national campaign organization and raising enough money for a statewide televised half-hour of Reagan which won the North Carolina primary. At a meeting of Southern Reagan leaders in Atlanta last weekend, Ellis helped lay plans for a platform fight at Kansas City which he hoped would nominate Reagan and was sure would put Reagan's mark on the party.

The Schweiker shock eliminated his enthusiasm for such rigorous combat.

While not following New Hampshire's Gov. Meldrim Thomson into outright abandonment of Reagan, the Phil Cranes and Tom Ellises will go to Kansas City as the walking wounded of a lost war rather than militant acolytes of a sacred cause. With depleted will to battle over platform and Vice President, Reagan delegates may well exercise no more impact there than if Mr. Ford's quest for the nomination had gone unchallenged and the long, hard months of struggle had never been.

Sudan Govm't Executed 81

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The Sudanese government executed 81 men early today for the abortive attempt to overthrow President Jaafar el-Numairi last month, the official Omdurman Radio announced.

The broadcast said 16 other persons were sentenced to prison terms ranging from 10 years to life. Numairi personally approved all the sentences, the radio said.

Sentences against Brig. Mohammed Nur Saad, the alleged leader of the rebellion, and 230 others also tried last week by two special military tribunals will be announced after Numairi reviews them, the broadcast added.

More executions were expected.

The broadcast did not say how the men were executed or give their names. But a list of the defendants published last week showed all were Sudanese.

Numairi charged after the attempted coup was put down July 3 that it was the work of 2,000 mercenaries and fugitive Sudanese who were trained and armed by Col. Moammar Khadafy's radical Libyan government.

The coup attempt began July 2 as Numairi was arriving at the capital's airport after a trip to the United States and Western Europe. The Sudanese president said 700 of the insurgents were killed in the two days of fighting in Khartoum. Heavy casualties also were reported among government forces.

Greenville Leaf Market Prices At Record Highs

Price average on the Greenville Tobacco Market continued to inch upward Tuesday as the market recorded its highest average of the season.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, said that Tuesday's average climbed to $104.29 per hundred pounds, up nearly $2 per hundred from Monday's sale.

Local warehouses sold 1,140,211 pounds yesterday for $1,189,126 in recording the second consecutive price average day over $100 per hundred pounds.

For the season, the Greenville Market has sold 7,525,774 pounds for $7,184,174, an overall average of $95.46 per hundred pounds.

Offerings consisted of lugs, cutters and a few leaves, Bryan report, with Stabilization receipts of 17.68 per cent reflecting a continued decrease.

Hotel Checks Carry A Bonus

NEW YORK (UPI) — Buying HiltonCheques in advance could help cut down on the cost of travel. The checks guarantee one rate — $35 single and $42 double, including service charges and taxes — at 21 Hilton International hotels in Europe, Morocco and Israel through next March 31. Hilton says the special rate offers savings of 15-25 per cent on published tariff rates at most hotels.

Fire Chief Reappointed By Winterville's Board

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board voted Monday night to approve the reappointment of Seth Cayton as the Winterville Fire Chief and hired a new police officer.

Clarence Warren was hired as a new police officer in Winterville. Warren formerly worked on the Greenville Police Department.

The board voted to repair a sewer line on Tyson Street east of the railroad tracks after reviewing several complaints.

A population report was presented at the meeting. According to the State Demographic Research Branch, the Town of Winterville's population has increased through 1975 from 1,750 to 2,010.

The board also approved street work to be done on the W. H. Smith heirs' property located west of Chapman Street after subdivision regulations are met.

John B. Lewis, chairman of the Pitt Development Commission and Reese Hart, the executive director of the commission, attended the meeting and offered the services of the commission to assist the Town of Winterville in developing its growth and industries.

The board received a petition from the residents of North Railroad Street requesting a curb and gutter project from Cooper Street to Blount Street.

Bids for a juvenile police car will be received August 9 at 7 p.m. according to Elwood Nobles, Town Clerk.

Nobles noted that the tax bills have been mailed and the 2 per cent discount is in effect only during the month of August.

In other action the board approved Robert Reneau of Southwestern Publishing Company to sell Bibles in the town.

New American Hospital For Iran's People

By CHARLES BERNARD
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A 10-story midtown building that was supposed to become a luxury apartment complex has become instead Iran's first hospital run according to U.S. medical standards.

Called the American Hospital of Tehran, the hospital recently opened with 66 beds. It will have 174 beds when it becomes fully operational in January.

English is the required language of communication for all staff, from doorman to doctors.

The hospital is the creation of Charter Medical Corp. of Macon, Ga., a Tehran bank and the Iranian Medical Institute, a newly-formed clinic of Iranian doctors all trained in U.S. medical schools and each with several years of experience in American medical practice.

Dr. Kaivon Saleh, a vice president of Charter International and the acting administrator, said the American hospital will serve as an example to other Iranian hospitals of standards they should employ.

Saleh said Iranian doctors, mostly trained in the United States, are as well qualified as any in the world.

But they come home to a system of hospitals lacking proper administration and standards and "run by doctors for doctors," he said.

"There is an Iranian Hospital Association," he said, "but it is on paper only. There isn't anyone you can go to and get told how to do it right, and there is no policing group."

"This is all slowly changing and the government is beginning to tighten up and is putting all hospitals under one umbrella" of standards and control, he said.

Saleh, who trained at the University of California at Los Angeles, said Iranian hospitals have been run as their private owners or government administrators saw fit. There have been no training standards for nurses or other medical personnel except doctors, he said, and no place that offered an example to them of proper medical procedures.

"Charter came to do some consulting for the government and to investigate the possibility of building some new government hospitals," Saleh said.

Then the company hit upon the idea of opening its own medical center, and saved an estimated four years building time by buying the already partially completed apartment complex.

The Bank of Tehran provided financing, and for medical staff Dr. Wyndham Blanton Jr., Charter's vice president for medical affairs, signed up 23 American-trained physicians who were just forming the Iranian Medical Institute to be located near the hospital.

With the bank's help, the physicians bought shares in the project and now comprise the exclusive practitioners at the hospital.

"The weakness in most Iranian hospitals," Saleh said, "is that staff doctors usually run them in the manner learned 30 years ago or so. It is hard to bring in younger doctors with new ideas and techniques."

Blanton said Charter came in because of the "void" that existed in Tehran.

"All over Iran you can find American equipment," he said. "It's all over the place and fantastic dollars have been spent on it. But it's not working. It's just sitting."

"And then there are lots of Iranians back here who have been trained in America and they can't find the equipment or proper working conditions. We are trying to be of assistance to the whole thing."

Manned Visit To Mars Said In Our Future

DR. JOHN F. CLARK foresees a space age future that may produce a manned landing on Mars before the 20th Century ends. (UPI Photo)

By NANCY KERCHEVAL GREENBELT, Md. (UPI) — Dr. John F. Clark, looking back on a career that began with World War II rockets, foresees a space age future that may produce a manned landing on Mars before the end of the century.

Finishing an 11-year stint as director of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, the 55-year old scientist says, "The future of man in space is to do work. It's not to determine his capabilities. He's already done that."

Even before the unmanned Viking made its successful landing on Mars, Clark was speculating on what's ahead.

"If Viking shows there's a need for man to go to Mars, and I think it will, man will be sent to explore the surface of the planet," he said. "Technologically, we can have a man on Mars by the end of the century, but it's going to be costly."

With plans to remain in the field of space technology in a nongovernmental capacity, the retired Goddard director said in an interview, "Space exploration and rocketry will go on forever."

"As far as I'm concerned, improvement of the space program for man's benefit is stronger now than it's ever been," he said. "The level of effort is far less than when it peaked with the Apollo preparation, but no activity in the minds of the proponents is enough."

The Reading, Pa., native said his most memorable years in the world of outer space were the 11 years he spent at Goddard.

"It's a tremendous thrill the moment of the launch," he said. "It's like the moment of the birth of a child. It's the first time you really get the feel of how healthy the child can be and how it will be when it goes out in the big, cold, cruel world."

"Space has exploded since the time of the V-2's to the Apollo lunar flights, but as they said (when the programs first started) 'Watch out for the first step, it's a bitch.'"

Clark said the next big question which may one day be answered by space travel, is whether there are "any life developments independently of that on earth in other parts of the solar system."

"The biggest unknown factor is the length of time a civilization, advanced to our point, is stable against self-destruction," he said. "We need to know if civilizations like ours are stable for a long period of time. We also need to be assured that diverse races can live in harmony rather than destruction."

Of the possibility of life on Mars, Clark said, "It was thought to be rather lifeless. But there is a huge chasm that makes the Grand Canyon look like a millstream. There's evidence of erosion. There's also distinct evidence of water vapor."

He feels it probably is time for the major powers to cooperate in space travel, both politically and economically.

"I don't see how we can afford to do without space," Clark said, "But I don't favor going back to the level of activity eight years ago, which would be four times what is now spent in real dollars."

When Clark reminisces about his years in space science, he goes back to 1945, the year he first met rocket pioneer Werner Von Braun.

Clark said Von Braun and other German scientists who surrendered to the Americans before they were grabbed by Soviet troops numbered "more than a handful and less than a mob."

"Most of the men were men of action," he said. "They were tough-minded engineers and technicians."

Von Braun, on the other hand, was "more of a dreamer and a scholar than a man of action."

"He was relatively unaware of some of the details of living and depended on others to keep records, but he had a lifelong dream of leaving the surface of the earth by means of Goddard's rocket. He was a man who brought that to reality."

Clark saw Von Braun in April at a retirement party at NASA's headquarters in Washington, about a year after it was learned the noted scientist had cancer.

"Even though he was burning up with fever and spending much of his time resting in a chair, he saw Hugh Dryden's wife standing in a group. He suggested I find her a chair. That was typical. He is compassionate, loves people and is a man of his word."

Clark had two of his most memorable moments at White Sands.

"I guess one thing I remember — along with the spectacular failures — was when a V-2 misfired," he said. "That left our hearts in our throats."

"We were watching from a concrete block house and no one wanted to go out and look at it. Finally a German tech went out to check the ignitor. He went up to the combustion center to make sure the wires were okay."

"Then we noticed he came back staggering. We had forgotten that oxygen concentration and alcohol ingested through the lungs rather rapidly," Clark laughed.

The technician was intoxicated.

He also remembered the time when he worked at the station near the testing site for the Honest John Missiles.

"We were supposed to leave when they test-fired the missiles, but one day we decided to stay," he said. "Suddenly we noticed the missile wasn't changing direction. We stood there helpless."

"At the last possible second, it literally veered. It dug a king-size hole not more than 25 feet from us. That was the last time we stayed in the area during a test."

Clark said it was a "tough decision" to leave Goddard.

But, he said, "I reached a point where I felt it would be good for the center. And I need a change — new faces and new challenges. The job has been fun, and I leave without regrets."

South Africa Township Again Explodes Into Angry Rioting

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rioting raged across the black Soweto township today after six weeks of tension, and police reported that at least three blacks were shot to death.

An estimated 20,000 blacks broke through a police barricade and tried to march on Johannesburg, eight miles to the north, but police said they fired over their heads and turned them back.

The marchers were protesting the detention of student leaders and voicing other grievances of South Africa's black majority.

Roving mobs of youths tried to stop workers from commuting to Johannesburg. A key railway signal block was burned. Commuter trains were halted. Buses and cars were stoned, and students carrying placards disrupted traffic in the ghetto in which a million blacks live.

The placards read "Release our Brothers" and "We Are Born Free But Everywhere We Are in Chains."

It was the first major outbreak of violence in Soweto since a student demonstration on June 16 touched off an upheaval in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria in which at least 176 persons were killed and more than 1,100 were injured. All but two of the dead and most of the injured were black.

Trouble was also reported in the black township of Alexandra, adjoining white residential areas in northern Johannesburg. Police said there were two attempts there to set schools on fire.

The outbreak in Soweto apparently was touched off by the recent detention of several student leaders, including Hlaku Rachidi, president of the Black People's Convention, and Ben Palmer Louw, a former leader of the black South African Students Organization. A number of other students have been under detention since the June riots.

Factories and other businesses in Johannesburg reported thousands of blacks absent from work.

Rioting was reported spreading through the township. Hundreds of riot police in camouflage battle fatigues and police in civilian clothes armed with submachine guns and rifles sealed off the area.

The police barred all other whites from Soweto, telling them it was not safe for them.

The mobs warned workers going to jobs in Johannesburg, South Africa's industrial and commercial capital, that they would be in for trouble if they returned to Soweto in the evening.

Demonstrators called for a march to Johannesburg's John Vorster Square, named for South Africa's prime minister, to protest the arrests of student leaders. Police set up roadblocks at all exits from the township to stop the marchers.

Leaf Quality Is Improved

FARMVILLE — An increase in the volume of lugs and color grades was responsible for the Farmville Tobacco average of over one dollar per pound for the past two sale days, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"The quality of the tobacco has improved this week considerably over the past week. Demand by companies has increased due to the increase in more descript grades," Williams said.

"The top price paid by a company this season is $1.29 per pound for leaves and lugs. Stabilization receipts for Tuesday were 18.56 per cent of the sales, as compared to 32.52 per cent last year on the same sale day," he said.

Tuesday the Farmville Tobacco Market sold 714,258 pounds for an average of $102.54 per 100 pounds. To date the Farmville Market has sold 4,614,128 for $4,367,448 with a seasonal average of $94.65 per 100 pounds.

office site, serves generally the eastern half of the state.

According to Melvin, the new office complex has some 4,500 square feet of total space, including roughly 1,300 square feet for each of the three offices.

The office building, constructed by M. E. Perry & Co. of Goldsboro, is of contemporary design with traditional interior accents, he said.

Architect for the structure was William E. Friend of Greenville.

Ira Baker To Address Group

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Ira L. Baker of East Carolina University will appear on the program as a discussant in the history of the press division of the national convention of the Association for Education in Journalism being held here at the University of Maryland this week.

The topic will be "An Exploration of the Use of Video-Tape Recording for History Projects as an Alternative to Traditional Term Papers." Baker is a member of the Teaching Standards Committee of the History Division.

Journalism professors from colleges and universities from all 50 states and Canada are attending this 59th annual convention.

Water Testing Lab Opening Announced

The opening of Environment I Inc., the city's first commercial laboratory for waste water testing, was announced by John Melvin, president.

Melvin said that Environment I Inc. offices and lab are located in a new office building in Oakmont Plaza situated off NC 43 opposite Carriage House Apartments.

He noted that the structure housing the commercial lab offers a "new concept" in office facilities, with the building divided into three separate offices with a common vestibule.

Sharing the office building with Environment I Inc. is local attorney Laurence S. Graham and the Certified Public Accountant firm of Freuler-Grady & Co.

Melvin said that the lab will conduct environmental analysis and waste water testing involving waste treatment plants, streams and rivers. Contracts are negotiated with municipalities as well as industrial clients and others seeking waste water testing, including individuals, he noted.

He pointed out that his firm, which conducts its tests at the

Joan Little Thinks Prison Was Inevitable; Planning A New Life

By D.J. HILL
 RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — "The best thing any person who comes to prison can do is for her to come here, do her time, abide by the rules as best possible and hurry and get out."

Joan Little said it and she plans to do it.

At the age of 17, the black woman who grew up along the dusty streets of Washington, N.C., clashed with the law. By the age of 21, she had been convicted of breaking and entering and was charged with murdering a white jailer whom she said tried to force her into a sex act.

She could have been sentenced to death.

"The way I was going, there was no way I could go but to prison," Miss Little said in an interview.

"Or possibly dead." Joan Little believes prison was the inevitable stopping place for her. But now, at the age of 22, she hopes to use the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women as a springboard to better things.

A year ago Aug. 15, she was acquitted of the murder charge, and before the year was out she was brought to the correctional center for women to finish her term on breaking and entering charges.

Now she has begun to make plans for her future and nervously awaits a parole review Sept. 15.

The murder charge followed the death of Clarence Allgood, a 62-year-old white Beaufort County jailer whom she said she stabbed to death in self defense on Aug. 27, 1974.

Hers was a cause celebre for prison reform, women's and civil rights groups that thrust her into the international limelight. She traveled around the country on speaking tours. Her audiences were college students and sometimes local legislators—company she would never have kept in the black section of Washington, an eastern North Carolina town of 9,000.

She was declared a teenage truant five years ago and was sentenced to a juvenile training school. She escaped and later went to Philadelphia and completed her 11th grade high school work.

When she returned to Washington two years later, school officials wouldn't accept her northern credits, and she dropped out of school for good.

Then began her "fast" life. By the time she was 18, Miss Little said she could be found most often "standing on the corner on 4th Street in front of the pool hall" or "in the pool hall with the guys."

"Very seldom did you ever see me coming from a job somewhere," she said.

She even lived with the pool hall owner, Julius Rogers, for a while, a move that set tongues wagging in her small hometown.

In the span of less than a month, between December 1972 and January 1974, Miss Little was charged three times with possession of stolen goods and shoplifting. She was convicted only once, and that sentence was suspended.

But on Jan. 15, 1974, she was charged with breaking into a house and two trailers and stealing appliances and clothing. It was on that charge that she was convicted and spent 81 days in the Beaufort County jail before she escaped.

Her subsequent surrender and the narrative of her version of Allgood's death brought her international attention for the six months she was in prison, the period before and after her murder trial.

She traveled and met many people, and after her acquittal, everywhere she went there were "hundreds of people," she said, giving her advice on what direction her life should take.

Miss Little said she listened most closely to one of her defense attorneys, Karen Galloway, who told her to try to complete her education and find a job.

"I knew I couldn't go back to what I was; what I used to be," said Miss Little.

In prison, she has completed her high school work and dropped plans for marriage because "I think I should wait and go after all the goals I've set."

She hopes to enter Shaw University in Raleigh this fall.

She works from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the prison sewing room and takes part in the chapel choir, drama class and toastmasters, where inmates are taught public speaking.

The Parole Board reviews her case Sept. 15 and will give her a final decision by Dec. 15. Prison officials will meet Aug. 25 to decide whether as an honor grade inmate she has earned the right to enter the highest honor grade level, which would enable her to go out of prison to college.

In the year that has passed since she was acquitted of murder, Miss Little said she has seldom thought about the sexual assault and the slaying of Allgood.

"The only time it crosses my mind is when somebody asks me, and I usually change the subject," she said, changing the subject.

Planetarium Has Space Art

NEW YORK (AP) — On show until September at the American Museum-Hayden Planetarium is an exhibition of the "space art" of Rick Sternbach, a prominent illustrator of both science fiction and fact. The exhibit consists of 20 of his paintings, mostly gouaches, futuristic visions glowing with gem-like colors.

Sternbach's illustrations have appeared in a variety of periodicals and books, including Analog, Astronomy and Science Digest. The exhibition is being held in conjunction with "The Universe of Science Fiction," a summer course at the Planetarium.

Office Copier Combats Crime

BURBANK, Calif. (AP)—Police here have discovered a new crime-fighting aid—the office copier.

A store owner in the city made copies on her Xerox machine of some hand-made jewelry. A few weeks later, robbers entered her store and stole the pieces.

Browsing through a neighborhood chain store, the lady spotted her jewelry on display. She pointed out to police that the distinctive marking that showed on the copiers matched those on the jewelry. Burbank detectives soon arrested three men, who were found guilty of armed robbery and fencing stolen property.

The chain store was found to be innocent and the lady recovered her jewelry.

LOG HOME

SWINK, Okla. (UPI) — The oldest residence still standing in Oklahoma is the Chief's Old House.

The two-story log home was erected in 1832-33. It is located on U.S. 70 about two miles northeast of this southeast Oklahoma town.

Sea Nettles Study Has Varied Goals

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — One University of Maryland researcher's outlook for sea nettles this year is good. That's bad for humans. But another researcher's outlook is also good, and that might some day save lives.

The two researchers are David G. Cargo, a 51-year-old associate with the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory, and Dr. Joseph W. Burnett, a specialist in dermatology with the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

Their work, which continues despite an ever-present lack of funds, involves a three-pronged scientific attack on what to most people is nothing but a nuisance.

The poisonous sea nettle has caused problems for residents of the Chesapeake Bay area at least since colonial times. They sting swimmers, water skiers and watermen, clog boat engines and factory pumps, and work their slimy way into fishing nets and crab pots. And Cargo, who is responsible for monitoring the jelly-like, tentacled creatures, thinks the temperature and salinity of the bay this summer will bring the nettles out in force.

A bumper crop of nettles can mean millions of dollars a day in lost revenue to Maryland and Virginia resorts and watermen, so Cargo's prediction will not make many people happy.

But when Burnett predicts "an antivenom, topical agent and theoretically, control" of nettles, the outlook brightens.

Each sea nettle has a blob-like top, six or seven inches in diameter, and about 50 tentacles ranging from four to six feet long. In those tentacles the nettle stores its sting.

Burnett and others are convinced that when a nettle comes in contact with a human, it fires a tiny dart at great speed with a small dose of one of many toxins.

"Man is an inadvertent victim," Burnett says, "so the question becomes, 'Is it possible to change man's response?'"

After seven years of studying the nettle's anatomy, Burnett thinks the answer is yes. His work is now at the stage of extracting and refining the nettle's toxin for injection into test animals and the subsequent production of antibodies.

While there is no documented evidence that the sting of a nettle has ever proven fatal, Burnett's research could some day prove life saving on two fronts.

First, the sea nettle is related to the sea wasp, a rare animal found off the shores of Australia that kills two or more people every year. Outside Maryland, the only research comparable to that of Burnett's is being conducted by Australians.

Secondly, in working with the nettle toxin, Burnett and another researcher found it had much the same effect on a dog's heart as digitalis, a drug given humans suffering from congestive heart failure.

"We found it had an effect on the transport of calcium, which is needed for nerve and muscle transport in the heart," Burnett explained. "It definitely affects calcium transport, much like digitalis. While I can't say now exactly where that will lead us, it's got to be an important discovery."

Burnett does not set a timetable for development of a vaccine or toxoid, nor does he foresee a mass immunization program once it is developed.

"We might help solve the problem of bay watermen, or divers in Florida or the Australians with a vaccine," he said. "But there's no reason why we couldn't come up with some topical agent, or ointment, to be applied after a person is stung."

"We know now that we're not just going to get rid of the nettle," Burnett added. "The third part of our program is the possibility of using jet streams of water or other methods to keep them away from swimmers."

"And it could be just a matter of delaying their life cycle — six weeks would do it for bay swimmers. But I can theoretically see control."

Cotton Researchers Looking For Cheap Flame Resistant Process

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Researchers at Cotton Incorporated explore a narrow path in their search for a process that will add flame resistance qualities to children's sleepwear without adding $1 to every pair of cotton pajamas. "It's not easy," said Leonard Smith, associate director of fire retardance research at the organization, which conducts market research for cotton farmers.

Whatever process is used, he said, "has got to be stable at the temperature of a household iron — about 450 degrees Fahrenheit — and yet it has to react with the cotton at twice that temperature — the temperature of a match."

Textile plants have an adequate process now which involves applying a phosphorous-nitrogen compound to cotton. The process forms a polymer inside the cotton fiber which reacts to prevent the cotton from burning. However, it requires expensive equipment and chemicals and adds as much as a $1 to the cost of sleepwear items.

"It takes 30 to 45 cents worth of chemicals per pound of fabric," said Smith. "So by the time you've treated several thousand yards of fabric, you've really spent some money."

Flame-retardance standards were imposed by the federal Consumer Products Safety Commission in 1973 and expanded in 1975 to cover sizes up to 14 — the size worn by many

Trial Date Set For Assailant

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The trial of Bennett Masel, 21, charged with assaulting Sen. Henry Jackson during his Wisconsin presidential primary campaign, will begin Oct. 12.

Masel is accused of spitting at the Washington Democrat during a March 30 campaign stop at an airport.

Masel's lawyer asked Tuesday that the trial in U.S. District Court coincide with a congressional recess so Jackson could be subpoenaed.

U.S. Magistrate Barbara Crabb granted Masel permission to go to Kansas City later this month to attend the Republican National Convention as a correspondent for a Yippie newspaper.

When the standards were first published, cotton's share of the children's sleepwear market plummeted from 77 per cent to 7 per cent, Smith said. Consumers turned to lightweight polyesters, many of which pass the fire retardance standards without treatment. Other polyesters are treated with a substance called Tris to gain the firefighting quality.

Some researchers say Tris may have questionable properties. Dr. Arlene D. Blum, a Stanford University biochemist, said during a speech in Charlotte earlier this summer that there is a "possibility that Tris is a very harmful substance," and may be carcinogenic — capable of causing cancer.

However, she said no cases of human ailment have been traced to Tris. An earlier account of her speech said Tris was used with cotton as well, but Smith said Tris has never been used with cotton because it could not be applied in durable fashion.

Cotton has made a comeback of sorts in some adult-oriented markets, such as clothing for firemen, because of comfort factors and because of an objectionable melting quality in some polyesters, according to Smith.

Smith said Cotton Incorporated, which is financed by cotton growers to advance the cause of cotton, has tested hundreds of compounds in an exploration for a lower-cost process.

A potential candidate which does not require the use of as many chemicals and which is applied by standard textile finishing equipment will be given mill tests later this year, he said.

Foam Chips For Those Oil Spills

NEW YORK (AP) — Mini sponges of foam may hold the answer to soaking up large ocean oil spills, according to a story in Modern Plastics.

It says Ocean Design Engineering of Costa Mesa, Calif., has designed and fabricated a system using polyurethane foam chips to soak up oil.

"The system reportedly can collect 50,000 gallons hourly using 3.6 million buoyant foam chips which are distributed over a 80-foot-wide spill area," it says.

Denies Romance With Defector

CINCINNATI (AP) — A wealthy Cincinnati businessman has denied reports that his daughter was involved in the defection of 17-year-old Russian diver Sergei Nemtsanov and the diver's lawyer has confirmed the denial.

Richard Lindner, president of Thriftway, Inc., a local supermarket chain, issued a statement Tuesday night following speculation that romantic involvement with an American female diver had influenced Nemtsanov's decision to defect.

Lindner's daughter, Carol, 21, was a diver at Indiana University and finished seventh in the U.S. Olympic Trials in Long Beach, Calif. in June. She was in Montreal for the Olympic Games.

Miss Lindner's uncle, Carl Lindner, is publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The statement said: "There have been numerous rumors that my daughter was in some way connected with the defection of Russian diver Sergei Nemtsanov. She met him at an international diving meet at Fort Lauderdale in June, and was hostess along with my wife and me at a party which he attended with divers from several other countries.

Elizabeth Ray Has News Role At Convention

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Ray will cover the Republican National Convention for Genesis magazine.

"We want her to talk to as many people as she can, get interviews with the people she knows," said Genesis publisher Norman Hill in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Hill refused to say how much Genesis will pay Miss Ray, the Capitol Hill secretary who rose from obscurity when she contended that she had been hired by Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, only to provide him with sexual favors.

But Hill said, "She'll carry a tape recorder everywhere she goes and she'll write it out in longhand. She can't type, y'know."

Hill said Miss Ray's article will appear in the December issue of Genesis and that the magazine's November issue will feature pictures of Miss Ray posing nude.

Andre Previn To Prepare Series

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Andre Previn, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra's new music director, will write and star in a series of eight programs to be produced by WQED-TV, the local Public Broadcasting System outlet.

The series will be aired nationally by PBS and will include programs from the symphony's regular series at Heinz Hall, as well as educational programs.

Target air date is early 1977, pending final approval by Alcoa of its $550,000 grant to underwrite the series.

Previn did a series for the British Broadcasting Corp. while conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra. The BBC series won the 1972 British Critics Award for Music Theaters.

Green Seeks Curb Govm't Size

By DAVID B. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Looking back over the past two years, House Speaker Jimmy Green said he is happy that he had the chance to lead one branch of the General Assembly during one of the toughest bienniums in the state's history.

Now, he wants to head the other legislative branch — the Senate — for the next two bienniums. He is running against seven other persons for Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. Two persons are seeking Republican nomination.

Jimmy Green is a businessman, farmer, tobacco warehouse owner and veteran politician. A father of two girls and a boy, Green has spent the last 16 of his 55 years as a legislator, all in the House except for a two-year stint in the Senate.

"Had I been able to select a period in my active public life that have served as speaker of the North Carolina House, I couldn't possibly have selected a time that would have presented such a challenge as the 1975 session," Green said in a recent interview.

Every year except 1957, the state has had a surplus budget at the end of the year and in 1957 the balance was zero, he said. Last year, the legislature faced a $290 million shortage, just one year after having a $300 million surplus, he said.

The reversal was caused by high unemployment in the state, he said. "We had a real depression in North Carolina and the country in 1974 and 1975," he said.

Candidate Green talks about money issues more than anything else. "There isn't any question that the prime consideration of the people of the state is their pocketbooks, the state of the economy," he said.

Green notes with pride that under his leadership, the House Base Budget Committee went through the state budget line by line and came up with cuts of $129 million.

He also points with pride to the 1976 special session when he was instrumental in the legislative leadership's coming up with a pay raise plan of 4 per cent plus $300 for teachers and state workers. Added to fringe benefits such as added sick leave and higher insurance payments, the average teacher was given better than a 10 per cent raise, he said.

Green wants to curb the growth in the size of government. "I don't think government has to be bigger to be better. Bureaucracy breeds bureaucracy... we can be overcome with bureaucracy. Everybody can't work for North Carolina; North Carolina can't employ everybody," he said.

"What we need is some sound, prudent business judgment about how we are going to spend this $6.8 billion we're spending. I believe there's enough money there to provide a high level of service to the people of North Carolina. . . I think we can pay state workers and school teachers better than states that are on an equal basis with us economically," he said.

pointed on the basis of ability rather than political favor.

Green said his philosophy as a public servant is simple: "I'm a taxpayer...it just so happens that I'm a legislator. It just so happens that I became speaker of the House. I feel a strong sense of duty to look at all of these reams of paper with dollar figures on them because I know whose money that is. I know where it came from because I made contributions to it.

"If we're going to, by law, extract that money from you and your neighbor, we ought to be most diligent about the way we spend it."

Green speaks in a low gravelly voice, but it has grown even more gravelly and lower in the course of the long campaign with its countless speeches and chicken dinners.

"People are just weary of government. They're just tired of being told they've got to pay more taxes and fill out more forms and of being needed... People are just weary of government needing them all the time," he says quietly through a cloud of blue cigarette smoke.

A native of Halifax County, Va., Green moved to Clarkton to begin his working life. He was a marine during World War II, participating in the Iwo Jima invasion as a machine gunner.

Limiting state spending would be better than changing the tax structure, the conservative politician said.

"North Carolina has just, I hope, recovered from one of the worst depressions we've ever experienced. This is no time to be rocking the boat and talking about adding taxes. I don't think we need any additional taxes."

But, "if the economy continues to improve and move ahead, and if there are inequities in our tax law, certainly we should address ourselves to those inequities because I'm one of those who believes that everybody ought to pay his fair share of the taxes," he said.

Green favors repeal of the inventory tax, which he believes has stunted industrial growth. He also advocates efforts to raise the industrial wage, but warns that it cannot be so high that agriculture is deprived of workers.

"I don't want to see industry take over the agriculture area. Producing food and fiber are equally important to us as anything we do," he said.

Green opposes the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution because he fears it would open a Pandora's box. He also favors the death penalty in the belief it would deter crime, if it is used.

Green also said the people would support spending more money to increase prison space. "The people want these criminals locked up."

The recent endorsement of Green by the political action arm of the North Carolina Association of Educators created a storm of protest with some local groups rejecting that and endorsing other candidates. Opponents said Green would not give education a fair shake, a complaint he denies.

Green has called for lower teacher-pupil ratios and the hiring of additional teacher aides, especially in the lower grades.

Overall, Green says the government must listen. If elected he said, "I'll do the best I can. I'll listen to them (the people) more hours a day than most public servants I've observed in my lifetime."

$6,442 Given ECU Project

The East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education has received a $6,442 award from the N.C. Humanities Committee for a project involving eastern North Carolina.

The project, "The Nature of Localism and Its Impact on Man and Society in Eastern North Carolina," will bring together ECU faculty from the humanities departments and citizens in several communities in the eastern region.

Coordinators of the project are Steven Alexander and Richard Morin of ECU's Office of Non-Credit Programs. According to Alexander, the idea for the project originated with Karl Rodabaugh, assistant professor of history with the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

Prof. Rodabaugh, a specialist in Southern U.S. history, suggested the project as a practical and beneficial way of examining the unique manner in which the South has preserved its regional identity despite urbanization and industrialization.

One of the most striking characteristics of the South as a region has been its localistic orientation, an attachment to its own land and people. This localism is thought to be largely responsible for the continued preservation of the South's regional integrity.

At a conference to be held at ECU in November, ECU professors representing the fields of history, sociology, anthropology, psychology, economics, political science and geography will meet with a cross-section of community representatives to develop a tentative statement on the role of eastern North Carolina's localism in the shaping of local social, economic and political institutions. An attempt will be made to determine past, present and future public priorities and policies on the local, state and federal levels.

"Following the conference, a project steering committee will oversee the organization of town meetings in several small communities to discuss dimensions of localism and to select current local public policy issues related to the general topics of discussion," said Rodabaugh.

"After all town meetings have occurred, the project steering committee will assess the results of the project and prepare a report to be disseminated widely in the communities where the town meetings took place."

The aim of the project, he said, is to develop a broad understanding of localism and to establish "public awareness of the relationship of localism" and a community's priorities and policies.

Ultimately, an important result of the project might be the establishment of an ECU Center for the Study of Localism in American Life, Alexander noted.

Bats Congregating In Roanoke Rapids

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — For some Roanoke Rapids citizens, life has become a living horror story.

Parts of the town have become infested with bats. The creatures swarm in the evening and terrorize those who venture outdoors. Some residents have reported the bats coming into their homes.

"It's kind of dangerous for us to sit out on the porch. They sweep under the shelter and make us think they're going to land on us," said Vernon Murphy, 56. "They've never bitten us, but we're afraid they might," he said.

Maggie Midgett, a city council member, said the town has always had some bats, but reports of excessive activity began last weekend. It was not known if the bats were a health hazard, she said.

Ernest Little, a city building inspector, said the bats apparently are congregating mostly in the attics of homes that were built long ago by the textile mills and now are individually owned.

"They act like they want to dive down, maybe light on you or bite you," Little said.

State agriculture experts have told town officials that mothballs will help repel the bats and burning a light in the attic in the daytime will help keep them out. But, the best method of dealing with the bats is to wait until they fly out at night then seal up the holes and cracks the animals use, the experts said.

Whatever the reason, the bats still frighten the Murphys:

"Saturday night one of them was swarming around my wife. She tried to fight him off and he finally worked down low enough to land on her leg. She was in such a shock...I thought she was having a heart attack."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, responding to General Motors' restoration of its dividend to its pre-recession level.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose more than a point in the early going, and gainers took a one-sided lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

General Motors announced after the NYSE close Tuesday it was raising its quarterly dividend back to the 85-cent-a-share level that prevailed until a year and a half ago.

In the midst of the auto industry slump that accompanied the recession, the nation's largest manufacturer had cut the payout to 60 cents.

GM shares, which jumped 1 1/2 Tuesday, backed off 1/4 to 69 1/2 in early trading today.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 8.07 to 990.33.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than a 2-1 margin among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index rose 48 to 55.61.

Big Board volume picked up to 18.50 million shares.

COMPUTER TALKS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A talking computer is being used by Civil Service here to aid its blind employees.

The experimental program makes it possible for workers to get information from a Honeywell computer in audible as well as printed form. This is accomplished by transmitting electronic impulses from the computer to a voice synthesizer which constructs words. Past methods for supplying computer information were printouts, video-display and braille for the blind. The six-month test is funded in part by a grant from the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Farmville Merchants Back Downtown Improvement Work

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—A poll of 81 merchants in Farmville's downtown area taken by the Chamber of Commerce shows that all are in favor of downtown improvements by the town, the Chamber reported to the Town Commissioners last night.

It was reported by the Downtown Improvement Committee that the area behind the stores on the east side of the 100 block of North Main Street is being surveyed by McDavid Associates to see what can be done about offstreet parking. "This area is more difficult to develop," Committee Chairman Eli Joyner said, "because it's owned and leased by many different people and used as a loading zone by many. Much of it is already paved, however."

Beautification of the area behind the stores on the west side of the 100 block of South Main Street will soon be planned," he said. Preparations for paving this area are being done.

The Commissioners enacted an ordinance to make the portion of Grimmersburg Street between Davis Drive and the fork where Grimmersburg and Wilson Street meet, one way between 7:30 and 8:30 each schoolday morning to facilitate the flow of traffic in the area which now, with the opening of Farmville Middle School, has three schools within a few blocks. The plan was suggested by the Farmville School Advisory Council.

The low bid of $42,125.31 by Mercer and Sons for the installation of water line on Highway 258 from the Farmville corporate limits to Horton's Corner was approved and the town budget was amended to accommodate the expenditure until Clean Water money from the state can be made available in 1977.

The sending of a letter to Carolina Telephone and Telegraph stating the town's intention to foot the bill for putting wire underground in the downtown improvement project area was approved. The cost to the town will be in the neighborhood of $63,000, a letter from Carolina said.

Estimate No. 2 for payment to F & G Construction Company of $36,750.60 for the Lewis Stores water extension was approved. The Commissioners agreed to pay the replacement cost of glasses broken by former police officer Mike Hamill while he was chasing "a suspicious person." Chief Marsdon Cannady reported that Hamill reported the incident the morning after it allegedly happened. The Commissioners asked that the optometrist's bill be sent directly to the town.

Town Administrator W. A. Martin was given the go-ahead to advertise for the sale of a 1973 Ford four-door sedan used by the Police Department. A resolution was adopted directing Martin to apply for county public health funds for mosquito control.

Building Inspector H. P. Norman was asked to check and make a decision about whether a ditch on property owned by Walter Bullock is the town's responsibility to tile and fill. It was agreed to rent up to nine poles from Pitt & Greene

CHAPEL HILL — Regular season champ North Carolina pushed over two fourth inning runs to tie the score, then came up with single runs in the fifth and sixth to take a 4-2 victory over East Carolina last night in the first round of the Summer League playoffs.

Louisburg downed Methodist, also by a 4-2 score, with former Rose High School player J. C. Daniels providing a key two-run homer for the Hurricanes.

This afternoon at 3 p.m., East Carolina was to meet Methodist, while Louisburg and Carolina collided in a 5 p.m. The winner of the first game was then to meet the loser of the 5 p.m. game at about 7:30 for the right to go to the finals tomorrow. For East Carolina to get to the finals, they would have to win two games today.

The Bucs broke out on top in the second inning, scoring both of their runs. With one away, Bobby Supel singled and moved up on a two-out single by Pete Paradossi.

Supel, on third, pulled a double steal with Paradossi, scoring the first Pirate run. Tar Heel catcher Bernie Menapace overthrew second on the attempt to get Paradossi, and he moved on to third, then scored when the ball was errored again in center field.

But the Bucs got little after that, as Carolina hurler Blaine Smith limited them to just seven hits and set the Bucs down in order the final four innings.

Only twice the rest of the way did the Pirates get runners as far as second. In the third inning, Macon Moye got a two-out triple, but died at third. Then, in the fifth, Glenn Card doubled, but was struck by a batted ball ending that threat.

Pete Conaty put the Tar Heels just about down in order in the first three innings, allowing just one hit.

But with one out in the fourth, the bubble burst.

Randy Warrick led off with a single to left, and Menapace followed with a single to center. An error on the play let Warrick come all the way home, and Menapace ended up on third, scoring the tying run on a hit by Steve Coats.

In the fifth, the Tar Heels pushed over the go-ahead run. Mike Fox singled with one down and moved up on a hit by Kevin Haerberle. Warrick also got a single, loading the bases. Menapace followed with another single, driving in Fox.

The insurance run came in the sixth. Jim Atkinson singled and stole second. He moved to third on an error on Win Barkley's grounder, then scored on P. J. Gay's hit.

Carolina banged out a total of 13 hits, 12 of them coming in the final five innings. Menapace and Atkinson led the way with three each, and none of the hits were for extra bases.

The loser of the first and third games packs up their gear for the year, while the two survivors meet Thursday for the championship.

Montreal's Problem: What Next For Site

MONTREAL (AP) — The Games are over, the thousands of athletes and spectators are gone. Now Montreal must decide what to do with the Olympic facilities, which barely were ready for use in the recently-concluded two-week spectacle.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister in charge of the Canadian Olympic Installations Board, says that work will continue in order to complete the $788 million Olympic Stadium and pool, the $85 million Olympic Village and the $62 million Velodrome.

"The Board may be in existence for another seven or eight years," Goldbloom says, "until the financial situation is cleared." The "financial situation" includes the $120 to $130 million still to be spent on construction through the next 18 months.

The baseball Expos and Canadian Football League

Alouettes expect to use the Olympic Stadium for their games. The Alouettes had hoped to finish the current season in the 72,000-seat facility, which will have artificial turf installed to replace the natural grass used during the Olympics.

The stadium tower — complete with a retractable roof — will be built, but Goldbloom notes that it hasn't been decided whether to use concrete, as originally planned, or steel in the construction.

"It may take more than a year to get the tower completed," says Goldbloom. The pool will become a municipal facility later this month. Fees similar to those charged for other city pools will be charged.

The Village is being converted into a housing complex, but it will not be a low-income project, nor will it be a luxury condominium, both of which have been suggested. The OIB hopes to have the apartments available to occupants by October.

The Velodrome is ready for use and will host the Canadian cycling championships August 12-14.

An eight-man committee has been appointed to oversee the use of the Olympic Park. Maurice Custeau will be responsible for booking "attractive events" into the various sites.

None of those events can be as attractive as the Olympics but the Province of Quebec and the city of Montreal will try to fill the Olympic sites as often as possible to help cut into the huge deficit caused by the Games.

Six Released By Falcons

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons have cut their roster to the National Football League 60-player limit by releasing linebacker Pat Curto, a 16th round draft choice from Ohio State, and five free agents.

Others cut Tuesday included wide receiver Troy Salde of Duke, tight end Larry Cunningham of Langston, Okla., defensive back Rollen Smith of Arkansas, running back George Brockington of Alabama A&M, and defensive end Angelo Wells of Morgan State.

Coach Marion Campbell announced he had moved offensive guard Larron Jackson and center Paul Ryszek to offensive tackle to bolster the position which has been hit by injuries.

Starters Brent Adams and rookie Dave Scott were both injured Saturday in the 17-10 preseason loss to Washington, and Len Gotshalk, last year's regular, remains out of action after off-season knee surgery.

Adams will be out four weeks with a shoulder separation. Scott, who also has a shoulder injury, is doubtful for Saturday's contest with Cleveland at Stillwater, Okla.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres have acquired pitcher Tom Griffin from the Houston Astros and will try him in a starting role.

The Astros have been using the 28-year-old right-hander mostly in relief this season. He has a 5-3 record.

Griffin's best season with the Astros was in 1974, when he had a 14-10 record and a 3.54 ERA as a starter. He was hampered by a shoulder injury last season and underwent surgery during the winter.

Yankee Fans Weren't Disappointed As Sluggers Cage Detroit's Bird

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Mark Fidrych is usually the main attraction when he pitches, but the New York Yankees won't be upstaged by the Birdman of Detroit.

The Yankees showed Tuesday night that they also have a flair for showmanship, sprinkling beans on the mound while the reknown "Bird" was performing. While the Yankees fed Fidrych "bird seed", Fidrych was feeding the Yankees fastballs. Both Roy White and Oscar Gamble hit them out of the park, helping New York to a dramatic 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers and their flashy rookie.

"I would have loved to beat the Yankees," said Fidrych. "The crowd didn't come out to see me. They came out to see the Yankees beat me."

Whatever the crowd of 44,909 came out for at Yankee Stadium, they weren't disappointed. They not only got to see their Yankees win, but they also saw Fidrych's showy routine of talking to baseballs, bouncing around the field like a berserk billiard ball and, yes, even eating beans off the mound.

In the other American League games, Kansas City stopped Minnesota 7-1; Cleveland blanked Boston 1-0 in 10 innings; Milwaukee outscored Baltimore 4-2; Oakland whipped the Chicago White Sox 7-3 and California turned back Texas 4-0.

Fidrych, who also gave up a two-run homer to White in the third, suffered only his fourth loss against 11 victories and it marked the first time the flamboyant rookie was defeated when Detroit had scored a run. Royals 7, Twins 1

Sore-legged Hal McRae hobbled around the basepaths with a double and a home run and Buck Martinez added a two-run double to spark Kansas City over Minnesota and snap the Twins' eight-game winning streak.

The victory raised Kansas City's lead in the American League West to 9½ games over the Twins, who had surged into second place the week before.

Indians 1, Red Sox 0
Dennis Eckersley pitched a three-hitter and Tommy Smith drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning as Cleveland ended Boston's four-game winning streak.

Brewers 4, Orioles 2
George Scott drove in two runs on a pair of base hits, leading Milwaukee over Baltimore. The Brewers sewed up the game with a two-run fifth inning that gave them a 3-2 lead. A leadoff double by Von Joshua, a single by Jack Heidemann and a fielder's choice by Robin Yount scored the tying run. The winning run then came home on Scott's single.

A's 7, White Sox 3
Joe Rudi smashed two doubles and a single and drove in two runs to lead Oakland over Chicago. Dick Bosman, 4-0, scattered five hits over five innings and picked up his eighth career victory over the White Sox with relief help from Paul Lindblad and Rollie Fingers, who was credited with his 15th save.

Angels 4, Rangers 0
Paul Hartzell pitched a four-hitter against floundering Texas and journeyman Tommy Davis knocked in two runs as California beat the Rangers. Texas has now lost 21 of its last 26 games to drop from second place to only five games out of the cellar.

Kessinger Outshines Pittsburgh Despite Split With St. Louis

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
Four runs in the last 38 innings, four losses in the last five games for the Pittsburgh Pirates. It seems there are terms in the Lumber Yard.

That's what people were calling the Pirates earlier in the season, when the power-laden lineup was hitting baseballs out of sight and first place wasn't 13 games away. But in the last eight games, three of which have gone extra innings, just 17 Pittsburgh runs have crossed in 83 innings.

Tuesday night, Don Kessinger of St. Louis drove in more runs than the Pirates could manage in their doubleheader, though Pittsburgh managed to beat the Cardinals 2-1 in the opener before dropping the nightcap 4-2.

In the other NL games, Los Angeles nipped Houston 2-0; Cincinnati blanked San Francisco 9-0; Chicago beat Philadelphia 4-0 before the Phillies took the nightcap 8-5; Atlanta topped San Diego 7-3 and New York edged Montreal 9-8.

Pittsburgh's opening-game triumph went to Jim Rooker, who pitched a six-hitter and drove in a seventh-inning run with a sacrifice fly.

Kessinger, who plated the St. Louis run with an eighth-inning double in the opener, drove in all four in the nightcap.

Dodgers 2, Astros 0
The Dodgers' Burt Hooton surrendered two first-inning singles — to Greg Gross and Cesar Cedeno — but didn't permit a hit the rest of the way in recording only his second victory in eight decisions. Both were shutouts.

Bill Buckner drove home Dave Lopes in the fourth and seventh innings for the offensive power as Los Angeles beat Houston for the eighth time in a row and 14th time in 15 games over two seasons. Reds 9, Giants 0

Jack Billingham held San Francisco to three hits and Dave Concepcion drove in three runs as the Reds — winners of 17 in 22 since the All-Star break — blasted the Giants for their seventh consecutive triumph.

Cubs 4-5, Phillies 0-6
A grand-slam homer by Gary Maddox powered Philadelphia past Chicago in the nightcap after the Cubs backed Rick Reuschel's nine-hitter with home runs by rookie Wayne Tyrone and Jerry Morales in the opener.

Braves 7, Padres 3
Atlanta's Clarence Gaston, who had started only two games previously this season, hit two home runs and drove in five in support of Andy Messersmith. "Sometimes I get a little upset about not playing," said Gaston. "When I do, I take extra batting practice and take it out on the ball." Tuesday night, he took his frustration out on San Diego.

Mets 9, Expos 8
Ed Kranepool's 100th career home run, a two-run shot in the eighth inning, lifted the New York over Montreal. The Expos had scored six runs in the seventh and eighth innings to take a 8-7 lead in the wild contest.

Short Gives Views On Baseball In Washington

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Three sports entrepreneurs have told Congress of the many problems and pitfalls of owning a team not belonging to one of the established major leagues.

Each cited the lack of a national television contract for income, high salaries for players and the "minor league" tag put on their club as reasons for losing hundreds of thousands of dollars and, in at least one case, millions.

Testifying Tuesday before the House professional sports committee were John Y. Brown Jr. of the American Basketball Association's Kentucky Colonels, A.E. Burgess of the defunct World Football League's Birmingham Vulcans, and Jay P. Moore of the Cleveland Crusaders in the World Hockey Association.

They followed Bob Short, former baseball owner who moved the Washington Senators to Texas in 1971.

Short said there should be baseball in the nation's capital — a pet project for several congressmen. But he cited several conditions, including a favorable lease and better stadium security, that had to be achieved before such a franchise could become successful.

Brown said he believes professional basketball has a good future now that the ABA and the National Basketball Association have merged. But he recommended that steps be taken to eliminate owners who are not in the sport for the business.

"In the horse business, if you don't make a profit in two of seven years then the burden of proof is on you to prove that it isn't a hobby," he said. "There has to be some burden on the owners to make them operate like a business. You won't survive."

He said that although the NBA has failed as much as the ABA in the past 10 years, "the fact is they had national television and standing among the fans. They had stronger and wealthier owners than we did."

"The whole industry has been distorted by the money being thrown around," he said. "I don't blame it on the players. I blame it on the owners who don't operate like a business." About the short-lived World Football League, Burgess, who was joined by Vulcans former coach and general manager Jack Gotta and part owner Bill Kelce, said the lack of a national television contract during the second year was the principle reason the league failed.

He also said the WFL was "hurriedly and not properly organized."

He said attendance at Birmingham's games dwindled because of the WFL's problems, primarily stemming from the folding of such teams as Chicago, Portland and San Antonio.

Moore, who also is a partner in the Cleveland Indians baseball club, said his club was not successful in Cleveland "because we were in the WHA and not the (older, more established) National Hockey League."

"We were constantly fighting the stigma of not being major league in a city which has the Indians, Browns and the Cavaliers," he said.

In answer to a question, he said the California Seals, an NHL hockey team which has been moved to Cleveland, "will have the overall cost but they can charge more. The NHL seal means something."

MORA, Sweden (AP) — George Tower, a defenseman in the organization of the St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League, has signed with Mora IK of this central Swedish town, 220 miles northeast of Stockholm, the club announced today. Tower, 24, was born in Hartford, Conn.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears of the National Football League have placed two players on the disabled list, club spokesmen announced Tuesday.

Defensive end Roger Stillwell, who has a sprained knee, and safety Craig Clemons will be out for an undetermined number of weeks, spokesmen said. Clemons suffered a jammed toe.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cotton Fitzsimmons, former head coach of the Phoenix Suns and the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association, has been named director of player personnel for the Golden State Warriors. Fitzsimmons will be in charge of scouting and will serve as adviser on player personnel matters, Warriors coach and general manager Al Attles said Tuesday.

Starting in 1971, Fitzsimmons spent four years with the Hawks after two years at the helm of the Suns. He compiled a record of 258-78 in 11 years of college coaching.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitcher Rich Hinton, acquired in a trade last winter which sent Clay Carroll to the Chicago White Sox, has been assigned by the Cincinnati Reds to their Indianapolis farm team.

Hinton, 1-2 with an earned run average of 7.50 in 11 games, was placed on waivers Friday but was not picked up by any other major league club.

He was replaced on the Reds' roster with Manny Sarmiento.

Walker Getting Stiff Test In Mile Event

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After taking the Olympic gold medal in the 1,500-meter race, rangy, long-maned John Walker of New Zealand announced he was "two seconds better ... than last year" when he broke the world mile record in Sweden with a clocking of 3:49.4.

Walker gets a chance to make good his boast tonight when he steps onto the new all-weather track at the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field to stave off the efforts of four sub-3:54 milers.

The Bicentennial Meet of Champions, starting at 7:30 p.m., runs through 11 events.

Among those competing against Walker will be West German Olympians Tom Wessinghage and Paul Heinz Wellman, who won the 1,500 bronze; Eamonn Coughlan, who ran fourth in the Olympic race; Marty Liquori, recovered from the hamstring pull that kept him off the Montreal team, and fellow New Zealander Rod Dixon.

Not testing Walker will be Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, who held the record until the Swedish meet. Tanzanian officials say Bayi cannot run in any race with Walker because New Zealand sent a sports team to South Africa, the same reason why the two men did not meet at the Olympics.

But there will be plenty of Olympic personalities on hand for fans suffering from post-Montreal letdown.

Hasely Crawford of Trinidad, the gold medalist in the 100 meters, will have to protect his title of world's fastest human against Steve Williams, recovered from a pulled hamstring that kept him off the U.S. team despite his world record of 9.9 seconds.

Also in the field will be two dashers hoping to resolve the question of how they might have done had not injury and politics kept them out of the contest.

Houston McTear, the Florida schoolboy who injured his leg before the game, and James Gilkes, whose country, Guyana, left the Olympic village during the African protest, will be joined by Don Quarrie of Jamaica, who won a silver in the 100 and a gold in the 200.

The 400-meter hurdles and the 3,000-meter race will offer new chances for rivalries. The favorites in hurdles are Ed Moses of Morehouse and Mike Shine of Penn State, gold and silver medalists in Montreal. But NCAA champ Quentin Wheeler, fifth in Montreal, and former world record-holder Jim Boulding will make it a good contest.

Lasse Viren, the Finnish policeman who won both the 5,000 and 10,000 gold in Munich and Montreal, will be up against Dick Quax of New Zealand.

Viren nipped Quax by four-tenths of a second in the Olympic 5,000.

Bronze medalist Dwight Stones and fellow Olympian Bill Jankunis will highlight the high jump. Stones holds the world record of 7-7 1/4 feet, and Jankunis has cleared 7-5 1/2.

Other events are the pole vault and 800-and 400-meters for men and for women.

Quarterbacks Beware Of Furness

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — If preseason games counted in computing National Football League statistics, Steve Furness would be well on his way to achieving a lofty goal.

"Getting 14 quarterback sacks by the end of the year would please me," said Furness, a fifth-year defensive lineman, during a break in a recent Pittsburgh Steelers workout.

In exhibition victories over the College All-Stars and the New Orleans Saints, the 6-foot-4, 255-pounder has four sacks, as many as any three other members of the Steelers front four.

But that front four provides the major obstacle to Furness achieving his ambition. As the team's fifth defensive lineman, his playing time is usually determined by the condition of the starters.

Furness has been splitting playing time this preseason

KINGMAN IN BELMONT?
ELMONT, N. Y. (AP) — M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets, got a kick out of a baseball fan in the walking enclosure during Belmont Stakes day at Belmont Park here. As the 10 three-year-olds were leaving the saddling ring, the fan said: "Jingman would beat every one of them."

The reference applied to slugger Dave Kingman who the previous night in Los Angeles had hit three home runs to snap a Met losing streak.

with All-Pro tackle Joe Greene, who is recovering from a pinched shoulder nerve that sidelined him much of last season.

"It takes a freak accident where someone gets hurt for me to get a chance to get in there," Furness admitted. "Our front four is the most consistent in football. It's hard to do anything about that."

When Greene missed four games last year and saw only limited action in four others, Furness stepped right in.

He started six regular-season games and the first-round playoff game against Baltimore, and ended up third on the team with 6 1/2 quarterback sacks, behind tackle Ernie Holmes and end Dwight White.

"Greene and White helped me with my technique," said Furness. "I'd say that my technique is a combination of theirs."

A fifth-round pick from Rhode Island in 1972, Furness spent most of his first season on the taxi squad.

"If it wasn't for the special teams, I don't think I would have been on the team that year," he said. "I had to refine my skills."

He became a special team regular in 1973 and 1974 and got one start in that span. Although he is used as both an end and tackle, the Steelers like to keep him inside because of his great strength.

"Even if I'm not starting, I don't get down on myself," said Furness, who led all Pittsburgh linemen with 10 tackles in last year's Super Bowl victory over Dallas. "I know I have the ability."

Yu Li Cullivan came to the heart of Bluegrass country to realize her dream of becoming a jockey. But she faces one hurdle.

She's never been on a horse. She says she'd been dreaming for months about becoming a jockey and decided last week to make her move. She boarded a plane last Friday in Iowa and flew to Bluegrass Airport here.

Wearing a new pair of blue-jeans and borrowed cowboy boots, the 5-foot mother of three at least looked like a jockey.

She says she's still nervous around horses "because they're so big" and she was afraid at first of being kicked.

But then she saw a horse up close for the first time, touched it, and already feels more comfortable about her ambition. "I feel different now," she said. "I feel the horse is very honest with me."

What gave the 33-year-old native of Taiwan the idea she could become a jockey without ever having ridden a horse?

She just decided to take the chance on making her dream come true, despite opposition from her husband, from whom she's separated. She feels she's being guided by a higher force, a holy spirit, she said.

"I think about it day and night," she said of her dream. "The horse's hair shining and me in jockey's colors riding him."

The dream apparently was strong enough to send her to a place where she knew no one — and had no idea how to get started. She said she came here because someone told her there were a lot of horses in Lexington.

She said she almost didn't get from Cedar Rapids to Lexington because she had to change planes at Chicago and didn't know how.

She didn't know where she would stay when she got here, either.

But despite the lack of certainty and her limited financial resources, she doesn't seem too concerned.

"I'm just going to plan day by day," she said.

Committed To ERA Adoption

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Herbert Hyde, 50, is a cigar chomping mountain lawyer who wants to be lieutenant governor. He's outspoken and he knows some of his views are likely to evoke negative responses from all shades of the political spectrum.

To become lieutenant governor, Hyde must first defeat seven other persons also seeking the Democratic nomination. There are two Republicans in the Aug. 17 primary.

A two-term state representative from Asheville who has also served a term in the state Senate, Hyde carries a copy of the state constitution in his pocket for ready reference. During legislative debate, Hyde, a Baptist, would quote from the constitution and the Bible with equal vigor, his oratory sprinkled with homespun humor and downhome tales.

During the 1975 legislative session, Hyde assumed the controversial role of managing the House of Representatives effort to win approval of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The House narrowly rejected the measure after a long and heated fight.

He said he's still committed to the ERA. "There are those people—and I respect them, bless their hearts — that take the other views and they can't reconcile themselves to me across that issue," he said in a recent interview. Losing votes is a price of integrity: "You don't back away from convictions just because it will take away votes," he said.

A 1954 graduate of New York University law school, Hyde is thoughtful and studious in his approach to issues. He will respond to any question from newsmen or the public and he works up long and detailed position papers on important issues. When, for example the Senate Rules Committee was recently considering powers the lieutenant governor should have, Hyde had prepared for the panel a detailed 18-page report on his views.

While liberals would delight in his position on the death penalty—"I'm opposed to it"—hard line law-and-order people would revel in his view on prisons—sentences without parole and inmates assigned to jobs.

He personally opposes capital punishment, but Hyde recognized that most North Carolinians and probably most legislators favor it. Since it is seemingly destined to be enacted by the 1977 General Assembly, Hyde said he wants to be sure it is a good law.

On dealing with crime, Hyde has proposed that punishment be swift, impartial and certain. Under current law, there is harshness and coddling of criminals, with prisoners eligible for parole after serving a fourth of their sentences, he said.

Under his plan, judges, policemen and prison guards would have little discretion. There would be fixed sentences for specific crimes and the parole board would be abolished, but the sentences would be shorter since the entire term would be served. Judges would still have the option of being lenient on first offenders and young people, though.

"I think prisoners ought to work...I think work is rehabilitative in itself," he said. Of his punishment plan, he said, "Get it to where everybody is fed from the same spoon then these people (critics of the system) will see we're being treated alike."

Sexual attacks, robberies and other crimes inside prisons must be stopped, he said, calling for single cells if necessary. "Of all the places on earth where there ought not to be crime, it's inside the prison walls," he said.

Noting that North Carolina's average industrial wage is the lowest in the United States, Hyde proposed a plan that would encourage industry to give pay raises. If a company gave its employees a general pay increase of 10 per cent, then it should be allowed a credit of perhaps one-half per cent on its income tax, Hyde said.

"This would give them (companies) an incentive to raise the wage of workers who would then spend more money and there would be more sales taxes and income taxes coming in," Hyde said.

North Carolina's low rate of unionization is partly responsible for the state's low industrial wage, Hyde said, but he defended the state's right to work law, saying only the governor should have the power to extract money from an unwilling citizen. (Right to work laws forbid union shops which require all workers to pay union dues even if they're not union members).

The sales tax on food "hits the poor, particularly the older people on fixed incomes, harder than the affluent," he said in opposition to it. But, "until I can find a replacement for it, I'm not going to get out there and say I'm going to have this repealed. It's a hard thing to work out."

The fairest tax, he said is the graduated income tax combined with a property tax. He said, however, the income tax would be fairer if it were increased some for the higher incomes.

Hyde also said he favors raising the 6 per cent corporate income tax and giving industry credit for the inventory tax paid to local government.

Chewing on his cigar stub, then pausing to light it, Hyde reflected on North Carolina's history and said it is a progressive state. It wouldn't enter the union for two years after George Washington was president because it insisted on having the Bill of Rights, he said.

A father of six, Hyde said he learned to play the banjo by listening to others. Also, he says he likes to square dance as well as clog, a form of dancing peculiar to the mountains.

If elected, Hyde says he has no plans or ambitions beyond lieutenant governor. But, he admits, his thinking could change.

Doctor Joins County's Mental Health Center

Victor L. Slater, M.D., has joined the Pitt County Mental Health Center, Greenville, as medical director responsible for clinical services. He assumed his duties August 2.

Dr. Slater comes to the Pitt County Mental Health Center from Gorgas Hospital, Canal Zone, where he was Chief of Psychiatric Services and Chief of the Division of Mental Health for the Canal Zone.

"We are pleased to have such a psychiatrist as Dr. Slater with his wide area of experience join our staff," said Dr. Stephen K. Creech, Pitt County Mental Health Center Area Director. "He will be working full-time in all areas of mental health and will be of great assistance to the people of Pitt County in helping us assure the people of quality mental health services."

Dr. Slater, a native of Geneva, Ohio, graduated from Northville High School, Northville, Michigan in 1943. After serving three years in the U. S. Navy Medical Corps, he entered Michigan State University where he received his B.S. Degree in Chemistry in 1949.

He did graduate study for two years for the University of Michigan in Bacteriology and then enrolled at Wayne State University Medical School where he received his medical degree in 1956.

He was at the University of Texas for his rotating internship and spent two years at Duke University Medical School as a psychiatry resident and one year at the University of Miami Medical School as a psychiatric resident.

Dr. Slater has served as an assistant professor in psychiatry at the University of Miami School of Medicine as a full-time faculty member. He has considerable study in the field of alcoholism.

He is a member of several professional organizations, including being a Fellow of the American Psychiatric Society. He has had several papers published on various psychiatric disorders and currently has three studies in progress.

He and his wife have three children.

Girl Cadet Dropped Out

STANFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Of the 119 women in the U.S. Military Academy's first class of females, 13 have resigned, including Cindy Love, 17, a recent graduate of West Stanly High School.

"There wasn't anything I found wrong, it just wasn't for me," she says. She plans to enroll this fall at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The resignations occurred the summer program of military training and physical conditioning at West Point. An academy spokesman said reasons listed were homesickness, no interest in a military career, and parental pressure to attend West Point. Those are the same reasons the men have been giving for years, the spokesman said.

There were 95 resignations among the 1,366 male cadets in the summer program. So that about one in nine women and one in 14 men resigned.

Miss Love enrolled at the academy on July 7 and was back home in this Stanly County town two weeks later.

The first day of basic drills was "a real shock," she says. "I tried to keep on smiling and thought it couldn't get much much worse."

A few days later "it started getting rough." Keeping in stride was difficult for her because "The boys' legs was so long and it was hard for me to keep up."

Her company commander was "real understanding" when she decided to leave the academy. Her parents were not disappointed or angry.

Not all parts of her experience were bad, she says. "It was so formal, so well organized, and the officers were very well trained and knew what they were doing, even though they were tough on us at times. They really stressed discipline, and that's what I liked."

FORMER GOVERNORS
OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The only two Republicans to serve as governor of Oklahoma now serve the state in the U.S. Senate.

Henry Bellmon, who was elected the state's first Republican governor in 1962, became the first Republican in the Senate in two decades when he was first elected in 1968. He was re-elected in 1974.

Dewey F. Bartlett, who succeeded Bellmon as governor, was elected to the Senate in 1972.

Found Robbery Suspects Soon After Holdup

PRINCETON, N.C. (AP) — A woman and two men were arrested and charged 45 minutes after a bank was held up Tuesday in this Johnston County town in eastern North Carolina.

A man and a woman armed with pistols escaped with an undisclosed amount from an office of the Branch Banking & Trust Co. Trooper J.E. Ramsey arrested three residents of Washington, D.C., after stopping their car. The Princeton police chief, Clovis Ray Talton, said they apparently had driven into neighboring Wayne County and then circled back into Johnston County.

The FBI said that Barbara Ann James, 38, and Delbert Leroy Jackson, the same age, had been charged with bank robbery.

It said that James Foxx, 27, was charged with receiving money stolen in the robbery.

Pair Abandon Mississippi Canoe Trip

MEMPHIS (AP) — In this, the Bicentennial Year, it seems everyone is out roaming the countryside on some sort of pilgrimage and the Mississippi River is getting more than its share of attention.

The Mississippi has been challenged this year by everyone from swimmers—the most notable of whom swam from Minneapolis to New Orleans, a distance he estimated as 1,776 miles, to canoeists.

But when their canoe trip from New York to New Orleans was beset by mosquitoes, storms and sunburn, Tom Donahue and Jim Vendryes had a ready solution: They quit.

"The trip's been fantastic fun," said Vendryes. "But it was turning into nothing but hard work with the heat and paddling all day."

Inspired by a newspaper article describing a river voyage by canoe, Donahue, 23, and Vendryes, 22, saved their money, bought a canoe, and the day after their graduation from St. Bonaventure College, set out from Olean, N.Y., — head for New Orleans.

While others have attempted similar adventures as a salute to the Bicentennial Year, the New Yorkers—neither of whom had ever canoed, or knew anything about rivers, or been farther south than Cincinnati—were doing it for fun.

After a brief test run in a lake, they put their vessel in the Allegheny River and began paddling toward the Ohio River.

But for 981 "long miles" down the Ohio, the pair, hampered by a slow current, felt like they were still on the lake.

Dreams of a swift-running Mississippi spurred them on, but the Mississippi was running about as slow as the Ohio. It took them three days to paddle from Cairo, Ill., to Tiptonville, Tenn., a distance of about 100 miles. One day they made only 12 miles.

They pulled their canoe out of the river at Tiptonville, rented a van in Memphis and after nearly 10 weeks on the Mississippi set out for New Orleans and the French Quarter by highway.

Unlike Donahue and Vendryes, Bill Brashear of Chapel Hill, N.C., had some experience behind him before he set out—June 17 from Sauk City on the Wisconsin River—on his solo expedition down the Mississippi to New Orleans.

As a Boy Scout and later as a camp counselor at the University of Wisconsin student, had been in canoes, but never on a river.

"As I was drifting along, I saw thundershowers ahead and then around a bend came a tremendous towboat," said Brashear, recounting an experience near Cape Girardeau, Mo. "Then lightning broke loose. A fiber glass canoe is a lightning rod. So I stuck out my paddle to check the water's depth, which measured about a foot and a half."

"On jumping out, I went down to my waist in mud...I managed to pull myself out and ooze ashore messy but safe."

After more than a month of paddling and 950-miles, Brashear decided to end his trip at Memphis. He dropped anchor and put his 17-foot fiber glass canoe in the protective custody of Memphis Yacht Club while visiting some Memphis friends.

"Thirty-seven days is enough," he said. "New Orleans will have to be on another agenda."

T. Dupree Jr. had delayed sentencing the Arringtons so they could be together last month for the birth of their first child. Mrs. Arrington held her child, wrapped in a blue blanket, as Dupree imposed the sentences.

Saying he was sympathetic, Dupree said he still decided on imposing the harsh sentence in hopes of it deterring others from participating in smuggling illicit drugs.

The Arringtons were among 10 persons, including Atkinson, tried on charges of conspiring to smuggle heroin into the

Pigs On Treadmill To Help The Human Joggers

HENRY THE JOGGER, one of 50 pigs at the University of California at San Diego, jogs on a treadmill for up to 25 miles a week as part of cardiovascular studies. (UPI Photo)

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Pigs are run 25 miles a week on a treadmill to help doctors better prescribe how much jogging is safe for humans.

Dr. Colin Bloor, acting chairman of the Department of Pathology at the University of California, San Diego, said pigs are ideal to use in cardiovascular research because their cardiovascular systems are so similar to man's.

Some of the laboratory animals are equipped to display symptoms of coronary artery disease in an effort to determine whether human heart patients would benefit from a regular jogging program, and if so, how much jogging.

Radioactive particles lodged in the coronary vessels graphically reveal the exercise impact on the heart. Autopsies conducted after the pigs are through with the experiment give insight into changes in the heart, skeletal muscle, and liver.

Dogs once were the basic animal for cardiovascular research, according to Bloor, but it was found pigs were better because they reacted more like humans in one respect.

They are basically lazy. They had to be coaxed a lot put in their miles on the treadmill.

Dogs were too eager to run. Bloor said "the coronary arteries are anatomically similar and the blood flow distribution is similar," in humans and in pigs.

Alcohol is formed as a result of the fermentation of sugar.

Before the pigs enter the university lab they're sent to a farm for three months of training.

After the first two weeks the non-runners are dropped from the experiment. During their farm-training period the pigs run on a merry-go-round contraption, to get them accustomed to running in place.

Bloor observes that some of the pigs quickly get wise to the fact that if they stand near the center of the merry-go-round they don't have to run as much.

Once brought to the laboratory, the pigs are run 6 miles a day on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and 3½ miles on Tuesday and Thursday. Readings similar to an electrocardiogram are taken before and after the three or four months the animal is in the running program.

Bloor said one of the objectives of the five-year research project, financed by the National Institutes of Health, "is to determine how much disease can exist in a heart's blood vessels before it impedes the flow."

The research also may provide guidelines for exercise limits based upon certain heart conditions, and determine whether the administering of drugs can increase the capacity of the heart.

One of the early findings has been that blood flow through the heart doesn't change, even to the point of exhaustion, and no evidence has been found that an animal collapses because its heart is failing. Rather, it is the skeletal muscles that are failing.

Bloor said one example of this in humans is the fact that a person will likely suffer muscle cramps in some part of his body well before his heart has been taxed to the maximum in strenuous physical exercise. It will be another three or four years, however, before the researchers can come up with some specific conclusions. Then it may be possible to give a person a prescribed limit of exercise based upon a physical examination. Bloor said no such firm guidelines presently are available.

Meanwhile, Bloor and his associates will keep leading the UCSD pigs onto the treadmill. And, as Bloor says, "They squeal when they're running, and they squeal when they're not, so I have no idea what their squeals mean."

Geo. Wood Turned His Back On Death Penalty

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — With the exception of Democrat George Wood, all of the seven major candidates for governor of North Carolina favor reinstating the death penalty.

That is only one of several crime-related issues on which the gubernatorial candidates tend to take a hard line.

A poll commissioned last year for the state Department of Public Instruction found that more North Carolinians were worried about crime than any other issue. The candidates have responded to that feeling.

None of them talk very much, if at all, about what some consider the roots of crime: poverty, unemployment, and dissolution of the family unit. They all talk about getting tough with criminals.

One of the top items of their agenda would be reinstating capital punishment in North Carolina with a law that would pass the scrutiny of the Supreme Court.

"I feel we should protect the public against repeated offenders; at the point he's convicted of a capital crime, a person has established a propensity to commit a premeditated murder," said Democrat Thomas Strickland.

"I don't relish the taking of life, but I don't see it as a cruel or unusual punishment for someone who has taken someone else's life; and I think it's worthwhile as a deterrent to crime," said Republican Jacob Alexander.

Wood, for most of his public life, was also a death penalty supporter. He voted for it in the legislature. When he was running for lieutenant governor, earlier this year, he also supported it.

He says his change of heart occurred when he began to consider the governor's authority to commute sentences and spare the lives of condemned prisoners. He is, in effect, their final appeals court.

"It was the hardest decision I ever tried to make. The more I read and studied, the more I realized we were selectively executing people in this country. The weak and the downtrodden and the helpless, the ones the public cares nothing about, are the ones they select to execute," Wood said.

He decided that if elected, he would use his commutation power to insure that no one was executed during his term as governor. First, he said, he would try to persuade the legislature to enact a new law making a mandatory life-imprisonment sentence without parole the punishment for capital crimes.

Democrat Edward O'Herron takes issue with that concept. "If anyone ever imprisoned me for life without parole, the first thing I would do would be to start trying to escape. You have to have hope," he said.

For that reason, O'Herron is not certain he agrees with the candidates who are calling for an end to the paroles system and predetermined sentences for convicted criminals.

"We ought to have fixed sentences," giving the judge some discretion, but not very much," Hunt said. Judges can choose sentences ranging from two years to life for many serious crimes on the books now.

Hunt also thinks that prisoners should serve their complete time, with time off given for good behavior at a fixed ratio. Prisoners now are eligible for parole after serving one-fourth of their time. Sentences, he said, might be shorter, "but the time actually served might be longer." Hunt would allow probation for first offenders.

Workers in the school are welcome. For information regarding attending or assisting call Mrs. Johnnie Edwards, 756-2926.

Unconcerned By Energy Crisis

HOUSTON (UPI) — Two University of Houston researchers have found most people aren't too concerned about the energy crisis.

A report issued by Dr. David Gottlieb and Dr. Marc Matre said even those persons most likely to believe there is an energy crisis continue to be major energy users.

The report lists employment, recession, inflation, crime, pollution, medical services, firepolice protection and education as issues of greater concern.

Hurricane Time At Hand In U.S.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Hurricanes that strike the eastern United States are born in the tropical and subtropical North Atlantic Ocean, the Caribbean Sea and the Gulf of Mexico, according to the National Weather Service.

Most occur in August, September and October, but the six-month period from June 1 to Nov. 30 is considered the Atlantic hurricane season.

Most early storms originate in the Gulf of Mexico and the western Caribbean. An average of six Atlantic hurricanes occur per year.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 22 through July 28.

House
MAIN STREET U.S.A.—Passed, 225 for and 149 against, a bill (HR 7743) authorizing $38.8 million through fiscal 1978 to implement the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Plan for preserving and developing the nation's "main street" between the White House and the Capitol. The federal seed money is expected to trigger a primarily private sector refurbishing of the historic avenue, involving the restoration of buildings such as the Willard Hotel and a limited amount of new construction. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Rep. Roy Taylor (D-N.C.), a supporter, said the federal trigger is necessary because private developers have been reluctant to bear the costs and risks of redevelopment. He said the avenue "is not now, nor has it been for the past several years, a place that the American people can be proud of."

Rep. Charles Vanik (D-Ohio), an opponent, agreed that "improvement and renovation are desperately needed" along the north side of the avenue. But he said redevelopment is "properly the function of the private sector," and called the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation a bureaucratic obstacle to private investment.

Reps. David Henderson (D-3), Stephen Neal (-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), James Martin (R-9) and James Broyhill (R-10) voted "nay."

Reps. Ike Andrews (D-4) and W. G. Hefner (D-8) did not vote.

VETO VOTE—Override, 270 for and 131 against, President Ford's veto of HR 12384, a bill authorizing $3.3 billion for fiscal 1977 military construction projects and strengthening congressional control over base closings. Despite this vote, the veto was sustained when the Senate failed to override it (see vote below).

Ford had found the bill "generally acceptable," but objected specifically to a requirement that Congress receive at least one year's notice of Pentagon plans to close a base or substantially reduce a base's personnel level.

Rep. Richard Ichord (D-Mo.), a supporter of the move to override, said the year's notice requirement was necessary to give Congress the means "to insure that the savings claimed by the Department of Defense will indeed occur and that the base reductions are...in the best interests of our national defense."

Opponents of the override generally agreed with Ford that the congressional review requirement would encourage inefficiency. Rep. John Rhodes (R-Ariz.) called it "a pure and simple attempt to make a policy of waste."

Jones, Henderson, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Taylor voted "yea."

Fountain, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

Andrews did not vote.

SUNSHINE ACT—Adopted, 201 for and 193 against, an amendment to require that minutes rather than verbatim transcripts be kept of closed regulatory agency meetings. It was attached to HR 11656, a "sunshine bill" requiring that virtually all federal regulatory agencies conduct open meetings, except when certain sensitive topics such as national defense and employ matters are under discussion. The bill was passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

The bill had originally required that transcripts be kept of executive session as well as open meetings, on the rationale that they could be used in any subsequent court challenge to the legality of an agency holding a closed meeting.

Rep. Paul McCloskey (R-Calif.), a supporter of the amendment, said the verbatim requirement would have a chilling effect "on the kind of derogatory but truthful comment that an agency like the Securities and Exchange Commission must consider" when discussing cases of possible corporate corruption.

Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), an opponent, said that "just because a meeting is closed is no reason that an official record of the business could not be and should not be kept."

Jones, Henderson, Andrews, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and

Neal, Preyer and Rose voted "nay."

Fountain did not vote.

TAXPAYER NOTICE—Rejected, 46 for and 50 against, an amendment to require federal agencies to give taxpayers 20 days notice of court proceedings to obtain information on their taxes from the Internal Revenue Service. The amendment was intended to give taxpayers an opportunity to oppose in court the release of tax data to investigators. It was proposed to HR 10612, a pending tax reform bill.

Sen. Floyd Haskell (D-Colo.), the sponsor, said that privacy of tax matters should have priority over convenience for federal investigators. "We are giving an individual taxpayer the same protection against disclosing his tax return if it happens to be a copy filed with the IRS that he would have if it is in his personal file," Haskell said.

Sen. Russell Long (D-La.), an opponent, said that "in trying to fight crime the government needs this information," and that the amendment "just goes much too far in protecting the right of privacy by making it very difficult for the government to conduct its fight against organized crime and against criminals of a white-collar nature in general."

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

VETO VOTE—Failed, 51 for and 42 against, to override President Ford's veto of HR 12384, a military construction authorization bill (see vote above). A two-thirds majority did not support the override attempt, so the veto was sustained.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), a supporter of the override attempt, said the purpose of the bill's congressional notice and one-year delay provision "is not to prohibit base closures and significant reductions, but to formalize a process whereby the Department of Defense can effect such closures and reductions in a more orderly and efficient manner."

Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.), an opponent, said that all a veto override would accomplish "is to provide one year for the Chamber of Commerce and the various groups in these affected communities to come here and lobby for special legislation to save these wasteful, surplus facilities that add nothing to the defense interests of the country."

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

AUTO EMISSIONS—Rejected, 45 for and 51 against, an amendment to weaken the warranty requirements on emission control equipment installed on new cars. The amendment was proposed to S 3219, a package of amendments to federal clean air laws. Final passage was pending.

A 1970 law requires manufacturers to provide a five-year or 50,000-mile warranty on the satisfactory performance of new emission control equipment. The amendment sought to limit the warranty to 18 months or 18,000 miles.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Tex.), the sponsor, said the stiffer warranty will ultimately increase car prices as manufacturers pass along the cost of compliance. And, Bentsen said, the more extensive warranty encourages car owners to have repair work done at manufacturer-franchised dealerships, thus harming the independent auto repair industry.

Sen. John Durkin (D-N.H.), an opponent, said that "the consumer is going to pay three times" if warranty laws are weakened. "He is going to pay for inferior auto pollution equipment; he is going to pay for the upkeep of that equipment, and then he is going to pay with his lungs, with the increased level of pollution."

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

Using Air To Transfer Heat

HOUSTON (UPI) — Two engineers say they have designed a solar energy collector using air instead of water for heat transferral that may be the key to a low-cost solar energy system.

Earl P. Herndon and Kenneth G. Anthony of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said their collector is unique in its low cost and simple enough for the average handy man to assemble.

The two estimate a solar energy system could save a household approximately 75 per cent of its normal winter heating expenses.

NEW SYSTEM

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The tire industry now recommends a new system of tire rotation of radials, says the Cooperative Extension service of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

In a four-tire rotation, the front tires should be moved directly to the rear, and the rear tires directly to the front.

Required Lecture On Perils Of Tax Evasion Fails Please Judge

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer
CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—A federal judge agreed to let Marvin C. "Redd" White lecture community groups on the perils of income tax evasion in lieu of serving a one-year prison sentence. The Rotary Club audience loved White's speech. The judge didn't.

"Once you get to the point where the IRS sends you to prison," White's routine went, "you've won your case, because after that you won't have 'em on your tail any more."

White, who pleaded no contest to four counts of income tax evasion, was sentenced to one year in jail by U.S. District Judge Charles Renfrew. The government said White failed to report all income from his gas station and illegally filed a joint return.

White would help spread the word that income tax evasion doesn't pay.

The tall Arkansas armed himself with a ready wit and lectured the Rotary Club in nearby Hayward:

"Two things in life are sure—and I don't see death getting worse every time Congress meets."

And: "I sent the IRS 25 cents because I heard I could pay my taxes by the quarter."

Then: "It's a rotten shame the way the government puts a tax on liquor, then they drive you to drink."

White, 51, had belonged to a Toastmasters' Club and said he knew getting a few laughs would warm up his audience. The judge, however, didn't see it that way and threatened to send White to jail if he didn't clean up his act.

"He read it all wrong," said White. "He accused me of trying to start a rebellion."

Renfrew ordered two IRS agents to monitor future White speeches, which were written by a lawyer and read by White in a properly subdued tone of voice.

But in the meantime, former President Richard Nixon was pardoned by President Ford after the Watergate scandal, and White was prompted to write Ford for the same consideration. A courteous reply from the U.S. Justice Department told him Ford wasn't interested.

Then, a tax auditor discovered White wasn't legally married to the woman with whom he filed a joint tax return in 1974, and that, said U.S. Atty. John Youngquist, was "the last straw."

West lived together for five years and he figured that by then they had attained common-law marital status. He said Martha had some interest income during 1974, and they wanted to be perfectly legal and pay whatever taxes were due on it. So they reported it on a joint return.

Renfrew finally decided he had made a mistake in offering to suspend White's jail sentence. Youngquist said, so White left his service station in the care of his lady and turned himself in for a stay at the Terminal Island federal facility last month.

He says he doesn't plan to resume his faceoff with the IRS.

"They got a nice law library there," he says of Terminal Island.

"I feel I'm going to college with tuition paid."

Holshouser Clout Fades

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Jim Holshouser once was touted as a possibility for the Republican vice presidential nomination. But now he won't carry much clout at the national convention which opens in Kansas City on Aug. 15.

Holshouser is not even a delegate. He lost his bid to become one of the 54 delegates when Ronald Reagan's followers won control of the state convention in June.

The governor will go to the convention under the auspices of the President Ford Committee and the Ford convention team. Holshouser has been Ford's chief Southern campaign spokesman. But without status as a delegate, he is very much weakened.

The key contact with the North Carolina delegation for the Ford effort will be a Greensboro housewife and substitute teacher, Nancy Lake. She started saving money four years ago to attend the convention.

Reagan's Tennessee Delegates Unswayed

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—Tennessee delegates committed to Ronald Reagan at the Aug. 16 GOP National Convention apparently have not been swayed by his choice of a running mate, a state campaign official says.

Some Mississippi Republicans, chosen as uncommitted delegates, indicated they would not support Reagan after he announced that if he wins the nomination, Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., would be his running mate.

But Todd Gardenhire, southeast Tennessee coordinator for the former California governor, said he contacted 14 of the state's 22 Reagan delegates and all reaffirmed their support.

"I'm surprised. They're even stronger now for Reagan than they were two weeks ago. I've stuck with him all the way and we aren't going to fall away now over just the naming of a vice president." Gardenhire said he contacted 12 of 15 delegates elected for Reagan in the presidential primary and two of the seven chosen by the state executive committee and committed to Reagan.

The polling was in lieu of a meeting which had been scheduled this week in Atlanta to show support for Reagan. It was cancelled because too many delegates could not attend, said Gardenhire.

President Ford won a narrow popular vote margin in the state's May 25 presidential primary but trailed in assigned delegates, 22-21.

CHEROKEE VILLAGE

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (UPI)—Descendants of the Cherokees who were forced to migrate westward on the Trail of Tears have re-created an ancient Cherokee village at Tsa La Gi, just southeast of this East Oklahoma city.

LAUREL SPRINGS, N.C. (AP)—Edgar Sheets, 56, who is crippled, likes to pass the time with a citizens band radio.

Members of his family were putting up a big CB antenna for him Monday when it touched a high-voltage line, electrocuting three of them.

The jolt set the house afire but Sheets and three children escaped.

The three who were killed were on the ground holding the antenna while Sheets' son-in-law, Ray Holland, 37, was on the roof. He was knocked unconscious by the electric charge and fell off. A passerby pulled him away from the burning building. He was treated for burns and released from a hospital.

Mrs. Sheets, 56; her son, James Sheets, 36, and her daughter, Mrs. Lylene Holland, 34, were killed.

The Sheets home two miles north of Laurel Springs burned down.

Gubernatorial Candidates Seek Education 'Issue'

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Although the candidates consider it a major issue, North Carolina's governors have little direct control over education.

The governor appoints members of the state Board of Education, which shares control with the independently elected Superintendent of Public Instruction.

He exercises most of his influence through the budget process. And that is where most of the seven major gubernatorial candidates are looking for issues. The most immediate concern is pay for teachers.

Democrat George Wood has proposed the most ambitious pay raise program for teachers, a series of two 10 per cent raises that would bring the state up to the national average in teachers' pay. It now ranks 37th.

Wood's program would cost $75 million in the first year and about $90 million in the second year. He has proposed paying for it, at least in part, with a windfall of $94 million gained by accelerating collections of the corporate income tax. After that, Wood says he trusts that economic growth will enable the state to afford the higher salaries.

Wood's proposal would have a higher price tag except that he has not included the rest of the state's employes in it. If they were also given two 10 per cent raises, it would cost $150 million the first year and $165 million the next. Wood says he has not decided what raises to recommend for state employes.

He is the only candidate who separates the two groups when he talks about pay raises.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, who has the teachers' endorsement in the Democratic primary, says he will push for a cost of living pay raise of 5 or 6 per cent, plus additional increments for teachers with more than 13 years of experience. His general raise would cost the state $75 million-$90 million. He does not have an estimate for his experience increments.

Democrat Edward O'Herron says he won't talk about pay increases until he knows how much money will be available next year. State revenue officials think that will not be very much. O'Herron says he will advocate raising pay "as much as feasible."

Democrat Thomas Strickland says he is confident that pay will be raised by 5 per cent in each year of the next biennium. That is what he is promising teachers.

Among the Republicans, David Flaherty has the teachers' endorsement. But he is not offering a specific pay raise. Flaherty said pay for teachers and employes "ought to have a high priority," but that "anyone who tells you a percentage is crazy. I'm not going to be guilty of promising something I can't carry through."

Republican Jacob Alexander is also not talking in terms of specific percentages. "I wouldn't want to make an estimate at this point," Alexander said he objects to any pay raise that requires windfall financing, as the one given to teachers and employes this year did.

Alexander also said that he does not think teachers pay in North Carolina will reach the national average until the state's per capita income increases.

North Carolina teachers in 1976-77 will get salaries ranging from $8760 to $13,360, depending on experience and qualifications. The average salary is $11,002, according to the teachers' association, while the national average is $12,524.

The third Republican candidate, Coy Privette, would like to raise teachers' pay to keep up with the cost of living. But after that, Privette said, he would like to channel the money into merit pay increases.

Privette has no specific ideas of how to do it, but he would like the state to measure the performance of teachers and pay them accordingly.

"To me, merit pay creates good teaching and motivates individuals. Some way or another, I want some people in the education field to come up with a merit plan."

Teachers generally resist proposals like Privette's because that no test yet devised for pupils can measure the effort and ability a teacher devotes to a class.

Privette also favors limiting teachers' tenure and seniority rights. "They lock in some of the less competent people. The ones cut are the young, enthusiastic and aggressive ones," Privette said. His stands are not popular with the teachers, he concedes. "You'll notice I didn't get their endorsement."

Other candidates have different ideas on educational innovations. Hunt is supporting a reading program that would add aides to primary grade classrooms. His proposal is to phase the program in to four stages. Each stage would cost $15 million.

Flaherty's major goal would be to restructure the "organizational mess" he finds in state government's approach to education.

He said he would push for a constitutional amendment that would provide for election of 11 state Board of Education members from Congressional districts. Another four members would be appointed by the governor from nominees selected by education groups like the teachers' association and the PTA.

That board, he said, ought to appoint the state superintendent, who is not elected statewide.

"You're not going to correct our plight until you have one captain, one set of priorities and everyone working the same direction," Flaherty said.

O'Herron said his concern in education would be basic education: "I'd like to teach our children to read, to write, to spell, do a little math. And we've got to get some discipline back in the schools by backing up the teachers and principals in their disciplinary procedures and trying to get more backing from the parents."

Discipline is also the major concern of Alexander and Strickland. Although the U.S. Supreme Court has written guidelines that limit a teacher's authority to corporally punish a pupil, Alexander says he would like to try to enact a law that would expand that authority.

"The big thing I would do is recommend to the legislature some sort of statutory limitation on restraints against school teachers and administrators for administering discipline. Until the teachers can be allowed to discipline, they can't be allowed to teach," Alexander said.

Strickland said he thinks discipline "has to come from the home. We've dumped this problem on the school system and it's not really the schools' fault."

"We've got to get it through that there's got to be discipline in the classroom. You can come up with all kinds of programs and spend millions of dollars, but if those students are not disciplined, it's of no effect."

FIRESTATION

FORT SUPPLY, Okla. (UPI)—The first fire station built in Oklahoma was a crude log structure located in this western Oklahoma city.

The station housed a hand-drawn horse cart and was used before Oklahoma became a state.

How's The Weather?

Carter Raps Ford Leadership

WEATHER FORECAST—Seasonably warm temperatures are due over most of nation today with showers in the Northwest, from the southern Plains to the Midwest, for the Great Lakes and for Florida. Rain is expected from the western Gulf to the Carolinas. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
It was cool, clear and dry in North Carolina today. But the east had gully-washing rain Tuesday, five inches in some coastal areas. High temperatures today were in the 80s, except for some mid to upper 70s in the mountains. The overnight lows will be in the 50s in the mountains and the 60s elsewhere. It got down to 50 at the Raleigh-Durham Airport at 4:30 this morning, a record low for Aug. 4. The previous low was 60 degrees in 1956. High pressure centered over Pennsylvania continues to bring cool and clear weather to most of North Carolina. A cold front off the coast set off the heavy rain over sections of eastern North Carolina. Cape Hatteras and Cherry Point each had about five inches in the 24 hours ended at 2 o'clock this morning. Other areas had more than two inches. Skies have been clear over the mountains and Piedmont during the night. Temperatures Tuesday were on the cool side, with highs mostly in mid 70s to low 80s. August sunshine will make Thursday's temperatures a bit higher than today's.

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the official start of his campaign is a month away, Jimmy Carter emerged from his Georgia farm to make a slashing attack against President Ford, criticizing Ford's leadership and labeling the Republicans "a party of backwardness."

Carter also predicted the Republicans soon will launch "vicious personal attacks" against him. The Democratic presidential nominee was in Washington today to confer with Democratic National Committee officials and to speak at a dinner sponsored by the Democratic Study Group, an organization of liberal Democratic congressmen.

Carter assumes Ford will be his opponent in the fall campaign, and his criticism of the President at a shopping center rally Tuesday in Manchester, N.H., was among the strongest he's voiced.

The former Georgia governor called Ford's fight for delegates against Ronald Reagan "an almost unbelievable spectacle." "The President of the United States is deeply concerned about an ex-movie actor, traveling all over the nation to get a handful of delegates... but neglecting the basic responsibilities of leadership," Carter said.

He attacked the Ford and Nixon administrations as governments of "vetoes and not visions," "scandals and not stability or pride," "rhetoric and not reason."

"The lack of leadership is the biggest single handicap the Republican party will face this year," he said.

Later, at a reception for the New Hampshire State Democratic Committee, Carter predicted that after their convention, the Republicans will launch "almost unprecedented vicious personal attacks" against him, his running mate

Sen. Walter Mondale and other Democratic candidates.

He asserted that such attacks will arise from Republican desperation, which he said partly stems from "their very low showing in the polls and divisions within the party."

Arriving in Washington Tuesday night, Carter told reporters that the first signs of a Republican attack against him are appearing. He said the Republicans have already started sending out collections of newspaper clippings critical of him, while Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and other GOP leaders "have begun to make very strong statements about my stands on issues."

Carter said he did not consider his criticisms of Ford and Nixon to be attacks but simple statements of fact. "I've very carefully refrained from any personal attacks, and I'll continue to do that," Carter said.

At the rally in a Manchester shopping mall, Carter re-emphasized what will be some of his major campaign themes: calls for a stronger fight against unemployment, greater openness and integrity in government, a more open foreign policy and government reorganization.

He received his loudest applause from the audience of some 500 persons when he talked of the need for tax reform "to eliminate special tax privileges that benefit special interest groups and rob every one of you every year when you fill in your income tax return."

Reagan Expects Tough Queries In Mississippi

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, launching his final pre-convention campaign swing, can expect "tough questions" from the crucial, uncommitted Mississippi delegation about the man he wants as his running mate, an aide says.

The conservative former California governor planned his first public appearance here today with liberal Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Reagan has made no public appearances or statements since announcing on July 26 that he wanted Schweiker as his vice presidential candidate if he captures the Republican presidential nomination.

Reagan is visiting five crucial states where he hopes to firm up his once-solid support in the South against recent inroads by President Ford and exploit new opportunities in the Northeast. It is his last scheduled campaign outing before the Republican National Convention Aug. 16 in Kansas City. Billy Mounger, Reagan's Mississippi campaign chairman, said Reagan and Schweiker would meet with delegates in private soon after arriving in Jackson. The two also planned to meet tonight with the 37 members of the Alabama GOP delegation, who are committed to Reagan but have expressed some discontent about Schweiker.

Mounger said Reagan would have to convince delegates that Schweiker is needed on the ticket to ensure a victory.

"I would expect about as tough questions for Sen. Schweiker as you can have," Mounger said.

In the Associated Press delegate survey, Ford has 1,106 of the 1,130 delegates needed for the nomination, and Reagan trails 78 delegates behind at 1,028. There are still 125 uncommitted delegates, including 78 in the five states Reagan planned to visit this week: Mississippi, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Reagan's chief aide, Mike Deaver, said Reagan would hold 18 to 20 hours of private meetings with delegates over the next four days, and stage joint news conferences with Schweiker in Mississippi and Pennsylvania.

Most party leaders had considered Reagan the majority choice of Mississippi's 30 delegates and 3 alternates until he picked Schweiker. A month ago, Reagan predicted a sweep of the delegation after a warm reception here.

After President Ford got a warm reception last week during a visit with delegates, his campaign staff said the President had won as many as 40 delegates and alternates. But Mounger called the claim "day-dreaming" and said the delegation was split.

Under state convention rules, each delegate and alternate has a half vote, and the candidate favored by a majority gets all 30 nominating votes.

Inmate Killed By Gunman

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—Gunfire in a crowded prison dining room left one inmate dead and another wounded when a young ex-convict sought revenge for an old dispute, police say.

The shootings erupted Tuesday evening at the State Work Release Center Building as residents were about to eat.

Johnny Armour, Chattanooga, strolled in, spotted his man, pulled a .22-caliber pistol with a four-inch barrel and fired three shots, police said.

"The suspect deliberately sought out his victim but the wounded man was just an innocent bystander," said police inspector Terry Slaughter.

Fatally shot in the back was Thomas Edwards, 30, Chattanooga. C.J. Robinson, 20, Red Bank, Tenn., was hospitalized in satisfactory condition with a bullet wound in the hip, authorities said.

Armour, 20, was charged with murder and felonious assault.

"I can't go into the details of it now but Armour says the shootout was the result of a misunderstanding which occurred several years ago at the Tennessee State Penitentiary," said Slaughter. "He was released from prison not too long ago."

Mike Smith, warden at the work release program, said Edwards never mentioned anyone's holding a grudge against him.

Armour served nearly two years in prison after being charged with grand larceny in June, 1974 following recovery of eight diamond rings taken from a theft at Zale Jewelry Co., police said.

Edwards had been serving a three-to-seven-year term for grand larceny and entered the work release program last May, said Smith.

Found Stolen Items In Texas

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Trucks and a fork lift, worth $300,000 and stolen in June in Charlotte and Hickory, were found Monday in a warehouse in Houston, Tex., the FBI has announced.

The agency said arrest warrants may be issued after a hearing before a grand jury.

It listed the recovered trucks as five tractors, five trailers, and a one and one-half ton vehicle.

A NEW KIND OF BREAD 3 OUT OF 5 DOCTORS RECOMMEND FOR ITS FIBER ALONE

'Police Story' Based On Experience Of Cops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The voices on the tape were two young cops, talking about a guy they busted for drunk and disorderly. They didn't book him. They heard his story and tried to help him. He was an ex-cop, allowed to resign after an off-duty scrape involving booze. His marriage was kaput. He'd tried to kill himself with heroin and "had turned into a $250-a-day hype," one officer said. The two cops tried to help him. They took him home, talked, asked about narcotics. The guy said he was trying to quit heroin, and was down to only a $50-a-day habit. He also volunteered to show them things about a user. "He goes, 'If I show you some stuff, you won't arrest me?'" he said. "You got our word on it," one cop said. "So he went and got his hype kit which he kept buried outside... he had a little bit of smack left, so he cooked it up and shot up in front of us.

The story, which would get the young officers in trouble if their names were known to their superiors, had a relatively happy ending. They helped him quit heroin.

But Liam O'Brien, a blunt-spoken, barrel-chested New Yorker who played the cassette and told how the story came out, said it never made it to NBC's "Police Story," which O'Brien happens to produce.

"The needle stuff was too explicit, we couldn't use it," said O'Brien, who also is executive story consultant on the series, created by ex-cop and novelist Joseph Wambaugh.

O'Brien has heard more than 300 stories from cops who spoke them into tape recorders at a studio in Burbank. None are from official Los Angeles police files.

They're all personal tales of life on and off the beat, first told by cops Wambaugh knew or sent in, later by police who'd heard that "Police Story" might use their stories and tried their luck.

O'Brien expresses unprintable scorn in talking about cop shows made with the help and official sanction of the Los Angeles Police Department. He thinks they make cops wooden good-guys, not human beings with the same emotions — and problems — of the civilian citizenry.

While there's no official LAPD connection with the content of "Police Story," O'Brien said, about 95 per cent of its scripts come from the cops here.

Those whose stories have potential are brought in, paid $50 for an interview and start speaking into a tape recorder, O'Brien said.

He said the tape is given to a screenwriter. If the writer thinks it has possibilities, the cop is brought back and given $150 and work begins on a plot outline and script.

The officer then gets the outline and script for comment and corrections. So does Wambaugh, whom O'Brien wryly notes is wont to "write some very acid comments."

If filming actually begins, the contributing officer is hired, again during his off-duty hours, to be a technical consultant on the show for $200 a day. He usually works three days, O'Brien says.

Some try their hand at scriptwriting — the minimum Writers Guild fee of $7,400 per one-hour script has been known to prod the muse — and on very rare occasions there even is a sale, O'Brien said.

One such writer, a rookie wordsmith, is a young officer named Rick Kelbaugh, a member of the LAPD's elite Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) unit.

Kelbaugh has made two sales, the first after six rewrites. O'Brien says he's attracted to a story that shows "a cop works on a case, then the case starts working on the cop."

He likes to deal with the emotional dangers of police life, including the searing frustration of a cop arresting a truly bad character for a crime he knows the guy committed, only to see him freed because of "insufficient evidence."

Or getting hit, cursed, spit on, trying to stay cool while making a split-second decision whether to risk a reprimand — or worse, a departmental trial — for bending both the suspect's neck and the law.

Or getting what O'Brien says is called "The Wyatt Earp" syndrome, the feeling of a cop, usually a rookie, that he is the last line of defense against human garbage, that almost anything goes to get the job done and protect the public.

But not all the tales told by O'Brien for "Police Story" are of grief. One, being made into a show called "Monster Manor," came from two young cops who had to check out late-night prowler calls an old lady on their beat made two or three times a week. The old lady owned two houses and lived in one. She always complained — and the cops never found — prowlers in the empty house. They finally suggested she rent out the house.

"I'd only rent to nice young guys like you," O'Brien quoted her as saying. "Next week, one of the guys has a fight with his wife, goes to see the old lady, rents her house for $100 a month.

"Well," he grinned, "in no time at all, eight other guys move in and they're throwing parties with broods.

"Then the vice department finds out they have this house, and they want to break a call-girl massage service. They say, 'You got the perfect house, can we borrow it?'"

Permission was granted, an undercover officer steered the unsuspecting call-girl operation to the house, suggesting it as a good operating base.

The result was the arrest of the innocent superior of the original renting officer. He'd been checking up on his subordinate, didn't know about the call-girl ring and didn't know the vice squad was setting up a big arrest. He arrived just as the arrests commenced.

"Took about five minutes for him to convince them he was a lieutenant and only wanted to check up on his man," said O'Brien, breaking into laughter.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to think out how you can best solve whatever has arisen that is foreign to your experience. Seek out information that can help you face such matters from a new angle.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have good ideas now so that you can make your many interests work more efficiently and profitably. Get the cooperation of some new associate that can be very helpful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle responsibilities more efficiently now, especially where collections and payments are concerned. Use direct approach with mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more skillful at your work now and increase benefits. Buy clothing that will enhance your charm. Let quality be your guide, but stay within your budget.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Improve your health and your outlook on life and you realize a greater abundance. Relax tonight and build up your energy.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Enjoy yourself at whatever will not make a big dent in your wallet. Not a good day for considering new investments. Do only necessary work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into those activities that will please kin more and home life improves. Study new projects and see where you may benefit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take a more direct approach in dealing with others and you gain your aims more quickly. Turn to the experts for advice. Avoid one who tries to downgrade you. Make appointments early for best results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to get backing you need from an influential person. Join in public work that brings more esteem and success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be persistent in going after information you need for advancement. A prominent person you met recently can be of help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have good ideas for keeping promises more easily and should try them out immediately. Try to please a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make sure you appear at some business meeting with associates so that the results will prove to be successful. Come to a better understanding with one who is egotistical. Avoid limelight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan time to get your surroundings improved. Be more concerned with that which is ecological in nature. Cooperate more with associates.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she can become truly successful in life provided you teach early to be more cooperative with others. Give as fine an education as you can and slant along lines of government work, corporations, big business or whatever has to do with the masses. Give good religious training.

America" on CBS. Despite the title, it's anything but another Bicentennial hurrah.

It's a beautifully filmed, well-edited and thoroughly interesting study of two young families — 1½, actually — who left their East European homelands last year to emigrate to the United States.

They're the "stars" of the show, their stories told with a mixture of actual footage or filmed re-enactments of their efforts to come here and some of the good and bad things they experienced in America.

The show's only flaw is its use of brief fictional sequences on Ellis Island, scenes where actor Alan Arkin plays a 70-year-old man reliving memories of his arrival from Italy 60 years earlier.

The device is supposed to provide perspective on immigration then and now. But it only intrudes on the engrossing true stories of the families of Jean-Ivan Dorin of Bulgaria and Andrzej Bozek of Poland.

Dorin and his wife, Violette, are entertainers. He's an actor and director in films, she's a singer. They have two children.

Bozek is a factory worker, traveling with his young son, Alec. (We later learn he had to leave his wife and daughter in Poland because the authorities only would let half his family out. Still, he hopes they can re-join him in America some day.)

Their stories start at a refugee camp in Austria. There, the families are assigned adjoining rooms. They draw their bedding and eating utensils. Then they study English and wait and hope.

After tense, nervous appearances before a U.S. Immigration Service official to whom they explain their backgrounds and reasons for leaving their countries, they're off to New York, a happy flight to an uncertain future.

Dewitt L. Sage Jr. and Julian Krainin, who put this two-hour show together, exhibit a keen eye for picking out seemingly little things that make a viewer strongly feel the experiences of the immigrants.

We won't say how their stories finally end in the program. But tune in CBS for the start of the story-telling tonight. We bet you won't leave until after the closing credits roll on the screen.

Galleon's Gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — THE riches recovery of sunken treasure in the New World was taken from a Spanish galleon that went under off the coast of Florida during a hurricane in 1715.

According to the Rand McNally "Traveler's Almanac," over $1 million worth of coins and other goods were brought up, and much of it is on view in the Museum of Sunken Treasure in Cape Canaveral City.

Declarer cashed the queen of hearts and learned the bad news. Then he decided to abandon the suit in favor of clubs, leading low to dummy's jack. But West hopped up with the ace, cashed the jack of hearts and got his king of spades out of the way. Now he led a diamond to his partner's king, and East was able to cash two spade tricks for a three-trick set.

In the other room the U.S. team also landed in one no trump, but managed to go down only one trick. Thus, the U.S.'s superior defense netted 200 points, which translated into 5 International Match Points. (The opening lead is the most important single play in bridge. Drug Traffic Through Moscow Receiving New Attention By Russians

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials are expressing worry over new signs of international narcotics traffic through Moscow, mostly involving young foreigners flying through the Soviet capital from Asia to Western Europe.

At least 16 citizens of the United States, Australia, Great Britain, West Germany, The Netherlands and other countries have been seized by Moscow airport police in the past year for allegedly smuggling drugs including hashish and heroin.

Two of the foreigners, possibly more, are now serving terms in Soviet prison camps.

The last such string of arrests was in 1967-68, when 15 young men from Western Europe, Canada and the United States were arrested for allegedly transporting hashish through the Soviet Union. After those arrests and sentences of up to five years' confinement, the traffic seemed to stop.

"I think it would be fair to say the Soviets are quite concerned about things at present, and they even asked me if I had any idea what could be done to stop the traffic," said a Western diplomat who talked with the Soviet foreign ministry after one of his country's citizens was arrested.

Nedelya, a weekly magazine published by the government newspaper Ivestia, reported this month that Soviet customs declaration forms were revised July 1 to include a special section on narcotics.

The weekly added: "A series of failures (in getting drugs into other countries) has forced the chiefs of the narcotics business to study new routes."

"Knowing that in the Soviet Union the social basis for narcotics addiction (within the local population) does not exist, they, obviously, have decided to try to grope around for a loophole by transporting narcotics through Moscow."

Specialists here point out that Moscow may have been a narcotics rate for some time and the arrests in 1967-68 and now may simply reflect better customs checking or informants' tips.

"The cheapest way to get from Asia to Europe is via Moscow by Aeroflot (the Soviet airline)," one diplomat said. Asian air-ticket dealers have been known to work out cheap fares on Aeroflot planes that would be tougher to arrange on Western airlines that belong to the International Air Transport Association (IATA).

"For the small smugglers," the diplomat said, "it's an attraction to go via Moscow."

Another Westerner added that smugglers may believe they are less likely to be checked at the Western European end of their journey if they arrived on an Aeroflot plane. Usually, he said, "customs officers believe people just don't come from Moscow carrying drugs."

Some drug traffickers, apparently, believe that transit passengers through Moscow — those who stop only to change planes here or who stay at Aeroflot's hotel awaiting a flight the next day — will not be searched. In fact, several of the arrests this year have been of transit passengers. Treatment of drug offenders has varied. At least one Westerner arrested at Moscow Airport was severely warned and then let go. But last year, four Dutchmen and two West Germans on a Pakistan-London journey were sentenced to terms of 10 and six years for allegedly smuggling hashish.

The Dutchmen and West Germans have been released on a government pardon since then, however.

An Australian who was allegedly carrying marijuana was sentenced to six years' confinement in May. Three Americans charged with heroin smuggling and two Britons held on drug charges are now awaiting trial.

It is not clear from cases decided so far whether the Soviets are making a distinction between small quantities of drugs intended for personal use and large commercial quantities. One diplomat also expressed worry that Soviet courts see little distinction between such hard drugs as heroin and drugs like marijuana and hashish.

CP Session At Raleigh

The United Cerebral Palsy Annual Conference will be held September 29th and 30th in Raleigh at the Sheraton-Crabtree Inn on U.S. 70 West.

The Conference will have the Honorable Ralph Scott, North Carolina State Senator, as the Banquet speaker on the evening of September 29th.

Other speakers will include E. Clark Ross, Assistant Director, UCPA Governmental Activities Office; Ms. Giovanna Nigro, Director, Recreation and Adult Activities, United Cerebral Palsy of New York City, Inc.; Ms. Ethel Underwood, Director, Professional Services Program Department Dr. Harrie Chamberlain, Medical Director of the Division of Disorders of Development and Learning; Dr. Theodore R. Oldenburg, Chairman, Department of Pedodontics, School of Dentistry, University of N.C., Chapel Hill; and Larry Allison, Director - Public Information, Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, Washington, D.C.

A panel the afternoon of the 29th will feature James Murphy as moderator on Consumer Affairs. Murphy is Coordinator of Consumer Affairs, UCPA, Inc. Robert R. Reilly, Assistant Attorney General of N.C. will appear on the panel. A highlight of the afternoon session on September 30th will be a fashion show for the handicapped.

The entire Conference will feature two luncheons and one banquet.

River Is Kept Free-Flowing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Missouri Conservation Commission says the Bourbeuse River is one of seven of 25 major streams in the state unaltered, as the commission announced opposition to construction of a 6,559 acre lake on the river.

It has not been channelized or impounded and, the commission said, is a free-flowing symbol of what once was a river state.

Chorus Giving Sunday Program

FARMVILLE — The Sir Walter Barbershop Chorus of Raleigh will perform at Farmville Central High School Auditorium Sunday at 4 p.m.

The chorus consists of from 40 to 50 men singing in barbershop harmony. They will present a bicentennial show of patriotic tunes, barbershop songs, show tunes, Southern tunes, and seasonal songs. Paul Conway, a Greenville native, is the group's director.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance from the Farmville Recreation and Parks Department, the sponsoring agency. For further information, one may call 753-4741 and ask for Billy Wooten.

Performing with the Chorus will be two quartets—That Old Gang from Raleigh, and The Corduroys from Washington, N.C.

Recorded In San Quentin

LEONA WILLIAMS, a member of Merle Haggard's show, compares singing at a prison to performing in Vietnam. (AP Wirephoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—
Leona Williams, believed to be the only woman to record an album in a prison, marvels at her reception.

"They were just fantastic," Miss Williams said about the inmates at California's San Quentin prison where she recorded "San Quentin's First Lady."

"They were more receptive than the average audience," she said. "I never thought about an encore. I started to walk off the stage and they stood up and applauded until I had to come back for an encore."

The idea to record at the prison came from Merle Haggard, who spent time at San Quentin from 1958 to 1960, for burglary and escape. Miss Williams is a member of Haggard's show.

"It simply seemed like a unique idea," Haggard said. "It just sounded like a good concept."

Haggard, too, was surprised at the inmates' reception. "In prison you don't have a built-in country music crowd," he said. "But the acceptance was unanimous."

Miss Williams, 33, who was with Loretta Lynn's show before joining Haggard's group, talked to a few inmates while at the prison.

"One guy was crying," she recalled. "He writes to me all the time. Another guy kept telling me he wasn't guilty. Another had been there since 1946. "I asked an inmate beforehand what they wanted, and he said just go out there and be a lady."

"I fell sorry for them. Just because they made one mistake 10 years ago, they have to go through this. They might make the same mistake today and not get punished."

Miss Williams, a soft-spoken beauty who bears a slight resemblance to "Hee Haw's" Lisa Todd, compared the experience to her tour of Vietnam in 1968.

"There were great audiences in Vietnam too," she said. "The men in Vietnam were more nervous and scared than they were at San Quentin. The soldiers would come up to me after the show and shake hands and cry."

"I recall we played a base about 200 miles from Saigon and after the show they caught some Viet Cong in there watching us."

Miss Williams, a native of Vienna, Mo., appears frequently on the Grand Ole Opry and has written several songs recorded by other artists. The biggest was "Dallas," recorded by Tammy Wynette and Connie Smith.

For Haggard, who accompanied Miss Williams to the prison, it was his third visit to San Quentin since being released.

He revisited his old cell, discovering that "they had it all fixed up. Regulations have been changed and they allow more things now."

He said he wasn't worried about inmate behavior during Miss Williams' performance.

"If something happened, privileges would be revoked and someone would have 2,000 inmates to contend with," he said.

Virus Largely Limited To Hogs

HOUSTON (UPI) — Swine influenza is so named because it has been limited to outbreaks among hogs for the past 45 years.

This strain of influenza was isolated from swine years ago by Dr. Robert E. Shope during the time of his studies of severe swine infections.

Shope was able to isolate an agent and through laboratory means, retroactively, many investigators have shown that those persons who lived through the 1918-19 epidemic carry in their bodies serum antibodies that react to the virus.

A high proportion of the people who died in the 1918 epidemic died because of bacterial infection which was superimposed upon the influenza.

Busy Building For Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — During the 1974-75 school year, 70 new buildings and 53 additions were constructed in Missouri's public school districts.

The building projects provided 837 new classrooms, plus other special facilities, the state Department of Education said.

Doctor Feels Links To Beirut Hospital

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Dr. Patrick Marshio deftly tied the sutures, stepped back and signaled the end of the surgery. It was one of 5 to 30 emergency operations performed each day at the Red Cross field hospital in Beirut.

On the table was Samar Chami, a 12-year-old Lebanese girl shot by an AK47 automatic rifle. The bullet passed through her midsection and lodged just under the surface on the opposite side.

Marshio, a 37-year-old native of Jersey City, N.J., is the only American among the hospital's 35 to 40 staff members. Most of them are Finns, Danes and Swedes. Marshio said he came from Denmark for a two-month stint as chest surgeon because he had never been in a war situation.

"Now I'll stay as long as I can," he said.

Most patients who come to the Red Cross hospital are too poor to afford the established hospitals still struggling to keep open. Although new to the Arab world, Marshio said he feels a special "Mediterranean kinship" with his patients because of his Sicilian ancestry.

The hospital is located in the new annex to a seafront hotel where the Red Cross is based. In a large, garage-like room with bare concrete walls, blankets hung from ropes separate the working areas. A crude handwritten sign designates one space the "Operating Theatre." The only sunlight comes through narrow slits in the windowless walls.

Sanitation is a constant problem. The floor is rough and difficult to mop. The area must be sprayed frequently for flies because of a large garbage dump not faraway.

Nearby is a 17-year-old Palestinian guerrilla. A Christian militiaman trapped in the upper story of a building dropped a grenade that blew off his legs.

Welfare In Sweden Is Pervasive

By ROLF SODERLIND
STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Swedish welfare nation looks after its citizens from conception to the grave.

There are welfare allowances for almost everything, from free medical checkups and birth technical during pregnancy, to the paying for a gravestone upon death.

"Without welfare, I am not sure I would be alive today," said Per, 22, a former drug addict who successfully underwent rehabilitation.

"I used to get stoned on booze, speed, hashish and LSD, more or less at the same time. But about a year ago I decided for a change in my life. The social workers really helped me. They made me a human being again," said the longhaired Stockholmer.

While being treated at a free rehabilitation institute, Per said he received an unemployment allowance of 90 kronor ($20.31) daily. After tax, he was left with 67 kronor ($15.15) daily.

After eight months at the institute, Per took a room in a boarding house. The state paid for food and rent. And he still received his 67 daily kronor.

Four months after he left the rehabilitation center, Per took a state-organized job test which included many interviews in order to discover the best type of profession for him.

"I would like to become a nursery school teacher," he said. "To get that, I need a one-year course, paid for by the National Labor Market Boefession for him.

"I would like to become a nursery school teacher," he said. "To get that, I need a one-year course, t 58.853 billion kronor ($13.315 billion) on social welfare, corresponding to 23.5 per cent of the Gross National Product.

"Of course, it takes taxpayers money to keep the system running, but it is a damn good one as far as I am concerned," Per said.

The National Social Welfare Service is a huge organization which assures that not only people like Per get on the right track again but also provides mandatory economic allowances.

It takes a large bureaucracy to cover social welfare obligations such as free day nurseries for children, general child allowances, home-help services, holidays for children and housewives, criminal care, unemployment insurance, retirement and early retirement pensions.

The Stockholm Central Board of Social Welfare offices cover five pages in the telephone book. National central administration costs in 1974 totaled 344 million kronor ($77.8 million).

Many Swedes object to special social assistance, a small part of the Social Welfare budget. In 1974 this special assistance was given to 220,901 persons at a total cost of 529.9 million kronor ($119.8 million).

This special social assistance is for people who could not make a go of life with ordinary assistance.

For instance, special aid may be available to a family whose income and fixed rent allowance doesn't match a high rent and everyday costs of living. A special monthly economical aid fills the gap.

The basic yearly amount of money under this social assistance is 10,400 kronor ($2,352). A single male in need can get 90 per cent of this sum in one year. A married couple can be provided with 150 per cent, or 15,600 kronor ($3,529), and additional money is available depending on the number of children involved.

"There is a belief that people on social assistance welfare are cheating the system. I think cheaters are rare," said Lars Olofsson, administrative secretary at the Social Service Center in the Stockholm suburb of Tensta.

In Stockholm there are 17 service centers handling matters of social assistance. Service Center No. 16 in Tensta has 41,000 inhabitants with 27 per cent immigrants within its area.

"Last March we had 2,400 relief recipients, which is a relatively high figure," Olofsson said.

Bengt Larsson, 23, a Tensta social worker, said "there is a lot of trouble here. Often some recipient threatens to kill you. The immigrants are calm, but young people on drugs can be quite dangerous."

Last June 16, a man on welfare stabbed a suburb service center female employe to death at her counter. Police said he apparently was not satisfied with a 50 kronor ($11) social assistance handout.

In 1409, Leipzig University was founded by German empires.

Aborigines Of Taiwan 'Civilized'

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
WULAI, Taiwan — A group of elderly Western visitors stare at a display of human skulls while descendants of headhunters sing Auld Lang Syne, in Chinese.
Pretty young aborigine girls flirt with their attentive beaus, oblivious to the sheer mountain-side drop behind the railing supporting them.
An 87-year-old man weaves straw into hats for sale, and an old woman, with a sleeping infant at her side, works on a loom. Their faces are deeply lined and tattooed but their fingers are quick and steady.
"You don't have to hold on to your heads anymore," quipped one tribal youth watching the somber tourists.
An hour's drive from the capital city of Taipei is the mountain home of the aborigines of Wulai, whose forefathers gave up headhunting just before the turn of the century.
As they tell it, government pressure to force the tribe to abandon what its people considered an essential religious ritual was unsuccessful until an official in the 1890s offered his own head if the practice would cease.
"We learned from our elders that this gesture so overwhelmed the chiefs that they banned all further headhunts," explained the young man in the aborigine museum, one of the few tribals who spoke English.
Today they hunt tourist dollars instead.
A rugged and rustic breed who climb the steep mountain trails with ease, they shuttle visitors with motorized mountain carts.
The young wear jeans instead of the body tattoos of their elders.
Now they're even planning a beauty contest for the girls, the ultimate surrender to culture of the West.
The 3,000 aborigines here, believed to have come from Indonesia in ancient times, have succeeded in adapting to a way of life that many call the "best of both worlds."
Taiwan's aborigine population of nine tribes and 250,000 persons ranges from the modern attitudes of the Atayal tribe in Wulai to the primitive Yami tribesman living on Lan Yu, 47 miles off the coast of southeastern Taiwan.
While the Atayal live in wooden houses built on the deeply-forested mountains and are accustomed to modern appliances, buy their food in stores and earn their living primarily through tourism, the Yamis live in primitive stone houses dug into the ground and fish and farm for their food.
The reputation of the island as a living museum out of the Stone Age has attracted the curious. Even the Yamis are beginning to concentrate on more handicraft for tourist sales. Plane service has ended their isolation.
With the total aborigine population in various stages of development, the Taiwan government wants to help them without destroying their traditions.
The aborigines pay no income taxes — a government decision to encourage them in their own enterprises — and the Provincial Forestry Administration protects the area from undue development as tourism increases.
Yu-lan, one of the many beautiful young women in Wulai with her dark black hair, fair skin and attractive figure, took a break from her job in a crafts shop to talk about the life she and her friends feel so comfortable with.
Speaking in Chinese, the national language whereas once the tribe had its own dialect, Yu-lan explained that the terrain highlighted by a waterfall, springs and a river suits today's Atayal as it did his ancestors.
"We go to a nearby school, usually for the first nine years of free education, and then to work," she said.
Some families have accumulated considerable wealth and built large homes with all the modern conveniences. All are delighted with the throngs of tourists. Paid the equivalent of $70 month, Yu-Lan said her family is sufficiently well off so she is able to keep her entire salary for herself.
"Family ties are very close here," she said. "There are some occasions when a young man will work outside Wulai and return here at night. But if he wanted to move, he would probably feel obligated to take his whole family with him."
While men and women working in shops or performing the ancient dances wear the colorful, traditional costumes, ordinary attire prevails during non-working hours, with jeans particularly popular among the young.
