Unemployment Rose In July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment increased for the second month in a row in July, rising from 7.5 to 7.8 per cent, and leaving more people out of work than at any time in the past seven months, the government said today.

At the same time, however, the Labor Department said about 400,000 more people found jobs in July, pushing total employment to a record 87.9 million.

But the pickup in hiring since the recession has apparently lured into the job market thousands of workers, particularly adult women, who hadn't bothered to look for a job when times were tight.

The number of people without jobs in July rose 280,000 to 7.4 million, the most since 7.8 million couldn't find work in December. The 7.8 per cent unemployment was the highest since an identical level in January.

The 7.5 per cent unemployment rate in June was an increase over the 7.3 per cent level in May. The June-July increases represent a threat to the administration's projections that unemployment will slip below 7 per cent by December.

There were fewer people unemployed in January than there are now, but the unemployment rates were the same because the labor force is constantly growing.

The work force has grown by 2.3 million, or 2.5 per cent, in the past year. Part of that is accounted for by normal population growth, but the rate is far above the eight-tenths of a per cent growth in the total

The bulk of the growth in the labor force — 1.4 million — has been among adult women, even though they represent less than a third of the total work force. The percentage of working-age women at work or seeking a job has risen to 47.4 per cent from 46.1 per cent a year ago.

The number of women in the work force has traditionally been considered a signal of the pressure families feel for beefing up their incomes. And economists still consider that to be a factor, but in recent years demographers have found a surge in women's work force participation rates unrelated to underlying economic conditions.

The unemployment rate for adult women in July was 7.6 per cent, up from 7.1 per cent in June. Adult male unemployment was 6.1 per cent, compared to 6 per cent the previous month.

Unemployment among household heads climbed to 5.4 per cent from 5.1 per cent.

Unemployment among blacks and teen-agers improved, but analysts said the rates remain so high that the change isn't likely to signal any dramatic improvement. Unemployment among teen-agers slipped to 18.1 per cent from 18.4 per cent. Among blacks the rate fell from 13.3 per cent to 12.9

per cent. Despite the increase in unemployment, its severity moderated somewhat. The average duration of unemployment fell to 15.8 weeks from 16.9 weeks in the previous month.

The number of Americans holding jobs advanced to a June record, but the number of unemployed swelled to the 7.14-million level. And that was the largest number of people out of work since January, when 7.29 million were unemployed.

The growth rate in the economy was cut in half in the second quarter of this year and goes a long way toward explaining why unemployment didn't improve much over the first six months of the year.

But John W. Kendrick, chief economist for the Commerce Department, says the job picture is being complicated by above-average growth in both productivity and labor force.

Productivity, or the volume of goods or services produced per hour worked, traditionally rises during an economic recovery. Employers use their most efficient facilities when they're running at less than full capacity, as they are now. And they wait until they are getting the most out of those already at work, usually preferring to pay overtime before calling furloughed workers back.

Kendrick noted that early this year productivity was 5 per cent ahead of a year ago, which is slightly above average.

Even more dramatic, however, he said, has been the growth in the number of people looking for work compared with previous recoveries at a similar stage.

It's not unusual that during a recession some workers simply drop out of the labor force, if for no other reason than they feel looking for a job is hopeless. Then, when things pick up, they're back out knocking on doors and swelling the ranks of the unemployed.

Kendrick's computations show that this phenomenon, along with normal population growth, has pushed up the size of the civilian labor force by 3 per cent since the low point in the recession. The average labor force growth in other recoveries at this point in their development was 1.3 per cent, he said.

Buffer Strip Agreed To As Area Rezoning Okayed

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

After years of effort by property owners to obtain a zoning change for roughly 46 acres located along the west side of US 284, north of 14th Street, the City Council has given its approval to the rezoning matter.

The Council, after holding another public hearing on the request by Reynolds May and David Evans Sr., approved the rezoning as advertised with the exception that a buffer strip along the rear of the property will remain as presently zoned.

The owners, through developer Phil Carroll, this time requested rezoning of the property from Neighborhood Commercial, R-9, and R-20 to R-6, R-9, Office and Institutional, and Shopping Center. The request was the product of numerous revisions over the years as neighborhood residents appeared at each public hearing to voice objections to the rezoning.

Only after the owners agreed to located the proposed Shopping Center and Office and Institutional zones near current commercial zoning at the 14th Street corner and after agreeing to a buffer strip along the bypass frontage, did area residents look upon the matter more favorably.

Last night, after several residents of the E. Wright Road section voiced objections to rezoning a portion of the property from R-9 to R-6, Carroll proposed that the owners would go one step further and leave a strip of approximately 100 feet from the center of Reedy Branch as R-9 to protect the residents from what they had termed "down zoning."

The revision in the request was permissible, it was explained, since the strip along the creek is already R-9 and the request for R-6 acreage would be decreased. Mayor Percy Cox said that a decrease in acreage would be in order where an increase would not be without readvertising.

Prior to Carroll's move to leave the 100 foot strip as R-9, W. J. Simmons of E. Wright Road stated his opposition to rezoning a portion of the tract to R-6 and said that the zoning ordinance should protect residents from devaluations in their property.

W. M. Smith, Bronson Matney, J. O. Parker and several other residents of the E. Wright Road area had said they also objected to the change from R-9 to R-6. After the proposal was made to leave the buffer strip, Matney said that, "This suits us fine."

The property owned by May and Evans adjoins the Eastern Elementary School property and Jaycee Park, as well as light commercial activity in the area near 14th Street at its intersection with the bypass.

The Council, in following the recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Commission to rezone the property, voted unanimously to approve the request as amended.

In other business, the Council approved an ordinance amending the city charter implementing four-year staggered terms for members of the Council. The ordinance is open to petition for a referendum for 30 days and if no petition is filed within that period, the ordinance goes into effect.

The ordinance, as approved with only Councilman Clarence Gray voting against adoption, stipulates: "At the regular municipal election to be held in 1977, the three candidates who receive the highest number of votes shall be elected for four year terms, while the three candidates who receive the next highest number of votes shall be elected for two-year terms. Beginning at the regular municipal election to be held in 1979, and every two years thereafter, three members of the City Council shall be elected to serve for four-year terms. The mayor's term of office shall remain two years."

Former Council member John Taylor, saying that he opposed staggered terms, contended that the Council had been effective under its present system and termed the new ordinance as "somewhat insidious."

Taylor asked for an explanation of the procedures defining petitions and filing for a referendum on the matter.

Gray said that he opposed the question of staggered terms in the past and he still opposes the matter. He said that he sees no reason to install a staggered term procedure unless the people see a need.

Councilman John Howard said that when he was first elected to the board, he joined a new slate of members who "sat around for a year wondering what we were supposed to do."

Howard contended that the staggered system would insure continuity and prevent a situation of having a whole new

MAIL-ORDER COURSE NOT HONORED

I took a course in nursing from the Lincoln School of Nursing in Los Angeles, Cal. I took 25 of the 30 lessons and paid all of the money for them. They now say I will have to pay extra for a pin and other things. I would like to know, although they have my money, if anything could be done about it so that I might be able to get my diploma or a refund. C.F.

We feel certain that you will not be able to get a refund for lessons you have already taken, nor is it likely you could get the remaining five lessons for free. Unfortunately, you probably cannot get your pin or diploma for free if they have already quoted you a specific price.

To further investigate this matter, HOTLINE contacted the Executive Director of the N.C. Board of Nursing, Mary McRee.

"There are a couple of these mail-order courses in the country," she said. "However, there is not a single state in the union that recognizes them."

Ads for such courses from unaccredited schools, she noted, are careful not to say that the lessons will lead to a nursing career.

"My best recommendation is to go to a local institution offering a program in nursing," she said. "We have a list of all the nursing programs which are available in the state. Our address is N.C. Board of Nursing, P.O. Box 2129, Raleigh, N.C. 27602."

"We've had some pitiful letters from persons who have taken these courses. We get at least one a year."

"I hope she won't take any more lessons," she added, referring to your case. "The lessons do not qualify you for any type of work, even as a nurse's aide."

You have said that, on her advice, you do not wish to continue the lessons. We have referred you to Pitt Technical Institute because you have indicated that finances may be a problem. Mrs. Judith Kuykendall, director of the nursing program there, has been contacted about your situation and will help you as much as possible. She said that financial aid may be available to you through the school if you qualify for the nursing program.

You have said that you are very interested in nursing, although you feel being middle-aged may be a handicap. HOTLINE will be glad to help you if you have any further problems.

Toxic Agent Likely

ATLANTA (AP) — Scientists at the Center for Disease Control today eliminated influenza and fungi as possible causes of the mysterious "legionnaires disease" and said test results point toward a toxic substance as a cause.

"The epidemic has peaked and is on its way out," Dr. David Sencer, director of the CDC, told a news conference.

"Unfortunately, people are still dying," Sencer said. "There are 25 dead and 153 cases, but the number is coming down."

"We can all breathe a sigh of relief that this is not influenza," he said. "We have found no viral isolation."

Sencer added that scientists still have not diagnosed the exact cause of the illness which struck persons connected with an American Legion convention two weeks ago in Philadelphia, but he suggested the disease may have been caused by a toxic agent.

"Toxic causes are one of the areas of investigation still continuing," the director said.

He added that chemistry tests for toxic agents are more complicated than those which have eliminated influenza as a possible cause and that he could not say when results of the tests might show what kind of toxin caused the illness.

Pressed by reporters to name a possible toxic agent, Sencer replied, "A wide variety of pesticides and herbicides are possible. We're looking into all aspects."

Sencer said scientists have found no firm evidence of secondary infection, and that indicates the disease is not contagious.

MEDAL OF FREEDOM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Olympic hero Jesse Owens has been awarded a Medal of Freedom by President Ford, who told the 1936 track and field champion that "your character, your achievement, always will be a source of inspiration."

No New Cases Of Mystery Disease

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Health officials here were optimistic today that the worst may be over in the explosive outbreak of "legionnaire's disease." The source remains a mystery, but there have been no new cases in two days.

Swine flu and other influenza viruses have been all but ruled out as medical researchers continued round-the-clock efforts to identify the cause of the illness that has killed 23 persons.

Two persons who exhibited symptoms of the disease — fever, chills and lung congestion — died Thursday in southwestern Pennsylvania, but state health officials have not yet officially listed them as victims of the disease. As in all confirmed cases, however, they had some connection with a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia two weeks ago.

Efforts to identify the source of the disease now focuses on an unidentified virus still being sought in the laboratories and a possible toxin that may have infected the victims while in Philadelphia.

New information on a possible viral source was expected when new tests are completed today at state Health Department laboratories in Philadelphia and at the U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Meanwhile, teams of medical detectives fanned out today to check the six hotels and scores of restaurants where those attending the convention stayed and ate. They were checking air conditioning systems, water sources, food and even carpets and wallpaper, looking for a toxin — a poisonous substance — that may have triggered the outbreak.

No new cases of the disease have been reported since Tuesday, state Health Secretary Leonard Bachman reported Thursday. He said that some of the 138 persons hospitalized in the outbreak have been allowed to return home.

There was still no evidence of contagious spread of the disease, he added, and evidence points to a slackening off.

"We believe the reporting system is good and we are optimistic," said Bachman, standing before a chart detailing the perplexing strength with which the disease broke forth.

The legionnaires opened their convention in Philadelphia July 21 and adjourned July 24. The following Monday, more than a score of people who attended or had some contact with the convention were ill.

One man who exhibited the disease symptoms died Tuesday, July 27, according to Bachman's chart. Three days later, last Friday, four deaths were recorded. There was one death last Saturday.

Caldwell added, "For very important legal reasons, I will not comment further on this action at this time."

Forum Planned

Greenville Chamber of Commerce president Don Collier announced today that the Political Action Committee, chaired by Miles Frost had completed all plans for a Campaign '76 Candidates Forum which will be held Tuesday, August 10 at 10 a.m. in the Conference Room of the Holiday Inn.

The purpose of the Forum is to allow the chamber members and interested citizens to meet their candidates for state and local offices in the forth-coming election.

Chairman Frost will serve as the moderator for the Candidates Forum.

The candidates who will take part in the Candidates Forum are candidates for the North Carolina House of Representatives—Rep. Sam Bundy, Rep. Horton Rountree and Mrs. Irma Worthington and candidates who are seeking the County Commissioner's seat, including Commissioner Bruce Strickland and Rosalind Britt.

The Political Action Committee of the local Chamber of Commerce has planned the meeting and prepared questions for the candidates' consideration.

Report Union Funds To 30 Tax-Break Voters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty senators among those who last week voted for a tax break for the maritime industry had received more than $270,000 in campaign contributions from maritime unions since 1972, Common Cause says.

A study by the self-described citizens lobby showed that seven senators who received a total of $45,950 from maritime unions voted against the tax break. An additional 15 who had received contributions were absent and did not vote, the study said.

The tax break, which allows an investment tax credit for the building of ships in the United States, was an amendment to an omnibus tax bill. The Senate voted 55 to 23 against taking out the amendment.

According to the Common Cause study made public Thursday, senators who voted to keep the tax break and have received maritime union money included:

Russell Long, D-La., who has received $22,000; Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., $21,700; John Glenn, D-Ohio, $20,100; Alan Cranston, D-Calif., $18,714; Robert Packwood, R-Ore., $13,000;

Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., $12,900; Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., $12,800; Birch Bayh, D-Ind., $12,500; Robert Morgan, D-N.C., $12,500; Henry Jackson, D-Wash., $11,250; John Durkin, D-N.H., $10,500; J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., $10,000; Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, $10,000; Harrison Williams, D-N.J., $9,000; Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, $7,500. Va., $1,000.

The seven senators who got maritime contributions and voted against the tax break were George McGovern, D-S.D., $15,000; Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., $12,500; Dick Clark, D-Iowa, $7,000; Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., $6,250; Gary Hart, D-Colo., $3,000; Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., $2,100; and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., $100.

Landon's Words Not Outdated Akins Favors Prompt Death Penalty Action

By ELON TORRENCE
Associated Press Writer
TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — "Mounting debts and increasing taxes constitute a threat ... They absorb the funds that might be used to create new things or to reduce the cost of present goods."
The words sound as though they could come from this year's political campaign. They do not, however.

They were spoken 40 years ago by Alf M. Landon, then governor of Kansas, as he formally accepted the Republican nomination for president on July 23.

"There now has appeared in high places ... a new and dangerous impulse," Landon said at another point in his speech. "This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves."
"In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this then is the most important question before us: Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?"

Landon, who will be 89 in September, said in an interview that the memories of that hot July night are still vivid. "I felt the burden of the heavy responsibilities I was assuming; whether I had done a creditable job in outlining the issues which I intended to define more fully later, and which I believed meant so much to the future of our country," Landon said.
"I never worked so hard on a speech. I don't think I finished it until the night before."
"But the two main issues I outlined are still major issues facing our country today ... unlimited inflation resulting from deficit spending and the enormous increase in the size and power of the federal government..."

Landon lost the election. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was re-elected to his second term by a landslide. Landon's acceptance speech came six weeks after he had been nominated by the Republican National Convention.
Special trains brought Republicans and friends to Topeka from across Kansas and surrounding states.
There was one of the biggest parades Topeka had ever seen. The parade started at 4 p.m. in 104-degree heat. Floats, military units and more than 100 bands and drum and bugle corps headed south on the main business street in downtown Topeka, then headed west into the blazing afternoon sun on the street immediately south of the Statehouse grounds.
The notification ceremony and acceptance speech began at 8:30 p.m. on the south steps of the Kansas Capitol. The temperature still read 95 degrees.
"I don't remember the heat, I was too busy with other things," Landon said.
"It was exciting, particularly the parade and the enormous crowd."
Newspaper estimates placed the crowd at close to 100,000.
Following the ceremony and speech, there was a fireworks display on the Statehouse grounds. Then the special trains began pulling out of Topeka on their return trips.
Other passages from the 1936 Landon address also might come from today's campaign oratory. They included:
—"If we are to go forward permanently, it must be with a united nation — not a people torn by appeals to prejudice and divided by class feeling."
—"The primary need still is jobs for the unemployed."
—"We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy. And, through a vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws, we must be freed from private monopolistic controls."
—"Let me emphasize that, while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it."
—"By its policies the administration has taken the American farmer out of foreign markets..."
—"I shall cooperate wholeheartedly with Congress in an efficient reorganization of the numerous government agencies, to get rid of those that are not necessary, to eliminate duplication, to insure better administration and to save the taxpayer's money."

Crime prevention, jobs and the attraction of industry to the state are major concerns for Waverly F. Akins, candidate for the Democratic lieutenant governor nomination.
Akins, campaigning in the Greenville area yesterday, said a special session of the legislature may be necessary to insure fair administration of the death penalty.
"I very strongly support the death penalty," he said.
"And a poll has shown that 75 per cent of all North Carolinians also favor the death penalty."
"What we have to do now is adopt some new laws to bring our statutes in line with the Supreme Court's recent ruling."
"I think perhaps we need a special session to clear the matter up. The long interlude between the Court's ruling and the new law could lead to a double standard, with different penalties being given to those convicted at different times."

Akins added that more care must be taken to eliminate what he called the "root causes" of crime.
"We must upgrade our educational interests," he said.
"We must put more emphasis on being productive citizens in our society. Many people have not been given that instruction, have become juvenile delinquents and ended up in prison as adults."
"The job situation relates to the crime problem also, as the unemployed seek alternative methods of finding money."
He said that the state must create 40,000 jobs each year to keep up with the market.
"That makes it mandatory that we selectively attract industry into the state," said Akins.
"The lieutenant governor should be very involved in this. North Carolina is the second most attractive state for new industry, but we are not attracting industry because we are not aggressive enough."

According to Akins, the state needs a better industrial mix.

WAVERLY AKINS

"We need industry, from service industries to metalworking, to get a broad spectrum in the working force," he said.
"We do not want to get too dependent on any one industry."
"We need to target high-paying, high-quality industries. But before we can do this, eastern North Carolina must have better roads."
Akins said North Carolina is the only state on the east coast without an interstate highway to the seacoast.
"We have to develop our transportation if we want to develop the East," he said.
"That would help industry, commerce, tourism and other businesses. They are tied to a transportation system."
"Our roads must be a top-priority item. We put more funds into the federal highway treasury and get back less than any other state."
Akins said he feels "very good" about his campaign.
"We felt all along that we would be in second place," he said.
"Now we think chances are real good for us to come in first."
"Our campaign has excellent momentum now, and we want to turn that momentum into votes."
"We are planning a tremendous push to get us over the line on August 17."

City Council...

slate take office that was unfamiliar with their positions.
Council member Joe Taft Jr. said that the staggered term proposal appeared to offer "good insurance" for the city to have persons in office who were familiar with the Council function.
Joe Hayes of Adams Boulevard said that he was in favor of the staggered term arrangement.
Approval was given to an ordinance establishing non-resident recreation user fee as recommended by the Recreation Commission. Under the schedule, pertaining to usage of city recreation facilities by persons living outside the city, a fee of $50 per family per year would be charged for non-residents and a fee of $25 per year for individuals.
The ordinance stipulates that in the event a new family or individual moves into the area after March 1, the user fee will be one half the regular fee.
The Recreation Commission and director were instructed to enforce the new fee system and establish necessary rules and regulations. The fees will be effective Sept. 1.
In another matter, approval was given to an ordinance regulating bus lines and mass transit systems in the city. The ordinance requires that no bus line or mass transit system will operate in the city without obtaining a franchise from the city.
The ordinance excludes church buses, recreation buses and "like systems of transportation used primarily for transportation to worship services or on a non-daily basis, or used on an irregular or occasional basis;" any bus system operated by East Carolina University for the exclusive use of ECU students and for which no outside funds are received; and "interstate transportation systems, intrastate transportation systems, or other like systems operated under franchises granted by federal or state authority."
Some questions arose as to the exclusion of the ECU system from the ordinance. The university system does not have a franchise.
It was directed that the ordinance be referred to the Transportation Commission for study. Amendments to the ordinance could be proposed and considered by the Council at a later date, it was noted.
A related ordinance, prohibiting smoking and use of alcoholic beverages on the city's bus line, was also adopted.
Approval was given, following a public hearing, to an ordinance granting a franchise to construct, maintain, and operate a cable television system in the city to Greenville Cable TV Inc. Last night's hearing was the second public session held on the ordinance as required by law.
Acting on a request from the Utilities Commission for Council's recommendations on revising the water and sewer service area in the southwestern area of the extraterritorial jurisdiction involving Tucker Industrial Park, the Council adopted a motion to "recommend to the ... Commission that the water and sewer service area as delineated in that certain agreement between GUC and the Town of Winterville be kept in its present form and the boundary line not be changed."
The motion also pointed out that Greenville Utilities "be requested to work out the necessary arrangements with ... Winterville and the developers of Tucker Industrial Park to enable ... developer to install water and sewer service."

In addition, the Council scheduled public hearings for a Sept. 16 special meeting on: request for rezoning property at the southwest corner of 14th and Broad Streets; request for rezoning property at the northwest corner of US 264 Bypass and 14th Street;

Again Fire On Rioting Mobs

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire on demonstrators today in Soweto as racial rioting engulfed the black township for the third straight day. Rampaging students stoned and set fire to buses and buildings and again tried to keep black workers at home.
There were unconfirmed reports that at least three blacks were injured in one of several confrontations with police, but it was not clear whether there were any new deaths.
Police confirmed that seven persons had been killed, three by police gunfire, in the previous two days in the troubled township eight miles south of Johannesburg.
Soweto, a segregated community for one million blacks, was the spawning ground for the black upheaval in June in which at least 176 persons were killed and more than 1,100 injured.
Roving mobs of youths fanned through Soweto today, moving from one area to another, stoning police, attacking buses and taxis and intimidating people trying to go to work in Johannesburg. The youths were throwing up roadblocks of wrecked cars and other debris.

Police reported running skirmishes with groups of blacks and said they opened fire on at least two occasions when they were surrounded.
Police reinforcements have been rushed to the troubled township and have declared a nationwide standby police alert.
The other four blacks killed Wednesday and Thursday were a girl trampled by a mob, two men hit by a train, and a man who broke his neck jumping from a bus being stoned, police said.

Membership In Drummers Ass'n

Lindy Pollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Pollard of Greenville recently became a member of the National Association of Rudimental Drummers.
The Rose High School sophomore attended a local Drum Camp in June where he tried out for membership by playing different rudiments. He was tested by Harold Jones, percussion instructor at ECU.
Pollard is one of two students from Rose ever to receive membership in the nation drumming association.

Diploma Quality Values Talked

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte-Mecklenburg County school system is considering diplomas that would state exactly how proficient the high school student was in certain studies.
Officials say they began discussions of putting a quality value on diplomas before published stories last week about a recent graduate of a Charlotte high school. He was fired because the boss said he couldn't read or write well enough to take orders telephoned to an electronics company.
The system of alternative diplomas could work this way:
A student proficient in certain skills, or an honor student, might have that listed on the diploma.
But one who has barely passing grades might get a diploma or certificate testifying only to the completion of courses necessary for graduation.

Strickland Trailer Moved From Site

The mobile unit which served as the Greenville headquarters for the Tom Strickland gubernatorial campaign was moved Thursday from its location at Pitt Plaza because of its violation of a city ordinance.
Strickland's state public relations manager, Slim Short claimed that City Inspector Alton Warren had told him that the trailer must be moved and that he was being forced to enforce the ordinance by Jim Hunt and George Wood forces.
Both Pitt County campaign managers for the Hunt and Wood denied forcing the move of the Strickland headquarters.
"Neither the Pitt County campaign workers or any of the Hunt campaign workers complained to the city about the location of the Strickland headquarters. We had nothing to do with it," Louis Singleton, Hunt's Pitt County chairman said.
"I don't know of anybody in the Hunt campaign or the Wood campaign that could force Mr. (Alton) Warren to do anything. If there is a city ordinance, it ought to be carried out," Howard Wilson, Wood's Pitt County chairman said.

Britain's Party For Queen To Continue For Many Months

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — It promises to be one long, spectacular party next year when Britain celebrates Queen Elizabeth's 25 years on the throne.

Already governments, industries and private local groups are deep into plans for the queen's silver jubilee. Celebrations begin next June, a quarter century after King George VI died and Princess Elizabeth, who was watching big game in Africa at the time, became queen at the age of 25.

The party will go on for months. "We have a great and beautiful queen who has served us very well as a nation for 24½ years," said Lord Drogheda, London's chief jubilee planner.

"Next year we have the opportunity to show our love and appreciation and to pay her honor."

Some of the honor will be paid in ceremonies both serious and solemn. Some will be in the stately pageantry England does so well.

But most of the party will be simple — and inexpensive — fun. "What we want to see is London en fete," said Leslie Hilliard, mayor of London's Hammersmith district. "It would be a lot of fun, quite the best thing that has happened to London for many years."

One light-hearted gesture will dress 25 double-deck London buses in glittering silver paint, shining like ingots on 17 capital routes. There are other plans, coordinated by the London Tourist Board, for regattas and pop shows, silver commemorative medals, popular street fairs.

There is no lack of jubilee ideas. Perhaps it is just as well that some will never happen. Just recently, for instance, the Royal Institute of British Architects judged its competition for a permanent monument to mark the jubilee. Serious entries included proposal to: — Carve a giant corgi, the queen's favorite breed of dog, into the green turf of a chalk hillside. The idea came from Iron Age figures of horses and men carved onto hills in prehistoric times.

— Plant a forest near Balmoral, the queen's private estate, in the shape of Elizabeth's profile. Fine for sightseers at 20,000 feet.

— Carve abandoned, water-filled gravel pits near London into another portrait of the queen, this one in water, to be seen by tourists flying in.

"It would make a marvellous gesture," said competition judge Peter Murray of this idea, which shared first prize. "It wouldn't cost much, and would create a lasting reminder of jubilee year."

"London," commented the Times, "needs such a lasting reminder as much as it needed the Blitz."

Some plans for permanent jubilee memorials have better chances of actually happening. One calls for a London pedestrian precinct, wandering from city-center Leicester Square past Westminster Abbey, along the south bank of the River Thames and ending at the Tower of London. Another, said planner Max Nicolson, is to plant trees along the uninspiring route from London airport into town.

Queen Elizabeth herself ruled out major government spending on her jubilee. She asked for public funds to be used stringently in view of Britain's current financial woes.

But private funds are pouring into the gap. Lord Drogheda's London Celebrations committee alone hopes to raise 1 million pounds ($1.8 million) from industry. Similar planning groups in most British cities have plans on a smaller scale.

Some already have adopted official jubilee symbols. London's is a silver crown with the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral superimposed upon it.

As one curious sidelight of jubilee planning, some major insurance companies like the Norwich Union have stopped writing policies on Queen Elizabeth's life.

Jubilee planners buy such policies to guard against cancellation of their event because of the queen's illness or death.

"There has been nothing quite like it for the insurance industry since the queen's coronation in June, 1953," one insurance expert said.

Nobody wants to collect on such policies, but the expert estimated there would be 25 million pounds ($45 million) of such policies in force by the time the jubilee begins.

Dream Can Come True In Decorating

By VIVIAN BROWN

The clay pipe look in decorating? It is an idea that might appeal particularly to the young crowd, for student or career pads.

Always quick to innovate, they've used everything from wooden wire spools to cinder blocks in trying to find economical alternatives to expensive furnishings. The masonry blocks are used to hold up mattresses and box springs and the spools make tables, big and little, and are even stacked to hold stereo equipment.

The terra cotta pipes can be cut for use as end table and coffee table bases, as shelves for the wall, and can be put together to form a standing lamp.

An idea suggested by designers who build rooms around beds — in one setting a chimney flue rectangular pipe, 12 by 24 inches, is used with a glass top as an end table. It was the right height for the hide-a-bed being featured, but a shorter or longer pipe could be used to accommodate another sofa or bed height.

Two circular terra cotta pipes, 12 inches in diameter and 24 inches high, were used to support a glass coffee table surface. A 15-inch-long rectangular section was halved for use as a wall shelf. Two 2-foot sections of 6-inch-diameter circular flue pipe were joined with epoxy cement and a terra cotta elbow joint added to turn it into a standing lamp, which can hold a regular spotlight. All pipes were cut with a carbide-tipped blade for a clean finish.

As for the glass tops suggested for the tables, heavy glass really is necessary, and might prove to be too expensive. Less costly surfaces, such as tiled plywood, a do-it-yourself job, could be very pretty. Or slate might be used. Students will not want to cope with glass, anyway, in a crowded room. Wrecking companies and old furniture stores might be tapped to provide interesting materials that could be used for such surfaces.

The cost of a 12 by 24 piece of chimney flue terra cotta pipe is estimated at less than $9. The 12 by 14 inch circular

Hot Bread Suits Hot Weather

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

One of the best ways to enjoy a hot bread in warm weather is to bake scones on a griddle instead of in the oven. Scottish cooks have been making scones in this fashion for years and years; only they may call the griddle a "girdle."

Now that the drive is on to have us all include more fiber in our diet, you might like to try Bran Scones. We found the bran made an excellent contribution to both texture and flavor. Split open and slathered with butter, the scones are likely to please any hot bread enthusiast.

BRAN SCONES
2 cups flour
1 cup all-bran cereal
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar, if desired
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 large eggs
½ cup milk

In a large bowl stir together the flour, bran, baking powder, salt and, if used, the sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in butter until it is no longer visible. Beat together the eggs and milk just enough to blend; add all at once to flour mixture and stir well. Knead on a floured pastry cloth until smooth — 2 or 3 minutes. With a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin roll out the dough on the pastry cloth to ½-inch thickness. Cut out with a round 2-inch wide cutter. Bake on an electric griddle or in an electric skillet (lightly grease and preheat whichever one is used) at 325 degrees until lightly browned — 10 minutes on each side; the low heat will allow the inside of the scones to cook through in this time. Serve hot with butter. These scones reheat remarkably well in a preheated moderate oven for a brief time. Makes 16 to 18.

Note: If you use a nonelectric griddle or skillet on top of the range, preheat it until it is quite hot — the time this will take will depend on the material your utensil is made of; then regulate the heat so it is low enough to take 10 minutes to brown each side of the scones.

Beat The Heat With Airy Tops

PLAY IT COOL—It's easy in airy gauze tops, especially when they are teamed with shorts. Look for carnival colors of violet, fuchsia and tangerine for a colorful, playful way to dress during a heatwave. Go native with embroidery for a South American mood, left, or give the summer heat the slip with elasticized neckline shirt, right. The peasant top with puff sleeves has a neckline that can be pushed down to leave shoulders bare. (Fashions by Ship'n Shore.)

Durian Is An Asian Delight

By KENNETH L. WHITING
SINGAPORE (AP) — Question: what odor do you get by crossing a skunk with a cesspool?

Answer: durian. That's right, durian, the polecat of the orchard. It's a fruit so smelly that it is barred from airplanes, trains and most hotels in this part of the world. But it is also savored by those who would beg, borrow or steal to satisfy their passion.

"It stinks like hell and tastes like heaven," said one old Asia hand. The telltale stench permeates sections of Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand now that the main durian season has rolled round again.

An Australian executive arrived at his Singapore office one recent Monday and immediately asked his secretary to find out whether the toilet had overflowed or a sewer pipe had broken during the weekend. No, he was told, the wholesale durian market had reopened six floors below in Beach Road. The market bustles as trucks unload, dealers haggle and connoisseurs sample the forbidding fruit.

The powerful aroma is the perfume of prosperity for growers and others in the trade. Prices vary according to the fruits' freshness, weight, shape, and where they were grown. The market seems as delicately balanced as Wall Street.

Too few durian and the price skyrockets out of reach of most buyers. Too many and durian becomes a drag on the market, forcing growers to process its pulp, ranging in color from pale yellow to bright orange, into a paste called tempoyak.

"There's no money in tempoyak," a Malaysian farmer grumbled. Durians are also used in cakes packaged like long sausages. Durian jam and durian-flavored ice cream are also marketed. To the aficionado, however, durians are a delicacy to be eaten raw.

A quality fruit is said to be "lighter than it looks"; a heavy one is either unripe or with little pulp but filled with seeds. Seeds are sometimes consumed after being boiled or baked, but the discriminating usually toss them into the garbage.

The fruit varies widely in size and shape but is generally about eight inches long and seven inches wide. The outer rind is thick and covered with sharp thorns, or "duri," so tough that relatively few break open when they fall to the ground. Tradition requires that they are never knocked from the trees.

Rapid chemical change, which can alter the flavor perceptibly within hours, starts the moment a durian drops from its tree. This fermentation spoils the fruit in less than a week and few people will eat them more than three days after they fall.

"When durians are down skirts are up," is part of regional folklore. It refers both to the alleged aphrodisiac effect of the fruit and skirt-like wrappers worn by many Malay men which have to be hiked up for running on nocturnal raids on local orchards.

Several states in Malaysia have laws governing the right to collect durians. A British newspaperman wrote, "Men cheat and steal and fight over durians, as I know, for a big durian tree overhangs my garden in Singapore and every year thieves smash down the fence to get at the stinking fruit."

Ordinary durians retailed for $81.40 (about 57 U.S. cents) a pound in Singapore as the current season reached its peak. Superior ones can fetch much more.

Singapore counted 60,000 durian trees in an agricultural census three years ago. About half were mature and yielded 8,900,000 fruits per year, or enough to treat each Singaporean to four durians a year. Millions of others are imported each season, mostly by fast truck from Malaysia.

The durian is related botanically to hibiscus, hollyhock, cotton and kapok. Scientists say it's native to Malaysia and has been cultivated in tropical Asia for centuries.

Don't Try To Hide Couple's Split

DEAR ABBY: Last year, our daughter was married in a beautiful church wedding, after which she moved to another state. She is back home now (alone) for what friends and relatives assume is a "visit." Actually, Doris (not her real name) has left her husband, but nobody knows it yet.

We have asked her not to announce it because we still have hopes that she and her husband will patch up their differences. But Doris insists that there's no chance for a reconciliation.

Abby, what should we tell people when she stays and stays? Doris says she wants to see a lawyer here who's a friend of her father's, but we're urging her to wait a while. Once she sees a lawyer about a divorce, the cat will be out of the bag and the whole town will start talking. She says she doesn't care, but we do.

Doris is 23 and her husband is 25. She refuses to say why she left him. How should we handle this?
DORIS' MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: What's to handle? Your daughter is an adult, and since she has asked for no advice or counsel from you, the best thing you can give her is your wholehearted support. Your biggest concern seems to be "what to tell people." Tell them the truth!

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose husband reads all the time. It annoyed her, but I can understand how he feels because that's the way I am. You might call us "bookaholics."

I always have something to read with me. I read if I'm eating alone or taking a bath. I read while I'm walking down the street or waiting for a red light. I read while waiting for an elevator, or standing in line at a checkout counter. It makes the time go faster and calms my nerves.

If I don't have something to read, and I have a few minutes to spare, I become very upset and even physically sick.
SEATTLE BOOKAHOLIC

DEAR BOOKAHOLIC: I'm all for reading, but reading while walking down the street or waiting for a red light can be hazardous to one's health.

New Level In Medical Service

Another important step in improvement of area health care was taken with the accreditation of the family practice residency program.

The program is part of the Eastern Area Health Education Center. The provisional accreditation announced last week, is for offering three years of graduate medical education in family practice.

Dr. F. M. Simmons Patterson, executive director of the EAHEC Center program, said, "This is really a great step forward. We have hoped and eagerly anticipated that our Family Practice Residency Program would be approved.

"Now that accreditation has been granted, we will begin active recruitment for physicians to begin on Jan. 1, 1977, a three-year training program in the specialty of family practice."

Administration of the residency program will be under the ECU medical school.

The thrust of all that has been done in North Carolina in recent years—including the AHEC program and the ECU Medical School — has been to provide more family practice physicians to serve the medical needs of North Carolinians.

For that reason the provisional accreditation of the family practice program is indeed a mighty step forward. The program here will focus entirely on the training of physicians who will deliver health care to the family. It means a new day in medical care is dawning in Eastern North Carolina.

Name Should Reflect A Regional Role

The chairman of the Airport Commission for Stallings Field at Kinston says a name change is being considered for the field.

The change will probably be made when the new terminal building is completed, as part of agreements with neighboring cities which supported the airport as a regional facility.

We have long felt that regional airport service was the answer for long distance air travel in Eastern North Carolina. Service at Stallings is steadily growing to meet this need, and a name reflecting the regional nature of the airport would be appropriate.

Seeking Road Fund Shift

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A legislative committee is seeking a redistribution of Secondary Road funds which it claims have been illegally allotted.

The Governmental Operations Committee, a joint senate-house group chaired by State Senator I. C. Crawford, D-Buncombe, grilled Transportation Secretary G. Perry Greene about the allocation procedure at a recent session.

Convinced from their questioning of Greene, and staff reports showing the county-by-county breakdown, that politics are playing a part in the funds allocation, the committee is asking Gov. James E. Holshouser to intervene.

Greene is a Republican appointee from Watauga County, home of Republican Governor Holshouser. The largely Democratic legislative body is convinced that Republican counties are benefitting from the money split.

The Split
 The heart of the argument is the formula set up by state law which calls for splitting the $30 million available for the current fiscal year based on number of miles of unpaved secondary roads in each county as compared with total unpaved secondary roads in the state.

The $30 million doesn't go far against the total 21,025 miles of dirt road in the state, so competition is keen for the dollars. On average, it costs about $50,000 per mile to pave such roads; state officials figure more than a billion dollars would be needed to do the whole job at once.

But it is that cost-per-mile factor which is causing the flap: on rural flatlands the cost can be as low as $31,500 per mile; in mountain areas it runs up to $70,350 per mile. Urban counties call for more money for rights-of-way.

So highway officials use a cost-per mile variable in the distribution formula — a variable not provided for in the state law, and one which legislators maintain is being used by Republicans to reward counties which have been faithful.

The Secondary Roads Council is specifically responsible for overseeing the program. The group is chaired by GOP leader Cecil Budd of Siler City. In a previous column, Budd was identified as being from Randolph County, which adjoins Budd's home county of Chatham.

Randolph is a heavily Republican county in the exact center of the state, and is the county with the second most unpaved miles of dirt road in the state (501.7). Randolph also has the Uwharrie Mountain range which transportation people say account for the high variable figure of $54,600 per mile which brought Randolph's total Secondary Road money to $807,200.

Chatham Wins
 Ironically, Chatham also got the $54,600-per-mile variable for a total allocation of $539,000.

Other counties in that same highway division (Hoke, Lee, Montgomery, Moore, Richmond, and Scotland) were given variables ranging from $31,500 to a peak of $39,375.

In short, Chatham got 12.6 per cent more than its statutory amount of money; Randolph got 12.6 per cent more than its legal share. The other counties adjoining or nearby got amounts ranging from 18.8 per cent to 35.3 per cent less than the amounts ranging from 18.8 per cent to 35.5 per cent less than the amount they would have gotten under a strictly legal split.

Best Job In The U.S.A.

WASHINGTON—They say it's a job that nobody wants. They say there is nothing to do. They say it's degrading and boring. And yet, as we have seen in the past four weeks, there is no shortage of candidates for the Vice Presidency of the United States.

If the truth be known, it is probably the best job in the government and anyone would have to be bonkers to run it down.

This is what you get if you're Vice President of the United States. First salary of $65,500 a year, plus a $10,000 tax-free expense account.

Then you're entitled to a beautiful house on Massachusetts Avenue furnished and with a double bed fully equipped with mirrors, thanks to Vice President Rockefeller. The bed has mirrors on the front of it, the back of it and the side, so you can see if another bed is trying to pass you in heavy traffic.

You have your own seal which can be tacked onto the podium when you speak at a Rotarian or Kiwanis luncheon. You also get Secret Servicemen and a staff of office workers, in case the President asks you to write him a letter.

The Vice President can use Air Force One when the President isn't flying anywhere, and he can also sail down the Potomac on the yacht Sequoia when the President's children aren't using it.

But this isn't all. If no one on the President's staff has reserved it, you can sit in the Presidential Box at Kennedy Center and see the best shows in town—for free.

In recent years Presidents, who have promised to work more closely with their running mates, have instructed guards that the Vice President no longer has to wait in line across the street with the tourists before he can visit the public rooms of the White House.

Another advantage that goes with the job is that a Vice President can go to the funeral of any head of state he wants to at government expense. He can also get tickets to a Washington Redskins game on just a week's notice. They may be behind the goal post, but they're high enough up so that he and his family can almost see the entire field.

If this wasn't enough to fight for the job, the Vice President and his wife are guaranteed at least five invitations to White House dinners a year, one of them a white tie affair.

He also can attend any large function the President holds on the White House lawn providing he doesn't get in the way of the press photographers.

But the real beauty of being Vice President is that your time is your own. You don't have to clock in in the morning, nor do you have to check out at night. If someone calls up at 10 a.m. for a tennis game, you can always make it. If a rich friend wants you to come to Palm Springs for a long weekend, there is no one who will deduct time from your vacation.

When the President goes out of the country you can sneak into his Oval Office and sit in his chair. And if no one is looking, you can even talk to Moscow on the President's hot line.

The Vice Presidency is the second highest office in the land. For this reason people you have never heard of are constantly trying to get into your good graces. Some of them will offer free

Scant F-16 Sales

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some key defense officials are admitting that the Pentagon may have oversold the prospects for worldwide sales of about 3,000 new U.S.-built F16 fighter planes.

Not a single new F16 sale has been announced in the 14 months since Norway, Denmark, Belgium and The Netherlands agreed to buy 348 of the planes.

The Pentagon had dangled the opportunity to share in a worldwide F16 sales bonanza before the four NATO nations at a time when they were considering whether to buy the U.S. plane or a competing French Mirage F1 fighter.

After much behind-the-scenes maneuvering by rival French and U.S. officials, the four European allies finally chose the F16 over the Mirage in June 1975. Their deal with the Pentagon guaranteed them, among other things, a 15 per cent share in parts production for any F16s bought by "third countries."

With the U.S. Air Force and the four NATO countries planning to buy a total of 1,000 F16s, the Pentagon forecast made in 1974 and 1975 suggested that "third country" sales could total about 2,000 planes.

But so far, Pentagon officials say only a few countries have indicated a definite interest in the F16 even though its $8.7-million price makes it cheaper than other new U.S. fighters.

Although conceding that the Pentagon may have overstated the anticipated demand for the F16, officials deny there was (Continued on page 5)

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
JACKSON, Miss. — President Ford danced around a hostile Mississippi delegate's question Friday afternoon about Henry Kissinger being retained as Secretary of State, partially explaining the mood that prevented this state's delegation from being formally delivered to him to clinch the presidential nomination.

Mr. Ford's praise of Dr. Kissinger and other positions taken during the closed-door session with Mississippi delegates confirmed apprehension about the President held by Ronald Reagan's militant supporters. Although shattered by Reagan's disastrous embrace of ultra-liberal Sen. Richard Schweiker, hard-core Reagan delegates here are battling to the bitter end and are not yet quite ready to surrender. Indeed, Friday's question-and-answer session with the President spurred on the Reagan resistance.

That means a meager vein of hope persists here for Reagan keeping Mississippi's 30 delegates from going to Mr. Ford by majority vote under the unit rule. Although experienced politicians in the delegation tend to agree with state chairman Clarke Reed that the nomination is wrapped up and Mississippi might as well fall in line, enough right-wing delegates are holding out to probably keep the delegation uncommitted until it gets to Kansas City.

This state's Republican workers and contributors prefer Reagan so overwhelmingly over the President that the party's leaders are avoiding the probably inevitable endorsement of Mr. Ford until the last minute. And until that endorsement actually is made, Reagan's candidacy remains barely alive.

A classic Reagan bitter-ender is Malcolm Mabry, a 43-year-old state legislator and small farmer from Dublin, in the Mississippi Delta. An ardent Reaganite, he was stunned by Schweiker's selection and instantly decided to abandon Reagan. But after a sleepless night, Mabry changed his mind while working in the pea patch the next morning and determined that Vice President Schweiker was a lot easier to take than Secretary of State Kissinger.

During Friday's two-hour session with the President, Mabry asked him a two-part question: would he reappoint Kissinger, and does he still embrace detente in fact though not in name? Typically, Mr. Ford did not answer either question but described Kissinger as "very successful," defended the now nameless detente policy and declared the U.S. is militarily "stronger now than ever before."

Other Editors Say No Tax Break

(The Wilson Times)
 There is seldom any good news on the subject of taxes but we have to know the changes constantly being made in order to comply.

Taxpayers who occasionally use their homes in connection with their jobs and claim a tax reduction are in for bad news; Congress has voted to end the tax break. The proposed tax revision would exempt employees whose bosses provide them no office space.

The Senate Finance Committee eliminated from the big tax bill 11 of 73 special tax cut provisions that had been under attack as special interest legislation.

In deleting the amendments and scaling down five others, the committee agreed only that the provisions, because they are so controversial, should be put aside now and reconsidered later. Some of the disputed amendments would affect only one company. Others would provide tax benefits to numerous firms. In acting on the 16 proposals the committee chopped about $175 million of the estimated $1-billion-a-year cost of the package of 73 amendments.

In accepting the package of amendments to the catch-all tax bill for next year, the full Senate voted to make the deduction even harder to get than under the version approved by the House last year.

Other provisions approved by the Senate would make alimony payments easier for divorced husbands to deduct, replace the current sick-pay provisions with a new benefit for disabled retirees and make permanent a $1.7-billion tax cut for small business. The Senate action on business use of homes is aimed at clarifying a situation that has grown out of conflicting court rulings.

Many Americans now deduct a part of the cost of maintaining their home on grounds one room is used occasionally for job-related work. The Senate amendment would rule out such a deduction, unless the worker has no other office and must use his home regularly. Another provision would make it tougher to deduct the cost of maintaining a vacation home that is rented to others during most of the year. The two amendments together would save the Treasury $255 million a year.

To the editor:
 Waking up this morning and looking out the windows of my house, I saw something beautiful that I'm not accustomed to seeing. But I quickly realized, it was only the air, looking clear. Surprising how colorful everything looked, how happyfying the breathing in of pure air was.

I realized again something I suspect to be true. We get a lot of the happiness of life from such basic things. Maybe it's chemical — that could explain it-our bodies running at perfect attunement. I don't know, but I do know that if makes a big difference! And I suspect that some of the joy of living minute-to-minute, doing whatever we do, comes from this something that changes the way the earth looks and smells.

Of course you all know why this pure air was here-it rained hard the night before, and all the smoggy-stuff got blown or driven away. This doesn't happen very often.

But surely you've guessed the drift of my letter; to point out that we can have this every-day beauty for our own. When I ride my bike, I say things like this to myself, if I'm tired; pretty soon I will be healthy, and feel good; pretty soon I will be breathing cleaner air, and I will feel good.

With love,

Strength For Today

WHO IS GREAT?
 When the celebrated Louis XIV, the "sun kind" of France, was buried in 1715, the famous preacher, Pierre Massillon, was called upon to deliver the funeral oration. Stepping to the pulpit, he began his address by saying, "God alone is great."

As he uttered these words the whole congregation rose to its feet. He had put into words what was on everyone's mind. Early in his career Louis had been an excellent monarch, but later in life he had become in-involved in a series of wars which left thousands of French soldiers dead, ravaged huge areas of the Rhineland, and left the French nation almost bankrupt. The congregation, reflecting upon the career of the Sun King, certainly realized that God alone was great.

The sovereignty of God is the most overwhelming fact with which we have to deal. Upon the proper understanding of this law our happiness and true welfare depend.

Scholar Distrusts Big Govm't

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — As a member of both academia and business, W. Allen Wallis, has a rare perspective of the ongoing battle between big government and free enterprise, in the personal as well as business sense.

Wallis distrusts big government. He sees it as corrosive of human freedom, unable to produce on its promises, inimical to the market economy and prosperity, and wasteful.

These past four decades have been a test and a trial for Wallis. Scholar, university chancellor, corporate director, member of five presidential commissions, author, Wallis has been forced to watch government grow.

"In the past 40 years the trend in public affairs has been very adverse in the long term for freedom and prosperity, or maybe I should say for economic welfare," said Wallis in an interview this week.

His answer is a book, "An Over-Governed Society," made up of various speeches given over the years that poke holes in the belief that big government can solve everything. It is published by The Free Press, a division of Macmillan.

Wallis, 64, an economist and statistician, is now chancellor of the University of Rochester and a director of, among others, Eastman Kodak, Trans Union, Esmark, Bausch and Lomb, Macmillan and Metropolitan Life Insurance.

Avoiding political labels, he says he chooses the best of

One of the consequences of this minority power, he continues, is that government grows bigger and more involved in jobs it cannot do effectively, and that frustrated voters futilely seek to remedy the problem with more government.

In the process, he adds, the productive power of our market system and our personal freedoms are infringed upon. Promising but not fulfilling government grows and job-producing free enterprise is thwarted.

Unlike many corporate officials, Wallis doesn't blame economic teaching for the public opinion that permits government to grow. On the contrary, he says, the more economics education the more conservative students become.

Moscow had not broken any of its arms control commitments. "I was not inspired," Mabry said later. "I wonder whether it was worth driving 140 miles for." Other Reaganites were similarly displeased by Mr. Ford's replies on forced busing, the Panama Canal and his vice-presidential choice.
Even some key Ford supporters here fear Mabry all too clearly represents sentiment at the white rural grassroots in the Mississippi. Pessimism prevailed at the Ramada Inn here as party leaders awaited Mr. Ford. Chairman Reed, under assault from his closest associates for having yielded to White House blandishments, was uncharacteristically somber.

No less than three hours before the President's arrival, efforts were still being made to collect the majority vote that would finally clinch the delegation and the nomination. Jackson city commissioner Doug Shanks, Mr. Ford's aggressive young state leader, on Friday morning was still looking for stray delegates to put the President over.

But even delegates who had endorsed Mr. Ford following the Schweiker selection wanted to avoid the showdown that could finally alienate the Reaganites. Accordingly, when Republican national committeeman Victor Mavar telephoned Reagan this week to beg him for a desperate eleventh-hour visit here, he informed him that though the delegation was all but lost there was some slight hope.

Mavar and other Reaganites believe two things must happen to save Reagan here: first, Schweiker must show he generated at least a few delegates in the Northeast for Reagan; second, when Schweiker appears with Reagan here Wednesday, he must come off as a conservative. The difficulty of the first requirement and the incongruity of the second do not brighten Reagan's chances.

But even if Reagan does not fulfill those requirements, Malcolm Mabry will not desert him. In truth, the Malcolm Mabrys, not the Clarke Reeds, comprise the heart and soul of the Reagan campaign.

While philosophically inclined to Reagan, Reed never believed he could be nominated and consequently was impressed by mounting Ford delegate totals during July. Delegate counts did not bother Mabry even last Friday when he was still nagging the President about Kissinger and detente. Thanks to such bitter-end Reaganites, Mr. Ford very nearly lost his nomination and still could not finally wrap it up here last week.

were interrupted only by scattered clouds during the afternoon. High temperatures were mostly in the mid and upper 80s. They were slightly lower in the mountains.

Skies were clear through the night with the exception of patches of cloudiness over the mountains and western Piedmont.

Southerly winds will bring moisture into the state today. And cloudiness will begin to increase as a front from the Plains states continues to move southward. Scattered showers and thundershowers could develop over mountain and northern portions of North Carolina tonight as the front nears. These scattered thundershowers will spread over the state on Saturday.

Temperatures today reached into the mid and upper 80s, except for the mid 70s to low 80s in the mountains.

Overnight lows will range from the low to mid 60s in the mountains to around 70 near the coast.

Cloudiness along with scattered showers and thundershowers will keep temperatures a few degrees cooler Saturday.

Police Say 'Hairy' Beast Just A Prank

MOUNT HOLLY, N.C. (AP) — Gaston County police have labeled it childish prank, while wildlife protectors say there's nothing to it.

Whatever it is, Roger Hoffman is out to get it: what he calls a "7-foot, hairy black animal" he says he saw prowling around his Catawba Heights home last week.

Hoffman claims to have seen the mysterious animal last Friday night.

"I'm going to hunt that thing down and kill it," he said.

Wildlife spokesmen have told residents of the area there is no cause for alarm over reports that "something that looked like a big black beast" had chased a group of children through a wooded area near their home.

Hoffman said he "just laughed at them when the kids around here told me what they had seen. And that is what people are doing to me. They're laughing, but I'm telling you I'm not crazy."

"I was sitting out here on my doorstep and I could see straight down a path that goes down to the creek. What I saw was this big black thing. I ran inside and got my rifle and took off after it."

He spotted whatever it was in the woods and began firing.

Hoffman said, "I know I got a clear shot that hit him right under his left arm. I put six more into him. He fell one time but kept on going."

He added, "People are saying it's a bear, but I never saw a bear running on his back legs and I've done a lot of bear hunting."

Huskins was chairman of the subcommittee which wrote that act, and the formula for distributing Secondary Road funds; set up to be not only fair to all, but to prohibit transfer from one county to another, Huskins explained.

But Iredell gets $36,750 per mile while neighboring Wilkes gets $57,750 per mile; 24 per cent below the legal line for Iredell; 18.9 per cent more than its share for Wilkes.

Huskins also introduced another factor—the efficiency of division highway operations. A county where costs have been kept low is in effect penalized by being given a low cost-per-mile figure; where costs have run high, a higher variable is introduced.

groceries, others will offer you cash. You don't have to take either. But if you do and you're caught, all is not lost. You can always make a deal with the attorney general to plead "no contest," which he will happily accept so not to bring scandal on the country.

Then you can go back home and become an author of fiction and, with a good agent, earn twice as much as you did as Vice President.
Is it no wonder that so many people in this country have no interest in being President, but would give anything to be Vice President of the United States? If I ever dreamed Ronald Reagan was looking for a liberal to run with him on the Republican ticket, I would have put my application in long before he ever heard of Richard Schweiker.

A Restaurant For Plains, Ga.

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Rosalynn Carter snipped the red ribbon stretched across the door to officially open Plains only restaurant, an eight-table delicatessen, as a board of photographers and TV cameramen recorded the historic event.

In other Plains news Thursday, a city council hearing on a request to rezone property near Jimmy Carter's house from residential to commercial use was postponed until December, apparently because city fathers were wary of the interest the Carter press corps expressed in the meeting.

The owners of the property want to transform the abandoned house on the land to a souvenir store.

Although seemingly minor, both items are harbingers of the major and potentially destructive changes which appear to be in store for this little peanut farming community as the result of its most famous native son.

This summer, while Carter quietly spends most of his days, including today, making plans for the fall campaign, his normally somnolent home town is humming with activity, and its atmosphere is changing dramatically.

The block long main street has become one large tourist center, with hundreds of visitors wandering in and out of the few stores. Store fronts and windows are papered with advertisements for Carter books and a tour of Carter landmarks in addition to Carter posters and buttons.

The variety of souvenirs promoting the former Georgia governor and the peanut keep multiplying. Some of the latest are $15 peanut scarves and peanut belts, and a poster saying "Love is like peanut butter—just spread it around."

Because of the influx of cars, residents complain they can never find parking places on the main street, and the Georgia Department of Transportation is considering the installation of Plains' first traffic light.

Every Sunday, Plains Baptist Church, Carter's place of worship, overflows with journalists and tourists. On at least one occasion, regular church members couldn't even get in, and last Sunday, the Carter family pew was occupied unwittingly by tourists, forcing the presidential candidate and his wife to sit in the front row.

Most residents of Plains, however, say they are delighted that this hamlet of 683 persons has become a tourist attraction. Plains people "have held up real well. They've kept their good humor and happy disposition," said Maxine Reese, who is in charge of the Plains Carter campaign headquarters, housed in the old train depot.

Radioactive Items Gone

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Radioactive material, including uranium used in the world's first nuclear reactor, has been stolen from the American Museum of Atomic Energy, according to the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Although the items stolen are of little value because it was used in the first nuclear reactor built and operated at the University of Chicago in 1942.

The material could cause a skin burn if held continuously against the skin for several days, but would not make other items it contacts radioactive, ERDA officials said Thursday.

The radioactive material is a green disk measuring about one inch in diameter and one-fourth of an inch thick and mounted on a white plastic card measuring 2 1/2 inches by 3 1/4 inches.

Also missing are a cube of uranium metal and a radioactive card measuring 2 1/2 by 3 1/4 inches. The radioisotope Strontium 90 has been impregnated in the card, ERDA said.

The items were taken from exhibits and displays after considerable effort to remove or force protective enclosures, ERDA said.

The disk was used in a demonstration to show how a geiger counter measures radioactivity.

Much has been written about Italy's great players, who have dominated international bridge for the past two decades. However, they are not getting any younger. It seems, though, that a new generation of budding stars is ready to replace them. One of them is Antonio Vivaldi, who was particularly impressive during the recent 5th World Team Olympiad in Monte Carlo. Here is an example of his ability from the match between Italy and Australia.

East's decision to enter the bidding might not meet with general endorsement. On this hand, it actually gave declarer a vital clue to the play of the hand, and Vivaldi was quick to profit.

The hand might seem innocuous, but it is very easy to go down. Assume declarer reads West's opening lead as a singleton, which it surely must be when the defender does not lead the suit in which his partner has over-called. If declarer tries to prevent a club ruff by playing ace and another heart (it would be risky to take the heart finesse in view of East's overcall), West wins the king, gets to his partner with the ace of diamonds and scores his club ruff. Another diamond trick results in a one-trick set.

Vivaldi came up with a better solution that even netted an overtrick. Since the lead marked East with at least ten cards in the minors and, therefore, shortage in the majors, he elected to cut communications between the defenders' hands. The opening lead was covered by the jack and queen and won by the ace. The ace and queen of spades were cleared and declarer entered dummy by leading a trump to the ace. Now he cashed the king of spades, and when East discarded on this trick, all was well.

Declarer discarded a diamond on the king of spades, then continued with dummy's last spade on which he shed his remaining diamond. West won this trick, but now he had no way to get to East for a club ruff. Declarer ruffed the diamond return and forced out the king of trumps, then claimed the rest of the tricks. All he lost was trick in each major suit!

Light Vote Is Expected
RALEIGH (AP) — Only about 38 to 40 per cent of the state's registered Democratic voters and only 28-30 per cent of the registered Republicans are expected to go to the polls Aug. 17 for the state's primary election.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said he guesses that between 670,400 and 695,600 Democrats and between 160,150 and 171,500 Republicans will vote. In 1972, the Democratic turnout was 808,105, a record number, and the GOP turnout was 170,583, the party's second highest for a primary, Brock said.

The new primary date interferes with the public's normal months for relaxation—July and August, Brock said. Previously, North Carolina primaries were in May but the 1975 General Assembly changed the vote to August in hopes of shortening the time of campaigns, lessening the costs and easing the burden on voters hearing the rhetoric.

Averages Up At Farmville
FARMVILLE — Offerings yesterday on the Farmville Tobacco consisted of mostly primings and lugs, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"A few sheets of smoking leaves appeared for the first time and colors continued to increase in volume," Williams said. "The quality of the tobacco was the same as Wednesday and more sheets of lugs and cutters and leaf grades accounted for the steady increase in averages. Stabilization was considerably less than last year's. The price per pound yesterday was an 18 cents per pound increase over last year's same sale day," Williams said.

Thursday 714,776 pounds were sold on the Farmville Tobacco Market for $759,833 with an average of $106.31 per 100 pounds. To date the Farmville Tobacco Market has sold 5,685,136 pounds for $5,508,005 for a season's average of $96.88 per 100 pounds.

CHURCHMAN SAYS ANGOLA CONFLICT STILL GOES ON
By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — An American churchman back from a fact-finding trip to Angola says its churches are faring well in areas firmly controlled by the new government, but are in distress in the most populous, productive region of central Angola where the civil war continues.

"I was not prepared for the level of military activity still going on there," says the Rev. Lawrence W. Henderson, adding that it has not generally been reported because of limitations on news reporters. "There's a lot of fighting and it has increased considerably in recent weeks."

He says that in that central region, agriculturally the most productive "breadbasket" of the country, forces of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola — UNITA — led by Jonas Savinbi, still are in open struggle with those of the Movement for the Popular Liberation of Angola — MPLA — headed by Agostinho Neto, which claimed victory last February.

It has set up the new government at the capital at Luanda, and in that area, there is a general mood of church confidence and vitality, and of cooperation with the government, says the Rev. Mr. Henderson, an official of the United Church of Christ Board of World Ministries. "Up to this point, the government has consistently followed through on its promises of religious freedom," he said in an interview.

"The government is absolutely committed to a Socialist society, but I found no reason to believe its leaders intend to carry out any war against religion."

He said the government's political position of "scientific socialism" holds that religion is "just an appendix, a leftover from feudalism and capitalism" that needs to be replaced by a scientific outlook, but that so far, no attempts had been made to restrict religious teaching.

As part of a three-man team sent to gather information on the church situation in Angola for a report to a meeting of the World Council of Churches central committee in August, he said that south of the Luanda region in central Angola, strife and uncertainties remain. "There is conflict, open confrontation and fear," he said. "The churches, caught in the conflict between government troops and guerrillas, are forced to collaborate with the government in the cities. But in the rural areas where the government is not strong, the churches are seen as still resisting. Schools are not open and the people who fled to the bush still are there."

The Evangelical Church of Central Angola, related to the United Church of Christ in this country, is the predominant Protestant body in that region, while Methodists predominate in the Luanda region and Baptists in northern Angola. Roman Catholics are spread through the country.

report of the Congressional General Accounting Office, which says that $10 million is just a mirage. It will disappear under accurate bookkeeping. The people want someone to level with them."

It was an obvious reference to the troubled $405 million Medicaid contract Flaherty negotiated with a private firm. He has maintained that the contract saved the state at least $10 million over what it would have had to spend had the contract not been signed.

As proof, Flaherty has pointed to the fact that the company now says it is not getting enough money to meet the state's Medicaid obligations due to rising costs and the increasing number of elderly and poor persons getting aid.

Flaherty, in response said simply that "there's no question" but that the state is saving money. He said "when you're behind, you start throwing mud."

Privette was not deterred. At his next opportunity to speak, he attacked Flaherty's claim that under his administration, the Department of Human Resources saved $50 million through administrative efficiency.

Privette cited the more than 50 per cent increase in the department's budget since 1972. "The people can't afford that kind of savings," he said. Flaherty retorted that his claim was backed up by the 1973 Governor's Efficiency Study Commission. The money he was talking about was money that would have been spent had the commission's recommendations not been followed. Privette, a Baptist minister who resigned his pastorate to run for governor, had no record in office to defend. He was questioned about some of his past positions on public issues.

He was asked why he had abandoned his 1974 support for a tax reform package that would repeal the sales tax on food and make up for the revenue loss with increased taxes on the higher income brackets. He now favors a package of tax repeals and reductions that would directly benefit businessmen, such as the phasing out the inventory tax.

Privette said the average working man paid only $24 per year in sales taxes on food. He derived that figure by dividing sales tax collections by the total population of the state. Later, when the program was over, he acknowledged that by his logic, a working man with a family of four children pays $144 per year in state sales tax on food and an extra $48 in local food taxes.

He said he still felt that his package of business tax breaks would stimulate the economy, increase jobs and wages, and in the long run benefit the working man more than the sales tax repeal.

Privette also took a stand on the presidential choices facing the GOP. He said he thought Ronald Reagan would help the party more in North Carolina.

Another candidate, Wallace McCall, said he voted for Reagan and preferred him as a running mate. The other two candidates, Flaherty and Jacob Alexander, refused to be drawn into the divisive GOP presidential campaign. "I don't think it would be good for the party if I did," Flaherty said. Neither man would say whom he voted for or whom he felt would run stronger.

People all over the country have been hearing rumors that I was walking out. I wouldn't do that. I know where I was before the series started and I know where I am now. I do not take that lightly." The American Quest
First came the convictions... solid rock-like convictions... about man and his rights... convictions about God and the gifts with which He generously blessed mankind. Then, came a search to implement these convictions; the result was our Declaration of Independence.
American liberty like America itself had its beginning in the quest for spiritual identity. In the wilderness itself the pilgrim fathers searched and labored to build a civilization based on their religious convictions. They probed their minds and hearts and discovered that they shared a common vision of "one nation under God." Again, the Declaration was the inspired result.
If our third century is to be one of "independence," like the two that have preceded it, all of us must continue this quest, and maintain this eternal vigilance of faith and religious commitment.

Ford Hunts Running Mate; Reagan Is 'Using' His

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is hunting for a vice presidential candidate but Republican challenger Ronald Reagan, who already found one, is busy hunting convention delegates in his running mate's home state.

Presidential spokesman Ron Nessen has confirmed that Ford will wait until after the GOP convention in Kansas City to name a running mate. But he said Ford has expanded the list of Republicans whose advice he will consider in making that choice.

The President sent letters to 350 GOP mayors and elected local officials Thursday to ask their views on a vice presidential nominee. He already had asked the opinions of all 4,518 delegates and alternates to the convention, all Republican members of the Senate and House and some high-ranking party leaders. Meanwhile, Reagan and his running mate, Sen. Richard Schweiker, head into Pennsylvania today hoping to add to the six new delegates they picked up in New York and New Jersey on Thursday.

The joint campaigning effort won the pledged support for Reagan from two delegates in New York and four in New Jersey. But the former California governor still trails Ford in an Associated Press delegate survey, with neither candidate having the 1,130 delegates needed for nomination.

Ten days before the convention's start, Ford has 1,100 delegates to Reagan's 1,035. The AP total counts only those delegates publicly stating a preference or legally bound — not those leaning toward a candidate.

Pennsylvania now stands 76 for Ford, 10 for Reagan and 17 uncommitted. The uncommitted delegates are prime targets of the Reagan-Schweiker hunt, but Schweiker says he feels Pennsylvania's support of the President may be eroding.

In campaigning with Schweiker in Mississippi, New York and New Jersey, Reagan has claimed that adding the liberal Schweiker to the conservative Reagan team boosted the campaign.

"I'm very optimistic. I don't believe we lost support any place" he said Thursday. He said Schweiker's selection "was aimed at November, not August."

Schweiker added: "We believe this is the only kind of base that can beat Jimmy Carter." He said the Democratic ticket of Carter and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota would beat a GOP ticket headed by Ford.

A possible running mate on the Ford ticket, former Texas Gov. John Connally, said Thursday it would be "difficult" for him to turn down an invitation to run with the President.

While asserting that he is not a candidate for the job, Connally said at a gathering in Detroit that if it were offered "I'd have to have a long, detailed discussion about it."

Connally heatedly labeled attempts of some GOP congressmen to scuttle his consideration for the Ford ticket by linking him to the Watergate scandal as "a hatchet job."

"I wasn't involved in Watergate. It only seems to me that they want to hurt the President," he said.

In Washington, Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., defended Connally. He called criticism of Connally's nomination by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., "unfounded, unfair and a disservice to the nation."

Findley had said in a letter to Bellmon that adding Connally to the Ford ticket would prove "a disaster."

"Connally is indelibly associated in the public mind with Watergate. His nomination would put the ticket on the defensive throughout the campaign," Findley wrote. Connally earlier had been criticized by Reps. Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., and William Cohen, R-Maine.

Connally was found innocent of charges that he had taken a bribe to gain an increase in milk prices, in return for political contributions to Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

A Democrat when governor of Texas, he jumped to the Republican party while serving as Treasury secretary in the Nixon administration.

Connally also won the support Thursday of a possible rival for the No. 2 position on a Ford ticket, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee.

"I have no reservations about having Connally on the ticket. He is an outstanding man and politician," said Baker, frequently mentioned as a possible Ford running mate. "Like everyone else, he has pluses and minuses."

On the Democratic side, Mondale assured fellow Senate Democrats on Thursday that the national ticket would work closely with Senate, House and gubernatorial races. He also met with AFL-CIO President George Meany to discuss what he called campaign issues, particularly "the need for a full-employment policy."

Mondale said he and Carter were invited by Meany to attend later this month an AFL-CIO executive board meeting at which the board is expected to ratify Meany's endorsement of the Democratic ticket.

Carter, meanwhile, remained in his home town of Plains, Ga. His only public appearance came at a ribbon-cutting ceremony of the town's sole restaurant.

A Carter spokesman said the candidate will set politics aside for the next few days while he drains a pond near his mother's home.

Telecommunication Surge Seen

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) —

Protesters orchestrating demonstrations over the air, prostitutes soliciting customers and police fighting back with electronic jamming — all are possibilities envisioned in a federal government study of the future of citizens band radio.

The wild proliferation of the small-talk medium could cause international protests in the next few years as CBers snarl world-wide communications, the report speculates.

And through it all, the Federal Communications Commission may be powerless to step in and regulate the chaos.

The report was prepared by Arthur D. Little Inc., a private consulting firm, for the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy.

In a series of scenarios, the study speculates about developments in telecommunications over the next 15 years. The scenarios are not predictions but, in the words of the study, are "futable" — they could happen.

The report also envisions: —The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. carrying all television service into homes over phone lines. TV stations stop broadcasting on the air.

—The U.S. Postal Service jeopardized by competition from private firms. The rivals deliver color facsimiles of letters into homes over the telephone network and electronically provide newspapers and magazines that can be read on television screens.

—A government-run communications satellite system that carries educational programs, medical information, defense data and also competes with private carriers, such as AT&T.

The CB scenario envisions antibusing demonstrators using radios to organize riots. But by 1977, it says, police will have learned to jam CB conversations by broadcasting noise on the channels.

Other uses will create problems as well. Lookouts will warn bandits of approaching police, and prostitutes will cruise the streets broadcasting their offers.

In 1977, the scenario says, scrambling equipment will be on the market that will allow private conversations. And there will be calling equipment that will let CBers dial base stations as though they had telephones.

In 1978, the report says, increased sunspot activity will cause American CB conversations to skip thousands of miles, disrupting communications in Europe and South America. This will bring complaints to the United Nations.

By 1979, the FCC will have virtually abandoned efforts to enforce its rules. Faulty CB equipment will interfere with television and FM radio.

By 1980, 100 FM channels will be freed for CB use. The sound quality on these channels will be better, but people who want licenses to use them will have to submit recordings of their voices so that regulators can identify violators of federal rules.

In 1984, the FCC will ban CB voice communication on all but the FM channels, and by 1986, there will be 10 million radios in use on these channels.

Russian Nuclear Tests Analysis Is Hampered

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. intelligence review is underway to determine if the Soviets violated the spirit of a landmark nuclear agreement with two powerful underground blasts in July.

The analysis is hampered so far by limited information about the terrain of the two Russian test sites and by what U.S. officials call "a rather wide band of uncertainty in regard to the exact yields of these explosions."

However, officials say preliminary indications appear to point to a Soviet infraction of the treaty's intent — but not the legal letter of the accord since the pact has not yet been ratified by the Senate.

The suspicious blasts occurred July 4 at Semipalatinsk, in the south central region of the country, and July 29 at Azgir near the Caspian Sea. The question is whether they had a force in excess of 150 kilotons, the ceiling agreed to by then-President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow in 1974.

Reporters traveling in Iran with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were told Thursday that the Russians may have violated the spirit of the agreement. Officials here claimed the Russians had said last spring that the Soviet Union did not intend "to take any action incompatible with the provisions of the treaty," on the understanding the United States would also observe its provisions.

The treaty had been held up while U.S. and Soviet negotiators completed a parallel pact prohibiting peaceful underground explosions in excess of 150 kilotons. The two treaties then were sent for ratification to the Senate July 29, the same day the Soviets ran their second test. A kiloton is equivalent to 1,000 tons of TNT.

Both Tass, the Soviet News agency, and Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, informed Russian readers last spring that no Russian tests prohibited under the pact would be carried out as long as the United States observed the agreement.

At the White House, spokesman Ron Nessen said "the rough range they're (analysts) looking at straddles 150 kilotons. It could be above or below."

He said President Ford received reports from the National Security Council on July 7 and July 30 and an additional report Thursday on the first blast.

Asked if Ford would consider the Soviets in violation of the spirit of the treaty if the explosion exceeded 150 kilotons, Nessen said he could not comment since "the scientists have not yet determined the size of the tests."

Four Accidents Here Thursday

An estimated $5,550 property damage resulted yesterday from a series of four collisions investigated by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12 Noon mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 50 feet East of the Kirkland Drive intersection involving cars driven by Lisa Jo Murad of 2006 Fern Dr. and Grady Gray Turnage of Route 2, Ayden.

Police, who charged Turnage with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Murad car and $1,000 to the Turnage vehicle.

No charges were reported in a 12:03 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Line Avenue involving vehicles driven by Kenneth Charles Meeks of Kinston and Donald Eugene Reese of Glendale Court Apts.

Investigators estimated damage to the Meeks truck at $150 and set damage to the Reese car at $1,000.

Shirley Ann Gardner of Lillburn, Ga., was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 6:25 p.m. mishap on Dickinson Avenue, 144 feet East of the Truman Street intersection.

Police reported the Gardner car collided with an auto operated by Ida Vernett Payton of Route 4, Greenville, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Payton car and $300 damage to the Gardner auto.

No charges were reported following investigation of the fourth mishap, a 10 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Jarvis Streets involving vehicles driven by Marlene Mulls Austin of Edenton and Diane White Krage of Route 9, Greenville.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $250 to the Austin car and $750 to the Krage vehicle.

Depression Is Building Up

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression about 400 miles off Florida's East Coast gathered strength today. Forecasters said it could become a tropical storm by tonight, but there was no immediate threat to the mainland.

At noon EDT, the depression's 35-mile-per-hour winds were centered near 26.5 north latitude and 73 west longitude, or about 400 miles east of West Palm Beach and 250 miles northeast of Nassau, Bahama. Forecaster Miles Lawrence said conditions favored some strengthening of the weather system, which was expected to remain stationary through today. He warned marine interests in the Bahamas to exercise caution. If the depression becomes a tropical storm it will be called Belle.

Loyal Only To Reagan

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina delegate to the Republican National Convention said today that "under no circumstances" would he support U.S. Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., for the Republican vice presidential nomination but that he would carry out his pledge to support Ronald Reagan for the presidential nomination.

Saying he was "very disappointed" in Reagan's selection of Schweiker for a running mate, Jack Bailey said in a statement that Reagan "has shown he, too, is a politician and will do what is politically expedient rather than stand on his own principles." "For this reason, my support of Ronald Reagan will never be quite the same," Bailey continued. "I am one delegate who, however, intends to keep his word. When I became a delegate, I promised to attend the convention and I promised to vote for Reagan and I will do both."

He said if Reagan is nominated, "I personally will support Sen. Jesse Helms as his running mate."

Former Bank Employee Files $464,646 Suit

NEW BERN — A former employee of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. in Greenville has filed suit in U.S. Eastern District Court, seeking $464,646 in damages from the bank and two of its officers here. Attorneys for Buell Thomas Allen filed the complaint against Wachovia, R. Wallace Howard, a Wachovia senior vice-president and Northeast Regional Manager, and J. Reid Hooper, vice-president and Greenville City Executive, July 16.

Allen, a former assistant vice-president and manager of Wachovia's main office in Greenville, alleges in his complaint that he was fired on August 12, 1975 for alleged "dishonesty in performing job," and was subsequently tried in Federal Court and found not guilty on charges of wrongful application of bank funds and embezzlement. The complaint alleges that one Federal Bureau of Investigation investigation check into the case resulting in a U.S. Attorney declining prosecution in the

Student Tax Credit Is Supported By Senate

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is recommending a $250-a-year tax cut to help students pay their way through college or vocational school. The special credit would start out at $100 next July 1 and rise by $50 a year until it hit the maximum $250 in 1980.

If the student had a job and filed his own tax return, he could subtract up to $250 from taxes owed. Otherwise, the tax credit would go to the student's parents or spouse, whichever paid his college expenses for tuition, books or fees. The credit does not cover room and board expenditures. The credit, written into a multibillion-dollar tax bill Thursday, would cost the U.S. treasury $1.1 billion a year when fully effective. No similar credit was contained in the House version of the tax bill. The Senate also: —Approved a sweeping revision of the estate tax, which would reduce government revenues by $2 billion a year. The effect would be to exempt from the tax all but the richest 2 per cent of estates. Current law applies to the top 7 per cent. The House is considering similar legislation.

Bank Resources Show Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina state banks showed an increase of more than $160.3 million in resources for the year ending June 30, it was reported today by John R. Tropman, state commissioner of banks. The total resources reported by state banks as of that date amounted to more than $5.1 billion.

Greenville Mart Price Average Remains High

Price average on the Greenville Tobacco Market remained high Thursday as local warehouses recorded a figure of $104.22 per hundred pounds. J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor for the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, said that the market sold 1,156,416 pounds for $1,205,225 in recording the local average. Stabilization receipts continued low yesterday as only 17.31 per cent of total sales went to the government loan program. Cutters and leaves made up the majority of local sales Thursday with less primings and non-descript tobacco on the floors. For the week, the market has sold 9,467,282 pounds for $9,216,964, an average of $97.36.

The second inquiry, according to the complaint, resulted in a three-count felony indictment which was tried and that the plaintiff "was acquitted of all charges and discharged from custody." Allen's complaint continues, "By reason of the defendants' acts, which caused the false imprisonment and malicious prosecution of the plaintiff, plaintiff lost time from work and suffered great mental anguish, physical discomfort, and damage to his reputation in the community..." The complaint then asks for $364,646 in compensatory damages and $100,000 in exemplary and punitive damages from the defendants.

Big Marijuana Crop Is Seized

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Deputies and SBI agents raided a Wilkes County farm Thursday and seized marijuana estimated to have a $700,000 street value, according to Sheriff Bill Anderson. The sheriff said 14,903 plants were taken from a dozen patches, some in a corn field and others in wooded areas, on the farm in the Roaring River area of the county. Anderson said officers worked from 10 a.m. to about 7 p.m. pulling up plants that ranged as high as 12 feet. They made up three large pickup loads and were taken to the Wilkes County jail and held pending destruction of the crop, the sheriff said. Anderson said no arrests had been made.

Carolina Captures Summer Loop Title

CHAPEL HILL—Randy Warrick took personal pride in downing East Carolina University last night as he led the Tar Heels of North Carolina to a 7-3 win in the finals of the Summer League playoffs.

The wins enabled the Heels to sweep the league's titles, having won the regular season title earlier.

Carolina went through the double elimination tournament without a loss. It was the first trip to the finals in six years of play for East Carolina.

The Bucs gained an early 2-0 lead, but couldn't hold onto it as Carolina took the lead in the third and sewed it up in the fifth and sixth.

Warrick banged out just two hits in the game, but one was a two-run double and the other a three-run triple, giving him five runs-batted-in, more than enough for the Tar Heel victory.

Kevin Haerberle banded in the other two with a single—one of three hits he got.

The Pirates got only one less hit overall than did the Tar Heels, 9-8, but they couldn't do the same damage with them.

Billy Davis took the loss, dropping his record to 6-4 for the season, while Greg Norris won going to 5-3. Pete Conaty came in to relieve Davis in the fifth.

The Bucs started the scoring in the opening frame, scoring twice Rick Koryda walked and Robert Brinkley singled to center. Sonny Wooten banded out a double to right, scoring both runners.

The Pirate lead held until his rampage. P. J. Gay reached on a fielder's choice that left two out. Mike Fox followed with a walk and Haerberle beat out an infield hit to load the bases.

Warrick then cracked out a triple to deep center, driving in all three to put the Tar Heels into the lead.

The Pirates tied it up in the fifth. Howard McCullough singled and Jerry Carraway ran for him, stealing second. He moved on to third on an out and scored on Brinkley's single.

But the Tar Heels immediately went back out, this time to stay. They scored two in the bottom of the fifth for a 5-3 lead. Fox singled and Haerberle walked. Warrick greeted Conaty to the mound with a double, driving in both runners.

The other two runs came in the sixth. Kevin Cadell walked and Gay reached on a sacrifice. Fox walked to load them up, and Haerberle singled in both Cadell and Gay for the final seven-run total.

The contest ended the 1976 season for the North Carolina Collegiate Summer League.

Two Exhibitions Slated Tonight

By The Associated Press

The last time he saw Joe Washington, Coach Chuck Fairbanks stood on the sidelines cheering on the young freshman halfback. Tonight, four years later, Fairbanks will be on those same sidelines trying to devise a way to stop him.

The change in the coach's allegiance occurred, of course, when the two parted the college scene at Oklahoma for the pros — Fairbanks to the New England Patriots and Washington to the San Diego Chargers.

Those teams will oppose each other in a National Football League preseason game, one of two scheduled tonight.

The site makes the Fairbanks-Washington confrontation even more interesting — they are returning to Owen Field at Norman, Oklahoma, the first pro game to be played there since 1959. A crowd of 40,000 is expected to cheer their old favorites.

The other game will match two neighbors, the Washington Redskins and the Baltimore Colts at Baltimore, a battle between two of the NFL's powerhouses.

Oklahomans get still another chance to greet their old heroes on Saturday afternoon when the Cleveland Browns play the Atlanta Falcons in the first pro game ever at Stillwater, Okla., home of Oklahoma State.

On Saturday night, Buffalo will play at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Kansas City, New Orleans at Houston, Dallas at Los Angeles in a nationally-televised game, Tampa Bay and Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago and Seattle at Spokane and St. Louis and Oakland at Phoenix.

Two games will be played Sunday afternoon, Miami at Detroit and Denver at San Francisco. On Monday night, the New York Jets and Pittsburgh plays at Philadelphia.

Washington will not be the only former Oklahoma player Sooner fans can cheer. The game will almost resemble an alumni affair with San Diego also bringing in former Sooner guard Kevin Grady and former Sooner assistant coach Rudy Feldman.

Fairbanks has five ex-Oklahoma players — tight end Al Chandler, running back Leon Crosswhite, nose guard Raymond Hamilton and linebackers Rod Shoate and Steve Zabel.

Each team opened preseason play with victories last week — San Diego beat Philadelphia 20-7 and New England stopped the New York Giants in overtime 13-7. Washington, in his pro debut, ran for one touchdown and rushed for 38 yards.

The Redskins and Colts also opened on successful notes last week and are expected to play their regulars a good portion of this neighborhood rivalry. Baltimore has a bit of an added incentive, having been beaten by Washington four straight times in exhibition games.

The fans at Stillwater on Saturday could have some problems deciding whether to cheer or boo. They won't have any trouble pulling for former Oklahoma State football and wrestling star Jerry Sherk, a tackle with Cleveland. But what do they do about running back Greg Pruitt and cornerback Tony Peters of the Browns, who played at bitter rival Oklahoma?

Both teams lost their opponents, Atlanta to Washington and Cleveland to Baltimore.

When the New York Yankees handed out Vida Blue's background, one Milwaukee writer said "that may be a museum piece." At the time the deal with Oakland had been voided by the baseball commissioner.

Meeting Is Postponed By Group Seeking To Form New Conference

GREENSBORO—The proposed meeting between a number of schools investigating the possibility of a new conference was postponed yesterday.

Dick Blake, assistant to East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins, said several presidents of universities that were to attend the Greensboro meeting were out of the country and it was felt that a meeting Thursday without them would not serve any real purpose.

"We don't want these meetings yet to get beyond the level of the presidents," Blake said. "So those involved felt that it would be best to postpone the meeting for a while."

Blake said that individual contacts with schools would continue during the coming weeks, however.

Schools which attended an earlier meeting included East Carolina, South Carolina, Southern Mississippi, Florida State, Richmond, William & Mary and Virginia Military Institute. Invitations had also been sent to Virginia Tech and West Virginia, but they had not attended. Several other schools, including the University of Miami, had asked to be kept informed.

It takes six schools to form a conference under NCAA rules. Although Florida State has since joined in the Metro Six basketball conference, Blake said that it remained interested in a new league, and that feelers are being extended to other schools in the South.

"We now expect to have another meeting in September or October," he said. "Then, perhaps another at the NCAA meeting in Miami in January."

Cincinnati Opens Up Ten-Game Lead With 3-2 Win Over Dodgers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers have been chasing Cincinnati up a hill all season, but have finally run into a big Red stop sign, it seems.

The Reds have put some daylight between themselves and their closest pursuers in the National League West, opening up a formidable 10-game lead with Thursday night's 3-2 victory over the Dodgers.

The pace has the defending World Champions going like 100 this season.

"We can honestly win 30 games or more," said the Cincinnati manager after the runaway Reds won their 70th game of the season. "I know we're a good team, and every year from the spring we point to winning 100 games."

The Reds won 108 games last season and figure to hit the century mark again, the way they've been playing of late. They've won eight of their last nine games and 24 of 32.

The Philadelphia Phillies are dominating the East Division the way Cincinnati is the West. With Thursday night's 5-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh's 7-4 loss to the New York Mets, the Phillies have opened a stunning 14-game lead over the Pirates.

In other National League action, the San Diego Padres trimmed the Houston Astros 4-3, the San Francisco Giants nipped the Atlanta Braves 2-1 and the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 4-3 in the first game of a doubleheader before rain washed out the second game.

Tony Perez slugged a bases-empty homer, Pete Rose doubled and singled twice and Fred Norman scattered seven hits to lead Cincinnati over Los Angeles. Perez' 12th homer, coming off loser Don Sutton, 12-9, gave the Reds a 3-0 lead.

George Foster drove in his 83rd run with a single in the third inning and Dave Concepcion singled home Cincinnati's second run in the fourth. Norman, 11-2, posted his fifth straight victory by striking out six, including Reggie Smith three times.

Phillies 5, Cardinals 2
Ollie Brown's home run triggered a four-run Philadelphia fifth inning and helped the Phillies beat St. Louis in a rain-shortened eight-inning game. Hector Cruz' homer had provided the Cards with a 2-0 lead in the second inning.

Mets 7, Pirates 4
Jon Matlack pitched and batted New York over Pittsburgh with relief help from Skip Lockwood. The New York starter allowed all of Pittsburgh's six hits before leaving the game in the fifth inning. In addition, Matlack drove in one run and scored another as the Mets hammered four Pirate pitchers for 17 hits.

Padres 4, Astros 3
Doug Rader drove in two runs and Dave Friesleben and Butch Metzger combined on an eight-hitter, lifting San Diego over Houston.

Giants 2, Braves 1
Gary Thomasson smashed a home run, then doubled and scored the go-ahead run as San Francisco trimmed Atlanta. Thomasson hit Phil Niekro's second pitch of the game into the right-field seats for his fourth homer of the season.

Why there's a shortage of Miller High Life.

We're brewing more Miller High Life Beer than ever. But Americans are also drinking more Miller High Life than ever. In each of the last two years, we've experienced greater sales percentage increases than any other major brewer in the industry. And this overwhelming demand has created shortages in some areas.

If you're having a problem finding enough of our beer, please accept our apologies. We're working around the clock to bring you an adequate supply as quickly as possible.

We're even building another brewery, our fourth, which will be in operation early next year. There's only one thing we refuse to do. And that's rush our brewing process.

Because it's the quality of our beer that has made us a success in the first place.

America's quality beer. Since 1855.

Some Trading Is Expected

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the National Basketball Association has held its dispersal draft, a number of NBA teams might think it only fair that the Portland Trail Blazers hold one of their own.

If they did, the Trail Blazers probably would collect almost as much for their two front lines alone as the NBA took in for the 12 American Basketball Association players selected Thursday.

For example, how much do you think other NBA teams would fork over if they could take home Bill Walton or Sidney Wicks or Moses Malone or Maurice Lucas? Lloyd Neal would not come cheap either, and no doubt someone would pay a few shekels for former No. 1 draft pick Larue Martin and current No. 1 draft pick Wally Walker.

All but Walker, who has yet to sign, belong to the Trail Blazers now after they selected Lucas and Malone in the telephone draft conducted at the NBA league office here.

They had to trade All Star guard Geoff Petrie, the last original player from Portland's 1970 expansion club, to Atlanta with reserve Steve Hawes to get Atlanta's No. 2 selection spot in the draft.

But it appears there are NBA general managers willing to send Portland adequate replacements in the following days and weeks if the Trail Blazers will part with some of their big men.

Veteran 6-9 forward Sidney Wicks once again found himself a big name in the trade rumor mill and there also was speculation that Malone would not be with the Blazers for long.

Portland probably will get its money's worth after shelling out $350,000 for the 6-10 Malone and $300,000 for the 6-9 Lucas, two of the ABA's bright young stars last season with St. Louis and Kentucky, respectively.

With the prices for the players pre-determined, only the Chicago Bulls dropped more into the kitty. They paid $1.1 million for 7-2 center Artis Gilmore of Kentucky, the top prize in the draft, which was still another step toward completing the merger agreement between the NBA and ABA.

Chicago had the first selection by virtue of its won-lost record last year, the worst of any of the 18 NBA teams or the four ABA teams that will be part of the merger this season.

The other high-priced selections were guard Ron Boone of St. Louis, picked No. 3 by Kansas City for $250,000; forward Marvin Barnes of St. Louis, selected No. 4 by Detroit for $500,000, and guard Bird Averitt of Kentucky, picked No. 8 by Buffalo for $125,000. Buffalo swapped picks with Milwaukee and threw in a second-round draft pick next spring to get a shot at Averitt.

In all, 12 of the 20 available players from the St. Louis and Kentucky franchises were selected — all but one on the first of the three rounds of the draft — and the teams paid a total of $2,832,750 for them. The money will be used to cover obligations to ABA players, the Kentucky and St. Louis franchises and those NBA teams which gave up original draft rights to the players involved.

The eight players not selected become free agents.

Allin Takes B.C. Lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Buddy Allin, riding high with an eight-under-par 63 in the first round of the B.C. Open golf tournament, wants badly to win this one.

If he does, Allin, winner of the Pleasant Valley Classic on Sunday, will qualify for the 1976 World Series of Golf.

A victory in this $200,000 event, he said, would enable him to get into the select field. But if he fails, he still has a chance to make the classic before the end of the month.

Jerry McGee, with only one victory in 10 years on the PGA tour, was in the clubhouse with a six-under-par 65 when Allin was making his surge Thursday.

Allin began with four straight birdies and finished his round with 10 of them against only two bogies. He one-putted 11 greens as he turned in a course record 63 at the par-71, 6,868-yard En-Joie Golf Club.

Coo Coo, Not Acting That Way, Seeks Win

By JERRY GARRETT

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Stock car racers are supposed to have macho, rough-tough nicknames like Fireball, or Boom Boom, or Black Jack, or even Silver Fox, or King Richard. But not Coo Coo. Anything but Coo Coo.

Coo Coo Marlin—his birth certificate says Clifton—says of Sunday's $200,000 Talladega 500. "I feel I have a chance to win this race." People might think Marlin gets his nickname from making statements like that (he actually got it from his parents over noises he made as a baby).

But Marlin backs up his pitch with a reputation for being one of the hardest chargers at the big tracks like Alabama International and Daytona.

"I do very well at Talladega and Daytona because I'm in the ball game as far as horsepower goes," said the 44-year-old Marlin, who's not afraid to use all his horses. "Where I lose out is in not having a topnotch man to set up the car for handling. You've got to handle in most of the major races, but handling isn't a big factor at Daytona and Talladega."

Marlin's only victory in 10 years on the NASCAR Grand National circuit has been at Daytona, in a 125-mile qualifying race for the Daytona 500. He was second there in the past 500 until his Chevrolet's transmission froze.

But between then and now, this season has been a tough one for the colorful ex-politician from Tennessee. He injured his shoulder at Alabama International last May in a qualifying session crash, and he's only now getting back into form.

"I tore up a good race car pretty bad here in May," Marlin said. "A wheel collapsed and put me into the wall pretty hard. I haven't always had the best luck at this place."

Based on Thursday's qualifying, though, Marlin feels his luck may be changing. "I go into the race with high hopes. We're competitive in the speed department."

"This is the engine we will run unless something happens to it before Sunday. We'll scuff in some tires, do some fine tuning and see what happens through 500 miles."

Marlin very nearly had the pole position for Sunday's chase. His 189.695 miles an hour run earned a standing ovation from the crowd.

Dave Marcis eventually edged into the No. 1 position on the second and final lap of his qualification run. The first one was too slow, but the next time he was 253 of a second faster than Marlin, at 190.651 m.p.h. It was the fourth consecutive pole at Alabama International for Marcis and his Dodge.

In the second row are A.J. Foyt and Benny Parsons, followed by Bobby Allison and Neil Bonnette, Buddy Baker and Cale Yarborough.

David Pearson, the "Silver Fox," qualified 11th. "King Richard" Petty was 14th of Thursday's 15 qualifiers. Another 15 will make the line-up today, with final 10 due Saturday.

New Grip Helps Bert Hurl Rangers To Win

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
Bert Blyleven, a major league pitcher since 1970, only recently learned how to throw a fastball.

Lacking one major tool of the trade for much of his career, Blyleven still has managed 104 victories. The latest came Thursday night when Blyleven relied on his usual baffling curve ball and a newly-discovered fastball to pitch the Texas Rangers to a 1-0 victory over the California Angels.

Blyleven, a 25-year-old right-hander, has been a stone's throw away from superstardom in his career. It now turns out that the thrown stone was a fastball.

Sid Hudson, Texas' pitching coach, said Blyleven's problem was in the palm of his hand all the time. Hudson merely had Blyleven change the grip on his fastball.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox edged the Detroit Tigers 5-4; the Baltimore Orioles topped the Cleveland Indians 6-2; the Kansas City Royals downed the Minnesota Twins 6-4, and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees 9-3 in a rain-shortened six-inning game.

Thursday night, the Rangers scratched out a run in the second inning. Jeff Burroughs lofted a wind-blown double, moved to third on Tom Grieve's sacrifice and scored on Len Randle's sacrifice fly.

Blyleven, 9-12, allowed only two runners to reach second base and forced 16 Angels to ground out. "I tried to kick myself in the tail from the sixth inning on and keep the ball down," said Blyleven, who recorded his fourth shutout of the season.

Orioles 6, Indians 2
Third baseman Doug DeCinces, emerging from Brook Robinson's long shadow, is beginning to build his own reputation.

"I'm just starting to play regularly," said DeCinces, who belted a home run and a two-run triple to pace the Orioles' attack. "I have to prove to the fans, especially the fans in Baltimore that I'm good enough to fill in for Brooks."

Royals 6, Twins 4
The Royals won their 64th game of the season and Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said they only have to win 31 of their last 58 games to grab the title in the AL West.

"I think 95 will do it," said Herzog after Fred Patek's two-run tie-breaking single in the sixth inning propelled the Royals to a three-game sweep of the Twins, 11½ games back.

Brewers 9, Yankees 3
Reliever Danny Frisella struck out five of the six batters he faced, including Thurman Munson and Lou Piniella, to thwart a Yankee rally in the fifth inning. The game was called because of rain after six innings.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 4
Rookie Butch Hobson slugged a two-run homer and Jim Rice added a solo shot to lead the Red Sox to their sixth victory in the last seven games. The Tigers have lost five straight.

Lee Campaign Is Issue-Oriented

THE WINNING CAR — Driven by Russell and Mary Beth Benore of Toledo, Ohio, the 1912 Detroit-Abbott hits the ribbon after crossing the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco on Wednesday to become the winning car in a 6,157-mile race from Istanbul, Turkey, to San Francisco.

The event began as a re-enactment of a 1906 race around the world and the Istanbul to San Francisco course was selected after the sponsoring committee ran into difficulties in obtaining travel permits from the Soviet union. (AP Wirephoto)

RALEIGH (AP) — Can a black man, the son of a Lithonia, Ga., sharecropper, be elected lieutenant governor of North Carolina?

"No," said that man, "not if he goes out and runs as a black man. I haven't run as a black man; I've run as a candidate and I think I've been able to dispel a great deal of racial hangup that might influence the people's decision."

Howard Lee, 41, is that man. A former mayor of Chapel Hill, Lee notes there's a group that will vote against him on racial grounds, "while at the same time there's a group that will vote for me because I'm black. I have always felt ... that these two groups tended to cancel each other out."

Lee's campaign is issue-oriented and he says it has reached all segments of North Carolina society. "My campaign ... is the most integrated campaign that has ever been put together in this state by any candidate for any office," he said in a recent interview.

His backers include supporters of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, rich and poor, young and old and conservative and liberal. "In other words we cut across every line," he said.

Lee was the underdog in 1969 when he was elected mayor of Chapel Hill with a 52 per cent margin. Two years later he took 64 per cent of the vote and led his opponent five-to-one in 1973.

"I'm one of those candidates who can be said to come from the bottom of the barrel. I've come up through the ranks; I've come up against great obstacles; and, I've come up through sheer determination and help from a lot of people," the mustachioed ex-mayor said.

His political experience has given him the belief that "people will be mighty surprised when the vote comes in as to the fact that people are not voting along racial lines."

He has faced hostile groups, he said, and when the speech was over, the mood had changed. "I dare anybody to listen to a Howard Lee speech and leave not feeling good about Howard Lee. If they don't support me they, at least, will leave with a sense of respect."

A technique Lee uses to handle hostility is to confront the racial issue headon by telling an audience that some people believe he cannot win because he's black. "I make it very clear ... that I'm not running to be the black lieutenant governor, but to be lieutenant governor and I just happen to be black; now let's get on with the issue."

More than most other candidates for the office, Lee has carefully staked out his position on issues, drawing up detailed position papers and making himself available to questions on the issues.

Generally considered a liberal, Lee has been active in the state Democratic party for years and is now a Democratic national committeeman.

Lee, active in the Baptist church and Boy Scouts, has three children.

The candidate earned a master's degree in social work from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and now is on leave from his job as director of human development at Duke University.

Lee has been compared to Jimmy Carter in the way he talks about issues and the way he has drawn diverse groups to him. But he said, he is not copying the presidential candidate; he has been saying such things since before his 1969 victory.

Lee describes his campaign as offering "a new sense of optimism to the people of North Carolina. It is important now for the people to feel some sense of security, some sense of strength and some sense of determination in their leadership." The message is similar to Carter's message.

Though of different races, Carter and Lee have similar roots: rural Georgia, the Baptist church. "I haven't just picked this up from Jimmy. It's something that comes from within me," Lee said.

Top priorities of a Lee administration would be reform of the welfare and tax structures plus improvements in education. Industrial development is also important, he said, suggesting that some of the smaller counties get together to draw industry rather than competing against each other.

The welfare rolls could be cut sharply, he said, by having a coordinated program of education, day care, vocational training, job placement and work incentives. Also, he called for trimming fat from the "cumberson welfare bureaucracy."

Lee's tax proposals include elimination of favored tax status for holders of stock in Tar Heel firms; a tax break for the elderly and the poor; removal of the $120 sales tax limit on items such as cars and yachts; and revision of the tax tables to ensure that higher income citizens don't pay a lower percentage than low income persons.

Repeal of the tax on food was also favored by Lee "when it appears that our revenue picture will allow it and when the other inequities are removed."

Advocating a 10-year educational plan, Lee said the basics must be emphasized so that the state's vocational and professional needs can be satisfied. He also called for competitive salaries for teachers and an automatic cost of living pay increase plan.

Though he opposes the death penalty, Lee said he is realistic enough to recognize the near certainty that it will be enacted by the legislature and said he hopes the lawmakers will consider other alternatives such as life imprisonment without parole.

The proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution extols the American principle that everyone has an equal chance, he said. Those principles should be reaffirmed by passing the ERA, he said.

Lee says there is no need to spell out additional powers for the lieutenant governor. "The strength of the office is pretty much tied to the strength of the personality that occupies that office," he said.

Noting that he carries an extra burden that other candidates do not carry, Lee said, "I will be judged more harshly...watched a lot closer. My mistakes...could very well destroy any opportunity any other minority may have in the future politically in this state. I've got to be cleaner than clean, stronger than strong and better than any other."

It would be difficult, he said, adding, "It certainly makes me work harder...to do my best."

Crop Dusters Adopt New Name, Same Job

By ROBERT D. INDERMAN
MART, Tex. (UPI) — It seems as though everyone is becoming image conscious.

Garbagemen are demanding they be called sanitation engineers. And when last heard from, the people with the brooms and mops no longer were janitors, but rather maintenance constables.

So perhaps it is not so unreasonable to accept a name change for those daring young flyers of the crop dusting trade. Today they are "aerial applicators" and to hell with romance.

"It seemed like everyone thought a crop duster was one of those hard-living, heavy-drinking, hell-raising son-of-a-guns portrayed in the movies," said Don Lowe from the office of Lowe's Flying Service.

"But the agriculture business is big business now and when people hire you out, they expect a professional job done quickly and efficiently. They're not looking for romance at $2 an acre, they're looking for performance."

"And the name crop duster, well, it just had a whole lot of bad connotations. And aerial applicators, well, you gotta admit it sounds good. Man, you just gotta change with the times."

The name change may be with the times but the work is pretty much the same today as it was 16 years ago when Lowe broke into the business at age 20. It was 14-hour days then and it is 14-hour days now.

"During the rush period — and that's just about anytime except during the winter months — it's a sunup to sundown job," said Lowe, whose four-plane operation is one of the two last aerial crop dusting services in Central Texas. "We're in the air this time of year almost constantly, laying seed, fertilizing and of course spraying chemicals," he said.

Two decades ago Lowe's contemporaries flew aging military trainers and pre-World War II biplanes painfully adapted to the stress and strain of crop dusting. Now airplane firms have provided crop dusters with fleet planes specially designed for high speed spraying.

"Maybe at one time it was considered a dangerous business, but not so much now," Lowe said. "Nobody gets into this business now unless he has had a lot of flying experience and can handle the machines."

"They've got to be good now. We zip across those fields at ground level at about 120 to 130 miles per hour. If it's not weedy and won't hurt the crop, we'll drag our wheels on the ground. Most times we're just a few inches above the tops of the crops.

"But dangerous, heck no. We've got good equipment and we know what it can and what it can't do. The only danger is letting yourself become too fatigued or too tired to stay alert. If you're reaction time is down, then yes, it is dangerous."

Despite what might appear an antiquated means of spraying for bugs, Lowe said crop dusting remains one of the fastest and most efficient ways to eradicate insects.

"On an average day, a crop duster can cover 4,000 to 5,000 acres of crop land a day. You couldn't do that with a tractor or by hand."

And there's no shortage of business.

"The demand for crop dusters just keeps growing by the year," he said. "It's been increasing ever since the 1950s when crop dusting was probably in its heyday."

"As long as there are farmers, I don't ever foresee being out of work."

Charge Nine In Unrest Inquiry

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Henderson police said investigations are continuing even though nine persons have been arrested following a period of racial unrest highlighted by firebombings and the shooting of an agent of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Police arrested nine young black men Thursday. The racial unrest came after the acquittal by a Superior Court jury of a white woman in the killing of a black man.

One of those arrested, Jimmy Louis Whitfield, 21, was charged in the July 15 shooting of SBI agent Tom A. Rasmussen, who suffered a minor wound while riding in a fire department car heading to the scene of a fire.

Others arrested were: —Clarence Thomas Fields Jr., 20, and Kirby Champion, 26, charged with; throwing firebombs into a warehouse.

—Jerry Lee Hawkins, 19, charged with setting fire to a tire and causing a wildfire.

—Lawrence Bullock, 17, and Dennis Darnell Allen, 20, charged with setting fire to a wooded area.

—Wayne Eugene Kearney, 19, Bobby Durham, 28, and Emmett Alexander Alston, 28, were charged with throwing firebombs into a private garage.

Police said investigation is continuing into other firebombings including the burning of a junkyard that caused damage estimated at $175,000.

Year-Round School Is Rapidly Growing Facet

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Year-round schools may be the substance of nightmares for some students, but a growing number of communities are switching to them with dreams of saving money and improving education.

A Cambridge consulting firm, in the first major study of its kind, examined 24 year-round schools operating around the country and concluded they were "a very promising innovation."

The report, prepared by ABT Associates Inc. under a $52,000 contract from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said year-round schools:

—Were a rapidly growing, locally initiated movement in education.

—Show potential for providing school districts with economic and space savings as well as educational gains.

—Could have a significant effect on federal policy and on American society in general.

In year-round schools, some portion of the student body attends staggered school terms during each season of the year. Vacations are shorter but more frequent than under the traditional school calendar.

The study said many educators see the traditional school calendar as a social anachronism, left over from America's early agrarian days, that persisted into the late 20th century out of custom.

Many year-round programs were started to cope with a sudden influx of new students or a shortage of teachers, especially following the two world wars and periods of heavy immigration.

What began as a space and money saver became recognized as a way of introducing educational innovations and curriculum changes to the school district as a whole.

"We must recognize that schools should respond to the ever-changing social and educational needs of their students and families," Morris A. Shepard, chief consultant for the report, said in a recent interview.

More than two million children currently are enrolled in year-round schools, the study says, and California leads the country with more than 38 programs. In 1974, districts in 19 states were operating about 100 year-round schools and 96 other school districts were seriously considering them.

The report said the flexible school calendar has special advantages for children from nomadic families who often move several times in the same school year.

Researchers also believe that year-round schools can minimize the usual learning loss which children experience during their three-month summer holiday.

The study noted that the new calendar has not always met with approval. While some parents enjoyed being able to take vacations in the off season, others complained that year-round schools disrupted the family's lifestyle.

Other parents criticized the program because their children showed signs of psychological letdown and strain after attending school months longer than students in nearby districts.

If we don't wash our wastewater he may have to drink it.

Every day, a million people living in a typical American city generate about half a million tons of wastewater.

Sewage systems in many cities cannot cope with these amounts. So wastewater is not cleaned thoroughly — before it's discharged into rivers and lakes, and contributes to their pollution. The same rivers and lakes we rely upon for our drinking water.

Union Carbide has developed a wastewater treatment system called UNOX. It cleans the dirty water of towns and cities faster, cheaper, and uses less energy and space than any system devised before it.

The Unox System uses high-purity oxygen instead of air. The oxygen is forced into a series of closed treatment tanks where it increases the efficiency of the microorganisms that feed on pollution and improve water quality.

Nearly 100 cities are now using or installing the Unox System. As the population of America grows, so does our need for clean water. And if we don't clean our dirty water, no one is going to do it for us.

Today, something we do will touch your life.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to April 19) A bigwig will now give you the support you want and you can do much to improve your vocation. A public matter should also be handled willingly and well. Show you have true ability.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to get valuable advice from an out-of-towner if you go after it now. Be more understanding of new contacts as well as of regular associates. A kinder attitude toward mate is wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your part of any agreement made and show appreciation for good business allies. You can have more rapport with loved one if you use the right kind of psychology.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to understand what associates need and you operate more efficiently. Good day for civic work. Relax tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan a better method of operating where your duties are concerned. See about improving health. Evening can be a sociable one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan early for recreation you want to have in the company of others, but set up appointments so all goes well. Praise loved one more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Put your home in order so you are more at ease when you entertain. Some new business idea is proposed that can be fine for the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make necessary appointments early and keep them on time. Evening is fine for relaxation and entertainment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study financial affairs well and see where you can cut down on expenses. Talk matters over with an expert and heed advice given.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Clear up any personal problems you have and then enjoy an evening with good friends. Dress for the occasion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan how to make your daily routine more efficient. Much happiness with mate is possible in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Decide what it is you want most in life and then take the right steps to achieve it. Join a group affair that can prove to be enjoyable.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a natural ability to organize and build a successful life because of the innate intelligence here. There is also beauty and charm here, and the sky is the limit provided you do not permit others to spoil your child early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!"

Former Lighting Man For Singing Group Taping His Own TV Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many years ago, a pal of mine, an ex-singer named Denny Shryack, told me about a wild comic with whom he used to work club dates. He and the comic grew up together in Duluth, Minn.

Music was the guy's name. At first, he worked the lights for Shryack's vocal group, the Escorts. Then he started doing comedy bits.

The world is small, but it's still a shock to learn this Music fellow is the same citizen millions now known as Lorenzo Music, the off-screen voice of Carlton, the doorman on CBS' hit "Rhoda" series.

Next Tuesday, the Escorts' former lighting man goes before lights of his own as he and his wife, Henrietta, start taping their own syndicated TV talk, comedy and songfest program. The daily one-hour opus, called "The Lorenz and Henrietta Music Show," already has been sold in 40 markets.

"There are a lot of photos appearing that show a man or woman alone and the only possible interpretation is that the person's body is their sexuality," says Dr. Fleming. "We want to get away from the notion that sexuality is a function of how your body looks. The people in our photos will be relating, they will be doing more than looking out from the page with a seductive smile on their face."

Going Farther Than 'Playboy'

STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The folks who brought you male centerfolds are back with a new magazine whose editor hopes to show that there's more to centerfolds than other magazines have shown.

The new publication, an offshoot of Playgirl magazine, is called the Playgirl Advisor and is aimed at "couples, men and women in the 18 to 49 age range," according to Ira Ritter, a vice president of Playgirl, Inc.

Ritter says the new magazine, which came out last month with a $1 selling price, will go farther than Playgirl in its treatment of sexual subjects.

"Playgirl magazine is trying to break through to the little housewife in Iowa," says the 27-year-old Ritter. "The Advisor is going to people who have already broken out, who say they want more out of their sex life."

The new magazine has a tough act to follow. Playgirl magazine is a publishing success story whose circulation has doubled and advertising rates almost tripled since the first issue three years ago. Those numbers have spawned competitors but the closest, Viva magazine, has less than half Playgirl's circulation.

The Advisor's 32-year-old editor brings some impressive credentials to the new venture. Dr. Joyce Dudley Fleming has a Ph.D. in psychology-sexuality from the University of California at Berkeley, was a practicing sex therapist for two years and spent five years with Psychology Today magazine before joining Playgirl.

Her magazine's purpose, says Dr. Fleming, is "to enlighten people about sexuality as a force in human nature and society," something she feels other magazines have failed to do.

"Other publications deal generally with behavior in the bedroom," she says, "but that's really just a tiny, tiny part of the whole thing. What is not done is teaching people how to deal with relationships, how sexuality affects your whole life."

Dr. Fleming has structured the magazine into sections that she hopes will help people with questions about their own sexuality. One of them, predictably, is an advice column written by a trained sex counselor. Another section, also written by a sex therapist, will deal with interpretations of readers' erotic fantasies.

"The point of running erotic fantasies and then having a professional talk about them is to tell people how common they are, how extreme some of them are, and that having them doesn't mean that you're pathological," says Dr. Fleming.

The Advisor will also have nude photos, she says, but they will feature men and women together rather than the cheese-cake layouts of other publications.

The highest toll paid in the Panama Canal was $49,208.04, charged the German container ship Tokio Express on Nov. 22, 1974.

'RAISIN' OPENING

spokesmen for it say, and the list ranges from New York to the stars' home town of Duluth.

Which is no end of satisfaction for Music, a short, bald, friendly man in his forties who may be the only ex-entertainment director of Fidelman's Resort in Michigan to hit it big in television.

"I still have Fidelman's towel in my banjo case," said Music, who plays banjo and guitar, as does his attractive blonde wife. The two performers have been married 16 years come November.

They met while at the University of Minnesota. A few years later, they got married and toured the world, doing a folk song-and-comedy act in night clubs from here to My Tho, South Vietnam.

In 1968, they settled here to raise a family (they have three kids). He got in the scrivening business then when an old show biz pal, Tommy Smothers, hired him for "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour."

Music had never written for TV before, "but I was really lucky, man, because I was getting paid a lot of money and I was on a top hit show." He came out of his first TV writing job with an Emmy award.

That led to other work, then employment as a producer-writer in the Mary Tyler Moore works, where he wrote for Miss Moore's show and cocreated MTM's hit "Bob Newhart Show."

He also helped develop the "Rhoda" series, doing warm-up jokes for the audience as well as serving as the voice of Carlton the doorman.

He said Carlton's fame didn't cause his new show, though: "It helped, but it also helped that I did the warm-ups. Somebody saw me and I kept my performing chops up at the same time."

He and his wife seemed oddly happy about the coming grind, which calls for them to tape 120 shows, help write each show, appear in each show doing music and comedy, and to chat with the featured guest of each show.

Would Add Penalties

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rep. Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, who sponsored the state's first open meetings law in the House, says criminal penalties should be added.

Stewart, a contender for speaker of the House, said Thursday night that the 1971 law needs to be rewritten to wipe out the "final cluster" of violators.

"It should be a tough one that includes a provision that any official act by a board or commission or any agency of the government be declared void if the law is violated," Stewart told the Mid-Carolinas Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

The criminal penalties should include a fine not to exceed $500 or a jail term not to exceed 90 days, he suggested.

The present law requires governmental agencies to meet in public, except when considering real estate, personnel or legal matters. Stewart said the law is vague because of Senate amendments. He said it needs penalties for willful violators, whose punishment should be decided by a jury.

Stewart said he knew of no matter that couldn't have been held in public during his 10 years in the legislature. This includes meetings of appropriation committee, he added.

He said the law should have a requirement that 72-hour notice be given of meetings, and 24-hour notice for emergency meetings.

Exceptions to cover riots and marshal law could be put into the law, he said.

All Candidates Concerned Over Utilities Costs

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — All of North Carolina's seven major gubernatorial candidates agree on one thing when it comes to dealing with rising electricity costs. The most important step the next governor will take will be the appointment of five members of the state Utilities Commission.

These five members will form an easy majority on the seven-member panel. Together, they should determine how much the public will have to pay for electricity and gas.

But none of the candidates is prepared to name any of the individuals he would try to put on the commission. All of them, however, will talk about the "type" of individual they will seek.

"Men and women who are qualified by experience and training to stand face to face with utilities executives," says Republican David Flaherty.

"People who won't be dominated by the utility companies, who can understand the complex nature of utilities," says one of his primary opponent,

Coy Privette. The Democrats sound similar. "The commission has got to be made up of strong, intelligent, competent people who will represent the people of North Carolina," says Edward O'Herron.

"We want commissioners who will understand and have the compassion for the problems of the rate-payers as well as for the companies," says Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt.

The rhetoric on the commission appointments reflects an assumption on the part of the candidates that the public is angry about what's been happening to its electric bills.

Since 1970, the cost of electricity for the average North Carolina home has risen from less than $15 per month to more than $35 per month. In some winter months, homeowners have come to Raleigh to protest about bills ranging as high as $300.

The power companies in the state have come to Raleigh numerous times for rate increases, and nearly every time they have received most of what they wanted from the commissions.

In 1975, the legislature responded by passing a package of three laws put together by Hunt. They expanded the commission from five to seven members; doubled its staff; permitted it to hear cases in groups of three; outlawed the automatic fuel adjustment clause; and repealed a 1974 law giving companies the right to base requests on a future test period. The legislature also gave itself the duty of confirming gubernatorial appointments to the commission.

Those changes did little or nothing to stop the rising price of electricity. Hunt acknowledged early this year that they had not done the job.

There are numerous proposals coming from the candidates about utilities, but many of them amount to tinkering.

"I think maybe we should revert back to a three-man commission and spend the extra money on a very strong auditing team to examine utility companies," says Sen. Thomas Strickland, D-Wayne, a Democratic candidate.

Hunt's proposals include advocacy of a "lifetime" rate in which an established minimum monthly amount of electricity would be made available to residential customers at the lowest possible rate. The customers who consume more than the minimum would have to make up the difference with correspondingly higher rates on power used in excess of the "lifetime minimum."

The goal, Hunt said, is to allow the poor and the elderly to buy enough electricity to meet basic needs for lights, a refrigerator and hot water at a price they can afford.

No Bail For Sen. Barker

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Bobby Barker, D-Wake, remained in jail Thursday night after the state Court of Appeals refused to grant him bail while his attorneys appeal his contempt of court citation.

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to bail pending appeal," the court ruled. Earlier Thursday, Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith rejected Barker's request to be freed on bond while the contempt sentence is appealed.

While Barker sat in jail, his attorney said the state Supreme Court would be asked to review the Appeals Court decision.

Barker was sentenced Wednesday to three months in jail by Superior Court Judge David I. Smith of Burlington after Barker was found in contempt of court for failing to turn over financial records of his defunct electronics company. An immediate request for him bond was denied.

Barker is running for a third term in the state Senate. Apparently upset by his situation, he refused comment Thursday on the impact of the developments on his campaign. Earlier, he had said that he plans to stay in the Aug. 17 primary.

Several creditors had filed suit seeking to recover from Barker unpaid debts owed by his company. Judge David Smith ruled that Barker's conduct showed a willful contempt of court orders.
