New 'Life Possibility' Puzzle From Mars

By JAMES J. DOYLE
PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking 2 slid into a long elliptical orbit around Mars Saturday and project biologists said puzzling results from one of the Viking 1 experiments suggests "at least the possibility" of life.

stopped and began to turn up again.

"As you can well imagine we are awaiting what's going to happen here."

Dr. Norman Horowitz, a member of the biology team, said a second experiment, the pyrolytic release which measures carbon assimilation by any organisms, also returned surprising results. "I want to emphasize we have not discovered life on Mars," he said, "but the data is conceivably of biological origin."

The pyrolytic release experiment relies on carbon assimilation by organisms.

Viking 2, launched from Earth 11 months ago, dropped into its egg-shaped orbit around Mars after a nearly 40-minute engine burn. It rolled to keep its antenna pointed toward Earth and entered orbit at 8:20 a.m. EDT.

"The orbit is beautiful," a Jet Propulsion Laboratory spokesman said. "The operation went like hotcakes."

"We have another beautiful MOI (Mars orbit insertion)," mission control said when the engine burn ended.

The actual orbit insertion occurred 20 minutes earlier, but it takes 20 minutes for the signal to travel the 215 million miles through space at the speed of light to reach mission control.

Viking 2 will begin taking pictures in four days of two possible landing areas, designated B-2 and B-3, along the 40 to 50 degree north latitude band of the red planet.

The first choice, B-1, in the Acidalia Plains, appeared rough, cracked and pocked with craters in pictures sent back by Viking 1's orbiter which has been photographing the site for weeks.

Viking 2's orbit of 27.4 hours is longer than a Martian day of 24 hours, 37 minutes and will permit the planet to revolve slowly under the spacecraft, mission control said.

At the nearest point the spaceship will be 932 miles above the rust red surface of Mars. At the farthest point in the orbit, it will be 22,126 miles away.

The alternative landing areas, B-2 and B-3, are west and east of the first site, but in the same latitude where scientists said there is more moisture, a thick permafrost beneath the surface and a better chance of finding life.

Viking 1 landed on Mars July 20, more than two weeks after its scheduled July 4 Bicentennial touchdown, because orbiter pictures showed the surface of Mars to be hazardous to spacecraft.

It landed in a desert-like basin and has been conducting organic and inorganic chemistry experiments and biology experiments in a search for micro-organic life forms in the soil.

The robot's one long retractable arm that scoops the soil for the experiments jammed last Tuesday, and scientists have been working to see what happened. A sequence of commands has been worked out and fed into the lander's computer to see if the arm will begin operating again.

Engineers said the source of the problem was not known, but frost was considered a possible cause.

In Big Thompson River Area Deputize Residents

By DANIEL CHISZAR
LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — County officials Saturday deputized an armed posse of Big Thompson River residents to patrol the flood-raked river canyon and provide their neighbors protection against looters.

"I've deputized a couple of hundred good citizens and ranchers," said Larimer County Sheriff Bob Watson. "Some people say they may not be well trained but they are working under my instructions."

The calling up of an armed civilian posse came as more and more regular officers were needed in the search for victims of the July 31 flash flood.

Meanwhile, Colorado State Patrol officer Lance Taylor told nondeputized residents they should use whatever measures necessary—short of arms—to protect their homes.

"The people are going to have to take it upon themselves to secure their belongings as best they can, but not with guns or clubs or whatever," Taylor said. "The (regular) mounted deputies are spread out a long way now."

Although there were reports all week of scattered looting, only four persons had been arrested. Persons going in and out of the canyon were given identification cards to show at police checkpoints.

Watson said about half of the 81 bodies taken to a makeshift morgue here were identified. He said he knew "of 20 down in the (canyon) area that are still there. We just can't get to them yet until the debris is cleared out."

"The cars down there are loaded with silt and searchers have to probe inside and shovel the debris out," said Watson. "I am sure we will find more bodies then. Until the Corps of Engineers goes in there and clears it out, we won't know how many bodies are there."

Watson said authorities were bothered with sightseers from Denver, about 45 miles to the south. He said there were "too many people coming up to see the area. It's real troublesome and bothersome."

Authorities said only 50 to 60 officers were available for patrol along the banks of the river. All were on horseback since the mud and scattered debris prevented the use of four-wheel drive jeeps.

Watson said the armed residents—called special deputies—included a 50-man posse in jeeps. He said they would patrol the canyon perimeter, which was still accessible to vehicles. He said a number of the deputies were using their own trucks and cars.

The 19-foot wall of water roared through the canyon and swept away possibly hundreds of sleeping campers, fishermen and summer residents. U.S. 34 connecting Loveland and Estes Park at the canyon's west end was gouged apart and cars, trucks and camper-trailers were tossed about like toys.

Iran Plans To Buy U.S. Arms

By NICHOLAS DANIOFF
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Saturday that Iran plans to buy $10 billion to $15 billion worth of American armaments by 1980 to modernize its armed forces.

Kissinger spoke after signing an agreement to boost U.S.-Iranian commercial trade from $10 billion since 1974 to $40 billion during the period 1976-1980.

"The military estimates would add $2 billion to $3 billion a year over that five year period," Kissinger said at a joint news conference with Iranian Finance Minister Hushang Ansary.

"If you add the military (figure) to the commercial the total figure would be $50 billion—$55 billion," he said.

Such massive sales to Iran prompted the Senate to charge last week that the management of the arms program was "out of control." Congress has also criticized Iran for alleged repression of civil rights.

The Shah said Friday that his country would be the judge of its own defense needs and that it would shop elsewhere if it is rejected by the United States.

In Saturday's news conference, Kissinger justified Iran's large military purchases as being in the interests of "its own defense which is consistent with our own objectives that countries in whose security we do have an interest should make a major effort."

He said no arms agreements were concluded during his current visit, nor did he cite specific weapons Iran wants to buy. It has in the past expressed an interest in F16 and F18 fighters.

Weather forecasters expected Belle to strengthen gradually and curve to a more northerly course, the reason the hurricane watch was not extended to cover any part of the Florida coastline.

The forecasters said Belle is the first Atlantic hurricane this season, carrying highest sustained winds of 80 m.p.h. Gale force winds extended outward from the center 100 miles to the north and 75 to the south.

Advisories cautioned all marine interests in the northern Bahamas Islands to exercise caution and keep in close touch with the hurricane's movements.

Belle was described as an average sized, typical tropical twister with a center eye of calm measuring about 25 miles across.

Eight Former Telephone Officials Are Arrested

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Eight present and former Southern Bell Telephone Co. officials, among 11 reportedly indicted, were arrested Saturday on felony charges stemming from an alleged political slush fund.

They were indicted by a Mecklenburg County grand jury investigating the charges raised two years ago by a former Southern Bell manager who said he ran a slush fund fueled by salary kickbacks.

The eight were charged under a state statute covering malfeasance of corporate officers. The statute states that "if any president, director, cashier, teller, clerk of agent of any corporation shall embezzle, abstract or willfully misapply any of the monies, funds or credits of the corporation...he shall be guilty of a felony."

The probe was launched after John J. Ryan, former general manager of Southern Bell's North Carolina operations, said he ran the slush fund. Bell later said an internal audit revealed that $152,000 in corporate money was diverted in 1972 and early 1973 through a bogus expense voucher scheme.

Storm Report

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Belle intensified to hurricane strength Saturday as it hovered off the southeast Florida Coast. The National Weather Service issued a hurricane watch extending from the most southern county in Georgia to Cape Hatteras, North Carolina.

At 6 p.m. EDT, the National Hurricane Center issued an advisory upgrading the storm to hurricane status. The advisory said the storm was centered about 375 miles east of Palm Beach, Fla., near latitude 27.0 north, longitude 74.5 west.

Weather forecasters expected Belle to strengthen gradually and curve to a more northerly course, the reason the hurricane watch was not extended to cover any part of the Florida coastline.

The forecasters said Belle is the first Atlantic hurricane this season, carrying highest sustained winds of 80 m.p.h. Gale force winds extended outward from the center 100 miles to the north and 75 to the south.

Advisories cautioned all marine interests in the northern Bahamas Islands to exercise caution and keep in close touch with the hurricane's movements.

Belle was described as an average sized, typical tropical twister with a center eye of calm measuring about 25 miles across.

All but two of those arrested, Henry Houston Helms, 52, and Edward Farris Sykes, 55, were on Ryan's staff in the firm's executive department when Ryan was with the firm, according to Southern Bell directories. Helms is in the agency's marketing division and Sykes is in its commercial department.

Others arrested were: John Bunn Smith, 59, a retired administrative assistant who listed himself as unemployed; Marion Cortez Bowers, 51, general marketing supervisor who was planning director under Ryan; Frank Edward Roberts, 50, a general commercial supervisor who served as industrial development manager under Ryan; Francis Donald Joffron, 49, an administrative assistant in the executive department; Judson Manley Palmer, 61, the firm's chief public relations officer; Floyd

B. Houck, 43, an administrative assistant in the executive department. Conviction under the statute can bring a jail term of up to 15 years.

Gilchrist, in an interview, said dates for preliminary hearings for those arrested would be set later this month. All were freed on personal recognizance. A Southern Bell report given to the state Department of Justice said 36 employees had taken money from the firm but only one, Ryan, was named in the report. Ryan admitted operating a political slush fund which made contributions to candidates in 1972 but denied any involvement in the bogus expense voucher scheme.

Carteret Challenges Land Use Plan Law

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — The Carteret County Commission has voted to challenge the state law that requires a land use plan in the state's 20 coastal counties.

Resources Commission has not yet decided what action to take in the matter.

The law requires local or state government to identify natural resources and problems and prepare for future development. Special permits would be required for development of environmentally fragile areas.

The County Commission called the law "an attempt by well intentioned legislators to save us from ourselves."

The county has claimed the law is unconstitutionally vague in not being more specific on regulatory policy. Also, the county said it violates the state constitution because it doesn't apply equally to all of North Carolina's counties.

The county officials noted that the 1975 legislature failed to enact a similar law for the mountain counties, though such a law was proposed.

The county had until Saturday to comply, having been given an additional 60 days to come up with a plan or have the state take control through the Coastal Resources Commission, the overseeing panel to implement the law.

A spokesman said the Coastal

The Rev. Lucius S. Cartwright, 33, and the Rev. Albert R. Hamrick, 40, both assigned to St. Phillip's Pentacostal Church in southeast Washington, pleaded guilty to fraud charges in connection with an ongoing probe of food stamp swindles.

According to court records, Cartwright and Hamrick used money collected from the sale of food stamps to charter a bus to Montreal at a cost of $2,000; pay for a $3,690 airplane trip to New Orleans, buy a $6,683 car; buy an old bank building to house the church, and open an ice cream parlor in northeast Washington.

Taxation Without Representation
GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The Lake Norman Marine Commission says the Duke Power Co.'s plan to charge property owners on company lakes a fee if they build piers, ramps and bathhouses is taxation without representation for persons who don't own Duke stock.

Advocates Trimming Workforce
Democratic gubernatorial candidate George Wood says the ideal way to give state workers a pay increase in the 10 per cent neighborhood would be to trim the workforce by not filling vacancies.

In a campaign stop in Greensboro Friday, Wood said a 10 per cent pay increase for state workers would cost $85 million.

"If we cut the number of state employees by 10 per cent through not filling jobs which become vacant, we could use those substantial savings to give other employees a raise. The bureaucracy has gotten too big, and we must limit its growth," the Camden County agribusinessman said.

Toxicant Possibility

ATLANTA (UPI)—Scientists trying to track down the cause of death of 25 American Legionnaires have on their list of possibilities a chemical toxicant so powerful that it brings swift death, yet is tasteless and odorless.

"There are some (chemicals) that are toxic in very minute quantities," Dr. Roslyn Robinson, director of the national Center for Disease Control's Bureau of Laboratories, said Saturday. "We don't necessarily smell or taste them."

But Robinson said he knew of no chemical which would meet the criteria of being tasteless and odorless and at the same time producing the symptoms experienced by the victims.

A total of 135 Pennsylvania American Legionnaires came down with an influenza-like illness after attending a convention in Philadelphia last month. Most were able to throw off the illness, which was marked by high fever, headache and a dry cough, but 25 met quick deaths.

The CDC has ruled out swine influenza, and has virtually eliminated any of the major bacteria, or any known virus or fungus, as the cause.

Explosion Rips Carter Station

By LYNN OLSON
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Three children were slightly injured Saturday in an explosion at the service station owned by Jimmy Carter's brother, Billy.

The presidential candidate and his brother were playing softball at nearby Plains high school when a huge boom was heard, accompanied by a gigantic tower of black smoke.

Billy, the other players and onlookers ran toward the station about one block away as Secret Service agents drove cars onto the field and forced Carter into one.

Firemen said a spark from a soft drink machine apparently ignited fumes from a gasoline truck which was delivering gasoline to the station.

Billy Carter rushed up to the truck to try to move it, but was restrained by several townspeople. An employee of Billy's, Randy Coleman, jumped into the truck a few minutes later and moved it to safety.

"If that truck had blown, this whole town would have gone," said Murray Smith, a local resident, who helped turn off the gasoline valves on the truck before it was moved.

The Plains fire department put the blaze out in about 10 minutes.

The Weekend Political Scene

By WESLEY PIPPERT
PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — With Jimmy Carter at his side, consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Saturday the Democratic presidential nominee has the best stand on consumer matters of any presidential candidate "in recent decades."

Nader said he was not endorsing Carter and he was willing to sit down with the Republican candidate, "But I haven't received an invitation thus far."

Nader praised Carter's position both as governor of Georgia and as a presidential nominee. In return, Carter said he would appoint persons to the major regulatory and consumer agencies whose "primary interest is consumers themselves."

Carter charged President Ford's nominees for consumer protection posts have come largely from the White House staffs of the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Said Nader, "As far as his declared positions in the areas of health, consumer protection, the environment, energy and recognizing the critical need to develop new civic institutions so people themselves can initiate the processes of government on their behalf, all of these stands have been admirable and better than any candidate that has achieved the nomination of a major party in recent decades."

Nader said he did not seek new laws so much as the enforcement of existing statutes "It's very important to analyze the way government has been misworking, in recent decades in particular, and unravel some of the reasons for the waste, corruption and lack of responsiveness in Washington."

Carter said that in a speech to the American Bar Association in Atlanta next week he will spell out "some of the principles into the structure of law that are not there" and discuss how attorneys themselves can help in the enforcement of law.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan Saturday ended his last cross-country delegate hunt for the Republican presidential nomination in the hills of West Virginia and won over at least one previously uncommitted delegate.

Reagan, accompanied by his designated running mate, Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania, got a warm reception by 1,500 people attending the state GOP convention, especially when he lambasted big-spending policies of Democratic administrations.

Following a private luncheon with most of the Mountain State's 28 Republican delegates, Reagan announced the support of former state Sen. Louise Leonard of Harpers Ferry.

The addition of Mrs. Leonard to Reagan's forces gave him 8 West Virginia delegates. But Paul Manafort, a liaison for President Ford, contended the President still would win the votes of 20 state delegates.

The UPI count shows Ford with 13 and Reagan with 8, leaving 7 undecided.

Communist Coalition In Rome

ROME (UPI) — A Communist-led coalition Saturday wrested control of the Rome city government from the Christian Democrats for the first time, and the Vatican warned a Communist administration would turn the Eternal City into a "Godless city."

The Communist victory in Rome gave them control, either alone or in coalition of all Italy's major cities. They already lead administrations in Turin, Milan, Venice and Bologna in the north and Naples in the south.

Negotiations Resumed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiations between striking rubber industry workers and Firestone and Goodyear executives resumed Saturday with Labor Secretary William J. Usery making another personal attempt to end the three and one-half month strike.

May Adjourn Without Flu Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Ford's protestations, Congress may adjourn next week without clearing the way for a national swine flu inoculation program.

Ford said Friday that delays in congressional approval of a vaccine insurance plan have put an effective inoculation program at least six weeks away — if passage comes before the House and Senate adjourn for the Republican National Convention.

Indian Faces Other Charges

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — The innocent verdict in Russell Means' murder trial here Friday exonerated the American Indian Movement leader on the most serious charges he has faced since the 1973 Wounded Knee occupation.

But Means, free on bond as he appeals a riot conviction, still faces a variety of charges in other incidents.

Will No Longer Give Details

WASHINGTON (AP) The White House says it will no longer give the public details about the size of Soviet nuclear tests, following two "suspicious" underground explosions that could politically embarrass President Ford.

The State Department said Friday that congressional committees have been informed "on a classified basis" about the two Soviet underground tests.

Asks For Another Reading

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The jury in the trial of SLA members William and Emily Harris, unable to reach a verdict after eight days of deliberations, Saturday asked the judge for another reading of testimony involving the shooting incident at Mel's Sporting Goods Store.

The incident in May, 1974, which began with the theft by Harris of a pair of athletic socks, touched off an alleged spree of kidnaping, robbery and assault by the Harrises and Patricia Hearst in their attempt to avoid capture.

Hospital Workers Settlement

NEW YORK (UPI) — A settlement was reached Saturday in a four-day walkout by 18,000 unionized workers who struck the city's 16 municipal hospitals to protest massive layoffs.

Officials of Local 420 of District Council 37, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents most of the strikers, predicted the pact would be approved "unanimously."

Few Women In Diplomatic Corps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, stung by the filing of a sex discrimination suit, admits there aren't many women in the diplomatic corps, but says the number is increasing.

Statistics on the number of women diplomats were made available Friday after a federal suit was filed earlier this week claiming that the department discriminates against women in hiring, promotion and assignments.

Old Plane Crash; School Bus Wreck Each Take Lives

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators began picking through the remains of a converted 1940-vintage bomber today to learn why it sheared through two homes, killing both pilots, a woman in her home, and injuring three other persons.

The plane took off Friday afternoon from Midway Airport in the residential southwest side of Chicago. The pilot radioed an emergency a few minutes later and headed back to the airport for an emergency landing.

The plane then stalled and plummeted one-half mile short of the runway, hitting homes and garages and shearing off three feet of a flagpole beside a vacant elementary school, missing the building itself.

Children playing in a ball park three blocks from the crash site said the twin-engine craft, trailing smoke and flames and with at least one propeller not turning, appeared to attempt a landing in the field before crashing.

NEOLA, Iowa (AP) — Lori Ring, 13, was on the school bus on a sunny day, perfect for a swimming outing. Then the bus turned over. When she regained consciousness, three young companions were dead.

"All I remember was the bus driver yelled 'oh no,' and I looked out and everything was all blurry," Lori said later. "When I came to, I was looking at my dad. I was out till Dad shook me."

Lori, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ring, was one of at least 33 survivors of the accident Friday afternoon near Neola. The accident killed two 8-year-olds, one of them the daughter of bus driver Carolyn James, and a 12-year-old. Most survivors were taken to a hospital in nearby Council Bluffs for treatment or observation.

Authorities said they did not know how many were on the bus because nobody made a list. A few survivors might have walked away.

Varied Ethnic Groups At Eucharistic Congress

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer
PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Roman Catholics at the 41st International Eucharistic Congress Saturday celebrated the wide variety of ethnic heritages that have combined to make the U.S. Church the church of immigrants.

With some 27 different ethnic liturgies and rites, pilgrims throughout the city worshipped in the native tongues of Korea, Lithuania, Poland, Germany, Italy, Ireland, Croatia, China and a host of others.

Cardinal Sergio Pignedoli of the Vatican told worshippers at an Italian-American service that such gatherings were important so as to "not forget your origins and the traditions of your mother country..."

Yet, the Cardinal said, the services also represented "people who have decided to take part in fullest cooperation with a second country which unites you all."

underscored that hunger for peace in calling for reconciliation between Catholics and Protestants in that war-torn country.

He said that Ireland "is still being denied its complete independence, its complete freedom," and that while "we all long for and look forward to the day when that will be realized...if it is to be worthwhile, it must be achieved peacefully."

Case To Go To Appeals Court

MESIC—Citizens of the small Pamlico town of Mesic, who lost a recent suit to have the incorporation of Mesic and a later annexation to the town declared null and void, have met and made a decision to take the case to the Court of Appeals in Raleigh.

The case should come up within three to six months.

Troy Potter, spokesman for the more than 100 landowners who brought the suit against Mesic Town Board and individual board members, said "We feel that our constitutional rights have been violated, that we were denied due process, and that the incorporation was done without the knowledge of a majority of the people."

The separate ethnic liturgies preceded a Eucharistic procession of the pilgrims and all-night vigil of adoration.

Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Cincinnati, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, in remarks to the participants in the solemn procession that the peace found in the Eucharist must be translated "into a practical commitment to peace and our individual and social lives."

The theme of the seventh of the eight-day Congress aimed at fostering spiritual renewal in the Catholic Church throughout the world was "The Eucharist and the Hunger for Peace."

In War-Wearry Lebanon Latest Truce Crumbles

By MICHAEL ROSS
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The shattered capital's suburban war fronts surrounded by artillery fire Saturday and fighting erupted around the northern port of Tripoli with the crumbling of the latest truce of the Lebanese civil war.

The body of a Lebanese cook at the U.S. Embassy was found floating in the Mediterranean off the Beirut coast Saturday five days after he was dragged from his apartment 200 yards from the Embassy, a U.S. spokesman said.

The spokesman could not say who was responsible but diplomats suggested that Antoine Saab had been singled out because of his U.S. employment or because he once worked as a cook for rightist Interior Minister Camille Chamoun.

Rightists and leftists reported continuing clashes with artillery and mortar in the eastern and southern suburbs of Beirut, where some 600 wounded were still reported trapped in the besieged Palestinian camp of Tal Zaatar, following the Red Cross decision to temporarily abandon attempts to evacuate them.

Leftists reported that militiamen from Zghorta, the mountain stronghold of President Suleiman Franjeh, the right-wing Christian leader, attacked the Moslem village of Dennie, near Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut. It touched off an exchange of mortars between Tripoli and Zghorta.

Rightists said the resort area of Maamaltein, near the Christian port of Jounieh, 12 miles north of the capital, also came under shelling from leftist forces, firing Soviet-made ground-to-ground missiles.

The fighting delayed plans by Arab League troops to move into observation posts at designated "hot spots," across the country to enforce the 54th truce of the 16-month old war, mediated by League envoy Hassan Sabry El-Kholi. Kholi's efforts to save the truce remain stalled, apparently over differences concerning the agenda of twice-postponed peace talks.

Lebanese leftists were reportedly demanding that the talks with their Palestinian allies, on the one hand, and the Syrians and Lebanese Christians, on the other hand, discuss Syrian troop withdrawal from Lebanon. The rightists, were reportedly insisting the talks be confined to security matters relating to implementing the truce.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, a militant Christian, also attacked the leftist movement, led by Druze chieftain Kamal Jumblatt, and vowed that he would not sit at the same peace table with the Leftists.

New Soil Service Book Is Published

A new Soil Conservation Service book, entitled "Soil Taxonomy," has been published by the Government Printing Office and is now in use in North Carolina, according to SCS State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

The 754 page hardbound publication shows how information about how soils are being organized.

The book provides "a basic system of soil classification for making and interpreting soil surveys" which is the subtitle of the book.

Soil Taxonomy covers the 10 broad categories of soils that exist, and has scientific and technical details on each one. The system has been used by the Soil Conservation Service since the mid-1960's, but the new book is the first formal publication of the system.

State Conservationist Hicks said that a limited free distribution of the book is being made to selected institutions including ECU and Pitt Technical Institute, and to the North Carolina Department of Natural and Economic Resources.

The book is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The book costs $17.50 and is Agriculture Handbook No. 436.

Ebbs On Pierce Fiction

Distinctive features of the fiction of Ovid Williams Pierce are identified and described in an article just published in the Spring-Summer 1976 issue of the collegiate literary magazine, St. Andrews Journal.

The article is by Dr. John D. Ebbs, professor of English at East Carolina University, a long-time friend and colleague of Pierce. Ebbs has also edited the collection of early Pierce short stories which as Old Man's Gold and Other Stories is the most recently published Pierce work. (UNC Press, 1976.)

Looking Ahead, Not Backward

Much of this 200th anniversary year of the United States has been spent in nostalgic looks backward.

This fall, however, Greenville will take a look forward by means of a Town Meeting '76 program sponsored by the Institute of Cultural Affairs and adopted by Congress.

The Rev. James H. Bailey is chairman of the steering committee locally.

"The specific intent of the town meeting would be to provide direction and planning for Greenville and to set its priorities for the next ten years," Bailey says.

"It would be a brainstorming session to find reasonable rational plans to implement in solving community problems."

There will be two workshops—one to find obstacles which are impeding progress and the other to find ways of eliminating the barriers.

The Town Meeting '76 is patterned after the town meetings of colonial New England and it will be held here Sept. 25.

This looks like a good way to continue the observance of the nation's bicentennial to us. We have had an exciting year so far reviewing the accomplishments of those who struggled to establish our nation 200 years ago.

The nation will continue to progress, however, and our own community must look ahead if we are to continue the heritage given us by our forefathers. What better way to continue the bicentennial than to look at our problems and to plan for our future progress?

Awesome Number Of Candidates

As the primary election of Aug. 17 approaches, voters should know that they will be faced with an awesome number of candidates to choose from on the ballots.

They should also know that they will have a long wait that night before they are to find out how our county voted. That's because our county commissioners refuse to turn to modern voting machines as so many of our neighboring counties have done.

Thus each paper ballot will have to be painstakingly counted by hand on election night, and most state races will be settled before Pitt County's results are known.

If you think Pitt County is doing the thing in a backward and archaic way, you are right.

THIS AFTERNOON Staff Remains On The Job

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When the General Assembly chopped the budget of the North Carolina Bicentennial Commission from $173, 627 to $64,375, legislators envisioned the office pretty well closing down.

That, in effect, is what Cultural Resources Secretary Grace J. Rohrer told legislators would happen. The $109,252 cut would be handled by cutting the staff from seven people down to two.

But it hasn't worked out that way. The entire staff is still on the job, and the cuts have been made in other areas of the budget instead.

To several members of the joint Governmental Operations Committee of the General Assembly, this amounts to moving operating money to pay salaries and transportation expenses for a staff "which doesn't have anything to do."

Work To Do
 Mary B. Cornick, assistant secretary of Cultural Resources, said the staff still has plenty of work to do between now and the end of December; sufficient to justify spending the money for salary and fringes, plus about $11,000 for "travel and communications."

Initially, legislators eyed cuts totalling $86,000, but Secretary Rohrer recommended even more cutting ($109,252).

The situation ended up on Gov. James E. Holshouser's desk, after the legislature did the cutting, and the decision was made to use the money for staff rather than other expenses.

State Rep. Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison, thinks the state auditor and the attorney general ought to see if the law was broken. But Bicentennial officials insist a study of legislative discussion shows that specific areas for cutting were never written into the final action of the General Assembly.

State Senator I. C. Crawford, D-Buncombe, chairman of the legislative spending watchdog committee, said the group "may not be able to do anything about this... but it is another example of how an executive department agency can get around the intention of the Legislature."

"At least we can get the information and be aware of how this is done, and take steps to prevent it in the future." The committee has also been probing another example in which the Department of Transportation shifted funds to keep 12 personnel officers on the payroll after the General Assembly voted to cut them off.

The running argument has elements of partisan politics, since the assembly is largely Democratic, and the administration Republican.

Politics, Too
 Additionally, the fighting over Bicentennial funds involves not only partisan politics, but in-house disagreements between Bicentennial Commission people and the supervising Cultural Resources Department, as well as personal relationships between a former Bicentennial director and a member of the General Assembly.

Current Bicentennial Director Dick Ellis said there is much work to be done the remainder of the year, with some 56 local celebrations still to be carried out, and a major event set for October 8 as North and South Carolina sponsor a joint celebration of the Battle of Kings Mountain.

Ellis said staff will be involved in preparing a complete collection of Bicentennial materials (printed works, pictures, films, souvenirs) for storing in both state and National archives; preparation of a time capsule recapping the Bicentennial for opening at the Tricentennial; publication of a wrapup report for inclusion in archives; and completion of the Bicentennial Mall in the governmental area of Raleigh.

That park with pools and fountains runs from the State Legislative Building to the State Capitol, and is being built at a cost of $400,000. It was supposed to be completed for the July 4 celebration, but will not be finished until Labor Day.

Also, the state will host a visit by the Freedom Train this fall, an event which will involve thousands of viewers. Ellis is the fourth director of the Bicentennial Commission which has been plagued by political haggling and firings over its short life.

Sunday Morning Notes

Tim Jones, The Daily Reflector composing room superintendent, had just as soon forget last week.

In fact, he'd just as soon last week had never happened.

Monday Tim parked his station wagon on the downhill side of the newspaper parking lot on Reade Street. That seemed safe enough, but later in the day a soft drink truck was parked at the door of the building. The truck rolled backward down the hill and struck Tim's car and another one in the rear.

Both cars were knocked over the embankment and received rear end damage.

A wrecker pulled Tim's car to Hastings Ford on Tenth Street. There the car was checked over and found to be in running condition. So on Tuesday Tim, needing transportation, picked the car up to use while the parts were on order.

Some time later he was returning to the office via Tenth Street. Alas, there was another collision and the front end of Tim's car was wrecked.

The vehicle still runs, however, and Tim is driving it — with a somewhat ragged front and back end.

An early rider on GREAT, the city bus system, boarded the bus headed for the hospital at a downtown stop on the first day.

He explained to the driver that he worked at the hospital and wanted to try out the bus as a means of transportation.

The driver asked the rider where he lived and he told him on W. Fourth Street.

It was quickly explained to the new passenger that he didn't have to walk all the way downtown to catch the bus. He could simply wait for it in front of his home.

Dr. Paul Murray, who is retired from the history department at East Carolina University recalled that he taught Jimmy Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee at Georgia Southwestern College.

Other Editors Say Courts Create Cynics

(Raleigh Times)

Much is made today of the overburden on our court system and its need for more staff and money. These needs are undoubtedly real. But the courts themselves have considerable improving to do in the way they treat the time and money of citizen witnesses.

A recent Raleigh case involved a young man who witnessed, as driver of one of three vehicles damaged, a car accident. Another driver was charged. The young man appeared as bidden on the first court date, at the cost to him of several hours of school, only to learn the case had been continued. This meant the customary month's delay until the arresting officer's next "court day."

But the new date conflicted with the young witness' final exams which could neither be rescheduled nor made up. Since he was leaving town after exams for an already-arranged summer job in a faraway state, he requested another continuance until after his return.

The district attorney's office was courteous, said, with good reason, that for fairness and because and memories of events deteriorate rapidly over time, the case should be tried as soon as possible. They agreed to a date a week before the witness had planned to return to North Carolina.

Forfeiting a week's work and a hundred dollars in summer earnings, he flew home to keep his court date like a good citizen. Only on that date, in the course of finding out what time to be at the courthouse, did he learn the case had been dismissed. No notice of the dismissal or its reasons was furnished.

In another local instance, a busy professional man witnessed a car accident and felt the wrong person had been charged. He volunteered as a witness and kept several court dates, only to encounter continuances and delays. At length he gave up his little battle on behalf of justice. And, even sadder, he feels he'll not be so ready to volunteer again.

In the first case, the witness probably ran afoul of the tendency of busy lawyers to get to work on settling a case only when court date looms near and subpoenas appear on their desks. This may be unavoidable.

But the court clerk's and district attorney's offices, funded by the taxpayers, have as much obligation to notify witnesses when they do not need to appear as when they do.

That no such notice is given only confirms unwilling witnesses' suspicion that it's never worth it to get involved with the courts, and turns willing witnesses like the two described here into unwilling ones.

If we sought to build cynicism about our courts, we could hardly think of a better way to do it.

Carter took an introductory social studies course and Dr. Murray's carefully preserved roll book showed that Carter got a B-plus on the course. We were a little put out. Seems Dr. Murray didn't mention that he also taught your columnist after he came to East Carolina. On second thought, we decided, it was just as well. Heaven forbid that Dr. Murray get out the roll book that contains the Alvin Taylor grade.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Stop-Connally Backlash

By ROWLANDEVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Intense attacks, both public and private, aimed at blocking John B. Connally as President Ford's vice-presidential choice now threaten to backfire with conservatives as well as the one man the anti-Connally crusade is aimed at: Gerald R. Ford.

A long-time Ford adviser, who privately wants Connally kept off the ticket, believes the "vituperative" onslaught will strengthen, not weaken, Connally's hand. He reasons that it will trigger a pro-Connally reaction among conservatives, particularly Southerners, many of whom will go to Kansas City angered by Ronald Reagan's probable defeat. Furthermore, there are signs now of such a reaction by the President himself.

Consequently, the many foes of Connally inside the Ford campaign want no more nasty talk about high risks for the President who pardoned Richard Nixon now linking himself with a Nixon lieutenant who was indicted by the Watergate prosecutor (though later acquitted). But agitation against Connally outside the Ford inner circle will escalate, perhaps with counter-productive results.

The backlash is reflected by one pro-Connally Southern leader, uncommitted in the presidential race, who last weekend decided to cancel his private agreement to work with Ford forces at Kansas City. He was infuriated by the fact that Mr. Ford's closest supporters in his home state of Michigan last week joined the shrill public attack on Connally.

Republican state chairman William McLaughlin assaulted Connally's "wheeler-dealer image" which "conjures up images of Watergate." Gov. William Milliken, a liberal Republican, was milder, calling Connally a "stem-winder on the stump" but lacking the proper post-Watergate "image."

Mr. Ford's reaction to this was sharp, unpleasant and quickly conveyed back to Michigan. So, earlier plans by Milliken and McLaughlin to write the President about their Connally worries were demolished by the President's displeasure.

But hostility in Mr. Ford's home state barely scratches the surface of influential anti-Connally Republicans. For example, Rep. Tom Railsback of Illinois, staunchly pro-Ford, has asked for a meeting with the President to make certain he has every pertinent document dealing with relations between Treasury Secretary Connally and President Nixon.

Rep. William Ceon of Maine, who with Railsback voted to impeach Nixon as a Judiciary Committee member, told liberal Republican Wednesday Group Congressman July 28 that a Ford-Connally ticket would be disastrous. The next morning, Railsback asked Cohen to go to the White House with him.

Railsback wants Mr. Ford to study the record of Connally's 1972 campaign efforts to collect political milk money for the Nixon campaign (despite Connally's acquittal last year of political bribery charges involving the dairy lobby). Also worried by the Connally-milk money

Strength For Today

THE GOOD NEWS
 The most thrilling conviction that can ever lay hold of a person's mind is the knowledge that he or she is forgiven of sin.

This is by no means easy to believe. When we feel unhappy and fearful our first tendency is to ascribe our malaise to adverse circumstances.

But deep down inside we know that we are suffering because of the type of people we are. This is what undermines self-confidence, damages self-respect, and causes that cloud of apprehension to dim the brightness of everyday living.

But the gospel, which means "good news," tells us that God proposes to make our lives over and that He has established a means by which this can be done. This means is forgiveness. We are forgiven the guilt of our sins and thus are relieved of their burden.

Nothing else in the world can give us the psychological lift of this assurance. When we accept it, we really begin to live.

Numbers Obscure A Basic Role

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors surprised a lot of people, shareholders and union officials among them, with the timing of its announcement this week that it was restoring its quarterly dividend to 85 cents a share.

Although the world's largest manufacturer had declared a special 50 cent dividend earlier this year it has left the quarterly rate at the recession level of 60 cents. Industry analysts thought it would continue.

Among the reasons given was the company's need to retain capital for expansion and the "necessity" of waiting until wage negotiations were over, lest workers use the dividend increase as an argument for a pay raise.

GM didn't listen to the analysts. After recording an amazing profit of $909 million in the second quarter, and expecting a strong third quarter as well, it decided to turn over close to $244 million to shareholders.

That, roughly, is the sum that 85 cents a share equals when multiplied by 287 million, which is about the number of shares owned by about 1,325,000 GM shareholders.

You may be sure that critics of GM will be quick to argue that this $244 million represents a rakeoff by the rich, ignoring the simple division that reduces it to $107.40 per shareholder.

GM is huge, and because of this it produces huge numbers — of cars, sales, dividends, wages, profits, taxes. Its sales figure is to many people almost incomprehensible, some $35.7 billion in 1975, but all GM numbers are that way.

681,000 men and women, and that was a depressed figure; in 1974 its employment was 734,000. Its payrolls last year totaled more than $10 billion, and yet 1973 was a bigger year for payrolls.

Since it is so big, the numbers sometimes obscure the fact that GM, and other large companies too, are social organizations into which many people contribute and from which many people receive benefits.

More surprising than the fact of a dividend restoration at what some people consider a strategically bad time is the distribution of the enormous revenues that flow into GM.

Last year, according to the GM annual report, 53.4 per cent went to suppliers, 34 per cent to workers, 6.6 per cent to taxes, 2.5 per cent for depreciation, 2 per cent for stockholders, 1.5 per cent for "use in business."

In 1973 the company paid more than $2.1 billion in U.S., foreign and other income taxes. Last year, a relatively depressed one, the total still remained over $1 billion.

All this is not a defense of big business, but merely a reminder that there is more to a company like GM than pollution, defective equipment recalls, layoffs and strikes, big executive salaries and high vehicle prices.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Education Task Force

Jimmy Carter honors North Carolina's university system and shows his own good judgment in his choice of William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina, to head the task force that will prepare background papers on education for his presidential campaign. The former Georgia governor may not adopt a Tar Heel point of view in all his educational pronouncements, but if he goes wrong on learning policies, it will not be because he has failed to solicit good advice.

The Friday task force's studies should yield valuable groundwork for a coherent, responsible and realistic national education effort. In Friday's words, "from pre-school... to lifelong learning." North Carolina and its university system have grappled at length, with varying degrees of success, with most of the major educational problems of the day, and the experience has been useful and productive.

The university system, the technical schools and community colleges offer a sound blueprint for a full range of higher education and continuing education opportunities. Our state kindergarten program, in full swing for the first time this coming year, promises to be a model of pre-school education achievement. The state has benefited from full and frank debate on such thorny issues as curriculum reform, vocational education vs. the "basics," teacher testing, the role of predominantly black universities and public financing for private schools.

Friday views the most significant problem of education as an erosion of confidence. That is merely a way of summarizing most of these other issues and expressing them in terms of their effect on the general public. If that is the case, then one way for a candidate to begin building the people's confidence, both in education and in his own view of education, is to seek the best education advice and counselors possible. In selecting Friday to lead his education study task force, Carter has taken an important first step toward that goal.—The Sentinel (Winston-Salem)

Misleading Figure

In his zeal to promote any program that would result in lower consumer costs for electric power, Guildford Sen. McNeill Smith has engaged in some slightly unfair and possibly damaging rhetoric. The usually careful and perceptive senator is a strong advocate of a peak-price program — as are we, if it can be worked out on a practical basis.

Smith has been sharp in his criticism of the private power companies for building expensive generating plants beyond need and having to pass on the costs of that construction to the consumers. In a recent statement, he produced the rather sensational-sounding fact that the companies used only about 38 per cent of their total power production capacity last year. That is designed to make any bill-payer gasp.

But what he did not tell the same bill-payers were the realities behind the figure. He should know, we are sure, that every steam unit has to be entirely dismantled on a regular basis to replace perishable portions. He should know that hydro-electric plants can never be operated 365 days a year or anything like it, because of water volume if nothing else. He should know that the newest plants were planned and started long before the recent recession when all available evidence pointed to a steadily increasing power demand.

And, of course, he knows that because of the recession and diminished use of power because of its cost, all of the power companies have cut back their new construction plans, even though it is a recognized gamble that power demand eight years or more from now will be what the best brains now think it will be.

The senator has every right — and we applaud — to explore every device to protect us from prohibitive costs of public utilities. But let's not engage in overkill.—The High Point Enterprise accepted a similar post at St. Mary's Hospital here.

The program is simple. Prier knows the questions which arise as a person approaches 65, so he schedules meetings with specialists who can answer them.

"We have 650 employees, about 100 past 55 years old," Prier said of the hospital staff. "I tried to hold down the meetings to 20 persons but I couldn't. We've scheduled another series for the fall. Sometimes even those under 55 come to the meetings."

Speakers at the seven-week seminar included a Social Security representative, a registered nurse who talked about the physical and mental aspects of aging, a bank officer who discussed trusts and wills, a spokesman for the Illinois State Employment office who told of job opportunities and a member of the Association of Retired Persons.

"We also had a nutritionist who talked about a diet for the elderly and two men from area colleges who discussed education opportunities, especially technical skills. What if you always wanted to build an engine and don't want to go to college?" he said.

equation is Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois, who has written all House Republicans that Connally would be "a disaster" on the ticket because he is "indelibly associated in the public mind with Watergate."

Nevertheless, all signs indicate deepening resistance by the President. Instead of showing concern, Mr. Ford now seems unlikely to meet Rallsback or any other Republican on an anti-Connally errand. Rather, in Jackson, Miss., last week, Mr. Ford was pleased to whisper in the ear of one Mississippi Republican that Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio is backing Connally.

This attitude is surprising only to Republicans with a short memory. Mr. Ford was strongly criticized when he went out of his way to greet Connally, then under indictment, in Houston in early 1975. White House insiders say he regards Connally as by far the best equipped of any possible running mate to assume the presidency. Indeed, one Ford crony confides that Connally "casts an amazing spell over Presidents, and Jerry Ford is no exception."

When Connally rushed to the White House to endorse the President once he heard about the Reagan-Schweiker misalliance, White House staffers were on guard to stop a joint Ford-Connally appearance. But Mr. Ford, without notifying his chief of staff, Richard Cheney, slipped out to the White House driveway for an impromptu press conference — with Connally by his side.

Accordingly, Connally's shrewd enemies are now counselling an abrupt switch from public to very private lobbying. Going public might provide a rallying point for pro-Reagan forces at Kansas City, where Connally may embody their symbolic aspirations. Besides, it is alienating the one Republican who really counts.

A Conservative View

High Principle Burdens Practical Politician

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The question before the house is: Resolved, that high principle plays no significant role in American presidential politics.

That is not exactly a debater's question, to be sure, and it is put awkwardly in the negative, but it merits examination. I find myself inclining more and more toward the view—and I mean this seriously, not cynically—that high principle is an orphaned child in a presidential campaign. Nobody wants the kid around.

By high principle, I mean to suggest a body of political and philosophical convictions that add up to a consistent and coherent whole. Such convictions are the product of experience, observation, instinct, upbringing, prejudice, education; they form a kind of political gene string.

The candidate of high principle, whether he is identified as liberal or conservative, builds his philosophy on bedrock. He may compromise on the edges of a particular issue; he may negotiate on matters of timing or amount; but at some point he makes the bedrock stand. This is an integrity of the mind. To violate such convictions is intellectually to know sin.

The politician who is burdened with high principle must run with weights in his saddle. The load slows him down. Such a man has certain convictions about the role of the state; he has certain convictions about the responsibility of the individual. He enters a race with fixed views on such issues as welfare, taxation, national security, the regulation of business. He is tied to inner compulsions; he must take positions "as a matter of principle." He prefers the glorious defeat to the tainted victory.

Now and again, in the course of our quadrennial presidential expeditions, one encounters candidates of high principle. They are lonesome fellows. You seldom meet them on the main highways; they are chugging along the gravel roads. I never met the late Eugene V. Debs—he died when I was six—but my elders tell me he was such a man. Fighting Bob LaFollette was said to be another. The recurring Prohibitionist candidates I take to be persons of high principle. Roger MacBride, this year's Libertarian candidate, doubtless would qualify. Eugene McCarthy is yet another. Such candidates are going nowhere.

By contrast, Jimmy Carter may go all the way. The Democratic candidate certainly is not a principled conservative. Neither, on close examination, can he be perceived as a principled liberal. In the loftier realms of political philosophy, he seems to have traveled not at all. His views on "right-to-work" provide a revealing example of his makeup: He has no views on right-to-work. He is neither for nor against the repeal of Section 14(b) of Taft-Hartley. If a repeal bill is brought to him, he will sign it. It is a matter of indifference to him. But to someone who is deeply, passionately committed to political principle—on either side of the issue—indifference is impossible.

The union of Ronald Reagan and Richard Schweiker offers another case in point. Mr. Reagan, formerly a man of high principle, found the burden too heavy and two weeks ago cast it off. He anointed Mr. Schweiker as his prospective running mate. Mr. Schweiker, by accepting the laying on of hands, demonstrated the soupy nature of his own bedrock convictions. There is no way under heaven—no highly principled way—that these two gentlemen could accommodate their positions. But they are accommodating fellows.

Of Senator Walter Mondale, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, one remains uncertain. It is possible that he suffers the affliction of high principle. If so, he may yet succumb to the sniffles and high fevers of a Carter campaign. Before November, Mr. Mondale may be a most unhappy man. But perhaps he can accommodate also.

I view these developments with no particular agony of the spirit. It is entirely possible that the country needs a good city manager type, unconcerned with such nebulosities as freedom, limited government, social management and individual responsibility. The Executive Office probably is no place for such dreamers as McCarthy and MacBride. Down with philosophers! Up with competent plumbers! When the next administration sets out to remodel the house of our fathers, we may not see great rafters of high principle, but at least the pipes won't leak.

THE BIG TEST!

There Are Problems In Car Safety Awareness

Before we had Meg, Phillip and I used to read the auto accidents statistics and wonder at all those awful parents out there who didn't adequately protect their babies by using proper safety seats. We declared to each other that WE would never let our baby ride in the car without being properly restrained. So when I got pregnant, the first thing we bought was a Petersen Safety Shell.

These safety shells have three different positions: the rear-facing position for an infant; the front-facing position for an small toddler, with the seat belt fastened over the safety shield that hooks to the front of the carseat; and the front-facing position without the safety shield for an older toddler.

Meg came home from the hospital in the first position, riding beside daddy in the front seat because none of the seat belts in the back seat would fit around the safety shell when it was in the back-facing position. Guess who rode in the back?

And I continued to do so for quite some time. At first we tried to pretend that nothing had changed, but I got tired of talking to a bald spot, so most of our rides were taken in silence. In chagrined silence, I might add, because everyone who pulled up beside us would stare at us like we were crazy.

"Nadia Comaneche, watch out," I muttered as I grabbed her again and pulled over to the side of the road to strap her back in, barely missing a car in the other lane.

The next phase of her performance was a bellyflop down the safety shield. I caught her head just before she hit the floor and ran a stop sign in the process.

Finally, I decided that it would be easier if I just put her in my lap where she could amuse herself by trying to take the keys out of the ignition. She was seated there, blowing the horn with great glee, when we pulled up at the next intersection, right beside another woman. She leaned over to roll down her passenger window, and I could see that beside her was a very young infant strapped safely in a carseat.

"Don't you know how dangerous it is to let your baby ride like that?" she yelled at me. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself! That baby ought to be in a carseat where she'll be safe and won't be able to cause any accidents!"

I started to say something, then thought better. After all, ignorance is bliss.

Facing South

Never Assailed By The Indecisions Felt Today

RED RIVER COUNTY, Tex.—"Right's right and wrong's wrong and if a man's word ain't no good, he ain't no good. I bought this place on the condition that ol' man Burl could farm that patch back there like he's been doing for thirty years and I ain't selling it no other way."

When my daddy, Elbert Stephens, made up his mind, there was no changing it, despite the fact that he would have made a profit if he sold the land. Our house faced a winding asphalt road that formed the southern boundary of twenty-three acres. To the north, beyond ramshackle outhouses and our own garden plot, lay the parcel of land our neighbor cultivated each year. He had no legal right to it but some former owner had given him permission to plant his corn there rather than let the field lie fallow. As time passed, habit had become tradition until, when my father bought the place, it was understood that Mr. Burl would continue to farm the northwest corner. The prosperous looking stranger who wanted to buy the land seemed faintly amused when Daddy suggested that the arrangement be continued. He lost no time in saying that if he bought the land, he would not honor any such absurd custom.

"Well, I don't guess we can do business," Daddy answered. "I ain't going to let no old man get kicked off a piece of land he's been working all his life."

We continued to live there until Daddy could no longer meet the mortgage payments. Money meant little to him beyond the necessities of life. Honor was much more important and he felt, if he worked (in his prime, he could pull a thousand pounds of cotton in a day), paid his debts and kept his word, nothing more should be expected of him. In all the years of my growing up, I never knew him to suffer from indecision. He followed his conscience and stood firm in the face of disagreement from his family, society in general, and even the United States government. I can still recall his words, booming out in defense of a neighbor who was operating a whiskey still in one of the dense thickets that flourish along the sloughs and bayous that dot the deep woods along Blanton Creek.

"He's just trying to make a living," Daddy's arms flew out to emphasize his words as he paced to and fro across the faded linoleum floor. "I know fer a fact, he'd work if he could find a job. I've pulled a crosscut saw, with him on the other end, enough to know that. Times like they are and him with all them younguns to feed, I don't blame him for making a little whiskey. Them that drinks that stuff is going to drink it whether they git it from a bootlegger or over 'cross the river where it's legal. I look down on them that sells whiskey jist 'cause they're too lazy to do a hard day's work but when it's the only way you got to keep your kids from going hungry, it's another story."

In the days that followed, we learned to ignore the wisp of smoke that occasionally crept above distant tree tops and if we saw a tow sack-laden man creeping through the underbrush, we looked the other way.

Daddy was never assailed by the indecisions that plague so many of us these days. To him, there is only right and wrong, with no intermediate shadings of gray. The advice he gave me, when I was in the sixth grade and concerned over the morality of letting classmates copy my homework, has served me well on many occasions.

"I cain't tell you what to do, Girl," he said as he drew his Barlow pocket knife over a piece of smooth whittling wood. "You got to figger out in your mind how you feel about it and if it makes you feel the least bit guilty to do a thing, then it's wrong fer you to do it even if everybody else says it's alright, and sometimes, there'll be something come along that everybody says is real wrong that you jist cain't see no harm in. Either way, the main thing is to decide where you stand, then pick a spot and stand there. Ain't nothing worse than being washy."

His stubbornness is often the despair of his family and always its salvation. He hates dishonesty, installment plans, and most of all, charity or indebtedness. His kind are a dying breed in a complex society where compromise is extolled as the only realistic way to solve any problem. I wonder if there is a place in my generation for a man who knows his own mind.

Majority Of Voters For Presidential Debates

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J.—Seven in 10 Americans, including a majority of the supporters of Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and President Gerald Ford, would like to have the presidential candidates this fall participate in nationally televised debates, such as the famous debates between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in the 1960 campaign.

Those who favor debates feel that a great many more people could be reached in this manner than by the present methods, and that the electorate in general would be better informed about the campaign issues. Others point out that a series of debates would save a lot of the present "wear and tear" on the candidates by relieving them of extensive travel across the nation.

Under Section 315 of the Federal Communication Act (the equal time provision), if time is provided for one candidate, broadcasters must provide equal time for all candidates, including those on minor party tickets. However, a recent Federal Communications Commission ruling permits broadcasters to cover debates or similar events under a non-broadcasting suspenses.

Debates In 1960

The Kennedy-Nixon debates in 1960 were the first prime-time, all-network debates and attracted a huge national audience—75 million viewers in 30 million homes. There were four debates—Sept. 26, Oct. 7, Oct. 13 and Oct. 21. Some political

The Train Leaves For Chocowinity Next Sunday

Eastern North Carolina fans of railroading in the days of steam will have the opportunity to relive them again in mid-August. A round trip steam powered excursion from Raleigh to Chocowinity is slated for Sunday, August 15.

The East Carolina Chapter,

National Railway Historical Society, announced sponsorship of the trip, which will utilize Southern Railway's venerable steam locomotive, number 4501. This 2-8-2 Mikado locomotive is now the property of Paul Merriman, President of the Tennessee Valley Railroad, Chattanooga, Tenn. She was built for Southern Railway by Baldwin Works in 1911. Some say that she was the first "Mike" under steam in the southland. At any rate she spurred a whole breed of Mikados. Within five years of her debut, over 150 identical engines followed her into service. Eventually, Southern acquired over 400 Mikados over the next 15 years. Her service record is sketchy, but 4501 appears to have operated over much of the Southern System in her youth. Later, she was operating on the Louisville and St. Louis divisions. In 1948, No. 4501 was in a scrap line at Princeton, Ind., when she was noticed by officials of the Kentucky and Tennessee. They purchased her and gave her the number 12, and assigned her to hauling loaded and empty coal cars between Stearns, Ky., and coal tipples not too far away.

Toward the end of 1963, the K and T switched to diesels and for the second time, No. 12 was out of a job.

The following year, the Tennessee Valley Railroad Museum became a Valhalla for her and she retained her maiden number — No. 4501. She now is dressed in the green-and-gold livery that made Southern passenger steam power so popular and is in the company of TVRM's growing collection of rail relics.

Other principal physical characteristics are— her drivers are 63 inches in diameter; the boiler pressure is 200 pounds; she weighs 272,900 pounds; her tractive effort is rated at $33,900 pounds — and she can whistle!

Stops will include Wilson, Farmville, Greenville and Chocowinity. The trip will follow the route of the former Norfolk Southern trackage completed in 1906 from Raleigh to Chocowinity. In days past, this area was served by regular pullman and parlor car trains of the Norfolk Southern, known as the "Day Express" and the "Night Express". Regular passenger service over this area of the line ended in January 1948.

Passenger cars for the trip include air conditioned and non-air conditioned coaches, baggage — refreshment car, open window coaches (for lovers of coal smoke and cinders) and provision for sound recording.

Tickets for the trip, which will be limited, may be obtained from the East Carolina Chapter, National Railway Historical Society, Caboose

5228, Farmville, N.C. 27828. The round trip fare from Greenville to Chocowinity and return is $7.00 for adults and $5.00 for children. One way fare, Greenville to Chocowinity is $3.50 adults, $2.50 children.

THE TRAIN TO CHOCOWINITY . . . will leave Greenville next Sunday, August 15 shortly before 1 p.m. The near 17 mile run will take about 50 minutes, with a return trip to Greenville to leave Chocowinity at 3 p.m. Reserve tickets can be purchased from Hungate's Hobbies and Crafts, Greenville.

Pitt Swine Flu Shots Uncertain

By BETTY SANDERSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Swine flu vaccinations may be available to Pitt County residents by October or they may not be given at all, according to local health officials.

"The availability of the vaccine is dependent on the liability (insurance) question pending with the manufacturers of the vaccine and the insurers, and the necessary Congressional action," said Frank Bradham, immunizations consultant for the Eastern Regional office of the Division of Health Services.

"A bill is pending in Congress that will offer some liability coverage through federal funds," he said. "The bill is being transferred to a subcommittee and may not be settled before Tuesday or Wednesday."

"It will take about 30 days after the liability question is settled before the vaccine arrives in North Carolina."

Two types of vaccine will be administered, according to Tillie Cullipher, personal health chief for the Pitt County Health Department. A bivalent vaccine will be given to persons over 65 and a certain percentage of persons over 24 with chronic diseases. Monovalent vaccine will be available for the mass public inoculations, to be given to persons 18 and older.

The bivalent type, said Mrs. Cullipher, is a combination of A-Victoria and A-New Jersey, two flu strains which have caused deaths. The monovalent vaccine is for the A-New Jersey strain.

Bradham said the bivalent vaccine should reach this area by mid-September, the monovalent by mid-October.

Most of the bivalent vaccinations will be administered in physician's offices, where elderly or chronically ill patients may be contacted more easily, said Mrs. Cullipher. They will also be given in health departments and clinics.

Monovalent vaccinations will be available from health departments, clinics and physicians.

The vaccine itself is free to the public, according to Mrs. Cullipher. Injections with a needle and syringe (for both strains) or with a jet gun (monovalent only) will be free at the Pitt County Health Dept. Some physicians, however, may choose to charge for supplies involved or for their services.

Evening and night clinics may be set up on certain days, she said, especially when jet guns are available. The vaccines will be administered as soon as possible after they arrive in Pitt County.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is currently trying to decide whether swine flu vaccine should be given to children, said Mrs. Cullipher. Test doses have shown that children do not build up sufficient immunity to swine flu.

If the vaccine is to be administered to children, she explained, the health department will probably work through the Greenville City and Pitt County school systems, giving the inoculations in the schools.

All adults must sign permission slips before vaccination, she said. Parents must give permission for their children to be vaccinated.

The best response to the vaccine so far has been in persons above the age of 24, according to Dr. Earl G. Trevathan, Jr., medical consultant for the Pitt County Health Dept. In the case of children, he said, it will take more time to develop a dose schedule and age range for effective immunizations.

Nurses with the local health department will undergo training sessions in the use of jet guns, hopefully by the end of August, according to Bradham.

The whole project, however, is still not definite, said Roger Barnaby, director of the Pitt County Health Dept. If an official recommendation comes from the federal government, then county health officials will go ahead with plans for the mass inoculation program.

Election Years Spur Books As Well As Candidates

EDITOR'S NOTE — Election years, it seems, breed almost as many books as candidates. Often hastily done, always, like the elections themselves, a gamble, such books have become a part of the national scene. Here is a lighthearted look at an American phenomenon.

did not shine quite so brightly: "Thoughts," by Edmund G. Brown Jr. This was out before Jerry Brown started running, and here is one of his thoughts: "I don't even want to think about the Presidency ... just being Governor is a pain in the ass." Here is another: "We're going to move left and right at the same time." "Republican Humor," by Stephen J. Skubik and Hal E. Short. One sample by President Ford: "Betty had a rather interesting theory as to why I played center rather than quarterback. She said it's one of the few positions where you don't have to move your feet." And a sample by Ronald Reagan: "I always grew up believing that if you build a better mousetrap the world will beat a path to your door. Now if you build a better mousetrap the government comes along with a better mouse." Take your pick. "Reagan: The Political Chameleon," by former California Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown and Bill Brown. From one former governor to another, "Ronald Reagan's election to the presidency would be a national disaster." And similar under-statements. "C'nelia: An Intimate Self-Portrait," by Cornelia Wallace. "The sunshine was shining," she records. "On Watch," by Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. "The President is paranoid. Kissinger is paranoid. Haig is paranoid."

"Scoop: The Life and Politics of Henry M. Jackson," by Peter Ognibene. His subject, says the author, is "a tightwad." "The Education of a Public Man," by Hubert H. Humphrey. "To lose to Nixon. Ye Gods!" "The Creative Balance: Government, Politics, and the Individual in America's Third Century," by Elliot Richardson. "And so, at last, I come to the one firm conviction that I mentioned at the beginning of this discussion: it is that the subject is too new for final judgments." And so to bed.

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer
It's election year, book fans, and, as ever, the shelves are as stuffed as a Cook County ballot box.

You can buy books on everybody from Adlai to Zumwalt. You can buy three books on Teddy, two on Rocky, three on Wallace and one on Wallace's wife. You can buy a book by Jerry Brown on himself and one by his father on Ronald Reagan. You can even buy a book, a slim one, on "Republican Humor."

And you can buy a number of books giving you the inside dope on who's going to win the election.

One, for instance, out early this year, had a compelling premise: that the eventual nominee of a political party may with certainty be divined before the first primary election.

The author, Arthur T. Hadley, rates potential candidates in various politically critical areas — staff, financing, strategy and the like — and in some 300 pages of unflawed analysis narrows the Democratic field to "only two possible champions."

Scoop Jackson and Mo Udall. Obviously.

Alas for Jimmy Carter, "he didn't have any spectacular success on any" of the key gauges, one in particular. "His staff was his weakness."

Carter, in fact, got short shrift everywhere.

Richard Reeves was out early with a book surveying this year's field of candidates. Among Democrats, he gave 15 pages to Teddy and 20 each to Scoop and Jerry. Jimmy got peanuts — 13 lines of biography and a few scattered paragraphs.

An alert publishing industry — which turned down as not worth the gamble at least one proposal last March by a recognized author to write a Carter book — has corrected that defect.

When the Democratic National Convention opened in New York, delegates were inundated with 13,000 quickie paperbacks on the nominee. There was no escaping them. One, "The Miracle of Jimmy Carter," was delivered to delegates' hotel rooms. Another, "Jimmy Who?", was shoved on reporters as they lined up for credentials. Thus, when the convention speeches tended to pall, delegates could flip through pages and revive their spirits on such passages as this, describing one man's discovery of the Carter secret:

"'Faith!' he said aloud. 'That's it! He has faith! ... This man Carter has got the kind of faith that moves voters — millions of them.'"

Or this: "When this year is over, the political textbooks and the history books will have to be rewritten."

History books? The speed with which some campaign books are written is matched only by the speed in getting them printed.

Ballantine Books, for example, received the manuscript for its Carter paperback, "I'll Never Lie to You: Jimmy Carter in His Own Words," on July 6. Four days later, 700 copies were flown to New York for the convention, and two days after that books were on sale.

Publishers are mum on how much profit is in a campaign book but it's significant that the larger houses tend to keep hands off.

Publishers Weekly, the trade magazine, has surveyed booksellers for an upcoming article on how well various categories of biography sell. Historical biography came in first, literary biography second. Political biography, including learned volumes by well-known authors, was dead last.

Take Carter's autobiography, "Why Not the Best?" It was published last October by Broadman Press, a small house in Nashville which also publishes hymnals. In the early stages of the campaign the stores didn't stock it. Now it has been reissued in soft cover and has sold about 175,000 copies with another 175,000 in print.

There are some other books, out this year, upon which fate

Each Night, For 30 Years, She Enters An Iron Lung

EACH NIGHT for 30 years Bettye Erickson has been sealed into an iron lung (background) so she can live another day. (UPI Photo)

By JOHN E. YEMMA

DALLAS (UPI) — Each night for 30 years, family and friends have taken turns sealing Bettye Erickson into an iron lung a relic of the past — so she can live another day.

During the day she sucks oxygen from a breathing assistance machine. But when she's asleep, an iron lung takes over, forcing air in and out of lungs long stilled by her paralyzed chest muscles.

She has lived with the iron lung longer than any patient in the United States. (Fred Snipe Jr. of Chicago died 10 years ago after spending 19 years in one.)

On a warm July night in 1946 — eight years before Jonas Salk developed the vaccine that made poliomyelitis and the iron lung a thing of the past — one of the periodic epidemics struck Mrs. Erickson's neighborhood in Dallas.

"It hit me," she said. "But I was the only person on the block that got it." She was 20 years old and had a one-year-old daughter. Her husband was in the military service.

Bettye lay in bed shivering, alternately suffering chills and fever and feeling a massive headache. She lost consciousness at Parkland Hospital, and when she awoke eight days later — on July 24, 1946, her daughter's birthday — she was inside a pulsing respirator.

Doctors told her family she would not live two weeks. Gradually Bettye realized she was 99 per cent paralyzed. She would never be able to use her hands, feet, arms or legs. She would never be independent again.

"I was such an active girl," she said with a good-natured smile. "I never did have time to sit and just listen. I had a lot of plans to do a lot of things when the polio hit. You know I never even got to push a button on a washing machine."

The bulbar polio attacked her neurons, or nerve cells, and the destruction of a large number of these caused paralysis.

"I can give you a thousand reasons why your children should be immunized," she says.

Bettye left the hospital after 13 months. Her family and friends set up a schedule to see to her needs and to lift her each night into the iron lung — the huge metallic cylinder Bettye calls "the workhorse."

She now needs the iron lung only when asleep. She can breathe independently for several hours and uses a respirator device to aid her as she lies on a hospital bed during the day.

With the partial use of her toes she operates switches at the foot of her bed which turn on a specially-designed telephone, a television, radio or tape recorder. She dials phone numbers with her toes. And with a pencil in her mouth she has learned to write.

For years she sold greeting cards and gifts by phone, supplementing the family income while she supervised the upbringing of her daughter.

She watches television, talks with people.

"I use words to paint every picture I want to get into other people's minds," she says.

She reads occasionally. "But I can't hold the book and turn the pages."

She developed an uncanny sense of hearing. One night as she lay sleeping in the iron lung the noise of a cat walking across the rug in the room awakened her.

But mostly, she watches the world through a large picture window in a suburban house built with funds raised by the Northwest Dallas Kiwanis Club.

"Lots of people come in and out of my life, people I'd known when I was very young, before the polio, and old friends who suddenly think of me, she said.

"You know I was a pretty good secretary before the polio and I darsay if I kept my books now the credit side would be very short and the debit side very long. People do very much for me, but what can I do for them?" Bettye Erickson has one overriding wish.

"I just wish I could use my hands," she said. "You know idle hands are the devil's workshop. I would hug my daughter and grandchildren — that's the first thing I'd do."

But other things could make her happy.

"Heaven help me if I were a millionaire, she said. "I'd have me one of those 'Ironsides' vans with hydraulic lifts and someone with a movie camera to take pictures of it.

"But it'd be nice just to have a driver for every day for a week to drive around and let me relocate myself. There are places in the city I haven't seen since I was growing up."

She spends hours thinking. "You know, when you get to be a half-century old and can't use your hands, your brain catches up with you. If your brain's not active you lose everything.

"I've been going through and doing a lot of cleaning out of things in it lately and it's surprising what I remember — things from way back.

She doesn't talk much about her religion, except to say, "I believe."

"But I never do know how to word anything about religion, she adds. "Sometimes I think maybe I don't please Him much. But then I don't have much to work with.

"I'm a little bit on the handicapped side."

Bible Translators Are Ordered Out Of Nepal

By BHOLA RANA

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — In the tiny Himalayan country of Nepal, the only Hindu kingdom in the world, religious freedom is not tolerated.

A group of Bible translators can testify to that.

With the vast majority of the country's 12 million citizens zealous Hindus, Nepal has sought to preserve its religious character.

The country is ruled by a royal dynasty dating back nearly 200 years. The rulers are believed to be incarnations of Lord Vishnu, the most powerful god in the Hindu pantheon.

Official pronouncements make it clear that any other religious group wishing to live in Nepal must respect the country's Hindu laws. Conversion from Hinduism to any other religion is strictly forbidden.

Thus it was no surprise that Katmandu's Tribhuvan University (named after the present King Birendra's grandfather) last month terminated its 10-year agreement with the Summer Institute of Linguistics, effective this September.

The Institute is affiliated with Wycliffe Bible Translations of Huntington Beach, Calif. It operates in about two dozen foreign countries.

The university, the only one in Nepal, did not give any reason for its sudden decision. An official of the Education Ministry said, however, "There were four specific cases of conversion."

Presumably the institute was involved in these conversions. "All those involved were told to leave the country," the official said.

The official declined to give the names of those converted. About 75 persons, a third of them American, were working for the institute in Nepal. Other employees included Britons, Germans, Swiss, Australians and New Zealanders.

The institute's official purpose in Nepal was to study the country's different dialects, which number more than 100. Since Nepal was decreed the official national language, most of these dialects have been dying.

"We have nothing against the Institute as such," a government official said. "What we were concerned about was the purpose for which the institute was using its knowledge of the different dialects by first translating the Bible into these dialects."

Another Nepali said, "The work of the Institute was against the very fundamental principles being adopted by the government.

"Ultimately, if the institute had been permitted to continue functioning it would have negated all the gains of the last 15 or 20 years. Nepali has not only been declared the national language but more and more people are now beginning to speak and study it on a national level."

A foreign resident close to the Institute said, "What happened was inevitable. But there were some people in the Institute who were professionally very competent. They are the ones who have suffered and ultimately many of the dying dialects will die."

Soy Milk In New Yogurt

By PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) —

Now that cow's milk yogurt has caught on throughout the United States, two scientists at the USDA Agricultural Research Service here have developed a new variety made from soy milk.

First, the scientists made soy milk in a process designed to maintain flavor and protein digestibility. Yogurt made from the milk breaks down, soy sugars that man cannot digest.

The researchers say both new foods have flavors more acceptable than that of traditional soy milk. The yogurt can be made with vanilla, orange, strawberry, lemon and natural flavors. It is not yet available commercially, but an announcement through the industrial press has been made to interest processors.

The research was done by Hiroshi Kanda, a visiting Japanese industrial scientist, and ARS scientists Hwa L. Wang, Clifford W. Hesselbine and Kathleen A. Warner.

Wang said the Northern Regional Research Center here used both new scientific theory and a centuries-old concept in developing the new products. Soybeans first are soaked 16 hours in water, then boiled five minutes in a sodium bicarbonate solution, in line with an ancient Oriental belief that soaking beans in baking soda reduces the beany flavor.

Bicentennial Beech Tree Is Certified

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The nation's only bicentennial beech tree may have shaded a Revolutionary War general and his troops as they marched to a rendezvous with George Washington.

The 250-year-old tree, found by an East Hartford woman, has been certified historically significant by the International Society of Arboriculture (ISA) in Urbana, Ill. The society said the tree is the only beech proven to be more than 200 years old in its search for bicentennial branches.

Historian Nelson Burr said New Britain Avenue, where the tree stands, was once a military highway. In 1781 Gen. Jean-Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, le comte Rochambeau, passed by the tree with his four French regiments.

Rochambeau left Rhode Island the previous winter to meet Washington in New York, Burr said. The two armies then marched together to Chesapeake Bay, where they surrounded and captured the British army of Gen. Cornwallis in the final significant military encounter of the war.

Pat Kirby, local housewife and Brownie troop leader, said she discovered the beech after learning of the ISA program. Her husband, James, is a tree surgeon, but Mrs. Kirby said she did all the work herself.

"I knew that all the schools and scout troops were doing bicentennial projects and I really wanted to find one for myself," she said. "My husband told me about this project with the understanding that I wouldn't bother him."

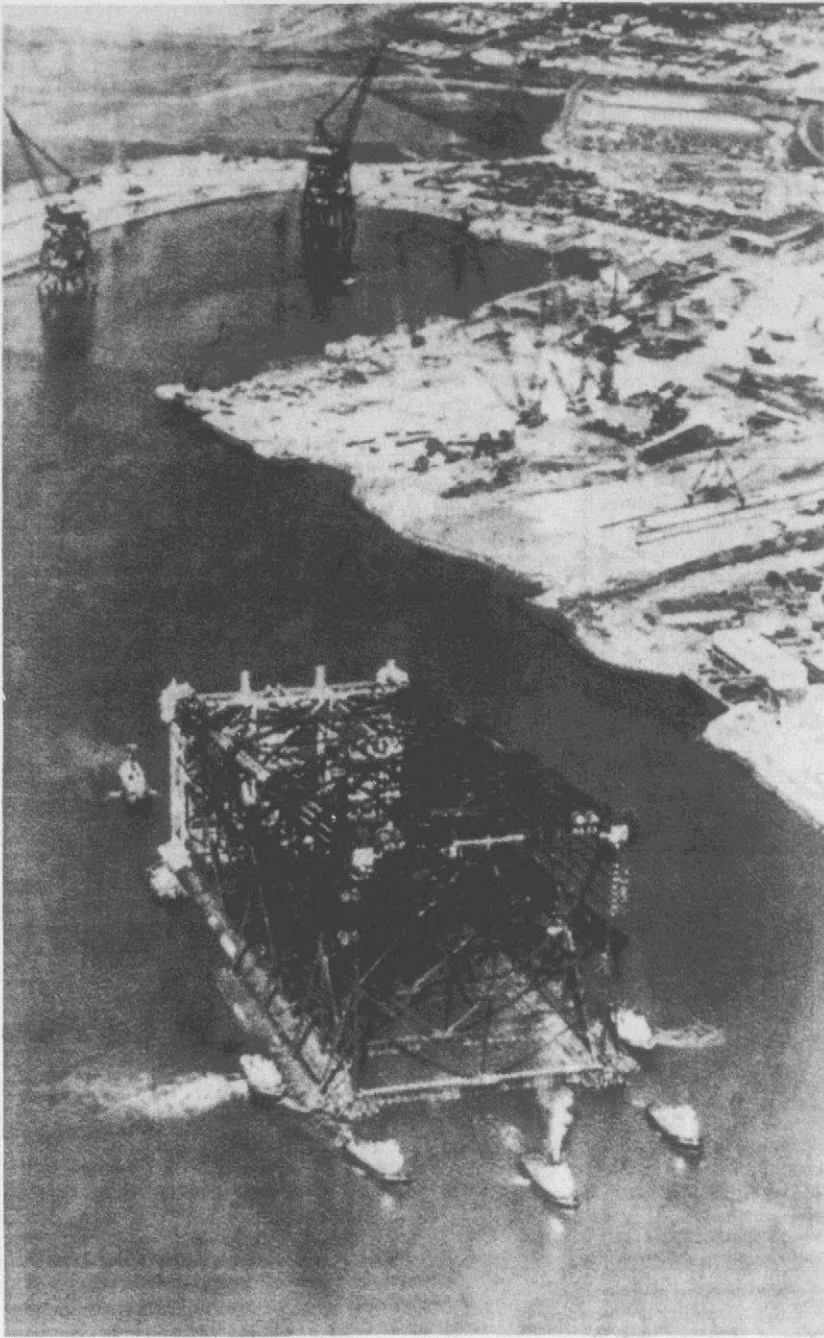

A check of the trees in town turned up the beech, which stands about 125 feet high, with branches spreading 80 feet. Its trunk has a circumference of 15 feet, 2 inches.

ISA Executive Director Ervin Bundy was notified of the find and determined through trunk cores that the tree is between 250 and 300 years old.

Bundy said beech trees of that age are not rare, but so far Mrs. Kirby is the only person to have applied for official recognition from the society.

Other beeches could be certified if they are shown to be at least 200 years old and if they are accessible to the general public, he said.

The beech in West Hartford stands on land now owned by St. Brigid's Church. The land was first settled in 1754 by the family of Joseph Skinner.

Palace Garden A Wildlife Haven

By JOHN JONES

LONDON (UPI) — British television viewers got a glimpse recently of a secret wildlife haven in central London, Queen Elizabeth's back garden at Buckingham Palace.

Tourists who clamor to watch the Changing of the Guard never see this part of London, although travelers on the top deck of a No. 52 bus might catch a glimpse of the trees and bushes beyond the grey spike-topped walls.

The Queen's back garden, all 40 acres of it, provides a breathing space from the crowds and traffic of central London for scores of creatures. Squirrels, blackbirds, thrushes, herons, as well as pigeons taking a rest from Trafalgar Square, congregate there.

Royal mementos are tucked away here and there. Two young oak trees are planted where Prince Charles and Princess Anne played as children. A corner of lavender and pinks set in Sussex stone was a silver wedding gift to the Queen and Prince Philip.

The animals who have shared this peaceful retreat with the kings and queens of England for more than two centuries were the stars of the 35-minute film by Bill Travers, who switched from acting in nature films such as "Born Free" to making wildlife documentaries.

Travers received permission to spend a year in the garden to record its everyday life through four seasons: a spider trapping flies, the metamorphosis of the dragonfly, the felling of a tree plagued by Dutch elm disease.

"It was the garden itself I wanted to be the star," Travers said. "In my film the Queen is just a nice lady who visits it and visits it as often as she can."

"The Queen spends as much time as she can there, and she took a healthy interest in our work. She knows a great deal about what's going on in the garden."

The Queen visits the garden most days she is resident at the Palace. Shrubs and bushes ensure privacy from onlookers in nearby high-rise buildings.

The film showed her strolling through the grounds as she talked with head gardeners Fred Nurbeam, a placid countryman who has nurtured the garden for 23 years.

The herbaceous borders are filled with familiar plants, marigolds, sweet william, geraniums and phlox. The shrubbery filled with rhododendrons, azaleas and camellias has attracted many insects, especially moths and butterflies.

Nutbeam and a staff of eight transformed the garden from its Victorian setting of privet holly and plane trees into what it is today, a large unobtrusively landscaped private garden and unofficial nature reserve.

LARGE LAKE

OSAGE BEACH, Mo. (UPI) — The Lake of the Ozarks, in central Missouri, is one of the largest man-made lakes in the world.

Might Move Stilt Village

BANDAR SERI BEGAWAN, Brunei (AP) — Steps are being taken to shift some 30,000 people living in the largest water village in Southeast Asia to dry land.

Picturesque Kampong Ayer has been called a health and fire hazard. Many of its wooden cottages are more than 30 years old. In one area, under the shadow of Bandar Seri Begawan's elaborate gold-domed mosque, about 3,000 people occupy only 300 homes. There is simply no room for new houses.

There were earlier attempts by the government of this oil-rich British protectorate on Borneo Island to improve the quality of life of those in the water village by moving them ashore. But they met with opposition from the villagers themselves, who appeared to like life in stilt houses on the Brunei River.

A more recent survey showed a change in public opinion. Every household in the complex was sent an official form that asked whether they would be willing to move. The results so far indicate that a majority would opt for dry land.

Some residents said they would like land of their own for farming or gardening. Others cited the increasing cost of maintaining older stilt houses. Still others are prepared to move because they lack privacy in the crowded water village.

Kaopong Ayer is one of Brunei's main tourist attractions and it will probably be years before it disappears. Government planners talk in terms of a completely new satellite town for the water villagers with its own mosque, schools, clinics, shops and other facilities.

The Resettlement Department is checking possible sites.

SPANISH INFLUENCE MARKS 4-BEDROOM HOME

By Jerry Bishop
Gracious living is all but guaranteed to the occupants of this Spanish-styled design. A four bedroom, two story arrangement, the Villa Bella begins with an exterior touched with arched elegance and adds a floor plan that emphasizes space. A courtyard framed in arches combines with double entry doors to dominate the exterior, and the upper level deck adds an interesting touch. To camouflage the garage and maintain design balance, garage doors are inside entry, and small-paned windows face front.

Inside, the floor plan succeeds in meeting the various demands of a large family. It features strongly defined areas for formal and informal living and assigns efficient work centers.

PLAN YOUR HOME

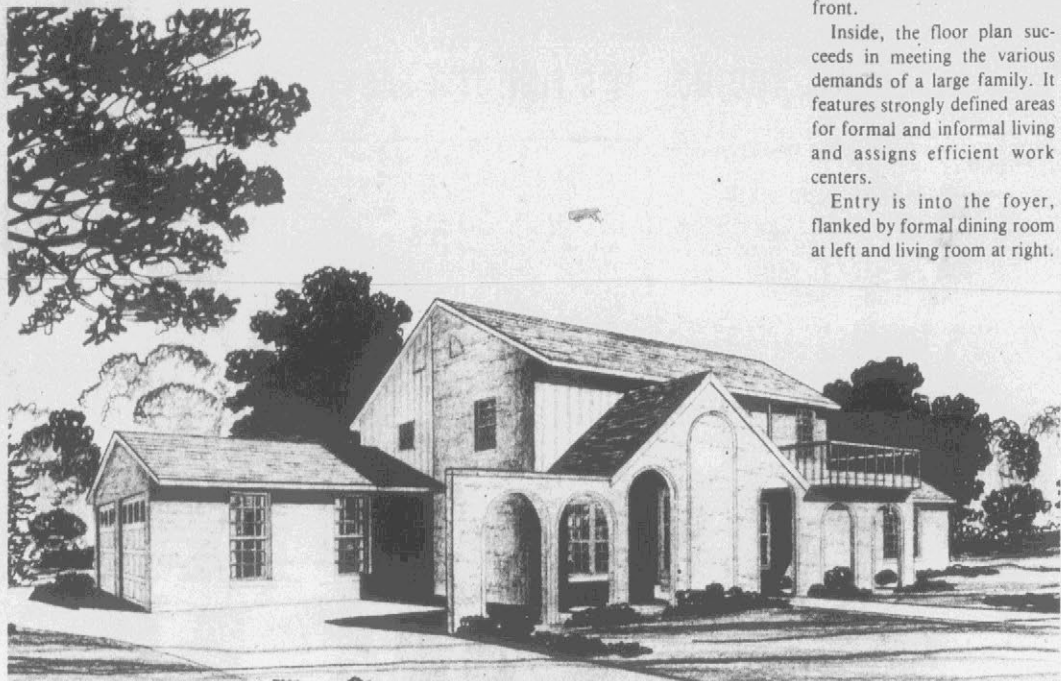

The closeted hallway off the foyer, however, leads directly to the breakfast room and helps minimize cross-traffic.

Sandwiched between dining and breakfast rooms is the ample kitchen, with convenient garage entry, pantry, and storage closet. The breakfast room enjoys sliding glass doors to the 22-ft. patio at rear. A half bath/laundry combination separates the area from the study, a large closeted room that could also serve as a guest room.

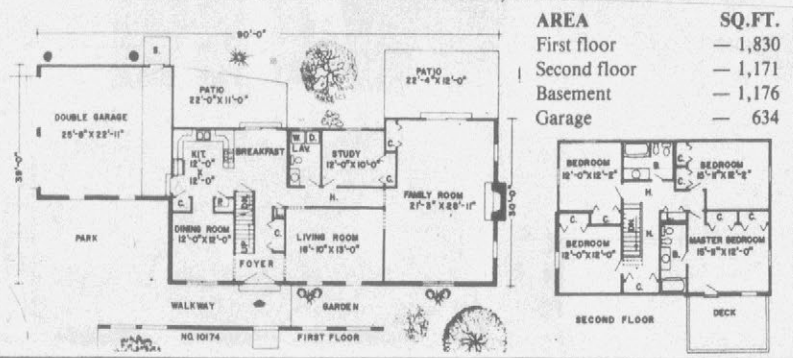

Bordering the study and living room, the family room offers an immense area for informal entertaining. It stretches the entire width of the home to end in sliding glass doors to the patio and spotlights a wood-burning fireplace.

Upstairs, four sizable bedrooms are served by two full baths. None of the rooms measures less than 12' by 12', and two display double closets. Besides a private bath, the master bedroom is indulged with its own deck, a restful addition.

Storage space is included in the oversized double garage and in the large basement.

There are many functional reasons for building fences other than the oldest of them all — to keep cattle, horses and other animals within certain boundaries.

No matter how utilitarian your reason, you can add to the appearance of your home and, consequently, its market value, if you choose a design from among the many exciting styles now available. Even the picket fence is becoming more stylized.

Whatever your choice, even before you decide on whether you want a traditional or contemporary design, make sure that the zoning requirements and survey limits are. The most common limitation is the height to which the fence can be built along a property line. Sometimes, a potential problem can be averted by reaching an agreement with a neighbor on sharing the costs and work of building a so-called "good neighbor" design, one that looks the same from either side.

Since it is the fence posts that support the entire structure, their installation is of vital importance. Get them solidly in place and the chances are the fence will last indefinitely without the necessity of a repair. Generally, it is best to use one of the weather-resistant woods, such as redwood, cypress or cedar, although other types of wood will be satisfactory if they are treated with a preservative. "Treated" does not mean brushing the posts with a single coat of preservative. They should be soaked overnight in a container of the liquid. In fact, it's a good idea to do this with any kind of wood.

The posts should be 4 by 4s, each set one-third of its length underground. In digging the hole, make it about 8 inches in diameter at the top, slightly larger at the bottom. Make it from 4 to 6 inches deeper than the part of the wood that will go below ground. Fill that extra space with gravel to facilitate drainage. While many persons backfill the posts with well-tamped earth, a better job can be obtained by setting them into a concrete mix. It can be one of the pre-mixes or a mixture of your own made of one part portland cement, two parts of sand and four parts of gravel or other coarse aggregate.

When a post has been placed into several inches of concrete mix, brace it into position with two or three pieces of wood, set at an angle to hold it firmly. Then pour in more concrete mix until it fills the hole and comes to a point slightly higher than the surface of the ground. Trowel the mixture so that it slopes away from the post, permitting rain to flow away rather than settle next to the wood.

Keep the braces in place until the concrete has hardened. Wet down the mixture a couple of times a day for several days, skipping this step on a rainy day and increasing the treatments if the concrete is exposed to the sun for several hours a day.

Gate posts should be even stronger than the fence posts because they are subjected to constant strain. The gate itself should be at least 3 feet wide, with about a half-an-inch clearance between it and the latch-post.

In the installation of the posts, don't rely on your eyes to tell you when they are vertical. Use a level while you are setting the braces into position. Check constantly while pouring the concrete to be sure there hasn't been some movement.

Gardening Questions

Q. Is there any easy way to keep liriope, which I planted as a border, from spreading in all directions like bermudagrass? (C. C. Greensboro)

A. No, you apparently have a rhizomatous strain which sends out underground stems from which new plants arise. You can mow the unwanted areas and keep them down. Otherwise, spray all of it with Silvex, let it die, then get a non-rhizomatous strain or variety. It will be easy to maintain as a border. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. Can we grow apricots in the Raleigh area? (G. F. Raleigh)

A. If you would be willing to grow the trees just for shade. Apricot blooms early and the blooms freeze nearly every year. So your chances of getting fruit are small. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please tell me how to get rid of peach borers. I have been unsuccessful probing for them with a wire. (R. G., Burlington)

A. Only 50 to 75 per cent of the borers are likely to be found during the first examination; therefore, the hand worming should be repeated. Another method is to use PDB (paradichlorobenzene) moth crystals. Place crystals in a band two inches from the trunk and cover with soil. However, PDB is not recommended for trees less than three years old. A last resort is to apply endosulfan (thiodan) the first week of September. (K. A. Sorensen, extension entomologist)

Q. Please tell me how to care for a Christmas cactus so it will bloom next year. (C. W., Pineville)

A. During October, give Christmas cactus no water. Cautiously resume watering in November; but don't let stems become flabby from over-watering. If room atmosphere is dry, place pot on a tray of pebbles. Keep pebbles moist via water in tray. Be certain to keep plant shaded from direct sun during summer. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Use Care As To Storage Sheds

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures
Little storage buildings, tool houses and the like, are becoming popular additions to yards, back and front, as an answer to quick storage of objects used outdoors. Often the buildings do not flatter the house on the property.

A unit should be selected that looks well with the house and it should be placed where it isn't an eyesore. A scale drawing of the property should help locate the most likely spot.

It must be determined, too, whether the building can be put where you would like to have it. A town's zoning laws might prohibit erecting the building too close to the road or a property line. If it is put on a temporary foundation, such as blocks or stones, no variance permit or building permit may be required. Check it out with the local building office. If a variance is needed, you may have to enlist the support of neighbors. They may be congenial about it, but you should choose a building that is pleasing to the eye from their vantage point. So a good deal of thought ought to go into selection of the unit.

Prefabricated buildings are available from many sources. These are usually good looking and can be trucked quickly to the property and then erected by the home handyman, perhaps with the assistance of one person. Some units resemble little guest houses with a window and a flower box and these can be quite attractive. Some designs built by local carpenters may be sturdier than the factory units. In any event, price can usually be a guide to the durability of the structure among factory built lines. Choosing a unit of lighter construction to save a few dollars may not be the best solution.

Building your own storage unit may provide more confidence in its ruggedness. Plans for storage buildings are available in books, library publications and from the Department of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service at state universities. One plan offered is a 10-by-12 storage building with a traditional gambrel-roofed barn. Other plans available include those with gable or single slope shed roofs in 12-by-16, 10-by-8 and 12-by-10 sizes. An expanded shed type is one that is 8 feet by 8 feet and 8 feet by 16 feet.

The choice of a roof may be the clue to whether the storage unit is suited to the main house. For example, a gambrel roof is a beautiful one for an old barn or even a reproduction one, but on a small building it may look as gauche as a fake "wishing well" in a front yard. Gable or slope roofs may be more compatible with a colonial or contemporary house.

One man chose a salt-box-style unit, a handsome little building and flattering to his big colonial house, only to find he had narrowed the building's storage possibilities because of the big sloping roof.

Before erecting such a building on a small plot of land, be sure it will serve the purpose. A small unit can cost upwards of $700. If it is used merely to store some tools or a lawn mower, a better planned garage perhaps could provide the space. One family erected deep bins in a garage area 6-by-12 which they used for rolled rugs, storm windows and screens. Other solutions to seasonal storage may be found on walls and ceilings. Outdoor furniture, bicycles, sleds and so on may be hung from walls. Other items — fishing rods, skis, etc. — may fit snugly into ceiling fixtures erected for the purpose. Often we don't make the best use of space. We quickly stuff a new cubby hole with anything that happens to get in our way. To be really well used, storage areas require a plan that limits their use to certain things. When all storage areas are properly planned for best use fewer storage places may be required.

Q. — We have what might loosely be called a concrete patio at the side of our house. It's just about the right size for an automobile. In fact, we often park it there since we have no garage. I would like to build a semi-enclosed shelter for the car, kind of like a carport. Since I have done a lot of work with plywood, I would like to use that material. What I would like to know before I start is — will plywood stand up in all kinds of weather?

A. — It will if you use exterior plywood. However, it should be painted just as you would the outside of a house. Here again, be sure the paint is intended for use outdoors.

Q. — There are several shingles on my asphalt roof which were damaged during a recent storm. I have some extra shingles which I can use to replace the old ones. The one thing that puzzles me is how to remove the nails that are hidden. Is there some knack to this?

A. — It isn't a knack so much as it is the use of the correct tool. Go to a building supply dealer and buy a nail puller. Explain what it is to be used for and ask exactly how it is used. With most nail pullers, one is slipped under a shingle so that it will cut off the head of the nail when its outward end is struck with a hammer. However, get the instructions, since there are some types that are used a bit differently.

Q. — I have some plumbing repairs to do and expect to replace a considerable section of pipe. Can I use plastic pipe?

A. — You'll have to check the local building codes. Some permit, some don't. And many specify exactly what kind of pipe must be used for each purpose. While you're at it, be sure the regulations permit you to do the work yourself.

Q. — Within a few weeks, I'll be painting the window sashes on my house. What's the best way to keep from getting paint on the glass?

A. — There are several methods, including the use of masking tape or a painting guide. After years of experimenting, I have found that the easiest way is to be extra careful while painting with a small sash brush that has the bristles mounted at an angle. If a little paint gets on some of the windows, let it alone and, when it has dried, scrape it off with a razor blade scraper. The disadvantage of this is that you have to attack the windows a second time.

Solar Energy In Greenhouse

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — A study geared to develop solar energy to minimize the use of oil, natural gas or coal in heating greenhouses is under way at Cornell University.

Initiated with a $35,000 grant from the Energy Research and Development Administration, the project is being directed by Professor Donald R. Price, agricultural engineer at Cornell.

"The greenhouse industry throughout the northern states is feeling a severe crunch from high fuel costs," Price said. "Before the energy crisis, the annual fuel cost was about $10,000 per acre. Now, it's $25,000 and certain to go higher."

The goal, he said, is to design a greenhouse that will provide the greatest possible portion of heat from solar energy to supplement conventional fuels.

The initial phase of the project involves evaluating and selecting already available solar energy collection devices and energy storage systems to determine which are best suited for greenhouses. As part of the study, the feasibility of using surplus energy from greenhouses to heat the homes of greenhouse operators will be investigated.

To obtain basic information on the effectiveness of solar energy collection and storage, the Cornell researchers are testing an experimental solar house at the College of Architecture. Price said that as soon as the evaluation stage is completed, a demonstration unit will be conducted.

One potential architectural stumbling block to be overcome will be placement of the solar collection device itself. It may have to be adjacent to the greenhouse to avoid blocking the sunlight needed for plant growth. A possibility would be building the greenhouses clustered in a honeycomb configuration with the collection device placed at a central location.

Methods of storing the energy for cloudy days also are an important part of the effort. One of the most common methods is to heat water. Another is to heat a bed of fist-sized rocks. Price cited the use of hydrated salts as a promising heat storage medium. By melting the material with heat, the energy then is stored in the liquefied salts.

"If the storage system is large enough, the stored energy can be recovered for several days," he said.

The Cornell scientists are also studying ways to insulate the greenhouse at night to conserve heat and how to remove the insulation during the day to utilize solar energy.

Price suggested the possibility of designing insulation panels that can be used to cover the greenhouse at night, but hinged so they can be retracted during the daytime.

 "The Best Ideas Are The Ideas That Help People" how humidity controls comfort

Evaporation is a cooling process. When the air is so humid that natural evaporation does not take place or is very slow, you are warm, clammy and uncomfortable. During summer, you want to keep the air as dry as possible.

There are several ways to solve humidity problems. Electric air conditioning, for instance, removes excess moisture from the air.

Another way of improving comfort on sticky days is a dehumidifier.

Here are a few more ideas to help you improve moisture problems:

- Try to find the source of any humidity problem. If water is leaking through walls or floor, a dehumidifier probably won't handle moisture removal.
- Where possible, eliminate sources of moisture and keep doors and windows closed.

- Heat and moisture accumulate in your attic. A powered attic ventilator will exhaust both, keeping your house cooler and avoiding moisture damage.
- Save your "moisture producing" activities, such as showering and laundry, for cool early mornings or late evenings. If possible, use a bathroom exhaust fan.
- Finally, if bathroom or kitchen moisture is coming into the room, release the moisture through windows in the bathroom and kitchen, preferably with an exhaust fan.

Poop Art A Success

The Great American Bicentennial Art Show, sponsored by ECU's ILLUMINA, opened Wednesday night at Mendenhall Student Center with about 300 people attending the festive red, white and blue oriented event.

"It was definitely a success," Brent Funderburk, chairman of ILLUMINA reported, "with every crumb of the 200 candle cake eaten and as many people attending as we could possibly fit into the available space."

About 150 artists, mostly ECU students, contributed works for the show ranging from small, hastily made assemblages to complex stitched, stuffed soft sculpture.

Barry Bailey's "Homage to George's Wooden Teeth," a plaster construction painted relief mounted on wood took first place in the show, which Betsy Ross judged.

Other interesting art homages to the Bicentennial includes a spectacular feathered ceremonial "Plains

Indian Headdress' and accessories; Ben Jenkins, "Bicentennial Blouse;" Jan Craft's "Progression from Dawn to Dust," a multi-layered landscape in raised batik; and Ed Weintraub's patriotic work of jewelry, suspended on red, white and blue ribbons, strongly resembling a Revolutionary male chastity belt.

In the showcases, dozens of items, mostly paper, effectively recall high points in American history and cultures. Posters, campaign pins, old newspapers, theatrical handbills, faded children's art, pages of ornate advertisements from magazines of the 20s and 30s, are all vivid reminders of the curious blend of the serious and frivolous marking the path of American history.

"Do It By The Stars!"

Sexual Astrology (Know What You're Doing, Do It By The Stars!). By Martine. Illustrations by Lance R. Miyamoto. New York, The Dial Press, 1976, 213 pps, $7.95.

Sooner or later is had to happen. Given the interest in anything sexual and most things astrological in the 70s, the big surprise is that some enterprising writer didn't get into print with this dual topic before 1976.

So here it is, a 12 chapter catalogue of individual male and female sexual potentials and limitations, all determined by the person's date of birth, the position of stars and moon at the time, etc., compiled and analyzed by a woman who contributes a monthly column, "The Amorous Astrologer" to Viva magazine.

Each sign of the horoscope is treated in an identical chapter format: "The Female," "Her Sex Life," "The Male," "His Sex Life," "First Moves," "Erogenous Zones," "Last Moves," and "Your Sensual Guide."

Note that the female gets top billing in this arrangement, which should be a cause of rejoicing to some women. This rigid structural arrangement has distinct advantages. It simplifies comparison of your own plus and minus characteristics (as outlined by the author) with friends and co-workers whom you may have secretly been curious about, wondering how their boasts stack up against reality.

The books dust jacket, claims among other things, that the book is "breezy." That's a true assertion. Martine writes in terse, almost breathless sentences. Typical is the opening paragraph on "The Female" in the chapter on "Gemini." — "She's a one-girl harem. Ten women would be hard put to it to match her virtuosity. Like a genie in a bottle, each time you summon her an entirely different woman will appear to mystify, delight, beguile, and enchant you."

Since I happen to be a Virgo, and a male, I fear such a Gemini creature would also confuse me. To verify my suspicions, a check on the dominant male Virgo characteristics shows "no one can talk him into a venture that seems impractical?" A further check, under the comparative tables in "Your Personal Guide" section has Martine advising "Virgo considers Gemini flighty and irresponsible. A possible affair, but don't sign a marriage certificate." Suspicion confirmed.

Most passages pinpointing "tendencies" toward sexual behavior astrologically predictable under the influence of different birth signs do not lend themselves to quoting in a family newspaper. Now and then, however, Martine puts aside sexual calisthenics for a calm respite that borders on the downright poetic. . . . "Think of him as a bud that has to be treated with loving care to bring it to the full bloom of sensual beauty."

Sexual Astrology is a far cry from a serious (scientific) analysis of sexual problems. It is, rather, a typical spicy literary bon-bon, better written than most of its genre, that will likely become a temporary favorite cocktail circuit topic before being forgotten along with similar literary concoctions.

Japanese Celebration To Feature Peggy Lee

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A few weeks late, Japan is getting ready to celebrate America's bicentennial with fireworks, festivals — and Peggy Lee.

One of this country's most appealing exports, Miss Lee has been invited to be guest of honor at a series of celebrations, including a fireworks festival at Karuizawa, and a formal dinner in her honor, given by the U.S. ambassador, James D. Hodgson. Her visit is sponsored by the Mitsukoshi Department stores, which will present four Lee concerts in Tokyo, Sapporo and Osaka in early August.

Miss Lee was chosen, said Mitsukoshi President Shieru Okada, "because her great warmth and lovely personality are representative of the American people."

"The Japanese have sent 30 requests for songs they would like to hear," said the singer as she prepared for the trip at her Beverly Hills home. "I'm amazed at how much of my work they know. They asked for songs that go back to when I was writing with Victor Young. They want not only 'Fever' but 'Johnny Guitar' and 'Autumn in Rome.' I've also written a special song for Japan 'Dreams of Summer.'"

Like certain brands of chateau wines, Peggy Lee seems to improve with the years. At 55 she is singing to a second generation of fans, and her blonde beauty seems little changed.

The survival road has not been easy, given the ever-changing nature of pop music and the rigors of road travel. She admitted to hospital visits in recent years, also a career lapse when hard rock swept through the music world.

"When that kind of music took over, I was destroyed emotionally," she admitted. "I didn't understand it, I couldn't find my place in it. I told myself if that's where music is going, I don't want to go along, so I'd better find something else to do."

"But after a while I made a conscious effort to study and understand what the younger musicians were doing. Gradually I came over. I realized there were some new, wonderful things evolving. Some of the soft rock is very interesting, and the Latin songs are something I can understand."

While getting ready for the Japan trip, Miss Lee was also picking out music for a Rodgers and Hammerstein TV special being produced by Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion. She was also finishing up an A&M album she made with Cy Coleman, "Mirrors," and planning a concert tour of Europe.

"The doctors tell me I should change my life-style," she remarked, "but what can I do? I don't drink, I don't smoke. I try to take care of myself, but I like to work. And when I work, I pay attention to detail. I don't mean that I'm like Craig's wife; I simply like to be professional."

PEGGY LEE HELPS JAPAN FETE U.S. BICENTENNIAL — Singer Peggy Lee has been invited to be guest of honor at a series of celebrations Japan is holding to mark the U.S. Bicentennial. She is also scheduled to give four concerts, and is "amazed" at how the Japanese are familiar with her work. Miss Lee discusses the tour and her career in an interview with Bob Thomas. Ancient Hindu Bronze Print Show On Campus

God To Go On Display

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A 1,000-year-old bronze god worshipped by millions of Hindus and mysteriously smuggled out of India is returning to its homeland under an agreement between millionaire art collector Norton Simon and the Indian government.

The first American showing of the Siva Nataraja — meaning "Lord of the Dancers" — is scheduled for next Wednesday in Pasadena, Calif., and is part of a deal between Simon and the Indian government.

Sivapuram Temple in Tamil about 20 years ago. Under the compromise, Simon promised to return the Siva to India and India agreed that Simon's foundation could keep and display it until May 1985 in any country with which India has a diplomatic relationship.

at the Norton Simon Foundation Museum in Pasadena. Diplomats here expect him to use the occasion to voice Asian resentment at ever increasing losses of art objects from their lands of origin.

With each successive show at the Kate Lewis Art Gallery in Whichard Building on campus it becomes one shade more difficult to see. High in the black ceiling above, one or two fluorescent tubes still activated are flickering their feeble light. Soon it will be necessary to provide viewers with flashlights or lighted torches.

of similarity each of the two projects his own personal sensitivity. Two works offer an example of this difference. Goforth's beautiful small drawing of an animal (baboon, chimpanzee?) gazing out from a weathered wooden structure speaks quietly of the animal's (and man's) acceptance of self-imprisonment. There's resignation, sadness imprinted here.

moment of stampede, confused by a blinding searchlight. If extinction is the water buffalo's fate, it will not be a mute acceptance, but a brutal charge, a defiance to exterminating technology. The two works, in explicitly different viewpoints, are sobering comments on contemporary conditions.

This trio reveals Smartt's attention to accuracy in drawing wildlife and his ability to achieve a satisfying balance of nature and mechanical objects within one work of art.

BRONZE GOD ON DISPLAY—This 1,000-year-old bronze god worshipped by millions of Hindus will go on public display Wednesday in Pasadena, Calif. It will be the first American showing of the statue called Siva Nataraja which means lord of the dancers. (AP Wirephoto)

The four-armed god, dated by scholars to the 10th century, is portrayed dancing in a ring of cosmic fire. The Siva weighs 262.8 pounds and stands 4 1/2-feet high. Litigation in California, New York and London courts preceded Simon's settlement with India. One provision guarantees Simon against new legal action for possessing what India regards as stolen property. But India reserves its right to prosecute anyone who may have been implicated in the removal of the idol from its temple.

The Siva was dug up with five other sculptures in 1952. New Delhi left it in the shrine where it could be worshipped, and in 1954 it was sent to a restorer for treatment. Two years later a statue was returned but Douglas Barrett, keeper of oriental antiquities at the British Museum, discovered during a 1958 visit that it was not the real Siva but a modern replica.

A search of nearly 14 years began. India called on Interpol to help find the treasured idol. Then, confirmation came that the Siva had been seen in New York in the possession of an art dealer named Ben Heller. Subsequent investigation confirmed that the idol had passed through several hands before reaching Heller. After buying it, Heller offered it for sale. At one time the Metropolitan Museum had an option to buy but, as the question of legal ownership and recovery became hazy, that option was not exercised.

Ultimately, Simon bought it from Heller for $900,000. With the sale, Heller gave Simon a guarantee that the work had been legally acquired.

Not all the treasure brought back by Spanish fleets from the New World in the 17th century was destined for the king's coffers. Scholars have estimated that some 25 per cent of the gold and silver aboard the galleons was contraband.

This is unfortunate, especially in the case of a fine show such as the two-man Student Honor Show now at Kate Lewis.

Charles Goforth and Matt Smartt, both East Carolina University seniors, strike a definite note of kinship in their work, in content and style. A stringent, masculine poetry marks their realistic study of animals and birds and the clean, light washed non-representational prints that form the major body of this small (29 piece) show.

Smartt's print, "To the Last Water Buffalo," seems equally to deal with the possibility of impending doom. Here, however, there's a sense of confrontation, heightened by the darker blacks and the impact of physical movement directed to the viewer. The animals are obviously depicted in a moment of stampede, confused by a blinding searchlight. If extinction is the water buffalo's fate, it will not be a mute acceptance, but a brutal charge, a defiance to exterminating technology. The two works, in explicitly different viewpoints, are sobering comments on contemporary conditions.

Three Smartt prints — "Chain Gator," "Cristofferson Looping Osprey" and "Trained Ram," grouped together, are interesting works in their major-minor combination of wildlife and symbols of today's technology — an alligator head and a chain saw; ospreys and the ribbed framework of early planes; a ram's head and what appears to be details of a computer system.

Fishing, Cooking, Adventure In New Franc White Book

Southern Sportsman Cookbook. By Franc White. Greenville, N.C. National Printing Co, 1976. Paper, 96 pps., illustrated, $2.95.

Most recipes in Franc White's new cookbook, however, call for ingredients more in line of what cooks expect to combine in cooking up a meal. There's dozens of recipes that can summon tantalizing visions of good eating, whether for fish, wild birds, venison or seafood mixtures.

A few that seem particularly promising include a "Fish Casserole" that calls for scallops, shrimp, artichoke hearts, mushrooms, white wine, rice and Parmesan cheese. Another that sharpens the appetite is "Flounder Marguery." Principal ingredients are flounder filets, cream, Sherry, oysters and shrimp.

creature not native to the South. White also takes to task the Corps of Engineers for their efforts to change the course of nature in opening a new inlet for the Old Drum Inlet. "The new inlet, flying in the face of Army logic, has succeeded in closing itself twice since then. Each time the taxpayer has picked up a $100,000 tab for dredge services."

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By JUNE PARKER
Sheppard Memorial Library has in several new books about people of current interest. The first is Dolores by Jacqueline Susann. DELORES is supposedly, in Jacqueline Susann's words, a new character and story, not roman a clef of the life of Jacqueline Kennedy. Susann says it was to be the story of a woman wanted to have a life other than as "The Widow." However, Dolores and Jacqueline Kennedy seem to be inseparable except for the changing of names. Dolores' favorite design is Donald Brooks while Jacqueline Kennedy's was de la Renta. Her husband, Jimmy Ryan, the President, is shot in New Orleans not Dallas. The bulk of the book is taken up with what happens in her life between her first and second husbands. She falls in love with a screenwriter who drops her in order to marry a richer woman. She then accepts the offer, arranged by her jetsetter sister, of the twenty billion dollar Baron Erich. The Baron leaves her on their wedding night to visit his mistress. Here, the story ends. This book is full of points of speculation as to its relation to any real life happenings.

A second book, I CAUGHT FLIES FOR HOWARD HUGHES by Ron Kistler, is a first-hand account of a man who worked in various capacities for Howard Hughes. He first guarded his airplane, then served as a driver for different people in the Hughes organization. He was one of the few people to see Hughes with his last job killing flies in Hughes' motel room. He describes the long days in a darkened room. Hughes sat for the most part unclothed with Kleenex everywhere. He refused to touch anything except with one. He subsisted for days on such things as water and candy bars. He would not allow anyone to look or to speak to him. Kistler describes the workings of the Hughes organization as he saw it — the private signals and messages, the complete security, the unbreakable rules, and the endless files of everyone and everything. This book, too, is full of gossip about people that have been recently in the news.

A third person who was prominently in the news in the sixties has written a new book, GROWING (UP) AT 37 by Jerry Rubin, a co-founder of the Yippie movement and a member of the Chicago Seven. This is a personal account of his efforts to find peace with himself and for "changing in me the things I opposed externally in the streets". He tells how a movement's leader feels when the movement dies and he has to face life as it really is. He tells of changes in his life and how he has come to accept and love the things he had formerly despised. The originator of the slogan "Kill Your Parents" has finally learned to love his.

In this volume, much of the action takes place in nearby areas easily and quickly accessible to Pitt County residents. The Pamlico Sound, the Neuse River, and some local rivers and creeks are the scenes of fine observations on the best places and times of year to fish. White promises no miracles, but he makes it plain that with a little patience and luck that even the novice or occasional fisherman can be rewarded with a good catch.

A concerned person, White takes a few seemingly justified swipes at some outdoor practices that are becoming more prevalent as the once unlimited areas of the great outdoors shrink. In an article "Don't Boar Me!" White takes strong exception to a number of commercially stocked so-called wild game preserves, where the affluent hunter (usually a non-hunter in the best sense of the word) can pay a fat fee to stalk released pen-raised wild game, often an exotic

White has the writing touch that brings a fisherman's guide to life. Explaining the presence of a fresh water fish, the largemouth bass, in salt water in a Pamlico County fishing ground, he notes: "They lay in thick grass like tigers, striking upward as the revolving spawns orbited slowly overhead; plump, stout fish with belly cavities heavily lined with pure fat as they stuffed themselves at leisure."

A number of good photographs, several map sketches, and a diagram for filleting fish add to the enjoyment and usefulness of this cookbook.

The book will soon be available in local bookstores. Jerry Raynor

Himeni Music Tuesday

Through a wedding of Christian hymns and Hawaiian culture in 1820, a new music, "himeni," was born that played a paramount role in the development of Hawaii's melodies over the last 150 years. "Hymns Become Hawaiian," the second program in the MELE HAWAII series, examines the way himeni influenced Hawaii's music history. Tuesday, August 10 at 10:00 pm on Channel 25, Greenville.

A Sort Of National Private Market In Handguns

By TIM REITERMAN
Associated Press Writer
VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — Before noon, the cavernous auditorium comes alive at Solano County fairgrounds. Two children collect $1.50 ticket stubs at the door. One young woman pours 50-cent wine coolers and beer. Others sip chile dogs on paper plates.

And hundreds of hands left and right stroke bayonets, Nazi swords, knives, antique muzzle loader rifles, heavy-barreled match target rifles, chromed lugers converted into carbines, sleek deer rifles, shotguns — and handguns, from mini-Derringers to .44-magnum cannons.

Sawhorse-legged tables are manned by amateur weapons collectors and weekend entrepreneurs who paid $15 for the space to buy, sell or trade with the hundreds of gun fanciers milling around, many with pistols jammed in their belts or rifles slung across their backs.

One man with $300 in his Levis wants to buy handguns. At the first table, he asked the price of a displayed gun, but the burly proprietor shakes his silver crewcut. "I can't even quote you a price on a handgun," he half-whispers. "I might get in trouble."

Nonetheless, he is persuaded to give his name and phone number for a possible transaction outside the auditorium, the walls of which are decorated with notices quoting a new state law requiring a 15-day waiting period for handgun sales.

Minutes later, the buyer is spinning the cylinder of a .38-caliber Smith and Wesson revolver at another table. "How much?"

"Price is on the back of the card," yawns the proprietor, a drawing middle-aged trucker. The card says $105.

"I'll take it." The buyer peels off $109 for the gun and a $4 box of target ammunition. Now friendly, the trucker examines the buyer's driver's license and asks whether he is a convicted felon, drug-addict, asylum escapee — or a federal firearms agent. Satisfied by the negative answers, the man writes a receipt. His beaming wife slips the gun and bullets into a wrinkled paper sack.

A minute later and a few yards away at another table, the buyer inspects a husky .45-caliber automatic pistol, the official sidearm of the U.S. military. "How much?" "I'm asking $165, but I could easily get $175 at the San Jose gun show," says the seller.

"How low will you go?" The tall man tugs at his greying moustache, ponders and says, "One hundred fifty-five." This deal is sealed with the same series of questions, written this time on a receipt bearing the buyer's signature and driver's license information. The license lists a former address, but not the current one.

In neither sale has the buyer been asked to fill out the official yellow form that the U.S. government requires of the nation's 160,000 federally-licensed gun dealers. The dealers must keep these forms as a record of each handgun sale.

As the tall salesman demonstrates the .45, he adds, "I got it from a guy who bought it through the National Rifle Association. It was government surplus. Manufactured in 1944."

The buyer crosses the room to buy a box of Army surplus .45-caliber cartridges for $7. The paper bag rips, so he swaggers outside with both guns in his belt and bullets in his pockets. No one bats an eye.

The guns were purchased by this reporter from men who might have been operating as unlicensed dealers. They certainly violated the state law requiring a 15-day waiting period before delivery. The two guns were the same types used in two assassination attempts against President Ford last fall.

The .45 is like one that Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a Charles Manson cult follower, pointed at Ford in Sacramento after taking it from the home of a friend. The .38 is a similar to one that Sara Jane Moore fired at the President in San Francisco after buying it from a private arms collector.

These two weapons are among an estimated 43 million handguns in the United States owned by dealers and individuals. The estimate was 40 million last year, Federal officials say. There is no central record system for this private arsenal, and millions of the handguns are almost impossible to trace.

There are records, on the other hand, for the two million handguns manufactured domestically each year and the 500,000 imported handguns. Each of these goes to a federally-licensed dealer, but once the dealer sells the weapon it often enters a recordless limbo — unless it is resold to a dealer or surfaces as a gun used in a crime.

These guns change hands at gun shows and through numerous sales between individuals. Some are stolen from homes and stores. Others are inherited or passed from friend to friend. So exactly how many handguns there are — aside from those held by the military, police, government agencies and licensed dealers — and who owns them is a mystery.

The gun shows — held nearly every weekend in California and in other states — illustrate a number of points: that handguns are readily and immediately available to anyone with money; that sales between private individuals are essentially without enforceable controls; that gun ownership is important not only to fanatics and criminals, but also to sportsmen and connoisseurs interested in the craftsmanship, design, history and ballistics of firearms.

"Gun shows have legitimate people," says Brenton G. Thorne of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in San Francisco. "But some are there to escape laws requiring licensing of dealers."

Federal law does allow a person not licensed as a dealer to make an occasional sale or to buy firearms at a gun show. But Thorne says: "If you offer an extra $25 or $30 over what a gun normally sells for, he (a gun show seller) is generally not going to be particular about getting proper identification."

Hence, a handgun bought at a show is often untraceable. This was the case for the two weapons purchased here by this reporter.

Federal officials said the .38 was manufactured during World War II and shipped to England as a military weapon, then somehow was returned to this country, possibly as a war souvenir. They said the .45 bore a stamp that indicated it was government surplus sold some time during the postwar years through the National Rifle Association. There is no federal handgun registration law in the United States, but the federal Gun Control Act of 1968 requires the 160,000 licensed gun dealers to have a buyer produce identification and fill out a form designed to weed out ex-felons, persons under indictment, fugitives, narcotics users, mental defectives, persons dishonorably discharged, and illegal aliens.

Congress is considering a bill that would ban manufacture of small, cheaply made pistols — the Saturday Night Specials. It would not require registration or otherwise affect existing laws.

The century-old, million-member National Rifle Association leads the pro-gun forces in Washington and in state houses.

According to Jim Norell, communications director for the NRA's Institute for Legislative Action in Washington, "Saying guns are responsible for crime is like saying the typewriter is responsible for libel or the camera for pornography." The solution lies, he said, with strict enforcement of existing laws.

The gun control bill with the Saturday Night Special provision does not completely satisfy the anti-handgun lobbyists.

"If your criterion for an effective bill is to reduce crimes of violence and death, this is not going to do it," said the executive director of the National Council to Control Handguns, Nelson Shields, whose son was shot to death in the so-called Zebra murders in San Francisco. If the bill passes, Shields said, a next step would be to work for registration and restrictive licensing, perhaps allowing only law officers and others with occupational needs to possess handguns.

That is exactly what the gun lobby fears. "We are against registration," Norrell said. "Some congressmen have said a ban on the private ownership of handguns is a goal, and whatever comes up this year is an interim step."

Soviet Women Spark Team To Victory

IN BY A TOE—Philadelphia Phillies Mike Schmidt gets a toe in on the plate just before the tag by St. Louis Cardinals' catcher Ted Simmons during the fourth inning Saturday afternoon at St. Louis. Schmidt legged it home from second on a single to right by Phillies Tim McCarver. The throw home was too late, but it was the lone run the Phils got as St. Louis won, 4-1. (AP Wirephoto)

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Ludmila Bragina set a world record and the Soviet Union women's relay team set another Saturday as the United States, with one of its poorest women's performances in history, lost a duel track and field meet to the Soviets.

The Soviet squad captured the cumulative men's and women's scoring, 211-157, although the U.S. men outscored their counterparts 115-107.

Miss Bragina led an awesome women's assault by capturing the 3,000-meter run in a blazing 8 minutes, 27.1 seconds for a world record.

The Soviet women's mile relay team was clocked in 3:29.1 to smash the previous world mark of 3:30.3 set by West Germany last year.

In 13 of the 14 women's events, Soviet athletes placed 1-2. The only breakthrough came when Olympic silver medalist Kathy McMillan of Raeford, N.C., finished second in the long jump to Lidija Alfejeva.

The American women's squad, which could have scored 40 points just by showing up, wound up with 42. The women's team was weakened when at least a dozen Olympic team members, who were apparently homesick, did not show up for this two-day, rain-punctuated meet at the University of Maryland.

10th time in 14 meetings dating back to 1958 when the series started.

American women have won just once.

The Soviet union leads in the over-all series 11-2-1 with the tie coming in 1971.

Edwin Moses of Atlanta and Mike Shine of Youngsville, Pa., repeated their 1-2 finish in the Olympic 400-meter hurdles and Olympic gold medal winner Mac Wilkins of San Jose, Calif., won the discus for the top men's performances.

Moses, whose world record of 47.64 won the Olympic title, clocked 48.55 and Wilkins tossed 217.2, 15 feet short of his own world record. Both marks were meet records.

Miss Bragina, the 1972 Olympic 1,500 meter champion, finished only fifth in that event in the Olympics at Montreal and was considered over the hill. But her amazing performance through misty rain was one of nine records set by Soviet women during the two days.

The 33-year-old Miss Bragina wiped out the previous world mark of 8:45.4 set two months ago by Grete Waitz of Norway.

The Soviet men, who trailed 59-46 after the first day, actually closed the gap Saturday when Alexander Barishnikov won the shot put at 69-43.4 and Viktor Anohin and Vladimir Ponomarevran finished 1-2 in the men's 800 to score upsets.

Tatyana Providokhina, won the event in 1:57.0, the fastest time ever run on American soil.

There was consolation for Madeline Manning Jackson, whose third-place 1:57.9 bettered her own American record of 1:59.8.

Rain again spoiled high-jumper Dwight Stones' hopes when the world record holder failed to clear 7-5 and wound up last.

Stones placed only third during an Olympic rainstorm, and although he said he would never again jump in the rain he gave it a try Saturday and managed 7-2. His second attempt at 7-5 was very close, but the crossbar slipped off moments later.

A mile relay rather than the traditional 1,600-meter relay was run because the United States wanted to lower its own men's world record of 3:02.4. A team of Moses, Benny Brown, Fred Newhouse and Maxie Parks won in 3:02.6 as poor baton passes probably ruined record chances.

Indicative of the women's plight was their mile relay. A U.S. quartet of Debra Sapenter, Sheila Ingram, Pam Giles and Rosalyn Bryant captured a silver medal behind East Germany in Montreal. But Saturday, with Giles and Bryant not running, the U.S. team finished 4.7 seconds behind the Soviets.

Still, the combined defeat was not as humiliating as last year's 225-138 Soviet victory in Kiev.

The victory helped the Soviet women maintain their complete dominance over American women. The Soviet women had a 53-40 lead after Friday's competition.

Finishing second in the 3,000 was Raisa Katjukova of the Soviet Union in 8:41.8, and third was Francie Larrieu of Long Beach, Calif., in 8:54.9.

Miss Larrieu's time was an American record, bettering the 8:57.2 set by Jan Merrill of Waterford, Conn., in winning the national AAU title this year.

American men got a boost in the javelin earlier on the rainy day when Anthony Hall of New York City upset USSR's former world record holder Janis Lusis with a throw of 268 feet, 2 inches. Lusis threw 267-3.

The 3,000-meter race will be part of the women's Olympic program in 1980 at Moscow.

Ferguson Got Even In Leading Cardinal Win

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joe Ferguson smacked two triples off Philadelphia left-hander Jim Kaat Saturday and claimed he was only evening a score.

"The last time I faced him I hit three shots and all of them were caught," said Ferguson, whose blows contributed to three of the St. Louis Cardinals' runs in a 4-1 victory.

"I got even with him," said Ferguson, who carried a .229 batting average into the nationally televised game.

Ferguson said he hit a changeup and fast ball thrown by the veteran Kaat, 10-7, for his triples and Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark said neither was a mistake.

"I thought Fergy hit two pretty good pitches. Both of them were low," Ozark said. "On the second one we might have had him out at third but the tag was too high."

Ferguson's hits combined with Mike Anderson's sacrifice flies, made a winner of St. Louis left-hander Pete Falcone, 9-11, who limited the Phillies to five hits before giving way to Al Hrabosky in the ninth inning.

"I'm hot now," said Anderson, a former Philadelphia outfielder who started with only four RBIs. "I just shortened up my stroke with the runner at third and made contact."

Falcone, bothered by wildness in the early innings, delivered 124 pitches and had most of his problems with his knuckle curve.

"I couldn't get it over, but my fast ball was moving," Falcone said. "I didn't want to come out of the game, but he (Cards' manager Red Schoendienst) said I was pushing myself. He's the manager."

A T-Shirt Day crowd of 32,105 and a national television audience watched St. Louis move on top 1-0 in the second inning when Ferguson drilled his first triple and scored on Anderson's sacrifice fly.

Bee Richard singled and came around to score on Don Kessinger's hit in the third. Philadelphia narrowed the lead to 2-1 on Tim McCarver's RBI single before Ferguson tripled to score one run, then came home on Anderson's second sacrifice fly in the fourth.

Prior to the fourth, Philadelphia's only baserunners were Greg Luzinski and McCarver via second-inning walks.

Falcone surrendered a single to Larry Bowa following McCarver's run-scoring hit but retired Kaat on a grounder with the bases full to end the uprising. He then retired 10 straight batters before Garry Maddox and Mike Schmidt stroked successive singles with one out in the eighth.

A throwing error by third baseman Hector Cruz enabled Philadelphia to load the bases with two out, but Falcone worked past the threat by retiring Bob Boone.

Falcone's victory was his second in a row following six losses in his previous seven starts. Kessinger had two singles and a double for St. Louis.

Hot Boston Rips Brewers

By PHIL CANNADAY
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Designated hitter Cecil Cooper slammed a two-run homer and Denny Doyle tripled in a run as the Boston Red Sox, behind the combined five-hit pitching of Luis Tiant and Jim Willoughby, blanked the Milwaukee Brewers 3-0 Saturday.

The victory was the Red Sox eighth in their last nine games. Jim Rice doubled in the seventh and Cooper followed with his 10th homer of the season. It came off Ed Rodriguez, 4-8.

Boston got off to a 1-0 lead in the third when Doyle tripled off the wall in right center field, scoring Rick Burleson who had reached base on an error.

Tiant, 11-10, left after five innings and Willoughby went the rest of the way, picking up his sixth save of the season.

Burleson, who stole two bases, got two of Boston's six hits. Sixto Lezcano had two hits for the Brewers.

Dr. Fager Is Dead

OCALA, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Fager, the 1968 horse of the year, has died after suffering a twisted intestine.

The 12-year-old Florida-bred horse, winner of $1,002,642 in his three-year career, died at the Tartan Farm Thursday night.

Dr. Fager won four of five races as a 2-year-old and earned $112,338. The following year, he won seven of nine starts and earned $484,194.

In 1968, he was named top sprinter, top grass horse, top handicap horse and horse of the year. He won $406,110 that year.

Syndicated for $3.2 million after retiring at the end of 1968, Dr. Fager ranked eighth among all American stallions in money won by offspring.

Ramirez Raps Richey; Other Match Delayed

By JOHN M. McALLISTER
NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Davis Cup star Raul Ramirez of Mexico trounced Texan Cliff Richey, 6-1, 6-1 Saturday, but the on-again, off-again New England rain forced postponement of the second semifinal match in a $100,000 tennis tournament.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, the defending champion, and unseeded Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia will play their semifinal round Sunday, weather permitting, to determine who will meet Ramirez for the championship and first prize of $16,000 and a $10,000 car.

Tournament officials said they hoped to complete the championship round Sunday but a final decision on the scheduling was not made immediately.

A semifinal doubles match between the team of Ramirez and Brian Gottfried of the U.S. and Bob Hewitt of South Africa also was postponed because of the rain.

Ramirez quickly finished off the popular Richey before Saturday afternoon's drizzle turned to rain. Ramirez dominated his match against the 29-year-old Richey, allowing the Texan to hold his service just once in each of the two sets.

The 23-year-old Mexican said the clay court, slowed by the drizzle, appeared "heavier. It seems that I can hit the ball better on a heavier court," he said.

Ramirez played near flawless tennis, hitting strong backhands, precise lobs, and playing each point until Richey made a mistake.

Richey, the top-ranked U.S. player in 1970, was the favorite of the crowd of 9,500 after his upset victory over second-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain on Friday.

Bird Bad Medicine For Cleveland Tribe

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Mark "The Bird" Fidrych rapped a six-hitter to end a brief slump and five different Tigers drove in runs as Detroit beat the Cleveland Indians 6-1 Saturday.

Rookie sensation Fidrych, 12-4, had not won in his previous three starts, but he had a perfect game going for four innings before being touched for a lone run in the fifth.

It was the 17th start of the season for Fidrych, who entered the game with a league leading 1.97 earned run average. He began his starting career against the Indians on May 15 when he tossed a two-hit, 2-1 victory. He now has 14 complete games.

Detroit scored its first run in the opening inning off loser Pat Dobson, 11-11, on a sacrifice fly by Rusty Staub.

The Indians tied it in the fifth when Rico Carty opened with a walk, Buddy Bell got Cleveland's first hit with a single off Fidrych's leg and Alan Ashby singled.

The Tigers broke the game open in the fifth as Ron LeFlore, Dan Meyer and Jason Thompson each contributed RBI singles. Ben Oglivie hit a two-run single in the sixth off reliever Dave LaRoche.

The crowd of 35,395 pushed Tiger attendance to 1,015,388—the 12th consecutive season Detroit has gone over the million mark and the 29th time in the last 32 years. The Tigers, primarily due to the drawing power of Fidrych, are more than 200,000 spectators ahead of the same point last year.

Pruitt Sparks Brown Victory

By RON JENKINS
AP Sports Writer
STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Halfback Gregg Pruitt scored two touchdowns, one a 38-yarder on Cleveland's first play from scrimmage, and the Browns defeated the Atlanta Falcons 31-7 in a National Football League preseason game Saturday afternoon.

The game was played at Lewis Field on the Oklahoma State University campus, where Pruitt had some of his best games as a two-time All-American for rival Oklahoma.

Pruitt, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in his third pro season last year, showed he hadn't lost any of his dazzling speed as he burst through a big hole up the middle and raced into the end zone virtually untouched for the game's first score with 13:26 left in the first quarter.

The Browns, blanked in their preseason opener last week by Baltimore 21-0, charged to a 14-0 first-period lead over the Falcons. Pruitt had first down runs of 4 and 16 yards and quarterback Mike Phipps completed key passes of 9 and 16 yards to Oscar Roan and Paul Warfield before Cleo Miller's four-yard TD run.

A frantic Cleveland pass rush kept Atlanta's quarterback Steve Bartkowski bottled up except for one second-quarter scoring drive that cut the deficit to 14-7 at the half. Bartkowski was sacked four times during the afternoon, twice by end Mike St. Clair.

Pruitt's second touchdown, a three-yard run, and a 48-yard punt return for a touchdown by rookie Arthur Moore set the stage for a runaway midway through the third quarter.

Jerry Royster drove in a fifth-inning run with a sacrifice fly and Ken Henderson drove in a run in the first with a single.

Triple Paces Chisox To Win

By FRED GOODALL
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Spencer smashed a two-run triple in the eighth inning to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Spencer's hit capped a three-run rally and gave Francisco Barrios his third victory in seven decisions. Barrios scattered seven hits, struck out seven and walked none in pitching his fourth complete game of the season.

Jorge Orta singled home the first run in the eighth-inning rally against reliever Steve Mingori, 3-2, after Chet Lemon singled and Lamar Johnson walked.

After Bill Stein filed out,

Spencer delivered his game-winning hit.

The Royals took a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Ruppert Jones' run-scoring triple and two White Sox' throwing errors.

Ex-Teammate Tops Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Grich and Doug DeCinces each knocked in two runs in support of former Yankee pitcher Rudy May as the Baltimore Orioles beat New York 7-4 Saturday.

May, traded to Baltimore in June, was facing his former teammates for the first time. He had a shutout for 82-3 innings before Chris Chambliss slugged a grand-slam home run. After the blow, Tippy Martinez, another ex-Yankee, relieved and nailed down the final out of the game.

Doyle Alexander, the Yankee starter, labored through the first inning, delivering 28 pitches and surrendering three runs. Al Bumbry walked to open the game, and Grich slammed his 10th homer of the year. Reggie Jackson then walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Ken Singleton's sacrifice fly.

Mark Balfanz singled and Bumbry doubled in one run in the fourth to chase Alexander, 6-8.

The Orioles scored what proved to be the decisive runs in the fifth, when Lee May singled, Singleton walked and DeCinces bounced a two-run double into the left field stands off reliever Ron Guidry, the second Yankee pitcher. Dave Duncan's double scored DeCinces with the final Baltimore run.

May allowed only three Yankee hits through the first eight innings before weakening in the ninth.

Athletics Roll Past Angels

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer
OAKLAND (AP) — Sal Bando hit his 21st home run of the season and Joe Rudi and Phil Garner drove in two runs apiece Saturday, leading the Oakland A's to a 9-1 victory over the California Angels.

Right-hander Mike Torrez, 9-10, scattered eight hits and got his first victory since July 9. Angels' starter Don Kirkwood, 4-9, gave up the first six A's runs and eight of their 12 hits.

Bando, the American League's home run leader, connected with the bases empty in the third to boost Oakland's lead to 3-0. The A's had scored single runs in the first and second innings.

California scored in the fourth on singles by Bobby Bonds and Tony Solaita and a ground ball by Bruce Bochte, but the A's made it 7-1 with a four-run rally in the fifth.

Garner hit a bases-loaded single to score two runs in the fifth. Rudi brought in one run with a sacrifice fly and Gene Tenace had an RBI single.

Come On, Ajax; 10-4, Undertaker

MIAMI (AP) — Chocolate Chip, Low Rider, Undertaker, Scarecrow, Kentucky Wildcat, Cornhusker, AJAX, Tumbleweed, Chocolate Milky Way, and the father of Dreamy Eyes and Miami Cracker are hoping to make it to the Super Bowl this year.

All are Miami Dolphins, a team hit hard by the Citizens Band radio craze.

"I wouldn't go anywhere without my CB," says tight end Andre "Chocolate Milky Way" Tillman. "It's saved me a lot of tickets."

Wide receiver Nat Moore uses Chocolate Chip as his handle, and running back Mercury Morris calls himself Low Rider.

Defensive end Don Reese calls himself Undertaker for a reason other than his 6-foot-6, 270-pound physique. "That's what I do in the off-season," he said.

Linebacker Ernie "Scarecrow" Rhone says he found his moniker in a comic book, but wide receiver Freddie "Ajax" Solomon didn't use even that much effort to find his name. "I just started with the beginning of the alphabet," Solomon says.

At least two Dolphins have encountered the kind of security problems common to owners of CB radios.

Punter Larry "Kentucky Wildcat" Seiple says he'd love to be in a convoy, "but somebody ripped off my CB."

"I'm the Cornhusker, but somebody stole mine too," added defensive end Vern Den Herder.

Coach Don Shula says he doesn't use his radio very often, but allows his daughters, Dreamy Eyes and Miami Cracker, to play with it.

Steve "Linebacker" Towle, Bob "Tumbleweed" Kuechenberg and Dick "Silver Eagle" Anderson round out the Dolphins' CB corps.

Members of Towle's family also have adopted handles. "My father is Dolphin Daddy," he says, "and my mother is Miami Mama."

Six Into Hall In Ceremonies

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer
COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon, standout right-handed pitchers during the 1950s, and four others will be formally inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame Monday in this scenic village in central New York State.

Both Roberts and Lemon were voted into the Hall by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The Veterans Committee selected Fred Lindstrom, a third baseman for John McGraw's New York Giants in the 1920s; the late Roger Connor, a pre-1900 home run king, and Cal Hubbard, former American League umpire. The special committee on Negro Leagues named the late Oscar Charleston.

Some 10,000 visitors are expected to be on hand for the ceremonies presided over by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn at Cooper Park, adjacent to the Hall of Fame and Museum.

The ceremonies, bringing their honor list to 157, will be followed by an exhibition game between the New York Mets and Milwaukee Brewers at Doubleday Field, where baseball tradition claims the game was founded more than a century ago by Abner Doubleday.

Roberts, a right-hander who had a lively fastball and good control, spent only a half-season in the minor leagues in 1948 before joining the Philadelphia Phillies. He helped the 1950 Whiz Kids to the National League pennant by posting a 20-11 record, the first of his six straight 20-victory seasons.

His best year was in 1952 when he had a 28-6 record for the fourth-place Phillies. He later pitched for Baltimore, Houston and the Chicago Cubs, winding up his career in 1966 with a 19-season mark of 286-245.

Lemon, who began his career as third baseman and outfielder, won 20 or more games seven times for the Cleveland Indians. His mark over 13 seasons was 207-128, helping the Indians to two American League titles, in 1948 and 1954. He was a manager of the Kansas City Royals and now is the New York Yankees' pitching coach.

Lindstrom was the youngest player ever to appear in a World Series — 1924 when he was 18. He had 10 hits in that series, four off Walter Johnson, an original Hall of Famer. In 1930 he hit .379 with 22 homers and 106 runs batted in. He later played for Pittsburgh, the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn. Now 70, he lives in Port Richey, Fla.

Hubbard, 75, earns the distinction of being the only man to be elected to both the baseball and pro football halls of fame. He was a tackle in the National Football League, umpired in the AL from 1936 to 1953 and later was the league's supervisor of umpires.

Connor, a first baseman, played in the majors with Troy, New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis, all in the National League. He had a lifetime mark of .325 and held the career record of 131 homers until Babe Ruth broke it in 1921. He died in 1931 at age 73.

Charleston, regarded as one of the best outfielders in the Negro Leagues, played from age 19 until well into his 40s. He was 58 when he died in 1954.

When Wajima won the Marlboro Handicap at Belmont Park it marked his fifth straight victory within two months.

LEADER TO THE FINISH—Japanese golf champ Chako Higuchi, 30, laces her swing with a smile Saturday during the fourth and final round of the Colgate European Women's Championship tournament in Sunningdale, England. Chako Higuchi Easy European Golf Winner

By ROBERT JONES
AP Sports Writer
SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Chako Higuchi of Japan fired a cool, patient par-74 Saturday and won the European Women's Golf Championship with a four-round, 12-under-par 284, six strokes over her nearest rivals, Americans Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Palmer.

Mrs. Higuchi, unruffled by being the leader throughout the tournament's four rounds, won the $13,500 top prize plus an additional $1,800 — $900 apiece for having the day's lowest score in the first and third rounds.

Miss Palmer and Miss Whitworth tied at 290. Miss Palmer, five strokes behind Mrs. Higuchi after Friday's third round, had a one-over-par 75 Saturday while Miss Whitworth came on with a rush by carding a 70, the lowest score of the day.

Two other Americans, Judy Rankin — the winner here two years ago — and Debbie Austin, started the day tied with Miss Whitworth at 220. They finished in fourth place, one stroke farther back at 291, seven strokes off the pace.

Miss Whitworth and Miss Palmer each get $9,900 while Mrs. Rankin and Miss Austin collect $3,540 each. Miss Whitworth also collected a couple of special $900 prizes for shooting the lowest scores of the second and fourth rounds.

Mrs. Higuchi started the day knowing that all the pressure was on her rivals. With a five-stroke lead over Miss Palmer, all she needed was a steady par game and she was virtually certain of victory.

And that's the way it turned out.

other holes, except the second where she took two putts but still was down in par.

But by the 18th it didn't matter. Miss Palmer, the only woman likely to catch her, started off badly with a couple of bogies on the sixth and seventh holes, turned one over par in 37 and then, at the 295-yard, par-four 11th, was bunkered and took a double-bogey six to get down.

Miss Whitworth, on the other hand, started off in a hurry with an eagle on the 296-yard fourth and two birdies to turn in 34. She kept this up coming home with three more birdies to finish with 70. But she was too far adrift from the start to catch Mrs. Higuchi.

The girl who started off as if she might spring the surprise of the tournament was Miss Austin, who reeled off five birdies in the first six holes, finished the outward nine with another and turned in a spectacular three-under-par 30.

It was thrilling golf — but she couldn't keep it up. Her game fell apart coming home when she had a bogey on the par-four 11th, then took a double-bogey seven on the long, par-five 12th after being bunkered well short of the green.

This threw her game completely off balance and she could only manage a 41 for her final-round 71.

Only six players finished the four rounds with sub-par scores. Behind the five leaders came Argentina's Silvia Bertolacci who had started the tournament so well with a 69. She fell back with 78 in the second round and 72 in the third, nine strokes behind Mrs. Higuchi. Saturday, she fell still further back and could only manage a 75 to get into sixth place with a two-under-par 294.

Two more Americans — Marlene Hagge and Joanne Carner — finished the four rounds at par 296. Donna Young was way back with a four-over-par 300.

Given Pro Pact Offer

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Olympic distance runners John Walker and Rod Dixon of New Zealand, have been offered $250,000 each over the next four years to turn professional.

Dixon said Saturday he is ready to accept — but only if Walker also agrees to leave the amateur ranks. "It has got to be the 'Flying Kiwis' or nothing," he said.

The man behind the bid is American Mike O'Hare of the International Track Association, who has given them an October deadline to make up their minds.

"I had an offer last February," Dixon said, "and gave it some thought and the guy is keeping on at me. I am now 26 and have got to decide whether to go all out for the Moscow Olympics in 1980 or make the most of the next four years."

Walker, who won the 1500 meters in the Montreal Games and is the only man in the world to have broken 3 minutes, 50 seconds for the mile, refused to comment.

But Dixon noted: "If we ran in about 10 to 15 meetings a year, we would be guaranteed a minimum $250,000 each, spread over four years. It could turn out to be anything up to $1 million. It is a great offer and I have got to have a serious talk with John about it."

Ipock In Putt Lead

Bobby Ipock grabbed a one-stroke lead after 72 holes of the 144-hole Greenville City Putt-Putt Championship yesterday.

Ipock carded a 25-under-par score of 119 to take the lead at the half-way point in the tournament. He edged out Junior Knox for the lead.

Knox is right behind with a 120 score after 72 holes. He's followed by Jerry Lee another stroke back at 121.

Then, there is a large gap before the fourth-placeman, Ken Paramore with a 134. Fifth place is held by Ed Stancill with a 139.

Traveled Denton Is On The Move Again

By DAN LOHWASSER
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Randy Denton — of the former Carolina Cougars, the former Memphis Tams, the former Utah Stars, and the former Spirits of St. Louis — may be the most traveled player in professional basketball.

"For a five year period, I probably have a record," the 27-year-old former Duke University star said Friday, the day after he was picked 6th in the National Basketball Association's dispersal draft by the New York Knicks.

"There's probably a few guys who have moved around more, but not many."

Despite seven moves in five years — twice "just around the corner" — Denton and his wife and three children survive as a family. And the family man image is one the 6-11, 245-pound Raleigh native is known for in a pro league filled with glamour.

"I think that's a good image. I really do," said Denton, who is spending much of the summer with his mother while his lawyer negotiates what will probably be his eighth move. "I had my taste of the wild life, not a lot, and I think the family life prolongs your career."

After graduating from Duke in 1971, Denton went to the Carolina Cougars where he stayed for six months before being traded to Memphis. He played for Memphis two and a half seasons, then moved on to Salt Lake City and finally, after the Stars went under, to St. Louis.

Each time, the Dentons made the move as a family.

"You just have to stick with them," said Judy, Randy's 26-year-old wife. "You've got to go where the job is. There's a lot of players who have their wives living in one place and don't travel with them. But we're too much of a family to be split up like that."

Statistically, the 16 games he played with the Stars before the team folded were his best as a pro. He averaged 20 points per game and 16 rebounds, something he attributes partly to the family life.

"We were more or less settled down," said Denton. "We had bought a house. We were relaxed. There were no social pressures and I was coming on strong. I'm really sorry we had to leave."

While in Salt Lake, the Dentons had the third addition to their family — Nate. Their 3-year-old daughter, Amanda, was born in Memphis. The fourth member of the family is Randy's sister-in-law, 10-year-old Tammy, whom they adopted.

For Denton, his wife, and an expanding family, each move admittedly gets more difficult.

"What I'm looking for is to get with a club that I'm going to play with right away and stay in one place for two or three years," said Denton. "I'm not looking past two or three years. I've been in five years and another four or five years would be plenty, but that would be hard to predict. I'm still in good physical condition."

Denton thinks New York might be the place he can find some playing time from the start.

"I think my chances with the Knicks are good," he said. "They haven't gotten a lot of production out of their front line players in the past couple of years, and they're looking for some front line help. If I do well, I don't see why I can't play a lot right away."

During the summer months before the dispersal draft, which left some former ABA stars as free agents, Denton said he was never worried.

"I felt like the scouts knew who could play and who couldn't," he said. "I knew I had some value and I wasn't worried about being picked up."

East Carolina Nickname Didn't Just Come Naturally To Team

By GEORGE A. THREWITTS
ECU News Bureau
Staff Writer

The Pirate, a symbol of East Carolina University and its athletic teams, was adopted from the legend and lore of coastal North Carolina and was a natural choice for a nickname when intercollegiate athletics began at the school more than 42 years ago.

Pirates, fierce and colorful, were prominent in North Carolina's colonial period. The State's Outer Banks which jut far out into the Atlantic were ideal hideouts for these legendary gangsters of the high seas. Many had homes and families in the small villages along the Carolina coast.

Edward Teach, best known as "Blackbeard" was a resident of Eastern North Carolina. He had a house at Ocracoke on the Outer Banks and an inland home at Bath on the Pamlico River.

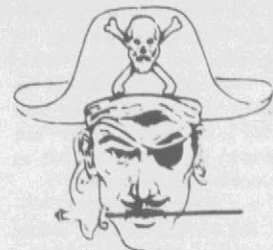

East Carolina University's interest in pirates and sea lore began in 1934. That year, the Tecocoan, the yearbook for what was then East Carolina Teachers College, carried pirates as its theme. The pages were filled with paintings and sketches of patched eye figures, tall ships and buried treasure. The book referred to the tales of the infamous "Teachy the Pirate" often told by natives in the nearby historic town of Bath.

The men's varsity team, at the time, was known as "The Teachers," a lackluster band of athletes who had won only two football games in three seasons of existence. But the student body interest in pirates quickly resulted in changing the name of the team to capture the romantic appeal of the early sea adventurers. The change brought so much enthusiasm that in the following year, 1935, the Pirate football team had a much better season, winning three of its six games.

The 1932 team, the first men's team in the history of what had been mostly a teacher training school for women, was called the "Co-ed" team. But the Co-eds had an unspectacular first year losing all five of their games by an average score of 37.4 points per game.

Prior to the introduction of athletics for men, the ECTC Athletic Association, comprising women athletes in basketball, tennis, baseball and archery were content with the more classical nicknames. A 1930-31 Handbook for ECTC listed the two teams that made up the Athletic Association as the Olympians and the Athenians. Their colors were purple and gold (the same as today's colors) and the mascot was a wildcat.

For a number of years a Great Dane was the official mascot for the Pirates. The dog was purchased in 1959 by the student government association who built him an A-frame house and pen behind Memorial Gym and named him Buc (short for Buccaneer). Mrs. Agnes W. Barrett, an observer and recorder of ECU history since 1930, and the secretary-administrative assistant to six presidents, described Buc as handsome and lovable. But she said he let the Pirate team down as a mascot.

"He liked milk and disliked the smell of beer; hated the band and was terrified of crowds. To see him being led, almost dragged, around the football field did little to whoop up enthusiasm in the stands," she said.

The latest pirate mascot, 4372-74, was an albino dog resembling "Pete" in the Little Rascals films. The animal had a more propitious nature and was named Wild Dog in honor of the Pirate defensive unit called "The Wild Dog." This name was originated in 1972 by Dick Jones, local area sports announcer who referred to the players as "a pack of wild dogs" as he broadcast the play by play early in the season.

Wild Dog appeared to take great pride in his role as mascot and enjoyed parading around the playing field with his name painted on his sides and a black circle drawn around his left eye. In 1974, the pirate fans attending the N. C. State ECU game in Raleigh displayed uproarious approval as Wild Dog took an immediate dislike to State's wolf mascot and made every effort to attack the more docile wolf throughout most of the pregame activities.

Other uses of the pirate theme began in the 1940's with a literary magazine named "Pieces of Eight." The name, however, was later changed to "Rebel."

The college yearbook became the "Buccaneer" in the 1950's and the pirate symbol, the face of a bearded, patched eye character with a crossed bone emblem on his hat was added to the school seal in the mid 1960's.

What Next For Rampants? Coach Looks To Return To The Playoffs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

After three straight trips to the state playoffs, including the 4-A State Championship in football last fall, what do you do for an encore?

Why, you just try to do it again.

That's what Rose High School football coach Dave Bumgarner is setting his sights on anyway. "I don't think we're under any kind of pressure," the coach said. "I really think we have a good chance of being in the playoffs again this fall, and I'm going to be somewhat disappointed if we don't make it."

But what about losing such people as All-Staters Doug Paschal and Mike Brewington? How do you replace them?

"Well, you don't really. You never replace the Paschals and Brewingtons and the rest who've graduated. You just try to find someone to put back there who will do the job as well as he can.

And if you're lucky, someone will come along who is just as good, or maybe even better."

Right now, Rose is winding up its first week of drills, designed mainly for conditioning. No pads are worn during this time. Monday, however, the Rampants move into two-day drills, and the tempo will pick up and hitting will begin shortly. "We're going to work from 9-11 in the morning and from 6-8 each evening for the next two weeks," Bumgarner said. "Then, we'll work out daily at 6 until schools starts, then switch to 4 each day."

Concerning the physical condition, Bumgarner said he was generally pleased with the way most of the players reported in. "We have a few who are overweight," he said, "but this will come with time."

The coach saw 72 players report for the first day of drills, both as varsity and junior varsity candidates, and he did find this disappointing, perhaps the most disappointing thing about practice so far.

"With the success we've had during the past few years," the coach said, "you would think that we'd have a lot more participation. I really expected to have between 100 and 125 people out this fall. And I know that we have kids in the hall that could be playing and helping us. I just don't know why they don't come out. I wish more would."

Bumgarner did add that he felt a few more would come out. "We have some away on vacations or still working somewhere. We're still accepting people, for sure."

While no hitting is allowed during the early part of the practices, some dummy work is going on, learning assignments and the like. "We've worked pretty hard on our kick game," the coach said. "We don't have a kicker coming back in the punting game, and we're trying to find one." Jeff Aldridge, Bill Collier and Julie White have been working in that job so far. Derek Brewington returns to handle the placements.

The offensive backfield is perhaps the brightest spot so far for the Rampants. "We have three good quarterbacks, and while our running backs are not in what we'd really call ample numbers, they are good ones. We don't have a lot of linemen, however, so we'll probably have some people going both ways."

Bumgarner expects the team to be a young one. "Our backs will all be juniors or sophomores, and most of our offensive linemen will be juniors. The defense will be largely seniors, and some of them are going to be the two-platoon guys, going both ways."

One of the sophomores seemed destined to see a lot of action is 6-2, 220-pound fullback Curtis Little. "He's looked good so far."

Sophomore quarterback Ronnie Chapman has also looked good, but Aldridge right now has the inside track on the spot.

Three veteran running backs return in Robert Williams, Mike Joyner and Mac Blount, and Bumgarner feels that the backfield may be better than last year's before it's all over.

"Our whole season is based on how well we perform in the first couple of weeks," Bumgarner said. "If we can do well and not get discouraged, I think we'll definitely have a shot at the playoffs again. But if we play like we did in last year's Reid Ross game, then we're in trouble."

"If we do well against Goldsboro in the opener, we'll be all right, I think," the coach said.

Rose will open on September 3 against Goldsboro on the road. They are home on September 10 for their first game in Ficklen Stadium, facing New Bern.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — John Ray feels he made a very shrewd used-car purchase recently.

It has no headlights or taillights, no side windows, no windshield wipers; he can't get the doors to open and close properly; there's no muffler or smog equipment, and it only gets about four miles to the gallon. It only has one seat.

The car isn't loaded down with a lot of expensive extras like radio, power steering or air conditioning.

But at something less than $20,000, without an engine, Ray figures his 1974 Chevrolet was a real steal.

Based on performance in preparation for Sunday's $200,000 Talladega 500 Grand National stock car race, it appears Ray is right.

With Bob Burcham, a Georgia used-car dealer, at the wheel, Ray's machine has been turning the fastest laps — even faster than Dave Marcis' 190.651 miles an hour pole-position-winning speed — of any of the 40 cars in the lineup.

"We didn't qualify so well because of this," said Ray, displaying a quarter-inch sliver of Teflon tape that was found in the carburetor. "Once we fixed that, it really came to life."

"I love superspeedways, and I can't tell you how grateful I am to finally have a car as competitive as John's to drive," said the soft-spoken Burcham, a successful competitor on Southern short tracks.

History would be made if Ray's Chevrolet, or any of the other 28 Chevrolets in the race, win Sunday. No Chevrolet has ever won a 500-miler at the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway oval.

But a victory for Ray and Burcham would undoubtedly be a popular one.

Burcham is well-liked and respected, but he's never had a competitive Grand National ride until now.

Ray, from nearby Eastaboga, is still recovering from near-fatal injuries suffered at Daytona earlier this year. In 1975, Ray established a closed-course speed record for trucks on the AIMS high banks.

Ray's Chevrolet has an interesting history. He purchased it from DiGard Racing to replace the one he crashed. This is the car which won the pole position for both 1975 races at Daytona.

Indianapolis 500 champion Johnny Rutherford drove for Ray at Daytona last month, but the team was plagued by a cracked differential through the race.

Rutherford, a McLaren driver who had a schedule conflict this weekend, brought with him special McLaren-built Chevrolet engines that Ray is still using.

"The car and I have already established a rapport," said the 40-year-old Burcham. In his Grand National debut, at Daytona in 1974, the engine in his car blew with just a few laps to go in the race.

"Donnie Allison was leading the race in this car. He ran over the pieces from my engine and his tires blew. It cost him the race," Burcham said.

The car has always run fast here, but has never finished, a common problem for the Chevrolets, considered too fragile for the high-speed Talladega grind.

Supposedly tougher Ford products have won all but five of the 13 500-milers here since 1969.

Ford driver Buddy Baker, seventh fastest qualifier, has won the last three races here, the last one at a world-record average speed for 500 miles of nearly 170 m.p.h.

Dave Marcis, a four-time pole winner at Talladega, won the pole Thursday in his Dodge.

J.D. McDuffie led qualifying Saturday for the final 10 spots in the field with a clocking at 183.585 m.p.h. Only 4.483 seconds separate the entire field in qualifying. And only nine drivers qualified at a speed below 180.

He averaged 157.3 yards a game in rushing and receiving, and in returning punts and kickoffs. In punt returns he averaged 11 yards on 22 returns.

Johnny Evans of N.C. State was fifth in punting, averaging 44.6 yards on 42 boots. Bob Grupp of Duke was eighth in this category. He averaged 43 yards on his 40 punts.

Ralph Stringer of N.C. State was 13th in kickoff returns. He averaged 25 yards on 27 carries.

Tom Fadden of Virginia was 17th in receiving. He averaged 4.4 catches a game. He caught 48 passes for 620 yards and two touchdowns.

John Zeglinski of Wake Forest, No. 5 in all purpose running and 15th in punt returns.

The others are:

Ted Brown of North Carolina State, who as a freshman last year was sixth in scoring. He averaged 8.4 points on 13 touchdowns and six extra points in 10 games.

John Zeglinski of Wake Forest, No. 5 in all purpose running and 15th in punt returns.

Nicklaus Needs Victory In PGA

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defending champion Jack Nicklaus is in the unusual position of needing a victory to salvage a season this week in the PGA national championship, the last of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

"If I win one of the majors it is a good season," Nicklaus said. "If I don't win one, it isn't a good season."

And, even discounting the majors — on which Nicklaus places such a high premium — it hasn't been an outstanding year for the man generally recognized as the finest player in the game.

The Golden Bear hasn't won in the three previous majors, the Masters, U.S. and British opens. In fact, he hasn't even been a major factor in them. He finished third in the Masters, but wasn't really within striking distance of the runaway winner, Ray Floyd. He wasn't close in the others.

He has won only one title, the Tournament Players Championship, and ranks fifth on the season's money-winning list. Both rank as all-time lows for Nicklaus. He hasn't finished lower than fourth on the money-winning list in a 15-year career dating back to 1962 and has won at least two titles every season.

"Actually, I've played pretty well at times," he said. "I just haven't won as much, perhaps, as I'd like."

He's been second twice, including the Canadian Open, his last start. He was fourth in another tournament, had the lead through three rounds of another and was eighth or better in three more.

But Nicklaus, preoccupied at least part of the season with the inaugural of his Memorial Tournament, hasn't exerted his usual influence on the tour this year. That lack of dominance, plus the rise of some new stars, makes it a wide-open struggle in the national championship that gets underway Thursday on the Congressional Country Club course.

More than a dozen men in the field of about 140 must be considered challengers for the title Nicklaus has won three times in the last five years. The purse hasn't yet been announced, but it's expected to go near $250,000 with a minimum of $45,000 to the winner.

Chief among the challengers are Jerry Pate, the sweet-swinging rookie who claimed the U.S. and Canadian open crowns, and Johnny Miller, the moody man who shook off his summer lethargy to annex the British Open title.

And there's Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green, Hale Irwin, Tom Watson and John Mahaffey.

The dynamic Crenshaw, holder of two 1976 titles, is the year's leading money-winner. His consistently high finishes in recent weeks indicate he's again reaching the top of his form.

Green is a three-time winner this year, while Irwin always ranks as a threat, is considered by his peers to be second only to Nicklaus and seems to play his best on the tough courses — which includes Congressional. Watson is firmly established as one of the game's better young players and Mahaffey, twice a beaten challenger in the U.S. Open, could be on the brink of a break-through.

"I'll have lots more shots at the big ones," he said. "Some-day I'll get one."

Runners Report

Candidates for the cross-country team at Rose High School are asked to report for their first practice session on Tuesday at 6 p.m.

The team will gather at the field house with Coach Ron Williams. All candidates are asked by the coach to come prepared to run, in shorts and with their shoes.

Rose Girls To Report

Tryouts for the 1976 girls' tennis team at Rose High School will be held on August 23.

Coach Gwen Waller announced that all prospective members of the team are to report to Jaycee Park Courts at 3:30 p.m. on that day. Returning members of the team are not required to try out.

Also-Rans Get To Prove Point

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
Two teams fighting for fifth place in a six-team division must struggle each night to find motivation. That was no problem for Carl Morton and Willie Montanez.

Morton, a professional pitcher, wanted to prove he could pitch and Montanez, a professional hitter, wanted to prove he could hit.

They both proved their points Friday night and led Atlanta to a 7-0 victory over San Francisco, giving the Braves a two-game bulge over the Giants in the race for fifth place in the National League West.

"Words can never express how trying this season has been," said Morton, who stymied the Giants four hits to earn his second victory in 10 decisions. "I've never experienced anything like this."

Montanez, who was traded by the Giants to the Braves earlier this season, rapped out a home run and three singles while driving in a pair of runs to show up his old teammates.

Elsewhere in the NL, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Philadelphia Phillies 6-2; the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos twice, 6-5 in 13 innings and 1-0; the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-4, and the San Diego Padres topped the Houston Astros 9-3. The game between the New York Mets and the Pittsburgh Pirates was postponed because of rain.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 2
Willie Crawford's sacrifice fly snapped a 1-1 tie and the Cardinals, taking advantage of reliever Tug McGraw's error, scored three runs in the seventh to put the game away.

The victory was the Cardinals' fifth in their last 16 games.

Terry Humphrey led off the sixth with a single, took third on Lou Brock's single and scored the tie-breaking run on Crawford's sacrifice fly.

Reds 7, Dodgers 4
Joe Morgan's leadoff homer, his 19th, triggered a four-run ninth inning that carried Cincinnati over Los Angeles and handed Rick Rhoden his first defeat of the season after nine straight victories.

Dave Concepcion's two-run single and Pete Rose's RBI single accounted for the other three runs in the inning.

The triumph increased the Reds' lead over the Dodgers to 11 games in the NL West.

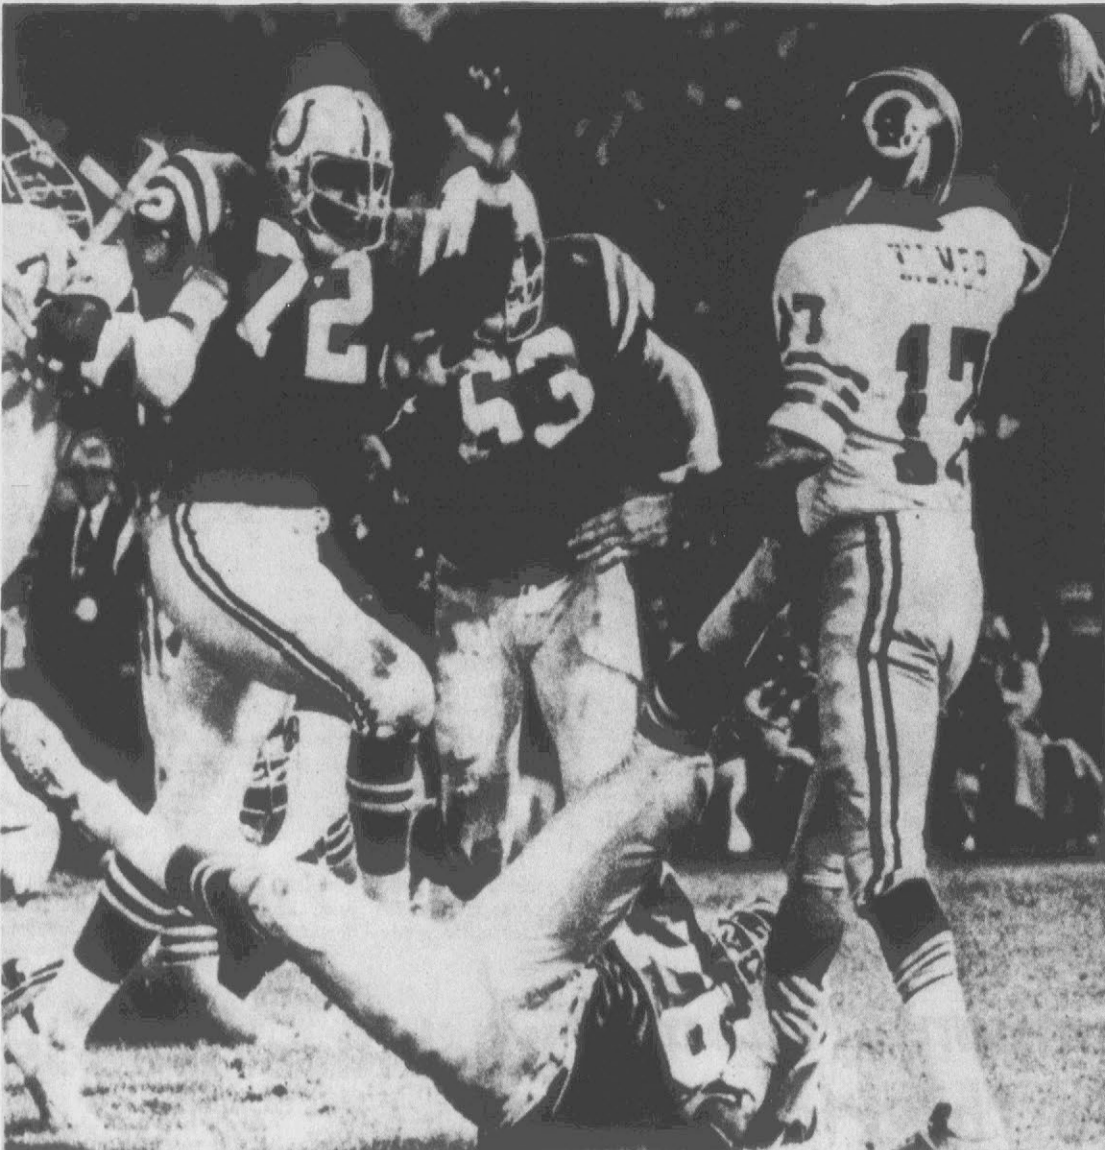

Cubs 6-1, Expos 5-0
Rick Monday's 19th homer of the year, coming in the 13th inning, gave Chicago the opener and Jerry Morales' 13th homer, a leadoff shot in the ninth, was the only run in the second game.

The losses were the woeful Expos' fourth and fifth in a row.

Chicago righthander Steve Stones tossed a four-hitter to win the second game. He struck out nine and walked one.

Padres 9, Astros 3
Tom Griffin, an Astro two days ago, came back to haunt his old teammates with an eight-hit effort before being relieved by Butch Metzger in the seventh inning.

Griffin raised his record to 6-3 and Metzger picked up his 10th save of the season.

Petty Seems To Lose Speed

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Richard Petty, who has to be considered one of the favorites in Sunday's Talladega 500 simply because he's entered, seems to be losing speed while others gain it.

Petty, who's having a lousy year despite winning two races and nearly $200,000 in prize money, qualified 14th fastest in the 40-car field at a disappointing 184.594 miles an hour.

A privateer, Frank Warren, drove a Dodge similar to Petty's, but much less expensively prepared, 184.562 m.p.h.

Petty's crew thought they had found out what the problem was, but now they're not so sure.

Things should have improved for Petty on Friday when a new engine was installed, but they didn't.

With Petty only hitting about 185, he might have a little trouble staying up in the lead draft, if Friday's practice times were any indication.

Dave Marcis won the pole position last Thursday for the $200,000 NASCAR Grand National event with an average speed of 190.651 m.p.h., but several others, including Marcis exceeded that in practice.

Bob Burcham, driving John Ray's Chevrolet last driven at Daytona by Indianapolis 500 champion Johnny Rutherford, turned an almost unbelievable lap of more than 191 in a solo run on the track early Friday.

Co. Co. Marlin, second fastest qualifier, ran a McLaren engine in his Chevrolet to go 189.685. Ray's car is also using a McLaren, a special one, left over from when Rutherford, a works McLaren driver, used the car.

Mar A.J. Foyt reportedly hit 194 in traffic.

In view of Foyt's reported speeds, Ellington added, "We're as ready right now as we'll ever be for Sunday."

One car that was too fast Friday was the Chevrolet of veteran Henley Gray at 186.521. NASCAR inspectors found an illegal fuel pressure assist system and disallowed the speed, which had been fastest of the second day qualifiers.

Boxer Honored By His Friends

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Charles Mooney, who won the Olympic silver medal in bantamweight class boxing, was honored by his buddies at Ft. Bragg Friday as a brave and skillful man.

One thousand of his I Corps Support Command heard the commanding officer, Col. Elmer Pendleton, extol him as "a great American, a great boxer and a great representative of the U. S. Army."

Lt. Gen. Henry Emerson, Ft. Bragg commander, also spoke at a ceremony in front of the command's headquarters. He said, "A lot of people don't realize that Charlie fought more fights in a shorter period of time than any other boxer on the American team. He fought sick, he fought hurt and he fought tired. He represented us well. The general said he 'never had a prouder moment than when Mooney won the silver medal.'"

Dignitaries on the podium included Mooney's stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Cotton of Washington, D. C.; his wife, Dara; son, Charles III; and a special guest, 18-year-old Kathy McMillan of Raeford, who won the silver medal in the women's long-jump.

After ceremonies at headquarters, a 57-unit motorcade traveled a 15-mile route around this sprawling military base and neighboring Pope Air Force Base, pausing at the main post Non-Commissioned Officers Club for a luncheon in Mooney's honor.

Some 300 persons attended the luncheon where Mooney received more awards and congratulations.

Terps Get ACC Pick

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Maryland was picked as a strong favorite by Atlantic Coast Conference sportswriters and sportscasters to win its third consecutive ACC football crown this fall.

All but five of the 62 first-place votes went to coach Jerry Claiborne's team. The Terps collected 429 points out of a possible 434. Maryland was chosen to finish second on the other five ballots.

North Carolina State received two first place votes and Duke, Clemson and North Carolina one each. The Wolfpack finished with 330 points for the runner-up spot. North Carolina was third with 273 points and Duke fourth with 268. Clemson was next with 196. Wake Forest collected 160 and Virginia was last with 80.

Duke got votes at all seven positions. North Carolina, Clemson and N.C. State each received votes at six of the seven spots.

If Maryland wins the crown it will tie Duke as the only other school in the league's 23-year history to win three championships in a row. Duke did it in 1960, 1961 and 1962.

Maryland, which returns 32 lettermen, has won 15 conference games in a row since losing to N.C. State 21-22 early in 1973.

John Clabaugh of the Tyler team in the East Texas League hit 62 home runs in 1926.

One In A Row Might Not Sound Like Much, But Just Ask Hassler

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Andy Hassler's on a winning streak—one in a row. That may not sound like much, but it is after you've lost 18 straight games.

"I finally got the monkey off my back," said the Kansas City pitcher after a 9-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the first game of a twingint doubleheader Friday. Hassler was so elated over his first victory since April 29, 1975, that he celebrated with a bottle of champagne. "I think it was Hal McRae's doing," Hassler said. "It was a pleasant surprise."

By winning, Hassler averted tying the American League record of 19 straight losses, set by H. John Nabors of Philadelphia in 1916. The major league record of 23 was set by Clifton Curtis of Boston of the National League in 1911.

The Royals swept the White Sox with an 8-3 decision in the second game. Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1; the Detroit Tigers turned back the Cleveland Indians 3-1; the Texas Rangers blanked the Minnesota Twins 6-0 and the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 2-1. The Baltimore-New York game was postponed by rain.

Red Sox 2, Brewers 1
Carl Yastrzemski singled home Denny Doyle from second in the eighth inning to lead Boston past Milwaukee. Yastrzemski's hit broke a 1-1 tie and came with two outs and two men on, giving Tom Murphy, 3-5, the victory in relief of Rick Wise.

Milwaukee tied the game in the seventh inning. Tigers 3, Indians 1
Dave Roberts, 11-11, pitched a seven-hitter while Rusty Staub, Ron LeFlore and Aurelio Rodriguez each drove in runs as Detroit snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Cleveland.

Staub had staked Roberts to a 1-0 lead off Jackie Brown, 7-7, with a leadoff homer in the fourth. Detroit added a run in the seventh when Tom Verzyer singled, stole second and came home on a single by LeFlore. Detroit added an insurance run in the eighth when Thompson walked with two outs and scored on a double by Rodriguez.

Rangers 6, Twins 0
Gaylord Perry handcuffed Minnesota on five hits and Texas cashed a Roy Smalley first-inning error into three unearned runs to defeat the Twins. The 37-year old Perry worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth inning and went on to his 11th victory against eight losses. Angels 2, A's 1

California left-hander Frank Tanana struck out 13 batters and allowed only four Oakland hits as the Angels beat the A's on Bobby Bonds' eighth-inning single to climb out of last place in the American League West. Tanana, 13-8, recorded eight strikeouts over the first three innings in his pitching duel against A's southpaw Vida Blue, 9-10. Blue struck out eight and scattered seven hits in a route-going performance.

the point race was made much easier when at least eight U.S. Olympians failed to show up.

"The girls just wanted to get home," said Martha Watson, the 29-year-old long jumper who was pressed into service as a sprinter. "They've been away from home since July 1 and were homesick."

The American women didn't figure to win even with their best, but they could have made the score closer and given the U.S. team a chance to lead in the combined score for only the third time.

Tatyana Kazankina, the Olympic 800 and 1,500 champion, and Faina Melnik, the world recordholder in the discus, led the Russian women in their assault on the meet records.

Miss Kazankina ran the fastest "metric mile" ever in the U.S., winning handily in 4:00.30.

The other records were set by Ilyina Nadezhda at 51.77 in the 400, Galina Filatova at 6-2 1/2 in the high jump, and the Russian 400-meter relay team with a time of 42.93.

After setting a meet record of 18-1/2, Roberts tried three times to break his own mark of 18-8 1/2, set at the Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore.

With darkness approaching on a misty, muggy day, and some of the 10,000 fans lining the runway, Roberts almost cleared the bar on his final attempt.

Steve Riddick, who failed to reach the finals of the 100 meters in Montreal, upset Russia Valary Borzov in 10.15 seconds and also anchored the 400-meter relay team to a meet record clocking of 38.56.

Other men's records were set by American Mike Durkin, who won the 1,500 meters in 3:38.42, and Russian Alexy Spiridonov who upset teammate Yuriy Sedykh, the Olympic champion, with a hammer throw of 225-10.

Records Fall Despite Ho-Hums

By GORDON BEARD

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — It may be just another track meet at the end of a long Olympic year campaign, but the performances belie the expressed feelings of some competitors.

Nine meet records were shattered, six by Russian athletes, as the Soviet Union took a 99-79 lead over the United States after Friday's 17 events in the 14th track and field meet between the two powers.

With another 18 events scheduled Saturday at the University of Maryland's Byrd Stadium, the American men led 59-46 and the Russian women held a runaway 53-20 advantage.

Even Dave Roberts, the Gainesville, Fla., medical student who narrowly missed a world record pole vault of 18 feet, 9 1/4 inches, said he found it difficult to "get up" for the Russians.

After setting a meet record of 18-1/2, Roberts tried three times to break his own mark of 18-8 1/2, set at the Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore.

The Chicod Creek Watershed Project Has A 13 Year History

(Editor's Note: Information on the Chicod Creek Watershed furnished below is taken from a paper prepared by the Pitt County Soil and Water Conservation District.)

Plans for improving the Chicod Creek Watershed have been underway for more than 13 years. The creek, with its small tributaries, covers an area of 35,100 acres in Pitt and Beaufort Counties.

Within this watershed area there are about 250 farms, ranging in size from ten to several hundred acres, with an average size of 130 acres. In April of 1963 a number of the local farmers made application to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture for assistance under Public Law 566. Under this law, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to work with state and local agencies in carrying out developments such as flood prevention to include utilization and disposal of water in watersheds.

In the plan for the Chicod Creek Watershed, conservation treatment was proposed for 60 miles of stream channel improvement. Provisions were proposed for a 13 acre warm water fish pond and 61 acres of wildlife wetland preservation to offset alleged fish and wildlife damages.

To provide for the proposed fish pond and wetland areas, the N.C. General Assembly had to amend the Drainage District Laws. Local people had to agree to pay for land rights and to continue to pay for maintenance. Other agreements were for a permanent public access and a road to the fishing lake.

Between September 1962 and March 1971, 36 public meetings were held by the watershed sponsors, without opposition being voiced at the meetings, with the exception of one biologist then (but no longer) employed by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

In October 1971, the Clerk of Pitt County Superior Court created the Chicod Creek Drainage District at a total cost to landowners of $235,202. In addition to cash costs, about 80 per cent of land rights were donated by landowners.

Following the creation of the drainage district, the Chicod Creek Watershed Project was approved by the local sponsors; the Soil Conservation Service; the N.C. Department of Water and Air Resources; the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission; and federal agencies — the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of the Budget, House Agriculture Committee, Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee, The Clerk of Pitt County Superior Court also approved the project.

The term "channelization" was first heard on May 3 and 4, 1971, when Wisconsin Congressman Henry S. Reuss held hearings on Channelization in Washington. Farmers call it "ditching." The Soil Conservation Service uses the term "stream channel improvement." N.C. law G.S. 139-47 definition is:

"The term 'channelization' means channel excavation but does not include channel clearing and snagging."

In 1969, the National Environmental Policy Act was passed. The act declared a national policy to establish harmony in the environment and to prevent or eliminate damage to the environment. The act also established a Council on Environmental Quality.

This was followed by a Watersheds Memorandum, with guidelines to review watershed work plans for three levels of effects — minor or no adverse effect; some adverse effect; and serious adverse effects. The memorandum was followed for the Chicod Creek Watershed. Chicod was placed in the minor effect category by the Soil Conservation Service. The revised plan was approved by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

A suit seeking to prevent channelization work began to develop in late 1971. On November 18, 1971 a Washington, D.C. attorney, Richard J. Wertheimer wrote Kenneth Grant, Soil Conservation Service Administrator, asking him to issue an environmental statement on Chicod Creek.

On November 30, 1971, 20 days after the Pitt County Drainage District No. 9 Chicod had been advertised for bids, an ecology suit to stop construction of Chicod Creek Watershed Project was filed before Judge John D. Larkins, Jr. in New Bern. Plaintiffs are three national groups and two North Carolina groups — the N.C. Wildlife Federation, Inc., and Pamlico-Tar Coalition, Inc. Defendants included the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, the SCS State Conservationist for North Carolina, and Larry Tucker, contracting officer for the project.

On May 2, 1972 the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife withdrew its June 3, 1956 approval of the Chicod Creek Watershed project and asked the Soil Conservation Service to place Chicod Creek in the serious adverse effect category until the lower five miles of channel work was eliminated from the plan.

More than three years ago, on February 5, 1973, Judge Larkins, issued a ruling that includes: "The Chicod Creek Watershed Environmental Statement misrepresents and ignores environmental effects;" "There is a substantial probability that construction of the Chicod Creek Watershed Project will violate Section 13 of the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899;" and "... the defendants are restrained and enjoined from taking any further steps... pending a final hearing on the merits of the case."

Asked to comment on the current status of Chicod Creek Watershed developments, Roy Beck, District Conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, remarked: "Negotiations are underway for a compromise that may lead to a consent judgement on the project."

Summer Inventory Of Chicod Creek Plant Life

Two young Tar Heels, Ed Weaver, Jr. and J.B. Little, Jr. are making a comprehensive inventory of current plant life in the four areas of the Chicod Creek Watershed.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

ESTIMATING... canopy density, biologist Edward (Ed) Weaver, Jr. studies the foliage above a vegetation sampling plot.

All this summer, biologist Edward (Ed) Weaver, Jr. and technician J. D. Little, Jr. are taking plant inventory at 80 checkpoint plots in the areas of Pitt and Beaufort Counties that comprise the Chicod Watershed.

"Basically, we're evaluating base-line data of the wildlife in the area," Weaver explained. "We're inventorying plant life currently in the area. It's a pre-channelization study, so that when channelization takes place, there'll be documentation available to compare the current density and number of species of wildlife with that here in future years."

Both the young men, in their twenties, are North Carolina natives trained in their home state.

Weaver, from Wilmington, holds a BS degree in zoology from UNC-Chapel Hill and a masters degree in biology from East Carolina University.

Beaufort County native Little is an ECU graduate who majored in geography with a minor in biology.

Weaver is a biologist with the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. The contract for the Chicod vegetation sampling is funded by the Soil Conservation Service.

Chicod Complex

Chicod Watershed encompasses four streams and surrounding areas drained by these streams. They are Upper Chicod, Lower Chicod, Cow Swamp Branch and Juniper Branch.

For the plant sampling program, there are four transect lines in each area, for a total of 16 transect lines. Each transect line is a mile in length, and each of the 16 transect lines have five predetermined points from which inventories are taken, for a total of 80 vegetation sampling plots.

Typical Checkpoint

The checkpoint at which photographs accompanying this article were made is new Juniper Branch, about two miles south of Simpson. Here the branch runs quietly, even sluggishly, through woods thickly canopied with green summer leaves.

Plant life being sampled that day was in the ecotone, which is the designation of the middle of three typical vegetation zones. The zone immediately adjacent to streams, low and usually moist or muddy and subject to being covered with water is the flood plain zone. Next comes the ecotone zone, an intermediate zone, with higher ground above that designated as uplands.

At the Juniper Branch plot site, the ecotone begins a few yards within the forest. A wealth of plant life, new growth and long established specimens, break through the rich woods mold carpeted forest floor.

Here there's lots of ferns and smilax, the tough green brier whose new shoots constitute prime food for deer. There's also black gum, holly, ironwood, swamp bay trees, tough rattan vines, grape vines, jack-in-the-pulpit and touch-me-not flowers, just to name a few.

System Devised

To achieve uniformity and a non-biased plant survey, selection of sampling sites was predetermined, never chosen on the basis of plots that would be most rewarding or necessarily the most typical for compilation of the greatest varieties of common and not so common plant life.

"Sample plots have been chosen in the laboratory, from spot elevation profile studies previously made of the watershed area," Weaver said.

"Essentially," Little explained, "it works like this. Permanent iron stakes have been driven in the 16 pre-selected transect lines. At a point six meters (19 feet, 10 inches) east of the permanent stake, we place our frame for sampling ground cover."

The lightweight wooden frame, one-half by two meters, encloses the area in which the two carefully study small plants to get an accurate representative plant count for the area. In the frame at Juniper Branch they found honeysuckle, climbing hydrangea, smilax, southern lady fern and woodwardia-fern.

"From the count taken here," Weaver said, "we can extrapolate plant life over the total area. Then, five or six years later we can return to this exact area and sample the vegetation present at that time."

Species Record

The men use a special, simplified field form to record names of species and the number of each species growing within the ground cover frame.

"We record species in acronyms for computer use. These are abbreviations for scientific names," Weaver said.

Little mentioned a typical example. "For black gum, which has the Latin name Nyssa sylvatica, the acronym is NYSSAS."

In other frames at other plots a large variety of local plant life has been recorded within the ground frames including vines, wild flowers, seedling trees and shrubs, mosses, reeds, ferns and mushrooms.

"Everything that has its root within the placement of a frame is recorded," Little said.

"Sometimes," Weaver explained, "we have to spend a little extra time in identifying a small seedling tree, especially if the seedling's one or two leaves have been eaten by insects."

"If we have doubts about the specimen, it is taken to East Carolina University for additional help from Dr. Donald Jeffreys. In some cases, as with different grasses, specimens will be sent to Albert Redford, one of the authors of Vascular Flora of the Carolinas. Redford is North Carolina's leading expert on plant identification."

Tree Count

Recording plant data within the ground frame is but one type of vegetation data determined by Weaver and Little.

From the pre-selected stake on the transect line, the two run a calibrated measuring tape for a distance of 30 meters.

They place small orange flags at six meter intervals on the line. "We record trees in quadrants taken every six meters," Weaver explained, "and measure the diameter of the closest tree within each quadrant at DBH, which is simply diameter at breast height."

The measuring tape they use is a special German designed tape that converts circumference into diameter readings, eliminating the time consuming process of figuring out this information.

"A tree must measure at least 8.0 centimeters in diameter before we record it," Little said.

Other information taken on trees include shrub (or tree) heights and the over story, or density of the canopy overhead.

"In a heavily wooded area such as here," Weaver said, "the canopy density averages from about 90 to 100 per cent."

Other Data

Though vegetation is the major concern of the inventory being conducted by Weaver and Little, they also record other data that is indicative of the presence of living creatures at the plot sites.

Information on the sightings of insects such as the airy damsel fly and the crane fly, small animals including mice and rats, and birds heard in the nearby forest are all part of supplementary data noted.

Weaver said a special project would be that "of checking for bear tracks in a heavily wooded area in Beaufort County. We'll first drag smooth one of the access roads, then check it for bear tracks to get an idea of utilization of the road by bears."

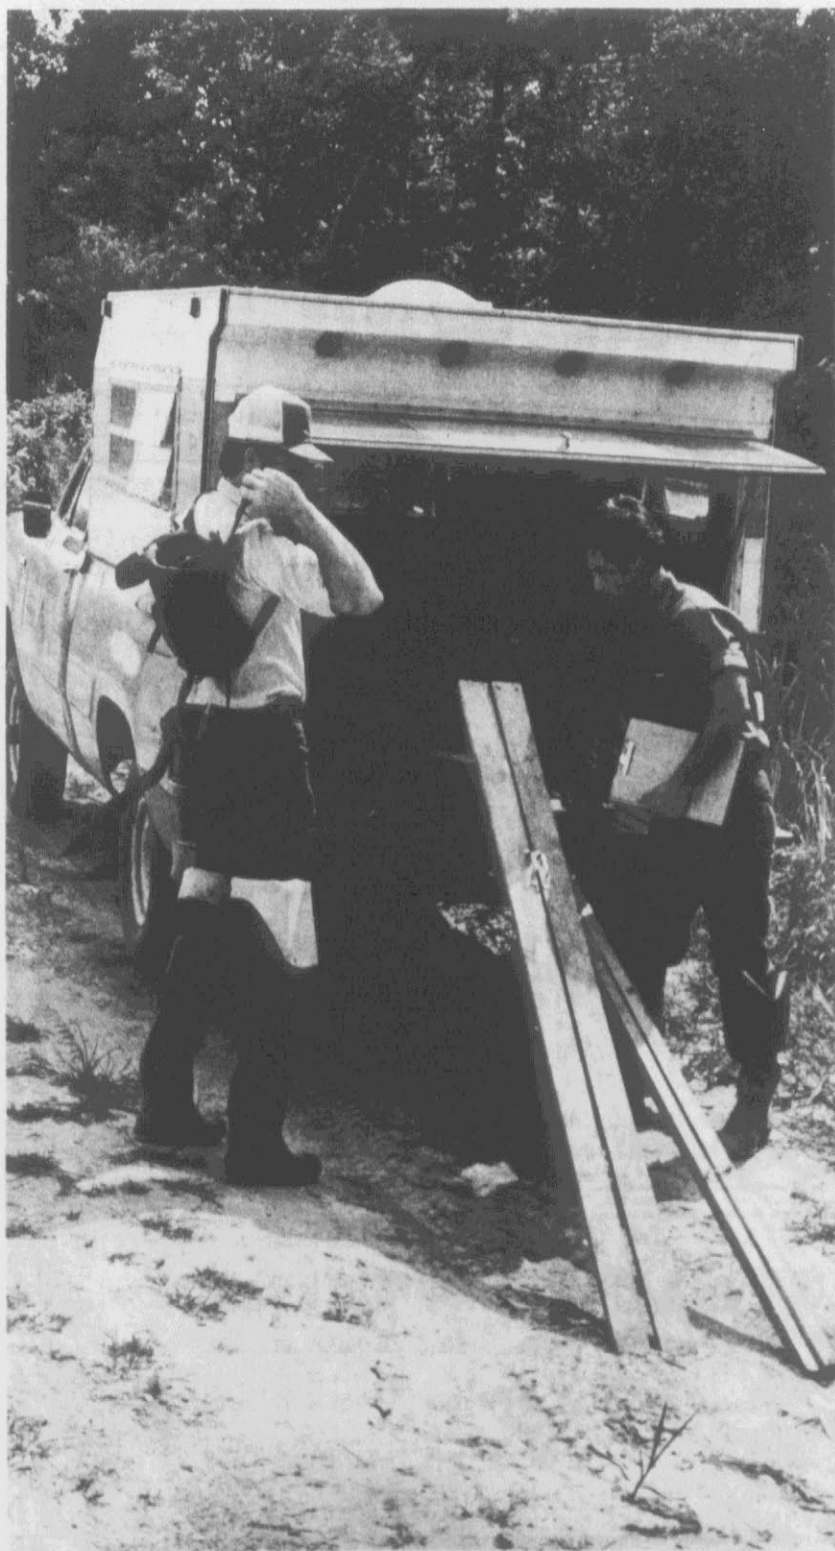

Cooperative

"One thing that has been helpful to us," Weaver observed, "is that landowners have been most cooperative about providing us free access to the areas where the sample plots are located."

"They do this without burdening us with arguments on their viewpoints on the channelization issue. I think they understand what our role is, and we appreciate this attitude on their part."

FERNS... formed a significant total of plant life recorded in a ground cover frame at the Juniper Branch plot.

GETTING READY... for another day's inventory of plant life, J. B. Little, Jr. (left) and Ed Weaver gather materials and equipment to take into the forest.

TAKING A MEASUREMENT... Little measures the diameter of a tree with a special tape that converts circumference measurements into diameter reading.

THE HOME OF GOOD SERVICE

BROWN & WOOD, INC.

BOB STARLING
Service Manager

My Qualifications As Service Manager Are Based Primarily On The Experience I Gained For Approximately 9 Years In Parts And Service.

As Service Manager of Brown & Wood, Inc. I feel that I have a department staffed with service technicians of extraordinary calibre. These men are screened and factory trained and receive continuous on the job training. We hire the very best and invest heavily in their development. It is important to point out that you pay the same general labor rates regardless of where you have your car repaired. Why pay the same for a job performance by less qualified technicians.

State Dept. Interpreters Use A 'Third Language'

By JIM ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is making one of his usual airport statements, with elegance, precision and a touch of humor.

The man at his right shoulder scribbles as Kissinger speaks, then delivers in Spanish his entire statement. Every nuance and passing jest is intact. Only Kissinger's German accent is lost.

Kissinger's host responds with a long, flowery statement. The interpreter jots down some more notes, then translates it into English, with pauses and emphases in the right place.

The audience might assume that the interpreter is making all his notes in conventional shorthand. Actually, he has been writing in a privately invented language that closely resembles some of the early Babylonian picture writing, or a modern equivalent of Chinese ideograms.

"I have never known a successful interpreter who uses conventional shorthand," says Don Barnes, chief of interpreters at the State Department.

Barnes says shorthand would require putting the thought into a third language (because each shorthand method is a phonetic language all its own), so the interpreters use a multilingual code of pictorial symbols that has several important advantages.

It is faster than shorthand, and because the symbols represent concepts more than words, the interpreters can choose exactly the right thought to translate the idea precisely.

The cream of the linguists are consecutive interpreters, persons who can listen to hundreds of words and then deliver them instantly in another language, complete with all their complex shadings of meaning.

Interpreting is far more demanding than translating, which means putting a written thought into another language. Translators can use dictionaries and take the time to mull over the exact meaning of a word.

Interpreters use their own versions of the picture language, and they even change their own symbols and abbreviations from day to day.

Here are a couple of the comparatively standard symbols they use:

— "World" is represented by a circle with a horizontal line — the equator. "Western Hemisphere" could be the same circle with a line drawn vertically.

— "Industrialized" would be a vertical line with a squiggle rising from the top, representing a factory smokestack. "Industrialized world" could be reduced to four quickly scrawled lines easily read in any language.

Barnes and others who use the system say it requires a good knowledge of the subject, an analytical mind and a very good memory.

It is not necessary to take down every word. The key symbol is written and this triggers the interpreter's memory for recreating the whole idea in another language.

Prior to a complicated negotiating session, the interpreter reads all the diplomats' briefing books to acquire a command of the subject and issues involved, and perhaps to prepare some special symbols or abbreviations he knows he will need.

The picture language relies heavily on mathematical symbols and conventional punctuation marks.

For example, the "equal" sign obviously means "equivalent" or "like." The same sign with a slash mark means "unequal."

A quotation mark (") means "says" or "states." An exclamation mark could mean "declares" or "announces."

From there on, the individual systems become ingenious, Freudian and sometimes even obscene, according to the user.

Alec Toumayan, a French-speaking interpreter, uses a dollar sign to signify "money" or "funds." The same dollar sign with a firm arrow extending from it becomes "investment." If the arrow becomes a longer, vaguer line, the symbol means "inflation." The same line, lengthened with several crazy loops becomes "runaway inflation."

Tony Hervas, an interpreter in Spanish, uses a circle (which looks like a pig's rear end) with a line on top to represent "prosperity." The symbol, he says, depicts the saying, "high on the hog."

In some systems, a small "v" (which could be a childlike drawing of a flying dove) is "peace." In another system, the same "v" (which also looks a little like a plow blade) represents "agriculture" or

"farming."

"Nuclear" sometimes is represented by two vaguely concentric circles, which is a simplified version of a nucleus with a proton whizzing around it.

For "nuclear testing," jot down two quick circles on the inside of a "u" (which represents a test-tube).

The interpreters place their symbols on a page so that the location of a thought serves as a memory jogger.

Sophie Porson, an American-born interpreter in French and Portuguese, says:

"The clue words such as 'but' or 'however,' which set the tone for the whole statement, are placed in the left margin where they stand out to warn you what is coming. The basic idea goes right next to that, and the modifying phrases go under that, to the right. Instead of writing down a phrase that is frequently repeated, you just draw an arrow to the basic phrase which you wrote down the first time."

Certain words keep recurring. Once, when Mrs. Porson was interpreting during the Vietnam peace talks, "withdrawal" was repeated frequently. She designed a special symbol on the spot — an arrow curving back on itself.

The key is analyzing the thought, quickly symbolizing it on paper in the simplest possible way, then translating the idea instead of the words.

As Sophie Porson says, "It requires poise and self-confidence. If you become a slave to the individual words, the interpretation usually falls flat. Writing down only the idea frees you."

Seek Best Control For Waterweeds

Waterweeds that grow in farm drainage channels hinder the flow of water, accumulate silt and debris, and reduce sports fishing. The soil conservation Service in North Carolina is seeking ways to cut down on growth of such aquatic vegetation.

Under the leadership of SCS biologist Phil Edwards of Raleigh, two separate studies, one in Pitt County, are being conducted on the best control methods for such waterweeds.

An experiment on streambank vegetation is being conducted on the main channel in Johnson's Milltail Watershed five miles east of Grifton. The experiment will determine whether vegetative manipulation — planting in some cases, removal in others — can effectively manage aquatic.

Light penetration to water in the canal is an important aspect of this test.

A water level fluctuation test was carried out in Robeson County, where a gate was installed in a channel and water level adjusted seasonally from three to seven feet.

Both tests should provide useful data in future control.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Saturday Ceremony

FARMVILLE — In a ceremony Saturday afternoon at five o'clock, Miss Kathryn Earlene Finklea became the bride of Roland Dixon Sauls Jr.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Curtis Tyler of Bethel and the Rev. Ronald Davis of Farmville in the First Baptist Church. The organist was W. Lee Hendricks of Greenville. Mrs. Rhonda Riley of Greenville sang "Aria of Ruth," "The Ring" and "How Do I Love Thee?"

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Charles Finklea of Virginia Beach, Va., the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of silk organza with a high neckline, empire waist and bishop sleeves. The bodice featured a sheer yoke appliqued with Venise lace that continued down the front of the bodice and around the waist. Appliques were applied on the sleeves and around the flounce of the full floor length skirt.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Meta Moore Sauls of Farmville, and the late Mr. Roland Dixon Sauls. The honor attendant was Miss Wendy Elizabeth Thomas of Virginia Beach, Va. Bridesmaids were Miss Karen Burke of Herdon, Va., Miss Lisa Heller and Miss Becky Brum-beloe, both of Farmville, Miss Laura Jolley of Baton Rouge, La., and Miss Michael Jackson of Florence, S.C., both cousins of the bride.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of blue knit designed with an open V-neckline and short flared sleeves. The wrap gown featured tiered layers of knit with a tie sash of self-fabric. They carried bouquets of white marguerite daisies and fern with white and blue streamers.

Miss Heather Moore of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a white dress with a floral print. Blue ribbon complemented the sleeves. She carried a basket of white daisies and wore a floral headpiece in her hair.

The ring bearer was Shae Terrell of Farmville. The best man was Fred Theodore Sauls of Fayetteville, brother of the bridegroom.

Ushers included Chuck Finklea of Virginia Beach, Va., brother of the bride, Eddie Allen, Ivey Smith and Linwood Woodard, all of Farmville, and Johnny Hardison of Williamston.

After a wedding trip to the mountains, the couple will reside in Pitt County. The bride graduated cum laude from East Carolina University and will be employed by the Pitt County School system. The bridegroom is a graduate of UNC-CH and received a master of physical education from ECU. He will be employed by the Pitt County School system.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Jack Farrior of Farmville and Mrs. William Whichard of Bethel.

After the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the DAR Chapter House, Farmville. The house was decorated with magnolia leaves and summer flowers.

The banquet table was centered with an arrangement of summer flowers flanked with silver candelabra.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Oglesby and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. George Moore.

The bridal party was honored at a wedding breakfast Saturday at the Candlewick Inn. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Moore, Maj. and Mrs. W. T. Mills, Mrs. C. L. Eason, Mrs. B. E. Moore, Mrs. F. O. Warren, G. W. Warren and Mrs. T. L. Moore.

The bridegroom's mother and brother, Fred Sauls, entertained the wedding party, relatives and guests at a dinner Friday evening at the Candlewick Inn.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the Colonial House, Farmville Friday. Hostesses were Mrs. Tammy Tucker, Mrs. Gordon E. Lee, Mrs. Billy Marston, Mrs. Rhoderick Williams, Mrs. Roger Beamon, Mrs. William Minnette and Mrs. Harold Flanagan.

Female Impact Felt In Sports

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP) — Women are exerting an influence on the design of sports equipment, an area once considered men's domain, says the president of a sporting goods manufacturing company.

They are also influencing sportswear fashions. American women spent $50 million in 1975 on tennis clothing alone, though some of it showed up in the supermarket rather than on the courts. This expenditure has also led to greater fashion consciousness among male athletes.

"However," says Spalding's Richard M. Geisler, "the women's influence goes beyond tennis and mere cosmetic changes. It goes all the way back to the drawing board. In golf, for example, we have designed a woman's ball that converts their slower clubhead speed into greater distance."

Another factor in the impact on sports equipment, Geisler notes, is the federal law requiring greater portions of school athletic budgets to be used for women.

Miss Atkinson Weds Mr. Council

Mildred Lucille Atkinson became the bride of Walter Baker Council at the Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church Saturday afternoon. The Rev. Richard E. Worrell officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Russell Atkinson of Greenville. She was given in marriage by her uncle, James Shaw of Alexandria, Va., and her aunt, Mrs. Queenie Willis of Richmond, Va., acted as mother of the bride.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Council Sr. of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Roger Ingram, organist, and Ms. Ivory Roseboro, Ms. Cora McFadden and Charles Quinn, soloists.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and impoted Venise lace. The fitted bodice of lace featured a scoop neck and full length organza puffed sleeves cuffed at the wrist in lace. The full length A-line organza skirt was appliqued with motifs of lace and featured a bordered hemline and tubular chapel train. A satin bow with streamers accented the back of the gown.

Her headpiece was a fingertip mantilla of Venise lace attached to a lace caplette. She carried a cascade bouquet of white miniature carnations, baby's breath and yellow sweetheart roses centered with a white orchid and tips of greenery tied with white satin.

Miss Constance Walker of Cleveland, Ohio, was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of apricot knit designed with a portrait neckline featuring a bertha collar and short capelet sleeves. The princess styled gown was enhanced by a gathered tucked bodice centered with a self-fabric silk rose and styled with a full flowing skirt. She carried a basket filled with mixed summer flowers tied with rainbow satin.

Mrs. Annie Wright of Springfield, Va., was matron of honor. She wore a dress styled identically to that of the maid of honor's in Nile knit. She carried an identical basket of flowers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Joyce Hampton of Mount Vernon, N.Y., Miss Dianne McLeod of Alexandria, Va., Miss Annie Speight of Kinson, Miss Rebecca Ware of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Dewilda Williams of Hillcrest Heights, Md. They wore dresses similar to the honor attendants' styled in maize knit.

Miss Tana Roseboro of Winston-Salem, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a formal length gown of white crinkle gauze designed with a high neckline and long full sleeves. White crocheted lace trimmed the bodice front and cuffs.

William Council of Washington, D.C., was best man. Ushers were Ricky Atkinson of Greenville, brother of the bride, Arthur Council Jr. of Philadelphia, Pa., Jesse Council of Rochester, Pa., Robert Council of Winterville and Thomas Council of Greenville, all brothers of the bridegroom, James Harper of Greensboro and Charles Quinn of Greensboro.

Anthony Mooring of Philadelphia, Pa., nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Rosa Harris.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the Moyewood Family and Child Development Center.

Mrs. Rosa Rogers Wiggins of Hillcrest Heights, Md., and Miss Renay Dukens of Bethel, Conn., presided over the guest register. Miss Helen Whitaker of Langston, Okla., introduced the receiving line. Mrs. Viola Reese of Thomasville, aunt of the bride, cut the wedding cake.

Punch was poured by Mrs. Marion Mitchell of Philadelphia, Pa., sister of the bridegroom. Mrs. Ruby Taylor of Greenville was in charge of the refreshment table. Mrs. Lula Gamble of Waycross, Ga., aunt of the bride received the gifts, and good-byes were said by Mrs. Cellustene Jones of Baltimore, Md., aunt of the bride.

Following the reception, the newlyweds provided a buffet dinner for their relatives and out-of-town guests.

On Friday, a luncheon in honor of the wedding couple and their attendants was given by Mrs. Nannie Hall Willoughby at her home. After the wedding rehearsal, a dinner was held at the home of the bride in honor of the couple and their wedding party. Mrs. Arthur Council Sr., mother of the bridegroom, served as hostess with Mrs. Queenie Willis, aunt of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Shaw University and received a Master's degree in social work from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. The bridegroom holds a Master's degree in safety and drivers'

Charlotte-Mecklenburg School System. The couple plans a wedding trip to Cho Rios, Jamaica.

By Erma Bombeck

In our town, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" comes on somewhere between The Star-Spangled Banner and man's tribute to flight.

Because of the nature of the material, they wanted to make sure all the parents were in bed and the kids glued to the TV set.

As I told the children the other morning, "I'm supposed to be using parental discretion, but I'm too dragged to discret."

"It's all right, Mom," they said. "If there was anything for you to make a decision on, we'd awaken you."

"You say it's just a story of a simple, average family from Fernwood, Ohio?"

"Right," they smiled. "You're from Ohio, aren't you, Mom?"

"Yes, Dayton. What bothers me is why they put it on so late."

"Who knows? There's this sweet grandfather who wears a raincoat, Mary's husband, who's your ordinary blue-collar worker, and a young girl seeking conversion."

"Conversion to what?" I asked suspiciously.

"One of your top three faiths."

"It sounds like 'The Waltons,'" I said. "Why does the grandfather wear a raincoat?"

"Granddad has a raincoat, doesn't he?" they grinned.

"Yes, of course. What does Mary do all day?"

"She's just your average stay-at-home housewife, like you. With the puffed sleeves and the dustmop."

"Sounds dull."

"It is. Some nights we can hardly keep awake."

"Then why do you?"

"We're trying to get a better understanding of your life, Mom. We never realized before what it was like to stay at home and just be a normal, average housewife."

"It has its moments."

"I thought I saw them nudge one another and giggle."

"Tell me," I said, "do they ever get into the good work we housewives do, like visiting the sick in the hospital?"

"Oh yeah," said our youngest, his eyes glistening.

"It doesn't sound like any more sex and violence to me than 'Wild Kingdom,'" I said.

Hardee-Fornes Vows Solemnized

Miss Polly Fornes and Randy J. Hardee were united in marriage Friday at seven o'clock in a private ceremony at the home of the bride.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Lupton of Salem Methodist Church, Simpson.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. H. L. Fornes Jr. of Greenville and the late Mr.

Fornes. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Linwood J. Hardee also of Greenville.

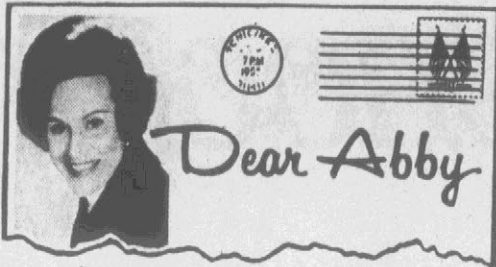

The bride wore a formal length white knit gown designed with an open squared neckline trimmed with floral Venise lace beaded with pearls. A panel of the beaded lace extended from the front center to the waistline.

Miniature floral Venise lace edged the cuffs of the long fitted sleeves. Matching lace encircled the waistline of the full flowing skirt. She carried in her hand a red rose.

Following the ceremony, a small reception was given by the mother of the bride, Mrs. Ricky Buck, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Bill Waggoner, sister of the bridegroom, assisted in serving.

The bride is a graduate of Mount Olive Junior College and is presently attending East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Winterville High School and is employed by Carolina Telephone Co.

Following a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will reside at Rt. 3, Greenville.

become better acquainted. We became inseparable, and within three months we knew we were in love.

I wrote to my mother asking for permission to marry Sun. (My father is deceased.) My mother wrote back saying she is against it. That is my problem, Abby. I am only 19 and cannot marry without my mother's consent until I reach 21.

My mother says I am too young to marry, but I think her real reason is she doesn't want a Korean deaf-mute for a daughter-in-law.

Sun and I are very much in love. I know in my heart that we were meant for each other. Sun's parents are both dead, and I am all she has. I know she would make a wonderful wife. Can you help me?

SAD PFC

DEARSAD: Talk to your chaplain. And consider this: A Korean girl with normal speech and hearing may have difficulty adjusting to a Western society, but a deaf-mute could be overwhelmed by the task. To bring Sun home as your bride could be terribly unfair to her. If your love was meant to be, it will endure until you are 21. Be patient.

Motel Maid Would Appreciate Tip

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What has happened to people? I work as a maid in a motel that is part of a very popular chain. We're full most of the time.

Our guests wouldn't think of having a cup of coffee and not leaving a small tip for the waitress. But the maid who cleans up their room never gets a thing.

I change the bed linen, scrub and disinfect the bathroom, pick up the soiled towels, and even gather up trash that's been thrown near, but not in, the trash can.

Sure, we get paid for what we do. But considering the way most people mess up a motel room, it takes a lot of extra work, so an extra dollar would be appreciated.

I hope you don't miss when you crumple this up and aim for your wastebasket, Abby.

JUST A MOTEL MAID

DEAR JUST: I aimed your letter at my typewriter—not my wastebasket. Perhaps a gentle reminder to all those summer travelers may help.

DEAR ABBY: I am an American serviceman who has been stationed in Korea for six months. The first week I arrived here I met "Sun," a beautiful Korean girl who was selling paintings for a church fund raiser. She is a deaf-mute, but we were able to communicate well enough to

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

AYDEN— The First Baptist Church here was the setting of a candlelight ceremony Saturday, at eight o'clock in the evening, uniting Ludie Mills Cannon and Luther B. Nichols in marriage. The Rev. Stanley E. Wingard officiated at the double ring ceremony. The wedding was directed by Mrs. David H. Smith Jr.

The vows were spoken before an altar decked with a white arrangement of flowers, flanked by ferns and other greenery.

Prior to the ceremony Lois J. Stocks, organist, and James M. Wilkinson, soloist, presented a program of nuptial music including "Because" and the "Wedding Prayer."

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her son,

Donald Scott Cannon. She was attired in an original gown of ice blue silk crepe. The empire model was highlighted with a sash of the same material as her gown, which had a cummerbund effect in front, with long streamers flowing from a self-bow into the folds of the back of the skirt. The dress featured chiffon butterfly sleeves, ending in points just below the wrists.

She carried a bouquet of pink tea roses and blue delphinium centered with a white orchid. Satin ribbon streamers of white tied in love knots, were caught at intervals with white stephanotis.

Mrs. Donald Scott Cannon attended the bride as matron of honor. She chose an original lemon yellow chiffon gown with a cowl collar caught at the neck with a cabbage rose. The full length back panels of the same material created the effect of butterfly panels and three-quarter length sleeves. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay of mixed summer flowers which featured yellow in shades identical to her gown.

The maid of honor was Miss Jackie Mazingo, granddaughter of the bridegroom. Her gown of seafoam silk taffeta featured a self-belt and a V-neckline which was accented by a standup-pleated lady in waiting collar. Her nosegay was identical to that of the matron of honor.

The bridegroom chose his son, Luther Green Nichols, as his best man. Donald Scott Cannon II served as ringbearer. Ushers were Clifton Waters, James Kite, and Luther Ray Nichols, grandsons of the bridegroom.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was hosted in the church's fellowship hall. Those honoring the couple as hostesses for the reception included Mrs. Billie Humphrey, Mrs. Theodell Waters, Mrs. Sue Kite, and Mrs. Gertie Nichols, daughters of the bridegroom.

Immediately following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Nichols left for a wedding trip to Florida. Mrs. Nichols chose for traveling a two-piece navy jacket dress with matching accessories. She wore the orchid from her wedding bouquet.

Upon returning from their wedding trip, the couple will be residing at Rt. 2, Ayden.

Dutch Adopt U.S. T-Shirts

By SHIRLEY CHAMPA
AMSTERDAM (AP) — U.S. T-shirts emblazoned with the logos of top American sports teams are all the rage among Dutch youngsters.

The kids are walking out with gear proclaiming "Cleveland Indians," "Dallas Cowboys" and "Philadelphia Flyers." Decorated with huge '76s and bold red, white and blue stripes, the shirts have an American bicentennial flavor.

The scene on the streets is not much different from an American town, but all the accents are Dutch.

Boutiques on Amsterdam's fashionable Kalverstraat are filled with the shirts. A clerk in one shop said hundreds were sold in a week.

"Since we got the first stocks in the beginning of June we've been selling them as fast as we get them in," she said.

Store racks are also crammed with American university sweatshirts — a style U.S. college students have cherished for years.

One Dutchman wearing a Michigan State University sweatshirt said he didn't know where Michigan was. "It's just something fun to wear," he explained.

The United States makes many of the shirts but others are imported from Spain, Portugal, Italy and even Communist Romania. The shirts mostly sell for 25 guilders or about $10. Similar ones sell in the United States for half as much.

Catchy slogans highlight some of the more offbeat shirts. One proclaims "Be a Man and Do It — Join the U.S. Navy." "American Cruising Ship" is emblazoned across another. Shirts resembling old flour sacks declare "Heart of America" and "Gold Medal Flour." Others have no slogans but are covered with red, white and blue stars and stripes. Uncle Sam glares from another.

Popular also are new and used American bowling and garage mechanic shirts. Dutch trend-setters are proudly sporting shirts that proclaim "Snowline Bowl and Billiards, Oakhurst," "Boulevard Lanes, Dover, Ohio" and "Cloverleaf Speedway."

In one exclusive shop a shirt with "Dalton Chevy and Olds, Garage Inc." stitched on the back is selling for 60 guilders or $24.

One Dutch girl commented, "It's crazy. People here pay a lot of money to wear somebody's old shirt."

Couple Weds In Jamaica

Miss Sandra Kaye Johnson and Mr. Dalton Woodrow Worthington, Jr. were married July 1st on the lawn of the Intercontinental Hotel at Montego Bay, Jamaica. The bride is the daughter of Mr. T.O. Johnson of Wake Forest, N.C. and the late Mrs. Johnson. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Worthington of Winterville, N.C. Mrs. Worthington is a graduate of East Carolina University and is the media co-ordinator at Stokes Elementary School.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A latch hook rug wall hanging in greens and golds was presented to the Greenville Recreation Department this week. Designed with a large G in the center, symbols representing summertime crafts conducted in the city's parks — a basketball for sports, a checker board for games, an artist's palette and musical notes are placed in each corner.

The wall hanging was designed by Mrs. Lucille Sumrell, director of crafts for the recreation department. The wool, which included 24 skeins, was cut by hand by the children at Evans Day Camp, South Greenville, Tot Lot, and the city parks including Meadowbrook, Belvedere, Lyndale, Kitrell-Goodson, Greenfield Terrace, Hillsdale, Woodlawn, Peppermint and Jaycee.

The work on the wall hanging which measures 45 by 48 inches was directed by Carol Whitford and Alice Moore and was carried on for seven weeks. The wall hanging will be used as a banner representing the recreation department.

The presentation ceremony highlighted the recreation department's arts and crafts show. Some of the other crafts conducted during the summer program in addition to the wall hanging were bird mobiles, copper tooling, decorated flower pots, and sculpture, needlepoint, key chains and jewelry from beads and shells.

Ribbons were awarded to each of the children who participated in the show. Judging was done by Wanda Elks, Beth Murdoch and Jim Sutton.

Taking part in the presentation were Susan Cherry, Tim Ellis, Kim Averette and Mitzl Benfield. Boyd Lee, director of the recreation department, accepted the wall hanging.

A GOLD G... highlights the wall hanging recently presented to the Greenville Recreation Department.

DEADBEATS

CHICAGO (UPI) — Consumer debtors who moved last year without notifying their creditors left behind more than one-million unpaid bills per month.

A nationwide survey by the American Collectors Association, Inc. showed these unpaid bills totalled $100 million a month, the cost of which is ultimately passed in the form of increased prices on goods and services to everyone else.

The ACA represents more than half the collection services in the United States. Its members receive more than 500,000 skip accounts a month from creditors who have failed to locate the deadbeats.

Luncheon Meet Is Planned

The Welcome Wagon Club August luncheon meeting will be held Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

The program will be presented by George Dudley of WNCT who will talk about what it is like to work in a newsroom.

There will be a family picnic for Welcome Wagon members Sunday, Aug. 15 at Cliffs of the Neuse State Park.

'Smart Bison' Guides Drivers

PARIS (UPI) — French travel authorities have reached into American Indian folklore to help the millions of tourists traveling by car in France to avoid traffic jams on highways and roads in July and August.

Posters carrying the image of a smiling little Indian boy named "Smart Bison" will guide tourists off the jammed speedways onto quiet less crowded country roads.

Tourist authorities are working on plans to reward tourists who will follow Smart Bison's path. They are thinking in terms of lottery tickets that would allow winners to get a bonus for up to 300 liters of free gasoline.

SHOWTIME

For The Week Of August 8-14, 1976

Comedy Special Airs Tuesday

LORENZO MUSIC—"The New Lorenzo Music Show," starring Lorenzo Music (his face is the mask being worn by audience members), is one of four half-hour comedies being aired on Tuesday, August 10 (9-11 p.m.) as part of the "ABC Comedy Showcase" on Channel 3W-5-12.

"The ABC Comedy Special," two hours of original programming featuring four separate half-hour comedies, will air Tuesday, Aug. 10, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 3-5-12.

The programs are "The New Lorenzo Music Show" (9 to 9:30), "Cousins" (9:30 to 10), "The Rear Guard" (10 to 10:30) and "Zero Intelligence" (10:30 to 11).

"The New Lorenzo Music Show" is the first television-special for host Lorenzo Music, one of the most talented comedy writers in TV and the well-known voice of the unseen "Carlton the Dorman" on the Rhoda series.

Employing a show-within-the-show format, Music relates what it is really like to host a television program — particularly one afflicted with his zany family, his long-suffering writers, a team of high-flying Italian acrobats and their relatives, his own klutziness and the constant indignities heaped on him by virtually everyone in sight. Co-starring is Lorenzo's real-life wife, Henrietta.

"Cousins" is the story of two semi-sophisticated young women who work for a major New York advertising agency. They're best friends, and they just happen to be relatives as well, although sometimes they wish they weren't.

There's a crisis when their boss, "Weird Leonard," thinks his marriage is breaking up and the girls feel obligated to effect a reconciliation. Starring are Lisa Mordante, Dee Dee Rechler and David Ogden Stiers.

"The Rear Guard" is composed of the "too old," "too young" and, one might add, the "too incompetent." It's the saga of a World War II Civil Defense unit which captures, completely by accident, the crew of a German submarine. It's a toss-up as to who is in charge as the Yanks and the Nazis fumble their way from helter skelter to loggerheads.

"The Rear Guard" stars Cliff Norton and Lou Jacobi with guest star Conrad Janis.

In a setting a few years more contemporary, "Zero Intelligence" is a top secret cold war radar station located near the Arctic Circle and staffed by a crew including base commander Deerfield (Sorrell Booke), civilian expert Higgins (Don Galloway), the enterprising city kid, Fred (Tom Rosqui), and the irrepressible Eskimo, "Mo" (Clyde Kusatu).

Strange blips begin to appear on their DEW (Distant Early Warning) radar scopes, the storeroom is broken into, bizarre footprints appear in the snow, and the "Zero" team is convinced it is under attack — not by the enemy — but by invaders from outer space.

Bugles' History Explained

Roone Arledge, President of ABC Sports, called for the bugles as he sat in the control room in Montreal producing coverage of the XXI Olympic Games.

Then, momentarily, millions of television sets across the United States erupted with the inspiring sound that seemed to leap to the top of the music charts in Olympic years — "Olympic Fanfare," an excerpt from "Bugler's Dream."

It happened several times during each of the Olympic telecasts. In fact, "Olympic Fanfare" has been part of the network's Summer and Winter Olympic coverage since the 1964 Winter Games in Innsbruck when it was established as the Olympic theme shortly before the Games began.

If it hadn't been for Arledge's determination to use music that possessed a specific Olympian flavor, there's no telling what the musical theme would have been.

Before leaving for Innsbruck in 1964, the Emmy Award-winning Executive Producer was feeling somewhat uneasy about the music that already had been prepared. He began searching for some new music instead and, as a result, was late arriving in Innsbruck.

The day before he left for the Games, Arledge asked Jack Kelly in the ABC engineering department to choose from the music library albums that somehow would symbolize the grandeur of the Games. Kelly brought him six records, but he listened to only one and was sold immediately on "Bugler's Dream."

"Bugler's Dream" was arranged by Leo Arnaud from a series of classic fanfares and recorded many years ago on Capitol Records by the orchestra of the late Felix Slatkin. It was re-recorded after the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich on Angel Records, a Capitol subsidiary.

Kroffts Sign Long-Range Contract

ABC-TV has signed a long-range multimillion-dollar, exclusive agreement with Sid and Marty Krofft Television Productions, Inc., for development and production of prime time specials, movies, pilots and series, it was announced recently by Michael D. Eisner, Senior Vice President, Prime Time Production and Development, ABC-TV.

Mr. Eisner termed the agreement "a unique step in ABC's desire to bring additional creativity and innovation to all family programs in our prime time programming schedule. As creators, Sid and Marty Krofft are leaders in our industry. Their achievement in the area of live-action children's programming have long been recognized, and, in fact, will continue on

"This agreement with them is designed to capitalize on their acknowledged expertise, to expand their creative input into prime time on ABC, and to extend our leadership in the Family Hour," Mr. Eisner said.

He added that the new agreement with the Kroffts is in addition to this past season's highly successful "Donny & Marie" variety series, which the Kroffts will continue to produce in prime time in the coming season.

Sid and Marty Krofft, whose family have been puppeteers for 200 years in Europe, began their business careers in the United States with their "Les Poupees de Paris" adult puppet shows at the Seattle and New York World's Fairs. They gained national fame on television in 1969 with their first fantasy show, combining live actors and life-size puppets, "H. R. Pufnstuf." The success of the show led to the theatrical feature film, "Pufnstuf."

The Kroffts produced many other highly successful network television series for children, including "The Bugaloos," "Lidsville," "Sigmund and the Sea Monsters," "Land of the Lost," "Lost Saucer" and "Far Out Space Nuts."

In addition to television production, the Kroffts recently opened "The World of Sid and Marty Krofft," the first indoor highrise world of fantasy.

Carroll Has New Show

Telly Savalas, star of "Kojak," singer Jon Lucien, and special guest star Sammy Davis Jr. join multi-talented actress-singer Diahann Carroll on the premiere of her new summer series, "The Diahann Carroll Show," Saturday, Aug. 14, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

Miss Carroll opens the series with a solo, "This Is It," then demonstrates the humorous plit of the working girl, who, in this case, works for an airline.

Telly Savalas solos with his musical theme song, "Who Loves Ya, Baby?," then joins Miss Carroll in a sketch about the problems of computer dating.

Sammy Davis Jr. solos with "John the Baptist," then later duets with Miss Carroll in a medley of tunes from "Porgy and Bess."

Miss Carroll also sings "He Was Too Good to Me," then together with guest Jon Lucien and a chorus of dancers and singers she presents a lavish production number of songs with a South American flavor. She closes the show with her theme song, "To Be Free to Be Who You Are."

Television is not a new medium for Diahann Carroll. She won an Emmy nomination for a dramatic role in "Naked City," and starred in her own series, "Julia." She has also appeared on "The Strollin' Twenties," "The Danny Kaye Show," and numerous other TV variety series.

Born in the Bronx, the daughter of a subway conductor, Diahann wanted to be a singer from the time she was a little girl. At age 10, she won a Metropolitan Opera Scholarship which led to her acceptance into the high school of Music and Art. Following high school and not yet certain whether she wanted a show business career, the practical high school graduate enrolled in New York University to study sociology.

But performing was already foremost in her mind and soon after entering N.Y.U., Diahann launched her singing career with an appearance on the "Chance of a Lifetime" TV show. Within a year she was a full-fledged nightclub star.

DAHANN CARROLL.—The sparkling and vibrant entertainer, starts off her new summer series with songs from "Porgy and Bess" and a number of comedy sketches, when "The Diahann Carroll Show" premieres on Saturday, August 14 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

'Sharks' Encores

Captain Jacques Cousteau's interest in sharks preceded "Jaws" and the current "shark mania" by a matter of years. "Sharks" was the premiere program of the famous "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" series in 1968.

"Sharks" will have an encore presentation Sunday, Aug. 8, 7 to 8 p.m., on the ABC series, "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau."

Filed on location in the Red Sea, the Indian Ocean and the Gulf of Aden, "Sharks" was hailed by critics as "the most beautiful terrifying and poetic film of the undersea world ever shown on television." It is also believed to have been the first filmed record of sharks in a "feeding frenzy."

Dr. Eugenie Clark, noted American ichthyologist and shark expert, accompanied Cousteau aboard the Calypso on the expedition, setting up a number of experiments on shark behavior. Dr. Clark, who has devoted many years to shark research, has been associated with the Cape Haze Marine Laboratory in Florida. She is the author of "The Lady and the Sharks." The experiments, besides providing a base around which to film the seas' most feared predator in action, were designed to test out methods for protecting downed flyers and shipwreck victims from shark attack. Special equipment for this phase of the expedition included a pair of jet-propelled one-man submarines designed by Cousteau's team, and a dummy named Arthur, designed to "bleed" when submerged.

In addition to capturing the fury of the feeding frenzy on film from the comparative security of a steel diving cage, Cousteau's crew of 30 expert divers and cameramen probed sharks' habits in eating and attacking, and their reactions when they themselves are the victims, in turn, of fishermen. The present-day predator is compared with its ancestor of some 400 million years ago, whose mouth could easily surround a station wagon. The evolution of the shark, one of the ocean's most ancient creatures, is examined.

The Search Ends

After a lengthy search, motion picture and TV actress Rosemary Forsyth has been signed to take over the key role of Dr. Laura Horton in NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," Mondays - Fridays, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

She replaces Susan Oliver in the role, that of a psychiatrist with her own personal problems. Ms. Oliver left last May, after nine months in the series, to produce and direct a motion picture.

Ms. Forsyth began her television career in New York City, went to Hollywood under contract to Universal Studios, and remained on the West Coast to continue in television.

She has had guest-starring roles on the "Petrocelli" and "Joe Forrester" series and appeared in the TV movie, "My Father's House." Her motion pictures include "Shenandoah," "The War Lords" and "Texas Across the River."

Overtaken By Tragedy

Jennie is powerless against Randolph's debilitating illness in "Triumph and Tragedy," the fourth episode in the TV series about Winston Churchill's American mother, "Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill," which will air Sunday, Aug. 8, at 10 p.m. on PBS. Lee Remick stars as Jennie.

Randolph, now Chancellor of the Exchequer and Leader of the House, draws public attention as the most prominent statesman of the time, certain to become Prime Minister. But as his career soars, his attitude toward Jennie grows colder. The Duchess of Marlborough, meanwhile, is annoyed at Jennie because of her mounting friendship with Charles Kinsky.

Jennie's joy at Randolph's homecoming from a campaign trip quickly turns to despair as he brusquely rejects her love. Distraught, she is convinced that Randolph's behavior can only be explained by the presence of another woman in his affections, and she decides to confront him directly.

In a dramatic and moving scene, Randolph confesses to Jennie that he is suffering from syphilis; her shock at this revelation turns immediately to sympathy and she tenderly comforts her weeping and broken-spirited husband. Ronald Pickup masterfully portrays the deteriorating Randolph, a man of remarkable energy and brilliance, whose faculties desert him just at the peak of his success.

To everyone's shock, Randolph suddenly resigns from the Cabinet. Having failed in a desperate bid for the power that he knows will shortly elude him forever, the pitiful man steals himself to wait for death. He still attempts to make speeches in the House of Commons, but his memory lapses and his speech begins to fail. He is, as Jennie and their friends comment, "dying by inches in public."

When it becomes apparent that Randolph's end is only a matter of time, Jennie finally accepts Kinsky as a lover. She remains a constant comfort to Randolph however, who by this time erupts into fits of anger at everybody, including Winston.

While Jennie loves Kinsky "as some people care for alcohol or opium," she cannot disregard her duty to Randolph, and she takes her husband on a world tour, to spare him from public scorn.

Reese Stars In Comedy

Della Reese and Red Buttons star in comedies NBC has scheduled for the 8 to 9 p.m. time slot Monday, Aug. 9, on Channel 6.

Ms. Reese stars as Flo, the owner-operator of a modest dockside hotel and restaurant. When she and her teenage son, Louis (Eric Laneville), inherit a tugboat from one of their "late" boarders, they think their financial troubles are over in "Flo's Place" (8 to 8:30).

Flo and Louis plan to sell the tugboat, pay off the hotel mortgage and have some money left over to help finance Louis' planned medical school education. They quickly discover, however, that along with owning the boat, they have also inherited the numerous debts of its previous owner.

Oscar winner Red Buttons

(Best Supporting Actor, "Sayonara," 1957) and Harold Gould play senior citizens who share living quarters but have little else in common in "Flannery and Quilt," to be rebroadcast from 8:30 to 9.

Pat Finley, Howard Storm and Michael Lembeck are featured.

Luke Flannery's daughter, Rose, moves out of the house when she marries Kevin. Lonely, widowed Luke rents Rose's bedroom to another widower, Samuel Quilt.

Flannery, who has a pet parakeet, and Quilt, who grows plants, soon find their outlooks on just about every subject are in direct contrast. However, the resulting arguments ironically cement their friendship.

Rose is portrayed by Ms. Finley, and Storm plays her husband, Kevin.

DELLA REESE STARS—Della Reese stars as the owner-operator of a dockside hotel and restaurant and Eric Laneville plays her son in "Flo's Place," Monday, August 9 on Channel 6 (8-8:30 p.m.).

Kavner Changed From Typist To Star

The day Julie Kavner was notified that she had landed the much-sought-after role of Valerie Harper's younger sister, Brenda, in the comedy series "Rhoda," seen Mondays, 8 to 8:30 p.m. on CBS-TV, she was busy filing and typing as a senior clerk typist at the UCLA Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning.

"I've always had jobs like that," Miss Kavner pointed out. "My role on 'Rhoda' was the first time I've ever been paid to act."

In this week's episode, Rhoda drills Brenda on how to land a man when Brenda's 'Mr. Right' seems to be taking her for granted.

Julie has done well in the role of Brenda, a gal who — like Brenda — is single and a clerical worker.

Although Miss Kavner is new to the ranks of the professional actor, her training includes college theater, the famous Old Globe Theater in San Diego, Calif., where she once won a best-actress award, and little theater production in Los Angeles.

"To support myself, I had to take jobs like being a receptionist in a real-estate office or breakfast cook in a sorority house," she notes. "Once I even got fired from a job as a cocktail waitress. The owner said I looked like everybody's daughter and no one wanted to come into the bar and see his daughter."

Miss Kavner goes on to point out that when she auditioned for "Rhoda" it was not the first time she had tried to become "one of the family."

"I auditioned for the part of Rhoda's other sister, Debbie, for an episode of 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show,' but they changed the concept of the character and cast another actress.

However, when the part of Brenda was created for the new series, the producers remembered Miss Kavner and called her in. Thus far, the impact of performing in a television series hasn't affected the actress.

"I don't think about the size of the television audience," she admits, "I just think about doing my part as best I can for the 300 people who sit in the studio audience each week.

"Besides," she happily adds, "I can't get over the fact that I'm actually being paid for doing the thing in the world I love most — acting."

Watches People

When asked if he thinks dramatic lessons are helpful to would-be actors, Jack Warden replies, "Could be, but I never had any."

The Emmy-winning actor and star of "Jigsaw John" (Mondays, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC Ch. 6-7), stepped onto a stage after being mustered out of the Army 30 years ago and real well enough to land a key role in a touring play.

"I had absolutely no experience, just a desire to become an actor," Warden recalls. "An Army buddy had introduced me to a Broadway dialogue director who recommended me for the part of the guy who doesn't get the girl in a touring company of 'There's Always Julie.'

"It was on-the-job training, and that worked for me. I learned a lot on that tour.

"I don't really know how to explain that surprisingly early break," says Warden. "I had self-confidence and I had many early life experiences that enabled me to absorb what I observed about people and situations. And, then, there was that broken leg."

Jack was referring to a World War II injury he received in a parachute jump. "It was serious enough to keep me in a hospital for more than a year, which is a long time to confine a kid in his early 20s. I had plenty of time to read."

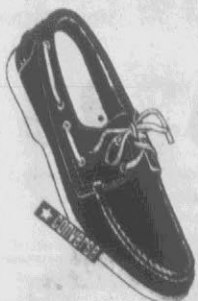

What Warden read mostly were plays. "I enjoyed the form," he says, "and I identified with many of the characters. But then I'd always been a people watcher."

Blythe Guest Stars On MASH

MASH LOVERS—The appearance of an old flame, nurse Cariye Walton (guest star Blythe Danner), rekindles the sparks of a romance with Hawkeye (Alan Alda) on "M*A*S*H," Tuesday, August 10 (9-9:30 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11.

Blythe Danner guest stars as an old 'romance' of Hawkeye who comes back to haunt him on this week's episode of "M*A*S*H" Tuesday, Aug. 10, at 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Currently, Blythe is hotly engaged in the campaign to wipe out pollution, and the tall beauty believes this should be a fundamental concern of all mothers today.

"We can't let our children grow up breathing smog," she says with emphasis. "I don't believe there's any human rights more important than the right to breathe clean air."

"My greatest concern as a parent is what shape the world will be in by the time my children are grown."

Blythe's anti-pollution activities are centered in her Brentwood neighborhood in West Los Angeles, through the West Side Environmental Association. Recycling is the group's big project right now, and Blythe devotes all her free time to rounding up paper, cans and bottles.

"I've even urged MGM to print the scripts on recyclable paper," she smiles. "This may seem like a little thing, but we can't afford to consider any phase of ecology as unimportant or not worth the time."

"Our air, our water, our resources are at zero level and we can't postpone action any longer. We're already a generation late."

Blythe and her husband Bruce Paltrow, a writer and producer, bought their home in Brentwood when she signed to co-star with Ken Howard in the ABC series, "Adam's Rib," in 1973. As a New Yorker, it was impossible to commute during the long filming season, and the couple could find nothing suitable to rent.

"I'm a New Englander at heart," Blythe admits, "but I'm beginning to enjoy California, although I miss the change of seasons. I've even got a little garden — and I'm really sincere when I say that I believe everyone should start to grow some of their own produce to help overcome the world's food shortage."

Blythe is furnishing the house herself, piece by piece, as she finds something she likes. She describes the decor as "early hodge-podge" although her preferences run toward Early American and some French antiques.

At the moment, Blythe and her husband have no pets although she says she grew up with at least one or two always around.

"We had a nice dog but it ran away and we were heart-broken," Blythe says. "We won't get a pet again until we're settled permanently and the yard is completely fenced."

This Better Be It

Alex Rocco and Anne Meara star as newlyweds for whom marriage is not a new experience and who want to make their second try work, in "This Better Be It," a half-hour comedy to be shown on Tuesday, Aug. 10, 9:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

Harry and Annie Bell (Rocco and Miss Meara) have little trouble adjusting to their life together with Harry's pompous young son and Annie's outspoken young daughter. But Annie is troubled by the upcoming marriage of Harry's 20-year-old daughter Diana. Her wedding will be one of the first events together for the whole "new family," and Annie doesn't want to go. She feels her presence will put a strain on everyone, with Harry's ex-wife present. The real family strain, however, is created by Annie's decision not to attend.

Miss Meara, who has been signed for a recurring role in the Network's popular "Rhoda" series, starting this fall, is the distaff member of Stiller and Meara. She and her husband, Jerry Stiller, are noted for their comedy work in clubs and on variety programs.

This past season, Miss Meara starred in the "Kate McShane" series, winning an Emmy nomination for her role. She has appeared in the feature films "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "The Out of Towners."

Rocco began his career on "Divorce Court." Although he is well remembered for his role in "The Godfather," that of a Las Vegas gambler, he has also played bodyguards in three Al Capone movies, including "The St. Valentine's Day Massacre."

His other film credits include "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," "The Venetian Affair" and "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins." Rocco has made many television guest appearances and recently starred in the "Three For the Road" series.

"This Better Be It" was directed by Richard Kinon from a script by the creators, Lila Garrett and Lynn Roth.

'Hard Contract' To Be Presented

James Coburn stars as an international assassin, moving coolly through the scenic beauties and exotic menace of Spain's Costal del Sol, Tangier and the charm of Brussels, in a society in which life has little meaning and death even less, "Hard Contract," which presents a hard-eyed look at men, women and murder, airs as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Aug. 13, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channels 3-5-12.

a world-weary woman who prefers lies and deception to the hard realities that have made her a rootless wanderer.

In the motion picture, the first directorial effort of writer S. Lee Pogostin, John Cunningham (Coburn) is an American "businessman" whose business is killing people for money, no questions asked. His "hard contract" calls for the elimination of three men in different parts of Europe — men he has never seen. On his arrival in Torremolinos he meets Sheila Metcalf (Lee Remick), a jet-set beauty who chooses to live a life as emotionless as his own, traveling restlessly with an English aristocrat and her companion (Lilli Palmer and Claude Dauphin), and a guilt-ridden ex-Nazi (Patrick Magee). The meeting changes her life — and his — when she finds herself falling in love with this mysterious man, and he goes about his murderous business with a nagging conscience he thought had been left behind.

Lee Remick is also starred as

Tyson Plays Pittman

"I have to soak up a character, slip into her skin, before I can play her," says Emmy-winning actress Cicely Tyson, who literally put on another skin for her portrayal of a 110-year-old former slave.

"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," the story of one woman's long and eventful life and her courageous stand for the freedom and dignity of her people, will be rebroadcast as a special presentation on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Aug. 11, 9 to 11:10 p.m. on CBS Channel 3N-9-11. The drama, which has become one of the most honored programs on television, was originally presented Jan. 31, 1974.

Four months before filming started, make-up artists Stan Winston and Rick Baker began working with Miss Tyson to create her make-up, made from wafer-thin layers of foam rubber, that would 'age' the actress. For their work, Winston and Baker also won an Emmy bringing to a total of nine the awards bestowed on the special by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

To create the make-up, Winston and Baker first made plaster casts of Miss Tyson's young, natural face and models of the faces she would assume as Jane Pittman at 75, 90 and finally 110 years of age. Then they designed the thin overlays that would be applied to each part of the actress' face, as well as to her hands and wrists. Other individual touches included separately applied eyebrow and facial hairs, yellow contact lenses that darkened and dulled her eyes, and a gold tooth. Application of the make-up during filming took six hours each day, starting early in the morning.

To test the authenticity of the JANE PITTMAN—"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," the two-hour Emmy award-winning special about a woman whose life spanned the slavery period of the Civil War to the civil rights movement of the 1960s will be rebroadcast Wednesday, August 11 (9-11:10 p.m.) on Channel 9-11:10 p.m. Actress Cicely Tyson, shown counter clockwise, being transformed into Miss Pittman had to sit still six hours each morning.

make-up, Miss Tyson first went before the cameras as a 90-year-old woman.

"I was nervous about seeing myself looking so realistically old," she said later, "but as I started to be Jane for the first time, I began to feel what it's like to have had such a long, hard life behind you.

"The make-up not only made me look old, but actually helped me feel old. As the application of it went on each morning, I could almost feel the years seeping into my bones - and experience seeping into my head and heart."

Major Drama Being Developed

A major drama based on the stunning July 4th rescue by Israeli commandos of 103 hostages held by terrorists at Uganda's Entebbe airport has been commissioned for presentation on NBC-TV.

The program will be a complete chronology of the saga — the hijacking of a Paris-bound Air France airbus on June 27; its ultimate landing at Entebbe airport the following day; the ensuing negotiations for the release of the passengers; and the daring action by Israeli paratroops and elite infantrymen which freed the 103 hostages.

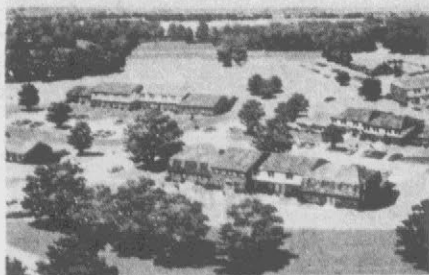

World reaction to the Israeli rescue operations — including words of approval from President Ford and other world leaders — may be included. Ford expressed the "great satisfaction" of Americans over the rescue of the hostages who, he said, "have been saved and a senseless act of terrorism thwarted."

This original play is the latest in a series of dramas drawn from the pages of recent history to be presented by the Network.

Success Is Never Too Late

ATTORNEY—Oscar winning John Houseman stars as an attorney with a unique style, in "Hazard's People," drama to be rebroadcast Wednesday, August 11 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Acting, and the success that goes with it, has come late in life to John Houseman, and he's enjoying every minute of it.

On the heels of his Academy Award-winning performance in "The Paper Chase," as the professor of law who struck fear in the hearts of his students, Houseman is playing another legal role, this time a flamboyant crime attorney, in "Hazard's People," to be rebroadcast Wednesday, Aug. 11, at 8 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11. "I enjoy being on the other side of the camera, after so many years of the responsibilities of producing and directing," Houseman acknowledges. "John Hazard is an interesting character who has surrounded himself with vital young people just out of law school. I was captivated by the role."

In addition to his association with Orson Welles, in founding the Mercury Theater on Broadway (1937) and in the even more publicized Mercury Theater of the air, Houseman produced Archibald MacLeish's first play, "Panic," directed Leslie Howard's production of "Hamlet," in 1936; directed the opera, "The Devil and Daniel Webster;" and directed such notable Broadway Shakespearean vehicles as "King Lear," with Louis Calhern, in 1950, and "Coriolanus," with Robert Ryan, in 1954.

Artistic Director of the American Shakespeare Festival, in Stratford, Conn., Houseman served in the same capacity with the theater group at UCLA. And, for two years, he was producing director of the APA Repertory Company.

Moreover, he had been associate professor of drama at Vassar College, lecturer in drama at Barnard College, regent's lecturer in theater arts at UCLA, and Director of the Drama Division of the Julliard School in New York City.

Shortly after a wartime assignment as Chief of the Overseas Radio Bureau of the Office of War Information, Houseman turned his attention to Hollywood. There, interspersed with stage ventures, he produced motion pictures "Letter from an Unknown Woman," "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Julius Caesar," "Executive Suite," "Lust for Life" and "Two Weeks in Another Town."

Houseman has also made his bold imprint on television, producing "The Seven Lively Arts," "The Great Adventure" and seven dramas for "CBS Playhouse 90."

Now Houseman, the producer-director, commands choice roles as an actor, something he couldn't have conceived of as a young hopeful behind the scenes on Broadway.

"I was much too nervous then to be an actor," says the dignified-looking Oscar winner. "Only the maturity of years could bring that about."

Ray Signs With McMillan

Martha Raye will play character who means well but is a little dinky. In other words, Agatha, Police Commissioner McMillan's (series star Rock Hudson) housekeeper — a well-meaning busybody — in the new season's "McMillan" dramas on "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie."

Raye originated the role of Agatha, sister of former McMillan maid, Mildred (played by Nancy Walker), in the series last February in an episode titled "Greed." She received an Emmy nomination for her performance.

Commenting on the role when she first played it, she said: "Agatha is a busybody, an eccentric, warm - hearted when three gansters devise a scheme whereby the police will become the unwitting "executioners" of a stool pigeon, he races to prevent it. (repeat, 60 min)

TENTH TIME AROUND
For the 10th consecutive year, Jim Nabors will guest star on Carol Burnett's initial show.

THIEF?—Bonnie Ebsen, daughter of series star Buddy Ebsen, guests as a calculating young girl intent on helping her boyfriend rob her wealthy friends, on this week's episode of "Barnaby Jones" will be telecast Thursday, August 12 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 9-11.

Ebsen's Daughter Wants To Forget It

Bonnie Ebsen is an attractive, well-educated actress who is gradually forgetting and overcoming the built-in stigma of being "Buddy Ebsen's daughter."

She has appeared in numerous television shows, including two episodes of "Barnaby Jones." One of these episodes will be rebroadcast Thursday, Aug. 12, at 10 p.m. on CBS Channels 9-11. Although she has been in the limelight all of her life due to her famous father, she is now overcoming his shadow. But, instead of begrudging his influence, she's utilizing it in building her own career.

"My father has always tried not to influence me," Bonnie says, "because becoming an actress is a decision you have to make yourself or you'll spend a lot of time wondering if it was the right decision."

"So my Dad sort of sat back and watched me flounder through all kinds of strange things, and not once did he step in or offer direction. Sometimes I really hated him for it, and I'm just now beginning to realize that it was the healthiest thing he did for me. My Dad could have helped me long before he did, and sometimes I sort of think that he helped me too soon as it is.

"However, now I'm finally feeling my own strength and weaknesses as an individual. When you're confident in yourself and you don't let the resentments get to you, it all falls into place. You don't overreact to everything, you don't feel you have to go one way or the other to be a certain way. You're just yourself, and your father or mother is whoever they happen to be.

"I think it's strengthened me a lot, or it's made me aware more of the implications of being sort of in the limelight, or having a reflection on me. It's given me more determination to find out who I am, being who I am instead of being Buddy Ebsen's daughter."

Bonnie admits she flirted with the idea of changing her last name, but decided it wouldn't gain her anything. She also acknowledges that she lied to herself for a long time about her aspirations as an actress.

"I guess I thought, 'How could I ever match my Dad?' So, I'd say to myself, 'All I want to be is a working actress."

Stars In 'Klute'

Jane Fonda stars as Bree Daniels, a call girl whose life is threatened, in "Klute," a psychological-suspense drama on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" Aug. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7. Miss Fonda, co-starring with Donald Sutherland, received the 1971 Best Actress Academy Award for her performance.

When Pennsylvania research scientist Tom Gruneman vanishes, the only clue to his disappearance is a letter from him to Manhattan call girl Bree Daniels.

After several months with no results from a police investigation, Gruneman's best friend, private detective John Klute (Sutherland), goes to New York to conduct his own inquiry.

Klute rents an apartment in Bree's building and by tapping her phone, learns that she is struggling to break away from prostitution through analysis and the pursuit of an acting-modeling career.

Initially aloof, Bree eventually admits to Klute that someone has been following her and making obscene phone calls. Klute, linking these events to Gruneman's disappearance, convinces Bree to help him in his investigation.

HOLLYWOOD — It may be hard to believe, but William Christopher, Father Mulcahy on "MASH," was driving his car into the entrance of Universal Studios when another motorist collided with his car. No one was injured, but the second driver, a woman tourist, was so excited about meeting the actor that she insisted he and the investigating police officer pose for a snap shot.

Telly Savalas is suing German TV station ZDF for marketing his appearance on a German-based variety-talk show to a UHF station in Los Angeles. No details on the suit were immediately available.

Mark Shera, who has gone from a supporting role on "S.W.A.T." to a similar role on "Barnaby Jones"; for the new season, is an avid lover of music — especially that of Barbara Deutsch, an up and coming vocalist who is also Mark's girlfriend.

Deidre Hall, who spent three years on and off daytime TV's "The Young & Restless" before joining "Days of Our Lives" in a regular role, is an identical twin. Her sister, Ann, a school teacher in Florida, is spending the summer in Hollywood, and when the sisters are together a lot of heads turn.

John Schuck of "McMillan" who'll also star in his own new series this fall, says he's ready to find a wife and settle down. And the first step in that direction came recently when he bought a spacious hillside home with high-beamed ceilings, stone floors in the kitchen and dining room, and with a beautiful terrace and swimming pool.

Mac Davis and Glen Campbell, denying that there was ever a hatchet to be buried, buried it with on-stage comments citing trash newspapers, malicious gossip columnists and an irresponsible press for trying to make trouble between them and sensationalizing their personal lives.

"Ode to Billy Joe" wasn't the first movie Robby Benson and Glynnis O'Connor teamed up for. They were also paired for "Jeremy."

Old Friend Is Involved In Case

Chief of Detectives Amy Prentiss, portrayed by Jessica Walter, wrestles with an unwanted dilemma involving an old family friend suspected of industrial espionage and homicide in "Baptism of Fire," to be rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Thursday, Aug. 12 at 11:30 p.m., on Channels 9-11. guest stars are William Shatner, Peter Haskell and Marielare Costello.

Ross Whitman (Haskell, a close friend of Amy's late husband, is accused of industrial espionage and homicide by a hard-nosed cop, Lt. Bill Parkins (Shatner), who is acting on 'gut' feelings rather than hard facts. Chief Prentiss must decide if Whitman is a victim of unnecessary harassment or if Parkins has a case.

Meanwhile, the chief directs the trackdown of a man bomber (Mills Watson), while trying to answer charges — by a councilman (Hector Elias) seeking re-elzctin — that her sex is causing dissension in the all-male department.

Costello plays Enid Feeny, wife of the bomber suspect.

Various Stars Are Osmonds' Guests

Barbara Eden, the Ice Vanities and special guest star Jack Albertson are the spotlighted performers on ABC-TV's music-comedy-variety hour, "Donny & Marie," Friday, Aug. 13, 8 to 9 p.m., on Channel 3W,5-12.
 In a fanciful waterfall spectacle, co-hosts and stars Donny and Marie Osmond are joined by Jack Albertson and Barbara Eden. In the colorful number, Marie appears as a butterfly, Miss Eden as a water nymph, Jack Albertson as King Neptune and Donny as a creature from the deep. The spotlight then shifts to Jimmy Osmond, who sings a number in a style reminiscent of Frank Sinatra.
 In another sketch, Jack Albertson and Barbara Eden impersonate Donny and Marie as they might appear some 50 years from now. Donny is next seen in the role of an assistant to a European comedic magician, the Great Tomsoni. The Ice Vanities sports number this week salutes hydroplaning.

 Former song-and-dance man Jack Albertson then leads the cast in a smashing Broadway finale.
 Donny and Marie team up with "High Tide," "Poor Butterfly," "Butterfly," "I'm Glad I'm Not a Moth" and "Listen to the Music."
 Donny solos with "I Write the Songs," "In the Summertime" and "A Time for Us," and Jack Albertson sings "Cool Water," "Broadway Melody" and "Give My Regards to Broadway."
 Marie sings "One Way Ticket to Anywhere" and then joins Jimmy for "Consider Yourself."

Three-Part Comedy Airs

A three-part comedy presentation, "Love, Honor and/or Obey", airs in three separate segments Friday, Aug. 13, from 8 to 9:30 p.m. on NBC Channels 6-7-28.

The first segment, "For Better or Worse" (8 to 8:30) stars Jack Weston and Marge Redmond as Jack and Marge Holland, who celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary and end up visiting a marriage counselor.

The couple invite Jack's business partner, Steve Weber, and his girlfriend, Bambi (Conrad Janis and Nancy McCormick), to their anniversary dinner, and have one of their "famous" arguments. Steve and Bambi convince the Hollans to visit a marriage counselor, and all is serene until Jack and Marge try an experiment in touching.

Weston and Ms. Redmond are husband and wife in private life. Patty Duke Astin and John Astin, who are also married in private life, star as a Hollywood couple who write TV scripts in "Phillip and Barbara" (8:30 to 9), part two of the presentation.

As the result of Barbara's refusal to wear glasses, several minor accidents occur — she gives Phillip "stay awake" pills instead of aspirin — and she finally relents and visits an eye doctor.

Feeling sorry for her because she has to wear glasses, Phillip suggests they follow a romantic notion from one of their scripts and be married a second time.

The idea appeals to Barbara until she discovers that Phillip plans to use their remarriage in a tax-deduction scheme.

The concluding segment of "Love, Honor and/or Obey" stars James Coco as Charlie. A salesman who was recently divorced, Charlie moves to New York's Upper East Side in search of the sweet life of a "swinging single" but discovers that he cannot quite put his ex-wife out of his life in "Your Place or Mine" (9 to 9:30).

Poor Charlie is not permitted to enjoy his new-found bachelorhood. His sister, Angela, tries to arrange a reconciliation and his neighbors, Dorothy and Harriet, offer an unsolicited female point-of-view on the breakup of his marriage. His friends Leonard (Andrew Duncan), a married-but-aspiring swinger, and Dennis (Simon Deckard), who is pathologically dedicated to what he calls "gambits," only convince him that the pursuit of pleasure is really more depressing than he imagined.

At last, Charlie's ex-wife, Marilyn (Joy Garrett), arrives at his apartment and the moment of truth is at hand.

A LIGHT TOUCH—Jack Weston and Marge Redmond star as a couple who celebrate their 20th anniversary by visiting a marriage counselor whose suggestion that they learn to touch more produces disastrous results in "For Better or Worse," a segment of the three-in-one comedy presentation "Love, Honor and/or Obey," to be colorcast Friday, August 13 (8-9:30 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Highly Acclaimed Program Returns

"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," the highly-rated two-hour drama special starring Cicely Tyson as the fictional 110-year-old former slave who recounts her life story, returns for an encore on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies" Aug. 11, 9 to 11:10 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

In discussing the Emmy Award-winning special, Director John Kory, likes to give credit where it's due. In this case, he feels it goes to the strong supporting cast, many of whom were local, inexperienced performers.

"Using inexperienced actors sometimes requires a little extra effort, and you're taking a chance on them," Kory allowed. "But their faces were so real, their responses in a scene were so genuine, that it definitely paid off. Valerie O'Dell, who played Jane as a young girl, is a good example of that."

"The importance of casting includes the professionals, too, of course," Kory continues. "Cicely sometimes surprised me with her thorough, almost intuitive creation of the old Jane Pittman. She was already acting old when she came in front of the camera, and I even hesitate to say 'acting' — she was old! She needed very little direction."

"I really believe that 80 percent of the secret of directing is in the casting," Kory concludes, modestly. "When the right people are in front of the camera, I don't have to worry about my job behind the camera."

Screen script Tracy Keenan Wynn, who penned the script for "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," thoroughly enjoyed witnessing the location filming of the special.

"Seeing the scenes and characters come to life is the greatest reward in writing a script."

Wynn's fascination with the location filming did not stem from unfamiliarity with the acting craft — his father is actor Keenan Wynn and his grandfather was the late comedian Ed Wynn. And he has seen his scripts produced before, notably the praised television films "The Glass House" and "Tribes."

His interest in the production did stem from Wynn's involvement with the drama he had adapted from the Ernest J. Gaines novel.

"This is about a great woman, but Jane Pittman represents much more," Wynn said. She reveals to you the survival of the human spirit, a strength that transcends color or time.

Cottage Is Haunted

What would you do if you bought a 200-year-old seaside cottage and found, to your utter consternation, that a ghostly, wraith-like sea captain, came with it?

You'd probably find yourself in a virtual state of shock, wouldn't you? Well, that's what happened to Tom Rankin, the new police chief of the New England village of Jacob's Neck and his family in "Jeremiah of Jacob's Neck," airing Friday, Aug. 13, at 8 p.m., on CBS Channel 9.

The script was written by the creator, Peter Benchley, whose best-selling novel "Jaws" became the most profitable film in motion picture history.

Keenan Wynn stars as cantankerous Captain Jeremiah Starbuck who lost his ship, Tempest, when it went down off the New England coast two centuries earlier, carrying a gold cargo worth millions.

The ghostly Captain Starbuck is visible only to legitimate deedholders of the property he has occupied so long, as Police Chief Rankin, played by co-star Ron Masak, quickly discovers.

Wynn's long acting career includes the motion pictures "The Hucksters," "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," and "The Americanization of Emily," television appearances on "Playhouse 90" and a TV movie, "Terror In the Sky."

Martin, Lewis Are Stars Of Late Movie

Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, when they were still a young comedy team without separate careers, star in "Sailor Beware," which will be presented as the "CBS Late Movie" Friday, Aug. 13, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 9-11.

The 1972 movie also features the then-unknown Vince Edwards.

When the movie first opened, the New York Times critic noted: "Whatever it is that Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis have that makes people howl with laughter and toss with rocking frenzy in their chairs, there must be plenty of it in their new picture. This coolly objective reviewer is duty-bound to report that people were doing plenty of both."

In "Sailor Beware," Dean and Jerry play two misfit midshipmen, with Jerry passing a physical despite the fact that his blood is clear and his heartbeat doesn't register. (He also proves his unseaworthiness when he pulls the plug from the bottom of a boat when told to bail it out, and sits on top of a submerging submarine.)

Dean does his best to help his hopeless shipmate although songs and lovely ladies keep distracting him, and the only real loser is the United States Navy.

PLAY SLATED FOR TV

"I Have a Dream," the Broadway-bound stage play starring Billy Dee Williams as Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., will be a two-hour TV special.

Robert Greenwald, who conceived and directed the play, also directed the TV version, which has already been filmed. Utilizing five cameras, the filming took place during a regular performance at the Shubert Theatre in Philadelphia.

Tony Award winner, Melba Moore, will promote "international understanding among people" as spokesperson for "Big Blue Marble," the Emmy and Peabody Award-winning children's TV series.

Ms. Moore will also act as a consultant and advisor to the series which is seen Saturday, at 7:30 a.m., on Channel 6. Tentative plans call for her to host several special events and appear in some future "Big Blue Marble" segments.

Ms. Moore, who taught school in New Jersey before becoming an actress, says her "Big Blue Marble" duties give her the chance to combine her performing talents with her love for teaching.

Because the show is a public service presentation, she adds, many of the time slots it gets are inappropriate for children. "I want the children and parents to know that 'Big Blue Marble' is a tremendously beneficial program that should be watched. Hopefully, we'll get better viewing hours for the show so that even more people can enjoy it."

Ms. Moore won her Tony for her performance in "Purlie." She has also appeared on Broadway in "Hair." She recently won plaudits for her portrayal of Harriet Tubman on ABC's "The American Woman: Portraits of Courage." Her newest recording for Buddha Records, "This Is It," is a sure-fire million seller that should turn gold very soon.

"Big Blue Marble," shown without commercial interruption as a public service by International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation on 148 domestic stations, received both the Emmy and Peabody Awards for 1976.

The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences awarded the Program its Emmy for the outstanding daytime entertainment children's series. The Peabody, known as the "Pulitzer Prize" of the electronic media, was awarded to "Big Blue Marble" for being "the only children's series to positively contribute to international understanding." The jury cited it as "a program which makes children very much aware of the world which lies beyond the borders of the United States."

"Big Blue Marble" has won the prized Silver Hugo at the Chicago International Film Festival as the "Best Children's Television Series of 1975." It has also won honors in the Hollywood Festival of World Television, U.S. Industrial Film Festival, Columbus Film Festival, Long Island International Film Festival, International Film and TV Festival — New York, and the Virgin Islands International Film Festival.

The series is appearing or scheduled to appear in 28 foreign countries and areas, with plans calling for extended distribution to 40 countries this summer and to 70 countries by the end of 1977.

MARVELOUS MELBA MOORE—Multi-talented, Tony-award winner Melba Moore is the newest spokesperson and consultant for "Big Blue Marble." Ms. Moore will host several "Big Blue Marble" special events and will appear on upcoming TV shows. "Big Blue Marble" the first international TV series for children is seen Sat. on Channel 6 at 7:30 a.m.

Tennis Changes

There was a time not too many years ago when tennis was only slightly less genteel than a law party in the Hamptons, a game only for the very wealthy. The only tennis courts around were those at the country clubs or on palatial estates.

The players, with skin as white as their terribly proper clothing, couldn't work up an honest sweat if they had to. But it really didn't matter, however, because they really didn't have to hit the ball with vim or vigor. They simply batted the ball over the nets at places like Palm Beach, Forest Hills and Wimbledon, where the grip on your teacup was as important as the one on the racket.

What's more, the game didn't matter to the majority of the spectators. They identified with tennis about as well as they did with the President of Procter and Gamble. Sports heroes were, to them, those who knock baseballs over fences or boxers against the ropes. None of this sissy stuff, if you please, where all you are allowed to do was applaud ever so politely.

But spectators have changed. So has tennis. And so have the players. Evidence of the changes will be seen when "The Volvo International Tennis Tour" airs Sunday, Aug. 8, at 4 p.m. on CBS. One immediate change is the loot garnered by the winner of the tour—$100,000. Now that's a change from the engraved silver loving cups of yesteryear.

Perhaps one of the people most responsible for the drastic changes that have taken place where tennis is concerned is the tour's defending champion, Jimmy Connors.

Connors doesn't bat the ball, nor does he swing at it. He attacks it, with massive, left-handed movements full of quickness and power—two qualities that would make him a success in practically any sport. Tennis is fortunate that he didn't opt for football, baseball, or even ice hockey.

Despite what you've heard and read about Connors' questionable manners and moods, about his egotism and impudence, the desire to emulate Jimmy wouldn't be the worst thing—for kids or for American sports in general.

Tennis has been his entire life since his mother first began to throw tennis balls to him at age 2. He worked hard at the game in his early days. "Maybe 45 minutes at a time, tough workouts, then rest," he says. "I love it. The workouts always stopped at the 'eager' stage when I couldn't wait to start again. Tennis was my choice and is my life still. I used to leave school every day at noon and practice."

One can't help but wonder about where tennis would be today were it not for Connors, Ken Rosewall, Pancho Gonzales and the participants of the well-known feud, Riggs and King—to name a few—who consider tennis anything but a lawn party in the Hamptons.

CIRCUS SELECTS TOP FIVE CLOWNS

Following a recent performance in Calif., the 59 clowns of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus polled themselves on their 1975 choices for the five top clowns in all of show business.

The winners included "inspirational" Charlie Chaplin, "veteran laugh-getter" Groucho Marx and Red Skelton, to whom the clowns felt closest. Lucille Ball and Carol Burnett were also chosen because "they prove females can be as funny as males and will do anything for a laugh."

GOLDEN BEAR—Jack Nicklaus, the famous "Golden Bear," is aiming for a record-tying fifth PGA crown in the 1976 PGA Championship. ABC will televise exciting third round coverage on Saturday, August 14 from 5 to 6:30 p.m. The last leg of the Grand Slam will take place at the Congressional Country Club in Washington, D.C.

Where have you gone, Jack Nicklaus?

So rings the cry of millions of golfing enthusiasts who have watched the infamous Golden Bear fail to win one of the major tournaments in 1976. But Jack gets a final chance when he defends his title in the PGA Championship this week.

ABC Sports will provide live coverage of the exciting third round of play on Saturday, Aug. 14, from 5 to 6:30 p.m. This year's PGA will have a bicentennial flavor, as it is being played at the tough Congressional Country Club in Washington, D.C.

1975 was another typically spectacular season that golf fans have come to expect from the big, blond-haired man who many consider to be the greatest golfer in the history of the game. He collected $298,149 in winnings, finishing number one in earnings for the seventh time in his unprecedented career.

Adding further to the excitement of the year was a serious bid by Nicklaus for the Grand Slam. He captured Masters and PGA Championships, and barely finished off the top spot in the British and U.S. Opens.

"Had I won all four major championships, I might have gotten out of the game, and I don't want to quit," he said after last year's PGA victory. "I sort of enjoy golf."

And for many years, millions have enjoyed the superb play of the Columbus, Ohio native.

Youngsters like Ben Crenshaw and U.S. and Canadian Open champion Jerry Pate are beginning to challenge the older golfing veterans, especially in the major tournaments. Yet the 'older' legends like Nicklaus aren't about to be relegated to the Golfing Old Folks Home.

"If you had asked me 10 years ago if I would still be playing when I'm 35, I would have said no," Jack admitted. "But if you ask me now if I'll be playing when I'm 45, I certainly hope I am still doing it. I should have a long time ahead of me."

"As long as I have desire, I think I will improve my game. I'm a better player this summer than I have been in the past. I enjoy the game a lot and there are still some more goals I'd like to reach," he concluded.

Besides wanting to win the final major tournament of the 1976 year, Nicklaus will be attempting to deal with the Walter Hagen's record of five PGA Championships.

Twice Is Not Enough For Pittsburgh Steelers Spectacular Sports

In the rugged city of Pittsburgh, Pa., twice is not enough—not enough Super Bowl titles, that is. The Pittsburgh Steelers will be searching for an unprecedented third straight NFL title in 1976, and Franco Harris will once again be the heart and soul of the offensive club.

The defending Super Bowl champions square off against the perennially strong Washington Redskins in an NFL interconference pre-season game on NBC, Saturday, Aug. 14, beginning at 9 p.m. The contest will be televised live from Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington.

Franco Harris broke into the NFL with a resounding boom in 1972 when he finished fourth in rushing with 1,055 yards and a 5.6 average per carry. He immediately became a local folk hero, and "Franco's Italian Army" was known throughout the league.

The Penn State graduate was not always sure of his chances to make the pos, but his hard-rushing style soon won him a permanent place in the Steeler backfield.

"I don't think of myself as having any different style of running," Harris says. "To me, it's just a basic form of running. There's a matter, though, of saying to yourself, 'how bad do you want it.'

"I think that was a factor with me. I knew I had the physical ability to make it as a professional. But I also knew that if I could develop my mental outlook to deal with the pro situation, then I would do better."

And better he did, rushing for a total of 4,005 yards in four years, only the fourth player to rush for over 4,000 yards in his first four seasons. He also has had 19 100-yard games, already tying him for the seventh highest in history.

But Franco's star shines brightest in the big games. Last season, the Penn Stater grabbed 157 yards against a strong Cincinnati team and 149 in an important contest against the Houston Oilers. In fact, he has been the leading rusher in eight of the nine post-season games he has played.

Who can ever forget Harris' "immaculate reception" against the Oakland Raiders in 1972, picking the deflected ball off in midair and racing toward the goal with the winning touchdown? He helped defeat Oakland in the playoffs the following year, and was named the Most Valuable Player in Super Bowl IX.

Recreates Role

Actress Susan Blakely, who received an Emmy nomination for her portrayal of Julie Prescott in the ABC-TV presentation of "Rich Man, Poor Man," has been signed to recreate the role in Chapter One of Book II.

"Rich Man, Poor Man," which will air on Saturdays, 10 to 11 p.m., is now in production. Peter Strauss, who starred in the original presentation as Rudy Jordache, will also continue in the role for which he received an Emmy nomination.

Also returning to roles from the original cast are Ray Milland as Duncan Calderwood, Kay Lenz as Kate Jordache (Tom Jordache's widow), William Smith as the dangerous Falconetti, Tim McIntyre as Brad Knight, Dick Sargent as the attorney, Eddie Heath, and Herbert Jefferson, Jr. as Rod Dwyer (Tom's charter boat partner).

In "Rich Man, Poor Man—Book II," Rudy becomes more responsive to other people's feelings—especially after he is left with the task of raising two young boys (Tom's son, Wesley, and Julie's son, Billy Abbott).

Newcomers Gregg Henry and James Carroll Jordan have been signed to portray Wesley and Billy, respectively.

Double Feature Airs Saturday

It's double feature time Saturday, Aug. 14, on "The ABC Saturday Night Movie" when "Brenda Starr" and "Kiss Me, Kill Me" air back-to-back on Ch. 3-5-12.

Jill St. John brings America's favorite comic strip newspaperwoman to life in a story of mystery and adventure in "Brenda Starr," the opening attraction (8 to 9:30 p.m.).

Jed Allan, Sorrell Brooke and Tabi Cooper are also starred, with Victor Buono as special guest star.

When Brenda gets a hot tip that billionaire recluse Lance O'Toole (Buono) has arrived in Los Angeles from Brazil and has been carried away on a stretcher, she thinks she has an exclusive story. However, her competitor, television newscaster Roger Randall (Allan), mysteriously gets the story on the air first, and with greater detail.

Brenda and Randall learn that O'Toole and four other men—including her publisher—have been threatened with death by a band of voodoo worshippers, unless each pays $5 million. Brenda then leaves for the jungles of Brazil, determined to get the full story before Randall does.

In those dark and deadly jungles, Brenda must cope with weird happenings and odd personalities, finally becoming the target of a terrifying voodoo ritual.

Stella Stevens stars in "Kiss Me, Kill Me," the story of a relentless, desperate search for the killer of a young teacher who was a pillar of the community, airing as the second feature (9:30 to 11 p.m.).

Michael Anderson, Jr. and Dabney Coleman also star. Claude Akins is a special guest star. Guest stars are Bruce Boxleitner, Alan Fudge, Bruce Glover, Morgan Paull, Tisha Sterling and Charles Weldon. Special appearances are made by Pat O'Brien and Robert Vaughn.

Stella Stevens plays Stella Stafford, an investigator attached to the District Attorney's office. Deabney Coleman plays Captain Hogan and Anderson is Stella's usual partner, Dan Hodges.

FOR CHARO

Is it difficult to be married to a man so much older than you?—S.M., Twin Falls, Idaho

● When Cugie (Xavier Cugat) brought me to America from Spain, he said, "You're young and beautiful, and I don't want to stop you from having a good time." Like most people my age, I'm very independent, and I don't like to be told what to do. If Cugie had given me instructions on how I was to behave, I probably would have gone out of my way to do the opposite. As it was, because he was able to make such a generous, unselfish statement, I have never had any difficulty, remaining loyal to him, despite the more than 40-year age difference.

FOR JOHN DENVER

Did you always plan a career in show business?—Amy Campbell, Bedford, Mich.

● No. Originally I wanted to be in the Air Force. In fact, I applied for admission to the United States Air Force Academy, but I was rejected because of my eyes.

FOR POLLY BERGEN

You have a reputation for being smart, so will you spoil it by telling me about the stupidest thing you ever did?—J.S., Fort Worth, Tex.

● Sure. I put my whole salary on the crap table. That was in 1947, when I had just started singing (in Las Vegas). I plopped everything down—double or nothing. That was the first and last time I ever did such an asinine thing—and, ironically, it was also the only time I ever won!

FOR HELEN REDDY

Were you offended by being named to the Worst Dressed List?—Elaine Laramee, Ogden, Utah

● And how! Last year I was No. 1 on the list. This year I was demoted to No. 2, and I'm furious! I got great publicity from heading the list, and I felt sure I'd win that "honor" again this year. Oddly enough, most of the people I meet don't seem to agree with Richard Blackwell, who composes the list. Wish I knew just who he is and what he does besides making lists.

FOR DON MEREDITH, actor-sportscaster

You seem to be so at ease as an actor. Did you take acting lessons?—Mrs. A.R., Rumson, N.J.

● I went to a drama coach once. She charged me $40 an hour and spent the first half-hour telling me what she had done in her own career. Then she spent the second half-hour trying to get me to get her a job in a film I was working on. So much for coaching. Actually, just working with fine actors gave me excellent training.

FOR ART LINKLETTER

As an adopted child, did you ever get to know your real parents?—E. Davis, Joplin, Mo.

● I found out who my natural parents are, but I have never contacted them. My real parents are my adopted ones (now deceased). They earned my undying love and respect. It never bothered me not to know anything about my natural mother and father.

FOR MRS. LILLIAN CARTER, mother of Jimmy Carter

Did you encourage your son to enter politics?—Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● My late husband was deeply involved in political life. In fact, he was elected to the Georgia State Legislature. So politics was part of the family atmosphere when Jimmy was growing up. When he first considered running for governor in 1966, I did not press him one way or the other. He knew that I would support him wholeheartedly in whatever he did.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of "The Last Chance"

What was your most ego-shattering experience?—A.S., Oklahoma City, Okla.

● When I went into a bookstore and saw some of my books on the "used" shelf. I looked inside and guess what I found out? Three of my friends (or should I say ex-friends) had disposed of their autographed copies of "The Best of Everything," my first book. That was a rotten thing to do. They could have at least had the decency to rip out the front page with my signed message on it.

FOR WEEB EW BANK, former pro football coach

You coached both Johnny Unitas and Joe Namath at the peaks of their careers. How do you compare them?—Brad Peterson, Providence, Utah

● Joe was a little quicker setting up, and his hook passes were faster. John was better on play-action passes and roll-outs, probably because he had more mobility. In leadership, knowledge of game, preparing for a game, they were equal. Both are Hall of Fame material, and I was fortunate to have them.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I saw a real old movie with Tony Martin, and I'd like to know whether he's still married to Cyd Charisse and whether he can still sing?—P.B., Lima, Ohio

● Tony and Cyd—married in 1948 and parents of Nicky and Tony Jr.—are still together. (He eloped with his first wife, Alice Faye, in 1937; they divorced three years later.) He hasn't given up singing, but his voice isn't what it used to be. That's probably why he's turning more to acting. But his sense of humor is still the same. He says: "I'm 35—around the waist." He tells a story of when he co-starred with Esther Williams in "Easy to Love": "I had to sing to her in a canoe. Suddenly the director yelled, 'Cut! Esther is smiling, and we can't see what you're doing with your hands! The problem was solved by my singing as I held up an oar—so everyone could see I was not holding Esther."

On the Eve of the "Showdown": Where Ford Stands on Today's

By the FAMILY WEEKLY Editors

As the nation's attention turns to the opening of the Republican National Convention in Kansas City, the two names on everyone's tongue will be Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan. Reagan, whose views were covered in the June 13 issue of FAMILY WEEKLY, has shown surprising strength against Ford. This article focuses on President Ford's answers to some of the problems of the day, and how he would handle them should he serve another term in the White House.

On Inflation: Since I took office in late 1974, I have worked vigorously to reduce inflation and to reverse the decline of the economy. I am pleased that our efforts have been successful. The key economic indicators are going in the right direction. I pledge to continue my fight against inflation by not overstimulating the economy as we enter into the expansionary stage of our recovery. Such overstimulation would re-ignite inflation and risk another recession. The key to fighting inflation and creating new job opportunities is to control Federal deficit spending. My budget proposals, if accepted by the Democratic Congress, will assure a balanced budget by 1979 and a strong and durable economic growth for America.

On Busing: To many Americans, busing appears the only way to achieve equal educational opportunities. To many other Americans, busing appears to restrict individual freedom.

It is my responsibility and the responsibility of Congress to seek a solution to this problem.

I recently submitted to the Congress legislation asking Congress to join with me in establishing guidelines for the lower Federal courts to follow in school desegregation cases. Busing as a remedy ought to be the last resort, and it ought to be limited in duration and scope to correcting the effects of previous violations. The legislative guidelines I have suggested would establish this in law.

I believe every American community should desegregate on a voluntary basis. Therefore, I have also proposed the establishment of a citizens committee to assist communities in voluntarily desegregating their schools. Groups on both sides of the busing issue have told me such a committee would be a welcome resource.

On Medical Costs: Last year I sent to Congress a series of proposals to reform Medicare and Medicaid. These proposals would limit the open-ended nature of these medical-care financing programs and re-target much of the savings towards needed improvements in protection against catastrophic illness. They would reduce the pressures on the states to cut back services to the poor and reduce the number of individuals who participate in the programs.

During the last two years, I have signed into law several new health programs designed to make our health system more accessible and more efficient. But I have been unwilling to support legislation which would turn our excellent health-care system into a Government-run and totally Government-financed monolith.

The concept of free medical care for all is alluring, but it is also deceiving. Someone will have to pay for the more than $130 billion of medical care we as a nation will use this year.

The real challenge, as I see it, is to create a system that protects people against the financially crippling cost of medical care, but does it in such a way that all who use this care are mindful of its cost. Until I see a national health-insurance proposal that can accomplish this critical balance, I will not propose new legislation in this area.

On Henry Kissinger: Secretary Kissinger is an outstanding Secretary of State. His diplomatic efforts on behalf of the United States have contributed greatly to world peace.

I am proud of my foreign policy which has brought us to a position of highest leadership in the international community and has kept us at peace. As I have said repeatedly, I would like Secretary Kissinger to continue in my Administration, carrying out my foreign policy.

On Tax Reform: A major objective of any tax-reform package should be to simplify the tax system, as well as to make it more equitable. Past attempts to make the system more equitable have unfortunately also made it more complex. My Administration's objectives in tax reform are threefold—greater equity, greater simplification and lower taxes. I proposed such a program to the Congress last year.

In addition to tax reform and simplification, my tax program includes $10 billion of further tax reductions which have yet to be acted on by the Democratic Congress. Benefits are directed toward middle and lower income taxpayers and incentives for the creation of new jobs by business. These tax cuts would be linked to comparable cuts in Federal spending.

White House/Kennedy

"Busing as a remedy ought to be the last resort, and it ought to be limited in duration..."

On China: My Administration attaches great importance to its relations with China. We have philosophical and political differences with the Chinese, but we share a number of similar concerns. We both desire to see all countries free to develop without outside pressures or interference. We both oppose any forces of hegemony in Asia. We have very similar views about the need for a strong and united Western Europe and for good ties between ourselves and Japan. We do not hide the fact that there are areas where we differ. But on both sides I think there is a desire to work together.

On the CIA: U.S. foreign-intelligence agencies play a vital role in collecting and analyzing information related to the national defense and foreign policy. To operate without adequate and timely intelligence information would cripple our security. Our overriding task now is to rebuild confidence. Last February, I issued an Executive Order that established new policy guidelines as well as restrictions for the foreign-intelligence agencies. I also established a new command structure and an oversight mechanism for the entire Intelligence Community. These steps were essential, and will improve the operations and accountability concessions.

On Military Spending: In my first address to the Congress, I said that "A strong defense is the surest way to peace, and weakness invites war." My program calls for the continued improvement of our strategic nuclear forces to maintain a solid, formidable, strategic deterrent. It also calls for strengthening our conventional forces.

World peace depends upon a strong American defense posture; I cannot let our defenses erode. I will continue to advocate a strong defense posture, and I believe Americans and the Congress will support me in this.

On Détente: The U.S.-Soviet relationship in this nuclear age has the most profound implications for global survival. My position is that the security of this nation must be maintained first through our national defense. At the same time, it is also my policy to move beyond confrontations and crises to develop a more stable relationship with the U.S.S.R., if that is possible. The third point is that we must prevent Soviet expansionism.

I think we can make progress, but the suspicions and rivalries of more than a generation cannot be swept away in a short time. Our rivalry and competition will continue. Therefore, we must be firm when necessary but willing to shape a more constructive relationship when possible. There is really no responsible alternative.

On Social Security: To replace the Social Security system with a national pension plan would be a serious mistake. Social Security not only already serves the principal function of a national pension plan (i.e., it collects contributions from individuals and their employers in order to provide post-retirement income), it serves several other extremely important functions that a national pension plan would not serve. Some of these are:

1) Benefits that are automatically adjusted each year for increases in the cost-of-living; 2) insurance against loss of income due to severe disability or extended illness; 3) survivor's insurance for widows and children; and 4) benefits sufficient to meet the minimum needs of persons with relatively low earnings' histories.

The Social Security system does require continual scrutiny and technical improvements, but any thoughts of replacing it entirely should be dismissed.

"The concept of free medical care is alluring, but it is also deceiving. Someone will have to pay for the more than $130 billion of medical care we as a nation will use this year."

of our intelligence agencies.

On the U.N.: I believe that a strong, viable United Nations, whose membership works in a spirit of cooperation, is essential to world peace and prosperity. We are concerned by trends to use the U.N. for narrow political purposes. Such trends do severe injury. The United States believes it is important for the U.N. to give appropriate weight to the views of all of its members and to work in a spirit of consensus, rather than serve narrow interests. And we will continue to speak out forcefully when we feel that the U.N. is being threatened.

On Israel: Our support of Israel is unchanged and unflinching. As evidence of this, in the past two fiscal years I have requested over $4.3 billion in military and economic assistance for Israel. This is more than 40 percent of all U.S. aid to Israel since its birth in 1948. On the other hand, in negotiating for peace in the Middle East, our policy is not to impose a settlement or to seek one-sided

Observations

Rule of reason? A slim little volume set us to chucking recently—and then to thinking. Called "The Trenton Pickle Ordinance And Other Bonehead Legislation," the book was written and copyrighted this year by Dick Hyman, and published by The Stephen Greene Press of Brattleboro, Vermont. Here are some of the cockeyed laws it chronicles: in Lawrence, Kansas, a regulation against carrying bees around in your hat on city streets; in Quitman, Georgia, a ban against chickens crossing the road (presumably, even to get to the other side); and in Fountain Inn, South Carolina, a regulation requiring horses to wear pants at all times.

Laugh till it hurts. Most likely, nobody takes such regulations very seriously, so they don't do much harm. But there are far too many government regulations that are harmful, wasteful, and costly. According to the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis, "the taxpayers spend about $3 billion a year to support a federal regulatory work force of 74,000 people." But that's only part of the cost. Rules often contradict each other, and our society is becoming vastly over-regulated, slowing down the economy, creating unemployment, and causing all of us endless frustration. No one knows how much the final tab is.

Hearing bells, seeing stars. Consider the regulation of Washington's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), which requires alarms to sound on vehicles being driven in reverse at construction sites. Sounds reasonable, as regulations often do. But OSHA also calls for some employees to wear earplugs as protection against noise. Sounds reasonable, too—unless you're wearing earplugs behind a vehicle that's backing up.

"I'M WITH THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION. DO YOU HAVE A LICENSE?"

They forgot to recall. Then there was the Wisconsin plastic toy maker, whose product was banned by the Food and Drug Administration in 1972, because of a potential hazard to children. The hazard was corrected, but in 1973 "an editorial error" by the Consumer Product Safety Commission (taking over from FDA) put the company's name on a new ban list. The Commission refused to recall 250,000 lists "just to take one or two toys off." Result: the company was forced out of the toy business, and laid off 75 percent of its work force.

What's your favorite horror story? We know we're not alone in our desire to stem the tide of over-regulation. You can help by telling us of examples of regulatory ineptness, contradiction, or plain silliness that we can verify. Write us, Department R, at the address below. If your "horrible example" holds up and we publish it, we'll send you a $25 U.S. Savings Bond. In the case of duplicate entries, the earliest postmark gets the bond.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

What Astrology Doesn't Say About You And Your Birthday

True or False? There is a direct relationship between the month you start living and when you're likely to stop.
(See No. 1)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There is a direct relationship between the month you start living and the month you're likely to stop.
2. Astrology aside, there is no scientific basis for the belief that people born at the same time of the year tend to share personality traits and general ability.
3. You're more likely to be left-handed if you had a hard time being born.
4. If you were born before your brothers or sisters, you're likely to be more of a "loner."
5. Your chance of growing up to be an introvert or an extravert is affected by where you fall in the order of siblings in your family.
6. First-born children have a greater drive for achievement.

ANSWERS

1. True—if your life span extends past middle age. A World Health Organization study impressed investigators by the frequency with which older adults died in the same month they were born—or shortly after. A follow-up study of mortality statistics tabulating month of birth and death of both sexes confirmed these findings. "In older persons, a birthday may in some subtle way influence the general morale of an individual," say the investigators. And it has been well established that morale has a direct effect on how long a person is likely to live.
2. False—according to the findings of British studies, which provide evidence of a definite relationship between season of birth and ability and general personality characteristics. It's pointed out that this might be caused by a number of factors other than astrology. For example, it has been found that "climatic temperature changes during fetal development are associated with subsequent ability at all levels."

3. True—as evidenced by studies at Canada's Simon Fraser University, which indicate a definite relationship between left-handedness and "stressful prenatal and birth conditions."

4. False. The opposite is likely to be the case. Research has shown that first-born children have greater needs for friendship, for affiliating with groups and establishing warm relationships.

5. True—as indicated by the interesting findings of a Boston College study in which undergraduates from two-child families were given a standard personality test. The result: first-born males and second-born females tended to be more extraverted. As the investigators suggest, perhaps the older male's identification with his father contributes to his more extraverted behavior. But it's noted that, for a girl, different relationships hold, and these might result in different behavioral patterns.

6. True. Studies show they have a greater need to achieve success or distinction in whatever work or activity they are engaged in. And it's interesting to note in this connection that, in a University of Wisconsin study, investigators administered a questionnaire to more than 2,200 U.S. Armed Forces personnel. Results indicated that first-borns succeeded in attaining higher military ranks.

“Reading why it was named the best car in the world for under $3,500† got me into the showroom. Finding out the model I wanted cost $300 more than the other make car I was interested in, almost got me out of the showroom. Then I drove it. Now I own it. Fantastic.”

People who try it, tend to buy it. There have to be some good reasons for that. And there are. For no other car that we know of, at any price, offers the combination of overall economy, acceleration and interior roominess that you'll find in the Volkswagen Rabbit. Road & Track magazine went as far as to call it the "best car in the world for under $3500."*

You owe it to yourself to go as far as your Volkswagen dealer to see why.

COOKBOOK

By Marilyn Hansen
Food Editor

An imaginative collection of recipes designed to help you savor the fruits of summer long into the winter. Some of these recipes are for canning, some are for the freezer, some are sun-dried, and others just kind of "make themselves."

The fruits of summer, temptingly preserved, catch rays of California sunshine on this ranch window sill.

Freezin' Season Fruit Pies

- 2¼ lbs. fresh peaches
- 2¼ lbs. fresh plums
- Boiling water
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon ascorbic acid powder*
- 2 cups sugar
- ¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 (8-inch size) foil cake or pie pans

1. To peel peaches: drop peaches into boiling water for 30 seconds; transfer with slotted spoon to cold water. Skins will slip right off.
2. Halve and remove pits from peaches and plums. Slice into large bowl (there should be about 8 cups); add lemon juice, ascorbic acid powder and toss to coat.
3. Combine sugar, tapioca and salt; add to fruit. Let stand for 15 minutes.
4. Divide fruit mixture evenly among 3 (8-inch) foil cake or pie pans.

5. Double-wrap in freezer paper or heavy-duty aluminum foil; label; freeze.
6. When needed, remove from freezer and unwrap. Makes filling for 3 pies

*Commercially known as Fruit Fresh

SPIRITED RAISINS

- 1 cup dark seedless or golden raisins
- ½ cup warmed brandy, rum, orange liqueur, coffee-flavored liqueur, chocolate-based liqueur, sherry or tequila

1. Place raisins in sterilized ½-pint jar. Pour warmed liquor or liqueur over them; and seal.
2. Let stand for 24 hours or more, shaking occasionally.
3. When using Spirited Raisins in a recipe, take out desired amount, straining liquor back into jar. To replenish, add more raisins and liquor to the jar, estimating proportions.

Makes 1 half pint

PEACHY-PLUM PIE

- Pastry for double 8-inch pie crust
- 1 (8-inch) pan frozen peach-plum pie filling
- 1 egg yolk
- 1 teaspoon water
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- Heavy cream

1. Preheat oven to 425°F. Roll out half of pastry and line the bottom of an 8-inch pie pan.
2. Slide pie filling out of foil pan into pastry-lined pie pan.
3. Roll out remaining pastry; cut into strips and make a lattice top.
4. Beat egg yolk with water. Brush lattice with egg glaze and sprinkle with sugar.
5. Bake for 60 to 70 minutes, until fruit is fork tender and crust is golden. Crust should be covered with aluminum foil when brown to prevent burning. Serve warm or cold with heavy cream if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings

POLYNESIAN PAPAYA MARMALADE

- 1 jar (10 ozs.) orange marmalade
- 2 cups chopped Hawaiian papaya (1½ papayas)
- 1 cup chopped fresh peaches (2 small)
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- Dash salt

1. Combine all ingredients in heavy skillet or saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring for about 15 minutes, just until juices have thickened slightly.
2. Pour into 2 sterilized half-pint jars. Seal. Makes 2 half pints

GRAPEVINE PRESERVES

- 1 lb. (about 3 cups) seedless grapes, pulled from stems
- 2 small oranges, peeled and sliced
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons orange or lemon peel (optional)
- 1 drop green food coloring (optional)
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 2¼ cups sugar
- ¾ cup water
- 1 pkg. (1¼ ozs.) powdered fruit pectin

2. Repeat for oranges. Measure 2 cups fruit with juices into bowl. Stir in lemon juice, peel; add food coloring if desired.

3. Thoroughly mix corn syrup and sugar into fruit; let stand for 10 minutes.
4. Mix water and pectin in saucepan. Bring to boil and boil for 1 minute, stirring constantly.
5. Stir pectin mixture into fruit; continue stirring for 3 minutes.
6. Ladle quickly into sterilized freezer jars or container, allowing ¼-inch head space.
7. Seal according to manufacturer's directions. Let stand at room temperature for 24 hours. Store in freezer.
8. If used in 2 or 3 weeks, store in refrigerator. Makes 2½ pints

Fresh Fruit Pickles: a joy to look at and refreshingly good with cold cuts.

FRESH FRUIT PICKLES

- 2 cups cider vinegar
- 3½ cups sugar
- 2 cups water
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 tablespoon pickling spice
- 4 fresh peaches, peeled
- ½ lb. fresh plums, halved and pitted
- 1 small cantaloupe, peeled and cut into slices
- ½ lb. seedless grapes

1. Combine vinegar, sugar, water, bay leaves and pickling spice in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes.
2. Arrange fruit in hot, sterilized jars and pour pickling mixture over fruit. Seal immediately.
3. Let stand in boiling-water bath for 25 minutes or in pressure cooker according to manufacturer's directions.

Makes 2 quarts

SPIKED PEACH JAM

- 3 lbs. fresh ripe peaches
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 pkg. (1¼ ozs.) powdered fruit pectin
- 5½ cups sugar
- Port, bourbon, brandy or rum (optional)
- Paraffin

1. Peel peaches; drop peaches into boiling water for 30 seconds.

2. Transfer with a slotted spoon to cold water; slip off skins. Halve and remove pits.
3. Finely chop or grind peaches to make 4 cups; add lemon juice.
4. In a 6- to 8-quart saucepan, thoroughly mix peaches with powdered fruit pectin.

5. Over high heat, cook and continuously stir until mixture comes to a full boil.
6. Add sugar; bring to a full rolling boil and boil for 1 minute, stirring constantly.
7. Remove from heat; skim off foam with metal spoon. Stir and skim for 5 minutes.

8. Into clean, hot, sterilized crocks or jelly glasses, pour 1 tablespoon liquor if desired.
9. Add hot jam, leaving ½-inch space at top. Cover jam immediately with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.*
10. Gently tilt jar so paraffin "climbs" and seals edges all around. Store in cool, dry place.

Makes 6 to 7 cups

*A grosgrain ribbon "lifter" can be placed on jam to help lift out paraffin. Pour a thin layer of paraffin onto the jam, lay ribbon in paraffin and pour another layer of hot wax over the ribbon. Secure end to crock with tape until paraffin sets firmly.

BRANDIED DESERT FRUITS

- 1 pkg. (1 lb.) light brown sugar
- 3 cups water
- 1½ lbs. Thompson seedless grapes, in small clusters
- 1 pkg. (6 ozs.) dried apricots
- 1 pkg. (10 ozs.) pitted dates
- 1 cup raisins
- ½ cup blanched whole almonds
- 1 cup brandy

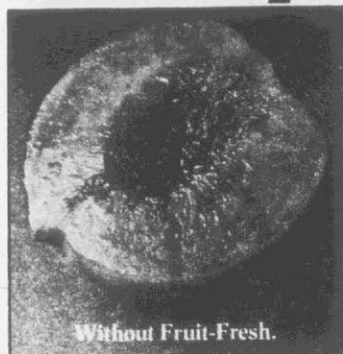

1. Combine sugar and water in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 5 minutes.
2. While syrup is simmering, arrange fruit and almonds in hot, sterilized jars.
3. Remove syrup from heat and add brandy. Pour over fruit and seal jars. Makes 2 quarts

VINELAND VINEGAR

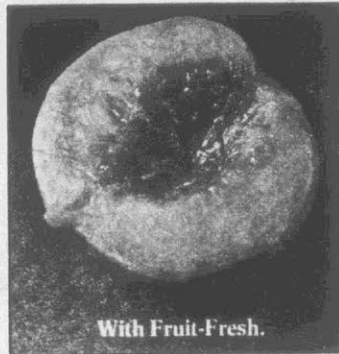

- 1½ cups white wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon honey
- ½ cup Thompson seedless grapes
- 1 thin slice fresh pineapple
- Peel of one small orange

1. Warm the wine vinegar and honey in a small saucepan.
2. Place grapes, pineapple and orange rind in a pint bottle and pour in the warmed vinegar. Cap and let stand for several days. (Variation: Omit pineapple and orange peel; add sprigs of favorite fresh herb.) Makes 1 pint

Yukky. Yummy.

Without Fruit-Fresh.

With Fruit-Fresh.

Peaches preserved in ordinary canning syrup for 12 hours.

Fruit-Fresh. You need it for canning, freezing, and fresh fruit.

If you want all the fruit you serve to look and taste its freshest, what you really need is Fruit-Fresh. Because Fruit-Fresh contains a special ingredient that locks in the natural, "just-picked" color and flavor. Which means no more brown, mushy-looking peaches.

Fruit-Fresh is economical, too. A 5-oz. can will preserve up to 75 lbs. of peaches. Here's how: For Canning: simply add Fruit-Fresh to the regular syrup. For Freezing: add Fruit-Fresh to the syrup or dry sugar. For Fresh Fruit: sprinkle Fruit-Fresh on your just-sliced fruit before refrigerating. Sound good? It tastes delicious.

Keeps fruit looking and tasting fresher.

7. Spoon pulp mixture out of cheesecloth (there should be about 2 cups). Mix in ¾ cup of the strained jelly.

Karo® lets the fresh fruit taste come through.

Whether you're canning, freezing, or putting up jams and jellies, Karo Syrup's gentle sweetness lets natural fruit flavor shine through.

Just blend the right amount of Karo and sugar for smooth syrups, bright color and fresh taste.

Strawberry Jam

4 cups fresh crushed strawberries
(about 2 quarts whole berries)

2 cups sugar

1½ cups KARO Light Corn Syrup

In large kettle, mix together strawberries, sugar and corn syrup. Quickly bring to boil over medium heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Cook rapidly 30 to 40 minutes or until jam sheets from metal spoon and becomes clear in color. Stir occasionally to prevent sticking and skim with metal spoon as foam rises to the surface. Remove from heat, cool 5 minutes, stirring gently. Pour into hot sterilized jars. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Makes 4 (½ pint) jars.

Pickling Syrup

3 cups sugar

3 cups KARO Light Corn Syrup

2 cups water

2 cups cider vinegar

4 (2-inch) sticks cinnamon

2 teaspoons whole cloves

Stir together sugar, corn syrup, water and vinegar in 5-quart kettle. Tie spices in cheesecloth and add to sugar mixture. Bring to boil over medium heat and boil 15 minutes. Makes enough syrup for 4 pounds peaches, pears or watermelon rind or 2 pounds dried fruit.

Spiced Peaches

Prepare Pickling Syrup. Add peeled peaches, whole or half, to syrup; simmer until peaches are tender. Remove spice bag. Pack peaches in clean hot jars; cover with syrup. Seal immediately. Process in Boiling Water Bath 10 minutes.

*Drying may be finished indoors. Set cookie sheets in 150°F. oven. Leave door open. Jerky can be dried completely indoors. Set pans of purée in oven. Heat to 200°F. and turn oven off. Reheat oven several times a day to maintain a temperature of 200°F. Jerky will dry in about 24 hours.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT HOME CANNING

"Canning jars and equipment were scarce last year. What is it like this year?"

Adequate supplies of glass jars are expected this year. There are more metal lids on the market because production has been increased. No shortages are expected in pressure and water-bath canners.

"I don't understand why you have to use a steam-pressure canner for some foods, and not for others."

Higher temperatures are required to destroy botulinum bacteria in such low-acid food as meats, fish, poultry and all vegetables except tomatoes. The only safe way to can these foods is to use a pressure canner, which provides temperatures (240°F.) higher than that of boiling water (212°F.).

"I like to add celery, green pepper and onion to tomatoes when I can them. Is this safe?"

Adding other vegetables lowers the acidity of tomatoes, which can provide a favorable environment for the growth of botulinum bacteria. So when you add other vegetables, use the pressure-canner method and follow the directions carefully.

"I use the open-kettle method. What's wrong with that?"

In this method, food is cooked in an ordinary kettle, then packed into hot jars and sealed without processing. Temperatures in open-kettle canning are not high enough to destroy spoilage organisms that may be in food. Spoilage bacteria may also enter the food when it is transferred from kettle to jar. So the open-kettle method is not recommended, except for jellies.

"Is it true that jams and preserves need to be processed in a boiling-water bath?"

Yes. This prevents the growth of molds and yeasts that can cause spoilage and destroy quality.

"I use lids with screwbands. When should the screwbands be tightened?"

Before placing filled jars in the processing kettle, tightly screw down screwbands and leave in tightened position. Do not tighten screwbands any more after processing.

"Can lids and screwbands be reused?"

Metal lids with a sealing compound should not be reused. Screwbands in good condition may be reused.

"How should the seal on home-canned jars of food be checked?"

To test a jar that has a flat metal lid, press center of lid; if lid is down and will not move, jar is sealed. Test the seal on glass jars with porcelain-lined caps by turning each jar partly over in your hands to see if liquid seeps out of the jar.

"Where can I get information on how to can food at home?"

Write to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for these publications: "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," HG Bul. 8 (45¢); "Home Canning of Meat and Poultry," HG Bul. 106 (35¢); "How to Make Jellies, Jams, and Preserves at Home," HG Bul. 56 (55¢); "Making Pickles and Relishes at Home," HG Bul. 92 (45¢).

Woman with arthritis increases grip strength with Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub

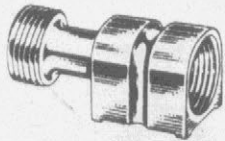

PHILADELPHIA—"My grip strength improved," said Sara Kait. A spritely 75 year old nursing home resident. Miss Kait had taken part in tests conducted by Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub and Extra Strength Lotion. First an instrument was used to measure grip strength. Then Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub was applied for temporary relief of minor pain and to improve mobility. Later, when tested again, the grip strength of most of those tested had significantly improved. "It certainly works," said Miss Kait.

DOCTOR'S THRILLING REDUCING PROGRAM HELPS

BURN AWAY FAT BY THE HOUR

...TURN IT INTO FLUID THAT YOUR BODY FLUSHES AWAY!

Yes, now you can lose up to 10 . . . 20 . . . 30 — even 50 pounds or more • without starvation diets • without grueling exercise • without ravenous hunger THANKS TO THE MOST POWERFUL REDUCING AID EVER RELEASED FOR PUBLIC USE WITHOUT A PRESCRIPTION!

SHRINK YOUR BODY'S FAT CELLS . . . TRIM AWAY POUNDS AND INCHES!

First came the ALL DAY cold tablet. Then the ALL DAY allergy pill. Now, from medical science comes the latest GIANT-STEP in the conquest of fat . . . this incredible ALL-DAY time-release capsule and fat-melting program, developed by a medical doctor . . . and guaranteed to work like nothing else you've ever heard about, read about, or tried before in your life. Because when in your life did you ever dream of a weight-loss method so effective, that without starvation diet, without grueling exercise, without gnawing hunger you can transform your body into the sleek, streamlined figure you've always longed for . . . even if at this very moment you are as much as 50, 60, or even 100 pounds overweight!

CONTINUOUS ROUND-THE-CLOCK ACTION ATTACKS THE BASIC CAUSE OF FAT BUILD-UP DAY AND NIGHT

Unlike every other weight-loss method that has failed you in the past, the COUNTDOWN once-a-day capsule and reducing program works in a completely different way. Not by pitting your will-power against some "inhuman crash diet". Not by wracking your body with torturous exercise. And most certainly not by the use of high-powered "speed" drugs that leave your nerves shattered and shot.

Doctor's New All-Day Triple-Action FAT-MELTER PROGRAM Works All Day To:

1. Transform fat into fluid and flush it right out of your system.
2. Attack the basic cause of overweight — overeating — and convert the food you do eat into burned up energy instead of into fat.
3. Break down those bulges of flab as you lose weight from your entire body . . . that up to now seemed impossible to budge . . . and force them to be consumed — oxidized — by your own body chemistry — without ravenous hunger — thanks to this thrilling new ALL DAY TIME-RELEASE FAT-FIGHTER PROGRAM.

COUNTDOWN with Mira-thene-12

Before starting this program, consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is obesity. Individuals with high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, or thyroid disease should use only as directed by a physician. As a matter of fact, we urge you to show this entire program to your own family physician and see if he doesn't agree that this is a medically sound approach to the problem of obesity.

Instead, this NEW TOTAL APPROACH TO TOTAL SLIMNESS actually helps shrink the fat cells in your body ALL 24 HOURS A DAY . . . even while you sleep. Yes, literally burns and oxidizes those bulging pockets of flab as you lose weight — all over your body — as it melts down into liquid that your body flushes away daily, in a completely natural, gentle manner.

And it's all so easy with this wondrous ALL-DAY CAPSULE that helps set the stage for the fat-burning process to be triggered into action.

A DOCTOR EXPLAINS . . .

No matter how many fad and crash diets you've run through in the past . . . there is only one effective weight-loss method known to medical science. It is simply this: in order to burn off fat there are 2 things you must do.

1. You must decelerate the rate of calorie intake. 2. You must step up your body's rate of fat burn-off just like you step up a furnace, so that you actually convert the food you do eat into burned-up energy instead of into piled-up fat.

And this is precisely why COUNTDOWN is so effective. Because the moment you launch yourself on this doctor's "Lifetime Slimness" program, here's what happens in your body:

1. Gnawing hunger pangs disappear as tiny grains of the most powerful reducing aid ever released for public use without a prescription are gradually released into your system to constantly calm your appetite and help you decelerate your body's caloric intake.
2. The food you do eat on this doctor's fully satisfying eating program instead of being stored up as fat, is now converted into a source of energy that your body burns away.
3. And even though you may lose as much as 20, 30, 50 pounds OR MORE . . . you never miss a meal . . . never deny yourself sensible snacks and desserts . . . never for a single moment starve yourself the very least bit.

NOW! ALL THE ECSTASY OF SLIMNESS WITHOUT THE AGONY OF HUNGER!

SKIING, RUSSIAN STYLE But don't fall . . .

A trial run: The Russians have introduced faster and more efficient methods of space travel, and now they've come up with a speedier way to move across some of their snow-laden terrain. With the help of a backpack engine, fitted with a propeller, cross-country skiing can now have the same thrills as downhill—speeds in excess of 30 miles an hour are possible, claims the designer. The engine is set in motion as the skier builds up his own momentum. While this mechanism may make cross-country more fun, isn't skiing perilous enough without being harnessed to a lot of sharp-edged equipment?

"Of course I'm interested in actuarial science, Foster. It's just you that bores me."

Diana Rigg talks about her coming of age: "Ever since I was a young girl, I knew I would reach my peak at around age 35. Well, I'm 36, and, unlike so many other women, glad to admit my age. I have begun to realize my true self. My body is in better shape than it's ever been. I've been on a protein diet, and I find I have much more energy—both physical and mental—as a result. I've got lines around my eyes, but they don't bother me. Even though I love children, I've prepared myself not to have any and not to be embittered when I'm older because I didn't. Children are supposed to be your greatest comfort in middle age, but I have enough wonderful memories already. I'm looking forward to being a sexy, crazy old lady."

DIANA RIGG

Camera Press

Why are college athletes generally Republican conservatives? Here's Democrat James Michener's view: "The athlete and his coach move in a world of conservative values and are surrounded by conservative types. Very few Democrats among the alumni have private jets or good jobs to dispense or the spare cash to endow athletic scholarships or build press boxes so that the university 'can really go big time.' Also, coaches know that conservative, hard-nosed procedures pay off. For every hotshot newcomer who throws passes all over the place, there are 10, tough old buzzards like Woody Hayes and Bear Bryant who work on the system of four yards, a cloud of dust and a bucket of blood. They're the ones who remain in coaching till their mid-sixties. Rich Sortun, who played varsity football at the University of Washington and later in the NFL, best explained the conservative politics of athletes: 'You are subtly channeled into an educational rut. Your advisors suggest fairly simple courses, like physical education or business. The practices leave you too tired to study more than what you need to get by. You're definitely too tired to think on your own. You're told to be suspicious of hippies and radicals. You end up avoiding the associations—the intellectual give-and-take with people of various philosophies—that are really as much college education as what you learn in the classroom. Increasingly, you accept the philosophy of the locker room. Physical strength and the ability to withstand pain are the most positive virtues. Women are things. Bookish people and little people are suspect. Finally, with the scholarships, the alienation and the practice hours, you come to view it all as a job.' PRE-TV

Most houses today have a family room,
What once we described as a den.
It's where we all sit and watch TV,
But what did we do back then?

I dimly recall (it was long ago,
No screen, then, at which to look)
We often played games, like checkers or cards,
Or maybe we read a book.

It's possible, even, that in our den,
Or so at least says my mother,
We did what's not done in our family room:
Talked (and listened) to one another.

4 pairs for 39.30
All 5 for only 48.95

The whole world knows how DoubleKnit Slacks will wear like iron. They even outlast your car! But up till now, the crease has been no good at all!

Now Haband, the mail order people from Paterson, N.J. say "Our Indelible Crease will not twist out, won't wash out, won't sag, bag, or droop!"

Let's face it! A good sharp crease is the first thing they look for in appraising your appearance. Now Haband's new INDELIBLE CREASE is actually locked into the stitches for the life of your slacks! What you get is a straight, handsome, permanent knife-like crease that will look as good after countless repeated washings and wearings as it will the first time you try them on! And that is IN ADDITION to all these other Haband Deluxe "EXECUTIVE CLUB" Dress Slacks features:

100% POLYESTER [NO-IRON DOUBLEKNIT]
100% Wash and Wear. "Talon" unbreakable zephyr zipper. "Ban-Rol" no-roll inner waistband. "Talon" hook type top closure. Haband's no-hole long wear pocketing. Fully lined separate waistband. Lined, reinforced fly. Diagonally offset front pockets; two back pockets. You don't get all these features even in $40 slacks!

Haband's straight leg modified patterns give you greater comfort in waist, seat, knees, crotch, and thighs. Yet the gentle two-way stretch of genuine DoubleKnit eliminates "old man" baggy pants and makes you look taller, slimmer, better tailored. Remember - Business Slacks are Haband's Business. You get wider belt loops, exact-to-the-inch waist & inseam sizes, the works! Let us show you this extraordinary value!

THE NEW COLORS!

Besides the basic office colors Brown, Blue, and Black, we offer the new European shades of Dusty Green and Rust.

You will be Shocked at this VALUE !!

We are constantly amazed at the price of ordinary men's slacks as sold in the Department Stores & Executive Shops around the country. You see plain pants for up to $40 per pair! So many people ask, "At 2 pair for 19.95, how can the slacks be any good?" Suffice it to say Haband has been in business more than 51 years selling direct thru the U.S. Mails to busy executives & professional men in every city & town in the U.S.A. Last year, we shipped over 1-million pairs! At that rate, we ask "How could you do any better?"

Now with the new INDELIBLE CREASE it is a good time to see for yourself. At 2 for 19.95, you'll never get a better deal!

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: DAWN, AND STILL THE STORM RAGES. THERE WILL BE NO WAR TODAY FOR FLOOD WATERS FROM THE RIVER COVER THE BATTLEGROUND.

IN THE COUNCIL CHAMBER, PRINCE VALIANT MAKES AN ANNOUNCEMENT: "MY LORDS, DO HOMAGE TO TELEMONT, YOUR REAL KING! AND THERE SITS HAJAS, HIS UNCLE, WHO STOLE THE THRONE FROM TELEMONT WHEN HE WAS BUT A CHILD. GUARDS! TAKE HIM TO HIS ROOMS."

AJAXOS SPRINGS TO HIS FEET, BLACK WITH RAGE. BUT HAJAS WAVES HIM DOWN: "FOR TWENTY YEARS I HAVE LIVED IN FEAR OF THIS DAY. I AM TIRED OF DECEIT AND TREACHERY... YES, TELEMONT IS INDEED THE KING."

HAJAS SHUFFLES FROM THE HALL ASSISTED BY HIS ATTENDANTS, AND AS HE DEPARTS SO DOES THE INFLUENCE OF HIS CHIEF ADVISOR, AJAXOS.

"STAND BACK, TELEMONT, THIS IS MY QUEST. I SEEK TO RESTORE THE PRINCESS HELENE TO HER SISTER, ALETA, QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES!"
