

Skyjackers 'Proud' Of Their Takeover

By BERNARD COHEN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Five Croatian nationalists, who apparently were unarmed when they hijacked a Trans World Airlines 727 jetliner, face air piracy and possible murder charges here in the 30-hour, trans-Atlantic hijacking drama that brought terror to the skies and death on the ground.

The hijackers, who demanded and won wide publicity for their cause of Croatian separation from Yugoslavia, surrendered in Paris on Sunday and were returned to New York. They had taken over the plane by threatening to blow it up with what they said were "explosives" wired to their bodies but which turned out to be modeling clay.

The prisoners, four men and a woman, were taken into custody by the FBI at Kennedy Airport and held overnight for arraignment today in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on air piracy charges.

The offense carries a minimum 20-year prison sentence, but if a death results from the piracy, life imprisonment can be imposed.

Paris police said that just before they gave up, the hijackers learned that a policeman was killed and three others injured in New York City while trying to dismantle a bomb they had planted in Grand Central Station in mid-Manhattan.

The leader of the hijackers said they were "proud" of what they had done.

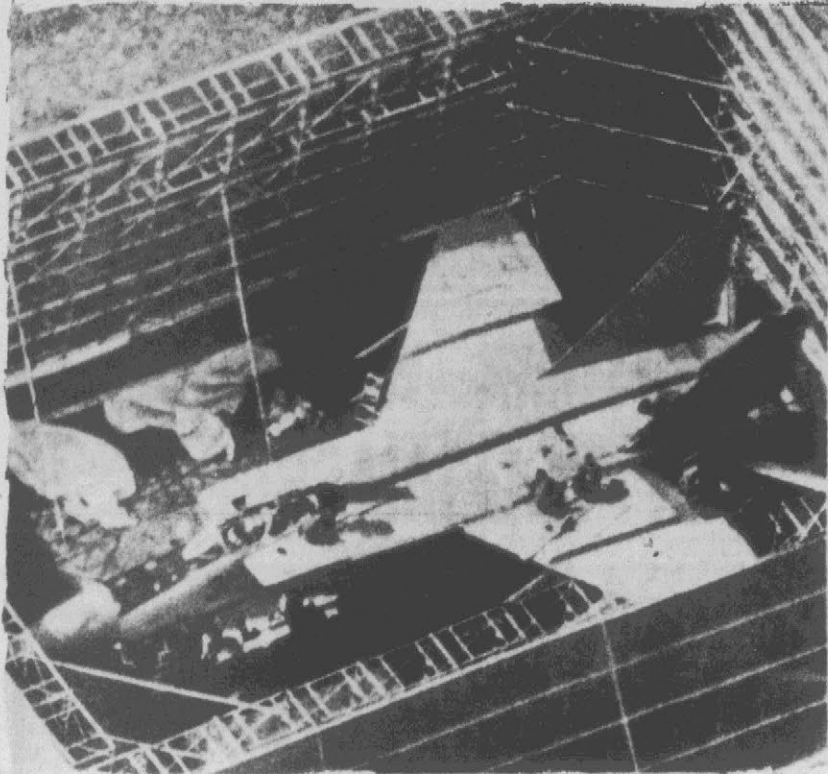

French authorities said they had told the hijackers they would be executed if any passengers were harmed. They said they gave them a choice of being sent either to the United States or Yugoslavia.

All 53 passengers still held hostage on the hijacked plane were released unharmed, and most of them also flew back to the United States on Sunday. Thirty-five passengers had been released when the plane landed in Gander, Newfoundland, early Saturday, the second stop in the hijacking escapade.

The hijackers were identified by the FBI as Zvonko Basic, 30, his wife Julienne, 27, and Petar Matovic, 31, all of New York City; Frane Pesut, 25, of Cleveland; and Mark Vlasic, 29, Stamford, Conn. The four men were born in Yugoslavia and Mrs. Basic is a native of Eugene, Ore., the FBI said.

Dist. Atty. Mario Merola of the Bronx said he would seek first-degree murder indictments against them from a grand jury in the policeman's death. The slaying of a police officer in the line of duty is a capital offense in New York State.

The hijacking, which spanned four nations, was the first in the United States since April 1975, and the first successful one since November 1972, before federal officials instituted tighter airport security.

Many Arrested In Soweto Sweep

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired bird-shot and tear gas at demonstrators today in the segregated township of Soweto and launched a "clean-up" sweep through another black township, arresting many residents, as the second black work boycott in less than a month began.

Gen. D.J. Kriel, deputy commissioner of police, said police fired on demonstrators in Soweto after several buses were set ablaze. It was not known if anyone was injured.

Kriel refused to comment on the house-to-house sweep in the black township of Alexandra, in northeast Johannesburg, by 300 to 500 police. The South African Press Association quoted sources as saying police hoped to arrest about 1,000 persons in the sweep by Monday night.

Many Johannesburg businesses reported an absentee rate of 80 per cent as blacks began another three-day boycott to protest the racial policies of South Africa's ruling white minority.

"Soweto looked like a graveyard this morning," one resident of the vast black ghetto eight miles south of Johannesburg reported.

Police also said there was little black commuter traffic out of the Alexandra township in northern Johannesburg.

Business firms in the city reported "fair" to "rather bad" attendance by black workers. One company reported that only 30 per cent of its black work force showed up.

Only four of the 62 black conductors and nine of 66 black bus drivers reported to the municipal transport department. A skeleton bus service was operating.

Salute To Agriculture Drew Crowd Yesterday

By BARBARA MATHEWS

Over 2,200 people attended the Pitt County "Salute to Agriculture" held yesterday at the county fairgrounds, according to Larry Land, president of the Pitt County Agribusiness Association.

Land said the purpose of the event was to make the general public aware of a farmer's expenses and "give them a better appreciation of the role of the farmer in our community."

"I think we have opened a lot of eyes as to the amount of money a farmer has to spend to succeed today," he said.

"We are very pleased with the outcome."

"He estimated the average Pitt County farmer's investment in his farm at one-quarter of a million dollars.

"People do not realize the importance of agriculture in this area," said Land. "Agriculture is much larger than any industry in this area."

The event featured displays of farm machinery, including tillers, harvesters, tractors and other equipment.

Entertainment was provided by the Clark Neck Cloggers, and exhibitions of crop dusting were given by Les Hill of Craft Spraying, Inc. of Farmville.

Between 1,250 and 1,300 people farm in Pitt County. In 1975, a total of 319,710 acres of Pitt County land were devoted to farming.

To Polls Tomorrow

By TOM BAINES

Pitt County voters will have only a few choices to make when they visit the polls in Tuesday's second (runoff) primary.

Democratic registrants will receive one ballot tomorrow containing the names of runoff candidates for Lieutenant Governor, State Auditor, and Commissioner of Labor.

Voters in Pitt County registered as Republicans will have only one choice to make as the lone GOP ballot involves a runoff for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Meeting in the GOP runoff are David T. Flaherty and the Rev. Coy C. Privette.

In the Democratic race for the lieutenant governor's nomination, James C. (Jimmy) Green will face Howard Lee while incumbent State Auditor Henry L. Bridges will meet Lillian Woo in their runoff.

John Brooks and Jessie Rae Scott will square off in the runoff for the labor post bid.

No local races are involved in the second primary.

Margaret Register, executive secretary of the Pitt Board of Elections, noted that polling hours of 6:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. tomorrow are the same as in the first primary in August.

Polling sites will also be the same as in the initial primary, she pointed out, but Greenville voters should remember that residents in Greenville Precinct One now cast their ballots at the VFW Hut on Mumford Road and residents in Greenville Three now vote at West Greenville Recreation Center (old Eppes Gym).

Greenville Two and Greenville Eight merged as Greenville Eight, she reminded, and voters in the Eighth precinct the Willis Building at the corner of First and Reade Streets.

Miss Register reminded poll officials to call in their returns to The Daily Reflector as soon as final counts are made. The Reflector will tabulate runoff totals tomorrow evening.

Money Issue Before Congress This Week

DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money is the big item before Congress this week, with decisions on how much will be collected in taxes and how much will be spent by the government as the lawmakers push to adjourn Oct. 2.

First on the agenda is Senate action on a $41.9-billion revenue-sharing bill that would extend for five years and nine months the program that allocates federal funds with no strings to localities throughout the country.

The extension bill before the Senate would allocate $6.9 billion the first year and increase the amount by $150 million each year after that. Unless it is extended, the program expires this Dec. 31.

When action on revenue-sharing is completed by the Senate, the measure probably will have to go to a conference committee to resolve differences with the House version. The House passed last June a three-year extension of revenue sharing that would continue the payments at the current $6.65 billion annual rate.

Also scheduled for action in the Senate today is the $104.3 billion defense appropriations bill, as approved by a House-Senate conference committee.

A key provision of that measure would defer a decision on full-scale production of the B1 bomber until next February. Opponents of the controversial bomber succeeded in winning the delay so that whoever is elected president in November would have the opportunity to make the final decision.

In other money matters, both the House and Senate are scheduled to act this week on the congressional budget resolution and on a major revision of the tax laws.

The budget resolution sets a limit on federal spending of $413.1 billion. It estimates revenues at $362.5 billion, with a deficit of $50.6 billion.

President Ford's budget proposal for the coming fiscal year called for $13 billion less in spending. But Ford also estimated revenue would be $10 billion less. The Ford deficit would be $3 billion lower than the congressional figure. The figures finally adopted by Congress prevail.

By October 15

The resurfacing of a portion of two major streets in Greenville — Tenth Street and Dickinson Avenue — is scheduled to be completed by October 15, according to Department of Transportation officials.

Spokesmen for the Division of Highways said contracts have been let to resurface Tenth Street from Washington Street to Dickinson Avenue and Dickinson Avenue, from Eight Street to Truman Street at West End Circle.

The resurfacing, expected to begin shortly, will include a thin overlay of the present pavement on the two streets, Highway officials notes.

Ozone Shield Damaged By Spray Cans

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fluorocarbons from aerosol spray cans have damaged the earth's protective ozone shield and will have to be selectively regulated or banned, the National Academy of Sciences said today.

But two academy panels which studied the problem said any ban or regulation of aerosol spray cans should be delayed one to two years until completion of further studies on the ultimate effects of the reduction in the protective shield of ozone in the atmosphere.

The panels said the reduction in ozone, which shields the earth from dangerous ultraviolet radiation, could lead to increases in skin cancer and potentially great changes in the earth's temperature and climate.

The reports were designed to resolve the controversy over the relationship between fluorocarbons and the earth's ozone layer. The panels said there was insufficient evidence to state precisely the extent of damage to the ozone shield.

Philip Handler, NAS president, said in a letter to the White House "that a one or two year delay in actual implementation of a ban or regulation would not be unreasonable."

However, he recommended the government begin immediately to establish the regulatory machinery that will be necessary to either reduce the use of fluorocarbons or ban them completely.

The reports said if fluorocarbons continue to be released at 1973 levels, "an ultimate reduction in ozone of about seven per cent" would result. Half of this loss would occur in about 50 years, the panels said.

The panels expressed particular concern about climate changes that might result from a slight reduction of the protective ozone shield. Temperatures could increase on earth. This, in turn, would affect rainfall and evaporation of moisture. "Such changes could lead initially to a general shift of the earth's climatic belts, and ultimately to a significant melting of polar ice and a worldwide increase in sea level," the reports said.

Planning Board Meet Scheduled

The Pitt County Planning Board will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday, in the Law Library at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda are consideration of time extensions for the Pleasant Ridge and Briarcliff subdivisions, and a discussion of a proposed recreation-convention center for Pitt County.

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — A school bus assigned to the Nathan's Creek Elementary School wrecked Monday after sliding off a mountain road east of Jefferson, but no one was believed seriously injured, authorities said.

The Highway Patrol said the bus was carrying about 40 passengers and about 10 were taken to Ashe Memorial Hospital in Jefferson for examination.

The rest of the children were taken on to the school but later they, too, were taken to the hospital for examination, a spokesman said.

The bus driver, Jessie Davis, was quoted by a newsman as saying something became lodged against the gas pedal of the bus. He said the bus went over an embankment when he sought to free the pedal.

Brooks Feels Candidacy Hurt

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh lawyer John Brooks says although he is "delighted" that Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten had cleared him of any wrongdoing, his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for labor commissioner had unquestionably been damaged by a probe to determine if he had violated the law by concealing perjury.

After investigating whether Brooks should be charged with the offense of withholding evidence of perjury in a murder case, Edmisten said Saturday he had concluded that the evidence "exonerates Mr. Brooks of any wrongdoing."

"Brooks was acting as an attorney who was attempting to protect the interests of his client and he did not intend, nor did he in any manner commit any criminal act," Edmisten told the Associated Press.

However, Brooks said in a statement Sunday the episode "had raised a cloud in many voters' minds which will be difficult to erase."

Brooks is running against Jessie Rae Scott, wife of former Gov. Bob Scott, in the Tuesday runoff primary for the labor commissioner nomination.

"I trust that the voters will get the message of my innocence," Brooks said. "I hope that the voters will make their decision on the merits of my qualifications and my programs for the North Carolina Department of Labor."

The investigation of whether Brooks should be charged with the common law offense of concealing evidence of a felony developed at a hearing in Wake Superior Court Sept. 3 in which Brooks was trying to win a new trial for a client serving a prison term for murder. Brooks submitted an affidavit in which a key prosecution witness in the murder case admitted he had lied on the witness stand.

The affidavit had been obtained more than a year before the hearing, and Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey ordered an investigation to determine whether Brooks had violated the law by concealing the evidence the witness had committed perjury.

When Bailey was asked Sunday for comment on Edmisten's ruling, he said:

"I'm perfectly willing for Rufus to rule there was no ground to bring charges. That's exactly what I wanted to know."

Bailey had first asked Dist. Atty. Burley Mitchell to make the investigation, but Mitchell turned it over to the attorney general's office.

Edmisten gave his decision in a letter to Mitchell which said, in part:

"It is my conclusion and the conclusion of my senior deputies that the evidence exonerates Mr. Brooks of any wrongdoing."

Brooks, who had insisted from the start he had done no wrong, reiterated his innocence at a news conference Friday. He said it was proven by a letter written by Asst. Atty. Gen. Richard League. League said Brooks had told to him more than a year ago that he had a client who had been convicted on perjured testimony and asked the attorney general's office to join in seeking a new trial. League, however, refused to do this.

At his Friday news conference, Brooks suggested that the matter was politically inspired and said he was considering having it brought before the state's Judicial Standards Commission.

Brooks' campaign office reiterated Sunday that Brooks and others were giving consideration "to bringing this matter to the attention of the Judicial Standards Commission."

Bailey, a veteran of more than 10 years on the bench, denied when contacted in Dallas, Tex., where he was attending a meeting Friday, that politics had anything to do with his order. "Not even my worst enemy would say that I've ever based a decision on politics," he said.

Asked for comment on the threat to bring the matter to the attention of the Judicial Standards Commission, Bailey said Sunday that there was "plenty of law" to back up his request for an investigation.

"It would be a funny world if a fellow sitting on a bench had reason to believe something needed investigating couldn't have it investigated," he said.

Requiem For A Smoker

DEAR READERS: I recently said my last goodbye to one of the dearest, most gentle and soft-spoken gentlemen I've ever known—David Brodkey. He was also my brother-in-law, having been married for over 40 years to my sister, Helen, the eldest (and prettiest) of the four Friedman girls.

Dave spent his 66th birthday in the hospital, fighting a losing battle against lung cancer. He was lucky(?). He went fast. Three months.

You're wondering, "Did he smoke?" Like a chimney! Dave had been a three-pack-a-day man for over 45 years.

Didn't he have periodic checkups and chest X-rays? He did, but nothing showed up in his X-rays until he went into the hospital for minor surgery for something totally unrelated to the cause of his death.

Oh, Dave had a "touch of" emphysema and a "little heart warning" a few years back, so why didn't his DOCTOR insist that he quit smoking then? Because his doctor also smoked heavily.

I know that God gives us life, and God takes it away, but I can't help feeling that this beautiful man could have lived many more years had he not become addicted to tobacco. And addicted he was!

His craving for nicotine was almost as enslaving as heroin to a junky or alcohol to an alcoholic.

Times without number he would develop a cough and try to "taper off." He would then allow himself only 10 cigarettes a day. But after he'd smoked his limit, he'd "bum" an extra cigarette or two, and soon he'd be back to the old routine. (He often said, "I don't really SMOKE them, I just light them, and they burn in the ashtray.")

Being a natural "reformer," over the years I sent Dave every stop-smoking gimmick and gadget I came across. He tried them all, but none of them worked for him.

Helen and Dave had a storybook romance and an ideal marriage, but their last few years could have been happier had he been able to quit smoking. Forgive me for washing the family linen in public, but my sister became so disgusted with her husband's "lack of character," that she wouldn't permit him to smoke in the same room with her! (She didn't realize how hopelessly hooked the poor guy was, and that it sometimes takes more than "character" to kick an addiction.)

How come some people smoke up a storm and live to be 100? I don't know. (Maybe they build up an "immunity" to nicotine.) And how come some people who have never smoked develop lung cancer? I don't know the answer to that, either. But I do know that an overwhelming percentage of those who develop lung cancer and heart disease have been heavy smokers.

Not everyone who develops lung cancer dies from it. Some are lucky enough to survive surgery and live with one lung (for example, a former heavy smoker, that lovable redhead, Arthur Godfrey). Others have had laryngectomies (the severing of the vocal chords), after which the patient learns to "talk" by swallowing air and "belching" it up into audible sounds. (The handsome veteran actor, Bill Gargan, another notoriously heavy smoker, has lived with this for many years.)

I have devoted a great deal of space in my column to the evils of smoking. (Perhaps more than some of my smoking readers have found tolerable.) I've also frequently needed those who inflict their habit on innocent non-smokers. (I'm informed there is now substantial evidence that breathing second-hand tobacco fumes is almost as damaging to the lungs as is smoking the weed itself.)

It's too late for my brother-in-law, and for countless thousands who couldn't break the nicotine habit, but will you do yourself (and me) a favor? If you don't smoke—PLEASE don't start. And if you DO smoke, don't quit trying to quit until you've won! I love you.

Shorter Ballot Awaits Voter

Tomorrow voters will have the opportunity to go to the polls for the second primary election. They will find considerably shorter ballots on this trip to the polling places, since only four races remain to be decided.

On the Republican ticket Coy Privette and David Flaherty will face each other to determine who will represent the party as the gubernatorial candidate.

The governor's race was decided in the first primary with Jim Hunt being the Democratic nominee. For lieutenant governor, however, first primary front runner Howard Lee is challenged by Jimmy Green. Also on the Democratic ticket John Brooks faces Jessie Rae Scott for Commissioner of labor and State Auditor Harry Bridges is challenged by Lillian Woo.

Generally there is concern that a second primary won't bring out the voters as a first primary does. Particularly is this feared this year since there is no second primary gubernatorial campaign to bring out the voters.

However, the remaining races this year have been spirited this year — and perhaps at times even vicious. Thus there is more interest than might be expected and we might possibly see a heavier vote because of it.

At any rate every voter should familiarize himself with the stands the candidates have taken on the various issue and every registered voter should make certain to vote tomorrow.

Degree Of Success Despite A Squeeze

It was a tight financial squeeze, but the city board of education was able to let bids for the first part of the new middle school last week.

Low bids of $2,117,052 were accepted to construct a 16 classroom unit, cafeteria, media center and pupil personnel area.

That's a long way from the total plant, but it is a start. Its too bad that funds weren't on hand to build more of the school since costs will only go up in the future.

We have made a start on this facility, however; and that's a help.

THIS AFTERNOON Priority On Police Safety

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The physical protection of law enforcement officers on the job is being given top priority in development of North Carolina's Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS).

That network of information which will span this state and provide links to other states and national data is now in the design stage, with completion expected to cost some $6 million.

Not without its major controversies during early development stages, the system now appears to be on track. Federal regulations which destroyed public access to critical information which has long been available to the public and press were overturned by efforts of Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., and representatives of the N. C. Press Association and N. C. Broadcasters.

Early battles over control at the state level were resolved by creation of a super-board cutting across agency and department lines in state government, and bringing laymen into the structure.

Two Boards

And with the recent establishment of both a new CJIS Board and a related CJIS Security and Privacy Board, the detail work of the system design is underway.

Gov. Holshouser's legal counselor, Sam H. Long, is the staffman most intimately involved in the long-running effort to get CJIS off the ground.

Long recently reviewed that history for the two newly created boards, and talked about priorities, and how the system will actually operate. He presented a foot-thick stack of design proposals from firms interested in doing the detailed storage and retrieval hookups statewide.

Priority in the system, Long said, will go to "those things which improve our ability to protect our law enforcement officers on the street."

How can that best be achieved? Any number of steps might be possible — identification of dangerous, wanted people before the officer approaches; data on

By ART BUCHWALD That War On Poverty

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed he wasn't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns.)

One of the big debates going on in Washington is whether the poor people should have a voice in the war on poverty. Everybody has been heard from on the subject except the poor people themselves. So I decided to go out and interview a poor person and ask him what he thought about it. It wasn't easy to find one, because nobody likes to admit to being poor. Also, poor people are suspicious of strangers asking questions. hey believe, and rightly so, that no good can come of it.

I finally found a man in a bar in one of the rundown sections of Washington who was willing to admit he was poor and also willing to talk about it.

I asked him if he thought he would like to serve on a committee to see what could be done about poverty.

"Mister, if I had any ideas what to do about poverty, I wouldn't be poor."

"But there is a school of thought in Washington that poor people are the only ones who know the real problems of the poor, and they should be strongly involved in the program to formulate and implement antipoverty programs."

"I wouldn't serve on such a board unless they paid me," he said.

Other Editors Say Worth The Price

(Washington Daily News)

We are amazed when we read how much it costs to run for governor of North Carolina.

While we already knew the price is not cheap, when we see in print that for every vote cast in the recent Democratic primary in North Carolina, it cost $4.44 per vote, then we must wonder if the job is worth the price paid.

The story says that 670,000 votes were cast in our state in the Democratic primary. Then it goes on to say that George Wood spent $1,066,000. Ed O'Herron spent $891,000. Jim Hunt spent $1,019,000. And even with an existing cost of $4.44 per vote, how much the campaign cost Tom Strickland is not even figured in the $4.44 per vote.

Where does all this money come from? We read that candidates for the most part today do not get in contributions the amount needed to wage a big campaign. Thus, it is necessary to borrow sizeable sums. And candidates did borrow a lot of money. And this money which was borrowed must be paid back.

No candidate wants to get into a primary or an election and after the votes are counted look back and say "if only I had spent a little more" or "if only I had worked a little harder." I would have been successful.

To be sure, the governor's chair in North Carolina is a much sought after prize. It is the highest elective office in our state. It is a place of power and prestige. But again when four or five people are seeking the same nomination for the same office, all but one is bound to lose. And the others are hurt and in debt so often.

We seek to answer the question, and for the winner, perhaps we can say that he is justified in his expenditures. But for those who lose out, we cannot see how they can justify the spending of so much money.

It would seem to us that spending $4.44 per voter surely would have meant a much larger turnout over the state than the 670,000 who voted. We spend all the money and we cannot even get half the registered Democrats to go to the polls and cast ballots. And the Republicans, while spending far less money in the first primary, also had a far smaller percentage of their registered votes go to polls and cast ballots.

Running for office today costs a lot of money. Unless a candidate was wealth in his or her own right or unless he or she has some good friends who will put up the cash, the effort is just about impossible from the outset.

THE INSIDE REPORT Regrets Of Kim Il Sung

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Contrary to hints from the State Department that Moscow and Peking secretly helped avert a new Korean war, non-political government experts believe the recent crisis was a poly orchestrated by North Korea with limited political goals in mind.

There is no hard intelligence of any intervention by either the Soviet Union or Communist China that prompted the North Korean expressions of regrets for the murder of two U.S. Army officers. Rather, there is a strong feeling among Pyongyang-watchers here that North Korean dictator Kim Il Sung never wanted the provocation of Aug. 18 to escalate into warfare but intended it for political effects, both in Korea and the U.S.

Thus, instead of triumphantly demonstrating the value of detente, the events in Korea were part of continued Communist pressure on one of the world's most dangerous flashpoints. The reaction on Capitol Hill, combined with the overall political climate here, should encourage North Korea to keep up that pressure.

The most obvious goal of the Aug. 18 incident was to draw attention to Korea at the recently completed non-aligned nations conference in Colombo, Sri Lanka, and the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly session. For the longer range, however, Kim's targets were political opinion, at home and among his enemies.

Troubled by grave economic problems in North Korea, Kim is believed by experts to have fomented a crisis to firm up national morale.

At age 64, the Korean despot is in questionable health, troubled by a visible growth on his neck which is getting alarmingly large. The designation of his eldest son, 36-year-old Chong Il Sung, as heir apparent has not proved popular with the party apparatus; the succession is now in doubt. Accordingly, the time-tested device for diverting attention from domestic discord is to generate a unifying foreign threat.

In the hermit state of North Korea, there is no quick way to determine whether Kim's bloody play fulfilled its domestic goals. It is clear, however, that it largely achieved its foreign purpose: to raise new doubts among Americans about their seemingly endless Korean commitment.

Beneath public expressions of outrage over Pyongyang's latest atrocity were private complaints on Capitol Hill that American blood was too precious to spill for Park Chung Hee's authoritarian South Korean regime. Indeed, events following the Aug. 18 incident indicate development of an anti-South Korea congressional bloc on the model of the old anti-South Vietnam bloc.

Just as the House International Affairs Committee was about to adopt a resolution condemning North Korean actions, Rep. Don Fraser of Minnesota proposed an additional paragraph condemning South Korea's sentencing of political prisoners.

Amazingly, the committee adopted it. Fraser, who has become the scourge of Seoul, on Sept. 1 won committee approval to subpoena South Korean diplomats and their documents.

That same day this question was raised by Rep. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts in a House floor statement attacking the sentencing: "Should the United States that gives massive economic and military assistance to South Korea confess that it has no sanction for this type of indefensible conduct?" While the Frasers and Drinans propose ending all aid as a sanction, Jimmy Carter talks of a staged withdrawal of all U.S. ground forces from Korea (though lately he has promised to first consult Japan.)

"But if you did that, you would lose contact with poor people and you would no longer be able to speak for them."

"Exactly. Poor people don't want to be spoken for. They just want to get the hell out of the neighborhood. Asking poor people how to win the war on poverty is like asking Japanese how I win World War II."

"You've got a point there. But there is a great deal of pressure to have poor people work out their own destinies in the antipoverty program."

"Okay, then let them put everybody who is poor on an antipoverty committee and pay them all a salary. Once they're on a salary, you'll solve every problem a poor person has. And they'll all

Public Forum

To the editor:

This past week the DAILY REFLECTOR carried a story which quoted State Representative H. M. (Mickey) Michaux, D-Durham, as saying that he would not attend the National March for Human and Labor Rights held in Raleigh on Labor Day.

Rep. Michaux, one of four blacks in the state House, was further quoted as saying that demonstrations of this type are a thing of the past and that the ballot box is the most efficient way to effect changes now.

Your story failed to include another statement attributed by other papers to Rep. Michaux. That statement was "I'm probably going to be out somewhere trying to get Howard Lee elected lieutenant governor."

Rep. Michaux chooses to use his time in a way which he thinks will have the most favorable effect on the future of the state.

Strength For Today

THE FAR COUNTRY

Once a year the police commissioner of New York City publishes a list of people who have disappeared during the preceding twelve months. Some years the list runs to hundreds of names. It is amazing to realize that such a multitude of people simply disappear from their ordinary walks of life and are never heard from again.

What happens to these people? Doubtless many thousands, like the prodigal son, are in a far country. Some fancied wrong, some unhappiness, some deep-seated aversion to some member of the family keeps thousands of people from the happiness they would have if they could only forget themselves and remember that nothing ever gives such real joy as purposeful living in the place they call home.

The neighbor's field is not green; the bright lights are not bright. They are tawdry and artificial. The golden windows in the distance are not made of gold. They are simply reflecting the sunlight in which we are standing.

Doubt Capital Spending Boom

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Economists have been waiting for months for industry to begin increasing its spending for new plants and equipment.

Such capital investment is considered vital to continued economic growth. It would provide more jobs, leading to a higher level of consumer spending.

And it would expand the capacity of businesses to supply their products, thus preventing future shortages that bring higher prices.

Whether the long-awaited capital spending boom has started was still in doubt this past week. And one group of economists said a boom isn't likely soon, and may not even be necessary.

The Commerce Department released its latest survey on capital spending plans. Polled in July and August, businessmen said they anticipate spending $121.2 billion this year for new plants and equipment.

That's not as much as it seems, considering a 4.5 per cent rise in capital goods prices in the six months ended in August.

And it indicated little change in spending plans since the previous Commerce Department survey in April and May, when businessmen said they planned a 7.3 per cent increase this year over last.

Meanwhile, economists at Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, said in a report this past week that the economy has enough production capacity without a new surge in capital spending.

"While capital spending is likely to trend up, a boom isn't about to happen — at least over the next 6-12 months," they said in the bank's monthly economic letter. "And it really doesn't matter..."

Although capital spending has slackened off in recent years, its rate of growth in the late 1960s was great enough to offset the recent decline, the bank said.

"What deterioration there has been in capital investment in recent years is cyclical in origin, and has not — with the exception of petroleum and some metals — resulted in any significant shortfall in the capital stock needed to keep the economy growing."

The supply shortages and double-digit inflation of 1973-74 were not the result of a lack of industrial capacity, the bank said.

"They were the result of a unique set of economic circumstances that stimulated demand in a way that is unlikely to be repeated in the foreseeable future."

These circumstances include a big upsurge in worldwide money supplies in 1971-72 that touched off the high demand for goods, and U.S. price controls and dollar devaluations that boosted the demand for U.S. goods abroad.

To Drum Up Pat Brown Believes Son Doing 'Remarkable Job'

RALEIGH (AP) — Tibbie Roberts of Morehead City has been appointed to work full time to drum up church support for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution (ERA).

Mrs. Roberts was appointed by the North Carolina Council of Churches. She will work with a Council of Churches' ERA task group and with the coalition North Carolinians United for ERA. Financial assistance for the work will come from a national group of Protestants, Catholics and Jews called Religious Committee for ERA.

A mother of four and grandmother of 10, Mrs. Roberts was Christian social involvement coordinator of the state's United Methodist Women for the last five years and is chairman of the administrative board of the First United Methodist Church of Morehead City.

move the hell out of the neighborhood."

"On the surface this sounds like a good solution to the problem, but it would put a great financial strain on the government."

"Yeah, but if you put people on salary, you wouldn't have to make welfare payments, and the poor people would pay taxes so it would eventually even itself out."

"I agree," I said, "but if you put all poor people on antipoverty committees and paid them, you would eliminate poverty and there would be no reason to have the committees."

"I'm not sure about that. As soon as people get a salary, they can get all the credit they want from banks and finance companies. The more you borrow, the poorer you become. As long as there are credit companies, there will always be poor people."

"It makes a lot of sense," I admitted. "you seem to have thought this out pretty well."

"When you're poor, you have nothing else to think about."

"I wonder why the government hasn't thought of it."

"Because they're afraid we'd all move the hell out of the neighborhood."

do otherwise in a party which voted solidly for Ronald Reagan.

But there are differences. Privette has advocated repealing, in phased steps, a slew of taxes that hit businessmen: the intangibles tax, the inventory taxes, etc. He has never specified how he would make up the lost revenues and balance his budget. Flaherty has urged holding the line on taxes.

Flaherty has come out with a detailed program for changes in the utilities laws. It has some things in it for consumers and some for the power companies. Privette has simply vowed "to cut out the fat," in the utilities' operations, presumably through the appointment of hard-nosed commissioners.

And again, there are differences in the milieus from which the candidates come. Flaherty, a Massachusetts native, entered North Carolina and state politics through the Bryolith furniture family, long the patriarchs of moderate, mountain Republicanism. He would most likely represent that tradition as governor.

Privette comes from a different atmosphere, steeped in the anti liquor politics of the Christian Action League. There are populist streaks in that tradition, and Privette took some fairly populist positions in the years before he ran for governor. He backed, for example, the same tax reform package Lee supports. He does not any longer.

Now, he has aligned himself with the conservative, eastern North Carolina wing of the party. Where he would line up as governor is hard to predict.

Privette himself chuckles when asked the question. "Well, I'll tell you this. It'll sure be an interesting four years," he said.

than he is," Brown said.

The former governor, now a Beverly Hills attorney, says he is very active in the practice of law but deals mostly with matters affecting government and is a member of several commissions concerned with prison reform, welfare and the environment.

"I try not to embarrass any of my son's appointees with any personal appearances where there might be some accusation of favoritism," the elder Brown said.

"But I did very well during the (Ronald) Reagan Administration because I asked no quarter and I gave none."

"I know government," he said. "I've been in it for 25 years and there are matters of administration, customs, prispolitical climate, Pyongyang-watchers believe Kim never had any intention of escalating the murder of the Americans into a war for the entire peninsula. Besides, his notions of attempting a lightning seizure of Seoul last year following the fall of Saigon were vetoed by both Communist superpowers.

Nevertheless, some close students of the Korean scene deduce that Kim, author of so much bloody mischief in East Asia for a generation, would never issue his first apology for anything without pressure from the Russians or Chinese. That deduction, however, is not backed up by facts. Officials at the highest level say there is simply no intelligence of any such intervention.

In his declining years, Kim Il Sung may have moved from sheer brute force to a mixture of brute force and political maneuver. Experts here believe his immediate goals will be to encourage sentiment inside the U.S. advocating a Korean pullout while seeking bilateral U.S.-North Korean negotiations, leaving out the South Koreans. That may prove more difficult for U.S. politicians to resist than a naked military threat.

ons and licensing that I feel particularly familiar with."

Brown said he is proud of his son's record as governor of California but said the unexpected could derail the young governor's career.

"I think he's done a remarkable job," Brown said. "I think he was far ahead of most of the governmental officials in recognizing the fact that expenditures were getting out of line and he still had the foresight to appoint liberals who had the compassion to administer the allocated funds."

"My only criticism," he said, "is that he kept too many Reagan Republicans in appointed positions instead of getting rid of them."

He said his son's presidential campaign was successful as far as it went. "When you go into six states and defeat the champ, well, my feeling is the Democratic Party should have nominated him."

It would have made a lot of people happy, he laughed. "It certainly would have made his mother and father happy."

But the road ahead could be rocky for his son, Brown said. He cited the case of Caryl Chessman, a rapist known as the "Red Light Bandit."

"In my own case I was very popular the first year," Brown said. "Even the Republican press praised me. Then the Chessman case succeeded in making everybody unhappy. It really hurt."

"I gave him a 60-day reprieve and the capital punishment advocates got all over me. Then I had to let him die. He had been twice convicted of the felony."

"You would have thought I raped those two women. The foes of capital punishment thought I should have found a way to save him."

"Politics is such a volatile business. You can be on top today and tomorrow be hurt by things you can't control. Jerry can be very popular today and then do something badly, and make a whole group of people unhappy."

"Those are the ups and downs of politics."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is due today for most of the nation but cooler in the Plains. Showers are forecast for the Southeast, the upper Great Lakes, Oklahoma and Colorado. Rain is expected for the Pacific Northwest. (AP Wirephoto)

By The Associated Press

A ridge of high pressure lay over North Carolina this morning, leaving mostly sunny skies and mild temperatures today. But a disturbance over Florida that was headed northward left the chance of showers and thundershowers in southern counties of the Tar Heel state Tuesday.

Temperatures over North Carolina will generally range from the upper 70s to the mid 80s today and Tuesday. Lows at night are expected to be mostly in the mid 50s to mid 60s.

Sunday temperatures across the state ranged from the mid 70s in the mountains to the mid 80s along the coast. The highest reported temperature was 89 degrees at Fayetteville.

No measurable rain was reported during the 24 hour period ending at 2 a.m.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina calls for largely sunny skies today. An increase of cloudiness will be noted over southern counties. Highs this afternoon gen-

Flaherty Here At Fund-Raiser

By BARBARA MATHEWS
Reflector Staff Writer

Leadership is the crucial issue in this year's gubernatorial campaign, according to David Flaherty, Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Flaherty was in Greenville yesterday for a Pitt County Republican party fund-raising event.

"Look at Jim Hunt's record in the General Assembly, with 49 Democrats and one Republican to lead," said Flaherty.

"Several newspapers have called the record of the General Assembly dismal because they did not have any leadership.

"Then look at my record as Secretary of the Department of Human Resources. We took a brand-new department and molded it into a smooth-running unit. We streamlined the department, reduced it from 14 layers of management to only four, and saved the taxpayers $50 million."

Flaherty also accused Hunt of "flip-flopping" on issues. "You have seen the Democrats flip-flop in national issues," he said.

"My opponent has his arm around Jimmy Carter because he flip-flops just like Carter. Jim Hunt is the same man who three-and-a-half years ago was trying to take away the power of the governor.

"Now that he is running for governor, he's trying to get the veto power."

"Jim Hunt ran for lieutenant governor so he could get across educational legislation to get us straightened out. Now, he's running for governor on the same platform."

Flaherty spoke of his department's record on the Medicaid problem.

"In North Carolina, we did not sit by and wring our hands about the Medicaid problem, we looked to the private sector for a solution," said Flaherty.

"And they saved us some tax dollars."

"The one thing I'm guilty of as secretary of the department is that in negotiating the contract I did such a good job that the state made money and the private sector lost."

"We saved the taxpayers $22 million."

"So like any good businessmen who are losing money, the private firm wanted out."

The candidate said he feels the Republican ticket this year will be a strong one.

"This year, we have the best council of state ticket we have ever had to offer," he said.

"If you look at the Democratic ticket, you can see there is no question that we have the chance to win this time if we do not underestimate our chances.

"We can win and we will win with candidates like these."

Other Republican speakers at the event yesterday included Bill Hiatt, candidate for lieutenant governor, Joe Ward, candidate for Congress from the first district, and Evelyn S. Tyler, candidate for state superintendent of public instruction.

Hiatt spoke of the need for educational reform.

"I've been in education now for 20 years," he said.

"Money is not the answer. We must return to the basics of education."

"We are raising a generation of computer punchers. I will do everything possible to make sure every child in North Carolina has the opportunity for a quality education."

Dr. Joe Ward addressed the group on the abuse of power by government officials.

"If there's anything that concerns conservatives, it is the use of power," he said.

"We do not want anyone to get too much power, either in state government, federal government, county or city governments, in the multinational corporations or on the police force."

"The thing that makes this country great is that we have been able to diffuse our power."

Ward, who will face incumbent Walter B. Jones for the Congressional seat, said he entered the race with the intent of winning.

"We are not running with the idea that we're not going to win," he said.

"When I doctor somebody, I doctor them to live, when I run for Congress, I run to win."

Mrs. Evelyn S. Tyler, who will face Democratic incumbent Craig Phillips in November, said education has gotten away from the people and become "an empire for a few."

"There are people in power who lust for more power," she said.

"The education of your children has gotten out of your grasp."

I would like to see more money going into the classroom level.

"If we can tear down the bureaucracy so the money being spent now to pay those high salaries is put in the classroom, where it belongs, we can improve our education."

Mrs. Tyler also said she favors the development of minimum standards for each grade.

"I do not want any youngster to graduate from high school unless that diploma has meaning," she said.

"We cannot afford any more to waste North Carolina's most valuable resource."

"I would suggest that we build some minimum standards for each level so that each year every child knows he has learned a certain amount."

"If I'm elected, you will see some changes for the better."

World's Largest 'Autograph Book'

EL MORRO, N.M. (UPI) — Towering 200 feet above a valley floor in New Mexico's western Valencia County is the world's largest autograph book. But instead of paper, it's made of sandstone.

El Morro, or Inscription Rock, was first used by the Indians who traveled between the ancient cities of Zuni and Acoma. They left petroglyph picture writing in the face of the rock.

The spot was ideal because a natural well provided a constant supply of water for those who stopped. Rain and melted snow from the top of the giant rock filtered down into a natural basin at the foot of it.

The first inscription by European man was recorded in April, 1605, by Don Juan de Onate, one of the early Spanish explorers of the Southwest.

As the Spanish moved into New Mexico and the Southwest to colonize the region, many travelers passing through the area left their signatures on the rock.

The Catholic Church attempted to establish missions for the hostile Zuni and Hopi Indians of the region during the Spanish colonization period, but their initial efforts failed.

On March 23, 1632, a Spanish soldier who signed his message only "Lujan" told of heading west vowing to avenge the deaths of Father Letrado, killed by the Zunis at one of the Spanish missions.

The last of the Spanish inscriptions was made in 1774. There was a long delay before the next signature was carved into the rock, in 1836, by an American who left only the initials O.R.

The O.R. inscription was found Sept. 17, 1869, by Lt. J.H. Simpson of the U.S. Cavalry, who stopped to record all the signatures at El Morro.

Simpson, as might be expected, decided to leave his message in the El Morro guest register. But he flubbed the job. He wrote that he had "visited and copied the inscriptions." After realizing he had left the letter "r" out of the word "inscriptions," he edited his comments by writing the letter above the right place in the word.

Since Simpson left his signature, hundreds of persons, including Indian agents, traders, surveyors and settlers have left their mark on El Morro.

El Morro was made a national monument in the early 1900s, and many of the historical signatures have been preserved and protected.

Two Sunday Car Mishaps

An estimated $1,150 property damage resulted from two Sunday morning collisions investigated by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:45 a.m. mishap on Polk Avenue, 100 feet South of the Crockett Drive intersection.

Police said a car driven by Terry Stanley Lloyd of 109 Firewood La. collided with a parked car owned by Clifton Earl Knox of Castle Haynes, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Knox car and $500 damage to the Lloyd auto.

Lloyd was charged with driving under the influence and operating left of center.

No charges were made in the second collision which occurred about 2:40 a.m. on Cotanche Street, 75 feet North of the Seventh Street intersection.

Investigators reported cars driven by Desiree Vann Conyers of Route 2, Franklinton and Kenneth Wayne Cratch of Route 5, Washington were involved in the mishap.

Damage was estimated at $100 to the Conyers car and $450 to the Cratch auto.

One of California's most interesting repositories of Indian lore is the state Indian Museum in Sacramento.

'Something For Everyone' In New Tax Legislation

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is about to pass a tax bill that will affect everyone who files a federal income tax return. It continues this year's reductions for most Americans and offers new cuts for millions of others.

The bill continues through 1977 this year's individual tax credits, providing a tax reduction of $35 for the taxpayer and each dependent, or 2 per cent of his first $9,000 of taxable income up to $180.

The election-year tax measure makes an effort to provide something for just about everybody. For instance, about two million American families are expected to take advantage of just one provision of the bill — one that would reduce taxes for working parents who hire babysitters.

While cutting taxes for most Americans, the bill also will lower federal revenues by about $17.9 billion. The individual tax cuts will total about $15 billion, and business tax cuts will reduce federal income another $4.5 billion. This will be partly offset by $1.6 billion in tax increases, levied mostly against the wealthiest Americans.

Congress is expected to give final approval to the bill this week, and President Ford is expected to sign it.

In addition to the child care provisions, the assortment of other changes would make it easier to claim alimony payments as a tax deduction; would expand tax benefits in job-related moves and would clear the way for tax-deferred pensions for housewives.

Here is how these benefits work:

CHILD CARE

On the tax return filed next spring for 1976, working parents can subtract from their tax 20 per cent of the first $2,000 spent during the year for the care of one child, or 20 per cent of the first $4,000 spent during the year for the care of two or more children. The maximum tax credit for one child would be $400; for two or more, the maximum credit would be $800. It is available to those families where both parents work, or where the only parent works.

The credit would be extended to those families using the standard deduction as well as those who itemize deductions. This is expected to double the number of families using child care tax advantages, from two million to four million.

The credit will be available to separated parents and to couples when one spouse works only part-time. Relatives may be hired for the child care if Social Security taxes are withheld from the babysitting payments.

The new credit may be calculated on all qualifying child care payments made in 1976, and it will eliminate the complex, separate form used to claim child care deductions under the old law.

The old law permitted a tax deduction from taxable income of up to $4,800 a year for expenses of hiring someone to care for a child under 15 or a disabled dependent or spouse while the parents work.

There are several conditions in the old law: Both parents usually had to work full time; no deduction was permitted for payments to relatives; the deduction was reduced $1 for each $2 of annual income above $35,000.

Most importantly, the old law required the expense be claimed as an itemized deduction on tax returns. The benefit has not been available to the 60 per cent of Americans who use the standard deduction.

The bill changes the deduction to a credit. Deductions are subtracted from income; credits are subtracted from taxes owed.

There is another distinction. Up to incomes beyond $35,000 a year, where it rapidly diminishes, the old $4,800-a-year deduction was worth more to richer than to the poorer taxpayers. The tax credit is calculated the same for every taxpayer, no matter how much or little he or she earns.

Here is how a family of four would fare under the old law and under the new bill. The family includes two children under 15, has an income of $15,000 a year with both parents working, has itemized deductions of $1,700, and takes the maximum $180 credit for individuals.

OLD LAW — If the family claims the maximum child-care deduction of $4,800, the tax owed would be $725.

NEW LAW — The child-care cost no longer would be a deduction and the family would use the maximum standard deduction. Without the child-care credit, this would mean a tax liability of $749. But the maximum credit of $800 for two children would reduce the tax bill to zero, a savings from the old law of $725. The saving varies with income and child care expenses.

ALIMONY

This is another expense that could not be deducted under the old law unless the taxpayer itemized deductions.

The new provision allows a taxpayer to deduct alimony expenses with or without itemizing. The change would be effective next Jan. 1, meaning this provision cannot be used until the returns for 1977, filed in the spring of 1978.

MOVING EXPENSES

Under certain circumstances the law has allowed a deduction from taxable income of some moving expenses if the move is required because of employment.

The maximum deduction has been $2,500 for expenses of house-hunting, selling the old home and temporary lodging — if the new place of work was 50 miles farther from the old residence than was the old place of work.

In addition to these limited expenses, the taxpayer may deduct fully all reasonable expenses for moving furniture and for lodging for himself and his family while en route to the new home.

The new law will raise the maximum deduction to $3,000 and cut the 50-mile rule to 35 miles.

The changes will become effective for moves on or after next Jan. 1, and the new provision will be used for 1977 returns.

HOUSEWIVES' PENSIONS

This change, effective next Jan. 1, is generally viewed as the government's first step in rewarding the housewife's contributions to the economy and the nation's social structure.

It is a small step, likely to be broadened in coming years.

Present law allows a worker who has no other pension plan to set aside up to $1,500 a year in an Individual Retirement Account. That money is not taxed until it is withdrawn; that generally would be at retirement when most persons would be in a considerably lower tax bracket.

The new bill will allow the worker to raise the total contribution to $1,750 a year if the extra money is earmarked for a pension for a spouse who does not work outside the home.

This could result in a joint account of $1,750 a year or separate accounts of $875 for each spouse.

Although this provision is aimed at helping housewives, the extra benefit could go to a husband who does not work outside the home so long as the wife works and qualifies for the pension plan.

Next: individual cuts, tax simplification.

Henry Bringing 3 Propositions

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Haunted by dangers of Soviet intervention, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is flying to southern Africa with three proposals for dousing the rising flames of a black-white war.

The short-term goals he has defined for himself both publicly and privately are:

—To set up a negotiating forum in which Rhodesia's white rulers would arrange peacefully to transfer power to the black majority within two years.

The United States, working with a consortium of allied, commonwealth made up of other friendly nations, will be ready to underwrite this process with multibillion-dollar offers to guarantee Rhodesia's 270,000 whites against loss of assets and to help the six million black Rhodesians with a huge program of investment after independence.

—To organize a constitution-writing parley for the Namibian people, formerly known as South-West Africans, in which exiled as well as authorized political groups would take part. South Africa, which still rules that onetime German colony, already has accepted that the mineral-rich land can become a state by the end of 1978.

But South African Prime Minister John Vorster's government would like to hand over power to a group of its own pet tribal chiefs. The United Nations, including the United States, say the banished South West African People's Organization, SWAPO, must be allowed to participate as authentic representatives of the Namibians.

—To urge the Vorster government to recognize that its policy of apartheid, or separate racial development, is "incompatible with any concept of human dignity." Kissinger, struck by the turmoil that has swept South Africa since June with a known death toll exceeding 300, has said, "No system that leads to periodic upheavals can possibly be just — nor can it last."

He will be pressing Vorster as he has done before "to take account of the conscience of humanity even while recognizing that the process of evolutionary and peaceful change will take time."

Avers South Is For Ford

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — President Ford will carry most of the South because Jimmy Carter "doesn't stand for what Southerners stand for," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Saturday.

Thurmond told a news conference that Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee, is controlled by big labor bosses, wants to cut defense spending and wants to enlarge the power of the federal government.

He said most Southerners are opposed to these positions.

Thurmond said a Southerner hasn't been elected president since 1848 and that he would like to vote for a Southerner for president. "But Carter is no longer Southern; he has aligned himself with philosophies that Southerners don't like," he said.

Thurmond was in Hot Springs to speak to the state Republican party convention.

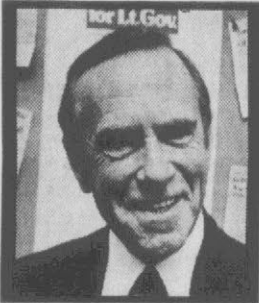

Thurmond said Carter's choice of Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota as his running mate demonstrated Carter's liberal philosophy.

Thurmond said he doesn't believe Ford has been advised to concede the South to Carter. He promised that both Ford and Dole will strenuously campaign in the South.

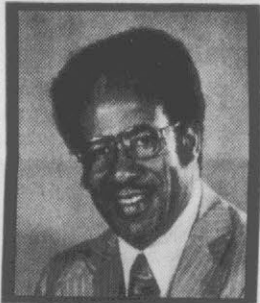

With Jimmy Green, better government is a way of life - not just a promise.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

Pat Dye spent last week wondering just what kind of team his East Carolina Pirates were. Saturday night, he spent a couple of hours reveling in just how well they performed against a Southern Mississippi team that never got the chance to show what kind of a team it was.

"I said after the game that we had a lot of big plays, and that had a lot to do with the big score," Dye said Sunday afternoon.

"But we're not that good, and Southern Mississippi isn't that bad. We got all the breaks and they didn't get any."

Dye heaped praise on his staff for preparing the team for its opener. "It was as good a first game effort as I've ever been around," he said.

"We didn't make any bad mistakes and we did what we wanted to. It was a great effort. We hit real well, and I was pleased with the conditioning. Our work there paid off." Dye added that as of that time, prior to the Sunday team meeting, he knew of no injuries.

"Our specialty team did a great job for us. They punted adequately, they gave good protection on all our kicks, and they did an extremely good job of covering kicks.

"The defensive punting team had two big plays that got us 14 points (a blocked punt that led to a touchdown, and 70-yard punt return by Gerald Hall for a score). These guys deserve a lot of credit," Dye said.

Defensively, Dye felt that the game was the best played in three years. "We were technically sound. I'm prouder than I've ever been, but I don't see how I can single out any one player. They all did a super job. They hit a lot of good licks. Our plan was to cut off the inside game and force them outside and make them pass. We did just that."

The coach added that his defensive line and linebackers were able to control the line play, despite the bigger size of Southern.

"Our secondary also had a great night in getting after people. It was a real fine effort and a good way to start," he added.

On offense, Dye said he had to be proud of the way the line got after Southern. "Again, we were able to control the line play, despite their being bigger than us. All of our linemen did the job."

Dye felt that the two fullbacks, Vince Kolanko and Raymond Jones, did exactly what was expected of them. They opened up the outside options by running hard for good yardage up the middle early in the game.

"Our two running backs (Eddie Hicks and Willie Hawkins) played like we expected them to. They have a lot of talent and they displayed it in the game.

"And Mike Weaver (quarterback) was just magnificent. He did a super job." Weaver's leadership resulted in a score every time he quarterbacked the team during the game.

Now plans turn toward preparation for meeting N. C. State.

"They are not an 0-2 team by any means," Dye said. "They may be a better offensive team than they were last year." The coach added that at the time, he had not looked at defensive film and could not comment on it.

"They moved the football in both of their games, and they are certainly not going to be easy to beat. They picked up over 400 yards against Wake Forest."

Like this weekend's 48-0 triumph, Dye feels that the kicking game and the line play will decide the contest.

"I expect them (State) to be ready to play, They'll be at home, they have two games behind them, and this will be an advantage. But I don't think our guys will have trouble putting the game into perspective. They know State is better than its record, and they know that State would love to beat us."

Two Pirates are nearing career milestones that they could reach in the State game.

Weaver currently has 1,830 yards in total offense, and needs just 17 more to become the all-time Number Ten player in ECU history. He also has 877 passing yards, and needs just 52 more to move into fifth place on the top ten lists.

Terry Gallaher, who added 44 yards on a touchdown pass Saturday night, now has 477 yards, just 28 short of the number nine position in the all-time career lists.

New W&M Team Is On The Gridiron

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
AP Sports Writer

William & Mary's Indians may be atop the Southern Conference football standings at the moment, but East Carolina's Pirates look like the team to beat — just as the league's coaches predicted.

"I can't believe we're 48 points better than Southern Mississippi. We had to have some breaks to beat them. Everything just went our way and nothing went their way," said Coach Pat Dye after his Pirates massacred Southern Miss 48-0 in their season opener Saturday night.

The Indians, picked to finish in the basement, trounced Virginia Military's Keydets 34-2 in their first conference game, and it wasn't really that close. This led Coach Jim Root to observe that "this is the new William & Mary football team."

Furman's impressive Paladins ran their record to 2-0 with a 17-7 victory over Tennessee Tech, and Appalachian State's Mountaineers rebounded from a 21-10 defeat by South Carolina to maul East Tennessee State 44-3 behind sophomore running back Scott McConnell.

The only nonleague loser of the six title-eligible teams was The Citadel. Ciro Piccirillo's 23-yard field goal with 54 seconds left game Clemson a 10-7 decision over the Bulldogs, who lost split end Mike Riley indefinitely with a knee injury on the game's last play.

All three new league members won. Only Tennessee-Chattanooga, which beat Illinois State 24-0, was making its first start.

But Nelson threw two scoring passes to Ray Crisp Jr. as Marshall, 1-1, upset 20th-ranked Miami of Ohio 21-16. Darryl Ripford carried a school-record 45 times, gained 172 yards and scored twice as Western Carolina, 2-0, turned back Livingston 21-14.

"It was a total team effort in every respect," said Root of William & Mary's victory. "The defense had a great day. Two of the scores against them were not their fault."

VMI scored with just 1:20 gone after an Indian fumble, and Johnny Garnett ran 19 yards with 1:38 left in the game after a 70-yard punt return by Gay McNeal.

In between, junior tailback Jim Kruis ran 30 times for 151 yards and two touchdowns and sophomore quarterback Tommy Rozants hit six of 14 passes for 118 yards and a 30-yard scoring strike to sophomore split end Joe Manderfield.

"Our offensive line sure opened up some real estate for the running game," said Root of the Indians' 271 rushing yards. VMI Coach Bob Thalman said "our lousy individual breakdowns got us whipped."

U.S. Open Play: Borg Bows To Connors

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — The sun finally set on Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the crown prince of world tennis. And it was James Scott Connors, the pugnacious lefty back in the limelight after a year in the shadows, who turned out the lights.

Connors regained the title he lost last year and vaulted back into the international spotlight Sunday when he beat Borg in the finals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships. The match lasted three hours, 10 minutes, the scores were 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4, and when it was over, Connors had sweet revenge against those who branded him an also ran after his second-place finishes at Wimbledon, the Australian championships and the Open last year.

Sunday's match began in bright, late afternoon sunshine and ended under the lights at the West Side Tennis Club. It was a curious contest, full of errors by both players. There was no tempo. No one really took command. In the end it was the third-set tiebreaker that determined the outcome.

Connors and Borg split the first two sets and broke each other almost at will as the third set went to 6-6. Borg missed several opportunities to win the tiebreaker as Connors fought off four set points. He saved the first one with a short volley and the second one with a stinging forehand down the line.

At 7-8 he raced to net and smashed an overhead and at 8-9 he did it again. Finally Connors drove a backhand shot past Borg and watched as the Swede hit a forehand wide to win 11-9. Borg never recovered.

Connors broke Borg's serve in the fifth game of the final set when the Swede batted a backhand into the net and then whacked a forehand long. Connors had only to hold serve for the match and he did.

"I was very surprised he played so well," said Borg, calm and expressionless even in defeat. "This is the best he's played against me."

Connors collected $30,000 for his efforts—the same prize money Chris Evert picked up when she beat Evonne Goolagong to win the women's title Saturday.

The doubles championships were also decided Sunday. Marty Riessen and Tom Okker knocked off Australians Paul Kronk and Cliff Letcher 6-4, 6-4 to win the men's doubles; South Africans Linky Boshoff and Ilana Kloss whipped Virginia Wade and Olga Morozova 6-1, 6-4 to take the women's crown, and the mixed went to Billie Jean King and Phil Dent, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 winners over Betty Stove and Frew McMillan.

McGee Hopes Loss To Player Of Year

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — "I hope," said Jerry McGee, "I lost to the Player of the Year."

And Ray Floyd, who beat McGee on the first hole of a sudden death playoff for the title in the World Open Golf Tournament Sunday, may have a shot at that title this season.

"He won the Masters going away. His record in the majors is fantastic. He's won twice. He's been in contention every week, it seems. I hope he makes it," McGee said.

"I think I've got a chance," said Floyd, who birdied the 72nd hole to gain a tie and then beat the bitterly disappointed McGee with a birdie on the first playoff hole on the famed No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

"I'd have had more than a chance if I'd won the last two weeks," Floyd said. "I really thought I was going to. And that could have fulfilled a lifetime's goal in one year. But I still have a chance."

Floyd was in strong contention for the title in both the American Golf Classic and the World Series of Golf, then blew his chances with final rounds of 76 and 78. This time he very carefully avoided what he called "the I've-got-to-win, I've-got-to-win" attitude. I stayed relaxed, just tried to play my game even when I got three strokes behind."

He overcame that deficit, bogeyed a hole he should have birdied, then nursed in a 10-foot birdie putt on the final hole for a round of par 71 that tied McGee for the top spot at 274, 10 under par.

McGee, a winner only once in his 10-year career, came out of the pack with a 66. He thought he had it won, then watched in dismay as Floyd birdied the last hole. On the playoff hole, Floyd ripped his approach out of the rough to within four feet of the flag and made the birdie putt.

Burns, who had led or shared the lead through the first three rounds, faded to a 73 and was third at 275, one shot out of the playoff. Tom Watson shot a 71 and was next at 276. Hale Irwin, Bob E. Smith and Rik Massengale were at 278. Massengale had a 67, Irwin and Smith 72s.

Cale Yarborough Drives Hard For Nat'l Point Championship

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., says winning the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing Grand National point championship "means more to me than anything else right now."

One way to win the point championship is to win races, and the veteran Chevrolet driver captured his second in three weeks Sunday as he held off Mercury driver Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., for a car-length victory in the Capital City 400.

The triumph gave Yarborough a 44-point lead over Dodge driver Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C., who finished third Sunday, and a 107-point lead over Bobby Parsons of Elberbe, N. C.

Parsons had started on the pole, but a blown engine in his Chevrolet knocked him out of the race after 103 laps and he finished next to last.

"I don't wish anybody bad luck, but it kind of takes the pressure off," said Yarborough of Parsons' troubles.

Yarborough, who had won the Southeastern 400 at Bristol, Tenn., just two weeks ago, streaked into the lead when the green flag ended the race's second caution period on the 301st lap and stayed there the rest of the way, though not without a challenge from Allison.

Several times after he went past Petty into second place, Allison moved in behind Yarborough and tried to go around him on the fourth turn. But Yarborough always outraced him down the front stretch.

Yarborough said he wasn't worried about staying in front of Allison, though he admitted he "thought about" Allison charging with victory in sight. "Bobby caught me in traffic.

I wouldn't take any chances in traffic. I didn't care if he got behind me. I felt the car was working well enough to keep him there," said Yarborough.

There were 10 lead changes among five drivers with Yarborough leading three times for a total of 216 laps. His average speed on the .572-mile Fairgrounds Raceway track was 77.993 miles per hour.

Chevrolet driver Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., finished fourth behind Yarborough, Allison and Petty. He and Petty both were a lap back, and Ford driver Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N. C., was fifth two laps behind.

"We had it tough all day, but that's the kind of race to win," Yarborough said.

It also was worth $10,650 and those important NASCAR points.

MARTIN'S ANKLE CATCH
NEW YORK (AP) — "All I can say," Casey Stengel once said "is that I wished I had an infielder like Mr. (Billy) Martin when I managed the Mets.

"I can remember how he saved the 1952 World Series in the seventh game in Ebbets Field. Mr. (Jack) Robinson hits a high infield fly with the bases loaded and the count three and two and everybody is running because it's two out and we're leading 4-2 in the seventh and my first baseman (Joe Collins) don't know where the ball is hit. But Martin does, and because he's playing deep on Robinson he has to run a mile to get to the pitcher's mound where he catches the ball at his ankles and loses his Yankee cap."

Now 29 Suits Filed In Kepone Poisoning, Pollution

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Criminal and civil cases arising from alleged Kepone pollution and poisoning now total 29 cases involving potential fines and damages of more than $200 million.

Suits have been filed by former employees of Life Science Products Co., Inc., the Hopewell company that made the pesticide ingredient until the State Health Department closed the plant in July 1975.

Other suits have been filed by families of the former employees; by commercial fishermen idled by the commercial fishing ban imposed on the James River from Hopewell to Chesapeake Bay, and by the state of Virginia.

More suits are expected from commercial fishermen and some lawyers involved in the suits predict commercial seafood distributors will sue, claiming their sales have been hurt because of the public's fear of Kepone poisoning.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency also is discussing the possibility of a suit to collect damages to help pay for cleaning the Kepone from the James River.

Most of the civil suits and criminal cases have been filed in U. S. District Court here. — 12 civil suits and three criminal cases.

Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. is disposing of the criminal cases first.

The largest of the criminal cases is a 941-count indictment against Allied Chemical Corp., which manufactured Kepone in Hopewell in the early 1970s until it contracted with Life Science to make it for Allied in 1974, and five of Allied's present or former employees.

Allied pleaded no contest to 940 counts of illegally discharging chemical wastes into Virginia waters. The other charge against Allied was one of conspiring to violate federal antipollution laws but that charge has been dismissed.

Three former and present allied employees pleaded guilty to lesser charges and conspiracy charges against them were dropped.

Two other men, Frank L. Piguet and Gerald P. Williams, pleaded innocent to the conspiracy charge and were acquitted by Merhige earlier this month.

Merhige has scheduled Sept. 27 to sentence Allied on the 940 polution law charges to which it pleaded no contest. The fines could total more than $13 million.

Merhige has expressed a desire to have any fines used to help clean the river.

Also scheduled on Sept. 27 are the trials of Life science, Allied, and Life Science co-owner William P. Moore on two other indictments. The first accuses the three of conspiring with Virgil Hundtofte, the other Life Science co-owner, to discharge waste from the Life Science plant into the Hopewell sewer system.

The second indictment accuses them of illegally discharging Kepone wastes from the Life Science plant on 152 separate occasions.

Hundtofte and the city of Hopewell also were codefendants in the second indictment handed down by a special federal grand jury last May. Hopewell pleaded no contest to 10 counts and paid a $10,000 fine in a plea bargaining agreement under which the other charges were dropped.

Hundtofte pleaded no contest to the conspiracy count in the first indictment and to 79 counts in the second indictment in a plea bargaining deal in which he agreed to help federal prosecutors in their cases against the other defendants.

Hundtofte has not yet been sentenced, nor have the two Allied employees, Joseph A. Smith and James G. Sawyer, who pleaded guilty to lesser charges in return for dismissal of the conspiracy charges.

Merhige has scheduled trial dates for only two of the 12 civil suits.

The two suits, which have been consolidated and will be tried at the same time, were filed by 17 former Life Science employees and seek more than $45 million in damages from Allied and Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. of New York, which supplied two chemicals used by Life Science in making Kepone.

The cases are set for trial on Oct. 4, but since the judge has postponed medical tests the defendants had asked the plaintiffs to take, neither side expects the trial to begin then.

Merhige himself has told the lawyers in the cases not to count on the date and he has scheduled a trip to Asheville, N. C., for other cases during the week of Oct. 4.

The lawyers for the defendants have taken statements from representatives of 80 Virginia newspapers and broadcasting stations and have paid $15,000 for a public opinion poll to support their claims the trial should be moved from Richmond. They contend prejudicial publicity about Kepone would make it impossible to get a fair trial in Virginia.

Judge Merhige has not ruled on the motion to move the trial, but he has told Allied lawyers he believes he must try to get an unbiased jury in this area before he can agree to move the trial.

Nine Accused Of False Marketing Cards-Use

YADKINVILLE (UPI) — A federal grand jury has returned a 20-count bill of indictment against nine persons accused of using federal marketing cards to falsely identify and market tobacco at the local market in 1973.

The indictment, returned early last week in Greensboro, charges the nine with using cards for 11 South Carolina farms to falsely identify and market 26,294 pounds of tobacco on the Yadkinville market between Oct. 17 and Nov. 7, 1973.

Four of those indicted were associated with the Big Yadin Tobacco Warehouse, which burned in November, 1973.

They are: Cecil Humphries, operator of the Big Yadin of Hemingway, S.C.; Charles F. Sutton Jr. of Farmville; Herbert T. Highsmith of Robersonville; and Ned V. Langley of Lake City, S.C.

Others named in the indictment are Bobby C. Mayes of Ruffin, S.C.; Fred Garland of Tuberville, S.C.; Hoyt Clifton Lee of Hartsville, S.C.; Randolph McKenzie of Lake City, S.C.; and Wayne W. Knowlton of New Zion, S.C.

All but three of the men were charged with various counts of marketing card violations. Lee, McKenzie and Knowlton each were charged with only one count of conspiracy.

Arraignment for the nine is set for today in U.S. Middle District Court, where a trial date will be set.

In a separate but related development, a November 29 trial date tentatively has been set for a complicated civil suit involving insurance claims in the Big Yadin fire.

Litigation goes back to June, 1974 when two persons in Pitt County and two others in Martin County filed suit against two insurance firms on claims for tobacco lost in the fire.

Those filing the suit were identified as Graham Jefferson of Greenville; Betty Turner Sutton of Farmville, who is the wife of one of the nine men indicted; Highsmith, who is one of the nine; and Irvin Keel of Robersonville.

The companies paid out a total of $57,806.69 in fire claims to about 60 farmers in and around Yadkin County.

However, the Aetna Life and Casualty Co. and the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. have withheld payment to the four plaintiffs and to Humphries, who said $179,200 worth of his own tobacco was destroyed by the fire.

In a countersuit, the two firms accuse Humphries, Sutton, Highsmith and others with having "conspired together and acting in concert" to intentionally burn the warehouse.

The charges were denied in affidavits filed by Humphries, Highsmith, the Suttons and Keel. Their lawyers have asked for a partial summary judgment that the insurance companies' charges be dismissed.

Church Members Honored Couple

WINTERVILLE — The Rev. and Mrs. Horace Thompson were honored at a covered dish supper by the members of the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church Wednesday night.

The Rev. Thompson was presented a framed resolution by Willard Finch. The resolution commended Rev. Thompson and his family for their work in the church and the Winterville community.

Rev. Howard Dawkins spoke about the accomplishments and services that Rev. Thompson had been involved with in the church. Kenneth Dews welcomed the guests.

Approximately 200 members and guests attended the dinner.

Accountants To Hold Meeting

The Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will hold its regular technical meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 15 at the Candlewick Inn.

Speaker for the meeting will be James H. Toy, vice president of the National Association of Accountants, who will speak to the chapter on "Financial Reporting Techniques," emphasizing the practical aspects of preparing and presenting internal reports to members of management.

In addition, Toy will present the Eastern Chapter its 1975-76 banner won in the chapter competition for the Warner Trophy. The chapter placed fifth in the Warner Division.

A social hour will begin at 6 p.m. with dinner served at 7 p.m. The business meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

Council Favors Reform In Taxes

RALEIGH (AP) — Directors of the North Carolina Consumers Council want the 1977 legislature to consider tax reform and to reject any suggestion that the sales tax be raised. The actions were taken by the board of directors at a meeting over the weekend.

Don Davis, president of the council, said the board fears some local governments will try to get an additional penny sales tax for local use. Now, the sales tax is 3 per cent for state government plus 1 per cent for local government if the county wants to impose it.

The directors reaffirmed the council's call for revisions in the personal and corporate income tax schedules so that bigger incomes would pay a larger share.

WHY ENLARGED STADIUM AT EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY?

Five Years Ago, I Retired From The Practice Of Medicine, And Active Participation In Developmental Community Activities, When I Was Approached To Head A Fund Drive In Pitt County For The Stadium Enlargement At East Carolina University, Everything In Me Said "No, Let The Younger Generation Do It." Then, Why Did I Accept The Challenge?

The greatest potential for planned growth for the State of North Carolina is here in Eastern North Carolina. We have the land, the year-round climate, the potential labor force, and the Technical Institutes to train skilled labor for diversified commercial and industrial jobs. Our utility systems are continually up grading for the future.

In this modern world of shorter work weeks and more time for recreation, Eastern North Carolina has been blessed with some of the finest rivers and beaches, excellent fishing and hunting, and the many Educational and Cultural (arts, music, theater) facilities at East Carolina University. The athletic program at East Carolina University has made tremendous strides in the past decade and the addition to the stadium is necessary for future improvement. Improvement in the athletic program alone was not enough to bring me into active participation in the stadium fund drive.

Besides the direct effect on East Carolina University's sports program, an enlarged stadium will have a tremendous impact on the economic growth throughout Eastern North Carolina. Besides the essentials of land, labor, and utilities, top commercial and industrial outlets desire a good environment, good entertainment, and good recreation for its management personnel and employees. We must continue to make improvements in these fields if we hope to be able to entice and choose top commercial and industrial growth. An enlarged stadium is an essential step in this direction.

- a) Better athletic program
- b) Better facilities to attract large outdoor gatherings
- c) Selective commercial and industrial growth
- d) Direct economic growth.

Yes, all these are part of the advantages of stadium enlargement! It guarantees a better economy in the next decade for our children.

Thus, I did accept the challenge! It is not my challenge alone. It belongs to all of us. Join Me! Build for the future!

Sincerely,
Ray D. Minges

WHY ENLARGED STADIUM AT EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY?

Five Years Ago, I Retired From The Practice Of Medicine, And Active Participation In Developmental Community Activities, When I Was Approached To Head A Fund Drive In Pitt County For The Stadium Enlargement At East Carolina University, Everything In Me Said "No, Let The Younger Generation Do It." Then, Why Did I Accept The Challenge?

The greatest potential for planned growth for the State of North Carolina is here in Eastern North Carolina. We have the land, the year-round climate, the potential labor force, and the Technical Institutes to train skilled labor for diversified commercial and industrial jobs. Our utility systems are continually up grading for the future.

In this modern world of shorter work weeks and more time for recreation, Eastern North Carolina has been blessed with some of the finest rivers and beaches, excellent fishing and hunting, and the many Educational and Cultural (arts, music, theater) facilities at East Carolina University. The athletic program at East Carolina University has made tremendous strides in the past decade and the addition to the stadium is necessary for future improvement. Improvement in the athletic program alone was not enough to bring me into active participation in the stadium fund drive.

Besides the direct effect on East Carolina University's sports program, an enlarged stadium will have a tremendous impact on the economic growth throughout Eastern North Carolina. Besides the essentials of land, labor, and utilities, top commercial and industrial outlets desire a good environment, good entertainment, and good recreation for its management personnel and employees. Bringing Theater Into Schools

By MARY FIESS
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A brand new bus carrying a versatile cast of characters embarks this fall on a quixotic quest for the attention of New York State's children.

Its destination will be any school that welcomes it.

The baggage on board will be everything necessary to transform dusty school auditoriums into the places where such old favorites as "Peter Pan" and "The Wizard of Oz" cast their spells.

The passengers — the 15-member acting ensemble of the New York State Youth Theater Institute—will be missionaries with one objective: getting their youthful audiences excited about the arts.

To each elementary and secondary school it visits, the institute ensemble will offer a kind of three-day crash course in the theatrical arts. The course will feature productions of two plays and workshops centered on them.

No one, of course, can yet predict the responses of the audiences waiting along the bus's itinerary. Will it be standing ovations or polite welcomes?

Or a diverting break from classes?

Behind the institute and its touring program, however, stand almost two years of planning. And the woman who has supervised most of the planning, institute director Pat Snyder, spoke recently of the institute's expectations.

"The arts should be accessible. Yet in many communities there is no children's theater or even a regular professional theater. It's considered a frill, not a necessity," she said.

"We think the arts are a necessity. The arts can get youngsters to think about other people. A play like 'The Miracle Worker' can help a child understand the experience of being handicapped even if he has never known a handicapped person."

Through its touring program, the institute intends to bring first-rate productions of plays right into the schools, where they can both educate and entertain the student audiences.

The plays themselves — this season's offerings include "The Miracle Worker," "Our Town," "The Wizard of Oz" and "You Can't Take It With You" — constitute only one part of the innovative educational package that will arrive on board the institute bus.

"We won't go into a school without our workshops. When we visit a school, it's for three days. If a child sees no time was given to something, he doesn't value it."

The institute hopes the workshops will be an education for students and teachers alike.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠6 ♥KQ5 ♦K62 ♣QJ7643

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Dble.

Rdbld. ?

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner could make a vulnerable takeout double at the two-level, it is obvious that one or both of the opponents are taking advantage of the vulnerability to muddy the waters. Your side surely must have a vulnerable game, and we would not blame you if you chose to jump to five clubs. However, it may be wiser to pass and see how partner extricates himself from the redouble. If he bids hearts, he almost surely has a five-card suit and you can raise to game. If he bids anything else, you can then jump to five clubs.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A83 ♥10952 ♦853 ♣764

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

2 ♠ Pass 2NT Pass

3 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—In this sequence you are allowed to pass with a worthless hand, but here you have an ace, so that option is not open to you. Since you have no distributional feature at all, we suggest you bid three no trump—you don't want to offer partner any encouragement.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK10963 ♥A ♦AKJ10 ♣Q5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

2 ♠ Pass 2NT 4 ♠ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner could have as many as 10 points for his response, game is a live possibility, and you can best describe your hand with a reverse bid of two spades. True, partner is unlikely to have a four-card spade suit in view of his initial response, but you should continue to describe your hand naturally. Four spades could be your best spot if partner has reasonable three-card support.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A10954 ♥63 ♦K762 ♣J6

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ 2 ♥

Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid two spades. Even though partner's pass tends to show a minimum opening bid, you should not sell out too quickly. It looks as if the strength of the two sides is more or less equal, but you have the advantage of holding the master suit and should make an effort to contest for the part score.

Q.5—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K98542 ♥84 ♦KJ852

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Despite the lack of fit for partner's diamond suit, your hand has improved considerably because of partner's support. It is now worth a full opening bid, and an opening bid facing an opening bid is enough to contract for game. Bid four spades. Don't put the strain on partner with a pusillanimous invitation of three spades, or some other try that will only tip off the opponents to the best defense.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK103 ♥7 ♦A982 ♠A95

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Two no trump. Don't hang partner for his reluctance to sell out to the opponents at the one-level. He could have as few as 8 points for his balancing action, and any more vigorous action by you could land your side in hot water. If he has solid values for his bid, it will be his duty to make a forward-going move.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

What action do you take?

A.—The normal action is to complete the description of your hand by rebidding four hearts, but that bid is likely to end the auction. We suggest a rebid of four diamonds. If partner is able to raise to five diamonds, or cue-bid the ace of spades, we would probably elect to risk venturing on to a small slam in diamonds.

By HENRY C. RIDDICK,
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

Tobacco stalks have been cut and the stubbles have been plowed out in approximately 95 percent of the tobacco fields in Pitt County. It is not too late to perform this important cultural practice in the other 5 percent of the tobacco fields.

Nematodes will continue feeding on tobacco roots and multiplying until December in those fields where the tobacco stubbles have not been plowed out. If the roots are plowed out and exposed to the drying action of the sun and wind the nematode build-up will be greatly reduced.

Cleaning up old tobacco fields will also cut disease losses from brown spot and mosaic as well as causing a reduction in next years tobacco insect population.

Budworm pupae over-winter in the top two or three inches of the soil. Turning the stubbles for nematode control also reduces the number of moths which will emerge next spring to lay eggs from which the larvae that destroys tobacco will develop. Hornworm population can also be reduced substantially by destroying the tobacco stalks and plowing out the stubbles.

About two weeks after the stubbles have been plowed out, the field should be harrowed and disced so that the crop residue will be completely buried where it will decay before spring.

Every day of delay will mean more nematodes, more mosaic, more brown spot, more insects, and more dollars down the drain in 1976.

Let's make Pitt County a 100 percent REDUCE 6 PESTS COUNTY by cutting tobacco stalks and plowing out the stubbles right now.

BACKYARD GARDENER, a program especially designed for all people who are interested in plants and flowers, will begin its fall series Monday, September 13. Viewers in this area watch this program from 7-8 p.m. over WUNK-TV Channel 25, Greenville. These programs will continue through October 18.

Frozen Melons Said Practicable

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Melons can be kept frozen for as long as a year by following a few simple directions, a foods and nutrition specialist says.

Sally Coble, a specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says make sure the watermelons, cantaloupe and honeydew melons are top quality. Then peel, cut into slices, cubes or balls and remove seeds.

Cover with a cold sugar syrup, using two cups sugar to four cups water — or pack dry in bags using no sugar — and freeze, Mrs. Coble says.

An adult wild boar may weigh up to 350 pounds.

Privette Has To Come From Behind In Runoff Bid

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — No gubernatorial candidate in post-war North Carolina has done what Coy Privette is attempting in the Republican runoff against David T. Flaherty Tuesday.

Privette is trying to overcome a deficit of 17 per cent to deny Flaherty the nomination. He has the chance by virtue of 264 voters.

That was the number by which Flaherty fell short of a majority in the August 17 primary. He got 49.8 per cent to Privette's 32.5 per cent.

The Privette-Flaherty race failed to attract the attention of even 20 per cent of the Republican voters last month. Privette based his runoff challenge on hopes of stimulating more interest, even though runoffs generally have smaller turnouts.

He has acknowledged that Flaherty's strength is superior among the GOP party loyalists who form the hard core of the primary vote.

Their clash offers the voters a choice in both style and substance.

Flaherty, 48, is the heir-apparent of the moderate, mountain Republicans' wing of the party, the faction led until now by lame-duck Gov. James E. Holsbouser. Although Flaherty has consciously tried to avoid being tagged as a Holsbouser ally, that is clearly where his roots are.

He came to North Carolina from Massachusetts as the employee of the patriarch of mountain Republicanism, J. E. Broyhill. When he served in the state Senate, he used to ride down to Raleigh with Holsbouser, a Broyhill ally. It was Holsbouser who called Flaherty to Raleigh as secretary of human resources. Flaherty's major campaign effort has been to build connections with the doctrinaire conservatives in the eastern, Reaganite wing of the party.

That is the constituency that Privette tried to claim when he got into the race. The 45-year-old Baptist minister had only limited success, judging by the first primary results.

Privette comes to Republican politics via an untraditional route. He was president of the state Christian Action League and led the league's successful 1973 campaign against liquor by the drink. He was born in Stateville and played football for Wake Forest University. Like Flaherty, he is a gregarious extrovert.

There are areas of agreement between the two on issues. Both have supported restoring the death penalty and proposed ways to make sure that criminals spend more time behind bars. Neither has come forward with a complimentary plan to ease overcrowding in the state's prison system.

Both support the idea that some governmental constraints must be put on the development of land in environmentally sensitive areas. Both would like, in some unspecified way, to give local governments more control over the process than they have in the new Coastal Area Management Act.

Both have pledged that they will run the state government for the next four years without a tax increase, even though they have pledged to try to budget cost of living pay raises for state employees.

Flaherty's tax proposals are the more modest of the two. He said he would like to see the intangibles tax and the inventory taxes repealed, but he does not think the money will be available. He refused to talk about how he would react to a dire need to raise taxes. "That's an iffy question," he said.

Privette's tax position represents a change from that which he held two years ago as head of the Christian Action League. Then, he favored a tax reform package that would have raised income taxes for the wealthy and repealed the sales tax on food.

Now, Privette favors a package aimed at pleasing businessmen. It includes immediate repeal of the intangibles tax on savings and accounts receivable; phased removal of the inventory tax burden on merchants and manufacturers; and increasing the exemption on the inheritance tax from $10,000 to $60,000.

Those measures would cost the state about $50 million in the first year, and Privette has never spelled out exactly where he would get the money to replace the lost revenues. In the long run, he says the tax cuts would stimulate the state's economy to produce more revenue.

Privette is similarly broad and vague when he talks about utilities. He says he will appoint commissioners who will "look after the public interest" and "cut the fat from the management" of the power companies. Exactly what and where the "fat" is he does not say.

Flaherty, on the other hand, has presented detailed position papers on some issues, including utilities.

His nine-point program would propose changes in utilities law to the legislature that would:

—change the rate structure to penalize high volume and peak-hour users;

—force the companies to absorb a fixed percentage of rising fuel costs — perhaps 15 per cent — so they would have an incentive to keep fuel costs down.

—give the companies the right to earn a return on investment in plants that have not yet begun to generate power;

—and seek ways to use the state's tax-exempt bonding power to provide cheaper money for plant construction.

Flaherty says he would address the problems in the state's education system by advocating a constitutional amendment that would make the state school board an elected body with representation for principals, parents, and teachers; and then give that board the power to appoint the state superintendent of public instruction, who is now elected.

"The way it is now, you've got two captains of the ship," he said.
