FORCED DOWN — Map indicates area where balloonist Ed Yost was forced to ditch his balloon early Sunday. Yost, who was trying to become the first man to cross the Atlantic in a balloon, started out from the Maine coast Tuesday and was forced down some 250 miles east of the Azores. He was picked up by a West German tanker about three hours after ditching and will be taken to Gibraltar. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Balloonist Ditched, But Set Records

PONTA DELGADA, Azores (AP) — American balloonist Ed Yost, rescued nearly 600 miles short of his goal, says he feels "perfect" and "in good spirits because I broke lots of records."

Yost was forced down in the Atlantic Ocean on Sunday east of the Azores, cutting short his attempt to become the first man to cross the ocean in a balloon. But his headquarters near Washington said that before Yost ditched, he traveled longer — nearly 107 hours — and farther — 2,500 miles — than any other balloonist.

The previous records were 87 hours, set in 1913 by a German named H. Kaulen, and 1,896.9 miles, set in 1914 by H. Berliner, another German.

The West German freighter Elisabeth Bolten rescued Yost and was taking him to Gibraltar. The ship was expected to arrive there Tuesday morning.

The 57-year-old balloon manufacturer from Sioux Falls, S.D., took off from the coast of Maine last Tuesday, headed for "anywhere between Norway and Spain."

He radioed Saturday night that he was about 700 miles west of Portugal but had run into strong vertical winds and

Terrorists Shoot Way Into Embassy

ROME (AP) — Three Palestinians protesting Syrian intervention in Lebanon shot their way into the Syrian Embassy in Rome today but surrendered to police after holding five hostages for two hours.

Police said one hostage, embassy counselor Humen Hatem, was seriously wounded in the leg. The guerrillas allowed him to be taken to a hospital where he underwent a 1½-hour operation.

A Syrian official said the Palestinians surrendered after they realized they had failed to take the ambassador hostage. Ambassador Farouk al Sharae had left the embassy earlier to attend a ceremony.

A Palestinian, identified as the 25-year-old leader of the group, was quoted by Italian radio as saying they were protesting what they called Syria's betrayal of the Palestinian cause. Syrian forces allied with Lebanese Christians have been fighting leftists Moslems and Palestinians in the Lebanese civil war.

The attack came two weeks after Syrian authorities hanged in public in Damascus three Palestinian terrorists who had raided a hotel in an attack in which four hostages were killed.

Youssef Miro, an embassy official who was among today's hostages, said "the three came in, leveled their guns at us and said they wanted to revenge the massacre in Lebanon." He said there were about 10 people in the building, but five fled by jumping from windows.

Taken hostage, he said, were three men and two women.

In his radio interview, the Palestinian leader said the guerrillas were members of the Black June Movement, which is named for the month when Syria sent an estimated 13,000 troops and several hundred tanks into Lebanon.

The guerrilla leader said the guerrilla attack was designed to "draw the attention of the world to the betrayal of the Syrian government and the plot of Arab states against the Palestinian people."

"We did not want to harm anyone," he said. "This action marks a new stage in the struggle of the Palestinian people."

Police rushed to the scene when they heard shots from

Hiroshima Raid Re-Enacted By Retired Pilot

By MILLER H. BONNER JR. Associated Press Writer HURLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Watched by 40,000 persons who paid up to $5 each, the pilot who dropped the A-bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, re-enacted his historic mission from a B29 bomber — complete with imitation mushroom cloud.

Paul Tibbets, a retired Air Force general, flew a B29 Superfortress over this Lower Rio Grande city once Saturday and twice Sunday to help raise money for a group that preserves World War II aircraft. The real bomb he dropped from the "Enola Gay" on Aug. 6, 1945, left nearly 130,000 persons dead, missing or injured.

"There certainly wasn't as much to worry about compared to 1945," the 61-year-old Tibbets said after piloting the bomber for about 30 minutes each time.

The plane he flew, "Fifi," reportedly is the last flying B29 in the world.

Joining Tibbets at the controls during the Airshow '76 weekend flights was Victor Agaiter, a retired Air Force officer who is credited with much of the restoration of "Fifi." The aircraft is named after his wife.

The event was sponsored by the Confederate Air Force, a nonprofit organization founded in 1957. The weekend's activities were held to raise money for CAF work on its "Ghost Squadron" of planes.

Combined crowds estimated at 40,000 watched as the big plane appeared over a target area, opened its bomb bay doors and delivered a simulated A-bomb.

On the ground, a U.S. Army demolition team detonated an atomic-bomb simulator, a barrel of explosives, sending a miniature mushroom-shaped cloud billowing skyward.

Admission to the viewing area was $5 for adults, $2 for children over 12, and free for younger children.

"I was not emotionally involved in the dropping of the first atomic bomb," Tibbets said. "To me, it was a military mission and I was relieved after it was over that it was a success."

"I've never lost a night's sleep over the fact that I commanded the bombing. The gray hairs I've got now came from the pressures of business."

Tibbets, who retired from the Air Force in 1966, is now president of a commercial flying service in Columbus, Ohio.

Carter And Ford Salute Columbus

By The Associated Press Jimmy Carter and President Ford entered the home stretch of the battle for the White House today by paying traditional tributes to the Italian son who discovered America while keeping their own voyages focused on the Middle East and other global affairs.

Carter planned to march in Chicago's Columbus Day parade after attending services at the Our Lady of Pompeii church. The President remained in Washington, but scheduled an afternoon wreath-laying and speech at the Christopher Columbus statue at Union Station.

Ford, meanwhile, was to receive Israeli Foreign Affairs Minister Yigal Allon at the White House for talks over the Middle East. And Carter renewed his attack on the Arab boycott issue by releasing copies of a Cabinet member's letter to the Senate Finance Committee as evidence that the administration had fought anti-boycott legislation.

Later in the day, Ford was to huddle with his running mate, Bob Dole, at the White House over strategy for the remainder of the campaign. Carter's No. 2 man, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, was in New York City for Columbus Day ceremonies there.

As the campaign enters its final three weeks, the Republicans and Democrats are wooing the nation's ethnic and religious voting groups, which form big blocks in major swing states. And both Ford and Carter tried to exploit the perceived blunders of their opponents in seeking support of one group or another.

In Chicago, Carter continued to pound away at Ford's statement that the Soviet Union does not dominate the nations of Eastern Europe.

Speaking to a banquet of Polish-Americans, Carter pledged that no word or deed of a Democratic White House would even hint at acceptance of permanent Soviet domination of Eastern Europe.

SUNSHINE?

A lady I met at a crafts show recently promised to send me the address of a publication which lists crafts shows over a large area—I think it was called Sunshine. I didn't get her name, though, and she must have forgotten or lost my address. I'd very much like to have this address. L.H.

From Sheppard Library, we obtained the address of a Sunshine magazine but from its description, it didn't seem to be the one you had in mind. We then started asking local artisans. An Ayden potter, Steve Reynolds, provided us the information we sought. An Ayden potter, Steve Reynolds, provided us the information we sought. MORE NEEDED

Hotline's appeal last Wednesday for donations for the Greenville Recreation Department's new Senior Citizens Center at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets brought in two chairs and some curtains.

If there are others who had planned to call but did not, Mrs. Leslie Ball, the Center director, says the Center is still in need of furnishings (especially chairs), games and other items for amusement, and also kitchen items. She will be glad to pick up anything donated. She may be reached at 752-4137, Ext. 250.

Talcum 30 Yrs. Late

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — "We have enough powder to talcum everybody in Spokane, twice," says Chief James Barbour, senior chief of command at the U.S. Naval Reserve Training Center here.

The only problem is, the stuff is more than 30 years late.

The invoice on a shipment of 25 one-pound cans of talcum powder received at the center last week said it was sent on Sept. 25, 1943.

Woodrow Oakley, the sailor who received the shipment, said the original consignee was the U.S. Naval Supply Depot, which was decommissioned by the Navy in 1958. So United Parcel Service sent it on to the Reserve Center.

The invoice said the talc was sent by Dr. Peter Fahrney's & Sons of Chicago. But the American Surgical Trade Association in Chicago lists no such firm in its files, which date back to 1951. Nor is it listed in the Chicago telephone directory, eight suburban directories or a business directory.

What's more, according to the invoice, the talc received this week was only part of a 200-pound shipment.

School Board Postpones Meet

The Pitt County Board of Education has postponed its meeting to discuss allowing students to attend schools out of the county district which was scheduled for Thursday, October 14 at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting will be rescheduled for a time which will allow all board members to attend according to Ott Alford, Superintendent of Pitt County Schools.

'Token Redneck'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "I'm the token redneck for the campaign," said Jimmy Carter's younger brother Billy as he had a few beers, shook a few hands and passed out peanut-shaped pins at Charlotte Motor Speedway Sunday.

The 40-year-old Carter campaigned for the Democratic Presidential nominee while watching the National 500 stock car race. He made one lap around the track in a convertible before the race with auto mechanic Junior Johnson, but sat looking into the car as often as at the crowd.

The Plains, Ga. service station owner told reporters he is the only member of the Carter family not on a regular campaign schedule. "I guess that's because I make a living for the rest of them," he said.

"I've never been on a tractor in my life, never done farming," Carter said, denying press descriptions of him as a peanut farmer. "I own the service station, but I got somebody else running it for me. I run the business."

Achieve Extraction Of Protein From Tobacco

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Government scientists say they have developed a practical way to extract a high grade protein from tobacco that could be a food supplement for humans and animals.

U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists said the process also could encourage the automation of tobacco curing, curb waste in tobacco production, and result in a safer cigarette.

They emphasized in recent interviews that experiments were continuing, but they hoped the process eventually would be carried out on a large scale commercially.

The scientists carried out much of the research at the Tobacco Research Laboratory the government operations jointly with the state at Oxford.

They announced the protein extraction method in a prepared statement from the USDA. The process was explained by Dr. T.C. Tso, of the USDA's Agriculture Research Service outside Washington, and Dr. Donald De Jong of the Oxford lab.

The protein sought is known as Fraction-1 Protein and is the most prevalent protein in green plants. When extracted it would take the form of a gel, much like the soybean curd, with nutritional value comparable to milk.

Farmers would harvest their tobacco crops and deliver them to a central plant for curing. During the new curing method—called Homogenized Leaf Curing, or HLC—the leaf would be ground to a semiliquid, or slurry, from which the protein would precipitate.

The scientists estimated that from 2 to 19 per cent of the tobacco acreage yield could be transformed into the pure, tasteless, odorless and colorless protein.

The remaining tobacco "juice" would be dehydrated and pressed into a sheet. This reconstituted tobacco could be ground or flaked and added to cigarettes as part of the tobacco blend.

In the HLC process, the USDA scientists said the farmers would turn over the traditional on-the-farm curing to an automated factory and would be able to sell most, if not all, of the tobacco plant.

De Jong said additionally that removing the protein from tobacco could help produce a safer cigarette. When proteins burn, they not only create a foul odor, but also produce certain toxic substances as byproducts. De Jong said those toxic substances are relatively harmless in small doses and have not been linked to cancer, but their elimination would make a safer smoke.

Tso said one manufacturer was currently testing a cigarette composed entirely of the reconstituted sheet tobacco, though a blend with conventional leaf is expected to be more desirable. He also said tests of the protein supplement in animal feed would soon be conducted and that there was interest in the product among cancer researchers.

Fraction-1 protein has long been recognized as a possible food supplement. De Jong said scientists had discovered that tobacco releases the protein more readily than any other major crop, though they could not explain why.

Despite increasing tobacco yields, "it would not be economically practical to raise tobacco as a main source of protein," said Dr. Tso.

"A tobacco plant contains 12 to 17 per cent of protein as compared with 42 or 44 per cent for soybeans," he said. "But even half of that 12 to 17 per cent, which we can get as a byproduct of normal (tobacco) production, can be very significant."

Couples' Love Has Been Strengthened

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who had had a mastectomy asked if she should tell her gentlemen friends about it. And if so, when.

My wife had a mastectomy after we were married for 28 years. When I brought her home from the hospital she was the same beautiful woman I had taken there before her surgery. It made no difference to me, except that it brought us closer together and strengthened our love.

The woman should tell her suitor early. If he is a mature man, it won't matter. But if he runs, he would have run sometime during their marriage—even without the surgery.

ONE MAN IN ALASKA

DEAR ABBY: When I was 34 I had a breast removed. Until that time I had a fabulous figure. In fact, I modeled brassieres. When faced with death or mutilation, I had no choice. (My dearest friend is now a terminal cancer patient because she waited too long to have the operation.)

I wore full baby-doll gowns to bed, and a prosthesis during the daytime, allowing me to wear sweaters, swimsuits, etc. No problems.

My husband was terrific. It made no difference in our love life, except to improve it. His sensitivity and consideration for me made me love him even more.

When I was 47 my husband died. A year later I started dating, and if I felt the man was getting serious, I told him about my mastectomy. His reaction told me immediately if he was repelled or not.

At 49 I married a terrific man. (I had had three proposals and took my choice.) Had I felt deformed, inferior, or sorry for myself, I'd have missed the best part of my life.

I am now 65 and...

NEVER BEEN HAPPIER

DEAR ABBY: With reference to revealing a mastectomy: I am a 21-year-old male and I'd advise a woman to tell the man about it as soon as the relationship became serious. Personally, I wouldn't bat an eyelid. Only a fool would be more concerned with how much flesh covers his lover's heart than the feeling she holds in it for him.

PHILADELPHIA

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 50-year-old man who married a 48-year-old woman who had had a mastectomy. She said, "Not every woman is lucky enough to be sure that her husband didn't marry her only for her body." I assured her that she meant far more to me than just a bosom buddy.

We Saw Them Under Pressure

The second debate between President Ford and Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter was spirited. Associated Press Writer Walter R. Mears commented, "This time they came out swinging, and Jimmy Carter swung harder — on the very issues President Ford had chosen."

That wasn't a bad assessment. An AP panel of college debate coaches gave the debate to Carter by a narrow margin; and, if you follow the boxing theory that a challenger has to win decisively over the champion to get the title, that would make it a clear Carter victory.

Both men seemed to be reasonably well informed in preparation for the foreign policy debate, but Ford raised eyebrows with his comment that Eastern Europe was not dominated by the Soviet Union.

That comment in the post debate period seemed rapidly on the way to becoming an albatross around the president's neck. A gleeful Carter is capitalizing on it in every way.

Concerning SALT talks, Carter commented that "Mr. Ford acts like he's running for president for the first time." Of course, Ford is running for the first time, although the spirit of Carter's comment is correct in that Ford is filling an unexpired term of office.

There was some criticism of the two candidates taking pot shots at each other. At least, though, they slugged it out verbally and that made for a reasonably spirited debate so that we voters get to see the two candidates responding under pressure. All-in-all we think the debate was worthwhile.

Natural Gas Supply Picture Is Better

After some crisis years for North Carolina's natural gas supplies, things may be a little better this winter.

A Transcontinental Pipeline Corp. official says the state may get by without industrial shutdowns this year caused by natural gas shortages.

Additional supplies of emergency gas seem to be available and, if the winter is warmer than normal, the state may get by without cutoffs during the winter.

Natural gas will still be in short supply, of course, but industrial users might be in a better position to obtain gas this winter than they were last winter.

Blame Who For Dropout?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Two out of three current ninth-graders in the North Carolina public schools will make it to graduation.

That leaves a sizable minority (36,000 children) of the Class of 1980 who will be lost, short of a high school diploma.

Unless the historic trend in dropouts take a sudden change, and there is little evidence that this will occur, dropouts will continue to be a big problem.

For whatever reason, one-third of the students find school an unsatisfactory experience. The gut question faced by participants in a recent seminar was whether the individual is to blame—or whether the system is at fault.

If dropouts are viewed as individuals who are unacceptable to society and who are bad risk for the economy, then the implication is that dropouts are the problem.

Not Helped

"If, however, dropouts are viewed as young people who are not being accommodated by the existing resources...

the implication is that dropouts are symptoms of causes that lie elsewhere," was the way conference participants defined the situation.

The conclusion of the group gathered for a two-day discussion at Quail Roost Conference Center near Durham was that many young people leave school because they are not being served: by their teachers or counselors, by their homes, by their available school programs, by their state agencies, or by their society.

Actually, those who leave school in such numbers between the ninth and 12th grades fall into three categories, not just the single term "dropout." The group, made up of people from schools, courts, social agencies—a variety of activities in daily touch with adolescents—decided on three categories: the dropout willfully leaves school; the pushout is unacceptable to school people and is forced out through formal or informal means; the fadeout is physically present in the classroom, but is not taking part.

Where is the system falling short? Perhaps the most significant area involves individual attention for pupils, participants felt.

"If primary individual needs of young people are not met, dropouts, pushouts, and fadeouts from our public schools will continue to be a problem..." a summary of the meeting sponsored by the Learning Institute of North Carolina reports. The session, like several others, was part of the statewide Year of Reading program.

All Different

Participants "felt it imperative that classrooms begin to exemplify what has been given ample lip service for an entire decade: all children are different."

The group also scolded schools for lacking the subject matter, the environment, and the personnel to develop "responsive human relationships and responsive physical environments. Environments which do not respond to the problems and personal interests of students will inevitably cause students to become angry, bored, or apathetic."

Out-of-school factors in the dropout problem included the need of a job to help support the family; false assumptions about the ease of getting a job and the amount of money which can be earned without an education; and the desire to "search for identity."

Among recommendations compiled by the study group were suggestions that a study be carried out on the needs of adolescents; that all state agencies be required to set up a system for communication, cooperation, and collaboration in serving young people; and that schools work toward responding to the needs of all adolescents.

The schools, in particular, were urged to set up more vocational programs, expand alternative programs for students who do not benefit from traditional approaches, revise certification requirements for people working with middle-graders, and strive for an atmosphere in which youngsters can take part in determining their own educational goals.

Neither Wants The Job

WASHINGTON—My friend Rosenfeld has a wild theory that, based on what is going on in the presidential campaign, both men are trying to throw the election.

"I don't believe either man wants the job and that's why they're trying to out-goof each other."

"That's hard to believe," I said.

"Thank about it," he said. I thought about it and came to the conclusion Rosenfeld could be right.

It probably all started when Gerry Ford first came to the White House as President and said to Mrs. Ford, "I said I wouldn't run for President in 1976, but how

Steam Engine On Run

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN
Associated Press Writer
FT. BRAGG, Calif. (AP) — Like a haunted cry from the past, the Skunk Train's mournful steam whistle hoots in a plume of white as the locomotive pulls from the depot for a run through lush timber land.

Snug inside, passengers riding the tortuous 40 miles through the coastal redwoods of Northern California are treated to a style of transportation now little more than a museum piece — the steam train.

Run by California Western Railroad, the line began operation as a logging railroad back in 1885. Passenger service came in 1904 and was extended to the current end of the line — Willits — in 1911.

The picturesque trains were named for the aroma of gasoline and other fuels which once powered the single railcars still plying the route. "You can smell 'em before you can see 'em," the locals used to say.

The smell is only a memory as the chuffing train winds at 15 miles per hour around 381 bends carved in a dense green forest. Fluttering steam trails past an ancient weed-choked cemetery, by ambling Pudding Creek, along the trickling Noyo River and through a timber-lined tunnel hewn by Chinese laborers in a bygone era.

Rumbling along through the silent countryside, the Skunk pulls a golden shower of drought-dry leaves from trees overhanging the tracks.

Halfway, the train halts to take on 8,000 gallons of water for its thirsty boiler. The passengers, mostly city folks here on vacation, marvel at the cool damp forest and the stillness of growing things.

The train twists and turns back on itself as it follows the terrain, at one point needing 8½ miles of track to advance 1½ miles. On a hairpin turn the engine appears far ahead, big black wheels spun by flashing red drive shafts.

Deer peek from sun-freckled hillsides, and an otter cavorts in a clear pool as the train climbs 1,700 feet past long-abandoned camps like Ranch Station, where cattle were raised to feed hungry loggers.

Other Editors Say Two Win Battles

(Wilson Daily Times)

American citizens were the beneficiaries as Big Bureaucracy suffered two setbacks during the waning days of the 94th Congress — thanks to the efforts of North Carolina's Congressman L. H. Fountain and Sen. Jesse Helms.

After a battle that lasted almost the full two years of the 94th Congress, Rep. Fountain succeeded in pushing to passage a bill creating the position of inspector general to monitor programs of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, a mammoth agency that spends about $145 billion annually, more than a third of the national budget.

Early this year, the House Government Operations subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Fountain, released a report calling attention to "extremely serious deficiencies" in HEW's system of monitoring some of the department's most costly programs.

Fountain said HEW's investigative resources were "ridiculously inadequate" and there was a 10-year backlog of cases alleging various kind of fraud and abuse.

The new inspector general, appointed by the president, will be charged with directing and coordinating activities designed to correct such abuses in the sprawling HEW agency.

If the monitoring system lives up to expectations, there may be no reduction in HEW expenditures, but perhaps more of the funds formerly frittered away will be spent for genuinely worthwhile programs.

Sen. Helms' victory touches the individual taxpayer a little more directly. Working closely with Sen. James B. Allen of Alabama, a master parliamentarian, Sen. Helms succeeded through use of the filibuster in winning approval of a measure that would make the Internal Revenue Service liable for attorney's fees of taxpayers who win suits after being hauled into court by the IRS.

To attain this important taxpayer right, Sen. Helms had to compromise by dropping opposition to a bill to provide federal payment of attorneys' fees of winning plaintiffs in civil rights cases.

We doubt if there are many citizens who have not read of, or know first-hand about, instances where taxpayers have found themselves in difficulty with the IRS and were unjustly forced to pay a larger tax bill because they lacked the resources to wage a court fight.

North Carolinians should be proud of these two elected officials who proved that hard work and tenacious adherence to principle can lead to triumph even when the odds are against the chances of success.

chances you have of getting the nomination."

Jimmy brought up "ethnic purity" in his next speech and there was such a hullabaloo about it that Carter was certain he was out of it.

But immediately the blacks forgave him and he was still in the race.

In the meantime Gerry Ford could not avoid his party's pleas that he run for the office again. He was dispirited and Betty cheered him up. "Don't forget you have to campaign against Ronald Reagan and if you put a really bad organization together he can beat you."

Ford put his campaign organization together, started to campaign and almost lost the nomination. But Reagan goofed and Ford squeaked through. His only hope was that the Republican Party was in such a shambles after Kansas City that he wouldn't have a chance. The polls confirmed this.

Carter was terrified and went to Miss Lillian and said, "What do I do, Ma? You know I don't want to go to Washington."

GUBERNATORIAL DEBATE

Flaherty Had Advantage

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The winner of last week's debate between North Carolina's gubernatorial candidates was almost certain to be Republican David Flaherty, a conclusion that could be drawn even before the debate began.

In some respects Flaherty was the winner. But, Democrat Jim Hunt did not lose and in some ways can be considered a co-winner.

If there were to be additional debates between the two, Flaherty would again have the greatest chance to win. That is why he has called for Hunt to meet him for two more debates. That is also why Hunt has refused.

When two candidates square off in a face-to-face debate, there is always the chance for error or of alienating a large segment of the voting population by revealing a stand, unpopular to some people, that had not been widely publicized before.

An example of error was Wednesday night's gubernatorial debate when President Ford made several comments that have been widely considered erroneous and therefore harmful to his campaign.

An example of the latter risk occurred last Monday when candidates for lieutenant governor—Democrat Jimmy Green and Republican Bill Hiatt—met for a half hour debate. Hiatt accused Green of supporting decriminalization of marijuana.

During the primary campaign and on his nomination, Green has preached the party line and expressed his loyalty to the party and all it stands for, presumably including the state and national platforms. Those platforms include a little noticed section calling for reduced penalties for possession of marijuana for personal use.

Hiatt had done his homework and surprised Green by linking him with that part of the platforms. Green's only response was to say he has never supported legalization of marijuana.

There were no such surprises in the gubernatorial debate last Tuesday.

While the presidential race is considered close with neither candidate being a solid frontrunner, the Democrats are in firm control in North Carolina's races for governor and lieutenant governor.

In a race where there is a clear frontrunner—which Hunt and Green are each considered to be—it is the candidate in the No. 1 spot who had the most to risk. By playing it safe and not debating, the frontrunner wouldn't risk his lead. An error by the trailing candidate would be far less damaging because he has less to lose.

Flaherty expressed that view Tuesday morning while talking with reporters before

Numbers Help Pick Presidents

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — During the past week various statistical indicators pointed to a less than buoyant economy, but perhaps of even greater significance they influenced greatly the election race.

The index of leading economic indicators fell sharply. Wholesale prices rose. The unemployment rate remained high.

The index of leading indicators is generally considered one of the most significant barometers of economic activity. When it is high and rising it suggests fair economic weather; when falling it foretells storms.

But the index of leading indicators quivers much, much more than most of us realize, so greatly in fact that the cliché "all over the lot" can almost be applied.

When it is announced each month it is read by many people as a rigidly set figure, computer-accurate and infallible. It isn't. It is revised each month, month after month. The reading for the same month might undergo a dozen monthly revisions.

The wholesale price index is not subject to so many revisions, but it is open to the same amount of questioning. Is the index accurate? Is it meaningful?

Some economists have faith in this index, but Prof. Richard Ruggles, Yale University economist, isn't among them. He maintains it is "quite meaningless." He suggests it is a concoction rather than an indicator.

Why should Ruggles have such a low opinion? Because, under government contract, he has analyzed the index and, in fact, is working to develop a new statistical formula to replace it.

The unemployment rate also has its critics. Does it overstate unemployment? The Commonwealth of Massachusetts maintains it does, and that as a consequence its economy has been damaged by, among other things, higher borrowing costs.

Does it understate unemployment? Scores of municipalities, including the City of St. Louis, says yes. They feel cheated because, they say, the understated figures deprive them of federal revenue sharing funds.

Is the jobsless total an accurate count? It isn't even a count. Few people realize that it results from a small sample that is then put through a computer. It is a formulation rather than a count. It is weighted, averaged, adjusted — and also corrected, but not until after the end of the year.

Why do we pay so much attention to the numbers? Well, they are indicators. Economists generally believe Washington's statistics are the best in the world. But professional economists also understand that figures can mislead.

Much of the public fails to possess such understanding, and therefore often assumes these numbers to be perfect. Didn't they come out of the computer?

Candidates also find the numbers make campaign material. President Ford, who is now being hurt by the numbers, relied heavily on them earlier in the campaign to suggest that he was moving the economy ahead. Jimmy Carter has exploited them too.

Question: Should a president be elected by the numbers?

THE VALUE OF EXPERIENCE

Often we hear it said that the fulness of life depends upon the amount of experience we have. There are some people who even go so far as to say that it does not make any difference whether the experiences are good or bad, moral or immoral. The experiences themselves bring about growth and maturity.

Yet is it experience that we really need in order to grow? Is not the most necessary thing the capacity for experience? Some people go through all sorts of experiences and never learn anything as a result.

Actually it is not experience which makes us wise but the capacity to learn from it. Some of the greatest writers and philosophers were men who could learn vicariously from the experiences of others. Some of these men never travelled more than fifty miles from their homes.

Most of us in the everyday course of our lives go through experiences with much learning potential. Our task is to profit from these.

Oscar, To Her, Simply Grandpa

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — To Diana Levy of Greensboro, famed lyricist Oscar Hammerstein was simply "Grandpa."

Mrs. Levy, 25, was Diana Hammerstein before her marriage. "My grandfather died in 1960, and I don't really remember that much about him," Mrs. Levy said. "We lived next door to he and my grandmother once on a farm in Pennsylvania, and what I remember most is him being upstairs all the time in his study. The only time he ever came down was for meals. Sometimes not even then."

Hammerstein, noted for his work on such musicals as "The Last Time I Saw Paris," "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," and "The Sound of Music," was different from the upbeat, bubbling personality projected in the music, Mrs. Levy said. "I think he was more tender in his writings than he was in person. I think he was probably one of those people who let themselves go more in his writing than in his personality."

Mrs. Levy, who moved two years ago after studying at Berkeley, Columbia and Briarcliff, has made some appearances in the Greensboro Community Theater but she has never looked at the theater with a career in mind.

"I would never want to be in a situation where I would exploit my family but I am proud of it," she said. Her grandfather, who she describes as a man with "kind of short-cropped hair and paunchy features," accomplished "great things," she said.

Now, she is studying at North Carolina A&T, where her husband is on the board of trustees.

She said she has no long-range plans other "than to

At one point on the return run, the train stops briefly to pick up Henry, an ancient resident. Henry, the conductor says, has lived along the path of the Skunk since 1914 and used to raise apples. Mountain Folk Report Heavy Winter 'Signs'

CRAB ORCHARD, Tenn. (UPI) — The winter of 1959-60 was a humdinger in the Tennessee mountains and East Tennessee's folk weather prophet Helen Lane says another one just like it may be on the way.

How does she know? Fogs in August, corn shucks, the fur on squirrels, and the activities of those little spiders that build their webs in the grass — all point to a hard winter.

Mrs. Lane said she counted six fogs during August, two of them real heavy. That means six snows of some significance and two of them will be real tree benders.

She says she hasn't seen too many woolly worms this year, so what they foretell remains to be seen.

"Corn shucks are real thick this year on sweet corn," she said. "And the fur on squirrels is thick, too. We could get some humdingers here on this mountain."

Mrs. Lane said she expects there will be "plenty of cold, icy rain up here on these mountains" in addition to the snows and what she calls "blue darters," when just a trace of snow shows up and is whipped about by the wind without sticking.

But the real clincher is the spiders. "I haven't seen too many in the grass. There are more in the house this year than in the grass," Mrs. Lane said. "The last time I remember that happening was in 1959, and that winter broke all records in Tennessee. We had six feet of snow during the winter."

A check with the Knoxville Weather Bureau confirmed Mrs. Lane's memory of that winter. During 1959-60, the bureau recorded 56.7 inches of snow. There were 23.3 inches in February and 20.2 inches in March, and the cold temperatures extended well into March, also.

Mrs. Lane stresses that the signs she goes by apply only to the area around this tiny community on the Cumberland Plateau and will be different for other areas. "I don't know how far out they will go in predicting the weather," she said.

But there are other mountain folk who have been watching the signs through the years, like Mrs. Ida Callahan, 88, of Bakersville, N.C., who told reporters recently that signs of a heavy winter showed up in her area, too.

There were many fogs in August — she counted 30 in western North Carolina — and some of them were heavy, "like nothing I've ever seen. They often didn't go away until noontime."

Some of the signs puzzle her, like the absence of hornet's nests. "I've not seen a hornet's nest this year, either built high or low. And I just don't know what that means," Mrs. Callahan said.

Mrs. Lane said there are other signs that point to a hard winter, like the abundance of crickets, the low flying patterns

As usual Miss Lillian was right and Jimmy Carter started going downhill fast.

Mr. Ford was horri-stricken and said to Mrs. Ford, "Carter is out-goo-fing me. What do I do now?"

Mrs. Ford said, "Why don't you disclose that you played golf on weekends with lobbyists. That could hurt you."

The President leaked stories about his weekends with lobbyists, but it had no impact at all, and the polls showed him neck and neck with Carter.

He was desperate and confided to Mrs. Ford, "I can't understand it. No matter what I do I still have a chance of winning."

Just then the phone rang. Mrs. Ford answered it and said to the person on the phone, "Thank you, I'll tell the President." She turned to Mr. Ford and said, "It's good news. Earl Butz just told a terrible ethnic joke on an airplane and Ron Nessen said it could ruin us."

For the first time in weeks the President smiled. "Good old Earl. He's always there when you need him."

had been told that Hunt appeared the winner. But, he said, Hunt is a winner of a debate just by not making a major mistake or otherwise losing his margin.

Because of the Carter-Ford debates, it would have been risky for Hunt to refuse to debate, possibly making voters wonder why he won't debate when the President will. To take maximum advantage of an unavoidable confrontation, Hunt issued the call for the debate even before the GOP nominee had been chosen in the Sept. 14 runoff.

The lieutenant governor debate had little effect. Hiatt put on a strong showing, but the confrontation was not televised, severely limiting its effect.

Hiatt has said he wants to face Green in a televised debate but it is unlikely the Democrat would agree to it and there is some doubt that very many stations would see enough public interest to televise it.

Last week's reports that Carolina Power and Light Co. will file for a 15 per cent rate increase later this year will give Hunt some powerful political ammunition.

Hunt has talked about utilities a great deal during the months of campaigning with most of the old issues now pretty well discussed to the point of boring voters. CP&L came to the rescue, though inadvertently.

Hunt has blasted Gov. Jim Holshouser's Republican administration for appointing utilities commissioners who, he says, haven't given consumers a fair break.

Just hours after the CP&L plan came to light, Hunt's campaign had distributed a news release quoting Hunt as saying the state needs "tighter utilities regulation" and a "commission we can depend on to look out for the needs of our rate payers."

Though Flaherty had nothing to do with appointments to the Utilities Commission, his ties to the Holshouser administration won't help when utilities are discussed.

Tom Rose covers the state getting grass-roots views on health care.

"As President of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, I travel the state, getting first-hand information from people. Talking, questioning, listening. Trying to identify North Carolina's health care needs. And looking for new and better ways to respond to them."

"Take catastrophic illness coverage, for instance. We studied that first through scientific surveys and I researched it personally. The answer was clear: North Carolinians wanted catastrophic coverage. Now we offer $250,000 Major Medical to our groups for just a little extra cost.

"Dental was the next-most-wanted coverage. We now offer an excellent dental program to groups of 25 or more employees.

"People want broad protection that's easy to use. For years our basic certificate has covered innovative services like same day surgery and pre-admission testing—without a hospital stay.

Last year we paid three times as many outpatient claims as inpatient.

"I know the people of North Carolina are concerned about the rising costs of health care. We're doing something about that, too. We conduct many programs designed to contain health care costs and keep subscriber rates at a realistic minimum. We're developing a new contracting agreement with hospitals and other institutions, and encouraging area-wide planning and new ways to monitor costs, like physician's peer review.

"Further, we've set up 11 Subscriber Advisory Councils across the state. They meet regularly and share with us their ideas and concerns about health care. We listen...and respond.

"Through our 19 local offices, we serve nearly half the people in the state. And all our service offices have terminals connected to our main computer. You can phone us with questions and get answers in minutes.

"Our latest innovation is sending personal monthly reports to subscribers who have had claims. This Health Care Benefits Summary will show subscribers what their claims were for and how much their Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage paid.

"We feel strongly that we owe it to all the people we serve to do everything we can to make North Carolina's health system the best in terms of service, efficiency, and economy. We think it is the best, but we're still looking for new ways to improve service. Next time I'm on the road, I'd like to see you and get your ideas, too."

Personal Touch Is Paying Off

NEW YORK (AP) — At a time when most banks are rushing toward automation, a few are discovering a growing business in old-fashioned banking services for rich people.

The banks that offer the personalized banking are mostly in New York, the nation's biggest money market and center of many of the largest corporate and personal fortunes.

Bankers Trust Co. said it has attracted 50 big new accounts with its personalized banking in the past two years. Citibank says there are "more customers for the service than we expected." U.S. Trust Co., which increased its personal service this year, agrees. And at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., "We do not talk specifically about the customers," a spokesman says, but he indicates that things are coming along just fine.

"People want a banker who they feel is in contact with it all. The specialists and the automation made them feel remote from the bank," said one banker.

Publicity about the special services has been quiet — black and white advertisements in business publications, personal letters, and word of mouth.

For banks like Morgan, any advertising is a jarring departure from the traditions it is trying to preserve.

"We are not in the retail banking business. It is a mistake to say that. We still do the old-fashioned things. We check the signatures on each check personally. In most banks it's a purely automated process," said John Wetzel, the head of Morgan's metropolitan banking division.

It takes money to qualify for the special services, but the amount varies from bank to bank.

It can mean keeping at least $2,000 in a checking account, or $10,000 in an investment account, or $1 million in a trust account.

What you get is a banker who serves you and a limited number of other people. He or she oversees all the usual banking functions such as checking, savings, and personal loans. Loans to these customers average about $25,000, bankers say.

Your personal banker will help you invest your money, find a new home across town or across the country, pay your bills, send the children away at school their allowances, make your travel arrangements and even have your dog walked and plants watered while you are

Club Holds Installation

The Winterville Kiwanis Club installed new officers and board of directors at its meeting Thursday night.

JAMES BLACK

James Black, a stockbroker with Interstate Securities, was installed as president. Other officers include the following: Linwood Rouse, vice president; Burnice Harris, secretary-treasurer. Members of the board of directors for the coming year are Jim Bussell, Wayne Avery, John Carroll, Norman Worthington, James Cobb, Linwood Hooks, Linwood Rouse, and Alva Worthington.

The installation of officers was held at a special Ladies Night meeting at A. G. Cox School. The D. H. Conley High School Singers presented several Broadway show tunes for the group.

During the last administrative year the Winterville Kiwanians spent over $10,000 in community service projects. The club funds its projects through its annual money raising project, The Kiwanis Farm Auction.

Will Meet To Plan Programs

Carl Toot of Pitt County Schools and Kay Whitehurst of Greenville City Schools will meet with other educators at the Northeast Regional Center in Williamston October 13 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. to begin planning occupational education programs for the 1977-78 school year.

During the day-long session workshop participants will be taking a look at manpower data to determine where the greatest needs for trained employees in specific job areas exist. Based on this data, educators can determine occupational education courses to be offered in the secondary schools.

Plan Honor 15 Teachers

Fifteen Tarheel teachers who have been selected regional Teachers of the Year in North Carolina for 1977 will be honored at a luncheon in Raleigh, October 13. The state Teacher of the Year will be named at the November 4 meeting of the State Board of Education. Ms. Jackie Staley Wooten, a teacher at Bethel Elementary School, will represent District 15 in Teacher of the Year competition.

The North Carolina Teacher of the Year should be an individual who exemplifies excellence in the profession of classroom teaching according to State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips.

The North Carolina Teacher of the Year award program is sponsored by the Department of Public Instruction and the Association of Classroom Teachers. Nationally, the Teacher of the Year program is sponsored by Encyclopaedia Britannica Companies, the Council of Chief State School Officers and the Ladies Home Journal.

Jetter, the son of Glenn Jetter and Mrs. Heneretti Jetter Collier, has worked with young people through Boy Scouts as a Sunrise District Commissioner, Round Table Commissioner, Neighborhood Commissioner, Scout Master and Cub Master.

He is a member of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church and is affiliated with the Mount Hermon Masonic Lodge No. 35 and is Past-Master.

Weekend Saw 3 Collisions

An estimated $3,000 property damage resulted from a series of three collisions investigated Sunday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7:35 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets involving cars driven by Palmer Lee Lisane of Route 2, Rose Hill and Jessie Brooks of 1203 Farmville Blvd.

Police, who make no charges, estimated damage at $300 to the Lisane car, $800 to the Brooks auto and $1,100 to a beat and trailer being pulled by the Brooks vehicle.

Peninsula Is Ideal Trip For Campers

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER, GASPÉ, Quebec (UPI) — Campers who plan to visit Canada in the future should plan a trip around Quebec's Gaspé peninsula.

The peninsula is 150 miles long and almost 85 miles wide, with 450 miles of coastline. It offers the camper and other motorists a variety of scenery.

There are numerous provincial parks along the main peninsular highway. Some are elaborate rest stops with excellent picnic facilities. The larger parks have camping sites as well as picnic grounds.

The Gaspé peninsula parks are ideal for self-contained vehicles, but tent campers and towers of vehicles which do not have their own heating systems should bring along catalytic heaters since there are no electrical hookups.

There are many privately owned campgrounds with full hookups at reasonable prices. An electric blanket will produce enough heat to keep the camper warm during the chilly nights.

The most picturesque village along the southern side of the peninsula is Perce, which overlooks some fantastic rock formations. If the weather is clear, the rock formations rising from the water offer an excellent setting for the seascape artist and photographer.

In this area, campers and other tourists will find a number of good restaurants, but the prices in at least one of them are rather steep.

Campers on a budget should be warned that gasoline prices in Canada are much higher than in the United States. At a service station outside Gaspé the price was 98 cents for an imperial gallon, or about $14 for a station wagon's full tank.

In a stretch of highway between Bonaventure and Gaspé, campers more than likely will encounter young boys selling wooden models of sailboats. They will shout "two dollars," but when the prospective buyer reaches for his wallet the price suddenly rises to $10. This is a gambit, however, because the youngsters enjoy haggling and a persistent bargainer can bring the price down to $3 or $2.

Gaspé is one of the main attractions in the trip around the peninsula. It offers a picture-postcard view to the motorist approaching counterclockwise from the south. Those campers or motorists who become weary of the seemingly endless coastline and fishing villages can find a change of scenery by taking the inland route from Gaspé to the mining town of Murdochville.

There is no sign of civilization along the 50-mile stretch. The scenery resembles part of the American west — heavily wooded areas with mountains in the background along the roller coaster highway.

The motorist can return to the coastal highway on the northern side of the peninsula at Anse Pleureuse and enjoy panoramic views of the St. Lawrence River all the way to Quebec City. A trip around the peninsula will be a memorable experience, especially if the weather is good.

Before entering Quebec, the camper should convert American dollars to Canadian currency to avoid paying an extra five or 10 per cent for exchange. Also the camper should bring along a French-English dictionary because almost all of the people living on the peninsula speak only French.

Fear Hangs Heavy Over Denizens Of 'Drugland'

By LOTTE SEIDLER, MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — It is a strange country — Drugland, USA.

Now you see it, now you don't. But it's there all right, in the center of the city as well as in the ghettos and the suburbs.

This past vacation, I traveled just three miles down the road from my home in south Minneapolis to reach it. But it is most anywhere — wherever people misuse drugs.

To the addicts and the dealers, it is very visible. To others, it goes unseen.

Fear lies heavy over Drugland, like smog. Many of those who call for help are too frightened to give their names. The hours before dawn seem to be the most fearful.

"I'm heavy into drugs," they'll say on the phone. "Can you get me off?"

They'll talk a little or a lot over the phone. Then, often as not, click goes the receiver. Chances are the person is never heard from again. But sometimes they come.

Sometimes they actually star in "to be helped, to get off frugs and be helped, to get off frugs and on to a more productive life."

Why Some Seek Help

Fear also has a lot to do with the decision of some who do show up for help. The police may have busted a friend. They may be after the addict himself, or herself. Or they may suddenly realize that they are strong out."

addicted — on heroin, or valium for that matters.

Other just plain decide they want to stop. Some stick to their decisions.

Drugland is not all horrors. People would not get hooked so much if it were.

Addicts say there is the golden glow and the pink clouds and the moments you can't feel your body; the days when amphetamines tell you you can go on forever without food forever without food, without rest; the nights when barbiturates take you out of your misery.

The trouble is, you have to come down sooner or later. Then, the boredom, or the sadness, if you wanted to escape from, are worse.

No Escape

When you come right down to it there is no escaping on this planet. You've got to confront what's there, handle it, master it. No question about it, it's tough.

At Narconon, the drug and alcohol rehabilitation organization for which I work, we don't promise people pie in the sky. Neither do we tell them how to solve their problems. And we don't tell them they're no good or give them sympathy. Evaluation and invalidation are out.

I became interested in Narconon three years ago at its national headquarters in Los Angeles. I spent many hours watching the program and talking to students and supervisors. I also got considerable training in Narconon techniques. Last winter a national representative asked if I wanted to help start a program here. I said I would and did.

Narconon's techniques are the techniques of L. Ron Hubbard. A philosopher, his theories about the laws of communication and study are used in the Narconon program as it is his stress on improving people's ability on their aberrations. According to Hubbard, man is basically good.

Narconon was started by an inmate at Arizona State Prison, Willie Benitez, in 1966. Benitez had been an addict for 15 years when he read one of Hubbard's books. He started to apply the techniques. By the time he left prison, he and 20 other inmates were off drugs. He now heads in Narconon program in Arizona. It's one of many such programs in this country. Others are in Canada, Sweden and West Berlin.

Drugless Withdrawal
To people heavily into drugs or alcohol, Narconon offers drugless withdrawal with little or no pain. Heavy doses of vitamins are given along with a high protein diet and calcium — calcium magnesium — in a solution which acts as a natural tranquilizer.

The person also gets body communication processes and "light objective" exercises. The body communication processes are designed to get the person back in communication with his body. The "light objective" exercises put a person's attention on the actual physical world around him and away from the not-so-real pictures in his mind.

After 72 hours or so the withdrawal is over. No more "jonesing," jerking of the muscles, no more convulsions, no more cramps, even without body communication processes.

But often the reasons a person took to drugs or alcohol in the first place — the depressions, the feelings of inadequacy, the fears — are still there.

The Narconon Basic Course is next. Simple exercises teach a person to confront another, to get his message across, to acknowledge, to complete a cycle of action. Then comes a study course, which teaches a person how to study; an objectives course — more extroversion — and the drug rundown, the counseling which goes back and finds the reasons a person became addicted and handles them.

Bill's Story
One of our first students at Narconon Minnesota — we started last February — currently is finishing up his objectives course. We'll call him Bill. Some 10 years ago, Bill started drinking heavily.

Next there was a one-year stint in the reformatory for armed robbery. After he got out, a "friend" turned him on to heroin. First it was for concerts and special occasions. But the next thing Bill knew he was strung out. To support his habit he became a dealer like so many others.

Last winter his girl friend, who wanted him to get off drugs, heard of Narconon and came. He withdrew himself and started the course. Bill, 27, went back on heroin a few times — after fights with his girl friend and when he had the blues — but a couple of talks with the Narconon "ethics officer" got him straight for good. He has joined the staff and is helping others get off. He says he has never felt better. The depression which led to his drinking is gone. It isn't always that easy.

The Road Out
The hankerings for drugs or alcohol lingers, sometimes long after the withdrawal symptoms are gone.

"I used to live well on drugs," more than one addict has told me. For the dealers there are the quick trips across the country, the sojourns at luxury hotels in Mexico the pockets full of hundred dollar bills.

For the kid dealers, there's the glamor and the admiration of their peers. For housewives drugs offer a continuous getting away from the drudgery.

But there are also the busts, the weeks and months spent in jail.

"I'll kill myself before I go back to jail," one former addict told me.

There are the wrecked cars, the o.d.'s — overdoses. Death does not only SEEM close. It is.

Thankfully, there's the other side of the coin. The torture ends. The pain goes away. There's a flicker of a smile, a little hope, reawakened personal integrity, some achievement, greater understanding, a road out of Drugland.

Humphrey Said 'Model Patient'

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey is described as "a model patient" in the New York City hospital where he is recovering from cancer surgery.

Dr. Willet F. Whitmore, who operated on the Minnesota Democrat on Thursday to remove his bladder, said, "He's doing very, very well."

"He read the Sunday papers and has been listening to music."

"He's calm, relaxed, friendly and cooperative. His vital signs are stable, his temperature's normal, his biochemical tests are normal and his recovery is right on schedule."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply and steadily today, continuing the slide of the past two weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 60.75 points in the last nine sessions, fell another 11.22 to 941.16 by 11.30 a.m. today.

Losers held a one-sided lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was relatively quiet, however, with many large financial institutions closed for Columbus Day.

Brokers said investors were distressed by the upswing in wholesale prices reported last week by the government, as well as doubts about the outlook for the economic recovery.

Today those doubts seemed to be heightened by reports indicating that a proposed settlement of the strike against Ford Motor Co. was in jeopardy.

Early vote results showed that two United Auto Workers union locals had rejected the proposal, while some others approved it.

Analysts noted fears that the strike, now nearing the end of its fourth week, would soon begin to have a significant negative impact on the broad range of industries with links to the auto business, such as glass, plastics, rubber and steel.

For motor shares dropped 1 1/2 to 56 1/2.

Among other blue chips, U.S. Steel lost 1 1/4 to 45 1/4; Du Pont was down 1 at 117 1/4; and Union Carbide was off 1 1/4 to 57 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost .39 to 54.46 in the first hour, and the American Stock Exchange market value index fell .48 to 99.48.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

It was definitely a night to howl—but not for the Salukis of Southern Illinois. The ones who did the howling were the Pirates of East Carolina as they panted their visitors, 49-14 in a game that wasn't even that close.

Both of the Southern scores came after the Bucs fumbled in good field position (for the Salukis). And there were a couple of penalties and dropped passes that kept the Pirates from scoring a few more touchdowns.

"We had them outmanned," Coach Pat Dye said in retrospect. "I thought their kids played hard. The fact that they scored 14 points in the second half proves that."

"But our kids were ready to play. We had good practices during the week, and it showed Saturday night. The players got themselves ready with good work."

Dye pointed out that the offense rolled up 270 yards by halftime, but could have gotten more. "Those penalties and a dropped pass or two could have meant a lot more yardage and points. The defense played as well as it could play during the first half, too. That's the sign of a good team—getting ready to play every opponent."

The coach added that the Bucs had gotten up for four of their five opponents. "The only one we weren't up for was William & Mary, and I hope we don't have anymore games like that."

Dye was pleased that the Bucs were able to get the ball to the outside running backs. The H&H Trucking Co. members, Eddie Hicks and Willie Hawkins, had 172 and 113 yards respectively, while Pete Conaty, subbing for Mike Weaver, picked up another 103 on the ground.

"I liked the way Pete played, and the way our offensive line got off the ball and blocked."

Overall, Dye said, he was pleased with the team's approach to the game and the way the team opened the game. "Later, after it became apparent what the outcome would be, we got a little sloppy." Dye added, however, that a lot of that was due to the Bucs playing the second and third teams, giving a lot of players time on the field.

"Now we go back to practice and try to improve some more," he said. "We made a lot of progress this week. We were a better team against Southern Illinois than we were against The Citadel. We need to get ready for VMI now."

As far as the injured were concerned, Dye saw no problems. "It was good that we could rest Gerald Hall (safety). And Mike Weaver will be ready to go too." Hall is recovering from a hip pointer sustained against The Citadel, and Weaver had a light groin pull and was rested.

"We can't afford to look ahead," Dye said, noting that the Bucs still had to play VMI before thinking about North Carolina. "If we don't beat VMI, we can't reach our goals. They're a conference team, so they're a very important foe."

The assistant coaches singled out a number of players for their work in the game, including linebackers Harold Fort, Tommy Summers and Harold Randolph; defensive lineman Jake Dove, who played one of his best games; middle guard Nick Bullock, who subbed a great deal for Oliver Felton; and lineman Wayne Poole, who also graded out a winner; and defensive backs Steve Hale, subbing for Hall, and Reggie Pinkney, who had one of his better games.

On offense, both Weaver and Conaty drew praises, along with running backs Raymond Jones, Hicks and Hawkins. The line drew an across the board praise from one end to the other, with Tim Hightower singled out for special praise.

"Tim's father died last weekend," Coach Dick Kupec said. "He didn't snap a ball all week long, and although we started Ricky Holliday, Tim played about half the game, and did an excellent job."

The Pirates will be on the road for the next two weeks, first playing conference foe VMI in Lexington, Va., this Saturday then going to Chapel Hill for the bout with nationally ranked North Carolina. They return home after that with Western Carolina for Homecoming.

"We don't have any other breathers," Dye said. "We really didn't expect one this week, but we definitely don't have any more the rest of the way."

Only Apps Have Chance To Deny Bucs SC Title

By The Associated Press
It now appears nothing short of a season-ending defeat at the hands of Appalachian State's Mountaineers will deprive East Carolina's Pirates of the Southern Conference football championship in their final year in the league.

A few hours before the Pirates belabored Southern Illinois 49-14 Saturday night to run their overall record to 5-0 and their two-year winning streak to 11, the Mountaineers missed a chance to tie for the league lead in a 14-14 tie with Furman's Paladins.

That dropped Appalachian to 1-0-1 in conference play behind East Carolina at 2-0, but the tie still left Furman at 0-1-2 and bringing up the rear of the six teams eligible for the title.

Other than the East Carolina victory and The Citadel's 14-10 triumph over new member Tennessee-Chattanooga in a game that doesn't count in the standings, it wasn't too good a day for the league.

Virginia Military's Keydets, 1-4, were bombed by Virginia Tech's Gobblers 37-7; William and Mary's Indians, 3-2, were upended by a Delaware comeback 15-13; and Davidson's title-ineligible Wildcats, 0-2-1, were held to a 0-9 title by Randolph-Macon.

The only other victory was turned in by another ineligible new member, Western Carolina, 4-2, which edged Jacksonville State 14-13.

"We should have scored 24 more points," moaned a spokesman at Appalachian, 4-1-1 overall, which blew four scoring chances inside the Furman eight. Part of that was due to an early reinjury of his knee that sidelined All-Southern quarterback Robby Price.

Furman quarterback David Whitehurst scored on runs of one and 19 yards and the Mountaineers countered with a 60-yard pass from Chris Swecker to Emmitt Hamilton and a two-yard run by Calvin Simon, the latter at the end of a three period drive that ended the scoring.

There were five lost fumbles between the two teams on the slippery artificial surface, the ball once changing hands twice at the Furman one. And ASU's All-Southern placekicker, Gary Davis, slipped and fell while trying a 23-yard field goal in the first period.

Furman is now 3-2-1 over-all.

Sophomore quarterback Marty Crosby marched The Citadel, 3-2, to two touchdowns in the final period on a 17-yard pass to Felix Hooks and a one-yard run as the Bulldogs twice came from behind. Crosby's winning score was set up by Greg James' fumble recovery.

"Marty did a super job," said

Coach Bobby Ross of The Citadel. He said Tennessee-Chattanooga, 2-3, "was giving us the inside and was daring us to pass. Marty did a good job mixing up the offense."

Tailback Eddie Hicks and quarterback Pete Conaty starred in the East Carolina romp, in which the Pirates ran up 491 yards on the ground while limiting Southern Illinois to 49.

Hicks scored on runs of three and 64 yards, while Conaty took over early for slightly injured Mike Weaver and ran 62 yards for another score. Conaty also kicked two extra points and ran for two two-point conversions but missed his first field goal in 11 tries this season.

"I was impressed with the job our coaching staff did in preparing the kids for this game and also the way our kids approached the game," said East Carolina Coach Pat Dye.

Surprising William and Mary appeared to have Delaware wrapped up by taking advantage of a poor punt and fumble recovery for Jim Kruss' 17-yard run and Steve Libassi's 45-yard field goal. Libassi kicked a 23-yarder after an Indian drive to make it 13-0 at halftime.

But the Indians went sour on offense after intermission and Delaware closed to 13-9 on a 52-yard drive and a Herb Kline field goal. Then the Indians fumbled a punt, and Bill Komlo passed 16 yards to Larry Wagner with 2:12 left to win for the Blue Hens.

"We had it and let it get away from us," said Indian Coach Jim Root. "I thought our kids played a helluva game, but Delaware cashed in on that big turnover, and you just can't give a real good football team like that such an opportunity."

VMI fell behind 10-0 in the first half against Virginia Tech on Paul Engle's 47-yard field goal and George Heath's 11-yard run, but pulled to within 10-7 on Steve Oddi's two-yard run set up by Gary McNeal's 43-yard punt return. Then the roof fell in.

Paul Adams capped a 65-yard drive with a one-yard scoring run. Greg Payne returned a punt 70 yards and Mitchel Barnes ran 46 yards on a quarterback keeper—all within the space of four minutes.

Virginia Tech had 373 yards on the ground and didn't throw a pass.

"The Wishbone is a running offense and we're a running football team. As long as we win, I don't care if we pass or run," said Tech Coach Jimmy Sharpe.

Davidson's Ed Farrell may have been the most frustrated coach over the Wildcats' scoreless deadlock with Randolph-Macon, which also hasn't won a game. Each team blew two scoring chances, but Farrell termed "embarrassing" the Wildcats' performance.

He called it "a ridiculous exhibition of football. We didn't get anybody hurt out there because we didn't hit anybody."

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Running back Dave Hampton of the Philadelphia Eagles was reported "resting comfortably" in a hospital following a concussion he suffered Sunday in a National Football League game against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Reds Go Up 2-0; KC Evens Series

Cincinnati Wins 6-2 Over Phils

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson made a prophetic statement last week when asked about all the psychological needings between his team and its National League playoff opponent, the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Come Oct. 14, or sooner, it won't matter who is doing the talking, somebody will have been full of wind. The best team is going to win. We are the world champions, and until they beat us three games, they're still just the Philadelphia Phillies," Anderson said.

Well, unless the Phillies are capable of beating the Reds three straight in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium, the Reds are going to defend that world championship in the World Series.

Cincinnati holds a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five playoff series, and can end it Tuesday when they send right-hander Gary Nolan, 15-9, against the Phillies' Jim Kaat, 12-14. Should the Phillies win, Game Four would be played Wednesday night, and if necessary, Game Five would be Thursday.

The key play of Cincinnati's 6-2 victory in Sunday's second game came in the sixth inning, involving controversial Dick Allen, the Phillies' first baseman. Allen failed to hold a line drive by Tony Perez. Two runs scored, sending the Reds ahead 3-2, and they collected a total of four runs in the inning.

Should Allen have caught the ball?

Official scorers Bob Kenney of the Camden, N.J., Courier Post and Bob Hertz of the Cincinnati Enquirer ruled an error. "The ball was hit hard," said Kenney, "but we felt it was right at Allen. The play should have been made. Apparently a lot agree, a lot don't. It was a judgment call."

The situation was created when Dave Concepcion walked to start the Reds' sixth off Jim Lonborg, who had not yielded a hit until that point. Concepcion moved to second on a grounder and scored on Pete Rose's single, the first Cincinnati hit. Ken Griffey singled, kayoing Lonborg.

Reliever Gene Garber intentionally walked Joe Morgan, loading the bases. Then Perez reached out and lined a pitch down the first base line. The ball hit Allen's glove and ticked off into short right field, two runs scoring.

"It was a pickoff play," said Allen. "I'm running toward the bag and never saw the ball. If it wasn't a pickoff play, I'm nowhere near it. It's a triple."

Who called the pickoff play? Allen did.

"When he moves toward first I react," said catcher Bob Boone.

Phillies' Manager Danny Ozark tried to skirt the hit-or-error debate.

"The ball was catchable," said Ozark. "He got his glove on it."

Allen said he didn't care whether he was charged with an error, and took another shot at the press in his long-standing battle with them.

"You have to consider this is Philadelphia," said the moody Allen in a low voice.

After Allen's miscue on Perez' liner, George Foster grounded out, but Johnny Bench singled, driving in the fourth run of the inning. The Reds added two runs in the seventh off reliever Tug McGraw, when pitcher Pedro Borbon reached first on a wild pitch third strike, went to third on a single by Rose, and scored on Griffey's single.

Another intentional walk to Morgan, again loading the bases, preceded a sacrifice fly by Perez.

Anderson had his say on the Allen error.

"I'm not the scorer," he said. "But let me say that Richie Allen shouldn't be blamed. He was breaking back on the pickoff, and if that ball had hit him in the head it would have killed him."

Anderson refused to speculate on his team's chances of a three-game sweep. In fact, he planned for a fourth and a fifth game, naming first-game winner Don Gullett to pitch Wednesday and Pat Zachry, Sunday's winner, on Thursday. Zachry wroked five innings, gave up both Philadelphia runs, then left in favor of Borbon.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on consecutive singles by Allen, Jay Johnston and Boone, Greg Luzinski delivered the second run with a second-inning homer into the upper deck in left field. Only 19 homers have reached that fifth level since Veterans Stadium opened in 1971, five of them by Luzinski.

Ozark, of course, wasn't in a conciliatory mood. He indicated his awareness of the Phillies' improbable task of winning three straight in Cincinnati, but said, "We haven't played out well today but petered out."

Kansas City Beats New York, 7-3

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP)—Muhammad Ali won't like this, but the Kansas City Royals float like a butterfly and sting like a bee.

Borrowing a page from the heavyweight champion, the lightweight Royals used a buzzsaw attack that fluctuated from frustrating to funny and — surprise, surprise — the thing worked.

Given the lead, Splittorff hung on to it. He breezed through the Yankees in the seventh and eighth, giving him 5 2-3 innings of shutout relief, his longest stint since he hot hurt July 27.

He had spent six weeks on the disabled list with tendinitis in the middle finger on his pitching hand and then a couple of more in the Florida instructional league, trying to regain his effectiveness.

The Royals still had that slim one-run lead as they came to bat in the eighth. And then the game got out of hand with a succession of bloopers and blunders that put Kansas City in control.

Paul Splittorff, who has spent six weeks on the disabled list and had not won a game since July, relieved Leonard and when he retired the Yankees in order in the sixth inning, it marked the first time in the game that New York failed to get at least one base runner.

It was also a signal for the Kansas City bees to start stinging.

George Brett opened the Royals sixth with a long fly ball to center field. Mickey Rivers slipped as he started after the ball, then turned the wrong way. When Rivers was through, the ball had fallen behind him and Brett was on third base with a leadoff triple.

"I knew that Rivers had a sore shoulder and doesn't throw too well anyway," said Brett.

"When I touched second base, he was just picking up the ball. There was no question in my mind to go for third, especially with John Mayberry coming up."

Buck Martinez looped another

Brett probably didn't realize it, but Mayberry was bending under the burden of an 0-6 for 23 slump against the Yankees. His last hit against them had come on July 6, a couple of weeks before Splittorff's last victory.

Mayberry had been a perfect placid butterfly, but suddenly he turned bee, buzzing a single to left that tied the score at 3-3. One out later, rookie Tom Poquette, who had singled home a run in the first inning, doubled up the left center alley and Mayberry, looking more like a truck than a bee, rumbled home with the go-ahead run.

For Tuesday night's third game, New York will use right-hander Dock Ellis against left-hander Andy Hassler for Kansas City. The Yankees have one consolation. Splittorff won't be in the bullpen.

"He's going to pitch the fifth game," explained Royals Manager Whitey Herzog, packing his beehive for the trip to New York.

"I'm not going to say anything about the sloppy play. If you want to use it, you can. I don't pay attention to errors. My players are human and they make errors. I just worry about losing."

For Tuesday night's third game, New York will use right-hander Dock Ellis against left-hander Andy Hassler for Kansas City. The Yankees have one consolation. Splittorff won't be in the bullpen.

"He's going to pitch the fifth game," explained Royals Manager Whitey Herzog, packing his beehive for the trip to New York.

"I'm not going to say anything about the sloppy play. If you want to use it, you can. I don't pay attention to errors. My players are human and they make errors. I just worry about losing."

Lessons Pay Off For Jerry Pate

Defending champion Gene Littler and Japan's Yoshitaka Yamamoto finished in a fourth-place tie with even-par 284s.

Pate, the 1976 U.S. and Canadian Open champion, led the field by two strokes by the end of the ninth hole. He then pitched up another birdie on the 13th hole and increased the lead to three strokes.

But he bogeyed the 16th hole to finish two strokes ahead of Aoki. Aoki had one bogey on the first nine and two birdies on the second nine.

More than 23,000 spectators turned out in clear, sunny weather to watch the 45 professionals from the United States, Australia, Britain, Taiwan and Japan complete in the final run.

"I received lessons from an instructor at the University of Alabama two weeks before coming to Japan," says Jerry Pate.

The lesson showed results Sunday when Pate won the $300,000 Pacific Masters Golf Tournament.

"I thought I could win when I birdied the 13th hole," Pate pointed out after his par-71 round gave him a four-round total of 279 for the title.

"Pate won by two strokes over Japan's former World Cup player Isro Aoki, who fired a closing-round 70 and finished with a 281 over the 7,187-yard Sobu County Club course.

Lee Trevino finished third with a 282 total despite cardin a brilliant 69 on the final round.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — East Carolina University's soccer team upped its conference record to 2-0 Saturday with a 3-2 win over Furman.

The Pirates scored all of their goals in the first half while allowing Furman one in each half. Tim Harrison, Jeff Karpovich and Pete Angus scored the Buc goals, all on assists from Scott Balas.

East Carolina had 27 shots on goal to Furman's 13.

The Pirates play again today at Davidson. They are now 2-7 overall.

Allison Grabs Victory; First Win In Five Years

By RICHARD O. WATERS
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Donnie Allison made his first trip to victory lane in five years Sunday, but had to wait for four hours before he was ruled the winner of the $216,555 National 500 stock car race.

It was Allison's seventh Grand National victory in his ten-year career and his third here. He nosed his Hoss Ellington-built Chevrolet under the checkered flag a comfortable 12.2 seconds ahead of Cale Yarborough's Chevy, which had lost its first and second gears.

Mercury driver Bobbie

Allison, Donnie's older brother, passed Buddy Baker's Ford a few feet from the finish line to take third by a hood ornament in the 500-mile race at the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway. Both were in the same lap with the winner. Benny Parsons' Chevy was fifth, one lap behind.

Officials of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing had to wait until Allison's engine cooled before declaring him the official winner. Heat had expanded the size of the engine. Post race inspectors said his engine had first measured 358.03 cubic inches, .03 cubic inches beyond the legal limit. A final measurement showed it to be 357.8.

"We did gamble on the last pit stop," said Allison, who took the lead for good on lap 308 of the 334-lap race. He pitted for gas with 33 laps to go and did not replace the worn tires in an effort to preserve a six-second lead over Baker.

"I seemed to run a little faster after my tires got worn and hot. I was really happy that we didn't do anything but put gas in the car," the 37-year-old Hueytown, Ala., driver said. Allison said his crew did not make a single chassis adjustment. "We started the race just like we finished it."

David Pearson's Mercury finished the sixth, two laps behind the winner, with relief driver Neil Bonnett at the wheel. Pearson, who started from the pole, called on the rookie driver to substitute after complaining of back pains. He sprained his back after taking a shower Saturday.

Mays Leads Browns Past Steelers

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

While many of his counterparts were falling like buck privates on the battlefield, David Mays scrambled from the foxhole, took up the battle standard and came out with a field commission.

Mays, who played last season with Shreveport of the defunct World Football League, was sent to the front after his field general, Cleveland starting quarterback Brian Sipe, was injured in a skirmish with the Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive front four.

Sipe was taken from the game with a concussion with 3:33 left in the first half. He may have lost the battle, but the Browns, guided by Mays, won the war, 18-16.

Sipe, however, was not the only casualty of that particular National Football League war Sunday. Pittsburgh starting quarterback Terry Bradshaw received what was diagnosed as "neck and back injuries," a Steeler spokesman said.

Bradshaw and Sipe were only two of five NFL quarterbacks who will receive the "purple heart" for injuries received Sunday. Also hurt were Joe Namath of the New York Jets, Craig Morton of the New York Giants and Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski.

Trailing 10-6 at the half and with Sipe out, Cleveland took advantage of a series of flubs that caused Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll comment: "We're about as good as a grade school team right now."

Don Dickroft attempted a 41-yard third-quarter field goal. It was blocked by the Steelers but fumbled back to Cleveland on the Pittsburgh 29-yard line.

Mays then moved the Browns to the Pittsburgh one from where Cleo Miller scored. Cockroft missed the point after with a stand-in, Dave Logan, holding for Sipe. Cleveland led 13-10.

Cockroft made amends for the missed PAT with a 50-yard field goal with 11 seconds left in the third quarter and what turned out to be the clincher from 40 yards with 1:55 left in the game.

Rookie Mike Kruczek, subbing for Bradshaw since the early part of the fourth quarter, managed a 22-yard scoring run with 1:05 remaining, but it was not enough to enable the defending Super Bowl champion Steelers to avoid their fourth loss in five games.

Bradshaw was flown back to Pittsburgh where X rays taken at Divine Providence Hospital were negative. A Steeler spokesman said the quarterback was "resting comfortably."

In other NFL games Sunday, the Jets downed Buffalo 17-14, Dallas beat the Giants 24-14, New Orleans blanked Atlanta 30-0, Kansas City upset Washington 33-30, Detroit surprised New England 30-10, Baltimore stopped Miami 28-14, Oakland beat San Diego 27-17, Houston thumped Denver 17-3, Minnesota nipped Chicago 20-19, St. Louis beat Philadelphia 33-14, Green Bay beat Seattle 27-20 and Cincinnati stopped Tampa Bay 21-0.

N.Y. Jets 17, Buffalo 14
The Jets gained their first victory of the season, under new Coach Lou Holtz, on Pat Leahy's 38-yard field goal with 48 seconds left. Namath also threw his first touchdown pass of the season, a two-yarder to rookie tight end Richard Osborne, in the first half as the Jets took a 14-0 lead.

But Namath sat out the second half after a minor muscle pull in his right calf, and rookie Richard Todd came in. Bradshaw's offense stalled in the second half, while Buffalo rallied with two TDs. But Todd marched the Jets from their 20 to set up Leahy's field goal.

New Orleans 30, Atlanta 0
New Orleans quarterback Bobby Scott threw for one touchdown and ran for another, while the Saints held the Falcons to 168 total yards and sent Atlanta quarterback Bartkowski to the sidelines injured.

Bartkowski left the game favoring his right knee moments before the first half ended. Surgery may be necessary.

Dallas 24, N.Y. Giants 14
Roger Staubach completed 13 of 15 passes for 178 yards and a touchdown, a 40-yarder to Drew Pearson, as Dallas cruised to a 17-0 halftime lead over the Giants.

Morton, the Giants' quarterback, threw one touchdown pass in the third quarter, but on the last of five sacks he suffered, Morton fell to the ground grasping his left knee. He was replaced by veteran Norm Snead, who mustered one TD drive, capped by Larry Csonka's six-yard run.

Kansas City 33, Washington 30
The Chiefs used a play, described by Kansas City Coach Paul Wiggin "as old as Methuselah," in handing the Redskins their second straight loss.

With 1:04 left, Mike Livingston took the snap, handed off to Woody Green, who handed off to wide receiver Henry Marshall, who later rallied back to Livingston, who finally passed to Larry Brunson on the Redskins' eight. Brunson bulled the rest of the way.

Detroit 30, New England 10
Greg Landry threw three touchdown passes, two to rookie tight end David Hill, and Detroit ended a three-game New England winning streak and their own three-game losing string.

Baltimore 28, Miami 14
Bert Jones ran for one Baltimore touchdown and passed for 177 yards, including a 10-yard TD strike to Glenn Doughty. The victory, coupled with New England's loss, gave the Colts sole possession of first place in the American Conference East.

Oakland 27, San Diego 17
Oakland's Ken Stabler threw three touchdown passes, two to Cliff Branch and one to the league's leading receiver, tight end Dave Casper.

Houston 17, Denver 3
Houston's Dan Pastorini completed 24 of 40 passes for 218 yards against the league's best statistical pass defense, and Ronnie Coleman and Fred Willis ran for touchdowns.

Minnesota 20, Chicago 19
The Vikings built a 17-0 halftime lead on scoring runs of one and five yards by Chuck Foreman, then held off the determined Bears. The Vikings blocked an extra point attempt and Bears placekicker Bob Thomas missed another that would have tied the score 20-20 in the fourth quarter.

St. Louis 33, Philadelphia 14
Jim Hart threw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Mel Gray, and the Cards turned two Philadelphia fumbles and two pass interceptions into scores after falling behind 7-0 in the first quarter.

Green Bay 27, Seattle 20
Lynn Dickey passed for 215 yards, including a 66-yard touchdown pass to Steve Odom, and the Packers came back from a 20-7 third-quarter deficit to beat the winless, expansionist Seahawks. Barty Smith scored twice for Green Bay.

Cincinnati 21, Tampa Bay 0
Defensive back Tom Casanova returned a fumble 25 yards for a third-quarter touchdown and intercepted a pass to set up another score as the Bengals handed Tampa, the other winless, expansion team and also winless, its third shutout of the season.

Some Voice Doubts Over Combined Middle School

RAYMOND WORTHINGTON

RAYMOND GASKINS

YVONNE STRICKLAND

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer
AYDEN-GRIFTON — The Ayden-Grifton Advisory Council adapted a proposal which recommended the construction of a combined middle school for Ayden and Grifton at a recent meeting. The proposal was sent to the Pitt County Board of Education which reverted the proposal back to local advisory committees to Citizens to express their opinions about the proposal.

The following are reactions of citizens in the Ayden and Grifton communities about the proposal. "I don't think that the combined middle school is necessary because Grifton has a good school and there is no need in busing sixth, seventh, and eighth graders. These children should not be subjected to the older children's habits," Grace Vrooman of Grifton said. "My little girl has to take two allergy shots a week and now she is able to walk to the doctor's office from the school. I have to work and I cannot take her. Besides, I have thought about it and at one time I would have one child in the high school, one child in the middle school and one child in the elementary school," Mrs. Vrooman added.

"I think that the idea of a combined middle school would be a good idea because of the expanded facilities. The large school could offer extra programs," Alice Register of Ayden said.

"I don't think anything about the combined school. I'd prefer that the school stay just like it is," Grace Morris of Grifton said.

"I have one child that attends Ayden Grammar School. I think it would work. It would give the students a chance to change classes," Yvonne Strickland of Ayden said.

"I have six children and I have been opposed to the idea of combining the schools. I prefer keeping the schools as they are because if they are combined we will lose something out of the neighborhood and the students will lose some of their identity," Raymond Gaskins of Ayden said.

"I have found that since the high school has been combined that the community does not have the personal contact with the students," Gaskins added.

"I have one child in the third grade, one in the fourth, one in the sixth and one at Ayden-Grifton High School and I just hate to see the middle school mover nearer to Grifton," Jennie Sutton of Ayden said. "Any improvements for the schools would be welcome but I think that a combined middle school near the high school would create a lousy traffic problem. I would rather that we keep the school within the city and keep the classes smaller," Sonya Porter of Ayden said.

"I know that consolidation is not the answer to all school problems and I can realize the fact that the school needs to identify with the community and vice versa. We have been faced with a decline in enrollment since the late 1960's. In the 1968-69 school year enrollment in grades 1-8 was 719, and today it is 514," Ike Baldrée principal of Grifton School said.

"Presently the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades have six state allotted teachers. Based upon the enrollment figures of this year we will probably lose another teacher next year. We had hoped that the enrollment would level off. There is also a need for more specialized teachers in the middle school level. With smaller classes, it is necessary to have teachers specialize in more than one subject and this is not easy," Baldrée continued.

"We have sent letters home to the students to show them the figures concerning the decrease in enrollment. Presently we are not suffering. We have a good staff and student body from well motivated homes. I simply fear for our survival," Baldrée said.

"I think that we should combine the schools, and put it beside the high school. It would cut the costs of the facilities," Raymond Worthington of Ayden said.

The combined Ayden-Grifton Advisory Councils will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Ayden-Grifton High School to discuss the combined middle school.

What do you bid now?
A.—If you have any faith in partner's bidding, double. You are faced with an almost certain spade loser, for partner had the opportunity to cue-bid a first round spade control at the five-level but did not do so. A pass by you would tell partner you have no fast spade loser and ask him to decide between doubling or bidding the grand slam.

Q.2—Neither side vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ4 ♠10 ♦AQJ107
♠AK98
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♥ 2♠ Pass Pass Dble.
Pass 2♣ Pass 2♥
3♥ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Double. Even though partner might be completely broke, since he could not act over West's three hearts after you had told him about your powerful hand with club support, your hand is too good not to make one further effort. A double offers the most flexibility. On this auction, partner won't play you for heart length, so he has the option of passing for penalties if he has a smidgen of defense, or of removing to four clubs if his hand is completely unsuitable.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♠K1083 ♦A9J2 ♠KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 2NT Pass
4NT Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid six trump. Partner's jump to four trump is quantitative, not ace-asking. He wants you to bid the no trump slam if you are maximum for your response. You have 15 fine points and the king in partner's suit is an added plus, so accept his invitation with confidence.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♥76 ♦Q9852 ♠AKQ7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 2♦ Pass
4♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Five clubs. You have an opening bid facing a partner who has jumped, so you are in the slam zone. However, it would be precipitate to jump to slam, since there is a possibility that you have two quick heart losers. Your club cue-bid will alert partner to your slam interest and heart weakness.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♠KQ872 ♦K72 ♠AQ65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2NT Pass 3♥ Pass
3♣ Pass 4♣ Pass
4♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Seven no trump. Partner's two bids have been cue-bids in support of hearts. He has shown a maximum with a heart fit, so you must own the deck. Add partner's 24 to your 14 and you get 38, more than enough to contract for the grand slam. No trump should be the safest spot, protecting against possible bad breaks.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A6 ♥K6 ♦AKJ972 ♠QJ7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 2NT Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Six no trump. You have 18 prime high-card points and a good six-card suit, so even if partner is minimum, there should be good play for that contract. Since partner in all likelihood has a high club for his bid, you shouldn't worry about being off two quick losers in any suit.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J5 ♥QJ85 ♦K1072 ♠Q109
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♣ Dble. 2♣ ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid three hearts. Don't allow East's preemptive action to freeze your side out of the auction. Opposite a partner who could make a vulnerable take-out double, you have a reasonable hand—ample for a free bid which will take the strain off partner.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠873 ♥J10542 ♦754 ♠92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2♣ Pass 2NT Pass
3♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. This is the one sequence where you are allowed to pass with a completely worthless hand, but this is not the right hand for that action. Besides the fact that your heart suit might prove useful, you have three trumps and a doubleton. The raise to game does not promise much of value.

Benedict Arnold Won Repute As A Strategist At Lake Champlain

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer ...
Before a sharp autumn wind, under a good press of canvas, His Majesty's flotilla knifed south through Lake Champlain. Twenty-eight warships strong, with 680 flatboats full of Redcoats and Hessians following, the fleet was the cutting edge of a campaign to lop off the Revolution's head.

Across her path wallowed a match-box American armada of 16 vessels manned by untrained sailors and commanded by a general turned admiral. The rebels were afraid to show a British success seemed certain, but in fact the Redcoats would lose. They would be beaten by a handful of Yankee carpenters and woodcutters, by their own overcaution and by a brigadier general named Benedict Arnold.

A narrow, 125-mile-long lake between New York and Vermont, Champlain was the back door to America in 1776. In the roadless wilderness, it was an easy, natural highway from British strongholds in Canada at the lake's northern tip to the strategically important Hudson River to the south.

Two American forts — Crown Point and Ticonderoga — guarded the southern reaches. Who held them controlled the portage to Lake George and the Hudson entrance. It was a simple step from there to Albany and a link-up with the Redcoats who had just driven General Washington from New York City.

That's what Sir Guy Carleton, the British Governor General of Canada, had in mind. If he succeeded, New England, the hotbed of rebellion, would be divided from the colonies to the south and could be conquered at leisure.

Carleton, directing Gen. John Burgoyne and naval Capt. Thomas Pringle, was just the man to do it. In the winter of 1775-76 he had turned away Arnold's and Gen. Richard Montgomery's thrust at Quebec, had withstood siege until reinforcements arrived in the spring and had driven the Americans out of the country. Now he was in hot pursuit of the retreating rebels.

There weren't enough of them left to defend Crown Point and Ticonderoga, the Gibraltar of America, was a plum ripe for picking. Some 3,500 half-naked, dispirited, ill-supplied soldiers led by Gen. Horatio Gates were supposed to stand against 16,000 well-equipped, well-trained and disciplined foes.

Three schooners and a sloop captured from the British when the Americans took Ticonderoga in May 1775 commanded the lake. An arms race began. At St. John's on Champlain's northern edge, the British started hammering together a squadron. At the other end, near what is now Whitehall, N.Y., Arnold was given the job of constructing enough gondolas and galleys to match it. A man of some sailing experience, including merchant trips on Champlain, he designed and directed construction of about 13 cannon-bearing boats. They were leaky, cumbersome craft made from green, unseasoned wood.

Apart from the armada of bateaux and gunboats, the British built three large ships along the St. Lawrence. Each sailed to the rapids at the head of the lake, was dismantled, carried cross-country and reassembled. HMS Inflexible, the largest of the lot, was divided into 30 pieces for the portage. With 18 guns, the 180-ton, three-masted, ocean-rigged ship was capable by herself of destroying Arnold's force. But she cost Carleton a fatal month's delay.

Gates ordered that the fleet not be risked in an offensive and that it return to Ticonderoga at Carleton's approach unless some opportunity presented itself. Arnold decided to make an opportunity. Near the present Plattsburg, N.Y., more than halfway up the lake, Arnold drew his ships up at a concealed anchorage across a narrow channel separating Champlain's west bank from Valcour Island. He gambled that Carleton, approaching from the north with the wind behind him, would not spot the hidden Americans until he rounded the island's southern tip.

The British then would be forced to beat upwind under American fire if they wanted to attack. On Oct. 11 — 200 years ago tomorrow — the gamble paid off. It was a furious fight. Indians with the British landed on either shore and peppered the rebels with muskets. Grape shot raked decks on both sides until they were red with blood. The Congress, Arnold's ship, was hit 19 times. One rebel vessel sank, another was beached, captured and burned.

Arnold dashed about his ship aiming and firing cannon. It was useless. By nightfall Carleton had the upper hand. In the dark, Arnold hatched a brilliant surprise. Under cover of a heavy fog, lanterns out, he silently slipped the remains of his fleet between shore and enemy and into the lake. Carleton didn't miss them until dawn. And he didn't catch up until Oct. 13.

Arnold's vessel and four others fought a rearguard action until the Americans were forced to burn their ships. Two had been burned the day before and another had just been captured. In all, 10 American boats were lost. One, the Philadelphia, was later raised and now is berthed at the Smithsonian.

Cautious Carleton proceeded to Ticonderoga and reconnoitered. Arnold's ferocity had surprised him and he feared, without need, similar resistance from the fort. Winter was fast approaching and Carleton thought he faced a long siege in the bitter northern cold.

Though his force outnumbered the rebels five to one, it was not a prospect he favored. If only it were September instead of October. What a difference a month would make; that month lost on the inflexible.

To mount a siege was to risk being trapped when the lake froze. Besides, he had already proved a point: rebellion was doomed in the face of such power.

He came about, sailed back up the lake and repaired to winter quarters in Canada. The United States was safe, until spring.

Fumes Affected Sunday School

STATESVILLE (AP) — Eleven children and their Sunday school teacher were rushed to a hospital Sunday morning after inhaling carbon monoxide fumes at St. Pius X Catholic church.

Father Edward Beatty said the furnace had just been turned on for the first time this year, and the chimney apparently was stopped up by pigeon nests and debris. This caused gas fumes to back up to the basement.

All the children, aged 5 to 12, and the teacher were given oxygen and released. Father Beatty canceled the 10 o'clock mass because of the incident.

He said he had been hoping for a new building, and, "Maybe this will make a difference."

Complains Over Mizell Letter

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Democratic incumbent in the 5th Congressional District, Steve Neal, says he plans to file a complaint with the Fair Campaign Practices Commission against his Republican opponent, Wilmer Mizell.

Rep. Neal says he will complain that Mizell distorted the facts involving mailing privileges. Mizell has charged Neal with back-dating a news letter to get it under a federal deadline for free mass mailings from congressional offices before the November election.

The deadline was Oct. 5 and the newsletter was dated Sept. 24.

Neal said, "I am outraged that Mizell issued a false statement to the press." Mizell's campaign spokesman, Ed Armfield, said, "Neal can complain all he wants to. He will only further embarrass himself. There is no basis for the complaint."

Sony Bono Enjoys A Big Life Style

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sony Bono hangs loose, lives with a pretty young girl, works with his ex-wife, Cher, and enjoys a life style all his own.

He has two homes, a Bel Air house he calls a "baby mansion" and a desert home in Palm Springs, both of which he shares with Susan Coelho, a beauty of Indian extraction. Susan and Sony are unmarried and haven't announced any matrimonial plans.

In his divorce from Cher, with whom he costars for CBS-TV every week, Sony agreed she should have the spectacular mansion in which they lived. The smaller one in Bel Air is a miniature version of the original but still more than 10,000 square feet in size.

Curiously, Sony and Cher had purchased both dwellings from Tony Curtis. The houses are only about a mile apart.

The "baby mansion" has three enormous bedrooms. They consist of three separate suites complete with private baths and dressing rooms. One of the bedrooms is the preserve of Sony and Cher's daughter, Chastity, 7.

Sony had Chastity's room decorated in blue denim. The little girl has her own old-fashioned wooden telephone booth in it, including an ancient telephone.

Sony and Cher had owned the house since 1968 but never lived in it. They leased it out. When the marriage became unglued, Sony had the place stripped from top to bottom.

He hired the same man who had decorated his Palm Springs pad to do a number on the Bel Air place. Sony describes the decor as a three dimensional Gauguin painting. The colors are brilliant.

Some rooms are clearly Italian renaissance. Others are done in desert tones. Still others give the feeling of the jungle.

It's a masculine house, furnished for comfort. Sony said he was a bit strapped when he refurbished the house and thought antiques would be impractically expensive.

The exterior is impressive, faced with Roman stone. It rests on an acre of ground and includes a swimming pool. Sony's greatest regret is the lack of room for a tennis court.

He is trying to convince a neighbor to install a court, allowing Sony to lease it on a long-term basis.

Sony's desert house has a pool, too, and is surrounded by enough tennis courts to enable him to play every weekend.

A butler takes care of the Bel Air house and does some of the cooking. Both Sony and Susan also poke around the kitchen. Susan excels at spicy Indian curry dishes. Sony cooks such Italian specialties as pasta with broccoli.

Sony, who once weighed 30 pounds more than he does now, watches his weight carefully. He stays trim on the tennis courts.

When "The Sony and Cher Comedy Hour" is in production Sony has a relatively easy schedule. He arrives at CBS at 10 a.m. and almost always is finished by 6 o'clock in the evening.

If he isn't working, Sony takes Susan to the race track. He owns a couple of thoroughbreds and runs them at Santa Anita and Hollywood Park.

"I lived in Inglewood, near Hollywood Park, when I was a kid," Sony says, "and it always was a dream of mine to own a race horse."

Sony bets modestly at the track.

For company around the house Sony keeps three German shepherds — Scruffy, Sabrina and Anthony — who double as watch dogs. They are frolicsome companions for Chastity on her frequent visits to her father.

The little girl has made the adjustment to her parents' divorce. So, for that matter, have Sony and Cher.

"We have separate lives and interests now," Sony says. "And we work together without a hitch."

For relaxation Sony reads historical novels and biographies. He seldom listens to music anymore, explaining, "I was so closely involved with music for so many years I got bored with it."

Sony, who wears a tuxedo most of the time on the air, is meticulous about his wardrobe. A professional costumer helps him with his personal wardrobe, which consists mainly of conservative three piece suits.

But around the house and in Palm Springs he's most comfortable in jeans and shorts.

"I'm living a good life," Sony concludes. "And I enjoy my work. For now, I can't think of any ways to improve it."

National Forests Timber Ban Lifted

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A year-long ban on timber sales in North Carolina's national forests probably will be lifted within two weeks, says a spokesman.

William Arlen, a Forest Service spokesman in the North Carolina office, says the ban on selected cutting of marked trees probably will be lifted in a fortnight, and clear-cutting may be permitted again soon.

Sales are expected to pick up slowly in the mountains, because many markings there are old, will have worn off, and trees will have to be marked again. But in the Croatan National Forest on the coast the Forest Service can be ready for a sale in a month, Arlen said.

The Forest Service temporarily banned tree sales in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia last year after a federal court outlawed the practice of clear-cutting, or cutting all the trees in a tract.

Legislation recently passed by Congress and awaiting the President's signature would permit the service to resume clear cutting.

"Never before has the forest industry been able to rally such support for any legislative effort," says a newsletter from the industry's Southern Appalachian Multiple Use Council.

Arlen said the Forest Service will have two years to develop regulations under the new National Forest Management Act, if signed by President Ford.
