Carter Plans Moves As President-Elect

JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmy Carter claims not to be overconfident, but he is already planning his first weeks as president-elect, announcing that he will meet with bipartisan congressional leaders to plan a future foreign policy.

He said at an airport rally Tuesday in Moline, Ill., before flying to Chicago, that "certain things need to be done immediately after the election" and that he would not wait until after he is inaugurated to go to work "to restore a sense of cooperation between the president and the members of Congress."

Carter spent most of Tuesday in Illinois, a key state with 26 electoral votes that is being hotly contested by both the Democratic presidential candidate and President Ford in the face of polls showing the race still very close.

He was to campaign today in New York City and Pittsburgh.

Throughout Tuesday, Carter faced large and noisy crowds, at the South Carolina statehouse in Columbia; at the Carbondale campus of South Illinois University; at the QuadCities Airport in Moline; and at a Jewish center in Skokie, a Chicago suburb, in the evening.

Wearing a black yarmulka, with gold braiding that sparkled in the television lights, he called Israel "an island of freedom and democracy in the Middle East.

He said the Arab boycott of companies doing business with Israel or those with Jews in executive positions is "a travesty and disgrace and it must be stopped."

Carter also criticized Ford for failing to bring into the government "new, aggressive, dynamic people to change things that were wrong" in former President Richard Nixon's administration.

Everywhere he went, he pleaded with crowds as he has repeatedly in recent days, to make "a sacrificial effort" to help him win Tuesday.

At the campus, thousands of students flocked to the rally. They were on a knoll, in the tree, crowding a pedestrian bridge spanning a roadway about 100 yards from the speaker's platform. They even jogged alongside Carter's car for several hundred yards when he left.

"You've come to this rally because you believe in our country and I hope you will join me on Nov. 2," he told them. "If you'll help me then ... then in January, Jan. 20 to be exact, we'll change this country, make it great once again, unified again."

Then, with the crowd cheering, he said, "We've got to do it together. ... Okay, we'll make this country great once again."

Carter, talking to several thousand persons at the Moline rally about his plans for the preinaugural period, said "I'm not overconfident."

But then he added: "After the election is over, I'm going to take a couple of days off by myself and call in foreign policy experts and call in members of Congress who are leaders of both parties, Democrat and Republican, and say, 'What can we do to restore bipartisan support for what our nation is, to restore leadership around the world . . . to repair our relationships with Mexico and other nations to the south, with Canada, Japan and Europe?'

"I'd like to ask you to help not only for the next seven days but the next four years as well."

Craig Phillips Speaks At Dedication Of New School

By SUSAN QUINN

FARMVILLE — Dr. Craig Phillips, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, issued three challenges at the dedication ceremonies of the Farmville Middle School Tuesday night.

"The youngsters must cherish this school. Teachers and administrators have a challenge to build on the ideas of educational planners and architects. Adults, parents, legislative representatives and others must continue to demand the best in constructive criticism," Phillips said.

"There is a imperative created here in this marvellous mortar, brick, and wood for an atmosphere for achievement where common men can accomplish uncommon feats. The youngsters and staff supported by the central staff and parents and citizens must work to make this school a good one. The real dedication of this building is in the hearts and minds of the students," he added.

The middle school site, located beside Farmville Central High School, consists of 25 acres. The building consists of 66,277 square feet and the total cost of the project was $1,687,208.68. The school's pupil capacity is 840 and it has 28 teaching stations. The school presently houses grades 6-8.

J. H. Hudson, general contractor of the school project, presented the key to the school to the architect of the project, Cameron Dudley.

"A lot can happen from the time that the bids are approved to the date of moving in. We're proud to be a part of it," Hudson said as he presented the key to Dudley.

Dudley presented the key to Mark Owens, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education.

"On behalf of the taxpayers, the board of education, the faculty, administration and the students who will attend this school, I accept the key and present it to Mrs. Pat Carr, Chairman of the Farmville Advisory Council and Richard Cutler, principal," Owens said.

"We've waited a long time for this school and we are proud to be here and use it. On behalf of the advisory council, I present the key to Mr. Cutler," Mrs. Carr said.

"I am proud to be a part of the Pitt County School system and to be in this new facility. A special thanks to the V.I.P., Voluntary Involved Parents for their help," Cutler said.

Dr. Thomas Patterson presented Dudley, architect of the school a plaque as an Award of Distinction for his work with the middle school and other school projects in Pitt County.

Pitt County Superintendent of Schools, Ott Alford, recognized Associate Superintendent Tom Craft for the work he has done in planning with the contractors and the board of education for the Farmville Middle School.

Prior to the ceremony students, parents and guests participated in open house. Following the ceremony refreshments were served.

Seoul Denies Lobby 'Link'

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Korean government says it has no connection with Tongsun Park, the central figure in a probe of alleged Korean efforts to win the support of U.S. congressmen with gifts and cash, but a published report says the president of South Korea gave personal orders that established a program of official bribery.

Park is a mysterious Korean businessman with a passion for fine living and a knack for cultivating important people.

His lavish parties attracted the high and mighty, and made the host a fixture in the society pages, even while he earned occasional front-page notoriety for business deals involving his homeland.

Now a federal grand jury is probing Park and the money that allegedly flowed from his rice deals into the pockets of congressmen as part of a reputed Korean effort to win favorable treatment in Congress.

The Korean goverment issued a formal statement Tuesday that disclaimed any connection with Park or his lobbying activities. "Park has never been employed by the Korean government nor does he have anything to do with President Park Chung Hee," the statement said.

However, the Washington Post reported today that "highly sensitive" intelligence reports show that President Park Chung Hee personally ordered that U.S. congressmen be bribed with cash, gifts and campaign contributions. The two men are not related.

The Post said the intelligence reports are based on electronic eavesdropping, wiretaps, intercepts of other communications and information from double agents. One tape recording was of a meeting in Park Chung Hee's presidential mansion in Seoul, the newspaper said.

The Justice Department declined to comment on the report.

The 41-year-old Park, who maintains homes in Korea and the Dominican Republic as well as his mansion here, is outside the United States and has not been reached for comment on the allegations.

A variety of activities will take place at "Farmers' Appreciation Day" Saturday in downtown Greenville.

Entertainment for the day will include appearances by the Bittercreek Blue Grass Band, The Green Grass Cloggers and Sallyo the clown, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The program is being sponsored by the Downtown Greenville Association and Billy Barrington is chairman of the program.

Hunt Offers 2 Steps To Remedy Tobacco Program's Weakness

WASHINGTON, N. C. — Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, Democratic candidate for governor, called Wednesday for two changes that he said, "are essential if our tobacco program is to remain strong."

At a press conference in Washington, Hunt said, "First, we must reinstitute a true acreage-poundage program, not poundage alone. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has abandoned acreage compliance and the abuse of supply controls which that facilitates will kill our program if it isn't checked.

"Second, we must make price support adjustments recommended by the farmers themselves for lower stalk tobacco, which are compensated for completely by increase supports for upstalk tobacco. This is essential in order for the farmers' cooperative, the Flued Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation to remain sound."

Hunt said that, "since North Carolina is one of the leading agricultural states in America, it's important that the governor of our states in America, it's important that the governor of our state be a strong spokesman for agriculture. If elected, I intend to be that kind of governor."

Hunt pointed to his experience with tobacco and the tobacco program as a farmer, as a graduate student at N. C. State University, and as a lawyer, and noted that the governor "is in a position to exercise grea leadership in working for needed changes in tobacco production and marketing practices."

Hunt added, "If elected governor, I will continually lend the full weight of my office in working with our farm organizations and North Carolina's congressmen to protect our tobacco and other commodities from those interests in Washington and elsewhere that seem bent on putting tobacco and our family farmers out of business."

"PRE-EXISTING CONDITION"

I took out a policy for hospital insurance in the last of 1974 with National Savings Life Insurance Co. I went into the hospital in May, 1975, and my doctor removed a growth inside my nose. Now the insurance company tells me it was something that had been growing on me for several years, but when I took out the insurance they agreed that I didn't need an examination, that I'd be covered regardless of what happened to me. They say my insurance is no good for that operation because it was a pre-existing condition. I had never been to the doctor for that problem before. E. E.

HOTLINE contacted the insurance company at its Murfreesboro, Tn., office for further information on your claim. John White, manager of the Claims Dept., wrote back with a detailed explanation of the company's reasons for denying your claim. He stated that: 1) your health policy covered only treatment of accidental injury and sickness after the effective date of the policy; and 2) your doctor told them that the growth was a "congenital condition," existing from birth (whether or not it was in a noticeable form until the time removal was required).

We then called the office of the N.C. Commissioner of Insurance. L. W. Cannady, complaint analyst, told us that most policies do not cover congenital or pre-existing conditions; this is generally included in some provision of the contract or in a special clause.

You sent us your copy of the insurance policy and we read it throughly. The first paragraph states, as the company said, that your coverage extends only to accidents or illness occurring after the policy goes into effect. This apparently is the contract's provision for pre-existing conditions, as no other special clause was included.

You note that the agent who sold you the policy said you were "covered for anything," in your words (not his). We can only conclude that he meant any normal circumstances with any resulting expenses.

HOTLINE urges all readers to know their policies — to be sure what conditions are and are not covered. A legal contract is binding and should be read completely. Policy-holders need to know what they are paying for.

Trask New Chairman Of Project Advisory Committee Of CBD

Wade Trask, owner of Shoemasters on Evans Mall, was elected chairman of the Central Business District Project Advisory Committee on Tuesday.

The election of Trask as chairman, succeeding E. Hoover Taft Jr., took place during the committees annual meeting at the Greenville Utilities building.

Other officers elected during the session included William H. Taft Jr. as vice chairman and Mrs. Marie Cox as secretary.

Hoover Taft, who has served as chairman since the committee was organized in 1969, congratulated the nominating committee for the selection of "such fine officers for the coming year."

Taft noted that Trask "has taken an active part in the committee function and was one of the first to upgrade and rehabilitate his location, both in the front and rear entrances." He added, "I am confident that he will do an outstanding job in carrying on the work of this important committee."

The outgoing chairman reported that Phase One of the program is nearly complete involving mall improvements and major street improvements within the CBD area. He recommended that the committee complete the phase and undertake the second part of the program which embraces business rehabilitation and the improvement of parking facilities in the area.

Taft urged the committee to work carefully with the city on Thoroughfare Plan studies in and around the CBD area, giving careful consideration to Greene and Pitt Streets as one-way facilities with a new bridge at the foot of Pitt. Other recommendations included the increase in width of Dickinson Avenue from Eighth Street west, and an increase in the width of Evans Street from Tenth to the 264 Bypass.

For Now, Elizabeth Ray Can Keep Govm't Salary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Ray can keep the money she earned from ex-Rep. Wayne Hays' "Oversight Subcommittee," at least for now.

U.S. District court Judge Thomas Flannery dismissed three private suits which asked that Hays and Miss Ray be forced to repay the federal government.

Three private citizens — Edward Thompson, Anthony Cennamo, and Anthony Martin-Trigona — brought the suits under the federal false claims act. They alleged that Hays and Miss Ray defrauded the government by arranging her to be paid a clerical salary when in reality she was only his mistress.

Hays, once chairman of the House Administration Committee, resigned from Congress earlier this year after newspaper accounts quoted Miss Ray as saying she was on the payroll only as his mistress.

The Ohio Democrat acknowledged a "personal relationship" with her but denied that she was on the payroll solely to be his mistress.

The false claims act authorizes private citizens or the government to sue to recover money paid out by the government for fraudulent reasons.

Flannery, in dismissing the private suits on Tuesday, noted that the Justice Department is investigating the Hays case. He said the three plaintiffs had only the information they had gotten from the newspapers, which the department also has.

Justice Department lawyers expressed fears that a private suit, based on an incomplete investigation, might result in a verdict that would hinder a possible government effort to prosecute or to recover the money.

Flannery's dismissal of the private suit leaves open the possibility that the government might bring a similar action of its own.

WADE TRASK

Foil Big Burglary

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say they arrested three suspected members of organized crime this morning as they were about to pull what authorities said might have been the most profitable crime in American history, the theft of $80 million.

Police said the yeggs, unarmed but carrying some of the most sophisticated electronic and alarm bypass equipment they had ever seen, were about to crack a safe containing money, gold, diamonds and other precious stones, destined for deposit in secret accounts in Swiss banks.

The plan, according to police of the Special Operations unit of the Public Morals Division, was to overpower the lone security guard at the Swissair hangar at Kennedy Airport and then open the big safe. But the police, acting on tips they got last August, foiled the burglary as the trio entered the Swissair cargo area at the airport.

Police arrested Cosmo Mezzatalla, 51, of Brooklyn; Michael Belvedere, 47, of Queens, and a third man who refused to give his name and was indentified only as "Harry Doe," Harry because a policeman heard one of the other men call him that.

The three were charged with burglary, criminal trespass, and possession of burglary tools.

Student Diet Can Lead To Problems Says Expert

By VIVIAN BROWN ....
AP Newsfeatures Writer ..

College meals may be the cause of a lot of the skin problems experienced by students, says skin specialist Georgette Klinger, who cautions young clients about their food habits when they go away to school.

She suggests also that they shower immediately after using the school pool to remove chemicals that might have been in the water, to be aware that smoking and sun can cause early wrinkling of the skin and to avoid eating and drinking anything to excess.

"Too much starch and sugar, canned foods, oils and fats make up the student's diet at the college dining table where there are usually few fresh vegetables and salads. They eat what they are served because they are hungry and the hungrier they get the more they want starches and sugars which will give them a temporary lift," she explained.

More fruit should be eaten, especially after meals, she advises, so the natural sugar may curtail the desire for other sweets. When young people enter the reception area of her New York skin care salon, they get the message: a hostess cart is laden with bowls of fresh cut carrots and cucumbers alongside a coffee urn.

"The digestive system plays a critical role in conditioning the skin. Waste materials can create problems — constipation can cause acne and allergies," she notes, recommending more bulk in the diet. "Raw vegetables, citrus pulp as well as the juice of fruit, millers' bran added to cereals, and yogurt and cottage cheese may all help digestion."

She suggests that "it is possible to get too much as well as too little of vitamins," and one should consult a physician before dosing.

Often she solves skin problems merely by checking the habits of clients, a point she emphasizes when men and women write for her skin examination charts to indicate their problems. What are their nutritional habits? What are their cleansing and makeup routines? She can tell a great deal from answers to those questions.

"Proper cleansing is a very important aspect of skin care. Even dandruff and other scalp conditions have a bad effect on skin. Girls should concentrate makeup only around their eyes, leaving their skin free. It should be a challenge to have a beautiful skin that doesn't need a cover, and the more you cover, the more you must cover," she says.

She also warns about the effects of sun, but she does provide sun screens "for those who would have a bit," and a sun block — a sun survival kit, she calls it — to screen sun out completely. After showering off swimming pool chemicals, she suggests swimmers use body moisturizer.

"My staff is afraid to be seen here with a sunburn. If they find out I am here, they try to sneak into the salon and hide all day," she says with a laugh. "After 30 years some have said, why didn't you make me listen?"

Her daughter Kathryn listened, she said, which may have been a rare mother-daughter experience. She came home from college for skin treatments and "did as she was told," Miss Klinger explains. As a youngster she had traveled widely with her mother on trips to Europe where Miss Klinger has done a great deal of research on skin. In fact, her daughter became so knowledgeable that she has been able to take over the job of running her Beverly Hills, Calif., salon, Miss Klinger says.

With fall here and children going back to school, good nutrition can help keep their attendance high. A diet containing meats and other high protein foods, breads, and cereals, dairy products and fresh fruits and vegetables will assure adequate nutrition for good health.

If you find your kids ignoring the vegetables on their plates, maybe it's because the vegetables are overcooked and unappealing. Try jazzing up vegetables with a fresh lemon accent — for flavor and color. Here are two yummy recipes that kids should enjoy, a Puffy Parmesan Broccoli Bake and a fresh Spinach Salad. Fresh spinach is an excellent salad green. It looks great, is loaded with nutrients and tastes terrific.

Puffy Parmesan Broccoli Bake

1 egg white
¼ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Grated peel of ½ fresh lemon
2 pounds fresh OR
2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen broccoli spears, cooked, drained
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

In small bowl, beat egg white until soft peaks form. Fold in mayonnaise. Stir in cheese, parsley and lemon peel. Arrange cooked broccoli on oven-proof serving dish. Pour melted butter over broccoli: top with egg white mixture. Bake at 450°F. for 5 minutes or until puffy and lightly brown. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Spinach Salad With Zesty Lemon Mustard Dressing

DRESSING:
1 egg, slightly beaten
¼ cup salad oil
Juice of 1 fresh lemon
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
Generous dash pepper
2 bunches OR 2 packages (10 ounces each) fresh spinach, torn in bite-size pieces
¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
6 slices bacon, cooked, crumbled
2 hard-cooked eggs, sieved or chopped

Combine dressing ingredients in jar with lid; shake well. Chill. In large salad bowl, combined spinach and mushrooms; chill. To serve, pour dressing over spinach mixture; toss well. Garnish with bacon and sieved eggs. Makes 6 dressings.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. After the lettuce has been washed, it should be drained well or patted dry with a towel and refrigerated in a covered container.

Grandmother Flying Again Despite Crash

By CLARENCE ZAIT

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Helen McGee, who has no legs, does more traveling than most people with two legs.

Mrs. McGee, 58, who had the courage to win back her pilot's license after she was nearly killed in a plane crash six years ago, just participated in the Powder Puff Derby.

She has toured Guatemala, flown in three Pacific Air Races, flown to meetings in Denver and Hawaii and regularly "drops in" on friends near the Grand Canyon and Tucson, Ariz. Next year, she says, she is flying to Peru.

She calls herself a "stubborn Swede" and ambles about on artificial limbs with the aid of crutches. She wears a cheery smile that belies the anguish she has suffered.

Mrs. McGee, who still maintains a fulltime job as secretary to a high school principal, says it is painful and tiring getting about on artificial legs. But she was determined to free herself from the "jail" of a wheelchair.

She was 51 years old when she took her first ride in a plane and was immediately inspired to take flying lessons. Before that "I never gave flying any thought at all."

A year after she earned her license she was sitting in the copilot's seat, flying with three other people to a luncheon. The plane failed to gain altitude after taking off from a small field in eastern San Diego County, plunged to earth and caught fire. Others were thrown from the plane, but Mrs. McGee was trapped as fire started burning all around her.

One of the passengers, Virginia Renn, "saved my life," she recalls. "She pulled me from the plane and away from the flames ... but the flesh was all burned off my legs ... all I had were charred bones."

The next thing she remembers is waking up in a hospital three weeks later with a doctor asking for her signature on a piece of paper, authorizing amputation of her legs.

"I was in a dream ... so I signed the paper. It wasn't until later that doctors asked me if I realized my legs were gone. At that point my burns were so severe I couldn't care less about my legs."

She suffered burns over 40 per cent of her body, and doctors told her nine children she only had a 10 per cent chance of surviving. Her face had been practically cut in two by the crash.

But after four months in the hospital and a half-dozen skin grafts, she was released to go to a daughter's home in a wheelchair.

But she quickly asserted the independence that is her most dominant trait and moved into her own apartment "because I wanted to be on my own."

That's when she realized what a restriction the wheelchair was. "I realized a wheelchair is sort of like a jail. I was isolated on all sides by stairs. I was dependent upon someone to take me everywhere. If I dropped something on the floor, I'd have to work laboriously to pick it up."

She decided on the artificial legs, as she explains, "because I could feel sorry for myself the rest of my life or I could be determined to use the legs and do my own thing — by myself."

Therapy at a hospital rehabilitation center was almost too much for the vivacious grandmother, who pooh-poohed therapists' efforts to get her engaged in some sort of hobby. "I didn't want to waste my time on crocheting or polishing rocks," she explained. So she went to work as a typist for the hospital doctors, using secretaries' desks after they'd gone home for the day.

That's typical of her character — she wants to be actively doing something useful.

It didn't take her long to get a driver's license for a car equipped with hand controls, and then she learned of a paraplegic in Escondido who had fitted an airplane with hand controls.

Mrs. McGee didn't have any qualms about flying but recalls "I didn't think I could ever fly again because I didn't know about hand controls. When some of my friends said I'd be flying someday I used to think what a ridiculous statement that was."

But she tracked down Bill Blackwood, the paraplegic who had developed hand controls for an airplane. He didn't take to the idea of teaching a woman — and especially one who had been in a serious plane crash.

He tried her out — even flying to the same field where the accident had occurred — and when nothing fazed her he agreed to train her to fly with hand controls.

By October, 1972, 19 months after the plane crash, Mrs. McGee got her pilot's license back and since then has earned a commercial rating as well.

After the interview — she insisted on coming to the office — she graciously allowed the reporter to open the door for her "because I've learned it gives people so much pleasure to feel they're doing a good deed for a handicapped person."

Have Patience With Mourning Mother

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young married woman. My father died last year, and my mother who was devoted to him is still grieving.

They would have been married 33 years last Sunday had my father lived. On the date of their anniversary, I invited my mother to my home for dinner. I purposely didn't make a party of it, and carefully avoided wishing her a happy anniversary. (I knew it was anything but happy, and figured the last thing she needed was another reminder of what day it was.)

Well, a few days later, my mother told me that she was very "hurt" that I didn't even wish her a happy anniversary. Abby, no amount of wishing could have made that day happy.

Under the circumstances, do you think I was wrong?

MEANT WELL

DEAR MEANT: No. Such a wish would have had a hollow and futile ring. Your mother was probably "hurt" because she's still hurting from her loss and not because you didn't wish her a happy anniversary.

You were thoughtful to have made sure your mother wasn't alone on that date. Don't be critical of her. She's obviously still mourning and deeply sensitive.

DEAR ABBY: I belong to a senior citizens' group. I'm a widow, over 65, and that is as far as I care to go when people get on the subject of age.

Abby, nearly everyone in our group tells their age, which makes me feel self-conscious because I have never told anyone my age and I don't intend to. I would never lie to my doctor, or falsify my age on a legal document, but I can't see what's to be gained by telling it to others.

Is there any harm in keeping my age a secret? When casual acquaintances ask me how old I am, I always say, "That's a subject I don't care to discuss." I know this sounds abrupt and unfriendly, but that's the way I feel.

Please tell me how to handle this question about age without seeming unkind or unfriendly.

AGELESS

DEAR AGELESS: Simply say, "I'm not telling." And if you say it with a smile and a twinkle in your eye, you won't be thought abrupt or unfriendly.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the employer who will hire a married man in preference to a single man if both are equally qualified for the same position interested me.

I find this deplorable. Single people are taxed more, which is unfair considering most single people are not adding to the population problem.

I am 29, male and single. I enjoy traveling, going to the theater with other singles who pay their own way and going out to dinner with no cranky kids around.

My brother is 25 and on his second marriage. He has five kids, is up to his neck in bills and spends his vacations staying home and babysitting.

I have missed only three days of work in the last 10 years. I am always on time and work a full day for a day's pay.

So, Abby, please pass this on to that employer. My boss must appreciate the fact that I'm responsible, though single, or I wouldn't have kept my job this long.

Founder's Day Program Set For Tonight

A tea will be held tonight at eight o'clock at the Kappa Delta House to commemorate the 79th anniversary of the founding of Kappa Delta Sorority.

All sisters, pledges and alumnae are invited to attend.

Kappa Delta Sorority was founded at Longwood College, Farmville, Va., Oct. 23, 1897. One of its four founders was Julia Tyler Wilson, granddaughter of John Tyler, the 10th president of the United States. The sorority now has 114 college chapters, 391 alumnae associations with a total membership of over 80,000.

Since its founding, Kappa Delta has been active in philanthropic activities. The sorority has contributed more than half a million dollars for the care and aid of patients in the Crippled Children's Hospital, Richmond, Va. Kappa Delta gives $12,500 annually toward the support of the hospital and also make contributions for special projects or equipment. At each biennial national convention, a convention gift of $10,000 is also presented to the hospital fund.

Each year the sorority also presents three $2,000 awards in recognition of outstanding research in the field of orthopaedic surgeons.

Flavor Booster Often Used In Chinese Food

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

What is MSG?

Back in 1908 a scientist at the University of Tokyo showed the effectiveness of monosodium glutamate (MSG) as a flavor booster. Today millions of pounds of it are consumed round the world each year.

It took a while for Americans to acquire a liking for MSG, which is usually produced by fermentation from sugar beet molasses. But finally it began to snowball.

Americans used less than 6 million pounds of MSG a year in 1946 but today the figure has rocketed to more than 42 million pounds.

Asians consume about four times as much MSG as we do, and it is a key ingredient in the dishes served by many Chinese restaurants. A report circulated eight years ago that some people might have an allergy to excessive amounts of MSG, and they began talking about the "Chinese restaurant syndrome" which reportedly caused some patrons to complain of headaches and dizziness after loading up on the delicacies offered by Asian chefs.

One critic was Dr. Jean Mayer, Harvard nutritionist who noted that MSG absorbed into the bloodstream in large quantities could cause an unpleasant aftermath, but he added, with no lasting effects on adults.

Scientists supporting MSG then came forward. One was Dr. Lewis D. Stegink, professor of pediatrics and biochemistry at the University of Iowa College of Medicine. Said he: "Glutamate is a common substance present in every normal diet." He added that human breast milk had large quantities of naturally-occurring glutamate.

Stegink said he had made a study of 24 individuals who received large quantities of MSG in meals and none reported symptoms of the "Chinese restaurant syndrome." He suggested that anyone who did suffer aftereffects might have a glutmate metabolism disabipity.

All I know is that I have eaten a great deal of Chinese food with nothing more than a sense of well-being afterward. Here is a recipe by Patricia Young from her book "From China With Taste" (Drake Publishers, New York) in which MSG is used very sparingly with very tasty results.

½ cup rice
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 medium potato
8 cups water
8 ounces round steak
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
3 teaspoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon sugar
Pinch MSG
1 teaspoon corn flour
1 teaspoon water
½ teaspoon salt
2 spring onions, chopped fine
¼ teaspoon sesame oil

Rinse rice in cold water and strain, marinate with first measures salt and oil 20 minutes. Peel and slice potato thingly. Bring first measure water to boil and add rice and potato. Let boil at medium heat 15 minutes. Turn heat low and let boil 45 minutes till congee is smooth. Mince steak and marinate with second measure of oil, soy sauce, sugar, MSG, corn flour and second measure water for 5 minutes. Put minced steak in boiling congee, stir and break up any lumps. Bring to boil for 1 minute. Add second measure salt, spring onion and sesame oil and serve. Serves 3. Good with chilled beaujolais.

Mrs. Rogers Gives Program

The Extension Homemakers of Sweet Gum Grove met for their meeting Thursday afternoon in the community building.

Mrs. Eric Whichard gave the devotion and gave a leader report entitled, "Are kids really to blame?"

Mrs. Mayo J. Rogers presented the program and "Citizenship". She spoke on renewing the ideas and ideals of 1776 and stated that it is very important in being a good citizen.

Mrs. Rogers gave the statistics of the million people that are registered in North Carolina to vote and urged everyone to vote in the coming election.

After the business meeting conducted by Mrs. Howard Briley, refreshments were served by Mrs. Sam Alexander.

PTA Tackles Violence On TV

CHICAGO (AP) — Violent television programs and their effects upon children are now under study by the National PTA in a project said to be the first of its kind for the organization.

The one-year project, which begins this fall, will include a program of seminars, public hearings and participation by PTA members nationwide in monitoring and evaluating violence in television programming.

PTA members plan a campaign of boycotts, letter writing and personal visits to local stations, networks, sponsors and legislators, according to the national office here.

Carol Kimmel, National PTA president, says, "The public is fed up with violent TV programs," noting a recent poll which she said revealed that 71 per cent of the public thought TV programs were too violent.

"And if you're a parent, and familiar with the negative effects of violent TV on our children, it's even more disturbing," she adds.

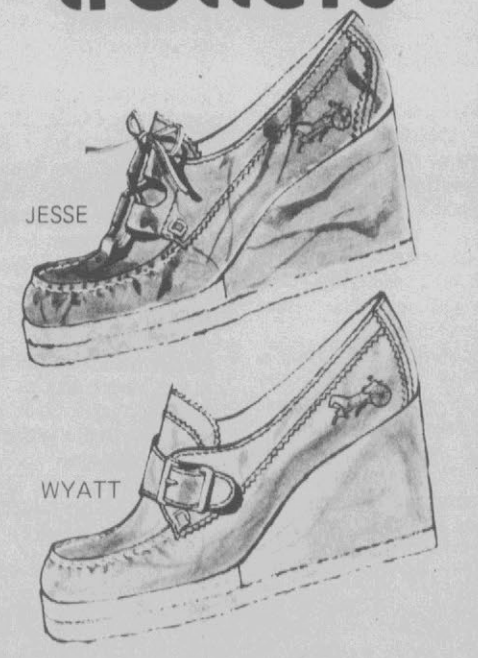

In 1975, the National PTA demanded that the networks and local stations reduce the amount of violence on the air.

Many Will Feel AHEC's Role

The Eastern Area Health Education Center is going to be important in delivering health care in the east, as well as in the development of the ECU medical school.

Forty persons were named to a board last week which will be responsible for the EAHEC. The family practice center is now being constructed at the new Pitt Memorial Hospital to serve as headquarters for EAHEC.

The center is one of nine which have been established throughout North Carolina and the eastern region will serve 23 counties which include 16 hospitals.

The AHEC program will coordinate continuing education and clinical education for the various health care fields. Included are medicine, nursing, allied health professions, pharmacy, dentistry and public health.

Rotation of students from the state's medical schools in hospital residency programs will also be a part of the AHEC responsibility.

Thus the board of directors which has been named for the EAHEC will bear a heavy responsibility in the improvement of health care in the east. The AHEC program is a new and exciting approach to health care problems.

Alternate Energy Sources Imperative

Interior Sec. Thomas S. Kleppe says the United States during the rest of this century will use as much fuel as it has produced in its entire history.

That makes it obvious that the need for producing alternate energy sources is imperative for this country. We must have national policies of developing new energy sources and conserving those that we now have.

Salvation Lies In Growth

By BILL NOBLITT

CHARLOTTE — The one thing which seems certain to keep local governments out of the poorhouse is economic development.

That theme was heard time and again among the more than 1,400 delegates gathered recently in Charlotte for the annual meeting of the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

Faced in their budgets with the same inflationary pressure plaguing their citizens, city officials put a high priority on finding increased revenue sources. But they're also enough in tune with their people to know that prospects for local income taxes or hotel-motel taxes are slim indeed; passage in the General Assembly and a local vote would be required.

Some relief will likely be found through limited state-local revenue sharing; a roads-bond issue, and a clean-water sewerage bond issue would help particular localities.

Enthusiasm

Economic growth looks to many to be the only desirable option for long-term relief; and the mood of local officials is one of enthusiasm in going after growth.

They are much encouraged by recent talk of a coming boom in Sun Belt states; and especially pleased at a Business Week Magazine survey of industrialists which put North Carolina in second place nationally as a desirable location.

But there's more to getting industrial growth than just wanting it. And in recent years there have even been some North Carolina communities which didn't want growth—the leaders actively discouraged new factories in the area.

Those days are over, however, says George Little, secretary of Natural and Economic Resources. The 1974-75 recession resulting in plant closing, layoffs, high unemployment and plunging sales convinced most isolationists they had better seek all the economic development they can get, he feels.

Little believes that local officials will have to take the plunge in order to attract new growth: local taxes may have to be increased to provide the schools, amenities, water and sewer lines and other services necessary to win.

While it may cost a lot to get the ball rolling, the returns are worth it in increased local income, increased property taxes on developed land, a growing population to expand the city tax base.

Advice

Mayor Simon C. Sitterson, Jr., of Kinston was installed as president of the League of Municipalities here recently, and in talking about industrial growth had some advice for his fellow mayors.

Kinston, he said, is aggressively working for growth, and he believes that is a major job local governments ought to do. Kinston and Lenoir County jointly fund from government sources an industry-development committee. That is a legitimate use of public funds and more communities ought to follow suit, Sitterson believes.

He thinks local communities must take stock of their facilities and take the necessary steps to provide the services which will help attract business.

Livability of the community is essential, "So that people who come in can quickly become a part of the community, feel accepted and encouraged to participate. And they in turn will make the community a better place for all, bringing diversity and fresh viewpoints," Sitterson said.

The main thing is "to get more industry, to create more jobs, to keep our young people at home. They are our most valuable asset and when you lose them, you've lost a lifetime of work," Sitterson believes.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Relying On Cesar Chavez

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

LOS ANGELES — Suffering a severe drain to President Ford of white, middle-class nominal Democrats in Southern California, Jimmy Carter's hopes for this state's potentially decisive 45 electoral votes rest on farm labor organizer Cesar Chavez turning out minority, student and other liberal voters for Carter Nov. 2.

Chavez's United Farm Workers and the California left generally are making a massive effort to pass Proposition 14, which would make easier Chavez's organizing of farm laborers. Since Carter has endorsed Proposition 14 at the price of alienating his remaining conservative support, the farm workers are at the core of a new Carter get-out-the vote operation. With that operation, Carter's California campaign — somnolent for three months — began anew Oct. 18.

Besides farm worker muscle, Carter's effort to get minority voters to the polls is fueled by the belated arrival in the campaign of Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown's top political operatives and the dispatch from Atlanta of $255,000 for telephone banks. But it may be too late. Although statewide polls show a virtual dead heat, there is foreboding among expereienced Democratic politicans here that Carter has lost California — and because of that, perhaps the presidency.

Actually, California Democrats are strong and unified, California Republicans are weak and divided. But Republicans have momentarily set aside profound ideological differences, despite deep scars from the Ford-Reagan struggle, in order to back Mr. Ford.

One reason is the performance by Republican national committeeman Mike Curb, a young Hollywood entertainment magnate and political neophyte who has persuaded fellow Reaganites to back the President. But Curb's efforts were possible only because of the Republican rights' view that, whatever Mr. Ford's deficiencies, Carter is concomparably worse.

Such a judgment was by no means certain during the summer when polls showed that Carter, winning California in a landslide, was capturing those pockets of conservative white Democrats (mainly Southern migrants) that have eluded Democratic presidential candidates here. "I thought we had a candidate who could get the redneck vote that not even Jack Kennedy won," a Democratic leader told us.

But when post-Labor Day surveys showed Carter trailing the entire ticket for the "redneck vote," plans to tie state legislative candidates to his campaign were dropped. Key Democrats here feel that Carter's leftward lunge last August embracing Ralph Nader and Warren Beatty alienated conservatives without winning over liberals.

This sudden erosion of Carter's base left him no real choice on Proposition 14. Newly reliant on the party's left, he could not take a neutral position costing him the support of Chavez and perhaps of Gov. Brown. Nevertheless, the endorsement burned Carter's bridges with the central valley farmers, his original California supporters, and probably lost other white conservatives.

Accordingly, Carter's chances for California are linked to the same liberal coalition that (except for the 1964 anti-Goldwater landslide) has lost every presidential election here since 1948. That is why deep-seated suspicion toward Carter by California liberals could prove catastrophic. Just last week, when state assembly majority leader Howard Berman urged support for Carter at a dinner of liberal activists, embarrassing silence was the response.

But in the euphoria following Carter's nomination, there was no interest in cultivating California liberals. When Jerry Brown visited Plains in August, he suggested that experienced California politician Joe Beeman manage Carter's California campaign. Carter declined, insisting that outsiders run his state campaigns. The result has been a becalmed Carter Campaign here, helped little by two ineffective Carter visits, and a disappointing voter registration effort.

Complacency over California has long since fled from Atlanta. Charles Kirbo, Carter's closest adviser, has been telephoning Los Angeles asking what's wrong. After two weeks of negotiations, Beeman and Tom Quinn, Brown's top political agent, finally entered the Carter campaign Oct. 18 — but that only brought on disagreements. Quinn was dubious about $225,000 for telephone banks and has urged new Carter television spots for California.

Nor is Quinn happy about plans for Carter's California

Strength For Today

RESTLESSNESS FINDS REST

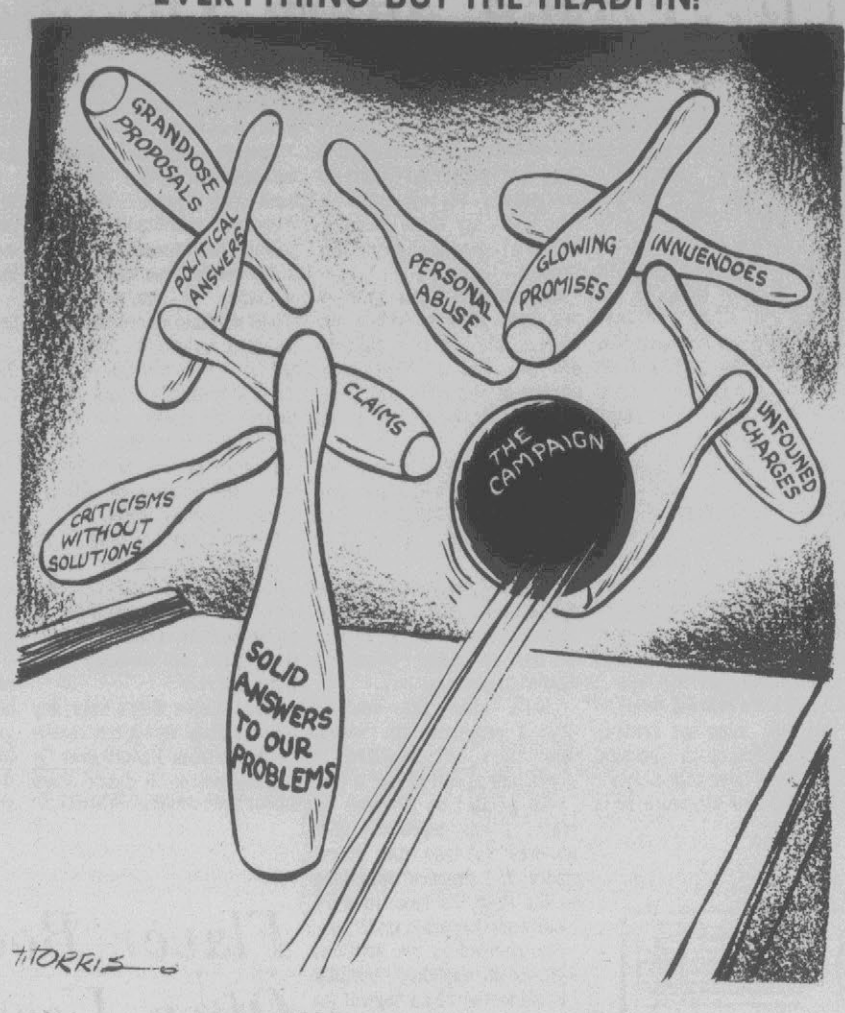

Many years ago the great philosopher William James wrote: "We hear in these days of scientific enlightenment a great deal of discussion about the efficacy of prayer; and many reasons are given us why we should not pray, whilst others are given us why we should. But in all this very little is said of the reason why we do pray... The reason is simply because we cannot help praying."

There can hardly be found a person who never utters a prayer. Silently, or in seasons of great stress, we all offer up our petitions. Probably a majority of people utter at least a brief prayer at some time during the day or night. There are others for whom prayer is a regular and conscientious practice, with its appointed times and places. Probably those whom the Lord loves best are those whose prayer is both a spoken word and a continual attitude of heart and mind.

Essentially we pray because God has fashioned us for Himself, and our souls are restless until they find their rest in Him.

Letters Of Clarification

WASHINGTON — With everyone misspeaking these days "clarification experts" have been put on a 24-hour shift answering mail from groups that have been offended by something someone has said.

Since everyone is so busy campaigning I thought I might provide some form letters that could be sent out to mollify the populace.

This is one President Ford's people could send.

Dr. Mrs. Gronowski,

The President was very happy to receive your letter concerning his remarks where he alluded to the fact that he was proud that Poland was not dominated by the Soviet Union.

What he meant to say, in the heat of the debate, was that he was proud that the Soviet people were not dominated by Poland.

The President has always had a very strong interest in what is going on in Eastern Europe.

If President Ford is re-elected his first act will be to send Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to Warsaw to see if Poland is dominated by anybody. If Mr. Kissinger discovers that it is, he will give Poland seven nuclear power plants, six squadrons of F-16 fighter planes and 12 missile cruisers.

The President believes a strong Poland is essential to the defense of the free world, and will do everything in his power to see that it never becomes a Communist satellite.

Sincerely yours,

* * * *

This is one Gov. Carter's people could mail out.

Dear Mr. Archibald,

Thank you for your kind letter concerning Gov. Carter's interview in Playboy magazine. I would like to explain to you that Mr. Carter did not say he was lusting after your wife. What he said was that he has lusted after women in his heart but God has always forgiven him.

The governor, according to our records, has never met your wife, and therefore the possibility of him lusting after her is out of the question.

ART BUCHWALD

There is nothing against your wife as it's possible that if the governor had met her he might have committed adultery in his heart.

But this is a hypothetical question, and there is no reason for you to be suspicious of your wife or the governor. To put your mind at ease we have rescheduled Mr. Carter's itinerary so he will not compaign in Mayville, Kan., this year and his chances of running into Mrs. Archibald will be nil.

Sincerely,

* * *

The third form letter could be sent out by ex-Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz' people.

Dear Mr. Washington,

Mr. Butz was very disturbed by your letter concerning his remarks as to why black people did not vote Republican.

For some reason the press misquoted him. What he really said was that "All that the fine hardworking Negroes in this country want are tight sneakers so they can win more gold medals in the Olympics, loose blue jeans to enable them to dance easier and a warm place to cook their wonderful soul food." This was said on an airplane and because of engine noise John Dean misinterpreted what the secretary meant.

Sincerely,

* * * *

The final letter could be sent out by the Pentagon.

To the editor:

The Greenville Nightclub Association is making plans for the upcoming Homecoming and Halloween weekend the last of this month. We have decided voluntarily that we wish to close Sunday night in order to promote and support what we believe to be a really exciting event being planned near Stokes—10 miles from Greenville. The First Annual Halloween Music Festival band and a $250 first prize for the best—or worst—Halloween costume—should make for a terrific last day of the homecoming weekend.

The club owners have asked the City to work with them to insure a fun and safe weekend for students, guests and residents of Greenville. It's really a matter of trust and common sense for all of us. Just think about it and help us help you.

Saturday night we will be open until our regular hours, but we have decided to stop our refreshment sales at midnight. The City has agreed to block off to traffic Fifth and Cotanche Streets between Fourth Street and Reade Circle and Evans and Reade. Each club manager and four of his employees will be outside to help you have a safe and enjoyable evening. You'll recognize them because of the distinctive arm bands they'll be wearing. They'll expect you to conduct yourself as ladies and gentlemen.

We are doing all this out of concern for you. It's your Homecoming and we want to show the City, people of Greenville and ourselves that we can have a really nice weekend and a really good time.

We're serious about it though and have given it a lot of thought. Please think about it too and help us and yourself.

See you Homecoming.

Pension Probe Pushed

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is pressing ahead with a broad investigation of alleged corruption in the Teamsters Union's largest pension fund despite the fund's housecleaning campaign and the resignation of 12 trustees.

Officials in the Labor Department, which is heading the year-old investigation of the fund's activities, regard the reform effort as a constructive step, but they say only time will tell whether it represents more than "mere cosmetics."

Eleven of the 16 trustees of the $1.4-billion Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund, acting under increasing pressure from federal investigators, announced their resignations Tuesday. Another trustee had stepped down earlier.

The Labor and Justice departments and the Internal Revenue Service have been investigating allegations that the fund misuses members' pension money and maintains ties to organized crime.

Sources say the investigation is focusing on a number of questionable real-estate ventures, some controlled by organized crime figures, on insufficient collateral and at unusually low rates of interest.

The fund, with headquarters in Chicago, is supported by monthly contributions totaling $26 million from the trucking industry on behalf of 450,000 Teamsters members and retirees.

In announcing the trustee resignations, a fund spokesman attributed them to "plans to streamline the board to meet rapidly changing economic forces and to respond to them

Mrs. Wallis Simpson, fascinating Baltimore-born friend of King Edward of England, won a divorce from her husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson, at historic Ipswich today.

Justice Sir John Anthony Hawke announced a decree after hearing a few minutes of formal testimony.

Cost of the case was charged to the defendant, Simpson, who did not contest the divorce.

The decree will be made absolute within six months.

Mrs. Simpson's evidence alleged that her husband, a subject of the king, was guilty of misconduct at the Hotel de Paris at Bray near Maidenhead Berkshire at the end of July.

Although cold weather was late reaching here, it came so suddenly it caught Greenville citizens unaware and coats were pulled from the closets and coal bins raided in efforts to keep warm.

The official weather bureau station here, headed by B. T. Clark, reported the mercury was standing at 38 degrees at eight o'clock this morning.

This section was due to have frost around the fifteenth of October, but so far the mercury has remained much higher than the degree of temperature necessary for frost.

The weather forecast indicates frost in this section if clear tonight.

Stunned By Unique EPA Suit

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — "We were really shocked," said Sydney Terry, Chrysler Corp. vice president for public responsibility and consumer affairs. "Incredible, unbelievable," he said.

Chrysler had just learned it was being sued for $91 million because, said the Environmental Protection Agency, it had produced 9,100 cars that failed to meet standards of the Clean Air Act.

"Incredible," said Terry again. "It was a simple, unintentional human error. It was insignificant. It was reported by us. It was corrected by us." The offense, he said, was more in the paperwork than in the quality of the vehicles.

The problem originated with the discovery by Chrysler that it had placed on some 1976 Plymouth and Dodge cars a vacuum amplifier for the exhaust gas recirculator that was different from the one it described to the EPA.

The tiny $3 or $4 item is designed to reduce the formation of oxides of nitrogen, a pollutant. In 1975 EPA permitted 3.1 grams per mile to be exhausted into the air; the 1976 requirement reduced that to 2 grams per mile.

When the company discovered the error it told the agency and immediately "cleaned up production," even though, said Terry, the company believed the incorrect amplifiers met requirements.

That belief was at least partially borne out. In testing the vehicles, Chrysler found the amplifier met requirements on 3,500-pound cars. It said the EPA agreed. This immediately reduced the number of possible violations to 3,600.

Even that number, thought Chrysler, was too high. It estimated that the remaining 3,600 vehicles would pass the antipollutant requirements, even though equipped with the older-model amplifier.

On Jan. 27, in keeping with its obligations, Chrysler notified owners and dealers, and managed to reduce the number of potentially offending vehicles to 1,800.

Then, said Terry, the company learned it was to be sued the maximum $10,000 penalty, and on all 9,100 cars. Since, said Terry, "the only basis for action was on a technicality," Chrysler lawyers met with the Justice Department.

"They told us to pay $1 million and sign a consent decree," said Terry. "We said that sounds like blackmail. We made an honest mistake." The Justice Department, he said, informed Chrysler it would sue.

Chrysler expressed its surprise in a Sept. 29 statement. On Oct. 8 Russell E. Train, EPA administrator, issued a statement expressing his surprise at Chrysler's reaction. To seek the maximum penalty, he suggested, was a legal routine rather than a demand for the full amount.

Asked about the suit, an EPA spokesman said the integrity of the certification program was at stake.

Veto Power And Prison Bonds Favored In Poll

RALEIGH (AP) — If North Carolinians had their way, their governor would have the power to veto legislation he didn't like and there would be a bond issue to finance new prison facilities, a Raleigh newspaper poll has shown.

The copyrighted poll by The News and Observer was designed and executed by Dr. Walter De Vries and Katy Martin of North Carolina Opinion Research Inc. Some 768 voters were surveyed by telephone on Oct. 19 and 20.

Results of the poll published in today's editions indicated that the people don't like North Carolina being the only state whose governor does not have veto power. Both gubernatorial candidates—Democrat Jim Hunt and Republican David Flaherty—support the governor having veto power. The question may come before the 1977 legislature.

According to the poll, 56.7 per cent of the people want the governor to have the veto power, 25.9 per cent opposed it and 17.4 per cent said they were unsure.

Because he supports several changes, Flaherty has called for a state constitutional convention to take them up. The usual method of changing the constitution requires three-fifths approval in both the House and Senate and a majority of voters in a statewide referendum.

Of those polled, 28.3 per cent said a convention would be a good idea while 34.2 per cent opposed the notion and 37.5 per cent were undecided.

A large majority of those polled expressed support for a bond issue to finance construction of prison facilities. North Carolina's prisons are now overcrowded.

Support for the bond issue was 65.2 per cent while opposition amounted to 20.2 per cent and 14.2 per cent were unsure.

Attended Nat'l Conference

Two members of the East Carolina University School of Home Economics faculty attended the annual conference of the American Association of Housing Educators at Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, last week.

They were Dr. Patricia G. Hurley, chairperson of the ECU Department of Housing and Management, and Marilyn Casto, lecturer, both currently members of the Association's Education Committee.

At Meetings In N.C., Va.

Several faculty members of the East Carolina University Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures attended professional meetings in Blacksburg, Va. and Winston-Salem last week.

Raquel Manning addressed a Spanish literature session on Jacinto Venavente and women's rights in Spain at the Mountain Interstate Foreign Language Conference in Blacksburg.

Other ECU representatives at the meeting, hosted by Virginia Polytechnic Institute, were Drs. Nancy Mayberry and Michael Bassman. Dr. Bassman chaired the first meeting of a new section, "Eastern European Languages and Literatures."

Department Chairman Marguerite Perry attended the joint meeting of the N.C. chapters of the American Association of Teachers of French, German, Spanish and Porteguese and the American Association of Teachers of Slavic and East European Languages at the Winston-Salem campus of Salem College.

A Labor Department spokesman said the retirements followed "extensive discussions" between government investigators and attorneys for the fund.

Continued control of the fund by certain trustees was "a matter of particular importance because, apparently, a number of their major loans had reached a point calling for critical decisions," the government spokesman said. "And we felt the board evidenced little or no faith that it could make those decisions prudently."

Sources also said the trustees were told in writing by William Kilberg, the Labor Department's chief legal officer, that their remaining on the board could be a factor in determining individual liability in the event of civil action.

Despite the resignations, the trustees still could be held liable for any fund losses that resulted from wrongdoing.

Sources said that any decision to seek legal action against the trustees, either civil or criminal, is still as long as a year away.

Quinn is seeking an election eve telethon here by Carter, who wants to return to Plains that night. Moreover, Brown telephoned Carter last Tuesday and urged him to visit California the week of Oct. 25.

In fact, however, Democratic leaders here feel Carter will not change his plans, his TV commercials or himself enough to make a difference. While praying that Proposition 14 will energize liberals for Carter, the real hope of California Democrats is that President Ford will lose the election in the Midwestern industrial states. They dread the outcome if the election hinges on California late into the night of Nov. 2.

N.C. Demos Complain Over Political Advertising

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Additional charges of distributing false campaign material about Jimmy Carter were leveled by Democrats Tuesday against President Ford and his supporters.

In the latest developments:

—Wake County (Raleigh) Dist. Atty. Burley B. Mitchell Jr. opened an investigation into whether a newspaper advertisement placed by the Ford committee violated state law by intentionally misstating Carter's position on the death penalty.

—Carter accused Ford of personally authorizing distribution in several states of a publication that has a cartoon of the Democrat standing at a pulpit holding a Bible in one hand and "Playboy" magazine in the other.

On Monday, Democratic leaders in North Carolina complained that Ford supporters had intentionally misstated Carter's position on several issues such as right-to-work and that the Ford campaign was behind racist and blatantly false anonymous mailings.

The advertisement, which appeared in a number of newspapers, was prepared and paid for by the Washington campaign office, said Ted Heydinger, executive director of Ford's North Carolina campaign. The ads were under the headline: "When Jimmy Carter gets specific, Americans get worried."

Raleigh attorney Robert Spearman, an occasional legal advisor to the state Democratic party, filed the complaint with Mitchell. State law makes it a misdemeanor to willfully publish false information about a candidate. Maximum penalty would be an unlimited fine and two years in prison.

"On its face, it appears to be a violation," Mitchell said.

Spearman complained that the ad accuses Carter of opposing capital punishment. Carter's position papers say the candidate supports the death penalty in certain cases such as murder committed by a prison inmate serving a life sentence.

On the CBS television network's Morning News show Tuesday, Carter charged Ford with personally authorizing distribution of "Heartland," a four-page tabloid newspaper. The publication contained "a very personal attack against me and my family," Carter said.

A spokesman for the Ford campaign said he doubted that Ford was involved with the "Heartland" distribution.

In addition to the cartoon, the tabloid printed the cover of the November issue of "Playboy" and several paragraphs from the magazine's interview with Carter. The reprinted paragraphs contained the candidate's controversial comments on sex and former presidents Nixon and Johnson.

A Ford spokesman said about two million copies of "Heartland" were mailed to voters in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Florida, Oregon, Tennessee and Washington.

Campaigning for Carter in rural North Carolina Tuesday, Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., accused the Republicans of using "Watergate tactics" and "resorting to racism."

"As election day approaches, please don't be misled, don't be duped by the Watergate type tactics of the Republican administration. We have seen these tactics before," Morgan said.

Morgan and other Tar Heel Democrats have charged that Republicans were behind an anonymous mailing of photocopies of a magazine picture of Carter kissing a black woman. Citizens reported receiving the material in the eastern part of the state which is mostly farmland and in the mountainous western part of the state.

Another anonymous mailing accused Carter of favoring registration of all handguns. A supporter said Carter only favors registration of cheap handguns commonly called "Saturday night specials."

A spokesman for the Ford campaign denied any involvement in the anonymous mailings.

Democrats also complained that Ford backers falsely stated Carter's position on right-to-work in a flier that says, "Jimmy Carter wants to force you to join a union." It says Carter favors repeal of right-to-work, but he doesn't, said Cher Brooks, assistant director of the state's Carter campaign.

The flier was distributed in the urbanized central part of the state. Heydinger said polls have shown that right-to-work is an issue there. He also said the party was careful not to misstate Carter's position.

Democrats also complained that Carter's positions on taxes and welfare were misrepresented in another GOP flier. Heydinger also defended that flier.

Buddy Poppies Going On Sale Friday, Saturday

Buddy Poppies will go on sale Friday and Saturday throughout Greenville.

The announcement was made by Leon Evans, local VFW Post commander, and Mrs. Carrie West, VFW Auxiliary president.

For hundreds of long-term disabled veterans in Veterans Administration Hospitals and Domiciliaries and State Veterans Homes, every day is VFW Buddy Poppy Day.

These are the men who assemble the poppies, tie them in bunches of 10 and pack them in boxes of 500 or 1,000 for shipment to some 9,000 Veterans of Foreign Wars Posts and Auxiliaries throughout the nation.

From the time it leaves the hospital till it graces the coat lapel or dress front of the individual citizen, the poppy provides care for the widow and orphans of deceased veterans at the VFW National Home, Eaton Rapids, Mich., provides funds for veterans and rehabilitation services on the state and national level, pays for direct relief to the families of needy and deceased and serves as a memorial to the dead of all wars of the U.S.

New System For Testing

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A new testing method will be employed next week along the Salem and Muddy creeks to determine how fast the streams replace oxygen depleted by sewage.

The tests, to be conducted by the state Division of Environmental Management, will take place downstream from Winston-Salem's Elledge Sewage Treatment Plant, said division spokesman Robert Van Tilburg.

The tests are designed to help state officials establish limits for the plant's discharge permit.

"Setting these limits is a nerve-wracking business," Van Tilburg said. "If you go too far on the limits, you can easily spend millions of dollars for sophisticated treatment equipment that really doesn't improve water quality very much. If you don't go far enough, then you get poor water quality."

Developed by a Georgia Tech scientist in Atlanta, the process involves placing two radioisotopes — krypton and tritium — into the streams.

One disappears into the atmosphere at about the same rate oxygen from the air mixes with the water. The other remains constant and gives researchers a base for comparing how much of the first radioisotope has disappeared.

CB Club Plans Thursday Party

Americans Will Believe Shortage Of Energy: Zarb

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb predicts a greater future reliance on sun and wind power and a practical electric car in the next decade.

"There are a number of advancing technologies which have real merit, among them solar power," Zarb told the Chattanooga Manufacturers Association Tuesday night.

"Others include coal liquification and gasification, extracting oil from shale, and harnessing the wind, which can be used equally well along the coastof Maine or in Washington, D. C."

Zarb said he fully expects to see a decline in par capita enerby consumption, beginning about 1978, as Americans begin seriously to conserve energy.

"And I believe in the 1980s, we're going to see an electric car that will be a viable second car because there's a real live market there — and that's where breakthroughs occur. But we're not there now."

President Ford's chief energy advisor said, however, that America's chief concern now is to fashion an energy policy that will leave it unconcerned about another oil embargo.

"We awoke in 1973-74 to an embargo, the third of the past 20 years but the only one that was felt her because our vulnerability has increased to about 33 per cent of our consumption," he said.

"They shut it off an turned it back on, but at $13.50 a barrel now instead of about $3 a barrel. And now we're a political hostage."

Only self sufficiency will make us less vulnerable, he added.

"Settlement of the IsraeliArab problem will not solve this problem," he said. "I don't know what the next international problem is going to be. But any number of scenarious could interrupt the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf."

Zarb said the country must reduce energy consumption, stockpile a year's reserve oil to reduce vulnerability, develop nuclear power and double coal production.

"We have more coal in this country than the Middle East has oil," he said. "In Zarb's view, we'll be using every bit of low sulphur and high sulphur coal that we can get to market over the next 10 years."

But, he added, the necessity for stockpiling hasn't been universally accepted.

"I get letters from people about our storage program," he said. "They ask why we're planning to take oil out of one hole in the ground and put it back into another. Makes sense."

Zarb also said he would remain in office through next January, but would then consider resigning — no matter who wins Tuesday's presidential election.

"I've had two years as federal energy administrator," he said. "That's one and one-half years longer than any of my predecessors and it seems like a long time for any man to serve the public.

"I'll be here through January and then I'll take a whols new look at the future to decide what my next step in life should be."

Arrest Youths In July 'Incident'

Two youths, one 17 and the other 14, were arrested yesterday by Greenville Police in connection with a July 25 incident at 111A Forbes St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Ricky Lee Skinner of 119 West 12th St. was charged with robbery, while the 14-year-old juvenile was charged with larceny and assault.

Cannon noted that another teenager was arrested Monday on charges of robbery and discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling in connection with the incident.

Town 'Died'; Taxes Live

GILBERTSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When residents voted to kill off this western Kentucky hamlet, they figured they'd also be putting an end to their city property taxes.

But about 100 of the former town's 300 residents have just been hit with a one-time, 200 per cent increase in their tax bills.

Gilbertsville officially died last June 14 after a judge accepted results of a referendum vote abolishing its 23-year-old charter. One of the arguments against the charter was that it authorized taxation.

Former city attorney Roger W. Perry explained Tuesday that although the city was dissolved by court order, it owes $4,200 and "cannot wind up (under Kentucky law) without first paying off its debts."

City receiver George Long said he began raising the funds by selling off the city's outstanding assets, including typewriters, walkie-talkies and the town's only police car.

But Long said he still was short, so he raised the property tax from 20 cents to 60 cents per $100 valuation. One motel must pay $300 under the increase, but Long said the average property owner will have to pay from $50 to $60.

Greenville Mart Enjoys Another $1 Million Day

Sales on the Greenville Tobacco Market exceeded $1 million on Tuesday, according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor.

Bryan said that the market sold 962,448 pounds yesterday for $1,102,195, an average of $114.52 per hundred pounds. Tuesday's average was up from the last sales day, he pointed out.

Offerings consisted of leaf, smoking leaf and cutters with lugs, primings and non descript tobacco increasing in volume.

Stabilization receipts were down to 33.80 per cent of total sales.

For the season, the market has sold 48,625,737 pounds for $56,175,911, an average of $115.53 per hundred pounds.

Paid Tribute To Bureau Director

D. D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP, made a special presentation at the N. C. Conference of NAACP branches held in Wilmington recently.

Garrett paid tribute to Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the NAACP. He extolled Mitchell as "a fearless man and the most feared man in Washington, whose life is imperiled at almost all times and whose maneuvering results in strong civil rights legislation."

Garrett represented the Pitt County chapter along with Mrs. Willie M. Carney and the Rev. J. R. Person at the conference.

Damage was estimated at $200 to each of the two cars.

Varied Races In East's Congressional Challenges

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

For most congressional candidates in eastern North Carolina, Nov. 2 will be a day of nervous poll-watching, but two incumbents can afford to relax.

Democrat Lamar H. Fountain is unopposed for reelection to his 2nd District seat and 6th District Democrat Richardson Preyer faces challenges only from the Labor and Libertarian parties.

Other races feature varying degrees of difficulty for incumbents, but the 3rd District race is wide open. Incumbent David Henderson, a Democrat, is retiring.

Charles Whitley, 49, Henderson's longtime Washington aide faces Republican Willard J. Blanchard, 56, a former state senator from Sampson and Johnston counties.

Blanchard has made an issue of his conservatism, versus Whitley's alleged liberalism, and has received campaign help from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Blanchard charged that Whitley's tenure as Henderson's administrative assistant entangled him in an alleged House croney system — a charge Whitley denied.

"I have specifically pointed out that Henderson's voting record is his," Whitley countered. "His position on issues is his and not mine."

The 1st District race between incumbent Democrat Walter B. Jones and Republican Joseph M. Ward has been heated by personal attacks.

Ward, 52, charged Jones, 63, with being an alcoholic, which Jones bitterly denied.

"I think it's hurting Ward," said T.S. Ryon, Jones' campaign manager and longtime friend. "He originated it against the advice of some of the key leaders in his party, I have been told."

Ward refused to comment further on the charge after it was printed in the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Democrat Ike Andrews, 51, seeking his third term from the 4th District, faces Dr. Johnnie L. Gallemore Jr., 37, an attorney, physician and member of the Duke University medical faculty who is making his first try for elective office.

Gallemore has been guardedly optimistic about his chances of unseating Andrews.

"Our polling indicates we're trailing in two counties relatively close and leading in two relatively close," he said. "I feel we've come a long way from zero a couple of months ago."

Andrews agreed, but noted that a political unknown can only improve in the polls as his campaign progresses.

"I see Andrews clearly ahead," said Arch Haithcock, Andrews' campaign manager. "I think a poll indicated Andrews about 68 per cent, Gallemore 15 per cent, two per cent wanted neither and 15 per cent were not sure."

"I doubt it's that close," said Andrews, noting the poll was released in the last week of September.

Andrews' strategy has been to stress Gallemore's inexperience in politics while pointing out his own experience and leadership.

Both candidates said voter turnout was unpredictable, but Gallemore said he hoped it would be high.

"I would never mind losing so much if I knew the majority of people voted and made a conscious choice," he said.

Republican M.H. "Mike" Vaughan, 64, a Wilmington stockbroker, is vying for the 7th District seat held by Democrat Charles G. Rose.

Rose, 37, is seeking his third term.

"I've been running on the integrity of Congress," said Vaughan. "While it doesn't apply to all congressmen, there's so many of them up there that have been engaging in ripoffs, it's a sad spectacle for the country. I'm not stressing being Republican. I'm stressing being American."

Rose predicted victory and indicated he was not overly concerned about Vaughan's chances, since the District is solidly Democratic.

"I feel very good about this election," he said. "I'm gratified about responses I've received from people of my district. I hope and believe they are satisfied with the service I have given them for the past four years."

Suggests Home By Night-Time

Sunday is Halloween, and Police Chief Glenn Cannon today urged parents of children who will be trick-or-treating to have their children complete their treat-gathering expeditions before night-fall, for their own safety.

He said children should trick-or-treat in their own neighborhoods and emphasized that they should accept nothing from strangers or persons they are not familliar with.

The chief warned that children should not wear masks or other items over their faces that will obstruct their vision, and should use sidewalks rather than take short cuts across other people's yards. He said there might be obstructions or holes in yards that could cause youngsters to trip and hurt themselves, in addition to the fact that trick-or-treaters might cause damage to the property of others.

Cannon suggested that parents accompany their children on their trick-or-treat forrays, said that youngsters should certainly be cautioned not to run across streets, but be instructed to stop and look both ways before crossing. He said youngsters should also be cautioned not to dart into the street while walking or playing with other children.

If children are out trick-or-treating after dark, Cannon said they should wear light-colored clothing or costumes so they will be more visable to motorists, and not walk in the street.

Drivers, according to the police official, should be especially watchful for children walking close to or in the street or playing nearby, and be prepared to stop if a youngster should dart into or across a roadway.

Cannon also suggested that individuals turn their porch lights on Sunday night. He said such action might prevent vandalism and will provide those children who do trick-or-treat after dark more visibility and safety.

Cannon emphasized that the Police Department will do everything possible to make Halloween safe and enjoyable.

It Makes Sense To Vote Democratic In '76

Jimmy Carter
for President

There's no reasor why our government can't be concerned with our needs.

Jim Hunt
for Governor

For the past eight years, our government has turned its back on the American people. A political and economic elite have shaped decisions and never had to account for mistakes nor suffer from injustice. The test of any government is not how popular it is with the powerful, but how honestly and fairly it deals with the many who must depend on it. We must have a government that recognizes and supports our needs in health care, education, housing, unemployment, aid to the elderly, environmental protection and agriculture.

There's no reason why our government can't work efficiently and effectively.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, following through on Tuesday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained about 3 points in the early going, and advances took a 5-3 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said traders still seemed inclined to buy stocks on anticipation of a possible improvement in the market's trend once the presidential race is settled with next week's election.

The market also appeared to be benefitting from a Saudi Arabian official's statement Tuesday that his country would seek to keep any yearend price increase by the oil nations moderate.

Today's early prices included American Telephone, up ⅛ at 59⅜; Chrysler, ahead ¼ at 20, and Gulf & Western, up ⅛ at 15¾.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.14 to 948.14.

Advances outstripped declines by about a 5-2 margin on the NYSE, and the exchange's composite index gained .51 to 53.97.

Big Board volume plodded along, however, at 15.49 million shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index picked up .28 to 98.17.

CBD Meet...

Association was urged.

The retiring chairman pointed out that all of the overhanging signs on Evans Mall have been removed with the exception of the H & R Block company sign. The PAC passed a resolution during the meeting requesting that the sign be removed, pointing out that H & R Block was the only occupant on the mall that failed to cooperate with the sign removal effort. The resolution stated that if the company fails to comply, the committee will request the City Council to enact an ordinance which would compel them to do so.

T. I. Wagner, CBD project manager for the Redevelopment Commission, reported that he is retiring at the end of the month. The committee gave Wagner a unanimous vote of appreciation for the work he has done for the city during his tenure with the commission.

Trask promised to "work diligently" as chairman and requested that the public submit to him any ideas or recommendations it might have for the betterment of the CBD project.

It was noted that when the committee began its work, there were nine vacancies in the two block mall area. Today there are none.

J. H. Moye, who had served as vice chairman since the committee was formed, joined Taft earlier in requesting that new officers be elected to provide fresh leadership as the committee enters a new phase. Resolutions of appreciation were passed for the retiring officers.

The committee, comprised of approximately 20 businessmen and property owners, acts in an advisory capacity to the Redevelopment Commission, reviewing all plans of the commission before execution.

Bellwethers Of Voting Results

EDITOR'S NOTE: The nation has its various "bellwether" communities and states during a presidential election — areas that say their choice has been the nation's choice for years. Here is a look at two such communities. One took a poll that says Ford will win. The other did not take a poll, but its sheriff says, "I've talked to people and most of them are for Carter."

EMMETSBURG, Iowa (AP) — Rural Palo Alto County, which prides itself on having voted with the winner in every presidential election since 1896, favors Gerald Ford this time, according to a local poll.

"Mostly I think it comes down to why they wouldn't vote for the others," said Jane Whitmore, who is handling the poll for the Emmetsburg Democrat and Reporter.

The newspaper poll shows Ford with support from 50.6 per cent of those answering, to 46.7 per cent for Jimmy Carter and 2.9 per cent for independent Eugene McCarthy.

Since ballots first appeared in the paper on Sept. 30, 274 have been returned in this northwest Iowa county of 13,289 residents. Most of its towns exist mainly as retail trade centers and commodity marketing points for farmers.

Editor Jerry Hofstad said the poll confirms his impression of how the election will go. He said many residents oppose Carter "because he wants to give everything away, and they're full of it — welfare, food stamps and crap like that.

"They also like some of the things Ford has done, like the vetoes of the big spnding bills."

Carter backers, said Ms. Whitmore, "seem to think it's time for a change ... and they were mad about the grain embargoes."

Ford may have lost some support by firing former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, Hofstad said. "The farmers here thought Butz was doing a good job for them."

Carter's controversial Playboy magazine interview seemed not to change many opinions in the county, Hofstad said, "but I understand that issue (October) was a sellout here."

BROOKSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The sheriff says Bracken County has a habit of voting for the winner in presidential elections, and he figures this year Jimmy Carter is a shoo-in.

"I predict Carter will be the next president, and a lot of people here think that, too," said Sheriff Roy Allen Jett.

"We're traditionally Democratic, but we're traditionally right, too."

Jett said in all but two presidential elections in the past three decades, residents of this northern Kentucky county have voted for the winning candidate.

The county's recent miscues came in 1952, when it went for Democrat Adlai Stevenson over Dwight D. Eisenhower, and in 1960, when county voters chose Richard M. Nixon, who lost to John F. Kennedy.

Local Republican leaders are calling the election "still a horse race," but Mike Templeman, a state Democratic official, said he agreed that if Bracken goes for Carter, Kentucky and the nation will, too. He said registered Democrats outnumber Republicans 1,153,629 to 498,388 in Kentucky.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

File Early On Redesignations

According to Stacy J. Evans, Pitt County Executive Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the flue-cured tobacco auctions for 1976 are expected to close early in November. Since regular redesignations which would be filed during the week of November 1-5 would not become effective until November 15, there is a possibility of the markets closing prior to the date the redesignation would become effective. Producers who do not file a regular designation will be able to immediately redesignate if the warehouse to which they have designated closes for the season before they have completed the marketing from their farm.

Peanut Stocks Are Below '75

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says peanut stocks in commercial facilities Sept. 30 totaled slightly more than 1.7 billion pounds in equivalent farmers' stock, 14 per cent less than a year before.

At the same time, the board said, the government had uncommitted stocks, brought in under the peanut price-support program, of 369 million pounds, compared to nearly 728 million a year earlier.

There's Nothing Wrong With A Checking Account That A Key Account Can't Cure!

First Federal is proud to announce an entirely new concept in personal money management, the Key Account.

The Key Account is better than a checking account, better than a savings account — because it combines the best features of both. It lets you control every extra dollar of your cash to keep it hard at work earning 5% daily interest. And that includes the money you use to pay your bills and for day-to-day expenses.

Unlike a conventional savings account, your First Federal Key Account keeps your money readily available. Instantly. Around the clock.

Here's how the Key Account works.

Instant telephone access to your Key Account and checking account is one of the primary benefits.

When you open your Key Account at First Federal, you retain your checking account at the bank. But instead of putting all or most of your salary into checking, and drawing it down slowly as you pay bills and handle other expenses throughout the month, put your paycheck into your Key Account instead.

Then, whenever you have a few bills to pay or need cash for daily use, just telephone a special First Federal number. Tell us how much to transfer to your checking account to cover those bills or expenses. We'll transfer the money to the bank for you — and that includes any bank in the Pitt County area. (We also record the phone call, for your further protection.)

An important part of the Key Account concept in cash control is that you can make these transfers to your checking account, or from your checking account back to your Key Account, just as often as you need to. Daily, if you like. Twice a week. Whenever you need only a few dollars or a sizeable amount for bill-paying from your checking account. There's never a charge for any transfer.

And you can phone us any time of day or night, any day of the week. If you call before 11:00 a.m., your transfer will be handled by your bank the same day. If you call later, it will be handled the next business day.

The main objective is to keep as much of your cash as possible working continually for you, earning 5% daily interest, in your profitable Key Account.

You receive a monthly statement of your Key Account that lists all deposits, withdrawals, transfers, interest earned and your present balance.

Your statement is issued automatically. You don't have to waste time coming in to have your account updated.

You get a personal Prestige Key Account Card that identifies you as a Key Account holder.

The First Federal Prestige Machine — operated by your Prestige Key Account Card — provides pushbutton cash control services at your convenience, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Use the Prestige Machine to deposit or withdraw funds from your Key account, to cash a check, or to make transfers between your Key Account and checking account — without charge; or to make a payment on your home loan.

You automatically get a receipt for each transaction.

Out-of-town Prestige Emergency Cash and free travelers checks are extra benefits of your First Federal Key Account.

First Federal will issue you free travelers checks before you go on a trip. If you need more cash along the way, you can get it from your Key Account — without charge — through any of over 3,000 savings and loan locations across the nation.

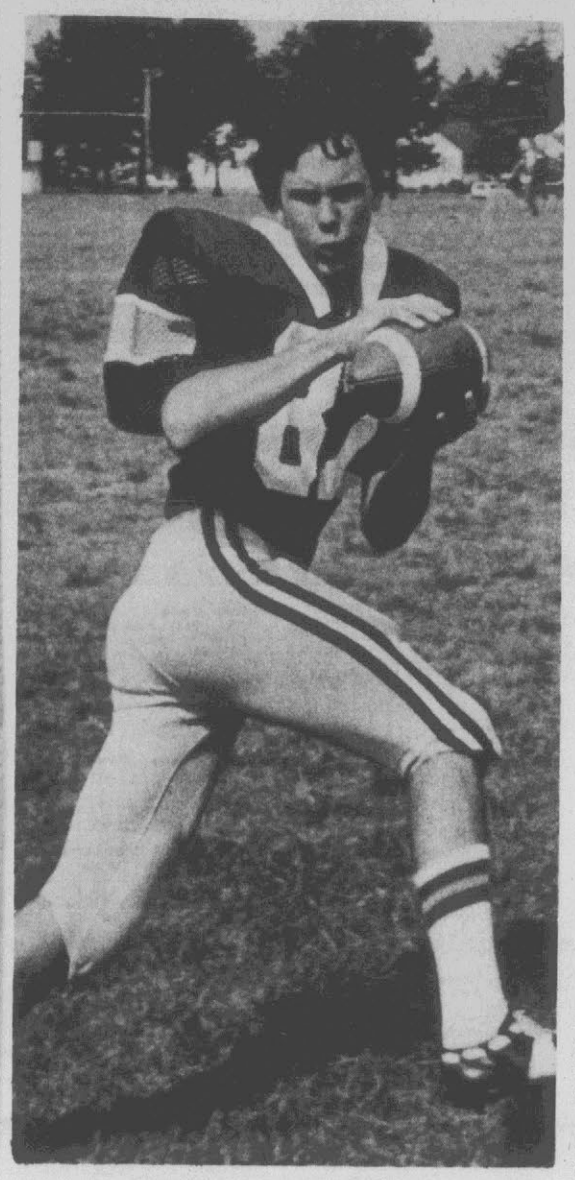

Only First Federal offers the Key Account in this trade area an entirely new concept in cash control. Stop by your nearest First Federal office and open yours. Now, before the rush begins.

Rampants Host Loop-Leading Wilson

Tight End Mark Conway

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With two games left to go, Rose High School isn't going anywhere, but it could still have an effect on the outcome of the Division I football race.

The Rampants go into Thursday night's game with Wilson Pike with an 0-3 record in the league, while Wilson comes in with the conference lead and a 3-0 mark.

The contest begins at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, and will be the final home game of the year for the Rampants.

Last week, Rose opened play against Northern Nash as if it planned to snap its losing streak of six games. The Rampants took the ball and marched down the field, scoring a touchdown, only to have it called back by a penalty. Another penalty on the next play moved them even further back and the Rampants never recovered.

Neil Flake

Northern Nash went on to win the game, 14-2, as Rose could manage only a safety in the final minute of play.

"I'd like to be able to say that we're making progress every week," Coach Dave Bumgarner said, "and I think we are, but we're just not able to win."

"We are playing better, but we're not winning, and we're not scoring," he said.

But the coach isn't losing heart. "For a 1-7 team, we're not giving up. Our morale is still good. This group still thinks it is a good team—not a great one—but a good one. Of course, it is a real disappointment for those who were on the championship team last year."

Bumgarner said the first drive of the team against Northern Nash was typical of this year's team. "We've done this in nearly every game; taken the ball and driven down the field only to not score and then never get anything going again. The break have just gone against us. It's like someone has cast an evil spell over us. But we're going to get better."

Bumgarner said that the team has too many players who are football and win oriented to give up. "We'll win, it's just a question of when. It may be Thursday night, or next Friday night against Northeastern, or it may be next year, I don't know."

Playing on Thursday is going to present no big problem, the coach said. "We've already done it so many times already this year. Physically we're in shape, but if we get people hurt, we looking at the year as a loss yet. "We still have two games, and we're going to do all we can to win them. We did bring up one sophomore, Quinton Eaton for last week's game. We are still going to be playing our seniors. We really don't have that many anyway. There are only two interior linemen who are seniors on offense, plus the two ends. Then, on defense we only have a couple so we will be relatively an experienced team next year."

Wilson brings in a team that could be in trouble, because we're not as deep as Wilson."

Bumgarner feels that it could be an emotional game, too. "I think our record and their record could be a factor in the gme. Our kids are going to want to stop them if they can."

The coach said the team is not has won all three of its conference games, beating Northern Nash, Bertie and Northeastern. A victory against Rose would clinch at least a tie for the league crown for the Titans.

"I look for them to run the ball right at us, on sweeps and off tackle," Bumgarner said. "They may throw too, although they didn't throw that much against Elizabeth City. I kind of look for them to throw more against us, however."

Timmy Wilkerson returns to the Titans as quarterback this year, and is a dangerous player. He likes to throw to wide receivers Dick Knox and Mike Smith. He has three good running backs, Charles Sanders, Frankie Hinnant and Ronald Wright.

"It could turn out to be a real good game," Bumgarner said. "It could depend on how well we get started."

Baker Runs For Wrestling

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Cross-country is a relatively new sport at Rose High School, and Jesse Baker is even newer to the sport, yet he's taken to it like a duck to water.

Baker has been the leading runner on the team this year, and he goes into Thursday's Division I meet at Wilson as one of the favorites to take the individual title.

Baker came out for cross-country just to get in shape for wrestling, a sport he participated in last year while a sophomore at the school. "Coach (Ron) Williams told us during wrestling last year that he wanted to see a lot of us out for cross-country, so I decided to come out to help myself get ready for wrestling," Baker said. "I'm really quite surprised that I've been doing so well."

Baker had a little initiation to it before he actually came out. "We ran the course last year to get ready for wrestling, so I kind of knew what it was about. You keep your weight steady and you get in shape for the other sport by running. By the time wrestling season gets here, I'll be ready to go six minutes on the mat. Most of those people who didn't go out won't be able to do that."

Rose runners run a three-mile course at home, but most of the other schools have shorter tracks. Wilson, where the conference meet will be held, has a 2.8 mile course.

"I think I have a shot at the conference individual title," Baker said. "The meet was supposed to be here (at Rose) but most of the people at the other schools don't like our course, so it was moved to Wilson. The shorter distance might be a help, I don't know. We do better on the longer course as a team."

Last year, Baker had a 16-3-2 record, winning the conference championship at 119 pounds. He finished third in the sectionals, just missing a chance to go to the state meet. This year he has his sights on winning another league title and getting the sectional crown to go along with it.

Following the winter season, he might also try out for the baseball team. "It really depends on how tired I am after wrestling is over," he said.

Baker also enjoyes hunting and fishing, and is a member of the Rose High Wildlife Club and the Key Club. "I really like about anything outdoors," he said.

He hasn't thought much about after high school, except going to college. "I'm not sure yet whether I want to wrestle in college. I'll just have to wait and see."

Sports Medicine Program Given

The East Carolina University Sports Medicine program drew praise from its attending physician yesterday at the Greenville Sports Club.

Dr. James Bowman called the program one of the best in the country as he and Pirate trainer Rod Compton presented a program about the work the trainer does.

"Training has come a long way during the past 50 years," Bowman said. He pointed out that plays like the flying wedge in football had been outlawed because of the amount of injuries caused by it.

Bowman showed a group of slides showing how injuries occur and are treated. Compton also showed slides and a film about injuries and the work of the trainer.

Compton commented that while most colleges have an adequate training program, most high schools and junior high schools do not. "One of the goals of the trainers' association is to have qualified certified trainers at every school where there are 'collision' sports."

Compton reported that East Carolina's program has made great strides, and that the injury rate at the school is roughly half the national average.

Next week's program at the Sports Club will be Dick Herbert, former sports editor of the Raleigh News & Observer, and currently promotion director of the Football Coaches of America.

Sports Briefs

TAMIMENT, Pa. (AP) — Twenty-one years ago Vince Yanovitch went to a car parking lot near here with a borrowed seven iron. He hit about two dozen balls. Pro Harry Obitz saw Yanovitch that first morning. In subsequent mornings, Obitz gave Vince a brief lesson with various irons, then woods.

Yanovitch now is in his 17th season as the head pro with a staff of assistants at the Tamiment Resort and Country Club here.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Mazzilli of Brooklyn tried to hit the ball for what he called "the gap in right center." Third base coach Eddie Yost gave the 21-year-old center fielder the hit sign with two balls and no strikes. Mazzilli swung and hit Kent Takulve's fast ball 390 feet over the right field fence in Shea Stadium to give the Mets a 5-4 ninth-inning win over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"That homer has to be my biggest thrill as a National League rookie," said the 183-pound Mazzilli, who has been taking fielding lessons from Willie Mays, now a Met coach.

SIU's Herrera Back Of Week

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Gale Sayers, standing at the sidelines in a driving rain, must have thought about his playing days while watching tailback Andre Herrera score six touchdowns and gain 319 yards in leading Southern Illinois to a 54-0 rout over Northern Illinois.

Herrera, a 6-foot, 197-pound senior from New York, was named College Football Back of the Week by The Associated Press for his performance last Saturday.

Sayers, now athletic director at Southern Illinois, also scored six touchdowns in a game, for the Chicago Bears against the San Francisco 49ers in 1965 in rain and mud.

"Andre is a fine runner and he's going to be even better in the National Football League," said Sayers. "His performance was absolutely outstanding. But the thing that impressed me the most was that he carried the ball 35 times in a downpour and didn't fumble once. To me, that's even a bigger feat than gaining 300 yards."

Herrera gained 214 yards in the first period, breaking an NCAA record of 182 yards in one quarter set by Mercury Morris of West Texas State, and left the game with 10 minutes to play.

Herrera, who never played high school football but is a junior college transfer from Westchester, N.Y., said, "I didn't care about the record. All I cared about was that we were winning."

Missouri, Oklahoma, Bucs Picked

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "No matter who wins what game, it won't be decided until the last game of the conference schedule."

Missouri's Al Onofrio was talking about the Big Eight, but he could have been referring to almost any conference.

The Big Eight, for example, shows a startling five-way deadlock among Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Colorado — all ranked in the Top Twenty — with Kansas and Iowa State just one game out.

Kansas State is in last place with a 1-6 over-all mark and the powerful Big Eight, which used to be Oklahoma and the Seven Dwarfs, is now more like K-State and the Seven Giants.

The Big Ten and Pac-8 have two teams sharing the lead while the Southwest Conference and Ivy League are blessed with three-way ties. The Southeastern Conference finds four clubs within one-half game of each other while five of the eight Western Athletic Conference teams have one loss or less.

Only the Atlantic Coast Conference, where Maryland appears to be a shoo-in, isn't really up for grabs.

The close races make forecasting a hazardous chore at best, despite last week's score of 52 right and 18 wrong for a .743 percentage. The crystal ball did come through with three Upset Specials — Missouri over Nebraska, Oklahoma State over Oklahoma and Iowa over Minnesota. For the season, the scoreboard reads 337 right, 134 wrong and 10 ties for .715.

Having been so successful in the Big Eight last weekend, let's go back there for openers this week.

Missouri at Oklahoma State: The Missouri Tigers have invaded such snakepits as Los Angeles, Columbus and Lincoln and come away with victories, so why should they be leery of Stillwater, Okla.? Because the Cowboys of O-State kayoed Oklahoma last week, that's why ... Missouri 28-17.

Oklahoma at Colorado: Barry Switzer says crippled Oklahoma is "in the worst shape" of any of the five teams tied for the Big Eight lead. The Sooners may get Mike Vaughan, the man-mountain tackle, back for this one ... Oklahoma 24-17.

Nebraska at Kansas: Nebraska "would have liked a chance to win the national championship, although I'm not sure we ever set that as our goal," says Tom Osborne, whose Cornhuskers were the preseason choice ... Nebraska 31-14.

Kansas State at Iowa State: K-State's last three opponents were Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. Its next three foes are Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Colorado. This week, it's ... Iowa State 24-14.

Texas at Texas Tech: The rumors are getting stronger than ever that Tech's Steve Sloan will succeed Bear Bryant at Alabama. Right now, Sloan would like to succeed Texas' Darrell Royal, Arkansas' Frank Broyles and Texas A&M's Emory Bellard, who tied for SWC honors last year. Just a hunch ... Texas 22-21.

Mississippi State at Alabama: Another case of the master (Bear Bryant) vs. the pupil (Bob Tyler) and the Bear hardly ever loses one of those ... Alabama 20-13.

Cincinnati at Georgia: The Cincinnati Bearcats are unbeaten and untied — with one loss. Their on-field record is 5-1, but it's 6-0 if you count the game Southwestern Louisiana had to forfeit. Too bad their next two games are on the road against Maryland and ... Georgia 35-14.

Minnesota at Michigan: Minnesota may have been looking ahead while losing to Iowa last week, but looking ahead in vain ... Michigan 28-14.

Syracuse at Pitt: Can Syracuse stop Tony Dorsett? No one else has ... Pitt 31-10.

UCLA at Washington: UCLA's Terry Donahue expects a tough game with the Huskies. But they made the mistake of handing UCLA its only Pac-8 loss a year ago and that almost cost the Bruins a trip to the Rose Bowl. Revenge is sweet ... UCLA 28-14.

California at Southern California: Ricky Bell should be okay for this one and he needs to take a few Heisman headlines away from Tony Dorsett ... Southern Cal 30-13.

Kentucky at Maryland: Kentucky has already knocked off one old grad this year, LSU's Charlie McClendon. Maryland's Jerry Claiborne is another ex-Wildcat, and he doesn't intend to pay the same price ... Maryland 21-7.

Ohio State at Indiana: The Hoosiers were ecstatic last year because they only lost to the Buckeyes 24-14 and actually made them throw a pass for their final touchdown. It remains to be seen how the Bucks will perform without injured quarterback Rod Gerald, so a far-out choice as the Upset Special of the Week ... Indiana 22-21.

They Came To To See Dr. J, But George Did It

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The crowd came to see Dr. J, but it was George McGinnis who operated on the New Orleans Jazz.

Dr. J — Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers — was held to 10 points but McGinnis scored 37 as the 76ers beat the Jazz 111-101 Tuesday night before a Louisiana Superdome crowd of 27,383 — a record for the National Basketball Association. The previous record was 26,511 for a Superdome game last season between the Jazz and Los Angeles Lakers.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the New York Knicks beat the Buffalo Braves 118-104, the Chicago Bulls edged the Milwaukee Bucks 90-88, the Atlanta Hawks stopped the San Antonio Spurs 122-114, the Indiana Pacers whipped the Seattle SuperSonics 120-90, the Kansas City Kinvs trimmed the Los Angeles Lakers 117-115 in overtime and the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Golden State Warriors 110-96.

The big crowd attraction Tuesday night was Erving, whose $600,000 annual salary makes him the highest paid player in pro basketball. Erving was acquired recently by Philadelphia from the New York Nets after missing the entire training camp and exhibition seasons.

Erving, playing only in the second and fourth quarters, was guarded closely by rookie Paul Griffin and E.C. Coleman and connected on only one of his patented slam dunk shots.

The Jazz, led by Pete Maravich with 28 points and Aaron James with 22, led by four points in the early minutes. But with three minutes left in the first quarter, Philadelphia took control and held on.

Knicks 118, Braves 104

The Knicks raised their record to 3-0 as Earl Monroe scored 29 points and Spencer Haywood added 23 points and 15 rebounds against the Braves, who were once again without three-time scoring king Bob McAdoo, out with a lower back injury.

Bulls 90, Bucks 88

Chicago saw a 16-point halftime bulge cut to one but hung on to win as John Laskowski hit a long jumper and Artis Gilmore added a stuff shot in the final two minutes. It was the fourth straight loss for winless Milwaukee.

Hawks 122, Spurs 114

John Drew poured in 33 points and second-year forward Joe Meriweather, celebrating his 23rd birthday, added 16 points and a career-high 15 rebounds for the Hawks.

Pacers 120, Sonics 90

The Pacers, one of four teams absorbed from the American Basketball Association, took advantage of 29 Seattle turnovers and routed the Sonics for their first victory in the NBA after three losses. Darnell Hillman led the Pacers with 24 points and Wil Jones and Mike Flynn each added 23.

Kings 117, Lakers 115

Kansas City's Ron Boone scored 33 points, including 24 in the second half and six in overtime, offsetting a 31-point effort by the Lakers' Cazzie Russell.

Blazers 110, Warriors 96

Portland reeled off the final 10 points of the third quarter, six by reserve forward Corky Calhoun, in opening an 85-70 lead and the Warriors never threatened. Phil Smith topped the Warriors with 27 points while Bill Walton led Portland with 21.

Recreation Results

The Cowboys handed the Steelers their first defeat of the season in flag football yesterday. In the soccer league, the Kicks and Rowdies each claimed victories.

In flag ball, the Cowboys took a 19-6 victory over the Steelers. The win left the Cowboys with a 3-1 record, while the Steelers are now 5-1.

George Blount scored on an 11-yard pass in the first period for the Cowboys. Ed Frazier tied it up for the Steelers in the third period, but Anthony Phillips scored on a 21-yard pass to put the Cowboys back into the lead. Donnell Lee scored the PAT after that touchdown. He also scored the final Cowboy touchdown in the final period on a 30-yard run.

Lee had two interceptions, while George Blount had one for the Cowboys. Ed Frazier had three to lead the Steelers.

The Kicks took a 1-0 win over the Hot Shots in the soccer league's first game. Luis Rollins scored the lone goal of the game. The Kicks are now 4-2, while the Hot Shots are 1-2-3.

The other game saw the Rowdies take a 3-0 win over the Cosmos. Jeff Jordan scored the first goal for the Rowdies in the opening period. He added another off an assist by Roy Trip in the second half. Kurt Berry got the other score. Goalie Clark Stallings had 15 saves for the Rowdies.

Bucettes Top UNC

East Carolina's women's tennis team captured their fourth straight match yesterday, defeating the UNC JV's 6-3.

The Lady Pirates gained the win on the strength of taking five of the six singles matches, and winning in the third doubles position.

Coach Ellen Warren was pleased with the win, as she considered the last two Pirate victims, the Duke and UNC JV's, to be her toughest mathches of the year.

The trimph raised the netters' record to 8-3.

BILL COBEY: "CAROLINA FANS FOIL PROMOTION"

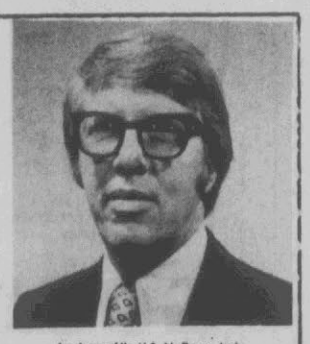

BILL COBEY
U.N.C. Athletic Director

Our Sports Promotion Director, Bob Savod, originally contracted this space to run last week in promotion of our game with East Carolina, but Tar Heel fans put a crimp in his plans. They bought out every available ticket for the East Carolina game and made it a sellout just as they did our games with N.C. State and Duke, so now we're committed to lots of ad space with nothing to say this week, except to tell Carolina fans everywhere how grateful we are for giving us these kinds of problems. Thanks to you, your loyalty, support and great enthusiasm for our program, this has been Carolina's most successful attendance year in nearly two decades. We deeply appreciate it and we want you to know it.

To those of you who have had difficulty obtaining tickets to Kenan Stadium this season, we do regret the inconvenience. However, we might take this opportunity to remind you that you can still see the Tar Heels play in North Carolina this coming Saturday at Wake Forest. The Wake Forest people tell us there are still plenty of good tickets available for that A.C.C. contest in Winston-Salem.

So in closing, on behalf of all of us in the Athletic Department, we again express our deep thanks as we dedicate this ad to you, our Carolina Fans, the greatest fans around, anywhere!

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is due today over a large area inland of the Gulf coast, and more rain is forecast for the Pacific Northwest. Snow flurries are promised for the upper Great Lakes while mild weather is expected for Florida and the Pacific coast. Most areas of the country are expected to be cold. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press

High pressure centered over Minnesota will cause temperatures to average well below normal for the next few days. Skies will be partly cloudy today, clear tonight and mostly sunny Thursday.

Highs today and Thursday will range from mid 30s to mid 40s in the mountains to 50s southeast. Lows tonight will range from 20s in the mountains to 40s along the Outer Banks.

The extended outlook calls for moderation in temperatures over the weekend. By Sunday, lows will average in the 40s, except for 30s in the mountains.

Highs will average in the low to mid 70s, except for 60s in the mountains.

Across North Carolina Tuesday, rain ended along the north coast early in the morning. There was a slow decrease in cloudiness through the day. Even so, the mountains and coastal areas stayed mostly cloudy. Highs ranged from around 50 in the mountains to mid 60s southeast.

The warmest reporting location was Wilmington with 67 degrees, followed by 65 at Cape Hatteras. Variable cloudiness prevailed across the state Tuesday night. Lows were generally in the 30s and low 40s.

Power-Test By Windmill

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Howard's Knob, near Grandfather Mountain, is one of 17 sites chosen by the Federal Energy Administration for testing one of the world's most ancient forms of energy production.

The testing involves construction of a 150-foot wind velocity test tower atop the knob, which may be one of four sites for pilot models of power generating windmills, if winds there are of sufficient velocity.

If wind velocity tests are affirmative, says Ronald Knouse of the Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp., a 1,500-kilowatt windmill, capable of serving 500 homes, would be built.

The project was approved in September by the Watauga County Board of Commissioners, which voted to give the Lenoir-based power company a six-year lease on six acres of the mountain.

Howard's Knob was selected because of its proximity to Grandfather Mountain, Knouse said, adding that high winds have been recorded there in the past. He also said the land is owned by the county, which could approve a utility easement later.

A successful experiment would not mean immediate construction of a large number of windmills, Knouse said.

"The windmill theory is just not far enough advanced for them to become a reliable source of power output," he said.

Ward Says Paper Should Give Its Conclusions On Charges

Dr. Joseph Ward of Greenville, Republican candidate for the First Congressional District seat held now by Democrat Walter B. Jones, and who has raised questions about the drinking habits of the incumbent congressman, said today that a Raleigh newspaper which has published several articles dealing with the matter should, "state on it's editorial page what conclusions they have reached regarding this matter."

Ward said News and Observer editor Claude Sitton should editorially present the newspaper's conclusions, "instead of continuing to give statements regarding my opinions or concerns." The Republican candidate said one of the series of articles published, by the newspaper "contains statements which indicate . . ." that the publication, "has extensively investigated the possibility of any health problems involving Congressman Jones, including any possible alcoholic abuse."

Ward also released a statement setting out his position on the use of alcoholic beverages.

"Perhaps some clarification is in order regarding my feelings . . ." Ward said. "If a person wants to drink sociably that is his or her business. If a person does not drink, that is also his or her business," Ward continued. "This holds true for public officials as well as private citizens."

But, according to Ward, "when a person's drinking habits begin to interfere with his job performance, this is a matter of deep concern. However, it is still none of our business unless the involved person is our employee, or a close personal friend, or unless we have another good reason to be involved."

Ward concluded, "public officials are employees of the citizens they serve. When at work, they should at all times have full control of their mental capacities."

Ward added, "As Thomas Jefferson once said, 'When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself public property."

The candidate also released a letter from a Greenville physician — Dr. Eric L. Fearrington — which said based on a detailed medical examination on October 8, "your health is in excellent condition".

Charge Having Marijuana

John Eric Ellis, 20, of Ayden was arrested yesterday on marijuana possession charges following investigation of a Monday night incident on Manhattan Avenue, Chief Glenn Cannon reported today.

The police official said the 20-year-old Ellis allegedly ran from an officer in the vicinity of Manhattan Avenue and Halifax Street and dropped a bag containing a quantity of marijuana, then jumped into a car and sped away.

Allen Andrew Savoy, 34, of Ayden has been charged with obstructing an officer in connection with the incident, Cannon noted. He said Savoy was allegedly the driver of the vehicle.

The incident occurred about 11:35 p.m. Monday.

Pitt Sales-Use Tax Take Is Up

The September figure compared with $188,268 in net collections recorded for August.

Neighboring county totals for September included: Beaufort, $90,062; Greene, $11,918; Lenoir, $133,630; Martin, $54,012; Edgecombe, $98,239; and Wilson, $161,185.

Total net collections for the 96 participating counties amounted to $11,478,636.

Set First Attempt To Control Demands

RED SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's first attempt to control peak demands for electricity through remote controlled switches is to go into effect next June.

The Lumbee River Electric Membership Corp. stands to save about $300,000 a year in what it pays for wholesale electricity, a spokesman said.

The cooperative will purchase the radio control switches and install them in the homes of about 8,000 consumer members. From a central location, the switches will turn off about 6,000 electric water heaters and about 2,000 central air conditioners short periods during peak demand.

Under the plan, when the use of electricity reaches a high level, the water heaters will be shut off and air conditioner compressors will be shut off for seven minutes each half hour. The peak period probably would last between 30 minutes and three hours, a cooperative spokesman said.

"We're spending about $600,000 on this project but we feel it's well worth the investment because it can sharply reduce our wholesale power costs which are based in part on our yearly peak demand," said Derl J. Hinson, general manager of the cooperative.

Like the other EMCs in the state, Lumbee River owns no generating facilities and must buy its electricity from other companies. Lumbee River buys most of its power from Carolina Power and Light Co.

Lumbee River EMC has 16,000 members in Hoke, Cumberland, Robeson and Scotland counties.

Theme of the program was "to think and talk about education at school and at home." Those attending were also informed of the services available to children in the Pitt County School system.

$116.63 Day At Farmville

FARMVILLE — The quality grades of tobacco continued to be in strong demand Tuesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market by practically all buying companies, according to sales supervisor Louis Williams.

Williams said that the demand for the less desirable grades remained approximately the same as on the last sales day.

The sales supervisor said that the top price paid for quality leaf yesterday ranged from $1.30 to $1.40 per pound with leaf grades and wrappers accounting for most of the top prices.

Offerings consisted of a heavy volume of non descript grades, he noted, as leaf grades declined in volume. Smoking leaf grades appeared in larger quantities than at any time this season, he added.

The market sold 677,200 pounds Tuesday for $788,834, an average of $116.63 per hundred pounds. For the season, the market has sold 29,903,388 pounds for $34,773,744, an average of $116.29, compared with $101.87 a year ago.

Hunter Killed By Ricochet

SCOTLAND NECK, N.C. (AP) — A La Grange deer hunter was killed Tuesday when he was struck by a ricocheting bullet at the end of a day of hunting in Halifax County, according to authorities.

A spokesman at the sheriff's office said Keith Sutton, 27, was pronounced dead on arrival at Our Community Hospital in Scotland Neck.

The spokesman said Sutton and five companions were in the hunting party. Investigating officers were told that the men were unloading their guns at the end of the day and Sutton was struck by a bullet which discharged in a truck, the bullet ricocheting after hitting a door handle, the spokesman siad.

Authorities said it was the third hunting death in Halifax County since the season opened Oct. 5.

Dr. Nelson On Program

Dr. Philip G. Nelson, a Greenville psychiatrist, will be on the program of a conference on "Mental Health for the Convicted Offender Patient and Prisoner" to be held in Raleigh this week.

Dr. Nelson, who is chairman of the steering committee for the conference, is to be chairman of the workshop on "Alternatives to Incarceration." This workshop is to be held Thursday from 10 a.m. to noon.

He said the conference grew out of the experience of a committee chaired by him, which was appointed by the president of the N.C. Medical Society, at the suggestion of Gov. Jim Holshouser to evaluate medical services provided the residents of the Women's Correctional Center in Raleigh in June, 1975, after riots occurred there.

HALLOWEEN CARNIVAL

A Halloween Carnival will be held at Belvoir Primary School Thursday, October 28, from 6 to 9 p.m. Games will include bingo, cakewalks, haunted house, ring toss, basketball and others. A yard sale and crafts sale will also be held. The public is invited.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

In duplicate bridge you have to worry about making as many tricks as you can. At rubber bridge, your primary objective is to make or break the contract even at the cost of a trick or two. So test your rubber bridge skill by covering up the East and West cards with your thumbs while you plan to make ten tricks as safely as possible.

You have reached an excellent contract. North had enough strength to jump raise spades at his first turn, but the quality of his trump support left something to be desired; so he chose instead to use the delayed game raise, which shows the same values with less trump support.

If you are an incurable optimist, you will be regretting the fact that you did not reach slam. Indeed, with a 3-3 club split, the diamond king onside and the queen of spades dropping, you could make a grand slam. However, if you played along these lines, you are destined to defeat, for none of these chances come home.

The pessimist plans his play to cater for all these possibilities being wrong. Correct technique is to win the opening lead in your hand and immediately lead a club to the king. Now reenter your hand with the ace of spades and lead a low club toward the ace. This is to protect against the possibility that West started with a singleton club. When the ace of clubs holds, ruff a club with the ten of trumps.

If West is an alert defender, he will refuse to overruff. That prevents you from using dummy's trumps as entries. However, you can counter this defense by leading a low trump toward dummy. It will not help West to duck, so he wins the queen and shifts to a diamond. Don't take the finesse, for if it loses, you will go down!

Rise with the ace of diamonds and set up a long club by ruffing a club high. Now you can get back to dummy by leading a low spade to the nine, which draws the last trump in the process. On the established club you discard a diamond, and you have managed to hold your losers to two hearts and a trump with text-book dummy play.

(Tired of waiting for the interminable rubber to end so that you can cut in? 'The Fonz' Is Still King Of TV Ratings

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last week's ratings are in, and they show The Fonz still is king, the last World Series game didn't do as well as the one a year ago and "Charlie's Angels" can now be called a hit.

ABC, in winning the No. 1 slot in weekly ratings averages for evening shows for the fifth straight week, did it with the help of "Happy Days," the top-rated show in the week ending Oct. 24.

It was seen in nearly 23.5 million homes Tuesday night.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. audience estimates, however, provide a dramatic illustration of how a little rain — particularly on a prime-time World Series game — also can flood NBC's ratings hopes.

The network last Wednesday had to substitute "Day of the Jackal" when what was to have been the fourth World Series game was rained out. The movie wound up in the Nielsen celler.

Which enabled competing network shows that night like CBS' "Alice" and "Good Times" and ABC's "Bionic Woman," "Baretta" and "Charlie's Angels" to get their best ratings yet this season.

All five wound up among the week's 20 highest-rated shows.

"Angels" did best, coming in No. 3. It can safely be called the season's new hit series, as it never has dropped below 10th place in the Nielsen standings in four outings.

The week's two World Series games on NBC also did well in the ratings, Tuesday's Cincinnati-New York joust being fifth-rated and Thursday's finale getting the highest ratings of all four games.

It was seen in an estimated 21.7 million homes — which is good, but about 1.3 million fewer homes than watched last season's exciting Series finale between Boston and Cincinnati on NBC.

For those who count such things, last week's 20 top-rated shows were "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Charlie's Angels" (ABC); NBC's Thursday and Tuesday World Series shows; "Bionic Woman" (ABC); "All in the Family" (CBS); "Sunday Movie" and "Baretta" (ABC); "Alice" and "M-A-S-H" (CBS); "Little House on the Prairie" (NBC); "One Day at a Time" (CBS); "Six Million Dollar Man" (ABC); "Maude," "60 Minutes," "All's Fair," "Good Times," "Kojak" and "Charlie Brown" (CBS).

Other ratings: Last Friday's nationally televised presidential debate was the least-watched of the three scheduled debates. It was seen on the three networks in 33,960,000 homes.

More than 38 million homes tuned in the first Ford-Carter debate, with about 700,000 fewer homes watching the second debate.

The Nielsens show ups and downs for ABC's new Harry Reasoner-Barbara Walters week night newscasts. Their much-publicized first week was seen in a nightly average of 8 million homes, about 2.2 million more than watchee the Walters-less show the previous month.

Two weeks ago, their audience dropped to about 6.8 million homes. But last week more than 7.1 million homes observed their newscasts. ABC says it expects such fluctuations to continue for a while.

CBS still leads the evening news pack, with NBC in second place.

Watergate Tapes Ruled Open To Sale

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's Watergate conversations with his associates were quoted extensively in print and made headlines during the 1974 cover-up trial. Now, the public may be allowed to hear those incriminating and sometimes-earthy tapes.

A court ruling Tuesday to allow copying, broadcast and sale of 30 White House tapes used as trial evidence displeased Nixon's lawyer.

"The effect of the (U.S. Circuit) Court of Appeals decision is to permit the commercial exploitation of the recordings of presidential conversations subpoenaed for use in a criminal trial," Herbert J. Miller said. "Accordingly, we will appeal that decision."

The court noted that "the tapes already have been played in a public forum" and said Nixon's claim of "intrusion on the sensibilities of those whose voices appear on the tapes" is groundless.

"The tapes at issue are not recordings of bedroom or other intimate conversations," the court said. "The embarrassment Mr. Nixon fears is not republication of highly personal matters. Rather, we deal with conversations between business associates admitted into evidence as proof of criminal misconduct.

"The embarrassment Mr. Nixon anticipates is largely that which results whenever misconduct or questionable conduct is exposed."

The tapes involved cover 18 to 22 hours of conversations in the Oval Office and Nixon's Executive Office Building hideaway, including the June 23, 1972, presidential order to derail the FBI's investigation of the Watergate break-in that occurred six days earlier.

Nixon had fought through the courts to withhold that tape and 63 others from Watergate prosecutors. When the Supreme Court finally ordered him to provide them as evidence, Nixon made the contents of several June 23 conversations public and resigned three days later.

The appeals court ruled 2 to 1 that the common-law right to inspect and copy judicial records extends to exhibits, such as the tapes.

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, who presided over the Watergate cover-up trial, had blocked public release of the tapes until the convicted defendants had gone through the appeals process.

The appeals court recently upheld the convictions of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and former domestic counselor John D. Ehrlichman. Their convictions, however, are being appealed to the Supreme Court.

Sirica was told by the appeals court to work out a plan for releasing the tapes and that "distribution should be prompt, and on an equal basis to all persons desiring copies."

Broadcasting networks, a broadcast-news directors group and a maker of phonograph records had sued for the right to copy the tapes.

NBC said it plans to "make some program" out of the tapes. ABC said it will not make a decision until it knows in what form the recordings will be released. CBS had no comment immediately.

Warner Communications, Inc., said it plans to release a condensed version of the tapes on one or two long-playing records, as well as a full set for use in libraries.

Repels 4 Would-Be Robbers With Club

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Would-be robbers will think twice before they pounce on Charlie Parrish.

The tall, husky owner of C&P Auto Parts Co. used a home-made wooden blackjack Monday night to repel four would-be armed robers.

"They won't come back to mess with me," said Parrish, 66. "I don't want no trouble, but a man does what he has to do."

It wasn't the first time Parrish had fought off persons who came to his old frame house "to try to do me some harm."

Parrish pointed to the site beside a huge tree at his door where he felled the first man,, who was carrying a big knife.

"It was a helluva knife," Parrish said. "It's a wonder that joker didn't cut me to pieces before I could do anything."

But Parrish reacted swiftly. "The one with the knife fell to the ground, unconscious, as soon as I cut him one up beside the head."

Parrish beat one of the man's companions to submission, hitting him atop the head, before two other men grabbed the unconscious pair and beat a fast retreat to a waiting van.

One of the fleeing men called back, "We'll see you later."And Parrish replied, "If you come back, I'll kill you as soon as I see you."

Parrish spent much of the night on his porch, seated in a rocking chair with a shotgun on his lap, but the four men never returned.

Congressional Races Enjoy Big Political Money

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Big political money, driven from the presidential election by post-Watergate reforms, is rushing in unprecedented volume into congressional races with the potential for greater impact than ever.

The Federal Election Commission says there are at least 125 political committees which have given as much as $50,000 each. With the figures for some committees in the $1 million range, the over-all total and its clout is massive.

Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby, computed that as of Sept. 1 special interest groups from big labor to big business had reported contributions totaling more than $10 million.

That is twice the amount given by special interest groups to congresssional candidates during the same campaign period two years ago. Dairy farmers, who had difficulty placing their money in 1974 in the wake of the milk fund scandal, have tripled their donations so far this year.

Figures coming in from October filings indicate that the final tally for the 1976 campaigns may run 50 per cent or more above the September level.

FEC reports show that the American Medical Association, for example, had given $904,840 to Senate and House candidates as of Oct. 1, $350,000 of it in the 30 days since the September report.

"The record certainly appears to show that not only is special interest money coming in in record amounts but that it is focused on legislative and political goals," said Fred Wertheimer, vice president of Common Cause.

"It's never been an accident that special interest groups focus on congressional committees that have life or death power over their issues," Wertheimer said. "What's happening is that with the role of special interest money eliminated from the presidential system, everyone is flocking to Congress."

The biggest spender by far is the AMA and its related state societies. Gifts from AMA-related committees totaled $963,725 by Sept. 1.

The AMA had another $1 million in its war chests, some of which is being reflected in reports coming in now.

Common Cause has filed a formal complaint with the FEC charging that the AMA's system of giving up to the maximum $5,000 from both national and state units circumvents the legal limit. AMA claims its state units are autonomous and can make their own contributions.

The California Medical Political Action Committee alone has given out $50,750 to Senate and House candidates, some of it overlapping gifts from the national fund.

AMA groups gave a total of $21,815 to 16 of the 37 members of the House Ways and Means Committee as of Sept. 1. And among members of the Senate Finance Committee, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., also briefly a presidential candidate, got $20,000 and Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., $6,000. Those are the committees that deal with health insurance legislation.

The next largest bloc of congressional contributions comes from the dairy industry, which benefits from numerous federal laws and regulations, including milk price supports which have been raised three times in the last two years. The industry's primary contributions go through political committees representing the three largest milk cooperatives. They had given $682,184 by Sept. 1.

Dairy gifts of more than $131,000 have gone to at least 21 of the 43 members of the House Agriculture Committee. The biggest beneficiary was Rep. John W. Jenrette, D-S.C., who received $27,000.

Other Democrats on the cmmittee getting large dairy gifts included Reps. John Melcher of Montana, $15,000; Richard Nolan of Minnesota, $14,725; charles Rose of North Carolina, $9,000; Joseph Vigorito of Pennsylvania, $9,000; Glenn English of Oklahoma, $8,000; and Tom Harkin of Iowa, $7,000.

The leading Republican on the dairy gift list was Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida, who got $6,000. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee who isn't even up for election this year, has been given $12,000.

Common Cause figures show agricupture, professional and business groups giving $4.9 million to Senate and House candidates, compared with $2.1 million at the same stage of the 1974 campaign.

Bentsen leads the list of individual recipients with $100,450, including some funds he received while seeking his party's presidential nomination. Other top recipients were Sens. Vance Harlke, D-Ind., $85,150, and Robert Taft, R-Ohio, $74,115.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., was the largest recipient from all labor sources as of Sept. 1. He had been given $96,375, followed by Hartke with $90,850 and Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., with $90,493.

Common Cause estimates that all labor contributions to congressional candidates as of Sept. 1 had totaled $4.1 million, compared with $2.8 million for the same period in 1974.

Political committees of the AFL-CIO had given $630,974 by Sept. 1, more than $600,000 of it going to Democrats. The new October figures show the national Committee on Political Education giving $727,669.

Real estate interests had contributed $25,000 to 17 Democrats and eight Republicans on the 44-member House Banking, Currency and Housing Committee.

The political arm of the National Association of Realtors had given $314,373 in all to Senate and House candidates, the bulk of it to Republican incumbents. The Truck Operators Non-Partisan Committee, had given to ten of the 23 members of the transportation subcommittee of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee.

The new October figures show the political action committee of the National Education Association has given $399,437, most of it to Democrats. The NEA gave a higher proportion of its money to challengers than did most other groups.

Face Shortage Of Volunteers

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Lung Program was set up in 1974 to determine whether periodic examinations of men who feel healthy could detect lung caner early enough to improve the survival rate. But it is running up against an unexpected obstacle — a deficiency of suitable volunteers, reports Dr. Myron R. Melamed, chief of cytogy at Memorial Hospital here and local director of the program.

"To be statistically meaningful the program must follow 30,000 men —10,000 at each of three hospitals—over a 5-10 year period, but it has still not reached that target."

The program is receiving $13 million from the National Cancer Institute. The participating hospitals are Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, New York City; Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; and Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md.

Volunteers must be men over 45 years old who smoke at least one pack of cigarettes daily. The program has confined itself to these men because, as a group, they have the highest risk of lung cancer in the total population, Dr. Melamed said.

All volunteers are given comprehensive annual chest x-rays at no cost. Because the special x-ray machine used develops the pictures on-the-spot, additional pictures can be taken from different angles immediately if any abnormality is perceived.

Half of the volunteers are also given a sputum test and are asked to mail in sputum samples twice a year.

"Memorial has enlisted volunteers through TV and radio publicity, newspaper ads and direct mailing. But it is still a long way from its goal of 10,000-12,000 volunteers," Dr. Melamed said.

"To date we have diagnosed 61 cancer cases among 6,600 volunteers at Memorial — twice as many as we expected. But nearly all of them can be treated by curative surgery. And we think we can boost the survival rate from 8 per cent to anywhere from 50 to 80 per cent.

"Since the program is a free service and requires only one 30-minute visit per year, we're surprised that more men haven't volunteered," said Dr. Melamed, who emphasized that the vast majority of volunteers will never get lung cancer.

"For them, participation in the program can provide the assurance that they are well. And they would be making a personal contribution — at a minimum of time and effort — to a cancer research program that may help save the lives of others."

Black Voter Participation Is Gradually Declining

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

Black voter participation in national elections has been declining steadily over the past decade, even as the number of black elected officials on the state and local levels has soared.

Black registration in 1972 was 65.5 per cent of eligible voters, compared to a white registration of 73.4 per cent.

For this election, says John Britton of the Joint Center for Political Sudies in Washington, only about 52 per cent of blacks are registered. This may be bad news for Democrats who are hoping for big black majorities in key industrial states.

Declining voter interest in national elections is characteristic of white as well as black voters, but the degree of non-participation by blacks is disturbing, Britton says.

"Ten per cent of the electorate is black," he noted. "If blacks as a group perceive their interest to revolve around one candidate, and if they vote, that 10 per cent could turn the election. But black voting has taken a nosedive.

"It's not apathy. It's cynicism. Why register? Why vote? It has to do with the fact that no matter how much blacks vote, government on all levels does not respond."

There was no upsurge of registration in the North this year, Britton said, despite a major registration called Operation Big Vote. "We were able to lure thousands of blacks in the North to register, but not nearly enough to close the gap."

Though a great many blacks have been elected in recent years at the local level, the inroads at the national level have been limited.

There are 17 black incumbents in the House of Representatives, all running for re-election, and one black senator, Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who isn't up for re-election this year.

In all, according to the Joint Center for Political Studies, there are 3,979 black elected officials as of June 30 — more than three times as many in 1969, when there were 1,185. Nearly all are on the state and local level, and include 223 blacks in state legislatures, most of whom are also up for re-election in November.

There is a total of 522,000 elected officials in the U.S.

The majority of black office holders are in county and municipal posts, such as constable, probate judge, sheriff, coroner and school board member. Many face re-election this fall.

Does the presence of such black candidates stimulate a black turnout?

"If blacks believe it will make a difference, then you'll see a big turnout," says Rep. Yvonne Burke, D-Calif., chairwoman of the Congressional Black Caucus. "In North Carolina last September, we had a black run for lieutenant governor. We didn't get too many blacks turning out to vote because they didn't think it would make a difference. He lost."

Mrs. Burke added that the recent furor over a racial slur made by former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz might bring a lot more blacks to the voting booths.

While registration in the North has been languid, it's increased substantially in the South. Close to four million blacks are registered in the 11 Southern states, says John Lewis, executive director of the Voter Education Project. In 1972, slightly under three million were registered.

Census figures show that the South, with 53 per cent of America's black population, has 55 per cent of all black elected officials. This includes 44 per cent of the black state legislators and 61 per cent of black mayors.

"Black Southerners are very concerned about the entire question of jobs," Lewis said. "The black Southern vote will be a decisive factor in this presidential election."

Others point out that much of the South is considered safe for Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter.

Dr. Charles Hamilton, a Columbia University political scientist, says:

"If there is a large black vote, it would be critical outside the South, in states such as New York, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio. But there's still the trend in all the electorate of not voting."

"Outside of Georgia, blacks aren't talking much about the candidates, but they're talking about making a change," he said. "If that's true, then Carter will be the beneficiary, not because he's Carter, but because he's a change."

Two Holidays

Friday, October 29 and Wednesday, November 3 are both student holidays for students of the Greenville City Schools.

Supt. Glenn Cox said that on Friday, about two to three thousand teachers from 17 northeastern North Carolina counties would hold a District 15 NCAE meeting at Rose High School.

November 3 is another of the teacher work days scheduled periodically during the school year.

Feared Labeling Locker Rooms

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — In these days of sex discrimination suits, Lake Superior State College officials weren't taking any chances with their new $10-million physical education complex.

That's why they labeled the locker rooms "1," "2" and "3" instead of the more traditional "men" or "women."

Officials said after wading through volumes of federal regulations governing sex discrimination and equal opportunities that they were afraid labeling the locker rooms by sex might trigger a lawsuit unless the facilities were identical.

"If anybody gets excited we can rotate the rooms monthly or weekly if necessary," said college President Kenneth J. Shouldice.

Nobody is sure who is supposed to use No. 3.

Dick Clark Recalls Troubled Career In 'Bandstand'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The author of this column on Dick Clark is a former editor of Rolling Stone magazine who now devotes his time to writing for young people about their world of music.

By ABE PECK
For The Associated Press

Don Kirshner hosts and produces "Rock Concert" and "The Rock Awards," and Don Cornelius does the same on "Soul Train." But nearly 20 years with "American Bandstand" qualifies Dick Clark as the godfather of TV rock.

Now, approaching 47, Clark has recalled his sometime troubled career in a low-key, amply-illustrated book called "Rock, Roll and Remember: America's Oldest Living Teenager Brings Back Those Happy Days." The writing was done by journalist Richard Robinson, and the book certifies "Bandstand's" place in pop history.

After all, "Bandstand" was the local music show that sprang out of South Philadelphia in 1957 to attract a network audience of 20 million. By 1960, Clark was a 30-year-old millionaire, ranked second only to President Eisenhower in a national teen popularity poll.

"Bandstand" (on ABC) helped teen-agers forge a group identity. The teens of the time oohed and ahhed as Fabian and Frankie Avalon sang their hit songs. They learned dances like the Bop and the Twist, and sent 15,000 letters a week asking for everything from favorite records to intimate details about some of the regulars on the show.

But suddenly it all fell apart. Clark went before a congressional subcommittee investigating payola in broadcasting. And then the coming of the Beatles and 1960s rock put dancing in the background and eclipsed "Bandstand."

"Rock, Roll and Remember" reviews Clark's career from his campus radio days in upstate New York to the payola scandal of 1959 and 1960. It portrays him as a regular guy who went on living in a garden apartment after making his first million. When Ed Murrow took his "Person to Person" TV cameras to the Clark residence, Mr. Music had to borrow record jackets from his friends so he could show off his collection.

"The book originally was outlined as the first 10 years of rock and roll," Clark explained from his offices in Los Angeles, where he now hosts "The $20,000 Pyramid" game show and the Saturday morning "Bandstand."

"The '50s were a special period. What's bad to remember? Nothing ever happened. We were coming out of bad times into good ones. We didn't have a war. There was enough to eat. It was a wonderful, frothy world."

In those days, the "Bandstand" audience played games like "pass the peanut with your nose." But it was a passport to fame. An obscure chicken plucker named Ernest Evans changed his name to Chubby Checker and Twisted his way to a Number One record.

On the air, the worst that happened was that a record of "Diana" stuck on a turntable and Paul Anka broke up laughing after trying to sing along with it.

Off-camera, though, was another story. Clark came to "Bandstand" after his predecessor was arrested for drunken driving and statutory rape. And though he was never indicted Clark nearly lost the show for accepting a ring and a necklace from a friend in the music business and $7,000 from American Airlines for what came to be called "plugola." Or, even worse, "Clarkola."

Clark's book portrays the Congressional hearings as a mixture of election-year headline-seeking, an attack by the vested interests of the music business and a reaction to the younger generation's self-assertion. The book discusses the testimony at length, but glosses over the question of whether or not it was wise for somebody in Clark's position to accept gifts in the first place.

"It was a dumb thing to do," Clark admits now. "Unfortunately, though, your own stupidity doesn't make a strong defense. But the accusation was that they influenced the records I played. When you're making $500,000 or $1 million a year, gifts like that aren't going to influence you."

ABC kept him as the host of "Bandstand" after he divested himself of $5 million in recording and music publishing interests.

What's missing from the book is an attempt to put 20 years of pop in perspective. Clark hinted he might remedy this in a second book.

"It's been the most extraordinary period of entertainment, and I was fortunate enough to have a seat at the ball game. Twenty years ago, the entertainment business was controlled by a close-knit group that ran Tin Pan Alley, the Hollywood studios, and the rest. We didn't even have auditoriums. We used to work in roller skating rinks and closed burlesque houses."

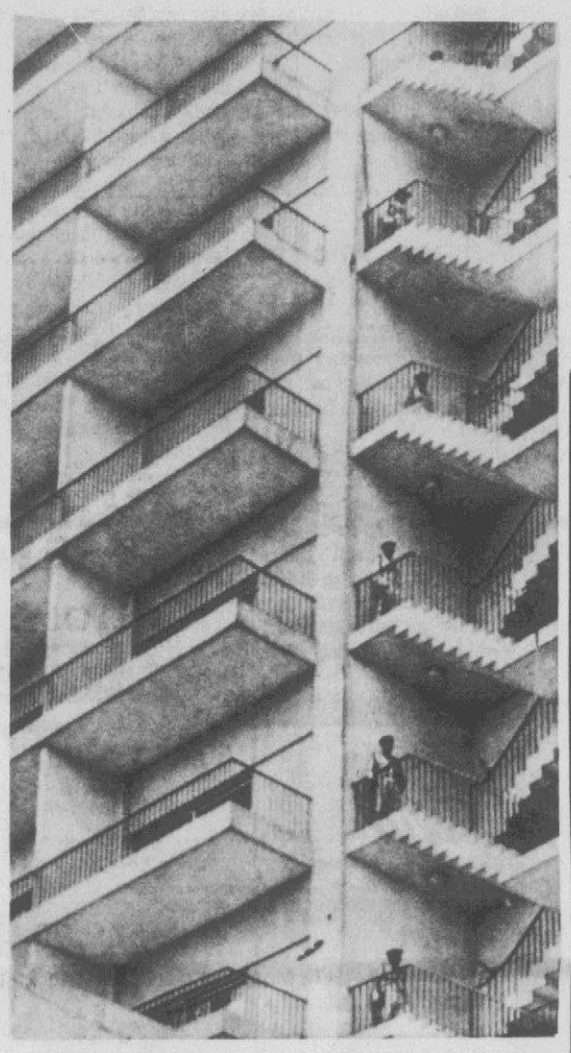

Now rock acts command $100,000 for a night's work. "We've come about as far as we can go," Clark says. "The scene will fractionalize, and it'll get bigger. If you're looking for the next superstar, or the next trend, the search might be a long one."

New Questions Raised On Death Of Czar, Family

By SUE BASS
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Contrary to the history books, the last czar of Russia and his family may not have been shot to death in a cellar by the Bolsheviks, two British journalists say in a new study.

And the czarina and at least three of her four daughters probably survived as Vladimir Lenin's hostages for months after July 16, 1918, the date when the massacre is believed to have occurred, the study says.

But the fate of the fourth daughter — the legendary Grand Duchess Anastasia — remains a mystery, the journalists conclude.

Anthony Summers and Tom Mangold, journalists with the British Broadcasting Corp., make these claims in "The File on the Tsar," a best-seller in London due to be published in this country today.

They based their research largely on seven volumes of sworn testimony and police reports collected by investigators in Russia in 1918-19 and only recently found at Harvard's Houghton Library.

Summers said in an interview that the new findings contradict the prevalent theory that the entire family of Czar Nicholas II was murdered by the Communists in the cellar of a house in Ekaterinburg, in the Urals. The family had been imprisoned there after the czar's overthrow in 1917.

But Summers stressed that he and Mangold also reject the romantic theory held by some that Nicholas, Czarina Alexandra and their five children escaped Russia alive.

Instead, the book concludes, the czar was executed by a firing squad at an unspecified location around the July 16 date, his son probably died of hemophilia, and Alexandra and three of the four daughters probably were killed on Lenin's orders seven or eight months after the alleged massacre.

Summers said Lenin had the czarina — a German princess who had married into the Russian royal family — and three of the grand duchesses kept prisoner while he negotiated with the German Kaiser for the return of Communists imprisoned behind German lines.

The place of imprisonment was Perm, 200 miles northwest of Ekaterinburg, the authors say.

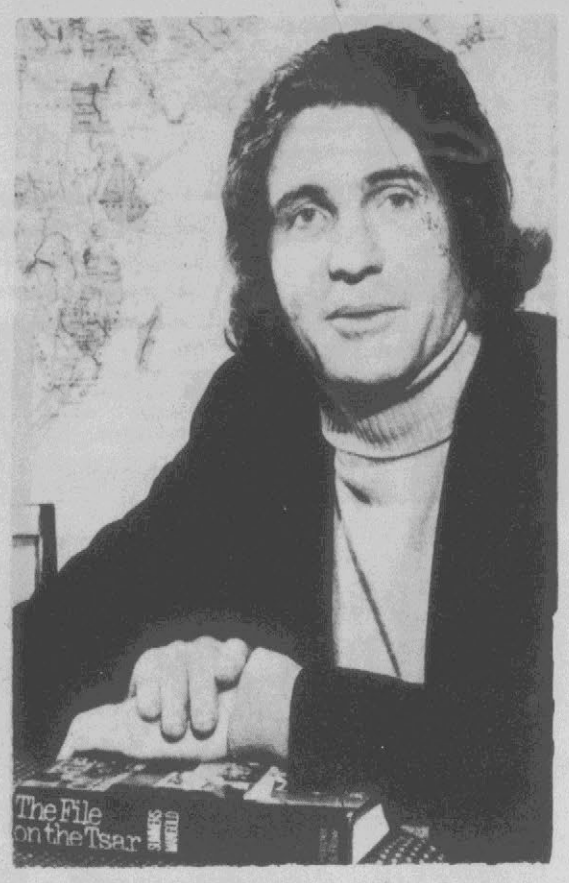

After the Russians defeated the Germans on the battlefield and the Kaiser was removed from the German throne, Lenin had the women sent to Moscow in January of 1919, Summers said. Their trail ends there.

After the Germans were defeated on the battlefield and the Kaiser was removed from the German throne, Lenin had the women sent to Moscow in January of 1919, Summers said. Their trail ends there.

"If Lenin kept the family alive as hostages for a deal with the Germans, the motive evaporated when Germany was defeated and the Kaiser toppled," Summers said. "Lenin either washed his hands of the surviving Romanovs or left them to their fate. What we know, what we're almost certain of, is that members of the family survived six months beyond their historic deaths."

Summers said evidence shows that the youngest girl, Anastasia, escaped and was recaptured. But he said he and Mangold were unable to come to any conclusion about her eventual fate.

Dozens of women have claimed to be Anastasia, including Anna Anderson of Charlottesville, Va., who in 1970 lost a 30-year legal battle in German courts to get her claims recognized.

HISTORY BOOKS WRONG? — Anthony Summers says he does not believe that Czar Nicholas II, Czarina Alexandra and their five children escaped Russia alive.

Father, Son, Daughter In Steeplejack's Life

By EVERETT S. LANDERS.
Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Journal .
Staff Writer

NEW PALTZ, N.Y. (AP) — The paint-smeared flannel shirt, worn jeans and heavy boots appeared an unlikely work uniform for the soft-spoken 17-year-old girl.

But her confident swing into a boatswain's chair, gliding 80 feet above the ground, was sufficient evidence she had chosen her occupation with conviction.

Doreen Baxter, like her father and younger brother, is a steeplejack. She doesn't object to being called a steeplejill, but it makes little difference, she said, "because I'm doing what I want to do and you can call it what you want."

The three-century-old steeple of the New Paltz Reformed Church was the immediate target of the Baxters' handiwork.

Billy Baxter, 15, worked at the very top, scraping a weathered coat of white paint. Doreen and William Baxter, 41, made their way along a narrow catwalk near the steeple clock. They made a careful check of the block and fall that guides their daily lives and deftly climbed into side-by-side boatswain's chairs to paint the steeple sidewall.

There was no idle chatter. Father and daughter quietly shared a unique detachment from others who spend their days earthbound.

Twelve years ago the elder Baxter had a comfortable office job. Following an argument with a superior, he went into business with a painter and eventually drifted into steeplejacking.

He has an unconcealed pride in the accomplishments of his son and daughter, but an understanding their days together in mid-air may be numbered.

Letting her dark hair fall from beneath a babushka, Doreen said, "I've been looking for something else, but when I think about an office job I know it will never be as exciting."

She said each job was a challenge and the kind of hard work she has come to enjoy. "I feel like I'm in my element high above the ground. I feel independent and in control.

"She complains because she can't keep up with me," her father said, "but she has the willpower to keep trying."

Baxter spoke of how he carefully checks the rigs each day before they ascend to perches above the treetops. He recalled his children working on huge oil tanks and their days together on numerous difficult jobs.

With the start of school, Doreen has resumed her studies in business and accounting at Wallkill, N.Y., High School and Bill is in junior high.

As for Baxter's wife, "She's interested in the work but not the height. I think she's happy at home."

Advise Smoke Detectors Help

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Homeowners should consider installing an early warning system as a fire safety measure.

Safety engineers with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service say a high percentage of fire deaths occur while people are asleep. Smoke detectors, say the safety engineers, are generally more suitable to provide early warning than are heat detectors.

Change Back To Standard Time Sunday

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's almost time again for that once-a-year ritual of falling back to keep up with what Uncle Sam is doing to your time.

Come 2 a.m. this Sunday, most Americans will set their clocks back one hour to signal the end of Daylight Saving Time. The exceptions are residents of Arizona, Hawaii and parts of Indiana, who are on standard time all year.

The nation's clocks will be controlled again by the 1966 Uniform Time Act, which decrees six months of daylight time — from the last Sunday in April, when clocks spring ahead, until the last Sunday in October, when clocks fall back.

That relatively simple system prevailed until late 1973, when Congress, shaken by the cutoff of much of the nation's imported oil, scurried about in search of energy-saving measures.

Given evidence that longer periods of DST could mean less fuel would be required for heating and lighting, the federal government ordered year'round DST, beginning in January 1974.

It didn't take Congress long to figure out that some things — including tradition — are more important than energy conservation. The letters started coming in from farmers and parents of school children.

Farmers complained it does no good to get up at 6 a.m. daylight time to work the fields because the sun hasn't had time to burn off the dew.

So, year-'round DST lasted for only 10 months in 1974. Congress then voted for eight months of DST in 1975. With the law scheduled to revert back to six months of Daylight time in 1976, the Senate earlier this year passed a bill setting seven months of DST in 1976 and 1977 but the measure was killed in a House committee. The result is six months of Standard Time, beginning this Sunday.

In killing the bill, opponents apparently rejected a U.S. Department of Transportation study showing that longer periods of DST could not only save the nation fuel but reduce traffic accidents and street crime as well.

Plan Explorer Convention At Atlantic Beach

The East Carolina Council's second annual Explorer Convention is scheduled for Nov. 12, 13, and 14 at the Atlantic Beach Ramada Inn.

The major purpose of the convention is to elect Council officers to head the Explorer program for 1977. Nominations will be made after the banquet on Saturday evening with elections held after breakfast on Sunday.

The Council announced that the total registration fee including lodging, two breakfasts, banquet, pool party and tours is $23 per person. The total fee must be in the Council Service Center in Kinston no later than Nov. 9.

Geographers At State Meeting

Four representatives of the East Carolina University Department of Geography attended the annual meeting of the N.C. Geographical Society in Asheville Oct. 22-23.

They were Dr. Ennis Chestang, department chairperson; Drs. Robert Cramer and Ralph Birchard of the geography faculty; and ECU graduate student Randolph Reid of Raleigh.

Reid presented a report of his research on family cemeteries within the city limits of Greenville.

Hayakawa Poses Real Challenge For Sen. Tunney

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Sen. John Tunney is on the attack in his California re-election campaign, running hard against a surprisingly strong challenge from political newcomer S. I. Hayakawa.

Hayakawa, who has been a Republican for only three years, has based his campaign on the fame he won in 1968 when, as newly appointed college president, he quelled a violent student strike at San Francisco State College.

The 70-year-old challenger led the 42-year-old Tunney in polls just after the June primary. The Democratic incumbent has gained ground in recent weeks — leading by five percentage points in the latest California Poll.

The candidates present a contrast in appearances:

—Hayakawa, a Canadian-born semanticist of Japanese ancestry, in the tam-o'-shanter he made his symbol, giving speeches that sound like classroom lectures delivered in a thin, almost whispering voice, limiting appearances to two or three a day, tap dancing for exercise, but making sure he gets plenty of rest.

—Tunney, son of former world heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, an athletic, early rising jogger, a traditional stump orator, with as many as eight or 10 appearances in a day, gregarious, swapping stories with aides about sports or Washington sex scandals.

Each candidate is viewed as a moderate in his own party and the substance of the campaign revolves around traditional philosophical divisions between Democrats and Republicans.

The style of the campaign is less traditional. It is the incumbent who is putting in the 14-to 16-hour days and making an issue of his opponent's reluctance to debate. It is the challenger who acts confident that the voters know him and will vote for him on the basis of his record.

Tunney says there is a reason for the reversal of roles. "I'm running against a folk hero," he says. "He (Hayakawa) couldn't have any more personal popularity than when he came out of San Francisco State — absolutely couldn't have any more popularity.

"The only place he can go from the speakers before a battery of television and newspaper cameras.

after that is down, so he obviously doesn't want to make news. And so our strategy is to keep the pressure on, confront him. It's almost as if I'm the challenger."

Tunney tells voters, "One incident, five minutes in front of television cameras eight years ago, does not qualify a man for the U.S. Senate."

He is referring to the morning of Dec. 2, 1968, when Hayakawa, the newest in a series of interim presidents of San Francisco State, climbed to the roof of a sound truck operated illegally by leaders of a student strike. He yanked the wires

Nine out of 10 Hayakawa supporters mention that incident first when asked why they back him. And Hayakawa himself takes every opportunity to remind voters of "the battle of San Francisco State."

When student demonstrators interrupted his campaign speech at the college, Hayakawa thanked them for reminding voters of 1968 and said the hecklers would "win hundreds of thousands of votes for me."

The tam-o'-shanter he campaigns in is similar to the one he wore as he pulled the wires from the sound truck. He even presented one to President Ford.

Tunney, meanwhile, has taken to "debating" a tam-o'-shanter to dramatize the point that Hayakawa has turned down 30 of 31 offers of joint appearances.

Hayakawa daily lists 10 issues such as national health care and offshore oil drilling on which, he says, Tunney switched positions. He calls Tunney "Sen. Flip-Flop" and attacks his absenteeism from the Senate, citing in particular two well-publicized vacation trips during sessions.

After the attack, Hayakawa often turns to subjects such as the historic perspectives of the two parties, which he says differ in psychology more than in objectives, or to analysis of the American "national experience."

In Tunney's bruising primary campaign, Tom Hayden and his wife, actress Jane Fonda, called Tunney a "playboy." At one point, Miss Fonda said Tunney dated teen-age girls, but she did not substantiate that allegation.

In the fall campaign, Hayakawa and other Republicans have made no mention of those charges, or of Tunney's widely publicized divorce two years ago.

There are few unique issues in the campaign. Hayakawa generally sticks to the Republican party platform, differing only on the question of abortion which he says "isn't any damn business of government." Like Tunney, he is the target of right-to-life pickets.

Hayakawa concentrates his appearances on GOP groups and despite his newness to the Republican party, he has won general acceptance in all but the most conservative GOP circles.

Tunney's campaign is focused on traditional Democratic bases — ethnic groups, labor, liberals, the poor and students. But the campaign is in large part an effort to patch differences with some of those groups.

Liberals are angry that Tunney opposed national health insurance legislation after coauthoring it. Conservationists are wary of his endorsement of nuclear power. Consumer groups say he has too many big business contributors.

Students and young liberals, who flocked to former student radical leader Tom Hayden's primary campaign against Tunney, are conspicuously absent from the current battle.

Tunney says he is not worried about losing campus votes to Hayakawa. But he is worried that many students and young liberals may sit out this election or cast a protest vote for one of the three minor party candidates on the ballot.

Americans Are Biggest Users

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The United States uses more energy per capita than any other nation in the world, the Center for Energy and Mineral Resources at Texas A&M University reported.

The U.S. comprises only 6 per cent of the world population, but Americans use 35 per cent of all energy consumed in the world.

Soil Acidity Is Crop's Enemy

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Soil acidity is a leading enemy of peak crop production in the state, said W. Wayne Hinish, agronomist at Pennsylvania State University.

Three out of every four crop failures are due to a lack of lime, according to a study of crop growth problems in Pennsylvania.

Says Pressures Cause Ailments

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Suppressed feelings sometimes can cause any of several physical ailments, reports a family life education specialist.

Ilene Miller with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says suppressed feelings can be expressed with headaches, backaches, fatigues, ulcers or other physical symptoms.

Six Bands For Hallow'en Event

Six bands will provide music for the first annual Halloween Music Festival, scheduled to begin Sunday at Noon and run until Midnight, at a site at Stokes, 13 miles from Greenville.

Sponsored by the Greenville Nightclub Association, the 12-hour festival will feature music by the Loafer's Glory, Lariat Sam, Tumbleweed, Sutter's Goldstreak, Super Grit Cowboy and Delias High Bands.

Buzz Ledford, spokesman for the nightclub owners group said a $250 prize will be awarded to the best Halloween costume at the festival. Admission he said,, will be $5 for advanced tickets and $6 at the gate.

The site, according to Ledford, will be a farm which will provide 35 acres of parking and a 75 acre activity area.

Food and soft drink concessions will be provided at the site, including such items as submarine sandwiches and pizzas.

Ledford said the nightspots in Downtown Greenville will be closed all day Sunday for the festival. He noted that the downtown clubs will operate normally Friday night. Saturday, the sale of refreshments will stop at midnight, although the clubs will remain open until their usual Saturday night closing time.

Another nightclub official, Danny Bercini said the club owners and operators are doing everything possible to create a "festive atmosphere" for the Halloween weekend.

Group Of Democrats Supporting Nye

DUTCH SEX SYMBOL — Dutch actress Sylvia Kristel, who gained fame as the star of the steamy "Emmanuelle", is shown in the frilly costume she wears for her role in "Behind The Iron Mask" which is being filmed in Vienna. At 24 she is the film world's newest sex symbol, but she doesn't think so. Her English is flawless, thanks to watching American TV. And, besides Dutch, she is fluent also in French and German. RALEIGH (AP) — A group of Democratic businessmen is backing the Republicans in their determined drive to hang on to the one Council of State post they now hold.

The group has organized the Democrats for Nye to bolster the campaign of Labor Commissioner T. Avery Nye, who is opposed by Democrat John Brooks, a Raleigh attorney.

In a couple of other Council of State races, former teacher Evelyn Tyler of Greensboro is seeking to unseat Craig Phillips, the Democratic incumbent superintendent of public instruction, and Deputy State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a Democrat, is opposed by Republican Revenue Secretary J. Howard Coble in the contest to succeed veteran Edwin Gill as state treasurer.

Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser and the Democrats for Nye are making much of the right-to-work law and the fact that Brooks is backed by the State AFL-CIO in their effort to keep Nye in the post to which Holshouser appointed him last year.

Nye is a strong backer of retaining the right-to-work law while Brooks has described himself as neutral on the subject. Holshouser recently asserted that with the strong support of the State AFL-CIO, Brooks cannot be neutral.

Mrs. Tyler, who switched from Democrat to Republican in order to make the race against Phillips, has the backing of some of the supporters of Ben Currin, Rocky Mount school superintendent who lost to Phillips in the Democratic primary.

Mrs. Tyler is a member of the state Board of Education and has frequently differed with Phillips. She had strong criticism of the incumbent superintendent when she kicked off her campaign Sept. 30 on the steps of the Education Building in Raleigh.

"Instead of putting so much of our education dollars into this building behind me, let's put them into our classrooms," she said.

Boyles and Coble have waged low-key campaigns in their bids to succeed Gill, who is stepping down next January after serving as treasurer since 1953.

Boyles, a 46-year-old Lincoln County native who has been Gill's top assistant since 1960, said in announcing his bid for office that "Mr. Gill has served the state well and it is that quality of service that I would propose to continue."

Coble, 45, a Greensboro native, is a former member of the state House of Representatives and a former assistant U.S. attorney for the Middle District. He made a tentative bid for the Republican nomination for governor last spring, but dropped out when no great groundswell of support developed.

Nye, 36-year-old general contractor from Fairmont, was appointed labor commissioner by Holshouser in September of 1975 to succeed the late W. C. "Billy" Creel.

Brooks, 39, won the Democratic nomination for commissioner of labor by defeating former first lady Jessie Rae Scott in a spirited runoff campaign. He ran for the same post in 1972 but was defeated by Creel in a second Democratic primary.

Brooks has accused the labor department of having "restricted its initiatives in making safety inspections and recording economic statistics." He has called for a coordinated program to develop more and better jobs and improvement of apprenticeship and vocational programs.

Nye has sought to portray Brooks as one whose "liberal views are clearly out of step with those of North Carolina's voters."

Phillips, 53, a former school superintendent at Winston-Salem and Charlotte, is seeking a third term as superintendent of public instruction. During much of his tenure, Phillips has frequently clashed with W. Dallas Herring, chairman of the state Board of Education, over educational policy.

Mrs. Tyler, 57, Gaston County native, is former president of the North Carolina Association of Classroom Teachers. She is now an area coordinator for in-service education of teachers at the Alamance Technical Institute.

See Small Gain In Enrollment

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Enrollment at Texas colleges and universities for the 1976 fall semester is up less than 1 per cent from the previous year.

This is the smallest one-year enrollment gain in 20 years, the State College Coordinating Board said.

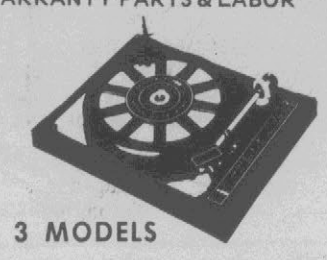

Preliminary statistics compiled by the board show the state college and university system with a fall enrollment of 681,000 students.

Potential Employers Planning To Interview Health Students

Potential employers in various health-related fields will visit the East Carolina University campus Nov. 12 to interview students interested in pursuing careers in health care delivery.

The event, ECU's annual Health Careers Day, will begin at 10 a.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center. According to Furney K. James, director of the ECU Office of Career Planning and Placement, Health Careers Day is intended not only to provide opportunities for graduating seniors to investigate job openings but also to give freshmen, sophomores and juniors a chance to talk with representatives of health fields about preparing for future careers.

Among the specific employment categories to be included in Health Careers Day interviews are nursing, physical and occupational therapy, medical technology, social work and correctional services, medical record science, dietetics, music therapy, speech, language and auditory pathology, community health, child development and family relations, food services, environmental health and rehabilitation counseling.

Hospitals, clinics and other agencies interested in participating in Health Careers Day may arrange to do so with the Office of Career Planning and Placement, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834 (telephone 757-6050).

Good Neighbors In 'Topping Out'

DETROIT (UPI) — Officials of Detroit's Renaissance Center, which overlooks Canada across the Detroit River, decided to make the "topping out" ceremonies at the $337 million complex an international affair by inviting a Canadian color guard to participate.

Enroute to the ceremonies, the American color guard from Selfridge Air National Guard Base were involved in an auto accident. The Canadians stepped into the breach and volunteered to carry the American Flag as well as the Canadian Flag.

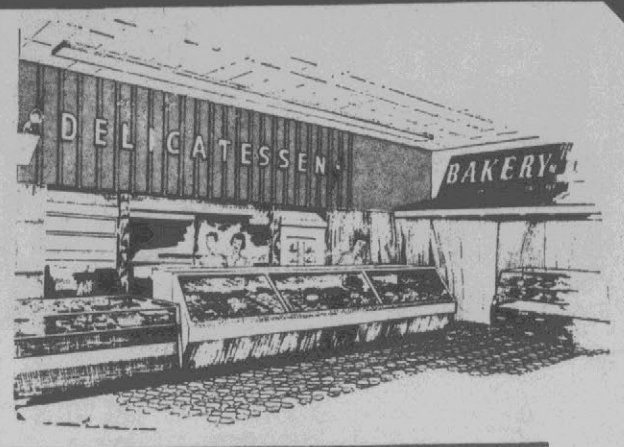

Grass-Savers For Gulf Coast

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Texas scientists are using a device constructed of old tires and steel cable to prevent washout of grasses along Gulf Coast beaches.

The wave-stilling devices, about three feet tall, were designed by J.D. Dodd and J.W. Webb, scientists with the exas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The two said the old tires looped together with steel cable has proven effective in eliminating losses of transplants of grass due to washouts.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THERE IS A GOOD CIRCULATION pattern and traffic flow on both floors of this two-story, five bedroom home. The kitchen is a few steps from all the important rooms centered between the service areas of the garage and the formal living-dining areas. The portico front entrance creates a long line extending across the front of the house and eliminates the "box" look often created in two-story design. Plan HA947Y was designed by Herman H. Lowry Painted In Spare Time

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Art history is full of unusual characters, but it rarely has produced one like bluff old L.S. Lowry.

The Royal Academy of Arts is paying Lowry its greatest tribute, a vast one-man show of his work. It is just a few months too late.

Lowry died in February at 88. By then he had become Britain's best-loved painter, one who had done something few artists achieve.

He created an image that stamped itself on a whole nation's mind.

Just the mention of Lowry's name in Britain is enough to bring that trademark image to view — bleak industrial factories of northern England with crowds of faceless people scurrying in front of them.

It is an image as familiar as Big Ben, "part of the visual stock of the nation." Virtually unknown 25 years ago, Lowry's paintings now sell for tens of thousands of dollars.

By profession he was a rent collector and cashier.

Until his retirement at 65, he painted at night and sketched on weekends. Art was his hobby and his obsession, but not the way he earned his living.

Lowry's only "studio" was the front parlor of his humdrum house near Manchester, where he lived alone after his mother's death. He used three basic colors. Most of his painting was by artificial light.

He never married. He went to art school, at night, for 20 years, and didn't have his first one-man show until he was 52.

When fame came, he changed not a bit. With limited education and narrow horizons, he loved brass bands and soccer and viewed art as "damned hard work." At the initial suggestion of the current retrospective show, Lowry screwed up his bulbous nose and sniffed:

Lowry's atypical history is traced in 334 paintings and drawings — about one tenth of his total output — loaned by everyone from Queen Elizabeth on down.

Usually a survey of an artist's whole career prompts deep analysis and critical examination. With this gruff, blunt, down-to-earth old man it has mostly inspired affection.

A third of the catalogue is filled with tributes to Lowry from friends and fellow artists. Critics' reviews have been less criticism than adulation.

The Royal Academy, in an unprecedented affectionate touch, even imported a brass band from northern England to play for the opening.

Inevitably the exhibition's major works are the primitive-looking industrial landscapes which every Briton knows.

They are thronged with life; people in blank, anonymous movement. There are no shadows, not as Lowry claimed because they "mess up the composition," but because as a nighttime painter he never studied shadows and simply left them out.

Some are story-telling paintings. Some trap the loneliness Lowry himself knew, that of an individual isolated in a crowd. Many glow with surprising color.

Part of their charm to Britons is that they capture something that is already gone. The dark, satanic cities Lowry painted were vanishing under redevelopment's bulldozers even as he worked.

Lowry painted other subjects — the sea and ships, a few expressionistic portraits, lonely houses and brooding churches. Almost always he shows the works of man, and this eliminated whole categories — no flowers, no commissioned portraits, virtually no nudes or still lifes.

His fame will rest on his industrial scenes and on his gritty character, so typical of England's industrial north.

"His matchstick figures against industrial scenes of the north became folklore long before his death," wrote critic Richard Lay. "Lowry was court painter to the working classes."

The exhibition closes Nov. 14.

Britain's Canal System Draws Tourist Trade

By GREGORY JENSEN

STOKE BRUERNE, England (UPI) — Barely a decade ago, Britain's fastest growing new form of recreation and leisure was a blot on the landscape, a useless relic of the Industrial Revolution.

Now canals are booming again, thriving in a way their builders would not have believed.

Two million people, including Americans and other foreign tourists, cruised the canals last year on vacation or weekend trips. Hordes more came for fishing or picnicking or hiking along the 2,000 miles of waterways.

Boat-hire companies have mushroomed on the canals—there are more than 300 now, renting narrow craft specially designed for the slim canals. A trickle of trade has become a flood of business for canalside pubs and shops.

Rental boats come in all shapes, sizes and prices. A few companies rent boats powered the old-way-by a horse pulling along a canalside towing path. Many offer all-inclusive cruises in self-powered canalboat "hotels," including meals and shore excursions. Do-it-yourself cruisers can be anything from a modest two-berth to a pair of 70-foot narrowboats, one towed by the other, to sleep 50 or more.

An ideal place to see what the canals have become is at Stoke Bruerne, a sleepy stone-built village 65 miles north of London.

Running past it is a stretch of the Grand Union canal with all the peace and charm that attracts today's canal enthusiasts.

Here the canal stairsteps down a series of old-fashioned locks. A thatched pub snuggles against a humpbacked bridge, and cottages like doll's houses line the banks.

At the end of the line is a three-story canalside mill which now houses a Waterways Museum telling the remarkable story of the canals and their almost-lost world.

Their story begins in 1760, just when the Industrial Revolution's appetite for coal to power new machines was becoming enormous. The Duke of Bridgewater built the first canal to Manchester, and it cut the price of coal there in half. Within 50 years, central England was laced with canals.

"The canals brought about immense changes in our economy and way of life," said a museum booklet.

Pencil-slim canals required specially narrow boats, 70 feet long and only 7 feet wide. The canal people developed their own architecture, their own slang and songs, their own law.

But canal profits dwindled when the steam engine was invented and the railroads took over. Bargemen economized by moving families on board their craft, and virtually a separate nation of "boat people" grew up.

"The boat folk formed a closely knit community, much intermarried," the museum says. "There was a tradition for everything, from the placing of their painted water cans to the intricate rope work (of shock absorbers)."

Boat people had their own costumes — fancy white bonnets for women, which changed permanently to black when Queen Victoria died — and unique crocheted caps for the head and ears of horses which pulled their boats.

The canal community even developed its own art style. It was called "roses and castles" after the subjects it always portrayed. It was painted onto every available surface and utensil, and is much prized today.

There are traditional roses and castles all over the rear section of a "narrowboat" just inside the Waterways Museum entrance. This section is a miniature floating home, complete to the coal burning kitchen stove, and furnished with ingenious spit and polish.

Canal people were born on these boats, married on them, died on them.

But now nearly all the "boat people" are gone. Their costumes, their art work and their story are museum exhibits at Stoke Bruerne and London's Victoria and Albert. Their songs and way of life live only in a group like the floating Mikron Theater, which tours canals telling their history.

And now, although commercial traffic never quite died, the canals have become an increasingly popular form of recreation, an away-from-it-all escape, seeing an England not visible from a car, train or plane.

"What could be nicer," said a member of the British Waterways Board which runs the canals, "than to glide over the water watching the countryside slowly drift by?"

Motivation Can Affect Injuries

HOUSTON (UPI) — An athlete who plays football for the wrong reasons is more likely to get hurt, an expert in athletic injuries says.

Dr. Thomas Moore, a clinical associate professor at the University of Texas Health Science Center, says personal motivation is healthier than peer or family pressure.

Moore also says athletes who remain in good condition and who are "up for" an all-out contest are more apt to avoid injury.

Library Society Hosts Students

Chapter president Nelda Caddell of Carthage welcomed guests and introduced the following officers: Kit Johnson of Wilson, Betsy Postel of Raeford, Liz Savage of Grifton and Sharon Smith of Mount Olive.

Speakers at the event included Dr. Gene Lanier, chairman of the ECU Department of Library Science, who addressed the group on the history of Alpha Beta Alpha, and faculty advisor Ludi Johnson, who discussed past and present projects and activities.

CB Offers Talk Outlet

Editor's Note: The writer of the following has a Ph.D. in psychology and recently got a CB radio for his birthday.

By SALVATORE DIDATO
For the Associated Press

With all the interest in CBs, one must wonder just what causes consumers to plunk down anywhere from $50 to several thousand dollars for a set which gives them the exclusive right to speak with strangers. It's an intriguing psychology.

There's no question that talking with strangers on CB has a wide appeal. When Betty Ford greeted radio buffs with "Hello, First Momma here," she became the most famous speaker on the nation's chattiest party-line.

The citizens' band radio is the fastest growing communication medium since the telephone. Half of the 15 million sets now in operation were bought within the past 18 months or so. By the end of 1976, the industry expects sales to rocket over $1 billion.

One explanation for the rage, no doubt, has to do with our impersonal society. The fact is, we don't have the relaxed, easy manner of relating face to face with others which we enjoyed 50 years ago.

The new camaraderie of the airwaves verifies that a CBer will readily speak to strangers about the most detailed minutiae, even when in a hurry to get through traffic. These, ironically, are the same strangers he might not say more than five words to in a bus, coffee shop or hotel lobby.

In addition, willingness to help emerges more quickly toward a CBer who is broken down on a highway than it does toward to someone who, like Kitty Genovese, is imperiled on a city street. The Genovese syndrome (she was murdered in a celebrated case in which more than 40 New Yorkers heard her screams and did nothing) is simply our fear of involvement coupled with a feeling that somebody else will help. But somehow on the highway it's different. The new CB ethos gives us options we don't enjoy elsewhere.

When we CBers are emplored by a stranger in trouble, we feel individually linked with him, yet we can choose involvement without identity. (Most CBers use only their handle). Anonymous Samaritan acts are not only valued but respected. We can relay a message for help, then tune out if we wish.

CB radio is a kind of fantasy "trip" in which we hear what the world is saying, eavesdropping, as it were, on humanity at large. We are riskng that we may be bored by the drone of it's chit-chat, but on the other hand, we may possibly profit from it's practical wisdom.

It's an electronic lottery through which all may speak regardless of their status in life. It's the first communication leveler in history. A flick of the switch and "Breaker 2, Breaker 2. What's your handle, good buddy?," invites any banker, farmer or stock clerk of any race, creed, color or educational level to enter into conversation.

Thus, despite the drawbacks of the conversational graffiti which crowds the 23 channels and charges that CB jams television and hi-fi sets, the contagion of chatter continues unabated. And much to the benefit of the public.

For example, in Kansas, deaths caused by sleeping drivers have declined in the past two years. Police attribute it to CB radio callers who report nodding drivers weaving along the highway. In a six-month period in 1974, the Missouri Highway Patrol received 664 CB calls and made 221 arrests, most for drunken driving. Among those apprehended, were 21 wanted criminals. Police there say that CB calls, which pinpoint the site of an accident or fire, help to reduce the response time by one-third compared with three years ago.

Obviously, bringing awareness to others can be a satisfying adventure from some persons. Operating a CB radio meets their needs for power, competence and authority. It's participative radio at its best, and it offers a chance for civic pride over a deed well-done.

It's hard to predict if the CBs will vanish as fast as the hula hoop, but one thing is certain, it does satisfy a need in many to relate to others.

Lonnie Creamer, a heavy-duty trucker from Spartansburg, S.C., seems to sum it all up when he says: "My CB radio is a friendship maker, bringing the whole wide world just a little step closer."

Inmates Erected Prized Facility

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Sam Houston State University students of criminal justice attend classes in a building erected almost entirely by inmates of the nearby state prison.

University officials describe the $7.3 million Criminal Justice Center, opened this fall, as "the largest criminal justice teaching facility in the world, as well as the most complete and modern."

They say the facility featuring a 98-room hotel for visiting corrections employes, a 487-seat auditorium, two libraries, a courtroom and crime lab would have cost $20 million if privately built.

Clearinghouse For Offenders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has awarded Texas $291,674 to establish a clearinghouse to identify job and training opportunities available to law offenders in San Antonio and Dallas.

The clearinghouse will contain data on educational programs and other services that meet the social and welfare needs of offenders.

Labor Day, celebrated the first Monday in September to honor the workers of the country, dates back to 1882.

Experience In Black Art

"FOREVER FREE"—This lacquered cloth over wood sculpture, done in 1933 by Sargent Johnson (1887-1967) is included in an exhibit, "Two Centuries of Black American Art," a survey of the contribution of black painters, sculptors and artisans to the nation's art.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Two Centuries of Black American Art," an exhibit that opened recently at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art prior to a national tour, is a comprehensive survey of the black contribution to the arts of America.

It includes more than 200 works by 63 painters, sculptors and artisans, ranging from colonial days to the modern era.

The exhibition seeks to fill in a long-standing gap in the national consciousness of the black experience in America, according to its curator, David Driskell, chairman of the Art Department at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

While black composers, dancers, singers, poets and writers have experienced a steadily growing acceptance, Driskell points out, the work produced by black Americans in the fine, decorative and building arts has remained comparatively obscure and is considered apart from the mainstream of American creativity.

Carrying out its aim, the definitive survey assembled by Driskell combines a broad representation of works by artists who have achieved some degree of recognition, with a generous sampling of black art that has been relatively unknown or incompletely understood and appreciated until now.

One of the exhibition's prime rediscoveries, presented photographically, is the impact of the work of black artisans on the architecture and building crafts of the early American South.

Tracing black American craftsmanship from its 18th-century origin in intricate African metalwork to its current state of sophistication and complexity, the exhibition "effectively counteracts the long prevailing notions that black art is confined to 'primitivism' or, more recently, 'social protest'," Driskell says.

"It demonstrates a wide diversity of artistic skills, rooted in African craftsmanship and creatively adapted to continental and American forms," he adds.

Works of all orientations — folk and classical, ethnic and universal, realistic and imaginative — are included in the exhibit. Such historically important movements as the "Negro Renaissance" of the 1920s and 1930s are amply represented; major works by virtually every leading American artist also are on view.

There is an excellent representation of the black woman as an artist, as seen through the works of Lois M. Jones, Selma Burke and Alma Thomas, all of whom have been interviewed by black filmmaker and historian Carlton Moss for a film documentary of the exhibition.

A number of objects are on public view for the first time. Highlights include a daguerreotype portrait by Jules Lion of the famous naturalist and illustrator John J. Audubon, and previously unseen works by David Butler and Clementine Hunter.

The exhibition has been made possible through grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and Philip Morris Inc. After closing in Los Angeles it is scheduled to appear in three other cities next year: Atlanta, Jan. 8 through Feb. 20; Dallas, March 30 through May 15; and Brooklyn, N.Y., June 25 through Aug. 21.

Look Ahead To Energy Imports

HOUSTON (UPI) — The United States will be importing one-fifth of its energy by 1990, according to a Shell Oil Co. report.

"While in 1974, the nation was about 16 per cent dependent on imported energy, Shell forecasts that in 1990 20 per cent of our total energy will be imported," experts say in "The National Energy Outlook 1980-1990."

The report, issued in September, also said new sources of energy such as oil shale and the sun will begin to be developed but, barring surprises, their impact will be small.

Has A Use For Fan's Bequest

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Singer Bobby Vinton, who received $8,650 from the will of an Alameda, Calif., fan, says the money will be used to set up a scholarship fund for Polish-American students at Duquesne University.

The money was bequeathed to Vinton by Martha I. Visser, 72, who died earlier this month. She had seen him perform in San Francisco and was impressed by his pride in being of Polish descent.

The terms of the bequest gave Vinton, who attended Duquesne, the idea for the scholarship fund.

PRICES FLUCTUATE

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Sheep and lamb prices continue to fluctuate at the super market but the trend is not unusual, reports the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

One reason for the instability in prices is sheep and lamb production is seasonal and causes problems with packers, say livestock marketing specialists.
