

Economic Indicators Mail Delivery Improving Climb In November

BY R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The government's index of leading economic indicators increased by 1 per cent in November, the second consecutive monthly rise, pointing to improved growth in the nation's economy in months ahead.

But the government also reported today that index revisions for earlier months showed that it declined in July, August and September. Many economists say a three-month decline in the index could foreshadow a recession.

However, the indicator's index, which is designed to predict future economic trends, improved sharply during the past two months. It increased by six-tenths of 1 per cent in October following a decline of six-tenths of 1 per cent in September.

The latest index probably will figure prominently in President-elect Carter's considerations of what to do about the nation's economy. Carter may decide the economy needs less government help if statistics point to improved economic growth in the coming months.

The index fell two-tenths of 1 per cent in August and one-tenth of 1 per cent in July. Nearly all of the recent monthly reports were sharply revised from the original estimates.

The Commerce Department last month reported the October index was unchanged from September.

Contributing most to the 1 per cent increase in November was an improvement in the job layoff rate, which declined to 1.3 per cent from October's 1.6 per cent.

Also showing improvements among the 12 individual statistics tabulated for the index were the average work week, up 40.1 hours from 39.8 hours the previous month, new orders for manufactured and consumer goods, an increase in building permits, an increase in cash and other liquid assets, and an increase in sensitive prices.

Categories that fell during the month were business deliveries, contracts and orders for plants and equipment, stock prices and the money supply. Two categories, changes in inventories and net business formation, were not completed in time for inclusion in the November index.

The over-all composite index of leading indicators, as it is known officially, stood in November at 127.5 of the 1967 average of 100.

The Commerce Department also issued reports for the first time on two other indexes. One is the so-called composite index of coincident indicators, which increased by 1.1 per cent in November. The second, the composite index of lagging indicators, decreased by four-tenths of 1 per cent.

Coincident indicators are designed to give a picture of how the economy is doing in a given month, while the lagging indicators are supposed to confirm signals given off earlier by the leading indicators.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service says its statistics show that mail delivery is getting faster and "service to the American people improved in 1976."

In its annual report, issued Tuesday, the mail agency said it reduced the average delivery time for first-class letters to 1.53 days in the fiscal year that ended June 30. In the previous year, the average was 1.57 days.

However, the Postal Service made no mention of a General Accounting Office report last February that said the old Post Office Department once had a slightly faster average, 1.5 days in fiscal 1969.

"The Postal Service made tangible progress in improved and more reliable service to the American people," Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said in a message in the annual report.

The postmaster general said first-class letters mailed to an address in the same local area were delivered the next day 95 per cent of the time.

In addition, letters going up to 600 miles were delivered by the second day 92 per cent of the time and letters going farther were delivered by the third day 90 per cent of the time, he said.

Bailar said this was an improvement from the previous year in all three categories.

Bailar also noted, "Despite improved service statistics, we recognize that some mistakes and delays are inevitable in a system that handles 300 million pieces of mail a day."

The GAO has said a significant cause of delays is mail sent to the wrong place by letter-sorting machines.

Bailar again urged citizens with complaints about mail service to fill out a "consumer service card," available at post offices and from letter carriers.

The cards have resulted "in such things as altering window hours, relocating street collection boxes, repairing faulty self-service vending equipment and identifying service bottlenecks," he said.

Durham Sniper Suspect Faces Unrelated Charges

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A man who was arrested in connection with an investigation of recent sniper shootings has been arraigned in state District Court on unrelated assault charges.

James Willie Grace, 31, of Durham, was charged with three felony counts of assault with a deadly weapon against three persons at a Durham store and a misdemeanor count. Police said no one was injured in the incident at the store. The misdemeanor is allegedly impersonating a police officer in a previous incident.

After Grace testified at his arraignment that he was indigent, Gene Dodd was appointed as his attorney.

State District Judge J. Milton

Read Jr. ordered Grace held under a $10,200 bond, pending his trial in Durham County Superior Court Jan. 6.

Grace, a former mental patient, was arrested Monday night in Clayton, about 35 miles southeast of Durham, shortly after his picture was shown on a television news program.

A dispatcher for the Clayton police department said officers received a tip from at least two persons who recognized Grace's picture and told police they knew where he was.

After police took Grace to the Durham police department they questioned him for about six hours about four sniper attacks that left two persons dead and two others wounded during a 12-day period earlier this month.

Durham Police Chief Jon P. Kindice said the three charges against Grace "involved an assault by a weapon upon three other people that took place the same night as Mr. (Herbert) Bradshaw was murdered and in the same locality."

Bradshaw, 68, a retired newspaperman, was shot to death in his home last Wednesday night in the fourth sniper assault. Officers have maintained that there was no apparent motive for the shootings.

Kindice declined to say if the arrest of Grace would be the final one in the sniper case.

Grace was recently released from a state mental institution at Butner, where he had been committed Oct. 1.

Carter Warns Of 'Lowered' Expectations

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter says those who think "we have automatic answers or easy answers to tough questions would be misleading themselves," and several of his key advisers are beginning to offer statements that seem geared to lower Americans' expectations.

In a television interview taped earlier for broadcast today, Carter expressed confidence that "the things that we have promised during the campaign can be delivered."

But his key aides and advisers, gathered at this island retreat for preinaugural discussions, were offering statements that would sound cautious to any who had anticipated quick changes from the new administration.

Bowles Studied For Army Sec.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles says he has been discussed before the transition team of President-elect Jimmy Carter as a possible selection for secretary of the Army, but he commented, "I ain't brought the suitcase out of the attic."

Bowles, a Democrat who failed in a bid for the governorship against Republican James Holshouser in 1972, said Carter's talent hunters have gone so far as to check with the Tar Heel congressional delegation about a possible appointment.

He is currently board chairman for United Title Insurance, and said he is not actively seeking a job in Washington.

As for the Army post, he commented: "I had no illustrious Army career, and I don't know that I will...if something were to come along, I'd be interested in it. I'd think long and hard."

In World War II, he said, he was a corporal who did not go overseas.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, told reporters Tuesday that it would be unrealistic to expect promised defense budget savings of $5 billion to $7 billion prior to the 1979 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, 1978.

Defense Secretary-designate Harold Brown also said he saw no chance of such a defense reduction "from this year's budget to next year's budget, for example."

Joseph A. Califano Jr., Carter's choice to be secretary of health, education and welfare, almost simultaneously was warning that full implementation of promised welfare reform may have to await a healthier economy that would provide tax dollars to pay for it.

During his long 1976 campaign, Carter repeatedly spoke of saving $5 billion to $7 billion in defense spending by cutting waste and inefficiency. But he never said when such a savings could be realized.

He talked at least once about being ready to move toward welfare reform soon after taking office.

But in convening the unusual, if not unique, preinaugural cabinet meeting here Tuesday, Carter stressed his determination to deliver on his campaign promises and to impress his cabinet nominees with what he sees as their responsibility to help him keep his word.

Carter said, "Because my word of honor is at stake ... if we should default on them it would be a very serious thing for me personally, and I think for the respect and confidence of the American people in their own government."

He said he does not anticipate that happening, however. He also said Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale will enjoy unprecedented authority and will serve as his "chief staff person." That means, Carter said, that everyone on the White House staff has been informed that Mondale as well as Carter will be their boss.

Threatening Bill Collector Could Now Lose His Job

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next bill collector who threatens you with your job is more likely to lose his own.

And he could be fired for calling you in the middle of the night or on Sunday morning, swearing at you, or prying without authorization into computerized data on your private life.

That is the thrust — and the hard reality in the case of one of the nation's largest debt collection services — of an unprecedented consent order unveiled today by the Federal Trade Commission.

Targeted in the case is a group of Diners Club subsidiaries, all tied to an outfit called National Account Systems, Inc., of Chicago, which offers dunning and collection services in over 50 cities.

The FTC staff leveled a host of allegations against the agencies. One is that they used telephone trickery with secret codes to effectively steal information about debtors from an unnamed company that runs a giant computer databank for insurance companies and credit institutions.

Other charges ranged from using "abusive and obscene" language, lying to debtors about what would happen if they didn't pay off, contacting employers to increase pressure and failing to comply with the Truth in Lending Act when arranging for deferred payments.

The respondents are, in addition to National Account Systems, the NAS Creditors Service, Inc., the National Account System of Milwaukee, and A.B. Hartman, Inc. All share the same headquarters office in Chicago.

Some industry experts believe that together they represent the largest network of bill collectors in the nation.

Under terms of the consent order, the firms agreed under penalty of fines ranging to $10,000 to cease and desist from all practices alleged in the FTC staff complaint and, moreover, to summarily fire any employee who uses such tactics on his or her own.

The agreement does not constitute an admission of wrongdoing, nor does it carry any penalties for past practices. The parent corporation, Diners Club of New York, has agreed to be liable for violations and to closely monitor all NAS employees for compliance, the FTC said.

The case is a landmark in the enforcement of new federal laws aimed at protecting Americans from harassment and abuses of records on their private lives.

It marks the first time the FTC has issued an order against anyone for obtaining credit information under false pretenses.

Lindsay Warren Dies At Age 87

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Lindsay C. Warren who became comptroller general of the United States after long service in Congress, died Tuesday night in Beaufort County Memorial Hospital. He was 87.

Warren for many years was one of North Carolina's most influential and powerful politicians in Raleigh and Washington. He represented the first North Carolina District in the U.S. House of Representatives for 16 years.

He was placed in the comptroller's post by President Franklin Roosevelt and held it for almost 14 years before retiring in 1954. In the post he served as a "watchdog" over federal spending.

Warren returned to North Carolina and at the age of 68 won election to the state Senate where he had begun his political career in 1917.

He explained his return to politics by saying he was "irked by boredom."

Known by his colleagues as "the lion of Beaufort," Warren always received total attention when he rose to speak in the legislative halls.

After serving in the 1959 and 1961 legislative sessions, he retired from public life.

He is survived by his widow, Emily H. Warren; a daughter, Mrs. Emily Warren Jones of Wilson; two sons, Lindsay Warren Jr. of Goldsboro and Charles F. Warren of Washington, D.C. and four grandchildren.

CHECK-CASHING PROBLEMS

Why do banks refuse to cash your checks if you don't have an account with that bank? It seems that if I didn't have an account anywhere, I couldn't ever get a check cashed. A.P.

According to Jerry Powell of NCNB, check-cashing is a problem for banks and customers alike.

"A check drawn on an out-of-town bank is just a piece of paper," he said.

"It takes a few days for the check to get through the banking system, and if the funds are insufficient it takes a few more days to get back. In the meantime, the check-writer can skip town.

"Unfortunately, the honest people are penalized. All banks' losses are tremendous from this problem."

Powell suggested if your bank is out of town and you are planning to be in town for a while, you should set up a local account. This is especially helpful to students, he said, and can prevent a lot of problems with check-cashing.

If you are planning to be in town for a fixed period of time, such as a month or six weeks, you can have your bank write a letter to the local bank explaining that you have sufficient funds. The local bank will then generally cash your checks.

To cash a check made out to you, Powell said, it is best to cash it at the bank on which it is drawn. And to cash a personal check on an out-of-town bank, you can also have a friend with a local account co-sign the check for you.

Powell said banks are generally willing to cash checks in an emergency situation. He also said some banks will cash out-of-town checks drawn on their branch banks in other parts of the state.

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 55 Years"

Small Family Grocery Forced To Close Doors

DEAR ABBY: After running a small, clean, home-owned grocery store for 36 years, I am going out of business. The wife and I worked hard—sometimes 15 hours a day, seven days a week—but with the large chain supermarkets moving in all around, we couldn't survive.

We gave people credit when things were rough. Why not? They were our neighbors, our friends. We cashed their checks and never turned anybody down when they came around with tickets for raffles, church suppers, school plays, etc. We gave to all the worthy causes and even placed their posters in our store to advertise fund-raising events. (No supermarkets around here did that. Against company rules!)

We've opened our store after hours to accommodate people, yet those same people would drive right by our store to patronize the big markets because they thought they could save a few pennies. They didn't even bother to compare our prices or give us a chance to compete.

So we're going out of business. Abby, please print this so people will realize that the home-owned businesses can't

SAD IN SAVANNAH

DEAR SAD: It's sad indeed. I'm running your letter for all the honest, hard-working little people who deserve a break. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: I need help and don't know where to turn anymore.

My husband and I have been separated for over two years, and I still love him, but there is no chance of our getting back together again.

Abby, how do you stop loving somebody? I've been going to group therapy meetings, but it has not helped to stop the ache in my heart. Misery may love company, but it doesn't make me feel any better.

Maybe a reader who has gone through the same thing can give me some suggestions.

ACHING HEART

DEAR ACHING: You can't "kill" love. It has to die by itself. Don't dwell on thoughts of him and throw out all the reminders and souvenirs.

Force yourself to think of something else. Keep busy, and don't feel sorry for yourself. Tell yourself you deserve to be happy, and eventually you will be. Good luck.

Candle wax stains always become more prevalent during the holidays, but they can be removed. First, scrape wax from a tablecloth or other fabric with a dull side of a table knife. Place the stained area between paper towels and press with a warm iron. Then, with fabric face down on paper towels, sponge any remaining stain with a dry cleaning solvent. Let dry and launder. If stain persists, soak in an enzyme pre-soak product or oxygen bleach. Wash again, using chlorine bleach if safe for fabric. If any stain is left, apply wet spotter (one part glycerine, one part liquid hand dishwashing detergent, and eight parts water) and a few drops of ammonia. Let it stand for 30 minutes or so, then rinse well.

Seasonal decorations should be clean before storing, so they are ready for use next year! Launder all washables, such as tablecloths, a sheet used as a tree skirt or Christmas stockings. Spot clean non-washables with a dry-cleaning solvent.

Clean ornaments and decorations with a sudsy sponge, if washable. Wipe with a clean damp cloth. Lights should also be wiped clean. Be sure to disconnect electrical items beforehand. Repair any electric cords before storing.

Use strong boxes with partitions for storage. Label each carton clearly with the contents inside for easy access.

Do not let a car's warm exhaust blow into nearby frozen shrubs. The alternating thawing and freezing can damage or kill valuable plantings. Back the car away from your shrubbery while it is warming up.

Resist the temptation to sprinkle salt on ice-coated steps and walks. To do so can harm nearby shrubs and grass. Once the weather moderates, the ice melts; the salty water can be

Friday Is Last Day To Enlist And Get Education Benefits

By JERRY T. BAULCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Friday is the last day you can enlist in the military and get full GI education benefits at government expense. After 1977 begins, new enlistees will have to contribute some of their own money toward a GI Bill education.

For those joining up after the end of the year there will be a limited voluntary plan under which peacetime GIs will have to contribute some of their military paychecks if they want Uncle Sam to help them through school after discharge. But the Pentagon says thousands of young people have entered service under a delayed entry program. Under that program, they enlist before New Year's Day and will be able to get current GI education benefits so long as they don't uniforms before the end of 1977. The Army, the biggest service, says it has some 30,000 of these delayed entry enlistees signed up. Those who sign up for the new education program will have to contribute $50 to $75 monthly from their pay, up to a maximum of $2,700 to receive GI educational aid. The Veterans Administration will match each $1 paid by the GI with $2 when going-to-school time arrives, making a kitty of up to $8,100 per person available. Educational payments will be limited either to the number of months the serviceman or servicewoman actually contributed, or to 36 months, whichever is less.

The amount of each individual's end-of-service educational fund will be divided by the number of months to which he or she is entitled. An ex-GI with the maximum fund of $8,100 who had contributed to the fund for 36 months would get $225 per month to cover his educational expenses.

Under the Vietnam era GI Bill that comes to an end on Friday, a single veteran can get $292 per month or $347 if married, with payments of up to 45 months. And the GI doesn't have to contribute from his paycheck.

The new program is a five-year experiment as part of the all-volunteer military concept. Program administrators say they will study the interest potential inductees have in the program when they must contribute $50 to $70 out of the $374 monthly recruit salary.

The secretary of defense does have authority to augment the VA payments for any individual to encourage the person to enter or remain in the armed forces.

Benefits under the new program must be used within 10 years after leaving military service. Unused contributions by an individual will be refunded, the VA said.

Chicago Democrats Still Face Another Selection

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — After picking the late Richard J. Daley's own alderman as temporary mayor in a process denounced by some blacks, Chicago politicians had a choice between two Irish ward leaders to wear Daley's other hat — the county's Democratic chairmanship. Meanwhile, Alderman Roman C. Pucinski, a former congressman, became the first formal candidate Tuesday for the upcoming special election for mayor of the nation's second largest city. Under state law, the election must be held within six months.

Michael A. Bilandic, 53, who was elected interim mayor by his fellow aldermen in the City Council Tuesday, promised to quit politics after that special election is held.

The Cook County Democratic Central Committee was to meet today to pick a new chairman. One contender, Cook County Board president George W. Dunne, has hinted that he would like to be mayor as well. His opponent, Chicago Park District general superintendent Edmund L. Kelly, says he will not be a mayoral candidate.

A sampling of the 50 city ward leaders and 30 suburban township leaders who will choose between the two men found no clear favorite.

Pucinski, 57, said in his announcement that it will not be "enough to run on the record of Mayor Daley," who died of a heart attack in his doctor's office on Dec. 20.

"It's an imposing record, but the new leadership will have to develop new solutions to new problems that will develop in the absence of the Daley leadership," said Pucinski, a leader of the City Council's Polish bloc.

Mayor Bilandic has been an uncontroversial figure, but his selection was stormy. Although only two of 48 aldermen voted against him, the result was widely believed to be part of a deal.

Black spectators in the galleries booed and gave the "thumbs down" sign when Alderman Wilson Frost, council president pro tempore, bowed out of his week-long candidacy to succeed Daley.

His bid had attracted a coalition of blacks and aroused enthusiasm on the predominantly black South Side. But his supporters were angered by reports that he accepted a deal to relinquish his bid for the mayoralty in exchange for chairmanship of the Finance Committee.

When Alderman Ross Lathrop tried to nominate Frost in today's election, a Croatian-American and the first non-Irish mayor in 43 years.

Besides Pucinski and Dunne, those mentioned as likely entrants in the mayoral election include Alderman Edward R. Vrdolyak, who supported Kelly in today's election; former Alderman William S. Singer, a leader of independent Democrats who was trounced by Daley in the 1975 primary; state Sen. Richard Newhouse, a black who finished third in the 1975 race; former State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan, whose career foundered in the aftermath of a 1969 raid on Black Panthers; and Alderman Edward Burke, who at 34 has become a council insider.

Callaway Plans Colorado Move

MOUNT CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — Former Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway is moving to the Colorado Rockies to become president and chief executive officer of the Crested Butte Development Corp., which manages a resort Callaway and his brother-in-law bought in 1970.

Last year, Callaway resigned as President Ford's campaign manager because of allegations that, while he was in the Pentagon, he misused his office to obtain a favorable U.S. Forest Service ruling allowing expansion of the company's Crested Butte Ski Area.

A spokesman said Tuesday that Callaway will replace his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, as the corporation's chief executive officer. Walton resigned the position Monday, and members of the board elected him to Callaway's former post as chairman.

Tobacco Market Now 'Volatile'

Tobacco prices on the world market have entered a phase of "relative volatility," the Foreign Agricultural Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture reports.

Rising demand, changing consumer taste and more competition are all factors in the situation.

"In recent years prices and price competition have become more significant," according to the report. It said that tobacco prices, once stable, have increased sharply in many markets.

In addition technological advances have made the substitution of cheaper filler-type tobaccos for the higher priced tobaccos possible.

There has also been an improvement in the quality of tobacco produced in other countries, making it more like U. S. grown leaf.

"These factors all have combined to yield more competitive price patterns in recent years," the report said. "The tighter supplies and corresponding higher prices of some types of leaf that have developed highlight the need for timely and accurate forecasts of available supplies and prices."

In our area we have seen record prices paid for tobacco this year. Part of this was eaten up by inflation insofar as the grower is concerned. Part was due to the high support prices for lower stalk leaf which sent large amounts of that tobacco to Stabilization Corp.

As we see it, there are factors at work which are making tobacco grown elsewhere in the world more competitive with the leaf grown in the United States.

We can expect the world wide tobacco market to be far more competitive in the years ahead.

Mrs. Roth Chooses To Be A Chairman

We think we like Mrs. Roxie Roth.

In her 70s, Mrs. Roth was recently elected chairman of the Surry County commissioners... that's chairMAN, the traditional title for the position, and not anything else.

"Somebody called me the chairPERSON," she said. "I said, No, I'm chairMAN."

In addition to serving on the county commissioners she is active in political, church, civic and social work.

We would never dare call her anything but chairMAN.

Heavy Assembly Business

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — What can the business community of North Carolina expect from the 1977 General Assembly?

Speaker-nominee Carl J. Stewart, Jr., D-Gaston, concentrated on money matters in a recent coffee-clatch conversation with leaders of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce.

While not attempting to say precisely what he thinks the Legislature might do, Stewart nonetheless pointed out that he can foresee some general directions from his vantage point.

The issues upcoming — more than any two previous sessions combined — are "so numerous and diverse I hardly know where to begin... I would anticipate between 2,500 and 3,000 pieces of legislation."

Busy Time

"There was a time when two or three strong leaders came to Raleigh and did all the work while the rest of the legislators waited around for the money bills and for the governor to send over his programs... no more," Stewart told the businessmen.

Financially, Stewart finds the state in sound shape with the required balanced budget and indications pointing at a credit balance (surplus) in the neighborhood of as much as $90 million.

That surplus plus increased income from improved economy will provide up to $200 million in new money for next fiscal year; another $100 million the following fiscal year. "My guess is that assuming continued increases in revenues, we will be able to go beyond that."

There will be plenty of money for the "modest proposals" outlined so far by Governor-elect James B. Hunt, Jr., Stewart feels: some $50 million in the biennium for reading; a million or two each for prison construction, community school programs, crime control improvements, and speedy trials.

Tax reform seems certain for debate, with repeal of the inventory and intangibles taxes having a "better chance of passage" than ever before. The problem is replacing the loss for local governments which realize $76 million from the inventory ($36 million from manufacturers, $40 million from retailers) and $31 million from the intangibles taxes.

Could Pass

The intangibles tax, says Stewart, has the best chance of passage. "I question the advisability of maintaining it... there is not that much money in it for local governments after distributing it all across the state."

Veto and a second term for the governor should be submitted to a vote on a constitutional amendment, and may be done except for the proposal's running into that "thirty per cent of the members of the General Assembly who believe the State Constitution is inviolate and ought never under any circumstances be amended," Stewart said.

He personally supports the measures because, "I frankly think the legislative branch is too dominant and should be looked at in some creative fashion... I stand as a minority, but hope to have some influence on the outcome."

Liquor-by-the-drink proponents have told Stewart they will be back with "new economic data and persuasive arguments," even though most legislators are "weary of this issue which is rather risky to their political careers... they would rather risk their careers on issues of more importance." In sum, Stewart sees a "slim chance" of passage.

Stewart foresees major change in the state's insurance law, with the possibility of rates being placed in a supply-demand situation rather than being fixed by a state agency. "I see some movement toward an open system — the setting of rates in the market place. The argument will be made against this that rates would go up in some particular areas as much as 30 or 40 per cent."

Beyond that, Stewart said, the "time has come to look at the office of the Commissioner of Insurance... to explore some new alternatives" such as a separate rating board and a staff to represent the people in matters being considered.

Perfect Football Menu

WASHINGTON—Holiday eating can be divided between large festive lunches and dinners, and meals served during football games. The football fare has been largely ignored as the food pages of newspapers and magazines devote all their space to how to stuff a goose, how to baste a turkey or how to roast a rib.

And yet football eating is far more important to the welfare of the family, and has much greater significance for most people during this merriest time of year.

Here is the perfect football TV menu, one that has been handed down in my family through the generations.

For appetizers we always have a selection of potato chips, in a low glass bowl. (We disdain Pringles which come in a tube with each one the same size. We want a potato chip assortment so our guests will be surprised every time they put one in their mouths.)

Next to the potato chips should be placed a large deep dish (four inches) of salted peanuts. The peanuts should be shelled, otherwise there will be a mess all over the living room as people in their excitement toss the shells all around.

Another hors d'oeuvre which we traditionally serve is M&M's, a colorful candy that looks like medicine pills. The beauty of M&M's during a football game is the surprise factor. You never know whether you're going to get one with chocolate inside or one with a nut. Also, you can hold at least 40 in your hand at one time while watching the tube.

All right, that should take care of the appetizers. In some families the lady of the house adds a guacamole or an onion dip for the potato chips, but very few football watchers have time to dip, and usually get furious at their wives and girlfriends for serving something they can't grab with their fingers without taking their eyes from the set.

The main course of a football dinner is always the traditional can of beer. In order to prepare the beer, you place it in the icebox for six hours so it will be properly chilled. The beer is then put on a tray and brought into the living room. The lady serving the beer must be very careful in carrying it into the living room or den, as the slightest shaking of it will cause the beer to foam when opened.

The serving of beer during a football game can either make or break the traditional football dinner. If the lady of the house walks in front of the set when placing the tray on the coffee table she can ruin the holiday spirit she has worked so hard to achieve. ALWAYS serve the beer BEHIND the viewers and make yourself as unobtrusive as possible. Never say, as you place the beer on the table, "What's the score?" or "Who are the men in the white jerseys?"

After the main course of beer is served—we prefer cans in our house as we find pouring bottled beer into a glass messy—you can serve the traditional condiments that go with it such as buttered popcorn, Fritos and bacon-flavored chips. This should be followed by pistachio nuts, hard candy and Hershey kisses.

For dessert I recommend Poppycock, a unique popcorn covered with molasses and mixed with walnuts. It is absolutely perfect for a third down situation when the ball is on the 15-yard line and it's four yards to go for a first down. Poppycock comes in a can so you can keep it on your lap and not have to reach for it during a crucial play.

Applies Minor Effort

By JAMES H. RUBIN

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

Prodded by a highly publicized request by a senator's widow, President Ford has asked for information that could be used to re-evaluate an amnesty program for Vietnam draft evaders. But administration officials say Ford's effort is minimal.

Ford, vacationing in Vail, Colo., told reporters Tuesday that "we have started the process" of reviewing the amnesty question raised by the widow of Sen. Philip A. Hart. Mrs. Hart said a general amnesty for Vietnam draft resisters and deserters was a final hope of Physicians attending Pope Pius, seriously ill with paralysis and old age complications, searched today for mild sedatives to relieve the Pontiff's pain.

Best informed Vatican sources reported today they are prepared for the death of Pope Pius at any moment.

The condition of the Holy Father was described as "unchanged," a report inspiring hope in prelates simply because no new crisis has arisen.

The Tennessee Valley Authority said today in its annual report it had blazed a trail for a new economic era based on electricity.

This possible key to the future, it said, was founded by applying the principles that have become the badge of success for many American industries, mass production and mass consumption.

A financial statement disclosed the cost of the whole program amounted at the end of the last fiscal year to about $100 million, including Congressional appropriations after deducting "appropriations, not advances," June 30 of about $17,000.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Castro Raises The Stakes

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Cuba's Moscow-financed Africa corps, far from shrinking as Fidel Castro promised last May, has grown to almost 20,000, with alarming indications that hundreds of black Cubans are now "settling in" with Angolan wives for what begins to look like permanent residence.

The exact count of Castro's mercenaries is never given in the controlled Cuban press; nor can troop traffic between Cuba and southern Africa be measured accurately. But intelligence reports from both Cuba and Angola are now showing a rising, permanent Cuban presence. The Communist-backed Angolan government of Agostino Neto has been totally unable to consolidate its hold over the central and southern part of that vast country, requiring Cuban troops.

That raises this disturbing probability: an "Africanized" Cuban military force, highly trained in the use of sophisticated Soviet military equipment, residing in Angola as a friendly force available wherever a new need might arise. Such a need might come tomorrow in Southwest Africa, now trying to achieve complete independence from South Africa as the new nation of Namibia; or it might come the day after tomorrow in white-dominated Rhodesia, where Soviet weapons funneled to black guerrillas through Marxist Mozambique are being used to gain black majority rule.

Indeed, Castro's potential for troublemaking in his announced purpose of using Cuban military power to advance "the world revolution" seems today almost limitless.

in southern Africa. Accordingly, President-elect Carter must deal with the Cuban challenge in Africa which has been ignored by the Democratic Congress.

Angola was Castro's first major African venture in trying to carry out his pledge to advance the world revolution (spelled out in the oath of allegiance for Cuban army officers). Castro's flexibility displayed in Angola shows that, unless the West is willing to confront him directly, his threat to dominate emerging countries of black Africa may prove to be the transcendent political event in the post-colonial period.

For example, reports from qualified sources in Cuba now indicate that Castro is freer of Soviet influence in his African intrusion than originally thought. "The Russians tried to get him to pull back months ago, but all he did was make a promise and then break it," one Western expert told us.

That promise was Castro's letter to then Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme, timed to coincide with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's visit to Stockholm. The letter pledges Castro to end his occupation of Angola.

Instead, first-hand reports indicate that the Cuban Africa Corps is at its highest point today — just under 20,000 men. There are two plausible explanations:

First, Castro is deliberately using southern Africa to thin out his own black population (Cuba is about 11 per cent black, 53 per cent mulatto, the rest white). Second, the success of anti-Neto guerrilla operations under the overall direction of Dr. Jonas Savimbi, the non-Communist leader, rules out withdrawal of Cuban forces. Savimbi can now put 10,000 guerrilla troops in the field and control an area roughly the size of Pennsylvania.

Experts here lean toward the second of these two explanations. But they worry more about the first, because of its horrendous implications for the future. The "settling in" of the black Cubans, including marriages to Angolan women, points to a new power equation in southern Africa.

A more or less permanent Cuban Africa Corps available for duty wherever the occasion required, with establish-

Other Editors Say Time Is Ripe

(Washington Daily News)

It would appear to us that the time is now ripe for changing the age old concept of the Electoral College.

In the Electoral college so many Americans see a "horse and buggy" approach. A lot of questions are asked all the time about it, and somehow those in power in our country never seem quite able to explain why we have it nor justify why we keep it.

President-elect Jimmy Carter won both in the Electoral College and with the popular vote. So we have no existing controversy surrounding his election. It is agreed that by any system we care to choose that Jimmy Carter was elected. So that very fact gives us the atmosphere to make a change which would tend to modernize the present system.

We know of no change more democratic than that of using the popular vote in our country. We keep hearing the talk about using congressional districts and sing a watered down version of the Electoral College. And certainly if we seek to use congressional districts instead of states as the electoral base, all we will be doing is watering down the present system without getting rid of the evils involved.

When in America today under our present system it is possible for a man to get the largest popular vote and still not be elected president, it is time we made the change. It has happened in our history. It happened with Grover Cleveland. It happened with Samuel J. Tilden. It could happen again.

We believe that very little real opposition would develop right now since Mr. Carter's victory. And now is the time to get the job done. If we wait another four or eight years and then if we have a controversy surrounding an election, we then have a bigger controversy surrounding a proposed change.

If we are seeking to take ever greater pride in our democracy, then we ought to take ever more serious steps to give this nation the purest democracy we have to offer. And electing the president of these United States on the basis of the popular vote rather than on the basis of an electoral system involving each state is surely a step in the direction of both greater and better democracy.

The fact that the Electoral College has just met in the 50 states and elected Mr. Carter serves to focus attention on the system. And well it should.

We believe government, democracy, and Americans will be better served by direct election of our president through popular vote.

We ought to try it.

Strength For Today

BELIEVING IS SEEING

A famous preacher of a past generation used to say that in the world seeing is believing, but in the things of the spirit, believing is seeing.

This was his way of saying that the most important element of religion is faith. We never understand a spiritual truth until we believe it. Religious certainty comes not so much by action of the mind as by action of the will; not so much through reason as through a changed life.

One reason why religion is not as influential today as it once was is because people have busied themselves too much in trying to explain it, and in explaining it they have ignored some of its most vital truths. Blind acceptance of a theological proposition is never a good thing, but we should realize that there is much about religion that can never be explained.

By a mysterious process, however, a difficult and even contradictory religious proposition becomes understandable to us when we put it into practice and find that somehow it works.

A New Look, In Just A Month

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It happened in a mere month's time, a view of the economy so vastly changed that at first one might have thought it was two different people talking or, if not that, two different subjects being discussed.

It was the same person, however, and the same subject. A month ago the President-elect thought the economy, his biggest challenge, was "bad and growing worse." This week he was "fairly encouraged."

Did economic events change that much? Some determinants did indeed change. The oil price increase wasn't as punishing as had been expected. Some of the leading indicators have looked better. Monetary policy is now seen to be quite accommodative to growth. Personal income figures, in addition, have been more encouraging. A two-month decline in industrial production ended in November. And retail sales have shown a bit more zip than they had demonstrated earlier.

But it doesn't take real economic events to change views, as is demonstrated each day now by the analyses distributed by brokerage houses, banks, universities, research organizations and others.

A statistical revision, for example, can have the same impact as an event. And, as usual, these revisions have been issuing forth in their usual volume. Making an enormous change in some analyses was the upward revision in retail sales statistics for October. Suddenly, a ray of sunshine pierced those dreary figures, which had shown so little luster.

You'll catch the mood if you scan the latest analysis being circulated this week by Smith Barney, Harris Upham Co., the brokerage and investment banking house. It begins with the headline: "Economy Better Than Expected," and proceeds to tell subscribers that:

"The economy is progressing better in the current quarter than had been expected earlier. Real Gross National Product growth is now estimated to rise about 4 per cent versus our earlier estimates of 2-3 per cent."

Why so? "This change

stems from the upward revision in retail sales statistics for October and the strong advance in November."

But what goes up can come down, and the country has been through this many times before. Retail sales are almost always being revised, and that tends to make the reviser more important than the underlying event.

Still, the economic mood changed with every figure, and it is changing again, and we really can't be sure until we see the revisions whether the recent appearance of good news is the real thing or its statistical ghost.

For the moment though, it cannot be argued: Things are looking better, and as the President-elect said, it's fairly encouraging.

Georgians Complain 'Political Revenge' By Ford

THEIR MONEY FOR A KILLER — Lee Rigdon and his daughters sit before television cameras after offering their $5,000 life savings for help in catching the killer of their wife and mother. In ATLANTA (AP) — Political revenge and discrimination against the South prompted President Ford to reject plans giving the South direct air service to Europe, Georgia officials charged Tuesday.

"We really feel it's a slap at the South because the South rebuffed him so unanimously in the election," said Gov. George Busbee.

"This decision prolongs a pattern of regulatory discrimination against the South and it is high time the transportation policy of this nation recognizes that Atlanta is as much entitled to be a gateway city for international air travel as the cities in the Northeast," the governor said.

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, whose city's airport was one of six in the South which the Civil Aeronautics Board recommended be given international service, called the decision "politically motivated" because Ford was beaten by a Georgian Nov. 2.

However a senior spokesman at the White House said the charges were "totally without merit." He said the staff recommendation to return the plan to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) for more study was made in November, but action was delayed until Tuesday to avoid any appearance of political retaliation.

The CAB-approved plan would have provided new airline passenger service from 12 U.S. cities—six in the South—to Europe. Cities to be given new service are Atlanta, Cleveland, Dallas-Ft. Worth, Denver, Houston, Kansas City, Miami, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Tampa.

The plan also would have given Delta Air Lines and Northwest Airlines their first transatlantic routes and provided competition for international service into New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

In returning the plan to the CAB, the President said the board did not give enough consideration to economic matters and the wishes of foreign countries.

Some foreign governments, whose acceptance of U.S. air carrier route awards is required, "are presently dissatisfied with the governing bilateral arrangements," he said. "We shall continue to support reliance on competitive aviation," said Ford. "We recognize, however, that the views of other nations may differ and that our policies must be modified in some instances in order to reach necessary international accommodation."

The CAB, he said, should develop a transatlantic system that "will best serve the long-term interests of the public, the financial strength and competitiveness of our private U.S. international carriers and overall U.S. international aviation policy."

Although a White House spokesman said returning the plans to the CAB will mean "no effective delay" in international airline service to the South, a spokesman for Delta, which would have gotten Atlanta to London flights under the plan, said it could set things back up to a year.

If the CAB study takes "the form of a full, reopened hearing before the five-member agency, we could be talking about six months to a year," said Jim Ewing.

"Also, we have an incoming administration, and maybe a reconstituted CAB. We just don't know what will happen. We will have to wait now until we see what they're going to do," Ewing said.

"As we understand it," he added, "If Ford had left it in his drawer, (President-elect Jimmy) Carter could have signed it. We don't know what Carter will do. He never accepts anything on face value. He goes into it real deeply."

Carter spokesman Rex Granum said, "It would be premature to count on how Carter might act in this case."

Cold A Boon For Farmers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A long cold winter would be hard on city dwellers, but it could be a boon to North Carolina farmers.

The farmers are hopeful that a long spell of 10 to 12 degree weather, possibly accompanied by some snow will assist them in their endless battle against bugs — especially fleas and boll weevils.

After three rather mild winters, the destructive insects threatened this year to become a serious problem.

This winter's cold so far hasn't been much help.

"It's got to get down to 10 or 12 degrees and stay there for three or four days before you get that frost line down deep enough," said Charles Elks of the market division of the state Department of Agriculture.

The frost line — the depth to which moisture in the ground is frozen — needs to be about a foot below the surface before it does much harm to the bugs or their eggs.

Elks said a long cold snap wouldn't hurt crops much, unless it came after a warm spell in which fruit trees began to come out of their winter dormancy.

That, Elks said, would leave the trees vulnerable to damage from the cold as they were last year when the state's peach crop was devastated.

Congress flatly refused to face this fact a year ago when President Ford pleaded for an American response. Now, Castro's intentions are far clearer than they were then. It will be up to Jimmy Carter and a new Congress whether Castro continues to enjoy unlimited initiatives in the vast tip of the continent which controls the strategic tanker routes for the West's supply of oil.

The thing to remember while serving the traditional TV football dinner is that, while beer is served as the main course, it can also be drunk with appetizers, dessert and as an after-dinner drink. The lady of the house must always make sure the empty cans are removed and replaced with full ones while the game is in progress. The best way to spoil this nutritious festive occasion is to make one of the TV spectators go to the icebox and get his own beer.

When it's done right, the TV football dinner can be the highlight of the holiday season and one every man and male child will remember for years to come.

her husband, who died Sunday of cancer.

The Justice Department said Tuesday that at the request of the administration, figures were sent to the White House on Ford's own clemency program, which began in 1974. The department took over the program after the deadline for applications passed in 1975.

Lawrence M. Traylor, the department's pardon attorney who is responsible for the clemency program, said he sent the figures to the White House and "that was about it."

Asked if the department had any other role in a new review of amnesty, he replied, "If anything is planned, I'm not aware of it."

John Carlson, deputy White House press secretary, when questioned about how extensive Ford's promised amnesty review would be, said, "Somebody's doing something, but not a big effort where you get the Justice Department and 15 people involved."

When Ford telephoned Mrs. Hart to offer condolences and ask if he could do anything, she told him of her husband's hope for a general amnesty for draft evaders and deserters. She said Ford promised to re-evaluate his opposition to such a program.

Ford said he agreed to review the situation. But when asked by reporters Monday if he was serious, he replied, "Oh no, I just said at the request of her (Mrs. Hart) that I would look into it."

When pressed to explain if he was merely being polite, Ford said, "The words speak for themselves."

On Tuesday, the subject was raised again by a reporter who urged Ford to clear up the confusion between what he told Mrs. Hart and what he told reporters on Monday.

Ford replied, "There's no confusion whatsoever. I said at her request that I would take a look at it and that's what I'm doing."

Registration fee is $13 per individual or $17 per couple. Persons interested in enrolling should attend the first class session or contact the ECU Division of Continuing Education at 757-6143 for further details.

Church Leaders Denounce Moon

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations have denounced the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his Unification Church as "anti-democratic, anti-Jewish and in direct conflict with basic Christian teachings."

At a news conference here Tuesday, leaders of the religious groups accused the Rev. Moon of fostering hatred and bigotry against Christians and Jews and encouraging the breakup of families.

Appearing at the news conference were the Rev. James J. LeBar of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York; the Rev. Dr. Jorge Lara-Braud of the National Council of Churches, which includes Protestant and Orthodox denominations; Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum; and Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

Shawn Byrn, a Moon movement staff member who identified himself as an inactive

Catholic priest from Ireland, rose to defend the Rev. Moon as a proponent of peace, love and "antifaithlessness" to God. He said anti-Jewish and anti-Christian teachings of the Rev. Moon's church were exaggerated.

Rabbi Rudin, the committee's assistant interreligious affairs director, said that a study of the Unification Church's 536-page "Divine Principle" turned up 125 references that gave a "demonic picture of Jews." He said the movement "is an ominous political ideology clothed in religious garb that is exporting to this country hatred, bigotry and divisiveness."

The religious leaders urged Congress to press its investigation of the Rev. Moon's alleged involvement with the South Korean central intelligence agency and reported illegal lobbying and bribery. They called for Americans to reject the Rev. Moon's appeals to patriotism and unity.

To Immortalize Inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter's inauguration will be immortalized by five top figures in American art — Andy Warhol, Jacob Lawrence, Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Rauschenberg and Jamie Wyeth.

The Presidential Inauguration Committee announced Tuesday that it has commissioned the five to record their impressions of the inauguration, and will raise funds for the event by selling 100 sets of their signed prints for $2,500 each.

Warhol, 46, lives in New York and was a leading figure in the pop art movement of the 1960s, when his works celebrated such familiar images as the Campbell's soup can. Lichtenstein, 53, of Southampton, N.Y., also figured prominently in that era, with dot pattern paintings.

Lawrence, 59, of Seattle, paints social and historical themes. Rauschenberg, 51, is a Texas-born artist who lives in New York and Florida. Wyeth, 30, a portrait artist, is the son of Andrew Wyeth and lives in Chadds Ford, Pa.

Canada Confrontation Posing Dismemberment

CANADA'S DILEMMA — Black area shows the province of Quebec, Canada where the possibility of outright secession threatens Canada's fragile political foundation. Several provinces have followed the lead of the largest, Quebec, in contesting federal jurisdiction in important areas such as multilateral tariff negotiations, energy and transportation. (AP Wirephoto Map)

the federal government in Ottawa, particularly over ownership of offshore oil resources. (AP Wirephoto)

EDITOR'S NOTE — A separatists' election victory in Quebec, 10 provinces only loosely linked in a federal system and growing regional differences all add up to potential crisis in Canada. An AP special correspondent, winner of a Pulitzer Prize for Vietnam war reporting, explores the troubles of America's neighbor in this first of three articles on Canada.

MONTREAL (AP) — Canada's provinces, which enjoy far greater powers than the individual U.S. states do, are challenging federal authority in a confrontation that some experienced observers fear could dismember the country.

The fragile political foundations that have supported the Canadian confederation for 110 years are now seen by many as inadequate for the job.

Several provinces have followed the lead of the largest, Quebec, in contesting federal jurisdiction in important areas such as immigration, multilateral tariff negotiations, energy and transportation.

Quebec has gone even further, its voters electing a government dedicated to secession from Canada. While Quebec's action shocked Canadians, the possibility of outright secession has often been raised by right and left voices in other provinces, and it is a subject of increasing speculation across the country.

Fueling the developing political conflict and its echoes of the secessionist movement in the southern states of the United States a century ago, are these factors:

—Canada's constitution is based on an 1867 British act of Parliament — the British North America Act — and inadequately defines federal powers. The country's parliamentary system of government has not been adjusted to the realities of the federal system.

—The soaring prices of natural resources have tempted provincial premiers to build "kingdoms" on their ore and energy deposits, jealously resisting federal attempts to assert control. Provinces are also fighting attempts by Ottawa, seat of the federal government, to control foreign investment under its "economic nationalism" scheme. The provinces say they need foreign money to fully develop their resources.

—Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's personal popularity has waned and his Liberal party government is seriously weakened by setbacks in the economy and internal conflict.

—Quebec Province's support of the separatist Parti Quebecois reflects Canada's inability to end the animosity that has effectively divided the country into an English and French Canada. Racial hostilities also are building against native Indians, and black and Oriental immigrants.

Canadians have long fretted about what some of them see as their stunted nationalism.

"We have no great dream, not like the United States," commented a federal government official in Ottawa. "We agreed to confederation to avoid being swalled up by the U.S."

The British North America Act gave provincial legislatures jurisdiction over natural resources, schools, roads, social welfare and urban affairs. With their taxing powers and own social and economic policies, Canada's 10 provinces have far greater strength than U.S. states.

But there is considerable regional discontent in Canada, one reason being that the Federal Senate, an effective representation of the regions in the United States, has no power in Canada. The governing party in the important oil province of Alberta has little voice in the federal capital because all of Alberta's 19 federal Parliament seats are occupied by opposition members.

The Liberal party is in power in Ottawa, but only three of the 10 provinces are governed by the Liberals.

"Provinces compete with the federal government, acting as though Ottawa is just another province, the 11th province," commented a Toronto political scientist.

An Ottawa official said, "Governing this way is costly, and it takes up an enormous amount of physical energy. There were 247 multilateral meetings between the provinces and Ottawa on policy in 1975, 60 of them ministerial level. And there were hundreds of bilateral meetings," he said.

The constant conferring does little, however, to dispel the hardening animosity between the provincial and federal governments. A New Brunswick editor commented, "Regardless of whoever is in power in Ottawa we are against them."

Experienced observers see the situation much more critical than in the past for these reasons. One is that the example of Quebec's resistance to the federal government in the 1960s caught on, leading to unlikely alliances between the French-speaking province and English Canadian prairie provinces. Even traditional Newfoundland took pride in establishing a loosely defined "alliance" with Quebec in inter-provincial meetings.

The second reason for concern about the future is that most of the provinces are on the threshold of gaining enormous wealth, and with it the potential for the first time to go it alone.

Economically poor Newfoundland, with a 17 per cent unemployment rate and the beneficiary of pork barrel financing on a massive scale, sees salvation in potential offshore oil and gas resources.

Booming Alberta Province produces 1.2 million barrels of oil a day, has potential for much more, and remains an ardent and successful defender of provincial rights. Despite Ottawa's objections, Saskatchewan was moving ahead to nationalize part of its potash industry, in which there is heavy U.S. investment. Manitoba Province recently forced Ottawa to back down on a controversial federal system of wage and price controls.

Another battleground is foreign investment, a resource Ottawa is attempting to control in a move toward "economic nationalism". The western provinces are not happy because they have long felt that the eastern core provinces were favored over them.

Political observers say Canada's weaknesses are more apparent today because of the declining popularity of the federal government headed by Prime Minister Trudeau, once called "the Canadian Kennedy" by his admirers. His Liberal government was trying to rebuild its fortunes from a low point in public approval of only 29 per cent in August, when it was further buffeted by the victory of the Parti Quebecois.

The 57-year-old Trudeau shot into political prominence eight years ago by promising to keep Canada together, and attempted to dampen Quebec's independence ardor with a bilingualism program. But English Canadians strongly objected.

"I've always considered Canada to be a foreign country when I travel outside Quebec," said movie director Claude Jutra during a recent visit to Vancouver in British Columbia. He quoted his aged father as saying, "Claude, we are two countries. It is becoming obvious to everyone."

The victory of the Parti Quebecois of former TV and radio personality Rene Levesque now is forcing Canadians to face up squarely to that possibility.

Experts Say Fire Ants Won't Take Over N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — It will be illegal beginning Friday to use the chemical mirex to kill fire ants, but agronomists say the pesky insects won't take over the North Carolina countryside even though they do constitute a nuisance.

The federal government was persuaded by environmentalists to ban mirex, the most effective chemical death agent for fire ants in the farmer's pesticides arsenal. Beginning Jan. 1, it will be illegal to use chlorinated hydrocarbon chemicals because they accumulate in the soil and can be transferred to plants and animals that eat them.

Rudy Hillmann of the extension service at North Carolina State University said fire ants "are a pest, that's all."

Hillmann pointed out that fire ants do not attack away from their mounds and their bite hurts no worse than a bee sting. However, he noted that some people are allergic to the proteins that make up their venom and those acutely allergic can be killed by the bite.

Fire ants have been a low-level nuisance for farmers in southeastern North Carolina for some time, especially in Robeson, Columbus and Bladen counties. Recently, however, 100 colonies were found in the railroad yards of Charlotte.

There seems to be no great spreading of the fire ant colonies, Hillmann said. The colonies in the southeastern part of the state have been stable for several years, and the new colonies in Charlotte apparently traveled into the area on the roots of some nursery plants from Alabama.

"One can guess some natural force is holding them in check, but we just don't know," Hillmann said.

Fire ants arrived in this country in 1918 and came to North Carolina about 12 years later.

In some untilled fields, the mounds create bumps that combines might find difficult to handle, according to John Hunter, fire ant expert with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture. But if the field is plowed regularly, they'll move to the edges or a ditch bank, he said.

Hunter said the ants can do some damage to crops by burrowing along near the surface and interfering with root systems, but Hillmann said he doesn't think this happens. To prove his point, Hillman produced some slides of mounds in the middle of a pasture. The grass atop the mounds was thicker and greener than grass in other parts of the pasture.

"They are not army ants," Hillmann said. "They will do absolutely no harm to warm-blooded animals. As long as a person stays away from the mound, the ants will leave him alone."

They do not attack grazing animals unless the animal wants to graze on the ants' mound and then the cow or whatever won't do it but once, Hillmann said.

Hillmann has five faint round marks on his hands where fire ants have bitten him when he was troweling in a mound. He said the bites, at worst, swell up like a painful pimple.

N.C. Officials Afraid Prisons Will Go Under Federal Court Control

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's prison system is virtually certain to come under management of the federal courts if the state fails to take rapid action to solve serious overcrowding and other problems.

That's a consensus of the concern expressed by prison officials, legislative leaders and other government officials.

The concern is so great that Gov.-elect Jim Hunt will spend up to $2 million immediately after taking office to temporarily ease the pressure of the system's burgeoning population. There are now more than 13,000 inmates housed in facilities that are considered crowded when the population is 10,000.

Also, prison officials warn that unless there is new construction and some changes in law, the situation will worsen. North Carolina has about the highest per capita prison population in the nation. Prisons Director Ralph Edwards said in a recent interview.

To make matters worse, the facilities now in use are antiquated, in many cases dilapidated, and built in such a way that it is difficult for guards to control inmates in the event of a disturbance. Central Prison in Raleigh was built by inmate labor in the 1880s and the numerous units around the state are mostly 1930s road camps that have been converted.

The only single cell prison built in the last three decades is the high rise unit in Morganton which opened in 1972. It has room for more than 400 inmates. It is often used as a dumping station for troublemakers from other units such as in 1975 when the 16th floor was used to temporarily house suspected instigators of the disturbance at the women's prison in Raleigh.

A 460-high-rise unit is scheduled for Salisbury and another unit is planned for Hillsborough. Construction hasn't started on either even though funds were appropriated three years ago.

"For too long, we have sat by in the anteroom while crime flourished and prison population increased and failed to build adequate facilities to house the inmate population," Hunt said in a campaign position paper. "North Carolina can ill afford not to take positive action now on its policies toward crime and punishment."

Lt. Gov.-elect Jimmy Green takes a similar position: "I don't think prisoners ought to be coddled, but if a man needs to be taken from society, then he ought to be treated as a human being and he ought to be given an opportunity to rehabilitate himself."

Prison officials such as Edwards, who has worked in corrections 25 years, say the greatest need now is to rebuild Central Prison and have single cells for those inmates, many of whom are considered the most dangerous in the system.

But, it is more expensive to construct single-cell-prisons, and a battle appears to be shaping up in the legislature. Hunt supports the single-cell concept and is expected to fight for it.

Adding to the legislative reluctance to spend on the Department of Corrections is the department's delay in spending more than $20 million appropriated in the last four years.

"It's a question of credibility," one official in the department commented. "The legislature naturally wonders why nothing has been done."

In addition, Correction Secretary David Jones' administration has been criticized for spending about $500,000 a year on mid-level administrators with funds the legislature intended to be used for positions to work with inmates, such as teachers and other rehabilitative personnel. The total prison budget is $72 million a year.

"The problem is the last four years. Although they've had the money, they haven't done anything," said Rep. John Edavenport, D-Nash.

"They've gotten bogged down ... and really haven't done anything," said Rep. J. P. Huskins, D-Iredell.

Some legislators view single cells as a waste of money. Rep. William W. Watkins, D-Granville, complained, "I don't think we need all these $12 million high rises that house 350 people. You can build motels cheaper than that."

Sen. J. J. Harrington, D-Bertie, who supports Hunt's program, also complained that high rise prisons are too expensive. But, he and several other legislators said there is a need for new facilities and said a bond issue might be the best method of getting them quickly.

As Hunt notes in his prisons paper, "Crime and its control is a three-fold issue. First, the cause of it and its prevention. Secondly, orderly disposition of cases, and, thirdly, the facilities and programs necessary to handle our inmate population."

In his program for curbing crime, Hunt calls on the legislature to enact laws to deter crime. He is calling for speedy trials which would demand more judges, fixed term sentencing which would raise the prison population and less discretion in the parole process.

"The effect of these proposals would be to establish a high degree of certainty of punishment for persons found guilty of specific crimes," he said.

In addition to new facilities, there are other methods that would reduce prison population problems. Hunt has called for a reevaluation of state policy that puts misdemeanants in the prisons rather than local jails.

There are some types of crimes that may not require imprisonment of the offender, Hunt said, citing traffic violations and vagrancy as examples.

Edwards agreed with Hunt's position and cited examples: 600 persons convicted of minor drug charges that could be in local programs rather than prison; about 600 persons serving six-month or shorter terms; about a fourth of the 1,900 youthful offenders between the ages of 14 and 21 that could safely be released.

"You don't need a maximum security institution for those people," he said. "A lot of things need to be done in addition to building new prisons."

Alioto's Fourth Trial Scheduled

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Mayor Joseph Alioto's fourth trial in his $12.5-million libel suit against Look magazine was tentatively set Monday for March 14.

A third mistrial was declared in November in the suit, which stems from a 1969 Look article that alleged Alioto was "enmeshed in a web of alliances with the Mafia."

The first trial ended in 1970 with a hung jury. The second ended with the jury agreeing that parts of the story were false and defamatory but disagreeing on the malice issue. The third jury was also unable to decide on the malice issue, one of the requirements for a libel judgment.

Alcoholism Becoming Huge Problem For Alaska

EDITOR'S NOTE — Perhaps it's the extreme cold, or the rapidly changing way of life in Alaska. But alcoholism is a huge problem in that state.

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
NOME, Alaska (AP) — Even for a Saturday, it had been a rough night. The jail was busy. The hospital was busy.

About 2 a.m., the police brought in one fight's drunken loser who was so banged up it took the nurses a few minutes to discover his nose was missing.

Half an hour later, a police officer showed up with the shredded appendage, and the weary surgeon went to work.

Alcoholism, and all its accoutrements — crime, suicide, just plain trouble — are the bane of Alaska, and especially northwest Alaska where the alcoholism rate is one of the highest in the world and still growing.

Alaska leads the nation in per capita alcoholic intake — 3.86 gallons a year for everyone over 15. One of every 10 people in a state with 360,000 population is an alcoholic or a problem drinker. The problem is especially bad among Eskimos (nearly 20 per cent of the total population) in small bush towns like Nome, on the Bering Sea coast, only 120 miles from Siberia.

Perhaps it is that day and night lose meaning in the land of the midnight sun.

Last year 1,277 drunk and disorderly arrests were logged in this old gold mining town. It only has 2,500 residents.

Police Chief Cecil Johnson says 99 per cent of Nome's crime is related to alcohol. The hospitals say 99 per cent of their emergency cases involve alcohol. District Court Judge Ethan Windahl says:

"If it weren't for demon rum, I wouldn't have a job."

Help is far away. There is no detoxification center in the area. If the hospital and the town's one psychologist decide a patient needs such help, he or she is flown to Anchorage for treatment in the state's primary alcoholism facility. Some go in straightjackets.

There are very few hard-core criminals in Nome. "Most of the offenses here involve someone getting drunk and then doing something stupid," said Johnson. "Most of the people around here are robust and like to drink."

Last year there were three murders, six rapes, 10 auto thefts, 32 burglaries, 21 cases of joy-riding, and one incident of child abuse.

Two persons killed themselves and 38 more tried "by any means you can think up — shooting, pills, hanging," said Ed Ward, chief investigator in the 10-man department. "We managed to talk a lot of people out of it because they generally were intoxicated."

About 85 per cent of Nome's population is Eskimo. Many arrests involve Eskimo visitors from the several dozen villages. Most of the visiting offenders are model citizens, police say. But when they come to town ...

"This is not a dangerous place, it's a peaceful town," Johnson insists. "It's just that people like to drink a lot."

Why drink? Unless you are a devout churchgoer, a television addict or a voracious reader, that's about the only thing to do.

Long ago white men taught the Eskimos to drink, and since then there has been no effective effort to teach them not to.

"There are some repeat prisoners who come before me in court whose alcoholism problems just can't be cured by the techniques we know," said Windahl. "An awful lot of the people I'm describing have permanent brain damage from alcohol."

A former Legal Services attorney appointed to the bench three years ago, Windahl has been criticized by many Nome residents as being too lenient.

"I don't believe in putting people in jail for an alcohol-related offense if it is minor," says the tall, lanky man in jeans. "In many cases, I assume it is some sort of problem that can be dealt with on a personal level. But it is so terribly frustrating to see some of the same people over and over again."

Windahl recently began cooperating with a native organization's fledgling family services center by sentencing some repeat alcoholic defendants to spend varying amounts of time in an Antabuse program. To avoid jail, the person must regularly take the medication, which causes violent nausea if liquor is consumed. If they do not cooperate in the program, their parole is revoked and they are sent to jail.

Although it is too soon to assess results accurately, Windahl says the program is moderately successful.

The judge is also hopeful a new Alaska law will cut down on the number of cases before his court. The law allows police to pick up a drunk and hold him in jail for 12 hours in "protective custody" without formal charge.

Police generally favor the law because it may cut down on fights and crime and protect the drunks from stumbling off into the below-zero wilderness.

Johnson says every year a few lose consciousness in a snowbank and freeze to death. Most of the victims' bodies remain hidden until spring thaw.

Windahl says alcoholism in northwest Alaska has no racial boundaries.

"Some glibly say a breakdown in the Eskimo culture causes the people to resort to alcohol," said the judge. "Maybe I'm a dimwit anthropologist, but it seems to me we have so many people raising a ruckus because so often here a person is not deemed drunk until he has passed out. If there is no violence, people just tend to get out of the way."

"If I behaved that way at a cocktail party in Southern California, everybody would be appalled at my behavior ..."

Not just town drunks. Youngsters too.

Dr. Steve Harrison received a frantic telephone call in Nome one bleak Monday morning. It was from an anguished father.

"Okay, everything's going to be all right, we'll send a plane down to White Mountain and you just bring her on in to the hospital and we'll take care of her," said northwest Alaska's only psychiatrist.

He hung up and called the hospital to alert doctors that a young alcoholic with psychotic tendencies was on her way. Harrison is director of Norton Sound Health Corporation's Family Services Center, a two-year-old, government-financed mental health organization.

Its primary function is to counsel people who drink too much. It also tries to prevent people from killing themselves.

"When you talk about drinking in northwest Alaska, you're talking about something that reaches into every facet of life here," said Harrison, a long-haired Californian who's been in town only six months. "Most of the people ... walked in the door because they were hurting."

"Court referrals have been mostly young kids in their late teens or early 20s who generally learn to drink at home because their parents do," said Harrison's assistant, Barry Levitt. "Here there is no such thing as 'social drinking.'"

Officials say alcoholism costs the state $17.8 million annually. That includes direct treatment, welfare money, police services and court fees. The center, with a full-time staff of seven, is hiring native employees to train as counselors "so the alcoholic Eskimos up here can relate to the people who are offering help," Levitt said.

He and the rest of the office staff work out of a two-story Front Street building just a block from most of Nome's bars and across the street from the jail.

The top floor has been converted into a "day hospital," a place Levitt describes as a room where "people can lie down, play ping pong, drink coffee, work with crafts, fight the desire for a drink, get their head together and not be hassled."

But on Saturdays, because of short staff, the center is closed. Another who helps is Renard Nichols, a police lieutenant who has halted more than one suicide attempt. When Nichols isn't taking people to jail, he is administering coffee, cigarettes and compassion.

Balding, 43, father of three young children and husband to a pretty native wife, Nichols has been in jail and twice fired from the Nome police force.

"I went clear to the bottom," he says. "Like everyone else does when they come to Nome, I hit all the bars night after night. One night I might be drinking with the city manager, the next night I might be fighting with him, and the next day I'd be working for him."

"Of course I'm good to the drunks on the street," he admits. "They are mostly decent human beings who've got an enormous problem and aren't getting much help in solving it."

"Remember, I've been in the jug with most of them. I don't want to ever get back in there. By helping them, I also help myself."

Basic Travel Insurance Could Be Big Help On Taking A Trip

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Accidents do happen when traveling so why not include a check with your insurance agent among things to do when preparing for a trip at home or abroad.

With the right kind of insurance, travelers can protect themselves financially against possible hazards, from missed charter flights to lost luggage.

Most people get basic travel insurance coverage from three sources, according to the Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies: health and accident policies, personal auto policies and homeowners or tenants policies.

Specialized coverages of particular interest to travelers include personal property floaters, trip accident and trip baggage insurance, special life insurance and charter flight protection.

Accident and health insurance policies generally provide coverage anywhere in the world. Nearly all medical facilities in the United States honor domestic insurance policies and won't require immediate payment from the patient if they can confirm that the insurance is in force.

To expedite medical claims, policyholders should carry their insurance identification card and the telephone number to call to verify coverage.

U.S. insurers will honor claims for medical expenses incurred out of the country, but the medical facilities themselves will probably require payment before the patient leaves. The policy holder then must apply to his insurance company for reimbursement and should therefore save all receipts to substantiate claims.

For travelers without medical insurance policies, there are short-term accidental injury policies that also provide a small hospital indemnity for illness, typically $30 a day. In addition, trip accident policies are available for short-term coverage for accidental injuries.

There also are short-term accidental death policies designed specifically for air travelers. They provide high benefits for the duration of the flight, at relatively low cost. They can be purchased at airports. Under one arrangement, through the American Express Co., and Fireman's Fund, persons buying airline tickets with their American Express card can automatically get $150,000 in accidental death insurance for $3.

For protection against lost or damaged luggage, there are short-term policies — also sold at airports — to cover a specific flight. There also are "trip baggage" policies providing such protection from the time you leave home until you return. Airlines and other public carriers usually will reimburse travelers for lost or damaged luggage, but their limits of liability often are not high enough to cover the value of the loss.

Fireman's Fund says there is some coverage, for at least $1,000, under homeowners and tenants policies for this sort of loss. So check.

Personal article floaters are used to insure particularly valuable items, such as jewelry and furs, and are generally sold for stated amounts of coverage on "all risks" basis.

Another type of travelers' insurance is "charter fare protection," offered by some companies to protect the financial interests of persons who pay in advance for charter flights but are not able to make the trip because of illness or other reasons. Cancellation could mean loss of the deposit. Some companies provide coverage for the air fare only, but a few others offer protection for the entire cost, including fare and accommodations.

Check your automobile insurance policy if you are traveling by car. Financial responsibility requirements for personal injury and property damage as a result of accidents vary among the states. Many auto policies now automatically extend coverage to meet the requirements of various states — including those with no-fault insurance. But there are exceptions and short-term additional coverage may be necessary.

Most domestic policies will protect U.S. motorists visiting Canada and agents will provide a card showing proof of such protection when asked. You could be asked by Canadian immigration officers to show the card on entry.

Your U.S. insurance, however, will not be recognized in Mexico. The only insurance that Mexican authorities consider valid is that sold by Mexican companies. Short-term policies can be purchased from agents at most cities along the border. Your hometown agent can probably make advance arrangements for you.

A word of caution: you can go to jail in Mexico if you can't prove you have valid insurance even if it was your car that was damaged and the other fellow was to blame for the accident.

Travelers using rented or borrowed cars are probably insured by their own auto policies, but car renters should give consideration to rental firms' offer of a "waiver of liability," sold usually for a dollar or two.

If you buy the option and damage the rental car, you won't have to pay the deductible, which is usually about $200. On the other hand, if you don't buy the option, the firm will probably demand full payment of the deductible when the car is returned.

Need Permit To Visit Bethlehem

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Tourists who want to visit Bethlehem on Christmas Eve or Christmas day will have to get a special permit from the Israeli Ministry of Tourism, a spokesman said.

Private cars will not be permitted to enter the city. Special buses will carry visitors from Israel's main cities to the town in the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Attendance at Midnight Mass at the Basilica of the Nativity will be by special invitation only, obtainable from church authorities.

The mass will be relayed from inside the Basilica via closed circuit television to a huge screen in Manger Square outside.

BIG SHOT, LITTLE SHOT — Five-year-old Bill Montgomery used a plastic dart pistol at Black Canyon Shooting Range when he went with his

Phoenix neighbor, Steve Judd, to try out a new Christmas present. (AP Wirephoto)

had broken through the ice while snowmobiling, and Golden heard his cries for help from his home nearby. (AP Wirephoto)

VESSELS ENTER BEIRUT PORT — Two cargo ships, seen at left, were the first to enter Beirut's demolished port Sunday after 19 months of closure due to the civil strife in Lebanon. Remains of demolished vessels and equipment lay at right. Christian militia leaders reported Tuesday that more than 25,000 well-armed guerrillas have moved into southern Lebanon and laid siege to a Christian village near the Israeli border. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Life insurance companies paid $22.5 billion to beneficiaries, policy holders and annuitants in 1975, according to the Institute of Life Insurance. Less than half the total went to beneficiaries of policyholders who died.

John Horschel of Ft. Lauderdale, in bicentennial garb, fires off Thompson Center .45-caliber muzzle loader at club shoot near Miami.

Bob Hay of Miami loads 1750 79-inch-long muzzle loader with 66-inch barrel. It uses 160 grams of black powder and lead ball shot.

The Muzzle Loaders

Muzzle loader is primed for firing. All club members' guns are period pieces or copies, and about half guns in use at a meeting have usually been built by members themselves.

Here, taking their enthusiasm for the historic a picturesque step further are the Palmetto Muzzle Loaders. They're members of a Miami club devoted to the restoration and shooting of antique guns. And to show a bit of bicentennial spirit they donned buckskin outfits and coonskin caps for one of their regular Sunday meets at the Trail Glades Range near Miami.

The club got going in 1957. Now there are about a hundred members, who meet on average once a month to shoot and show off the replicas they've made. All their weapons are either period pieces or exact copies of period pieces—about half the guns out at a shoot have usually been built by members. One member, Bob Hay of Miami, has a 79-inch-long gun, with a 66-inch barrel, made in 1750 for the Hudson Valley Company as a trade gun. The club also organizes hunts, for Muzzle Loaders with muzzle loader only.

Photographed by Jim Bourdier.

Armin H. Reimer of Miami loads his .50-caliber gun. Ear muffs over coonskin cap help cut noise of firing.

Bullseye! John Horschel's expression says it all.

Muzzle Loaders club members at meeting at Trail Glades Range. Shoot is competitive.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market kept its year-end rally in motion today with a push from some favorable government statistics on the economic outlook.

Trading was active. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which closed above 1,000 Tuesday for the first time in three months, gained a fraction in early trading today.

Gainers held a slight edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. At the opening, the government reported that its index of leading economic indicators climbed 1 per cent in November for its best showing since last June.

The news added further impetus to hopes that the economy was picking up momentum after its sluggish showing since last summer.

Despite that plus, however, analysts noted that the market was faced with some stiff resistance from profit taking.

Today's prices included American Telephone, up 1/4 at 64 1/2; NCR, unchanged at 36 1/2; and Kellogg, ahead 1/4 at 28.

In Tuesday's advance the Dow Jones industrial average gained 3.99 to 1,000.08.

Vacationing Ford Lives 'Casual Style'

APRIL IN PARIS, IT'S NOT — Parisians walk on a carpet of white snow Tuesday in the gardens of the Champ de Mars, the park located near the Eiffel Tower in background. It is the first snow of the season for the French capital. (AP Wirephoto)

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford, in the second week of what probably will be his final skiing vacation as the nation's chief executive, swims in the morning, skis during the day and parties at night. He lives in the casual manner of Vail.

In between, aides say, the President studies his paperwork, discusses the transition to the administration of President-elect Carter and ponders his future. Ford leaves the White House on Jan. 20.

Whether he's working or exercising, Ford adopts the relaxed manner of this mock-Bavarian village where the Fords have visited for nine Christmases.

He sits wearing slippers before the fireplace in his rented ski chalet to meet with aides. He wears a ski sweater and snow hatless through the snow-covered village streets, exchanging seasonal greetings with those who pass by.

Even on social occasions, Ford is casually dressed, wearing at times the wolfskin parka he received on an Alaskan trip and a cowboy hat. He showed up for a midnight Christmas service at the white stucco interfaith chapel in a blue turtle-neck jersey and red sports jacket.

"I think he's pleased. He's very relaxed," a Ford aide says of his boss. "He's in good spirits and getting a lot of rest."

Ford sleeps later here in the mountains, rising at about 8:30 a.m. He goes for daily swims in a heated pool, just as he does in Washington.

In his first nine days here, Ford skipped skiing only three. He took two days off to recover from a bruised hip, suffered in a tumble on the slopes, and missed one day in favor of watching two professional football games on television.

For skiing partners, he leans toward Vail friends — wealthy businessmen and professional athletes. He skied one day with Don Shula, coach of the professional football Miami Dolphins. Another day it was Susan Chaffee, once an Olympic competitor and now a regular on the professional freestyle ski tour.

Ford, who came here as a congressman and vice president before moving into the White House, has his favorite night spots as well.

In one, a restaurant with French cuisine, a picture of President and Mrs. Ford and Secretary of State and Mrs.

Henry Kissinger hangs on the wall near the door. Next to it is a handwritten letter from Ford expressing his thanks for a nice meal.

Ford also has his favorite after dinner nightclub here, owned by two staunch Republican boosters.

Currently featured at the club is the music of the Ink Spots, a group specializing in nostalgic tunes of eras past.

Ford often stays to dance until after midnight.

Frustrating Year Said Likely For Cotton Crop

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — American cotton producers, trapped between economic recovery and a tight world market, may face another frustrating year in attempts to gain a larger share of the textile market from synthetic fibers.

Textile mills are expected to buy all the cotton farmers can produce, according to Dave Cox of Cotton Inc., a research and marketing center funded by cotton growers.

But the farmers won't be able to produce enough to satisfy an industry expected to be expanding with the anticipated national economic recovery, Cox said.

As a result, cotton's share of the textile market, which reversed a downward trend with slight gains in 1976, is expected to plunge again next year. Just how much depends on how much the industry expands.

Cox blames the tight supply and the resulting less competitive prices on slow response of cotton producers, particularly abroad, to fast-paced changes in market conditions since 1972, when the Soviet wheat sales made grain a more attractive market.

Cotton prices rose as supply dropped, and farmers all over the world began planting cotton again. In 1973, U.S. farmers began cutting back, Cox said, but foreign producers continued to expand production.

In 1974, prices continued to drop and the recession began. By 1975 foreign producers had gotten the message and really began cutting back, just as the economic recovery got under way.

Producers abroad are just starting to respond to the new conditions, Cox said, and next year's cotton supply won't be enough to keep textile mills running without expanded purchases of synthetics.

"The supply worldwide relative to demand is as tight as it has ever been in the history of the industry," Cox said. "The demand is there, but the supply is not."

One expected result of the tighter supply and higher prices is an expansion of North Carolina's modest cotton production.

Ten years ago the state was growing about 200,000 bales of the nation's 10 million-bale output.

But cotton production has been shifting westward, where new capital-intensive production techniques with higher yields were more economical than on North Carolina's smaller farms.

The current crop is expected to be only about 65,000 bales. But Cox and Linus Parker of the Cotton Growers Association said larger producers are moving into the state.

"We are hoping for 100,000 bales this coming year and hopefully I think it will increase after that," Parker said, adding that he believed the state's production might eventually level off at about 150,000 bales.

Kissinger Drops Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has given up his effort to keep the transcripts of his office telephone conversations. But Kissinger will tightly control access to them.

A State Department spokesman said Tuesday that Kissinger had changed his mind and decided to include the transcripts with the papers he is donating to the Library of Congress.

Like the other papers, they will not be open for public inspection for 25 years or five years after Kissinger's death, whichever comes first. Anyone seeking earlier access will require Kissinger's advance permission, plus a security clearance.

The transcripts were typed by a team of four secretaries who listened on extensions to all of Kissinger's conversations — unbeknownst to Kissinger's callers — and took shorthand notes.

Last week, Kissinger said he considered the notes private property and did not include them with the rest of his official papers as he announced their donation to the library.

how to get the most from your heating system

House heating is the largest expense in your family's home energy budget. By careful operation and a little maintenance, you can increase the return on your energy dollar and improve your family's comfort. You will also save precious energy resources. Here's how:

LET THE SUNSHINE IN

In the daytime, let the sunshine in. Let the sun help heat your home. At night, close shades and draperies over windows. Make sure they fit snugly at the window sills.

INSULATION

Adequate insulation can reduce your heating costs by as much as 50%. By reducing your heating needs, good insulation increases the useful life of your heating system — and you can use a smaller unit if you're putting in a new heating system.

KEEP COLD AIR OUT

Weather stripping around doors and caulking around windows will stop drafts and save from 15% to 30% on heating costs. And, keep the fireplace damper closed.

STORM WINDOWS

Storm windows and storm doors are excellent investments that will pay for themselves in fuel savings in a few years. Storm windows can save up to 15% annually on your heating bill.

LET THE HEAT FLOW FREELY

Don't block wall registers with furniture or draperies. Keep registers free from dust and adjust them so that the air flows freely upward into the room.

REGULAR CHECK-UPS

Every heating system needs an annual inspection. Have a reliable dealer look it over thoroughly before each heating season. And during the heating season, check filters frequently and change when dirty.

THERMOSTAT SETTINGS

The higher your heating thermostat, the more energy you use. Set the thermostat at the lowest possible setting to maintain family comfort and leave it there. At night, set it 5 degrees lower.

Lambert Top Defensive Player

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Middle linebacker Jack Lambert of the Pittsburgh Steelers was selected the National Football League's Defensive Player of the Year today by The Associated Press.

Lambert was an easy choice with 42 votes from the 84 ballots cast by sports writers and broadcasters in the 28 NFL cities. Defensive tackle Wally Chambers of the Chicago Bears finished a distant second with 10 votes while defensive end Tommy Hart of the San Francisco 49ers had seven and cornerback Monte Jackson of Los Angeles had five.

Others receiving support included Lambert's linebacking partner, Jack Ham of Pittsburgh, defensive end John Dutton and tackle Joe Ehrmann of Baltimore, cornerback Mike Haynes of New England, the defensive rookie of the year, and defensive end Coy Bacon of Cincinnati.

Lambert was the leader of a Steeler defense that permitted only 28 points in the final nine games of the regular season as Pittsburgh recovered from a 1-4 start to charge into the American Conference playoffs.

Playing middle linebacker, Lambert became one of the more visible figures in the Steeler defense. But, he said, his teammates also had outstanding seasons.

"You have to have the talent," he said. "We're in a unique situation. We could easily have 11 players in the Pro Bowl. Look at (tackle) Ernie Holmes. He's having his best season but it's hardly noticed because he plays next to somebody like Joe Greene."

Lambert plays his position with intensity. He feels that's expected of him.

"There's a certain way a middle linebacker is supposed to act," he said. "It goes along with the position because of the Butkus and the Nitschkes. Maybe I take all my aggressions out on the football field."

Lambert was the Steelers' second draft choice in 1974 out of Kent State. He played quarterback in high school and then defensive end in his sophomore year at college. Then he changed positions the following year.

The Steelers flank Lambert with Ham and veteran Andy Russell, giving Pittsburgh one of the strongest linebacking corps in the league. But the wheelhorse is the man in the middle and Lambert knows it.

"Once the ball is snapped," he said, "Jack Ham and Andy Russell can't help me play middle linebacker."

But the way Lambert plays the position, he hardly needs the help.

Pitt Prepares For Georgia's Bulldogs

By GARY MIHOCS
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With Georgia on their minds and a warm sun on their necks, the Pitt Panthers brought some life back to neglected Tulane Stadium.

"I'm old, but not as old as this place," Coach Johnny Majors said during a Sugar Bowl practice Tuesday amidst the stadium's rusting expanse and 81,000 empty seats.

"You know, I played my last college game here 20 years ago," he added, referring to the 1956 Sugar Bowl in which his Tennessee team lost 13-7 to Baylor.

Pitt and Georgia are drilling at Tulane Stadium because the Superdome will be tied up by basketball and a rock concert until Saturday.

The 50-year-old stadium, built on the site of a sugar plantation, has been used as Tulane University's practice-intramural field since the Superdome opened two years ago.

Another era will end Saturday when Majors completes his stay at Pitt and becomes coach at Tennessee.

"It's been four years of toil and effort by everybody involved," he said from a bench as temperatures rose into the 70s.

As he spoke, his top-ranked, unbeaten team flashed the raw talent Pitt didn't have in the 110 season before Majors arrived.

"Do it," defensive end Cecil Johnson yelled after Al Romano intercepted a pass thrown by a scrub quarterback, ran 10 yards and spiked the ball.

Majors' watch from the sideline ended when he saw a mixup on a play. "Who's supposed to block that man," he shouted as he trotted out to his offensive unit.

"The Georgia Bulldogs are tough. They'll bite you," Majors later told 240-pound guard Tom Brzoza.

Brzoza then led Tony Dorsett on a sweep against a reserve unit that used the same alignments as Georgia's Junkyard Dogs. Some scrubs kiddingly taunted the starters with shouts of "Dog food. Dog food."

And Dorsett was obviously working in earnest as he ran play after play. "To play hard, you have to practice hard," he said.

Pitt's team members also played hard on Bourbon Street this week, with no curfew Sunday or Monday.

"We're cutting back the hours now," Dorsett said Tuesday. "It's time to get rest and slow the partying down. We've got a real important game."

OKAY, YOU'RE NUMBER ONE, BUT I WANT MY BIKE — University of Pittsburgh defensive back J. C. Wilson rides a borrowed bike and gives the number one signal while 13-year-old Tad Huber gives chase in Tulane Stadium in New Orleans Tuesday during practice. Wilson got a free ride and young Huber got his bike back and the number one depends on what the Panthers do against Georgia in the Sugar Bowl Saturday. (AP Wirephoto)

Jet Owner Dies

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Iselin, a high school dropout who rose to prominence in pro football and horse racing, is dead.

The 74-year-old president of the National Football League's New York Jets and of Monmouth Racetrack in Oceanport, N.J., died at the football team's office here of his third major heart attack in 3½ months.

Iselin's heart had stopped twice during a Jets game at Denver on Sept. 19, but he was revived by emergency equipment on hand at Mile High Stadium. He had returned to work after months of recuperation but was stricken again at 3:30 p.m., EST, Tuesday.

"He was great for the sport and a great man for the New York Jets," said the Jets' defensive captain, lineman Richard Neal. "He tried to make things the best."

"It's a great loss, not only to the Jets but to the world that knew him," added veteran offensive tackle Winston Hill, the Jets' elder statesman who has been with the team since 1963. "Our prayers now are with Mrs. Iselin."

Betty Iselin was at her mother-

PHIL ISELIN

er's bedside in St. Louis when told of her husband's passing. Other survivors include a son, Jimmy, and a daughter, Kay Gillman. The funeral was scheduled for 11 a.m., EST, Friday at Temple Beth Miriam in Deal, N.J.

Iselin left school at Port Washington, N.Y., at the age of 15, but rose quickly to success after becoming a clerk in a women's clothing business. By the age of 21, he was a salesman. At 25, he owned a company.

Profits from the business led to his purchase of an estate in Oceanport. In 1946, the late Avery L. Haskell, a nationally prominent horseman, asked Iselin if he'd mind having a racetrack built near his home.

Iselin eventually headed the construction committee, became treasurer and later president of the track.

He called horse racing "my first love," but entered football management with a group headed by David "Sonny" Werblin, which purchased New York's American Football League franchise in 1963. The team was nearly bankrupt at the time, but the new ownership changed the name from Titans to Jets; in 1964 the club moved to Shea Stadium, and after quarterback Joe Namath was signed with a flourish in 1966, the team's financial complexion changed.

"I loved him. He was a great man. It's that simple," Namath said Tuesday.

"He was a warm, caring man," added NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "He cared for his family, his friends, and the over-all — rather than the strictly personal — interests of the sports with which he involved himself."

The only players with more career yards are Dorsett, Archie Griffin of Ohio State, Ed Marinaro of Cornell and Joe Washington of Oklahoma.

"The records are nice, but they don't really mean that much right now," said Voight. "Maybe they will later when I look back on them. I just want to go out a winner and the Peach Bowl is very important to me."

The Chesapeake, Va., native says football has given him an opportunity to work his way through school.

"Football is the only way some athletes have of getting an education," he said. "And when I put work, that's what I mean. I say in around seven hours a day at football. That's almost a job."

Records Mean Little; Voight Would Rather Have Peach Win

By TOM SALADINO

ATLANTA (AP)—Tailback Mike Voight of North Carolina hasn't had the publicity of Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett or Ricky Bell of Southern California but the Tar Heel senior will be remembered as the most prolific runner in Atlantic Coast Conference history.

"Mike is a one-in-a-lifetime player," said Tarheel Coach Bill Dooley as he prepared his club for Friday's meeting with Kentucky in the ninth annual Peach Bowl.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium with a sellout crowd in excess of 60,000 expected for the contest between the Tarheels, 9-2, and the Kentucky Wildcats, 7-4.

It is the first bowl appearance in 25 years for Kentucky of the Southeastern Conference and the fifth post-season appearance in seven years for North Carolina.

Voight, a 6-foot 204-pounder, broke just about all of Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice's records at North Carolina and ended the regular season against Duke with 261 yards rushing, four touchdowns and the winning two-point conversion as the Tarheels edged the Blue

Two Teams Still Alive

By The Associated Press

Two title-eligible Southern Conference basketball teams are still in the running for championships in the rash of holiday tournaments around the country.

Virginia Military's defending champion Keydets upped their record to 5-1 with a 75-66 victory Tuesday night over Tulane in the opening round of the All-College tourney at Oklahoma City and face California tonight in the semifinals.

In the Poinsettia Classic at Greenville, S.C., Furman's host Paladins gained the championship game with an 89-66 romp over Navy. But The Citadel's Bulldogs, 4-4, were edged 89-87 in overtime by Columbia in the other semifinal.

Tonight's title game sends Furman against Columbia with The Citadel tacking on Navy for third place.

Three other title-eligible teams will be in action tonight.

William and Mary's Indians, 4-4, beaten Monday night by host Hawaii 63-60 in the opening round of the Rainbow Classic, face Illinois in the consolation semifinals.

Davidson's Wildcats, 1-7, will try to halt a seven-game losing streak against New Hampshire in the semifinals of the Charlotte Invitational, while East Carolina's Pirates, 4-3, go against Duke in the opening round of the Raleigh Holiday Doubleheader.

New member Tennessee-Chattanooga, 6-2, not eligible for the title, will meet Kentucky State in the title game of its own Choo Choo Classic. The Mocs beat Nebraska-Omaha 101-92 and Kentucky State edged West Georgia 91-88 in Tuesday night's semifinals.

Will Bynum poured in 26 points and Ron Carter added 24 for VMI in its victory over Tulane.

Even with sophomore Jim Strickland and freshman Jonathan Moore in foul trouble, Furman had little trouble with Navy.

Ricky Free's layup with four seconds left in overtime gave Columbia its victory over The Citadel, which led by six points at one stage of the extra period.

Rec Teams Win Tourney Games

Four teams posted victories last night to advance to the quarter finals of the Greenville Recreation Department's pre-season basketball tournament.

The Poor Boys, Wildcats, East Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Happy Store all posted wins and will play again tonight. The Poor Boys will go up against the Wildcats and E.C.S.W. will play the Happy Store.

In last night's action, the Wildcats showed a balanced attack to get by Grady White, 69-60. The Wildcats led 35-29 at the half and were paced by Cleveland Johnson with 14 and Larry Bradley with 12. Ernest Hymond led Grady White with 26 and Frank Brown had 14.

Michigan Survives Rhode Island Score

It took just a little too long for Rhode Island's Rams to realize they were playing a human basketball team Tuesday night.

The poised, powerful Michigan Wolverines took advantage of some early uneasiness by the Rams to carry a 56-40 lead into the second period. And, as Rhode Island Coach Jack Kraft noted, "You can't afford to get 16 points behind at the half against a team of Michigan's caliber."

It's tough to come back from that kind of deficit against any team. But when the opposition is the No. 1-ranked club in the nation, the going is that much tougher.

"Any time you play a No. 1 team you have a tendency to be in awe," said Kraft, "and I think this hurt us early."

Indeed it did. On the hot shooting of sophomore Phil Hubbard, who finished with 25 points, the 6-0 Wolverines raced to a 51-32 lead. It wasn't until after the intermission that the momentum shifted.

"The first and second halves were like night and day," admitted Kraft, whose Rams pulled within six points when just over three minutes remained but lost their first game in eight this season when Michigan held on for a 95-85 triumph.

In other action involving ranked teams Tuesday night, No. 4 Alabama topped Western Michigan 83-74; Mississippi State beat No. 7 Wake Forest 88-83 in the opening round of the Old Dominion Classic; eighth-ranked UCLA buried Southern Methodist 99-71; No. 10 Clemson blasted Boston College 128-76 in the consolation game of the Milwaukee Classic; No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas vanquished Eastern Michigan 109-85; 12th-rated Marquette downed Wisconsin 64-57 to win the Milwaukee Classic for the ninth consecutive time, and No. 14 Louisville outscored Rutgers 76-68 in opening-round play at the Louisville Classic.

Meanwhile, No. 16 Maryland beat Ohio Xavier 84-74 in the opener of its tournament before 18th-ranked Syracuse set a school scoring record in crushing Duquesne 116-86. No. 19 Utah bopped Nevada-Reno 97-67 to win the Wolfpack Classic and Creighton surprised No. 20 Auburn 81-76 in the other Louisville Classic opener.

Third-ranked San Francisco was playing St. John's of New York in the final first-round game of the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii. In an earlier game, Arizona topped Temple 73-65.

Third-ranked San Francisco brought its record to 13-0 with an 80-70 victory over St. John's of New York as seven-foot sophomore center Bill Cartwright scored 21 points in the first round Rainbow Classic game at Hawaii. The Dons put their record on the line again tonight in a semifinal fray against Arizona, which topped Temple 73-65.

St. John's trailed 72-68 with 2:36 to play, but Winford Boynes and Marlow Redmond scored quick baskets for San Francisco to insure the victory.

Michigan's victory boosted the top-ranked Wolverines into tonight's final round of the Friar Classic at Providence, R.I. The loss, despite 32 points by Williams, dropped Rhode Island into the consolation game against Texas, which fell 81-67 to Providence in the opening game.

Reginald King scored 23 points and Rickey Brown had 14 points to go with 14 rebounds, propelling unbeaten Alabama to its ninth triumph of the season before a turnaway crowd of 17,500. Center Tom Cutter had 26 points for the losers.

Freshman Ricky Brown amassed 29 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to spark unbeaten Mississippi State's upset of Wake Forest. The Deacons took a 43-38 lead into the second half, but fell to their first defeat in eight starts.

UCLA, 8-1, got a career-high 19 points from center Brett Vroman and led by as many as 34 points before resting its regulars against Southern Methodist.

Clemson's 52-point victory over Boston College was the calm after a storm for 7-foot-1 Wayne "Tree" Rollins, who scored 25 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

Nevada-Las Vegas, on 21 points by reserve center Lewis Brown, beat Eastern Michigan to move into the finals of their tournament to face St. Mary's.

Butch Lee scored 25 points and Bo Ellis added 23, leaving just 16 points for the other Marquette players in the Warriors' runaway triumph.

Rick Wilson's 22 points powered Louisville past Rutgers and into the finals of the Louisville Classic against Creighton. Freshman Bill Bryant tallied 17 points to help carry Maryland into the finals of its tournament against Syracuse, which got 30 points from Jean Williams in blasting Boston College. Maryland and Syracuse are 8-1.

The University of Utah routed Nevada-Reno behind 27 points by Buster Matheny to win the Wolfpack Classic.

A 22-point performance by Rick Apke and a 16-point game by John Johnson led Creighton's triumph over Auburn.

Mike Haynes Named Top NFL Defensive Rookie

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Haynes, the New England Patriots' cornerback who was chosen National Football League Defensive Rookie of the Year by The Associated Press, has a warning for the rest of the NFL.

"I'm going to be better next year," he said. "I think we're all going to be better."

Haynes and the rest of the young Patriots came within a whisker of knocking off Oakland in the first round of the NFL playoffs. The Raiders, of course, have now advanced to the Super Bowl against Minnesota Jan. 9 in Pasadena, Calif.

Much of New England's success this season could be traced to Haynes, who was the fifth player chosen in the 1976 college draft. He was the first defensive back selected and repaid the Patriots' confidence in him by immediately moving into a starting role.

Haynes finished second in the American Conference with eight interceptions and led the AFC with 45 punt returns for 608 yards. He averaged 13.5 yards per punt return, only two-tenths of a yard less than the NFL leader, Denver's Rick Upchurch.

Two of his punt returns were for touchdowns. He went 89 yards against Buffalo on Nov. 7, producing the first Patriot

TD on a punt return in the club's history. Three weeks later, he repeated the feat, going 62 yards against Denver for another score.

Seven of his interceptions came in a span of four games that had people all over the league talking about him. Still, he didn't think he'd win rookie honors.

"I'm very surprised," he said. "You don't expect something like this when you start out."

Haynes, who played his college football at Arizona State, received 66 votes from The AP panel of 84 sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL franchise.

Walton Spoils Party For Bulls In Chicago

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Bill Walton is a party pooper. A record crowd of 19,889, the most ever to watch pro basketball in Chicago, turned out at the Stadium to watch Walton and the powerful Portland Trail Blazers battle Artis Gilmore and the surging Chicago Bulls Tuesday night. And with three minutes to go, the home folks were happy as their club clung to a 75-74 lead.

But Walton hit a free throw to tie the score, then banked in a pair of baskets before scoring the game's final point on a free throw. He also grabbed four rebounds in those final three minutes as Portland scored an 84-79 triumph.

Walton led all players with 29 points and 18 rebounds.

Elsewhere, Seattle edged Atlanta 120-119, the New York Knicks beat Houston 111-99, Kansas City defeated Cleveland 113-106, Washington topped Indiana 117-111, San Antonio outscored Philadelphia 127-116, Denver downed Phoenix 110-102, Milwaukee topped Golden State 113-102 and Los Angeles trounced Boston 134-105.

Sonics 120, Hawks 119

Seattle blew a 20-point lead and trailed 117-116 before Tom Burleson's basket put them back on top and Fred Brown's two free throws clinched it.

Knicks 111, Rockets 99

Tom McMillen, who played 41 minutes because Knicks forwards Bob McAdoo and Spencer Haywood were sidelined by injuries, scored a career-high 31 points against Houston.

Kings 113, Cavaliers 106

Brian Taylor scored 12 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter and rookie Richard Washington chipped in 10 of his 20 in that period as the Kings dealt Cleveland its third straight loss.

Spurs 127, 76ers 116

George Gervin scored 29 points and Larry Kenon added 22 to lead the Spurs to their fourth win in a row as they capitalized on 34 Philadelphia turnovers.

Bucks 113, Warriors 102

Milwaukee erased a four-point deficit by outscoring Golden State 20-6 in a four-minute stretch late in the fourth quarter.

Bullets 117, Pacers 111

Rookie Larry Wright's jumper snapped a 109-109 tie and led Washington to victory. Elvin Hayes scored 31 points and Wright came off the bench to hit 25 to offset 34 points by Billy Knight and a season-high 27 by Dave Robisch.

Nuggets 110, Suns 102

Dan Issel's 34 points and nine rebounds helped Denver past Phoenix, which lost injury plagued center Alvan Adams, last year's rookie of the year, because of an ankle injury in the first period.

Lakers 134, Celtics 105

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 30 points helped Los Angeles beat Boston for the first time in two years.

Duke Signs Two

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Football coach Mike McGee of Duke University has announced the signing of two football prospects from the Washington, D.C., area.

They are 240-pound tackle Brian Holloway of Potomac High School in Potomac, Md., and linebacker-center Joe Rowe of T.C. Willis High School in Alexandria, Va.

McGee said Holloway, 6-7, was a two-year starter at defensive tackle and earned allcounty honors this season. Potomac was 19-2 over the past two seasons.

Rowe, who's 6-2 and 212 pounds, was an all-metropolitan linebacker and all-district center and was co-captain of his team which finished 7-2-1 last season, the Duke coach said.

Talks Earplug Vendor Scheme

By KAREN SOUTHWICK
UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa.
(UPI) — An expert on the effect of loud music on hearing believes discotheques should provide earplug vending machines for those who want some protection.

Dr. Gordon Bienvenue says it is known that loud music alone is definitely hazardous to 10 to 15 per cent of all people.

"We know at least some people are harmed if the music is loud enough," said Bienvenue, a professor at Pennsylvania State University. "The loud music all by itself doesn't seem to be extremely hazardous except for 10 to 15 per cent."

"However, a lot of people are getting a total safe exposure to noise in work places and then going to a disco at night and adding a couple of hours more, putting them over the safety level."

Bienvenue suggested vending machines with inexpensive, unobtrusive earplugs be placed in discos or any place with high level sound. Such protective devices already are required in industrial locations.

"You could still hear the music and experience the vibrations, the 'feel' of the music," he said and the earplugs would cut down on the sound level.

He also suggested warning signs similar to those on cigarette cartons at locations where there is high-level sound. Bienvenue, research associate at Penn State's Environmental Acoustics Laboratory, has been involved in audiological research for five years and previously worked with Army personnel suffering hearing losses.

His conclusions and those of other specialists on whether there are proven long term hearing losses due to exposure to loud music were presented at a recent Penn State graduate seminar entitled, "Is Music Noise?"

Studies on the effects of loud music generally have avoided people who work in industries and used those to whom exposure to the disco music is the only time they are above safe noise levels. Because of this, Bienvenue said these studies have shown only small amounts of hearing loss.

But, says Bienvenue, "there are definitely people who are more susceptible to high-level sound."

His research involves trying to find an earlier detector of sensitivity to high-level sound. He believes the time will come when, "you can have a test performed that will tell you if you are sound sensitive and if you should avoid high-level sound." But that is at least five or six years off.

For now, individuals suffering hearing loss may not notice it because Bienvenue said "single exposure is not measurable. It accumulates over a period of time."

The nerve damage that results in hearing loss is permanent, although it won't be total deafness. The victim generally is unable to distinguish what is being said when there are many sounds in the background, such as at a cocktail party.

"In our society it is very difficult to find situations where you don't have background," Bienvenue said. "As the hearing loss gets worse, the ability to pick sounds out of background is the thing that falls apart earliest and to the greatest extent."

He pointed out federal regulations set the absolute maximum noise safety level at 115 decibels (DBs). Anything above that at industrial points is a violation, while exposure to lower DB levels for lengths of time is also considered hazardous.

Bienvenue said 105 DBs is equivalent to standing right next to a large-sized bulldozer operating at full capacity.

At least one rock group has claimed it can get 125 DBs in the middle of an arena. Bienvenue noted the level would be much higher right next to the amplifier.

Most home stereo equipment cannot produce a hazardous level of sound. But Bienvenue said the use of earphones can. He said earphones can amplify the sound up to 130 to 135 decibels.

AGRICULTURE STUDENTS ARE ON THE RISE

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Student enrollment in the College of Agriculture at the Pennsylvania State University for the fall semester totaled 3,650, an all-time record for the college.

Robert E. Swope, assistant dean for resident education in the college, noted the increase in total enrollment from 3,463 last year and said that it was estimated that 70 per cent of the students came from urban and suburban areas of the state.

TV Show Is By Students

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Students at Spauld Junior High School produce their only television newscast and show it via closed circuit to each classroom every morning.

At 8:25 a.m., students and faculty are briefed on school announcements, sports previews, interviews with school officials and reports from student council meetings.

Spauld is one of three in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg system equipped with its own television cameras. Although the television systems are something of a novelty, school officials say they are designed to be aid in educational.

William E. Sweezy, media services director for the school system, said the television equipment may be eventually installed at all local schools. He said the total cost for each school would be about $3,200.

Schools with the equipment can tape special assemblies and use the tape later. Teachers and student teachers can tape themselves and evaluate their teaching techniques. Activities in one classroom can be beamed to the entire school.

At Spauld, a 35-member student committee produces the broadcasts, with some students acting as announcers and others as behind-the-camera workers.

Cop Retiring To Write Scripts

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It sounds strange for an ex-Green Beret, a former police SWAT team member, to admit it. But Rick Kelbaugh, who was both of those, says he originally wanted to get into the dramatic arts.

"So I don't know," the 31-year-old officer laughed. "Maybe the Man upstairs was saying along the way, 'Okay, kid, now I'm going to give you your chance. But the only way I can do it is to let you crash and burn.'"

So next month, after nine years as a Los Angeles cop, Kelbaugh is retiring, "pulling the pin," putting in for a disability pension nearly two years after almost burning to death in a police helicopter crash.

And he'll start his first year as a fulltime writer, with three "Police Story" scripts already logged, plus story outlines he sold the NBC series, one about the crash and his still-continuing recovery from it.

The accident that helped decide Kelbaugh's transition from a man of action to a man of letters came in what the easy-talking, Utah-born officer calls "the not-so-merry month of May" in 1974.

That month, he had to shoot and kill a suspect holding a hostage at gunpoint. Then he nearly was killed in the head-line-making shootout between police and Symbionese Liberation Army members here.

Two days after that came the helicopter crash, during a SWAT training demonstration. It left a police commander dead and Kelbaugh in critical condition with burns over 60 per cent of his body.

"We were about 150 feet off the deck when the damn thing just quit running," he said in a phone interview from suburban Rowland Heights, where he lives on a small ranch with his wife, Bonnie, and their two kids.

"It went into a violent spin, smashed into a low hill. I thought I was going to be dead anyway, because I saw the hill coming up through the plexiglass and thought, 'Hell, this is it.'"

Initially, he said, doctors thought he'd be in the hospital eight months, "if I lived."

"But I ended up staying there three months. The one good thing I had going was that I was in good physical shape before the crash."

But the recovery still took more than a year, a year of painful skin grafts, painful exercises, continuing treatments at the Sherman Oaks Burn Center in suburban Los Angeles.

During the period of recovery, Kelbaugh, who says he had sold his first effort as a writer to "Police Story" before the crash, signed on with the now-defunct ABC series, "S.W.A.T.," as a technical adviser.

But during that year, in which he got a cram course in all facets of television production, he set himself the goal of getting back on the police force, back to the work he loved.

He wasn't allowed back on the SWAT — Special Weapons and Tactics Team — because his burns limited the mobility a SWAT member needs. So he first worked in robbery-homicide, then narcotics.

Kelbaugh, who kept writing while recovering, said he finally decided, "Okay, now it's time for me to retire. I've gone back and proved to myself I can still do it."

"But the pain of just getting up in the morning to go to work, to spend a half hour in the shower just to limber up the joints, well, it got to be a hassle. I said, 'Now's the time to make a change.'"

But before he made the change, he sought out Liam O'Brien, the tough, barrel-chested "Police Story" producer, for a professional opinion on whether he could make it in Hollywood as a fulltime writer.

"He's a goddamn good writer," O'Brien said in a separate interview. "I told him, 'Rick, go ahead. You can write. You can make it.'"

And, said O'Brien, who thinks Kelbaugh will be a top Hollywood writer in a few years, "as long as 'Police Story' is alive, he's good for two or three assignments a year here."

'Baby X' Found Inside A Charlotte Trashcan

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Doctors called the newborn infant "Baby X" because they had no idea what his real name might be. If he had a name.

The infant was found Tuesday in a trashcan outside a local restaurant. Doctors at Memorial Hospital here said he was no more than five hours old when he was found.

As doctors did everything they could to keep Baby X alive, police were doing all they could to find his mother, or whoever had left him outside a McDonald's restaurant.

"We don't have much to go on," said Police Maj. Sam Killmann. Officers were searching for a young man and woman seen near the restaurant before the baby was found.

"We don't know if there is any connection or not, but it's the only lead we have," Killmann said. Witnesses reported the young woman looked "weak," he said.

Baby X was found by William Hardlaw, who was going about his regular noontime task of emptying trashcans.

"This one trashcan seemed heavier than usual," he said. He opened it, saw a bloodied bundle and called police.

When officers arrived, they unwrapped the bundle and found the infant. He was not moving, and they believed him to be dead until the baby whimpered.

The baby stopped breathing in an ambulance, but was revived at the hospital, said hospital spokesman John Lottich.

He said the infant weighed about seven pounds and appeared to be normal.

The baby was in critical condition as doctors worked to raise his body temperature after exposure to morning temperatures that peaked at 52 degrees.

"The body temperature was too low to measure when it was brought in," Lottich said.

Killmann said the only clues police had to work with were the sighting of the young couple, and the handkerchiefs and plastic bag which the baby was wrapped in.

RICK KELBAUGH is retiring next month from the L.A. Police S.W.A.T. squad to become a full-time writer. (AP Wirephoto)

Attitudes Program To Begin Here On Jan. 10

Developed by Personal Dynamics of Minneapolis, Minn., the program is being used in colleges and educational systems, corrections programs, and major corporations across the country over the past 18 years.

Information and registration forms are available from the Chamber of Commerce. The tuition is $60.00 for the entire 30 hour program including all printed materials. Additional members of the same family may enroll for $45.00. Registration deadline for the program is January 4.

Woman Held For Slaying

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Biltmore Forest police have charged a 20-year-old Asheville woman with first degree murder and armed robbery.

The charges followed the fatal shooting of a 74-year-old beauty salon receptionist Tuesday afternoon.

The charges were brought against Carolyn Snow in the killing of Mrs. Tomsie DeNardo, also of Asheville.

"We have a confession from Miss Snow," said Capt. William Green of the Biltmore Forest Police Department. "She said she went into the place and that the gun went off."

Green said Miss Snow told officers that she is a drug addict with a $500-a-day habit and needed money.

The robbery-slaying occurred about 4 p.m. at the Lloyd Salon of Hair Styling in the fashionable village suburb of Biltmore Forest, on Asheville's south side.

Police said Miss Snow fled the scene in a borrowed automobile which was found abandoned at a church in the Arden-Rural Pines area by the State Highway Patrol. Miss Snow was taken into custody by police at a nearby house.

According to police, Miss Snow entered the shop wearing a ski mask and carrying a pistol.

"She told everyone to get up against the wall and then she was going through Mrs. DeNardo's desk with one hand and holding the gun with the other when the gun went off," Green said.

George Washington was the only president to be inaugurated in two cities. He took the oath of office in New York City on April 30, 1789, and in Philadelphia on March 4, 1793.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain, snow and snow flurries are forecast Wednesday for almost all of the northern half of the nation. Mild weather is expected from the southern Rockies to Texas, but most of the nation will be cold. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Snow accompanied a blast of cold air into the mountains of North Carolina early today and travelers warnings were issued in the central and northern mountain regions.

Most of the snowfall landed on surfaces warmed by mild temperatures and turned to slush before freezing and creating dangerous driving conditions, the National Weather Service reported.

About an inch of snow was reported in some western sections of the state early today and up to two inches more was in the immediate forecast.

Most of the primary roads were sanded to improve conditions, but secondary roads were reported to be extremely hazardous in mountain regions.

Winds were brisk around the state Tuesday and temperatures climbed into the 50s. Wilmington was the warmest reporting station with 59 degrees. During the night some of the light snowfall reached the northern Piedmont, while some light showers developed in the south coastal sections.

Temperatures dropped into the 20s in the mountains, into the 30s across the central sections and into the 40s points east.

Partly cloudy skies and colder temperatures were in the forecast today through Thursday, with highs ranging from the mid-20s in the mountains to the lower 50s along the coast. High today will range from the mid 20s and low 30s in the mountains to the lower 50s along the south coast.

Lows tonight will be in the teens in the mountains ranging to the lower 30s on the Outer Banks. Highs Thursday will be in the mid-20s to mid-30s in the mountains and in the 40s elsewhere.

We are often asked our opinion about the value of the "Unusual No Trump" convention, and have just as often expressed our doubts about its effectiveness. Unless there is a reasonable chance that you will buy the contract, the bid usually gives declarer invaluable information on how to play the hand. Certainly it steered declarer to the winning line here.

West's "Unusual No Trump" asked his partner to bid his better minor. North doubled to show a good hand and South gave his partner the right of way, in case he wanted to make a penalty double of three clubs. North, however, introduced his heart suit, then had just enough to raise to game after South rebid his spades.

West led the king of clubs, which was allowed to win. The queen of clubs went to the ace, and the ace-king of trumps revealed the bad break. It now seemed that declarer had four more losers, but he was able to read the hand perfectly, thanks to the information he had that West held ten or eleven cards in the minor suits.

First, South cashed dummy's top hearts, and West's discard on the second round revealed the lie of every card. Declarer ruffed a heart, entered dummy with a club ruff and ruffed another heart. He went back to dummy with the ace of diamonds and ruffed dummy's last heart as East followed helplessly. Ten tricks were in the bag, and declarer graciously conceded the last two tricks to the defenders.

Actually, both defenders won these tricks. East was left clutching two high trumps, while West held a high diamond and a high club. The defenders' four tricks had been telescoped into two!

Scientists Add A 'Leap Second'

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Federal scientists are adding a "leap second" to 1976 because the earth is spinning one second slower this year than the standard 365-day calendar calls for.

Officials at the National Bureau of Standards here said Tuesday the second will be inserted on Dec. 31 in order to keep atomic clocks functioning properly.

"Compared to the atomic clocks," the bureau said, "the earth is slowing down enough that the extra second is needed to keep the clocks synchronized to the spin of the earth within one second."

Commandant Sees A 'Bum Rap'

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer
WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Military Academy's commandant says he was told that Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann vowed months ago he had to be ousted because of the worst cheating scandal in the 174-year-old institution's history. But a Hoffmann spokesman denies the charge.

The outgoing commandant, Brig. Gen. Walter F. Ulmer Jr., a 1952 West Point graduate, said in an interview with The Associated Press that "somebody told me" Hoffmann said last summer that "Ulmer has to go."

Hoffmann was unavailable for comment Tuesday, but his spokesman said in Washington that "Marty doesn't do things like that." He reiterated Hoffmann's earlier statement that the commandant's transfer at least half a year early was a routine management decision unrelated to the scandal.

Asked whether his sudden reassignment to the 2d Armored Division at Ft. Hood, Tex., was a "bum rap," Ulmer replied, "I truly think it is."

Adding that he had offered before his transfer to forego any promotion and stay "as long as I can contribute something," Ulmer said his departure would traumatize the corps of some 4,000 cadets.

Although his staff characterized him as a "sacrificial lamb," Ulmer declined to go that far.

He did say, however, "My move was an extraordinary one, and there's no denying that. I am changing station rather abruptly to go to a job which has been open for five months.

"The real question is why do you move the commandant at this particular time, and the answer is I don't know. If I thought this was going to make things better for the institution, I'd volunteer to leave."

Ulmer added that, whatever the qualifications of his successor, Brig. Gen. John Bard, "they don't really need a new commandant unless I can't perform the job here."

In protest of the Army's handling of Ulmer, the special assistant to the commandant for honor matters, Col. Hal B. Rhyne, said he was retiring despite the prospect of a choice command in the spring.

"It was just this final straw when the Army uses the commandant as a sacrificial lamb in this whole thing," the 1954 West Point graduate declared. "It just was more than I could take."

Ulmer's reassignment was disclosed a few days before a special commission headed by former astronaut Frank Borman reported on Dec. 15 institutional deficiencies at West Point and called for reinstatement "as soon as possible" of the 151 cadets implicated in the scandal.

And a separate report by the Army's general counsel office said Ulmer had acted improperly with respect to Army defense lawyers.

Doerun Courier Is Just Resting

DOERUN, Ga. (AP) — Homer Garrett's paper may not go to press any more.

He's not sure he'll get it out again.

"I'm 91. And when you get to be 91, you don't know what in the hell you're going to do, do you?" Garrett, who has published the Doerun Courier more or less periodically since 1919 said in a telephone interview Tuesday night that life may have caught up with him.

"I'm not quitting," he said. "I'm just temporarily out of business. You know what I mean."

"I didn't get out but six issues last year. I hope I'm going to get out some issues in 1977, but I don't know. When you get to be 91 you can't hardly see how to set type."

"My last issue was in June, but it was a little late. I didn't get it out until July," he said.

Garrett may be the last of his breed. He still sets type by hand, when he sets it. But right now, his press is greased and waiting.

He said he has 400 "understanding" subscribers.

"They understand me," he said. "They know I'm going to publish when I can. I don't owe a dime. I own my own business. I think I've made something of it."

He writes a personal column whenever he gets his paper out. It begins with "Deer Peepul," said is signed "The Office Boy."

He said his hero is Benjamin Franklin, and his column often contained some Franklin-type philosophy.

The Courier office is the only two-story building in downtown Doerun still in use. The front door has a broken glass, a reminder of the day Garrett forgot his key.

A more or less permanent sign hangs on the door. It says, "At home working in the garden."

"I think I've been successful," he said. "God Almighty told me to be an editor."

How come?

"Some preachers say they were called to preach. I was called to be an editor."
