Americans today will focus their attentions to Washington, D. C., for the beginning of the inauguration festivities.

Representation from Pitt County includes Mrs. David Speir of Bethel, who is chairman of the county's Democratic Party, and her husband. The Speirs will leave Thursday and will be attending the N. C. Inaugural Ball Thursday evening at the Crystal City Marriott, Arlington, Va., and a White House reception Friday morning.

The Speir's daughter, Candy, of Alexandria, Va., will also be attending several Inaugural parties and the swearing in ceremony and parade. Miss Speir is a press aide for the House Sub-Committee on Energy.

Charles McLawhorn of Winterville left by special train from Raleigh this morning. Some of the things he plans to attend are an Inaugural party at the Washington-Hilton Hotel Thursday night, Senator Robert Morgan's reception, the N. C. Inaugural Ball, a reception for Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland at the National Press Building Thursday.

This evening, McLawhorn will be attending the N. C. Democratic Club in conjunction with the State Democratic Party's reception in the Caucus Room of the Cannon House, the Vice President-elect's reception this afternoon, and the swearing ceremony.

Sam McLawhorn of Rt. 1, Grifton, left early Monday morning. Some of the activities on his agenda are the swearing in ceremony, an Inauguration party Thursday night and the N. C. Inaugural Ball. "I am planning on not missing a thing. When you are a strong Democratic and work 12 months in the Democratic campaigns, you are entitled to a little relaxation," said McLawhorn. He will also be visiting his son, Whit.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilton R. Duke Jr. of Farmville also left Wednesday afternoon. The couple will be staying with friends and will be attending the parade and swearing in ceremonies.

Mrs. Catherine Lang of Greenville left this morning on Amtrak out of Raleigh. She will be attending a number of things and all of the North Carolina events.

Tom Taft, also of Greenville, left today and will be attending all of the Inaugural events including the N. C. Congressional reception tonight, Sen. Morgan's reception, the N. C. Inaugural Ball and one of the Jimmy Carter Inaugural Balls. "The most exciting plans for the weekend will be attending the Carolina-Maryland basketball game Saturday," said Taft.

Others from Pitt County planning to be in Washington, D. C., are Don Leggett, T. R. Pierce, Mrs. Louise Snowden, Delano Berry, all of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville, Wiley Gaskins, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Reeves and Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Odham, all of Grifton, and Mayor and Mrs. Ross Persinger of Ayden.

A special reception honoring the Vice President-elect and Mrs. Walter Mondale initiated the activities. The reception was held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3-5 p.m. at the Pension Office Building.

A unique gala, the New Spirit Inaugural Concert, is slated for tonight at the Opera House of the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts.

The President and Vice President of the United States will assume office as the Inauguration Ceremony begins at 11:30 a.m. Thursday with the oath of office being administered at noon.

Jimmy Carter will be the 27th President to be sworn in outside the Capitol steps. After the 35-word oath of office has been administered to the President and the Vice President has been sworn into office, President Jimmy Carter will deliver the traditional Inaugural Address.

The Inaugural Parade will begin at 1:30 p.m. and will follow the official Inaugural Ceremony. The theme of the parade is "A New Spirit, A New Commitment, A New America."

In order to open the Inauguration to as many people as possible, the parties are usually held in several locations throughout the city. This year 40,000 to 50,000 invitations to the six Inaugural Parties were issued.

Youth Arrested On Four Counts Of Forgery

A 16-year-old Rt. 1, Winterville youth was arrested Tuesday and charged with four counts of forgery, according to Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Sheriff Tyson said that Gregory Moore was charged with cashing four checks on the account of Milton Carmon totaling $40. Moore allegedly used the name of Gregory Tyson in cashing the checks, it was noted.

The checks, all drawn on North Carolina National Bank, were cashed at Joe's Quick Shop in Winterville in the amount of $10, two at Harris Super Market in Ayden for $10 and $5, and at the Super Dollar Store in Ayden for $15.

Bond for Moore was set at $8,000 with a hearing scheduled for Feb. 10 in Ayden District Court.

PREMIER KILLED

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav Premier Dzemal Bijedic, who had held the office since 1971, was killed in an airplane crash Tuesday. He was 60.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Carter is coming to town. President Ford is getting ready to leave and Washington has begun its inaugural hoopla amid bitter winter cold.

The bands began to play Tuesday night at parties thrown by the inaugural committee for the incoming Democrats. And at the White House, outgoing President Ford threw a surprise party for his wife, Betty.

Carter planned to leave his Plains, Ga., home and fly to Washington today after stopping at the Plains railroad depot to send off neighbors and friends traveling aboard a special inauguration-bound train.

Carter, 52, confessed Tuesday night that he felt "a little sad" about leaving his home town, but was ready for the move.

The peanut farmer-turned politician will spend tonight, the eve of his inauguration as the nation's 39th president, in Blair House across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House. He will attend a nationally televised pre-inaugural gala at the Kennedy Center tonight.

President Ford, who spent some 30 months in the executive mansion he will vacate Thursday, kicked up his heels Tuesday night at the surprise party, with 100 close friends and Cabinet members attending.

The 63-year-old President, whose term ends at noon Thursday, invited new Republican members of Congress to visit him in the White House today on his last full day in office.

Ford, who came to Washington as a freshman congressman in 1949, plans to depart after Carter's swearing-in. He will fly by helicopter and presidential jet to California, where he has a date to play in the Bing Crosby golf tournament at Pebble Beach on Friday. The Fords have rented a home in the Palm Springs resort area and plan to live there.

An aide said Tuesday that Ford, who will have a 24-member staff and $1 million for transition expenses through Sept. 30, plans to speak at various colleges in the months to come. He will spend three days in February at Yale, where he attended law school.

A cold wave put a damper on the Democrats' fireworks display at the Washington Monument on Tuesday night. With temperatures in the teens, the Park Service estimated only 1,000 persons were on the snow-covered Mall for the display of four tons of fireworks. A million persons watched the pyrotechnics on the same spot last July 4th.

But the crowds were expected to swell to the hundreds of thousands for Thursday's swearing-in ceremony, the parade down Pennsylvania Avenue and the parties — official and otherwise — all over town.

A cold wave settled over the city more than a week ago, icing over streets and sending the thermometer plummeting to near zero at night.

Temperatures were expected to rise as high as the low 30s on Thursday with a chance of snow in the afternoon or evening.

The festivities that began Tuesday run for five days, with dozens of free events. The seven official parties Saturday night are open only to holders of the hard-to-come-by $25 tickets.

Inflation Rate Is Slowed To Lowest Rise In Years

By ROBERT A. DOKKIN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a moderate four-tenths of one per cent in December, bringing the over-all rise in prices in 1976 to 4.8 per cent, the smallest inflation rate in four years, the government reported today.

The annual increase bettered the Ford administration's goal of reducing inflation to a 5 or 6 per cent rate for the year and marked the best record since elaborate government wage-price controls held the rise in consumer prices to 3.4 per cent in 1972.

In 1973, prices rose 8.8 per cent, followed by a 12.2 per cent rate in 1974 and a 7 per cent inflation rate in 1975.

Although the rate of inflation cooled last year, the annual increase was still more than what Americans had become accustomed to during most of the post-World War II period when prices increased an average of 2 to 3 per cent a year.

A decline of nine-tenths of 1 per cent in grocery prices last year, the first December-to-December drop since 1961, helped slow the inflation rate, the Labor Department said.

In announcing the year-end figures, the department also reported that the purchasing power of the average worker's paycheck increased for the third month in a row, rising two-tenths of 1 per cent.

Over the year, real spendable earnings — take-home pay after reductions for inflation and taxes — were up one-tenth of 1 per cent as a 1.8 per cent increase in real gross average weekly earnings more than offset a rise in taxes, the government said.

Retail prices for food, non-food commodities and services all rose less than in 1975.

Declines for beef, pork and poultry led to the decline in grocery prices last year. In 1975, these prices rose 6.2 per cent. Over-all food prices, including the cost of restaurant meals, increased six-tenths of 1 per cent in 1976, down dramatically from 6.5 per cent in the previous year.

Nonfood commodities rose 5.1 per cent in 1976, compared with a 6.2 per cent in 1975. Smaller increases for gasoline, fuel oil, household durables and new cars contributed to the slowdown.

The cost of services rose 7.3 per cent last year, less than the 8.1 per cent advance in 1975. Charges for medical care and transportation services increased about as much as in 1975, but the rise in household services other than rent moderated.

In December, the consumer price index stood at 174.3, meaning that it cost $174.30 to buy the same marketbasket of goods and services that cost $100 in the 1967 base period. The index is not seasonally adjusted as are the percentage changes.

New Trustee And Chief Of Medical Staff Are Welcomed By Board

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Memorial Hospital Trustees last night welcomed Dr. Hubert Eaton of Wilmington as a new trustee and Dr. Jack Welch as the new Chief of the Medical Staff.

A nominating committee was appointed by Board Chairman Wilton Duke. Robert Monk is chairman and Leroy James and Mrs. Nancy Norwood are serving with him to pick a slate of officers to be considered at the March meeting. At that meeting the terms of Duke, Ed of Pacolus, and Delton Perry of Bethel will be completed, since these three have served two six-year terms and this is the limit for any trustee's tenure according to the by-laws.

The board approved a finance committee recommendation that Warren McRoy be authorized to sign any hospital checks up to $5,000 and co-sign ones larger than that amount.

Approval was given to raising the salaries of one anesthetist $2,000 and two others, $1,000, and also to pay insurance premiums for anesthetists, whose rates have gone up this year from $72 to $725.

Radiology technicians' base pay was raised from $3.70 an hour to $4.04.

Both these measures were taken mid-year because the finance committee said it must be done to keep Pitt competitive with other hospitals and therefore able to get and keep people in these vital jobs.

Approved was the disbursement of $11,000 for the printing of information booklets to be distributed to each patient who enters the hospital.

Also approved was the hiring of an employment officer and an administrator for surgical services.

The Board was told that a suit brought against the hospital by the estate of Hubert G. Coltrain has been dismissed by Judge Sam Ervin III. The judge ruled that the hospital was not negligent in restraining Coltrain sufficiently so as to keep him from going out a window and on to a ledge from which he fell. The incident took place several years ago. Three punctuation changes suggested by the Internal Revenue Service after review of the hospital pension plan and pension trust agreement were approved by the Board, making the plan retroactive to Jan. 1.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson reported that Freeman-White Associates, engineers for the new hospital, are providing a second construction manager to share Ralph Hall's duties as he becomes busier with the completion and occupation of the building.

A team will visit here Friday, it was reported, to explore the possibility of setting up an Organ Procurement Unit. Also being considered is a Burn Unit.

Assistant Administrator for Nursing Services Jean Owens reported the issues she feels are causing the most dissatisfaction among nurses nationwide. She listed these as lack of control over their own work load, lack of representation on committees that determine hospital care, lack of representation on standard-setting boards, too much paperwork, too many non-nursing activities.

She said that the nature of hospital care is such that work load cannot be fully determined, but that as many nurses as seem to be needed are hired here. She said she had just come from a staff meeting at which there were more nurses present than doctors—that nurses do have input at Pitt Memorial.

She said a messenger service and a number of other measures have been taken in the past couple of years to ensure that

ICY PONDS DANGEROUS

I am fearful for kids playing on and near icy streams and ponds in this area. We're just not used to weather conditions as we're having them now and young people may not realize the danger of thin ice and the cold water beneath it till it's too late. They and their parents should be warned. A. T

Hotline talked to Billy Woolfolk of the Greenville Rescue Squad. He said that at the time of our call Tuesday, the Squad had had no calls as a result of anyone's falling into icy water, but that it is both possible and likely.

Of course, the breaking of bones and other injuries are also likely if one chooses to play on ice, even shallow areas like that on puddles, he reminded.

"Ice, wherever it is, is tempting when you're a kid," he said, but he reminded that there are skating rinks in the area now and suggested these as a better alternative.

CB INTERFERENCE

I keep experiencing citizen's band radio interference on my stereo. Please help me obtain contact with the FCC. B. S.

Hotline called the Norfolk Federal Communications Commission office and obtained the following information: Anyone wishing to report interference on radio, television, or stereo sets to the FCC should send information about the situation IN WRITING to the Norfolk office, describing in detail exactly what's happenings and at what time of day it's most likely to happen. Names of operators interfering, if known, or any handles or other possibly identifying information heard should be included. The address to mail this information to is FCC, 870 N. Military Highway, Norfolk, Va. 23502.

Reports may NOT be called in. All you'll get for your long distance call is a recording giving the information stated above.

Interference on telephones should be reported directly to the telephone company in one's area, the recording said.

Ice At The Port Terminal

FROZEN OVER — The water in the creek at Port Terminal, east of Greenville, was completely covered with a layer of ice Tuesday afternoon. Pitt County area temperatures never exceeded 29 degrees Tuesday. During the continuous sub-freezing temperatures this week, many area creeks, ponds, canals and other waterways have remained frozen. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

What To Do About Tasteless Ads

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Now that someone wrote in to complain about offensive TV commercials, I want to state my objections.

I really don't see anything so offensive about feminine hygiene products. But what spoils my appetite are commercials about acid indigestion, sinus trouble, hemorrhoids and diarrhea.

While having my dinner, I don't want to look into anybody's nose, down his throat or through his bowels. Thank you.

TURNED OFF IN TRENTON

DEAR TURNED OFF: Several thousand other readers wrote in. Read on for two vastly different views, and what to do about offensive advertising.

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to say that douche, Kotex and tampon commercials on TV were offensive and should be banished. (She said her teenagers left the room in embarrassment when such ads came on.)

Children who are reared with these products in plain sight in the bathroom and who have their questions answered frankly would not be embarrassed by these ads.

I think beer and cigarette commercials are far more harmful. (Fortunately, we have done away with the latter.)

If this lady wants to get uptight about something, she should forget the commercials and concentrate on the crime, violence and foul language we are getting in our TV "entertainment."

And while I'm sounding off, I would like to add that I think our movie code is all wet, too. Movies in which people maim and kill each other are okay for kids to see, but kissing and making love is for adults only.

Don't get me wrong, Abby: I'm not advocating pornography or heavy sex. But I'd rather have my kids see kissing than beer and cigars. After all, sex and menstruation are natural functions—violence, murder, alcoholism and nicotine addiction are not!

ALABAMA BAPTIST

DEAR ABBY: I am in complete agreement with that person who wrote to complain about the feminine hygiene products that are now advertised on TV.

These commercials have been such a source of embarrassment to us that we no longer turn on our set when we have guests. We have grandchildren and have noticed that when they watch TV here, they are frequently so embarrassed by some of the commercials that they leave the room.

Abby, I don't know why advertisements for such products cannot be confined to newspapers and magazines. Where can I write to register my complaint? If enough people protest, maybe we can get some action.

NEWSDAY READER: L.I., N.Y.

DEAR READER: Send your complaints to:

EMILIE GRIFFIN
NATIONAL ADVERTISING COUNCIL OF BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU
845 THIRD AVENUE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10022

You can also refuse to buy the product whose TV commercials offend you, then write to the president of the company who manufactures it and tell him why you bought another brand.

If enough people protest in this manner, offensive commercials will be taken off the air. (P.S. If you lose the above address, write to me, and I'll forward your letter to the proper party.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Miss White Weds Rev. Loftin

WILMINGTON — Miss Frances Belinda White and the Rev. Paul Lavern Loftin exchanged vows during a candlelight ceremony Saturday at 5 p. m. in the First Pentecostal Holiness Church here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie C. White of Wilmington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Loftin of Ayden.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank Gentry of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents, and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of white organza fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline and empire waist. The long fitted sleeves were accented with a Venice lace ruffle. Her headpiece was a Camelot cap with a chapel-length veil, also edged with Venice lace. Her bouquet was a French-styled cascade of ivory roses, white carnations and snowdrift chrysanthemums accented with baby's breath. The bouquet was finished with a Victorian lace back.

The nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Lila Head, organist. Mrs. Teresa Powell sang "Whither Thou Goest" and Emory Powell sang "The Wedding Song" as the couple lit the Trinity candle.

Miss Cynthia White attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of royal blue designed with an empire waist and attached long cape. She carried a colonial bouquet of white marguerite daisies, white carnations, baby's breath and accents of dried dark blue hill flowers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Crawford of Burlington, Mrs. Donna Powell, Miss Lori Ross and Miss Beverly Ward, all of Wilmington, and Mrs. Betty Loftin, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, of Martinsville, Va. Their light blue gowns were similar to that of the honor attendant, as were their bouquets.

Miss Jennifer Twigg of Wilmington was flower girl. She was dressed identically to the other attendants. She carried a white woven basket of white and blue flowers.

Bryan Loftin, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Robert E. Loftin, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were David Hayes of Fayetteville, Wayland Loftin, brother of the bridegroom, of Martinsville, Va., Tony Mills, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, of Wilmington; Elmer Rook of Greenville, and Ken Shirley of Royston, Ga. Jimmy Ward of Wilmington served as junior usher.

The mother of the bride wore an aqua gown designed with a jewel neckline and empire waist. The dress was complemented by a full-length lace coat and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a mint green gown with an overlay of pleated chiffon and long chiffon sleeves. She also wore a white carnation corsage.

Mrs. Janette Mills, sister of the bridegroom presided at the guest register. Mrs. Hilda Beasley of Wilmington directed the wedding.

Parents of the bride entertained at a reception immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. It was directed by Mrs. Retha Ward of Wilmington.

The bride's table was covered with a handmade cutwork Irish linen cloth centered with a tiered three-leaf clover wedding cake and silver candelabra accented with epergnettes of pastel flowers. Mrs. Brenda Bishop and Mrs. Dianne Twigg, both of Wilmington, served cake, while Mrs. Connie Bennett, also of Wilmington, poured punch. Mrs. Helen Tartt of Wilmington greeted guests and said good-byes.

After the reception, the couple left on a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina. They will make their home in Smithfield.

Mrs. Janette Mills entertained at a bridesmaids' luncheon in her home Friday.

The wedding party, members of their families and out-of-town guests were honored at an after-rehearsal party Friday evening. It was given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Loftin at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Mills.

The bride is a graduate of New Hanover High School and attended the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Eden Epitomized The Empire

Perhaps former British prime minister Anthony Eden epitomized the empire as much as anyone beyond the royal family itself.

The suave Eden died last week at 79. His beloved empire had died well before him and perhaps the end was symbolized, as much as anything, by the abortive Suez invasion in 1956 while Eden was prime minister. That was a blow to Eden and ended his governmental career.

Since then Great Britain's power and wealth has waned until now there is talk of even Scotland breaking away.

It wasn't always that way, however, and Anthony

Eden's service to his country spanned a time when England was one of the most powerful nations on earth.

Eden fought bravely for England in World War I, then turned to governmental service following that war. He was one of those who recognized the danger in the rise of Hitler and resigned from the Chamberlain cabinet in protest of the appeasement of the dictator.

Anthony Eden's time had come and gone by the time of his death. During his career, however, he had contributed much to his country and to the world.

Adulation Of Gilmore Is A Poor Facet

Gary Mark Gilmore is dead, executed by a Utah firing squad.

In achieving his own execution, Gilmore obtained a type of fame and adulation that is usually reserved for movie and television stars, or sports heroes.

All this came after his cold blooded killing of two innocent people. You don't have to be for or against capital punishment to wonder if this sort of hero worship isn't the very worst facet of mankind.

THIS AFTERNOON

Year Of The Referendum?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Given the mood of assemblymen in this 1977 session of the Legislature, this may be the year of the referendum in North Carolina's history books.

Plainly evident among elected representatives is the mood that they'd just as soon not get themselves staked out on some of the emotional issues which lurk in the wings as the session gets underway. After all, why risk future political hopes and ambitions in a "no-win" situation, goes the reasoning of many members of the General Assembly.

The Issues

And while those emotional issues are not the most significant and important ones in terms of North Carolina's future, they are the ones which hold the heat to ignite passions: death penalty; equal rights for women; liquor-by-the-drink; veto; succession for the governor; bond issues and tax increases at a time when money is tight, revenues not growing as expected, and taxpayers generally demanding some relief from rising tax bills.

Perhaps it is the simplicity of the issues which make them such emotional ones. All are rather clearcut, easily understood as to impact, and having been debated over the years each has developed rabid constituents — pro or con.

Oddly enough, those issues which have far-reaching implications for Tar Heels are the least emotional, and attract less argument: land use legislation, insurance rate structures, governance of public education, reform of correctional programs, zero-based budgeting and sunset legislation, beefed-up open meeting laws, minimum competency for high school graduation, teacher tenure and certification changes, etc.

Such legislation is complex; argument swirls around each, but usually involving vested interest groups with expert staff to help dissect and either propose or oppose parts or whole pieces. Such "normal" legislative activity the assemblymen can cope with.

But when the "whole public" gets involved and attitudes are clearly split with no way for legislators to see where the majority of people stand, then you begin to hear the lawmakers mumbling among themselves for an election.

A Package

It would not be surprising to many close to the decision-making process in the General Assembly to see a package of proposals take shape for an early statewide referendum:

—Liquor-by-the-drink would provide for a statewide vote on whether a county could hold another election to approve a prescribed system within that particular county. This is different enough from the statewide referendum of three years ago which saw whisky defeated by a two-to-one margin to make it acceptable to many.

—Death Penalty legislation would provide for a dual jury system in which one jury would decide guilt or innocence, a second hearing (which may have the same jury as the first sitting again) would hear sentencing arguments and mitigations and decide the punishment.

—Several alternate suggestions are being talked about on gubernatorial succession and veto: a six-year term rather than two four-year terms? A veto which can or can't be overridden? Why not let the people express their desire, some legislators wonder.

—An increase in taxes on tobacco, liquor, beer, wine, and other non-essentials? Why face the wrath of the lobbyists alone, some legislators feel. Let the people speak.

—Bond issues are being talked in at least two areas: highways and prison construction. Each area needs about $300 million.

Equal Rights for Women promises another battle over whether the state will endorse the proposed amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A New Brzezinski View

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Zbigniew Brzezinski, President-elect Carter's national security adviser, has privately informed the Israeli government and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance he no longer agrees with a 1975 report that he signed proposing a Palestinian state next to Israel.

Brzezinski's change of heart breaks the solid front of one of the most prominent Middle East study groups ever put together. Although he is on solid ground to shed foreign policy positions that might risk embarrassing conflict with the new President, his switch was not made known to the other 15 members of the Brookings Institution's study group.

The issue of a Palestinian state is one of the hottest in the Middle East, but the Brookings study group courageously met it head-on. It reported in December 1975 that no settlement is possible unless "Israel accepts the principle of Palestinian self-determination" — and conversely, the Palestinians "must recognize the sovereignty and integrity of Israel."

The Israeli government has been specifically informed by Brzezinski that he refused to sign a letter from the Brookings study group to Vance formally turning over the report to the new administration. Brzezinski intimates said he had abandoned the report partly because he had "changed his mind" about the Palestinian issue during the 1976 trip to the Middle East, and partly because of his new job.

But skeptics worry that the real reason may have more to do with the desires of Israel — and the reflection of those desires in the pro-Israel lobby here — than Brzezinski's changed perceptions.

A footnote: Adding to the skeptics' concern is the fact that Brzezinski's National Security Council (NSC) staff, now being newly formed by top to bottom, will be run by David Aaron, Vice President-elect Mondale's longtime legislative assistant. During his dozen years in the Senate, Mondale was consistently in the pro-Israeli legislative vanguard.

BAKER'S MR. SAM

The upset one-vote victory as Senate Republican leader chalked up by Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee 10 days ago received an invaluable backstage boost from a most unlikely source: former Democratic Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. of North Carolina.

He helped remove the only serious reservation about Baker among many Republican Senators — longstanding rumors and innuendo that Baker had played a double game during the Senate Watergate hearings.

Watergate committee chairman Ervin quietly informed liberal Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. of Maryland — who made the first nominating speech for Baker in the Republican caucus — that he would gladly write Mathias a Baker if Mathias or any other Republican Senator needed such reassurance.

The cloud around Baker had been thickened by John Dean's recently published "Blind Ambition." Dean, whose acute memory served him so well before the Ervin committee, wrote that Baker had a secret session with Richard Nixon in his Executive Office Building hideaway early in the Watergate investigation. According to "Blind Ambition," Baker concealed that fact until Dean privately warned him that he, Dean, would

To the editor:

We honestly cannot blame Sasquatch for throwing rocks at humans as they did in the movie shown at the downtown Pitt Theater. My neighbor, his 13-year-old son, my nine-year-old son, and I decided Saturday afternoon to see the movie, "Sasquatch", which was, by the way, rated "G".

First, mind you, we were only entertained by the preview of a very "R"-rated movie, which 90 per cent of the then-present audience would not be allowed to see the movie for another five to 10 years, to say the least. But what impressions it must make on the parents to find out their child is looking at a "G"-rated movie, but did not know the first five to 10 minutes showing in the cinema should be rated "X".

Good thinking and well done, Pitt!

And keep on throwing those rocks, Sasquatch.

"DO UNTO OTHERS..."

Philippe Pinel, a Frenchman who died in 1828, was the man who is most responsible for bringing about humane treatment for the insane. For centuries before this time, insane and disturbed people were treated as criminals. They were manacled, chained to posts, and very often cruelly beaten and abused.

Much that Pinel said about insanity would not stand the test of modern scientific knowledge, but he did establish the principle that unreasonableness is not to be beaten out of people and that a person cannot be restored to sanity by being treated like an animal.

Pinel also made clear that this same principle applies to people generally considered to be sane. If we treat people we dislike with contempt and distaste, they will respond in kind — often in an even more pronounced fashion. But if we respect their dignity as men and women and behave toward them with consideration, they may reveal much higher moral character than we have given them credit for.

Tips For The Appointees

WASHINGTON — It is no secret that many of the people who will work with President Jimmy Carter have never been to Washington before. They will have to learn the ropes on how this town operates over a period of time. But I think someone should warn Carter appointees about a few of the things to beware.

When someone offers you a free trip to South Korea and sticks a plain white envelope for expenses in your pocket, do some serious Seoul-searching before accepting it.

If a Washington vice president of Multi-National Co. tells you he knows a nice girl who has nothing to do with her afternoons — or evenings — make certain she is not writing her memoirs.

When the president of a major aircraft company invites you to the corporation's hunting lodge for the weekend he isn't just shooting ducks.

If the Pentagon offers you a ride in their B-1 bomber, it doesn't mean they're trying to save you the air fare to Atlanta.

There is no such thing as "free lunch" at the Sans Souci.

The first thing to do when you get to Washington is find a literary agent. The second thing is to buy a four-year diary and fill it every day with vignettes about the mistakes made by the people you work with in the Administration. It is never too early to start writing your book.

Now that you are in the Carter Administration you will be known by newspapermen as an "official source." You will be expected to provide a certain of leaks to avoid getting a bad press. The safest place to leak information to reporters is at PTA meetings. The worst place is the National Press Club.

Don't waste time writing letters to the newspapers protesting a Jack Anderson column. They never get printed.

If you want to get something in the Evans and Novak column, be sure and specify it's "off the record."

If you're invited to play tennis or golf with a Washington lawyer you will be astounded how many times you win.

Don't let it go to your head. Washington lawyers are fantastically adept at losing to people in every new administration.

When you're invited to a cocktail or dinner party and your wife is concerned about what to wear, assure her she has nothing to worry about. If she's wearing blue jeans and an apron everyone will still tell her she looks beautiful.

If an aide asks your permission to tap the home telephone of someone else in the government, be sure you don't put it in writing.

If a superior asks you to tap someone's home telephone, be sure and put it in writing.

If a young lady approaches you on 14th St., and asks if you would like to go with her to a baseball game in Washington for a few hours, don't say yes. Washington doesn't have a baseball team, and she could be a policeman in drag.

If you go out on the town at night and someone suggests you all go for a swim at the Tidal Basin, forget it. It isn't heated and there are no lifeguards on duty at night.

That's about all I can think of for the moment. The thing to remember that no matter how important you are in the Administration you still have to put your pants on the same way as everybody else does in the morning. Unless, of course, you're a female appointee. Then you can put them on any way you want to.

'Evita' Is An Opera

By TOM JORY

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Would you listen to a rock opera about the life of Eva Peron? No, it's not a joke.

Eva Duarte Peron, second wife of Argentine dictator Juan Peron, may be an unlikely subject for the idiom that produced Elvis and the Beatles, but how would a rock opera on the life of Christ strike you if you hadn't heard of "Jesus Christ Superstar"?

Well, the boys who brought you "Superstar" now bring you "Evita," a serious, entertaining, hard rock look at the woman who rose dramatically from less-than-respectable beginnings to the side of one of South America's most dominant figures.

"She's an extremely impressive person, a remarkable person," said Tim Rice, 32, who wrote the words for "Evita." "And that doesn't mean one admires her 100 per cent. I like to say most people are good and bad. She was very good and very bad."

The rock opera was unveiled in album form here this week for the media and selected trendsetters, including Sylvia Miles and Prince Egon von Furstenburg. A head-start single of one of the opera's most stirring songs, "Don't Cry for Me, Argentina," already has sold a quarter-million copies in England.

Rice caught the idea for "Evita" from a radio broadcast he heard in 1973, spent some time in Argentina "getting the facts and a feel for the country," then returned home to England to sell the idea to Andrew Lloyd Webber.

Rice got the facts — Eva Peron's mundane background, her career in motion pictures and on the radio, her marriage to then-Criol Juan D. Peron and the brief decade she spent as one of the world's most glamorous, powerful and beloved women. It ends with her death.

40 Years Ago Today

January 19, 1937

Deadlocks gripped the nation's two biggest labor disputes today, dashing hopes of quick settlement in the automobile workers' strike against the General Motors Corporation and a seamen's walkout on the Pacific coast.

The two controversies affect some 156,000 of the nation's 214,000 strike idle, including 115,000 General Motors employees and 40,000 maritime workers.

A UAW picket line estimated by union officials to number 1,000 men withstood a police tear gas attack today and closed the Briggs Manufacturing Company's Detroit plant.

Striking at an average speed of 32 miles an hour, Howard Hughes, flying movie producer, today drove his high-speed monoplane across the country in seven hours, 31 minutes for a new transcontinental speed mark.

Hughes took off from Los Angeles at 2:14 a.m. (5:14 a.m. EST) and roared down across Newark municipal airport 2,000 miles away to make his official time seven hours, 29 minutes, 27 seconds.

The new record breaks his old mark of nine hours, 25 minutes and 10 seconds made last January 14.

Legionnaire's Disease Said Identified

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — It took thousands of tests, dozens of researchers and scores of chicken eggs to find the still-unnamed killer that claimed 29 lives in Philadelphia last summer.

Almost six months after reports of mysterious deaths started trickling to increasingly alarmed Pennsylvania officials, sleuthing scientists declared Tuesday that the cause of Legionnaires' disease was a bacteria-like organism never before isolated.

Isolating the organism does not solve the mystery, but it does give researchers something to look for. The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said it will continue testing the 151 persons who recovered and will return to Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel to try to determine how the organism might have grown and been transmitted.

Most victims had attended the Pennsylvania American Legion convention headquartered at the now-closed Bellevue. All died from an upper respiratory infection similar to pneumonia.

The disease baffled city, state and federal scientists. Theories ranged from swine flu to poisonous metals to parrot fever — even sabotage was considered.

The scientists started at the beginning — with blood and tissue samples from the dead and the sick. The blood samples showed high levels of antibodies.

"We originally incubated autopsy materials in guinea pigs, and we got fever, which is a pretty good indication of bacterial infection," said Dr. Joseph McDade, a research microbiologist with the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Known bacteria didn't react to the antibodies, so they were ruled out as the killers.

Searching for an answer

among rickettsia — one-celled organisms smaller than bacteria — McDade again inoculated guinea pigs with tissue material from victims' lungs. The animals became ill.

McDade then injected chicken eggs with tissue from the sick guinea pigs and, sure enough, the embryos died. He found bacteria in the eggs, but so few that they had to be a contaminant, not a thriving group of organisms that killed, he thought.

The tests were run and rerun. Then, during another routine rickettsia test over the Christmas holidays, McDade found something different growing in the yoke sac of one of the eggs.

Most bacteria can be grown easily, but researchers found this organism very difficult to grow in an artificial medium.

Researchers eventually succeeded, and blood serum from 33 "typical survivors" of Legionnaires' disease was tested on the organisms.

Antibodies in the blood reacted in 29 cases. That meant the organism was the one the victims' bodies were fighting off.

But what was it? Did it kill all the victims? How did the victims catch the disease?

Researchers don't know yet. But they do know that the disease was not contagious, and that people who had the disease are "no danger to anyone in their communities whatsoever," Dr. Charles Shepard, chief of the leprosy and rickettsia branch at CDC, told a news conference Tuesday.

Did it kill all the victims or did some die of other illnesses, including Broad Street pneumonia, which struck some persons who were not delegates and had not been in the hotel in Philadelphia during the July 1976, convention?

How did the victims catch the disease?

Researchers don't know yet. "You can tell whether a disease is contagious or not by whether it spreads to people contacted by the patient," said Dr. Charles C. Shepard, chief of the leprosy and rickettsia branch at CDC. "There was no spread."

Victims of Legionnaires' Disease are "no danger to anyone in their communities whatsoever," he said at a news conference Tuesday to announce the findings.

Researchers are back in Philadelphia to get new blood samples. Others are doing tests on the blood serum of those who died.

More of the victims were smokers than nonsmokers, but that is normal in any upper respiratory infection, said Dr. David W. Fraser, a medical epidemiologist who is part of the research team in Philadelphia.

Researchers admit they don't know much about this organism, now newly classified on the list of organisms that cause reveal it in his public testimony.

Ervin, now retired back home in North Carolina, reacted strongly to criticism of Baker by both Dean and by Sam Dash, counsel of the Ervin committee whose book "Chief Counsel" was published late last year.

Ervin told us over the telephone: "Any innuendo that Baker was playing a double game is not accurate. If he went to see Nixon, I know it was to try to get his cooperation with the committee. Baker and I did have minor differences, but it is my strong conviction that he was out to get the truth and that he served his country well."

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Wednesday, January 19, 1977 — 5 piece of music in 1976 the kind of impact she had 25 or 30 years ago.

"Evita" from Webber and Rice is a striking and not always flattering portrait of a woman of unflagging energy, driven by a desire to improve the lives of the masses and revered as a saint by her "shirtless ones." She was hated by the army and Argentina's aristocracy and, after all, was the powerful wife of a powerful dictator.

Carter Special Is On Its Way

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer
ABOARD THE INAUGURAL SPECIAL (AP) — Clerks and schoolteachers, government officials and a railroad executive rode the bumpy, curving rails from Atlanta to the nation's capitol today on a pilgrimage to see a Southern peanut farmer inaugurated as president.

Nearly 400 persons paid about $200 each for a seat on the "Jimmy Carter Georgia Inaugural Special" which left Atlanta shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday on a 15-hour northward trip.

Throughout the 18 cars on the Georgia train, a party atmosphere prevailed. But the passengers were clearly saving the hoopla for their arrival in Washington and the ceremonies to install Jimmy Carter in the White House.

The Stone Mountain High School Pep Band played vigorous selections for passengers as they pulled out of Atlanta's Brookwood Station, and another high school band was on hand at Gainesville, Ga., where the train stopped to pick up additional passengers.

Members of the Georgia Poultry Federation and the Georgia Milk Producers Association passed out samples of their products as the train lurched along its way. Around midnight the film, "Silver Streak" was shown in the train's dining car. The film features a train-wreck scene.

The passengers were mostly white, mostly middle-class and mostly without young children.

Marie Cross, who works for the city of Atlanta, seemed to speak for most passengers when she explained why she was on the trip.

"It's an honor for a Georgian and a Southerner to be President and I want to be part of it."

Mrs. Lucy Lee of Hoboken, Ga., journeying to Washington with her husband and another couple, said "I'm a Democrat, too. And I didn't want to be left behind."

The best seat on the train clearly belonged to W. Graham Clayton, chairman of the board of Southern Railway, which operated the special train.

Hosting news reporters in his private observation car at the rear of the train, Clayton watched the miles of track slipping beneath the train's wheels, talked about the problems of the railroad industry and speculated on the Carter administration.

"I think he'll be good for the trip.

Ida Howard, an Atlanta schoolteacher, said, "I love my Georgia boy" and added she had "mystical feelings about the trip."

"Here we have a man who is not known and was almost scoffed at, at first," she added.

Another passenger, Bill Ferguson, an Atlanta actuary, said, "I kind of think of it as an historic event. He set for himself a goal. He was laughed at intensely. But he achieved that goal. You've got to admire him."

John Blackmon, an attorney who was Carter's state revenue commissioner, said, "I think it's absolutely fabulous."

Blackmon brought his two young daughters with him on the trip "because they'll always be able to say they were there."

businessmen ... the business community has been very pleasantly surprised by the appointments he's made so far."

But looking out into the night over the gleaming tracks, he also talked of passenger fares which don't pay the cost of operating the trains and commented, "There's no way long distance passenger service can ever break even on fares."

Goose Lost Its Plastic Noose

CARY (AP) — The goose has lost its noose.

The noose was the plastic holder for a six-pack of beer that somehow had got entangled around the neck of a Canada goose on an ice-covered lake at Cary near Raleigh.

Shipping Bodies Of 44 Launch Victims

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — The bodies of 44 American servicemen killed when a Spanish freighter capsized a U.S. Navy landing craft were being flown to the United States today. One sailor believed killed was located ashore in Barcelona, officials said. He was not identified.

Divers resumed their search for the bodies of five men still missing.

A Navy spokesman said 126 sailors and Marines were aboard the launch when it capsized. He denied a report by the Spanish news agency CIFA that there were 150 servicemen on the boat and it was overloaded.

All but two of the 30 hospitalized with injuries had been released by today, officials said.

A Navy spokesman said the 44 bodies that had been recovered were flown to the U.S. Air Force's Torrejon base outside the Madrid and would be flown to the United States. He said they would go to the U.S. Air Force Base at Dover, Del., and the first planeload was scheduled to leave today.

A list of 27 of the dead was issued in Washington on Tuesday. The Navy Department said other names would be given out after next of kin were notified.

The 56-foot landing craft was on its way to the helicopter carrier Guam and the transport Trenton with sailors and Marines who had been on weekend leave in Barcelona. Survivors said the boat was just pulling out from the shore when the 380-ton freighter loomed out of the darkness, hit the American boat and turned it over.

Charge Against Deputy Dropped

LINCOLNTON (AP) — Dist. Atty. Hamp Childs said charges against Lincoln County's chief deputy sheriff, growing out of a breakin at the Lincoln Country Club in 1975, were dismissed Tuesday.

The officer, Fletcher Whitesides, had been charged with receiving stolen goods and with conspiracy in breaking, entering and larceny.

Sheriff Harven Crouse said Whitesides will be reinstated to duty. Whitesides has been under suspension since his indictment last October in the incident.

Childs said his action in dismissing the charges was taken after Johnny Hamrick, who was charged with the robbery, changed his story that Whitesides was involved.

Carter Taking His Time Over Selecting New CIA Director

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Carter is taking his time selecting a new nominee to head the CIA and the agency will be without a director for a while after Thursday's inauguration.

Carter spokesman Jody Powell told reporters in Plains, Ga., Tuesday that Carter will not name a new nominee before next week.

Carter's first choice, Theodore C. Sorensen, withdrew his nomination Monday, saying that "scurrilous" personal attacks would either defeat him or leave him with a narrow and divisive confirmation.

Outgoing CIA Director George Bush took issue Tuesday with Sorensen's contention that some people in the intelligence community opposed him because he was an outsider.

"I was an outsider ... and I'm not egotistical enough to think that everybody in the intelligence community believes as I believe," said Bush, a former Republican congressman, GOP national chairman and diplomat at the United Nations and in China.

"But as an outsider, I was given fantastic support, and the discipline and integrity of the intelligence community is such that it will support its director," declared Bush after a briefing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Several committee members praised Bush's performance during his 12 months as CIA director.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., suggested that Carter keep Bush in the post until he chooses a successor. Humphrey said the new president "will want his own man, but I don't believe there's any hurry. George has done a good job and I am sorry to see him leave."

But Bush told newsmen that he leaves office at noon Thursday "when I stop being paid."

Powell said the President-elect has not decided whom he will nominate. He said Carter was aware of press reports that he was considering Bill D. Moyers, a CBS News correspondent who was President Lyndon

Remedy For Tax Cheats

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Property Tax Study Commission says the General Assembly should study a plan under which counties could collect property tax on cars when owners buy their license tags.

County tax officials say they lose hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax revenue to owners who fail to register their cars for tax purposes each January as required by law.

Under the commission proposal, counties could apply their tax rate to cars on the spot, using valuations from a standard manual.

The commission said the idea could not be implemented this year because it would interfere with plans to begin staggering license renewals through the year instead of having all come due at the same time.

But it suggested that the General Assembly create a high-level commission or an interim legislative committee to study the problem and prepare a bill for the 1978 legislature.

County tax personnel have been complaining for years that owners have been cheating on their property taxes by not registering their cars.

The number of such delinquents has grown in recent years. Wake County officials estimated, for example, that they may have been losing more than $360,000 on 30,000 unregistered cars.

State law allows tax collectors to garnish wages, bank accounts, rents and other debts owed to delinquents to secure payment.

Progress Is Cited In Legislators' Budget-Making

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Progress has already begun in the legislative budget-making process as lawmakers begin learning about where the state's money comes from and how it is spent.

In what amounts to schools in the basics of state budget making, legislators on money committees have been meeting to hear broad statements about the state's money situation.

Tuesday, the chairmen of the two finance committees—Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, and Rep. Robert Farmer, D-Wake—said their panels will meet jointly whenever possible to save time. In the early part of the session joint meetings are possible because the committees commonly review the state's income picture. But, Rauch noted, the panels will have different bills to work on as the session goes along and will not be able to meet jointly.

The finance committees find sources of money while the appropriations committees spend it. In the Senate, finance and appropriations are under the Ways and Means Committee.

The Ways and Means Committee met with the House Appropriations Committee Tuesday afternoon. The members were given a rundown on the proposed $7.9 billion budget for the 1977-79 biennium.

The budget was released Monday night in Gov. Jim Hunt's State of the State address. It had been prepared by the administration of Gov. Jim Holshouser and the Advisory Budget Commission with Hunt taking some of his programs onto it.

Beginning Tuesday and running through Thursday, the lawmakers will be given outlines of how state agencies spend money. The information is being provided by the legislature's Fiscal Research Division.

Next week, the lawmakers will begin questioning state department heads to learn details of how the agencies are using funds. Until work on building the new budget actually begins later in the session, the lawmakers will be looking for ways to cut spending in government.

In the joint finance committees meeting, Revenue Director Mark Lynch told the lawmakers where the money comes from, detailing the sources.

Also in the General Assembly:

REGISTRATION

A bill to prevent abuse of declaring party affiliation on primary election day was filed by Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake. As under current law, a person registered without a party affiliation would be allowed to declare a party at the polls and vote in a primary.

But, if the voter changed back to no party, he would not be able to change again on primary election day. He would be able to change registration when the books are normally open, though.

The bill would also abolish the "independent" classification, substituting "no party" on registration books. The independent classification causes confusion because some states have an Independent party, Adams said.

DRIVERS TEST

Sen. Robert Somers, R-Rowan, filed a bill that would allow safe drivers to continue to renew their licenses without taking a test. A bill passed by the 1974 legislature at Somers' urging allowed license renewals without tests for just three years. Somers' bill would make the provision permanent.

Drivers who have tickets or chargeable accidents on their records would still need to pass the test, as is the case now, he said. "It's a way to reward people for obeying the law and it didn't cost anything," he said.

ABC RULES

Rep. Richard Erwin, D-Forsyth, filed a bill to repeal as a crime a violation of Alcoholic Beverage Control regulations. The bill would have no effect on a violation of ABC laws being a crime.

TRIALS

A bill filed by Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, would require trial within 90 days for a person charged with a crime. If the trial is not begun in that time, the charges would be dismissed and the person freed.

Offer Wine With Grits

ATLANTA (AP) — Should a light, dry, white wine be served with grits, or would champagne or even a red be more appropriate?

In the unlikely event that the worst fears of Washington, D.C. hostesses are realized, several Atlanta wine merchants offered suggestions Tuesday on how President-elect Carter can serve grits with social grace at official functions.

"Personally I don't care for grits, so I would serve a wine that would make them at least half-palatable," said Fred Weck, manager of the Ansley Mall Wine and Cheese Shop.

He suggested a Chenin Blanc. "It's light and a little bit sweet and might cover up the taste of the grits," he explained.

Jerry Greenbaum, president of Green's Wine Stores, believes "there ain't no wine that goes with grits." But he added, "If they're going to be served why not a peach wine from Georgia."

Carter has given no indication what part grits — a traditional Southern dish made from corn — will play in the culinary processes of his administration. But he has said no alcoholic drink stronger than wine will be served at the White House

No Charges In Auto Accident

No charges were reported following investigation of a 1 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson and Pennsylvania Avenues.

Police identified the drivers involved as Deborah Susan Williams of Route 3, Greenville, and Vina Parrott Simmons of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Williams car and $600 to the Simmons auto.

Warmer In His Freezer

CHICAGO (AP) — When temperatures skid to below zero they josh Jim Turney as the man who came in from the warm.

For 25 years Turney has worked in the freezer room of an ice cream plant in temperatures of 30 to 40 below zero. He operates a fork-lift truck, moving drums of ice cream for shipping.

But Chicago's coldest winter of the century is getting to Turney.

"The cold is dry where I work and doesn't get to you as fast," he says. "Outdoors when it's 10 below and the wind is blowing, it goes right through you. It's the dampness that cuts you."

It's been so cold in these parts that Turney, sometimes hates to leave his deep freeze inside the Bresler Ice Cream Co.

On the job, he wears two insulated undersuits, a pair of coveralls, fur-lined gloves and insulated boots and headpiece.

Turney, 54, usually works in the plant's hardening room two hours at a time.

Drought To End Nomadic Life Of The Masai

TRIBAL DISASTER — Masai remove a sick cow from mud after a prolonged drought. In background, bones of another cow are visible as well as undernourished stock. (UPI Photo)

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
OLOITOKITOK, Kenya (UPI) — The Masai, tall, lithe and disdained, their long hair braided and plastered with red ochre and their bodies with mud, presented a frightening picture to the first white explorers who ventured into the interior a century ago.

They ruled an area the size of West Germany by the strength of their spears. One European traveler described the warriors as having an "Apollo-like form with the face of a fiend."

Another said they were the "Apache Indians" of East Africa.

But now, on the arid plains of western Kenya, their way of life, unchanged for centuries, is ending.

Once one of the fiercest and proudest tribes in Africa, the Masai is being forced by drought and modern day politics to come to terms with the 20th century.

In the name of progress, tribesmen are being asked to abandon their customs, don trousers and even give up their vast herds of cattle and their nomadic wanderings across East Africa's plains.

Reluctantly, the Masai themselves admit the end of the road is near.

An old Masai watched over his herd of skinny cattle and lamented: "There can't be warriors when there is drought. We have to move our cattle almost every day or they will starve. There is little time for our old ways."

The Masai ignored, as best they could, both their British colonial masters and even the independent Kenyan government, though the size of their lands was drastically reduced.

Now drought, overpopulation and overgrazing have devastated even their remaining ranges in the shadow of Africa's largest mountain, Kilimanjaro.

The Masai population has increased from 15,000 a century ago to 150,000 today. The numbers of their cattle have multiplied correspondingly.

The Masai once believed they owned all the cattle in the world. Their herds provided all their needs — blood, milk and urine for food, hides for clothes and shelter, and cow dung for the walls of their igloo-style homes.

But a continuing drought in the last few years and the increased herds have turned large areas of rangeland into dustbowl.

The cattle are dying. The government is urging the Masai to give up their nomadic existence and settle down.

Recently, Masai herdsmen in search of grazing land drove their cattle to the outskirts of Nairobi, touching off a curious debate that added politics to their increasing social problems.

"Get civilized or I quit," John Keen, a Masai member of Parliament, told his fellow tribesmen.

He urged the Masai to wear trousers, cut back their herds and send their children to school, something the Masai used to fear would cause the death of the children.

He hired a fashion designer to come up with a simplified, every-day outfit for the Masai — "easy to wear, easy to clean and cheap."

Many Masai already have begun to settle down and find steady jobs. Because of their fearlessness, they are highly prized, for instance, as night watchmen in Nairobi.

But many government officials believe the logical move for the Masai would be to become involved in organized cattle ranching.

The government is encouraging this by setting aside areas for model ranches and giving land to Masai who want to settle down.

"I would like my son to have a ranch," an old Masai nomad said. "With ranches you can have schools, doctors and big stores. And you don't have to wear trousers to run a ranch."

There are other signs of change in Masailand, too. Schools are being built and health clinics opened.

Witchdoctors are referring patients to government health officials if they cannot help.

More and more Masai are abandoning their traditional homes — bomas — and moving into permanent houses of brick, wood and tin.

But ultimately, the fate of the Masai will depend on the rains. Without water they cannot continue their current way of life or switch to cattle ranching.

"We are Masai," the old warrior said. "But our cattle need water. We cannot be Masai without water."

Luster Lost By N.Y. Nightclubs

By H. D. QUIGG
NEW YORK (UPI) — "End of an Era: N.Y. Loses Last Top Hotel Cafe."

That headline in Variety, the show business newspaper, was occasioned by the shuttering of the big and (usually) prestigious Empire Room nightclub showcase at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

From the prohibition-day "hello, suckers" bellow of Texas Guinan, through the pandemonium of Clayton, Jackson and (Jimmy) Durante, the madcap monologues of Joe E. Lewis, and the after-dark antics of myriad other top entertainers, New York has been a nightclub town.

It still is, but in a small-ambience fashion. The little places are running right along, opening, folding, struggling to cope with cover charge vs. consumer resistance. What Variety is talking about in the era-end headline is the big joint with the high-totem talent.

The Waldorf closure for the winter and spring seasons — and it may be only temporary — left Manhattan without a major hotel night room and, Variety notes, "in virtually the same position as Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Hollywood, which long ago lost their top cafe showcases."

The last year or so in Manhattan has seen the departure of the Maisonette of the St. Regis Hotel and the Persian Room of the Plaza, once a virtual home to "the incomparable" Hildegarde and scores of others.

The big niteries remaining are the Rainbow Grill (the skyhigh roofery about which comedian Fred Allen once remarked, "that's where people in Rockefeller Center go when they die — if they're good") and the Chateau Madrid. But they, Variety says, "are doing very well without expensive names."

The darkening of the three big hotel rooms "has put a severe crimp in the image of New York as a niter center" but what's the cause?

Earl Wilson, the columnist, who began dredging night life for news nuggets in 1942, says: "The problem seems to be getting talent down to a price where the room can make some money — plus competition from Las Vegas and Miami Beach. Nowadays they have to pay $25,000 a week for some of those talents."

Barney Josephson, who opened his first nightclub here in 1938 and gave such people as Lena Horne and Zero Mostel their professional start, says the troubles of the big places are economic — inflation and soaring prices, the high costs of talent, musicians, waiters, cooks and bartenders.

"They have to put the costs on the guest, and it's too high — people just don't have the money; it's as simple as that," Josephson says. "And the small places are having their troubles too. People are just not going out — and if they are, not as often."

Josephson now operates a small and unpretentious entertainment place, "The Cookery," in Greenwich Village and tries to keep it full by charging only a $3.50 minimum, which is tiny peanuts compared with the plush hostelry cough-up.

Josephson speaks fondly of the pre-inflation days. He opened the old Cafe Society Downtown with singer Billie Holiday, who got $75 a week. During World War II days he presented such song-and-comedy groups as then-unknown Betty Comden, Adolph Green and Judy Holliday; they had a pianist named Leonard Bernstein (the same).

"I served a full course prime roast beef dinner for $3.75, with the entertainment thrown in. But, after all, my entire rent was $200 a month."

A Letter From Beirut: The City Is Divided In Superficial Calm

By DOYLE McMANUS
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanon's Mediterranean winter is only a halfway season. Snow lies on the central mountains, but in Beirut the days are sunny, some of the nights still balmy.

Lebanon's new peace is a halfway affair as well.

Battered cars and elegant shoppers clog fashionable Hamra Street, now that it is clear of rubble. More and more shops reopen every day.

Newspapers are full of advertisements announcing proudly, as one did, "Abu Marwan enterprises are pursuing their activities just as they did in the past."

But underneath these signs of peace is uneasiness.

Every foreigner is asked one question: "Do you think it will last?"

At night, the streets are dark and deserted. Most Beirutis are not yet convinced that they can go out without fear of being kidnapped or robbed.

Men have stopped routinely carrying guns on the street. But the guns have all been hidden away, ready to be used again if "the troubles" resume.

The superficial calm does not feel like peace. Like the bright snow shining on Mount Lebanon, one short hot spell could melt it away.

The war has transformed the city for good.

Beirut now is two cities: The largely Moslem "western sector" and the almost wholly Christian "eastern sector."

Every day, more people get up their courage and cross the "green line" between the two sides. But they rarely cross often, and never late at night. Banks, government ministries and even universities have, carefully opened branches on both sides.

There are no guns on the "green line," except those of the Syrian peacekeepers. The barrier is psychological.

country's wars of independence.

The crazy-quilt of ragged leftist and rightist factions that ruled the streets during the war has been replaced by Arab League troops in green, brown, gray and camouflage uniforms.

The desert-dark Saudi Arabians, who seem very tall, wear bright green berets and spend hours delightedly window-shopping in front of uptown Beirut's elegant boutiques. The Syrians wear more sober maroon berets and look more serious about their work.

For an occupying army, they are all disarmingly friendly.

The Syrians often apologize courteously when they stop cars to search them for arms. A halting greeting in Arabic from a foreigner brings wide grins, laughter and a wave to go on.

A Christian girl in the car is furious. "Why did you say that?" she scolds. "I don't like being stopped in my own city. You shouldn't be nice to them."

The gunmen of both sides have doffed their uniforms and guns. Some have gone back to work; others stroll down Hamra in Paris suits. Only their bandages betraying their recent past. At least one has returned to his prewar occupation — selling hashish.

Traffic lights are working again. But drivers have not yet relearned the niceties of peacetime driving. The best way through an intersection is to honk loudly and plunge. Stopping for a red light is a sure way to get hit from behind. Peace has made the problem worse.

The number of cars on the street has rocketed. And there are huge, white-painted Syrian tanks and troop trucks at strategic crossroads. Hamra Street is once again bumper-to-bumper with cars and street hawkers selling oranges, nuts, watches, radios and anything else portable.

The best buy is liquor — the government has not yet moved in to charge taxes, and premium Scotch whiskey goes for $3.50 a bottle.

Despite weekly promises, the government has not succeeded in rebuilding the city's electrical system. Power comes only every other day, and then intermittently. Many of this year's Christmas and New Year's parties were by candlelight. Flashlights are essential for those going out in the evening.

"Not having hot water is the worst," a pretty schoolteacher volunteers cheerfully. "You can't imagine how tired I am of ice-cold showers."

People are still hesitant to make long-term plans. The planes leaving Beirut are as full as the planes coming in.

"My parents are still in London. It's still too early for them to come back," the schoolteacher says. "It doesn't feel like peace yet."

"I'm afraid to start again," says a paper-goods merchant whose shop was burned and looted. "I lost $200,000 — everything I had. I don't want to risk it again, not yet."

Violence is still in the air — and in the rhetoric of rightists and leftists, Christians and Moslems whose conflict has not been solved in 19 months of bloodshed.

Fairy Tales Termed Helpful For Kids

By JEANNE LESEM
American experts on children's literature reacted mildly to news from West Germany that Grimms fairy tales were making a comeback after 15 years of bad repute.

Child psychologists there had criticized traditional fairy tales for their violence and cruelty that they said traumatized children. Now some have changed their minds. They say such tales help rather than harm children.

"You can read almost anything you want into a book," says Barbara Rollock, coordinator of children's services at the New York Public Library.

"I have two children, and I brought them up on the traditional fairy tales. I haven't noticed any adverse results."

"It depends on how adults interpret the tales. These books can serve as a catharsis for children's insecurities."

In an interview, Mrs. Rollock said she thinks children have a greater sense of reality than adults credit them with.

Mrs. Rollock and several other children's literature specialists credit Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, a noted child psychologist, with increasing Americans' interest in fairy tales earlier this year with the publication of "The Uses of Enchantment" (Knopf). In the book he discusses the interpretations children put on fairy tales and how they use the stories in working out their own problems, learning that the world has "bad guys" as well as "good guys," and that the good sometimes lose.

"Good fairy tales (like the Grimms' and Hans Christian Andersen's) have lasted thousands of years, and they wouldn't have if they were not saying something," said Phyllis Larkin, head of the children's book department at Macmillan.

Jean Mercier, editor of children's books at "Publishers Weekly," a trade publication, thinks Grimms' tales in particular are enjoying a great resurgence of popularity in this country largely because of Maurice Sendak's illustrations and Randall Jarrell's new translation, "The Juniper Tree" (Farrar, Straus and Giroux).

Rapid Schedule Set For Bringing ERA To Floor

RALEIGH (AP) - A rapid-fire schedule that could bring the Equal Rights Amendment issue to the House floor by early February was outlined Tuesday by Rep. John R. Gamble Jr., chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

Longjohns Big Sellers

By The Associated Press
Everybody seems to be buying longjohns and thermal underwear these days. Three guesses why.
"Folks are buying warm things out of necessity this year, not just because they want it. They really need it," said Dick Nokes, merchandise manager of the Durham Sears store.
"People are standing in line for them," he added. "Sometimes I think I'm the East Coast distributor."
"We have just about run out," said sales clerk Faye Sheehan of Hudson-Belk department store in downtown Raleigh.
"In fact, we're wearing them here in the front of the store what with people coming in and out and opening the doors all day."
A Fair Bluff merchant had the foresight to order an extra supply.
"I ordered about two to three times more and I still have about 25 per cent of what I ordered. It has really sold in the last two or three days because of the cold spell," said Randy Britt, partner in a general store, B.H. Small and Co.
Sears in Greensboro said the longjohns weren't moving too quickly, but thermal underwear is going fast.
"We're out of the large bottoms and two out of every three persons want large," a clerk said.

N.C. Farms Are Bigger

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farms are still getting bigger, but there aren't as many of them and total farm acreage is diminishing.
The North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says 3,000 of the state's farmers gave it up in the past year. There are now 122,000 farms in North Carolina.
"The smaller farmers are getting out of business because it isn't economically advantageous any more," a service spokesman said. "Many of the smaller farmers are finding that they must either get out or get bigger and it appears that most are getting out."
The decline in the number of farms continues a national trend that began 26 years ago. Total land devoted to farming also declined from 13.6 million acres in 1975 to 13.5 million in 1976. This year the figure stands at 13.3 million acres.
"The average size of a farm has been increasing in North Carolina by an acre or two a year, so what we are seeing is not so much farmland going out of production, but just the number of farms decreasing," the spokesman said.
"This isn't something unique to North Carolina," he added. "This is a trend all over the country."
Farm numbers in the United States have declined by 15 per cent during the last decade, but farmland dropped only four per cent. The average size of an American farm last year was 390 acres. In North Carolina it was 108 acres.

The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee, meanwhile, decided at an informal session to wait until the House acts on ERA before taking up the issue and not to hold joint public hearings with the House.
"It was the consensus of the Senate committee that no action be taken until the House has acted," said Sen. Cecil Hill, D-Transylvania, chairman of the Senate group. "The feeling of the committee was that the members of the Senate committee ought to attend the hearings conducted by the House committee as unofficial delegates."

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, remarked that the Senate group would have wasted its time by holding public hearings if ERA dies in the House.
Miller filed the ERA ratification measure Monday night with 44 House members joining him in sponsoring it. He said several other House members had indicated support of the bill which requires only a simple majority of the House and Senate members present when a vote is taken.

So far, 34 states have ratified ERA and the approval of four others is needed for it to become the law of the land. The amendment says that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

When Gov. Jim Hunt voiced strong support of ERA in his State of the State speech to the legislature Monday night, it brought a prolonged round of loud applause. Miller said that "obviously the governor's remarks brought applause and support and I believe it will be helpful."

"I have every expectation the bill will receive favorable consideration after debate and that this bill will be ratified," Miller said.

Will Sue Over Non-Delivery

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. said Tuesday it would seek $400 million damages from a French firm for failing to deliver uranium fuel to CP&L nuclear plants.
CP&L said that Uranex was unwilling to deliver about 12 million pounds of uranium at prices agreed to in a 1973 contract. The contract calls for delivery between 1977 and 1986.
The $400 million represents the difference between the contract price of between $7 and $8 per pound and the current market price of uranium.
The contract called for arbitration of disputes in New York under rules of the American Arbitration Association.
Should CP&L not be able to obtain the uranium at the promised price or the damages, CP&L customers would have to make up the $400 million in additional costs during the 1980s.

BOUGHT NIXON OFFICE

LA HABRA, Calif. (AP) — Don Bendetti, a Southern California fan of former President Richard M. Nixon, says he and two friends bought Nixon's former law office here and will restore it so people can visit the site.

BROTHER DOMINIC — Jack Eagle, a Borscht Belt comic, has a confession: his portrayal (above) of Brother Dominic, the monk on award-winning Xerox commercials, has lifted him from obscurity to what he calls a "semi-name". His fee for night club comedy work has gone up and he is frequently hailed as Brother Dominic or "the monk". (AP Wirephoto)

Today's Young Offenders Seldom Weep In Court

By PATRICIA Mc CORMACK
UPI Education Editor

These days many youthful offenders who maim or murder don't weep in court when details of their crimes are repeated, says Judge Patrick R. Tamilla.

But the judge said facts of such crimes, related during a trial, often bring tears to his eyes as he sits in Juvenile Court in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"The accused used to cry," Judge Tamilla recalled while testifying in Pittsburgh at the first of eight National PTA regional hearings on television and violence.

Judge Tamilla was among several dozen persons who testified during the recent 12-hour hearing attracting doctors, ministers, teachers, parents and other authorities from Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

His report of the "hard hearts" among contemporary juvenile delinquents was linked by him to violence on television.

He believes violence seen on the screen desensitizes youths inclined to anti-social acts — and some adults, too. Other experts repeated that point.

As a result of the desensitization, when a youth clubs or knifes or stomps another human, he loses sight of the fact a person's involved. "It's as though they struck something inanimate," the judge said.

"Television also teaches young people how to run away from home, how to steal, how to use drugs.

"It shows girls how to be prostitutes. We see all types coming into court, getting into trouble trying to emulate something or someone they've seen on television."

Those testifying at the hearing included some television industry persons, including Roy Danish, director of the Television Information Bureau in New York.

Seymour Banks, vice president of Leo Burnett U.S.A., a firm that places $500 million worth of television commercials a year, was an observer. Clients include cereal and soap makers.

"I'm here to listen," he told United Press International. "The important thing is to understand our deep concern."

Industry observers said they also will attend hearings scheduled for Kansas City, Atlanta, Chicago this month; in Dallas, Portland, Ore.; Hartford and Los Angeles next month.

Among the teachers, Camille Faith spoke for the 6,000 members of the Teachers Association of Baltimore County in Maryland.

"In the past, family goals and morals played a dominant role in a child's formation.

"Today in some ways the extended family is made up, not of relatives, but of the Fonz, Steve Austin and Wonder Woman.

"Children spend as much time listening to these television characters as they do to their parents."

The average American child will have viewed some 15,000 hours of television by the time he has been graduated from high school — compared with his having been exposed to some 11,000 hours of formal instruction.

"It is quite common for students to watch more than three hours of television each evening," Ms. Faith said.

"A survey of teachers in our area indicates that many believe television encourages disrespect for law. This, in turn also weakens the authority of the teacher.

"Throughout the nation statistics on attacks on teachers steadily rise. Violence under minor provocation, as seen on television, makes it a more normal response to today's teenagers."

Dr. Michael B. Rothenberg, a child psychologist at the University of Washington, claims the average American youth will have seen 18,000 murders on television by the time high school graduation rolls around.

He believes regular television viewers become desensitized to violence. As a result it takes more violent offerings on television to hold their attention.

Ms. Faith said 7 year olds in her school want to be Lassie, Giant Robot, or a bionic person when they grow up.

She suggests that this may show that the youthful mind is able to judge that most human television characters do not have much to offer in an ordinary existence.

"Mechanical persons and animals are the best role models presented to our children. Is it a surprise that the American Medical Association has diagnosed television violence as a risk factor threatening the health and welfare of young Americans."

Other comments from teachers:

"It seems the only time my students really display a good deal of enthusiasm is when I incorporate ideas from television into my literature ideas."

"The unrestricted viewing is limiting interests to the cops and robbers simplistic programming. We can definitely see the effect on vocabulary, interests and so forth. Yet, television can be used constructively, too."

"It is really sad to see kindergarten children choking other five-year-olds in imitation of something seen on Kojak."

Dr. Albert Bandura of Stanford University says viewing violence blunts a child's sensitivity to it.

He conditions himself or herself to avoid being upset by the gouging, smashing and stomping he sees on television.

Bandura maintains if the viewer did get involved, his emotions could be shattered.

Dr. Frederic Wertham, a psychiatrist and respected authority on violence in the world, also reports that some who watch violence become accustomed to it. They are indifferent and feel this is how life is so you might as well see it.

"Even though there have been no definitive conclusions drawn that violence on television is a prime factor in the rising crime and violence in American society today, one can't help but feel that it has played a significant role.

"There are those who claim this is a nation which is conceived in violence and has a heritage of turbulence. One spokesperson has said violence is as American as cherry pie.

"While there might be just a bit of truth in this concept, it is not one which will further the progress of this nation."

Anne R. Somers, professor of community medicine at Rutgers Medical School is among authorities believing television violence threatens the health and welfare of American children and youth.

In a report published in "The New England Journal of Medicine," she describes the contribution of television to the current epidemic of youthful violence. Her arguments are built on studies by social scientists and government commissions.

The Journal's editor, Dr. Franz Ingelfinger, insists there is an urgent need to combat the "environmental disease" of television violence.

Another report cited during the hearing was from the American Medical Association Journal.

"In 1973," the report stated "18,032 young Americans, 15 to 21, died in motor vehicle accidents, 5,182 were murdered, and 4,098 committed suicide.

"The death rate for this age group was 19 per cent higher in 1973-74 than it had been in 1960-61, owing entirely to deaths by violence.

"For a considerable proportion of American children and youth, the 'culture of violence' is now both a major health threat and a way of life.

"One contributing factor is television's massive daily diet of symbolic crime and violence in entertainment programs."

Plans Laid By 4-H Club

A planning committee for the completion of the nature trail started at the Falkland Elementary School was discussed at the January 12 meeting of the Falkland 4-H Club. Extension agent Mike Davis will be present at the February meeting to explain in detail things that will be needed for the project.

The club agreed to clean the community building at the end of January when school is out.

It was announced that the county-wide 4-H Valentine's Dance will be held February 12 at the Wildlife Club near Falkland.

Each member selected a project for the coming year.

Volunteers were named to help prepare supper for the February Ruritan Meeting. The decorating committee agreed to decorate one day prior to the meeting.

Approximately 19 members were present at the meeting. Reports were presented by the officers.

Mike Regans Is Recognized At Conference

Mike Regans, assistant agricultural Extension agent in Pitt County, was recognized at the recent North Carolina Pork Producers Conference for his outstanding work in the Parasites or Profit (POP) program. He will receive an expense paid trip to the American Pork Conference in Des Moines, Iowa, which will be held in March.

The POP program involves sampling and testing in swine herds to help a producer determine if internal parasites are a problem. Then an effective control program can be designed.

Regans joined the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Staff in January 1976. His responsibilities include livestock, dairy, poultry and forage crop production. He is currently serving a term on the board of directors of the N.C. Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

Corn, Soybean Workshop Set

A corn and soybean workshop has been scheduled for Wednesday, February 2 at the American Legion Building. The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m.

Agricultural Extension specialists, research, and industry leaders will be a part of the corn and soybean workshop. The workshop will feature outlook information, problem spots in many fields, production, weed control, seed varieties, and marketing trends. The public is invited.

Says Non-Learner Can Become Trouble-Maker

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Teachers tend to believe students who are disciplinary problems aren't learning because they're too busy making trouble.

Actually, it's the other way around, according to Dr. William W. Purkey, a professor of education at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Purkey says students often create problems in class because they aren't learning, and teachers too often make them feel like failures.

"It's almost like Shakespeare wrote in 'Richard III,'" Purkey said. "He said, in rough translation, 'Therefore, since I cannot be a lover, I am determined to be a villain.' And that is exactly what happens in our schools."

But the educator insists that teachers can turn this kind of self-defeating behavior around.

If teachers look for ways in which problem students succeed and praise and encourage them, Purkey says, the student begins to see himself as a success and acts accordingly.

"Anyone can find fault, but to find and cultivate honest success experiences in children is the mark of a pro," he says. "That is what we need to train our teachers to do in the future."

The key, he adds, is the student's self image. "A student's self-image serves as an inner gyro-compass," he says. "It's his or her directional system. It doesn't cause behavior, but it determines the direction of behavior, for good or bad."

"In the past," Purkey adds, "educators focused primarily on punishing those students considered to be disruptive. But my thrust is working from a self concept point of view."

If students are pressured or criticized too often, they begin to consider themselves failures and stop trying.

But if teachers look for real accomplishments and give credit for them when it is due, Purkey says, the student learns to handle failure without damage to his self-image and his learning ability.

Recover 80 Bodies In Australia Rail Disaster

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Workers removed the last of 80 bodies today from the two commuter train cars crushed by a concrete overpass the train brought down when it jumped the tracks Tuesday, police reported.

The men toiled for 30 hours, hacking up the 200-ton span that flattened the two cars. The concrete was broken into 20-ton blocks that cranes lifted away. The final death toll was not known until the last large slab of concrete was pulled off and the wreckage beneath was examined.

Preliminary examinations showed that more than a dozen of the victims suffocated in the wreckage. One was found with a handkerchief over his face.

Thirty-six persons were hospitalized, some with serious injuries.

An investigation has begun into the accident, the worst train wreck in Australian history.

Premier Neville Wran of New South Wales said the state's railways were in "ramshackle condition."

The commuter train from the Blue Mountains derailed 20 miles northwest of Sydney, slammed into a stanchion supporting the highway overpass and brought the span and several automobiles down onto the two cars.

Neville McDonald, a journalist, said he was thrown to the floor when the train braked suddenly.

"I had time to pick myself up and stick my head out the window before the bridge came down," he said. "A great cloud of dust went up, and I thought the train was exploding. Everyone was stunned and silent."

Griffin added, "We are especially proud because this plant has done it faster than any other Procter and Gamble plant startup in history."

The Greenville plant was operational in August of 1975 and reached the one million mark Jan. 9, 1976, a period of about one and one-half years. The previous startup safety record for all company plants was two and one-half years, it was reported.

The plant manager pointed out, "The accumulation of safe hours is really not important in itself, but what is important is that no one who works at Procter and Gamble suffered the unnecessary pain of a disabling injury during this record period."

He concluded, "This has been possible not only because of a safe work environment, but because of the safety attitude of the employees at Procter and Gamble. Safety is one of our highest priorities."

McMurray also commended the employees for their safety efforts and remarked, "The great thing is that you came here and worked and then went home with the same thing you started with. You didn't lose any eyes or fingers."

The corporate representative told the employees that "you've really got a wonderful thing here and it's going to be a real pleasure to come back for your two million hour award."

Griffin invited the plant's team safety members to take Heart Patient Carries An Emergency Signal

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Katherine Held felt the chest pains and knew she was having a heart attack — she had already suffered four. She squeezed the pendant around her neck and within minutes, paramedics arrived at her home to give her emergency aid.

Mrs. Held, 64, now recovered, is one of more than a thousand persons who wear one-ounce transmitters, slightly larger than a pack of matches, around their necks or on their wrists.

The device, which leases for $20 a month, allows a user to set off a series of prerecorded telephone messages to paramedics, neighbors or police by triggering a separate sending unit that is kept plugged into a standard telephone jack.

Heart patients, disabled or elderly persons, shopkeepers worried about robbers or anyone else who may need help in an emergency can use the Microlet Pendant Transmitter, made by Microlet Systems International of North Hollywood.

"It's saved my life more than once," said Mrs. Held. "I wouldn't be without the thing. All I have to do is push on that little button and I've got paramedics and everybody else here."

Tom Cataldo, the 51-year-old president of MSI, said he founded the firm three years ago after his mother suffered an attack and lay alone for several hours in her Boston home before help came.

"There is often no way to get help in these situations other than by having something on your person," Cataldo said in an interview. "It just seemed like there ought to be a way for people in that situation to get help, so I decided to chuck it all and get involved in this. I had an engineering background and figured I could do something more useful with my life."

Today, Cataldo's firm has the potential to produce as many as 10,000 Microlets a month. The device can trigger its sending unit within a range of about 300 feet, setting off as many as 50 phone calls to preselected numbers, although Cataldo said five or six messages are normally sufficient.

PAGE Meeting Slated Tonight

The program for the meeting will be a discussion of the goals for PAGE, led by Mrs. Wende Allen, Research and Independent Studies teacher at Rose High School.

Dr. John Richards, ECU Special Education Department, will report on plans for Saturday morning seminars scheduled to begin Saturday, Jan. 22.

All persons interested in the enrichment program or the Saturday morning seminar series are invited to attend. For further information, call Mrs. Ann Frost, 756-7978.

Nurse Completed Study Series

Mrs. Lucille Hill, R.N. of Greenville, Home Service Director of eastern North Carolina for United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina, recently completed a workshop series on the problem oriented health care concept and record system. Sponsored by the Department of Nursing, School of Public Health, UNC-CH, the workshop emphasized writing family care plans, auditing care plans, and implementing standards of practice.

Home service consultants work with families in which at least one member has cerebral palsy, a disability affecting muscular coordination and speech control.

You May Make 'Adjustments' In Reporting Income

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the third in a series of five articles entitled "You and Your Income Taxes." They were written to help taxpayers prepare their 1976 tax returns.

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to income taxes, the amount of money you made during the year is not necessarily the amount on which you will have to pay taxes.

The government will allow you to reduce your total income by several adjustments, which are not to be confused with deductions.

All taxpayers are allowed either the standard deduction or itemized deductions. Adjustments to income are entirely different from these and will not apply to everyone.

There are six adjustments: moving expenses, employee business expenses, payments to an individual retirement account and to a Keogh Retirement plan, a forfeited interest penalty for premature withdrawal of funds from certain savings accounts, and a disability income exclusion.

The new law makes changes in five of the six. Only the forfeited interest penalty remains untouched.

This penalty is imposed by the savings institution and generally comes into play when individuals cash in long-term savings certificates before the date of maturity. If the penalty applies, it will be reported to you by the savings institution and you can deduct it from your income by putting down the amount on line 41 of the tax form.

There is a little more involved with the other adjustments.

Take job-related moving expenses reported on form 3903. The new law provides added benefits to one class of taxpayers — military personnel. Servicemen and women will be allowed to deduct out-of-pocket expenses even if they don't meet a requirement that they live at their new location for 39 weeks in the first 12 months after a service-connected move.

Civilian taxpayers must meet that time requirement to be eligible for moving expenses. In addition everybody must meet a mileage requirement: Your new job must be at least 50 miles farther away from where you used to live, than where you used to live was to where you used to work.

For example, if your former job was five miles from where you used to live, your new job must be at least 55 miles away from that former home.

If you qualify you can subtract the cost of remove and temporary living expenses, and expenses related to the sale, purchase or rental of a new home; the cost of transporting your household goods and travel and lodging to your new location. If your employer pays all or part of your moving expenses you must report the amount he contributes.

The subtraction for employee business expenses has undergone a major change this year by all but doing away with a deduction for an office-in-home. Generally, all other qualified expenses not reimbursed by your employer can still be subtracted, but you should have good records for the amounts you report on Form 2106.

As for office-in-home expenses, they are out unless you can show that the deductions are for a portion of the home used exclusively and on a regular basis for business, and for the convenience of your employer, not you.

For example, if you decide to set up an office at home because it is quieter there to go over some work than the busy company office, you don't get the deduction. That's for your convenience, not your employer's.

If that employer does not have a company pension plan and you have set up your own Individual Retirement Account, you'll find this year you can put away more than last year's limit of $1,500, if you set up a separate account for your spouse who doesn't work.

That's one of the major changes in pension plans this year and entitles you to pay up to $875 in your account and $875 in your spouse's account and then subtract $1,750 from your income for the year.

If you are self-employed, you can't have an IRA, but you still can take tax advantage of a so-called Keogh Retirement Plan that is designed for self-employed persons. It allows contributions based on a percentage of income of up to $7,500 to be subtracted from income.

Finally, the last major change in the area of adjustments involves what used to be called the sick pay exclusion.

This item has been replaced by a disability income exclusion that is more difficult for taxpayers to use.

Under the sick pay plan, certain taxpayers were allowed to subtract all or a portion of income received under a company wage continuation plan during a period of illness.

Under the disability exclusion, a taxpayer must be declared permanently disabled by either physical or mental impairment that is expected to result in death or last at least 12 consecutive months.

Only then will a subtraction of up to $100 per week, $5,200 for the year, be allowed from any wages received under a company sick-pay plan.

Device May Aid Guinea Pigs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Guinea pigs traditionally have been used for testing new medical techniques. Now a device used first on humans may wind up helping guinea pigs.

Dr. Charles Reid, a veterinarian and associate professor of radiology at the University of Pennsylvania's veterinary clinic, recently found that the xeroradiography process, which has been used for a number of years to aid in the early detection of breast cancer in women, also does an excellent job of spotting hairline fractures in animals.

The radiologist said that a horse was recently admitted to his clinic with an obvious fracture of one bone. When the animal was examined with xeroradiography, the fracture of a second bone was discovered. "The sharp detail of xeroradiography revealed the fracture clearly," Dr. Reid explained.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, bidding to break a three-session losing streak.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up a fraction in the early going. Advances held a slight lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

For December the consumer price index posted a 0.4 per cent advance.

Today's early prices included Pittston, up 1/2 at 32 1/4; Beneficial Corp., up 1/4 at 25 1/4; Dow Chemical, up 1/4 at 40 1/4; and Chrysler, down 1/4 at 20.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gave up 4.82 to 962.43, its lowest close since it finished at 960.69 last Dec. 7.

That extended the average's loss since the start of the year to 42.22 points.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 24.38 million shares, against 21.06 million on Monday.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks lost 19 to 56.04.

The American Stock Exchange market value index was off .18 at 111.12.

nurses' time can be spent on nursing, not on non-nursing duties. She said the only paperwork that nurses must do is that generated by physicians' orders, that all the rest is kept to a minimum and done by persons other than nurses.

Construction Manager Ralph Hall reported that the occupation of the acute hospital will begin around Feb. 1, with the rehabilitation center's occupation beginning about two weeks later. Equipment is arriving daily, he said, and some x-ray equipment is already being installed. Patient moving day is still expected to be some time in April.

Hall suggested that perhaps the trustees should be thinking of a new name for the complex developing around the new hospital. On his charts he is calling it Pitt Medical Center, he said.

Chief of Staff Welch reported on three audits done recently. One dealt with transfusions of blood and blood derivatives between February and July, 1976; the second with blood banking during the entire year; and the third with circumcision operations done on 50 consecutive patients.

For lack of interest on the part of the trustees present, the idea of reimbursing trustees for mileage and other expenses incurred by attendance at the board meeting was tabled. Richardson had reported that UNC reimburses its trustees 15 cents per mile and $15 per day, or $25 if they must stay overnight.

Letters were sent to Board member Otis Stokes, who has had heart surgery recently, and to Board member Mack Edwards, whose father recently died.

Explain Mirages Atmospheric Conditions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mirages, those optical illusions which can even fool a camera, are actually caused by atmospheric conditions, says National Geographic.

The most common kind of mirage is the inferior mirage which is caused when light rays are bent by passing through varying densities of air and reflected. When the road ahead glimmers like a lake on a hot summer day, the pool is really a reflection of the sky.

The Fata Morgana, another type of mirage in which images are projected into the sky, is named after King Arthur's sorceress sister. This unusual form of mirage can have strange consequences.

Some Good, Bad Effects From Cold

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer
The continuous sub-freezing weather in Pitt County has had some good and bad effects on agriculture according to Pitt County Agriculture Extension Chairman, Ed Yancey.

Tuesday's ranged from a high of 29 to a low of 13 degrees, according to the Greenville Utilities Department. Wednesday at 8 a.m. the temperature was recorded at 12 degrees and the river level measured 11.4 feet. The wind velocity peaked at 5 m.p.h. Tuesday and registered 7 m.p.h. Wednesday morning.

The cold weather has probably affected the reduction of insects, and has possibly damaged some newborn animals, but has had no great effects on the wildlife in the Pitt County area, according to Yancey and Kay Dunn, Pitt County Wildlife Enforcement Officer.

Talks Early Action On Panama Canal Treaty

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State-designate Cyrus Vance is telling Latin American countries the Carter administration should be able to complete negotiations for a new Panama Canal treaty within three months.

Foreign minister Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica, serving as a special emissary of eight Latin American presidents, said in an interview Tuesday that Vance also told him Panamanian Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd will be invited to Washington to begin talks within two weeks of Carter's inauguration.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has announced the names of 27 of the 44 sailors and marines listed as dead in the capsizing of a launch in the harbor of Barcelona, Spain, Monday morning.

Five other men remain unaccounted for. The dead were identified as: Seaman Brian Keith Royal, Plainfield, N.J.; Fireman Charles Edward Simon, Gunter, Tex.; Seaman James Roger Laboury, Hudson Falls, N.Y.; Petty Officer Robert Charles Lewis, Norfolk, Va.; Seaman

To Eliminate Independents

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill was filed Tuesday in the North Carolina House of Representatives that would eliminate the designation "independent" for a person who wants to register to vote without affiliating with a political party.

The term "no party" would be substituted for independent. "It has caused confusion because some states have an Independent Party," said Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, sponsor of the measure.

Adams' bill also would limit to once the number of times a person registered "no party" would be allowed to declare an affiliation on the day of a primary.

No Blades On Prize Windmill

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — City boy Craig Greenwood of Topeka beat out 35 other Kansas high school students by creating the best windmill in a design competition sponsored by Wichita State University.

Entries in the contest, held Tuesday to stimulate interest in engineering and energy problems, were judged for originality and for how well they performed in a wind tunnel and in a stress test of their 20-inch towers.

Greenwood, a senior, designed a round tower-like structure with oval cups that catch the wind to generate propulsion. It had nary a blade.

JUNIOR CITIZENS

ficer. Yancey said that he thinks that the continuous sub-freezing temperatures have aided in the reduction of the insect population which will develop in the spring.

"The cold weather mainly affects the newborn livestock. For example a hog operator without good facilities would probably lose more baby pigs at this time without supplemental heat. The weather will also cause poultry operators in placing baby chicks to use more heat. But the livestock that are outside animals are fairly acclimated to the weather," Yancey said.

"One good thing about this weather is that it did come on a gradual basis and it has stayed cold. This has been to the plants and animals' advantage," Yancey added.

Yancey said that a problem may have developed in the gas-ing of tobacco beds during the cold for farmers who did not gas the beds during the fall.

"The soil temperature needs to be about 50 degrees for gassing beds. If we have a break in the weather the farmers who have not gased will be alright, but it is close to seed time and it could put a squeeze on farmers who have not gased long enough before planting dates."

Dunn said that the animals are fairly well adjusted to the bad weather, but the cold is causing hunters to have mostly empty traps.

"During the cold weather the animals like to den up and this causes problems for the trappers. The wildlife will get along fine without the snow as long as they can get to the food. Water is still running in the streams in the woods, so the water supply is plentiful," Dunn said.

The U.S.-Panamanian canal talks have droned on for 12 years, heightening tensions between the two countries. Although several important issues still divide them, the key is the duration of the U.S. right to defend the canal and occupy the Canal Zone.

Panama wants to share operational control of the canal, and it wants an end to U.S. occupation by the year 2000. Panama also wants a fifteen-fold hike in toll revenues, which now bring Panama under $3 million a year.

Visiting Hours Are Announced
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. and Mrs. Jim Hunt have announced visiting hours for the Governor's Mansion, beginning Feb. 1.

The mansion will be open to visitors from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday through Friday. Saturday visiting hours will be considered in the future, possibly once a month. Extensions of visiting hours may be arranged when it is convenient, and when there is apparent need, the announcement said.

The announcement also said students of all ages are welcome at the mansion, provided they are accompanied by a sufficient number of adults.

Group To Seek New Law Dean
DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — Duke University President Terry Sanford has appointed a seven-member search committee to seek a new dean for the Duke Law School.

Dr. A. Kenneth Pye, law dean since 1973, has resigned to devote full time to his duties as chancellor of the university.

Pye was appointed to the chancellor's post last July 1 for a one-year term, but Sanford has said he will recommend to university trustees that Pye continue in the post for another five years.

The trustees will hold their next meeting in March.

FORECAST Until Thursday
Figures show low temperatures for area.
Data from 30
NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE
NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

WEATHER FORECAST — Continuing cold weather is expected today for the East while unseasonably warm weather is due from the Pacific coast to the Rockies. Snow is forecast from the central Gulf to the Great Lakes and Northeast. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Major North Carolina utilities were still operating at reduced voltages today, but it looked like the worst was over in the current round of the state's bout with one of its toughest winters ever.

Cold weather was forecast again for tonight, but a gradual warming trend appeared to be setting in with highs expected in the 30s in the mountains and the 50s along the coast by the weekend.

Duke Power Co., forced by record demand to cut back voltage Monday, was still reducing the juice Tuesday, but only in order to share power with Virginia Electric and Power Co. in Richmond.

"We're in good shape here," a Duke spokesman said.

Carolina Power & Light Co. also had reduced voltage Monday, but reported an improved situation Tuesday.

"We are in a tight reserve situation regionally," said

CP&L spokesman Mac Harris. "To maintain what we consider minimally adequate reserves, we felt like it was necessary to maintain the voltage reduction."

CP&L was helping with the Duke-Vepco power sharing by "wheeling" or relaying electricity to Vepco. South Carolina Electric and Gas Co. was also sharing some power.

Vepco was hit by maintenance shutdowns at eight generating stations during the worst of the cold.

N.C. Employment Gains Were Below Expected

Employment gains were not as large in North Carolina during the last quarter of 1976 as expected, according to Jim Hannan, of the Employment Security Commission of Greenville.

According to Hannan, traditionally the last quarter of each year is a time of steady economic growth due mainly to the Christmas shopping season. While the retail trade sector of North Carolina's economy did add 2,300 new workers to its payrolls during November, the gains were not as high as expected.

At the same time, employment losses in other industries and agriculture added to the unemployment rate at the time of Christmas seasonal employment increase.

During the first 11 months of 1976 joblessness averaged 6.4 per cent; a substantial decrease from the 8.9 per cent average for the first 11 months in 1975.

Statewide unemployment fell steadily from the yearly high of eight per cent in January, to 5.8 per cent in May. Then, July's jobless figure reflected thousands of North Carolina students and graduates unsuccessful efforts in finding work and the unemployment figure increased to 6.7 per cent. The rest of the year became a struggle to regain earlier advances in employment. For the past three months, economy and employment has been stable but improvements need to be made.

William & Mary Manhandles Pirates

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Some years ago along the shores of the James River in Virginia, Capt. John Smith had his head placed on the chopping block by the Indians of the area.

But just before the hatchet fell, the Indian princess Pocahontas rushed in to the rescue.

Last night, in those same neighborhoods, the East Carolina Pirates had their heads put to the block by the William & Mary Indians. But this time there was no escape.

By the time the Indians had finished their bloody deed, they had hung the Pirates' scalps from their wigwam, 79-54.

The defeat dropped the Pirates to a 7-7 overall mark and a 2-3 Southern Conference standing. William & Mary is now 9-6 and 3-2 in conference play.

It was all William & Mary — all the way. East Carolina never led, and by the time the first warhoop had faded away, the Pirates were down against a team that it is never healthy to get down against.

The Indians scored the first four points, allowed a free throw, then came back with six more to take a 10-1 edge. After that, it was only a question of time — and a lot of time was left, unfortunately for the Pirates.

After it finally was over, Dave Patton had little to say. He was disgusted. "We stunk up the joint. It was the worst game of the year."

Patton referred back to Saturday night, when the Pirates played one of their best games in defeating Appalachian State. "Just as good as we played Saturday night, we played that bad tonight."

East Carolina did little right. The Bucs connected on only 36.6 per cent of their shots from the floor, and made only 58.8 per cent of their free throws.

William & Mary, one of the top shooting teams in the conference, hit 54.8 per cent from the floor and a fine 73.3 per cent from the stripe.

The Indians also outrebounded the Pirates, 41-36, with John Lowenhaupt leading the way with seven. Larry Hunt had the tops for the Pirates with 10.

East Carolina turned the ball over 26 times in the game (as compared with just 15 against ASU), while the Indians gave it up 21 times.

Matt Courage, who hit his first eight shots, started the rout in the opening minutes with the first basket and John Kratzer followed for a 4-0 lead. After Kyle Powers hit a free throw for the Pirates, Lowenhaupt got a basket, Kratzer made two free throws, and Courage hit two straight baskets for a 10-1 lead.

It got worse after that. The Pirates did cut the lead back to five, 12-7, but that was as close as they got. For the rest of the half, and much of the second, the Indians gradually eased away.

They hit two straight, as Courage and Lowenhaupt both struck, to run the lead out to 13 at 22-9 midway through the period. Two free throws by Mark Risinger edged it out to 15 at 30-15, and a Lowenhaupt basket made it 36-19 later in the half. The Indians took a 40-23 lead into intermission.

Ron Satterthwaite hit a free throw, then added a jumper, followed by another by Lowenhaupt for a 45-23 lead before the Pirates finally got two free throws, both by Larry Hunt.

But the Bucs didn't score again for some time, and the Indians used that to run their lead to 27 at 52-15. Shortly after Hunt finally got the first basket of the half for the Bucs, the Indians stretched it again, first to 56-27, then to 60-29. That 31-point spread was the largest.

A number of times during the first and second halves, the Pirates had chances to nibble away at the lead, but failed to connect.

Lowenhaupt finished with 17 points, while Courage had 16, all in the first half to lead the Indian scoring. Hunt had 17 and Don Whitaker, 10, for the Pirates.

East Carolina stays on the road Saturday night, traveling to meet first place VMI in Lexington, Va. From there they travel to Greenville, S.C., for a Monday meeting with Furman.

Ford, Palmer Compete In Bing Crosby Pro-Am

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus makes his first start of the year and Gerald Ford makes his first start as ex-President this week in the $200,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

The soon-to-be ex-President will miss Thursday's opening round due to the inauguration of Jimmy Carter, but will compete as an 18-handicapper and the amateur partner of Arnold Palmer on Friday and Saturday. They'll also play together Sunday — if they qualify for the final round.

Only the best 30 of the 168 teams of one pro and one amateur each qualify for the last round. They'll have to work hard to make it. In the pro-am section of this old tournament, scoring is based on the better ball of each team, including the amateur's handicap. Ford has been assigned an 18, meaning he gets one stroke a hole.

Since he will not be able to compete in Thursday's opening round, Palmer's score on his own ball will count as the team score that day.

Under the unique format for this event, the pros and amateurs play one round each over three courses on the spectacularly beautiful Monterey Peninsula. At the end of 54 holes, the field is cut for the final round at the famed Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Spyglass Hill, normally one of the tournament courses, is being rebuilt and is not available this year. It will be replaced by the Monterey Peninsula Country Club Shore course. Cypress Point is the other.

ABC-TV will provide National television coverage Saturday and Sunday from Pebble Beach only. President Ford and Palmer, of course, are in the portion of the field that will play the television course on Saturday.

In addition to the pro-am competition — which includes a number of show business personalities, pro athletes and other celebrities — the pros also keep individual scores in the main competition.

Jack Nicklaus, as usual, is favored here. And that's despite a horrendous 82, the worst round of his career, over the last 18 holes last year.

He normally starts his season in this event and brings credentials that only get better with the passing years. And, too, Pebble Beach serves as one of his favorite playgrounds. He's won three Crosby tournaments and a U.S. Open on this layout.

As usual, the tournament has drawn one of the premier fields of the year. The only major absentees are Lee Trevino, still recovering from surgery, and Gary Player, who hasn't yet started his American tour.

Among the more prominent pros are defending champion Ben Crenshaw and the current holders of the world's four major championships — Jerry Pate (U.S. Open), Ray Floyd (Masters), Dave Stockton (PGA) and Johnny Miller (British Open). Miller, off to his slowest start in four seasons, withdrew from the final round of last week's Tucson Open, suffering from a cold.

Boxing Exhibition

East Carolina University's Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity is sponsoring an exhibition boxing match Thursday night featuring the Marine Corps Boxing Team from Camp Lejeune.

The tournament is being staged to benefit the ECU football stadium expansion drive, with proceeds going to the stadium fund. It will begin at 7:30 at Wright Auditorium on the campus of ECU.

The Marine team features military champions, ranked amateurs and Golden Gloves champions and is coached by Roosevelt Sanders. It is the same team which turned out heavyweight pro Ken Norton.

Roosevelt Green, who recently captured the middleweight championship at the World Military Matches in Ghana, will participate in the exhibitions and has challenged ECU Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins to a three-minute bout.

The TKE fraternity has pledged $1 per second that Dr. Jenkins can stay in the ring with Green to be donated to the stadium fund.

Mills Attacks Emphasis Put On Need To Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Overemphasis on winning, and the cheating that it brings with it drew an attack from Wake Forest head football coach Chuck Mills at the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

"We honor the cheater," Mills told the group in an often humorous talk.

"We have many problems in athletics; we always have, and probably always will. We have made winning and losing a matter of life and death. We equate losing with failure and it is not the same thing. If losing is anything, it is a lesson to try again. It is a lot like life. Death there is final; losing is not, it is just another chance."

Because of the overemphasis on winning, cheating has come into vogue. And Mills did not limit himself to simply cheating in recruiting. He also brought up getting some athletes into easy classes, or getting professors to give passing grades. "When this athlete gets out into life and gets nowhere, some people will wonder what happened to him."

But Mills also said that coaches were the victims of the system. "Too often a college coach's job hangs on someone or some people in the academic community who turn on him when they get rough."

"And I'm afraid that if things are not controlled soon, college athletics may collapse altogether."

While losing is tough, Mills said, the coaches and players have to endure. "We can't jump ship like the fans. We can only win or quit to keep from losing."

Mills, who initiated college trips to Japan to play football, said that the sport was all he lived for, and that it had given him his highs and lows in life. "The high came on our first trip to Japan, and the low came when I was at Utah State, and the Wichita State plane crashed on the way to play us."

Mills also noted that he could feel some empathy with East Carolina and Appalachian State as they try to build a program and get a decent schedule. "We went through the same thing at Utah State. They are in a situation where they can't get a good schedule too easily. A smart coach won't play them because if he loses it hurts him with his own fans, even though he knows that they have a quality program."

Wake Forest, incidentally, will be playing East Carolina in the near future, with a series starting late in this decade.

Lee Schaffer, former University of North Carolina and Philadelphia 76er player, is the speaker for next week's meeting of the Greenville Sports Club.

PRESIDENT — Stan Walter, above, has been elected president of the Candlewick Swim and Tennis Club for the coming year. Other officers elected include Robert Muzzarelli, vice-president; Ray L. Jones, treasurer; and Carolyn Whitley, secretary.

Vikings Win In Overtime

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Big Al Tyson hit a follow shot at the buzzer in overtime to give D. H. Conley a 57-55 win over Ayden-Grifton last night.

Only moments before, things had looked bad for the Vikings as Ayden-Grifton had the ball with 40 seconds left and a chance to tie. But, the Chargers missed a shot and Mike Cox came down with the ball for Conley.

The Vikings held the ball and called time out with nine seconds left. They played the ball back inbounds and got it to Cox, who missed a 20-footer from the left side with three seconds left.

But Tyson was there to grab the rebound and put the ball back in with one second on the clock and win it for Conley.

The game was close nearly the whole way. The Vikings jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the first quarter on follow shots by Cox and Ken Dawson and a 15-footer by Daryl Thompson.

The Chargers, however, led by Willie Forbes and Ogden Braxton, fought back to cut the lead to 11-9 by the end of the quarter.

Frankie Dail hit a jump shot in the second period to give Ayden-Grifton an 11-9 lead, their first of the game. Terry Morris connected on a jumper a few seconds later to put the Chargers out by three with 6:10 left in the first half.

Conley regained the lead with 3:46 left when Tyson hit from underneath to give the Vikings a 17-16 edge.

Mike Teachey hit both ends of a one-and-one to put the Chargers out in front 23-20 at the 1:15 mark, but Frankie Dail tied it back up at 23 on a jumper with 1:02 left in the half and that's the way it stayed.

Ten seconds into the third quarter, Ken Dawson connected on a jump shot to give the Vikings a 25-23 edge, but Braxton tipped in an errant charger shot 20 seconds later to knot the score again.

Twice in the period, the Vikings went up by four, only to see Ayden-Grifton come back to tie. The Chargers scored the last four points of the quarter — a baseline jumper by James Leggett and layup by Terry Morris — to take a 38-37 lead into the final period.

Dail made it 40-37 when he hit two free throws with 7:52 left in the game, but the Vikings tied it again at 42 when Thompson hit a technical free throw and then went ahead as Tyson hit on a follow shot a few seconds later.

Braxton made a layup and was fouled with 5:13 left. He hit the free throw to complete the three-point play and give the Chargers a 47-44 lead.

With 3:05 left, the Vikings were able to tie the game again when a layup by Johnny Streeter knotted the game at 49.

Bernard Hawkins scored on a follow shot to put Conley up 51-49 with 2:22 left and, after a missed Ayden-Grifton shot, the Vikings had the ball and the lead.

A Conley foul turned the ball back over to Ayden-Grifton and the Chargers again missed a shot but, after another Viking turnover, Dail was fouled by Cox and hit the one-and-one to tie the game at 51.

Leggett blocked a Cox shot to give the Chargers the ball again but, with 50 seconds left, Forbes missed on a fall-away 15-footer and Dawson grabbed the rebound for the Vikings.

Forbes hit a jumper with 2:46 left in the overtime period to put the Chargers in front, but Tyson tied it up with two free throws seconds later.

A Streeter jumper put the Vikings ahead, 55-53, but Forbes hit two from the line to knot the score again. That gave the Vikings the ball with a minute left, but Thompson missed from the lane and Braxton grabbed the rebound with 40 seconds remaining.

Leggett missed a shot with 25 seconds left, however, and Cox rebounded for Conley who kept it until Cox's shot, which Tyson followed for the winning score.

Braxton led all scorers with 17 while Dail hit 15 and Forbes 14 for the Chargers. Streeter led the Vikings with 12, Tyson had 11 and Hawkins 10.

Conley hit 23 of 58 from the field for 40 per cent. Ayden-Grifton connected on 21 of 57 for 37 per cent. Rebounding was about even, 42 for the Chargers and 41 for the Vikings, while Ayden-Grifton had 19 turnovers compared with 12 for Conley.

Vertha Dixon and Karen Haseley combined for 44 points to lead the Ayden-Grifton girls to a 60-41 win over the Valkyries.

The Chargerettes led by a narrow 15-12 margin at the end of the first period, but ran it to 30-18 at halftime.

Dixon hit six points in the third quarter and Haseley added five more to give Ayden-Grifton a 41-26 lead.

The built it to as much as 21, 47-26, in the final quarter when Haseley hit two from underneath and Mary Rowe added another at the beginning of the period.

Haseley led the Chargerettes with 24 and Dixon had 20. Mary McCracken paced the Valkyries with 10.

The loss in the boys' game drops the Chargers' conference record to 4-2, knocking them out of a tie for first place. Conley is also 4-2 in the league and the two teams are in a tie for second place with Farmville Central.

Both teams will play again Friday night. Conley travels to Greene Central and Ayden-Grifton hosts C. B. Aycock.

No Tech; Warriors Top Drake

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Al McGuire went for a walk; Bob Ortel thought he was guilty of trespassing.

There were three seconds showing on the clock at Drake's Veterans Fieldhouse, and McGuire's eighth-ranked Marquette basketball team was nursing a 62-60 lead, on Butch Lee's basket two seconds earlier. Drake had called a time-out, and during the stoppage, McGuire strolled onto the court and positioned his players defensively.

Ortel, the Drake coach, wanted the officials to call a technical foul on McGuire for going onto the court — but none was called.

Three seconds later, after Napoleon Gaither's shot at the buzzer had bounced off the rim, Marquette had its 13th victory against three losses — and Or-tegel had a beef.

"I guess if you're Al McGuire you're allowed to do things like that," Ortel said angrily. "Those officials are not men. It was absolutely gutless of them not to call a technical."

McGuire demurred.

College Roundup

"I've been in the business 25 years, and they don't call technicals for things like that," he said. But McGuire did concede, "We were very fortunate — in fact, lucky — to win."

Marquette was the only Top Ten team in action Tuesday night. Among the Second Ten, No. 15 Providence beat neigh-

Kinston Downs Aycock

KINSTON — Kinston Junior High School took a pair of games from E. B. Aycock Junior High yesterday.

Kinston won the varsity game, 39-32. The Jaguars from Aycock were able to take a 12-8 lead in the first period, but Kinston crept back and gained a 19-18 halftime edge.

They stretched that to 28-25 by the end of the third period, and outthit Aycock, 11-7, in the final period to wrap it up.

Cliff Kilpatrick led Aycock with 14 points, while T. Smith was high for Kinston with eight.

In the junior varsity game, Kinston won, 42-33.

Both Aycock teams are now 1-4 on the year. Aycock plays host to Goldsboro on Friday.

Chicod Wins In Overtime

CHICOD — The Chicod Junior High boys gained a 55-54 overtime victory over Bethel yesterday.

The win came when Sammy Whitehurst hit two free throws in the extra period with one second left. Frankie Pollard led Chicod's scoring with 24 points, while Whitehurst had 14 and Vickey Hardy had 13. R. House led Bethel with 28.

In the girls' game, Bethel took a 39-20 win. A. Roberson led Bethel with 18 points.

Elm City Gets 88-60 Victory Over Roanoke

ELM CITY — Elm City showed Roanoke's Redskins why its boys and girls teams are the top ones in the Eastern Plains Conference last night. The boys took an 88-60 win over the Redskins, while the girls gained a 53-34 decision.

Roanoke did win the junior varsity game, 46-39, to avoid a shutout.

In the girls' game, the unbeaten Elm City lassies inched out to a 12-8 lead in the first frame. They continued to pull away from the Squaws, 13-8, in the second quarter, for a 25-16 halftime lead.

Elm City boosted that lead to 37-21 by the end of the third period, then outthit Roanoke, 16-13, in the final quarter.

Angela Armstrong led Elm City with 15 points, while Lydia Rountree had 13 and Pam Helmer had 11. Dee Stanley and Carolyn Duggins each had nine for Roanoke.

Drake with 17 points each.

Providence fell behind 10-2 at the start but then got rolling against Rhode Island in raising its record to 10-2. Bruce Campbell led the Friars with 22 points.

Firebirds Grab Win Over Rams

SNOW HILL — Southern Nash romped to an 84-68 victory over Greene Central in an Eastern Carolina Conference game last night, but the Greene Central girls came up with their first victory of the season.

The Ewes beat Southern Nash, 43-42, to record win number one, both on the season, and in the conference.

The Greene Central girls rolled out to a 15-6 lead in the first period, but were outthit in each of the remaining frames. That first period lead, however, was enough. Southern Nash cut the margin back to 22-17 at halftime, and then to 31-28 after three quarters.

The Lady Firebirds caught up in the final period, but the Ewes regained the lead, and held off Southern for their one-point win.

Marilyn Yelverton led the Ewe scoring with 27 points while Daphne Riley had 19 and Zulene Minga had 10 for Southern.

In the boys' game, Southern Nash edged out into a 16-10 lead in the first period. The Firebirds added 25 points to just 17 for the Rams in the second quarter, raising the score to 41-27 at the half.

Greene Central was able to come back and trim five off that in the third period, but still trailed, 58-49, as the last quarter began. Southern outthit the Rams, 26-19, in that frame to wrap it up.

Ricky Murray led Southern Nash with 20 points, while Walter Williams had 19. Ronnie Trybron added 11, while Wilbert Pridden and Willie Williams each had 10. Ernest Thompson had 24 to pace the Rams, while Leonard Swinson and Lawrence Edwards each hit 11.

Greene Central returns to action on Friday, hosting D. H. Conley.

Washington Matmen Win Over Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Washington High School gained a 36-30 wrestling victory over Williamston last night, and forfeits played a major role in the decision.

Washington won eight of the 13 weight classes, including two by forfeits. Three of the Pam Pack wins came on pins, while Williamston took two by falls.

Furman, W&M Take Victories

By The Associated Press

By the time William and Mary's Indians were through with East Carolina in their Southern Conference basketball scrap, Pirate Coach Dave Patton said "things were so bad that we couldn't even check into the ball game."

Southern Roundup

That oversight Tuesday night by Greg Cornelius, who failed to report, led to a technical foul that was part of a 20-6 run in which the Indians put the game out of reach on their way to a 79-64 victory that gave them third place in the standings.

In Tuesday night's only other action involving a conference team, Furman's Paladins ran their record to 8-5 with a 75-65 conquest of Jacksonville behind the 25-point scoring of Bruce Grimm.

Tonight's only games have Appalachian State's Mountaineers, 5-7, at home against UNC-Charlotte and Davidson's Wildcats playing host in an exhibition to Athletics in Action.

William and Mary, 9-6 overall, ran its conference record to 3-2 in its romp over East Carolina, which fell to 2-3 in the league and 7-7 against all opposition.

Matt Courage hit all eight of his shots from the floor in the first half as the Indians took a 40-23 lead, leading Coach George Balanis to observe that "he was not as a firecracker."

The Indians started in a pressing zone defense, but wound up in a man-for-man.

"The guys forgot to press. So I said, 'What the heck,' and went to the man-for-man. And we never let them get any rhythm," said Balanis. East Carolina had 18 turnovers in the first 20 minutes.

John Lowenhaupt finished with 17 points and Courage with 16 for the Indians, who shot 54.8 per cent from the floor. Larry Hunt had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Pirates.

But William and Mary had a 41-37 rebound advantage, and Patton said, all things considered, his Pirates were "completely dominated."

Grimm hit two field goals and a pair of free throws to put Furman ahead to stay after Jacksonville gained its final tie at 47. Jonathan Moore and John Cottingham had 16 points each for the Paladins.

By ALEX SACHARE

"When you've been down as long as we have, you have to use your brains to get back,"

NBA Roundup

said Pete Maravich. "Tonight we began to do that."
The New Orleans Jazz used their brains, plus 44 points by Maravich and a solid rebounding effort led by Ron Behagen, in snapping a six-game losing streak, beating the Boston Celtics 99-89. It was the Jazz' first game back in the Louisiana Superdome following an eight-game road trip.

"We finally played smart basketball," said Jazz coach Elgin Baylor. "We played tough defense and good offense and I only wish we could play like that all the time."
Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, the Los Angeles Lakers edged the Kansas City Kings 113-111, the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Milwaukee Bucks 101-93, the Houston Rockets defeated the Chicago Bulls 103-85 and the Golden State Warriors trimmed the Denver Nuggets 107-101.

North Pitt Tops North Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — North Pitt's boys found themselves back in sole possession of first place after taking an 86-76 victory over North Lenoir last night.

But the North Lenoir girls sidestepped an upset try by North Pitt and managed to gain a share of first in the girls' standings, 44-42.

North Pitt pushed out into a slim 16-14 lead in the first period of the boys game. Then, in the second frame, the Panthers went to work on the scoreboard and banged through 23 points. The Hawks got but 16 and that left North Pitt in a more comfortable 39-30 halftime lead.

The Panthers continued to pull away in the third period as they upped their margin to 57-42. In the final period, however, the Hawks managed to stage a slight uprising, outshooting North Pitt, 34-29.

"The young men played a very good defensive game, except for a few minutes in the final quarter," Coach Cobby Deans said. "Another key to the win was our ability to control the boards."

The win left North Pitt with a 5-1 record in the conference, ahead of Farmville Central, Ayden-Grifton and Conley.

Donnie Perkins led the North Pitt scoring with 29 points, while Kenneth Roberson had 19, and Jimmy Hardy and Virgil Pilgreen each had 17. Mitchell Wiggins led North Lenoir with 21, while Johnny Wiggins had 18, Garland Fisher had 14 and Amos Percill had 10.

North Lenoir's girls are also 5-1 now and tied with Farmville Central and C. B. Aycock for first place, thanks to Aycock's win over the Jaguars last night.

But it took some last second heroics to pull out the win. North Lenoir had jumped away to a 14-4 lead in the first period of the game. But North Pitt came back with a 17-8 margin in the second quarter, cutting the lead to 22-21 at the half.

North Lenoir inched back out to a 30-27 lead after the third period, then had to hang on again. North Pitt came back and tied it up at 42-42, but Denise Beacham hit in the final seconds to give the Lady Hawks the win.

Beacham led North Lenoir with 18 points, while Betty Ledletter had 10. Mabel James and Jackie Clemmons each had 13 for North Pitt.

The Panthers return to the court on Friday, hosting Southern Nash.

Jaguars Roll To Win Over C.B. Aycock

FARMVILLE — C. B. Aycock's Falconettes nipped Farmville Central's girls, 52-50, last night, and knocked the Lady Jaguars out of sole possession of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Jaguar boys made up for some of the sting by taking a 73-48 romp over the Falcons.

The defeat was the first for the Lady Jags in the league and left them with a 5-1 lead, tied with Aycock and North Lenoir for first.

Farmville inched out to a 12-10 lead in the first period of the girls' game, but Aycock stuck right with them. Both teams pushed through 16 points in the second frame, leaving Farmville in a 28-26 lead at the half. Again, both scored evenly in the third period, 14 each, to make it 42-40, as the final period began.

Aycock then charged into the lead, and two free throws by Helen Jones with 15 seconds left gave the Falconettes a 52-48 lead, and Farmville could not overcome it in the time remaining.

Jones led Aycock with 22 points, while Rene Hales had 15. Dianne Barrett led Farmville with 16, while Jennifer Counterman had 12 and Julia Moye hit 14.

It was a different story in the boys' game. Farmville jumped out to a 20-12 lead and pulled away from that. They outshot the Falcons, 18-9, in the second quarter for a 38-21 halftime lead.

The Jaguars kept it up in the third period, building the lead to 55-31. The Jags finished the Falcons off, 18-17, in the final quarter.

Jeff Fields led the Farmville effort with 20 points, while James Baker had 15 and Kenno Farrow hit 10. Eddie Jones led Aycock with 15.

The Jaguars return to the hardwood on Friday, hosting North Lenoir.

Scientist Eyes Changes In A Future Society

By RON HUTCHERSON
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Bud

Crow's goal as a researcher into what makes society tick is practical change — not theory — to take the shock out of what lies ahead.

"Our focus is on the future," said Crow, known formally as Dr. Wayman J. Crow, director of the Western Behavioral Sciences Institute in La Jolla.

"We are dealing with a way to handle the various problems that are facing us as individuals and as a society."

"Our intent is to carry through with our research to the point that it is implemented — to get the results to people who can actually make use of them."

His fellow researchers range from holders of advanced degrees in behavioral sciences to ex-convicts.

"Set a crook to catch a crook," he postulated when the institute undertook to learn how to reduce robberies of small grocery stores.

His key advisor was a career crook, and the client was the parent company for 6,000 such stores. It is estimated the program the institute devised will prevent 2,000 or more armed robberies a year.

Other clients and sponsors in the nonprofit institute's 18-year history include businesses, foundations and governmental agencies.

Trends now are toward finding pragmatic solutions to problems and "pulling theories" from them rather than the reverse, said Crow, a former Navy flier.

"There has been a lot of rhetoric and political maneuvering based on theories, but reasonable men do not argue about facts — they find out what they are," he said.

Tony Gorman's experience illustrates the institute's method.

Gorman, an institute sociologist, married a woman who already had three children, but he could not find any reference works on how to be a stepfather. Being in a culture of increasing family "reconstruction," he recognized the need for the information by more and more people.

The result was the taking of a proposal to research step family problems to the National Institute of Mental Health and a survey of 1,764 families.

Researchers found no evidence that parent-child relationships differ in natural and step families, Crow said.

"It's the relationship that seems more important than whether one got there through the natural route," he said.

The follow-up idea, as yet unsponsored, involves the impact of divorce in the working class, where divorce rates are highest and emotional and financial resources are weakest, Crow said.

The idea-first, sponsor-later approach in the divorce research typifies the institute. Its core staff of 25 anthropologists, sociologists, psychologists and communications specialists originates 90 per cent of its project ideas.

"Good ideas are a dime a dozen," said the institute's Peter Shoup. "What's difficult to ascertain is whether it's worthwhile to invest money."

Shoup, the program development director, said 200 staff ideas a year may be pared to three or four the institute decides to submit to potential sponsors.

"One thing we find is that a lot of our ideas tend to come up before anybody else finds them necessary," he said.

The women's liberation movement suggested in 1970 that more women would be involved in crime, but no interest was shown in female offenders before the Patricia Hearst, Sarah Moore and Lynette Fromme episodes, Crow elaborated.

"Then all of a sudden, everybody wished they knew a good deal more about female offenders," he said. "It's just beginning to come under study now."

Several institute projects including the robbery study grew out of an interest the researchers had in the 1960s in the criminal justice program.

Another institute idea, "Simulations," was keyed off games structured along the lines of businesses and government agencies to provide insights into policy making and the willingness of administrators to assume risk.

The endeavor led to formation of a company that sells games such as "Metropolitan Politics" and sends royalties to the institute.

Crow said important research areas emerging now include are consumerism, family life problems, education for the disadvantaged and early identification of gifted children to alleviate juvenile problems.

One project in progress now hinges on parent involvement in elementary school classes in a totally ethnic neighborhood.

"We are trying to bring the parent to school and train her to work with the child at home," Crow said. "It has produced real increases in achievement."

Among other projects are: — A study of how non-welfare poor manage in cheap downtown hotels.

— A study of the impact of major historic crises such as wars and the Great Depression on American men in their formative early adult years.

— And an inquiry aimed at reducing the three-year time lag in communications among scientists and the public.

Work By Liszt

Is Rediscovered

PURCHASE, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Nancy Reich recently discovered a long-lost piano work by Franz Liszt in the Manhattanville College Library here. The work, a fantasy based on Rossini's opera, "The Siege of Corinth," is called "Introduction des Variations sur une Marche du Siege de Corinth." It is dated 1830, and was written when Liszt was about 19.

Dr. Reich, an assistant professor of music at the college, said this particular work by Liszt had never been published and was last mentioned in a catalog of the composer's works compiled by August Gollner in 1908.

Later catalogs, including Humphrey Searle's 1954 compilation, listed about 66 doubtful or lost works by Liszt, she explained. "Since then, two mentioned by Gollner have turned up in the United States — including this one."

TRIES FOR LAND RECORD — Balloonist Karl Thomas (above crowd in balloon basket) who attempted an unsuccessful trans-Atlantic crossing last summer, tests his new 92-foot high hot air balloon at Circus Circus Hotel in Las Vegas, the American home of the Guinness Book of World Records. After flight and inflation tests here and in Kingman, Ariz. this week, Thomas, 28, will travel to Los Angeles to select a time and launch site for his coast-to-coast attempt. The mark is currently held by balloonist Malcolm Forbes who made the trip in 41 days. (AP Wirephoto)

Hindu Religious Festival Is A Bath Of Millions

RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL — January and February mark the season for Khumba Mela, the largest religious festival in the world, when Hindu holy men, leaders of Hindu sects as well as a multitude of pilgrims gather in Allahabad, some 360 miles southeast of New Delhi, where two sacred rivers, the Ganges and Yamuna, merge. (UPI Photo)

Spectre Of Busing Raised In Integration Of L.A. Schools

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Unified School District, the nation's second largest, is under final court order, after six years of procrastination, to begin racial integration this fall.

The problems ahead may make the troubles in Boston, Louisville and other American cities seem minuscule if only by sheer numbers alone.

In the fall of 1975 there were 607,153 students enrolled in 665 district schools with 37,374 fulltime and 7,056 substitute teachers.

The district covers 710 square miles and includes 10 other incorporated cities. During the morning and evening rush hours, it can require more than an hour and one half to drive from one extremity to another.

The student school population is 25 per cent black, 30 per cent Spanish surname, 5 per cent Oriental, 40 per cent Anglo and 5 per cent American Indians.

The blacks are concentrated largely in south central Los Angeles surrounding Watts, scene of the race riots of 1965. Some of the schools there are over 90 per cent black.

The Chicano population, mostly Mexican-American, is located mainly east of downtown Los Angeles.

The whites are scattered throughout the area but in the sprawling San Fernando Valley the white enrollment is over 80 per cent.

It is estimated that 85,000 students do not speak English or have only a limited command of the language.

Early this year the Board of Education established a Citizens' Advisory Committee on Student Integration (CACSI) to draw up guidelines for a desegregation plan.

One of CACSI's first achievements was to provide a definition of racial balance in the schools: "One in which student population (in individual schools) reflects the ethnic percentage of the total school district with a permissible variance of 15 per cent among blacks, whites and Chicanos."

At this stage, the emotion-provoking word "busing" has been tiptoed around as if it might not be necessary. But a glance at the demographic picture makes it apparent that it will be necessary if the definition of racial balance is to be taken seriously.

No one is talking of violence and Los Angeles' black mayor, Tom Bradley, assured a recent meeting of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights that his city could comply with the court order without the ugly scenes that have marked forced integration in schools elsewhere.

The appointment of the citizens' group was an essential step in that direction. It is composed of women and men from all racial, ethnic, social, economic and political strata.

But in a report prepared in December by its own staff it noted:

"The black community believes that the plan will involve only one-way busing. The Chicano community fears that bilingual education will not be provided children who are reassigned. San Fernando Valley residents — predominantly white and antibusing — have reacted vehemently to CACSI information meetings.

"Blacks fear that violence by whites will occur. There is also concern by black parents that teacher integration has resulted in the transfer of many experienced black teachers from minority to white schools. Chicanos feel that something may happen to bilingual teachers."

"Black and Chicano community spokespersons admitted that there is tension between blacks and Chicanos."

"Finally, there is a belief in Chicano, American Indian and Asian communities that school integration is strictly a black-white issue. Integration as a concept is not a priority, though it may be of value. Therefore, busing is seen as an intrusion forced on these groups by blacks and whites."

One gauge of community feeling is the fate that befell Superior Court Judge Alfred Gitelson who started the integration ball rolling.

Gitelson ruled in 1969 that the Los Angeles schools were being deliberately segregated and ordered integration to begin in 1971. In the 1970 election, Gitelson was defeated for reelection after only one term by William P. Kennedy who waged an intensive anti-busing campaign.

The issue was appealed through the courts until the California Supreme Court on June 28, 1976, upheld Gitelson's original finding.

The planning since has been largely in generalities.

There has been talk of achieving integration over a three-year period. There is also discussion of voluntary transfers of both students and teachers but no one in authority claims that will bring about racial balance.

What it all boils down to is that neither whites, blacks, Chicanos or Orientals are convinced in great number that a major upheaval of the neighborhood school concept is desirable.

The district's annual budget is now more than $1 billion. Opponents of full-scale busing claim that would cost up to $40 million more the first year and $20 million more in succeeding years. There is already a taxpayer revolt over soaring property taxes which finance the schools.

The school board and the citizens group are hopeful that public information programs in the next months can ease some of the tensions.

In any event, the court order stands that the board must present some time this summer to Superior Court Judge Parks Stilwell, selected to oversee the program, a "reasonably feasible" plan to make school integration in Los Angeles a reality.

By JOHN NEEDHAM

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — From towns, villages and cities throughout India, Hindus have gathered where two sacred rivers merge at what may be the largest religious festival in the world, the Khumba mela.

For the first time in 11 years, during the Hindu lunar month of Magha (January-February), the sun and moon are in Capricorn and Jupiter in Aries — the time affixed for the festival.

Because of the conjunction of astrology, religion and tradition, the city of Allahabad — some 360 miles southeast of New Delhi — is drawing thousands of Hindu holy men, leaders of Hindu sects as well as the multitude of pilgrims.

It is the third Kumbha mela since India became independent in 1947. The festivals of 1954 and 1966 led to death for hundreds, some say thousands, of pilgrims caught in stampedes of frenzied faithful rushing to bathe in the confluence of the Ganges and Yamuna Rivers at the most auspicious astrological times.

This time there are to be six especially auspicious bathing days. The first was Jan. 5. The last is Feb. 16. The best: Jan. 19, new moon day.

"On Jan. 19 we expect a crowd of 10 million," one government official said in an interview with UPI. "They are planning for a crowd of 10 million."

At past Kumbha melas one million or more pilgrims have bathed between midnight and dawn of the new moon day, sometimes in an area as small as 100 acres.

At dawn begin the processions of groups of leaders of Hindu sects, viewed by throngs of their followers. Many of the holy men march naked, having symbolically renounced all the processions of groups of leaders of Hindu sects, viewed by throngs of their followers. Many of the holy men march n miles long" as pilgrims on foot, bicycles, horses, bullocks and in cars tried to enter the site, the government official said.

"A township spread over 3,000 acres is being built to receive about 10 million pilgrims expected to come from different parts of the country," a government statement said. Police will be equipped with two-way radios and several television monitoring stations will be set up to assist in crowd control.

The government of Uttar Pradesh state, where Allahabad is located, has been readying the site of the Kumbha mela for the past six months.

Roads have been built or widened, routes mapped out for vehicles, pedestrians and animals, food and money-changing shops built.

The government says it will refuse entry into Allahabad to anyone not inoculated against cholera, a disease that has swept through pilgrims bathing in the Ganges at past festivals. Previous attempts to check so many people for inoculation certificates failed, but orders have gone out to deny bus and train tickets to anyone without a certificate.

The Kumbha mela, according to Hindu tradition, marks a battle between gods and demons in which the demons snatched a Kumbha (jar) filled with nectar. A god disguised as a bird snatched it back and flew with it to heaven on a journey lasting 12 days, each day equalling one year on earth.

One version says drops of nectar fell from the jar at Hardwar, Ujjain, Nasik and Allahabad, which have since been considered holy spots of Hinduism. A mela, or festival, is held roughly once every three years at one of the four locales. The biggest is the one at Allahabad, because it is there that the Ganges, most sacred of rivers, flows into the Yamuna, a river associated with the god Krishna and the second most holy river. It is believed also that the mythical river Sarasvati joins the other two at Allahabad.

A Hindu holds the Ganges so sacred that to bathe in it once in a lifetime, especially at a holy spot like Allahabad, is more likely to assure salvation than a lifetime of prayer and meditation.

Even if, as has happened in past Kumbha melas, there should be a major tragedy, such as a stampede, a Hindu victim will at least have the satisfaction of having died in the best possible place and at the best possible time.

JULE SPACH

Moderator Here Sunday

Jule Spach, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., will speak at the First Presbyterian Church here Sunday at both the 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. worship services.

A native of Winston-Salem, Spach served as a missionary to Brazil from 1951 until his election last summer as Moderator of the General Assembly, the highest office in the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Spach's offices and affiliations in Brazil included General Secretary of the Brazil Mission, Brazil Christian Parliamentary Leadership Movement, as well as a teacher and director of the Fifteenth of November College.

Richard Gammon, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church said anyone interested in hearing Spach is invited to attend either of the services.

FEDERAL AID ANNIVERSARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal-Aid Highway System celebrated its 60th anniversary in 1976. The first project, according to The Road Information Program (TRIP), was a two-and-a-half-mile road built in southern California in 1916.

STILL GOING STRONG — Frank Masterson, 85, sits on a rear bumper of his 1930 Model A Ford parked outside his home in Fairbury, Ill. Masterson purchased the car in 1932 for $185, and has driven it regularly ever since, for over 200,000 miles. He says it's a toss-up as to which lasts longer, he or the car. (AP Wirephoto)

Farm Scene

By MICHAEL E. REGANS
Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

Before you know it, the breeding season - for those of you with cow-calf operations - will be here. So now is the time to start looking for that new bull. If you want to buy or are just window shopping, the Performance Tested Bull Sale in Rocky Mount will be a good place to start. The sale will be held at the Eastern Carolina Livestock Arena in Rocky Mount, located adjacent to the Bull Test Station. The sale will begin at noon on Friday, January 21.

Seventy-three bulls will be sold. The report is that these bulls are all above average and many are outstanding. The sale will include 43 Angus, 17 Polled Hereford, 7 Simmental, 3 Charolais, 2 Beef-Fresian and 1 Limousin. Performance records on all bulls will be available. With this information, you can calculate how much gain your selected bull can, on the average, contribute genetically to his offspring in your herd. You still want to visually appraise a bull before buying but his performance records offer a more objective method to determine selection. For example, you want to be sure the bull's 205 day weight ratio is above herd average. The milking ability of the bull's dam affects the 205 day weight ratio so look at his post weaning or 365 day weight ratio also. Some other recommendations for selecting a bull are to purchase the bull early. Selection is best when you select early. If possible, the bull should arrive on the farm 3 to 6 weeks prior to the breeding season. This way, he has time to adjust to his new surroundings and overcome any problems encountered in shipping. When selecting a bull, consider your situation. What breed or breeds are best for your area or your type of operation? When selecting a bull to use on yearling heifers, use the birth weight and calving difficulty records of the bull. The objective in any cow-calf operation is to get cows bred-so provide adequate bull power. A yearling bull is capable of breeding 10 to 15 cows. A mature bull, 2 years or older can breed 25 to 30 cows. Yearling bulls should be fed some grain during the breeding season. Bulls should be in good flesh but not fat. If bulls need to lose some fat, do so at least three weeks before breeding season begins.

Take a look at your operation. Evaluate it and your bull power. Whether or not you buy, remember the performance tested bull sale in Rocky Mount on Friday, January 21.

Provide Course In Oil Drilling

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New England is coming to Cajun country to learn how to handle the jobs the offshore oil industry has provided for Louisiana for the last three decades.

A dozen young men will arrive from New Bedford, Mass., early in 1977 to begin a year of training and work at Louisiana oil ports, in preparation for the start of Atlantic Coast offshore drilling.

"Within two years, or just about the time Atlantic Coast offshore drilling is projected to be under way, New Bedford would have a skilled manpower cadre of between 150 and 200 young people already trained and oriented by the very same offshore logistics companies that will support the Atlantic Coast offshore oil production operations," said state Rep. Kevin Reilly of Baton Rouge.

Reilly, a Boston native, has been helping to set up the training program for the New Bedforders.

A dozen or more Massachusetts men will begin a year's training every three months on Louisiana's Gulf Coast, learning such basic skills as pipefitting, welding and boat handling and how to apply them to oil-field work.

Each trainee will work in Louisiana at least a year before returning home.

There is an added benefit to the training of the New Englanders. "The demand for skilled workers and technicians by Louisiana's offshore logistics companies still continues to overwhelm the available supply and has not been filled locally," Reilly said.

Thieves Picking Coffee Berries

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The price of coffee in Malaysia has gone up so much that thieves are plucking coffee berries off the trees at night, growers reported today.

Much of the country's coffee is grown in the Banting area, about 30 miles southwest of here. Farmers have pitched tents among their trees to make sure no one gets at them.

It is now the end of the harvest season, with the next harvest in late May.

A pound of coffee powder a year ago cost about 80 U.S. cents. Now it costs $2.40.

Russia Sees Opening Gun For Dieting

By PEGGY POLK
MOSCOW (UPI) — A battle of the bulge has been launched in the Soviet Union.
The attacker is the influential weekly, "Literaturnaya Gazeta." It says 50 per cent of Soviet women, 30 per cent of men and 10 per cent of children "unfortunately have extra weight."

Far from carrying an onus, plumpness in women often is preferred by Soviet men. Girls with figures that Miss America would envy bemoan their slimness. Only the most westernized would consider cutting down on bread, potatoes and sweets.

But the newspaper, known abroad for its acerbic attacks on the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, isn't interested in aesthetics. What worries Literaturnaya Gazeta is the question of longevity.

Referring to the research of a Prof. M. Konshalovsky, the paper warned that fat people don't live as long as thin ones.

Ninety per cent of thin people but only 60 per cent of fat people survive to the age of 60, according to Konshalovsky. Fifty per cent of thin people but only 30 per cent of fat people live to be 70 while 30 per cent of thin people and only 10 per cent of fat people reach the age of 80.

The paper blames the national tendency toward fatness to the national propensity for partying.

"If more than five people gather, any reason is good for eating and drinking," the weekly said. "It may be a birthday, a bonus, defending a university thesis, a housewarming, a wedding, a divorce, a business trip, a funeral, pay day, a visit to the mother-in-law in the next street and so on and in one evening they eat a week's norm of calories."

Even when they aren't partying, the newspaper said, the Soviet people "eat too much white bread, sugar, candy and cakes, pies, jams. We drink a lot of lemonade and fruit syrups and we eat a lot of ice cream."

Restaurants only aggravate the situation by trying "to make guests overeat by every means," it added.

It seems low-calorie products are not as profitable as richer food.

The paper said attending a wedding banquet or other celebration in a restaurant virtually assures overeating. These events usually are lavish and prepaid at a cost of at least 10 to 12 rubles ($13 to $16), expensive by Soviet standards.

"This means that each participant of the celebration either has to consume more food and drink than a normal person can do, sometimes up to 7,000 or 8,000 calories, or leave it uneaten, which means senseless participation in destroying valuable products."

The Soviet food industry shares the blame for "producing a lot of sweet tarts, cakes, ice cream, expensive breads and other refined and concentrated products which do not have enough vitamins, microelements and other things which are necessary but in which the showing of calories is very high," the paper said.

It advised a diet, generous by Western standards, that includes a maximum of 500 grams (a pound) of meat or fish, 400 grams (12 ounces) of bread, preferably not white, 40 grams (one and a half ounces) of butter and 70 grams (two ounces) of sugar.

Sadly, the newspaper said, too few people follow such a regimen but instead seem to think "the more, the sweeter, the fatter the better."

Squatters Pose London Problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Britain has a growing problem with squatters, reports House & Home magazine.

Nowhere is the problem more serious than in London, where it says an estimated 6,000 squatters live.

The magazine quotes the Greater London Council as saying that squatters' groups "provide handbooks for potential squatters; are said to operate a radio station; have their own police squads, news sheets and an estate agency where information on empty properties is maintained and where the organizer is reported as offering his services for breaking into premises."

For Rob't Trout, This Is Twelfth Inauguration

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS' Walter Cronkite is covering his eighth presidential inauguration Thursday. But he's the new kid on that beat compared to an old friend — Robert Trout of ABC News.

Trout, 68, is working his 12th inauguration, doing it again on radio. The first time was in March 1933, when he reported on the inaugural parade that followed the swearing-in of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He worked for CBS then, told listeners what he saw from his chilly parade-route perch atop the old Willard Hotel in Washington, D.C. He might have done it from a Navy blimp — a radio first — but had bad luck.

Trout, speaking by phone from Washington, said when he learned CBS planned to have someone report the 1933 parade from the blimp, he applied for the job. He got it. And quickly lost it.

Seems he admitted to the man in charge he'd never been aloft before. Whereupon, Trout said, the boss exclaimed, "Okay, that's it. You're not going." He was afraid I'd get airsick and ruin things.

"I begged and pleaded to go, but Paul Douglas did it," he added, referring to the late actor who started as a CBS announcer in New York.

Trout, who joined ABC in 1975, having spent most of his 45 years in broadcasting with CBS, was asked if he felt shaky when he covered the first inauguration, live, on a network hookup, from high atop the Willard.

"No, not really," said the reporter, who began on what now is station WTOP in Washington. "I'd had more than a year of breaking-in, ad-libbing, announcing, and it wasn't all that different."

"I was kind of an ad-lib specialist who was sent out on all kinds of things, so I can't really say I was nervous about it. Of course, you always get a little adrenalin flowing. I still do now."

ROBERT TROUT

TO JOHANNESBURG

NASHVILLE, TENN. (AP) — Billie Jo Spears, Don Williams, Tommy Overstreet, Skeeter Davis and George Hamilton IV will appear at the international Festival of Country Music Feb. 1-5 in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Thousands Of Children Are Kept From School

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ice and snow have kept thousands of North Carolina children out of school so long, the state may have to turn the whole thing into a case of legalized hookey.

The state Board of Education may be asked to waive a state law that requires school children to attend classes for 180 days during the 10 months between September and June.

Between 12 and 15 school superintendents from the northwest and western educational districts will meet here Thursday with state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips.

Phillips said a number of superintendents had been in touch with him about the problem. Some districts have been unable to conduct classes since before the Christmas holidays.

In Ashe County, for example, pupils have been out since Dec. 23 because ice and snow have made travel to and from school unsafe.

Other districts have been plagued by heating problems caused by the bitter cold weather.

Altogether, Craig said, about 40 of the state's 145 school districts have been affected by the weather. He didn't know how many students were involved.

There are just over 1.1 million students in North Carolina schools, but that figure is no help in computing the number in the west and northwest, since many of those districts are small ones.

"There's no question but that this has been the most difficult closing problem we've ever had," Phillips said. "Individual counties have had more serious problems, but this is the most widespread we've had."

Phillips said he asked the superintendents to come to Raleigh for "an informal meeting to explore some of the issues involved and some of the alternatives."

The superintendents and state staff will gather data on exactly how many students have lost how many days.

After that, it's up to the local school boards to formally ask the state board to waive some of the required 180 days.

India Preparing Hold Elections

By MYRON L. BELKIND
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed dissolved the lower house of Parliament today in preparation for the election of a new lower house in March, a year late.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi announced the restoration of political activity after 19 months of tough emergency rule in a broadcast Tuesday night. She made clear that the state of emergency proclaimed in June 1975 would continue. But she said there would be major relaxations to permit "legitimate" campaigning.

Parliament's lower house was scheduled to be elected last March, after a five-year term, but Mrs. Gandhi postponed the voting twice. She claimed it would hamper economic development.

In her broadcast, the 59-year-old prime minister said she decided to hold elections now "to reaffirm the power of the people and to uphold the fair name of India as a land committed to the path of reconciliation, peace and progress."

She also said she was eager to lift various restrictions imposed at the start of the emergency, when the government suspended civil liberties, jailed opposition leaders and put press censorship into effect.

A few hours before she went on the air, Mrs. Gandhi freed one of her most prominent foes detained under her emergency powers, 80-year-old Morarji

This hand is from an article by U.S. internationalist Eddie Kantar on suit combinations. After North had shown a minimum opening bid by passing at his second turn, South chose the slightly aggressive jump to three no trump because of his fine intermediates and double stopper in the enemy suit.

West led his fourth-best diamond and declarer won the ten. He was not too sanguine about his prospects. He only had six fast tricks, and would have to develop the heart suit for the three tricks he needed to fulfill his contract.

Schools, Businesses Idled By Unprecedented Cold

By The Associated Press

Subzero temperatures and natural gas shortages in the East, Midwest and South forced hundreds of thousands of school children and workers to stay home today. Businesses were closed in many areas, and officials in several states predicted tens of thousands more layoffs.

Fuel emergencies were declared in at least two states and a number of cities, and navigation was restricted by ice-blocked waterways throughout much of the nation.

Tennessee was particularly hard hit, with the state's Public Service Commission predicting that 100,000 persons could be out of work today because of factories and stores closed for lack of heating fuel.

Supermarkets, restaurants and drugstores in Clarksville, Tenn., were ordered to operate only six hours a day until further notice. Nashville industries were ordered shut down, and Nashville Gas Co. asked that public and private schools close to conserve gas.

Some areas in the freeze belt reported a slight "warming trend," but elsewhere the severe cold lingered and its effects mounted.

In the Chicago area, where temperatures have been below zero in the daytime, thermometers climbed to 20 degrees Tuesday, but the National Weather Service reported that subzero temperatures will return Saturday.

Columbia Gas of Ohio, the state's largest natural gas supplier, lifted peak day emergency curtailments to industrial users as temperatures were expected to warm to 20 degrees in parts of the state.

But the downtown area of Dayton, Ohio, resembled a ghost town Tuesday as natural gas and electricity shortages closed scores of businesses and kept workers and school children at home.

Some 4,000 persons in southern New Jersey, idled Tuesday by cutbacks in natural gas, were expected to return to work today as industries turned to emergency oil and propane gas suppliers to stay open.

For the first time in its 5½-year history, Amtrak announced indefinite suspension of some trains effective today because the cold damaged passenger cars and locomotives.

A spokesman said water pipes burst in passenger cars and auxiliary steam boilers used on older trains were failing. Station facilities in some areas were also affected. Watering and fueling facilities and track switches were frozen solid.

Trains on eight routes were suspended, including Chicago to Miami and Chicago to St. Louis runs.

Agriculture officials in Florida said the state's citrus and vegetable crop was threatened by freezing temperatures.

Metropolitan New York had record low temperatures that caused commuter delays for a second straight day. Long Island and Connecticut railroad travelers waited up to 1½ hours for trains on Tuesday.

Five emergency centers were set up in New York City to provide cots, blankets and hot beverages to persons without heat. Complaints were coming in at the rate of 1,500 an hour.

Schools in a number of states from Maine to Florida and throughout the Midwest were shut down Tuesday, and officials said classes would not be held today because of extreme cold.

In New York, about 100,000 pupils were affected by upstate school closings. Throughout Tennessee, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Maryland and other states, school children were on unscheduled holiday.

Tragedy struck in Springfield, Mo., where four children who ordinarily would have been in school died in a series of fires blamed directly or indirectly on the cold weather.

The nation's two largest automakers halted or curtailed operations in four states and sent more than 25,000 workers home Tuesday. Ford Motor Co. and General Motors plants were closed in Ohio, New York, Michigan and Indiana.

Fuel emergencies have been declared in Minnesota and Pennsylvania.

In St. Paul, Gov. Rudy Perpich and the Executive Council declared a 30-day "energy supply emergency" on Tuesday and issued a list of conservation suggestions, including setting thermostats at 65 degrees during the day and 60 degrees at night.

In Pennsylvania, Lt. Gov. Ernest Kline declared an emergency situation, especially in the western part of the state. Navigable waterways were choked with ice, delaying delivery of road salt to several Pennsylvania counties, officials said.

Ice floes were as high as 12 feet in some parts of the Mississippi River, and stretches of the Ohio River froze solid.

"When you consider that 60 per cent of the millions of tons of cargo that move past St. Louis each year is fossil fuel—coal, fuel oil or gas—you have to believe that some power plants and factories up the Illinois River toward Chicago are going to be hurting soon," said Mel Doernhoefer, a spokesman for the Corps of Engineers.

Thick ice and severe cold forced temporary suspension of shipping on Lake Superior and the St. Mary's River, a 20-mile stretch linking Lake Superior and the Soo Locks with Lake Huron in the St. Lawrence Seaway system.

A Winter Navigation Board spokesman said Tuesday's closing was the earliest date in five years that the section has been shut down.

In Florida, Pensacola school officials sent 50,000 students home in an inch of snow on Tuesday, and flurries were reported over most of the state's northeastern area. Record lows of 27 in Daytona Beach and 32 in Fort Meyers were reported Tuesday, with no relief predicted before the weekend.

In Florida, the possibility that the state's vegetable and citrus crops could suffer heavy damage from a severe cold spell heightened today as weather forecasters projected freezing temperatures for the rest of the week.

Richard Van Brackle of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association said several more days of cold would probably destroy winter crops of cabbage, cauliflower and celery in Central Florida, potatoes and cabbage in North Florida and cucumbers, tomatoes and pole beans in South Florida.

Record lows Tuesday included 21 at Jacksonville, 27 in Daytona Beach, 29 in Tampa, 32 in Fort Myers, and 52 in Key West. Stores throughout the state reported runs on mufflers, sweaters, gloves, thermal underwear and blankets.

Cold Causes Farm Losses

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians aren't sure what to think about the cold weather this week. It's been killing their bugs, but it's also hurt their crops and livestock.

The worst damage is in the mountains, according to state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

Graham said the cold came at a bad time for cows, which are in the midst of calving season, and some of the young ones are having it "rough." Pigs are in similar difficulties, he said.

"So far we can't put a dollar value on young animal losses," Graham said, "but there are bound to be problems when the weather is like this."

"In several streams and ponds, the water has frozen so hard livestock can't drink," he added. "Farmers are having to break the ice. To my knowledge no crops have been damaged."

But the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service reported small grain crops were suffering some weather damage in many parts of the state. Pastures were also reported deteriorating in the cold.

The service said the weather had brought an almost complete halt to farm field activity during the week.

Ice Melts In Balmy Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Anchorage Hockey Association had to cancel its games Tuesday — ice on the outdoor rinks melted.

While many of the lower 48 states shiver in a deep freeze, Alaskans are swapping parkas and mukluks for sweaters and street shoes and basking in one of the warmest winters on record.

Instead of skidding on icy sidewalks, urban Alaskans are jumping puddles or dodging splashes from passing vehicles.

Temperatures in Anchorage, the state's largest city, were running 20 degrees above normal. The highs here on Sunday and Monday, both in the low 40s, wiped out records set 43 years ago.

On Tuesday, only two Alaskan stations reported readings in the minus range — Barrow at -4 and Northway at -12.

It's like a summer vacation for many of the 14,000 Air Force, Navy, Army, Marine and National Guard personnel here to take part in "Jack Frost 1977," an annual joint military cold weather combat exercise.

"Hey, guys, it's warmer here than on the East Coast," said one Leatherneck reserve arriving from Albany, N.Y., bundled in heavy clothing designed to ward off the biting subarctic temperatures he expected. The low temperature at Albany, home of Company A of the 1st

Responded To Smoke; No Fire

Firemen were called to the Blount-Harvey Co. at the intersection of Fourth Street and the Evans Mall about 4:05 p.m. yesterday when smoke was discovered in the department store's basement and elevator shaft.

Fire officials, who said no fire was found, said the smoke may have come from the furnace.

No damage resulted.

WHEN THE COLD HITS FLORIDA — Workmen at Sunken Gardens, a tourist attraction at St. Petersburg, Fla., fired up their 1,300 heaters during the night as the mercury dropped through up the Sunshine State. More of the unusually cold weather is forecast for tonight. (AP Wirephoto)

COLD STORAGE — An old safe stands in the freezing wind among the rubble of the old North Side Lumber Co. The old safe, which is of the larger two door type, apparently was not moved from its resting spot, after a portion of the floor had been cut around it. The building is being torn down to make way for a fast food restaurant. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

HOUSING PROJECT PLANNED
Bill Cochran, Executive Director of the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority announced today that the Authority is planning a rental housing project for the town of Winterville.

Twenty-five apartment units, to be constructed upon the determination of citizens' housing needs in Winterville, will provide comfortable living conditions at reasonable rental rates.

According to Cochran, a rental housing survey is now underway, and interested persons in Winterville are encouraged to go by the Town Hall, complete the survey and receive other information pertaining to the proposed apartment construction.

The surveys are designed to determine the feasibility of the project, so prompt citizen response is important, Cochran said.
