HOUSTON (AP) — The parent of a Houston high school pupil received a message from the principal about a special meeting on a proposed educational program.

It read: "Our school's cross-graded, multi-ethnic, individualized learning program is designed to enhance the concept of an openended learning program with emphasis on a continuum of multi-ethnic, academically enriched learning using the identified intellectually gifted child as the agent or director of his own learning.

"Major emphasis is on crossgraded, multi-ethnic learning with the main objective being to learn respect for the uniqueness of a person."

The parent wrote the principal:

"I have a college degree, speak two foreign languages and four Indian dialects, have been to a number of county fairs and three goat ropings, but I haven't the faintest idea as to what the hell you are talking about. Do you?"

Carter Picks Tax Break Stimulator

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is opting for tax breaks, including a $50 rebate this year for nearly all Americans, as the nucleus for his $31 billion package to stimulate the economy.

While the President does not plan to send his economic proposals to Congress until Monday, he discussed them with congressional leaders Tuesday. His budget chief, Bert Lance, publicly revealed the plan for an across-the-board $50 rebate.

Lance gave no indication that there would be any ceiling on the amount of rebate one family could get, other than the $50 a person rate of rebate.

Organized labor contends that the new administration is placing too much emphasis on tax rebates and not enough on job-making programs.

The AFL-CIO's top two leaders, George Meany and Lane Kirkland, planned to meet with Carter today at the White House.

The AFL-CIO favors pumping the $30 billion directly into jobs programs without tax breaks.

Lance said Tuesday that the rebates would go to taxpayers at all income levels, including the wealthy.

But he added that there could be variations in the $50 per person payment for some income groups, and final details remain to be worked out. The total amount of rebates and cash payments would be about $11 billion. The rebates would be on 1976 taxes.

He said the government also would try to make $50 payments to Social Security recipients and the poor who pay no taxes, although he said it may not be possible to find all the eligible poor.

Lance estimated the two-year package will total $31.3 billion, including $15.8 billion this year. Carter and his advisers said on

Jan. 7 that the stimulus package would cost up to $30 billion.

Lance and other Carter economic advisers will testify on the program before congressional committees next week after the President sends his plans to Capitol Hill. The program is subject to approval by Congress.

Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he has "no problems" with the tax proposals and hopes they can clear Congress by the end of February.

Lance also disclosed that Carter has decided to include a second benefit for businessmen in his economic package, an increase in the investment tax credit to 12 per cent from the current 10 per cent. Lance said the purpose is to encourage new business investment.

Businessmen would have a choice of two ways to take the investment tax credit. They could reduce their tax payments by a certain percentage of the cost of new investments, or take a 4 per cent tax credit equal to the amount of their Social Security tax payments for their employees.

They could not take both, Lance said.

He said the combined tax benefits for business would total $2.5 billion, up from $2 billion estimated previously when Carter was considering only a 5 per cent Social Security tax credit. As part of the change, the amount of the credit was reduced to 4 per cent.

WANTS LIMIT — Gov. George Ariyoshi of Hawaii says his island paradise is being spoiled by too many people so he is urging passage of a constitutional amendment to stem the tide of new residents. Crime Address Planned Monday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Aides to Gov. Jim Hunt are preparing a crime address for Hunt to deliver Monday to the General Assembly.

The governor requested the opportunity to make the appearance. In other actions Tuesday, Hunt:

—Announced appointment of Ken Flynt, 28, as his chief economic advisor. Flynt, of Charlotte and a Kernersville native, is currently an economist with North Carolina National Bank.

—Spent time reviewing potential appointees to the Advisory Budget Commission, the Board of Alcoholic Control, the Board of Transportation and the state Utilities Commission.

Flu-Like Sickness Has Swept Area's Schools

By SUSAN QUINN Reflector Staff Writer

A sickness with flu-like symptoms has swept through the schools in the Pitt County area during the last few days and has caused a high rate of absenteeism and the closing of one school.

St. Peter's Catholic School in Greenville closed for the rest of the week Tuesday afternoon because of the high rate of absenteeism and continuous spreading of the sickness, according to principal, Sister Mary John.

"We had about one third of the students out Monday and Tuesday and many of the students at school were sick. We decided to close to allow the students a while to get well and to try to stop the spreading of the sickness. Classes will reopen Monday," Sister Mary John said.

The county schools have experienced a large absentee rate but not an epidemic proportion, according to Pitt County School Superintendent Ott Alford.

"In a spot check of attendance at seven schools we have found that there is no particular problem. The attendance is better this week in some schools than last week. Ayden Elementary School had an unusual number of students out last week. It seems that there are no more than the general absentee rate in January," Supt. Alford said.

Glenn Cox, Superintendent of Greenville City Schools said that presented by the council would:

—Prohibit picketing and demonstrations near courthouses. The panel said the demonstrations are aimed at influencing judge and jurors in a trial and are disruptive. "It is unrealistic to believe that a judge sitting in a courtroom can control by use of his contempt authority a mob in the streets which is picketing a courthouse," the report said.

The council's proposal would be similar to a federal law passed in 1950 which bans demonstrations within 500 feet of the building where a trial is being conducted. Such laws have been upheld by the Supreme Court, the report said.

—Provide an attorney for indigent parents in cases where the state is contesting parental custody. Now, indigent parents have no right to an attorney in such proceedings.

"Because of the magnitude of the consequences involved in these proceedings, the council feels that simple justice often demands that counsel represent the parties..."

—Allow dismissal of frivolous petitions for the removal of district attorneys. Current law does not allow judges to dismiss charges against district attorneys if the charges are baseless. The change supported by the council would allow the charges to be dismissed without a hearing by the judge.

—Repeal the habitual offender provision was enacted seven years ago and, the council said, there is no evidence that it has succeeded in removing bad drivers from the roads.

"The primary purpose of the act can be accomplished administratively by tighter enforcement of the existing laws dealing with those offenders convicted of driving while their licenses are revoked..." the report said.

The law defines an habitual offender as a person who is convicted of 12 moving violations or three major violations in seven years.

Confirmed

ATTORNEY GENERAL — Attorney General designate Griffin Bell and his wife Mary are pictured as they depart their Washington hotel Tuesday evening. Senate OKs Griffin Bell

By JOHN CHADWICK Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — His confirmation battle over and won, Griffin B. Bell is taking office as the nation's top legal officer, the attorney general.

Bell, an Atlanta lawyer, former federal judge and longtime friend of President Carter, won Senate approval Tuesday by a 75-21 vote.

The President planned to attend Bell's swearing-in ceremony today in the Justice Department's Great Hall.

Bell was the tenth of Carter's 11 Cabinet nominees to be confirmed. The Senate planned to vote today on the nomination of F. Ray Marshall as labor secretary.

Fifty-four Democratic senators voted for Bell's confirmation and only five against. The Republican line-up was 21 for and 16 against.

Carter's selection of Bell aroused strong opposition from some black leaders and various civil rights and liberal organizations, but the President himself called Bell's civil rights record "superb."

Bell has been a friend of the President and his family since boyhood. He was born in Americus, Ga., near Carter's hometown of Plains.

Bell, 58, resigned from the 5th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals last March after nearly 15 years on the bench.

In the more than six hours of debate that preceded the confirmation vote, liberal Democratic senators like Birch Bayh of Indiana and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts supported Bell's confirmation.

But Sens. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, Bob Dole of Kansas and other Republicans who voted no said the Democratic majority was applying a different standard to Bell than it would have applied to a Republican president's nominee.

Brooke recalled how the Senate had rejected former President Richard M. Nixon's Supreme Court nominations of two southern judges, Clement F. Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carswell.

Bayh and Kennedy acknowledged some aspects of Bell's past record were troubling, but they emphasized commitments he made during six days of hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee to enforce civil rights laws vigorously.

The committee heard conflicting testimony about Bell's role as a legal adviser to former Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver, who was elected in 1958 with a campaign pledge to keep the state's schools segregated.

Spare Tires Expected Soon

NEW YORK (UPI) — Car buyers who accepted delivery on 1977 models that lacked spare tires should be getting them during the early part of the year.

The spares missing because of the four-month tire industry strike were included in the cost of the cars, says the Better Business Bureau, which has these suggestions for car buyers in obtaining the spares:

Be sure your dealer has your name and address on a list that proves you accepted a car without a spare, and advise him in writing of your new address if you move.

Unemployment Insurance Fund Has Fresh Threat

By DAVID TOMLIN Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's unemployment insurance fund, still trying to recover from the 1974-75 recession, faces a new threat from the winter energy crisis.

But fund officials insist that while job layoffs caused by natural gas shortages may delay recovery of the fund, they will not jeopardize its integrity and benefits will be paid promptly.

State officials estimate that if all companies that depend on natural gas were forced to shut down, 38,000 North Carolinians would be without work.

Most companies that have had their gas supplies curtailed or cut off were continuing operations at reduced levels, many using reserves of gas they had stored themselves or buying propane as an alternate fuel.

But while a few firms said they had enough gas to last the winter, many were expected to run out soon, and at least some layoffs were expected this week.

The state's unemployment insurance fund stood at $575 million in 1974 before the recession began, according to its manager, Warren G.

Wittmer. It now stands at $245 million, and the latest projections indicated it would bottom out at $230 million before resuming a slow climb in April.

How the energy crisis will alter that picture is not known yet, but Wittmer and Manfred Emrich, chairman of the Employment Security Commission, said they were watching the situation closely.

Emmrich pointed out the fund was paying benefits to 220,000 people at the height of the recession. There are 100,000 on the rolls now, he said, so even if the worst happens the energy crisis won't pose a threat that can't be met.

Benefits amount to half of a worker's average wage, based on a complex formula, and are paid from 13 to 26 weeks, depending on how steadily the employee had been working.

Emmrich noted the energy crisis had come at a bad time for the fund, since unemployment is always highest in the winter, even under normal circumstances.

KNOW VALUE

We had problems last year because the County Tax Office valued our mobile home too high by a couple of thousand dollars. We found out it was partly our fault because we were not supposed to sign the tax forms unless we agreed with the values stated. This year, again, they did not put in the values when we went down to sign the forms, and when we requested this, they said they were not supposed to do it. We went back again and requested that they put in the values of our property. They did that time, and we did not agree with it. They finally got it straight, but we want people to realize that they can save themselves a lot of trouble by knowing they are not supposed to sign their tax forms unless they agree with the values stated when they list their taxes. B.J.

A spokesman for the Tax Supervisor's Office said that persons who list in person are, indeed, supposed to see the value assigned to each piece of property before they sign their tax forms. Values are taken from appraisal books and are usually correct and fair because everyone's property of the same type is appraised the same, she said. However, if anyone seriously questions an appraisal, his recourse is to go before the local Equalization and Review Board.

Persons who list by mail do not see the appraised values unless they go into the office later and ask to. This is every tax lister's privilege, of course, she said.

Choice: Continued Power Shortages Or Pay More

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Are people willing to put up with less heat in the winter, less cooling in the summer, occasional electric voltage reductions and even a blackout now and then?

Or would they rather pay higher utility bills 12 months a year to ensure there is all the power they can use on the coldest and hottest of days?

Represented by state Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, a coalition of conservation and public interest groups have urged the Utilities Commission to ask those basic questions about how much electricity will really be needed in the next several decades.

Smith, backed by an array of academic and theoretical arguments, said Duke Power Co., Carolina Power and Light Co. and Virginia Electric and Power Co. have overbuilt generating facilities — with the consumer paying for the unneeded construction in higher rates. The utilities built a large reserve of electric power, Smith argued, with the thought that it would be needed on the occasional peaks of power demands — days like Jan. 17 when thermometers across North Carolina plunged below zero and customers of those utilities used more power than ever.

Instead of building more and more electric generating plants, Smith said the Utilities Commission should plan for a slower rise in electricity production in the future — supplemented by other sources like solar and wind energy. If electric companies would institute "time-of-day" pricing, charging higher rates for use during daily peak periods, and offer incentives for homeowners to stall better insulation, the peaks would not be so high, his group argues.

But even if the peak demands continue to soar, the conservationists imply, can't people live with a brownout or a brief blackout on the coldest and hottest of days? "They can't pay $300 electric bills," Smith concluded.

New Agricultural Act Change Opposed By Bd.

The Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors last night approved sending a letter to First District Congressman Walter Jones voicing opposition to a bill before Congress to amend the Agricultural Act of 1949.

Passage of the proposed amendment would give the Secretary of Agriculture the right to control the price support for tobacco.

Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, a member of the State Women's Advisory Committee urged board members to install smoke detectors and fire extinguishers at strategic points in their homes.

Farm Bureau president D. R. House named the following commodity committees for 1977:

Has Strict Orders To Get A Panama Treaty

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panama's foreign minister is under strict orders to negotiate a new Panama Canal treaty that will require total and final U.S. withdrawal from the Canal Zone within 23 years.

Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will begin talks on a new canal treaty next week.

Boyd, who arrives in New York on Friday, also has orders from his leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, to tell Vance that the 600-square-mile Canal Zone will become the 10th province of the Panamanian state.

Panamanian embassy officials in Washington said any new pact between the Torrijos regime and the Carter administration will be submitted for popular acceptance or rejection in a national plebiscite.

The Panamanian officials say Boyd has firm instructions and will insist that the U.S. presence in and around the canal be ended by the year 2000.

These developments coincided with reports that President Carter plans to name Washington lawyer Sol M. Linowitz as co-negotiator with Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker. Bunker has been in charge of the canal negotiations for five years.

Vance privately has advised Latin American governments that he expects a new treaty to be completed in about three months, and Torrijos, in a speech last weekend, called

Carter administration officials "men better fitted than the men they replaced."

But Torrijos was quoted here as warning that "We will not accept a treaty that will leave in the (Canal Zone) overt or covert forms of colonialism."

In negotiations, which have ground on for the past 12 years, the U.S. position has been that control of the waterway could be shared and the size of the U.S.-occupied Canal Zone reduced.

U.S. officials also have insisted on maintaining a U.S. presence in Panama until about the year 2040 and on retaining the primary right to defend the waterway for an indefinite time.

Another Award Given Kissinger

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been awarded the printing industry's Benjamin Franklin Award gold medal as a "courageous and incredibly gifted negotiator." The award, single highest honor of the nation's printing industry, was made Tuesday at the International Printing Week Dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria. The dinner celebrated the 27th anniversary of the birth of "B. Franklin, printer," as the patriot-philosopher-statesman referred to himself.

Lost A Bundle

BRAYTON, Iowa (AP) — "You can't take it with you," commented Elmer Carlson, after selling a 170-acre farm to pay for parties he threw to celebrate President Carter's inauguration.

Carlson said about 200 persons packed the town hall of Brayton for the auction Saturday. Three neighbors went together to bid $1,385 an acre — for a total of $235,450.

The Iowa farmer threw three parties, which he said cost him about $150,000. He said his only regret was that more people didn't attend.

Partygoers paid from $20 to $35 each. Carlson had hoped for a turnout of 2,500 at each party. Only 200 or 250 attended each of the first two, but about 2,000 were at the last one Thursday night.

Carlson, a resident of Audubon, said he still owns about 1,700 acres of Iowa farm land.

"I'm there first as a fire chief and not as a newspaperman," said Gill.

Single Prefers To Live At Home

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single 24-year-old woman who lives at home with her family. I love my family and they love me. They have plenty of room and I feel that I belong here.

When some of my friends hear that I don't have my own pad, they ask what's wrong with me.

Abby, why do so many young people leave perfectly wonderful homes to move into a cramped, crummy apartment just to "get away" from home?

I have a good job and insist on contributing financially to our home, so it's not as if I'm freeloading. I can move out any time I want to, but I like it here.

Is there something wrong with me? I know others my age who also live at home, but they seem embarrassed by it.

LOVE MY HOME

DEAR LOVE: There is nothing wrong with you. And there is nothing wrong with people who prefer their own pads. Different strokes for different folks.

DEAR ABBY: I hope that you will print this letter to warn other working wives. My husband and I lived in a comfortable house in the suburbs. We have two young children.

For a long time I had asked my husband to hire a live-in housekeeper, but he was never very fond of the idea. Then out of the blue he suggested hiring this girl. (I'll call her Amy.) I thought she was too young, but my husband said she would be good for the kids. Good as she was for the kids, she was better for him.

We are now divorced. I hope you get the message.

CLEANING ALONE

DEAR CLEANING: So what's the message? That no man can be trusted with a female domestic under 70? Sorry, I don't buy it. The message I get from your letter is that YOUR husband can't be trusted, period.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who constantly complains about her health. She never feels "up to" doing anything, except when something comes along that she really wants to do.

She is constantly talking about her symptoms, medication and visits to the doctor. Her case is always the "rarest," or the most complicated the doctor has ever seen, according to her.

I have listened to her for years and have had enough. I used to try to pick up her spirits, but it takes too much time and energy, and I just can't handle it. Believe me, I've tried. Others feel the same way about her.

How can I tell her without hurting her feelings that people are avoiding her because of her constant whining? Or do you think she's beyond help?

HER NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: Nobody is beyond help. At least make the effort. Tell her in the spirit of love and generosity. And give her this priceless poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, which I recently published in this column:

HEALTH

Talk health. The dreary, never ending tale of mortal maladies are worn and stale.

You cannot charm or interest or please by harping on that minor chord—disease. So, say that you are well, and all is well with you. And God will hear your words and make them true.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

SWEET TREATS

—Sweetpotatoes generally reach their peak of popularity at holiday time when they make their most festive appearance with the traditional turkey dinner. But now is a good time to reorganize your menus and use sweetpotatoes more often. They're versatile and they're also plentiful this January, according to reports from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Sweetpotatoes are grown largely in the southern states, with North Carolina and Louisiana leading production.

The nutritional value of sweetpotatoes has been known and heralded over many years of good eating. Their versatility has been enhanced yearly as new and interesting ways to prepare and serve sweetpotatoes creep into recipes that range from breakfast dishes to flaming desserts.

Traditionally, sweetpotatoes have been a company food with poultry, but they are also a natural go-together with pork, ham, sausage and many other entrees. They can be baked, boiled, fried, or mashed, and they combine well with other foods. For example—a sweetpotato casserole topped with marshmallows, pineapple, or orange slices. Nutmeg and cinnamon are the most appropriate spices to enhance the flavor of these rich, orange-fleshed potatoes.

Sweetpotatoes are popular in one-dish and buffet specialties with pork, veal, corned beef, luncheon meats and other meats. Their color, taste and texture make them a good choice for a variety of quick breads.

For the same reasons—taste, texture and color—new dessert recipes include sweetpotatoes in puddings, souffles, for pies, tarts, whips and sherbets. And sweetpotatoes are also combined with mincemeat, apples, prunes, apricots, coconut, raisins and a variety of nuts.

A Lot Of Forgiving Is Needed

President Carter made it clear during his campaign that he would issue a pardon for draft evaders if he were elected.

We supported Carter, he was elected and one of his first acts was to pardon the draft evaders.

There was no surprise there, and we accept the action of the president.

Nevertheless, our assessment of the draft evaders who we have seen or read about through interviews was that they were thoroughly middle-class individuals who held their country in low-esteem back during the Vietnam tragedy, and still do.

We assume the middle class draft evaders had family money to get to another country and free themselves of the national tragedy which we all grappled with.

As they left, however, the military kept filling its quotas through the draft. In the places of the draft evaders, more often than not, went the financially disadvantaged. This, as we know, included a high proportion of blacks.

Many of those who went pulled their time and got back home in good condition. Some came back maimed for life; others never came back.

To forgive is divine, however; the president forgave. We hope all those individuals and families who were directly affected by the Vietnam war through military involvement can find it in their hearts to forgive, too.

Action May Provide The Gas We Need

It appears now that the lifting of price controls on natural gas temporarily is virtually certain.

It is anticipated that President Carter will ask Congress to do this shortly.

We already have a two price system for gas — one for normal supplies and another for so called "emergency" gas.

We think the controlled price for gas is adequate to provide the suppliers with a sound profit. Yet, the gas we need is not forthcoming and even the U. S. government has to buckle under these circumstances

Petrocomplex Cost High

By BILL NOBLITT

(Second of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — North Carolina appears high on the list of areas in which a petrocomplex (refineries, pipelines, ports, product industries) would be desirable by the industry.

Nearness to market, possible port sites, location relative to Mideast oil fields, and proximity to potential offshore drilling sites combine to make the area attractive.

But another major factor is introduced by researchers in a study just completed by the North Carolina Office of Marine Affairs: "environmental groups and other citizens have opposed refineries and deepwater terminals at a number of proposed locations in (New England and mid-Atlantic) areas . . ." putting this state at a "comparative advantage."

The report entitled "The North Carolina Petrocomplex Study" was prepared for decision-makers in the state's Legislature and administration as the prospect of petrodevelopment in the state draws close to reality.

Tax Investment

Costs would be high, researchers believe: there would be governmental investment in roads, schools, hospitals, water and sewerage facilities, etc.

Fresh water for cooling and manufacturing purposes would be needed in great quantities — so much that a petrocomplex in a given area would probably rule out additional industrial development. Also, more than one petro industry "would call for careful planning to avoid saltwater intrusion of groundwater supplies."

Then there is the ever-present threat of oil spill. Just handling oil regularly means some is spilled. Chronic oil spills (11 to 22 barrels per 10 million handled) is the rule, researchers say. That chronic spilling is "likely to lower plant and animal species diversity, lower dissolved oxygen concentrations at the channel bottom, and to lessen species reproduction in the immediate area."

Chronic spills would most affect shallow water locations. Deepwater ports offshore would provide enough depth and water to handle the spill-age without too much effect.

But what of the acute, catastrophic oil spills? That, researchers say, is another matter. Such spills are usually much larger than the chronic spillage; effects depend on weather and specifics of the accident.

"Data on such accidents are not extensive, but suggest that the majority of them occur within 50 miles of a coast," the report notes.

Big Spill

What happens? The researchers spell it out:

"It is well known that birds are killed . . . diving species are particularly susceptible . . . localized pockets of rare species might be greatly affected . . . sea mammals would also be affected."

"Little is known about effect . . . on fish and fisheries . . . on plankton, neuston, intertidal organisms, or seabed organisms . . . In estuaries . . . destruction of eelgrass and marsh grass . . . food supply and shelter of many species, especially at their early ages."

"Other potential effects of spills include tarring of beaches and fouling of boats, motors, and other marine and fishing gear, affecting both the fisheries and tourism sectors of the economy," the environmental section of the report states.

As to air pollution, researchers conclude that computer studies "indicate that ambient air quality standards for hydrocarbons would be violated" requiring rigid control measures, or refinery sites must be large enough (nearly 10 square miles) so that pollution concentrations at the borders do not exceed standards.

Environmental impacts would be "relatively local in nature" even though chronic oil spills "will exist at tanker and product unloading and loading areas" and "acute oil spills from major accidents are possible."

Nonetheless, the report concludes that "petrodevelopment would be accepted by the residents of any of the three areas because of its potential economic benefits . . ."

A Record-Setting Walk

WASHINGTON—Everyone in Washington is still talking about President and Mrs. Carter's walk from the Capitol to the White House, and Carter watchers are still asking "Why did he do it?" The obvious answer is "Because it was there."

The President made the walk in 35 minutes and 10 seconds—a new world record for a head of state. He would have probably even broken that if Amy hadn't had to stop and tie her bootlaces along the way.

This, incidentally, was not the first attempt by someone to walk from the Capitol to the White House. In 1957, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gerard of Tampa, Fla., started out from the door of the Senate building and were making excellent time until they were mugged at 7th St. and Pennsylvania Ave.

In 1961, Ezra Bealeman of Racine, Wis., decided to see if he could make it. Following almost exactly the route the Carters took along Pennsylvania Ave. in the middle of the street, Bealeman was almost halfway there when he was hit by a Washington express bus and thrown through a window of the Post Office Building. He spent three months at George Washington Hospital and upon his release was given 30 days in jail for jaywalking.

This discouraged people for a little while from walking along Pennsylvania Ave. until 1967 when four Vietnam protesters decided to try it. They were making good time until they passed the FBI building. J. Edgar Hoover happened to be looking out his window. He flew into a rage and 200 FBI men surrounded the protesters and charged them with walking by the FBI building without a permit.

In 1970, Gerald Timmons of Chevy Chase, Md., had a few drinks and when he couldn't find a taxi he decided to walk the famous route taken by the Carters. Unfortunately, he chose to do it during rush hour and it took an hour to get across 14th St. and Pennsylvania. This discouraged him and, though he was within a few blocks of his goal, he said the hell with it and stopped in Bassin's Bar where he spent the rest of the evening.

Five Cubans hired by the Committee to Re-elect the President were the next people to try the walk. They made it to the White House without incident where they received orders to continue walking on to the Watergate Headquarters of the Democratic Party where they were captured.

Had they not stopped at the White House to rest, their walk would never have been traced to President Nixon's staff and Nixon might have been the man last Thursday to turn over the keys of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. to the Carters.

The most interesting attempt to walk from the Capitol was made by Congressman Wilbur Mills and his party who decided to do it in October 1974. Mills got off to a good start, but he took a wrong turn at 8th St. and wound up at the Tidal Basin instead. Since it was two o'clock in the morning and a dark night, he mistakenly thought he was at the White House.

He suggested to one of his party that she take a swim in the White House swimming pool. Much to his chagrin he discovered they weren't at the White House, and everyone knows what this simple mistake cost the Arkansas congressman.

When President Carter decided to take the walk, his aides and the Secret Service tried to talk him out of it. But he was adamant and told them, "I have to show the country I can walk and chew gum at the same time."

Farther north at Louisville the flood stage, normally at 28 feet, reached 56.9 feet with a crest of 57.5 expected by tonight or early tomorrow. The previous all-time record was 46.7 feet in 1834.

Future Fight's Symbol

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's delay in confirming Ray Marshall as secretary of labor marks the first skirmish in a battle brewing in the 95th Congress over controversial "right to work" laws.

Marshall, the last of President Carter's Cabinet nominees to be considered, is expected to be approved today by a substantial margin, despite opposition from some conservatives.

The full Senate set aside five hours today to debate the nomination of the 48-year-old University of Texas economist.

Eight Cabinet nominees were approved last Thursday, a ninth on Monday and a tenth on Tuesday when the Senate approved Griffin Bell as attorney general.

His critics contend Marshall is too pro-labor, particularly because he favors repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permits states to ban union shop agreements.

The Senate Labor Committee recommended Marshall's confirmation last week by a 13-2 vote after a one-day hearing at which some senators assailed his position on 14-B, his support for public employe bargaining rights and his statement that there might be "some merit" in allowing unions to organize members of the Armed Forces.

Virginia's conservative senators, Independent Harry Byrd and Republican William Scott, said they would vote against Marshall. Byrd said his positions "constitute nothing less than extremism."

But Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said he would vote for Marshall even though he opposes efforts to repeal the right to work laws.

Section 14-B — on the books since 1947 — is the provision in the federal law allowing states to ban labor contracts requiring all workers to join a union as a

40 Years Ago Today

January 26, 1937

The yellow tide of the Ohio River swelled to record-breaking heights today on its turbulent rush to the Mississippi as the death toll rose hourly and a "super flood" was predicted.

Haggard refugees by the thousands fled from the devastated flood zone embracing 11 mid-west states from Pittsburgh, Pa., down the debris-littered river valley to Memphis, Tenn.

Eddying in muddy torrents the water spread along a 1,300-mile front. The death list was unofficially placed at 132, with 550,000 driven from their homes and thousands of others marooned in precarious straits.

Whole towns and villages showed only roof tops. Property damage was estimated at more than $300 million.

At Cairo, Ill., the "key" point in the great onswep of death and destruction an army of volunteers toiled feverishly to combat the approaching crest of the Ohio's tidal deluge.

Farther north at Louisville the flood stage, normally at 28 feet, reached 56.9 feet with a crest of 57.5 expected by tonight or early tomorrow. The previous all-time record was 46.7 feet in 1834.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Another Nyet For Carter

WASHINGTON — Stung once by the Senate in the Sorensen-CIA fiasco, President Carter has now all but conceded a second defeat, less significant than the withdrawal of Ted Sorensen's nomination to head the CIA but, in a personal sense, more humiliating. Mary King, who along with her husband, White House aide Peter Bourne, has been touted as one of Jimmy Carter's closest personal aides, was slated to be director of the $100 million agency called ACTION (including the Peace Corps, VISTA and other volunteer organizations).

But when word of the pending nomination leaked to the press, it triggered a storm of indignation in the Senate Labor Committee, which, with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has jurisdiction over confirmation. Leading the opposition are two formidable Senate powers: Sen. Harrison (Pete) Williams of New Jersey, Labor Committee chairman, and Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the Senate majority whip and chairman of the Labor subcommittee that would handle the nomination.

They and other Democrats have quietly passed this firm word to Mr. Carter: Mary King was a "disaster" as head of the Carter women's committee and his health policy task force during the campaign and is unqualified to run a $100 million agency that has been in trouble since it was created six years ago.

Williams personally led the 1971 floor fight against the Nixon administration's proposal to lump the Peace Corps and VISTA together in one sprawling agency. The Nixon plan was adopted, however, and the agency is now described by congressional experts as "having the lowest morale of any agency in town."

What makes the Senate's rebellion against Mary King so embarrassing is her closeness to the new President. She was described in the New York Times last summer as "one of the Carter brain trust, on the same level as his foreign policy adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski." Carter operatives view her differently, describing her privately as too inexperienced and politically naive for the top ACTION job (now held by Michael P. Balzano) but perhaps suited for a lesser post in the same agency.

A footnote: Anti-King sentiment in the Senate marks another step in the decline of Mr. Carter's aides and advisers who do not come out of the old Carter inner circle of Georgia aides, and another boost in the power of that inner circle, led by Hamilton Jordan.

Panama And Republicans

The Republican party's ideological split was vividly brought home to the party's new national chairman, William Brock, when Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina once again raised the incendiary issue of Panama Canal control.

Helms proposed to Brock that Ronald Reagan represent the Republican party nationally on the canal issue — a bitter point of contention between Reagan and President Gerald Ford in their struggle for the Republican presidential nomination. Since Brock has no intention of reopening that struggle, he is not about to follow Helms's advice.

With Robert Strauss's remarkable record of conciliation as Democratic national chairman during the past four years as his model, Brock wants to emphasize those issues on which Republicans agree rather than disagree. But that means overcoming the intense pressure from the party's left and right wings, both of which claim credit for Brock's election, to take hard stands on specific issues.

Helms, who has emerged as an aggressive and influential figure on the Republican right, telephoned Brock shortly after his election to congratulate him for winning as a "born-again conservative." The phrase reveals the dubious but widely-held view by many conservatives that Brock lost his Senate seat in Tennessee last year by straying too far left and now has moved right again to be elected national chairman.

Helms then suggested that

To the editor:

I read a letter in this paper Jan. 20 signed Judith L. Willis. The society which you accuse has acted justly through the courts. Gilmore was guilty without doubt. You know the evidence. May the courts ever deserve honor.

The ordination of government is of God. And the Holiness of God demands punishment. Capital punishment makes known the enormity of murder and the value of human life. God commanded the human race long before the Jewish law was given from Sinai—whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man. See Genesis 9:6; Leviticus 24:27, 20:10, and 24:16; Exodus 21:15-17; Deuteronomy 13:5-9 and 17:2-5; and Numbers 35:27 and 35:31-34. God instituted capital punishment as His word clearly reveals, and no man has a right to do away with it. Thou shalt do no murder—Matthew 19:18.

There is a difference between murder and the judicial taking of the life of a murderer. North Carolina will soon have a death penalty statute I feel sure. I think we should.

Yes, some moral decisions were misguided during the Vietnam Conflict. The mishap there was moral failure to go ahead and win the war quickly.

Expect Busy Housing Industry

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Real estate people are looking for this year to be the most vigorous ever in sales of single-family dwellings, despite an anticipated rise in the median price of new homes to more than $50,000.

That expectation, from the National Association of Realtors, stands in sharp contrast to some other industrial forecasts that are hedged against the possibilities of rising interest rates and inflation.

The Realtors concede that inflation will be apparent in the housing market, but no more so than in 1976. They forecast an 8 per cent rise for existing homes and a 10 per cent increase for newly built units.

The cost of mortgages, however, is expected to go the other way, falling during the first half of the year to 8.5 per cent before stabilizing and then probably inching higher. Rates last year generally were around 9 per cent.

The biggest spur to sales is expected to come from an even stronger existing home market. Last year close to 3 million such homes changed hands, and the Realtors expect sales this year to total 3.4 million.

The interest of Americans in homes previously occupied soared during the past few years but was almost unnoticed by some economists and others who had their eyes glued to the figures on newly built homes.

A number of factors are behind the interest, including the higher cost of new homes, the greater spaciousness of some existing homes, the desire of some young couples to renovate units in mature neighborhoods.

In addition to higher sales for existing homes, the Realtors expect that about 1.3 million single-family homes will be started in 1977, making it the second-best year ever for this type of construction.

In all, said the Realtors, "American consumers will spend $220 billion to purchase nearly 4.7 million single-family homes, making this the best year ever for the single-family home market."

What astounds some students of the housing market is that the surge comes in the face of higher prices — prices that some of them had felt would rule out statistics such as those now forecast.

The median price of an existing home — a resale home — is expected to rise by 8 per cent, or about $3,000, to $42,000 by the end of the year.

New homes are expected to rise nearly 10 per cent, surpassing the $50,000 mark.

While some young couples are relying on loans from their parents in order to meet the increasingly large down payments required, some buyers are benefiting from a relaxation of mortgage money restraints.

The thrift industry, made up of savings banks and savings and loan associations, had record high deposits in 1976, and is expected to be in a strong position to lend throughout 1977.

While business and government borrowing is expected to absorb some of the excess funds, perhaps nudging interest rates higher near the end of the year, the funds available to housing are expected to be more than adequate.

Strength For Today

THE ART OF WAITING

Among the last words Jesus uttered at the close of his ministry were these: "Wait for the promise of the Father." He was about to ascend into heaven. His followers were eager to receive his final instructions. But the only word he had for them was "Wait."

One of the most trying experiences in life is that of waiting. In things spiritual we sometimes fail to realize that religion is not primarily something we do for God but something we allow God to do for us. The Almighty has promised us certain things. He will give them when He knows that we are ready to receive them. Until then we are to wait — not in idleness but in expectation; not as creatures without purpose spread out in the sunshine, but as runners set for a race and waiting for the signal.

First we need prayer, meditation, seeking. After that comes action which will remove mountains and east them into the sea.

Child Day-Care Law Changes Slated For Debate

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Changes in state law regulating child day care centers prompted by a Winston-Salem fire which killed two children are set for House debate Thursday.

The child day care center measure was one of several bills approved by legislative committees Tuesday as the tempo of the legislative session picked up somewhat.

Meanwhile, forces on both sides of the controversial Equal Rights Amendment issue were set up for public hearings scheduled to begin this afternoon. Opponents of the amendment were given the opportunity to get their arguments in first while backers will be heard Thursday afternoon.

Meanwhile, legislators reported they were being showered with mail and telephone calls appealing for them to vote for or against ERA.

Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee which is considering ERA, said he was getting about 200 letters a day and "the phone rings constantly."

"I presume the mail is running against it," he said in answer to a question. Legislative action Tuesday included:

DAY CARE

The House Judiciary III Committee gave its approval to a bill designed to close a loophole in the day care center law. The bill is expected to be on the House calendar for debate Thursday.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, introducer of the bill which 19 other House members joined in sponsoring, said the bill would enable the state Child Day Care Licensing Board to seek court orders to close day care centers found not complying with the law.

Before a day care center can be closed under present law, the operator must be convicted in court of operating without a license. Sponsors of the bill say that it is difficult to get juries to convict operators of child day care centers even if they are violating the law.

The Cook bill and one sponsored in the Senate by Sen. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth, were prompted by the death of two children in a fire in a Winston-Salem day care center over a year ago. State officials said they had tried unsuccessfully to close the center.

DEATH PENALTY

The House Judiciary II Committee made plans to hear representatives of North Carolina's five law schools next Wednesday discuss capital punishment. Faculty members from the schools will interpret last summer's U.S. Supreme Court opinions which upheld capital punishment but ruled North Carolina's law unconstitutional. The committee is considering legislation to restore the death penalty for murder and rape.

Rep. John Ed Davenport, D-Nash, committee chairman, said forces opposing the death penalty had requested a public hearing, but no date was set.

The committee received pamphlets arguing against the death penalty compiled by North Carolinians Against the Death Penalty and Southern Coalition of Jails and Prisons. The pamphlets contended that the death penalty does not deter crime.

SCHOOL BOARDS

The House Education Committee gave its approval to a bill that would allow teachers to serve on school boards as long as they are not employed by that board.

The bill was prompted by a decision last summer in which Superior Court Judge Sam Ervin III ruled unconstitutional the present law which forbids teachers from serving on any school board. Ervin said it was unconstitutional to forbid a teacher to serve on a board other than the one that employs him. In the case, a teacher in the Catawba County system lived in Caldwell County and was on that country's school board.

CHILD SUPPORT

Fathers would be required to provide "adequate support" for their illegitimate children under a bill approved by the House Judiciary I Committee. The present law just requires support.

ABC RULES

The House Judiciary I Committee gave its approval to a bill that would eliminate criminal penalties for violating rules of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Rep. Richard Erwin, D-Forsyth, said the present law is unconstitutional because it makes ABC Board rules equivalent to law.

Committee members pointed out that ABC rules apply to businesses and the board may suspend or revoke a license if its rules are violated.

Rest And Golf Fill Ford Days

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — It was more rest, relaxation and golf for former President Gerald Ford in sunny Pebble Beach, far from the freezing cold of Washington, D.C. He played a round of golf Tuesday at the exclusive Cypress Point club with A. Thomas Taylor, chairman of the board of Del Monte Properties. The former president and his wife, Betty, arrived here for a week's visit with industrialist Darius Keaton last Thursday as Jimmy Carter was being inaugurated in Washington.

HOPE EXPRESSED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, has issued a statement expressing the hope the "tragic murder" of three missionaries in Rhodesia will spur efforts toward a nonviolent settlement of the Rhodesian situation.

the Republican National Committee demand equal time to answer President Carter's contemplated fireside chat on the Panama Canal negotiations. Reagan, said Helms, would be admirably equipped to present the Republican viewpoint.

Indisputably, Brock did not give a total no to Helms. But whereas friends of Helms report that Brock agreed to making use of Reagan, friends of Brock say he was only agreeing to the principle of demanding equal time.

The Ford camp, led by the former President himself, would protest loud and long should Reagan represent the party on canal negotiations. So, Brock is at once faced with a divisive issue from out of the past which runs exactly counter to his search for issues that will unify the bedraggled party.

condition of employment.

Not since the mid-1960s has organized labor mounted a major national effort to overturn the law.

But now, with Democrats in control of both Congress and the White House, labor leaders are mapping strategy for a new attack, one that could confront Carter with a political dilemma.

Twenty states, including nearly all the South, now have right to work laws. Louisiana was the last to adopt such a law this past summer following a bitter fight between opposing pro- and anti-union forces.

During the campaign, Carter said he was comfortable with such laws — his native Georgia has one — but said he would sign a repeal if Congress passed it.

If repeal reaches his desk and Carter signs it, he would risk losing support from the region of the country that gave him almost solid backing in the presidential election.

On the other hand, a veto would turn labor against him.

Tar Heel Lawmakers Are Flooded With ERA Mail

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — As the issue headed for its first public hearing, legislators say they have been virtually flooded with mail on Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Some lawmakers say their mail has been heavily in favor of ERA, some said it has been heavily against and others say it has been about divided.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee will hear both sides of the issue with opponents having their say this afternoon and proponents getting a chance Thursday.

Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, chairman of the panel, said his mail has been heavy with an apparent slight majority being against the measure.

"I'm getting about 200 letters a day and the phone rings constantly. Apparently some campaigns are under way. Other legislators say the same thing," Gamble said.

Rep. John Ed Davenport, a vigorous ERA opponent, exhibited a large folder of mail on the issue adn said, "My mail is running about 50-to-one against it."

Some other legislators have been saying that proponents have been busier writing about ERA this session. That led a group of women to visit the Legislative Building Tuesday and personally deliver letters opposing ERA to lawmakers.

"We've read that some legislators said most of their mail favors the ERA, so we wanted to make sure they got this," said one of the women, displaying a package of letters.

Sam Johnson, administrative aide to Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, said mail to his office has been generally against ERA but said more is coming.

"The ERA mail hasn't peaked yet," he said, adding that floods of mail will likely come over the weekend because of the public hearings.

Some of the letters to the legislators are humorous, but all of them state fervently the writer's belief that his or her view is the right one.

A woman opposing ERA wrote one lawmaker, "It is against my moral, religious and home atmosphere beliefs. It will be a sad day for all, especially the truly confused 'for' people, if it is passed."

Though the ERA does not specifically say it is to aid women, it is generally discussed as a measure that would benefit them.

"Women have proven themselves at the university and on the job. We have pulled ourselves up by our bootstraps.

What more must we do to be considered worthy?"

"Why, this can only lead to more demoralization in this country & to the destruction of the family as a unit. As a woman, wife, mother & American citizen, I am asking you...to vote 'No' for the ratification of this amendment."

Another woman, after stating her opposition to ERA, said, "P.S. This represents the views of my husband and 5 children and their respective cates. 12 votes plus the many people we can and will influence."

Another opponent, a Raleigh man, left her meaning some what cloudy when she wrote: "Passing ERA is like voting to make doors illegal. At this point, I still have the right to say no. Please don't take away my legal right to say no. Please don't vote for ERA."

An obviously harried eastern

North Carolina housewife wrote: "Equal rights have gone far enough, I'm a trucker's wife. I am more equal than I feel necessary."

Another woman signed a letter which sounded as though it had been written by a man: "Women have already got it made & they are not smart enough to know it."

A positive view of ERA came from a couple who are in business together, apparently enjoying their personal brand of ERA: "Everyone should be treated equally under the law. That's the only issue at stake."

Hearings On 2 Requests

By The Associated Press
North Carolina is enjoying sunny skies and warmer temperatures today, but the weather man says it's only a breather. The deepfreeze returns this weekend.

Highs today were forecast in the 40s over most of the state. Lows tonight will range from the 20s in the mountains to the 30s along the coast.

But the National Weather Service said a new blast of arctic air from Canada would arrive in North Carolina by the end of the week.

Skies will remain clear through the weekend over most of the state, but highs were forecast in the teens and 20s Friday and Saturday with overnight lows in the teens along the coast and near zero in the mountains.

The weather service said North Carolina would have colder than normal temperatures through the middle of February.

Raise Price On Aluminum Cans

Aluminum recyclers here now have the opportunity to earn more for their efforts since Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company has announced it has raised the price it pays for aluminum cans and other clean household aluminum.

The price is now 17 cents per pound, rather than the 15 cents per pound paid last year for aluminum beverage cans, pie pans, foil, frozen food and dinner trays and dip, pudding and meat containers. Certain other types of clean all-aluminum items can be redeemed at a slightly lower rate.

Pickups are being made at Pitt Plaza every Friday in February from noon to 1 p. m.

Given Advice On Future Bride

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, says he once was advised to look down the road a bit before choosing a bride.

Prince Charles, speaking Tuesday to a group of farmers at a banquet, said a "fish and game merchant from King's Lynn came round and said, 'Master, you make sure you look at their mothers first.'" The prince, 28, also joked about how his knees knocked when he was commander of a British minesweeper. Of his Navy career, which ended last month, Prince Charles said, "I enjoyed it enormously but I was petrified most of the time, particularly going alongside (when he was responsible for maneuvering his ship into dock).

AND WINTER ISN'T OVER YET! — Map shows states affected this week and last by the unusually cold weather. States in black indicate those where natural gas shortages have caused many plants to shut down; shaded states indicate scattered plant closings. The Federal Energy Administration says a survey indicates at least 300,000 workers were laid off during some part of last week because of natural gas shortages. Map also shows parts of four states (dotted areas) with kerosene shortages. And in Florida, this month's freeze has put thousands of migrant harvesters out of work. (AP Wirephoto Map)

The First Symptom Is Death In Infant Sudden Death Syndrome

By CHARLES J. CANNON
DENVER (UPI) — Public health officials are seeking better ways to allay the guilt feelings of parents who unexpectedly lose a child to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

"The disease has no symptoms, its first symptom is death," says Sue Perrin, a public health nurse who is director of an SIDS Center in Denver.

"Parents must be made to realize that nothing they did or did not do would have prevented it or caused it."

"They inevitably feel totally responsible for the death," she said. "The impact on the parents is very dramatic and traumatic, primarily because there has been no anticipation. It happens to babies which are believed to be very healthy and normal."

SIDS, which killed 8,000 children across the country last year, is a "sudden, unexpected, silent death which occurs in infancy, usually around the third month," said Dr. Clifton Govan, a Colorado Health Department pediatrician and consultant to the SIDS Center.

"We don't know what causes it and we don't know how to prevent it," he said. "It occurs in every part of the world, and among all socio-economic groups, with about the same incidence of two or three deaths per 1,000 live births."

"In the first few hours, it is very important to the parents to know if their baby died of SIDS," Ms. Perrin said. "And the only way it can be confirmed is through an autopsy. For that reason, we are working with pathologists and coroners to obtain autopsy results within 24 hours of death."

Once an SIDS death is confirmed, Ms. Perrin said public health nurses visit the parents' home to answer questions and provide "counseling and other support services." Such visits occur after the child's funeral "because parents are more able to deal with it then."

Govan said SIDS victims could die anywhere, in the home, in a car or in their mother's arms. But death always occurs while the child is asleep.

"There currently is research to see if there is any relationship between a child's respiratory center, which apparently matures at that age (one to six months), and SIDS," he said. "And the disease may be related to

They're Working At 50 Degrees

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Workers at the Magnavox Co. plant in Arden near here are working today in 50 degree temperatures.

The company, faced with curtailed natural gas supplies, asked th employees if they would be willing to work in the cold.

"We asked them if they would rather be warm and shut down or be cold and keep working," said plant manager Bryon Gibson. "They decided they'd rather be cold."

Other companies in the Asheville area said they would be able to stay open with temperatures reduced in some cases to 60 degrees, using propane to substitute for gas.

periods of apnea, or halted breathing, in which there seems to be a sort of spasm in the larynx area."

Govan said during apnea, when air is blocked off, the respiratory muscles apparently "overwork themselves trying to pull air through."

"That probably accounts for the autopsy results in which about 85 per cent of the SIDS victims have pinpoint hemorrhages throughout the chest cavity and the walls of the pulmonary blood vessels are thicker."

Ms. Perrin said the center also worked with emergency personnel and public health and hospital officials to educate them about the disease.

"If emergency personnel can give the parents the initial information about SIDS, they can immediately start to allay their guilt."

"But if the emergency personnel, especially those who are exposed to frequent cases of child abuse, are not aware of SIDS they can, by their tone of voice or a simple look, compound the damage to the parents who already are devastated by guilt and the social stigma of losing a child."

Ancient City Of London Has Ghosts Of Centuries

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor

A figure lurking in the shadows in New York City might be a mugger. In York, one of England's chief historic and religious centers 211 miles north of London, it could be a ghost.

Ghosts are as much "a part of our heritage as the stories of King Arthur, Robin Hood and other folk heroes," writes John V. Mitchell, a York school teacher, in the introduction to his book "Ghosts of an Ancient City."

York dates back before the Roman invasion in A.D. 72 and was a strategic center for the Roman legions until their withdrawal in the fifth century when they abandoned Britain to the Anglo-Saxon raiders from the Continent.

The city is surrounded by walls dating from the 14th century. The upper storeys of ancient timbered houses lean precariously toward each other across narrow winding streets. York is shrouded in medieval mists and haunted by the ghosts of centuries.

Ghosts are everywhere — in doorways, in the back streets of the town, in churches, in a dancing school. One in medieval uniform even haunts the night porters in the Viking Hotel.

And while New York City cops are busy tracking down criminals, at least one York constable spends his off hours conducting ghost tours.

Harry Martindale, a tall, handsome man in the traditional bobby uniform, is a vegetarian, a teetotaler and a nonsmoker. He also is becoming a legend in his own time, written up in books, interviewed on British radio and television, and all because when he was 18 he saw not one ghost, but a whole army of them.

Harry was an apprentice plumber in 1953 when he was sent to install central heating in Treasurer's House, close to York Minster, the huge and magnificent cathedral of St. Peter. He had barely begun to knock a hole in the four-foot-thick arched ceiling when suddenly, from the wall which was supporting his ladder, out stepped a Roman soldier.

At the time, Harry didn't know that his ladder was resting on an old Roman road, 18 inches below the stone floor of the cellar.

Here's how Harry related it recently to a group of American journalists who had descended through a narrow dank passageway to assemble in the same cellar:

"I heard a sound — the only way I can describe it is the sound of a musical note. It was just like a trumpet blaring out — no tune, just a blare. At the same time, a figure came out of the wall. And the head of the figure was in line with my waist, with a shining helmet.

"I knew that it shouldn't be here and when I say that I was terrified, I mean that I was terrified," Harry said, speaking in a rich Yorkshire accent. "I fell off the ladder and scrambled into the corner ... and from there I got a bird's eye view of what it was. It was the head of a Roman soldier."

The figure crossed the room at a slight angle and disappeared into the opposite pillar. He was immediately followed by another Roman soldier on horseback, Harry said, and behind the horse, Roman soldiers in twos, walking side by side.

"Now I was in no fit state to count them, but as I say at the time I took a count of between 12 and 20. I was suffering from severe shock, and the immediate relief I got was that not one of them looked in my direction. You couldn't see through them. I saw them exactly as what you and I are."

The soldiers Harry saw that day were small men, "about five feet, in want of a good wash and a shave. Nothing smart about them." They were dressed in handmade uniforms, Harry said, "like skirts, made of cloth, in various shades of green.

"When they came through the wall, I couldn't see even the horse from the knees down. The road had only been excavated in the center of the cellar. The surface is 18 inches below, and I couldn't see them from the feet up until they were walking on the center of the cellar.

"They all had the same helmet on, with the plumes coming out of the back, down the neck. They all carried a short sword on the right-hand side. I used to think that Roman soldiers carried a long sword, but it was like an oversized dagger on the right-hand side.

"The horse I can only describe as a great big cart horse — not like the chargers that they use nowadays on the television. And they came as quick as they went.

"When they were in the center of the cellar I could hear like a murmuring. No speech, just a murmuring."

Harry fled from the cellar and collapsed at the top of the stairs, where the old curator found him. "By the look of you you've seen the Roman soldiers," the curator said. "As soon as he said this," Harry related, "I knew that it hadn't been a nightmare. I knew then that I'd actually seen it."

But for 20 years Harry didn't tell of his strange experience for fear of ridicule. Recently he discovered that he is the third person known to have seen the soldiers. The second was the old curator, seven years before Harry. The first, an American professor back in the 1930s, seven years before the curator. "He knew about them, he came, he waited in the cellar, he saw them. Which makes those in York think that lots of people see them. Cause he knew about them. And he knew to come here and sit.

"There's a fourth person to have seen them, I've been to see this fourth person with John Mitchell. And this chappy whose seen them since me, he is mentally very ill. He refuses to discuss seeing the Roman soldiers."

According to Harry, historians have put a date on the Roman soldiers of A.D. 390. At that time, Harry said, the Romans were making their own uniforms, completely forgotten by Rome. The bulk of the Roman army had gone back to Italy. "They left like a police force over here of volunteers and men that married the local women and when they used to go out on patrol they used to have to go out in parties of between 20 and 40, so they wouldn't be ambushed. When they went out they had to go out for at least a week or a fortnight. And when they came back they'd all be tired, scruffy, wanting a shave. Just like these were."

A few months ago, Harry said, a water main burst outside Treasurer's House, and in fixing it the base of a Roman court was unearthed. "And they know now that where the cellar wall is is the exact entrance to the Roman garrison."

In the cellar today is television and sound equipment installed by a British newspaper. According to Harry, within six weeks of putting it in they picked up a sound of mumbling and horses hooves hitting stones.

Times Are Not Easy In Mexico; Poverty Growing

EDITOR'S NOTE — A half a century ago Mexicans fought a bloody revolution aimed at giving the poor a better share of the country's wealth. Now some nine million persons are estimated to be unemployed, and landless peasants are clamoring for land. Following is the first of two reports on Mexico—a Troubled Neighbor.

By CHARLES GREEN
Associated Press Writer
QUERETARO, Mexico (AP) — They drift into Queretaro from the mountains and from the farm lands looking for work. If they don't find it here they may drift on 150 miles south to Mexico City. There they stand in the chilly dawn besides Mexico's National Cathedral, the tools of their trade at their feet. For hours they wait. Perhaps someone needs a plumber or a handyman or a gardener for a day's work? Boys so small they have to hop on the hood to wash car windshields at traffic lights on beautiful Paseo de la Reforma Boulevard in Mexico City. They hope for a penny or a nickel tip. Women with babies on their backs sit on blankets with a display of oranges or apples or pecans. These are among the millions of Mexicans struggling to earn a bit of money in an economy they do not understand. Estimates vary on how many people are without work in Mexico.

Realistic estimates put the number of jobless at about nine million or at least 30 per cent of the work force. The conservative magazine Nego-Banco estimates that as many as 16 million may be unemployed. The president of the College of Economists says four million people between the ages of 18 and 25 were out of work in January.

Unemployment in the United States last month was 7.6 million people or 7.9 per cent of the work force. The United States has 200 million people while Mexico has 63 million. The Mexican economy now cannot begin to handle the unemployed or absorb the 600,000 to 700,000 persons entering the job market each year. Mexico's 1977 federal budget is $30.8 billion, 38.9 per cent higher than in 1976, even though President Jose Lopez Portillo, who took office in December, has warned that this will be a year of austerity in Mexico.

Even for those with jobs the times are not easy in Mexico. They were stunned Sept. 1 by the first devaluation in the Mexican peso in 22 years. Another devaluation quickly followed. Mexicans, who were promised there would be no devaluation, lost faith in the outgoing government of President Luis Echeverria. Money started flowing out of Mexico into banks in other countries.

SQUATTER TOWN — A slum frowns on the outskirts of Mexico City. Its residents are augmented by a growing number of peasants who come to the city seeking, but failing to find work. At present, some nine million persons are unemployed in the land which five decades ago fought a revolution aimed at giving the poor a better share of the nation's wealth. (AP Wirephoto)

Stunning Display Of Jewelry Is Shown In British Museum

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — If the first thing the cave man did to announce his love was flatten his fiancée with a club, the second must have been to present her with jewels. The British Museum has no proof of the violent courtship beloved of cartoonists, but it has at the moment a stunning display of precious metals and stones going back more than 7,000 years.

obsidian but an imitation fashioned from clay and painted black. The aim of the exhibition, titled "Jewelry Through 7,000 Years," is to bring together examples from all the major phases of Man's history, according to Hugh Tait, deputy keeper of antiquities, who made the selection entirely from items already in the possession of the British Museum. Tait said it was decided to restrict the show to approximately 500 pieces. One of these, mounted on a model, is an arresting display of what a royal attendant would have worn in Ur-of-the-Chaldees, found in graves at that ancient city of Iraq and dated to some 4,500 years ago. Among her decorations were:

A hair ornament with three gold rosettes; gold hair ribbons; three head bands of lapis-lazuli and carnelian beads, one with narrow leaf-shaped gold pendants, another with broad leaf-shaped gold pendants, a third with circular gold pendants having lapis-lazuli centers fastened with gold wire; a pair of gold earrings; a choker of alternating gold and lapis-lazuli triangles; three necklaces, one of gold and lapis-lazuli fluted beads, another of varied gold and carnelian beads and a third of lozenge-shaped lapis-lazuli beads; a silver dress pin with lapis-lazuli head.

Among other spectacular items is a cape of solid gold highly decorated and believed to date from the British Bronze Age, about 3,400 years ago; a pair of gold armlets with carved mythical beasts ("magnificent but impractical," said Tait) from the Persian Empire of 2,500 years ago; 3,000-year-old Chinese jade ornaments; a gold mask of a human face found in Colombia and dated between 500 and 1,500 A.D. Tait said the jewelers of Ur-of-the-Chaldees were already using two of the most important techniques in the history of jewelry, filigree and granulation, and while the court headdress in the exhibition is the earliest recorded in these processes the skill employed indicates they might have been in use for a long time before. "It is important to remember," Tait said, "that all the metals used at Ur, together with the carnelian and lapis-lazuli, must have been imported. Personal jewelry from the earliest periods was undoubtedly already being used as an indication of status."

LATIN AMERICAN DECORATIVE ARTS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Renwick Gallery of the National Collection of Fine Arts, in a salute to the craftsmen of the other Americas, is presenting "Americas: The Decorative Arts in Latin America in the Era of the Revolution" through April 3.

Tugboats Adopt Airline Custom

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Several local tugboats are taking a communications cue from the airlines by recording all radio messages — something onboard airline flight recorders do automatically. The recordings are valuable in case of mishap. A local tugboat company outfitted its vessels with voice-recording tape machines that continuously record radio communications around the clock. According to Jules Johnson of Dictaphone, "the recorders have helped prevent accidents because the crews are now more careful giving and receiving instructions."

Wagen costs 155 per cent more than it did in 1972. A new Ford Ltd or Chevrolet Impala costs $12,500. While bread was going up 300 per cent in five years the federal minimum wage increased only 236 per cent in seven.

"The only way I can feed my children with these high prices is by stealing," said Felipe Martinez, a Mexico City bricklayer. If Martinez stops on his way home to buy tortillas, beans, rice, milk and meat he is likely to spend 56 per cent of the minimum federal wage of $4.32 for a day's work. His groceries would cost him about $2.50.

For two decades Mexico claimed a growth in its gross national product of from 6.5 to 7.3 per cent a year. The future looked rosy for Latin America's fastest developing nation. Now a growth rate of 3 per cent will be considered good.

The future still looks promising, but the honeymoon is over. It ended after the Luis Echeverria government started massive spending programs designed to narrow the gap between rich and poor. It was, Echeverria said, a matter of spend or fight a revolution. Echeverria moved the government into areas formerly held by the private sector. The government took over a number of companies. Some estimates say the government spent as much as $400 million a year in direct subsidies to more than 800 government-owned businesses ranging from night clubs to newspapers.

Nego-Banco estimates the Echeverria government left office with a 307 billion peso deficit. Under the predevelopment exchange rate of 12 pesos to the dollar that would be about $24.5 billion. The foreign debt was estimated at from $20 billion to $24.6 billion.

The newspaper El Sol — itself one of the companies taken over by the government for a time — estimated that $1.1 billion left Mexico in the three months after the devaluation. Reserves were estimated to have been no more than $1.5 billion when the panic started.

Passengers who try bringing cigarettes, cigars, and pipes aboard may end up discarding them before the ship pulls out June 13 on a week-long cruise.

Smokers are encouraged to come along, but only if they promise to kick the habit for its duration.

The 83-foot Mary Day, one of the few old-fashioned windjammers built in the past 30 years, has a fireplace, an old-fashioned organ and flush toilets — but no place for a smoker to hide.

Hawkins, an adamant anti-smoker, is taking the ship out under sponsorship of the Rhode Island Lung Association. He plans to donate $25 of each passenger's $225 fee to lung association programs. "The passenger list is so small that anyone who smokes will be immediately ostracized," said Jean MacCorison, executive director of the group. She said the idea came from lung association members who sailed on the Mary Day last summer — with smokers on board.

"Passengers get the chance to help the crew with some of the simpler chores, which keeps their hands busy, and they can't use the excuse of nervous tension to light up, since there's nothing more relaxing than a

She said the memory of the cruise might sustain quitters through the first tough weeks of abstinence after returning home.

The stereotype of the pipe-puffing old salt doesn't fit the Mary Day's skipper or his crewmen. They don't smoke and sometimes find the smoking of regular charter passengers offensive, Hawkins said.

"The crew has to take it most of the season, but during this week consideration will go to passengers and those of us who find tobacco smoke offensive," he said. "It will also underscore the safety aspect of fire prevention, always a shipboard priority."

When the smoke is gone, Hawkins said, "the salty Marine air will smell better, and the food served aboard the Mary Day will be even tastier for being smoke free."

Taking Cruise To Break Their Habit

By TERRY ANZUR
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — There'll be a lot of cold turkey aboard the Mary Day on one of the windjammer's summer cruises this year.

Capt. Havilah S. Hawkins will up anchor at Camden, Maine for a special voyage — a no smoking cruise.

Passengers who try bringing cigarettes, cigars, and pipes aboard may end up discarding them before the ship pulls out June 13 on a week-long cruise.

Smokers are encouraged to come along, but only if they promise to kick the habit for its duration.

The 83-foot Mary Day, one of the few old-fashioned windjammers built in the past 30 years, has a fireplace, an old-fashioned organ and flush toilets — but no place for a smoker to hide.

"Echeverria simply tried to do too much, too quickly, with too little," Law said. Defenders of Echeverria say the former president created a deficit by creating a nation. They predict that future generations will look upon Echeverria as one of the men who pushed Mexico into the 21st century.

His government increased the road system from 43,400 miles to 124,000 miles. It built hundreds of new schools and thousands of new classrooms. The number of university graduates increased 100 per cent in six years. A huge low-income housing project was started throughout the nation. The number of people covered by social security — an expensive form of socialized medicine — increased from 11 million to 25 million.

The Echeverria government spent billions on oil exploration but never said how much reserves had been found. New officials of the government-owned oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos — PEMEX — say now the nation has more than 11 billion barrels of proven reserves and may become a major oil exporter. Venezuela has about 17 billion barrels and Saudi Arabia about 148 billion.

In six years Mexico turned from an oil importing nation to an oil exporting nation, and turned from a steel importing nation into a steel exporter.

But Mexico also became a nation that now has to import corn.

While making these advances the Echeverria government alienated conservative businessmen and industrialists. He called them "emissaries of the past" and said they wanted to keep on without change to make themselves even richer instead of helping the poor get a better share of the economic pie. Private investment slowed, production dropped and prices skyrocketed.

"But the long-range outlook is still good," Law said. "Mexico is the leading nation in development in Latin America."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was mixed today, continuing the split pattern of the past several weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down a point in early activity, but gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow, a small sample of big-name stocks, showed persistent selling in that sector of the market.

At the same time, the broader advance-decline figures indicated buying interest in many secondary stocks.

The trend was established late last year. Analysts say a major factor behind it has been a move by investing institutions to spread out their portfolios, which for a long time were concentrated in a select list of glamor and blue chip favorites.

Today's early volume leader was Shakespeare, a sporting goods producer, which rose 1/4 to 10% in a 105,000-share block trade.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average closed at 965.92, up 2.32.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 3-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 26.34 million shares, up from 22.89 million on Monday.

The NYSE's composite index was unchanged at 56.14.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .38 at 112.42.

plan.

Mrs. Wheelis said that the long range plan for the county is a guide to aid the betterment of life in the county.

Gaskins said that he had reviewed the plan and believes that the 4-Sight plan is a plan of action that will be a plan to make the county grow.

Yancey explained that the 4-Sight program will for the next six years represent the foresight of the people of Pitt County and North Carolina. The plan is designed to increase by 35 per cent the gross agricultural income of Pitt County by 1982 and keep Pitt County within one of the top five agricultural counties in the state according to Yancey.

Major Areas

A 35 per cent increase in Pitt County's gross agricultural income is projected by 1982. The increase is based on expected price increases and improvements in crop yields and livestock efficiency. The 4-Sight plan projects that tobacco will gross $85 million for Pitt County growers by 1982. Corn is expected to yield 7.5 million bushels for a gross value of $15 million. Hogs will continue to lead the way for livestock enterprise in Pitt County. Commercial egg production will increase to bring over $9 million to Pitt producers.

The Home Economics segment of 4-Sight might be viewed as a blue print of people oriented problems and opportunities, to which educational programs will be addressed to during the six year period. Families will be assisted in the use of the clothing and food dollars. Decision making related to helping families acquire adequate and convenient housing will be one of the top priorities. All efforts in the long-range program will be aimed at the overall objective of helping people lift their

High Court Will Again Study Pregnancy Issue

WASHINGTON (AP)—The rights of pregnant workers, handed a severe setback by the Supreme Court last month, once again will be studied by the nine men who make up the nation's highest court.

The justices voted Tuesday to decide when employers are justified in treating pregnancy differently than a disability that would be covered by various fringe-benefit plans.

On Dec. 7, the court ruled that private companies offering employees disability insurance do not have to include pregnancy benefits. Women representing the 100,000 female employees of General Electric had charged the firm with sex discrimination in that case.

Feminist groups now are lobbying Congress in an effort to have such protection written into the Civil Rights Act as a specific amendment.

On Tuesday, the court agreed to hear arguments in pregnancy cases from Nashville, Tenn., and Richmond, Calif. The cases present several new questions for the court to re-

Vice President Is Berlin Wall Visitor

By JAMES GERSTENZANG Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP)—Vice President Walter F. Mondale paid a symbolic visit to the Berlin wall today and said, "We can only pray that progress will see the day when this kind of wall will disappear."

Mondale mounted the stand at the Brandenburg Gate to look over the wall 50 feet away into the eastern half of the divided city.

Two East German guards stared back through the gray mist at the vice president, his aides and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

Mondale went on to the city hall, where President Kennedy made his electrifying "I am a Berliner" declaration in 1963, and told officials: "I am here ... to assure you that United States policy is based on our full support for your city — a policy that guarantees, with our allies, your freedom and security."

Mondale said President Carter "asked me to convey to you his determination that the United States will not only fulfill its promise to see that Berlin survives, but also to go further to help this city and its residents flourish as an important part of the Western world."

Mondale's motorcade passed clusters of people who stopped on the street and waved. There was no massive turnout, but several hundred people were gathered at the city hall.

From West Berlin, the vice president flew to Rome for talks with Italian government officials and an audience with Pope Paul VI, continuing his 10-day tour of major U.S. allies in Western Europe and Japan.

Mondale met for nearly four hours Tuesday with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and said afterward chances were "much enhanced" for a "cooperative solution" to differences between their governments over the West German agreement to sell Brazil uranium reprocessing and enrichment plants that could produce plutonium for nuclear bombs.

These plants are part of a $4-billion nuclear power package Brazil is buying. Asked at a joint news conference whether he would go ahead with the part of the deal opposed by the United States, Schmidt said

West Germany would continue to fulfill "the agreements it entered into along with their contractual obligations."

"This does not exclude additional contractual obligations being entered into in this field in the future," he added. The chancellor appeared to be hinting West Germany might accept additional restrictions on future deals to prevent nuclear arms production.

The international economic situation was the other major topic discussed. Mondale said he outlined the economic measures the Carter administration plans to stimulate the U.S. economy. He said Schmidt agreed that the United States, West Germany and Japan, as the industrial nations with the healthiest economies, should "pursue similarly stimulative packages" that would increase their demand for imports from other nations.

"We have a very good understanding on this matter, and I come away most pleased," said Mondale.

Pitt Labor Data Stays In A Seasonal Pattern

The November civilian labor force in Pitt County showed a normal seasonal pattern with a decrease of 6.0 per cent from September 1976. Both employment and unemployment estimates registered decreases from September and the unemployment rate rose significantly from 3.2 per cent to 4.8 per cent during the past year, according to Jim Hannan, manager of the Employment Security Commission. The estimate of total employment dropped 5.2 per cent between September and November because of the loss of 2,430 agricultural workers from the labor force.

Manufacturing employment by place of work within Pitt County increased by 3.6 per cent from September 1976 and plants manufacturing durable goods in the Greenville area added an additional 100 employees from September to November 1976.

While the November unemployment rate in Pitt County in November was less than the 5.7 unemployment rate of September 1976, it was greater than the 3.2 per cent of the November 1975 unemployment rate. Although, the unemployment rate has increased during the year, the November 4.8 per cent rate compares favorably to the 6.0 statewide unemployment rate and the national unadjusted rate of 8.1 per cent.

According to Hannan, the total manufacturing employment will probably decline by nearly 15 per cent through March, 1977. Substantial layoffs during the off-season for the tobacco industry will be the major factor in the decline. In nonmanufacturing, trade employment should decrease slightly after the holiday season, but governmental employment should increase through March. Unemployment will probably increase slightly during the winter months in the Greenville area.

Shaffer: 'Heels Then And Now

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Lee Shaffer, a member of the basketball team at the University of North Carolina in 1958-60, revealed yesterday that he is an East Carolina University fan.

Shaffer, in town to speak to the ECU Fellowship of Christian Athletes, spoke also to the Greenville Sports Club, and told of watching former coach Sonny Randle bring the Pirates into Kenan Stadium several years ago.

"I became an East Carolina fan that day," he told the club. "I have watched the East Carolina program begin from nowhere and arrive. I think it arrived that day in Kenan Stadium. East Carolina lost the game on a very questionable call, and I ended up pulling for the Pirates. I saw a team coming in with pride and dedication."

Shaffer added that it is difficult for a school like East Carolina to successfully compete in recruiting against such schools as the Big Four.

Shaffer told the group of his experiences as a player for the Tar Heels. He said that he was very confused as a high school player about where to go. His own coach, Press Maravich, went to Clemson and wanted him to go with him. "But I had never heard of Clemson at the time."

Shaffer ended up at North Carolina because of Frank McGuire, then the Tar Heel coach. "He was the most dynamic man I met. East Carolina must have such dynamic individuals as coaches to be so successful."

The former Tar Heel added that McGuire was a great recruiter and an outstanding bench coach. He also expressed his displeasure in the dropping of the Dixie Classic. "It should NEVER have been dropped," he said.

On McGuire, he added that while Everett Case of N.C. State brought basketball to the area, it was McGuire who brought big-time ball to the area with the national championship.

Shaffer pointed to the pressure defenses and the larger players as the biggest differences in the game today and when he played. "We had a full-court press in our repertoire, but we only used it in desperation, and we didn't do it very well. John Wooden started pressure defenses, but Dean Smith brought it to the East and made it really work." Shaffer added that he thinks Smith is the best basketball coach "ever."

He credited the ACC Tournament, the attractiveness of the schools in the league, and the hard work in recruiting for the success of the ACC. "The tournament puts $100,000 into Virginia's pockets every year. They could not get this kind of money any other way," he added.

In this year's race, Shaffer said that N.C. State and Maryland have the best talent, but that Smith's coaching will win the regular season title. "He has people starting that couldn't start for either State or Maryland."

Shaffer said he gauges a player by whether he makes it with the pros. "It's so much tougher there. You have to do it on your own." He rated Bill Russell as the best ever in the middle, Oscar Robinson the best guard, and Elgin Baylor the best in the corner.

"David Thompson is the best player ever to be in the ACC, but the book is still out on him as a pro," Shaffer said. "But people should not overlook (Tom) Burlison. He never even made All-Conference, but without him, State was just a good team, not a championship one."

Next week's speaker is former East Carolina football coach, now head coach at Duke. Mike McGee.

Lakers Now Support Jabbar

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Remember the joke about Kareem Abdul-Jabbar suing his teammates on the Los Angeles Lakers for non-support?

Well, things have changed under Coach Jerry West, who has gotten the most out of both Abdul-Jabbar and his mates — enough to take the Lakers to the top of the National Basketball Association's Pacific Division.

The Lakers moved one-half game ahead of the Portland Trail Blazers Tuesday night by beating the Seattle SuperSonics 120-109. That raised Los Angeles' record to 30-15, second-best in the 22-team NBA.

The Lakers scored the first 11 points of the game, took a 21-2 lead and never looked back on their way to their 17th consecutive victory at home, the longest home winning streak this year.

"We played real well during the 21-2 spurt, but other than that our offense stank," said West. "But our defense, especially by Dan Ford and Don Chaney, was especially good. Chaney closing out Fred Brown was really the key for us."

Brown, Seattle's high-scoring guard, was held to just two points by Chaney.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Detroit beat Boston 91-89, San Antonio defeated Phoenix 116-108 and the New York Knicks topped Chicago 108-91.

"We are doing things that come naturally — our players go to their strengths," said West, the Lakers' first-year mentor, explaining his coaching philosophy.

Against Seattle, the Lakers jumped out to their big early lead and were ahead 83-66 going into the fourth period. The Sonics scored six points in a row and eventually closed the gap to 10 at 89-79 with eight minutes to go, but the Lakers then outscored Seattle 11-3.

Cazzie Russell and Lucius Allen scored 15 points each, while the seven Laker reserves contributed 46 points. Abdul-Jabbar had 10 rebounds and Washington and Ford nine apiece.

Rookie guard Dennis Johnson led Seattle with 23 points.

Pistons 91, Celtics 89

Bob Lanier scored 22 points against the Celtics, whose regular center, Dave Cowens, was sidelined by a sprained ankle. Chris Ford helped Detroit take the lead midway through the fourth quarter, and the Celtics never caught up. John Havlicek led Boston with 30 points.

Spurs 116, Suns 108

Larry Kenon poured in 38 points as San Antonio halted an eight-game Phoenix home-court winning streak. The Spurs took the lead to stay with a 39-point third period in which they shot 59 per cent from the field and George Gervin scored 14 points.

Knicks 108, Bulls 91

New York stopped a three-game losing streak by routing the Bulls, shooting 55 per cent from the field. The big man was Bob McAdoo, who shot 17-for-26 for 34 points and also had 15 rebounds and seven assists.

Carolina, Wake Battle For Lead

By The Associated Press

The Atlantic Coast Conference lead is at state tonight as 4th-ranked North Carolina battles 10th-ranked Wake Forest in televised college basketball action.

ACC Roundup

The Tar Heels are still stinging from the loss last week to N.C. State, which marred their conference record, now 5-1. They're 13-2 overall.

The Deacons could improve their national ranking with a victory. They are now 4-1 in the conference and 14-2 on the season.

Coach Carl Tacy says the heat's on his team, but they're ready to transfer it to their opponents where it belongs.

"I'm very much satisfied with them," Tacy said. "I don't think any team has given more of itself than ours."

"Our players have had to work without much relief from the reserves. And they've had to be at their best when the going was tough," he added.

Tacy thinks he will need a sturdy inside game and better foul shooting than the Deacs showed when Carolina beat them on their own court two weeks ago, 77-75.

UNC center Tommy Lagarde hurt his toe in Tuesday's workout but was expected to be ready tonight. So will guard Phil Ford, plagued with blisters last week.

"Wake has won each of its ACC road games," UNC coach Dean Smith observed. "So the home court must not mean anything when you play them..."

Seven Area Wrestlers Still Among Unbeaten

Seven area wrestlers remain unbeaten, but one suffered a blot on his record during the last accounting period.

A total of 34 wrestlers currently post winning records based on a minimum of 11 matches wrestled to date.

Rose High School continues to have three unbeaten, while the Conley Vikings have two. North Pitt and Williamston each have one.

Williamston's Roosevelt Mackey, however, suffered a tie recently, and is now 10-0-1 on the year.

Cliff Hagan and James Cherry of Rose High School have raised their records to 16-0, while John Lawler is just one back at 15-0. Conley's Jesse Davis and Ronald Harris are both 18-0, and go into the biggest match of the year Saturday when the Vikes host top-ranked Cary.

North Pitt's Aubrey Wynne rounds out the unbeaten slate with an 11-0 record.

Hagan leads the way at 100 pounds, followed by Lawler at 107 and Cherry at 114. Conley's Floyd Crandall has the best record at 121, with Farmville Central's David Newton leading the 128-pounders.

Harris has the best mark at 134, followed by Mackey at 140. Conley's Marvin Hardy tops the 147-pounders, with Wynne leading at 157.

Charles Hanson of Conley is leading at 169, followed by teammate Paul Bridges at 187. Davis leads the 197-pound division, followed by fellow Vike Lo Carmon at heavyweight.

The current list of leaders, based on at least 11 decisions, through Monday events are:

100: Cliff Hagan (R) 16-0; Gary Harris (C) 14-2; John Simpson (NP) 6-5.

107: John Lawler (R) 15-0; Joe Ebron (FC) 10-3.

World Golf Tour Not Likely

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Published reports to the contrary, a formal world golf tour is not likely in the foreseeable future.

Major tours, offering growing purses and prestige, now exist in Europe, Asia and Australia, in addition to the United States. Purses in the $200,000 range are not unusual. There's a lesser tour in South Africa.

And there are a number of proponents, none in an official capacity, of a world tour. They envision a gathering together of the major events of the foreign circuits along with selected events in the United States. One nationally circulated golf magazine recently went so far as to publish a proposed schedule.

But it isn't likely to happen. There are two major factors that work against it:

First, there is no support from the American PGA Tour — an absolute necessity for the success of any such venture.

Second, everyone who wants to play a world tour does so now.

"Our loyalty must be to our American sponsors, who have built the tour into what it is today," said PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman.

"We now play about 10 months a year. A world tour would cut deeply into that schedule. In doing so, we'd have to trim some of our sponsors. We aren't about to do that.

"And there are the players. Our tour offers an opportunity for making a living to a player with limited resources. On the other hand, playing a world tour would require someone like Jack Nicklaus who has unlimited resources."

Steve Reid, another tour official, had a slightly different view.

"Some of these guys, we can't get 'em from Tucson to Phoenix," he said. "How are we gonna get 'em from Singapore to Sydney?"

He's talking about the more or less marginal players. The major names, many of whom compete on a restricted basis in the United States, have extensive foreign schedules now. Many have commercial contracts that require them to compete in a designated number of foreign tournaments.

Locke Is Replaced

BUFFALO (AP) — General Manager Bob MacKinnon makes his debut as head coach tonight when his Buffalo Braves meet the Milwaukee Bucks, the team with the worst record in the National Basketball Association.

MacKinnon takes over as interim coach of the Braves following Tuesday's firing of Tates Locke, who got the axe shortly after the club returned from an 0-4 road trip. On the season the Braves are 16-30, the third-poorest record in the league.

"I was a little surprised last week when the rumors that I would be fired started up, but I wasn't surprised by what happened today," the 39-year-old Locke said.

"I won't criticize the franchise, the people here or my situation, because I walked into it with my eyes open. So much negative stuff surrounded the team this year. What bothers me is that I couldn't correct it."

Locke took over a contending team when he was named head coach last summer. But since then Buffalo has traded and sold such players as three-time NBA scoring king Bob McAdoo, team captain Jim McMillian, Moses Malone, Tom McMillen and Kenny Charles.

While their current roster includes some talented players — Randy Smith, Adrian Dantley,

State Romps By ECU Swimmers

RALEIGH — N.C. State's nationally ranked Wolfpack romped to a 73-40 victory over East Carolina University's swimming team last night.

The defeat was the second straight for the Pirates, who have won six of their starts this season. State climbed to 6-0 overall.

State took the lead on the opening relay and never let it go as they piled up points. East Carolina won just three events, with John McCauley taking two of them.

McCauley won the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 21.44 seconds, and added the 100 freestyle later in 47.47 seconds. The other Pirate victory came in the 500 yard freestyle, where John Tudor won in 4:40.48.

Kevin Weldon, in winning the 1,000 yard freestyle for State, set a new school, pool and Atlantic Coast Conference record of 9:28.33. The old mark of 9:32.12 held by State's Sid Cassidy was set last spring.

The Pirates are idle until February 5, when they meet another Atlantic Coast Conference opponent, Duke University, in Minges Natatorium.

John Shumate, George Johnson, Ernie DiGregorio, Bird Averitt, Chuck Williams, Gus Gerard — they have not been together long enough to blend as a unit.

MacKinnon, who coached Canisius College and the Spirits of St. Louis of the American Basketball Association before taking his administrative post with the Braves, says he plans to emphasize pressure defense and a running attack.

Meanwhile, with MacKinnon serving on an interim basis, there was speculation that former Milwaukee Bucks Coach Larry Costello might be asked to become the Braves' permanent coach.

Costello, who resigned under pressure from the Bucks Nov. 22, said late Tuesday night that he "hasn't talked to anybody from the Buffalo club about the vacant position." But he added he "would be interested in talking to Snyder if they are interested in me. My objective is getting back into coaching."

Lady Pirates Get First Win

East Carolina University's women's basketball team finally snapped its ten-game losing streak last night with an 88-72 victory over Elon College.

The Lady Pirates were led in scoring by Gale Kerbaugh, who scored a career high of 30 points. All five starters were in double figures.

"We didn't play as well as we should have," Coach Catherine Bolton said. "The starting lineup has gained confidence in its play and that's a sign of better things to come."

The Lady Pirates held a commanding lead on the board, ripping off 64 rebounds to Elon's 45.

Won't Play Coaches Game

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 17th annual Coaches All-American football game will not be played this June because of the uncertainty of the professional football draft and player's contracts and skyrocketing insurance rates, the American Football Coaches Association announced Tuesday.

The game featuring outstanding college seniors has been off-season fixture for the last 16 summers, including the last seven in Lubbock, Texas.

The uncertainty of players' contracts with professional teams and the astronomical rise in the cost of insuring players' contracts and offers were the major reasons for the suspension, Ben Martin, association president and head coach of the Air Force Academy, said in a statement issued here and in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Debbie Freeman led the rebounding with 17, while Kathy Suggs had 14.

The Golden Girls of Elon were led by Sandra Gray with 16 points and Janet Fleming with 15.

Besides Kerbaugh's total, Freeman had 14, Linda McClellan had 13, and Suggs and April Ross each had 10.

The Lady Bucks, now 1-10, travel to Greensboro to face UNC-Greensboro on Friday.

Keith Herron scored 20 points and older brother Larry connected for a dunk and a foul shot in the closing seconds to lead 12-3 Villanova over St. John's in a battle of Eastern powers. The Redmen, 12-5, had rallied to within a point with 36 seconds left on George Johnson's tip-in.

Indiana State, 16-2, saw its 12-game winning streak snapped by Illinois State despite 40 points by Larry Bird.

Illinois State, 14-5, outscored the Sycamores 18-6 in the final 13 minutes of play.

Buffalo, 3-14, shocked 11-3 Wisconsin-Milwaukee as Sam Pellom scored 20 points, including a slam-dunk with less than a minute remaining in overtime for the decisive basket.

Centenary got 30 points from forward Bobby White and 22 more from guard Aaron Strayhorn to defeat Hardin-Simmons. Sophomore Tom Meggers came off the bench to score 18 of his game-high 25 points in the second half for Boston College. Walter Anderson's 16 points and Tony Searcy's 14 led a balanced attack as Appalachian State topped Davidson.

Candidate's Talk 'Tough'

By JUDI HASSON
NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — He packs a pistol, is followed by a bodyguard, and is waging a one-man fight for mom, apple pie and the American flag.

He is tough talking Anthony Imperiale, a state senator and New Jersey's only independent state legislator.

Unabashed that his flamboyant antics and outspoken views have won him many critics, he says, "I do what my constituents need."

"I think what politics have lost is that the people in politics have lost touch with the people."

Now, Imperiale is putting out feelers to see if he can win support for a gubernatorial campaign. He says businessmen have pledged more than $40,000 to him if he decides to run, a decision he will make in February or March.

"I want to see if the people are ready for an independent governor," he says.

The burly Imperiale represents one of the remaining white enclaves in Newark and several adjacent communities. He has often taken the most conservative side of an issue.

In October, Imperiale donned only a barrel as he rode on a float in Newark's Columbus Day parade to dramatize his opposition to the newly enacted state income tax.

In 1972, Imperiale chained himself to a fence to show his opposition to Kawaida, a high-rise low-income housing project in Newark's predominantly white North Ward sponsored by Imam Baraka, also known as LeRoi Jones, the author.

In 1967, Imperiale organized the first of his "citizen" patrols after riots shook New Jersey's largest city. The patrols, dismissed by many as a temporary vigilante group, won him zealous support.

Today, the patrols are still in effect, and have expanded to include nighttime escorts, a free blood bank, first aid and ambulance service for residents in the North Ward where Imperiale lives.

The 45-year-old former truck driver and karate instructor has built a successful career out of his tough, street-flavored politics.

Many people refuse to take him seriously or ridicule him, he says, only because they don't have the "guts" to take a stand.

He has made a few enemies. Several years ago someone took a shot at Imperiale as he was leaving a Newark office. In 1970, dynamite was found under the hood of his car.

As a result of those incidents, he has a bodyguard.

"I want no one to believe I'm afraid of them," says Imperiale. "But my advisory committee insisted I travel with someone. They said 'We do not get a leader like you very often and we don't want to lose you.'"

Imperiale, a part owner of a gun store and head of a security and detective agency, also totes a gun when he is at work.

"You have to have a gun at the shop and I carry a gun in performance of my work as an investigator."

The son of parents who immigrated to this country from Italy more than 50 years ago, Imperiale says his love and respect for his Italian heritage is second only to his love of America. He says he is a "patriot."

Growing up in Newark, he talks of wearing shoes lined with cardboard to cover the holes and delivering milk before he went to school.

"I'm strongly against anyone who uses poverty as an excuse. We had it rough. We knew poverty. But we were taught that poverty did not give us a right to steal."

Eying the governor's mansion, Imperiale candidly admits his speech lacks the polished refinement of many of his colleagues in the legislature. "I've been told that I'm a diamond in the rough. We're trying to take the edge off that roughness."

He says government in New Jersey lacks leadership. He says:

"Do you want to walk with a man who can defend you or do you want to walk with a man who is going to run away."

His Factory On Wheels

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — If you place an order with the River Runner kayak factory, be prepared to have a 14-ton house trailer pull up to your front door. The factory is inside.

Duke Best, 46, and Pierre Arcouette, 35, the two men who quit their corporate jobs to start the rolling factory, said it avoids overhead and other costs involved in packaging, shipping, and transportation delays or damage to merchandise.

Boat dealer Gordon Sussman, who recently called the rig to turn out 25 kayaks for him, likes the arrangement. "The quality control is good because the factory is in my front yard," he said. "I can stand right there and watch them being made and if I don't like one I can tell them I don't want it."

Best, who handles the sales, said the factory makes a boat an hour with its three-man work force, molding a 28-pound bag of powder into the proper shape, baking it for three hours in an oven and turning out a gleaming hard plastic boat suitable for white water.

PORT ORANGE, Fla. (UPI) — Skateboarding as a sport and hobby is growing so rapidly that the number of skateboard parks is expected to reach 102 by summer.

Only one existed in February last year, says Chuck Cromie, president of the American Skateboard Association. A skatepark is a winding course of curved banks and straightaways and a supervised arena to keep young skateboarders away from dangerous hillside streets, parking lots and empty swimming pools.

Cromie said all ASA parks require users to wear knee and elbow pads and helmet. Track monitors are on hand to prevent horseplay that can endanger the skateboarders.

EXXON EARNINGS UP
NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the nation's largest oil company, said today its earnings rose 5.5 per cent in 1976 over 1975 with fourth quarter earnings up 6.9 per cent over the comparable year-earlier period.

A New View At Duquesne

By STEVEN E. PROKESCH PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Duquesne University's graduate school of psychology differs from others in the United States.

What is unique about the Duquesne psychology department is its phenomenological, or "human science," approach to psychology.

"At Duquesne, the whole psychology faculty is working towards the development of psychology as a 'human science,'" said the Rev. David L. Smith, 45, department chairman. Duquesne and the University of Dallas, which has a smaller program, are the only such phenomenological schools in the country.

Smith explained that until the development of phenomenology, psychology as a rigorous science was split into two branches — the behavioral and psychoanalytical schools.

Both of these traditional schools sprang from the natural sciences which, in turn, are based on the ideas of the French philosopher Rene Descartes. Descartes separated the universe into three entities: mind, body, and world or environment.

In contrast, the phenomenologist sees man as a whole rather than as fragmented. And while the traditional psychologist aspires to use a language of mathematics to portray man, the phenomenologist aspires to allow man to portray himself in his own language and behavior.

"Phenomenology tries to study man in his human fullness," Smith said.

"The primary function of natural science has been to predict and control behavior. They (traditional psychologists) try to explain man in terms of cause and effect," he said.

"The primary aim of phenomenology as a 'human science' is not to explain in terms of cause and effect. We don't wish to look at a person as being a product of causes. We look at the person as the originator of his world.

"Traditional psychologists talk about environment as if it were something independent in itself — without relationship to man," Smith maintained. "We would say there is a dialogue between the two and what is important is the individual's perception of the environment.

"The therapist in phenomenology in dialogue with his client would move toward a clarification of how the client constitutes his world so he sees he is not a passive victim of forces and circumstances, so he sees there is a possibility to make new choices."

"Many psychologists, no matter what their backgrounds are, would probably agree psychology has yet to find its own identity," Smith said.

"Phenomenologists believe that the reason that there are 'psychologies' rather than a 'psychology' is because it has been based upon the natural sciences."

The conviction psychology should have one identity is a main reason Duquesne has decided not to seek accreditation from the American Psychological Association.

"The APA representative came to Duquesne to evaluate our program in 1964," Father Smith said. "He was impressed with our program and advised us not to join the APA. He said we might lose our uniqueness."

But according to Father Smith, the decision to remain unaccredited has been accompanied by financial consequences. Federal grants are not available for lack of accreditation.

"As a private Catholic university, we can certainly use more money," he said.

And while students were having no trouble finding jobs after graduating, Smith said students had trouble obtaining certain salaried internships as well as federal fellowships.

But the financial situation doesn't seem to deter students from applying to Duquesne. There were some 80 applicants for this year's 10 Ph.D. spots and 250 to 300 applicants for the 40 M.A. positions.

"I felt in the phenomenological approach there was more of a chance of seeing people in their humanness than in the traditional, natural science approach," said Steven A. Morton, 25, of Oklahoma City. "In traditional psychology, a person is lost in statistical analysis."

Father Smith said the APA is currently contemplating "a new program for accrediting innovative and creative programs." If such a program were implemented, he said Duquesne would consider seeking accreditation.

New Bridge Idled Ferry

COTTONWOOD POINT, Mo. (AP) — They've busted the Cottonwood Point connection and for skipper Eric Taylor and his 26 sailors it's the end of a Mississippi River era.

For 68 years, Taylor's family ran one of the few river crossing services between Memphis and Cairo, Ill. But today the ferryboats are tied up, replaced by a new, $27-million, concrete and steel bridge.

Taylor ran the operation himself for a half-century. He had two ferries at the Missouri Bootheel community of Caruthersville and two here, 10 miles downstream. Cottonwood Point is about six miles above the Arkansas border.

"Nobody likes to see their business go away from them," said Taylor. "But it might be a blessing in a way. I'm 72 years old. I've been running them myself for 50 years."

"We never fought the bridge. It's part of the progress in this country. It's good. We consider ourselves lucky to last as long as we did."

Taylor said he made "a reasonable profit" from the business, which operated 24 hours a day until it shut down at the end of 1976.

The boats could carry 12 vehicles on the 15-minute crossing. The Cottonwood Point boats went to Tennessee 20 near Heloise; those from Caruthersville to Tennessee, 79 near Ridgely.

This has been a crossing point as long as anyone can remember, said Taylor. "I know from hearsay that some fellows once had an oar boat here they could put a wagon on," he said. Taylor's boats are for sale.

Americans On Stage All Over World

EDITOR'S NOTE — If all the world's a stage, it's peopled with Americans. Whatever the ups and downs of politics, in entertainment and the arts the U.S. flag is flying all over the globe.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Andrew Wyeth is very big in Tokyo, Vera Zorina is very big in Oslo, Grace Bumbry is very big in West Germany, soprano Mary Costa is very big in Chile, Tennessee Williams is very big in Moscow, George Balanchine is very big in Denmark, Frank Sinatra is very big in Amsterdam, Benny Carter's quintet is very big in Cairo, James King of Dodge City, Kan., is an honored singer in Vienna and Ken Kesey's "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest" is on Spain's best seller list.

Whatever Americans think of their image abroad after Vietnam and Watergate, American artists carry the flag proudly everywhere and to rising acclaim.

An Associated Press survey of the world's cultural scene finds Americans on the stage, in the museums and on the best seller lists of almost every literate nation, including many communist countries.

Americans dance, sing, write and compose, they paint and sculpt, they perform, and their grace, style and imagination pervade the world's artistic consciousness.

In West Germany, John Neumeier directs the Hamburg Opera ballet to critical approval. Theodore Bloomfield of Cleveland directs the West Berlin Symphony. There are 10 American soloists with the Bavarian State Opera in Munich and 19 with the German Opera of West Berlin.

There are German versions of "Hello Dolly" and O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night." Erica Jong's "Fear of Flying" in translation leads the best seller list; Saul Bellow's "Humboldt's Gift" is sixth and Leon Uris' "Trinity" is tenth.

There are 17 American ballet dancers in the Hamburg State Opera Company including soloists Daja Michel, Victoria Pulkiné and Hagen Haigen. The Hamburg Opera ensemble has seven American singers, all of international stature.

West German museums show more than 1,000 American paintings.

As the guide of the National Gallery of West Berlin comments: "At the end of the 1950s, the United States of America started challenging Europe in Art. In a short time, the attention of Europe switched from Paris to New York."

Even in Soviet-dominated Eastern Europe, the American presence is appreciated, although there's a lag between what appears in the East and what appears in the West. In Czechoslovakia, after World War II, the most popular American authors were Edgar Lee Masters, Walt Whitman, Emily Dickinson and William Carlos Williams.

Today they are Ernest Hemingway, William Faulkner, Scott Fitzgerald, Erskine Caldwell, and thereafter Arthur Hailey, Ray Bradbury, Norman Mailer, Truman Capote, William Saroyan, Sinclair Lewis, Upton Sinclair, Louis Bromfield and Irving Stone.

In the Soviet world, the U.S. State Department becomes a Sol Hurok in reverse. As it has elsewhere in the world, the U.S. government has played a major export role for American artistic efforts.

Latest on the Soviet translation list are Kurt Vonnegut, John Updike and Irving Wallace, with Kesey's "Cuckoo" currently in process.

Among American plays now being staged in the Soviet Union are Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth" and "A Streetcar Named Desire," and Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse — Five."

American jazz has always been popular in the Soviet Union, and a recent youth concert included numbers by Duke Ellington as well as Russian compositions. Rock was very big among those who attended the American Bicentennial exhibit that closed in Moscow in December.

The U.S. Bicentennial was the occasion for many special exhibitions of American art. Tokyo's Seibu Museum marked the U.S. birthday with a show entitled "Three decades of American art selected by the Whitney Museum," including works by William de Kooning, Hans Hoffman, Jackson Pollock, Mark Rothko, Jasper Johns and Roy Lichtenstein.

In Singapore 95 per cent of the English language films and 45 per cent of the television programs come from the United States.

New Yorker David Zinman conducts the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra and regularly presents works by Aaron Copland.

When Frank Sinatra performed at Amsterdam's Concertgebouw, one paper wrote: "For 80 minutes he thrilled the packed concert hall. Those who complain about his voice are mad. The man sings life itself and listening to him was an unforgettable experience."

Dutch ballet experts consider U.S. dancers among the best in the world. There are 15 Americans in the Amsterdam-based National Ballet, and 10 in the Netherlands Dance Theater of The Hague.

Hans Knill of the Netherlands Dance Theater says the biggest problem is holding onto the Americans. "They all dream of dancing in New York ... They are among the best dancers in the world and certainly the best trained. They come to Europe after leaving ballet school because they can't all get a job in America. Competition is too fierce."

Americans are strong in Vienna, where, one U.S. diplomat says, "There is more top-class American talent than in many American towns."

Austria is fascinated by American musicians and dancers, but is equally taken by American literature and musical comedy.

Americans have long been appreciated in London, and among those on the concert schedule this season are Andre Previn, principal conductor of the London Symphony who lives in a country village outside London with his actress wife, Mia Farrow; Zubin Mehta, James Levine, Isaac Stern, Lorin Maazel, Rudolf Serkin, Frederica von Stade, Judith Blegen, Sherill Milnes, Grace Bumbry, Jessye Norman, John Browning, Craig Sheppard and the Juilliard String Quartet.

A major operatic occasion was the debut of Grace Bumbry and Sherrill Milnes in the lead roles of Verdi's "Macbeth."

American literature is the major Yankee influence in South America. In many countries, the only visits by musicians, dancers and singers are sponsored by the U.S. government.

But seven Americans play in Peru's only symphony orchestra. Mary Costa sang in the Chilean production of "La Traviata," and bass James Morris of the New York Metropolitan sang in "Faust."

'Possession' Adds Status

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI) — According to Dr. Lenora Greenbaum, adjunct member of the sociology faculty at Adelphi University, many Americans view possession by a spirit as being both frightening and evil. But, she says, this is not the case all over the world.

"We automatically assume that anyone who is possessed is laboring under the influence of 'the devil,'" Dr. Greenbaum said. "But in African and Caribbean countries, the possession trance state has a very different meaning — the spirit is not regarded as a devil ipso facto, and a possessed person can be seen as having high status."

Dr. Greenbaum speaks with authority on the subject of possession trance and its effects on decision-making in many African countries. Her 1973 study, entitled "Sociocultural Influences on Decision Making: An Illustrative Investigation of Possession Trance in Sub-Saharan Africa," was judged the best socio-psychological research of that year by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Cable Car Back In Operation

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — The Caracas "teleferico" — the cable car system that offers a spectacular view of the Venezuela capital — is working once again.

The teleferico was closed down for a month for repairs but is back in operation again as one of Caracas' chief tourist attractions.

New Clue To Old Disease

By JANE ANDERSON
LYME, Conn. (UPI) — There is increasing evidence suggesting that Lyme arthritis, a puzzling mini-epidemic that has hit scores of people in eastern Connecticut, is caused by a virus transmitted to humans by insect or tick bites.

Such an infectious agent has not yet been found, but ongoing research into the disease could be a blessing in disguise for medical sleuths trying to solve the mystery of arthritis.

Lyme arthritis, named after the Connecticut town where the first cases were discovered, was first recognized in late 1975 because of the geographic clustering of cases — in the adjoining Connecticut River towns of Lyme, Old Lyme and East Haddam. Most victims lived in heavily wooded or sparsely settled areas.

"We've seen patients from other parts of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Long Island and Massachusetts who fit the picture but we don't know how far it goes," said Stephen E. Malawista, chief of rheumatology and professor of medicine at Yale University. "There have not been any confirmed cases beyond this general area."

Malawista and two other Yale specialists, Drs. Allen C. Steere and John A. Hardin, who have been studying the disease said it has been around since 1972 with most new cases developing in the summer and early fall.

They studied 51 victims from December, 1975, through last April and followed 30 additional persons who developed the initial symptoms last June through September.

In a report Dec. 11 to the Arthritis Foundation, they said laboratory studies showed chemical changes in the blood of the victims that may be indicative of an immune reaction to a viral infection.

The initial symptoms of the illness, similar to juvenile rheumatoid arthritis, often include fever and aches, followed by swelling, mostly at joints such as the knee, wrist or elbow.

The researchers said the first sign is a red spot that grows into an expanding red circle. In one nine-year-old girl, for example, the lesion began in July and lasted two weeks. In August, she developed Bell's palsy and in September developed arthritis.

A three-year-old girl started out with one spot and within four days had 20 expanding lesions on all limbs, the trunk and face. These lesions lasted a week and were associated with fever, headache, stiff neck, nausea and fatigue. The symptoms disappeared until three months later, in October, when she developed arthritis in her right knee.

In the 30 new patients studied, the lesions lasted anywhere from a month to two months and were associated with symptoms ranging from none to high fever, stiff neck, headache, backache, nausea, sore throat, fatigue and arthritis.

Four of the patients remember having been bitten by a tick at the site of the original spot.

Steere, Hardin and Malawista theorized that an arthropod such as a tick transmitted the infectious agent into the skin where some patients — but not all — develop the characteristic expanding skin lesion.

"When it occurs, this lesion is a unique clinical marker for this illness," Steere told the Foundation meeting.

Gary Granai, an East Lyme independent investment and insurance agent, said he almost went broke when he, his wife, Pauline, and their sons, Jason, 9, and Jeffrey, 4, came down with the illness in September, 1975.

"I developed a problem in my leg and back which another doctor diagnosed as a slipped disc. In January I had swelling in the joints. I was bedridden for about a month and I was on crutches for a long time," Granai said last summer.

"From the beginning of September until February 6th, I was unable to work but a day or two a week. My wife for the most part had to run the family and drive me around. I couldn't drive," he said.

But Malawista said in an interview that most cases are much more mild.

"Most people who have it really have a mild arthritis that comes for maybe a week and then goes away for three months. And they might get another attack once or twice and that may be it. A good number of patients only had one attack which was very mild and went away."

Steere said an understanding of the cause and early stages of Lyme arthritis could lead to a better understanding of arthritis in general.

"The key problem now is to try to identify the virus," he said. "If we could isolate the virus, we could say who has it and who doesn't, and we would be in a position to control it."

He reported at the Arthritis Foundation meeting in Miami Beach that trapping of insects in the Lyme area and followup lab tests had not yet uncovered a virus which might be the cause.

There were two other reports at the Foundation meeting that also linked arthritis to viral infections. Dr. Peter D. Utzinger of the University of North Carolina reported on three unrelated patients with an upper respiratory illness caused by a virus who subsequently developed arthritis. And two doctors from Boston University described a new arthritis syndrome in five patients which also appeared caused by an unknown virus.

Dr. Emmanuel Rudd, consulting medical director of the Arthritis Foundation, said the three reports will encourage further research to confirm or refute the suspicion about the role of viruses in arthritis.

"We may be seeing new kinds of infectious arthritis or it may be that better laboratory techniques are permitting investigators to sort out different forms of arthritis which previously have been lumped together under the single label, 'arthritis,'" he said.

Wide Role For Sulfuric Acid

NEW YORK (AP) — Sulfuric acid — one of the most widely used industrial chemicals — also helps make a vast array of consumer products, from foods to plastics, reports U.S. Industrial Chemicals Co.

Soft drinks, for instance, rely on it. Sulfuric acid is used to make citric acid, the additive that increases the tartness in soft drinks. Citric acid is also used in processed cheese and pharmaceuticals.

Other everyday products to which sulfuric acid contributes include wet cell batteries, gasoline, detergents and paper.

Paris Prepares For Its First Mayor Since 1871

FUTURE MAYOR'S OFFICE — A city usher is putting into shape the office in the Paris Town Hall which will be used by the new mayor of the city. Since 1871,

Paris is the only municipality in France that has not had an elected mayor. (UPI Photo)

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — For the first time in 105 years, Paris will have a mayor — a popular politician in the American style but without the financial and decay headaches of the administrators of New York and other U.S. cities.

Not since the turbulent days of the 1870-71 insurrection in the French capital has a mayor ruled Paris. In earlier centuries, Paris was never a self-ruling city but a fiefdom of the national government, forever fearful, according to historians, that a Paris mayor could concentrate such power he could threaten national leaders.

But in 1977, city voters will elect a 109-member city council March 23. The council members in turn will elect the mayor. And Paris will begin to run its own affairs.

The reform stems from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's plan to decentralize the national government and give more role to all French cities.

The president also wants to personalize the currently faceless administration of Paris.

To prepare for the radical change, some of the president's men fanned out around the world to absorb experiences of other major cities. The team interviewed city officials in New York, Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, Montreal, London, Stockholm, Munich, Rome and Amsterdam.

One task force was to gather research for the portion of the 1975 mayorality decree that Paris have "the pre-eminence of an elected mayor" — a man close to the people.

"One purpose was to see how cities deal with the public," said a member of the fact-finding tour, Bertrand Chardon of the Interior Ministry.

"It was amazing to see the public relations that a city politician has in the United States. Politicians can contact the people through news conferences, newsletters, speeches. This is more developed in the United States and Canada than in Europe.

"Such a system will be used for Paris and will be quite new in French municipal politics" (or in even national politics where a chasm divides the rulers and the ruled).

"In Montreal, for example, there is direct connection between the mayor and the people.

"I was fascinated to learn how Mayor Drapeau answers any kind of mail. He goes on TV once a week and you can telephone him during the program with complaints. The Paris mayor, too, will use radio, TV and the press."

But Mayor X of Paris will not, emphasized Chardon, find himself in a fix as did the leaders of broke and decaying New York. Chardon flew to New York to see how La Grosse Pomme (the Big Apple) was working — an idea that struck some New York news media as odd — and decided

"Paris can avoid the difficulties of New York."

"We learned that expenses were allocated to New York without the city having the means to afford them," Chardon said. "Paris cannot get into such financial difficulty because money is allocated to it by the national government, they can't get money elsewhere. Big cities need to have financial control by the state."

Paris will not have any problems of inner cities decaying as in North America, he said, because "European capitals tend to preserve their old inner cities."

The traveling Paris officials, however, admired Los Angeles' civil service system and method of "checking its management process. And we were amazed at the efficiency of the police department."

Under the reorganization of Paris, the city will keep its 20 "arrondissements," or regions with neighborhood town halls. The investigating team found such a system also exists in Berlin, Munich, Rome and London, among other cities.

The Paris mayor on paper, anyway, will be one of the most powerful men in the capital. He will occupy what city officials call the most beautiful office in Paris — grander than Giscard's.

The mayor's office in the Hotel de Ville (city hall) is almost 500 square feet with sculpted ceilings, Gobelintapestries, carved doors and a magnificent view of the tree-lined River Seine.

The office formerly was occupied by the little know prefect of Paris who was appointed by the national government and ruled the Paris suburban region as well. It now will move to another building — which might be built in the old market area of Le Halles — and will be responsible only for regional problems.

The mayor will take over matters close to the hearts of Parisians: housing, construction, city maintenance, aid to the elderly, parks and gardens traffic and cleanliness.

"He will be known to all the people and will respond to their questions and needs," a city hall spokesman said.

Already, politicians and parties are battling for the mayor's job. Industry Minister Michel d'Ornano, backed by Giscard, is campaigning on a ticket of "returning Paris to the Parisians their great city and their village. He speaks hopefully of fewer cars and more space for pedestrians parks and a return to Paris' one-time village atmosphere in the "arrondissements."

The first mayor of Paris was Jean Bailly, acclaimed but not elected in 1789 during the French revolution. He didn't last long. The city had seven elected mayors in three years, some serving as long as six days.

In 1848, two more mayors were elected and two more during the 1870 uprising. The last was Jules Ferry who stuck it out until he fled the revolt-torn capital in 1871.

Royal Investiture Rite Is Stepped In History

By A.O. SULZBERGER JR.
 Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The gilt on the chairs is peeling a bit now, and the massive chandeliers have lost a few of their crystals. But a Royal Investiture in the grand ballroom of Buckingham Palace still carries the pomp of 900 years of British monarchy.

The feeling of centuries of history is there as a visitor is let through the massive, black iron gates and the palace guard, in their tall bearskin hats, snap to attention.

It's there when the Queen's personal guard, garbed in red, black and gold Tudor costumes with frilly white collars, move into position around the ballroom, their long, polished pikes resting on their shoulders.

In the grand entrance hall a detail of Household Cavalry Guards lines the walls, dressed in red and black with polished breast plates and plumed helmets, holding their swords against their shoulders.

A visit to an investiture ceremony — there are about a dozen each year — is likely to convince the visitor that there is at least one small reason for retaining the monarchy.

The investiture is the occasion when the Queen confers honors and titles on her subjects. The recipients, most selected by the government but some chosen by the Queen herself, are honored for outstanding service to the country or for individual acts of heroism.

At a recent investiture the recipients ranged from television comics known to millions to obscure civil servants. About 150 persons are honored at each investiture.

The ballroom, the largest room in the palace, is laid out with rows of chairs for the invited guests. As the guests enter and take their seats, a guards band plays light semi-classical music.

Promptly at 10:30 a.m., the Queen enters from a side door. It's a bit awesome when the Queen strides into the silent, crowded room.

Behind and flanking her, in addition to her personal guard, are two Gurkas, the diminutive Nepalese soldiers whose presence dates to the time of Queen Victoria.

A palace spokesman said Queen Victoria insisted on having "my Gurkas" because she thought they were "peachy keen."

The Queen stands at the front of the dais. Beside her are palace protocol officers who announce each honor recipient.

When a knighthood is conferred the recipient kneels before the Queen and she touches each of his shoulders with a ceremonial sword.

On this occasion she knighted seven men, about average for an investiture, and the rest received medals of varying orders.

The ceremony lasts about an hour and must be a tedious procedure for the monarch.

But each award means a lot to the person receiving it.

The ceremony ends in a hushed display of precision and nobility. When it is over, all rise for the playing of "God Save the Queen," and the Queen leaves through a side exit, followed by her guards and palace officials.

A few years ago, a Lord Chamberlain, who deals with palace protocol, remarked that all ceremonial is ridiculous if it isn't perfect.

"The whole thing is to keep the trappings and the mystery and not look ridiculous," he said.

The investitures are truly close to perfect.

Minimum Bet Is Only 41 Cents

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (UPI) — The minimum bet in the main hall at the casino in this Atlantic Coast beach resort is 100 pesos — the equivalent of 41 cents in U.S. currency.

Bettors must buy $82 worth of chips in order to get into the "special salon" reserved for serious wagering. The minimum bet there is 82 U.S. cents at roulette. The betting maximum is a little over $8 at the roulette table and $160 at the "punto y banca" card table.

London Adds A Museum

LONDON (UPI) — A time machine has just gone on display in London, opened by Queen Elizabeth.

It's the new Museum of the City of London, with the Great Fire of London in color and sound; a Roman dinner, including the kitchen and utensils; a cell in Newgate Prison; and most amazing of all, a shop window with pre-World War II prices on the items.

The spanking new museum which cost about $18 million overlooks London's Roman and medieval walls and has something from every era before and after. There are quaint little Victorian shops, recreations of what life was like in London in the iron age.

Anglo Saxons, Vikings, Normans, they're all there, arranged on two floors around a central garden. The visitor takes a chronological stroll from 250,000 years ago beside a swampy Thames with prehistoric hunters and finishes up with modern London's split-level walkways.

Has Cause To Fear TV Violence

By BILL DENSMORE, Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Diane Blackmore says she never worried much about television violence until her 4-year-old foster son tried to smother the family dog after watching a violent program.

Mrs. Blackmore, a nurse from suburban Northbrook, was one of nearly 50 persons, including television executives and state and city leaders, who presented views on TV violence Tuesday at a 12-hour hearing conducted by the National Parent-Teacher Association.

Officials of the 6.6-million member PTA say they have been holding similar hearings around the nation in hopes of stirring up enough public concern to challenge local television licenses and maybe even boycott advertisers who peddle products on programs featuring gunshots, karate chops, beatings, robberies and rapes.

But many witnesses testified that no connection has been established between violence on television and in real life.

Mrs. Blackmore said the incident with her foster son happened "after Sunday dinner about two years ago. We were watching the Sunday night mystery movie. He tried to smother our dog with a pillow after he saw a corrupt policeman try to smother a victim."

Henry W. Levinson, an executive with the New York-based Television Information Office, defended television programming and complained that "everybody's yelling at each other and nobody's listening. I'm learning that television is a very easy target." His organization is funded by the three commercial networks, the National Association of Broadcasters and several major studios. He said the networks have tried to eliminate "gratuitous violence" in programming and stick to a "family-viewing hour" policy, even though a California court ruled the family hour unconstitutional.

Hermilio Traviesas, vice president of NBC, said his network will report its findings on TV violence later this year. "It is prudent for us all to be concerned about violence on television," he said, "even though a conclusive case for a cause-and-effect relationship has not been made."

In other testimony, Mrs. Blackmore told of a science class experiment conducted by her 12-year-old daughter, Karen.

She said Karen used closed-circuit TV to show a class of parochial school fourth-graders a film about street gang fighting. The next day, she showed a similar class a film describing the way chairs have changed from kings' thrones to kitchen straightbacks. After the films, she led each class member, about 30 in all, into a room. She showed each pupil a doll and told him to imagine that it was his baby sister who had been bad while their mother was out. She said the children had permission to punish her with a paddle.

"The class that had seen the violent show were very violent, making comments such as, 'I'm going to kill it,'" she said.

She said they struck the dolls a total of 332 times. Viewers of the film about chairs, Karen said, struck their dolls 54 times.

Eyes Prison Conditions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The new state corrections secretary says several North Carolina prison units "are going to need eliminating or drastic renovation."

"There is much that saddens me," said Amos Reed of the dilapidated, overcrowded prison system he took over two weeks ago.

Central Prison in Raleigh, he said, where 10 per cent of the prison population lives in filthy, overcrowded conditions, is especially bad.

"Central, that old prison, has been gerrymandered and reworked until it is impossible to develop" rehabilitation programs or effective security.

Other units, Reed added, "were built in the 1930s and were not substantial then."

Reed said he had accepted resignations of two corrections officials Tuesday and was phasing out the jobs of seven others in the personnel section.

The resignations were from Victor C. Donati, personnel director, and John G. Patseavours, director of the division of adult probation and paroles.

Reed said he still had not decided whether to retain prison system director Ralph D. Edwards.

He said he was still meeting with department officials.

MTM Building A TV Empire

By JAY SHARBUTT, AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grant Tinker, husband of Mary

Tyler Moore, didn't get coy when asked if he ever thought their creation of MTM Enterprises in 1970 to make CBS

"Mary Tyler Moore Show" would lead to so much.

"I don't want to have seemed too clairvoyant, but the idea certainly was to start a viable production company, and to do that you need to have several projects going at one time," he said.

"So the answer is yes." Since MTM's first series, it's made seven others, two of them spin-offs, "Rhoda" and "Phyllis," and the rest originals. "The Bob Newhart Show," "Doc," "The Tony Randall Show," the Paul Sand and Bob Crane shows and "Texas Wheelers."

The last three flopped and CBS axed "Doc" late last year. But the success of the others leaves MTM Enterprises still one of Hollywood's hottest situation comedy concerns.

Come Feb. 4, Miss Moore whose show started it all, films the 168th and last episode of her Emmy-winning series. After seven successful seasons, she wants to move on to other things in TV.

Although what Tinker calls "our flagship show" will end, their company won't, despite the loss of four of its writer-producers to ABC and Newhart's recent decision to quit after this season.

In addition to MTM's returning series, there'll be an hour-long CBS series with Ed Asner, Mary's newsroom boss, as a Washington, D.C., newspaper editor. Plus work on a comedy pilot for Betty White, another regular on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Also afoot: a trio of daytime game show projects, three more comedy pilots, a 12-hour adaptation of the novel, "Boys and Girls Together," a TV movie, plus two variety specials and a TV drama for Miss Moore on CBS next season. CBS also can ask her for another series.

All this was planned as far back as two years ago, Tinker said, "so we don't get quite so typed or labeled as we have been — as situation comedy specialists — in the past.

"I think we're beginning to work a variety of streets." A big hole in the sunniest side of MTM's street may be caused by Newhart. Early this month, he said he's leaving his hit show, now in its fifth season. He wants to try other things.

Problem is, he's still got a year to go on his MTM contract, according to Tinker, "and CBS says to us 'You owe us another year of Newhart's series) and you better deliver it.'"

"So now we're in midair," MTM's 50-year-old president said, adding that he's been trying hard to get Newhart — who emphasizes his farewell decision isn't a salary-boosting ploy — to come back.

"You ask me about it a month from now. Maybe Bob will have changed his mind, and I must say he gives no indication he will at any price. Or maybe CBS will have figured out how to accept that decision, which they've given no indication of doing."

It's all very well to master the technical plays. But you will never become the "complete" bridge player until you have learned how to apply pressure to an opponent. Bridge is as much a war of nerves as a game of skill.

South was on the borderline of a jump rebid in his suit. However, he decided that game was unlikely unless his partner could bid freely a second time, so he contented himself with a simple rebid in his six-card suit. North's raise to four hearts was beyond reproach, especially since he knew his partner was virtually certain to have six hearts.

West led a low club. After topping dummy's king with the ace, East cashed the queen and shifted to a trump. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds and was now faced with the problem of avoiding two ton, for it will drop under the ace and the ten will be established. If declarer follows that course, he will be down one as the cards lie since he must lose two diamond tricks.

Declarer discarded this line in favor of one which had a better chance of revealing the location of the diamond king. He crossed to the king of spades and led a low diamond from dummy. If East held the jack of diamonds, he might not realize the importance of going in with that card, and when the ten forces the king, two diamond tricks would be established in dummy.

There was another combination that would also give East a problem. If East had the king of diamonds, he would have to exhibit great fortitude to duck smoothly when a low diamond is unexpectedly led from the board.

At the table, East did not have the poise to play low in tempo. He hesitated awhile, thereby giving away the position, then took his king. Declarer could then claim the rest of the tricks for his contract.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Dumped French Wine In Protest

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Red Buttons and about 1,000 other members of the Synagogue for the Performing Arts dumped 500 bottles of French wine into a sewer to protest France's release of Palestinian terrorist Abu Daoud. Daoud, reputed mastermind of the 1972 assault on the Munich Olympic village in which numerous Israelis were killed, was released despite pleas that he be tried on criminal charges. Buttons, film director Arthur Hiller and others dumped the wine Tuesday into a gutter in front of the French tourist office. The entertainers said they were kicking off a planned international boycott of French products.

Madrid's Industrial Belt Is Idled By Big Strike

Natural Gas Suppliers Agree Price-Fixing Hurt Incentive

HOUSTON (AP) — Suppliers say the only thing new about the current natural gas problem is the weather.

Fred Ebdon of Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. said the natural gas industry has been complaining for more than 20 years since the Federal Power Commission, through a U.S. Supreme Court ruling, took control of the prices gas producers can be paid by firms dealing in the interstate sale of natural gas.

"We've been talking about it for years, but nobody listened," Ebdon said. He added that some gas companies have been forced to curtail out-of-state gas shipments since 1970 and 1971, but he added that the weather, prior to this winter, has not been a critical factor.

The gas companies operate on two systems—interstate and intrastate. Interstate gas prices are those charged by the supplier for gas shipped across state lines. The prices are regulated by the federal government and kept at a level below the intrastate gas price that is regulated by the home state.

Although many Texas industries have been faced with 100 per cent gas curtailments and forced to switch to fuel oil, it's the interstate customer who is being frozen out—literally.

Natural gas industry spokesmen in Texas say they are not going to drill for gas and sell it to out-of-state customers at prices kept at a lower level than gas sold in the intrastate system.

Gas-rich Texans got a taste of what can happen a few weeks ago when the city of Wichita Falls had its schools and plants shut down by a gas curtailment. The city is supplied by the interstate system of Lone Star Gas Co. of Dallas.

Suppliers claim interstate gas reserves are much lower than the intrastate reserves. As a result, out-of-state customers, mostly states in the East, North and Midwest, have had their shipments curtailed by Texas gas producers.

In emergency cases, suppliers have received approval by the Federal Power Commission to buy new supplies at the intrastate rate and sell it in the interstate market.

Ebdon said his company, which serves primarily customers in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan, has been forced to curtail supplies. He said the company, which supplies 2.6 billion cubic feet a day, has reduced shipments overall this season by nearly 1.4 billion.

Ebdon estimates Panhandle has 7.4 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in reserve, or nine years, but he said reserves are steadily declining.

A spokesman at Lone Star Gas Co. in Dallas estimated that his firm, which deals mainly in intrastate natural gas business, has 12 to 12 and a half years supply in reserve—until they run out. The spokesman said 16 years is considered a good average.

And an official with Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Co. of Houston said emergency supplies authorized by the FPC have eased the immediate situation.

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer
MADRID, Spain (AP) — Thousands of workers struck today in protest against rightist attacks on leftists, closing down Madrid's industrial belt and construction sites. The government ordered police reinforcements into the capital to prevent renewed violence.

Police swarmed through the capital's streets in jeeps and buses in anticipation of disorders at the funeral of five Communists slain by right-wing extremists on Monday.

Faced with Spain's worst crisis since the death of dictator Francisco Franco 14 months ago, Premier Adolfo Suarez canceled a trip to the Middle East and met with his cabinet.

Liberal and leftist political leaders called on their followers to avoid "street action," and the government said the streets of the capital were free of demonstrators for the first time in four days.

Labor sources were unable to say yet how many workers were idled, but newspapers estimated 50,000 workers struck in Madrid and about 60,000 in Bilbao, the northern industrial center. Five leading labor organizations in Barcelona said their members were striking, and there were walkouts in several other cities.

Public transport was crippled in Madrid and Bilbao.

The joint appeal against violence was signed by Communist party chief Santiago Carrillo, Socialist party leader Felipe Gonzalez and the leader of the centrist Popular party, Jose Maria de Arellaza.

Strike action began Tuesday, when 35,000 workers in Madrid and 30,000 in Barcelona quit work to protest a rightist machine-gun attack Monday night on the Madrid office of a Communist labor lawyer in which five Communists were killed.

Police arrested more than 60 persons Tuesday in an effort to stop the tide of violence that also included student demonstrations, kidnappings, the assassination of a student demonstrator Sunday by an ultrarightist, and the killing of a woman student demonstrator Monday by a police gas grenade.

Universities in Madrid and Barcelona remained closed today as officials tried to avert further clashes between students and police. The university law faculty in San Sebastian, the Basque capital, also closed to protest the violence, which it said was induced by rightists.

A far-right organization called the Apostolic Anti-Communist Alliance (AAA) said two of its members made the machine-gun attack on the meeting in the Communist lawyer's office Monday night. The death toll from the attack rose to five Tuesday night when another labor lawyer died.

The little-known group told the Spanish news agency CIFA in a telephone call the country would suffer "a night of the long knives" if royal adviser Antonio Maria de Oriol was killed.

Oriol was kidnaped Dec. 11 by the ultra-leftist First of October Anti-Fascist Resistance Group, or GRAPO, which is demanding the release of 15 political prisoners. GRAPO also said it abducted Lt. Gen. Emilio Villaescusa, the 64-year-old president of the Supreme Court of Military Justice, on Tuesday.

Some Prohibit Lower Thermostat Settings

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

Besides making you cold, following President Carter's thermostat reduction plan could land you in jail.

Dropping your thermostat to 65 degrees is illegal in parts or all of several states. In other states, officials say the chances of the suggestion's succeeding are remote.

New York City landlords who follow President Carter's recommendation face fines of $1,000 and up to one year in jail. City law requires the maintenance of a minimum of 68 degrees during winter days.

State law in Connecticut says a home or business where the temperature is less than 68 degrees is "injurious to the health of the occupants thereof." Gov. Ella Grasso said that because of the law, it would be illegal for Connecticut residents to voluntarily set their thermostats at 65.

Philadelphia regulations require landlords to keep thermostats at 68 degrees from Oct. 1 through April 31 and any time the temperature drops below 10 degrees. A state official said all heating systems must be capable of heating to 70 degrees.

Massachusetts law requires owners to supply heat in habitable rooms of at least 70 degrees between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. from Sept. 16 to June 14. A setting of 65 is allowed other times.

The Wisconsin Administrative Code sets minimum temperatures for a variety of dwellings, businesses and public buildings, generally ranging from 67 to 70. Public buildings must be heated to a minimum of 70; living and sleeping areas in rented private dwellings 67. In Milwaukee, the minimum for rental units is 70.

Courtsrooms, retail stores, offices, study halls, classrooms and beauty parlors also must be no lower than 67.

Linda Berger, spokeswoman for District of Columbia Mayor Walter E. Washington, said officials there planned to enforce a local ordinance requiring daytime temperatures of 68 and nighttime settings of 65 in rental dwellings if they receive complaints.

District government officials will comply with the President's suggestion, she said, except for places like hospitals where health considerations make it unwise.

And in Springfield, Ill., acting state energy director Michael Adsit said, "I just don't believe people are really going to comply" with the 65-degree request.

"Turning it down to 65 is a little bit more than people will think is reasonable," he said.

But it was Ebdon who summed up the suppliers' feelings on the problem, saying: "There's plenty of new gas that could be found—if there was an attractive price."

SHORT ONE FOR THE LONG FORM — By now most working Americans have received their yearly tax forms from the IRS. No doubt little Michael Berry, 3, of Lackland, Fla., will figure heavily on his parents long form. New tax laws have gone into effect since January 1 of this year. Next year Michael will be even taller, and his parents hope the tax forms are no longer. (AP Wirephoto)

Mary Anna Morrison's Life Was Changed By A Visit To Virginia

By DR. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — She didn't know it at the time, but Mary Anna Morrison's visit to Lexington, Va., in 1853 changed her life.
It was on that long trip from Lincoln County, N.C., to visit her sister, Mrs. Daniel Harvey Hill, that Anna met a young teacher of artillery tactics and natural philosophy at Virginia Military Institute. He had recently resigned his army commission following meritorious service during the Mexican War. His name was Thomas Jonathan Jackson.

Then, in 1857, a letter arrived from Jackson himself asking permission to visit Anna. Dressed handsomely in his uniform, the 33-year-old teacher made a striking appearance at Cottage Home, the Morrison plantation in Lincoln County. Anna's father, Dr. Robert Hall Morrison, was particularly impressed by the visitor.
Following a brief courtship, the couple took their marriage vows at Cottage Home on July 16, 1857. They traveled to Niagara Falls for their honeymoon, then settled at Lexington where Jackson continued his teaching. In 1859 he commanded the cadet corps at the hanging of John Brown.
The Civil War two years later tore the couple apart. Anna returned to North Carolina, and Jackson accepted a commission as colonel in the Confederate army. Within two months he was a brigadier general. At the first battle of Bull Run, Jackson made such a courageous stand that Gen. B. E. Bee exclaimed, "There stands Jackson like a stone wall." With that statement, a legend began to grow around "Stonewall" Jackson.

His exploits in the Shenandoah Valley campaign, coupled with the emotional loyalty of his men to whom his eccentric behavior and dress appealed, soon made Jackson the South's most exciting general.
Back in North Carolina, Anna Jackson followed the news of her husband's progress and bore him a daughter, Julia.
The child was five months old before Anna received permission to visit Jackson, by then a lieutenant general, at Hamilton Crossroads, Va. The visit, however, was cut short by the movement of Union troops.

Ann and Julia rushed back to Richmond, and General Jackson rode off toward Chancellorsville with his greatest military victory. While awaiting transportation back south, Anna received notification that her husband had been wounded. She insisted on going to his bedside at Guiney's Station.
Anna was shocked by the general's condition. His left arm had been amputated and he had lapsed into pneumonia. As her father grew weaker, little Julia was brought in and put on his bed. He smiled, sank back, and uttered his last words: "Let us cross over the river and rest under the shade of the trees." The legendary Stonewall Jackson was dead.
Anna, still a young woman, carried her baby back to Lincoln County and for nine years lived at the Morrison homestead. In 1872 she and Julia moved to Charlotte.
Instead of living in sadness, Anna Jackson sought to perpetuate her husband's memory through a full and productive life. She took special interest in the Confederate veterans and was a familiar figure at their reunions.
Her graciousness even won the respect of Union veterans, and she traveled around the country seeking to heal the wounds of war.
While her fellow townspeople called her the "First Lady of Charlotte," many others called her "First Lady of the Confederacy."
Julia grew up and married William E. Christian of Charlotte. But in 1889 she died, leaving two young children for Anna Jackson to raise.
This new responsibility seemed to rejuvenate the grandmother who showered affection upon the children while continuing her civic and social activities.
She died in Charlotte in 1915 in her 84th year, 52 of which had been spent as the widow of Stonewall Jackson.
Thomas Jackson Christian, like his grandfather, went to West Point and rose to the rank of colonel in the army. His sister, Julia, married Edmund Randolph Preston, and this last grandchild of Stonewall Jackson now lives in the Presbyterian Home in High Point.

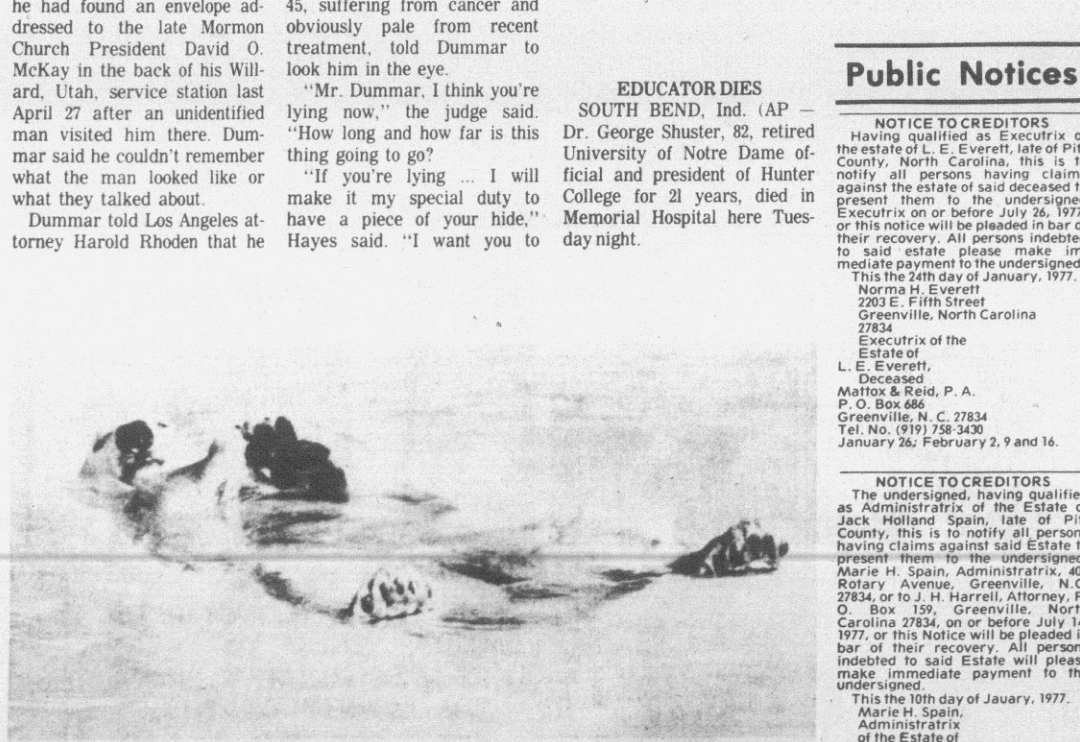

Judge Grills Dummar On Hughes' Will Testimony

By JOHN M. WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The judge threatened to "have a piece of his hide" if he lied and called on him to tell the truth as a fellow Mormon. Melvin Dummar stuck to his story that a mystery man brought him the will that leaves him a chunk of Howard Hughes' estate.
The unusual grilling by Clark County District Court Judge Keith Hayes came Tuesday as Dummar, a 32-year-old ex-service station operator, testified voluntarily in a hearing on the so-called "Mormon will." It leaves him one-sixteenth of Hughes' estate, which has been estimated at $2.5 billion. Dummar was to return to the stand today.
Dummar, admitting he had lied during earlier deposition sessions, said he delivered the three-page, handwritten document to the Mormon Church headquarters in Salt Lake City and wrote a note found with it. But he denied having anything to do with writing the will itself.
Instead, Dummar said that he had found an envelope addressed to the late Mormon Church President David O. McKay in the back of his Willard, Utah, service station last April 27 after an unidentified man visited him there. Dummar said he couldn't remember what the man looked like or what they talked about.
Dummar told Los Angeles attorney Harold Rhoden that he used an electric frying pan to steam open the envelope, because, "I was curious and I was scared to death." Rhoden represents former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich, named as executor of the estate in the will.

Dummar said his wife, Bonnie, had joked several times that they would be named in Hughes' will and once said: "One of these days uncle Howie's gonna leave us in his will."
Dummar said he left later the same day for Mormon Church headquarters to see current church President Spencer Kimball. He said he worried that "somebody was playing a bad joke on me," but said he later questioned his wife and was satisfied she was not involved.
Dummar said he intended to return to Salt Lake the next day to tell his story to President Kimball, but changed his mind because, "I was afraid that no matter how I looked at it, I knew somebody, somewhere would accuse me of writing it (the will)."
After a recess for lunch, the casual tone of the civil proceedings changed abruptly. Hayes, 45, suffering from cancer and obviously pale from recent treatment, told Dummar to look him in the eye.
"Mr. Dummar, I think you're lying now," the judge said. "How long and how far is this thing going to go?"
"If you're lying ... I will make it my special duty to have a piece of your hide," Hayes said. "I want you to know, Mr. Dummar, the Nevada State Prison is not a country club."

Sympathetic To Patty's Plight
REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A sheriff's deputy whose life was shattered by a terrorist's bullets says he and Patricia Hearst shared each other's sympathy when she worked with him to train her guard dog. "I could identify with her as a victim of terrorism, like me," said Robert Outman, who faces disability retirement from the San Mateo County sheriff's department because of the shooting a year ago. Outman spent two weeks recently in daily training sessions with Miss Hearst, the convicted bank robber, free on $1.25 million bail pending appeal, learned to work with her new 85-pound German shepherd, Arrow. Outman was gunned down last year by terrorists planting a bomb at a utility tower.
