State Offices Told Adopt 4-Day Week

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt ordered state employees on a four-day work week and urged steps be taken to cut fuel consumption in homes, schools, businesses and churches under the state of emergency declared

Tuesday. "The health, welfare and safety of the citizens of North Carolina are threatened by reason of an acute shortage in usable, necessary energy resources," Hunt said in making the declaration. Hunt's emergency guidelines, which are mandatory for state government and voluntary for schools, homes and industry, take effect 48 hours after he signed the measure, unless they are altered by the Legislative Committee on Energy Crisis Management.

The committee met briefly to review the plan Tuesday afternoon, but postponed any action.

Hunt asked retail businesses to limit operations to 48 hours a week, except where the public health and safety would be threatened. He asked that public and private schools and churches voluntarily cancel all night activities and reschedule them where possible for afternoons.

Hunt said his order was necessary because of critical shortages in natural gas, propane, heating oil and kerosene.

The four-day work week, under the governor's order, does not apply to public schools or to operations that must remain open, such as law enforcement agencies.

The governor did not say which day of the week state employees would be given off, but indicated it would be Friday or Monday. He said employees would work four, 10 hour days, with their lunch break reduced by 30 minutes and their day extended by 1½ hours.

Hunt asked businesses and local governments — and ordered state government — to lower thermostats in their buildings to 62 degrees during operating hours and 55 degrees at other times, and to lower water heater settings to 130 degrees.

Thermostats should be set on 65 degrees during daytime hours in schools, churches and homes. Arenas where collegesponsored activities cannot be rescheduled, such as basketball games, should have their thermostats set at "the plant protection level," of 45 degrees, Hunt said.

Hunt said he and the Energy Policy Council, with which he met before declaring the emergency, would review results of the voluntary action next week. "If the situation continues to worsen and we do not get compliance, I would be prepared to order compliance and submit that to the legislative committee," the governor said.

The council adopted a resolution approving of the emergency steps and also supporting federal deregulation of natural gas prices.

Hunt said closing state office buildings one more day during the week would save about 85 per cent of its normal fuel use for that day, providing an overall energy savings of 10 per cent to 15 per cent.

Reduced Hours Considered By Area Retailers

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

While cooler temperatures continue to threaten the fuel and energy supply throughout the Pitt County area local retail businesses are considering cutting back to 48 hours per week of operation in accordance with Governor Jim Hunt's request.

Tuesday the high temperature was recorded at 42 degrees and the low temperature was recorded at 21 degrees, according to the Greenville Utilities Department. Wednesday at 8 a.m. the temperature was recorded at 21 degrees and the river level measured 4.7 feet, according to the National Weather Service River Level Chart.

Local supermarket managers were asked how their businesses will be affected by Governor Hunt's request of limiting retail businesses' hours to 48 hours per week.

Wayne McKinney, manager of Winn Dixie said that his store has not received any notification of reducing hours of operation.

"We have not received any orders yet. The Winn Dixiestores in Virginia have gone along with the other businesses in reducing hours. We will try to work with whatever the other stores do," McKinney said.

Winn Dixie is presently open 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week. George Shovos, Assistant Manager of Big Star which is open 8:30 to 12 midnight six days and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays, said that no orders have been received as of yet.

"We have not heard from our company yet. I expect that we will be contacted by the weekend," Shovos said.

Leroy James, manager of A&P said that he expects a cut in hours. A&P presently is open 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. six days and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays.

"I received a notice on Monday that we probably would have a cut in hours, but I do not know to what extent at this time. We have cut our thermostats back to 63 degrees. Our 24 hour stores in North Carolina are just operating from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight now," James said.

Durward Harris of Harris Supermarkets said that he is in favor of mandatory cutbacks.

"We discussed the governor's request this morning. I don't think that it will work unless it is made mandatory. I wish that it were mandatory that the stores close except for 40 hours or 48 hours. I think that it will be the only way that it will work. I am in favor of conserving energy but I think everyone should do it," Harris said.

Groundhog Makes Unfavorable Report

PUNXSUTAWNEY PHIL, the weather-forecasting groundhog, was lifted from his burrow at sunrise today and his interpreters said he forecast six more weeks of winter. Phil was taken from his comfortable museum cage to wind-swept Gobbler's Knob an hour before the annual ceremony and tucked into his lighted and heated burrow. According to legend, if Phil had not seen his shadow, spring would have been just around the corner. Alas, it was not to be. (AP Wirephoto)

County Schools To Open Hour Later In February

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

In an effort to conserve more energy, the Pitt County Board of Education voted to open schools one hour later during the month of February at its Tuesday meeting.

According to Associate Superintendent Tom Craft, 300 gallons of fuel are saved for each hour that the schools can operate on less fuel. Craft said that by closing the schools for teachers' workdays Friday and Monday that 3,000 gallons of fuel was saved. He reported that the schools presently have a five weeks supply of fuel on hand and that a shipment of coal is expected to be delivered soon. However, if the coal is not delivered soon, getting coal will be more of a problem than getting oil, according to Craft.

The board voted against establishing the day after Labor Day as the uniform date for the beginning of the fall term for all public schools in the state. Superintendent Alford said that energy has never been a factor in scheduling the calendar, but it may now become an important consideration.

The board voted in favor of increasing the amount payable in hospital medical treatment and funeral expenses for pupils injured on school buses, and a proposed amendment concerning the eligibility of school employees and district committee members serving on boards of education. The amendment would make it necessary for school employees and district committee members who are eligible for election to resign their employment and committee membership before becoming a member of the board of education. Superintendent Alford will send a letter advising local representatives of the board's opinions.

The board voted to allow with conditions an easement for the Town of Grifton.

At the January meeting of the board, Grifton Mayor Dave Boseley requested an easement

Pay Raise Is Facing Test

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is getting a chance to approve or turn down hefty pay raises for members of Congress and other government executives. One lawmaker says the raises would be "a terrific rip-off of the American taxpayers."

It was Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., who used the term "rip-off" for the congressional raises of close to 30 per cent. Allen paved the way for a possible vote on the raises at today's session by tacking an amendment to a measure restructuring the Senate's committee system.

The Allen amendment would block pay raises scheduled not only for members of the House and Senate, but for high-level executive branch officials and federal judges. The raises were proposed by President Gerald R. Ford in the last days of his administration and subsequently were supported by President Carter.

Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., indicated he probably would move to table Allen's amendment, offered shortly before the Senate recessed Tuesday night.

Disapproval by either the Senate or the House would kill the raises, which are automatic unless action to stop them is taken by Feb. 20.

Unless lawmakers block their own raises, their pay will increase to $57,500 a year, from the current $44,600. The speaker of the House, the vice president and the chief justice of the Supreme Court would have their salaries increased to $75,000 from $65,500.

Cabinet members would get a $3,000 raise to $66,000. Associate Supreme Court justices would get raises from $63,000 to $72,000.

Most lower federal court judges would have their pay raised from $42,500 to $54,500 and some 20,000 top-level civil servants whose salaries have been frozen at $39,600 for several years would receive automatic hikes of up to $7,900.

Allen said his amendment would save $124 million initially. But he called it "a drop in the bucket" to eventual savings because higher top-level pay scales would lead to raises throughout the bureaucracy. He said the cost probably would amount to $1.2 billion a year.

Ford proposed the salary raises in his final budget, linking them to acceptance of a new code of conduct for federal officials, including restrictions on outside income and public disclosure of finances.

Spokesmen for the citizen's lobby Common Cause said today they favor the pay raises, but warned that the public would be "justifiably outraged" if raises are adopted and a new code of ethics is not.

Bargain Day Set

A city-wide Dollar Day Sale will be held in Greenville Thursday. The one day annual event will include retail businesses from all parts of the city.

Morris Brody, chairman of the Merchants Dollar Day activities, said that the Dollar Day has a history of being a special day of events in Greenville.

"Dollar Day is a one day event that brings shoppers to Greenville from as far as Ahsokie and Wilmington. It is the biggest city-wide promotion of the year and it is a great time to get outstanding buys. Retailers use this day to dispose of many seasonal goods. The weather never seems to affect the activities; Dollar Day remains a big event," Brody said.

Fresh Start On Pupil Petition

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Schools are supposed to be saving energy, but at Horace Sisk Junior High School it's taking a student petition to get thermostats turned down.

Amy Holt, 13, started the drive because she said classes were so hot students couldn't concentrate on their work.

Apparently they couldn't concentrate on the petition either. Amy said she'll have to start it again today because some "boys got it messed up by signing names like Jimmy Carter."

LATE CHARGES?

I live in a trailer park. I'd like to know if the management can legally charge me a penalty for late payment, and can they add onto it if I pay the rent due, but refuse to pay the penalty. It's all I can do to make the rent payment, and it was circumstances, not just not wanting to pay on time that made my payment late this month. Can I be evicted for not paying this penalty? A.L.

Hotline posed your questions to Jean Ann Wolhar, consumer protection specialist in the N. C. Attorney General's Office. She said you are bound by nothing less nor nothing more than is in your contract. She suggested you go back and read what your contract says about penalty for late payment and do whatever it says.

Reasons for eviction should also be stated in the contract, she said, and the amount of time notice that must be given by the owner if he wishes you to move.

HOMEMADE BREAD COURSE?

Is there anyone in Greenville who teaches the making of homemade bread? S. P.

We know that these courses are popular in some areas other than our own, but have heard of none here so far. Linda Fleming in the Continuing Education Department of Pitt Technical Institute said there are no breadmaking courses underway at Pitt Tech. If enough calls were received indicating an interest on the part of enough people and an instructor and a facility could be located, one could be started, however. Anyone wishing to take or teach such a course may call Ms. Fleming at 756-3130, Ext. 238.

County Commissioners Reaffirm Support For School Bond Stand

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners on Tuesday night reaffirmed their total support for a school bond issue for Pitt County and Greenville City Schools.

This support was voiced individually and collectively by commissioners at an unofficial meeting of commissioners and members of the Greenville City School board held Tuesday night in the Pitt County Courthouse. The meeting, requested by Supt. of Greenville City Schools Glenn Cox, was billed as one to explore avenues of funding for capital outlay needs for the city schools.

"We have advocated a bond issue to the city school board. We saw the need two years ago and have been after the city school board to go the bond issue route," Commissioner Burney Tucker said.

Commissioner Bruce Strickland stressed the bond issue as one "that must and will pass when people understand what the needs are. The other commissioners agree with me on this. If we all get together and show the people our needs, I know they will vote favorably on it. People are concerned about their children and their education."

Cox had requested the meeting on behalf of the Greenville City School board following an early January vote by the Pitt County School board against a school bond issue.

Also revealed during discussions was the fact that county commissioners were surprised by the January 4 defeat of the bond issue idea by the county school board. Several commissioners noted the first they knew about this was when they read it in the newspaper. To date, commissioners have not received official notification of the action from the county school board. (The city school board, however, was notified of the action in a letter over the signature of Pitt County Schools Supt. Arthur Alford.)

Informing commissioners of the sequence of developments, Cox told them he had appeared before the members of the county school board at their November meeting. "Before the meeting, I had written Ott (Supt. Alford) about our need for $4 million," Cox said, and asked if I could appear before

Farmville Board Invites Street Work Petitions; Money In Sight

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—Farmville Commissioners voted last night to make it known to the public that the town will welcome any petitions from landowners on unpaved streets for paving and curbing and guttering.

The Board expects to use Powell Bill money allocated from gasoline tax money by the state to each municipality based on the number of miles of its dedicated streets. According to a survey done by Town Engineer Van Lewis there are 21 unpaved streets in Farmville.

Also approved were plans to resurface as many streets as possible out of Powell Bill money, according to a priority list drawn up by Lewis. Lewis said priority is based both on the condition of each street and the amount of use each has. Home Avenue is first on the list of 17 streets said to need to be worked on.

The Board asked the engineer to contact the N. C. Department of Transportation to see what kind of repairs can be made to state-maintained streets in Farmville, also.

Commissioner Walston, head of the street committee, said that he believes that somewhere along the line that money other than Powell Bill funds are going to have to be allocated for streets in Farmville. He said the price of petroleum products are going up, and asphalt is a petroleum product, and that he thinks that as much work as possible should be done in the near future. In other words, he said, interest drawn on unused money is not keeping pace with inflation.

Mrs. James H. Cobb asked the board to consider the tiling of a ditch that runs past her mother's house and those of several others in the Perry Street area. The Board agreed to discuss the matter and put it on the agenda of next month's meeting. A policy concerning whether the town will simply tile ditches at its own expense or perhaps share the cost with landowners bordering ditches needs to be worked out, they indicated. W. A. Allen asked the board to discuss with him the price being paid for rent on a portion of the municipal lot behind the stores

'Fireside Chat'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will use a low-key format in delivering his first broadcast report to the American people tonight.

All three major television networks plan to carry Carter's report live at 10 p.m. EST.

Aides said the President plans to use a conversational tone for his speech being referred to as a "fireside chat," although Carter reportedly doesn't like the term.

The ground floor library at the White House was chosen as the setting for the address, aides said, to provide a contrast with more formal presidential addresses of the recent past, delivered from behind President-sized desks in the Oval Office.

Although Carter can be counted on for his customary soft-spoken delivery, aides made it clear his objective is to enlist popular support for his major domestic and foreign policy goals, and to convince voters he is moving vigorously on their behalf to deal with a weather-aggravated energy crisis in the East and a below-par economy nationwide.

Carter, during the campaign, pledged he would deliver periodic "fireside chats." But Press Secretary Jody Powell said that term would not be used officially to describe the President's appearance. Powell said Carter and his aides are still looking for an appropriate label for such broadcasts.

New Booklet Gives Tips On Local Customs

By KENNETH L. WHITING SINGAPORE (AP) — "Social Etiquette or What Not To Do in Singapore and How Not To Do It" has been written for those who don't want to come on like ugly Americans.

More than 6,000 U.S. citizens live in this Chicago-size island republic and thousands of others visit each year as tourists. The new booklet is filled with tips on local customs to help wary Americans avoid social pitfalls.

More than 75 per cent of the 2.2-million population is ethnic Chinese. There are Malay and Indian minorities.

The customs and taboos compiled by author Jo Ann Craig are based on religious practices and local habits. Mrs. Craig's 20-page booklet was sponsored by the Singapore American School. Her husband is assigned here on business.

In a chapter on cultural and personality differences between East and West, she advises curbing "the good old American temper." The "American virtues of outspokenness, boldness and aggressiveness" are not regarded as admirable traits by most Asians.

"The average American is giant-sized compared to the average Asian. He is very hairy. He smells differently (probably because of the vast amounts of meat that he consumes). Add to this picture what appears to be a loud and booming voice, an aggressive attitude, a clever, snappy answer to everything and compare this to the quiet, reserved and modest attitude of the Asian. If we take a look at ourselves the way others might look at us, maybe we can tone ourselves down a bit so we won't seem to be so overwhelming . . ."

Other suggestions from Mrs. Craig to those who would remain faux pas free:

- Avoid the quick use of first names or nicknames upon meeting a Singaporean for the first time.
- Avoid casual touching of the opposite sex.
- Avoid unwitting use of offensive gestures. These include pointing with the forefinger at a person — try a thumb instead. Beckoning for someone or a taxi with a wagging forefinger is very offensive. Calling someone with the first two fingers of the hand is also considered rude. A fist made with the right hand and slapped against the open left palm is extremely obscene. Hands on the hip are a sign of anger.

Won't Perform Wedding No. Four

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 29 and was looking forward so happily to her fourth marriage. But she's terribly upset because our rabbi has suggested that she go to another rabbi for this ceremony.

Actually, this rabbi (who confirmed her) performed only two of her marriages. She married a Catholic last time for whom she turned Catholic, but in less than a year their marriage was annulled, and she returned to the Jewish faith. So now she is as Jewish as she was before she became a Catholic.

Now, our rabbi doesn't want to marry her. Does he have the right to turn her away?

What would you do in our place? There are other rabbis handy, but our daughter felt so close to this one. (He is not an orthodox rabbi, he's reformed.)

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: A clergyman has the right to refuse to perform a marriage ceremony for reasons of his own. Inasmuch as there are other rabbis handy, ask one.

DEAR ABBY: Joel and I had gone steady for two years and things were going great until six months ago. Then he suggested that we both start dating others.

I really didn't want to date anyone else, so I asked Joel what went wrong in our relationship, and he told me: I had cut my hair above my ears without asking him first, and it seems that short hair on girls turns him off. Then because Joel complained about my cigarette breath, I quit smoking and gained 20 pounds in five months. Well, it seems fat girls turn him off.

He told me that after I had my hair grown out and lost the weight I gained, I should give him a call.

My question: Do you think I should let my hair grow and try to lose weight just to please Joel? Or should I tell him that I am not going to make myself over for him?

I WANT TO BE ME

DEAR WANT: Only you can make that decision. Now that you know what it will take to get Joel back, it's up to you to decide whether he's worth the effort. Is he?

DEAR ABBY: My mother (a widow) is coming to town for a family wedding. She lives a great distance from here. Mom has always stayed with me, and she wants to this time, but there are complications.

She has a live-in boyfriend, and she won't come without him. Furthermore, she wants me to put them up together in my home.

Abby, I have children at home, and I don't want them to say, "If Nana can do it, why can't we?"

I explained this to my mother and she said, "Well, tell the kids we're married!"

Abby, I don't want to lie to my children, and although I don't approve of my mother's lifestyle, I still love her. My husband disapproves, too. What should I do?

STUMPED OUT WEST

DEAR STUMPED: Tell your Mom you refuse to lie, but you'll be glad to make hotel or motel reservations for her and her friend. And don't apologize for your decision. Houseguests should expect to conform to the house rules.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

The Only Hope: To Conserve

The message in the current energy crisis is becoming more clear every day — we aren't going to see additional energy materialize in the short run; the only way to get through the current severe winter is to conserve what energy we have.

That is the message President Carter and N. C. Gov. Hunt are delivering to the public.

Hunt's press secretary Gary Pearce said earlier this week, "Really, the only thing you can do right now is to use less of the stuff. You can't just go out and get more."

That applies regardless of whether natural gas, oil or electricity heat is used for heating purposes. All of it is drawing off the same total energy reserves.

North Carolina is already drawing off its reserve fuel oil, and we have still to face February and early March, which often are the coldest times of the winter for our state.

Even with electric heat it does no good to argue that there is adequate generating capacity, or that nuclear fuel produces much of the electricity. As demand increases the power companies turn to older generating facilities and these are usually big users of oil.

Even if by some wild stroke of luck we get warmer weather in the weeks ahead, conservation will be necessary since we have already gone so deeply into oil and natural gas reserves.

The answer to the crisis lies with the public, for there are few of us who can't cut our energy use by quite a percentage. We can start with considerably lower thermostat settings and bundling up around the house. We can do laundry in cold water with modern day detergents. We can use as little hot water as possible for baths. Water can be heated after midnight when electric usage is lowest and nuclear plants may be able to carry the load.

Some of these alternatives will mean changes in the way we live, but they could mean that there will be enough energy to keep us going in our homes and our jobs during the weeks ahead.

Our Weather Paranoia

WASHINGTON—People who talk about the weather are now getting paranoid about it. They keep looking at the TV weather maps and they aren't laughing any more at the jolly men and women who are bringing them bad weather news.

I know this for a fact. I was sitting in the living room with Seltzer and the weatherman said, "Well, I guess you folks out there are wondering when it's going to warm up. Would you believe things are going to get worse before they get better."

"I'll kill the SOB," Seltzer said, as he made a move toward the screen.

I stopped him. "It's not his fault that the news is bad."

"Why does he have to grin when he's telling it? Cronkite doesn't grin when he tells you about an Amtrak train derailed in New Jersey."

The weatherman was standing in front of a screen.

"He's a sadist," Seltzer says. "He gets his kicks pointing to white spots on satellite maps."

"It's his job," I said. "He doesn't like the white spots any more than you do."

The weatherman continued. "Ordinarily, we would have gotten some relief except for this cold front which is coming in from Canada."

"Aha!" Seltzer shouted. "It's Canada again. How long are we going to take that stuff from Canada? Why don't we tell 'em 'one more cold front from you people and we nuke Ottawa.'"

"It isn't really Canada's fault. The front probably originated in the Arctic and just passed through Canada."

Why does Canada let it pass through? Seltzer asked. "Tell me that."

"Because if she didn't let it pass through it would become a stationary front and hang over Canada. No country wants a dark cloud hanging over it day and night."

The weatherman was still talking. "Now behind this cold front is another cold front coming up from the South."

"I knew it," shouted Seltzer. "The South is sending all its bad weather north. The people down there don't care any more about us than the Canadians."

"The South is suffering, too," I said.

"Good. If they want to originate cold fronts they have it coming to them."

We turned back to the weatherman. "But what we really have to be concerned about is this low-pressure system over here of warm air meeting this high-pressure system over here of cold air which could cause precipitation of up to two feet of snow."

Seltzer threw his shoe at the screen.

The weatherman chuckled. "So be prepared to put on your long underwear and your galoshes and if you can

Crisis Alert In '75

By STAN BENJAMIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years ago the staff of the Federal Power Commission urged the preparation of plans for mandatory natural gas conservation and allocation to cope with exactly the kind of emergency the nation now faces.

The warning went unheeded and today the United States still has no comprehensive plan for allocating scarce gas supplies or for managing the current crisis, which has idled an estimated 1.5 million workers.

The FPC report, titled "A Realistic View of U.S. Natural Gas Supply," warned that unavoidable, deepening gas shortages eventually would cause "widespread plant and business shutdowns and local unemployment and economic problems," and might even cut into residential gas service in some regions.

And despite efforts to find new gas supplies, the FPC's Bureau of Natural Gas saw no hope of keeping up historic gas production rates.

"Even these accelerated efforts will not provide the basis for a continuation of conventional production at present levels," it said.

Making matters more gloomy for interstate pipelines, it said, was the apparent diversion of new gas supplies into the intrastate market — mainly Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma — where gas is sold inside the state where it is produced. Intrastate sales are not subject to the FPC

40 Years Ago Today

February 2, 1937

The Tar River was standing at 18.1 feet at 8 a.m. today, one foot higher than at the same time yesterday, and was still rising rapidly.

The local weather station here has predicted the stream would reach a high of at least 19 feet by Wednesday or Thursday. The prediction was made before the heavy week-end rains, however, and there is a possibility it will go even higher before it starts to recede. The estimated 19 feet will set a record of several years' standing.

The din of an incessant bombardment on Fascist positions resounded in Madrid today as government cannons roared in retaliation for the insurgent shelling of a southwestern suburb yesterday.

Despite a heavy rain storm, soaked militiamen captured an important factory near La Balstida, south of the capital, a war commune said.

Madrid's defenders said Fascist attacks to regain lost territory along the western edge of the city were repulsed, along with onslaughts in the west and on the road to the northwest.

Open Government Inspires Confidence

President Carter is considering opening cabinet meetings to news coverage.

It sounds like a pretty good idea to us. Granted the coverage would be limited, perhaps with only one pool reporter in attendance.

Still, the move would demonstrate more openness on the part of the new administration; more frankness with the public.

If anything is going to restore the public's faith in its government, it will be more open government at the highest levels.

Local Control Philosophy

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The philosophy underlying North Carolina's Community Schools proposal is local control. If the people want to participate, to build their schools into genuine community centers, the opportunity would be there.

If they do not take part, there would be no action.

"The critical factor is whether people truly want local control... they are gonna have to demonstrate a willingness and an ability," says one top public school official.

Meanwhile, the unrest among school patrons has led to what many consider disturbing directions in the General Assembly and at the State Board of Education — a growing list of state mandates imposed upon local school systems demanding compliance.

State Control

Just a few of those efforts to mandate illustrate the problem: a move to establish starting and quitting times for all teachers, a uniform opening and closing date for schools, legislative fiat that free enterprise will be taught, agitation for a "standard course of study" setting minimum school offerings, and the list goes on.

A Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction, is a strong advocate of local control. He strenuously resisted the free enterprise mandate, and has fought others which he sees as imposing control from Raleigh. The issue, he believes, is whether neighborhood groups will run the schools, with flexibility to respond to unique needs and demands; or will the General Assembly and State Board of Education do the job.

The public, Phillips says, is demanding a partnership role in the schools.

The Community Schools Act put forth by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. is aimed at the heart of this complicated issue. "The public schools belong to the people. We must be open and honest with the people as to how they are doing and involve them in every way possible to improve them," Gov. Hunt said in his speech to the General Assembly.

Some Steps He suggested statewide standardized testing to measure progress with the results "available to parents and to the public... The results... will spur us on to greater support of our schools."

BILL NOBLITT

He also wants a minimum competency test developed as a criteria for high school graduation — to prove ability to look up a phone number, respond to an advertisement, pay a bill.

But above all, the governor urged that we "open up our schools to the people... increase the people's involvement in our schools... to provide grassroots advice and help as needed to our legally constituted school officials."

Here is a brief rundown on the major elements of that Community School proposal which will be presented for legislative consideration: —$2 million in state funds to match local money for units which draw up plans for using school space (gyms, libraries, shops, etc.) for community social, recreational, and educational purposes.

Community Advisory Councils as a way for parents to be involved and to overcome difficulties of feeling apart from the educational process; establishing ways to encourage involvement in school affairs and improvement of communication between school and community.

A task force on discipline to devise ways to attack root problems and suggest cures.

The money would be used to operate the councils, and to hire staff to relieve school administrators of the burdens of scheduling, supervising, and cleaning up for community activities, and to pay cost of heat and lights.

The overall goal, says Hunt, is "to provide a process through which families can become cooperatively involved in identifying problems, in mobilizing and coordinating... work on these... and in offering advice and guidance to each school unit."

THE INSIDE REPORT

Big Obstacle In Rhodesia

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While the Western democracies join in an orgy of recrimination against white leader Ian Smith for blocking peaceful settlement in Rhodesia, the present tragic impasse can be traced to an incendiary speech last fall which made clear black refusal to abide by the terms negotiated by Dr. Henry Kissinger.

The speech by Robert Mugabe, ostensible political leader of Rhodesia's most powerful black guerrilla forces, was delivered to his guerrilla chieftains last September before the Geneva conference even started. He flatly forecast that Geneva would never produce a plan peacefully converting white-ruled Rhodesia into a new black majority nation. His words dripped with hostility for what he called the "Kissinger-British" peace plan.

Smith, prime minister of the white regime, in fact has been considerably more faithful to Kissinger's compromise than Mugabe and other nationalist leaders. To join the present browbeating of Smith by the British will not ease the Carter administration's apparent helplessness in the face of growing Soviet-backed guerrilla war in Rhodesia.

Mugabe spoke in secrecy late in September at Lusaka, capital of Zambia (the former Northern Rhodesia), shortly after Smith accepted Kissinger's plan for black-majority rule within two years. "The question is," said Mugabe, "not to go to a conference and argue which powers each (blacks and whites) will have. What we want is more time to fight and then the Smith government will acknowledge that the time has come to give in."

Diplomatic experts believed Mugabe's secret directive to his guerrilla cohorts was overstated because of vicious political rivalry between him and other black nationalist leaders. Even so, his message left no doubt about his game plan and proved prophetic of what would soon transpire throughout the flawed Geneva conference. Indeed, Mugabe's words helped bring Geneva to its dismal conclusion in December.

Mugabe's exhortation in Lusaka, ignored by the Western press (except the London Sunday Times), stated that "even if the (Geneva) proposals gave 100 per cent black membership of parliament, we would not accept it unless there was total destruction to Smith's army and (its) immediate replacement by (Mugabe's own) forces. When Smith's army is tired, he will come and say, 'Gentlemen, let's talk about the transfer of power.' The only time for negotiations is that time."

In view of the blame heaped on Smith, Mugabe's widely ignored words in Lusaka suggest a different cause for the events in Geneva: "We can be confident in our support from our friends and from the socialist (Communist) countries. We shouldn't worry about the Kissinger-British proposals. They can put in any puppet government they want but a puppet government cannot contain us."

Ironically, then, the post-Geneva record shows that Mugabe's "friends" also include many Western politicians, headed by chief British negotiator Ivor Richard, who are now flaying Smith as

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

There has been considerable discussion concerning the possibility of changing Pitt Tech to Pitt Community College. Allow me a few thoughts on the subject.

First, Pitt Tech was created to provide technical education in the county. If the school changes to a Community College, the technical education sector is likely to be pushed down to second place. The need for technical education in the county is too important to have it relegated to an inferior position.

Second, the creation of a Community College in Greenville will result in much unnecessary duplication between E. C. U. and Pitt Tech. Such unnecessary duplication will cost the tax payer money and resources. The "Community" has a College: it is E. C. U. None other is needed and it is ridiculous to charge the tax payer for two "Community Colleges" so close to each other.

Third, the issue of Community College status for Pitt Tech was put to the tax payers once and was turned down. With this vote in the past, the county commissioners would be foolish to vote community college status for Pitt Tech without first having a referendum to determine if the people of the county want such a change. They have spoken once; if there are people who believe Pitt Tech should become a Community College, they should be most willing to submit the proposed change to the voters.

To sum up, we need a good technical institution in the county and don't need a Community College in its place and if people insist I am wrong in that summation, then at least submit the proposal to the voters.

No Defenses Against Winter

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As the ice vice crushes the local economies of various areas in the Midwest, South and East, residents are awakening to the terrible realization that they have little immediate defense.

It fills rivers with ice, roads with snow and millions of people with fear. It closes thousands of plants, idles hundreds of thousands of workers and causes families to dip into savings to pay fuel bills.

With fuel bills running at least $50 a month more for many homeowners, President Carter's carefully planned $50 tax rebate per person suddenly begins to look like a paltry sum. It might easily be called the fuel bill subsidy.

Administration economists are said to be using a figure of $2 billion to $3 billion as the cost of the big freeze, but there is hardly an economist alive who is certain the real figure won't be much higher.

While the country was ill-prepared for a big freeze, it is just as poorly prepared to assess the economic significance. The figures vary by the billions of dollars.

Quick tallies of the economic toll include mainly the closed plants, the layoffs, damaged crops, the higher fuel bills, the obvious damage to heating and plumbing systems, and the lost retail sales.

But there is other damage too. There is that to river and harbor docking facilities, to roads that will be badly pocked by spring, to wildlife, to shrubs and trees that cannot grow in the salt-saturated soil near highways.

There is the potential damage to local economies by the probable removal of factories to warmer climates. There is the uncertainty that reflects itself in retail sales and which many people gradually were overcoming.

Perhaps the most optimistic views, baffling as it must seem to those with cold apartments and no jobs, is that there isn't a terrible energy shortage at all, and that what damage has been done will be quickly overcome.

The first of these views is said to be contained in an upcoming report by energy experts that the nation's Gross National Product, or output of goods and services, can continue to grow without parallel growth in energy supplies.

Business Week Magazine states that the report to President Carter will suggest that it is even likely that the GNP could triple over the next 40 years without significant energy growth.

How? Through incentives and plant-design improvements that would promote efficiency while alternative sources of energy are being developed.

The question of overcoming the economic damage already done might be viewed as equally unrealistic by skeptics. Still, some economists maintain that lost production will be made up before the end of the year.

The assumptions underlying such expectations are that the icy conditions won't continue, that there will be sufficient fuel to gear up operations to make up for losses, and that retail spending has been delayed but not lost altogether.

Such assumptions might assess too lightly the true situation. There are some meteorologists who believe we have entered a prolonged period of cold, just the fear of this could depress expansion plans of corporations.

There is a serious question also about future spending plans of consumers. Scores of millions of dollars that would have gone into retail purchases have been spent on fuel instead, bringing up the question: How can this loss be made up? Where will the money come from?

When the final bill is in, it might be larger than what is now being tallied. Well after the eastern two-thirds of the nation gets over shivering it might be left with a serious case of economic shakes.

Strength For Today

BEYOND PRICE

General Robert E. Lee, after the conclusion of the Civil War, was once offered $10,000 if he would allow his name to be connected with a lottery scheme. His reply was, "Gentlemen, my name is all I have left, and it is not for sale."

This reply is a bracing reminder that the greatest asset a person has is his or her good name. Lee certainly told the truth when he said that he had nothing else left. He had been the leader of a cause which had met defeat. The government had even confiscated his home. He had nothing left but the memory of a life lived under the command of conscience and a reputation for integrity such as few men in history have possessed.

Most varieties of pride are evil, but the pride one takes in a good name is justified. This is something which cannot be bought. If anyone attempts to sell it, it disappears before the transaction is completed.

responsible for the collapse of Geneva.

Granted that Smith is a political anachronism who represents a tiny fraction of his country's 6 million population, it was not Smith who torpedoed the Geneva conference. "On balance," one of the best informed Western diplomats told us, "the responsibility was more the blacks' than it was Smith's."

Smith's grievous fault was not torpedoing Geneva, where his representatives never departed from the basic settlement formula Smith agreed to with Kissinger. However, he can be faulted for not returning to Geneva for one more effort. That refusal now compounds the U.S.-British contentions to limit Soviet intervention on the side of Mugabe's guerrillas.

President Carter appears defenseless against this rising Soviet intrusion because of congressional refusal to approve U.S. involvement of any kind beyond diplomacy. Without a threat of force or arms, the U.S. can do nothing on behalf of more moderate black nationalists. A story untold until now about Gerald Ford's effort to warn Moscow out of Angola 14 months ago tells why.

In late 1975, with Soviet arms pouring into Angola to supply Fidel Castro's Cuban expeditionary force, President Ford personally warned Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin that if Moscow did not call off the dogs in Angola, the U.S. would react. Soviet arms were immediately reduced.

But on Dec. 17, in the midst of this slowdown, the Senate rejected Ford's request for Angola aid. Moscow at once resumed its operations.

Now, with Mugabe's guerrilla leaders plotting a repeat of Angola in far more strategically important Rhodesia, the Western position in southern Africa has dropped into an abyss. Climbing out of that abyss will not be made easier by political posturing against the unfortunate Ian Smith.

"Let me ask you something," Seltzer said. "How come the newspapers have a little box somewhere with the weather which says 'Sunny, Cloudy, Rain or Sleet,' and television spends 15 minutes telling you about every snowflake in North Dakota?"

"It's a good spot to sell Bayer aspirin or Anacin," I said.

The weatherman had a puppet in his hands. "Let's talk to Ezra about how cold it really is outside. Ezra, if the temperature is 5 below and the wind is 35 knots, and the wind chill factor is 30 below, how do you get your car started in the morning?" Ezra, the puppet, replied, "You send your wife out in her housecoat, ha! ha! ha!"

"I'm still going to kill him," Seltzer said.

price controls that apply to sales across state lines.

To cope with the gas shortage, the report suggested mandatory conservation measures for all gas users, including residential users. And it proposed allocation of gas by state and federal governments to high priority users, such as residential, small commercial and essential industrial customers that could use no other fuel.

"The hour is very late," the report concluded. "The time for action is now." And "now" was heavily underscored in the report.

Just over two years later, within days after taking office, President Carter has asked Congress for authority to allocate natural gas from one interstate pipeline to another, but not from the intrastate market where most new gas supplies have gone.

Neither the Bureau of Natural Gas nor any other agency has a definite plan on how to allocate gas from one region to another.

College Merger Ordered In Ruling On Integration

By BILL RAWLINS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal court order for a black state university to absorb a white state university may result in the first U.S. Supreme Court ruling on racial integration at the college level, lawyers in the case say.

The results could affect predominantly black state universities in every state in the old Confederacy, as well as others in the North. Ultimately, the future of many private black colleges kept alive by transfusions of federal dollars could be at stake.

The issue came to a head on Monday when Judge Frank Gray Jr. of U.S. District Court gave the University of Tennessee at Nashville three years in which to merge into Tennessee State University.

UT officials and lawyers were conferring regarding an appeal, and lawyers said privately an appeal to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is certain. The case likely will end up in the Supreme Court, however the court of appeals decides.

Despite the many U.S. court rulings against racial segregation in public schools — including sometimes conflicting rulings on cross-town busing — since 1954, the Supreme Court never has ruled specifically in a case involving colleges and universities.

In a sense, Judge Gray's ruling requiring UT-Nashville to merge into TSU was similar to a ruling by his fellow federal judge in Nashville, U.S. District Court Judge Clure Morton, requiring desegregation busing within the Metropolitan Nashville school system.

In both cases, the issue was not enforced segregation but effective segregation of formerly black schools. Judge Morton ordered busing for the public schools, grades 1 through 12, as the only way to end this in the Metropolitan school system.

And Judge Gray said merger of UT-Nashville into TSU was the only thing that would end true segregation of TSU.

Like Pearl High School nearby, Tennessee State University was founded 60 years ago for black students when segregation not only was legal but required by state law. This ended in 1954, when the Supreme Court ruled in a Kansas case that segregated schools resulted in unequal education — and outlawed them.

At that time, Tennessee ended forced segregation of all colleges and universities, including Tennessee State, then known as Tennessee A&I. But its black tradition led few whites to enroll.

The lawsuit decided Monday was filed in 1968 by a group of TSU students and supporters seeking to block expansion of what was then a UT extension center in Nashville into a full-fledged campus.

The black group contended that the existence of UT would effectively prevent whites from enrolling at TSU. UT-Nashville was allowed to come into being, but the lawsuit continued.

In the meantime, the state tried a series of experiments, giving TSU exclusive rights to teach certain courses and UTN exclusive rights to others. Still others, including nursing and business administration, were taught at both schools — and Judge Gray said TSU classes in both were more than 90 percent black and UTN classes in both were more than 80 percent white.

"The only truly successful exclusive program is the graduate teacher education training program which was given exclusively to TSU by court order on April 19, 1974," he ruled.

Last fall, he said, there were 313 blacks and 275 whites enrolled in graduate teacher education at Tennessee State, a black majority of only 53 percent.

The lawsuit also sought to speed admission of blacks to predominantly white schools across the state, but Judge Gray ruled this is no longer enough of a problem to require a court order. He also declined to order appointment of blacks to the Board of Regents, which operates TSU, five other state universities and 10 state community colleges, or the UT Board of Trustees, which operates the main UT campus in Knoxville and others at four other cities in Tennessee.

Booklet ...

Three chapters of the booklet explain some of the social graces in the Chinese, Malay and Indian communities, including the proper uses of surnames, introductions, visits to homes, gifts, meals, weddings and religious customs.

Some of the things not to do and how not to do them:

Don't arrive on time at a Chinese wedding "as this may be taken as a sign of greed. It is best to arrive about 20 to 30 minutes late."

Never bring simple gifts to a person's home in odd numbers; rather offer six pieces of fruit, two boxes of candy, etc. "Odd numbers are a sign of death and may cause a feeling of unease."

Don't leave a cup of tea untouched when one is served with a Chinese meal. At least two sips should be taken to avoid seeming rude.

Never stick the chopsticks upright in the rice bowl. "This would be a bad omen as the single chopstick is stuck upright in a bowl of rice at a Chinese funeral to indicate the separation of the person who has died."

Don't be surprised when soup is eaten noisily or a Chinese table companion burps with gusto. "Slurping soup is considered acceptable. Burping is a sign of appreciation."

Never forget to take off your shoes before entering an Indian or a Malay home.

Don't pat an Indian's head, not even a child's. "The head has special significance and honor."

Never offer a gift to an Indian with the left hand. "The left hand is used for hygienic purposes and it is considered to be disrespectful to touch another with it; to handle or receive anything with it or to eat with it."

Don't wear shorts, plunging necklines or backless dresses to an Indian affair.

Never serve pork to a Malay.

Never refuse to eat or drink a little of any refreshments offered to you in a traditional Malay home. "To refuse would be insulting."

Don't hug or kiss in public around Malays. "Displays of affection or physical touching between the sexes are considered to be in bad taste."

vinegar and a dash of oil; mustard and a dab of sour cream; herb-dressed yogurt; or a splash of dry white wine.

Some good ways to enjoy your potatoes in a low-calorie way would include:

Easy Potatoes Au Gratin
3 medium potatoes, peeled, cooked and sliced
1/2 cup coarsely chopped celery
1 can (10-3/4 oz.) condensed cheddar cheese soup
2 tablespoons prepared mustard

In a non-stick 9-inch square baking pan, combine potatoes and celery. Blend cheese soup and mustard; pour over vegetables. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly. (Makes 4 servings, about 80 calories each.)

Saucy Potatoes and Green Beans
3 medium potatoes, peeled and cubed
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1 pkg. (9 oz.) frozen French style green beans
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Cook potatoes with salt and oregano, covered, in 1-inch water for 15 minutes. Add green beans and cook 5 to 10 minutes or more until vegetables are tender. Drain, reserving 3/4 cup cooking fluid.

In cup, blend cornstarch with 1 tablespoon cold water; stir into reserved liquid. Cook, stirring until thickened, about 2 minutes.

Add vegetables and reheat. (Makes 4 servings, about 85 calories each.)

Stores To Adopt Reduced Hours

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Merchants Association says Gov. Jim Hunt's call for a 48-hour business week is "very reasonable" and members will comply.

Virginia imposed a 40-hour week, which created some panic among Tar Heel merchants, but spokesmen said the 48-hour request is fine with them and stores are gearing up for the shorter hours.

Dissenters Insisting Pledges Be Kept

EDITOR'S NOTE — Communist governments of Eastern Europe, which pledged to adhere to principles of human rights at the 1975 Helsinki conference, are faced now with demands by dissidents to live up to those pledges. This last of two articles examines how Communist authorities are dealing with the issue.

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Communist governments in Eastern Europe are resorting to harassment, interrogation and house searches in crackdowns on dissidents who demand that they abide by pledges to guarantee human rights.

Recalling Stalinist days of summary executions and wholesale jailings, the dissidents themselves describe the reprisals now as mild in comparison. But some say the reprisals could get worse.

Halina Mikolajzka is an actress in Poland. She also is a member of a committee demanding human rights for workers arrested or fired for participating in protests last June against government-imposed increases in food prices.

"Somebody's always damaging her car," said fellow Polish dissident Jacek Kuron, a 42-year-old philosopher. "Police in Cracow accused her of stealing a fur coat. Men purporting to be workers call her and say, 'You will be killed. It is very easy to kill a woman.'"

"After the theater, her car doesn't start. Or she receives a box of candy, beautifully wrapped, and inside is a hering."

Kuron himself said he sometimes is awakened by a telephone caller at 5 a.m. and told, "Get up and work, you lazy bum."

"I tell him, 'You should not watch over my sleep, because when I am asleep, I'm not bothering your government.'"

Actress Mikolajzka and Kuron belong to a 20-member Committee for the Defense of Workers formed to demand leniency for the thousands of workers who were arrested or fired for taking part in protest disturbances last June.

In Czechoslovakia and East Germany human rights also is the banner for dissidents.

Repercussions from the Polish, East German and Czechoslovak movements are being felt in Hungary, perhaps the most liberal Kremlin ally, and in Yugoslavia, a Communist nation following a nonaligned course.

At the root of it all is the Helsinki summit conference of 1975 when the leaders of 35 Eastern and Western nations, including President Gerald R. Ford and the Soviet Union's Leonid I. Brezhnev, signed a nonbinding protocol which contained provisions that the signatory governments would recognize the principles of human rights.

But the dissidents in Czechoslovakia claim in a recently issued manifesto called "Charter 77" that human rights in their country "exist only on paper."

In his election campaign, President Carter said he intended to make human rights an essential part of U.S. foreign policy and last week the State Department in Washington accused the Czechoslovak government of violating the human rights provisions of the Helsinki conference because of its actions against "Charter 77" signers.

Many of the East European dissidents say they are Marxists whose only goal is to give communism a better face — essentially the aim of Alexander Dubcek, the Czechoslovak Communist leader who was ousted by a Soviet-led invasion after launching his so-called "Prague Spring" in 1968.

Dissidents and some Western diplomats see the current crackdown by Eastern European governments as an attempt to prevent another "Prague Spring."

Western diplomats say, however, they can find no evidence that the Soviet Union is masterminding the fitful crackdowns.

"For the moment, the Kremlin is standing back and letting them do their own thing — as long as they keep the lid on," said one. But the diplomats expressed no doubt that the Russians would intervene politically and militarily if, as in the case of Czechoslovakia 8½ years ago, they thought their brand of communism was seriously endangered.

In contrast to the Stalinist era, the East European countries are carrying out their crackdowns with kid gloves, as for example:

—In Poland, only about 50 of the thousands initially arrested during the June strikes and rioting remain jailed. Although authorities have declared the Committee for the Defense of the Workers Illegal, they have refrained from arresting the 20 intellectuals comprising the group. But two members, writer Jerzy Andrzejewski and Actress Mikolajzka, have been fined $250 each by an administrative court for soliciting funds to help workers fired or jailed. Of the hundreds who were fired, a majority are reported back at their jobs.

—The hard-line East German regime, according to Western sources, is holding at least a dozen dissidents without charges, including novelist

Juergen Fuchs. Another leading dissident, Prof. Robert Havemann, a physicist, is under house arrest. Protest singer Wolf Biermann was stripped of his citizenship last November after a West German concert tour.

—In Czechoslovakia still haunted by 1968, four dissidents have been jailed for alleged subversion in collusion with unnamed foreign diplomatic missions. Three of those arrested signed "Charter 77." Another 200 signers have been hauled in for protracted police interrogations. Ten or more have lost their jobs. Others have had their telephones disconnected, lost their driver's licenses and been publicly maligned. Playwright Pavel Kohout and his wife were roughed up by police.

—Yugoslavia, which broke with the Kremlin in 1948, admits to having arrested several hundred dissidents and other regime foes in the past five or six years, primarily in the period 1971-75. Dissident sources say the number may actually run into the thousands. Nineteen professors, mostly sociologists and philosophers, were dismissed from universities in 1975, the year of Helsinki, for advocating a more liberal brand of Marxism. There are no known human rights groups currently active in the country, however.

Western diplomats in Poland express a belief that there is no official policy of repression there. Those in Czechoslovakia regard the methodical approach of authorities as a sign of a continuing split between hard-liners and middle-of-the-roads in the leadership.

Ota Sik, the exiled former Czechoslovak deputy premier under Alexander Dubcek, said that unless Communist regimes resort to Stalinist-style repression, the dissident movements in Eastern Europe no longer can be stopped completely.

"But, I would not exclude plained of "terror on the streets" and extralegal measures being taken by authorities. The campaign of defamation against human rights advocates, the playwright said, is unparalleled since the 1950s.

In Warsaw, Kuron maintained that communism in Poland has become more humane, though still restrictive, since the 1956 worker and student uprising marked the end of Stalinist repression. He terms the system that has developed since then "totalitarianism with a human face" — an ironic play on Dubcek's abortive 1968 attempt to introduce "socialism with a human face" in Czechoslovakia.

"A characteristic of this system (of Polish communism) is the way they try not to make any political repression or, if they do, to hide it," Kuron said. "Certainly," he added, "it's very easy to beat up and jail a worker in Radom or Ursus (centers of last June's disturbances) and nobody will ever hear about it. It is very difficult to do the same to a man who is very well known in the country. Of course, in the Stalinist era, there was no problem in killing professors."

The younger Slansky, a signer of "Charter 77," is an economist employed by a Czech construction cooperative.

Playwright Kohout has com-

Still Too Many Jobless Vets

"Unemployment of military veterans continues to be much too high," according to Kendrick Taylor, Veterans Representative with the Employment Security Commission in Greenville.

Taylor said "data clearly indicates that minority veterans, younger veterans and disabled veterans are experiencing a considerably greater unemployment rate than their non-veteran counterparts."

"This is a problem that has continually plagued the Vietnam-era veteran," Taylor added. He noted that employers have also been encouraged to give preference in the hiring of veterans.

The high unemployment rate exists despite the fact that a Veterans Administration study shows that a record number of veterans have received college training under the current GI Bill.

More than 6.7 million persons have trained under the current (Vietnam era) GI bill since it became available in 1966. This is more than the combined total enrolled in college courses under the World War II and Korean Conflict bills.

Taylor mentioned that some veterans are still eligible for educational assistance. Except for persons with dishonorable discharges, veterans who have been separated less than 10 years and those who are now on active duty are entitled to assistance.

Predicts Rise For Hamburger Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hamburger prices are likely to increase this year as grass-fed marketings decline, says Richard Lyng, president of the American Meat Institute, a trade organization.

The increases would follow two years in which hamburger prices remained steady at less than $1 a pound, Lyng said, adding that the figures reflect an increase in grass-fed cattle and marketing of a large number of cows from the breeding herd.

He also said supplies of red meats (beef, pork, lamb and veal) are expected to remain plentiful during 1977, thanks to last year's record corn crop that should encourage continued high marketings and abundant supplies of grain-fed USDA choice graded beef.

Total red meat production is expected to increase slightly due to larger supplies of pork.

Lyng says last year's per capita meat consumption of 192 pounds carcass weight topped all previous records. Beef consumption set a record at 128.5 pounds per capita, up eight pounds over the previous year. Per capita pork consumption rose topped all previous records. SNAKE MEAT FOR HEALTH
NEW YORK (AP) — Many Chinese living in Hong Kong consider snake meat essential for good health during the winter months.

"Snake venom mixed with Chinese wine is considered an aphrodisiac and rheumatism cure," reports an article in the travel magazine, Going Places. "At the herbalist's, you'll find wine drawn from jars in which snakes are pickled," it says. "You'll also find such other standard potions as dried sea horses, deer fetuses and ground tiger bones."

—the transfer from contingency of $550 for the payment for professional services rendered the town during the investigation of Police Chief Marsdon Canady during November;

—a request by the Planning Board that the town attorney, the town engineer, the utilities director, and the town administrator meet with the Planning Board;

—the sale of a portion of Hollywood Cemetery formerly kept by the town as a "beautification area" to Leroy Bass, who had made the request. It was recommended that a similar area adjacent to the Ben Lang plot be offered to Lang for the same price, both prices to be decided upon based on current plot prices;

—transfer from contingency of $1,370 for the second payment on the thoroughfare Planning Study;

—transfer from LEA Funds of $735.37 to the Crime Prevention Program of the Police Department; —amendment of the 1976-77 budget ordinance by appropriation of $13,972.13 and the revenue from state funds in the $735.38 and federal funds in the amount of $13,236.75. This is simply an acknowledgement in the budget of grant moneys received;

—transfer of $93,664.84 from different departments' budgets to the non departmental general fund, $70,227.67; to the non departmental electric fund, $8,794.85; and to the non departmental water and sewer fund, $14,642.32. This is a simplification of bookkeeping recommended by the town's auditor.

—the mayor's appointing of Horace Allen, Jim Craft, Leroy Redden, W. E. Fulford Jr., the Rev. J. R. Person, Jim Hockaday, and Chester Outland Jr. to the Planning Board.

Commissioner Durwood Little suggested that the board meet each month a few days before the Board meeting in workshop session to familiarize themselves with items on the agenda and hold some preliminary discussion, so as to shorten and reduce tedium in the public meeting.

A request by a few citizens that the leash law be reenacted was turned down. "There's no need to have a leash law without a dog warden, a truck, a gas chamber, the whole works," Commissioner Jack Farrior. "Farmville can't afford this, so I don't think we need a leash law."

Commissioners...

the Pitt County Board of Education at their November meeting.

"At the meeting," Cox continued, "I made a brief statement saying I was available to answer any questions. None were asked."

Henry Dunn, chairman of the city school board, said "the county school board members have chosen not to talk to our board on the bond issue. We have requested a meeting with them, but they have never responded."

"That is why," Dunn added, "we have come to you, (the commissioners) to seek guidance and assistance. Since you are the fiscal authority, we needed to get together with you to seek some way to meet our pressing needs. We have the responsibility to students to do everything we can to get money for our school needs."

Commissioner Ed Warren voiced the opinion that the two boards of education must get together. "I can't understand why the two boards cannot get together, work on the problem and come up with some solutions. I simply cannot envision two boards of intelligent people not being able to do this."

Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Commissioners noted that the county school board does have capital outlay needs that will have to be funded. "When they present their needs at budget time," Gaskins said, "we will have to ask them where are they going to get their money from. We have all advocated a bond issue as the way to go. There's only two places for the money to come from. One is the increased tax route, and last year we had the greatest increase in taxes in our history, so I can only see a bond issue as the route to take."

When city school board member Ed Waldrop raised the question about the possibility of a bond issue solely for the Greenville City Schools, attorney W. W. Speight confirmed such an approach was possible.

"A bond issue is different from a tax issue in that the two school boards can come to an agreement with county commissioners to seek a bond issue for one system only," Speight noted. "We had a bond issue of $9 million for the county some years back. The city helped the county a lot in getting it passed. So that approach is possible."

Speight and others commented they did not feel that a bond issue for city schools alone would have much chance to receive a favorable vote. On that viewpoint, several commissioners disagreed, saying they felt voters would support a bond issue if informed and convinced of the needs that existed in the city schools.

Although no definite plans were offered to pursue a bond issue for the schools, the consensus among commissioners and city school board members at the end of the informal meeting is that some

Four Sharing Mission Role

Elders Jon Shumway, Steven Condie, Gary Lemmons and Mark Meldrum are now residing in Greenville as missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The four currently reside at Stratford Arms Apartments. According to the elders, they work under the direction of the North Carolina Mission in Greensboro. The Mormon Church has over 28,000 young missionaries serving in similar capacities throughout the world, it was noted.

They said that in order to share a religious message and to tell more about the Mormon Church, some 12,000 young men and women are called each year to leave their schooling or work for a period of two years, and devote their full time to the job.

The church in this area is located at 307 Martinsborough Road.

Shumway is from Phoenix, Ariz., while Condie is from Grace, Idaho, Lemmons from Salt Lake City, Utah, and Meldrum from Spanish Fork, Utah.

Private Colleges Ask For More

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's 38 private colleges and universities have asked for $200 more in per-pupil state assistance over the next two years. They currently get $400 per student.

A spokesman for the schools said enrollment increased in private schools last year, and for the first time in ten years the percentage of graduating seniors from high school choosing independent colleges had risen.

By The Associated Press
Bright sunny skies with a gentle northwest wind prevailed over North Carolina today under the influence of a high pressure system.

The forecast called for temperatures ranging from the 30s in the mountains to the 40s elsewhere, but with calmer winds it was expected to feel some warmer.

The high pressure system is moving eastward and behind it a complex storm is building through the Plains and into the Gulf of Mexico.

This storm will spread a mixture of rain, sleet and snow into the North Carolina mountains by Thursday afternoon. Rain and possibly sleet are indicated for the western Piedmont.

The forecast calls for cloudy and a little warmer over the eastern part of the state Thursday.

Tuesday's high temperatures ranged generally in the 30s and 40s but brisk northwest winds put considerable chill in the air.

Raleigh-Durham had the lowest reported temperature this morning, 13, followed by Hickory 15, Rocky Mount 16, Asheville and Greensboro 17, Charlotte 18 and Wilmington 26.

OIL SPILL CLEANUP — Workmen are silhouetted against the sun as they vacuum oil from Buzzards Bay at Wings Neck, Mass., with pump lines leading to tank trucks ashore. Private contractors were hired to cleanup about 100,000 gallons of oil leaked Friday night from oil barge which went aground during a storm. (AP Wirephoto)

Marketbasket Prices Going Up

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The first month of the new year brought higher grocery prices and consumers were warned to expect more of the same in the future due to the cold wave.

An Associated Press marketbasket survey showed prices increased during January for a wide variety of items, including pork chops, orange juice, coffee and eggs.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked them on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey came in the face of several discouraging reports. The U.S. Department of Agriculture said Monday that prices paid to farmers for their products went up 1.5 per cent between Dec. 15 and Jan. 15. It was the second monthly increase in a row.

The USDA report did not reflect recent damage to crops, particularly in Florida, because of the below-freezing temperatures east of the Great Plains. The government said generally abundant livestock supplies should hold down meat prices and help offset higher fruit and vegetable costs. But a private economist warned that if the cold continues through March, the nation's food bill could be boosted by $7 billion.

(The Conference Board, a business research organization, says that Commerce Department statistics showed Americans spent $166.4 billion on food in 1974.)

Consumers shopping at the start of February found orange juice prices already were up in some cities, according to the AP survey, although it could not be determined whether the increases were directly linked to the cold.

The price of a six-ounce can of frozen orange juice concentrate increased at the checklist store in six of the cities surveyed, although most of the increases were only a penny or two.

The AP survey showed that the marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in 10 cities during January, up an average of 4 per cent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in two cities, down an average of seven-tenths of a per cent, and was unchanged in the 13th city. On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores was up an average of 3 per cent last month.

The situation represented a slight improvement over December when the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in 12 cities, rising an average 5.1 per cent.

The items on the AP checklist were: Chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M.; Atlanta, Ga.;

Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Prison Terms To Smugglers

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Six men charged with taking part in a massive marijuana smuggling operation were handed prison terms ranging from six months to seven years in federal court here Tuesday.

The six had been charged in connection with a smuggling ring a government witness testified had brought 7½ tons of marijuana into Pamlico County in 1975, loading it into a fishing boat from a large ship offshore and distributing it through facilities of a seafood company.

Charles V. Wilson, a Miami man who allegedly helped establish the operation at the Mayo Seafood Co. in Mesic, got consecutive terms of four years and three years. He pleaded no contest to charges of importing marijuana and possession with intent to distribute.

William C. Hedde, 34, of Florida, was handed a five-year sentence suspended to six-months in prison and five years' probation.

Johnnie B. Armstrong, captain of a fishing trawler that allegedly picked up the marijuana offshore, pleaded guilty to importing. He was sentenced to a two-year term to run concurrently with a three-year sentence stemming from the January, 1975, shipment.

Louis G. Wendler, also of Florida, pleaded guilty to importing and was sentenced to three years and fined $2,000.

John David Steele, former mayor of a Miami suburb and an unsuccessful candidate for Congress, received a five-year term to run concurrently with a 10½-year sentence he had already gotten. He pleaded guilty to conspiracy to import.

Ernest Hugh Mayo, owner of the seafood company, was sentenced to four years in prison on his plea of no contest to conspiracy. The term runs concurrently with the seven years he is serving now.

Computerized Radar Installed

HONG KONG (UPI) — A $1.6 million computerized radar system has been installed at the Kaitak airport to direct the flow of air traffic in and out of Hong Kong.

The equipment, the Secondary Surveillance Radar 990, provides the air traffic control staff at the airport with continuous information on aircraft identity, position and height in all weather conditions within a range of 250 miles, according to Roy Dowling, the director of civil aviation.

"The main advantage of the SSR," Downing said, "is to minimize the need of radio telephone contacts between air traffic controllers at the airport and pilots in the air for exchange of data which will now be seen on the radar screen," he said.

Appetite Makes For Ferocity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports of the wolverine's ferocity are greatly exaggerated, says Dr. Maurice G. Hornocker, head of the wildlife research center at the University of Idaho.

Legend pictures the wolverine, the largest land dwelling member of the weasel family, as a ferocious predator that would tear up a camp or challenge a grizzly bear.

Appetite Makes For Ferocity

Hornocker says the animal harbors no malicious intent. "It's simply a question of trying to find a square meal."

Reflector Staff Writer
Health professionals from 29 Eastern North Carolina counties met here last night to begin work on a long-range program designed to improve perinatal care in the multi-county area.

Perinatal care is special care and treatment of expectant mothers and newborn infants who face special problems which may result in infant mortality unless special treatment is available.

Dr. Richard Nugent, head of the perinatal branch of the Department of Human Resources' Division of Health Services spoke at the meeting of the 36-member committee, outlining the objectives of the program.

Nugent said a task force established in 1972 has recommended the establishment of six regional centers, a dozen district centers and 40 to 50 community centers specially staffed and equipped to offer various levels of treatment.

Greenville, along with Asheville, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Fayetteville, and Durham-Chapel Hill, have been designated as the area centers to receive referrals from the district and community centers, Nugent pointed out.

Talks On Clown Role For Club

WINTERVILLE — Ms. Susan Quinn was the guest speaker at the Sans Souci Book Club meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. Milton May.

Mrs. Quinn, vice president and founder of the Greenville Clown Alley explained how the clown group was organized in Greenville and discussed clowning as a hobby and a skill. She also demonstrated clown makeup application with book club member Mrs. R. E. Carroll.

Mrs. Lyles Russell, president of the club presided at the meeting. The February 21 meeting of the Sans Souci Book Club will be held at the home of Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Graham Olive will direct the program.

Fullilove PTA Meeting Slated

Jim Campbell, president of the Agnes Fullilove School PTA, said the group will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

Officers and members invite the public to share in the meeting.

He noted that the Department of Human Resources initially requested $4.5 million for the program.

"As we plan to roll forward into 1984 and 1985," Nugent continued, "we will need $10 million per year in each of these years in order to reach the total plan as envisioned by the task force."

Satterfield said the committee, over the next year, will "learn what the needs are in the area — equipment, personnel, clinical type care — and what kind of services are being delivered at each facility now," so plans can be made to improve the services.

Tingelstad noted that present plans call for the addition of a neonatal unit at Pitt Memorial Hospital, probably costing $400,000. "This is brick and mortar money," he said, with additional funds being needed to provide the necessary equipment.

He indicated that the unit might be funded as part of the medical school program, but indicated contributions would be welcomed when the program gets underway.

He said the proposed neonatal unit would provide about 35 intensive care beds for infants. When the new hospital opens, Tingelstad said, there will be eight or nine intensive care beds in operation in the hospital nursery.

Nugent noted that efforts are underway now to "further enhance the staffing, facilities and equipment in each of the six regional centers."

For Energy Crisis

No Definite Plans To Cancel Games

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Area administrators are taking a wait-and-see attitude toward the request of Gov. Jim Hunt to cancel or reschedule athletic events due to the energy emergency the governor declared yesterday.

All events scheduled for tonight will go on as scheduled. There is a possibility that before the week is out that at least some changes might be made. But it would appear more likely that fans and players will have to bundle up a little more in the meanwhile, with most events going on as planned in colder gyms.

East Carolina Athletic Director Bill Cain said a check of the university's athletic schedule for the next three weeks showed few problems. "Most of our basketball games are away during this period. The other events at home are usually in the afternoon, so I do not foresee any problems as far as home events are concerned. We will probably take another look at it from week-to-week, however."

Cain said he had not heard from any of the schools East Carolina has events scheduled with on the road about cancellation cancellations or time changes. "We were informed that the VMI Relays (indoor track) had been cancelled, but aside from that everything is as scheduled."

Glenn Cox, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, said he did not expect to have any decision on changes in the city's schedules this week. "I understand that the governor's office is sending out a letter on guidelines, and we want to see that first. We also have a regional superintendents meeting on Thursday, and we want to see what others are proposing so as to be consistent as we can throughout the area."

Cox added that a staff meeting is scheduled for Friday, and that principals would then be polled for their feelings.

"Personally, I feel that we do not want to cancel an event unless it is absolutely necessary. But we can cut the heat back or set a heating schedule and then let the individual teams decide on whether they want to play in the afternoon or in a cooler gym."

Arthur Alford, Pitt County Superintendent, said a meeting with his administrators would be held in the morning, and some policy would probably come out of that meeting. "We have the alternative of playing in the afternoon or at low maintenance levels in the gyms at night. I know that revenue is important, so they may take the latter course."

Alford added that the ninth grade and middle school programs would be asked to cancel the remainder of their schedules or move to the afternoon in all likelihood. "We may also have to do away with any Saturday play." Several teams have games scheduled this Saturday.

Pete Perry, assistant principal at Greene Central High School, said a meeting was underway this morning between the school's principal, athletic director, and the county superintendent to set up a policy.

Comer Griffin, associate superintendent of Martin County Schools, said that as far as he knew, no policy has been decided upon in Martin County. "We have a board meeting on Monday, and I would expect some policy to come from that meeting. There may be some interim decision by the superintendent, but I know of nothing at this time."

The Daily Reflector asks that athletic directors, principals or coaches at the area schools please notify the Reflector Sports Staff of any changes that may be made in the schedules during the coming weeks due to the energy situation.

Any changes of times, sites or dates should be called in as early as possible, so that the Sports Calendar can be kept up to date and coverage of games can be continued without foul-ups.

Farrow, Moye On Top

Farmville Central's scoring duo of Kenno Farrow and Julia Moye continue to lead the scoring in the Pitt-Martin-Greene area, just as they did two weeks ago.

There were a few shifts behind them, with Rose High's Greg Guthrie moving into third place ahead of North Pitt's Virgil Pilgreen, who fell back one slot.

In games through Monday, Farrow had posted a 20.4 average, while North Pitt's Donnie Perkins was hot on his heels with a 19.5 average.

Guthrie followed with a 17.4 margin, while Pilgreen dropped to 16.8. Greene Central's Ernest Thompson held onto fifth place with a 16.3 average.

The second ten included Anthony Bryant of Rose, 16.2, Al Tyson, Conley, 14.9; Barry Wallace, Williamston, 14.9; Frankie Dall, Ayden-Grifton, 14.5; and Eric Davis, Jamesville, 14.3.

Ms. Moye heads the girls' scoring with a 16.2. Patricia Taylor of Bear Grass is second with a 15.7 mark, as the top three positions held. Paula Bennett of Williamston stayed third at 15.4.

McGee Talks Of Past, Future Of Blue Devils

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mike McGee, who got his start as a head football coach at East Carolina, returned to Greenville yesterday for a talk at the Greenville Sports Club.

McGee noted in a jesting manner, that his athletic director, Carl James, had told him to expect two questions: one about the future scheduling of East Carolina, and the other on the possibility of Atlantic Coast Conference expansion.

But strangely enough, neither was asked of him.

McGee did say that the Duke schedule is fairly well set through 1990. "We play Penn State, Michigan, South Carolina, Georgia Tech and Navy next season outside the conference," he said. "It's a typical Duke schedule."

McGee spoke mostly of last year's Duke team and the hopes for the coming year. "We had strong hopes for an improved team," he said. "Although our record did not show it, we do believe that we were improved. We had a strong offense, but we went up against some of the best defenses in the country."

The Blue Devils started the year out with an upset win over Tennessee, then lost to South Carolina. "We had a good experience with Miami, and a good win over Virginia. Then there was a tie against Clemson, a loss to Pitt when we made a good run at them, and a disappointing loss to a great Maryland team."

After a win over Georgia Tech, and a loss to Wake Forest, "we had a happy win over N.C. State and a disappointing loss to North Carolina, in a game that was more like a basketball game."

Most of the Duke offensive line returns, along with rising junior quarterback Mike Dunn. But the rest of the backfield, two defensive backs, one linebacker and both tackles must be replaced.

"We feel like we have a good nucleus, so things bode well," he said.

McGee recalled his first days at East Carolina when he began the conversion from the single wing to more modern offenses. "When I got there, we had only one player on campus, a senior, who had played quarterback. It was quite an experience. The schedule here began to step up that year, too. We played West Virginia and State for the first times. And that year, we had only four men on full four-year grants."

McGee said Duke has signed 13 players so far this recruiting year. "There are a lot more out there who are candidates to come to Duke, and we hope to get a number of them."

Next week's speaker will be former big leaguer and former Duke baseball coach Enos Slaughter.

"I've been shooting pretty well lately," said Monroe, who has hit 51 of his last 72 field goal attempts at Madison Square Garden. "This one felt as good as the others. Sometimes you know it's going in. It's a good feeling."

Golden State's Rick Barry had that feeling moments later — but he was wrong.

After a timeout had moved the ball to midcourt, the Warriors' Gus Williams inbounded it to Barry deep in the right corner. Golden State's golden boy spun towards the basket

Nevada-Las Vegas Survives Scare

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
"Bradley played us off our feet," Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian noted. But the Rebels managed to land right side up against the upset-minded Braves.

Fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas survived the scare by Bradley and recorded a 107-106 victory at Peoria, Ill. in the top college basketball game in the nation Tuesday night. The victory was the Rebels' 17th against one loss.

College Roundup

"Bradley played a great game," Tarkanian added, after Robert Smith's two free throws with five seconds left offset a 46-point output by Bradley's

Roger Phegley. "We got nine up and I thought we were going to blow them out, but they came back. "We had nobody who could guard Phegley. I didn't believe he could do that to us." The Rebels were led by Eddie Owens' 31 points, while the 7-12 Braves also got 26 points from Bobby Humbles.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, No. 11 Tennessee ripped Georgia 106-82 and remained undefeated in South-eastern Conference play, 15th-ranked Providence beat St. Bonaventure 82-75, and Clemson squeaked past North Carolina State 60-59 after losing star center Wayne "Tree" Rollins because of a leg injury.

Elsewhere, Notre Dame topped Dayton 97-64, West Virginia upset Virginia Tech 86-78, Houston defeated Texas Tech 94-87 in a fight-marred contest and bad weather in the Buffalo area forced cancellation of Buffalo State-Niagara and Canisius-Buffalo.

Tennessee appeared to have recovered from its rout by UCLA Sunday. Ernie Grunfeld scored 32 points and SEC scoring leader Bernard King added 26 for the Vols, who are 9-0 in the conference and 15-3 overall.

Bruce Campbell tallied 22 points and Joe Hassett 16 as Providence improved its record to 17-2 with its victory over St. Bonaventure.

Jim Wells replaced the injured Rollins early in the second half for Clemson, scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, leading a furious Tigers comeback. He scored 14 of the last 26 Clemson points, including a tip-in that put the Tigers head 58-57 with 58 seconds left. Colon Abraham hit two free throws with nine seconds remaining, for the decisive points.

After the Wolfpack's Clyde

Austin scored an uncontested layup with three seconds to go, N.C. State stole Clemson's in-bounds pass, but Kenny Carr's shot went through the basket after time had expired.

Notre Dame took charge against Dayton in the first half, hitting 25 of 38 field goals and building a 60-33 lead. Bruce Flowers paced the 11-5 Irish with 20 points.

West Virginia surprised Virginia Tech on the loser's court, shooting 59.2 per cent from the floor. The Mountaineers broke open the game at the start of the second half with a 10-2 burst. Otis Birdsong scored 31 points in Houston's victory, which was marred by a bench-clearing fight in the first half.

Houston's Kenneth Williams and Tech's Mike Edwards exchanged blows as Williams readied to shoot a free throw.

Sloan Moans State's Loss

By The Associated Press
"When you lose," sighed North Carolina State coach Norm Sloan, "you make a lot of dumb decisions. When you win you're a genius. So you're looking at a dumb man." Sloan was reflecting on the Wolfpack's last-minute loss to 16th-ranked Clemson Tuesday night, 60-59. The game was to settle the two teams' tie for second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball standings.

cover from the loss of Tate Armstrong, still out with a broken wrist.

"Our kids are working hard, though," said Duke coach Bill Foster, "and that's all I can ask."

The Deacons sit astride the conference with a 5-1 record, and probably aren't expecting much of a contest.

In other conference action tonight, Maryland hosts last-place Virginia. The Terps are still smarting from last Saturday's loss to George Washington, their first such debacle in 16 years.

"My wife said maybe we did something for humanity, because they were so happy over there," quipped Maryland coach Lefty Driesell, adding, "We've done enough for humanity, and for doctors too."

The Terps have suffered a rash of injuries, led off the day before their season opener by Driesell's own ruptured Achilles tendon, which is just now out of the cast.

"We've had more injuries this year than any team of mine has ever had," Driesell said. "Maybe I started it off by being a bad example."

ECU Coaching Changes Made

East Carolina University head football coach Pat Dye has announced two changes in his coaching staff.

Ken Hutcherson, coach of the defensive ends last year, will coach the running backs this season. Greg Troupe, a parttime coach last season, has been hired as a fulltime assistant coach and will handle the defensive ends.

The changes in the Pirate staff resulted when Wright Anderson resigned his position to become an assistant coach at the University of Illinois. Anderson was in charge of the running backs during his three years at East Carolina.

"I'm very happy to announce these two changes," said Dye. "I'm much more on hiring individuals than coaches, and in this case, I think our staff is very fortunate to be gaining two super individuals."

"Coach Hutcherson came here as a graduate assistant and has done a very fine job for us. I think he'll do a great job with our running backs. Greg Troupe worked with our defensive line last year and our defensive scout team. He should find the move real simple. Again, I think we are fortunate to have a graduate assistant capable of moving up. It's good to make adjustments within."

Hutcherson came to East Carolina in 1975 from Eau Gallie, Fla., where he was head football coach at Eau Gallie High School. During the past two years, Hutcherson has been responsible for computer scouting, dorm life, Greenville area recruiting, the training table, as well as coaching the defensive ends. He's a 1969 graduate of the University of Miami (Fla.).

Troupe starred at East Carolina as an offensive guard for the 1972 and 1973 Southern Conference champions. He was twice named all-conference and was selected to play in the Blue-Gray game as a senior.

Upon graduation, Troupe played the 1974 season with the Honolulu Hawaiians of the World Football League, and the 1975 season with the Charlotte Hornets.

In the fall of 1975, Troupe served as a graduate assistant coach at Duke University, working with the defensive line. He then joined the East Carolina staff last year as a parttime coach.

ACC Roundup

Now N.C. State is third at 4-3 and Clemson is all alone in second at 5-2.

"I couldn't be more pleased," said Clemson coach Bill Foster, who has been saying that a lot lately. His Tigers are turning out to be the league spoilers.

Foster watched his team come back from a 30-18 half-time deficit, slowly gaining ground until the winning points just seconds before the buzzer.

"I think we showed a lot of poise by not trying to go out there and make up all the points in five minutes," Foster said.

Tonight's ACC action offers upset possibilities, as crippled Duke, languishing in sixth place, goes after fifth-ranked Wake Forest in Durham. Duke hasn't managed to re-

Watching The Whoopers

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — The show starts every day an hour before dusk. With luck, one of the cast will be a special celebrity: a whooping crane.

"Look that way," Dick Rigby instructed, pointing north. "They feed in cornfields there all day long and all of them are back before dark."

Through binoculars, weaving threads of black laced the ginger sky and then the overture began, a distant, eerie trilling that grew ever louder, closer, tightening the pores.

Without sufficient warning they were overhead, just overhead, so low they seemed almost within touch, and there were tens of thousands of them, ducks frantically flailing the darkening sky, majestic snow geese in chevrons of white barking a high-pitched arrival song, squadrons of raucous Canadas, and at last the cranes, lordly birds, long necks outthrust in rightful disdain of all lesser creatures that fly.

"There's one! There's a whooper!" Rigby cried.

And there it was. As the formation winged past the curtain of a mountain, the whooper appeared as a single glistening pearl in a pale gray strand.

The formation circled, listening to the invitations of thousands of insistent kin to come join them on the ground for the night, and finally chose a group bedded down in an appealing marsh 200 yards away.

The whooper took up a position on the edge of the great gathering of his dusky cousins.

WHOOPING CRANES — A whooping crane chases another which invaded its territory at a wildlife refuge. In an experiment, wildlife officials are attempting to have sandhill cranes raise their cousin whoopers to keep the whooping cranes off the endangered species list. (AP Wirephoto)

Do the sandhill cranes make him keep his distance?

"No," Dick Rigby said. "He has a place in the pecking order like all the rest, but he's not rejected. They don't seem to notice he's any different."

But he is. Different and special.

The whooper is one of six wintering in New Mexico in an experiment, successful so far, aimed at starting a second flock of the rare breed in North America and thus removing them from the endangered species list.

Sandhill cranes are their foster parents. Dick Rigby is their godfather.

Rigby, a big, bluff man with a hard voice and a gentle nature, is manager of the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge, a 57,000-acre sanctuary of life situated, with glaring irony, about 25 miles from the site of history's first atom bomb test.

"My job is to watch over them, see that they are well fed and able to get through the summer at the nesting ground and get back here for winter."

The experiment was the brainchild of Roderick Drewien, an expert on cranes at the University of Idaho and a pal of Dick Rigby's. It was Drewien's idea to steal whooping crane eggs from the great birds' only nesting site, in far north Canada, and put them in sandhill crane nests at the sandhill nesting site in Idaho.

So if the experiment works there will be two whooping crane flocks, the second one flying side by side with the sandhills between Idaho and New Mexico.

Samuel Johnson's 18th-century dictionary defines oats as "A grain which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people."

Claims He Can Turn Garbage Into Fuel; Nobody Will Listen

MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charles Besser believes he could end the natural gas shortage and become a rich man, if only somebody would listen.

The 72-year-old heating and plumbing contractor has developed a system which he says takes in any biodegradable material, from raw sewage to dead leaves, and produces methane gas and an odorless liquid fertilizer.

Besser has built a working model of his "anaerobic digester" at his house. Gas from the plant is used in some gas lights in his house, in an outdoor grill and to partially heat his home.

With his working model as evidence, Besser and some friends have peddled the system to various businesses and government agencies, but one has offered to buy.

Besser, an earthy man who has come up with several chemical and mechanical inventions since his youth, says he is astounded at the calculated rejections his latest invention has gotten.

"A bunch of PhDs and educated fools won't listen to a man with practical sense," he says. "They say wait 'til something has to be done for energy. Hell, I say do it now."

What he has done at his own house is underlay the soil with tanks, pipes and machinery. His own plumbing system feeds into the digester instead of into the city sewage lines.

In his yard is an outsized garbage disposal and it feeds food scraps, leaves and anything else into the system. "I once saw him feed a dead dog into that thing," says a friend. After the disposal has finished its growling, material mixes with a series of compounds in various tanks. A compressor squeezes the gas into two tanks.

The only other product is the liquid fertilizer, which Besser says helps keep his yard greener than his neighbor's.

Besser admits his system would probably be too expensive for individual homeowners, but he designed it on a grander scale for factories or entire cities.

He contends that his system could take raw sewage flowing out of Charlotte and produce enough energy to heat all the city's houses, and it would handle the city's waste.

"We throw away enough stuff every year to run the whole country," he says.

Besser has a patent pending on his system, which he says he spent four years and about $70,000 developing. He has sent sets of blueprints and evaluations from chemical laboratories to government agencies in hopes of getting a federal grant.

But he keeps getting replies such as the one from the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). ERDA told him it was only interested in proposals "if they contain something new, novel and unique," and his did not.

Besser has a few choice words in response. Put mildly, he contends his system is far more efficient than any other gas generator, and besides, if it's not new, why aren't the systems being built?

He says he told the managers of a local industry he could build such a unit for $215,000 and save the company $26,000 a year in gas bills.

"I never heard nothing from them," he says. "They ran out of gas and had to shut down last week."

A cobra's hood is actually produced by the snake's ability to extend the ribs immediately behind its head when it is angry or disturbed.

Office Space Is At Premium

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Chicago real estate firm says office space is at a premium in some parts of the country and is expected to intensify over the next two years. The Howard Ecker Co., which surveyed office leasing firms in 12 cities, said the study showed business firms are "rapidly" taking over vacant office space and creating shortages in many cities.

Insurance Loss

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Insurance Information Institute estimates U.S. property and casualty insurers had more than $2.2 billion in underwriting losses last year. The estimate includes statutory underwriting losses of some $1.8 billion and $434 million in dividends to policyholders.

which could lead to a major breakthrough University. The main project, to be carried out by Dr. R. G. Sommerville of the Bacteriology Department, will involve identifying people from blood stains. "Human blood," says Dr. Sommerville, "contains various antibodies produced in reaction to bacteria or viruses entering the bloodstream during infections such as flu, colds or other diseases. "Since every individual's exposure to infection is different, what we are hoping is that the levels of the different antibodies in any sample of blood will enable forensic scientists to build up what you might call an 'antibody profile' which will be unique to an individual in the same way that his or her fingerprints are." The other project, which will be carried out at the same time, is an investigation of the various proteins found in saliva. The man in charge, Dr. J. Beely of the Department of Dentistry, says the general principle is the same as that involved in the antibody investigation. "What we are hoping," he says, "is that everybody will have a different saliva 'fingerprint' according to the levels of the various proteins that are found."

The bidding:
 North East South West
 Pass 3 ♥ 3 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass Pass Dble.
 Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Two of North America's opponents in the 1977 World Team Championship have already been determined. Argentina will represent South America, and Taiwan, by winning the Far East Championships in Auckland, New Zealand in November, will be that zone's team.

Perhaps the star of the Taiwan team is 34-year-old Patrick Huang. He first won the Far East Championships in 1963 when barely out of his teens. Here is a sample of his skill.

Despite an attempted barrage by East, Huang would not be kept out of the bidding. North raised to game and West, thinking he was looking at three sure tricks in his own hand, ventured a double.

The opening lead of the jack of hearts was won by declarer's queen, and the ace of spades confirmed declarer's suspicions that the trumps were 3-0. It was now tempting to lead another trump, but declarer realized that that could end in defeat. West could win the trump, reach his partner by leading a low diamond to the king and ruff away the ace of hearts. He would then exit with a club, and declarer would eventually have to concede a heart trick.

Huang's solution was simple and totally effective. He first cashed the ace-king-queen of clubs, then led a second round of trumps. West won the king, led a low diamond to the king and ruffed declarer's ace of hearts. However, he found he had not gained a trick, for Huang's farsighted play had stripped West of his safe exit cards.

West was left with nothing but minor-suit cards. If he exited with a club, he would give declarer a ruff-and-sluff; a low diamond would permit declarer to play dummy's jack and discard his losing heart; and the ace of diamonds would be ruffed, setting up the jack for a heart discard.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. ## Vignettes Are The Rule For Valentines

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Humorous, heartwarming stories involving people and romance are a natural by-product of St. Valentine's day, says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins, who collects them.

One husband took his wife into domestic relations court complaining she had received 27 valentines from her "circle of boy friends." In court the woman sheepishly admitted to the judge that one person had sent them all — herself.

Some years ago TV personality Garry Moore surprised his wife on Feb. 14 by hiring four sky-writing planes to draw a heart three miles wide, pierced by an arrow six miles long, with Garry and Nell written inside.

In England romantics no longer send valentines in the form of checks on the "Bank of Love." They were banned for looking too much like the real thing.

Two New Series Worth Watching

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two advisories: Don't miss tonight's premiere of NBC's new "Tales of the Unexpected." And Thursday, be sure to see NBC's new fantasy series, "The Fantastic Journey."

The former is a suspense anthology, tonight's episode concerning a newspaperman (Roy Thinnes) who winds up on the receiving end of pure terror while posing as a death row inmate for a capital punishment story.

"Journey," a series with continuing characters, uses the famous "Bermuda Triangle" — ships and planes mysteriously vanish there, they say — off the Florida coast as its premise for proceeding.

It gets off to a rousing start Thursday as a boatload of folks who disappear in the Triangle in mid-1976 wind up with other citizens of past and future centuries, also Triangle victims.

Set on an island, it's a fascinating blend of "Swiss Family Robinson" and "Star Trek," with a little "Twilight Zone" thrown in for good measure. It's a mind-stretcher the entire family can enjoy.

But keep the tots away when tonight's "Tales" starts at 10 p.m. EST because its realistic, frightening depiction of the last moments of a condemned man before he's strapped into a prison's electric chair.

Reporter Thinnes is there to witness the execution. He believes and has written that the terrified wretch is innocent, the victim of a botched, hurried investigation by a police detective played by Ned Beatty.

He can't bring himself to watch them throw the switch. He steps out of the death chamber, as does Beatty, whom he bitterly assails for causing, as later proved, the death of an innocent man.

Ten years pass. Capital punishment is gone. But a recent Supreme Court decision paves the way for its resumption, a prospect that deeply disturbs the crusading reporter.

So, with the support of his editor and a sympathetic warden, he's booked into death row, posing as a convicted murderer, to truly experience life there, to rouse public opinion against capital punishment.

Only he, the warden and the editor know of the plan. Unfortunately, the "keeper" of death row turns out to be Beatty, who took the job after the reporter's attacks on him ruined his police career.

Revenge Time. And it comes, horrifyingly. But the ending — well, let's just say you can expect two surprises in the finale.

Both tonight's "Tales" and Thursday's "Journey" are well-crafted, well-acted and wholly entertaining. If they're indicative of things to come, NBC has two real winners on its prime-time schedule.

Sugar Ray Encourages Kids To 'Make Right Turn'

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — What is the answer for a street-wise kid, experimenting with narcotics and learning that crime is a way of life? "Competition, involvement," says Sugar Ray Robinson.

"Competition gives them a reason to try. It means an awful lot. And you don't have to worry about them when you've got them involved."

Sugar Ray Robinson, who retired his middle-weight boxing crown in 1965, is on the way to becoming another kind of champion — a defender of lost and alienated youngsters.

He is doing this with the Sugar Ray Youth Foundation. It began in the core area of Los Angeles. Now it is being adopted in other parts of the state. There are 4,300 youngsters involved. Sugar Ray and his associates hope it will eventually be a national group.

"The difference between this group and other youth-help organizations," one of his associates said, "is just Sugar Ray. It's the heart of the man."

Robinson, at 55, heavier and appearing softer — but not much — than his ring days, tells his own story by way of explaining his desire to help children.

"Childhood, I wanna tell you. I did everything that was to be done. Me and all the guys then. We were always in a bunch, all the kids on the block. Stealing. I did everything. Except snatching purses.

"I always use to think of my mother. I couldn't do that.

"But you had to be one of them, one of the group. In Detroit, then in New York in Hells Kitchen. That's where I started to live.

"I didn't have a father. Momma was working. She did laundry. There was me and two sisters in one room and it was the depression times.

"But I had the encouragement to take the right turn. I always, since I was a kid, believed in God. We had to go to Sunday school and come back and tell our Mom what it was about. I was happy I grew up with this belief. When I was in a training camp, I use to get the Bible and read Bible stories.

"I believed, but it's very difficult to believe in something you've never really known, just what you hear."

When he retired from the ring, he was concerned about the growth in juvenile crime.

"This juvenile crime is growing," Sugar Ray says. "People are going to wait until it's chaos. We keep putting them in jail, and that's not the answer. All we do is chastise. It's not right. Kids need guidance when they're young. Wait until they're 20 or 21 and it's too late."

"At the time, I was invited over to England and I was talking to Prince Phillip at a birthday party. He suggested that I could do something, start an organization. He gave me the idea."

The foundation began in the back room of a church. There was no money. But Sugar Ray had the help of a lot of volunteer work from friends.

"Then we got together with the board of education and started programs in the schools.

"We built competition, this school against that school. And finally the county Board of Supervisors funded us and we had the money to work with and we started to expand quite a bit. We grew like wild flowers.

"Then the state Assembly heard about us and gave us some funds to expand and we did. They even put us in the state budget."

The foundation now operates in schools throughout Los Angeles and Orange counties in California and in Las Vegas, Nev. It was made a charter member of the Los Angeles Social Service Department in 1969 and received tax exempt status from the U.S. Treasury Department that year. It has no religious, political or racial barriers. Its concept, Robinson said, is "children in general, hard core and dropouts in particular."

There are no paid members of the board of directors which includes many celebrities. Year around programs of athletics, arts and crafts projects and participation in fine and performing arts are provided along with the athletic games. Trained counselors work with boys and girls aged 8 to 16.

"Most of our kids come from single-parent homes," Sugar Ray said. "That's one of the bad things. You know, a boy has to have masculine direction. And most of them have to work, too. I've been like a dad to so many kids. I know what it is."

The youngsters get into the programs usually through their schools. Most are chosen from recommendations by school principals and juvenile law enforcement officers. Others just ask to get in.

"They look for recognition and a chance to perform, compete. All kids love that. Get them under 16. There has to be some kind of activity in a young kid's life."

The Sugar Ray Foundation tries to provide that activity and, in the process, as he puts it, "the encouragement to take the right turn."

Driftwood Provides A Livelihood

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Richard Zachary crawls around in swamps for a living.

What he's actually doing is hunting cypress driftwood to sell at a Baton Rouge flea market. But it's also a labor of love.

"I've never felt as close to God as I do back in the swamps," said Zachary in explaining his trips into the swamps of the Atchafalaya Spillway. "It's God's country back there."

Once a week, he makes a run into the swamp, emerging with a bateau full of muddy cypress discoveries, odds not so easily spotted by a neophyte.

Customers at the flea market tell Zachary they often "go fishing in the swamps, but never find the wood."

"You have to understand the movement of the water, the flow of currents, to understand where the wood is found," Zachary said.

Zachary has been interested in cypress for nearly 16 years. He reverses cypress trees, never cutting a single piece. He collects only the fallen portions.

The worn, smooth pieces he brings out of the swamp are from trees that fell more than 500 years ago.

"Intricate designs are created throughout the wood by a fungus which begins eating in the tree when it is 200 years old," said Zachary. "When the cypress tree is destroyed by lightning, dredging of canals or rapping of cypress crops, the fungus is washed away, leaving unusual pieces of wood.

"Each piece is unique. There are no duplicates. Everyone who sees the wood likes it."

One problem a cypress driftwood hunter faces is cleaning. The swamp wood is coated with mud and it may contain insects. For years, Zachary worried about proper cleaning while maintaining natural cypress color and shape.

"Sand-blasting, steam and soap are possibilities when cleaning," he said, "but I've finally found the best cleaning process." He will not disclose what his method is.

"I present all my wood as nature does, minus the mud. No varnish or stain is used," he said.

A Prince Charming Of Yesterday Now Author

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor

Yesterday's prince charming is today's grandfather, and author.

Peter Townsend, the handsome group captain who failed to win the hand of Princess Margaret in 1955, because he had been divorced, has written a book on the princess's father, King George VI, "The Last Emperor" (Simon and Schuster).

Townsend, whose princely qualities are inherent, not inherited, was born in Rangoon, Burma. He commanded a fighter squadron during the Battle of Britain in World War II and later was asked to join the British royal household as a personal aid to the king.

Now 62, Townsend lives in France, the happily married father of five. He has two grandchildren.

Princess Margaret, whose royal obligations forced her to reject his proposal of marriage, went on to marry Antony Armstrong Jones, also a commoner, from whom she is now separated.

Asked during an interview if he thought the outcome of his romance with the princess would be different in today's more permissive society, Townsend replied with perhaps a trace of sadness: "I would think that a different public and legislative attitude would be taken today. I would think so."

He went on to explain that "everything would depend on whether the Royal Marriages Act of 1772 was abolished by Parliament."

Briefly, Townsend said, the Act forbids any descendant of George III to contract a marriage before the age of 25 without the sovereign's permission.

Princess Margaret had waited until she was 25, Townsend said, which freed her from the queen's veto. But the Royal Marriages Act continues: If the sovereign, in Margaret's case, the queen, does not approve of the marriage then the royal person in question must give notice to the Privy Council and within one year Parliament may veto it or approve it.

England, you're in permanent contradiction with yourself. Like Koko in 'The Mikado' who was Lord High Executioner. He committed some crime and had to chop off his own head."

But even if the Act were abolished, enabling a royal person to marry whom he or she wished, there would still be the question where to marry, Townsend said. "The church still says 'we can't remarry you,' and I don't argue with the church."

"Personally, I don't go to church very often, but I'm a religious person. No airman I think can't be."

Despite his defeat at the hands of "a powerful body of opinion, I say powerful, not numerous" during his courtship of Princess Margaret, Townsend still holds the British royal family in high esteem and affection as is evident in his book.

While he does not hesitate to agree that the book is not the "intimate account" it is purported to be, it does peek behind the scenes from time to time to show George VI to be an able and concerned monarch during a period of tremendous turmoil in the world.

Townsend rejected a request to do a biography of the king. "I suppose it was rather expected of me to write a portrait of the king during the eight years that I knew him and I wasn't keen to do this. But then I got the idea that when Queen Victoria celebrated her Golden Jubilee in 1887 the British Empire was at its pinnacle of power, the world was at the Great White Queen's feet, the New York Times wrote and said that 'we are proud,' the Americans are proud, to belong if only indirectly to this vast body of nations, and that the British were obviously destined to govern a quarter of the globe for some centuries to come. Fifty years later it was finished. So I thought, well, how did it happen. And this is the story I tried to tell."

Eleven Were In Olympics

Eleven special athletes from Greenville were in Charlotte this past weekend to take part in the State Special Olympics Basketball Tournament. The trip was sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The mayor of Charlotte welcomed participants from across the state. Music was provided by the Statesville Grenadier Band.

Participants took part in Run, Dribble, and Shoot competitions, both as individuals and as teams.

Those from the Greenville contingent receiving Run, Dribble and Shoot medals were: Charlie Heath, Gregory Daniels, and Jessie Carman, gold medals; and Donnie Davis and Carl Joyner, silver medals.

Greenville winners in the team members category were Ollen Peadar, Donnie Holland, Ronnie Holland, Ben Moore, Tim Harper, and Raymond Powell, all recipients of silver medals.

The Greenville team placed second in the Division I Senior Boys Competition.

Townsend used four peoples, the Irish, the Indians, the Burmese and the Jews in Palestine, to tell his story. "What irked them, got under their skins, was 'why should we be governed by a foreign king'."

"The Jewish struggle ... was very distressful in my feeling. I remember I was with the king at the time and it was an unfortunate business because Jews and British — English — are brought up on the Bible. The Bible is everything. You had two people whose whole civilization and thinking is founded on the Bible and they were cutting each other's throats."

In his book, Townsend quotes Joseph Kennedy, then ambassador to the Court of St. James's, as saying, "The war will ruin Britain. But the British decided that Hitler could not exist in this world. Hitler had everything lined up. We know now whom he had appointed as the chief Gauleiter of Britain and we know what he was going to do to every Englishman between 17 and 45. They were to be deported or castrated, heavens knows what, and I would have been one of them. Not a very happy thought."

The state of Britain today, he said, can be traced back to World War II and even further back to the first world war. "The British lost just about one million men in the first world war and about half a million in the second. And in the first world war particularly she lost her young generation, 20s to 30s ... the flower of British youth were killed off."

Today Townsend sees "Britain's role and France's role and the role of some of the older European nations ... as a moral one, insisting on justice between people rather than trying to puff themselves up and get powerful."

"Britain may get rich again. I think that's quite possible. I know it's a platitude to say that Britain loses all the battles and wins the war, but there is a lot of truth in that. But I don't see the conception of empire. It won't occur again."

Fuel Conservation Is Helping But Cost Runs High

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

Conservation measures appear to be easing the drain on natural gas supplies, but the long-run costs will be high. A federal energy official said today that factory closings and layoffs that are saving gas this frigid winter could last until April.

In Washington, meanwhile, the House and Senate were expected to approve a compromise version of the emergency natural gas bill today and send it to President Carter. The emergency bill is not designed to increase natural gas supplies, but to give the president the power to shift some gas from low-priority users to high-priority users through April 30. High-priority users include homes, hospitals, schools and small businesses. Low-priority users include industries.

Over thousands of miles of American countryside today, the misery of the harsh winter was evident.

In paralyzed Buffalo, N.Y., which has had 160 inches of snow since the beginning of the year, 200 Army engineers were being flown from North Carolina to help 500 National Guardsmen clear the latest, and worst, storm's snow from the streets. Otherwise the streets were deserted. An occasional rescue vehicle passed, or a military helicopter droned overhead. Great chunks of ice choked Niagara Falls.

On the Chesapeake Bay and the Ohio River, fuel barges which were idled for up to two weeks were moving again. But their progress was tedious through floes of ice.

In West Virginia and Kentucky, more than 30,000 coal miners were off the job, their mines shut down because of the cold.

Thousands of schools and facties also were shut and about a dozen states had declared energy emergencies.

On Tuesday, North Carolina joined the ranks of states declaring such emergencies, and the auto industry alone announced that 80,000 workers in the United States and Canada would join some 1.5 million persons estimated to be laid off around the nation. In the auto industry, parts shortages were a factor as well as gas shortages.

The harsh weather has centered in the East, Midwest and South, but the problem was national in effect and both the federal government and some distant areas were acting to help.

Warm California, meanwhile, imposed emergency restrictions on the use of natural gas so state utilities could ship some of the fuel east. And a spokesman for the Southwest Gas Corp. said two utilities in Nevada had agreed to convert from natural gas to oil in a shared power plant, allowing their natural gas to be diverted also.

But the outlook for immediate relief was not good. Even if President Carter immediately ordered pipeline companies to begin sending fuel into the frigid East, gas moves only about 15 miles per hour and could take several days to pass through the interstate pipeline network to Ohio and other states.

And Federal Power Commission spokesman William Webb said today that factories forced to close by the natural gas shortage may have serious difficulty finding enough fuel to reopen before April.

Today's forecast promised little relief for the hardest-hit areas: Continued cold in the East, with snow flurries near the Great Lakes.

These were some of the severe weather's effects around the country:

—In Michigan, after a weekend blizzard, winds dropped and snowfall slowed Tuesday. But National Guardsmen stayed on weather duty in three counties and on standby in a fourth. Lake Michigan showed open water for only about 15 miles near Chicago.

—In Maryland, the Federal Energy Administration is allowing Baltimore Gas & Electric to use liquid naphtha to produce synthetic gas to meet about 8 per cent of its needs. Two fuel barges made it up the ice-clogged Nanticoke and Wicomico rivers Tuesday but one official said only eight had reached Salisbury in the last 16 days and under normal conditions 45 would have made the trip.

—In Pennsylvania, natural gas shortages were keeping about 20 per cent of the state's 5,200 schools closed for the rest of the week. Paul Smith, state secretary of labor and industry, estimated about 135,000 people would be laid off by the end of the week.

—The Labor Department ordered payment of unemployment insurance benefits in 18 eastern states speeded up through emergency procedures that cut red tape. It also is making available an additional $10 million under a federal job training program to hire snow removal, fuel transport and other crews in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Virginia.

—Massachusetts uses relatively little natural gas, relying instead on home heating oil. Now inventories are low and Gov. Michael S. Dukakis ordered temperatures kept at 65 degrees in all state buildings. Meanwhile, in Buzzards Bay, the Coast Guard tried to keep 100,000 gallons of the oil, which spilled from a barge, away from beaches. Much of the oil is trapped below ice, and an attempt to set it afire Monday ignited only a fraction.

Texas-Size Price Asked

LAREDO, Tex. (AP)—If the snowbound Northeastern states want Texas' natural gas, they ought to be willing to pay Texas-size prices, says a Laredo-based gas producer.

Antonio R. Sanchez Jr., president of Sanchez-O'Brien Petroleum Corp., said Tuesday that Texas has enough natural gas to supply its homes and industries because "the people ... have suffered through high prices in order to attain adequate supplies."

"Why should we be asked to turn this gas over to the people of the East Coast, people who were unwilling to permit construction of refineries and drilling offshore?"

Sanchez said Texans pay more than East Coast consumers but have more gas available because a free market exists in the state.

Texas natural gas generally sells in the state for $2 per thousand cubic feet. However, it is sold in the interstate market at about $1.40 per thousand cubic feet because government regulations set the price levels.

Sanchez, whose company sells its gas to South Texas cities from fields along the coast and the border, said natural gas is expensive to find and producers are not about to invest in a risky operation to sell their product at prices fixed by the government. He said deregulation of interstate gas prices would avoid crises like those plaguing the upper East Coast.

CP&L Sees New Record

RALEIGH (AP) The severe cold weather the week of Jan. 16-22 caused customers of Carolina Power & Light Co. to use a record-breaking amount of electricity.

The company said Tuesday there was a record peak demand of 5,512,000 kilowatt hours between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. Monday, Jan. 17. The low temperature that morning in the Raleigh-Durham area was one below zero.

Lynn Eury, manager of CP&L's system operations and maintenance department, said the usage during a 24-hour period hit its highest point on Jan. 17. The total consumption for the week was 723,989,000 kilowatt hours.

It was the coldest week this winter and began with a low in Raleigh-Durham of seven degrees. Other lows during the remainder of the week were three, seven, 12, nine and 12.

Eury said about 40 per cent of the electricity consumed came from the company's nuclear plants near Southport and Hartsville, S.C. He noted that a significant amount of power was generated in the second Brunswick unit at Southport. This unit is licensed for full-power operation while undergoing testing prior to beginning commercial service this spring.

Eury said that thanks to conservation by customers, a slight warming trend and a voltage reduction, the company was able to get through the week without interrupting service to customers.

Snoik Snack 'Nutritious'

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Snoiks look like junk food and taste like junk food, but these new crisp snack puffs are 17 to 18 per cent protein, comparable to hamburger.
 They were developed by a food science and nutrition research team at Brigham Young University. Dr. John Hal Johnson, team leader and an associate professor, has applied for a patent on the extruded soy and corn flour snacks.
 Snoiks come in four flavors: butter, savor, cheese and onion. Soy flavor predominates in the butter variety, corn in the remainder.
 Johnson hopes to see the new snack puffs manufactured commercially and sold in school and campus vending machines.
 He also sees possibilities as a low-cost, nutritious food for low-income snack puffs manufactured commercially and sold in school and campus vending machines.
 He also sees possibilities hson said university researchers are working on related products using soybeans: granola, a quick biscuit mix and cheese.

Old Soft Shoe 'Coming Back' In Disco Fad

By FRED T. FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Remember the Old Soft Shoe? Say Old Soft Shoe, think Ray Bolger, Donald O'Connor, George Burns, Milton Berle. They all Shuffle(d) Off to Buffalo.

It's coming back — maybe. To hear Van McCoy, the Hustle man, tell it, the Shuffle is just an Old Soft Shoe done to disco music. He says it may very well become the rage this year. It could become the successor to the Hustle.

After all, what is the Hustle? Nothing but the tango, the rumba, the jitterbug and some other dance variations to a different beat. Now it has, as Van puts it, become "sophisticated."

That's getting to be the trouble with the Hustle, says McCoy. "You almost have to take a special partner now who knows your version — if you're a real hot hustler, that is."

"Some of the kids just taught me the Latin Hustle and, you know, it's very complicated," says Van, "no slouch on a dance floor."

The Hustle is syncopated — kind of off beat; not the world's easiest dance for those afflicted with a limited sense of rhythm. Because of this, there are some, today's younger generation notwithstanding, who have managed to avoid braving the Hustle.

So Van feels it is time for something different, a dance he believes "the kids will go for." "After all, they always set the pace."

He has put his money on the Shuffle. It is included in his latest album, "Rhythms of the World," and his single of the Shuffle is just out. He plans to make some disco dates to show it off. He'll use it in select, big-hall appearances of his road show — Soul City Symphony, Faith, Hope and Charity, The Hustle Dancers.

"The Shuffle is still a triplet kind of thing — six beats. But it's simpler — much simpler, more with the beat."

And even young people know that Old Soft Shoe basic step, thanks to late night TV movies and the continued personal appearances of the likes of George Burns.

McCoy is a record industry producer returned to the role of entertainer whose "Disco Baby" album included his Hustle tune — the one with lyrics confined to a chorus's occasional, sotto voce, "Do the Hustle!" It is the Hustle that hit. The album has sold seven million copies. That's big in the record business.

Van got into the Shuffle last fall while on the West Coast for a meeting, in his role as a producer, with Aretha Franklin. "Some friends asked had I heard about the Shuffle. I asked how it went, did it with a partner. Like I said, it's like an Old Soft Shoe — almost a toe slide."

Although the Hustle was inserted in the "Disco Baby" album pretty much as an afterthought, its success was not altogether unplanned. McCoy and Kipps give much of the credit to the promotion man.

"Steve Rudolph was head of promotion at H and L Records which recorded the album. He set up a Hustle Sweepstakes, fed the industry tip sheets on who was moving the Hustle, presented trophies to the hustling radio stations," said Kipps.

"He convinced CBS-TV Sports to include the instrumental during playbacks and got Van's 'Love is the Answer' hustle played in the intro for the Belmont Stakes," said Van.

"He really, more than anyone, popularized the Hustle."

McCoy and Kipps, both bachelors, manage to keep their fingers in a lot of pies. They have been the record producers for Gladys Knight and The Pips, Melba Moore, Aretha Franklin, David Ruffin, Faith, Hope and Charity, and for Van, himself.

Then there's the road show, the publication of Van's Hustle sheet music, the scoring for a motion picture Van is doing and their idea for a rhythm section that would appear with symphony orchestras for a disco music night to attract young people.

Van's musical career began with piano lessons at age 4. His first public appearances were at age 5. With his violin-playing older brother, Norman, he played ladies' teas around Washington. He was into songwriting at 12 but took a few school years out "to shoot marbles and chase girls."

He was studying psychology when he dropped out of Howard University to go into the record business.

When neither arranging and composing, nor producing and performing, McCoy relaxes by his hi-fi set with Rachmaninoff — even Beethoven.

Having picked up arranging "by the hit and miss method," he talks with particular pride of Henry Mancini's inclusion of his "African Symphony" in a recent album and says, "I'd like to get into serious music."

"I'm composing a symphony of my own, you know."

Couple Beat The Bottle

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
NOME, Alaska (AP) — Lincoln and Emily Milligrock are in their mid-40s, own a two-bedroom home and a late-model pickup truck, have reasonably good health and take a two-week annual vacation.

Statistically, they come close to being average Americans. Except that they are Eskimos who beat the bottle after 20 years of alcoholism.

They kicked the habit in a town where more than 40 percent of their relatives, friends and neighbors have serious drinking problems, where there is no drug or alcoholism treatment center, and where drinking forms the basis of the only social activity outside the churches and the television set.

Along the way they lost one of their six children to crib death. Another son was found dead at the age of 22 floating in Fairbanks' Chena River for reasons which still have not been determined.

A daughter is mentally retarded and lives with foster parents in Anchorage, and the Milligrocks spend their vacation visiting her.

During those two fuzzy decades when they lived from one bottle to the next they hocked several households' worth of furniture, a piece at a time, to pay for liquor. Often Emily's mother kept them alive by spoon-feeding them soup as they lay abed too hung-over and sick to fend for themselves. Lincoln spent days in jail sleeping it off.

"And then I woke up one day after a two-week bout where I couldn't remember anything, and I found that everything in the house was gone — the new washing machine, all the kitchen appliances, the ivory-carving tools we needed to earn a living, everything we had," Mrs. Milligrock remembers.

"I started drinking to keep Lincoln company. That day we stopped together, and now we stay sober to help each other. It has been the hardest thing we have ever had to do, and the thing we are proudest of."

Fluent in English, the Milligrocks speak their Yupik Eskimo language at home and prefer walrus and seal meat to beefsteak and bacon.

They married in their teens like most of their contemporaries and find themselves in the generation caught between the old village ways of their ancestors and the new ways of the white men who founded this ramshackle town during the turn of the century gold rush.

Their children cannot speak Eskimo and do not know how to carve or sail the walrus-hide skinboats which dominate Lincoln's life.

Most of their friends still founder in the cross-currents of the changing culture which almost drowned the Milligrocks. Because they have been on the wagon for seven years, they are viewed with contempt by many companions of their youth who came from the same roots and now find themselves strangled by them.

The Milligrock home is warm and comfortable in this treeless land trapped seven months a year in winter's dark, subzero grip. A modern couch and color television set share places of honor with a living room workbench stacked with prized tusks and an intricate array of carving tools.

A handsome handmade table and the bounty spread atop it is testimony to the family's subsistence lifestyle in a town where milk is $2.35 a half-gallon and grapefruit $1 apiece.

An ever-present dish of homemade cranberry jam is a small part of the results of Emily's summer of berry-picking along the tundra hills ringing Nome. Home-baked bread is served daily. Wild game is a staple, although dwindling herds and tougher government restrictions are making caribou and reindeer more of a treat than an everyday meal.

Although they do not have indoor plumbing, the Milligrocks have electricity and a large freezer is stocked with chunks of muktuk and blubber. Every summer Lincoln and his skinboat crew of nine harvest seal and walrus among the Bering Sea iceflows, sometimes as far as 50 miles west of the safety of Nome's windswept shore.

Because this is a "dry" house, the coffeepot is always on the stove.

The Milligrocks entertain themselves with television, visiting their grandchildren, and an occasional movie. "We stay as far away from bars as we can get," said Mrs. Milligrock.

Can Lift Stain Of Nail Polish

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nail polish spills needn't ruin a garment if you have clean-up materials readily available.

Cornell University's consumer education program recommends using bottled acetone nail polish remover while the stain is still wet. Place the stain face down on a paper towel and sponge the area with polish remover on the reverse of the fabric. Move the stain to a clean part of the towel often, and continue sponging until the stain disappears, then launder the garment immediately if it is washable.

This method will damage acetate or tri-acetate fabrics, so they should be sent to a dry cleaner instead, and as promptly as possible.

Bear Meat Is A Gourmet Export

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Bear meat was among the delicacies that Czechoslovak Koospol, a foodstuffs firm here recently exported to the West, particularly West Germany.

Demand is also high for stag and deer exports as well as mouflon (a wild sheep) and wild boars.

Bolger Fond Of 'Oz' Role

SEPTUAGENARIAN — Ray Bolger kicks up his heels during a workout last November. Now in his 70s, Bolger says his favorite production is still "The Wizard of Oz". (AP Wirephoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — Ray Bolger, the comedian, actor, singer and dancer who went from vaudeville to Broadway plays, movies and television, says his favorite production still is "The Wizard of Oz."

"Kids don't recognize me until I make my Scarecrow face," said Bolger, now 72, wriggling his nose, pursing his mouth, bulging his eyes and shuffling with loose-limbed gait.

He lives in Southern California near Jack Haley, the Tin Man, and when visiting back East often sees Margaret Hamilton, the Wicked Witch. Altogether, he said, 23 members of the cast are alive.

Bolger reminisced about the 1939 movie while in the area to film some TV commercials.

"We all had funny feelings about 'The Wizard of Oz' in the beginning," he said. "It wasn't well-received by the critics. One said we'd have the kids running down the street to see Shirley Temple pictures."

"They missed the satire, the underlying story of the picture, the timeless triumph of good over evil, old friends, family ..."

Shaking his head, he added, "It's still my favorite movie."

Bolger said he begins each day at 7 a.m. by pedaling a stationary bicycle set at the equivalent of a six-degree incline.

"I spend five minutes or so working up to a rhythmic heartbeat of 144 beats per minute, cycle four or five minutes more, taking my pulse every 50 seconds, then spend three minutes slowing down," he said. "I then lie down until my pulse returns to normal, eat breakfast, read the paper and do my chores."

"At 11 a.m. my musical director comes in and we work for two hours."

"If I'm doing my short show in concert, we work on that. If I'm doing the long show, I work on that."

"In addition to the dancing, I do political satire, pantomime. I write all my own material."

Bolger said embarrassment at a high school prom got him into dancing and out of a part-time job at a bank.

It seems he lost a girlfriend when he waltzed to every tune at the prom. He started learning new steps but before long was fired for practicing his dancing in the hallways of the bank where he worked.

Bolger entered vaudeville with the Bob Ott Musical Repertory Theater in 1922 and was on Broadway in "The Passing Show of 1926," "George White's Scandals of 1931," "Life Begins at 8:40," "On Your Toes" and "Where's Charley?"

His movie appearances include "The Great Ziegfeld," "Where's Charley?" "Rosalie" and "Sunny." In addition to his many guest appearances on television, he once had his own show, "Washington Square."

In 1929 he met another vaudeville player, Gwen Rickard. She became his wife, manager and coproducer of "Where's Charley?" They're still married.

Colombia Adds A New Jetport

PEREIRA, Colombia (UPI) — A new airport capable of handling jet traffic and night takeoffs and landings is being opened at Pereira, a fast-growing city in Colombia's west-central coffee region.

The airport, less than 30 minutes from Bogota by air, also serves other cities in the area, located on Andes mountain slopes so steep no airport construction is possible.

PREMIUM SPENDING

NEW YORK (UPI) — Premiums and other marketing prizes likely will be a $5.5 billion business in 1977, the magazine Incentive Marketing predicts. The sum is more than 12 percent above last year's actual outlays for premium and incentive merchandise.

Farrior Has Plans To Be Veterinarian

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Gerard Lucas is a shoe salesman, but the clients he fits are horses.

The Purdue University veterinary student from Trumbull, Conn., is a farrier, or horse-shoer. And even though he admits the work is sweaty, demanding and presents the risk of an occasional swift kick from a temperamental customer, he enjoys it.

"It's hard physical work but I enjoy it because it gives me a chance to be physically active and gives me some extra money. But the biggest drawback is lack of time," says Lucas, who carries a full load of college classes.

"A full-time farrier can make a good salary. But I'd rather limit myself to cases where I can look at the situation medically, instead of trying to do so many horses an hour."

He confines his work to weekends, when he usually shoes two or three horses. It takes him less than two hours to shoe all four hooves of an animal.

The bearded 24-year-old student admits to being generous with treats — sugar cubes, carrots and other tidbits — to ease the work along.

"The thing I like about horses is that they're really characters," he says. "A horse is a very intelligent animal and knows what is happening to him."

Lucas started his business after attending a farrier school in Oklahoma two years ago. Since then he has acquired a small forge, anvil and other equipment, all of which are carried in his aging black truck. His initial investment was about $1,500, in addition to the school tuition.

"One of the hardest things I've found so far is trying to find the right kind of coal for my forge," he says of his search for a special type of hard coal called Pocahontas.

Farriers are of two types, Lucas explains: cold shoers and hot shoers. The former uses preshaped horseshoes which need a minimal amount of reworking to fit the horse, while a hot shoer starts from scratch.

"If you want to do any corrective or therapeutic work, then you have to start from scratch," says the vet student, who uses both forms of shoeing.

"Farriers do perform a therapeutic function," he says.

"The potential for ruining a horse is just as good as for improving him. A fellow who doesn't do farriery work doesn't know what a shoe can do to a horse's foot."

Lucas, who notes that "to be a good farrier takes a lifetime," would like a residency where he could specialize in studying lameness in horses.

"I'd like to do the therapeutic aspect of farriery and still apply my vet medicine background. I can see a lot of demand for the combination of a veterinary medicine background and farriery," he says.

Adult Standards Not Applicable

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — "Parents should not apply adult standards to children's art," says Dr. Harlan Hoffa, professor of art education at the Pennsylvania State University. Young children don't draw to make an accurate picture of an object or a person, but to make symbolic representations, he says.

"From a kid's point of view, it is a sign or symbol which stands for something else but is not necessarily a picture of it," Dr. Hoffa explains. "Adults need to recognize this and not discourage the child by asking what the drawing is supposed to be."

No Baseball At Detroit Center

DETROIT (AP) — Renaissance Center, the $330-million privately-financed project to help revitalize the city's downtown area, will have many attractions indoors and out when it opens in the spring — but one it will not have is a baseball field.

With 11,536 specially tinted glass windows in its 72-story hotel and four 39-story office towers, officials say there's little likelihood that the 33-acre riverfront site will provide a diamond for the Little Leaguers or any other baseball teams — and for good reason.

Feeling Of Floating In Dead Sea

EIN GEDI, Israel (AP) — Swimming in the Dead Sea produces the other-worldly sensation of floating in an astronaut's zero-gravity chamber. Due to high concentrations of minerals, the human body floats in the Dead Sea.

When walking into it, you reach a point — usually when you are between waist and chest deep — when buoyancy sweeps your feet to the surface. Sun worshippers simply prop their hands behind their heads and soak up the rays with almost no distractions, except a hardy breed of flies.

For tourists in Israel, a visit to the 500-square-mile Dead Sea is as essential as going to the top of the Empire State Building is in New York. Apart from its quirky swimming qualities, the Dead Sea is the lowest point on earth, lying 1,292 feet below sea level. It is part of the great Jordan rift that cleaves the earth from Syria to south-east Africa.

A head-first plunge is definitely not the best way to experience this natural phenomenon since the salt level is 10 times greater than the open seas. Most bathers enter cautiously, trying not to splash water above the neck.

Dead Sea water is painful if a swimmer has cuts or sores. It's a literal case of pouring salt into wounds.

Surrounded by the sparsely populated, lunar-like Judean hills, the Dead Sea is nearly dead quiet. Floating is a smooth sport because of minimal wave action and because floaters don't have to keep a watchful eye out for sharks, crabs, jellyfish or other ordinary nuisances to swimmers.

Unlike at other rocky-bottomed beaches, swimmers don't have to worry about slipping on algae-covered stones because no plants or animals survive in this land-locked sea. The Jordan River empties its waters and some fish into the salty basin, but the fish don't last long.

The Dead Sea's name accurately describes this body of water, but some Israelis feel it is a misnomer because the ancient sea is a great source of raw chemicals for industry and agriculture.

Of course, there is a catch to the relaxing sensation of weightlessness. The body's balancing mechanism becomes accustomed to the buoyancy of the water and therefore when swimmers walk out of the sea they experience the clumsiness of a newborn animal.

Returning from the dense water, bathers head for the nearest shower to rinse off the potent mineral solution. Without a shower, hair begins to feel gritty and a chalky white powder appears on the skin.

Only two inches of rain fall annually at the Dead Sea. The Jordan River pours 6.5 million tons of water daily into the lake, but all its living contents die soon after contact with the salt liquid.

The water evaporates so fast in the baking sun that a permanent vapor cloud hangs over the Dead Sea. Parts of the lake smell of sulphur. Greek author Nikos Kazantzakis wrote that the Dead Sea was his vision of hell.

But there are optimists. A Jewish settlement has existed, on and off, for decades on the shore of the lake. Its name, Kalia, is a Hebrew acronym for the words "the Dead Sea is alive again."

Better Health Care Forecast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Better health care for more of the nation's labor force was forecast by Sue A. Bill, president of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses, formerly the American Association of Industrial Nurses.

Mrs. Bill, supervising nurse, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New Brunswick, N.J., based her prediction on the fact that on-the-job health care is expanding rapidly in both location and scope.

For instance, at the turn of the century workers employed by heavy industry were the main beneficiaries of a "company nurse." "But today," Mrs. Bill pointed out, "occupational health nurses are also available to employees in locations ranging from entertainment centers to department stores, from art museums to space laboratories."
