Drastic Water-Rationing Order For San Francisco

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surrounded by drought-stricken counties already rationing water, San Franciscans now will have to cut their use to face what the mayor calls "the most desperate matter facing this city since World War II."

Car washings and full swimming pools are banned in the regulations passed Tuesday by the Public Utilities Commission. The rationing "will be very demanding" for this city's 665,000 residents, Mayor George Moscone said at a commission hearing.

The water conservation policy, which goes into effect April 1, is designed to cut overall consumption by 25 per cent.

The plan allows each dwelling unit — single home or apartment — to use up to 70 per cent of the amount used in the same period last year.

Industrial customers, however, will be required to reduce consumption only 10 per cent from what they used a year ago, to avoid what water department manager Ken Boyd called "a can of worms leading to personnel layoffs ..."

The average four-person family in San Francisco last year used a daily average of 221 to 331 gallons, making a bi-monthly average of as much as 19,860 gallons.

A few households will use more than that, but once their consumption exceeds 22,500 gallons bi-monthly, they will be forced to cut back to just 50 per cent of what they consumed a year ago.

Boyd said consumers will be allowed one minor infraction and a second infraction will result in a written warning.

But if the customer exceeds the limit a third time, a device will be installed on his pipes to limit how much water he can get. And he'll have to pay for the punishment: a minimum of $25 to install and another $25 to remove.

Residents were told at the hearing that every drop of water will have to count as the two-year drought that has parched the northern two-thirds of the state continues unabated.

With rainfall down 40 per cent from normal because of an offshore high pressure area which has blocked storms coming in from the sea, the city's reservoirs contain about 37 billion gallons of water, compared with 65 billion gallons in normal seasons.

Find Body Of 7th Victim

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — A body found along a dirt road has been tentatively identified as 11-year-old Timothy King, apparently the seventh victim in a string of child abduction-slayings in Oakland County.

The body, discovered late Tuesday less than a mile from a busy intersection by a passing motorist, was wearing a red jacket, green pants and shoes that a Birmingham police officer said "matched the description" of clothing worn by Timothy when he was last seen.

A skateboard was found near the body, said Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson. Timothy had taken his football and skateboard with him on March 16 when he walked to a pharmacy near his home, left the store through a rear door and disappeared.

Asked if the latest death appeared to follow the pattern of the six child abduction-slayings since January 1976 in the county, state police Sgt. Jack Kresae said, "There is a great similarity, yes."

Kresae said the body was not concealed and that police did not know how long it had been in the ditch, which is about 11 miles from where Timothy disappeared.

The slayings have enraged and frightened county residents.

"People are scared," said Oakland County Sheriff Johannes Spreen. "Parents are now driving their children to school and picking them up. When a child has been missing a couple of hours, where the parents would have waited it out, now they call us right away."

Board Meeting

Two items of business are scheduled for consideration on Thursday night by the City-County Board of Adjustments.

The board will conduct public hearings on requests for special use permits by: Mrs. R. E. Tyson who wishes to place a mobile home on the lot located on the northeast corner of 264 Business and State Road 1135; and by

B. E. Jones, G. A. Weimer and P. E. Carroll who wish to construct a care home on the property located on NC 43 North across from the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Meeting Press On Thursday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter plans to hold a news conference at 2:30 p.m. EST Thursday, a spokesman says.

CBS and ABC said Tuesday they plan live television coverage of the conference. NBC said it would not decide on coverage until today.

Carter's last press conference was on March 9.

Street Improvement Program Is Adopted

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council yesterday adopted the Community Development street improvement program calling for over $150,000 worth of street work in eligible CD-designated areas.

The program includes improvements involving curb, gutter and paving on some streets and paving only on others, it was explained at Tuesday's special call meeting.

Mayor Percy Cox reminded Council members that, "We only have so much money to go so far." He explained that some of the streets in the program can be improved without curb and gutter.

City Engineer Charlie Holliday noted that he has been a "strong advocate" of curb and gutter for subdivisions but he said he did not view the proposed program as a subdivision.

Holliday reported that by paving and not putting in curb and gutter on all of the streets in the program, over three times more paving could be accomplished for the money. Curb and gutter could be added later if it was desired, he explained.

Cox contended that the installation of curb and gutter has been over sold in the past. By paving the streets, the costly maintenance involved now would be curtailed, he added.

Jim Caldwell, City Manager, explained to members of the Council that a priority system had been developed to select streets that would be included in the improvement program.

Curb, gutter and paving was approved for: Paris Avenue from Farmville Boulevard to Spruce Street; Spruce Street from Paris Avenue to Raleigh Avenue; Halifax Street from Watauga Avenue to Paris Avenue; Manhattan Avenue from Farmville Boulevard to Halifax Street; Davenport Street from Tyson to Farmville Boulevard; Ames from Howell to Gooden Place; and 16th and Greene from Howell to Evans westerly.

Streets designated for paving only include: Skinner from Harris to the railroad; Stutz from Third to Colonial Avenue; Gum Road from Memorial Drive to the ditch; Holbert from Gum Road to Pollard; Arthur from McClellan to Pitt; Brown from McClellan to Greene; and Elks from McClellan to Greene.

The total street improvement costs amount to $150,377.

Council members adopted a resolution authorizing the city to execute an agreement with the Department of Transportation concerning construction on NC 43, Stanstonsburg Road, and the nursing home road.

Caldwell noted that the municipal agreement is necessary before contracts for the construction work can be awarded by the state.

Bids are scheduled to be taken tomorrow on the new construction, according to Caldwell, with construction beginning in May.

In other business yesterday, the Council discussed several suggestions offered by the Downtown Greenville Association concerning use of cleared property in the Five Points area.

Caldwell said that there is "quite a movement among merchants...to pressure the city into designating all of the area as parking." Caldwell contended that the city can not afford to develop all of the property for parking.

He suggested that the frontage on Fifth Street be developed to a depth of 85 feet and the remainder be used for parking.

The Downtown Association suggested that the "newly cleared areas" be leased by the city from the Redevelopment Commission, designated as public parking, and improved with meters installed.

It was also recommended that the city discontinue using the southwest corner area to park patrol cars and other vehicles and that attention be given to "relieving the monotony of parked cars through the installation of small rest areas" with benches, bushes, and drinking fountains.

The group suggested that the leasing of parking spaces in metered lots to individuals to park their personal vehicles be discontinued. In addition, the city was asked to give consideration to establishing special assessment districts designated to assist in the financing of parking facilities with the assessments included in the tax notices.

Caldwell urged the Council members to make an on-site investigation of the cleared property and to review the plan originally proposed for the CBD area.

In a final matter, the Council discussed briefly the status of the Woodrow Haddock suit against the city. The suit was filed following the city's denial in January of a request by Haddock for a refund of 1976 taxes.

Dedication On Saturday

Gov. Jim Hunt will deliver the dedication address when the new Pitt County Memorial Hospital and Rehabilitation Center is presented to the people of Pitt County Saturday at 11 a.m.

He will be introduced by Kenneth Dews, Hospital Trustees' chairman. County Commissioner Charles Gaskins will welcome those attending, and, along with Dews, will accept the hospital from Beverly Freeman of Freeman-White Associates, the Charlotte architectural firm which designed the building.

The invocation will be given by the Rev. Willis Wilson and the closing prayer by the Rev. Clarence Gray. The flag-raising will be led by American Legion Post 39. The East Carolina Wind Ensemble will present a musical prelude and also the National Anthem during the flag-raising.

The ribbon across the front door of the hospital will be cut by former trustee board chairman Woodrow Wooten and Wilton Duke. Remarks will be made by Dr. Jack Welch, chief of staff, and Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Immediately after the dedication activities, tours of the hospital will be conducted for the public until 6 p. m. Tours also will be provided Sunday from 2 to 6 p. m. Everyone is invited.

The hospital will be occupied by patients as of Apr. 30.

Citation For 'Crime Watch'

R. E. "Buddy" Rogers Jr. of Greenville was presented a certificate by Mayor Percy Cox this morning for his participation in the Police Department's Mobile Crime Watch program by patrolling more than 100 hours since the program began in July 1976.

To date, Rogers has patrolled 105 hours and traveled 952 miles. He is the first member of the Mobile Crime Watch team to log 100 hours.

The volunteer mobile crime watch program began in July 1976 and in the first five months it was in operation, team members spent 1,083 man hours and traveled 9,835 miles on regular patrols throughout the city, supplementing regular Police Department activities.

During 1976, the crime watch team found 43 open doors, 47 open windows, 20 stolen vehicles, reported six traffic accidents, 8 traffic lights out, reported 10 drunken drivers and found two break-ins.

Thirteen arrests were made by city police as a direct result of crime watch operations.

Drought Aid Is Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is asking Congress to approve a program of loans and grants totalling nearly $850 million to assist drought-stricken Western states.

The outline of Carter's program was unveiled today by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, who told the House Interior Committee that details would be spelled out in a presidential message later in the day.

"The President's message will propose a program providing as much as $594 million in loans and $250 million in grant moneys," Andrus told the committee.

He said the administration proposed $300 million in community water supply loans and $150 million in grants under the Economic Development Administration and Farmers Home Administration.

An additional $100 million would be provided in grants through the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for soil conservation practices, he said.

He said the package would also increase the loan authorization for small businesses under the Small Business Administration by $50 million.

Wilson Acquires Big Glass Plant

WILSON — The Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corp. of Los Angeles announced that it will build an $18 million glass container manufacturing plant here.

The new plant, which will employ 180 persons initially, will be built on a 75-acre tract adjacent to Firestone Parkway, the company's president, William A. Kerr, announced.

He said that construction of the 500,000 square foot plant is scheduled to begin immediately with completion slated for the spring of 1978.

The official reported that the Wilson plant, which will be one of the city's largest manufacturing facilities, will produce glass containers for brewing, soft drink and commercial food packaging industries.

According to Kerr, the plant will have an initial capacity of approximately 400 million glass containers a year.

The corporation had $250,433,000 in sales in 1976. Currently, the firm employs 4,500 persons at 11 Kerr plants, 27 sales offices and two research and engineering centers in the United States.

Califano's Personal Cook On Govm't Payroll

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a new job in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that pays $12,763 a year and sounds pretty important.

"The nature of the assignment requires a continuing day-to-day association with the secretary and other high-level executives during high-level policy discussions involving plans and objectives," the official job description says.

But in plain language, he is Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.'s personal cook.

The holder of the newly coined title of Personal Assistant to the Secretary (Special Activities) is Wiley Barnes, who recently retired from the U.S.

Marine Corps where he managed the personal quarters of the commandant.

The job description that appeared recently in the Federal Register never came right out and said Barnes cooks Califano's lunch. It said he managed "the food supply service of the secretary's dining room."

It also said that the job demands "the utmost in personal discretion...the nature of some of the incumbent's duties requires personal participation with the ongoing special activities and programs, thereby necessitating the need for an extremely confidential relationship with the secretary."

"He does much more than cook for the secretary," a spokesman for the department insisted Tuesday. "He manages the secretary's mess, handles the accounting and supervises the kitchen."

Barnes also plans meals for special groups, such as governors or members of Congress whom Califano invites over for working breakfasts or lunches, the spokesman said. In his first two weeks on the job, Barnes served meals to three VIP groups.

Califano and Hale Champion, HEW's undersecretary-designate, normally dine together in the secretary's dining room, which adjoins Califano's office, a special meeting room and kitchen.

When they aren't entertaining outsiders, the two pay out of their own pockets for the ingredients Barnes uses to cook their meals, the spokesman said. For official functions, Barnes is authorized to use the secretary's discretionary funds to pay for the food.

It was not known whether any other Cabinet members have personal cooks. But Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia R. Harris recently turned her private dining room into a conference room. She eats in HUD's cafeteria.

At the White House, where President Carter's second cousin Hugh is in charge of cutting out frills, there was little discernable reaction to the Barnes appointment. "I don't know anything about it," said Press Secretary Jody Powell. Hugh Carter could not be reached Tuesday.

DIAGNOSTIC—DON'T WORRY

My daughter had fairly extensive x-rays done immediately after her birth during the 1940's. I heard that Duke Hospital, where she was born, is now sending out notices to all who received x-ray therapy there in years past, and I am wondering whether there is any reason for concern about increased chance of thyroid cancer in my daughter. Mrs. M. B.

We talked to someone on the Duke University Cancer Hotline, describing your situation. She assured us that you have no need for concern, that the problems now coming up concerning thyroid irradiation stem for x-ray therapy, not from simple diagnostic x-rays.

If you have further questions, you may wish to call the Cancer Hotline yourself. The number is 800-672-0943.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

PROBLEM CORRECTED

Carolina Telephone Area Manager Don Collier says the problem concerning an answering service for a Hotline reader has been taken care of. He said FCC rulings concerning such additional equipment are changing all the time and that he expects a major change, perhaps even the abolition of the Consumer Reform Act that called in 1934 for one telephone company per operating area. He said such a change would permit competition, but would at the same time probably increase the cost of telephone service, since one service, such as the provision of additional equipment, would not subsidize other services such as service to the rural customer.

Referring specifically to the problem encountered by Mr. B., he said it was at least partially a communications problem with the person he talked to initially, that the information about needing a $500 account was erroneous.

Car Repair Manual For Women

By ROBERTA G. WAX SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Deanna Sclar shows off her carburetor as proudly as some women show off their diamonds.

And why not? Ms. Sclar not only puts carburetors into working order, but she also changes spark plugs, does lube jobs, flushes cooling systems and changes flat tires.

She says anyone can learn how to do simple repairs and preventive maintenance on an automobile, and she's written a book, "Auto Repair for Dummies" (McGraw-Hill $7.95) to prove it. She said it is not primarily for women.

Car owners "... should learn how to flush the cooling system, be aware that the oil has to be changed," Ms. Sclar said in an interview. "Know how to tune the car, install spark plugs, new air and fuel filters, etc.

"People should also know how to change a flat tire and to diagnose some problems."

The author, a petite woman in her 30s, said she was 25 when she learned to drive, but has always been crazy about cars.

She enrolled in a high school auto repair course after moving to southern California.

"I fell in love with the beautiful logic with which cars are designed," Ms. Sclar said. "It made such sense. Auto makers do the simplest things because it's cheaper. I found it fun to work on my car and found out how cheap it was to do my own repairs."

She said eight spark plugs sale-priced for $4.80 to $6 would cost up to $14 for plugs and labor if a mechanic installed them. An oil change and a new oil filter installed by a mechanic would cost up to $20, compared with $4 to $6.50 self-installed.

"I always assumed that women got ripped off the most by mechanics. Statistically they do, because they bring in most of the cars.

"But from talking to mechanics, the guys who really get ripped off are the 'closet dummies' who go into a garage with a super macho attitude and pretend to know what they are doing. And also the people who come with cars that they have completely run down."

She suggests car owners learn enough to give mechanics a coherent description of their automotive problems. She encourages them to watch and show interest in the mechanic's work.

Ms. Sclar said most mechanics prefer people to do their own basic work.

"Mechanics don't make any money off the little things," she said. "And when you do your own work you realize why mechanics charge so much for the complicated repairs. You know how time-consuming some things are."

After her first car maintenance course, Ms. Sclar bought a 1959 Mercedes 190SL roadster she is reconditioning.

But she still turns some jobs over to garage mechanics.

"I'm limited by the fact that I don't have a hoist. And I draw the line at lying on my back with oil dripping on my face. Basic maintenance is what I'm after."

She once toyed with the idea of becoming a mechanic ("The pay is good"), but would rather write for a living and restore old cars as a hobby. But she doesn't mind giving advice to friends.

"I will show anyone how to do anything, but after that you're on your own. For a while I felt responsible for strangers and would stop to help anyone who looked like they were having trouble.

"But then experience showed me that men don't like strange ladies coming up and telling them what is wrong with their cars."

Couple Speaks Vows Wednesday

Mrs. Luther Ray Nichols Jr.

Miss Deborah Susan Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Boyce Williams of Rt. 3, Greenville, and Luther Ray Nichols Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Ray Nichols of Greenville, were united in marriage Wednesday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in a double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a white street length dress of polyester fashioned pinafore style with a scalloped collar trimmed with embroidery and a V-neckline.

The couple are residing in Greenville.

The bride attended Rose High School and is employed at Clark's. The bridegroom graduated from Pitt Technical Institute and is employed at Greenville Body Shop.

The couple was entertained at dinner following the ceremony.

Look Twice At A Wrong Match

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just slapped my son and realized it was because he looks like his father. I am trapped in a miserable marriage with three children (all accidents). I married more out of stubbornness than love. My parents and even friends told me not to marry him, but I wouldn't listen.

When we were going together, he'd borrow money from me and "forget" to pay it back. Now all the money is "his" money. He never takes me out, saying he can't afford it, but he always has enough to entertain his buddies.

My second baby was 3 and my third was on the way before I got a washing machine. (And then it was his mother's old one.)

He used to twist my arm, now he hits me regularly. He tells me what to do, what to say and even what to wear.

I wish I had listened, but it's too late now.

SORRY

DEAR SORRY: It may be too late for you, but it's not too late for girls presently involved with fellows who fit your husband's description.

A tip to girls "in love" with a man who everyone thinks is wrong for her: Listen and take a good long second look at him. And a third. And then a fourth.

(P.S. You didn't ask for any advice, but if you're interested in getting your head together, you're tired of being a punching bag and have had it with accidental pregnancies, write again. Have I got a letter for you!)

DEAR ABBY: Our granddaughter just completed her nursery school term at St. Edmunds Episcopal Church, and each parent was given a copy of some words of wisdom.

I hope you will find it worthy of printing in your column.

MRS. S., SAN MARINO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. S.: I do. And I shall pass it on to my readers:

Constant Fear Marks City Life For The Elderly

Editor's Note: Crime in the city's cities has created a life of fear for many old people. Nowhere is the fear more pervasive than in New York City's Bronx where a wave of brutal assaults on the elderly has focused attention on a problem that exists in many urban areas. This is the first of three stories on crime and the elderly.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM, Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bessie, so frightened she lives on tranquilizers. Clara is so scared she sleeps in a hallway cot near her front door — for a fast getaway. Ralph is so fearful that he says extortion money. Hans and Emma hanged themselves because they wouldn't live another day in fear. Bessie, Clara and Ralph. All of them old; all of them afraid of crime. So they flee the streets at dusk, barricade themselves behind their doors and don't come out until the sun is high. Out of place, out of step, out of time, many urban elderly are prisoners in their homes, foreigners in the neighborhoods they settled, old people in a young and threatening world.

Out of fear, they break the patterns that give meaning to their lives. Gone are the soft sociable afternoons on park benches; the park has become a war zone. They forego visits to children and grandchildren. They won't see doctors. They stop going to religious services. "Crime leads to an unbelievable deprivation and reduction in the quality of life of older people who already have problems of fixed income, poor health, loss of loved ones and of their own role in life," says George Sunderland, coordinator of the Crime Prevention Program of the American Association of Retired Persons.

"An older person's sense of self can be very fragile, and crime is an invasion of that self. People die a little," says Alice M. Brophy, commissioner for the aging in New York City. About 22 million Americans are over 65. Many live in cities where crime is high. There are no comprehensive national statistics on crimes against the elderly. Police say that nationwide, senior citizens are victimized less than the general public.

But in terms of purse snatch, robbery and assault, especially in cities, they are a disproportionately large victim group. The Midwest Research Institute found, for example, that persons over 60 living in certain neighborhoods of Kansas City, Mo., can be 10 times more vulnerable to crime than younger persons in safer neighborhoods.

Most elderly victims are women, most are alone, most are attacked during the day in or near their homes. Most are poor and live on fixed incomes. Younger victims can recoup losses through earnings; the elderly often cannot. Their savings often are the only thing keeping them independent of their children and out of nursing homes. They are also highly vulnerable to attack, less able to defend themselves and more likely to suffer serious and lasting injury, or death.

Every mugging, say police, is a potential murder. Many old people also live alone and have few people to rely upon.

They often live in changing neighborhoods, where unemployed youths prey upon the core of elderly who cannot afford to move away.

All this makes the urban elderly a prime and easy target: Unable to resist, unable to identify their attackers and often unwilling to report crimes or press charges.

For this reason crimes against the elderly are called "crib jobs"—robbing an old person is like taking candy from a baby.

Everywhere, the elderly are being victimized: in the South Beach section of Miami Beach; in the 3rd, 4th and 5th wards of Houston; in the downtown area of San Diego.

But nowhere are the assaults more numerous or the fear more pervasive than in New York City's Bronx.

Hans and Emma Kabel killed themselves last October in their Bronx apartment where they had lived 50 years. Their home had been invaded and robbed twice and they had been attacked.

Finally, they laid out their funeral clothes, penned a note saying they could no longer live in fear and hanged themselves.

The kind of violence that drove the Kabels to suicide is reflected in the city's crime figures. New York's latest statistics on crime and the elderly showed there were 3,208 muggings of people over 60 last year — a 16 per cent increase over 1975. The elderly represent 21 per cent of all purse snatching victims, 27 per cent of all pocket-book robberies (where force, fear or weapon is used) and 27 per cent of all stickups in apartments. The elderly comprise only about 17 per cent of the city's population.

The Kabels' solution to their worries about such statistics and their real life experiences was extreme, but fear forces many elderly in the Bronx to take extreme measures. It frequently drives old people into lives of isolation. It drives still others to pay out their life's earnings for a feeble assurance of safety.

Police tell of one 75-year-old woman in the Bronx — let's call her Mary — who was so frightened after she was mugged that she never left her apartment. Her life shriveled.

Mary never carried out the garbage. So it piled up, and room by room was filled with refuse. Room by room was sealed off, as her life got smaller and smaller.

Nor would Mary venture out for food. She threw money out the window to kids who bought

LIVING IN FEAR — Clara, a 64-year-old widow from the Bronx, who did not reveal her family name for fear of being identified, sits wrapped in her coat in her unheated apartment ready to run for the door ever since someone broke into her bedroom and ransacked the house. Clara has been robbed twice on the street, once thrown down striking her head. (AP Wirephoto) her candy bars. They, too, ripped her off, charging her double for candy.

Police learned of Mary when, letting down her guard, she was mugged as she mailed a letter.

The police tell of an elderly man — call him Ralph — one of the few elderly people of means, who thought money could insulate him. So he paid two brothers $1,000 in extortion money to protect him from the predators in his Bronx neighborhood. He was mugged anyway.

But most old people don't retreat from life because of fear. They live with it every day in hundreds of ways.

Take Bessie and Sarah (not their real names; they say they are afraid to be identified):

"My life, my nerves are shot. What's to become of me?" asks Bessie, a 77-year-old widow who lives off the majestic, mugger-infested Grand Concourse in the Bronx.

She has been burglarized three times and mugged twice in the last couple of years. A girl once held a knife to her throat and demanded a family ring from her finger.

When she said it was a dime store trinket, the girl shoved Bessie, a pale, blonde dumpling of a woman, against the wall and said: "Choke on it!"

Then someone threw a flare into Bessie's window and burned out one room.

She takes tranquilizers. Depressed and lonely, she seldom leaves her apartment, except to do some shopping or go to a senior citizens center where she played Goldie in "Fiddler on the Roof."

"I'm even afraid to let people help me across the street," says Bessie, who is arthritic and walks with a cane. "Kids who do this should be punished like an adult. They tell me they come from poor homes. That's no excuse. I'm poor, too."

"The least little noise and I can't sleep. Sometimes I wish I wouldn't wake up," Bessie cries.

She can't afford and doesn't really want to leave her spacious old $113-a-month apartment. All her memories are there. Not as frightened as Bessie, Clara also lives in fear. At 64, she sits gray and huddled on a cot in her hallway. Ever since someone broke into her bedroom and ransacked the house, she sleeps in the hallway.

If it happens again, she's ready to run for the front door, under the clutter of locks and escape.

"I've lived in this apartment 33 years and raised a beautiful family," Clara says. "I remember the park and the tulips. But we can't sit there now. The kids throw rocks and bottles at us."

She pays just $100 a month and asks "Where can I go?"

Sometimes her son visits her from Long Island. "I used to go see him on weekends," Clara says, "but now I'm afraid to leave my apartment."

"If I came back and found my apartment broken into again, I think I'd go crazy. Everything thrown about." She doesn't have the energy to put things back in her bedroom. She has shoved a folding chair against the window — a fragile, futile defense against intruders. "They tell us another lock, more bars, something that costs $100, but they always get in," she says.

Clara has been robbed twice on the street, once thrown down, striking her head.

"I'm sorry to say it, but I'm scared of young people. Everybody is afraid. On the phone when we talk it's nothing but robbery. All we hear about is killing and robbery."

"What can you do? We are trapped."

Smokers Do Have Rights, Too

No doubt the fight over cigarette smoking will go on and on, but we have to think that many opponents of cigarettes are interfering with other people's rights.

If we are going to outlaw cigarettes because they harm you, then we should outlaw mountain climbing, skiing, skin diving and almost any other activity because of the possible injury.

We don't, of course, and we shouldn't since it is the individual's right to judge the dangers and choose whether or not to participate.

Yet Ms. Connie Drath, assistant to the president of the Tobacco Institute, reports that some governmental units have established criminal penalties for smoking in public places. In Minneapolis an individual can be fined from $10 to $500 and jailed from one to 60 days for smoking in a public area. As a misdemeanor a conviction becomes a part of a person's record.

What kind of minds can devise laws which will send a person to jail for smoking a cigarette in public? What possible benefit could society gain from sending a decent law-abiding citizen to jail merely for lighting up a cigarette?

If opponents think cigarettes are harmful then they should conduct all the educational programs they want. That is their right and we will go to bat for retention of that right.

But to make criminals out of cigarette smokers—How ridiculous can you get?

Democrats And Republicans Long-Lived

Political parties come and go but the Democrats and the Republicans stay around.

Alex K. Brock, executive secretary-director of the State Board of Elections announced that three state parties expired because they failed to poll enough votes in the November elections.

The American, Labor and Libertarian Parties failed to draw the minimum ten percent of the total votes cast for governor or for presidential electors.

That leaves the Democratic, Republican Independent and No Party designations as the only valid registrations in North Carolina.

The Republicans suffered a severe blow in the past elections, but they still have one of the two major parties in the state and their candidates will continue to appear on the ballots.

Revamping Land Records

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There used to be limited interest in land records. The only time anybody looked at them was when buying or selling property.

But growing emphasis on land use management, zoning, urban (and even rural) planning, and modern anti-crime and firefighting techniques are making land records more important.

And the more people who try to use land records, the more obvious it becomes how difficult it is to get information from the antiquated system used in most North Carolina counties.

That situation was brought home forcefully to many private citizens recently as they attempted to check their own property against other real estate to compare the impact of revaluations which in many counties sent tax values soaring to double or triple the previous amounts.

Scattered records on land are filed and maintained in the Office of the Register of Deeds in the 100 counties. Deeds, deeds of trust, mortgages, powers of attorney, option agreements, easements, maps and plats are recorded there. All are listed by name, rather than an identifier number.

Meanwhile, other land information (judgments, liens, probate proceedings, etc.) is on file in the Clerk of Superior Court; and the County Tax Supervisor has tax abstracts and lists for all taxable property. Again, it is listed alphabetically by property owner.

A legislative committee describes the decentralization this way: "Records that contain information about land and that create and transfer interest in land are maintained in several different offices of state and local government (and) only one of those offices — clerk of superior court — receive any substantial direction and guidance... in the filing, indexing, and maintaining of records... No office has authority to prescribe methods of indexing and recordkeeping... each county may devise the methods... it deems satisfactory." The consequence is a lack of uniformity which is costly and in many cases inaccurate.

The study committee chaired by State Rep. Robert Z. Falls, D-Cleveland, also found few counties attempting to automate information or map parcels, and the index system of listing alphabetically by name of the owner makes it difficult to find out who owns a particular parcel.

BILL NOBLITT

Given the growing need for land information, the committee is recommending to the General Assembly several steps to be phased in over a period of years.

Mapping

The first step is mapping which would cost $20 million over a 10-year period, with the state paying half the cost. The committee is asking for a million dollars to get that underway.

Further state matching money would be sought to help counties automate systems so that either the name of the owner, or a unique parcel identifier could be used to pull out a complete package of information from one storage place: boundaries, improvements, tax records, title history, zoning, soil and ground water data, liens, etc.

The committee is asking that a technical advisory committee be set up with members from the state association of assessing officers, registers of deeds, land surveyors, photogrammetry experts, planners, tax collectors, civil engineers, the Bar Association, and the public to work with a central staff in further planning and researching directions in revamping local land records.

A question explored thoroughly by the committee was whether there should be a State Registrars Office to supervise and coordinate local deeds offices, but no recommendation is made on that point.

That Saccharin Debate

WASHINGTON — In dealing with the saccharin problem I have to confess I am not a disinterested spectator. I have a cousin who is married to Marvin Eisenstadt, one of the owners of the company which makes Sweet 'n Low, a powdered saccharin in pink packages that can be found in restaurants, grocery stores and supermarkets all over this land.

Although I do not own any stock in the company, I am very proud of Marvin and tend to brag about the relationship. You can't imagine what a bombshell I can drop at a dinner party in that whether I was related to Marvin by marriage or not I would be against the FDA ban on this artificial sweetener. For those of us who are constantly fighting weight problems saccharin is our security blanket. It alleviates the guilt we all share when we have a large dinner with a big gooey dessert. At the end of the meal we can always put Susan Quinn's story in Sunday's edition "Fuel Factor Negates Savings" is just the sort of story that makes a local newspaper worth reading. If ever I wondered why my efforts to save fuel seemed so small when I received the bill, I need wonder no more.

This series promises to be one of the most worthy ventures in journalism I have seen our paper take upon itself. I have, until now, considered The Daily Reflector a supplemental news source behind Raleigh's News and Observer, but I see our local paper now coming to its own.

Miss Quinn packs her story with so much useful information that every fuel consumer in this area ought to know. I just had to express my appreciation to the Reflector in hope that they will keep up the good work. It is innovations in style such as that reflected in Miss Quinn's story that can make a local paper a symbol of pride in the community.

And so thank you, Miss Quinn, and The Daily Reflector editors for doing the work to prompt me to write you this letter. I have a refreshed pride in Greenville.

To the editor:
The new Pitt Memorial Hospital is both a welcome and needed facility. However, we, the Junior Woman's Club, feel that an alternative to paid parking by visitors is necessary.

We feel that it is unfair to ask people to finance lighting and security by paying to visit friends and relatives. This is especially true since the hospital will serve all of Pitt County, in addition to being a regional center for pediatric care. Many people will have to spend long hours, sometimes days, with children in the hospital.

If paid parking is a necessity, we hope you will consider using a system similar to airport facilities. A parking area closest to the hospital could be used for hourly parking, while a parking area farther away could be used for all day, or longer, parking, with only a nominal charge.

Because we are proud of Greenville and committed to serving and improving this community, we feel obligated to express our opinion on this matter.

The 'Ability To Pay' Is Basic

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Behind the simple maxim that "wages are limited by the ability to pay and the ability to produce" there is an interesting and perhaps surprising history, and maybe a lesson for today also.

It is not the capsulized philosophy of a robber baron. It is more closely identified with the years of President John F. Kennedy, when wage increases were tied to increases in productivity, and with the union movement.

In 1946, in the midst of a strike against General Motors, Walter Reuther, head of the United Auto Workers, used similar words. "It's an old idea," he said. "It's just common horse sense."

Reuther's men then lowered their demands and settled for an increase of 18.5 cents an hour. Shortly thereafter the Auto Workers found themselves criticized by the American Federation of Labor, for settling too high.

"Those unions which broke price ceilings to get 18.5 cents followed a shortsighted policy," said the AFL, whose secretary-treasurer at the time was George L. Meany, now head of the AFL-CIO. An official AFL report at the time continued:

"Had they been really willing to accept smaller increases and adjust their demands by genuine collective bargaining to industry's ability to pay, they would be better off today and so would all American workers."

The provision for paying wage increases by raising prices had a disastrous effect on the entire economy, the AFL said, because it led to inflation that brought serious losses to almost everyone.

The "ability to pay" philosophy has since become lost in a jungle of verbiage, of charges and countercharges and misinformation and ignorance, says John Q. Jennings, who headed federal mediation in Michigan at the time. Now a labor economic consultant, he would bring it into the open again and nourish it.

"We're wandering around in the dark not knowing what we're doing," he said. "I would restore and activate the ability to pay concept to collective bargaining." He would seek cooperation rather than confrontation.

Jennings, who has an international following, would restore the concept not through law — "controls, guidelines and presidential jawboning over work very long in peacetime" — but by an appeal to reason and understanding.

And in order to obtain that, he continues, we must educate ourselves.

"Most people don't know the simple arithmetic of business," he said. "They add it up all wrong. Even economists forget that 2 and 2 equals 4."

Business, which is directly affected by these short-comings, hasn't done its share to educate, he feels. "Even today they're reluctant to show the real figures," he said. Nobody, he believes is willing to state the facts.

40 Years Ago Today

March 23, 1937
Michigan Governor Frank Murphy announced today a conference would be held in Lansing Wednesday between Walter Chrysler, chairman of the Chrysler corporation, and John L. Lewis, head of the C.I.O.

Although formal replies from his invitations to the conference have not been received, it was understood the governor had assurance both Chrysler and Lewis would attend the meeting.

Senator Rush Holt (D-Va.) said today President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley are "cracking the party whip" for the President's court reorganization plan.

He said in a prepared address "the report has gone abroad throughout the land that recognition and patronage will be taken from the members of the House and Senate of the Congress simply because they dare to differ with the President and Mr. Farley on this great question."

"The President and Mr. Farley, by cracking the party whip on the subject, are not appealing to the wisdom of the proposal but to the force that they desire to possess to push it through," Holt said.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Lectured By Andy Young

By ROWLANDEVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While Assistant Secretary of State William E. Schaufele sat silently for more than two hours, UN Ambassador Andrew Young delivered a tough warning Monday evening to South African Ambassador R. F. Botha which could result in a break in diplomatic relations between the U.S. and South Africa — raising ominous possibilities for the continent.

Specifically, Young told Botha that black Africa now demands immediate independence be granted by South Africa to Namibia (Southwest Africa). This remarkable emergence of the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations as spokesman for black Africa to white-ruled South Africa is another blow to drastically worsened relations between Washington and Pretoria.

Some diplomats here believe that if Young's hard line against South Africa truly represents President Carter's own position (as Young repeatedly claims), a break in diplomatic relations will be unavoidable. An isolated South Africa, out of touch with Washington, does not bode well for prevention of tragic race war.

The 6:30 to 8:45 Monday evening session in Schaufele's office was attended by Schaufele, Young and Botha, plus aides. Based on their response to our questions, what took place at the meeting follows.

Young repeatedly claimed President Carter's full support for everything he told Botha. Backed by his top UN aide, Ambassador Don McHenry, he warned South Africa that time was short. Young said that leftist President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, leader of black Africa's "front-line" presidents, informed him during his recent African tour:

* That the problem of Rhodesia was being solved by military means which, despite ups and downs, could have only one outcome: total victory for black nationalists and the end of any vestige of white influence.

* That South Africa itself, where a minority white population rules with apartheid (the elaborate system of racial separation), was of no immediate interest to black Africa and could wait for a while.

* That Namibia, an international territory illegally ruled by South Africa, must be given immediate independence as ordered by the UN.

* That South African whites are "enemies" to be "destroyed" eventually — the most incendiary of Nyerere's pronouncements as relayed by the American envoy.

Young's lecture was delivered to Botha in temperate, polite tones. There was not a single intervention by Schaufele, the official presumably in charge of the administration's African policy. This clearly dominant role being played by Young and his UN mission in defining U.S. African policy promises severe problems between Washington and Pretoria, perhaps a break in relations.

Young seemed oblivious to the fact that South Africa and the U.S. reached an understanding on Namibia last year during the Ford administration that was never publicly revealed. While regarded by Henry Kissinger as a possible basis for settlement, South Africa has heard no word on the plan from the Carter administration. On the contrary, Young expressed surprise that it existed.

Nor did Young show interest in South Africa's offer three weeks ago to act as a guarantor for Rhodesia to

Strength For Today

A FORTUNE UNCLAIMED
Some years ago a man died without a will and left a large fortune. His attorneys, after a long search, at last found a legal heir. He was an aging man who had never made much of a success and was living in obscurity and genteel poverty in a city several hundred miles away.

When the lawyers called the man by phone and told him of his great good fortune, much to their surprise the man refused to believe them. "Nothing good has ever happened to me," he told them, "and I'm certainly not going to be taken in by a crank phone call. If you have anything to say to me, write a letter."

We read in the New Testament that God has assured man that he has a great gift for him — namely, the gift of salvation and joy. But to many people the whole thing seems so improbable that they react like the heir to the fortune described above. These people feel that they will only make fools of themselves if they accept God's offer. They are heirs to an infinitely greater fortune than can be given on this earth, yet they refuse to believe it.

N.C. Legislators Face Choice Of Saving Millions

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislators face a choice between saving millions of dollars for local government or abiding by earlier commitments to bondholders as a result of a disagreement in the House Tuesday.

Debate over a bill filed by Rep. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, to allow governments to repay high interest bonds by floating bonds at the current lower rate highlighted the House calendar

Tuesday. The Senate, on the other hand, referred back to committee the only bill on its calendar.

The fight over the bond issue was expected to be concluded this afternoon.

Here are the major developments in the General Assembly:

BONDS

Johnson put off a battle, but the House voted 51-50 Tuesday to adopt an amendment to his bill that would allow local governments to save millions of dollars by refinancing the loans made when interest rates were high by floating new bonds at the current interest rates. Johnson said the amendment gutted his bill which he said would save local governments millions of dollars.

The amendment, by Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, would make the bill apply only to bonds sold in the future. "It's fundamentally a matter of integrity," he said. Those who purchased the bonds expected them to be paid out at the rate agreed upon, he said.

Johnson said he would try to have the amendment taken out as the House gives the bill final consideration today.

SECRECY

A bill aimed at expanding North Carolina's open meetings law has won the support of House Speaker Carl Stewart who sponsored the 1971 bill that put the law into effect. Stewart said he would give the bill's sponsor, Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, as much help as he could.

Among other things, the bill would open meetings of the Advisory Budget Commission, the Council of State and the Legislative Services Commission. It would also provide a prison term of up to six months for an official convicted of violating the law and would provide machinery to void any action by a governmental body taken during an illegally closed meeting.

TESTING

Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, will head a subcommittee of the House Education Committee studying school testing bills backed by Gov. Jim Hunt. One bill calls for achievement testing of children in the first, second, third, sixth and ninth grades of public school. The other bill would require high school pupils to pass a competency test before they could graduate.

AGING

Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, chairman of the House Committee on Aging has filed four bills aimed at helping the elderly. One bill would upgrade the Office for Aging in the Department of Human Resources to a full division and another would appropriate funds to operate the division.

A third bill would create a commission to study needs of the state's elderly. The fourth bill would appropriate $1.9 million to the Department of Human Resources to raise the level of income at which an elderly person can still qualify for Medicaid.

turn political power over to majority blacks excluding Soviet armed, Cuban-trained guerrilla factions. The South African offer has disappeared from sight since being made to both the U.S. and Britain.

Judging from Young's blunt talk Monday evening, there is foreboding over what the U.S. may have in store for South Africa at the UN Security Council sessions later this month, with Young in the chair as council president.

The U.S. position for that session is not yet formulated, but it is taken for granted here that the Carter administration is at a critical turning point which will harden this nation's South African policy beyond anything in the past. With Young playing the major role in defining the new policy, that much is inevitable.

One of Young's top aides told us events in South Africa have been "marching backwards" since last fall's killings of blacks in the Johannesburg township of Soweto. The Security Council, Young's aide said, will have to take up the Soweto tragedy, new press censorship, the rising number of so-called "suicides" by black militants — strongly implying that the U.S. for the first time may play a leading role in targeting South Africa for punishment. In addition, the U.S. may back UN resolutions calling for a moratorium on new investments in South Africa and a mandatory embargo on arms shipments.

If Mr. Carter takes this hard line, the prospect of a U.S.-South African break would be enhanced, leading to a new, tougher and totally independent South Africa acting beyond restraint from Washington. If so, any hope for gradual solution of southern Africa's race problems will fade, replaced by the horrors of unavoidable racial wars.

offered him something else to eat. In the same labs you have white rats smoking tobacco and they're developing cancer all the time. Yet nobody in this country has dared to ban cigarettes from the marketplace. You have other rats breathing nothing but car fumes and they're dropping like flies. Yet there is no government effort to ban automobiles from the road. The only white rats they're picking on are those who were overdosed with a sugar substitute.

If the government was reasonable they would put on each package of Sweet 'n Low and on every bottle of diet cola a message similar to the ones they put on cigarettes. It could read: Surgeon General's Warning — "A recent test showed that 12 out of 44 white rats who were fed a fifth of their diet in saccharin found it hazardous to their health."

Make no mistake, we dieters aren't going to take this lying down. If they persist in banning saccharin we'll start buying the stuff from pushers on street corners. Mexico is already geared up to smuggle the stuff across the border. If we can't get our daily fix of saccharin legitimately, we'll let the Mafia do it for us.

So it's up to the government. Do they want my cousin Marvin or the Gambino family in the Sweet 'n Low business? It better make up its mind fast.

Farm Bureau And Pitt Board Meet

The Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors and the Pitt County Commissioners were special dinner guests of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Women Tuesday night.

Members discussed the solid waste problems of Pitt County. The county commissioners agreed with the Farm Bureau members that income taxes are much needed to increase the money necessary to provide all the services citizens are asking for. Members also discussed the Pitt Technical Institute status.

President D.R. House explained the democratic process by which the Farm Bureau policies are made.

Reports were presented by John Radford, Young Farmer and Rancher Committee Chairman; Mrs. Ruel Dilda, Women's Chairman; Jack Barnes, Office Manager; and Burney Baker, member of the staff of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation.

Gaylon Ambrose, a new extension agent was introduced as a special guest.

couldn't contribute money.

But Tower said the kind of manpower assistance that organized labor gives Democratic candidates is more valuable than money.

Although Carter's package did not suggest dollar amounts, a bill introduced in the House last week would provide taxpayer funding of up to $150,000 for congressional election races.

The other two elements of the Carter package were a constitutional amendment to eliminate the Electoral College and allow direct election of presidents, and a plan to amend the Hatch Act to permit greater participation in partisan politics by federal employees.

Many lawmakers believe the end is near for the Electoral College. Debate on the Hatch Act revision is likely to follow the same party line with a few Democrat defections that occurred when similar proposals were before Congress last year. Strong opposition by then-President Gerald R. Ford blocked their enactment.

Merchants See Changes In Coffee-Buying Patterns

By BARBARA MATHEWS
Reflector Staff Writer

Although the full impact of last week's increase in wholesale coffee prices will not be felt on the local level for a while, several Greenville merchants have reported changes in coffee buying patterns on the part of their customers.

Charles Overton of Overton's Supermarket said people are buying coffee in smaller amounts now.

"I have noticed an increase in the sales of two-ounce and six-ounce sizes of coffee as opposed to 10-ounce and two-pound sizes, which have almost quit selling," he said.

"People just can't afford to pay $6 for coffee. Instant coffee is selling better than the regular. There's less waste with the instant."

"And there's a big upswing in tea sales. While the weather was cold, we were selling a lot of cocoa, but right now tea is really moving along."

"But tea prices have gone up, too, lately due to this increased demand."

Durward Harris of Harris Supermarkets said his customers "have definitely changed their coffee-buying habits."

"They're buying the smaller jars — the two- and six-ounce jars are really selling," he said. "It used to be the 10-ounce size was the most popular, but those sales have slowed down."

"We're selling more tea and cocoa mix."

Harris feels a consumer boycott of coffee could work. "I'd like to see people stop buying coffee," he said.

"I think a boycott would work. The big companies are squeezing us, and it's really a rip-off situation."

"It's not a coffee shortage; we're having no problems getting the coffee. But coffee prices are four times what they were a couple of years ago, and coffee companies made their biggest profits ever last year."

Billy Wells, manager of Big Star Foods, similarly noted customers were buying coffee in smaller amounts.

"I think people are buying smaller jars of coffee and more cocoa and tea," he said.

"Because of the high price of coffee now, people are buying more instant coffee than fresh ground."

"We're almost constantly getting price changes on coffee. We're picking up some of the price increases ourselves and passing them on to the customers a little at a time."

According to R. L. James of the A & P grocery store, coffee sales are increasing due to fear of further increases in the price of the beverage.

"People are buying what's on special," said James.

"They are buying our ground coffee because they are afraid of it going up in price even more. We sold a tremendous amount of coffee at 40 cents off last week. People are buying it and freezing it."

"And tea sales are up tremendously. We're selling an excessive amount again because people fear the prices will go up even further. But I feel this demand for tea will drive tea prices up even more."

Winn-Dixie's Wayne McKinney has noticed no real differences in his customers' coffee buying patterns.

"Instant is selling a little better than regular," he said.

"But sales of the 10-ounce jar of instant coffee is about the same as always."

"As of right now, I expect no tea price increase. The movement of the tea for us is the same. If anything, we're experiencing more difficulty getting the tea, but the price most likely won't change that much."

Coffee sales in local coffee shops and restaurants have been unaffected by the increase, despite a nickel-a-cup increase in price at most places.

"People are drinking more coffee," according to Rick Kimmel, manager of Sambo's Restaurant.

"Consumption is up. We've experienced a slight increase in our coffee sales because we give unlimited refills and the coffee drinkers like that."

The five-cent increase hasn't slowed coffee consumption

Krispy Kreme either, according to manager J. L. Pulley.

"It hasn't made a difference," said Pulley. "My coffee is still holding its own. In fact, my sales may be going up. Maybe I'm pulling customers from places where coffee is more expensive."

"I anticipate at least a 50 cents a pound increase in wholesale prices, but I sure hope it doesn't come to that."

Remodeling Shop For Opening Next Month

Remodeling work is progressing at 110 E. Fourth Street in preparation for the April opening of Certain Things Inc., new fashion shop for women.

The new store will be owned and operated by Eleanor B. Cherry and Teresa Cherry Hart of Greenville as partners.

Mrs. Cherry explained that the women's apparel facility, offering some 1,400 square feet of selling space, is scheduled to open for business on the weekend of April 15.

Noting that Certain Things Inc. will offer a "totally different look from anything Greenville has had," she noted that the interior of the shop will feature white walls with natural finish wood accents. The exterior of the building will be white stucco.

She explained that the shop will feature a two-level floor with black and white checked tile on the front section of the facility and a stepped up level in the rear section with natural pine flooring.

"We'll add some antique pieces and have lots of sunlight and plants," Mrs. Cherry observed. A side display window is included in the remodeling plans and customers will be able to utilize a convenient rear entrance as well as the Fourth Street door.

Office and storage facilities are planned for the rear part of the building, she said.

Customers will have access to parking at both the front and side of the new business, it was pointed out.

Certain Things Inc. will be open five days a week.

Get Music To Learn By

By NAOAKI USUI
TOKYO (AP) — Some Japanese experts say such things as Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1 can be a help to students while studying math, or listening to Paul Anka doing "My Way" might make the study of English grammar easier.

When publisher Masao Sumino heard their views he jumped in and started marketing what is called "Easy Learning Music." His product consists of a set of eight cassette tapes of varied kinds of music. Sumino said he sells an average of 30,000 sets a month for 13,500 yen (about $45 each).

In Japan's highly competitive society, one of the main means of climbing the professional and social ladder is to enroll in a handful of prestigious universities after attending leading senior and junior high schools. All require passing tough entrance examinations.

Preparation includes hours of intensive study, starting in elementary school years, and can extend to special private schools that hold classes on Sundays and offer trial examinations.

"Of course, these young people are likely to get tired of studying, studying, studying. But the Easy Learning Music keeps them from being bored as well as helps them concentrate," said Sumino in an interview.

The musical study aid system was "designed" by Akira Tago, professor at Chiba University and a well known psychologist, author of "Psychological Guidance for Students" and music fan, who said he "always needs music while working."

Model Contest

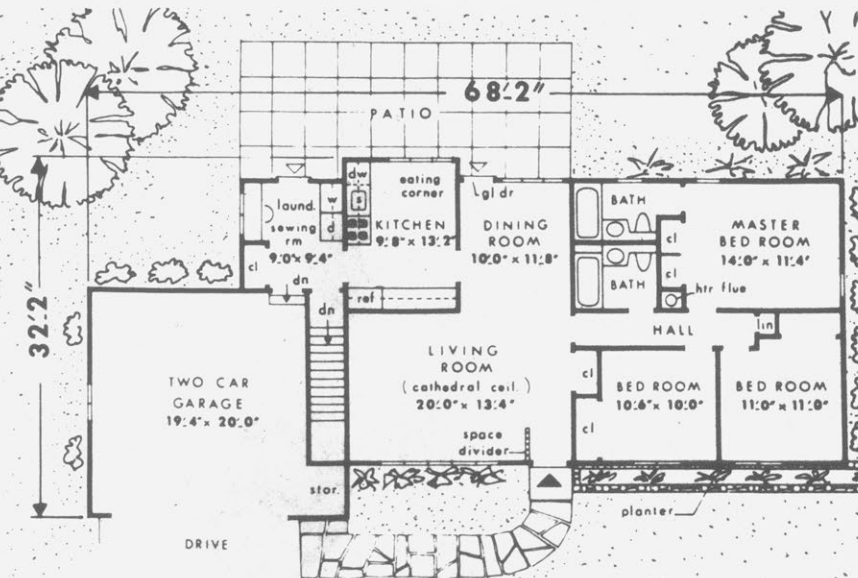

The Greenville Flight Club will sponsor a control line model airplane contest March 27, beginning at 12 noon and lasting most of the afternoon.

The event will be held on the field adjacent to the Allied Health Building at East Carolina University, near the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street.

Events will include combat flying (dogfighting) and racing. Flyers from North and South Carolina and Virginia are expected to be competing for trophies in the various events.

Contest director Bill Waggoner said the general public is invited to attend the contest which is sanctioned by the Academy of Model Aeronautics.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report HOUSE
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 10-16.

VIETNAM PARDON Adopted, 220 for and 187 against, an amendment to prohibit spending certain Justice Department and Immigration and Naturalization Service appropriations to implement President Carter's pardon of Vietnam era draft evaders. It was attached to a fiscal 1977 appropriations bill (HR 4877), later passed and sent to the Senate.

The vote might not thwart the pardon, since funds could be obtained from other appropriations bills and the Senate might reject the prohibition. At a minimum, it was a symbolic rejection of Carter's pardon.

Rep. John Myers (R-Ind.), the sponsor, called the vote "possibly the only opportunity you will have to express your views on... the pardon. If the Members feel the pardon was wrong... the vote is yes to restrict and limit the funds. If the Members feel otherwise... they can vote against my amendment."

Rep. John Slack (D-W. Va.), an opponent of the amendment, said "it appears to be an attempt to nullify the pardons granted by President Carter. (It) would make it impossible to administer the program and would create a chaotic situation."

Reps. L. H. Fountain (D-2),

Charles Whitley (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Charles Rose (D-7), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "yea."

Rep. Richardson Preyer (D-6) voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1) and Stephen Neal (D-5) did not vote.

RHODESIAN ORE Passed 250 for and 146 against, a bill (HR 1746) giving President Carter authority to stop imports of chrome from Rhodesia.

In effect, the bill repeals the so-called Byrd Amendment which permitted chrome imports from Rhodesia in defiance of United Nations' sanctions against trade with the white-minority government of that African nation. The bill later was passed by the Senate and signed into law by Carter.

Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.), a supporter, said: "At stake... is the integrity of our commitment to human rights and majority rule. At stake is the integrity of our international legal obligations. At stake, in part, is the prospect for peaceful settlement of the issues afflicting southern Africa."

Rep. Dan Daniel (D-Va.), an opponent, said: "The excuse in the Congress for this action was human rights. Now we find our purchase of chrome ore and ferrochrome must be made from such countries as the Soviet Union, Albania and India, none of which has shown any concern for human rights. How hypocritical can we be?"

Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

Jones and Neal did not vote.

WOMEN Adopted, 249 for and 157 against, an amendment requiring an equal number of men and women to sit on the proposed 20-member National Commission on Neighborhoods, a panel that would advise the Department of Housing and Urban Development on remedying urban decay. The amendment was attached to HR 3843, a HUD funding bill. Despite this vote, the proposed commission later was stricken from the bill.

Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio), sponsor of the amendment, said that women are under-represented throughout government, and that "Members who believe that women have as much talent, perspective and intelligence as men will support this amendment."

Rep. Edward Koch (D-N.Y.), an opponent, said "it would be easier to vote for it rather than to have to explain my vote." However, he added, "What is required is that all people—men and women—without regard to race, religion or national origin be considered on the basis of their individual merit. Affirmative action programs I will support—quotas never."

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain and Martin voted "nay."

SENATE
PUBLIC WORKS Adopted, 65 for and 24 against, an amendment to defeat President Carter's plan to stop construction of 19 massive water development projects, most of them located in the West.

Carter earlier stated his intention to shut off these public works projects beginning in the fiscal 1978 budget. Although this amendment applied to fiscal 1977 expenditures, it demonstrated the resolve of the Congress to fight Carter on the issue. The amendment was attached to HR 11, later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Bennett Johnston (D-La.), the sponsor, summarized the resentment of many senators that Carter would seek to kill projects within their states. "Apparently some in the executive do not understand what the law is and we are reminding them what the law is," he said.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wisc.), an opponent of the amendment, said: "I respect and support the instinct of the President to finally say, 'For heavens sake, let us not dam every river, every stream, and every watershed in this country just as part of some project that is desired by some groups or Members of Congress.'"

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "yea."

RHODESIAN ORE Passed, 66 for and 26 against, a bill (HR 1746) which in effect puts the U. S. in compliance with the United Nations sanction against importing Rhodesian chrome. The House earlier passed the bill (see above vote) and this vote sent the measure to President Carter, who signed it and ordered a halt to such imports.

Sen. Dick Clark (D-Ia.), a supporter, said enactment of the bill "will implement the announced policy of President Carter and that of three previous Presidents — Republican and Democrat alike," and will "recognize political and economic realities to which the United States must now, after years of debate, meaningfully respond."

Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) said that if chrome imports from Rhodesia are stopped "then we will be without approximately one-fifth of our supply of ferrochrome. The impact of that on our economy, in terms of jobs in the industry and the price of stainless steel, would be rapid and drastic."

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

ABSENTEEISM Moved, 71 for and two against, to instruct the Sergeant at Arms "to request the attendance of absent senators." There was no debate on the motion by Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.).

The motion came during consideration of legislation to cut off U. S. imports of Rhodesian chrome (see above vote). After a quorum call showed only eight senators on the floor, Helms made the quorum so that legislative motion in hopes of achieving a business could proceed. Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

NCNB 7 1/2% Six-Year Certificates. A lot of banks have lowered their "Big Rate," but we've kept ours.

In the past few months, many banks in North Carolina have reduced the rate of interest they pay on long-term savings certificates. But, at NCNB, we've kept our rate for 6-year, $1,000 Certificates at 7 1/2%—the highest annual rate the law allows a bank to pay. What's more, we give you flexibility on interest payments. You can 1) have interest added to your Certificate, 2) receive periodic interest payments by check, or 3) have the interest automatically deposited to your NCNB Checking Account.

For the complete details, stop in at any NCNB office. NCNB 7 1/2% Certificates, and the NCNB Savings Program. Just one way "Cash-Flow" Banking works to help you make the most of the money you make. And save.

Federal law and regulation prohibit the payment of a time deposit prior to maturity unless three months of the interest thereon is forfeited and interest on the amount withdrawn is reduced to the Regular Savings rate. Member FDIC. Each depositor insured to $40,000.

Bristly Locust Generates Its Own Nitrogen

A new plant with the rare ability to make its own nitrogen may soon aid some of North Carolina's most troublesome eroding areas, according to State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

The plant is Arnot bristly locust, developed at the Soil Conservation Service Plant Materials Center at Big Flats, N.Y., according to Plant Materials Specialist S. I. Dronen of Raleigh.

The plant's ability to generate nitrogen makes it especially well suited for growing on dry and infertile sites such as gravel pit banks and mica mine spoil.

Bristly locust is a native plant in the mountains of North Carolina. The new Arnot selection is an improved variety derived from native plants. It is an open-branched shrub that grows into thickets, spreading by underground root suckers. The name comes from soft reddish-brown bristles on twigs and branches.

Pink flowers in late May and early June make Arnot bristly locust a valuable landscape beautification plant as well as an outstanding erosion control plant. Spring is the optimum time for planting seedlings. In the mountains, seedlings should be set no later than April 15. In other parts of the state April 1 is a practical deadline.

The new variety was first planted in North Carolina in 1970 on a mica mine area in mountainous Mitchell County. Since that planting it has been tried in other areas and is well adapted to the Blue Ridge, Piedmont, and Sandhills areas. Arnot bristly locust is well adapted to coarse, textured soils but has not been very successful on heavy clay soils.

The local Soil Conservation Service office has further information about the bristly locust.

FINALLY KNOWS — Loubertha Braxton Smith did not know she was really 61 until she got her birth certificate recently after almost two years of trying to cut through bureaucratic red tape. She was born on a Louisiana plantation and no record was made and kept of her birth but with the help of Margie Regnier in the Racine (Wisconsin) County clerk of courts office she managed to get a birth certificate making March 27, 1915 her birthday. Quality Transplants Are Primary Need Quality transplants are necessary to produce quality tobacco crops, according to Gaylon Ambrose, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent.

A tobacco plant about five to six inches long from the base of the root to the ball of the bud has generally given the best results, according to Ambrose.

The transplant should have a strong stalk about the size of a pencil. Stalk and leaf should be neither too hard and tough, nor too tender and succulent. Tall, spindly plants and short stocky plants should be avoided, Ambrose explained.

In dry windy weather, the tall, tender plant will wilt and lie down on the soil. Rain or heavy dew may stick it to the ground and it will have difficulty straightening up. A tall spindly, hard plant will frequently button early following an early, cold season and dry weather. Excessively heavy-seeding rates cause the plants to be spindly and "leggy" which results in weak plants which do not live nor grow off well when transplanted to the field, according to Ambrose.

Tobacco plants that are big, bushy, stocky plants tend to button early in a dry season. Large leaf surfaces increase the transpiration rate which leads to transplant shock, slow starting and irregular stand. Excessively light seeding rates will result in plants which are bunched. Broken stands, irregular growth and irregular maturity will not provide quality tobacco production, according to Ambrose.

Old Money And New Is Drawn To Palm Beach Life

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Where in the world can you see poodles being driven to their appointments at a pet beauty parlor in chauffeur-driven limousines? Palm Beach, of course. And the pampered pooches of America's richest winter resort know their place. They sit in the back seat upright, the better to display their jeweled collars. Vulgar displays of wealth are not new to this carefully manicured social sandbar where ocean front property sells for $3,000 a foot — when available. Soon after the Vanderbilts, Whitneys, Gerrys, Cushings, Wanamakers, Goulds and Astors gave the infant resort their imprimatur in the 1890s, the nouveau riche began to register at its grand hotels. Some stayed, built palatial villas and became today's Old Guard.

The continuous mix of old money and new from all over the United States has gradually changed Palm Beach from one of the most snobbish resorts to one of the most democratic. Almost anyone with a fortune and without a criminal record can "make it" socially in Palm Beach, although money alone cannot open the doors of the starchy Everglades and Beach Clubs to newcomers and most of the resort's sizable Jewish colony.

Palm Beach today is essentially a home community made up of wealthy to super rich families who have become residents for reasons of weather and Florida's lack of state income tax. One of its newest residents and boosters is astronaut Edgar D. Mitchell, who established a business here and would like to be mayor someday.

Transient vacationers still stay at hotels, and there are only two that count—the impressive seafront Breakers, a designated National Landmark that is celebrating its 50th anniversary, and the more intimate Colony. But most of the social action goes on in Palm Beach's beautiful houses.

Million dollar mansions, in architectural styles ranging from pseudo-Spanish to neo-Regency, separate the real social swells from people content to nest in the rapidly growing number of condominium apartments, which start at $100,000 for a one-bedroom efficiency unit. But Palm Beach houses never seem big enough for the average party, which tends to take the form of a supper dance.

"You really need a tent in the garden," said Mrs. Victor W. Farris, whose husband invented the disposable paper milk container. Mrs. Farris rents brightly striped tents seating up to 300 guests and lit by crystal chandeliers, a preference shared by such hostesses as Alabama steel heiress Mrs. F. Warrington Gillette, Jr., and cosmetics queen Estee Lauder. "They're easy to air condition — but we didn't have to worry about that this winter," Mrs. Farris added.

The coldest winter season in Palm Beach's history ended March 19 with the Cancer Ball.

The chill, cloudy weather kept tourists away from Worth Avenue's celebrated array of 165 shops and fashion boutiques but did not crimp the social activity. Mort Kaye, the resorts veteran and more or less official photographer, described the staggering succession of private parties and charity balls as "sensational."

"There's no accounting for it except that the winter was worse up North," Kaye said.

There are balls and dinner dances to benefit every known disease and cultural activity, many of them at the Breakers' spectacular Venetian Ballroom.

Palm Beach prides itself on being "the Most Philanthropic Community in America," and charity has done more to bring gentiles and Jews together in common enterprise than any other aspect of Palm Beach life.

For $200 or so for the price of a pair of tickets, black tie and a couture gown, and a goodly display of jewels (tiaras are still worn on occasion), any Palm Beach couple can join in the charity fun and get a chance to see some of the celebrated visitors to the resort.

This season they included Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, Henry Ford II, Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward, Ronald Regan, the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whiteys, Oral Roberts, Carol Channing, Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen, Roberta Peters, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Burt Reynolds, Gloria Vanderbilt, Louise Nevelson, Joan Collins, Mayor Teddy Kolleck of Jerusalem, the older brother of the Dalai Lama, and a clutch of U.N. ambassadors.

First nights at the Palm Beach Playhouse and art show openings at the Wally Findlay and Palm Beach galleries are also chic formal occasions. These events are meticulously recorded in the photo-filled Social Pictorial, one of several Palm Beach publications that have not heard of the death of the newspaper society page.

"We're in a geographic area that is a little short on culture, and I'm trying to do something about it," said Patrick Lannan, a Chicago-born conglomerateur who introduced Palm Beach to modern art before it had even countenanced Picasso. Lannan just added 28 galleries to his home to display one of the world's largest collections of contemporary art to the public, by appointment only.

"Art lovers from all over the world have come to see my collection, which makes Palm Beach an art mecca of sorts," Lannan observed.

Nobody knows exactly how many people come to Palm Beach in the winter, but there are about 10,000 residents of which 6,600 are registered voters. A majority of them recently elected a new mayor, Chicago meat-packing heir William Cudahy, to succeed New York stockbroker Earl E. T. Smith, one of whose three wives was a Vanderbilt. Smith retired from the non-paying job after serving six years and spending more than $100,000 of his own money on Palm Beach.

"This is a wonderful community and we try to keep it that way," said Smith, who successfully battled high-rise condominiums and other atrocities. Palm Beach has a superb police force and is virtually without crime. It has the most elegant shopping center — Polinciana Plaza — in America and another of the same ilk soon will be built by art dealer Findlay at the head of Worth Avenue.

Palm Beach has no mortuaries, cemeteries or hospitals, but all such facilities are available in West Palm Beach across Lake Worth. Right now, the resort actually has only a few dark clouds on its otherwise sunny horizon. Florida's lethal coconut palm disease has hit Palm Beach, but trees are being injected with terramycin to slow its advance.

More worrying, however, to most Palm Beachers is Hustler Magazine's rental of the estate of the late Jock McLean, of the Hope Diamond family, for $10,000 a month as a "weekend retreat." Whatever obscenities were expected have not materialized.

A more chronic headache is the fate of Mar-a-Lago, the 112-room pile built by cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post and willed by her to the state of Florida for an official guest house worthy of presidents and prime ministers.

Tuscarora Chief To Be Guest Of Shad Festival

GRIFTON — Chief Arnold Hewitt, Chief of the Tuscarora Indian Nation, has accepted an invitation to visit Grifton for the 1977 Shad Festival April 22-24. The theme of this year's Shad Festival is Tuscarora Indians.

Chief Hewitt lives in upstate New York near Niagara Falls, where the remnants of the Tuscarora tribe moved in the 1700's after a series of bloody Indian wars in Eastern North Carolina broke the strength of the Tuscaroras here.

The Five Nations of the Iroquois in upstate New York, relatives of the North Carolina Tuscaroras, accepted the Tuscaroras as the Sixth Nation of the Iroquois Confederacy.

Chief Hewitt will be one of the judges during the Shad Festival parade Saturday morning, April 23. In addition to the usual awards for the best float, best overall unit, best non-motorized and best motorized representations of a fish, a trophy will be given for the best Tuscarora Indian unit. The deadline for notifying parade chairman, Steve Rogers of intent to enter the parade is April 10.

The reason Tuscarora Indians was chosen as the theme for this year's Shad Festival is because a major Tuscarora village, Catechna, was located in or near the present site of Grifton.

Psychologist Helping Snake Phobia Victims

By ROBERT W. WELKOS
Associated Press Writer
RENO, Nev. (AP) — King Kong tapping at your window or Alfred Hitchcock's birds scratching at your screen door are enough to give anyone nightmares, but probably nothing frightens humans in the real world more than a snake.

Just ask Nancy Adams. The 26-year-old master's level psychologist counsels people who are deathly afraid of snakes.

"I think part of the reason for a fear of snakes is that you never expect to see them," Miss Adams said. "I don't care what you see, if you don't expect to see it you're going to jump."

"There are some people who are incapacitated by their fear of snakes," she continued. "Often it is characterized by nightmares or really strong physiological arousal and fear."

"I think most people have fears of one kind or another," she said. "It's just difficult to understand the intensity of fear some of these people have." Since last June, Miss Adams has worked under a federal grant counseling persons with snake phobia. Sessions are held at the University of Nevada.

Since then, she has counseled approximately 40 persons from the Reno area in an effort to cure them of their snake fears.

"Quite a number of people are afraid of snakes to the point where it interferes with their enjoyment of life," Miss Adams said. "They're not comfortable hiking or camping or going to the zoo or seeing a picture of a snake," she added.

"We're helping people to reduce those fears," she said. "I think it's very realistic but the types of people we work with are people who have fears so severe that it really interferes with their enjoyment of life."

People who sign up for Miss Adams' counseling service usually tremble at the sight of any snake, whether it be a venomous water moccasin or a harmless garter snake.

And, she noted, the persons seeking help have ranged in age from 14 to 65 and she has counseled as many men as women.

Miss Adams blames parents, the news media and myths as major reasons persons develop fear of snakes.

"I think a lot of fear comes from parents," she said. "It's amazing to see how often children look to their parents to see how they react."

She said motion pictures of ten depict snakes as something terrifying while, in reality, the snakes used in the filming are docile.

And then there is religion and mythology.

"If you look at all religions and myths, a snake is usually associated with everything from virility to the occult," she said. "Snakes are probably associated with more myths than any other creature."

Miss Adams said the snake counseling she provided free of charge usually required only 10 hours of one-on-one discussions with the emphasis on learning theory. "Fears are learned and they can be unlearned," she maintained.

She noted that a psychiatrist would charge $40 to $70 an hour for curing snake fear.

Now that's a frightening thought.

Changing To Metrics Is Slow Work

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The first person to push for the metric system — a Frenchman — lost his life. And, opponents of metrics in Russia, China and Latin America saying they would rather fight than switch, staged uprisings.

The United States, a world leader in industry, is making the change inch by centimeter.

The resistance is evident even among the young — one 9-year-old in the Tidewater wrote President Carter in exasperation:

"The metric system is bugging me. Can't the government just throw it down the drain? We've done without it so far."

In the 1790s, French revolutionaries did away with the chairman of a commission which sought to replace a traditional system with the more scientific metrics.

Not until 1837 did the French — under compulsion by a Napoleonic decree — abandon tradition.

England started converting to metrics 12 years ago, leaving the United States to share company with Sierra Leone, Burma and Malaysia as the only nations sticking with traditional measure.

The United States began switching on a voluntary switch two years ago. Liquor bottlers introduced metric sizes last fall and will convert to six basic metric sizes within two years, putting the cork on the traditional fifth.

One soda company is marketing a two-liter bottle which it says gives the customer 5 per cent more than the 64 ounce size.

About half the states are putting distances in kilometers on their road signs, cc's are showing up on measuring cups for cooking and some hamburger stands are passing out metric measuring sticks.

Old Dominion University engineering professor Hirst Lederle says he expects the conversion in the United States to be complete in 15 years.

"But I must admit U.S. public schools are not doing enough to teach metrics," Lederle said.

"I've been pushing conversion to metrics for years because it is logical," he said. "With metrics, measurements of distance, volume and weight all interrelate and are easily translated from one to the other."

Another virtue, he said, is the metric measurements are divisible by 10.

American industry has resisted the change because of retooling costs, he said, but the pressure from international trade is breaking down their resistance.

Dr. Alan Mandell, professor of educational curriculum, is conducting a pilot metric in-service course for teachers.

Results of the course will be included in a request for federal funds to conduct a full-scale program to bring metric education to elementary school teachers in Norfolk, Chesapeake, Virginia Beach and Portsmouth, Mandell said.

Curtis E. Wall, an assistant education curriculum professor, said the emphasis on converting back and forth from English to metric measure is a mistake.

"It is much better to measure within the system and to learn metrics the way we used to learn the English system — not compared to or converted from anything," he said.

Conversion is too much for the average school child to grasp, he said.

Edwin C. Spencer, a colleague, said the key is to visualize the system. For example, he said, a common paper clip is about a centimeter wide and the thickness of the metal is about one millimeter.

"You've got to visualize the system," Spencer said. "I try to liken it to learning a foreign language. When you can think and dream in a foreign language without continually needing to translate, then you really know it."

Introducing A New Tea Blend

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. (UPI) — First there was the tea bag, and then instant tea. Now a major importer of the beverage is introducing a blend designed for use in automatic coffee brewing machines. A 12-1/2 ounce canister of the product makes about 210 cups of tea for less than two cents a cup. The blend of orange pekoe and pekoe cut black tea can also be used to make iced tea with the same appliance.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices, down for four straight sessions, revived a little today. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose a fraction in the early going, and advances took a lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that some of the glamor issues, including IBM, started to recover late in Tuesday's session, an indication the market might rally today. Early prices today included: Sony Corp., the NYSE's most active issue Tuesday, up 1/4 to 10 1/2. The company reported higher quarterly earnings. Mattel Inc. was next, down 1/4 to 5 1/2 and Westinghouse Electric was third, unchanged at 17 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gave up 2.58 to 950.96. Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 3-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 18.66 million shares, against 18.04 million on Monday. The NYSE's composite index lost .16 to 54.93. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .23 at 112.59.

Seniors Toured Belhaven, Bath

The Elm Street Senior Citizens Club toured Belhaven after its business meeting Thursday. Seventy-six members and guests traveled to the River Forest Manor in Belhaven for a birthday luncheon honoring Mrs. L.L. Rives and Mrs. Eleanor Clark. Gifts were presented and birthday cake was served to the members.

Following the luncheon, the members toured Belhaven and Bath. At the business meeting, Mrs. Sarah Ashton, president greeted the members and read "Shamrock". She also explained why the shamrock is the emblem that is worn to represent St. Patrick's Day.

Mrs. Cotten Smith and Mrs. Ada Smith were also presented birthday gifts.

Cher Files For Separation

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Singer Cher Bono has filed suit for legal separation from her husband, rock singer Gregg Allman.

The Superior Court petition filed Tuesday marks the second time she has gone to court over marital problems with Allman. Cher, 30, requested custody of their 8-month-old son, Elijah Blue, and asked that the 28-year-old Allman not be granted alimony payments.

The couple was married June 30, 1975, three days after Cher divorced her husband of 11 years, Sonny Bono. Cher filed for divorce from Allman nine days later, then asked to have the suit dismissed.

Feliciano Wins A Court Order

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer-songwriter Jose Feliciano has won a court order stopping RCA Records from releasing an album of the guitarist's hits without his approval.

Feliciano filed the suit to stop the release of an album containing his top-selling songs unless he was allowed to approve the selections, the album cover design and album notes.

Zaire Invaders Are Firmly Entrenched

By LARRY HEINZERLING Associated Press Writer KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Katangan rebels appear to be firmly entrenched and fighting hard in southern Zaire despite government claims of success against them.

It was learned Tuesday that the invading exiles from neighboring Angola apparently have regained control of Kasaji, a town 130 miles west of Kolwezi, the copper mining center in southern Shaba province, the former Katanga.

Kasaji was first reported taken by the invaders on March 14 after heavy fighting in which President Mobutu Sese Seko's forces were estimated to have suffered about 200 casualties. The government claimed on Saturday that its troops had recaptured the town, which is nearly halfway between the Angolan border and the Kolwezi mines, the likely immediate target of the invasion.

Copper from Shaba is Zaire's biggest export, and about half of the U.S. supply of cobalt, a byproduct of the copper mines, comes from the province.

The Katangans also were reported still holding the towns of Dilolo, on the border west of Kasaji and Kolwezi; Sandoa and Kesenge, and Kapanga, 155 miles northeast of Dilolo and 45 miles from the border, despite government claims of "massive bombing raids" that were driving the invaders back into Angola.

Foreign observers doubted these claims, estimating that Zaire's air force at the most has only eight operational jets and that they carry only two rockets each.

The invasion force is estimated to consist of 2,000 Katangan troops who fled to Angola after losing a war for the independence of their province from the former Belgian Congo in the 1960s. Five thousand more Katangan troops are reported still in Angola.

Zaire's 25,000-man army is handicapped by fuel shortages, poor communications and long supply lines. According to one report, the government owes its troops in some areas two months pay but has managed to pay those in Shaba.

Mobutu trained Cuban troops in Angola charged and may be leading the invaders. Cuban President Fidel Castro denies this. Mobutu also charges that the Katangans are equipped with Soviet arms, which is quite likely, and the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua alleged today that the invasion "is a war of aggression masterminded and financed by Soviet imperialism."

The United States, which has a $35-million military aid program for Zaire, has shipped Mobutu's government two plane-loads of so-called nonlethal equipment since the invasion, including spare parts for transport planes, troop carriers, rations, uniforms and medical supplies. Belgium has sent ammunition and light weapons.

Insulation Loans Slated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven rural electric cooperatives and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland signed agreements Tuesday for a program to help families finance the cost of home insulation.

The highest income a rural family of four can have and qualify for the program is $15,600 a year, an Agriculture Department spokesman said.

Under the agreements, the families may borrow up to $1,500 for insulation and installation. The spokesman said the savings in fuel costs should offset the five-year, $500 cost of borrowing the money at 8 percent interest.

The program mandates greater insulation standards than currently exist for government housing programs, Bergland said.

That is a step toward "thinking seriously about alternative energy sources" that are impractical without better sealed homes, he said.

The Farmers Home Administration is funding the program. Local cooperatives that participate will handle the individuals' applications, approve contractors and bill the agency when the work is completed.

The families will have the cost of the loan included in their monthly electric bill from the coop.

Signing the agreements were the Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp., of Lenoir, N.C.; Adams Electric Cooperative, Camp Point, Ill.; Verendrye Electric Cooperative Inc., Vevava, N.D.; Northern Lights Inc., Sand Point, Idaho; Guadalupe Valley Electric Cooperative Inc., Gonzales, Tex.; Farmers Rural Electric Cooperative Corp., Glasgow, Ky., and Black River Electric Cooperative, Sumter, S.C.

In order to present facts more vividly, a skit was enacted with members participating in impromptu fashion. James L. Rees of the East Carolina University Speech and Drama Department wrote the framework of the skit. The Rev. William Hadden and Mrs. Roy Schaal were in charge of presentation.

These questions were asked: "Do you regard yourself as a global citizen?" and "To what extent are you concerned with humanitarian considerations for individuals in developing nations?"

Will Seek Proving Witness Financed

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State officials will seek to prove in a May hearing that Wilmington 10 prosecution witness Allen Ray Hall was financially supported when he recanted his testimony last fall, says Richard N. League, assistant state attorney general.

League would give no details of the evidence, saying only that it came from the FBI.

Hall was a key witness in the 1972 trial, in which the Rev. Ben Chavis and nine other young people were sentenced to a total of 282 years in prison on charges of arson and conspiracy.

The trial stemmed from the firebombing of a white-owned grocery during Wilmington's 1971 racial upheaval.

Judge George M. Fountain of Tarboro is scheduled to preside over the post-conviction hearing the week of May 9 to determine whether the defendants should have a new trial.

Hall has claimed since last fall that he lied during the trial and was offered money by the prosecution to leave the state rather than testify at a new trial.

State officials have denied Hall's claims and League said he had faith in the state's handling of the case.

"As near as we can tell, it's clean," he said. "We're going to take that position."

State Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten and two aides were scheduled to meet today with U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell in Washington to discuss federal investigations into charges of misconduct by prosecutors in the case.

But League says probes by the FBI and U.S. Justice Department have "come up with a goose egg."

humanitarian considerations for individuals in developing nations?"

It was brought out that developed nations have an obligation to carry out policies which will fulfill basic human needs everywhere. Discussion focused on liberalizing trade policies; efforts to improve product quality and international marketing techniques; and particularly, the establishment of international standards and agreements to regulate overseas corporate investment policies and practices.

Following careful study of the UN, members will come to a consensus to formulate national League position.

Groucho, 86, Is Out Of Hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Groucho Marx has been released from a hospital after undergoing surgery in which doctors inserted a new joint in his fractured right hip two weeks ago.

Dr. Robert Rosenfeld, his orthopedic surgeon, said Tuesday that the 86-year-old Marx was one of the oldest patients to successfully undergo such an operation.

When he entered the hospital, Groucho quipped: "I'll do anything to miss my cook's food."

Killer Gets Life Term

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte man was sentenced to life imprisonment Tuesday for killing a convenience store clerk here, but other charges were dropped after plea bargaining.

Michael Thomas Bean, 18, was convicted of second-degree murder and armed robbery in the June 17 death of Susan Paulson.

Miss Paulson, a Baltimore, Md., native, disappeared early that morning from the store. Her decomposed body was later found in a creek near the store.

Charges of kidnaping, breaking and entering and larceny were dropped against Bean in exchange for his guilty plea.

Bean also pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the death of Andrew Gregory Waynick, 19, who shared an apartment with Bean and 27-year-old Laura B. Sweet.

Waynick was found shot to death in the apartment. Bean said he was playing with a gun when it accidentally discharged, killing Waynick.

Bean told police he and Waynick robbed the convenience store, abducted Miss Paulson and that Waynick shot her to death.

Miss Sweet, however, told police that both Bean and Waynick shot the woman.

Prince Attends Jazz Concert

TORONTO (AP) — Prince Andrew, Queen Elizabeth's son, enjoyed the beginning of the week-long March vacation from his school at Lakefield, Ont., by attending a jazz concert at a city art gallery.

Philip Harris, curator of The Art Works, said Tuesday that Prince Andrew arrived at the gallery Saturday night accompanied by two Royal Canadian Mounted Police guards and listened to the Jim Galloway Quintet play 1 1/4 hours of jazz.

Harris said the prince slipped in while the lights were low and left before many of the 40 persons in the audience were aware he was there.

Wind A Problem For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
A strong wind that blew all afternoon from left field made it a pitchers' day yesterday as the University of Maryland tangled with the Pirates of East Carolina at Harrington Field.

inning.
It wasn't that the Pirates couldn't get men on base; they did, but they left eight stranded, six of them in scoring position.
It seemed that the Pirates couldn't get a break in the game from the start. That was shown early in the contest, when Sonny Wooten drew a walk. Bobby Supel followed with a blast that would have landed close to Charles Boulevard on a normal day, but the ball was caught just steps from the fence due to the wind, and then an amazing throw all the way from left to first doubled off Wooten.

While the wind continued to play tricks on the Pirates the rest of the day, Maryland seemed to enjoy it, coming up with some outstanding defensive plays, including one diving catch in center that robbed the Bucs of another chance of a run.

Meanwhile, the Pirates had their troubles finding the handle on the ball, making three errors that helped the Terrapins pick up two of their runs.
Maryland first threatened in the third, with a one out walk to Clifton Parker. He advanced on an infield out, but then died at second.
Finally, in the fifth, the Terps broke the ice. Richard Cann led off with a walk and Mark Poehlman, attempting to bunt, put the ball down just a few feet in front of the plate. Pirate hurler Larry Daughtridge fielded it, but slipped down, and Poehlman reached safely before the throw could be made. Parker tried to bunt them up, but the Bucs got Cann going into third. Then, Mark Harris reached on an error, loading the bases, and Frank Thomas drew a walk, forcing in a run. Two fly balls ended the frame without further damage.

There. Wooten walked and stole second in the seventh, but also got no further.
Then, in the ninth, Wooten walked, Raymie Styon was hit by a pitch and with two away, Robert Brinkley walked, but a called third strike on a fullcount to Rick Koryda ended the hopes of the Bucs of a comeback.
The defeat dropped the Pirate record to 6-5, while Maryland climbed to 4-2. The two teams were to meet again this afternoon at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Cagers Put UNCC On Map

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "When I first came here, people kept saying, 'Why didn't you go to Chapel Hill?'" remembers George Parker, a senior at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Some trends have remained — 75 per cent of the students still commute from the surrounding area. Admissions applications, however, have skyrocketed and students are staying four years instead of transferring.

The team has given the student body a rallying point and given the school and faculty a common ground that could never have been established in the classroom.

Until the team went to the National Invitation Tournament last year, there was no school song. A song was hastily penned, reflecting the attitudes of students and faculty with the line, "You're gonna know our name."

And Colvard admits that, for at least a while, much of the school's reputation will be established on the basketball court.

UNLV Is Finally In The Big Time

By JOHN M. WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian, one of the winningest active coaches in college basketball today, has never been accused of being unemotional or of underestimating an opponent.

It's no different this week. What is different is that after five disappointing losses in regional play over the past seven years, Tarkanian will finally take a team to the big time: the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta Saturday and a date with fifth-ranked North Carolina.

The fourth-ranked Runnin' Rebels have been accused of putting the ball up from the locker room or the arena's mezzanine, but the team shoots nearly 50 per cent from the floor, and has six men averaging in double figures. Two of them are substitutes.

Meanwhile Tarkanian, a stubby, balding Armenian, prowls the sidelines, growls at his players and chews on towels and his fingernails.

If UNLV and semifinalist Marquette meet in the NCAA finals, Tarkanian and Warriors Coach Al McGuire will be competing for the ranting and fig-digging title on the sidelines.

But Marquette will have to get past North Carolina-Charlotte, and Nevada-Las Vegas will have to defeat the ever-tough Tar Heels of North Carolina to produce the colorful coach matchup next Monday night.

Preparing for the Western subregionals two weeks ago, Tarkanian said the Rebels, 28-2,

That's not all, folks: "Most teams do one or two things. They do five or six things, and everything they do, they do well," Tarkanian said of North Carolina. "They're a superbly coached ball club—they just do everything so well. We're just going to have to play our best game of the year."

The Rebels have won their last 11 straight and have scored 100 or more points in 22 games this season. They lead the nation with a 107.9-point per game average.

Tarkanian's style has changed from his control-of-fense days at Long Beach State.

Indeed, for many years, few people outside the Charlotte area knew much about UNCC. The school was created by the N.C. General Assembly in 1965 from the remnants of Charlotte College as part of the 16-member University of North Carolina system.

At first, it was primarily a commuter school for Charlotteans and the transfer rate was high.

Farmville Central Baseball Team Feels It Can Challenge For Title

By WOODY PEELE

FARMVILLE — Despite being only 1-2 at this point in the season, Farmville Central baseball coach Linwood Woodard feels that the Jaguars have a good year coming to them.

weeks, it looks like," the coach said. Meanwhile, Ted Dunn is holding down the spot.

meone and take them out of it. We need hits back-to-back." The potential is there, Woodard feels. If it all falls together, the Jaguars will be in the battle for the league title later this spring.

ICING IT DOWN — North Carolina's All-America guard Phil Ford reads a sports magazine in the Carolina training room Tuesday while receiving an ice treatment for his injured right elbow. (AP Wirephoto)

49ers, Tar Heels Would Love To Meet

All-America guard Phil Ford would love to see his North Carolina team battle North Carolina-Charlotte in the NCAA basketball finals, but it has nothing to do with state pride.

All three of their games have been against 4-A opposition. They beat Greenville Rose and lost a pair to strong Southern Wayne. "Southern used its best pitcher against us. He was 11-1 last year, and they look like they'll be a championship team in their conference this year."

Woodard said he was a little disappointed with the second loss to the Saints. "We lost both games in the first inning. And I think we sort of gave up there in the second game."

The Jaguars return a good nucleus returning from last year's 11-11 club which finished second in the Eastern Carolina Conference. "We have six seniors starting and we lost only two starters off last year's team."

Woodard believes that opening against the 4-A opposition will be a benefit to the Jaguars. "We should be more relaxed and confident when we get into league play. We had tough openers, but we didn't get any batting practice due to the weather for five days before our first game and that didn't help us at all."

Bulls Continue Their Surge

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Bulls continue their amazing surge, and part of the reason for their recent success is their early season failure. "We're not playing any differently now, except that we're a little more mature and the shots are starting to fall in," said Chicago Coach Ed Badger, whose Bulls beat the Los Angeles Lakers 102-86 Tuesday night for their sixth victory in a row and 17th in the last 18 National Basketball Association games.

"We have so much confidence now, it's hard to believe we lost so many games," said captain Norm Van Lier of the Bulls, who got off to a 2-14 start this season. "I think the difference is that we know what we want to do and if we goof up a play, we don't suddenly fall apart."

The Bulls did not goof up many plays against the Lakers, sending the crowd of 21,046 — the biggest pro basketball attendance in Chicago history — home happy.

Chicago pulled away in the third period when Wilbur Holland, Mickey Johnson and Scott May combined for 21 points, putting the Bulls ahead 76-63. Los Angeles closed the gap to 10 points, but Holland scored six points and Artis Gilmore added two studs, putting the game out of reach.

Holland led the Bulls with 24 points, while Johnson grabbed 21 rebounds. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earl Tatum each scored 18 points for the Lakers.

Despite the victory, Chicago failed to gain in its bid to overtake Kansas City for the sixth and final playoff berth in the Western Conference as the Kings beat the Golden State Warriors 126-113. The Seattle SuperSonics, also in the scramble, were beaten by the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-104.

Elsewhere in the NBA Tuesday night, the Boston Celtics defeated the San Antonio Spurs 108-104, the New York Knicks topped the Milwaukee Bucks 125-115, the Houston Rockets stopped the Indiana Pacers 106-99, the Atlanta Hawks nipped the Buffalo Braves 86-84 and the New Orleans Jazz beat the Portland Trail Blazers 106-95.

Kings 126, Warriors 113
Brian Taylor's 33 points and four steals helped the Kings beat Golden State.

Cavs 108, Sonics 104
Seattle took the lead in the fourth quarter with a 15-2 burst, but Cleveland climbed ahead 89-88 on a basket by Jim Brewer midway through the period and the Sonics never were able to get back in front.

ECU Completes Grid Recruiting

Three more recruits have been signed to grants-in-aid to East Carolina, bringing the total to 27 incoming freshman and three walk-ons.

The total of 30 brings East Carolina to the NCAA limit for the year.

The three are Derrell Donnell Baker a 6-0, 180-pound quarterback from Bradwell Institute at Hinesville, Ga.; Anthony Collins, a 6-0, 200-pound running back from Penn Yan Academy, Penn Yan, N. Y.; and Dwight Tart, a 6-5, 235-pound tight end from Dunn High School.

Jimmy Southerland, junior quarterback from Wilmington, will miss the remainder of spring practice due to a broken wrist. He will be in a cast for five and a half weeks.

Also to miss practice is fullback Perry Allred, a High Point freshman, who has suffered a sprained knee. It is uncertain how long he will be out of action.

Celtics 108, Spurs 104

Boston remained four games ahead of New York in the battle for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference by erasing a nine-point deficit in the final period and stopping the Spurs. Jo Jo White led Boston with 27 points.

Knicks 125, Bucks 105

The Knicks scored the first six points of the game, grabbed a 37-21 lead after one period and never were in trouble against Milwaukee. Bob McAdoo led the way with 29 points and 15 rebounds as the Knicks equalled their longest winning streak of the season with their third victory in a row.

Rockets 106, Pacers 99

Houston moved into a tie with Denver and Los Angeles for the best record in the NBA at 44-27 by outscoring the Pacers 14-6 in the final five minutes for its 10th victory in the last 11 games.

Rudy Tomjanovich led the Rockets with 26 points while Moses Malone set an NBA record for offensive rebounding when he grabbed his fourth in the fourth quarter, giving him 366 for the season.

Williamston Edges Bertie

WILLIAMSTON — The Williamston Tigers opened their baseball season yesterday with a 5-4, eight-inning victory over 4-A Bertie Senior High School.

The Tigers took an early 2-1 lead, increased it to 4-1, then saw the Falcons come back to tie it up in the top of the seventh.

Bertie scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. Ricky Vick walked and scored when Stewart White singled.

Williamston came right back to score a pair of runs in the bottom of the first. Mike Koesy walked and scored on Tim Hardison's triple. Hardison then stole home.

The Tigers added two more runs in the third for a 4-1 lead. Gary Howell walked and Allen Peaks singled. Hardison walked, leading the bases, and Lee Pearson was hit by a pitch, forcing in Howell. Peaks then scored on an error.

Bertie cut it to 4-2 with a run in the fourth. Jack Hurlings walk-

Pirate Swimmers Go To Nationals

Five East Carolina swimmers left today to attend the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships at Cleveland (Ohio) State University, Thursday through Saturday.

Ted Nieman leads the group, as he will be swimming in three events. He has qualified for the 200-yard freestyle and the two freestyle relays, the 400 and the 800. John McCauley will swim in the 50-freestyle championships, as well as the 400 free relay. Joining Nieman and McCauley on the 400 free relay team will be John Tudor and Billy Thorne. Nieman will team with Tudor, Thorne and Stewart Mann to comprise the 800 team.

"I think this is our first legitimate chance to gain All-American status for some of our swimmers," Coach Ray Scharf said. "It is one of the fastest pools in the world, the competition is good, and we have some experience which we lacked in the past."

McCauley was ranked ninth in the country last year before the nationals at Princeton, but failed to make the top 12, which gives a swimmer All-American status.

"John's a junior now and has been to the nationals twice," Scharf said. "The jitters should not work against him this year."

While the Pirates are sending two juniors, two sophomores and a freshman, Scharf noted that four of the Bucs have been there before, and that the lone frosh, Nieman, is a "cool performer."

Nieman was one of the top Buc performers of the year, holding four varsity records, the 200, 500, 100 and 1,650 freestyles, and has been on the record setting 800 freestyle relay team.

Scharf feels that the relays may hold the most promise for the Pirates. "I think we can knock five or six seconds off our 800 time. That should be good enough to place. We'd have to knock four seconds off the 400 time to make it, but with the good competition, and the faster pool, who knows. We just might do it."

Local Games Postponed

A number of athletic events in the area were postponed yesterday.

Rescheduled for today are the following baseball games: Farmville Central at Rose, South Edgecombe at Roanoke, Bear Grass at Mattamuskeet, and Washington at Conley. Also today, Roanoke will be at South Edgecombe for softball, Northeastern at Rose for tennis.

Southern Wayne will be at Greene Central on Thursday for baseball, with Rose traveling to Washington for softball, and North Pitt at Tarboro for baseball.

A track meet scheduled for Thursday between Rose and Bertie will be held Friday on the E.B. Aycock track, while a softball game between Greene Central and Washington, set Thursday, will be played Friday in Washington.

Jaguar Netters Top Rams, 7-2

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central gained a 7-2 tennis victory over Greene Central yesterday.

The Jaguars won five of the six singles events to sew up the victory. They added two more wins in the doubles.

The win boosted the Jaguar record to 2-3. They return to action on Thursday hosting Roanoke.

Summary:
Stuart James (FC) defeated Tim Stocks 6, 1, 6-0.

UNC, UNCC Want To Meet In Finals

17th-ranked 49ers. UNCC's inability to schedule Atlantic Coast Conference teams has been a sore point for Rose in his two seasons at the 12-year-old school.

"They always say they have nothing to gain by playing us," Rose said.

Each team has a major hurdle to clear, however, before reaching the finals and no one is looking past Saturday. The 49ers take on Marquette and North Carolina faces Nevada-Las Vegas in the semifinals.

Ford said Tuesday he knew little about the Rebels, other than their reputation for explosive offense, and that he had never seen them play.

Coach Dean Smith went over the UNLV lineup in a team meeting Tuesday, Ford said, but added he expected nothing new when the Tar Heels held their first practice Wednesday since their East Regional victory over Kentucky.

Ford said he has seen UNLV guard Eddie Owens in action, but did not get to know him.

"He was at the Olympic trials. He sure can shoot," Ford said. Should the Tar Heels and 49ers succeed in making the finals a battle for state bragging rights, UNCC hopefully could rid themselves of their Cinderella image, Rose said.

But the 49ers would not have a monopoly on incentive, Ford warned. "We would have something to be psyched up for, too," he said. Incentive, Ford warned.

Knicks Pass $1,000,000
NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association passed the one million mark in total attendance Tuesday night.

The crowd of 12,005 which watched the Knicks' 125-115 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks boosted New York's attendance this season to 1,000,982. That figure includes total crowds of 584,988 at home and 415,994 on the road.

The Knicks' average attendance for 71 games this season is 14,098. They have 11 games remaining.

Grandma Is 88 And Jogs

A MILE A DAY — Eula Weaver used to jog two miles a day, after recovering from her stroke and arthritis. But now that she's 88, Mrs. Weaver does just a mile a day. (AP Wirephoto)

By STELLA ZADEH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eula Weaver isn't as young as she used to be, so she's reduced her daily regimen of jogging to just one mile a day. After all, she is 88.

When it rains, and she can't jog the full mile around a high school track near her suburban Santa Monica home, she mounts the stationary bicycle in her living room and pedals 10 miles or so.

She also goes to a local gym three times a week and pedals 10 miles before dinner.

Mrs. Weaver suffered a stroke a decade ago and was nearly paralyzed.

"I could hardly walk at all," she said, explaining the effects of the stroke combined with arthritis in her hands and knees.

Doctors gave her two choices — spend the rest of her life as an invalid, being hand-fed and clothed, or get out of her rocking chair and start walking again, no matter how painful.

It didn't take her long to decide. She vowed she would "try everything in this world to get back to normal."

Following her doctor's advice, she started slowly, walking gingerly at first, pushing herself even though it hurt, and deadening some of the pain with pills.

She moved from Illinois to southern California to be near her grandson, went on a strict health-oriented diet and started running. Soon, she was jogging two miles a day.

Mrs. Weaver was induced in 1975 to enter the National Senior Olympics held in Irvine, 50 miles south of Los Angeles.

"I jogged there three years and got six gold medals, one for Saturday and one for Sunday (each year)," she said. "The first time I did it Sen. (Alan) Cranston (D-Calif.) came out and hugged me and said, 'I'm so proud of you.'"

She walks away from the contest every year as the female champion of the 1,500-meter run for those over 80. There's no one else in the category.

Mrs. Weaver thanks her grandson, Jim Weaver of West Los Angeles, for introducing her to the man whom she credits for her recovery. She said Nathan Pritikin, founder of the Longevity Research Institute in Santa Barbara, is responsible for making her "able to walk — in fact for being alive."

She says he made her throw away her pain-killing pills and put her on a diet of green vegetables and fresh raw fruit, and less than three ounces of meat a day. She had to say goodbye to salt, sugar and grease and says she doesn't miss them a bit.

Convention Costs Vary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The daily cost for someone attending a convention ranges from $104 in Saudi Arabia to $12 in San Marino, Laos and Guinea-Bissau, according to a federal cost of living survey. The survey showed that most convention destinations fell into the $50 to $70 a day area, such as Nassau, Bermuda, Brazil, France and Germany.

Airline Volume Hits New High

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Figures from the Air Transport Association of America show that the nation's scheduled airlines carried a record 222 million passengers last year, up 15 million from the previous high in 1974. At the same time, the association says earnings of the airlines rose to an estimated $325-$375 million, a sharp turnaround from the $84 million loss for the industry in 1975.

Greater Risk In Too Much Light

ITHACA, N. Y. (UPI) — A professor at Cornell University says too much light is more dangerous to eyesight than too little.

Clark Garner of the New York State College of Human Ecology at Cornell says a little light suitably directed indoors provides greater clarity than a lot that is not properly directed. Garner said rooms painted and furnished in light colors need less energy to light comfortably than dark colors.

He said persons with vision problems and older people probably will want higher light levels because their eyes function less efficiently. Even so, Garner said, lower levels of light won't harm their eyesight physically.

Greenhouse Is Specializing In French Seeds

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

French-born Raymond Saufroy sold out his interest in a successful New York City restaurant to operate his own greenhouse specializing in French vegetable and fruit seeds and plants, first in New Jersey, now in Vermont.

Another Frenchman, J.A. Demonchaux, sells French seeds and imported foods and cookbooks by mail from his company in Topeka, Kan.

Electrical engineers David Tsang and William S. Sher are partners with Denis Ma in a San Carlos, Calif., company that imports and sells oriental vegetable seeds, many from the Peoples Republic of China.

All of them say business is thriving as Americans develop appetites simultaneously for gardening and foreign cookery.

The Chinese seed importers established their company three years ago for mail orders only. This year, their seeds are also in discount stores, nurseries, farm and garden centers, supermarkets and gift shops. The two moonlighting partners hope the business eventually will permit them to give up their engineering careers.

In a telephone interview, Sher said seed sales last year were seven times greater than in 1975.

Their seed envelopes picture mature vegetables in color and offer cooking tips. The vegetables range from reasonably familiar Chinese cabbage and snow or sugar peas to red-leaved Chinese spinach, yard-long beans, pak choi — a flowering loose-leaf cabbage — and Chinese okra that looks like six-to-eight-inch-long okra pods but really is a variety of gourd.

Although the seed envelopes don't tell you, Sher recommends starting seeds indoors in flats for the leafy greens, snow peas, yard-long beans, bitter and winter melons and fuzzy gourds.

"Some people grow snow peas in planters on a sunny balcony," he said. "Most of the other vegetables take too much space for this. The Chinese okra plant grows eight or nine feet tall."

Saufroy's company sells almost entirely by mail. His specialties include three varieties of shallots, some available only seasonally Egyptian onions that form bulbs both atop the stalks and underground; three varieties of cornichon seeds for the tiny French sour pickles and six varieties of bean seeds, including flageolets and fava, or broad beans.

His seeds for French vegetables and flowers and fraise des bois (wild strawberries) are imported from Vilmorin, a famous French seed company. Saufroy's catalog also offers a wide variety of fancy foods and a limited number of American cooking and gardening books.

Demonchaux's garden seed list includes French endive, a popular French salad green called mache, or corn salad; cornichons, six varieties of lettuce, ciboule, or Welsh onion, two varieties of potiron, or pumpkin; caper bush; and laurier, or sweet bay that can be grown in containers indoors in winter, outdoors in summer.

Like Saufroy, Demonchaux also sells food specialties and books, although the latter are French language publications about cooking, gardening, tourism and culture.

Demonchaux, in the seed business in France since 1945, settled in Topeka in 1965 after marrying an American from Lawrence, Kan., whom he met aboard ship when she was returning from a visit to the United States.

Big Surprise In Towel>Returns

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Officials of Holiday Inn were surprised at the response to a plea for the return of towels "borrowed" by guests.

"After all, how many people are willing to walk in and admit they stole one of our towels?" said Rick Schneider, manager of special events for Holiday Inns.

About 4,300 towels were returned to some 300 Holiday Inns on Saturday, and almost $1,100 is being donated to the Easter Seal Society in return.

The Memphis-based firm offered to make a donation to the Easter Seal Society in return for each towel returned — no questions asked — to participating inns across the nation.

The first public television broadcasting service originated at Alexandra Palace, London, on Nov. 2, 1936. Experimental transmission had been made in the United States beginning in 1933.

'Roots' Cast Has Reunion; Sequel In Preparation

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1977

Your DAILY HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Your logical reasoning powers are at a new high and you are able to see quite clearly the best and most advantageous ways by which you can expand your interests and activities far beyond their present boundaries. You are also articulate in putting across your point of view.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over a plan with partners that can add appreciably to mutual productivity. Handle travel matters well. Take care of important mail.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Ideal time to put across ideas that could add to present income, bank account. Set up a better budget also.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Participate in activities that will bring you greater personal happiness in the future. Make important social contacts. Avoid trouble.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel nervous, but if you get busy and clear up small tasks, this is soon dissipated. Have a more practical outlook on life.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show more devotion to good friends and enjoy social amusements that please. Improve health through proper treatment. Watch your reputation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't look for excuses to break appointments. Add to goodwill you now enjoy. Find proper gadgets to make work more efficient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Think of new ideas that could lead to fine results in the future. Make a new friend, one whose ideas are different from your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle responsibilities early and show that you are a conscientious person. Mate can make you very happy, so keep cheerful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get to work early on an agreement made with another and make any needed changes for good mutual results. Do your share of work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take care of chores and spend more time in exercise to improve stamina. Avoid a paranoid who could depress you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be generous with friends during spare time and be happy. You have some fine talent that should be used to advantage.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do things that will please a kin and make home more harmonious and charming. A new venture you started should be showing good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many talents, so be sure to teach early to finish whatever is once started for big success throughout the lifetime. Give as fine an education as you can and slant it along lines of selling or public speaking, the law in particular, whether male or female.

Tournament bridge is increasingly becoming dominated by the bridge professionals—players who earn their living in one way or another from the game. But few have a better record in national competition over the past 18 months than a non-professional from Mexico City—Dr. George Rosenkranz, who takes time off from his duties as head of the giant pharmaceutical company, Syntex, to walk away with the top prizes in American Contract Bridge League competition.

If the auction looks strange, it is because Dr. Rosenkranz and his wife were using a forcing no trump response to five-card major suit opening bids. When South could freely introduce his second suit into the auction, Mrs. Rosenkranz decided that her secondary fit warranted a jump to game in partner's known five-card suit.

West led the jack of clubs, won by dummy's ace. It seems that the contract hinges on finding either West with the king of diamonds or East with the ace of spades. Declarer decided that he did not need any of these possibilities.

If East held the king of diamonds, the play of a low diamond from dummy would allow declarer to set up the diamonds for two heart discards, so at trick two declarer led the six of diamonds from the board. If that card lost to the king in West's hand, declarer was reasonably sure that he would find the ace of hearts with East, because of his overall, and by leading hearts twice to his hand, he could hold his losers to one heart, one diamond and, possibly, one trump.

East won the king of diamonds and continued clubs. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the king of spades and led a heart to his king. West won the ace and forced declarer with another club. After ruffing, declarer cleared the ace of diamonds from dummy and returned to his hand with the ace of spades. Two hearts were discarded from dummy on the queen-jack of diamonds. After cashing the queen of hearts, declarer ruffed a heart in dummy. East could take the trump queen whenever he wanted to, but that was the third and last trick for the defense.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. "ROOTS" REUNION — Author Alex Haley, left, Chuck Connors and LeVar Burton rejoice together at a reunion party for the people who made television's most-watched show. (AP Wirephoto)

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chicken George and Kizzy didn't make it, but most of the other characters from "Roots" attended the reunion party for the people who created television's most-watched show.

The invitation for the dinner, hosted at The Bistro in Beverly Hills by executive producer David Wolper, said it was "the first opportunity for all of us and our friends to get together since that wild week we made television history."

Euphoria flowed with the wine well into the early hours Tuesday. Leslie Uggams, who played Kizzy, and Ben Vereen, who had been Kizzy's son Chicken George, were absent, but everyone present from author Alex Haley to LeVar Burton, who played the young Kunta Kinte, shared the joy.

Before the dancing, Wolper conducted what resembled a witness session at a gospel meeting. Actors, writers and directors took the microphone to testify what "Roots" had meant to them.

The most moving speech was by author Haley, who told his 12-year quest for his origins and how the TV dramatization evoked "a national, galvanic response." He concluded: "The Lord may not come when you expect him to, but he will always be on time."

A reporter asked several participants the question: "How did 'Roots' affect your lives?" Here are the responses:

Wolper: "I had expected to have an easy year after selling my company to Warner Brothers. Now I'm busier than ever trying to keep up with the response to 'Roots,' including thousands and thousands of letters. And I'm starting on 'Roots II.'"

LeVar Burton, Kunta Kinte: "It has assured me that I can do anything I want to do for the rest of my life — creatively or otherwise."

Chuck Connors, who played

Massa Tom Moore: "After 23½ years in the business, producers are telling me, 'Hey, I didn't know you could act!'"

George Stafford Brown, Tom the blacksmith: "The fun was in the doing. I haven't felt the aftermath yet. They aren't writing parts for black actors yet."

Lloyd Bridges, Evan Brent: "It's sad but true: as long as you're part of a success, you're noticed. Producers are now looking at me as something besides an actor in action films."

Scatman Crothers, Mingo: "I suppose the show brought more notice to my career. I didn't see it. I was involved in a tragedy (the suicide of Freddie Prinze, his fellow actor in "Chico and the Man")."

Lorne Greene, Mr. Reynolds: "The show must have had an impact. For years I was known as good of Ben Cartwright (on "Bonanza"). After 'Roots,' people asked my housekeeper in the grocery store: 'Is he really that mean at home?'"

Nixon Begins Filming TV Interviews Today

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon, silent until now about his career and the Watergate scandal that drove him from office in 1974, starts talking today for history, television and money.

And British talk show star David Frost, whose exclusive interviews with him will air in May, calls the talks his tapping with Nixon easily the toughest and most challenging task of his entire career.

"Particularly since Richard M. Nixon is renowned to be an incredibly private person, and we want to see the real Richard Nixon, find out the answer to that enigma," Frost said.

Among those who've helped Frost prepare for the Nixon meetings are Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward, the Washington Post reporters whose work broken open the Watergate story that led to Nixon's resignation. Frost, whose company opened an office in Washington, D.C., last July to research the Nixon story, says Woodward and Bernstein "are but two of hundreds of people who've given us their help."

"We've literally talked to hundreds of people, had a full-time staff of four working since July, and they've talked to hundreds of people who participated in the Nixon saga — for, against and in the middle."

Starting today, Frost is to interview Nixon 12 times, two hours each time, with the last interview on April 20. He says they're working at a private home near Nixon's house in San Clemente.

Neither Frost nor his production company, Paradine Productions, will say what the 64-year-old former president is being paid for the interviews. But published reports put the fee at around $600,000.

At least 118 television stations in the United States will air the interviews, to be edited down to four 90-minute programs shown in sequence on May 4, 12, 19 and 25, says Syndicast Services, the company selling the show.

And, says Marvin Minoff, Frost's business partner, the Mutual Broadcasting System has bought radio rights to the Nixon interviews and will feed them to MBS affiliates for airing the same nights as the telecasts.

Frost, 37, met with Nixon two weeks ago to iron out technical details of the interview-taping. He described him as appearing "remarkably resilient," as he first found him on Aug. 9, 1975, when Nixon signed his contract with Frost, a year to the day after resigning from office.

"It was as if he went through that enormous emotional depression and has come to terms with the most dramatic rise and fall in American political history," Frost said.

Asked to describe Nixon's mood, he said: "Composed, I suppose, is the best word, because he's about to embark on these 12 sessions of two-hour interviews, which are a tremendous undertaking, really."

"I'm a television man and I've never done 12 two-hour sessions."

According to Minoff, the first televised show will deal with Nixon's last days in office, the second with his foreign policies, the third with his domestic policies and last with Watergate.

Story-Teller Is Stricken

LEESBURG, Fla. (AP) — Baynard H. Kendrick, dean of American mystery writers, has died in an Ocala nursing home after a three-month illness.

He was 82 when he died Tuesday.

Kendrick was the creator of the blind detective Duncan MacLain, who became the hero of his mystery stories after Kendrick learned how keenly blinded World War II veterans developed their other senses.

Kendrick had made his home in Leesburg since 1959, serving as a director of the Florida Historical Society and writing occasional magazine and newspaper articles about Florida's past.

He held membership No. 1 in the Mystery Writers Association of America and was the recipient of its "Edgar," a detective story award in the likeness of Edgar Allan Poe.

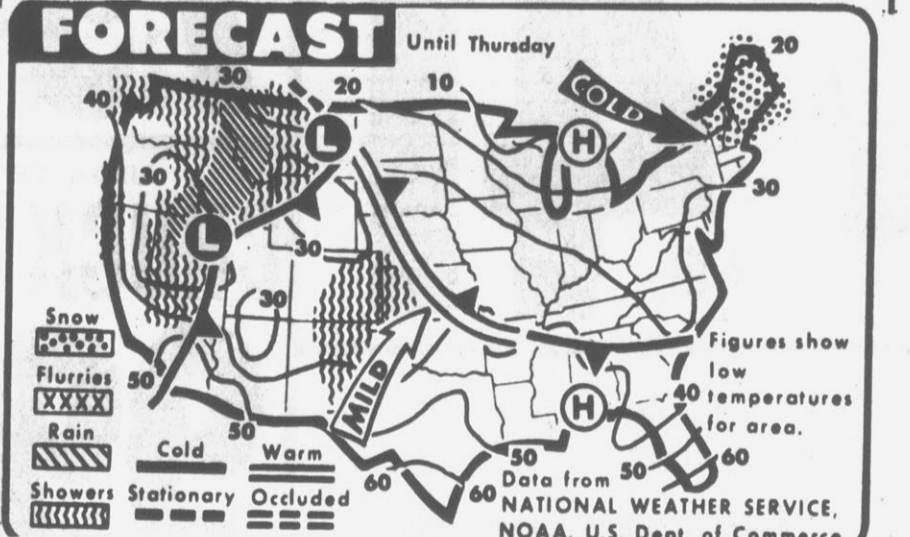

Kendrick's 29 novels included seven which were printed serially by the New York Daily News.

His films included "The Last Express" in 1938 and "Bright Victory" in 1946, the story of blinded war veterans taken from his novel "Lights Out."

Kendrick was working on the manuscript of a Charleston, S.C., historical novel, "Cousin Lottie," at the time of his death.

He is survived by his widow, Jean; a son, Baynard Kendrick Jr., Austin, Tex.; two daughters, Mrs. Edythe Zepp, of Falls Church, Va., and Mrs. Julia Elmore, Florence, S.C.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today includes rain and showers for much of the western half of the nation to the Rockies and some overlap of precipitation in Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico and Texas. Snow is expected for New England. (AP Wirephoto)

By The Associated Press
Old Man Winter didn't go out without a fight in North Carolina Tuesday, giving Tar Heel residents a parting blast of bad weather as spring began.

Temperatures dropped below freezing in the mountains while strong winds raked most of the rest of the state, knocking down trees, interrupting power around Raleigh and flooding an Outer Banks highway.

Rain fell Monday night and early Tuesday through central and eastern North Carolina before giving way to wind gusts up to 40 miles per hour. Several mobile homes were reported overturned or damaged around the state. One overturned while being transported by truck on Interstate 40, east of Durham. The wreckage blocked traffic for several hours.

Gusts up to 156 m.p.h. were reported at Grandfather Mountain, but no damage was reported.

High winds in the mountains were expected to protect foliage from subfreezing temperatures, but the National Weather Service reported that plants would be unprotected from the cold as winds diminished today.

Some 3,000 Carolina Power and Light customers were affected by power outages in the Raleigh area Tuesday, but CP&L spokesmen said all problems were corrected by late afternoon.

Scattered outages were reported across eastern North Carolina, officials said.

Seminar For Nurses Held

Approximately 75 persons attended a seminar Friday on "Clinical Excellence in Nursing" held at the Allied Health building on the ECU campus.

Sponsored by Beta Nu chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, the national nursing honor society, the seminar featured speakers who were ECU School of Nursing graduates.

Keynote speaker was Dr. Mollie Penny, director of nursing in a private psychiatric hospital. Seminar leaders were Linda Best, staff nurse at N.C. Memorial Hospital; Faye Freeze, staff nurse at Pitt Memorial Hospital; and Donna Ruffin, instructor at Nash Technical Institute.

Special recognition was given to Terry Lawler of Eastern AHEC, Mrs. Phyllis Martin, president of Sigma Theta Tau, and Mrs. Sylvene Spickerman.

Workshop Set On Special Olympics

The Eastern Section Special Olympics Workshop is to be held in Greenville at the Greenville Senior Citizens Center at the intersection of Greene and West Fourth Street on Friday, March 25.

Sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, the event will begin at 10 a.m. and last until 3 p.m.

Local Special Olympics coordinators, volunteers, and teachers from eastern North Carolina will take part in the workshop.

Guest speaker will be Miss Catherine Bolton from the East Carolina University Physical Education Department.

The purpose of the workshop is to share and discuss information that will improve the Special Olympics programs throughout eastern North Carolina.

All persons interested in this program are invited to attend.

Still Openings In Family Class

Pitt Technical Institute still has some openings in its parent-child relations course. All interested persons should attend today at 8 p.m. in Room 113 of the Humber Building.

The course will run for 12 weeks with a total of 24 hours of instruction.

For further information contact the Continuing Education Division at Pitt Tech, 756-3130, ext. 238 or 266.

Mineral And Gem Show Set

A Gem and Mineral Show is taking place on three days — Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 25, 26 and 27 — in the Scott Building, N.C. State Fairgrounds in Raleigh.

Sponsored by the Tar Heel Gem and Mineral Club of Raleigh, the show is a non-profit event designed to further knowledge and to increase appreciation of gems and minerals.

Hours are: March 25, 6 to 10 p.m., March 26, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and March 27, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Ecologists Want Safety Review Of Dam Projects

By EDWARD ROBY
United Press International
Four months after 80 billion gallons of water breached the Teton Dam to cut a swath of death and destruction in an Idaho valley, an amendment requiring project safety reports from federal dam builders died quietly in a congressional subcommittee.

The man-made disaster that unleashed a torrent of public criticism and a tide of official white papers, seemed incapable of producing even a trickle of reform.

But the fate of the amendment does provide a preview of the kind of opposition President Carter might face in his attempt to prune 19 questionable water projects from the federal budget.

Even if the safety amendment had passed, it would not have affected hundreds of current impoundment and diversion projects or Teton and the 103 other dams from New York to Hawaii that have ruptured since 1930.

"In most cases of dam failure, responsibility has not been formally fixed," said a 678-page House Governmental Operations subcommittee report on Teton. "But in some catastrophic disasters, individuals, corporations and even government decision makers have been held responsible."

Brent Blackwelder of the Environmental Policy Center believes governmental decision makers must take some of the responsibility for federally funded projects before they fail.

"Just look at the attitude of this Congress," said Blackwelder, who pushed for approval of the safety amendment. "If you can't pass one on future projects, how are you going to deal with ones in progress?"

Blackwelder said his group also made similar recommendations to the House Judiciary Committee, urging safety and disaster analyses on all project proposals "instead of always appropriating disaster relief to help out victims of tragedy."

It was the Bureau of Reclamation which built Teton and won Field & Stream magazine's "dumb-dumb" award for the year's worst environmental fiasco.

But Blackwelder said congressional resistance to safety and environmental measures may be based on its reluctance to hamper the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, an even larger dispenser of public works funds than "Bu Wreck," as its critics have taken to calling it. In the Southeast alone, the 1978 federal budget contemplates spending $420 million on flood and erosion control and navigation projects.

The Corps Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, slated to receive the lion's share of $157 million, also topped the Carter Administration transition team's list of questionable projects in urgent need of review.

Because of its marginal economic benefits and the belief some have that it will practically destroy the Tombigbee's ecology, the project is unpopular with environmentalists across the nation.

Another budgeted project on Carter's initial Gathright list was the $75 million Gathright Dam in Southwest Virginia.

Proposed in 1946 to control periodic floods and even out the high and low flow of the headwaters of the James River, the project's costs have already exceeded initial projections by 700 per cent.

Gathright and Tenn-Tom, on which costs spiraled 321 per cent, were just two of 178 projects, worth $14 billion, on which the Corps underestimated costs.

In awarding the Corps his 1976 "Golden Fleece" citation for its overruns, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said: "Without exception, this is the worst record for mismanagement and cost growth in the entire government."

Blackwelder said Gathright is a classic illustration of the need for independent safety reviews. Costly unforeseen geological problems cropped up long after work began.

Built on limestone strata honeycombed with caverns, it has weathered a federal court suit and a storm of protest from area residents, some of whom say they fear for their lives when the reservoir is filled in 1979.

But, according to Blackwelder, the Corps says "trust us. We are the engineers. We never had a failure. They say we are the best dam-building agency on earth."

In fact, some of the expensive design changes at Gathright were made only after a jittery subcontractor brought in his own geological consultants and complained that the Corps had not presented a true picture of the job.

Blackwelder said he examined aerial photos of the dam site and "anybody familiar with the site would have known there'd be problems."

But, he said, "the Corps technique is not to do the test drilling in the key spots. Get the work well underway, build momentum, and then do the drilling."

The House Appropriations Committee's investigative staff charged in a report that the Corps failed to make proper site studies and covered up data showing how serious the geological problems were.

What Blackwelder called the Corps' "build-at-all-cost philosophy" appears to find some sympathy in Congress.

When the Corps sought $11 million extra to solve Gathright's geological problems in 1975, Rep. Joe L. Evins, D-Tenn., said "it would be a tragedy to leave the dam unfinished now."

And when Evins, the subcommittee chairman, heard that a federal court had just rejected environmental arguments against the project, he remarked, "when you get free sailing, it's time to move."

Blackwelder said Kentucky's Wolf Creek Dam is the best example of what he believes to be the Corps' indifference to safety.

"They had to spend $100 million to rebuild it," he said. "It's being built on the same type foundation as Gathright and it sprung leaks. Look at all the cost overruns because the Corps was superficial in its geological examination."

Several of the 19 projects which Carter proposes to strike from the budget appeared on a list of "dams with avoidable geological problems" as part of the interim report on the Teton disaster.

Missouri's Meramec Park Dam, for example, was cited for an inadequate test "drilling program in an area that is more cavernous than Gathright."

The Richard B. Russell Dam in Georgia and South Carolina and the Auburn Dam in California were listed because of their proximity to earthquake-prone areas.

The Garrison Diversion project, proposed by the Bureau of Reclamation in North and South Dakota, was called "a national tragedy" by Field & Stream and is opposed by environmentalists as potentially ruinous to the region's natural drainage system.

Two other projects which Carter wants scrapped — the Cache basin project in Arkansas and the Dickey-Lincoln Dam in Maine — have already hit other snags which could block construction.

The Corps said the $600 million Maine project ran afoul of a federal statute protecting rare and endangered plants and animals because a nearly extinct species of snapdragon, the turkish lousewort, was discovered in the area to be flooded.

In moving against the dams, Carter is keeping a promise he made years ago as governor of Georgia when he vetoed construction of the Spewrell Bluff Dam on the scenic Flint River.

Carter complained at the time that the Corps' reports were strongly biased in favor of its projects and he called for an investigation of the agency.

"The construction of unwarranted dams and other similar projects at public expense should be prevented," said Carter.

"Establishment of priorities in providing for recreation, power generation, economic redevelopment, and water quality should be entrusted to those professionally able and motivated to make fair and objective judgments solely for the benefit of those people to be served and the taxpayers who pay the costs."

Cantata To Be Featured

TARBORO — The Chancel Choir of St. James United Methodist Church will present a cantata "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bonds" by Johann Kuhnau Sunday at 5 p.m. in a worship service in the church sanctuary.

Instrumental accompaniment for the Lenten program will be provided by a string ensemble composed of Paul Topper, violin one, Anita Cahoon, violin two, Jean Treynor, viola one, Lance Kellas, viola two, and Joan Mack, cello.

John S. Barker III, music director of the church, will be organist-conductor. Four members of the string ensemble are East Carolina University faculty and students.

Ms. Cahoon is a former member of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. Vocal soloists are Agnes Tharrington, soprano, the Rev. Caswell Shaw, tenor, pastor of the church, and Willis Marshall, bass.

Members of the string ensemble and Barker will also perform two church sonatas.

The public is invited to attend.

Solicitation Is Given Approval

The request of the American Cancer Society for permission to conduct a door-to-door solicitation during April and a sidewalk solicitation on April 16 has been approved by City Manager Jim Caldwell.

The solicitation request for the Society's annual fund raising drive was submitted by Jane M. Fleming of Greenville.

LEASE HEARINGS
CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Public hearings on the proposed sale of offshore oil and natural gas leases in the South Atlantic will be held here March 31 and April 1 by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — What is your reaction when a big test or an important speech looms like a viper ready to strike? If the mere thought of such a trauma leads to sweaty palms, sleepless nights or mental blanks, Dr. Edwin B. Fisher Jr. may be the man to see.

The idea, according to graduate assistant Roland Maiuro, is to help the client take another look at what makes him afraid and realize that it's not such a terrible experience after all.

between fear that is just a part of living and fear that is worth seeking help for," Fisher said. "The best person to make such a decision in the final analysis is each individual person."

as others are before taking a bar exam. If the fear interferes with everyday activity, it's wise to seek help. Fisher and Maiuro also pointed out that their program is solution-oriented and not designed to get at any deeply buried roots of a problem.

personal and financial expense," Maiuro said. The small investment has paid good dividends. Fisher said that of 40 persons completing treatment for exam fear, 85 per cent were either appreciably or substantially improved. The desensitization worked in removing the stumbling blocks to success in tests, whatever they were for any individual student. Most important, Fisher said, no one should worry, as some law students did, that because they weren't afraid any more, they wouldn't care at all. "These law students thought the treatment might make them zombie-like, with no motivation at all," Fisher said, "but I assured them that the law school wouldn't let that happen."

Fisher, working with the Psychological Services Center at Washington University, directs fear clinics designed to help the nervous through horrors ranging from final exams to a confrontation with a mouse.

Fisher and his associates emphasize that anxiety is a natural state of mind. His process, which he describes as systematic desensitization, is designed to manage the fear, not eliminate it.

"Goalsetting is important," Fisher said in an interview. "If fear of snakes is the problem, we don't want to get someone to the point of not being afraid of being bitten by a rattlesnake — only so he is able to walk in a field where a snake may be."

The fear clinics usually involve between 6 and 12 one-hour sessions in which a fearful client is led, step by step, through a series of situations, beginning with one of relaxation and ending with the stress-causing situation.

In other situations the experience may be more concrete. Someone who once would squeal and run at the sight of a mouse cage may even end up with one of the furry little creatures crawling on his neck.

The key, Maiuro said, is a gradual reduction of tension — first looking at the cage, then watching the clinic director touch a mouse with a glove, then talking to it, and so on until the anxiety is under control.

"This is better than my walking in immediately and putting the mouse on my neck," Maiuro said. "That would be too strong a dose all at once."

Fisher emphasized that fear is normal, and that just being afraid of something isn't a reason to seek professional help. The counseling is needed only when the fear becomes so strong that it makes normal functioning impossible.

"We have to distinguish

Small Town; Big Goofs

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Bill Davidson has learned that small crimes can pay big dividends. He became the beneficiary of a $200,000 check from LaGrande, Ore., last week — for speeding.

Davidson was ticketed several weeks ago for speeding in the eastern Oregon community and paid a $17 fine.

The original fine was reduced when it went through Oregon's court system and he should have been reimbursed $7.

But last Thursday, when his wife picked up the mail, she found a check for $200,000 from Oregon.

"We just laughed when we saw it," Mrs. Davidson said Monday. "We never thought of trying to cash it. My husband took it right down to our bank manager, who also thought it was pretty funny."

The county clerk in Oregon was not aware of the error until a reporter brought it to her attention.

"Oh, my God," the clerk said. "We may be a small town of 1,000, but we sure make big goofs."

Weather Braked Housing Starts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New housing starts will be down 16 per cent in the first quarter because of the unseasonably cold weather, according to the National Association of Homebuilders. This translates into a loss of 120,000 total man years of work and a construction loss of $2 billion, the association says.

All Eyes For Hildegrade

HILDEGARDE has been singing, dancing and playing the piano for decades, and still is going strong. (UPI Photo)

By FREDT. FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — "Who's that?" said my daughter of the songstress on the record. "Hildegrade."
"Hildegrade who?"
"Just Hildegrade."
"She's pretty good," a high tribute from Lisa, 14, for anyone associated with daddy's "old fogie" music.
Hildegrade sang "Feelings."
"Hey," said Lisa, surprised. "She's singing my music."
"Your grandmother was a fan of hers. Hildegrade was a star before your father was born. And she's still a star."
"That's something," said Lisa, impressed.

Listening to "What I Did for Love," the "Chorus Line" hit and title of Hildegrade's new album, was in preparation for an interview. In the office, other reporters recalled their Hildegrade interviews. "You should have the experience," they said.
Her press agent says the restaurant at which Hildegrade will join us invariably refuses luncheon reservations — even for famous rock groups he represents. "But I said it was for Hildegrade. 'Oh, in that case...' they said." And at the restaurant, there is a reservation.

In sweeps Hildegrade — a striking woman, still blonde, escorted by the record producer, welcomed by the maitre'd. There is a to-do at the table, all eyes on Hildegrade.
Her cape, over a dust pink turtle neck sweater, matches a burgundy midi skirt. "I don't like miniskirts." A dust pink hat is jaunty over her right eye. There is a replica of a czarist brooch on her cape, a diamond cross at her neck and, of course, her white gloves.

She calls it her costume, recites its designers. Her bright eyes take the measure of her tablemates as she removes her gloves.
Conversation flips from one Hildegrade activity to another. She is opening shortly in the Stanhope Hotel's Rembrandt Room — "You should see my costume, all Rembrandt colors, by Stavropoulos," will have just returned from appearances on Florida's "condominium circuit;" is into celebrity cruises, sang aboard the QE2 last fall, is billed on the Rotterdam for May. And did we see her photograph in the paper with Cardinal Terrence J. Cooke?

She has an interest in a bottled water company; is negotiating a deal for a line of cosmetics for women over 40. "Poof with youth!" There is an elegant gesture. Youth is figuratively flicked away. "It's about time we paid some attention to those who are mature."
"I've been working for it (the cosmetics line) for 12 years. I've had so many rejections, you have no idea, my dear. But when I want something, I get it."
"Now, people are accepting their age. So it's the time for it."
"By the way," she adds, "you know I'm 71."
"George Bernard Shaw said, 'Youth is wasted on the young.'" She emphasizes that in her talks to senior citizens groups.
"I see people my age and younger and they are old, old, old!"
"I refuse to age." The wrist flip again. "I have my disciplines — my daily routine. I stay active. I get up early.

I'm very big on nutrition — pure food, no chemical preservatives, natural vitamins, unpolluted water."
The cuisine is Sicilian, heavy on the pasta. She orders "just a double shrimp cocktail" but later sneaks a slice of the Italian bread. "I can't help myself, my dear. I adore it."
She plans to write another book. "I've kept a diary since I was 12."
"The incomparable Hildegrade," she got the sobriquet when Walter Winchell used it years ago in his column. She remonstrates with the record man for not using it on her album cover.

The press agent speaks when she is talking. She tells him not to. One does not step on the lines of Hildegrade.
"You know, it was in 1926. 'Jerry and Her Baby Grands' were playing the Palace in Milwaukee," says Hildegrade from Milwaukee. "I played 'Twelfth Street Rag' for her. Three weeks later I got a telegram to join the act in Springfield (Ill.).
"I'm still playing 'Twelfth Street Rag'."

A letter to her fans on her pink stationary with her flamboyant signature graces her album cover. She tells them she hopes those who "fell in love to my songs" will enjoy hearing her sing "Darling, Je Vous Aime Beaucoup" and "I'll Be Seeing You" again.
There is "Lili Marlene" — "Dietrich introduced it in Europe. I sang it first at the Savoy Plaza."
And "The Last Time I Saw Paris."
"I recorded it when the Nazis had just taken Paris. I wanted to do it very sadly. The control man insisted I do it light. Later, he told me Jerome Kern had been in the control room. He wanted it done light."
"As I was recording these songs," Hildegrade writes her fans, "I relived all the beautiful and sad moments when I was in love, which," she adds, "was frequently!"

Property Value Is Raised By Good Greenery
MARYSVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — An attractive lawn and landscaping add substantially to the value of suburban homes and properties.
A survey of 98 realtors in Chicago, Denver and northern New Jersey indicated that such greenery also makes prospective buyers feel the house itself has been well taken care of. The study made for a lawn and garden company here showed it also significantly increases the speed with which a house is sold.
The realtors were asked what dollar difference a thick, green, weed-free lawn would make in the sale price of a $45,000-$50,000 home. Their replies indicated it would add an average of more than $1,400 to the resale value. They said attractive trees, flowers and shrubs would add about $1,500 more.
One dealer said most people choose one house over another for emotional reasons.
Eighty-three per cent of the realtors said attractive plantings increased the speed of home sales.

Pressure On A Princess

PRINCESS CAROLINE, now 20, has inflamed the gossip writers and papparazzi as have few objects of their lurking lenses and pointed pens. (UPI Photo)

By ROBERT MUSEL
MONTE CARLO (UPI) — Recently Princess Caroline of Monaco went to the cinema and saw a travelogue in which a panda tenderly cuddled its cub. There were tears on her cheeks when the lights went up. The photographers were present, of course. They almost always are. They caught her dabbling at her dark blue eyes. "I know what the captions will say when they use the photos," she told a friend. "They will say I was crying because I flunked my exams or because my boy friend doesn't like me anymore." Understandably, perhaps, her experiences with certain sections of the media have made the daughter of Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco a bit more cynical about the world than she should be at her age.

Prince Rainier foresaw this might be the case some years ago when a visitor to his office in the royal palace found his daughter shopping in the adult section of a department store. "Well," said the visitor, "Caroline is a big girl now." "I don't want her to be a big girl," said the Prince in the plaintive tones of any father watching his daughter slip from the carefree days of school into a womanhood bound to have its pressures. Alas, not even princes can stem the advance of time. Princess Caroline is — as everyone who reads magazines cannot help but be aware — indeed a big girl now. She was 20 years old in January — tall (over 5-foot-8), strikingly attractive and with a figure to match her face. Her combination of youth, beauty, wealth and position has inflamed the papparazzi — the freelance photographers — and the gossip writers as have few objects of their lurking lenses and pointed pens in recent years. They are desperate for someone to replace those two fading ladies who have been the staples of their trade for so long — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and former Queen Soraya of Iran. Caroline's real life does not fill the bill, but they are not short of invention although they are disturbed by indications Prince Rainier will not tolerate the fantasies about his daughter that Jackie and Soraya tended to shrug off as part of the price of celebrity. Caroline's own wish is to have privacy when she wants it, to get on with her education and sometime, in her middle 20s or before, climax a marvellous romance with a splendid wedding, perhaps in the great white cathedral of Monaco in which her father married film star Grace Kelly in 1956. That may happen. It will if Princess Grace and Prince Rainier can help. But there may be a few more heartaches along the way. One of these twinges came last year when Caroline, forgetting the eternal vigilance of the papparazzi in the gloom of a nightclub, leaned too far forward in a dress that was low cut to begin with. The flashlights exploded and the picture was published around the world. "It was dark in the nightclub and she was careless," said Princess Grace. "There was nothing wrong with the dress itself. It was just the way she wore it. We were distressed and so was she." An even more upsetting incident came last January when a Brazilian playboy, Francisco Scarpa Jr., 25, mentioned Caroline's name during a television discussion of his romantic life. Although Scarpa said later that he was only joking, Rainier filed suit charging his daughter's honor had been impugned. There has been some comment that the Prince should have ignored Scarpa as beneath notice. But Rainier does not see it that way at all. He says he has received masses of letters supporting his stand against anyone publicly defaming and libelling his daughter. "I am not dropping the suit," said the Prince. Caroline is used to anonymous young men suddenly appearing alongside her as she goes to college at the Sorbonne, where she is studying child psychology, or as she leaves a night club. The cameras click and there she is in newspaper or magazine with a caption claiming her "escort" is a mystery boy friend. Once she found her car at the Sorbonne ringed by barriers. Photographers had put them there and snapped her at their leisure as she cleared them away. One enterprising papparazzo even managed to get into her school but the word went out that "Grimmy" — her nickname from the family name, Grimaldi — was in trouble and other students tossed the photographer out bodily. Still another freelancer waited three days in a building across the broad avenue Foch from the Rainier apartment to try to catch her undressing. He finally got a shot of her drawing the curtains but she was fairly well covered and her face is too indistinct for easy identification. Gossip columnists have linked Caroline's name with many people but she is only now involved in what might be considered a romance of sorts. About a year ago she met Philippe Junot at a New York nightclub and they have been going out fairly steadily since. Before then, the round of parties and clubs in Paris proved so distracting she flunked out of the tough School of Political Science, an intense disappointment because she had originally wanted a career in which she could travel and use her four languages. She then enrolled in the psychology and sociology course of the Sorbonne. Prince Rainier says she loves children and will be happy to devote herself to their welfare. Junot is 35, an insurance broker whose father is head of the French division of Westinghouse. The family has a title awarded an ancestor who was an aide of Napoleon but does not use it. Caroline brings Philippe home to dinner and Prince Rainier is invariably present. But it has been remarked that Prince Rainier is rarely there though he is known to feel that friendship with an older man has given Caroline a certain stability. At this stage the Grimaldis do not expect them to marry. Junot has been quoted as saying he likes rather than loves Caroline. And Caroline has said she is determined to complete her studies — at least another year. She sometimes says wistfully that she wishes more people knew that she spends very little time in nightclubs and far more time studying.
