

Vegetation Islands For Parking Lots Ruled Out

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission finally made a decision Wednesday evening on the proposed amendment to the Zoning Ordinance that would require tree and vegetation islands in parking lots.

After several months of study, discussion and tabling action, the board members voted seven to one to recommend to the City Council that the amendment not be approved.

City Planner John Schofield pointed out that the question of minimum square footage that would be affected by the amendment had been raised at previous meetings and it had been proposed that 15,000 or 20,000 square feet parking lots constitute the minimum size. Schofield noted that the input of local developers had also been sought and they were approached for comment.

Phil Carroll, developer, said that he would like to see some provisions of the amendment spelled out in more detail.

Commissioner Lyman Ormond Jr. observed that he could see the need for vegetation islands in public parking lots but he could not see where they were needed in private parking. He cited a manufacturing plant lot as a case where vegetation islands are not necessary.

Commissioner Eddie Howell said that the amendment should apply to public lots only.

Schofield recalled that debate on the amendment had brought out the question of lot size, the question of what constitutes a public or private parking lot, and also a concern about maintenance duties.

The planner said that the commissioners could approve the ordinance, subject to some necessary changes, defeat the proposal, or revert it back to the planning staff for further study.

He added, "Personally, I don't know what else we can do with it."

Commissioner J. T. Manning Jr. said that it would be hard to put the matter on paper since every parking lot would present a different situation.

Ormond offered a motion to recommend to the City Council that the amendment not be approved. The motion passed with only new city board commissioner Clarence Tugwell voting against.

In other business during the four-hour meeting, the joint commission voted to waive the 30-day tabling period on rezoning requests and recommended that the Council approve the request of Agri Supply to rezone approximately 13.6 acres on the north side of Greenville Boulevard northeast from RA-20 to Highway Commercial.

Thomas Anderson, representing the petitioners, said that the firm wished to build an industrial structure on one lot in the 13-acre industrial park to handle agricultural supplies.

Anderson explained that the developers propose a service road that would serve the development and also provide entrance and service to the remaining lots in the overall tract. In addition, the road could also be aligned to tie in with adjoining access corridors.

Both a fence break and median break is available on the bypass at the proposed development area.

Anderson said that the facility would not manufacture supplies but would serve as a supplier for packaged agricultural products.

He noted that the firm would like to begin construction immediately but it wanted to conform with planning policies.

The motion to table the waiver period and recommend approval to Council was unanimous.

Commissioners approved an addition to the Zoning Ordinance that would require rezoning petitioners to notify adjoining property owners by certified mail and present a return receipt as evidence that an attempt was made by the postman to deliver the notice.

Assistant Planner Skip Browder explained that in the past, the Planning Department had relied on the use of an on-site sign to notify adjoining property owners of proposed rezoning action. He said that it had been recommended that an ordinance be considered that would require the petitioners to notify the property owners.

Browder pointed out that several methods of notification had been studied and he felt the use of certified mail-return receipt would be the best answer. The receipt would provide tangible proof that the notification attempt had been made.

According to the amendment, the receipt would have to be submitted to the Planning Department at least one week prior to the board meeting. The cost per letter would total 98 cents, he said.

Schofield said that there is no sure way to handle the matter but he viewed the certified mail proposal as the

Increased Minimum Wage Sought By Administration

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration recommended today that the minimum wage be increased 20 cents an hour as of July 1, 50 cents short of the proposal by the AFL-CIO.

The administration also proposed that the minimum wage be tied in the future to a set percentage of average manufacturing wages.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall told a House Labor Standards subcommittee that the Carter administration proposes increasing the $2.30 an hour minimum wage to $2.50 an hour as of July 1.

The administration also proposed that beginning in July 1978 and each year thereafter the minimum wage be set at 50 per cent of the average straight-time, hourly wages of manufacturing workers. This proposal is known as indexing.

The AFL-CIO had recommended a $3.00-an-hour minimum wage immediately upon enactment of the bill with indexing beginning January 1978 at 60 per cent of the average manufacturing worker's wage.

Labor lobbyists in the crowded hearing room appeared shocked by the Marshall proposals and one lobbyist for the garment workers remarked that "labor might have backed the wrong candidate," a reference to labor's support of President Carter.

An AFL-CIO spokesman said that when subcommittee chairman John Dent left the White House after a meeting with Carter Wednesday, he had the impression Carter had agreed to an indexing level of 55 per cent of the manufacturing wages. The labor spokesman said Carter's top economic adviser Charles Schultze "is the guy who shot it down."

Marshall said the administration's proposal would eliminate the wage differential between employees who have been covered in stages by the minimum wage act.

He said the administration had "carefully reviewed" the proposals by organized labor which closely parallel those recommended by Dent. He said the Carter administration "believes that in light of current economic conditions, a somewhat different approach is warranted at this time."

He said the administration would support the concept of indexing future minimum wage increases to "eliminate the irregular pattern which has characterized the history of minimum wage adjustments.

"It would enable the business community to more accurately anticipate and adjust its wage costs by providing a system for increasing the minimum wage at regularly published intervals," Marshall said.

Under the administration proposal based on its economic predictions, the minimum wage would be $2.50 on July 1, $2.73 on July 1978 and $2.92 on July, 1979.

The AFL-CIO had testified earlier that the minimum wage would have to be $2.65 right now to cover the inflation that has reduced the value of the dollar since the last series of staggered increases in the minimum wage began.

Coast Guard Plans Sink Tanker's Bow

WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP) — The Coast Guard said today it was preparing to sink the bow section of the oil tanker Claude Conway, which broke apart Sunday 120 miles southeast of Wilmington, leaving 12 of its 39-man crew missing.

A spokesman at the Coast Guard's Portsmouth, Va., district headquarters said authority for sinking the bow section had been received from the ship's owners, the Cosmopolitan Shipping Co. of New York.

The spokesman said the cutter Dallas, which has been maintaining a watch over the still floating bow and stern sections, would sink the section with its 5-inch gun to remove it as a hazard to navigation.

In another development, the Coast Guard said the Conway, of Panamanian registry, said from New York without repairing several cargo tank vents.

Coast Guard officials have admitted the possibility that a welding accident touched off the blast that blew the tanker apart, as reported by survivors. But the Coast Guard has not officially said that was the cause of the accident.

Twenty-seven crewmen huddled on the ship's stern section and were rescued Monday, but the bodies of 12 crewmen remained lost.

"After extensive questioning of the survivors, it was concluded that the stern section was thoroughly searched by the ship's crew prior to their rescue and that no persons remained on that section," said Capt. Raymond Wood, chief of staff at Coast Guard district headquarters in Portsmouth, Va.

A Coast Guard officer searched the bow of the ship for 30 minutes Wednesday, but found no one on board and sighted no bodies, Wood said.

"No one has been seen or reported on the bow section since the initial rescue," he said. "However, to insure that no one remained on board, a Coast Guard officer was flown to the scene Wednesday afternoon by helicopter and lowered onto the bow for one final check."

The ship's insurance company planned to salvage the stern, but the bow will be scuttled because it poses a navigational hazard, Wood said. Several methods could be used to sink the bow, he added, but a decision would be left to the commander of a Coast Guard vessel at the scene.

PAPER "HOUSE" GONE

There used to be a little house at Harris' Supermarket in Ayden for leaving one's paper to be recycled, but it's not there now. Are there any places in Greenville, if not in Ayden?

Vandals destroyed or made useless the Sheltered Workshop paper collection house at Harris' in Ayden, but it will be replaced soon, says James A. Cherry, who is in charge of the Workshop's paper recycling program.

He said his clients are in the process of building more houses for this site and for others where the houses are also dilapidated. All should be completed in about a month, he said. Houses will then be placed at the Ayden site you mentioned, plus Pitt Plaza, the A & P Store lot on E. Tenth Street, the corner of Tenth and Clark Streets, at Harris' Supermarket on Memorial Drive, and at Hollowell's Drug Store lot on Memorial Drive.

All paper thus donated is processed by Sheltered Workshop clients and sold for use in furthering Workshop programs.

Resuscitation Demonstration

NEW TRAINING AID — Greenville Rescue Squad members Joe Burris and Tony Brannon prepare to demonstrate the proper method of giving cardio-pulmonary resuscitation on a Resusci-Ann training dummy as Addie Jenkins, president of the Greenville Pilot Club, Ouida Deber, Pilot Club recording secretary, and Rescue Squad Capt. Pratt Williamson look on. The Pilot Club donated the $1,000 training aid to the local squad as part of the club's public service work. Mrs. Jenkins and rescue squad officers said plans are being laid for a CPR class to be open to the general public, using the Resusci-Ann. Persons interested in taking the training may call 752-2554 and ask for a rescue officer, leave their name and address and will be contacted when plans for the course are finalized.

Hide Your Cheese! A Six-Foot Rat Is Loose

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer
Cheese lovers should be guarding their refrigerators this week. There is a six foot tall rat that answers to the name Sigmund, who is missing in Greenville according to Ed Saunders a member of Psi Chi fraternity at ECU.

Sigmund, the rat, Psi Chi's mascot was allegedly taken from the Psychology Department in the Speight Building on the ECU campus. The six foot tall rat was being used to display signs advertising a retreat that the Psi Chi fraternity is having at Atlantic Beach this weekend.

Sigmund is six feet tall and is made of plywood. His head looks like the side view of a rat's head. His gray painted body is bigger in the belly and the bottom than the top, according to Saunders. He has a gray nose and whiskers. His legs are approximately eight inches long and he is wearing foot long tennis shoes.

The fraternity members are anxious to retrieve Sigmund because they wish to take him to the beach with them this weekend.

"Sigmund did not take his teddy bear with him. We thought that we would advertise that he is a diabetic and needs his insulin shots so he will be returned," Saunders said.

Sigmund was last seen in the trunk of a car with his head hanging out of the trunk Tuesday night about 7 p.m., according to Saunders.

The ECU Campus Police Department has been contacted concerning the theft of Sigmund and the Psi Chi students who built the rat are continuing to look for him.

According to Saunders, a reward will be offered to the person who returns Sigmund or for information leading to the return of Sigmund.

Gloria Emerson Puts Memories In Book

By Thomas Powers

The Associated Press
APR (AP) — Gloria Emerson has a lot of memories of a young man, an American who she interviewed and who she recently published in her book. This parson had been in Vietnam and she had seen him there — meaning she had seen him before he was killed. He looked like Robert

Emerson. She took off his dark hair and she found Gloria Emerson's face. "What do I look like?" she asked. "You have a scar," she said, pointing to the top of one eye, where the eyes, along Emerson has a lot of scars that, some from the war, some from Vietnam, some from New York Times, some from talking to the country since. To Emerson doesn't forget, she has put a long book with a long title: "Winners and Losers: Battles, Retreats, Gains, Losses and Ruins from a Long War."

"Notice the cover," she said during a recent interview. She was referring to the fact that Vietnam was not mentioned. "It could be any war. It could be the Civil War. But everybody knows what it's about."

What it's about is Vietnam, and it is one of the very few books about Vietnam published in this country since the North Vietnamese entered Saigon and won the war at the end of April 1975. There have been only two books about the fall itself, "The Last Day" by John Pilger and "Giai Phong" by Tiziano Terzani. Pilger is an Englishman, Terzani an Italian. So far no books about the end of the war have been published by Americans, a fact which strikes many observers as strange considering the cost of the American role in the war. Official figures put that cost at 55,000 dead Americans and $120 billion, with perhaps as much more money still to be spent in veterans' benefits.

Unlike the fall of Saigon, Watergate produced a flood of books, both before and after the resignation of President Nixon, and many of those books became bestsellers. Nothing of that sort has happened with books on Vietnam.

"Vietnam was just too painful," said Charles Elliott, an editor at Alfred Knopf. "People were never tormented in that way by Watergate. When Nixon resigned a lot of people were delighted, but no one took any satisfaction in how awful Vietnam was."

Elliott is not surprised at the small number of books about the war since it ended. He points out that great war books tend to gestate in their authors for years. Four of the greatest books about World War I, for example, appeared in 1929 — Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms," Edmund Blunden's "Undertones of War," Robert Graves' "Goodbye to All That" and Erich Maria Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Vietnam, Elliott says, was not just a bitter experience but a confusing one. "It will take time to understand what happened," he said. "We're enormously embarrassed at having made such a terrible mistake. A writer must find some way to explain how we could have been so terribly wrong."

With time, he thinks, the first, easy answers will fade, and people will begin to see the war as a whole.

In a series of interviews, other New York editors expressed similar views, but several also cited the practical fact that books on Vietnam have not sold well. With the exceptions of Frances Fitzgerald's "Fire in the Lake" and David Halberstam's "The Best and the Brightest," books on Vietnam generally have been what Samuel Johnson once called "a drug on the market." Even highly praised books like Ron Kovic's "Born on the Fourth of July," Robert Stone's "Dog Soldiers," which won a National Book Award, and C.D.B. Bryan's "Friendly Fire," were commercially disappointing.

"After a series of failures," said an editor at a major publishing house in Boston, "our editorial board got into an anti-Vietnam thing. They didn't want to hear the word Vietnam, but I should add we haven't really been offered anything on Vietnam worth publishing."

Tom Stewart, an editor who recently moved from Farrar Straus and Giroux to Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, said he had read a lot of Vietnam novels in manuscript over the last year or two, most of them literary failures.

"People who went through it can't always write about it," he said. "I've seen a lot of books which were boring and badly done. World War II epics which had been moved south to the jungle."

Part of the problem, he says, is that the college graduates who might have written books often found ways to avoid military service, while the high school dropouts who did go must develop literary skill from scratch if they want to write about what they saw.

One who did was Larry Heinemann, a young Chicagoan who spent a year with the 25th Division in Cu Chi, Vietnam, in the late 1960s. According to his editor at Farrar Straus, Heinemann taught himself to write in order to capture what he had seen in Vietnam. The result is a novel called "Close Quarters" which will be published in May and which already has begun to capture some attention in the publishing industry.

"Until this year, Vietnam books were considered essentially unsaleable," said Heinemann's editor, Pat Strachan, "but this time our salesmen are fairly enthusiastic. It's not a political book, and it's not terribly pretty either. There's a lot in it about the physical ordeal of combat, and there's an honest picture of the prostitute scene and of racism, both in the Army and toward the Vietnamese. There's very little sympathy for the enemy who are referred to as 'gooks' and 'slopeheads.' There's much, much evil in the book — cruelty, violence and anger. It's going to be offensive to some people."

Another novel which may breach the public's disinterest in books about Vietnam is "The Last Best Hope" by Peter Tauber which Harcourt Brace will promote as one of its major books next fall. Tauber's book, his second, is described as "an epic novel of the 60s" with a huge cast of characters including public figures such as Nixon, Eugene McCarthy and Richard Goodwin. Tauber never went to Vietnam, but early readers say the book's Vietnam sections are among its best.

Other books about Vietnam scheduled to appear in the next year or so include:

"Great Spring Victory," by Gen. Van Tien Dung, the North Vietnamese commander who captured Saigon 18 months ago. His account of the campaign, described as a dramatic human history rather than a technical military treatise, originally was published in the Hanoi "Nhan Dan," or "People's Daily." An English translation will be published on April 30, the second anniversary of the fall of Saigon, by Monthly Review Press. Profits from the book's sale will go to the American group Friendship, which is building a hospital in Mylai.

Neil Sheehan, a former New York Times reporter who obtained the Pentagon Papers, is finishing a biography of John Paul Van, an American official killed in Vietnam. The book, which has grown into a broad history of American involvement in the war, will be published by Random House but does not yet have a title.

—CBS television correspondents Bernard and Marvin Kalb are working on Vietnam books, but no details have been announced.

—William Colby, director of the CIA from 1973 until 1976, is writing his memoirs for Simon and Schuster and is expected to deal at length with the Phoenix program which he ran in Vietnam. Described as an effort to "root out the Vietcong infrastructure," the Phoenix program is blamed in the deaths of at least 20,000 South Vietnamese and has been widely attacked as terrorism. In a recent article in the Washington Post, Colby recommended American aid to Vietnam as part of an attempt at postwar reconciliation.

—Sam Adams, a CIA analyst, discovered in the late 60s that the Vietcong were roughly twice as numerous as previous estimates but failed to persuade the Army or the CIA to officially accept his figures until the Tet offensive in 1968. He is writing a major account of intelligence battles during the war. Tentatively entitled "14.3," for the official number of the CIA's annual Indochina estimate, Adams' book will be published by Norton.

—Hill and Wang, a division of Farrar Straus, will publish an English translation of "We Have Eaten the Forest of the Stone Spirit Goo." Written by Georges Condominas and published in France in the mid-1950s, the book is a description of a Montagnard culture in Vietnam which has been virtually destroyed by the war. Ten years after the book's appearance, Condominas said that he discovered that U.S. Special Forces had been using an unauthorized translation of the book as a guide to military operations in the area he had studied.

The reception of Ms. Emerson's book, "Winners and Losers," has been mixed, although it has been widely reviewed. Sander Vanocur in the Washington Post and David Halberstam in the Los Angeles Times praised the book, but the New York Times, in both its daily book column and the Sunday Book Review, dismissed it as tendentious and overwrought.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My Boston Fern is dead! At 4:59 p.m. yesterday, I pulled out the life-sustaining water tubes, thus ending an eight-month vigil. It leaves behind a $24.95 stand, $2.49 worth of fertilizer, a $3.59 watering can, $1.50 trowel, $4.59 volume of "Roots" (an anthology of a Boston Fern that traced its ancestry back to the Garden of Eden) and a carpet full of shredded, brown leaves.

Okay! Okay! So I was in over my head. Don't you think I knew that? I guess I got a little overconfident with the success of my dieffenbachia and figured I could handle it.

It wasn't that people didn't try to warn me about Boston ferns. Mayva pushed me into a chair one afternoon and pleaded, "Don't do it. I've given ferns the best years of my life. There were 1967, 68, 69, 71, 73 and 74." "What happened to 70 and 72..." I asked.

"I didn't have time for a fern those years. I had children." "Are you saying they take a lot of fiddling around?" "I'm saying you're laying yourself open for an alienation of affection suit." "But I didn't listen. Last June, I plopped down $23 for one of the most beautiful Boston Ferns I had ever seen in my life. Never had I paid that much for a plant before."

The investment did strange things to me. While on book tour I called home every night. As I told the operator, "I want to call person-to-fern."

My son answered, "Hi, Mom, where are you?" "My plane is leaving. How's the Boston Fern?" "We're fine and so's the fern. We miss you." "Don't waste your time on me," I said angrily. "Mist the fern. If you miss a day misting, I'll know you missed." "Do we have a bad connection?" "Listen carefully. My three minutes are almost up. On Friday the fern gets a haircut. Put it in the bathtub and cut away the brown fronds."

"You saw the Fonz?" "Get your father, this is important. Water the fern through the crown, do you hear?"

But by the time I got home, it was too late. The fern had deteriorated. As I told my husband, "I'm not blaming anyone. It's just hard to say goodbye to a plant."

"You just have to put it out of your mind," he smiled. "I paid $23 bucks for it," I said sadly.

I had never seen a full-grown man give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a leaf before.

OES Annual Installation Is Scheduled

Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its annual installation of officers Friday at 8 p.m. at the Masonic Temple.

Officers elected at a recent meeting to be installed include: Mrs. Mayo Rogers, Worthy Matron; Charles Ledbetter, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Sarah Caprell, Associate Matron; Archie Dean Taylor, Associate Patron; Miss Ayla Ray Taylor, Secretary; Mrs. Shirley Price, Treasurer; Mrs. Irene Ledbetter, Conductress; and Mrs. Mildred Prebish, Associate Conductress.

Other officers who have been appointed will also be installed at this time.

April Family Reunion Set

JASON — The annual Parrott Mewborn II family reunion will be held April 17 at Mewborn Church near here in Greene County.

Lunch will be served at 1 p.m. followed by a talk by the Rev. Charlie H. Mewborn of Elizabeth City. He is the son of the late Van Ernest Mewborn and Leona Smith Mewborn of Saulston.

The reunion will be in honor of Mary Mewborn, the fifth child of Parrott Mewborn II and Mary Aldridge Mewborn. The speaker is a great grandson of Mary Mewborn Hardy and her husband, Benjamin George Hardy.

A family history will be distributed following lunch. Old items of the family will be on display. Any family records that need to go into the Mewborn family book should be brought to the reunion as the book will soon be closed.

All Mewborn descendants and friends are invited to attend and are asked to bring a food basket.

Don't Apologize for Appearance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I want to say something in defense of women who go out in public with their hair in curlers. I know I'm a bit of being put down because of it. My hair is very delicate and easily damaged, so permanent hair driers are out for me. In order to look half-decent, I have to set my hair every day and let it dry naturally without intense heat. My husband works days, and it's more important for me to look nice for HIM when he comes home than for some man I never saw before who happens to be in the corner of a print this, Abby. There are a lot of us women in the same boat.

WAUKEGAN WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I understand your plight. If you feel there is no need to apologize for your appearance—don't apologize.

DEAR ABBY: My friend's Chihuahua died, and I attend a funeral, and I've got to ask somebody if I've led a good life or not. I'm 50 years old, and until this week I never had funerals for dogs and cats. I had a dog (Jimmy) who was buried in a satin-lined casket (bigger than a shoe box. (It cost $900.) Jimmy was buried in the "slumber room," and a "minister" actually performed a service for the dear departed dog. The "funeral" cost $500.

It's not all Jimmy was driven out to the pet cemetery in a limousine just as a deceased person would be. There are little tombstones all over the cemetery, and my friend says she is having one made for Jimmy to the tune of $1,000.

I think of all the hungry children that could be fed with the kind of money I want to scream.

What are your thoughts on this, Abby? It makes absolutely no sense at all to me.

DAZED

DEAR DAZED: To each his own. And only a pet lover could understand the sense of putting away a beloved pet in an extravagant style. To them, their pets are their "children."

DEAR ABBY: Do you think our son has a problem? He is a senior in high school and an average student who has had a good relationship with his family and friends. While cleaning his room I found (under his bed) an unfinished "story" he had written. It contained some descriptive accounts of "his" sexual experiences—all of them. But what shocked me was the fact that he had written this in the first person as though he was the girl! I showed it to my husband, and he was even more upset than I.

Can you guide us, as we want to do the right thing.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: All adolescents fantasize, and it's normal for them to imagine themselves to be of the opposite sex while fantasizing. Unless your son shows signs of disturbed or abnormal, there's little cause for concern.

FISH STOCKING OPERATION — Employees of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission are shown releasing some of the 2,000 striped bass (Rockfish) placed in the Tar River at the Wildlife Fishing Access Area near Falkland yesterday. Another 2,000 of the eight to nine inch long fish were released Tuesday and approximately 1,000 more were released today. The year-old fish were culled from choice brood stock at the Fayetteville hatchery, according to fishery biologist Albert Little of Greene County. Little and Wildlife Protectors Kay Dunn and J. E. Waters, who were on hand for the stocking operations emphasized that the legal limit for taking striped bass is 12 inches. Little said the fish released yesterday should grow to about 14 inches in the next year. "The fish released," Waters said, "are not large enough to be lawfully retained if caught." The Wildlife Resources Commission has stocked the Tar with some 200,000 to 250,000 fish since 1972.

Joan Mondale Finds The More Stately Home Has Compensations

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One benefit of living in the stately quarters of the vice president, says Joan Mondale, "is that our children's table manners have vastly improved."

Another, she said, is that the house, situated high on Observatory Hill, "reminds me of every house we lived in in Minnesota. The wind has that same, high-pitched whine. Last night it blew out a window."

Mrs. Mondale's comments were made Wednesday afternoon at a buffet lunch for members of the press. They had been invited to view the American art collection she has assembled from numerous museums around the country, primarily from the Midwest.

The art is on loan to her for a year. But art was a minor topic. The question was about life in the Admiral's House, the vice presidential mansion, and about being a part of the vice president's family.

She said the Mondale family, which includes Teddy, 19, Eleanor, 17, and William, 15, usually gathers at home for dinner. "But if I don't have breakfast with my husband, he goes off with the front page of the paper, and I can't stand it." Teddy has a job selling motorcycles in suburban Maryland "but he wants to go to college," she said. Eleanor is a junior at the private Georgetown Day School, and William attends the exclusive St. Albans School for Boys.

Mrs. Mondale takes weekly art classes in pottery. "You know you've made it as a potter when your pots are good enough to give away. I gave one to Rosalynn (Carter) in Plains on July 8, and I miss it. Rosalynn has it on her mantle-piece there."

At 46, Joan Mondale strikes strangers as a warm, friendly woman, quick to laugh and eager to put guests at ease. Standing on the stairway landing, just above an armful-size arrangement of fresh forsythia, magnolia and cherry blossoms, she gave a stiff little talk about the history of the 86-year-old house.

But later, over spinach souffle, she relaxed as she related personal anecdotes, punctuating many sentences with exclamations of "fantastic" and "isn't that neat!"

Mrs. Mondale has collected 52 pieces of art by 20th century American artists to decorate the house, a Victorian mansion overlooking Embassy Row. They include contemporary pieces, like Andy Warhol's Campbell Soup can, a lithograph by Roy Lichtenstein and a collage by Robert Motherwell.

Her husband can't decide which art work he likes best. Mrs. Mondale said, but "he'll soon learn to relax and enjoy the shapes and colors and forms and not worry about story-telling. That's okay. I think a lot of people start that way."

Startling Changes Are Sought

The Carter administration has come up with two rather startling proposals for amending the election laws.

The plan was prepared by Vice President Walter F. Mondale who discussed it at a news conference Tuesday.

Included is a proposal to eliminate the Electoral College and elect presidents and vice presidents by popular vote. Since the Electoral College is provided for in the Constitution an amendment would be required to bring this change about.

The popular vote for president and vice president seems logical to us, since that is the way most voters think of the election in the modern times. Most of us don't even know the names of the electors we choose since we vote for president and vice president by name on the ballot.

The electors almost always follow the will of the people in casting their ballots when the Electoral College meets sometime after the general election. There is, however, always the possibility that a president will be elected by a minority vote, even if the electors follow the mandate of the voters in their individual states.

So let's go on and make the election of presidents official by popular vote. The Electoral College no longer serves the purpose of a modern democracy.

Another part of the proposal is not so wise. Mondale, citing the experience in his home state, wants the laws changed so that unregistered citizens may register and vote up to and including election day. Mondale cited an increase in voting in Minnesota due to election day registration.

We suspect that the beauty of this system to some would be that all qualification for voting would be eliminated and almost anyone could vote unchallenged. Most voter qualifications have been eliminated, but there is still an 18 year old age limit for voting and convicted felons are not allowed to vote. How would these qualifications — as well as bonafide citizenship — be checked out if there is no way to challenge a prospective voter?

In North Carolina we now have year around registration and efforts have been made to register voters through libraries and other methods. There seems ample opportunity for anyone to register and participate in any election if he or she wants to participate.

We see election day registration as a situation which would be fraught with the danger of fraudulent voting.

Job Cut Impact Doubtful

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. has proclaimed his efforts to trim the numbers of state employees a success.

It was tough, he said, but needed to be done at the outset of his administration before "status quo" settles in.

Just what was accomplished? A list of 880 jobs has been sent to the General Assembly in nine state agencies over which the governor has direct control.

It will mean a savings of $10 million a year, money which "isn't a mirage or an illusion; it is $10 million in new money. The General Assembly can now reallocate it to other needs. It's just as good as a tax increase; as a matter of fact, it's better because it doesn't require a cent in higher taxes," the governor said.

Real Progress

A closer look at the situation leaves little room for exultation.

To begin with, at least half of those 880 jobs had been vacant for an extended period of time—some a year or two.

Traditionally, bureaucrats leave authorized jobs unfilled as a way to accumulate extra dollars which they can either divert and use in some pet project; or return to the General Assembly as surplus.

The bulk of money returned—reported as credit balance—and carried forward into next year's budget is made up of unpaid salaries. A goodly portion of the "savings" will be simply less of a surplus.

Secondly, the governor earlier insisted the two per cent job cutback would apply to all state agencies. He hedged that when he announced success in his agencies: "As for other agencies, I am asking them to cooperate... we have not gotten a lot of response from that. This is something the General Assembly will probably want to look at."

Most importantly, just how does the two per cent cut stack up against the job increases which Gov. Hunt has already submitted to the General Assembly?

"I'm not sure. I have not yet taken a close look at that, but I'm sure this will be more than that," was his response.

For the nine agencies under his supervision, perhaps. But not across the board.

Add 7,000-Plus

Hunt has endorsed adding 7,689 employees to the state payroll over the next two years, and has made that request in his budget now before the General Assembly. Total cost of those new employees: $40 million over the biennium. Those totals do not include additional state employees to be added in the university system.

Most of the increase (5,401) will be aides to boost reading, and 308 to cut class size in kindergartens. For guards in new prison spaces, 102 slots are set, and 94 judges, prosecutors and clerks to implement speedy trials.

The list also includes five people to beef up the governor's ombudsman staff and community involvement office.

Here is the way the state payroll has grown: in 1975 there were 155,600 jobs; in 1976 it was 162,600; recommended for the coming fiscal year are 167,000 (minus 880); and for 1978, 171,000.

How much of a savings will the General Assembly realize with the 880 job cuts? The governor's recommended pay raise of 6.5 per cent will cost $103.2 million in the first year of the biennium; another $106.4 million to continue it the second year, and cover new employees as well—a total of $209.6 million. And that's before arrangements are made for another pay raise in the second year of the biennium.

"I am announcing today what I believe is a significant step forward in making government leaner and more effective," the governor said in his news conference recently.

An Embargo On Honesty

The House and Senate voted with a whoop and a holler last week to repeal the Byrd Amendment on Rhodesian chrome. An exultant President signed the bill the next day. "This puts us on the side of what's right and proper," he said. It was a fatuus remark, but no more than what we are learning to expect from Mr. Carter.

Until it was snuffed out a few days ago, the Byrd Amendment was the one bright flame of truth in a murky world of diplomatic falsehood. As such, it was a great embarrassment. In the midst of ten thousand lies, there stood the Byrd Amendment: Little Orphan Honesty. Observers of the African scene were perplexed: What's a nice kid like you, they kept asking, doing in a joint like this?

During the five years of its existence, the Byrd Amendment provided the only breath of integrity in the UN's fetid swamp. The amendment openly, unapologetically, without shame or subterfuge, authorized the importation of Rhodesian chrome. The amendment was in palpable violation of the United Nations' sanctions against trade with Rhodesia. So long as it remained on the books, the amendment made Uncle Sam a kind of pariah, as welcome as Billy Graham at an East Side orgy.

With this irritating splinter removed, the United States may again be as crooked, as deceitful, as filled with hypocrisy, as everybody else. And this will be a tremendous relief. For the past ten years, since the UN imposed these punitive sanctions none of the leading members of the UN has paid the slightest attention to them. Visitors to Salisbury have marveled at the evidence of worldwide commerce before their very eyes—Toyotas from Japan, Fiats from Italy, Volkswagens from Germany, Chevrolets from the United States. Every major nation of the world has violated the sanctions in every conceivable way.

Rhodesia produces the finest metallurgical chrome in the world; and for the past ten years, despite the UN embargo, Rhodesia has sold every ton that could be mined. The ore has gone to Russia, to England, to Germany, and of course of the United States. The ore will continue to find its way into the channels of steel production worldwide. The only difference, now, is that the cheating will be unanimous.

Mr. Carter, maintaining his fatuity record in this regard, referred the other day to the "illegal" regime in Rhodesia. The regime at Salisbury is precisely as "illegal" in its Insurgent Spanish armies, in the new role of the besieged, dug in to withstand government assault far northeast of the capital today while a sudden insurgent sea sortie left men, women and children dead and dying in a Catalan coastal town.

An insurgent warship was said by reports of a Spanish news agency to have bombarded a place 40 miles north of Valencia early Tuesday. One shell fell into Central Plaza, killing seven and wounding 30, many of them women and children.

The attacking ship lay 48 miles north of Valencia.

M. K. Blount, who has served Greenville as mayor since November, 1935, today announced his candidacy for that position for the city election May 3.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Blount declared that he was running on his record and a platform that the city could progress and at the same time maintain an economical government.

Mayor Blount was appointed by the Board of City Aldermen to fill the unexpired term of the late mayor, Roy C. Flanagan. Shortly after his appointment he was named to the legislative committee of the League of Municipalities and at its annual meeting last summer was chosen as third vice president.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Another Angola Shapes Up

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Even after early warning signals from both Western-allied Zaire and pro-Western elements in Marxist Angola, the U.S. was helpless to interfere with the invasion of Zaire's copper-rich Katanga province by battle-hardened veterans — now Cuba-trained — of the old Moise Tshombe Katangan constabulary.

That helplessness shows that the impact of the Vietnam war, followed by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) investigations, traumatized Congress today as they did during the 1975 Angolan civil war. Congress remains transfixed with fear that U.S. aid will lead to military intervention, and is still unwilling to use the undercover CIA option. So, there is no effective response to the invasion of Zaire.

Accordingly, U.S. and Western European experts here have already conceded this result in the two-bit war over a king's ransom in copper: the fall from power of Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko, whose hapless "army" cannot begin to turn back the Soviet-armed, Soviet-supplied Katangan troops.

This may well be only the first of several agonizing results. If Mobutu does lose the presidency under the shock of losing the richest part of his huge country, the momentum of that loss would expose much more of Zaire to ravage by the Katangan forces. Backed by Angola's own Cuba-directed army and supplied by huge Soviet military resources, the old Tshombe constabulary may now be accompanied by Cuban and Angolan leaders.

President Carter has been strongly urged by European allies to solemnly appeal to Moscow to halt the invasion. U.S. officials are uncertain, as we write this, how deeply Moscow was involved in the decision to invade Zaire. Nevertheless, there is strong presumption that a word from Moscow could stop the invading force dead in its tracks, by merely threatening to withhold supplies.

But diplomats here have little hope that the Soviets will lift a finger in response to such a request from Mr. Carter any more than they did in reply to Henry Kissinger's plea to stay out of Angola in 1975. Indeed, cooperation by the Kremlin is made all the less likely by repeated Soviet embarrassments from Mr. Carter's human rights campaign.

Nor does the mood in Congress incline Moscow to defer to U.S. wishes. The skeptical, even frightened, attitude on Capitol Hill over foreign risk-taking was dramatically evident last week when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance testified before the House International Relations Committee on fatted aid for Zaire.

In response to Vance's request for $32.5 million in military aid for Zaire, liberal Democratic Rep. Don Bonker of Washington informed him that Zaire's army was corrupt "from top to bottom" and that Mobutu did not have the confidence of his people.

Bonker later told us that was the prescription that led the U.S. into Vietnam. But Bonker's was the formulation that led Congress into shrugging off any responsibility for Angola.

Vance's aid request has not yet been authorized, but it is now too late for it to have any impact on the military situation in Katanga (now called Shaba province). Moreover, even if Bonker overstates the weakness of Mobutu's army, the fact that it is not an effective fighting force is well known here. It may indeed be too late for rehabilitation.

With Havana and Moscow watching to see how well the old Katangan constabulary performs in Shaba province, success is expected to gain their support for more extensive operations. "The game is to destabilize Mobutu," one diplomat told us, "and after he is destabilized, the avenue is wide open for many nefarious purposes."

A glance at the map of southern Africa shows why. The fall of Shaba province to the Communist-backed Katangans would surround Zambia' the only other Western-leaning black state in southern Africa, with black states which all lean heavily toward Moscow and away from Washington: Angola, Tanzania and Mozambique. So, in any civil war in Zaire between a U.S.-backed force (under Mobutu or some suc-

LIFE ON THE CROSS

Hansel and Gretel were left in the woods by their cruel stepmother. They wandered about, becoming hungrier and hungrier, until at last they fell asleep. They were awakened by a beautiful white bird who led them through the forest to a gorgeous house made of cake, sugar, and spices. Overjoyed at their good fortune, they immediately fell to eating.

Here, put in the form of a children's story, is the dream of thousands of people. A beautiful white bird will someday appear to lead them to a million dollar, a handsome and wealthy husband or wife, social eminence, power. The distinguished English man of letters, Thomas Carlyle, had something to say about this: "A perpetual dream there has been of paradises, where brooks run wine and trees bend with gold. But suffering, contradiction, error, have their perennial abode on our earth."

The cross is the Christian symbol of what the world is really like. But it is also the hope of what heaven is like.

Lowered Food Prices Indicated

By BRIAN B. KING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's first, heavily qualified projections of this year's harvests indicate continued build-ups of feed grain and wheat stocks balanced by shrinking rice and cotton supplies.

If fulfilled, the predictions would mean good news for grocery-buyers because of cheaper feed for animals from which the food industry draws meat, eggs, poultry, milk and dairy products. That in turn could ease food prices.

The department projected an increase in retail food prices this year of between 3 and 5 per cent, although some officials are worried privately that drought in the West and Midwest could push prices higher by year's end.

In contrast, cheap feed means lower returns to wheat, corn and feed grain producers. Too much production of meat and those other products in a cheap-feed period eventually would damage livestock farmers' incomes.

That, in turn, might mean the grocery-buyers' taxes would go for higher payments to farmers, with food production eventually curtailed to raise farm prices.

"The final outcome of 1977 crop production is many months away and uncertainties cloud the outlook," the Agriculture Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Tuesday. Weather conditions will have a large impact on predictions, the board said.

The board projected a harvest of feed grains of about the same as last year with good weather, leading to a 20 per cent decline in exports and increased beef, pork and chicken production.

With bad weather, production could be off 20 per cent, it said, with livestock feeding dropping back to 1974-75 levels, a small drop in exports and only enough left in late summer 1978 to fill feed pipelines.

For wheat, with a 1.1-billion bushel surplus, the total acreage and production for this year will be down whatever the weather, the board said. Good weather would continue the decline in exports and farmers' prices and further increase the reserve.

Bad weather could mean a wheat harvest 20 per cent smaller than last year, with larger exports and a sharp cut in those stocks as livestock ranchers start using them more for feed.

A shortage of irrigation water in California means smaller rice production this year, whatever the weather, the board noted. It also increased from 64.6 million hundredweight to 67.6 million hundredweight the amount expected this year from the old crop.

Even with good weather, the rice carryover stocks from 1977 are likely to be down for the first time in three years and production will drop by 14 per cent.

Soybean stocks will be down to a two-week supply by Sept. 1, the board said. Because prices are high, the forecast is for a 1977 crop of 1.3 to 1.6 billion bushels and continued tight supplies.

Tight supplies also were forecast for the "very uncertain" cotton crop, with stocks falling sharply.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Thursday's forecast includes rain for parts of the Pacific Northwest, showers and snow in the Rockies, snow in the Northeast and along the Minnesota-Canadian border, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Scattered frost and freezing temperatures will pose another threat over North Carolina tonight to all but the immediate coast and the Outer Banks.

A dry Canadian air mass that moved through the state during the day will keep a lid on any strong warming trend until the weekend.

Temperatures dropped into the 30s over North Carolina again this morning with the Raleigh-Durham area reporting, as it frequently does, the coldest reading — 31 degrees.

Charlotte and Rocky Mount were next with 32 degrees, following by Asheville 33, Greensboro 35, Elizabeth City and Wilmington 36, and Fayetteville, Goldsboro and New Bern 37.

Temperatures Wednesday ranged generally in the 50s although Wilmington managed to warm to 60 degrees. High readings today were expected to be about the same.

The forecast for tonight carries frost warnings for the northwestern and midlands with the lows expected to range from the 20s in the mountains to the low and mid 30s over the rest of the state.

origin, neither more nor less than Mr. Carter's regime in Washington. As we reminded to the point of saturation throughout 1976, the United States came into being by means of a unilateral Declaration of Independence from Great Britain. Our forefathers were rebels, traitors, revolutionaries. And not to put too fine a point upon it, they were racists also—dedicated to denying the black slaves the most elementary human and civil rights.

In the name of conscience, in the name of history, how can the Americans of that inheritance denounce an "illegal, racist regime" in Salisbury? The government of Rhodesia is no more illegal than any other government born of revolution; and it is no more oppressive or undemocratic than dozens of other regimes that are cordially welcome in the family of nations.

The whole business is disgraceful. Mr. Carter has won repeal of the Byrd Amendment. His next step will be to obliterate the tiny Rhodesian Information Service that has been operating modestly in Washington for the past decade. Not a single dissenting voice is to be permitted. Root and branch, the last vestige of a Rhodesian presence is to be stamped out.

This is the scenario: The peaceful, inoffensive government of Ian Smith, under which the blacks of Rhodesia have attained the highest standards of health, education and personal income in southern Africa, is to be toppled. The country then is to be delivered into the hands of power-hungry terrorists, Marxist in their orientation, who will set up a one-party dictatorship in the fashion of Zambia, Mozambique and Angola. The native blacks will have no effective voice in their destiny; they will be worse off than they are now. Most of the white Rhodesians will leave, and a long dark night will begin.

In that dreary prospect, repeal of the Byrd Amendment fits perfectly. In the UN's essentially dishonest atmosphere, polluted by a double standard of international morality, the Byrd Amendment was too good to survive. Let it go. Asking the UN to tolerate truth is asking too much.

Wednesday night on a 217 to 205 vote.

Although it directly affected only the building trades, the vote was the first test of organized labor's strength in the new and heavily Democratic Congress.

The bill's prime sponsor, Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said the vote killed the legislation for the foreseeable future. He also said the outcome bodes ill for labor's campaign against right-to-work laws.

Conservatives and business lobbied intensively against the bill, which would have allowed a union to shut-down an entire construction site in a dispute with only one subcontractor.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he had never seen organizations lobby as hard as the picketing bill's opponents. Before the vote, a pessimistic O'Neill chided labor for not mounting an effective drive to muster support for the bill.

The House passed a similar bill in 1975, 229 to 189. It was vetoed in January 1976 by then-President Gerald R. Ford.

"When you get careless along the line, the train goes off the track," O'Neill said. Despite the speaker's efforts to keep Democrats in line, 88 voted with 129 Republicans against the bill. Only 14 Republicans voted for it.

The majority was fashioned out of a coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats, including all nine from President Carter's home state of Georgia.

Carter, who won with overwhelming labor support in a narrow contest against Ford last fall, stayed out of the fray. Carter had said merely that he would sign the bill if Congress passed it.

Ford initially backed the common situs bill in 1975, but vetoed it under heavy pressure from conservatives.

'Lifeline' Bill Backers Heard

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Spokesmen for several hundred persons who thronged the Legislative Building Wednesday called for the passage of "lifeline" electric rate legislation to help the poor pay their electric power bills.

The throng turned out for a public hearing before the Senate and House Utility committees on bills that would require power companies to furnish the first 350 kilowatt hours of electricity to their residential customers at their lowest rates.

This power now brings the highest rates.

Several of the lifeline supporters said that the losses power companies would suffer from imposition of the rates should be made up by increasing the rates on industrial customers.

Spokesmen for power companies said this would result in a 30 per cent rate increase for industrial customers. "Electric bills are eating away at the average North Carolinian's budget," State AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby said in backing lifeline rates. "It's to the point that many now pay higher electric bills than mortgage payments."

"Our senior citizens and others on fixed income are hardest hit by the spiraling rates," Hobby stated.

"Immediate relief is needed now from the outrageous electric bills residential customers have been getting," said Richard Whittington of Pittsboro, speaking for two consumer groups, Carolina Action and Citizens for Fair Rates.

"Since industry causes a major drain on our electric supply we feel that they, as the largest users, should absorb any revenue displacement due to Lifeline," Whittington continued. Steve Griffith, general counsel for Duke Power Co., said Lifeline would cost his company $70 million a year, and William E. Graham, senior vice president and general counsel for Carolina Power & Light Co., said CP&L would lose $65 million a year. Both said a 30 per cent hike in industrial rates would be necessary if the entire burden of Lifeline rates were placed on industrial customers. Graham said such a shift would result in CP&L selling power to some customers at less than the cost of serving them while charging other customers more than their power cost.

"We're not insensitive to the fact that many people on low fixed incomes are suffering severely as the result of inflation," Graham said. "But we say lifeline is not the way to provide for them."

Work Is Affected By Mental Health

NEW YORK (AP) — About one third of a person's life is spent working, so it pays to maintain on-the-job mental health, says Dorothy M. Saller, executive director of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses.

The group's 9,000 members, all registered nurses, daily counsel employees and see firsthand the effect of personal problems on job performance. Self-examination on the following points might be the key to increasing your own happiness at work, Miss Saller notes.

—If something at the office or factory bothers you, do you ever express your feelings — in a nice way, of course — to your boss? It might be a good idea to do so.

—Have you had a physical checkup during the past year, especially on your blood pressure? It could be the root of what's bothering you.

—Do your on-the-job work habits create stress for you and your coworkers? Every company has behavior and procedural norms that require a certain amount of conformity.

—Do you have the right qualifications and skills for your job? You may be in the wrong field — or "over your head" in your present job.

—What about your personal habits? Are you smoking or drinking too much. Are you overeating?

—Are you a workaholic, with no time to relax? Is your job your only interest in life?

—Are your family, social and sexual relationships in good balance? If not, they can hamper work performance as much as heart or any other disease.

—Are you getting the proper amount of sleep? It's still true: you can't burn the candle at both ends.

—Are you letting personal financial problems nag you without doing anything about them?

—Have you ever discussed your business or personal problems with an expert such as your company doctor or occupational health nurse?

cessor) and a Soviet-backed force, the U.S. force would be operating under most unfavorable circumstances.

In fact, however, there almost surely will be no U.S.-backed force there because the still-traumatized Congress would not permit it. Vance's aid request for Zaire will be cut by Congress; in addition, the "human rights" bloc will challenge it on the basis of alleged repression by Mobutu.

So, Zaire, or at the least its vital copper-rich heartland, seems doomed to go the way of Angola in the familiar pattern of a Secretary of State crying for help and Congress turning away.

Must Be A Big Black Market Unanimous In Voting Against

OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — The black market for flags must be booming in this south-west Iowa town. Police said Wednesday that the number of flags stolen in just over a week went to about 20 when six were taken Tuesday night. The inventory of the thief, or thieves, includes a number of U.S. flags, state of Iowa colors and a Mexican flag.

Pitt County lost 620 workers from November 1976 to January 1977, with the greatest loss falling in the nondurable goods sector. Due to seasonal trends, tobacco employment decreased by 560 workers during the two months; food textiles, and apparel all experienced moderate decreases and other nondurables registered a small decrease. Nonmanufacturing firms recorded a decrease of 240 employees since November, 1976. Trade lost 130 workers over the two month period. Government decreased by 90 persons, construction firms lost 30, and finance insurance and real estate declined by 10. Service, however showed a gain of 20 workers.

The number of unemployed stood at 2,480 for January 1977 an increase of 400 from a year ago. The unemployment rate for Pitt County fluctuated during 1976 ranging from 5.7 per cent in September to 4.8 per cent in November and climbing to 6.5 per cent in January 1977.

According to Hannan, the employment outlook shows that tobacco should decrease by about 250 workers through May due to the normal seasonal pattern, apparel will probably dip by nearly 400 workers, resulting

Rep. Taylor To Aid Fund Drive

State Rep. Ronald Taylor, D-Bladen, an Elizabethtown tobacco firm executive, has been appointed chairman of the East Carolina University stadium expansion fund drive in Bladen and Columbus counties.

Taylor is a 1974 graduate of ECU in Business Administration and Correctional Services. In addition to the family-owned tobacco and mechanized farm equipment business, he is also a farmer. He was elected to the legislature last year and represents the 19th House District of Bladen, Columbus and Sampson counties.

from the employee cutbacks of a local apparel firm and government is expected to increase through May by almost 100 workers. Trade employment moderate gains are also expected for durables.

By JERRY RAYNOR, Reflector Staff Writer
KINSTON — "As a child, I had not brass nor sass. There were lots of little things I could not do that I wanted to do because I had a strict mother. And at 89, my mother still tells me what to do." This revelation, made by Pulitzer Prize winning poet Mrs. Gwendolyn Brooks in Kinston on Tuesday night, was one of a string of reminiscences Mrs. Brooks sprinkled in between readings of her poetry and passages from her fiction. As a woman, the talented Negro writer needs not brass or sass to hold people's attention. Tall and thin, with a rich, husky voice that she uses in slow, rolled cadences, Mrs. Brooks has something better — perhaps "presence" is the right word, the kind of magnetic presence that the late Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt possessed. Despite the sudden snap of cold weather Tuesday, she drew a packed auditorium of listeners. People — young and old, black and white — lined the walls, sat on the floor in the aisles and surrounded the stage for her 8 p.m. reading at Lenoir Community College. Easy going and low-keyed, she nonetheless showed flashes of assertiveness occasionally — as when she put the record straight on the well-known lines from one of her poems, The Mother "...singers and workers that never handled the air..." which somehow were recently attributed to Dianna Ross. "I first published that poem back in 1945," Mrs. Brooks said. "So I've not stolen anything from Dianna Ross. They are mine, originally mine, all mine." Successor to Carl Sandburg as the Poet Laureate of Illinois, Mrs. Brooks contrasted her simple definition of poetry with Sandburg's widely publicized 38 definitions. "My definition of poetry has four words — Poetry is life distilled." She mentioned too her puzzlement on the remarks of one reviewer of Annie Allen, the volume of poetry that won her the Pulitzer Prize in 1950. "He said my poetry is studded with cakes, that I talk too much about cakes I always thought everybody liked cakes," she said, flashing a big smile. At another point she expressed her belief on the importance of the natural integrity of an individual, both as a person and as an artist. "What you are, you are, that I fervently endorse," she said.

Book Fair At S. Greenville
South Greenville School is staging its annual Book Fair beginning Friday, March 25 and continuing next week through Friday, April 1. The fair will be held in the library during regular school hours. Parents, friends, and students are encouraged to support the event. Proceeds from the event will be used to help buy needed items for the library.

Arrest Suspect For Break-In
Greenville Police yesterday arrested Joe Terry Brown, 17 of Route 7, Greenville on charges of breaking, entering and larceny, in connection with a December 21 break-in at 510 Greenfield Boulevard, Capt. L. J. Russell said. According to Capt. Russell, Brown allegedly entered the dwelling where a quantity of tools, money and two stereo speakers were reported taken.

Mrs. Brooks' career as an acclaimed writer has not been without some strong objections to some of her work. "Three of my poems are banned in Nebraska and in one county in West Virginia," she noted. "It seems you're not supposed to suppose God to be a vulnerable essence, which is what I assumed in one poem. She quoted lines which ostensibly are the reason one poem is banned. "... (God) perhaps sometimes tires of being great/ in solitude without a hand to hold. "It seems they also objected to the word 'jazz' in another poem. It's said to have sexual references. It didn't, but I don't mind their thinking so." In her poetry and in her lectures Mrs. Brooks advocates looking again to values she says had deep meaning when she was young and which she feels has as much value now, things like loving doctoring at home when you're sick, and patriotism. "We used to spread the American flag across the front of the house. It's a widespread magic, that flag. Patriotism seems to be dying out where I come from (Chicago). Maybe you still have it here. I sure hope so." Now that her two children — a son who is 36 and a daughter who is 25 — are grown, Mrs. Brooks has time to turn her warm motherly instinct to young people in her neighborhood. "Young people from 18 high schools meet in my home. It's a kind of forum, where everybody sits on the floor and talk things out. "I'm sending as many as I can to visit African countries, to let them get a feel of their roots. I buy books for them, send them to shows. But you know what they seem to like best? Just the chance to sit on my floor and talk. That should tell you something, something important."

Book Has The Answers For Trivia Questions

By AGNES T. HOOPER
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK (AP) — Think quick.

How long is a marathon? What movie won the most Oscars? And what was Eleanor Roosevelt's maiden name?

The answer to these and 2,297 other insignificant questions can be found in "The Princeton Trivia-Quiz Book," compiled by a Princeton University junior.

It's the first book published by a Princeton undergraduate since the mid-60s when the staff of the Daily Princetonian put together "Where the Girls Are."

Thomas Epstein, 19, of Toronto, began his trivia writing career in 1975 after he broke his finger boxing with a friend and then couldn't get a summer job.

What could be more appropriate than to dedicate his masterpiece to the person responsible for his triumph? "To Jeff Blumenfeld, upon whom I broke my finger..." the dedication reads.

"My mother wouldn't let me dedicate it to my dog," he explained in a telephone interview.

Epstein tried out the questions on fellow Princetonians and he helped organize a contest between Princeton and Yale. "I know nothing in detail but everything very superficially," said the trivia kid whose major is medieval studies. "I've never really tried to get very enthusiastic about one subject."

Epstein said he wrote the questions and answers in the book from memory, checking only occasionally to verify.

The topics range from Presidents, Kings and Queens, and The Bible to Entertainment, Cooking and Sports.

And the college junior admits his shortcomings: he's good in subjects like history and art and weaker on entertainment and sports.

"I don't have a very great intellectual commitment. I don't have any great thoughts. I'm a catalogue," he said.

Epstein attributed some of his obscure knowledge to the tutoring he received as a youngster.

Because his father didn't think much of the public school system, young Epstein was educated at home, first by his parents and then by hired instructors. He also loves to read.

But trivia was a subject he was always interested in. "It's something you pick up gradually," he explained.

Epstein said he had no idea how his book was selling and added he hadn't made any money on the venture yet. He said he would receive royalties but had turned down an advance.

Getting trivial now, Epstein's book isn't infallible. The 2,264th question asks: What is the third estate? The book's answer: The press. After it was pointed out, Epstein agreed with the dictionary: the press is called the fourth estate.

The answers to the above questions are, by the way: 26 miles, 385 yards; Ben Hur with 11, and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Special Police Team Trying To Protect Elderly

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Detectives Jerry Keegan and Donald Gaffney slide into their squad car, a retired yellow taxi cab that starts with a groan and runs with a death rattle.

There's no shotgun, no siren, no radio. They take a folder of crime reports, a book of mug shots, a fingerprinting kit and a camera.

They're part of the Bronx Senior Citizens Robbery Unit, a prototype police group that investigates crimes against people over 60 who are attacked in buildings.

They use the taxi because it's unobtrusive. It looks like a lot of other taxis in the Bronx. Many old people are embarrassed to be pinpointed as crime victims by the presence of a police car. Some fear reprisal.

Keegan and Gaffney cruise the Grand Concourse, a stately canyon of buildings that has become a combat zone for old people and young muggers.

"See that park?" Gaffney asks. "In nice weather, the old people come out and sun themselves. You can see the kids watching them, circling at a distance, picking out their quarry.

"You can spot it right off. Like cats watching birds. It's unnatural for young people to be that interested in old folks."

Wearing civilian clothes, the two hefty veterans are on their way to interview crime victims. They also take pictures of injuries, useful evidence if the victim recovers by the time the case goes to trial.

In most other robbery cases, the victim is asked to go to a precinct to view suspects' pictures. But Keegan and Gaffney visit victims at their homes or hospital beds.

Individual attention is the key to their approach. After an attack, old people are especially distraught.

Perhaps they will have a cup of tea, look at a family album or listen to stories about life in gentler days.

Their unassigned duties include contacting relatives, stopping mail delivery, freezing bank accounts and taking victims to and from court.

"Most are so amazed anyone takes an interest," Keegan says. "We still get Christmas cards from people we've visited."

They enter the hospital room of 79-year-old Sarah (she doesn't want her real name used) whose spine was broken by three burglars she surprised in her apartment. She had just returned from buying birthday cards for her grandchildren.

Gaffney and Keegan take her fingerprints to compare with those they lifted in the apartment.

Lying there large, pale and fragile, she tells them she had two rolls of pennies in her little bank. Did they break her Japanese vases? Was there a tin of papers from her cedar chest?

She puts her inky fingerprinted hand to her forehead and cries.

"Oh, why don't they leave us alone? We don't have much longer to live. I've been in that apartment 40 years. But I can't go back now. But where can I go?"

"When you're old, nobody wants you."

There's nothing much to say. They think they've got good prints of the attackers. "We think we'll get someone," says Gaffney.

With a small burst of fire, Sarah says: "They should do to them what they did to me." She sinks back.

On the way out, they shake their heads. Gaffney mentions his own mother. He wants her to move out of her neighborhood, but, like many old people, she's very independent.

Back in the taxi, Keegan says: "This beating will change that woman's life, all her patterns and her outlook. If it happened to us, we would get over it. She won't."

"And, you know," says Gaffney, "there's really nothing we can do for her. It's done. We just hope we catch someone and prevent this happening again."

They estimate that each person they arrest is responsible for 60 crimes against old people a year.

And, say the cops, most are remorseless. They go to court, get slapped on the wrists, get out and do it again.

The taxi rumbles past blocks of rubble and gutted tenements, blocks of housing developments.

"Look. It's no wonder," says Gaffney, pointing to one high-rise. That one building housed eight kids who committed crimes against old people who later died of injuries.

They head toward another hospital, another old lady, Lottie. "I'd really like to get the guy who did this one," Keegan says.

Lottie, who also is afraid to have her real name in print, has no family, just a cousin in New Jersey. They're visiting her to say that her mail will be held at the post office — and to give her a little company.

She's 88, a tiny, outraged mass of bruises. Her nose is broken, her eyes are blackened, her neck is purple, her hands are wounded.

She was pushed into her apartment when she opened the door. She was beaten with her own walking cane. She was tied to a steam pipe.

"He kept beating me and asking, 'Where is the money? Where is the money?' I told him I didn't have any, just the $5 in my pockets. But he thought there was more," she said.

Lottie feels the bumps on her head and points to her nose. "Oh, why did he have to break my nose? Now I'll look like a prize fighter. I don't care how old I am, I don't want to have a broken nose.

"I hope you get him." She keeps pounding a fist into her palm. "I know I can identify him. Please get him."

Keegan and Gaffney leave, sickened, despite all the years of bruises and beatings they've seen.

They get back into the taxi. Another case. Another old lady. Another mugging.

Prison Inmate A Proud JC

SOMERS, Conn. (AP) — Ronald Jackson is a Jaycee chapter president who wears his membership pin proudly. He is also an inmate at the Somers State Prison.

Jackson, 22, who is serving a 26-year-to-life sentence for the 1975 murder of a New Haven liquor store owner, says the Jaycees give inmates a chance "to do something good for themselves."

"I go to bed thinking about the Jaycees. I wake up thinking about the Jaycees," says the articulate, soft-spoken Jackson.

The prison unit, one of 8,500 Jaycee chapters across the country, is in the midst of a drive to increase its inmate membership.

Jackson says two of the most important Jaycee programs are its leadership seminars and public speaking courses. He says that, thanks to the public speaking course, "I can go to the parole board and think while I'm talking, without it coming out mumbo-jumbo."

The Somers prison chapter also operates a refreshment stand for inmates, takes and sells color photographs for inmates to send home, and runs a money-making print shop which does work for nonprofit groups.

Jackson says his chapter would also like to organize a crime prevention unit similar to one operated by the chapter at the Enfield prison farm. That would send inmates into the community to talk about crime and how to avoid becoming a criminal.

Last year the Somers chapter ranked in the top 15 of the 103 Jaycee chapters in Connecticut, according to Roland Violette, Jaycees district director with responsibility for the prison unit.

Violette says the chapter had gone downhill early last year, so much so that the warden refused to meet with inmate Jaycees or allow Violette to visit the prison.

But since Jackson became chapter president in August, Violette says "he's turned things around." Violette now visits the chapter and the prison Jaycees are trying to rebuild their relationship with the prison administration.

The Jaycees hope their prison members will continue in the organization once they are released.

Jackson says any success ex-convict Jaycees may have in staying out of jail "depends on the individual. If he wants to stay out, then he can. He can use what he's learned to better himself."

Water Taken, Cities Sinking

CHICAGO (AP) — What do Birmingham, Ala., Houston, Tex., and Baton Rouge, La., have in common? They're sinking, because more water is being taken from the ground than nature can replenish, according to water treatment engineers at Ecodyne Corp.

This phenomenon, called "subsidence," has caused the ground level in the Houston-Galveston area to drop an average of five feet since 1918. Baton Rouge will fall five feet by 1990, while sinkholes as deep as 150 feet can be found in Birmingham, report the engineers.

In War On Drug Smuggling, We Are Not Winning

By KENNETH F. ENGLADE
BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, Tex. (UPI) — All manner of goods come north across the 1,300 miles of Rio Grande that form the boundary between the United States and Mexico.

From pot to parrots, mesquite to monkeys, the smugglers bring them. Most common of all is drugs: marijuana, heroin, cocaine, hashish, uppers and downers, LSD, PCP and MDA. Illegal drugs are coming across in such volume and in areas so hard to watch, at times the traffic resembles a flood. Most experts figure less than 10 per cent of the smugglers are being caught.

"It's obvious we're not winning (the war against traffickers)," said A. F. Hacker, the head of the narcotics section of the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin. "But the fact we exist and they know it helps."

Mexican drug-running pays a return of up to 8 to 1 on the buyer's investment. At those odds, it's an expanding market. "You can get a ton of weed (marijuana) for about $25 a pound in Mexico," said Marx Howell, a bankerish looking captain who works for Hacker. "In Texas, it will sell for $100-$120 a pound so that's $240,000 on a $50,000 investment."

"If you move it to Chicago, you can get $200 a pound and now you have $400,000 gross return."

Thomas A. Bailey, head of the U.S. Customs Service Air Support Branch in San Antonio, Tex., put it another way: "If you're going to smuggle, you might as well make money."

He said a good pilot willing to take a few chances can clear $500,000 tax free each year. Or at least until his luck runs out.

And luck means mainly surviving low-level, nighttime flights, zigzagging through 8,000-foot-tall peaks or skimming so close to the ground branches dangle from the wheels.

"One guy used to come in with twigs in his landing gear. He was about one-half crazy and one-half nifty. He's dead now. He had too much nerve for his ability," Bailey said.

Bailey figures about one-third of the goods smuggled into Texas from Mexico are coming in by air, and about 80 percent of that is narcotics.

It is not much of a problem for someone to rent or buy a small plane, find a backer and set himself up as a smuggler. Bjorn Finnseth was stuffing sausages at a plant in Houston and figuring it was a hell of a life for a ex-cropduster when one of his co-workers came up with an idea.

"You can make a lot of money flying dope in from Mexico," the man told Finnseth.

The Norwegian liked the idea. Finnseth made a couple of trips, leaving from a small strip in South Texas, flying into the interior of Mexico and putting down on a brush-cleared runway.

He would load up with dope, refuel his plane and fly back, slipping across the Rio Grande just above the ground to escape radar detection.

For awhile, things went smoothly for Finnseth along the vast, hard-to-patrol border. His undoing was traveling too fast.

Returning from a flight south of the border one night, Finnseth reported by radio — a routine procedure which made the flight look legitimate. However, the identification number he used belonged to a Cessna 172 — and he was flying too fast to be piloting a 172.

When Finnseth put down for fuel, agents were waiting. They searched his plane and found a load of marijuana. Finnseth agreed to fly the load on to his regular point of delivery and officers made more arrests. In all, they got 21 indictments. Finnseth served two years and was deported.

But most smugglers are not caught. "The chances are about 95 per cent someone can get away with it on a one-time basis if he doesn't get ripped off in Mexico," Bailey said. The fact is, though, most dope flyers become greedy and with each repeat trip increase their chances of detection and arrest.

"The one-time operator is almost nonexistent. They see the profit that can be made," he said.

The problem, from the authorities' point of view, is enormous. It takes two days to drive from Brownsville to El Paso; two hours to fly it non-stop in a jetliner. "It (the border) is an 800-mile-wide hole we're trying to fill," one drug agent said.

Capt. Wayne Winn Jr., head of the Customs Service office in Big Bend National Park, shifted his chaw of tobacco, squirmed in the passenger seat of the Dodge Ramcharger and smiled. "Out here, people have to drive 50 miles to do their grocery shopping," he said. It is 83 miles to the nearest U.S. liquor store.

Big Bend, as big as the state of Rhode Island, is a triangular-shaped area of rocks, peaks, cactus and yucca pointing like an arrowhead into Mexico.

Nestled in a treeless high desert between El Paso and the Lower Rio Grande Valley, the park was created in one of the more thinly populated and stark areas of Texas. Apollo astronauts used the mountains just west of the park for part of their training because of terrain closely resembling the moon.

The Rio Grande twists for 107 miles along two sides of the park. It is crossed hundreds, if not thousands, of times daily by North American tourists and Mexican nationals even though there is no bridge.

In 1976, more than 1,000 persons a day flocked to the area. Most of them came to see the unspoiled desert, the magnificent vistas, the stunning sunrises and sunsets, to watch the mule deer, javelina and roadrunners, or simply to relax in the Chisos Basin campground 1½ miles above sea level.

But an ever-increasing number come because the smugglers of drugs from Mexico have discovered the park is an almost ideal marketplace for their wares.

Both park officials and federal drug agents, at first undermanned and outmaneuvered, say their forces are growing and are better equipped to fight the illegal importers and their buyers.

Big Bend is one of the few national parks in the country where the rangers wear pistols and carry slug-loaded shotguns.

"It's something we wish they didn't have to do," said Park Superintendent J. F. Carithers. But it's also something he feels is necessary.

The park's location and the Old West tradition, combined with its excellent roads and a constantly changing population, make it one of the southwest's prime areas for smuggling and the violence that sometimes accompanies cash transactions.

At least twice in the last three years drug deals have erupted in shootouts between officers and Mexicans. One officer — a criminology student from nearby Sul Ross State University acting as a volunteer undercover agent — was killed last year.

Downriver, drug violence worsens.

Customs Col. Arthur S. Cser, based in Laredo as an assistant superintendent of an area covering 400 miles of Rio Grande country, unlocked a drawer in his desk and pulled out a folder.

"Here's a partial list of recent murders in Nuevo Laredo (Laredo's Mexican sister city)," he said, tossing across a stapled sheaf of papers.

"Shot in the head ... shot and thrown into the river ... machine-gunned by two cars ... chased by a red Mustang and machine-gunned," the list said. "These were professional murders," said Cser.

Despite the gangland type murders in Mexico, U.S. agents said they have not been able to trace major drug involvement to organized crime.

"Investigations do not point to a single organization,"

Howell said, making a tent of his fingers and speaking slowly and carefully. "However, we do not disagree they are responsible for a portion of the supply."

But organization or no, drugs are coming across by the ton, especially in Cser's heavily populated area.

Not long ago, agents operating on a tip from an informant searched a small, innocent-looking frame house in the citrus belt community of Donna. Inside they found 17,000 pounds of marijuana, neatly wrapped in bricks, stored in bags and organized in piles pre-set for delivery to certain areas.

To Expand Communications

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — In an effort to expand its television communications capability in time for the 1978 World Cup Soccer Championship, Argentina signed an agreement with neighboring Paraguay to extend the communications network linking the two countries. When fully operational by mid-1978, the two-country connection of the Inter-American Telecommunications System will have a capacity of 960 phone channels and color TV transmissions, several of which will be linked to earth satellites.

Review Planning End Publication

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Review, the longest running paperback literary periodical in America, will publish its last issue in September.

The Review, begun by editor Theodore Solotaroff in 1963, has published Philip Roth's "Portnoy's Complaint," Kate Millet's "Sexual Politics" and E.L. Doctorow's "Ragtime." It has enjoyed the reputation of discovering and introducing many new authors to the American public.

Explaining the decision to terminate publication, Solotaroff said, "I feel that after ten years of publication, American Review has lost much of its editorial momentum, reaching a point where most of my ideas for the magazine have been carried out or have become dated."

Seek Cheap Beef Recipes

DENVER, Colo. (UPI) — The women's auxiliary of the Denver-based American National Cattlemen's Association is looking for new recipes for less familiar, less expensive cuts of beef.

Its annual beef cooking contest, scheduled for Sept. 15-16 in Columbus, Ohio, will focus on new recipes for cuts such as brisket, round, chuck and rump, says Mrs. Marvin Berschet of South Charleston, Ohio, national cook-off chairman for the American National CowBelles.

Contestants must be over 21 years old and without professional status in the food industry. Recipes must contain two to five pounds of beef and no other meats. Cooking time cannot exceed four hours.

Mrs. Berschet said about 40 states expect to send finalists. State deadlines vary. The entry deadline for the national contest is August 1. The event is sponsored by wives of cattlemen and agribusinessmen, and women who own and operate their own farms and ranches.

For a copy of contest rules, write Mrs. Berschet, 8396 Clifton Rd., South Charleston, Ohio 45638.

Hungarians Are Heavy Smokers

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungarians are second only to Americans in the smoking of cigarettes, according to statistics published here. The annual per capita consumption in this country of 10.5 million is 3,750 cigarettes.

The statistics, compiled by Dr. Laszlo Vertes and Dr. Nandor Kun, put Canada in third place, followed by Switzerland, Britain, Poland, Japan and Bulgaria.

The United States and Bulgaria were listed as the leading producers of tobacco, with an average of 4.1 million tons of tobacco leaves being harvested annually worldwide.

Hungary has a "Society of Opponents to Smoking," with a membership of some 4,000, which seeks to promote a ban on smoking in offices and certain catering establishments.

Sympathetic Court Unable Help Disabled Youth

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen Aaron Jackson enlisted in the Army to be trained as an automobile mechanic. Instead, at 21, his body was cut in half by a tank.

A federal court on Wednesday said it "deeply sympathizes" with Jackson, but it can't order the government to pay damages to him.

Jackson had sued for breach of contract, claiming he was promised two things by a recruiter: he would get mechanic's training; he would not be assigned to dangerous duty.

The Army says there was no such promise, at least not in writing. And even if there had been, the recruiter had no authority to make it and therefore it's not binding.

In May 1974, four months after he enlisted, Jackson took part in maneuvers at Ft. Riley, Kan. A tank ran over him. The lower half of his body, navel on down, had to be amputated.

Jackson's lawyers could not sue for negligence; the Supreme Court has said it knows of no law that permits a soldier to recover damages on that ground. The lawyers chose the unusual claim that there was breach of the enlistment contract and asked $5 million damages.

The U.S. Court of Claims on Wednesday issued its decision in case No. 259-76, Allen Aaron Jackson v. The United States.

The court said it made a thorough, careful and comprehensive review "in view of the shocking severity of the plaintiff's injuries," but said it could find nothing in the enlistment papers that prevented the Army from using Jackson in training exercises.

"The court deeply sympathizes with the plaintiff for the severe injury he received while serving our country in the United States Army," said the judges. "However, the court is without jurisdiction, authority or power to grant him any relief. It may be that he could get help from Congress...."

Since that awful day in Kansas, Jackson has undergone 28 operations. He is now in the Hines (Ill.) Veterans Administration hospital being fitted for a prosthesis.

"He can sit up in a bucket which holds him rigid," says his father, Raymond, a Chicago bus driver. "When he dresses up in the prosthesis it will look like he's whole, but actually he's half. When he sits up he'll look like a whole man, that's about it."

The Army discharged Jackson and the Veterans Administration sends him $1,700 a month disability pay. It is small compensation.

"He had a girlfriend. She disappeared out of the picture," says his father. "He has only a couple of the friends he had, only a couple who have been true blue to him. All the pals he used to pal around with ... all he's got is family."

Lawyer Ronald Pinski, a member of the legal team that brought the suit, said the Court of Claims decision probably will be appealed.

Some Tips On Trip To Plains

By FREDERICK STANDISH
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — About one million tourists are expected to swarm over the home town of President Carter this summer, and to some, it may be a disappointing experience.

So, here are a few observations that could make your visit more enjoyable:

Watch where you drive ... others may not.

Expect to wait in line at Billy Carter's service station ... but don't expect to pull up a milk crate and sip a beer with the President's brother while you're waiting. Besides, police frown on public beer-guzzling.

Don't plan to blend in with the local citizens ... there are 683 residents of Plains and there's a better than even chance that you'll be spotted right off as a tourist, who, sometimes, outnumber townspeople two-to-one.

Notice the number of parcels of land and of picturesque homes for sale ... but don't ask how much they cost unless you're ready for a jolt.

Plan to pay tourists' prices ... after all, that's what you are.

Take a breather when you walk around town. A couple of years ago, Plains was a small southwest Georgia hamlet where life moved a bit slower than other parts of the state and nation. When you take a break, some of the town's Southern charm manages to seep through souvenir stands with their smiling peanut replicas.

Consider yourself a film star, of sorts ... you'll probably wind up in a slide show or movie presentation put together by other tourists when they get home.

And, of course, don't make jokes about peanuts.

Wide-Ranging Nixon Interview

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — British talk show host David Frost's interview subjects range from Tiny Tim to the Archbishop of Canterbury — and now to former President Richard M. Nixon.

"I've always said I thought Mr. Nixon was ready to speak, and that is how I think he arrived today — ready to speak," said Frost Wednesday after taping the first of 12 exclusive interviews with Nixon, covering his life, his almost 30-year career and the Watergate scandal which ended it.

Frost was cautious when asked what general area of questioning was involved in Nixon's first substantive interview since leaving the White House.

"Well, we don't want to go into that too much, but among them was the resignation," he said, declining with a gentle laugh to say whether Nixon refused to answer any questions. That'll be in the programs, he said.

The talks are to be edited to four 90-minute programs to be shown on the evenings of May 4, 12, 19 and 25, with same-day broadcast in at least 10 foreign countries.

Frost met with Nixon at a private home a few miles north of Nixon's beachfront estate in San Clemente, 75 miles south of here. The site was shifted when technicians found that radio signals from a Coast Guard unit near the Nixon estate interfered with videotape recordings. Frost won't identify the owner of the home.

According to Syndicast Services, the New York company selling the programs, at least 118 American TV stations will air them in May.

Nixon's agent, Irving Lazar, reportedly sought $1 million. Neither Frost nor his Paradine Productions, Inc., will say what Nixon is being paid, but published reports put the fee at $600,000.

Abby Mann Will Direct 'King'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "King," a four-hour movie for television based on the life of Martin Luther King Jr., will be directed as well as written by Abby Mann, Oscar-winning author of "Judgment at Nuremberg."

Mann will also serve as executive producer of the two-part show, which will appear on NBC next season. He says that he will present new material concerning the murder of the civil rights leader.

Carters Urge Voters At Home To Approve New School Bonds

By FREDERICK STANDISH
Associated Press Writer
AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — President and Mrs. Carter think their high school alma mater is in no shape for their daughter, Amy, or the children of any other county residents. And they're telling Sumter County voters about it.

In a taped two-minute announcement distributed to local radio stations, the first family has been backing a $2.2 million bond issue proposal set for a referendum next Tuesday to build a new county high school.

Carter, a graduate of Plains High School, said, "We owe it to our children not to let our pride in the past cloud our vision of the future."

And, in a separate 1½ minute tape, Rosalynn Carter said, "I am afraid we have let our high school buildings get into an awful condition. The roofs leak, doors swing crooked, window shades are stained and torn, floors are uneven and paint is peeling from the walls.

"Our children deserve to have an education as good as other communities provide for their children," she said.

Amy, the Carter's 9-year-old daughter, currently is in public elementary school in Washington. Mrs. Carter has said the family will return to Plains, Ga., when the Carter administration leaves office.

The proposal would help finance a new, consolidated secondary school which would house 7th through 12th grades. Currently there are two high schools in the county — Union High in Leslie and Plains High in the home town of the first family.

The new school, to be located just south of Americus, the Sumter County seat, would involve the transfer of about 1,000 students, said County School Supt. Carl Story. He said 90 percent of the students would have to travel less than 16 miles, and only a few about 20 miles.

Story backed the proposal, adding, "This consolidation would considerably reduce our transportation costs."

An opponent to the bond issue, Sumter County school board member James Gaston, has proposed that the building at Plains be renovated, and a new high school be constructed in Leslie. He said his proposal would cost about $500,000.

The two smaller high schools, Gaston said, would result in "smaller classes and more individual attention."

Also, he said, maintenance costs at the two separate schools would be less, and a consolidated secondary school would involve more administrative costs.

County voters go to the polls next Tuesday.

Merit Selection Of Judges Heads To House Floor

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A merit selection of judges proposal will be on the House floor for debate Tuesday and predictions are that the vote will be close. The proposal is aimed at protecting judges from political activity and was approved by the House Courts and Judicial Districts Committee Wednesday.

"It'll be close. I hope it passes, though," said Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, an attorney who said he has opposed such measures in the past but decided to co-sponsor this year's bill after he studied it earlier this session. Principal House sponsor is Rep. H. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, while

Sen. Lawrence Davis, D-For-syth, is chief sponsor of an identical measure in the Senate. The people will have the final say on merit selection because it requires a constitutional amendment that must be approved in a referendum even if it is approved by the three-fifths majority required in each chamber of the legislature. Under current law, judges are elected to terms of four years for district judges, and eight years for judges on the superior, appeals and supreme courts. Under the proposed change, a nominating commission would select three nominees to fill an opening. The governor would name the judge from that group. The public would have the right to reject the judge during the first election after the judge has served a year. In that election, the people would vote between retaining the judge or turning him out of office. As now proposed, a 60 per cent majority would be required for the judge to stay in office. District judges would be up for reconfirmation every four years and other judges would be up for reconfirmation every eight years.

Rep. Richard Erwin, a Winston-Salem lawyer, said he opposed merit selection in previous years because it would have left the nominations in the hands of the Bar Association. There would be 150 members on the nominating commission with more than half of them laymen. The governor would appoint at least a third, all non-lawyers; the chief justice of the state Supreme Court would appoint at least a third, all lawyers; and the remainder would be divided between the speaker of the House and president pro tempore of the Senate. Commission members would serve two-year terms and be prohibited from serving more than four years. "I don't know of another method that the commissioners could be better selected," Erwin said. To ensure representation of women and minorities, the proposal calls for all segments of society to be on the commission. Opposition to the measure centered on fears that it would remove the judicial system from control of the people. "I trust my people when they go to voting. I don't think there's anybody on this committee that can convince me that this mode of selection is going to be any better," said Rep. George Hux, D-Halifax. "It's going to end up that the lawyers and politicians are go-

GRAVE BATTLE — A battle is brewing over Chief Joseph's grave at Newpelem, Wash. Joseph was the leader of the Wallowa Nez Perce, who led his people in the war with the United States in 1877. The new conflict is over whether Joseph's grave should be weeded. Nez Perce leaders say "no", contending that weeding ancestral graves "would be disturbing what is their home." Members of the Colville tribe say "yes", contending the grave invites weeds and makes visitors think the legendary chief has been forgotten. (AP Wirephoto)

Landlocked' He Likes An Art Of The Seas

By JOHNNY FUTCH
Athens Daily News
ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Steve Hollis isn't a grizzled veteran of years at sea. He never hurled a harpoon, took a "Nantucket sleighride" or spent nights boiling blubber into whale oil.

But Hollis is an artist dedicated to preserving a small part of the whaler's heritage. Hollis is a scrimshander. Scrimshaw is the art of engraving on ivory. Whalers originated the craft between Nantucket sleighrides, the wild rides in a small boat being towed by a harpooned whale. They scratched sea scenes into whales' teeth or whalebone, which is the plate inside the jaw of toothless whales.

Hollis' introduction to the art was more prosaic. The Athens man became a scrimshander by accident — his first effort was idle scratching of a knife against a piano key.

"It didn't come across as a sailor's art," he recalled.

Intrigued by the possibilities, however, he improved his skill in his spare time, often working on discs of polished cow ribs. The sometime hobby quickly developed into a part-time job when others saw the delicate etchings. Hollis' scrimshaw became cuff links, tie tacks, bracelets and necklaces. "The first pieces I did had nothing to do with the sea," he said.

"They dealt with mythological subjects. Then I did some Indian-style pieces." His themes now range from squarerigger ships to trains to animals. He was even commissioned to do what he describes as an erotic scrimshaw.

With whalebone and whale teeth no longer available, many artisans use substitutes. Boar's teeth, walrus and elephant tusk are acceptable, but expensive. Ivory piano keys are a good substitute, but small. Before engraving it, Hollis polishes the piece with a buffing wheel, pumice and water.

The engraving is done with a sharpened dentist's probe.

Hollis uses a lead pencil to sketch the design on the ivory, which has a very soft surface. He etches the design, lightly at first, then more broadly.

"It's like painting with water colors," he explained. "You put down the lighter areas first and then work up the darker portions of the design."

Black ink brings out the design, and a coat of tung oil protects the engraving.

Hollis, who has a sense of history about his work, feels a kinship with the whalers of New England who turned a lonely hobby into a lasting art.

"Some say you can't sing the blues unless you've lived the life, but I don't think so. Some say you can't be a scrimshander until you've spent your life at sea," he said. "I don't think that's true. Until they come up with a better name for someone who does this but who hasn't been to sea, I'll consider myself a scrimshander."

Curious Cancer Concentration Baffling Experts

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A curious concentration of mouth and throat cancer among white women in the Southeast is baffling epidemiologists at the national Center for Disease Control.

A study is under way in Georgia to try to understand why the incidence of this disease is so much higher among white women in the Southeast than in other parts of the country.

The national average among white women is 1.05 per 100,000 persons. In Georgia, it is 1.86 per 100,000.

A study by the National Cancer Institute plots the highest rate of this cancer among white women in Georgia, Alabama, middle Tennessee, a small portion of the Florida Panhandle, eastern North Carolina and a narrow strip through the middle of South Carolina.

There is little difference among blacks in the Southeast and other parts of the country. Nor is there any difference in the incidence of the disease among white men.

But what causes this high rate of mouth and throat cancer among white women in the Southeast?

Georgia was chosen for the study that was begun more than a year ago "because we had to deal with one section of the country at a time and it was easier to single out one government, one set of officials and one set of hospitals," said Dr. Glyn Caldwell, deputy chief of the cancer branch at the CDC.

So far, there are no results because the facts still are being analyzed.

A group of 188 cancer patients at Brunswick, Ga., have been studied and researchers now are studying another group of about 200 patients at Savannah.

The two groups were chosen because of the availability of their records at hospitals cooperating with the study.

A similar study of a population group along the Atlantic coast from South Carolina to northern Florida is under way, Caldwell said, because this area is one of the nation's "hot spots" for lung cancer.

These are the first two of many planned studies of mass population areas where the incidence of different kinds of cancer exceeds the national average, Caldwell said.

There has always been the possibility that such "hot spots" for certain diseases are flavored with reporting procedures which vary from state to state. But the cancer "hot spots" were designated from actual causes on death certificates.

One problem which researchers had to solve early in the investigation was that the occupation on death certificates of almost all of the females who died of mouth and throat cancer was listed as "housewife."

"This put a screaming halt to the death certificate investigation," said Dr. J. Malcolm Harrington, a medical epidemiologist.

"The death certificates showed that 90 per cent of them were housewives. Now, we have to find out: What did they do besides being a housewife?"

"Now we have to go back to people," said Harrington. "We interview them about their past life, their past work experiences."

"Did they dip snuff? Did they use tobacco? Did they work in textiles? These are some of the things we are looking into.

"In epidemiological investigations, you never prove anything," he said. "You get a stronger and stronger implication until you find what seems to be the cause."

Caldwell said one of the things that is beginning to worry epidemiologists is: "Are we asking the right questions?"

He said the same interviewers are being used in Savannah who were employed in the Brunswick investigation.

"But they don't have enough information about any number of cases so that they can form an opinion," he said. "We don't want them to become suspicious of something and hone in on some possibility. We don't want them to bias the Brunswick investigation."

Caldwell said he believes the riddle might be solved if the investigators can find out what women in the Southeast do that women in other parts of the country don't do.

"If it were genetic, we think it would occur more often across the country," he said.

"What is it that the women do that the men don't? Is it an occupational hazard, some unusual religious practice, the environment?"

"Nobody has ever done what we're trying to do," Caldwell said. "This is 'hot spot' epidemiology. It is going to take time. And there is always the possibility that we will never know the cause."

Seek Birth Control Plan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan will initiate a six-year plan to reduce its annual population growth rate by one-third, population planning secretary Badraddin Zahidi has announced.

The plan, to be launched July 1, emphasizes a sterilization program but will offer various methods of birth control.

Zahidi said that eight model family clinics would be opened in major Pakistani cities to provide facilities for sterilization and other means of birth control. There will also be mobile clinics to carry the program into rural areas.

He said plans were also in the offing to open vasectomy centers in various places in the country. "We have to motivate and educate the males too," he said.

Pakistan, with a population of more than 52 million and an area of 400,529 square miles, has a current annual population growth rate of 3.5 per cent. By 1983, Zahidi hopes, the growth rate will be reduced to 2.4 per cent.

Zahidi said there was a great need to control the growth rate. He said, due to better medical and nutritional facilities, the fatality rate in the country had dropped to 1.1 per cent.

The sterilization program, he said, would be carried out on a purely voluntary basis. But, he emphasized, everyone must be involved in the program. The government alone could not do anything, he said.

He said Pakistan was considering sending a delegation to China to study their population planning system and to see which measures might be adopted in Pakistan.

183 Million Have Protection

NEW YORK (UPI) — An estimated 183 million persons in the United States are protected by some form of private health insurance, according to the Health Insurance Institute. This is a gain of three per cent — or five million persons — from the year before, and means that nine of every 10 Americans is covered by such insurance, the institute adds.

Water Safety Vest Less Bulky

CARBONDALE, Pa. (UPI) — Contoured foam construction eliminates bulkiness in a new line of safety vests designed for boaters and water-skiers.

They are available in high-fashion colors and styles for men, women and children. All come with extra heavy duty, foul-free zippers and adjustable action panels. The children's model has front flaps that add flotation ability and mobility and make sitting more comfortable. Foam over-shoulder design in one adult model offers greater arm comfort, the manufacturer says.

More Wintry Than In Alaska
WATERTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Which has the more perfect weather — Alaska or the Watertown area of upstate New York?

For the military, the blizzard of '77's more than six feet of snow provided the answer. The miserable winter weather off the eastern end of Lake Ontario made Camp Drum the winner over the sweeter weather that greeted troops in Alaska for this past winter's training exercise.

Joint Zoning Meet...

easiest way to insure notification.

Browder said that the planning staff would probably continue to place signs on the property to be rezoned, in addition to the mail requirement.
Commissioners tabled for 30 days a request by H. G. Stocks to rezone approximately 32.6 acres on the south side of US 264 Bypass from Highway Commercial and RA-20 to Highway Commercial and Office and Institutional.

Arnett Harris, who served as chairman last night, said that the Council has requested that the Planning and Zoning Commission make a comprehensive study of the overall 264 Bypass area. He noted that it would be a good idea to table requests regarding the area pending the study.

Schofield informed the commissioners that the staff is in the process of studying comments received on the proposed Planned Unit Development (PUD) Ordinance and will draft another version for consideration. He said that the draft will be ready to bring back before the commission in a few weeks.
Commissioners voted to recommend to the Council that an annexation petition submitted by Courtney Square located southeast of the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road be approved.

Schofield, who discussed an annexation impact report regarding Courtney Square Apartments, said that the new property would not create a financial burden on the city. He added that utilities services, as well as fire, police, recreation and public works services could be met with no added burden.
The planner said that the proposed area for annexation involves some ten acres and would yield an estimated $1,300,000 addition to the city's tax base. The city would also realize approximately $8,320 in real property tax, it was pointed out.

Commissioners approved several amendments to the Zoning Ordinance defining dine and dance establishments in the city. Schofield said that the present ordinance does not adequately define "dine and dance" establishments. The amendment would take out "dine and dance" from the Downtown Commercial and Downtown Commercial Fringe zones, insert "nightclub, beer hall, coffee house, cocktail lounge, private club and other similar activity" in the definition section, and reinstate the new definition in CDF as a special use.

In addition, the amendments would give the Council the ability to approve the special use permits for the establishments.
Schofield said that the amendments provide the Council with some control over the location of the establishments. He said there is no control now in the CD zone.

Mayor Percy Cox observed that the ordinance would not affect businesses already in operation but would mean that the number of downtown spots would not be increased. He said it would help to regulate the CDF area.
Consideration of a revision to Chapter Four of the City Code relating to airport zoning was tabled for 30 days to allow further study.

Approval was given to the final plat of North Park Industrial Center located south of State Road 1579. City Engineer Charlie Holliday noted that the preliminary had been approved earlier by the commission and all checklist requirements were met in the final plat documents.

Both the preliminary and final plats of Vainright Subdivision, Section I, north of Greenfield Terrace and west of NC 11, were approved. Holliday reported that the name of the subdivision had been changed to Beverley Downs.

According to the engineer, some 8.5 acres are included in Section I and 21 lots are provided in the layout.

The plats were approved with the stipulation that recreational area be provided when the second section is developed.
City Planning and Zoning Commissioners, after hearing opposition of Lakewood Pines property owners who turned out in a delegation, voted to approve the revised preliminary plat of Section I and II of Singletree Subdivision.

City Planning and Zoning Commissioners, after hearing discussion on a request by Wilson Rhodes Electrical Contractors Inc. to rezone about one acre on the east side of Hooker Road from RA-20 to Highway Commercial, decided to table the request for 30 days pending Council action on another rezoning matter on Hooker Road.

Rhodes indicated that he was seeking the rezoning since his business is currently a non-conforming use in the RA-20 zone. He said that if the business is lost due to fire, wind or other circumstances, he would be unable to rebuild since it is non-conforming. Rhodes said that he has no plans to change anything other than upgrade what is presently there. The property adjoins Cambridge Subdivision.

Several Cambridge property owners appeared and said that although they did not object to Rhodes' business remaining, they felt that by rezoning the property for commercial use it would open the door for other commercial development in the area. They cited potential downgrading of their residential properties.

The property owners said that their problem was with the proposed zone, not with Rhodes who they considered a good neighbor.

After hearing opposition from neighboring property owners concerning his request to rezone approximately .94 acres at 602 E. Tenth Street from Office and Institutional to Downtown Commercial Fringe, Dr. Ledyard E. Ross withdrew his petition.

Ross said that four dentists are moving from his dental complex to other quarters and he wanted to have more flexibility in selecting new tenants for the offices. He said he planned to spend some money on upgrading the complex but he would have liked to have had more selection flexibility if the money is spent.

Commissioners, despite the opposition of Lakewood Pines property owners who turned out in a delegation, voted to approve the revised preliminary plat of Section I and II of Singletree Subdivision.

A spokesman for the Lakewood property owners said that they had been unable to communicate with the developers on the proposed subdivision plans and they needed some leverage from the commission in order to discuss the matter.

The property in question involves a ten-acre triangular tract lying between the railroad and Lakewood Pines Subdivision. The developers, it was noted, would prefer to put a street in through a lot owned by them in Lakewood Pines for access to the ten-acre tract but Lakewood Pines covenants prevent such action. Therefore, access is being sought across the railroad into the property.

Schofield noted that where the plat conforms with the subdivision checklists and where there is no technical reason for denial, the commission had no choice but to approve the plat.

David Evans Jr. is serving as agent for the developers. Approval was given to the preliminary plat of Twin Oaks Subdivision located at the northwest intersection of 14th Street and US 264 Bypass.

The preliminary and final plats of Elks Subdivision located west of Fomes Road adjacent to Maplewood Subdivision were discussed and commissioners voted to table consideration on the matter for 30 days.

Approval was given, with Tugwell abstaining, of the final plat of Bond-King Subdivision, Section I, located on Fomes Road.

Commissioners accepted the sedimentation control plan for Kings Arms Apartments located east of Charles Street and north of 14th Street.

Pirates Score In 9th, Nip Maryland

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor
 Robert Brinkley came up with a one-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning to push over the winning run as East Carolina gained a two-game split with the University of Maryland yesterday, 3-2.

Maryland had taken the first game of the series on Tuesday, 3-0.

Pete Conaty, hurling another fine game, went the distance to claim the win and raise his hard-luck record to 2-2. He scattered nine hits, and just one of the runs against him was earned. East Carolina also collected nine hits, off two Terrapin pitchers, but they were able to put them together to gain their three runs without benefit of the lone Maryland error.

Coach Monte Little changed his lineup a little, moving Tommy Cobb into left field for Charlie Stevens, and inserting Jerry Carraway at shortstop for Rick Koryda. Carraway had one error in five chances, and was two-for-three at the plate.

Maryland offered a threat in the third inning, but a fine fielding play by Pete Paradossi helped to take the Pirates out of the jam. Billy Gardner led off with a single and moved up on an infield out after stealing second. Chris Hudson grounded back to Paradossi at second, who threw out Gardner at the plate. Maryland later left a man at second in the fourth.

East Carolina grabbed the lead in the second inning with a run. Bobby Supel reached on a fielder's choice and moved to second when a pickoff play was booted. Raymie Styons then doubled to left, but Supel was able to reach only as far as third due to a near catch of the ball.

Brinkley then hit a sacrifice fly to right, scoring Supel.

The Bucs threatened again in the third and fifth, putting men as far as second.

Maryland tied it up with one in the sixth. Hudson walked and Mark Poehlman ran for him. Mark Harris singled, and John Norris walked, leading them up. A wild pitch scored Poehlman, but the Bucs got out of the jam with another fine fielding play, getting Harris in a pickoff after Robert Niffenegger singled to right.

East Carolina went back out in front in the bottom of the sixth. Eddie Gates singled, then was caught off first on a pickoff move. He slide safely into second, starting a rhabarb that led to the ejection of Terp second baseman Frank Thomas. Sonny Wooten singled to score Gates for a 2-1 lead.

But again, Maryland rallied for the tying run. Billy Owens led off the seventh with a single and was sacrificed up. Scott Smith then reached on an error, scoring Owens. Maryland missed a chance to score in the eighth, when after loading the bases with two out, Smith's fly to right was caught by the charging Gates.

Then, in the bottom of the ninth, the Bucs won it. Wooten led off with a walk, and Stevens came on to run for him. Supel sacrificed him up, and Styons was intentionally walked. Brinkley responded with a single into right field, scoring Stevens from second with the game-ending run.

The Pirates are now 7-5, and will play host to Elon on Friday at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

They open Southern Conference play Saturday

Roanoke Tops South Edgecombe

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School won its second straight victory yesterday, downing South Edgecombe, 6-2.

The Redskins pushed over three runs in the third inning to break a scoreless deadlock and take the lead for good.

Ken Gurganus led off the third with a single and stole second. David Spruill singled and advanced to second on the relay home. Cliff Keel sacrificed Gurganus over with the first run, and Charlie Smith walked. A double steal scored Spruill, and Smith then stole third, scoring on Eddie James' sacrifice fly.

South Edgecombe came up with its first run in the fourth. Lenoard May singled and stole up. Mitch Causeway singled him to third, and another double steal brought in May.

The other South Edgecombe run came in the fifth. James Corbett singled and Mark Webb reached on a two-base error. Tommy Tolson was hit by a pitch and Causeway walked to force in Corbett.

Roanoke finished it up with three in the bottom of the fifth. Spruill singled and scored on a triple by Keel. Keel was thrown out at home, however, trying to score on Smith's infield grounder. Smith, caught in a rundown, was awarded third base on interference. James then walked and stole up, and both scored on a single by Cargile.

Gurganus had three hits, while Spruill and Cargile each had two for Roanoke. Corbett had a pair to lead South Edgecombe.

Roanoke travels to Elm City on Friday.

Southern Nash Tops Chargers

PIKEVILLE — Southern Nash captured first place in a three-way track meet yesterday, with Ayden-Grifton finishing second.

The Firebirds came away with 86-1/3 points, while Ayden-Grifton ended up with 46-1/3. Host C. B. Aycock was third with 37-1/3.

Ayden-Grifton's Rod Nobles won both the 100-yard dash and the 220, setting a school record in the latter with a time of :23.1 seconds. Dunston was a double winner for Southern Nash, winning the 880 and the mile.

The Chargers also set a new school mark with their mile relay team, finishing in 3:44.1.

Overall, Southern Nash won nine events, Ayden-Grifton won three and Aycock won two.

Ayden-Grifton goes to West Craven on Monday.

Washington Nips Conley

WASHINGTON — Washington held off a Conley High School rally in the seventh inning yesterday to escape with a 14-12 victory over the Vikings in a baseball game.

Washington took an early lead and built up a good margin before the Vikings managed a comeback in the final inning to pull within two runs.

The Vikes committed eight errors that helped along seven Pam Pack hits. Conley banged out 12 hits, coupled with five Washington miscues, but it wasn't enough.

Conley took an early lead with two runs in the top of the first inning. Kevin Adams walked and stole up, scoring on Mike Phillips' single. Quinn Morris then doubled in Phillips.

But the Pack came back in the bottom of the frame to push over five runs to take the lead, 5-2. Cristiano was hit by a pitch and both Rowland and Batchelor walked. Then, after two were out, Perry, Gibbs and Tolson all walked, forcing over three runs. Whitehead followed with a two-run double, winding up the frame's scoring.

Washington added two more in the second, while Conley scored two each in the third and fourth, cutting it to 7-6. But Washington pulled away with four in the bottom of the fourth, three on a homer by Roberson. Washington got two more in the fifth, and both teams scored a run in the sixth to make it 14-7.

Conley put together a rally in the top of the seventh and almost pulled it off. Morris walked and Dale Bailey reached on an error. Victor Evans singled in both runners, and Gary Brock and Nuggie Worthington both walked, loading the bases. Adams followed with a triple, driving in all three, but the rally ended there, two runs short.

Adams led Conley's hitting with four, including a double and a triple, while Phillips and Curtis Spencer each had two. Roberson had two for Washington.

Conley, now 1-1, travels to Ayden-Grifton next Tuesday. Conley 202 201 5-12 12 8

Kinston Eases Past Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — Kinston High School gained revenge for an earlier defeat by nipping the Ayden-Grifton Chargers, 3-2, yesterday in baseball.

The Vikings pushed over the first run in the top of the third inning. Glenn Spence was hit by a pitch and Joe Wiggs singled. Craig Hill followed with another hit, scoring Spence.

Ayden-Grifton took the lead in the fourth with a pair of runs. Mike Teachey walked and Butch Davis singled. David Riley singled in Teachey and Davis scored when Mark Cannon reached on an error.

It stayed that way until the top of the seventh, when Kinston rallied for two runs and the win. Marshall Whitfield singled and Kirk Williams walked. Spence doubled in Whitfield, and Wiggs singled to score Williams.

Wiggs led the Kinston attack with two hits, while Davis had three for the Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton is now 1-4 on the year, and travels to Washington on Friday.

Tigerettes Take Win

BEAR GRASS — Williamston's softball team eased to a 16-12 victory over Bear Grass yesterday.

It was the third straight victory for the Tigerettes, while the Bears fell off to an 0-3 record.

Williamston pushed over two in the first, while Bear Grass came back with three in the second, one in the third, and five in the fourth. Williamston after adding two in the fourth got another in the fifth, while the Bears added two.

The Tigerettes then exploded for 11 big runs in the sixth to wrap it up. Bear Grass added one in the seventh.

Terry Hopkins led Williamston with four hits, while Valeria Barnhill had three, including a triple. Cindy Cullipher (home run), Lisa Roberson and Christie Rogerson each added two hits.

Taylor led Bear Grass with three (double), while Howell (double) and Leggett each had two.

Lydia Singleton was the winning pitcher.

Squaws Take Softball Win

PINETOPS — Roanoke High School's girls' softball team inched past South Edgecombe yesterday, 17-16.

Roanoke fell behind in the early innings, but came on strong later in the game to pull out the win. The Squaws scored a run in the top of the first, but South Edgecombe came up with three. Both teams scored six in the second frame, with South adding three in the third for an 11-7 lead.

But Roanoke added four in the fourth, and both got two in the fifth. South got another in the sixth, and Roanoke pushed ahead with four in the seventh. South came back with two in the bottom of the seventh, but fell short.

Nancy Roberson led the Roanoke hitting with four, while Sheila Hoskins had three. Carolyn Carolyn Duggins, Becky Spruill and Phyllis Roberson each had two, with Duggins having a double and Roberson a triple.

For South Edgecombe, Sharon Jernigan, M. J. Darden, Jackie Howell Martha Sharpe each had three, with Howell having a homer, and Sharp a double. Dorothy Phillips and Ginger

Cummings each added two, with Phillips having a triple and Cummings, a double.

Miriam Jones was the winning pitcher.

Roanoke is now 2-1 and hosts Elm City today.

Jaguars Again Defeat Rose, 6-4

Kyle

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Farmville Central grabbed a 6-4 lead over Rose High in the third inning and held on to take a 6-4 win at Guy Smith Stadium yesterday afternoon.

The Jaguars scored five runs off of Rampant starter Jeff Aldridge, only one of them earned, before he was replaced with one out in the second. The Jags scored another run in the top of the third, but Rose rallied in the bottom of the inning to make it 6-4.

The Rampants couldn't generate much offense after that, however, and, although holding Farmville Central scoreless, couldn't score the winning runs themselves.

Much of the Rampant problem centered around third base, where starter Reggie Spain committed three errors and his replacement, Joey Mattheis, made two more.

Aldridge started off the first inning with two straight strikeouts and the third man up, catcher David Winborn, grounded to Spain, but he muffed the throw to first.

Aldridge then delivered four straight walks, scoring Winborn and the designated hitter, Jerry Rackley, before the third out was made.

In the second inning, with one away, Aldridge walked two more batters, Mike Jenkins and Neil Gordon, before allowing Winborn to get a hit to right field, loading the bases.

Aldridge then walked in Rackley for Farmville's third run. The next batter, David Cochran, hit a ground ball to third and Spain again overthrew the first baseman, allowing Cochran to go to second and scoring Gordon and Winborn.

Rampant coach Ronald Vincent then replaced Aldridge with Perry Worthington who, after walking one man, struck out Carroll Griffin for the second out before Donald Holloman grounded to third for a force out there. Aldridge moved to right field after reacquainting his mound duties.

Rose went down 1-2-3 in the bottom of the second and another error on the third baseman was responsible for the Jaguars' final run in the top of the third.

Worthington struck out the first batter, Ted Dunn, but Mike Jenkins made it safely to second after Spain once more overthrew the first baseman. Neil Gordon got an infield single to move Jenkins to third base before a wild pitch by Worthington brought him home. The Rampants struck back in the bottom of the inning however, scoring four runs and getting two doubles.

Spain led off with a single to third base and went to second on an error by the Jaguar third baseman, Dunn. After Worthington grounded to first, John Coffman hit to center field, scoring Spain.

Ronnie Chapman then doubled to right field, moving Coffman to third, and Coffman scored when Mike Shank singled to the shortstop.

Shank's hit advanced Chapman to third and he scored as Wright Hooks doubled to left field, moving Shank to third base. Aldridge then walked to load the bases and Shank scored when Greg Lee hit a fielders choice to the left fielder, which played to third to get Hooks out.

Mark Conway walked for the Rampants to load the sacks again, bringing up Spain for the second time in the inning. But he struck out to end the frame.

Farmville Central threatened to score again in the top of the fourth. With two out, Donald Holloman made it safely to second on an error by Rose's new third baseman, Mattheis. Dunn then walked for the Jaguars and Jenkins made it to first on an error by Rose shortstop Lee. But Holloman tried to make it to home after Lee bobbed Jenkins' ground ball and Lee threw him out at the plate to end the inning. Only twice more in the game did a team have a runner in scoring position. Rose in the fourth and Farmville in the sixth, but neither were able to move past second.

Winborn was the only player with more than one hit, going two for three for the Jaguars. The winning pitcher, Ricky Smith, went the distance for Farmville Central, giving up five hits, being charged with four earned runs and having seven strikeouts and five walks. Worthington pitched four and two-thirds innings for Rose before being replaced by Danny Hester for the final frame. He gave up two hits, had nine strikeouts and walked three.

The loss evens the Rampant record at 2-2 on the year. They play again Friday when they host Rocky Mount. The Jaguars are also 2-2, with both wins being over Rose, and will entertain Tarboro on Friday.

Williams Leads Lady Jag Team

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Farmville Central's girl's track team will be depending on the distance, hurdles and field events for success this year, according to coach Hilda Worthington.

"When it comes to sprints, we're going to be hurting," Mrs. Worthington admits, but the Lady Jaguars could make up for it in the distance events. There are also some freshman sprinters on the squad who may come around before the end of the season.

The Farmville Central girl's track team "did all right last year, but really didn't have that many people out," Mrs. Worthington said. "We've got a pretty good person in the discus," Lou Anne Eason. "She's getting the turn put in this year," Mrs. Worthington said, "and that's an accomplishment for a girl."

Teresa Manning will run the 60 and 100 hurdles for the Lady Jags and Mrs. Worthington said, "I think she will come through." Although practice has been hampered by the weather, her times are coming down, Mrs. Worthington said.

In the mile, Terri Lloyd and Lynette Harris have looked good so far this year, according to Mrs. Worthington.

Dianne Barrett, a newcomer to the Lady Jag squad, will be high jumping this year and "Should come along real well. Hopefully, she should reach 5-2 or 5-3 before the season is over."

Farmville Central also has Ilean Phillips in the shot put. She will "probably come through with a pretty good distance," according to Mrs. Worthington.

Also, the Lady Jaguars "have some mighty good freshmen coming up and, if we continue to work, I think they'll be pretty good."

Only three other teams in the Eastern Carolina Conference besides Farmville—C. B. Aycock, D. H. Conley and Southern Nash—will compete in girl's track this year, according to Mrs. Worthington. In addition, Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central will have some individuals competing.

Mrs. Worthington doesn't know how Farmville Central will face up against the other teams in the conference but the key, she said, is getting everybody in condition and ready. She is hoping the weather will improve to make that possible.

Farmville In Track Victory

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central nipped D. H. Conley by three points in a three-way track meet yesterday.

The Jaguars completed the meet with 84 points, while Conley finished with 81. North Pitt finished a distant third with five points.

Farmville Central captured first place in seven events, and Conley won a similar number. Each team also won a relay. Farmville's victory came on its greater depth in seconds, thirds and fourths.

Rufus Mayo was a triple winner for the Jaguars, winning the triple jump, the 440-yard dash and the long jump. Conley's Hill won the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Farmville entertains Eastern Wayne on Monday, while Conley travels to Greene Central on Wednesday. North Pitt goes to North Lenoir Wednesday.

Namath Said Joining Rams

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath, the flamboyant and controversial quarterback of the New York Jets for the past 12 years, has agreed to play for the Los Angeles Rams, the New York Times reported today.

The newspaper said the injury-prone Namath, who led the Jets to the National Football League's Super Bowl championship in 1969 in a stunning upset over the Baltimore Colts, agreed to join the Rams Wednesday night.

However, the deal reportedly may take a while to complete. Namath's lawyer, Jim Walsh, told the Times from California that he would talk to the Jets today and tell them: "We'll go along with whatever deal the Jets and Rams can make."

When the clubs work out a trade, the Rams would have 30 days to sign Namath, who earned $450,000 last season. Namath was in the option year of a two-year contract. If the Jets and Rams could not conclude the deal, then New York would have the choice of picking up Namath's option year. If they did, they would have to pay him $495,000 for the 1977 season under the terms of the NFL's new player agreement.

High Point Advances POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Tiny Biola College of La Mirada, Calif., and Berry College of Rome, Ga., have shot their way into the third round of playoffs for the national women's small-college basketball championships.

Biola squeaked by Francis Marion College of Florence, S.C., 69-64, late Wednesday night, after Berry easily laid aside a challenge from Cal Poly Pomona 86-66 in the week-long Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament.

Earlier in the day, in the final first-round games, High Point College of North Carolina defeated Salisbury State of Maryland 114-50, and Phillips University of Enid, Okla., beat Eastern Connecticut State 95-62.

In four matches in the consolation bracket, West Georgia defeated Ursinus College of Pennsylvania 71-45, Tarkio College of Missouri beat Eastern Montana 53-32, Dayton College eliminated Salisbury 77-60, and Eastern Connecticut slipped by Colorado College 75-63.

In today's playoffs, Phillips faces Ashland College of Ohio, and Southeast Louisiana plays High Point College.

Tarkanian Avoids Investigation Talk

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian, coach of fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, would just as soon skip the subject of his basketball team's investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Asked Wednesday if he thought word of the investigation leaked out of NCAA headquarters in hopes of hampering the Rebels' bid for the national championship, Tarkanian said, "I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best that I don't express any of them."

And he didn't. Asked if it might affect his team in the NCAA tournament, he replied, "I don't think so."

He seemed more concerned with No. 4 North Carolina, his opponent Saturday in the 4:15 p.m. EST nightcap of the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta's Omni.

"I've never seen a team that did so many things and did them well," Tarkanian said Wednesday during a telephone news conference involving the coaches of the four semifinal teams.

He especially expressed concern about the Carolina "four corners" offense, a delay game often employed by Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith late in a game when his club is nursing a lead.

"A lot of teams are running the four corners," Tarkanian said. "It's not a matter of running it, it is how well you run it. It'll be new for us because we haven't seen anyone run it as well as Carolina."

"It would be nice if we got ahead and didn't have to worry about it." "We get too much attention on our four corners," Smith said. "We also believe in the fast break. But no one does it any better than Vegas. We think we are surely facing the toughest team in the West. It will be one of the toughest tests we have faced."

The Tar Heels carry a 2-4 record into the game. Las Vegas has the top mark of the final four, 28-2.

Saturday's opener matches upstart North Carolina-Charlotte, 28-3 and ranked 17th, against No. 7 Marquette, 23-7.

UNCC also will employ the fast break, although the well-disciplined Sun Belt Conference champions also demonstrated considerable patience in rolling to victories over Syracuse and No. 1 Michigan in last week's Midwest Regionals.

Marquette, which loses veteran Coach Al McGuire to retirement after this tournament, is a defensive-minded club that likes to control the tempo of a game.

McGuire said he thought Charlotte's strong point was its "underdog type of attitude — all for one and one for all. I think this is the greatest asset you have."

He said he was sure UNCC had outstanding players and that he had read about Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who "just seems to be a charming young guy. He seems to be the type of guy that can lead you to the national championship."

Maxwell is Charlotte's 6-foot-8 center, a silky-smooth operator who is averaging more than 20 points per game and also is used to take the ball down court against an opponent's full-court press.

"Maxwell does all phases of the game well," said 49er Coach Lee Rose, who took his team to the finals of the National Invitation Tournament last year, but still didn't figure to be one of the finalists in the NCAA event.

Rose was asked if he feared his team might have "peaked out" in last week's victory over Michigan.

"I think the four teams left have extremely tough games," Rose said. "I'm not concerned about peaking against Michigan. If we peaked out, we just did it."

The teams begin arriving in Atlanta tonight — Nevada-Las Vegas via a commercial flight and Marquette on a charter. Both Carolina teams are due to arrive around noon Friday, the day each team gets the only workout in the Omni before Saturday's games.

Davis Holds Bowling Lead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "Probably my biggest goal is to win the grand slam. In fact, all I've thought about this year is winning the U.S. Open," says Dave Davis, who retained his lead Wednesday in the Bowling Proprietors Association of America U.S. Open tournament here.

The veteran from Atlanta held a 127-pin lead over young Bill Spigner in the $100,000 event with a three-round pinfall of 5,484.

Davis, the Professional Bowlers Association's No. 5 all-time money winner, is seeking to win the only major tournament to have eluded him in his 15-year career.

His third-round game totals were 214, 233, 210, 235, 228, 188, 264 and 233 for a total of 1,811 and a 226 average.

Spigner, of Hamden, Conn., edged slightly closer with a block of 1,836 Wednesday for a tournament total of 5,357.

Others in the top five were Palmer Pallgren of Las Vegas at 5,176; Dick Weber of St. Louis at 5,175; and Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., at 5,171.

The 240-man field was cut to 80 for eight more qualifying games today. The field will further be cut to the top 24 for 24 games of match play tonight and Friday.

The top prize is $10,000.

'Tree-Warming' Took All Day Contacted Paralyzing Syndrome Much Later

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Amy Carter has had a tree-warming for her backyard treehouse. It must have been quite a party because it lasted all day.

The President's 9-year-old daughter invited a couple of friends to join her one mid evening last week for what amounted to the formal dedication of the structure.

Armed with blankets, the girls spent the night aloft. One informant says they talked and giggled till dawn, then went home to rest.

Technically, it's not a tree house at all but rather a small platform resting on four posts beside a tree. You climb the tree to reach the platform.

Amy's father was the architect but he left the actual construction to a White House carpenter.

President Carter lost ground this week in his fight for more understandable government prose. He and visiting Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda issued a communique that referred to "recrudescent inflation." That means new price increases.

A member of Carter's staff recently telephoned a Pentagon official to seek any available gossip about the job prospects of a third person being considered for a presidential appointment. The Pentagon hand replied that the White House seemed the place to seek such information.

"Have you ever tried to talk to Hamilton Jordan?" the Carter staff member shouted back. Jordan, the President's top assistant, rarely is available for comments as he oversees the effort to match up job candidates with top level vacancies throughout government. Reporters apparently are not alone in finding Jordan elusive.

Equally inaccessible has been James R. Schlesinger, the President's energy adviser. Since Schlesinger was not shy about meeting reporters when he held other posts, including the defense secretaryship, it is believed likely he will emerge next month to do some tub-thumping after Carter unveils his energy program.

Carter aides were elated about the way the President turned Clinton, Mass., on its ear when he flew there last week to respond to citizen questions at a "town meeting."

Locally, the event inspired a bumper sticker: "Where the hell is Clinton? Jimmy Carter knows."

Not so pleasing to White House aides was a 2½-hour energy round table conducted by Carter last week in Charleston, W. Va. They acknowledged that the marathon discussion, broadcast live nationally on radio, made for dull listening.

With more "meet-the-people" trips in prospect, Carter advisers are looking for a fresh format that will offer "something between Clinton and the radio call-in program," which was another success.

Editor's Note: Associated Press writer C.C. Miniclier was hospitalized when he found that both a roommate and a neighboring patient had Guillain-Barre, the paralyzing syndrome that temporarily halted the national swine flu vaccination program. He learned that persons who had the shots as long as four months ago are still contracting the disease.

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Joseph Lima, 29, has not been able to speak for 16 days. His eyes are fixed in a stare; he can't control his eyelids. He is unable to eat or walk. He breathes through a surgical hole in his throat.

Lima was hospitalized March 7 with the paralyzing Guillain-Barre syndrome. He received a swine flu vaccination Nov. 12, a month before evidence of its connection to Guillain-Barre halted the $135 million national vaccination program.

Lima's case was not reported to either the Colorado Health Department or the national Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta.

"The vigor of the surveillance effort dropped off after the end of January," said the state Health Department's chief epidemiologist, Dr. Tom Vernon. At the CDC, spokesman Bob Alden said the CDC is no longer "aggressively seeking a continuing reporting system."

Because of slackened reporting of the syndrome, no up-to-date figures are available on new cases. But there is evidence that Guillain-Barre continues to strike, even after an eight-week incubation period suggested by federal officials.

New consent forms for the partially revived swine flu program warn that there is a chance of contracting Guillain-Barre within eight weeks of vaccination. Lima was affected 15 weeks later.

When Lima, a microbiologist at Fitzsimons Army Hospital outside Denver, received his shot, the consent form then in use warned of possible tenderness in the arm, adding "some people will also have fever, chills, headaches or muscle aches within the first 48 hours."

Almost four months later, when Lima was admitted to Presbyterian Hospital March 7, he complained of numbness and speaking difficulty. By morning he was unable to speak.

Two days later Lima wrote a note to his nurse saying he was having difficulty breathing. A tracheotomy permitted him to breathe through a hole in his throat.

Doctors say Lima will recover in time. Lima, fed intravenously, has not lost his sense of humor — commenting on his writing pad that the "food is a bit bland."

The mid-March CDC report, admittedly less comprehensive than those prior to Jan. 31, says 875 cases of Guillain-Barre have been reported nationwide since Oct. 1. Of these 442 had received one of the two swine flu vaccines; 401 had received no type of flu vaccine; 14 had received other influenza vaccines, and 7 had received a swine flu shot after the paralysis had already begun.

The vaccination history of the other 11 is unknown.

The same figures show 35 deaths, including 18 who received swine flu vaccine.

Tackled Him On Suspicion

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — "I didn't know why I was chasing him. I figured he might have tried to rob a bank or something," said Brent White, who made a flying tackle on a man later charged with kidnapping.

White, 25, a body shop mechanic, told police a man sprinted past his shop Monday afternoon as five pursuers shouted, "Stop him! Stop him!"

Joining the chase, White tried to ask what the fugitive had done, but the others apparently were too winded to answer him.

The object of the chase was Archie S. Rabon, 36, of Thomasville, identified as a Davidson County prison escapee.

Thomasville police said Rabon was serving a 10-year sentence for breaking and entering when he escaped March 17.

White finally caught up with Rabon, knocked him down and held him until police arrived.

"I picked him up and led him back to the sidewalk," White said. "I searched him to make sure he didn't have a gun and told him to lay there until the police got there."

Rabon allegedly kidnaped the wife and daughter of Hubert Leonard, an officer of the Northwestern Bank in Thomasville, and demanded a $10,000 ransom, police said.

Police said Rabon deceived Mrs. Leonard into thinking he had a package for her husband and then pulled a gun and threatened her life. When Mrs. Leonard's daughter arrived, Rabon allegedly called a taxi and forced them to accompany him to High Point, police said.

The women escaped from the cab in High Point and began screaming for help, police said, and Rabon tried to flee on foot.

Winners In Science Fair

Some 315 science projects constructed by North Carolina high school students were entered in the Eastern Regional Science Fair, held March 18, at East Carolina University.

The annual event was sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education. About 2500 junior and senior high school students, teachers and other guests attended the event.

The list of categories and the names of area students receiving 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place awards include:

Junior Biological Science
GREEN COUNTY, Snow Hill — Jeffery Albritton, first place, and Debbie Lynn Albritton, second place, Snow Hill Jr. High School.

Senior Earth Science
GREENE COUNTY, Snow Hill — Delores Nethercutt, second place, Greene Central High School.

Senior Technological Science
GREENE COUNTY, Snow Hill — Cris Cromm, third place, Snow Hill Jr. High School.

Noted Policy Expert Here

Harlan Cleveland, former adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson and noted foreign policy expert, will speak at ECU's Mendenhall Student Theater at 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Recent foreign policy issues will be discussed, and the speech is free and open to the public.

Cleveland's speech will kick off an intercollegiate Model United Nations Security Council to be hosted this weekend by ECU.

Delegations from the following campuses will attend the conference:

University of Pennsylvania, N. C. State, University of South Carolina, Atlantic Christian College, West Virginia Technical Institute, Roanoke College, Clemson University, Oglethorpe University, The Citadel, Duquesne University, Morgan State College, University of Richmond, Brenau College and Marshall University.

Eagles An Out-Of-The-Ordinary Sergeant At Arms

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Larry Eagles is a bit out of the ordinary in the Legislative Building. He brags that he is the only man there — and probably the only man in the state — who has a 95-year-old mother and a 5-year-old daughter. He once had cancer and credits his recovery to a dog bite. He also says, with a heavy dose of modesty, that he is the only person to have beaten U.S.

Rep. L.H. Fountain in an election. Last summer, Eagles himself was defeated, losing his seat in the state House of Representatives after heading the ticket for three terms.

"I got beat by one heck of a nice fellow," Eagles said of Rep. Jim Ezzell, D-Edgecombe, who unseated him.

Eagles credits his loss to the news media playing up his arrest a year ago for drunken driving. "I couldn't deny it because it was true. I took my punishment and I will get my license back tomorrow if I can pass the test," he said in an interview Wednesday.

But the 67-year-old retired insurance company president did not want to give up legislative life, so after his loss at the polls, his old buddies in the House elected him sergeant at arms.

"I get the pleasure of being around people I enjoy without catching all the Hades. In other words, I get the rainbow without the rain," he said.

In his new job, Eagles supervises a staff of 13. "I wish they'd either make it 12 or 14 because I'm superstitious," he said.

"I reckon because the Senate's got 13 and I don't want them to have something we don't have," he said.

Eagle's first legislative job was in the Senate, however. He beat Fountain for the job of reading clerk in 1935, which paid $5 a day.

Fountain was favored to win, but there were five candidates and Eagles lined up second ballot votes from senators supporting the other three candidates.

"I can right now call that roll, believe it or not," he said, proceeding to do so.

Eagles' home is in Tarboro. "All the Eagles were hatched out of the little town of Crisp," about 12 miles from Tarboro, he said.

His father went broke during the Depression, so Eagles worked his way through Wake Forest University, selling Bibles.

Eagles has been married twice, first at age 40, and has children ranging from a practicing dentist to a daughter in kindergarten.

His second wife is 37. "I was playing the field," he said, explaining why he waited 40 years to marry. "If I had it to do over again, I'd play the field all along."

A few years ago, one of his bird dogs bit him, ripping off part of a finger. When Eagles' doctor was repairing the damage, he noticed that Eagles had a suspicious looking mole, which he removed and diagnosed as cancerous.

Further delay would have been fatal, Eagles said.

"It almost made a Presbyterian out of me," he said, referring to the belief of some Presbyterians in predestination. His sense of humor, he said, is a reflection on his philosophy of life.

"I learned to never trouble trouble until trouble troubles me. So, if I've got a sense of humor, I guess that comes from the fact that there's a lot of things I didn't like but couldn't do anything about, so I just accepted them," Eagles said.

Standing 5-foot-3 and mostly bald, Eagles jokes, "Grass doesn't grow on a busy street, but neither does it grow in cement."

Sometimes his philosophy can be serious. "Each separate moment is a meeting place between the past and the future and your history is written at this moment," he said.

Eagles sums up that intellectual thought in a simpler form, however. "What the hell's time to a hog?" he said.

Looking For A Drug Connection

HANOVER, Va. (AP) — Authorities are investigating to determine whether a man killed in a traffic accident on Interstate 95 might have been involved with three men arrested when a plane loaded with marijuana was seized here earlier this week.

State Trooper E. P. Ryder said Wednesday he felt "there is a connection" between the traffic fatality and the drug bust, which netted an estimated 7,000 pounds of marijuana worth about $4.2 million on the street.

An unidentified man was struck by a tractor-trailer and killed on I-95 about three miles from Hanover Industrial Air Park about 2 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

There had been reports that more than the three men arrested were around the DC-4 when it landed at the airport about 8:20 p.m. Tuesday.

Ryder said the three arrested when the plane was seized "will not cooperate in identifying the man."

A hearing was scheduled in Hanover County General District Court today for the three arrested on charges of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute it.

They were Robert G. Eby, 29, of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Dutch Robbins, 41, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; and Frank M. Phillips, 22, of Louisville, Ky.

Eby was arrested on similar charges in August 1975. He and 13 other men were charged with landing a four-engine cargo plane filled with 3,000 pounds of marijuana on a makeshift airstrip on a north-west Georgia mountain. Officials said the plane was registered to Eby.

A Hanover County sheriff's investigator said Eby apparently was the pilot of DC-4 which landed Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration's aeronautical division in Oklahoma City said Eby has a commercial pilot's certificate for single and multiengine aircraft. The FAA said the plane was bought in January by a Jim Edwards of Thousand Oaks, Calif., who reportedly operated a firm named Contemporary Air Leasing.

Julian Walker, manager of the airport, called authorities after the plane landed because it was unusual for such a large plane to come into the small airport.

LEAVING BARETTA
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Saying he's "smart enough to know that the American people get sick of anybody," actor Robert Blake says he is leaving his ABC television series "Baretta" in a year.

LARRY EAGLES brags he is probably the only man in North Carolina with a 95-year-old mother and a 5-year-old daughter. Eagles became House sergeant-at-arms after he was defeated in his bid for a 4th term as representative from Edgecombe County. (AP Wirephoto)

Unprecedented Alliance Saved Labor Govm't

By ED BLANCHE
 Associated Press Writer
 LONDON (AP) — An unprecedented alliance with the Liberal party saved Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government from defeat on a no-confidence motion, but the Labor party's left wing rebelled today against the linkup.

Some 80 left-wing Laborites signed a letter to Callaghan declaring they would not be bound by his agreement to give the middle-of-the-road Liberals a voice in shaping government policy during the four months remaining in the current session of Parliament.

The deal also split Callaghan's cabinet. At least four ministers opposed it, including leftist Energy Secretary Tony Benn and Environment Secretary Peter Shore.

Labor's left wing has been increasingly critical of the government's restraints on wages and its curtailment of government spending, both policies that the Liberals favor. Labor's left is also traditionally opposed to pacts with other parties.

The Liberals' 13 votes in the House of Commons gave Callaghan the margin he needed Wednesday night to defeat a Conservative motion of no confidence 322-298. Had the government lost, it would have had to resign and call a general election, and recent public opinion polls indicate that the Conservatives would win a majority.

It was believed the Liberals agreed to support Callaghan because they don't want to face an election any more than he does.

Incensed Conservatives called the Labor-Liberal partnership a "shotgun wedding" and vowed to intensify parliamentary pressure on Callaghan's troubled administration.

Besides agreeing to consult the Liberals regularly on government proposals, Callaghan endorsed the proposal which they support for direct election of representatives to the planned European Parliament.

Political sources said Liberal leader David Steel also pressed Callaghan to abandon such doctrinaire socialist policies as nationalization of banks.

Some observers said the prime minister got the best of the bargain. They said he conceded little to secure Liberal support while the Liberals may have weakened their long-term political prospects.

U.S. Coast Guard PO 3.C. Jerry Murray stands on top of Wood Island lighthouse beside beacon that shines over nearby Maine waters.

LIGHTHOUSE

"This is all I have ever wanted to do," says PO 3.C. Jerry Murray, U.S. Coast Guard. And here he is, on a four-year term of duty as keeper of the Wood Island Light, off the coast of Maine near Biddeford Pool. He and his family are the only inhabitants of the 33-acre island, and keeping the light is very much a family operation. Jerry's wife, Susan, is half the team. The rest of family is Jessica, the Murrays' 4-year-old daughter.

A small boat is their only contact with the mainland and even that is cut off in bad weather, perhaps for two or three months at a time. But the light tower never ceases to send its messages out over the waters: the light to point the way through the darkness, the fog horn to speak through the fog.

'Last Outpost' Will Be Taken To Television

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Essex, a tiny town near the Arizona border, has been written up a lot lately, as it's a town of good fortune. It's one of America's last outposts without TV service. Mountains bar TV signals.

Because television cannot get to Essex, NBC is going to bring Essex to television. Friday morning, almost the entire town — 61 residents and two guests — are to board two tour buses dispatched by the network.

They'll be whisked 217 miles west to the NBC works in beautiful downtown Burbank, lodged at a posh hotel nearby, given a special tour of NBC facilities and attend a taping of Friday's "Tonight" show.

That's the word from Maxine Orosz, who works for NBC's promotion department, which is picking up the tab for the voyage and sight-see.

Miss Orosz, who swears on a stack of ratings points this is no publicity gimmick, says the idea of bringing TV-less Essex to television started when an NBC executive in New York read of the town's plight.

He asked her to confer with the townfolk and invite them to see NBC. The notion was brought up at a town meeting, enthusiasm was expressed, invitations immediately sent out and accepted.

Miss Orosz was asked if NBC isn't worried the look at television may cause irreparable damage to the minds of the good citizens of Essex.

"Actually, we're not trying to seduce them," she laughed. "We realize that it may be years before they receive a TV signal or perhaps never will.

"Our point wasn't to tantalize them with what they don't have, but rather to offer them what might be just a really interesting trip, to see how a network operates, see the facilities and see a show taped.

"Because frankly, they're very happy they don't have television. So our point is: this would be an interesting trip, since it's something they're so unfamiliar with.

"And it'd be interesting for us to talk with people who don't have television."

One of the few Essex residents who won't be making the NBC trip — although his wife will — is Walter Smith, 40. He operates a gas station and grocery store in the town, located in the Mojave Desert.

He'd like to go, but says the people who live in and around Essex depend on him to keep his businesses open.

Smith, a polite, soft-spoken man, said in a phone interview he estimates two or three TV sets exist in town and they occasionally get a TV signal. But not from Los Angeles.

"Once in a while, you'll get a cloudy day and get a skip," he said, meaning a signal that bounces off low clouds. "It usually comes from Texas or the Midwest and fades out after 15-20 minutes."

He's lived with TV and without it, and says he likes without better.

Ready For Income Cut To Get Back In SHP

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Even though he nearly was killed two years ago and stands to earn a great deal less money, Harry E. Stegall is itching to return to the Highway Patrol.

"It's a matter of principle now. I knew in the first place it was a very dangerous job, very underpaid and very underappreciated," said the 25-year-old Stegall. "But the importance of a job gets in you and sticks there and the money, hours and risk are no problem."

Burns could earn as much as $18,000 this year by sticking with his job as a salesman for Burns International Security Services, Inc., a Charlotte firm owned by his father, compared to the $10,000 he made as a trooper.

He still carries in his shoulder one of seven slugs that struck him at point-blank range, but says he is in top physical shape.

Stegall was shot Oct. 17, 1975 near Laurinburg after he stopped a speeding motorist. Stegall, who had been on active duty only two months, was unaware that the driver — Gregory Hudson Jones of Decatur, Ga. — was wanted for a murder, two shootings and a kidnapping in Wilmington.

Despite being shot seven times, Stegall crawled to his cruiser and radioed a description of Jones, who presently is serving a life sentence in Central Prison for murder, kidnapping and assault.

Stegall's troubles were not over, however. Last August, seven months after returning to duty, he was permanently suspended from the patrol after a Charlotte nurse swore out warrants against him, charging that Stegall slapped her, threw her into a lake and attacked her car with a hammer.

Stegall was cleared of the assault charges and one count of malicious damage to property.

A Scotland County Superior Court judge last week dismissed the final charge after Stegall's accuser, Kathy Brooks, 22, refused to testify. Stegall said his attorney will ask the transportation department's employee relations committee to reschedule a grievance hearing that was postponed last fall.

Despite those experiences, Stegall said returning to the patrol would give him more peace of mind than the work of a salesman.

"This job's a lot of paperwork. Out there, you're pretty much your own boss," he said.

Richlands Will Continue Fight

RICHLANDS, N.C. (AP) — Directors of the Richlands Area Tobacco Market Inc., say they will continue their fight for a flue-cured tobacco market in Onslow County.

The group agreed at a Tuesday night meeting to go to court over the denial of their application by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They also voted to submit a new application for the federal marketing services.

"We just feel it is not just and we're not going to take it. We're going to fight it all the way," said Dan Rand, association president.

Rand said the lawsuit and new application would be filed within a few days in an attempt to have the dispute settled before the 1978 marketing season.

At issue is a disagreement between the government and association about what is best for the area's economy.

The association, a nonprofit group of about 50 area businessmen, contended a tobacco market in Richlands would be an economic boon to Onslow County and the surrounding area.

The government disagreed, saying there already were too many markets and that a new one would drain business from the others.

Agriculture officials refused to extend rating and inspection support services for a new market, which are necessary before sales can begin.

"That decision was arbitrary and capricious," said Rand, adding that supporters have spent about $20,000 so far in attorneys' fees and organizational costs.

Greek Novelist Prefers Write In Swedish

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Although he's a native of Greece, novelist Theodor Kallifatides writes his books in Swedish.

The slim, 38-year-old Kallifatides — who has four novels to his credit although only one, "Masters And Peasants," has been published in English in the United States — explains: "I left Greece and went to Sweden in 1964 when I was about 26 years old. I saw it as a kind of immigration, not only for economic opportunity but for a chance to do the kind of things I wanted to do but could not do in Greece at that time. I wanted to study, to get an education, to develop.

"I wasn't able to speak a single word of Swedish, but this was no great problem. It's related to English and German — each of which I knew a little of — and most Swedes speak some English. So now I can speak Swedish."

Kallifatides says he decided to write his books in Swedish rather than in his native Greek because "the literature I want to do must be done in a way which makes it possible for me to get into the real heart of Greek society. Using a new language is the best possible way for me to discover my country as well as to get an objective view of my culture.

"By using Swedish, I can detach myself from Greece and this is important to me since there is a need for me to have distance — without distance there is a good risk that what I write would be sentimental and thus make the things discussed in my books false. What I am interested in doing is finding out the real truth about my village, my people, my self."

Born in a small village near Sparta, Kallifatides was a young child when the Germans occupied Greece — and his village — during World War II.

"The Germans were there for four years," he recalls. "To begin with they were not bad to us, but when the Greek resistance started there was a lot of retaliation and repression. Then it got worse. My father was arrested and imprisoned for being involved in the resistance and for being an intellectual. He was a teacher. He was in jail five years.

"Then the hunger came. The occupying armies took almost all of the food. It became a very, very hard occupation."

Kallifatides was 7 when the war ended and his family was reunited but "then we had another war. We had a new hell." This was the civil war with the Communists that ended in 1949.

"Masters And Peasants" deals with the German occupation of a small Greek village called Ialos during World War II, and the effects of the occupation on the inhabitants. "My native village is the model for Ialos," Kallifatides says, "and some of the things in the book did happen to me or my family but much of it, of course, is fiction."

The novel is the first in a completed trilogy. "The second volume tells about Ialos during the days of the civil war. The third is set in the early 1950s and deals with the experiences of a family from Ialos after it has moved to Athens."

Kallifatides took to writing novels after taking a bachelor's and master's degree in philosophy, teaching philosophy at the University of Stockholm, and editing a literary magazine. He has published two collections of poetry and written television scripts. His first novel, "Foreigners," dealt with Greek workers in Sweden.

He says he recently finished a play which dramatizes an old

Greek legend and currently has a novel "on my mind. I've been trying to get it down but it won't come for the moment. So I'll just have to wait until it decides it wants to be written."

Although the income from his books "is enough for me and my family to live on" — he lives in Stockholm with his Swedish wife and their two small children — Kallifatides also writes feature articles for a Stockholm newspaper.

"I do this work," he says with a laugh, "to have someone to talk with. Writing books is very lonely. You might say my newspaper work is my social life."

Reunion For Cast Of Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Does Father still Know Best? The answer may be found on a forthcoming NBC special that will bring back the Anderson family headed by Robert Young and Jane Wyatt.

Columbia Pictures Television is producing the 90-minute "The Father Knows Best Reunion," which will feature a 35-year wedding anniversary of the Andersons. Their children, played by Elinor Donahue, Billy Gray and Luaren Chapin, will return for the event.

"Father Knows Best" ran for nine seasons starting in 1954. The reunion marks the first time the cast has performed together since the series went off the air.

Board Game Plan Aids Disturbed Young Adults

By JAMES J. DOYLE
SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (UPI) — Residents of the California Center for Living and Learning are graded on everything from having breakfast to passing room inspection and personal hygiene.

The interior of the center is decorated to resemble a famous board game. Its rules have been adapted to a structured program to restore the center's 75 occupants to society. All are emotionally disturbed young adults.

"We have taken a behavioral approach and turned it into a living Monopoly concept," says Marjorie Flitterman, the founder and executive director.

"We painted the interior like a village in three dimensions, and we have four Monopoly streets. We have a point system that allows students to earn.

"They can pass 'go,' earn a house, get four houses and earn a hotel. Hotel owners are very important people. The fact that they get rewards encourages the lower achievers to want to get hotels.

"One 17-year-old came in a year ago, kept in a state of infancy by his parents, only ate special baby foods, couldn't shower or tie his shoes. We've had such remarkable progress we're writing a paper on him."

Another, a 17-year-old girl, entered the home with a recorded IQ of 72. She now is getting A's in her school work. She will receive her high school diploma in June.

Mrs. Flitterman, former administrator of a hospital for severely disturbed mental patients, has studied crisis intervention, adolescent psychology and behavior modification. She opened the center in 1973 on property given her by her husband, David, a real estate man. She planned it as a "living situation in a non-institutional setting" because she had been very discouraged at the lack of decent placement for young adults in the state.

It is a private corporation licensed by the State Welfare Department. It includes a two-acre farm where the young residents raise animals and vegetables and learn.

"They were being plunked into facilities set up for geriatric groups," Mrs. Flitterman said. "These young people who required placement have been through a very personal ordeal, often a very dehumanizing experience. They've been emotionally starved, spiritually broken and betrayed by society."

Board Game Plan Aids Disturbed Young Adults

Residents receive points for good behavior. The only punishment is loss of points.

Mrs. Flitterman said the center's interior design planning took a year, during which she worked closely with Parker Bros., the game's copyright owners.

"The kids get better. I just can't believe the way it works for them. It's incredible. Most young people who have been institutionalized have been in a system that becomes boring, but turning it into a challenging kind of game lets them compete with themselves."

"They are emotionally disturbed. We call them socially handicapped," she said. "Some of them have been battered or abandoned children. Some have come from poor families.

"We have some who have been neglected by wealthy parents. Then when they turned 16 or so, they became tremendous behavior problems at home and had to be removed from the home setting.

"First of all, I call them children, but they are 16 to 25 years of age, but the 25-year-old might have the emotional maturity of a 16-year-old."

From September to the end of last year, the center graduated 12 young people. It lost five others, "because within the first few weeks they weren't able to stay with the programs, were tremendous behavior problems, so the community voted them out."

The system is based on behavior modification with no adverse techniques used.

"Since level systems and behavior modification are not new but vital to this type of therapy, what could be a more natural device than the Monopoly game as a motivating technique," Mrs. Flitterman said.

"They can pass go by earning a total of 1,400 points a week and earn a house. Four houses in a month earns a hotel. Hotel owners are eligible for monthly rewards which vary from a concert at the Hollywood Bowl to overnight camp-outs."

NOTICE OF COMMISSIONERS' SALE OF REAL PROPERTY
North Carolina
County of Pitt
Under the authority of an order of the Superior Court of Pitt County made and entered in Special Proceedings No. 76-513, pending on said Court and entitled "Benjamin T. Eastwood, Jr. vs Lillian R. Eastwood," said order of Court bearing date of February 17, 1977, the undersigned Commissioners will on Monday, March 28, 1977, at 11:00 o'clock A.M. on the premises on said land hereinafter described at the intersection of the Commercial Road (Horn Road) about one (1) mile northeast of Greenville, North Carolina, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash those certain tracts or parcels of land lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

FIRST TRACT: Lying and being situated in Pictious of Greenville Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, and containing 27.1 acres, more or less, and being more particularly shown on that map made by McDavid Associates, Inc., dated February 17, 1976, entitled "Property of Benjamin Thomas Eastwood and wife, Lillian R. Eastwood" of record in Map Book 25, Page 82, Pitt County Registry, reference to which map is hereby made for a more particular description.

Also conveyed will be the non-exclusive rights in and to the 25 foot path as shown on the map, as well as any extension of said path.

To be sold with this tract will be all crops allotments assigned to it as located on the above described land.

This land is not contiguous to but is located between Secondary Road 1523 and the eastern By Pass and is adjacent to that tract sometimes known as Nicholas Commercial Subdivision (formerly the Norman Bennett property).

OTHER TRACTS: Lying and being situated in Pictious of Greenville Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, and being all of Tracts One (1) through Nine (9), containing 10.2 acres, more or less, and being more particularly shown on that map made by McDavid Associates, Inc. dated February 16, 1976, entitled "Property of Benjamin Thomas Eastwood and wife, Lillian R. Eastwood" of record in Map Book 25, Pages 83 and 83A, Pitt County Registry, reference to which map is hereby made for a more particular description.

Also conveyed will be the non-exclusive rights in and to the 25 foot path as shown on the map, as well as any extension of said path.

Two of the above tracts have residences on them and one has mobile home spaces rented thereon. One of the tracts is suitable for pasture land and several of the tracts are suited for building. These tracts of land hereinafter described will be offered collectively and individually, and grouped for sale, as the Commissioners shall determine at the date of the sale. No crop allotments will be assigned to these tracts. The sale will be subject to the rights of the present occupants of the homes and mobile home spaces situated on the above-described tracts to continue their occupancy until one month after confirmation of the sale. Immediate possession, upon confirmation of the sale, shall be given subject to this right.

The successful bidder at this sale will be required to deposit with the Commissioners ten per cent (10%) of his bid to show his good faith, and said sale will be made subject to confirmation by the Court.

This 23rd day of February, 1977.

CLOCK STOPPING SUPER SHOPPING TIME AT TOYOTA

You got it. Again.

60 hours to go. Last week we stopped the clock. We sold so many cars and trucks that we're going to do it again. We'll be open from noon tomorrow, March 24, to midnight, Saturday, March 26. During these 60 hours, we want to sell even more new Toyota cars and trucks than last week.

We'll deal like there's no tomorrow. Come on in. Super Shopping Time is a great time to buy your Toyota. Choose from 27 great new models for 1977. Celicas. Coronas. Corollas. Half-Ton Trucks. But you'd better hurry. Clock Stopping Time runs out Saturday.

RELIABLE USED CARS
12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

Road-Builder Used Clam Shells To Cross Marshes

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - With the help of two Turkish-born engineers, Louisiana has developed a method of building "floating" highways over marsh as soft as ice cream.

The main ingredient is a lot of clam shells. And Louisiana has a lot of clam shells.

"In 1971 we were just getting involved with relocation of U.S. 90 and needed to come up with a cheap method to cross a marsh," said Ali Kemahli, soil design engineer for the State Highway Department.

His division linked up with a Louisiana State University engineering team to research the idea of using clam shells for a highway embankment.

The university team was headed by Ara Arman, a civil engineering instructor who, like Kemahli, moved to the United States from Istanbul years ago.

They attended the same university in Istanbul, though at different times. And both attended the University of Texas, again at different times.

"It really wasn't a new idea," said Kemahli. "Oil companies had been building small work roads with clam shells for years. But no one had tried to build a major highway on such an embankment. Now we've got Alabama doing it."

The final decision to try the new method was made when the department was faced with building a 4.4-mile section of U.S. 90 near Raceland in the heart of the state's marsh country. The road will be completed in two years.

The questionable stretch near Raceland is so soft a demonstration film shows a man easily pushing a 12-foot pole into the marsh with one arm.

To use the traditional embankment of sand, the department would have had to dredge up tons of marsh mud and use an enormous amount of sand fill. After all that, there would be no guarantee the sand wouldn't just disappear into the marsh.

Even if enough sand could be poured, the cost of construction of the tiny stretch of road would be about $26 million. And an elevated highway would have cost about $30 million.

No dredging is required for a shell embankment. It's just a matter of dumping the shells into the marsh. The total cost of the 4.4 miles will be roughly $10 million.

Construction crews are building a five-foot-high shell embankment, allowing for about two feet of settling.

"The shell is lighter than soil or sand and virtually floats like a raft on the muck after just a little settling," one of Kemahli's engineers noted.

The team built a demonstration road first and then double-checked in the lab.

A ton of sand is cheaper than a ton of shell but it doesn't take as much shell to build an embankment. And since there is no sand near the marsh, transportation costs also become a factor in the final cost.

"What the shell does is give us an alternative to sand and make the contracts more competitive," Kemahli said.

The present U.S. 90 coast road was built along natural ridges in the marsh and therefore is full of curves and dangerous, engineers said.

Gay Alliance Event In April

Members of the Eastern Gay Alliance will participate in the second annual Southeastern Gay Conference to be held in Chapel Hill Apr. 1-3.

More than 50 workshops will be offered and a host of films and exhibits are planned.

Among those leading workshops are Jean O'Leary, co-executive director of the National Gay Task Force; Karla Jay and Allen Young, editors of Out of the Closets—Voices of Gay Liberation and After You're Out; Barbara Gittings, coordinator of the American Library Association Task Force on Gay Liberation; Louie Crew, founder of the gay Episcopal group, Integrity; Bill Smith, the highest ranking open gay in Atlanta city government; and H. Wayne Bandy, NGTF National Tea Dances coordinators.

Some of the workshop topics include coming out, lesbians in athletics, gays and religion, gays in business; peer counseling for homosexual problems; parents of gays; gays and aging; being out; mad moments before straight audiences; assertiveness training; gays who are parents; gay themes in children's literature, and the constituency of gay liberation. The Carolina Gay Association is sponsoring the conference.
