

At Least 562 Die In 747 Collision

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — The Spanish air ministry said today the death toll from the fiery collision here of Pan American and KLM jumbo jets had climbed to 562. It was the worst aviation disaster in history.

Spanish officials said 72 persons survived Sunday's collision of the two Boeing 747s on the fog-shrouded runway. All the survivors were aboard the American plane. Eleven were listed in very serious or grave condition.

"The whole plane was on fire and people were crying and screaming trying to get out," said James Naik, 37, of Cupertino, Calif. "Within just a few seconds the metal started to come apart."

Pending an official finding, there were conflicting reports on the sequence of events leading to the crash.

The Spanish news agency Cifra quoted airport sources as saying the flight recorder from the American plane indicated the collision may have been caused by a misunderstanding on the part of the Pan American pilot, Capt. Victor Grubb of Centerport, N.Y.

In New York, a Pan American spokesman said the airline expected "anything substantive" concerning the cause of the collision to come from a U.S. government investigating team sent to the crash site "and anything else we view with concern."

Sources quoted by Cifra said the recorder showed the airport control tower had ordered the Pan American plane to move onto the main runway. The sources said the U.S. crew apparently misunderstood the order and taxied onto another runway where the KLM plane was taking off.

But Cifra quoted Grubb, who was hospitalized at the Santa Cruz General Hospital, as saying he was taxiing down the main runway at the time of the collision.

"The crew saw nothing right up to the moment of impact," he was quoted as saying. Another survivor, Roland Brusco Jr., of Longview, Wash., said the passengers were told the KLM jet was to hold its departure while the Pan American plane taxied across the runway to await its turn for takeoff.

"According to our pilot, the other plane was to hold at the other end of the runway," Brusco told the Portland Oregonian newspaper by telephone. "We pulled out and followed them. Just as we got to the offramp, where we would get out of the way, well, communications must have gotten mixed up."

Dedication, Open House At Hospital Pleases Director

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"We just don't see how the dedication and open house could have gone any better than they did," Pitt Memorial Hospital Director Jack Richardson said this morning.

The crowd at the dedication was estimated at about 400, and more than 10,000 people toured the building during Saturday and Sunday afternoons, he said.

"We had a very good turnout of Pitt County people," he said, "and also were surprised and pleased at the number of people from other communities of Eastern North Carolina who came—from New Bern, Plymouth, Kinston, Greene County, and Williamston.

"Everyone seemed surprised at the size of our hospital and amazed at the services we will be offering. There was a lot of enthusiasm on the part of everyone, and, of course, this makes us feel good."

Asked to name the dignitaries who were on hand for the dedication, he said, "I hesitate to do this for fear of leaving someone out." However, he named the following: from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill—Dr. William Friday, president, and Ray Dawson and Felix Joyner, vice presidents; William Dees of Goldsboro, past chairman of the UNC Board of Trustees; Troy Pate of Goldsboro, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees; from East Carolina University—Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor; Dr. Ed Monroe, vice chancellor for health affairs; Cliff Moore, vice chancellor for financial affairs; Col. Richard Blake, administrative assistant to Dr. Jenkins; Dr. William Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine; and Evelyn Perry, Dean of the ECU School of Nursing; legislators, Sam D. ## Energy Saving Credits

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State income tax credits of $100 to $1,000 for persons installing energy saving home devices are being prepared by aides to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Credits of $100 would be available to persons insulating their homes while larger credits would go to those using solar energy devices, officials said.

The $100 credit would be small compared to the cost of purchasing and installing insulation, but could be the deciding factor for a homeowner considering insulation, said Barlow Herget, assistant to state Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth.

Insulation costs for older homes are estimated at between $500 and $1,000, he said.

The state might initially lose $3.25 million a year in collections if the plan is enacted by the General Assembly, but tax credit bills have been introduced by state Sen. Carolyn Mathis, R-Mecklenburg, and Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln.

Arms Control Talks By Vance, Brezhnev

By KENNETH J. FREED
MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev opened talks today on a new nuclear arms control pact, with Brezhnev reportedly warning the United States to stay out of Soviet internal affairs.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Brezhnev opened the talks with an "appropriate appraisal" of U.S. foreign policy with emphasis on "those moments in the U.S. policy which do not square with the principles of equality, noninterference in the internal affairs of each other."

If these principles are not followed, the Soviet leader said "constructive development of relations between the two countries is impossible," Tass reported.

American officials declined comment on the substance of the talks.

The Soviet leader's remarks were apparently aimed at President Carter's public support of Soviet dissidents. Kremlin officials have repeatedly warned that the dissident issue could sabotage the arms control talks.

Before the meeting got under way in private, both sides posed for photographers and exchanged the routine pleasantries.

"I am happy to welcome you here," Brezhnev told Vance and congratulated him on his 60th birthday, which he celebrated in Moscow Sunday.

"I bring you the warmest regards from President Carter," Vance responded.

"I send him my heartfelt good wishes," Brezhnev replied.

Vance was accompanied by

Paul Warnke, the Carter administration's chief arms negotiator; Deputy Undersecretary of State Philip Habib, William Highland of the National Security Council and Malcolm Toon, the U.S. ambassador to Moscow.

SALT-1, the first five-year treaty limiting the two superpowers' nuclear arsenals, expires in October.

Judge Retiring

TARBORO, N. C. (AP) — Chief District Judge Phil Carlton gave official notice of his resignation in Tarboro today. He will become the first secretary of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety April 1.

At a news conference, Carlton, whose resignation is effective March 31, said Gov. Jim Hunt wants to find someone in the ranks to head the Highway Patrol, and he hopes to have an announcement within two or three weeks.

"If I had to bet money this morning, I would say the commander would come from within the ranks," he said.

Not One Death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — For the first time in 25 years, North Carolina's highways and byways have gone through a weekend without a single reported traffic death.

"We have not had a single weekend since 1952 when there was not at least one fatality," said Mrs. Christine Bunn, director of the traffic records section of the Motor Vehicles Division.

She said Monday the records showed that the weekend of March 6-7 also stood out because there was only one traffic death.

"I think it's just wonderful," Mrs. Bunn said of the death-free weekend.

Late Sunday night, a spokesman at the Highway Patrol office in Raleigh had said, "It's possible we might still get a report in here — maybe in the case where the family couldn't be found to be notified — but it's not likely."

Mrs. Bunn said the same thing Monday morning, it was no longer likely.

BRADDY MOORE... with daughter, Mrs. Irene Thomas, who found him through a Hotline appeal, and her daughter, Kim, two. (Reflector Staff Photo).

REUNITED—IN PERSON

Mrs. Irene Thomas of Bird's Nest, Va., who found her father, Braddy Moore of Greenville, through a Hotline appeal published Jan 17, arrived here Friday to visit.

Mrs. Thomas had been taken by her mother to Virginia while she was an infant. She came here Friday bringing along her four children, Brenda, 19, Coley, eight, Shawn, seven, and Kim, two, and her grandson, Terry, three.

Mr. Moore proudly brought his family in to meet the Hotline columnist, and we thought our readers would enjoy seeing a picture of the family.

Mrs. Thomas said she and her father have been exchanging letters, phone calls and pictures since Hotline let her know Jan 18 that her father had answered her appeal. The appeal, by happy coincidence, was run the day after her 39th birthday, and she said finding her father was the best birthday present she has ever had.

Despite the natural gas shortage this winter, fertilizer supplies should be adequate for the upcoming season, although distribution problems may cause Pitt County farmers some headaches.

According to Ed Yancey, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent, the natural gas shortage did hurt production of ammonium sources of nitrogen.

"Some of the major fertilizer plants in this part of the U.S. were shut down for several months due to the shortage," said Yancey.

"This, plus the increased cost of natural gas, have caused the prices of all nitrogen products to be higher.

"The general information we get is that there will be enough fertilizer. But there may be distribution problems, mainly because farmers have not taken early delivery.

"We may have a problem with farmers not being able to get what they need when they need it."

Yancey suggested farmers plan ahead to avoid the squeeze.

"We encourage farmers to make their commitments for fertilizers now," he said.

"We also suggest they follow soil test recommendations and not use excessive plant nutrients.

"A lot of our farmers are attuned to using complete fertilizers. But many of our soils are high in phosphorus, and there is no advantage gained in applying more.

"To do so is simply wasteful and expensive." Bill Little of Grimesland

Plant Foods anticipates some problems with nitrogen products.

"Nitrogen products will be in short supply and I expect prices to go up," he said.

"As far as potash and other products, we're looking for some distribution problems. And anhydrous ammonia will be in short supply.

"Customers should come by and let us make up a delivery schedule so we can plan ahead for them. We can then make deliveries on time.

"Raw materials are short, and we need to know where and when the fertilizer is needed."

Don Glisson of Blount Fertilizer noted the possibility of a shortage of liquid nitrogen late in the season.

"We will be in good supply for dried granular fertilizer," he said.

Dear Abby

Forget Trial Basis And Take The Trip

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 36 years. He is 64 and I am 57. There has been no sex in our bedroom for the last six or seven years. Not even any signs of affection. He has even refused to kiss me, saying I would only expect it to lead to something else, and he is impotent and can't deliver.

Now it turns out that he has found another woman and wants a "trial separation." He leased an apartment for six months and he's living with her on a "trial basis." He says at the end of the six months he'll let me know whether he wants me or her.

The other woman is 38 and divorced, and you can't tell me that she's satisfied to just hold hands every night. I asked him about his "impotency" and he said the doctor gave him some pills that are supposed to rejuvenate him sexually. Naturally I don't know if the pills are working. (Maybe I should ask his new friend?)

I have talked to an attorney and he gave me the name of a psychiatrist. I am NOT crazy. I just want to know if I should wait six months or force a decision.

If he decides to stay with her, I want to go on a cruise around the world. The ship sails in June and I don't want to miss it. What should I do?

ELSIE

DEAR ELSIE: Don't hang around waiting for your husband to decide whether he wants you or not. Get on that ship and Bon Voyage!

DEAR ABBY: How old do you think a girl should be before she starts seeing a gynecologist and stops seeing a pediatrician? This is a point of disagreement between my mother and me, and we would like to settle it by asking you.

HONOLULU GIRL

DEAR GIRL: When a girl reaches the age where she feels uncomfortable seeing a pediatrician and prefers to see a gynecologist, she's ready to switch.

DEAR ABBY: Just before Christmas I read a letter in your column signed TOO LATE from a man who never found time to visit his elderly parents, even though they lived nearby. He said he always found time to visit friends and go other places, and now that his parents are dead he had deep regrets.

I must have had a guilty conscience, because one night I awakened suddenly at 3 a.m., decided to cancel the plans I had already made for Christmas and went to my parents' house instead.

Abby, it was the most wonderful Christmas I've ever had! Mom and Dad were so thrilled to see me, it made me ashamed.

The next morning, my father called to tell me that Mom had died in her sleep! I couldn't believe it. She had been so well and happy the night before.

I just want to thank you for printing that letter. If I hadn't read it, I would have continued in my selfish ways and missed spending my mother's last evening with her. God bless you.

Demand Rising For Luxury Cars

DETROIT (AP) — Cars and gasoline get more expensive, but the market for heavy, expensive luxury cars keeps growing and growing.

Total car sales this year are up only 10 per cent over 1976. But combined sales of Cadillacs, Lincolns and Germany's Mercedes-Benz — the industry's biggest-selling luxury cars — are already 20 per cent ahead of last year, when a record 470,000 were sold.

Auto executives predict luxury sales will hit 550,000 this year. That means 5 per cent of new car buyers — one in every 20 — will have paid $10,000 and up for a new Caddy, Lincoln or Mercedes.

In 1970, just 250,000 luxury car sales were sold — about 3 per cent of the market, and then a Cadillac sold for as low as $6,000.

"America is getting more affluent," says one auto analyst. "Incomes have gone up faster than the cost of many luxury items."

Some auto people think much of the new affluence is due to an increased number of working women contributing to family income. They make it possible for a young working couple to afford a car they couldn't consider buying if only one of them were working.

"We're definitely getting a younger set of people who obviously are making more money than their counterparts 10 or 20 years ago," said Al Zaleski, assistant manager of Seymour Cadillac in Detroit. "We also are finding more women coming in," added Zaleski.

According to surveys conducted by independent research firms, luxury cars are being bought by increasingly younger drivers.

They also show women as the principal users of 30 per cent of the new cars sold last year, and 21 per cent of the luxury cars. In 1969, they were principal users of only 18 per cent of all new cars sold, and 15 per cent of luxury cars.

Median family income of a luxury car buyer was about $36,000 last year, up from $25,000 in 1969. Median income for all buyers in 1976 was $18,500, compared with $12,000 seven years earlier.

Another factor, some executives say, is that buyers believe the end is near for the big, so-called full-size car.

Sales of Cadillac's smaller-sized 1977 models are up from last year. But Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln, unchanged in size and the industry's biggest car, is attracting buyers who "want one of the last big ones," as one Cadillac executive man put it.

There also is the belief that luxury sales have come at the expense of other models because the price differential between top-line models and so-called "high mediums" has narrowed.

By FRANK CORMIER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is a "work horse" who spends more than 70 hours a week on the job without complaining of fatigue, but "we can see it sometimes in his eyes," says a presidential aide.

According to a staff study of the President's first month-and-a-half in office, he has been working 75 to 80 hours a week, compared with a scheduled 55 hours.

Appointments Secretary Tim Kraft, who directed the study as a guide for Carter and his schedulers, said in an interview:

"We can see on paper that he's sometimes overdoing it. We can see it sometimes in his eyes, in signs of fatigue."

But, says Kraft, "You know, he's a work horse. He never complains about work. If he has a complaint, it's about his ability to be efficient and effective and to get through the 'in box.' He never says 'I'm tired' or 'I need a break.'"

But Kraft conceded that Carter did complain once that he had too many scheduled appointments in a single day.

As a result of the study of Carter's activities from Jan. 24 to March 6, additional "contingency time" now is being built into the President's schedule.

Aides also believe Carter is likely to devote more time to domestic affairs in the weeks ahead, and that he will set up more meetings with key members of Congress.

In the six weeks covered by the study, foreign affairs took more of the President's working time than any other category.

Carter is scheduled to work 10 hours a day, Monday through Friday, and five hours on Saturday. The study documented an average 71-hour week that did not include work done in the White House living quarters, where Carter has an office, or during weekend visits to Plains, Ga., and Camp David, Md.

When he first took office, Carter planned to have only two regular daily appointments — with foreign policy adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Press Secretary Jody Powell. In addition, he planned regular, although not daily, sessions with Vice President Walter Mondale and weekly meetings with the Cabinet and Democratic congressional leaders.

As a result of experience, White House lobbyist Frank Moore has since been given a daily appointment and budget chief Bert Lance and economic adviser Charles Schultze now see Carter at fixed hours two or three times a week.

Hamilton Jordan, regarded by many as the President's top assistant, has no fixed appointments. He usually accompanies Moore to Carter's office and "pops in" at other times.

Pledge Restoration Of Democracy For Indians

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Morarji Desai's government pledged today that it would move quickly to complete the restoration of Indian democracy.

In a speech outlining the new government's program, Acting President B.D. Jatti told cheering members of the new Parliament: "The most urgent task is to remove the remaining curbs on the fundamental freedoms and civil rights of the people, to restore the rule of law and the right of free expression to the press."

The president's address opening the new Parliament was written by Desai and his advisers. It hit hard at former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, whom Desai and his allies ousted from both office and Parliament in the general election a week ago, and her 30-year-old son Sanjay's bid for power during his mother's 21 months of authoritarian emergency rule.

"The people," said Jatti, "have given a clear verdict in favor of individual freedom, democracy and the rule of law and against executive arbitrariness, the emergence of a personality cult and extra-constitutional centers of power."

Sanjay also was the target of some 125 members of his mother's Congress party in both houses of Parliament and state legislatures. They demanded his expulsion from the party along with three former cabinet members closely associated with him, and there were calls also for the resignation of Congress party president Dev Kant Borooah.

A split in the victorious coalition was papered over with the swearing into cabinet office of four campaign allies of Desai who initially refused to serve in his cabinet because they were not satisfied with what they were offered.

After an appeal from Jayaprakash Narayan, the ailing spiritual father of the alliance, Jagjivan Ram, who had wanted to be prime minister, accepted the defense ministry; labor leader George Fernandes became communications minister; H.N. Bahuguna, Ram's close associate, became chemicals and fertilizer minister, and Raj Narain, who took Mrs. Gandhi's seat in Parliament away from her, became minister for health and family planning.

Jatti also pledged that the new government would avoid any coercion or compulsion in its family planning policy, in contrast to the high-pressure sterilization drive that Sanjay Gandhi sponsored during the emergency.

In foreign affairs, Desai's ad-

Departure From Street Policy

The City Council decided on a radical departure from long standing street improvement policies at a special meeting Tuesday.

In approving the Community Development street improvement program the council authorized some street paving without curb and gutter.

Under the $150,000 program the city has developed a program for curb and guttered streets and another group which would be paved only.

Listed in the paving only category were: Skinner from Harris to the railroad; Stutz from Third to Colonial; Gum Road from Memorial Drive to the ditch; Holbert from Gum Road to Pollard; Arthur from McClellan to Pitt; Brown from McClellan to Greene; and Elks from McClellan to Greene.

The reason for the paving-only decision seems to be money. "We only have so much money to go so far," said Mayor Percy Cox. He said that curb and gutter had been oversold in the past.

City Engineer Charlie Holliday said he was a strong advocate of curb and gutter for subdivisions, but he did not view the project work as in the subdivision category. He said curb and gutter can be added later if desired.

We have no doubt that money is short for street work, but then it has always been short. Years ago the city got stuck with some pretty bad problems on streets where paving only was installed. That led to a tightening up and, so far as we know, virtually all street work for years has included curb and gutter. We think that has given the city a pretty good street system, and one with a lower maintenance cost.

If we deviate from the curb and gutter standard now we can expect that it will be easier in the future to go on and put in a street without curb and gutter. And, we are sure that some subdividers will want to see a change in the subdivision ordinance so that streets can be installed without curb and gutter.

Sure it is cheaper to improve a street with paving only... but it makes a far better job if curb and gutter and proper drainage are installed.

The City Council should re-think this one.

Keeps Close Watch

By DOLLIE L. SMITH
UPI Capitol Reporter
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. I.C. Crawford, D-Buncombe, says he's not a crusader, but the anger in his voice when he talks about the lack of accountability in state government disputes that claim.

As chairman of the joint Legislative Commission on Government Operations, the 17-year veteran legislator has had a real awakening about the potential for misspending and overspending by state agencies.

"I've been coming down here a long time, but I just took it for granted that the Executive Branch was doing a good job," said Crawford, who served five terms in the House from 1957 to 1965 and is in his fourth consecutive term in the Senate.

"But I didn't know anymore than a jackrabbit about what was going on until I got into this. I'm getting so disgusted with what we are finding. We just don't have any system of accountability."

The watchdog commission, created in 1973 when the Republican Party was in control of the executive branch for the first time in 72 years, is Crawford's brainchild. The panel, consisting of five House and five Senate members, is charged with studying ways to reduce government expenses.

Crawford says he intends to keep as close a watch on the spending habits of Democratic Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.'s administration as he did with Republican Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr.

Crawford, a criminal attorney in Asheville, said newspaper disclosures about questionable spending habits of state agencies have prompted many of the commission's investigations.

Prison mismanagement and spending heads Crawford's list of "things we're looking into."

"Nothing will probably be done about it, but I think the public ought to know how their tax money is being spent," he said.

Crawford said the failure of the Holshouser administration to produce a plan to cope with prison overcrowding was costly to the state. Because the Holshouser administration "loafed around" for four years in the planning for a high-rise prison unit at Salisbury, the cost of construction for a single cell rose to $30,000, he said.

Crawford said the cost of single cell units in a campus-type facility would run between $4,000 and $5,000 and would reduce the need for security by 90 percent.

"We've got to build some prisons fast," he said. "We can get the money, but it's a question of getting some plans. Where are we going? We've just got to have a damn plan. It's as simple as that."

Crawford contends the legislature is not out to "take anything away from the governor," but instead hopes the commission's probes will prompt the governor to "tighten up his own ship so we don't have to do it."

He said during the past four years there were 1,600 transfers of money in the Department of Human Resources to create new jobs. He said money appropriated for jobs at facilities and offices throughout the state had been transferred to Raleigh for use by the agency's main office.

"That kind of stuff ought not to be allowed," he said. "But if we pass a law prohibiting it,

Winter's Crunch Shows Up In Report

A disappointing revenue report worried legislators last week.

The Legislature is in the process of making up a biennial budget, and memories of tight revenues of the past biennium still linger.

If state revenues continue to drag, it could mean financial troubles, but it is well to remember that the energy crunch of January and February is showing up in state tax reports now. Hopefully things will look better in a couple of months.

Aim At Local Tax System

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — How do you take local politics out of local property tax decisions?

By taking the process one step away from the local politicians—county commissioners—is the reasoning behind a complicated set of proposals which are being placed before the North Carolina General Assembly.

Documented cases from time to time and place to place around the state place in question the fairness and equality of the local property tax system which places in the hands of county commissioners authority to determine how land will be valued for tax purposes, the rates, the appraisal process, and granting of relief to individuals who question or oppose the process.

Favoritism

The result has been charges that particular pieces of property got favorable treatment, or that classes of property—farmland, or warehousing—got special breaks.

Cutting across the compllicated explanations, the legislative Committee for the Study of the Property Tax System in North Carolina is putting forth a variety of recommendations designed, in the view of State Rep. Robert A. Jones, D-Rutherford, to "modernize and improve the system... not to cause serious inroads to the tax base, yet to improve the efficiency and administration of the system. The changes are directed at simplification, and place responsibility in tax supervisors to actually supervise the system; building in an easy avenue of appeal; but removing the local Boards of County Commissioners sitting as tax appraisers."

Tied together under the reform movement are measures to set up local tax maps in all counties, computerization of records, revaluation of property regularly (rather than every eight years) using local people rather than outside consultants, more authority in tax supervisors to set values and appraise property, abandonment of the complicated "schedule of values" set up by county commissioners as the guideline for property appraisal, and guarantees of openness of public access to tax manuals, base maps, appraisals, etc.

—Tax supervisors would be empowered to change property values for tax purposes at any time, upon notification of the owners, and appeal possible to the review board or county commission. Tax supervisors would be given authority to use state income tax records to determine values of commercial or industrial properties, and true value would be required on documents recording property sales. At present, deed stamps are often fiddled up or down by the parties involved for various reasons.

—Study is called for with the aim of setting up a full-time tax review panel at the state level to hear the increasing number of appeals from local people protesting either appraisals, or schedules.

BILL NOBLITT

Far To Go

It is far from clear just how the diverse pieces of legislation being submitted by the study committee will be viewed by members of the General Assembly which must act on each. Here, in brief, are the key proposals:

—Local tax supervisors, not county commissioners, would write an appraisal manual on standards "to insure that all property in the county is appraised uniformly at its true value." Sales, income data, computers would be used for constant monitoring and updating.

Leaders Want More Pay

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Now that Congress and high government officials have received their pay raises, heads of foreign governments are demanding that they also be given a boost in salary. After it was revealed that King Hussein as well as other leaders of the Free World were on the CIA payroll, the heads of foreign governments decided to take their demands for a pay hike to the public.

"We haven't had a pay raise from the CIA in eight years," one prime minister complained to me. "How does the CIA expect to attract able, dedicated leaders if they don't match the salaries of the multinational corporations such as Lockheed, Boeing and the Gulf Oil Co.?"

"I guess the reason," I said, "is that if you people got a raise from the CIA you'd be making more money than the President of the United States."

"Our expenses are higher. Some of us have more than one wife to support. We have to send our kids abroad to school. As heads of state our entertaining bills have gotten out of hand. No leader of a country can afford to live on what the CIA pays him these days, unless his wife has her own charitable foundation."

"I agree," I said. "But there seems to be a great deal of resentment amongst American taxpayers when they read that a king or a foreign president or a prime minister is making more money than they are."

"That is a shortsighted attitude," the prime minister told me. "If the United States can't pay foreign officials a living wage, it's not going to attract the type of leaders your country wants to do business with. I know several outstanding politicians who have turned down the highest offer of their land because they couldn't afford to take the job on what the CIA was offering them. You're losing the best people to Northrop, Texaco and Grumman Aircraft, who don't care how much they pay to get the right man for the job."

"I tend to agree with you that most heads of are underpaid by the CIA," I said. "But I don't see how you can get a pay raise unless you people come up with a code of ethics."

ART BUCHWALD

As it stands now, most Americans believe you foreign leaders are getting away with murder."

"That's the fault of the American press," he said bitterly. "You play up the few bad apples that get involved in a scandal and never write about the majority of heads of state who do their jobs quietly, diligently and without fanfare. Most of us are dedicated men who have made great sacrifices to work for the CIA and all we ask is a decent wage for our services."

"I still believe you won't get the raise unless you initiate a moral code that the American taxpayer can live with," I told him.

"What do you suggest?"

"I think that when a head of state accepts a position with the CIA he has to reveal his full assets. And then put them into a blind trust."

"I'm not sure we want to do that."

"President Carter has said he will not support a CIA raise for you people unless there is full disclosure," I warned him.

"You will have to accept a limit on outside income."

"How much?"

"You can't personally accept more than $100,000 from any foreign defense contractor."

"We'll starve to death," he cried.

"And finally, Mr. Prime Minister, and this is very im-

To the editor:

In a recent story concerning the status of the Equal Rights Amendment, part of a statement made by me was inadvertently omitted. As a result, the story implied that I thought the people favoring the Equal Rights Amendment are in the minority. On the contrary, I am convinced that the majority of the citizens of North Carolina are ready for ratification of this amendment. As I told your reporter, Barbara Mathews, this opinion is based on the fact that almost without exception, the organizations which have worked for the betterment of women endorse this amendment. These include labor, professional, social and religious groups. A number of opinion polls taken in this state indicate that the majority of the people favor this amendment. The overwhelming majority of North Carolinians elected to state or national office support this amendment. If there is widespread opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment, then I don't believe they could have been elected.

After expressing this opinion to your reporter, I added that if I am mistaken and if the majority of North Carolinians do not endorse ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, they should not continue to deny equal legal rights to the minority. In a democracy, rule by the majority requires that the rights of the various minorities be held secure for these citizens. Our nation has taken steps throughout its history to correct laws which have denied rights to certain groups. We are now ready for the last giant step which will add to the Constitution of the United States the principle that equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex.

Real Politics Of Energy

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The nagging question for President Carter one month before his energy message to the nation is whether political success in avoiding confrontation with passionate environmentalists over nuclear and coal production will yield political failure in providing the nation's energy needs.

Contrary to Mr. Carter's warnings of painful sacrifices ahead, there is no intent of radical energy conservation that would change the American way of life. Consequently, to become invulnerable to a future oil embargo requires the production of much more energy from coal and nuclear sources. But coal and nuclear power are taboos for environmentalists who backed Jimmy Carter for President and are now strategically placed in his administration.

The Carter answer is to appease the environmentalists with prestigious government jobs and conservation measures, while at the same time going slow on the nuclear and coal programs. But is the President going too slow? Those who say yes, mainly in industry, are privately telling energy czar James Schlesinger that the plan now forming may not even put a dent in the frightening energy deficit.

Final decisions on Mr. Carter's first major program are not yet in concrete. Nor do those who have read sketchy first drafts of the President's message feel it approaches the clarion call to action that they want. What's more, decision-makers and speech-drafters must confine themselves to two unspoken political realities that circumscribe Mr. Carter on energy.

The first is that not even a President so popular as Mr. Carter can convert his energy-spoiled nation into an energy-saving China or Sweden. While Cadillacs and Corvettes may soon disappear and home insulation become mandatory, Americans will not let anyone drive them from auto and home into bus and apartment. One Schlesinger aide feels that "inconvenience" is a better description than "sacrifice" for what Mr. Carter is cooking up.

To maintain a faintly reduced American way of life without vulnerability to the international oil cartel, the need for new energy — from coal and nuclear sources — is obvious. But that runs into the second political reality: President Carter will not reenact President Ford's head-on charge against the environmentalists.

The conscious plan of Dr. Schlesinger is to trade off energy conservation for environmentalist acquiescence in coal-nuclear development.

Liability Costs Keep Soaring

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Product liability costs and awards are endangering the existence of some small business, threatening the viability of insurers, adding insidious pressure to inflation and dulling innovation.

"Will manufacturers of safety pins one day have to label their product with a warning not to swallow when open?" asked a lawyer for the American Insurance Association last week.

Perhaps not, but the manufacturer of a child's jump rope has felt it necessary to warn that it should be used only for rope jumping, not for climbing, and that it should be inspected before each use.

And the manufacturer of a child's beanbag attaches to the product a warning that it is not intended for use by children under three years of age, presumably because of some unknown danger that might possibly be found in the product.

The liability problem, say businessmen and insurers, is the scourge of our times. Rather than compensating victims for damage, they say, it has become a vast lottery in which a few win and everyone else loses.

A Senate committee late last year heard one horror story after another from small-business men who were forced out of business by their inability to pay for liability insurance premiums, or to obtain insurance at all.

In one case, the premium jumped in one year from $2,000 to $200,000 — more than the company's earnings — although it never had a liability claim against it.

Insurers, meanwhile, say they cannot afford to continue paying huge damage claims. They attribute their, multibillion dollar underwriting losses in recent years to what they consider excessively high awards.

Both manufacturers and insurers say that under present law they are unable to protect themselves. There is no way a manufacturer can be legally certain he has complied with every requirement of a warning, they say, and no way insurers can pay claims without charging enormous premiums.

The American Insurance Association insists that a statute of limitations, among other things, is urgently needed because, under the law in most states, liability last as long as the product.

"This means that a defendant who may have created or dealt with a product 50, 60 or 70 years ago remains liable for that product even today," said Dennis Connolly, a counsel for the association.

The association also advocates a defense that would free the manufacturers of liability for damages which result from tampering or adjustments made by others without his consent and without his knowledge.

It also seeks to free manufacturers — and their insurers — from liability for injuries resulting from dangers inherent in a product which were not discoverable at the time the product was released for sale.

And, because in some cases it is no longer necessary to show that a product caused the injury alleged, it seeks a statute that would require a claimant to prove causality.

Meanwhile, until the general problem is corrected — the attitude of the public, the generosity of juries, huge lawyers' contingency fees and the generally high costs of litigation — inflation has a diabolical booster.

CHRISTIAN STANDARDS TOO HIGH?

In Egypt a training school for Mohammedan missionaries instructs the students how to make Muslim converts out of Christians.

The school's line of reasoning is something like this: Christianity as a religion is vastly superior to Mohammedanism. Jesus was a much greater prophet than Mohammed. But Jesus was an idealist who set up moral standards unattainable to man. Mohammed, on the other hand, was practical, level-headed, and realistic. Christianity is fine as a theory, but it does not work. Be sensible, therefore, and attach yourself to a religion in which you have some chance of being faithful.

Mohammedans are not the only people who regard Christianity in this light. Many people in this and other countries prefer the easy codes of paganism, seasoned with a little benevolence, to the sublime demands of Jesus for a fully surrendered and consecrated life.

 newspaper editors will accuse us of taking something away from the governor."
 Crawford credits the commission with preventing the highway patrol from turning property valued at more than $15 million "into a racetrack." The 1976 general assembly, at the commission's recommendation, halted plans by the patrol to turn the vacated Governor Morehead School for the Blind in Raleigh into a training academy.

"We thought the Law Enforcement Training Academy in Salemburg was for all law enforcement officers," he said. "But the highway patrol doesn't want anything to do with it. They want their own training school."

However, the legislature assigned several of the blind school's buildings and three of its 350 acres to the State Bureau of Investigation for its headquarters. The SBI offices had been scattered throughout Raleigh at eight different locations.

By the legislative action, the state saved more than $6 million and still preserved 90 per cent of the property for some other use, Crawford said.

Crawford and the highway patrol have had a shaky relationship during his tenure in the legislature. As a member of the House in the early 1960s, he successfully led the fight to prohibit the patrol from using airplanes to catch speeding motorists.

Then, in 1971, his use of troopers to drive him different places was the subject of a number of news stories.

Evans-Novak...

 This compromise satisfies all but radical anti-growth environmentalists.

But it certainly does not satisfy power utilities or electric manufacturers, fearful that natural uranium will be depleted around the year 2000 and unwilling to embark on a major nuclear development program for only 25 years. One important utility executive told us that, as news of tentative decisions has spread from Washington, he and his colleagues over the past two weeks have devolved from cautious optimism to deepening gloom.

Their pleas, however, have not moved the decision-makers. When Schlesinger was told that General Electric Co. was on the verge of quitting the nuclear power business, he replied with a brief but salty expletive. In truth, dispassionate experts disagree among themselves over the immediate need for fast breeder development.

Considering that doubt, one objective energy consultant believes that Mr. Carter should at least continue building the $2 billion fast breeder reactor at Clinch River, Tenn., both as a safeguard for the future and to reassure industry. Yet, it seems dead beyond all hope. The reason: Clinch River has become a hated symbol for environmental activists.

Clearly, then, the real politics of energy goes beyond the President exhorting fellow citizens to drive smaller cars, pay more for gasoline and insulate homes. Although they may not end up in the final draft April 20, two lessons have emerged from its preparation: first, production rather than conservation is the toughest obstacle for an energy program; and second, the biggest sacrifice of all may be sacrificing an environmentalist scruple or two.

Snoopy and his Sopwith Camel notwithstanding, the Red Baron flies again — over the skies of Greenville.

This time, though, the familiar red tri-plane is a kite, and controlling its flight is Ollie Maye, an eighth grader at E. B. Aycock Jr. High.

Ollie's kite has a four-foot wingspan, is over two feet long, and took first place in the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's contest March 19.

"I've been experimenting with making kites for a while, but this is the first one I've had any luck with," said Ollie.

"And then, the first time I flew it it crashed. I had to go back in the house and glue it back up."

Ollie's interest in kites began a few years ago when he saw some kite flyers enjoying themselves. "I thought it looked like fun," he said, "so I tried it."

The prize-winning kite took the soft-spoken 13-year-old two weeks to build.

"I just bought some balsa wood and started cutting it out from a picture I had of the real plane," he said.

"I got some tough paper for the wings, painted it and it was finished.

 "But you have to be patient. It took me maybe 50 manhours to build it."

And how does one fly such a delicate aircraft?
 "When I want it to go left, I point my hand to the right," said Ollie.

"And when I want it to go right, I point my hand to the left. "That's all there is to it."

He is "thinking about" becoming a doctor when he's older, but for right now Ollie Maye is content to plan ahead only as far as next year's kite season.

"I'm going to hang the Red Baron in my room for now," he said.

"And next year, I'm going to build a ship kite."
 Snoopy can breathe a sigh of relief.

Report Charlotte Police Maintained Secret Files

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte police kept secret intelligence files on religious, political and academic leaders in the 1960s and 1970s, The Charlotte Observer reported Sunday.

The newspaper quoted anonymous sources as saying records were kept on Mayor and Mrs. John Belk, evangelist Billy Graham and state Sen. Fred Alexander, D-Mecklenburg, among others.

Relying on court records, documents and interviews, the Observer said police admitted keeping intelligence files on at least 500 people and that some files dealt with groups such as the Ku Klux Klan and the Black Muslims.

When told Friday about the files, Belk said, "I don't even know what you're talking about," the newspaper reported.

Alexander said he would ask Police Chief J.C. Goodman for a look at his file after the story was reported.

Goodman refused to be interviewed or to respond to written questions, the Observer said, but left at police headquarters a letter that stated in full:

"We do not respond to The Charlotte Observer reference their statements or questions."

The story quoted anonymous police sources as saying the files were kept in the special investigations section, then headed by Sgt. A.J. Europa. Europa is now a lieutenant and coordinates five police teams.

Europa testified during two court suits filed by Rudolph Turbeville, a Mecklenburg County Juvenile Court counselor, that police keep intelligence files. Turbeville filed the federal suits alleging police spied on him and caused him to be fired in 1971 because of his antiwar activities.

Europa testified his assignment was "to develop and maintain information of continuing criminal activity, the individuals involved...and make the proper referrals throughout the department."

He and Goodman decided which "criminal" activities were to be included in intelligence gathering, Europa testified.

Goodman denied under oath that he instructed Europa to keep files on any "specific" organization, but admitted the department kept, and later destroyed, files on people involved in antiwar rallies.

Europa then denied he ever kept files on people involved in antiwar rallies in general, but said he had collected and disseminated information on Turbeville.

Turbeville won the 1971 suit and was reappointed to his job.

"Stedman Corporation manufactures fabrics, sportswear and underwear. The textile industry is a very competitive business. We have to keep our operating costs down to give our customers the most for their dollar.

Business District 'Cure' Fails

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City tried to revive its old riverside business district as an entertainment and shopping area it thought would equal New Orleans' French Quarter.

But the crowds are avoiding River Quay following financial setbacks and publicity over gangland slayings and bombings. Two of the surviving bars were dynamited into rubble early Sunday.

Thousands of people came out in 1972 when River Quay was opened. It was to be a "Midwestern French Quarter minus grillwork," according to Joseph Canizaro, a New Orleans developer.

Although a few businesses, such as the Victoria Street Station restaurant, continue to draw numbers of customers, and bars with live entertainment draw modest crowds on weekends, the streets are often deserted and many shops are empty.

The city still bills it as a "Revitalization of Kansas City's Victorian past. Restored historic buildings house a wide variety of stores, quaint restaurants, boutiques, delicatessens and art galleries."

Canizaro sounded the first warning in July 1974: "If Kansas City is interested in seeing the Quay be successful you have to keep out the bad element that tends to go to an area where there are a large number of bars."

Fourteen months later, saying he had lost $300,000 and complaining that local banks had failed to take an interest, he said:

"You can turn it over to the other element and it's going to be a real problem for you ... the element that's interested in bars, in the strip joints, the what-do-you-call-it, massage parlor and all that garbage."

Four months before Canizaro's second statement, a River Quay business owner had been found beaten to death in his shop.

Then the Kansas City Star began running investigative stories on later killings, such as John "Johnny Green" Amaro, who was gunned down in his garage by two men with shotguns shortly after he surrendered his River Quay liquor license.

Last month, four gunmen walked into a bar — Mr. O'Brien's — ordered the patrons to the floor, and executed Harold "Sonny" Bowen, an ex-convict with criminal connections.

Although Mr. O'Brien's was in the Westport district about 30 blocks south of River Quay, police believe it was in retaliation for the Amaro killing.

A few nights later at Pat O'Brien's, a companion establishment on the River Quay, there was only one customer.

People pick up newspapers and "... read murder, River Quay, and they put the two together," Pat O'Brien complained earlier this month. "None of the stuff is even alleged to have happened in the River Quay, but it's driving the customers away."

On Sunday morning, his River Quay establishment and a neighboring one — Judge Roy Bean's — were blown up.

Ersatz Brew?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A coffee substitute developed by a Henderson inventor could eventually account for 20 per cent of the country's coffee consumption, a state agriculture department official says.

The ersatz coffee developed by C.C. Granger is a blend of foodstuffs, with corn as the main ingredient.

The formula is Granger's secret, but a Kinston firm, M&M Coffee Co., is eager to put it into production, said Terry Peak of the department's marketing division.

Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham invited Granger to submit his formula to tests and evaluation by department researchers and marketing specialists think it will be well-received by the public, Peak said.

Real coffee sells for about $4 a pound, he said, but Peak's brew should cost between $1.29 and $1.39 a pound.

It also can be mixed with coffee to make the expensive beverage last longer.

Vendors also have expressed interest in buying Granger's brew and the Kinston company may buy additional machinery to increase production, Peak said.

Russian Tanks Adding Realism

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Sometime within the next year, some Americans may be startled to see Russian tanks rolling across U.S. countryside.

The tanks will be accompanied by soldiers wearing Russian-style uniforms, carrying Soviet AK47 assault rifles and riding in Russian armored personnel carriers.

No matter what it looks like, it won't really be a Russian invasion. It will be part of a training exercise involving the U.S., not the Soviet, Army.

The "Russians" will be part of one of the U.S. Army's special new units, organized to provide more realistic training for fighting what the military likes to call "the potential adversary" — the Soviet army.

While the soldiers will be mock Russians, their equipment will be the real thing, relics of the 1973 Mideast war between Israel and Soviet-supplied Syrian and Egyptian armies.

The Israeli government has given the United States some of the T62 tanks, personnel carriers, artillery, and thousands of smaller arms captured by Israel's forces in the Sinai and Golan Heights battles more than three years ago.

The new training approach was devised, the Army said, because the old system of using simulated "aggressor forces" with American uniforms and arms "didn't provide the realism essential to prepare commanders, noncommissioned officers and soldiers for the next war."

Reorganization Plan Is Nearing Vote In House

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Carter's request for authority to reorganize the federal government is up for a House vote this week, while the Senate moves toward a final decision on enactment of a new code of ethics.

The House of Representatives is expected to pass the President's reorganization proposal on Tuesday. The measure would allow the President to reorganize government agencies unless his action was vetoed by Congress.

But that presidential authority would stop at the Cabinet level, where Carter plans to combine the government's energy agencies into a new Cabinet department.

That plan requires separate legislation and a House subcommittee planned today to begin hearings into the proposal.

The Senate, which has spent most of the past 10 working days debating and voting on various aspects of its proposed code of ethics, scheduled a final vote for Friday. The next major item of business for the Senate is to be Carter's economic stimulus bill, but it was unclear whether it will come to the floor before or after the ethics code vote.

The House also is preparing to vote on Carter's requests for a one-year extension of authority to create public service jobs.

The jobs bill would extend for a year Carter's authority to create up to 750,000 public-service jobs, for which a $6-billion appropriation already has been passed, with $3.8 billion marked for use in fiscal 1978.

Approval also was anticipated for the continuation of the House assassinations committee, which intends to investigate anew the murders of President John F. Kennedy and civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Final action on the new Senate ethics code, a companion piece to one already adopted by the House, was set for Friday after being pushed back repeatedly by extended debate over its controversial features, the main one being a limit on the amount of income senators could earn in addition to their legislative salary.

A host of amendments were rejected last week, and similar action was expected on most of some 28 remaining before the code, given top priority by Senate leaders, comes to a vote.

After the ethics issue is resolved, Senate debate was scheduled to open immediately on the Senate Finance Committee version of President Carter's tax cut proposal. The measure already has passed the House.

The key part of the bill would provide a $50 tax rebate to 200 million Americans this spring. The legislation would permanently cut taxes for 46 million couples or individuals by raising the standard deduction, and would give businesses increased incentives for hiring new workers.

Gangster's Role In Arizona Detailed

By The Associated Press
The past career and present activities of Peter Joseph "Horseface" Licavoli Sr., a Detroit gangster who moved to Arizona in the 1940s, are detailed in published accounts of the latest installment of a series by a team of investigative reporters.

The stories appeared in Monday editions of the Indianapolis Star and some other papers available on the street Sunday night.

They said Licavoli's "track record" — from his days as leader of the old Detroit Purple Gang to his present stewardship of an Arizona hoodlum mob — illustrates how firmly entrenched organized crime has become in Arizona and throughout the Southwest.

The stories in print said: "The Licavoli family has carried on its criminal activity virtually unmolested by the law since Pete Sr. came out of prison in 1960 after serving two years for tax evasion. Since then, he and his sons have operated without interruption or felony arrest."

The published accounts covered the 16th part of a 23-part copyright series produced by Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc., after a six-month effort in Arizona. Stories in print yesterday traced the activities of another organized crime figure now in Arizona, Joseph "Joe Bananas" Bonanno Sr.

The Monday stories said that, according to associates, Licavoli, 74, has become increasingly reluctant to be involved in narcotics because his son Ted was once a heroin addict.

The published accounts add that Licavoli's two other sons, Peter Jr. and Michael "don't share their father's distaste for drugs. The Drug Enforcement Agency, which identifies Peter Jr. as the successor to his father's throne, says young Pete operated a smuggling ring from Mexico to St. Louis, Youngstown, Ohio, Boston and Anaheim, Calif. Peter and Michael Licavoli are said by DEA to be financing other smuggling rings."

The stories in print said that Licavoli's recent conviction on a charge of trying to sell a stolen painting to an undercover FBI agent "is living proof of the adage that old Mafiosi never die; they go into semi-retirement in the sun and work an occasional scam." Licavoli was sentenced on Feb. 4 to 18 months in prison and was fined $10,000 in the case. He is appealing.

According to the stories in print, Licavoli has faced 38 criminal charges, but was convicted only three times before the painting case and spent only 4½ years in prison. The earlier convictions came for bribing a Canadian border guard during his rumrunning days, for income tax evasion in the 1950s and for contempt of Congress in connection with his refusal to appear before a racketeers investigation.

The published accounts said Licavoli purchased the Grace Ranch outside Tucson in 1944 and added that the property "quickly became a haven for the mob and has stayed that way for 35 years."

Among the Licavoli activities detailed in the published accounts:

—His purchase, through associates, of a controlling share of stock in the Rillito Race Track, a horse racing track in Arizona, in 1953. A year later, according to the stories in print, Morris Udall, then a county attorney and now a congressman from Arizona, "exposed the Licavoli infiltration."

—Licavoli passed $300,000 to Willie Bioff, described as a racketeer, to invest on Licavoli's behalf in the Ingleside Turf Club in Phoenix, another race track. "When there was no sign of action by Bioff, Licavoli demanded his money back. Bioff couldn't produce it because he'd lost most of it in the stock market." On Nov. 4, 1955, Bioff was killed when a bomb exploded in his pickup truck.

—On Dec. 27, 1973, Licavoli drove to the Phoenix airport and met an informant for the alcohol, tobacco and firearms division of the Justice Department. Licavoli allegedly offered to supply counterfeit money and Israeli-manufactured guns. "The ATF became involved in an internal squabble over how best to move on the case and flubbed the investigation."

—"The IRE investigation has tied Licavoli to a number of Tucson restaurants and real estate ventures. Some of his other interests extend south to the border and north of Phoenix."

Published accounts of what was presented as a sidebar to the IRE series said, "Crime syndicate leaders and Teamsters Union officials have joined to push for pre-paid dental coverage plans in Arizona and across the nation."

The stories in print detailed complex arrangements, allegedly involving mob figures in the dental plans.

Arguing Four Separate Cases Involving The Death Penalty

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Southern states are arguing four separate cases before the Supreme Court in an effort that could lead to significant changes in the scope of capital punishment in the United States.

The cases being argued today asked the justices to decide:

—If rape can be punished by death.

—Whether a state can make the death penalty mandatory for murderers of police officers.

—If a man who committed a crime punishable by death under a state law that was later invalidated be condemned again some years later under a new death penalty law.

—And how far prosecutors can go in making impassioned closing arguments to a jury in a trial in which the defendant faces a possible death sentence.

The four cases include two from Florida and one each from Louisiana and Georgia.

The death penalty laws in Florida and Georgia were upheld by the high court last summer but Louisiana's law was struck down. Legal experts had said the Louisiana statutes were invalidated because they required a mandatory death penalty for certain crimes. But last Dec. 1 the justices voted to study whether Louisiana could automatically sentence to death persons convicted of killing police officers.

The rape issue comes to the court from Georgia, in the case of Ehrlich Anthony Coker, condemned for the 1974 rape of a 16-year-old woman who three weeks before had given birth to her first child.

The mandatory death sentence issue is before the court in the case of Harry Roberts, a New Orleans man convicted of gunning down a city policeman on Mardi Gras Day, 1974.

The two Florida cases involve Ernest John Dobbert of Jacksonville, convicted for the torture killing of his 9-year-old daughter, and Willie Jasper Darden, convicted in the Sept. 8, 1973, murder of a Lakeland furniture store owner.

Attorneys for Dobbert argue that his death sentence was unlawfully handed down because the capital punishment statute was not in effect when he committed his crime. Attorneys for Darden claim the prosecutor made a fair trial impossible by making "inflammatory" remarks during closing arguments.

The Supreme Court said last July 2 that states using certain guidelines can pass laws enabling them to execute convicted murderers, but the court reserved any decision on whether the death penalty is a constitutional punishment for any other crime.

Many of the 20 states with death penalty laws now on their books list such crimes as rape, kidnapping, treason and even armed robbery under certain circumstances as capital offenses.

Chief Glenn Cannon said local officers and SBI agents stopped a car about 3½ miles West of Greenville on U.S. 264 and found the marijuana, valued at $5,000, in the car trunk.

Charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of sale were Edmon Wayne Thorne, and James Edward Campbell, both 26 and both of Fayetteville.

The chief said a .44 caliber magnum pistol was also found in the trunk of the car.

Cannon said the SBI seized the vehicle pending outcome of the case in court.

Both Thorne and Campbell were placed in the Pitt County Jail under $5,000 bond each.

The arrests occurred about 1:30 a.m.

Marijuana Confiscated

Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation early Saturday morning arrested two Fayetteville men and confiscated between eight and ten pounds of marijuana.

Does your herbicide offer weather flexibility?

Roger Walker

This may never have happened to you, but it could. As you put in your corn, you apply a labeled herbicide that's for corn only. A few weeks pass, the corn has begun to look real promising. Could be a good year after all.

All of a sudden the weather turns against you. There you are—hailed or flooded out. It's too late to replant corn. You still have time to put in soybeans. But you can't—your corn herbicide may kill the beans.

You can avoid this situation, without sacrificing many of the herbicide features you count on. You can apply liquid Lasso® herbicide or Lasso® II granular herbicide by Monsanto. Either herbicide works well in both corn and soybeans. So, if your corn gets wiped out, you're still in the soybean business.

And liquid or granule, Lasso is an effective grass herbicide. Lasso controls foxtails, fall panicum, crabgrass, many other grasses, too. Lasso even controls pigweed.

Of course, we don't want you to use Lasso because you might get hailed or flooded out. We want you to use it because it controls many grasses and certain broadleaves. Lasso herbicide by Monsanto.

Lasso. If it weren't dependable it wouldn't be where it is.

Lasso is a registered trademark of Monsanto Company. Always read and follow the label directions for Lasso.

A MIRACLE FOR THE MANNING FAMILY

"ODE TO SYLVIA"

"Sylvia" was like an angel, sent down from above,
To help us out, and this she did with love.
Now, she was a dark skinned girl, of this she was proud,
And she didn't mind telling all of the world, clear and loud!

Sylvia performed her household chores, gaily moving about,
She always brought a smile to us, when we were all "down and out"
She prepared an abundance of delicious "soul food",
And if you didn't have soul, this would "put you in the mood!"
But, after eating so much "Soul food", we started getting fat,
So we told Sylvia, "we've just gotta' cut down on some of that!"

When problems got in our way, as they so often do,
Sylvia would always remind us that GOD was bigger than any problem, and he would see us through.

She took care of the three of us, Paul, Greg and Dot.
Although Greg, the teenager, would many times put Sylvia in a spot.
But she disciplined him with a very firm hand,
Maybe when he's grown up, this will be appreciated and understood.

Paul, so intelligent, handsome and a very talkative man,
He was the judge of the court, we the others were always on the stand.
Dot, sick in bed, with her good days, along with the bad.
She sometimes seemed happy; but more often sad.

So Sylvia, I write this especially for you
By your good deeds, God will bless you, and someday you will get your reward too!

NCAA Finals: Carolina, Marquette Vie For National Championship

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — After slowing down Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina will try to speed up Marquette. That's Dean Smith's plan for the NCAA basketball championship game tonight.

Al McGuire's game plan is much simpler—go for the head.

"You've got to cut off the head for the body to die," says the Marquette coach.

Translated, that means that Marquette will have to cut off Phil Ford at the pass, run and whatever else he does best—which is usually everything.

"Ford's dynamite," said McGuire. "No one will ever know the full value of North Carolina's 'Four-Corner Offense' until Ford leaves. We'll have to short-stop Ford. We'll have to be very patient."

Patience, of course, is the virtue that got Marquette into tonight's big contest at the Omni, which starts at 8:15 p.m. EST. The seventh-ranked Warriors play painstaking basketball, calculating each move on the court with computer-like efficacy.

This tedious, deliberate style paid off in Saturday's semifinals, when the Warriors nipped the North Carolina-Charlotte 49ers 51-49 on Jerome Whitehead's last-second shot.

Smith, whose fifth-ranked team held Nevada-Las Vegas to its second lowest point total of the season in Saturday's 84-83 victory, is entirely cognizant of the Marquette tempo.

"I'm very concerned about forcing tempo," he said Sunday at a news conference. "I'd much rather slow a team down than speed it up. You can't force someone to play. There's no 30-second clock in basketball."

There is, however, the fastbreak—and Smith acknowledges "we like to do that a lot."

McGuire therefore will be looking for that, as well as

North Carolina's storied "Four-Corner Offense." And it is an offense, despite some opinion to the contrary.

"People have misconceptions about the Four Corners," said Smith. "They think it's a stall. But actually, it isn't. It's designed to get easy layups, draw fouls and tire out the other team's defense, as well as run out the clock."

"It really opens up a lot of scoring opportunities," added guard John Kuester. "We've been very effective with it—especially with Phil Ford, the best guard in America."

The famed spread formation, with a player in each corner of the court and Ford orchestrating in the center, has provided a lot of anguish for the Tar Heels' opponents this year. Nevada-Las Vegas was hurt by it Saturday when North Carolina got a lot of "back-door" baskets by freshman Mike O'Koren, who wound up with 31 points.

Acknowledges McGuire: "It's the Blue Plate Special. No one does it any better than North Carolina."

Ford, considered by many to be the best guard ever to play for the Tar Heels, has been directing the formation in recent games despite injury to his right elbow. He suffered a "hyperextended" elbow in the East Regionals against Notre Dame and reinjured it during a practice last week.

"The elbow feels great," Ford said Sunday. "I thought that after Saturday's game, I'd wake up today with some pain. But it seems to be okay."

While trying to hold the ubiquitous Ford in check, the Warriors will also be attempting to direct the game's pace with their paralyzing ball-control offense.

"I consider Marquette a great ball-control team," noted Smith. "They're very similar to Virginia and Oregon, but Marquette probably does it even better than those two teams."

While the Warriors put you to sleep with their offense, they can put you away for good with their tremendous firepower up front.

"They're probably the best rebounding team in the nation this year," said Smith, "maybe the best in any year."

As well as acknowledging Marquette's obvious physical capabilities, Smith also stressed a possible emotional edge that the Warriors may have.

"I know they'll be up for McGuire's last game," he said.

Along with the drama of a national championship, McGuire's retirement has added more electricity to the proceedings. The veteran coach announced earlier this year that he was leaving basketball to go into private business.

"McGuire has meant so much to all the coaches," Smith said. "I think all the coaches feel that way. I love my players more than I do Al. Otherwise, I'd want Al to win the national championship."

But if perhaps Marquette has a psychological weapon in McGuire's retirement, it could be offset by North Carolina's Tommy LaGarde. One of three Olympic Gold Medal winners on the Tar Heels, the bony center was a tower of strength through most of the season before injuring his left knee late in the year.

LaGarde had recent surgery on the limb and has been giving North Carolina moral support from the sidelines while sitting in a wheel chair.

"I'm disappointed that Tommy won't be in the championship game," Smith said. "I'm disappointed for Tommy. He's meant so much to North Carolina's success."

Observers are amazed that North Carolina has come this far, considering its plague of injuries. Forward Walter Davis is still playing despite a broken finger on his right hand.

Despite all these injuries to key personnel, the Tar Heels have built a 15-game winning streak to move within one game of handing Smith his first NCAA championship. He's been in the championship round on four previous occasions.

Before the Marquette-North Carolina game, Nevada-Las Vegas and North Carolina-Charlotte will meet in the third-place contest at 5:35 p.m. A sellout crowd of more than 16,000 will jam the Omni while millions more watch on national television.

Yarborough Wins On 38th Birthday

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Cale Yarborough had everything going for him Sunday in the 17th annual Gwyn Staley 400 stock car race and he won running away from Richard Petty.

Yarborough won both NASCAR events at the North Wilkesboro Speedway last year, his sponsor is headquartered in North Wilkesboro, his crew chief hails from the Wilkes County woods and it was Yarborough's 38th birthday.

Yarborough's previous victories on the compact five-eighths mile oval that was crowded with 29 starters Sunday didn't hurt, either.

"This track has got so many bumps and grooves and angles in it, you have to drive it all the way," Yarborough said. "You can't put the car on the track and let it take a set."

Petty, who has won 13 times at the track, chased Yarborough for most of the 400 laps of the 250-mile event, but the Dodge driver could not overcome Yarborough's quarter-lap cushion.

Benny Parsons finished third in the same lap with Yarborough and Petty. Buddy Baker was fourth, a lap back, and Bobby Allison took fifth, two laps behind.

Yarborough took $14,000 of the $73,465 purse and maintained his lead in the lucrative Winston Cup drivers' standings. Petty's second-place finish vaulted him from third to second in the standings while Darrell Waltrip dropped to third.

Yarborough averaged 88.95 miles per hour in winning, but said the track was slick and leaders were jammed together in the early going.

"I don't believe ice is that slick," he said, adding that the size of the paved circuit made it "hard to pass without touching."

After several laps of jockeying for position and lead changes, Yarborough slipped past pole-sitter Neil Bonnett on the third turn of lap 27, Bonnett's Dodge slipping sideways a bit as Yarborough cruised by on the inside.

Bonnett, who captured the pole in a new two-day qualifying procedure, dropped back in the pack after that. He cracked the wall on the third turn of lap 31 with the right tire spinning off.

"I was stuck somewhere down in the corner and it seemed like something broke," the Hueytown, Ala., driver said after his car was pulled in. "I might have cut a tire, but I can't say when the tire came off."

Six drivers had a piece of the lead during 12 changes, with Yarborough holding it six times for 320 laps. Petty stayed close, but in second.

"I never could get Richard out of my rear view mirror," Yarborough said.

Six caution flags slowed the race for 38 laps with two yellow flags brought out after debris was thrown from the stands.

Watson Blows Lead; Marsh Takes Tourney

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Graham Marsh was almost apologetic about it, and he had a word of sympathy for distraught Tom Watson.

"It's happened to me. I know how it feels," the 33-year-old Australian said after Watson's swing again collapsed in the run down the stretch and he let Marsh escape with the title in the Sea Pines Heritage Golf Classic.

Watson, who now has failed to secure a victory after leading two tournaments in as many weeks, fled the Harbour Town Golf Links immediately after his bitterly disappointing finish Sunday and wasn't available for comment.

"He didn't say anything," said Ben Crenshaw, Watson's playing partner over the last 18 holes. "What could he say?"

Comment, perhaps, wasn't necessary. The look of anguish that crossed his freckled face immediately after he'd pumped one into the water on the 14th hole told it all. He covered his eyes with his hands and ducked his head. He'd done it again.

He'd started the final 18 holes with a commanding, four-stroke lead, blew that in four holes then, from a tie, made double bogey five and trailed by two shots.

It was doubly disappointing to the former British Open champ in that he'd done much the same the week before, blowing a two-stroke lead over the last nine holes.

Buc Golfers Finish Low

GREENVILLE, S.C. — East Carolina's golf team finished 21st out of 27 teams at the Furman Intercollegiate Tournament held this past weekend.

Auburn University won the tourney with a total team score of 868. Furman finished second at 872, followed by UNC, 882, Georgia Southern, 886, and Georgia 888.

The Pirates' team total was 924. They were paced by Mike Buckmaster at 229 and David Brogan and Keith Hiller at 230. Other ECU scores were Frank Acker, 235, and Phil Bell, 253.

The Bucs will not play again until April 25, when they compete in the Southern Conference tournament at Florence Country Club in Florence, S.C.

Consolation Game Rapped

ATLANTA (AP) — Suppose they gave a consolation basketball game and nobody came? Jerry Tarkanian thinks it wouldn't be such a bad idea.

"Our kids are wounded and really don't want to play it," said the Nevada-Las Vegas coach whose team meets North Carolina-Charlotte in tonight's third-place game of the NCAA championship playoffs.

Tarkanian expressed explicit displeasure with the thought of a consolation game and Coach Lee Rose of North Carolina-Charlotte indicated similar thoughts at a news conference Sunday.

"When a team loses in the NCAA playoffs, the season should end right there and the players go home," said Tarkanian, whose team lost an 84-83 decision to North Carolina in Saturday's semifinals at the Omni.

"I don't like consolation

Tonight's battle for the NCAA basketball championship is not quite what people in North Carolina had hoped for, but North Carolina (Chapel Hill) Coach Dean Smith may be just as happy.

Over the past few years, Smith had made no bones about the fact that he is not interested in playing anyone in North Carolina with the exception of Wake Forest, N.C. State and Duke, fellow ACC members.

The fans of North Carolina (Charlotte), along with other teams were hoping for such a meeting to prove that the 49ers were equal to the task. But it is not to be.

Beating North Carolina would be a feather in the cap of UNCC, naturally, or in the cap of any other non-ACC North Carolina team. Smith feels that in such a game, emotion would be a great factor. I'm sure that he means that as far as the regular season is concerned. By the time any teams make it to the national finals, one would expect that there would be plenty of emotion anyway.

Emotion is certain to be a heavy factor in tonight's final game, since Marquette Coach Al McGuire announced early in the year that he plans to retire following the end of the season. His players are sure to want to give him the NCAA title as a going-away present, and he'd love to have it.

Whether the Tar Heels and Coach Smith can overcome all this is to be seen.

One thing is certain, it's sure to be a bang-up finish to an excellent tournament.

New East Carolina Coach Larry Gillman has passed up the basketball coach's coaches' meeting in Atlanta during the tournament for the sake of recruiting.

Since he was hired to replace Dave Patton, he's been almost constantly on the go. He was with San Francisco for a couple of days prior to the Dons' elimination from the NCAA tournament.

After that, he visited the National Junior College Tournament, and has since been on the road seeking new players for the Pirates.

He came into Greenville last week for a couple of days to meet with the team, look for a place to live, and handle some other chores, then took off again Sunday morning to be gone for another week or so.

He's due back around the seventh of April. Not long after that comes the National Letter of Intent signing date, a most important time of the year.

The Pirate coach has only four grants available this year, since he has 11 players returning. One of those, too, seemingly is already taken since George Devone of Hobpton has signed a grant-in-aid with the Pirates. Devone admits, however, that he has not settled on the Pirates for sure. Gillman spent some time with him Saturday, trying to persuade him to wear the Pirate purple next season.

As we have said before, if he comes up with the right combination in those four, next season could become a banner year for the Pirates.

Smith Wants Old Basketball In Title Game

ATLANTA (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dean Smith isn't particularly happy with the basketballs being used at the NCAA playoffs.

"I hope we get a good one for the national championship," he said prior to tonight's NCAA finals against Marquette at the Omni.

The ball used during North Carolina's 84-83 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas in Saturday's semifinals was freshly unwrapped and apparently too slick to hold firmly. Several times, North Carolina guard John Kuester had to wipe his hands off with a towel before shooting a foul shot and both sides made an unusual number of turnovers in the game.

Smith indicated that he'd prefer a used ball for the championship game.

"In the future we're hoping for a ball that isn't slippery," Smith said.

Farmville Track Team Is Young

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Farmville Central's track team this year, is young, inexperienced and weak in sprinters, according to coach Gene Brewer, but the Jaguars have a lot of athletic ability and are good to work with.

The inexperience will hurt the team, initially, but Brewer is hoping the athletic ability of each of the team members will show through by the end of the season.

One of the most experienced team members is junior Rufus Mayo, who competes in the long jump, triple jump, 440 and 100-yard dash. Mayo was eighth in the state in the long jump last year, but his distances so far this year are "not where I want him right now," Brewer said. He added that Mayo is coming around, however, in both the long jump and 440.

Junior Horace Williams won the conference pole vault title last season. He will be competing in the 880 this season, as well as the pole vault. Williams has "come along pretty good, considering the amount of time he's had to work on the pole vault" due to the weather, Brewer said.

Kelvin Dixon and John Dupree both return in the thrown — throwing events and Brewer is hoping they will progress throughout the season. "Kelvin has come along pretty well; John got off slow, but it looks like he's ready to come around for us."

Two other Farmville Central returnees are both distance runners, miler Chris Connell, who also high jumps, and Kyle Bullock, who runs the two mile.

The Jaguar sprinters include Angelo Harris, Robert Williams, James Tyson and Warren Carlton. They are probably the weakest part of the team right now, Brewer said, but he is hoping they'll come on as the season goes along.

Walter Blow, Woody Edwards, Donald Freeman, Calvin Horne and Rochelle Taylor will be the hurdlers on this year's team and "they're inexperienced, but I've been pretty well pleased with them, not to have had any experience."

Running the 440, along with Mayo, will be freshman Andre Gay. "I'm expecting him to improve right much," Brewer said. He is joined by Herman Ellis.

In the distance events, Farmville Central has William May, Ken Vickers, Jason Patterson and James Mercer. Again, they are inexperienced, but Brewer is hoping for improvement.

Nearly every team in the Eastern Carolina Conference had some key losses to graduation last year and, for this reason, Brewer sees the league race as "pretty wide open."

Southern Nash, D. H. Conley and Greene Central should all have good teams this year, but Brewer said Farmville Central will "probably be as well off as some of the rest of them."

Brewer said the Jaguars have a "chance, but we're going to have to have people really progress from week to week.

"And, to win the conference, you're usually going to have to have some breaks."

Consolation Game Rapped

games at all. You've got two teams that don't want to play. You know my kids were hurt after losing, and the best thing would be if they could go home this morning."

Rose was not as blunt in his reaction to the relatively insignificant game, but did get across the same message to his audience.

"I'm not here to dictate what the NCAA can and cannot do," he said, unsmiling. "If that's what they want, I'll go along with it."

Rose added, however, that he considered himself "the world's worst consolation game coach" since he'd been in five such contests and won only once previously.

Even Al McGuire, whose Marquette team meets North Carolina for the national championship after Nevada-Las Vegas plays North Carolina-Charlotte, displayed some strong anti-consolation game feelings.

"The problem with a consolation game is hanging around for two days before you play it," said McGuire. "It would be better to play it the next day."

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today for parts of the Northeast and Midwest, ranging from Maine southwest to Ohio. Snow, accompanied by cold air from Canada, is expected for the northern Plains states. Flurries are predicted for parts of Colorado and New Mexico. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By CARL ZEITZ
Associated Press Writer
TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — In a letter to his mother, convicted Lindbergh baby killer Bruno Hauptmann ridiculed evidence used against him and said his defense attorney cooperated with the prosecution and was often drunk.

The letter was never delivered or otherwise made public. It was hidden for 40 years in the personal papers of Col. Mark Kimberling, warden at Trenton State Prison in the mid-1930s.

It presents no new evidence but may serve to revive doubts about Hauptmann's guilt which have circulated since he died in the electric chair on April 2, 1936.

Hauptmann spent 14 months on death row at the prison and was executed there for the murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr., infant son of Col. Charles Lindbergh, the national hero who made the first trans-Atlantic flight in 1927.

Hauptmann gave the letter, written in German, to Kimberling, and asked him to send it to his mother Pauline in Kamenz, Germany, near Dresden, and give a translation to then-Gov. Harold Hoffman.

There is no record whether Hoffman saw the letter. But according to an attached note, Kimberling decided not to mail it because it "might receive some press comment over in Germany, which might result in some unfavorable reaction, or, at least in placing us in an embarrassing position for having released it from state prison." Copies of the letter were obtained by The Associated Press and The New York Daily News. Hauptmann said he "was condemned without having the slightest idea of the crime. Also, I have never in my life seen the unfortunate child and if anyone should ask me where the Lindbergh house is, I could not give him any information, even with the best of intentions."

He especially disliked his former chief attorney, Edward Reilly, a renowned New York criminal lawyer brought into the case by the Hearst newspapers without consulting Hauptmann.

"How my chief counsel at the trial acted or how he could act so, I cannot comprehend. According to my opinion, I believe that I am 100 per cent certain when I say that he worked together with the prosecutor. I had an opportunity to explain my case to him only five minutes. He simply did not come to me, or if he came for three to five minutes, he was often drunk. How could I talk with him?" Hauptmann complained. Hauptmann tried to prove in the letter that some of the evidence must have been fabricated by police.

Farm Scene

L. GAYLON AMBROSE,
Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

The discovery that tobacco plants absorb only mineral forms of nitrogen has helped reduce the use of organics in tobacco fertilizers.

And, the extra price of fertilizers containing organics has caused many growers to question the claims for organics. Fertilizer bills can be reduced by avoiding organics without any changes in yield or quality!

The results of 75 on-farm tests conducted by S. N. Hawks, Jr., tobacco specialist at N. C. State University, show there is no advantage to including organics in tobacco fertilizers. Hawks compared all-mineral fertilizers with ones containing 20 percent of the nitrogen in the organic form in tests for 3 years. There was no difference in the yield and price of the tobacco in the tests.

75 On-Farm Tests

Nitrogen Source, 20 percent organic; Yielding/lbs. A, 2261.

Nitrogen Source, All mineral; Yielding/lbs. A, 2284.

Years ago organic nitrogen used in tobacco fertilizers were natural materials. Such materials as cotton seed meal, tankage and fish scrap were used. As a result, many growers think of organics as cotton seed meal only. In recent years, synthetic compounds have been used to supply much of the organic nitrogen. Regardless of material used, the price has increased sharply.

Leaching Discussed

A lingering belief about organics is protection against leaching on sandy textured soils. It's true that organics do not readily leach but neither can they be absorbed by your tobacco plants.

A change to a mineral form must occur before they are used or leached. Research by Dr. C. B. McCant has shown that only about one-half of the nitrogen in organics changes over to mineral forms during the period tobacco is in the field.

Once the change takes place this nitrogen is leachable. McCants found the portion of the organic that changes does so during the first several weeks the fertilizer is in the field. Since the change takes place so quickly after organics are applied, the short length of protection hardly seems enough to justify the high cost of these materials.

Rate Analyzed

A grower who has been using high rates of organic nitrogen may need to apply less nitrogen if he changes to all mineral nitrogen. This is because of differences in available nitrogen from the two sources.

Some growers often say tobacco fertilized with organic nitrogen matures earlier and better than where all mineral nitrogen is used. This observation is believed to be associated with relative availability of nitrogen from the two sources. Less available nitrogen from the organic sources could definitely influence maturity.

There are two forms of mineral or inorganic nitrogen commonly used in the production of flue-cured tobacco — ammonium and nitrate. Tobacco plants will absorb and utilize both forms of mineral nitrate. However, when large quantities of ammonium nitrate are absorbed the growth of the plants is reduced. Yield and leaf quality are lowered. Because of the possibility of the tobacco absorbing too much ammonium nitrogen, it is suggested that complete tobacco fertilizers contain at least 50 percent of the nitrogen in the nitrate form. This suggestion is extremely important when fumigants are used that kill some of the bacteria that help change ammonium nitrogen to nitrate nitrogen.

Sidedressing fertilizers should contain at least 50 percent of the nitrogen in the nitrate form. And, a favorable response often can be obtained from using 100 percent nitrate nitrogen in regular sidedressing and adjustments for leached nitrogen.

Pay-Off For Odd Claims

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) —

A kidnaped cow, a burnt beard and a pair of flying dentures crushed beneath the wheels of a passing auto were some of the crazier claims handled by one insurance company in 1976.

Examining the files on the more than 20 million cases it dealt with last year, Aetna Life & Casualty says it also can document the case of a butcher who was beaten with a frozen chicken by a disgruntled employee.

The fracas ended when the employe stumbled over a frozen rooster and broke his leg.

In another case, a rancher contacted Aetna after an unusual dispute with a neighbor. The rancher's cattle had wandered off the open range and trampled down the fence of the neighbor's vegetable garden in search of fancier food.

The neighbor lassoed a cow and threatened to hold it for ransom until she was reimbursed for damages. A suggestion by the Aetna claim agent that the ASPCA might take exception with her action led to the animal's speedy return.

A young Milwaukee resident sporting a face full of hair had his pride singed at a local tavern while consuming the house specialty. Drinking a concoction called a "Flaming 151," the flame licked his face and ignited his beard.

The bartender put out the blazing beard by spraying it with a seltzer gun.

Aetna said a New Jersey man filed a claim after a passing car pulverized his dentures. The man had stopped to have lunch in his car and was removing his dentures when a heavy sneeze hit him and propelled his false teeth into the roadway.

Three-Year-Old Struck By Car

A three-year-old child, Ansel Morice Grimes of 1919 Kennedy Cir. was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries he received yesterday afternoon when struck by a car on Sheppard Street.

Police said a car driven by Noah Lawrence Moore of 604 Sheppard St. struck young Grimes when the child ran into the path of his car about 4:03 p.m. 150 feet South of the Sixth Street intersection.

A cold front extending from the central Plains southeast into the lower Mississippi Valley region was expected to reach the North Carolina mountains early tonight. It will become stationary across the Piedmont Tuesday.

Considerable cloudiness prevailed in advance of the front, becoming thickest across the western half of the state. The forecast called for afternoon temperatures ranging from the upper 60s to the mid 70s. Mild temperatures are expected to continue through Tuesday.

Scattered showers and a few thundershowers also were predicted across the mountains ahead of the front. The showers were expected to spread into the western Piedmont during the afternoon and east to the coast tonight and Tuesday.

Lows tonight will range in the upper 40s to mid 50s. Highs Tuesday will range in the 70s to around 80. With considerable high level cloudiness across North Carolina Sunday, afternoon temperatures ranged from the mid 60s to the low 70s. Except for the Outer Banks where readings were in the mid to upper 50s, the warmest reporting points included Fayetteville with 72, and Asheville, Charlotte, Cherry Point and Raleigh-Durham with 69.

Cloudiness prevailed during the night, holding low readings to the mid 40s to the mid 50s. A lone shower occurred during the wee hours of the morning over Transylvania County in the southern mountains.

Everybody Affected By Carter Energy Program

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — When — and if — President Carter's energy program becomes law, it will be felt right down to brother Billy's Amoco station in Plains.

But it is more likely to be a twinge than a pain.

There probably will be smaller automobiles, less gasoline to go into them and a higher federal tax on every gallon.

Natural gas prices will go up substantially, and there are indications that they will be accompanied by some form of excess profits tax, to make sure that producers don't pocket the proceeds instead of using some of the money to search for new supplies.

Using a system of tax incentives, loans and perhaps federal instructions tacked onto local building codes, Washington will seek to insulate the nation's homes and offices, old and new. Homeowners and landlords are going to have to pay for it.

As rapidly as possible, the government will end the use of natural gas to generate electricity, pressing and possibly compelling conversion of those power plants to coal.

This will involve bending some clean air and other environmental standards although there won't be a wholesale retreat on that front.

There will be mandatory constraints on the use of energy, Carter has said, and while he did not enumerate the constraints, it is in that compulsion that he anticipates political trouble.

Carter said long ago that he was prepared to take the political risk, tell the nation what had to be done, and make it stick. The telling begins on April 20, before a joint session of Congress, when Carter delivers his energy policy message.

He says it will "substantially change the lifestyle of the American people."

Carter has outlined some major features of his energy policy, as candidate and as President. Unless he has major surprises to present next month, it doesn't look all that painful.

It will mean higher prices, but that's nothing new. Prices that would have been unthinkable five years ago are posted on every gas pump in the country.

If the program hurts less than people expected, it becomes that much easier to accept, which may account for some of the advance suggestions that it really is drastic.

College Has 5-Cent Cups

ST. PETER, Minn. (UPI) — Gustavus Adolphus College offers no athletic scholarships, but where else can you still get a cup of coffee for a nickel?

And brownies and pastries for a nickel to go with it? Evelyn "Ma" Young modestly takes no credit for attracting students to the small Lutheran school in southern Minnesota, but the canteen she has managed for 28 years is a "powerful public relations factor."

How can she do it when the local cafe can't or won't? "It's a profit," she said. "In 1949, coffee everywhere was a nickel a cup. I never have raised the price, and now that I'm buying it in bulk it isn't even costing me a nickel a cup."

She said she plans no price boost even when she runs out of the present supplies she bought last summer before the recent coffee price hike.

Canteen patrons drink a total of 900 cups of coffee a day, the 64-year-old Mrs. Young said.

"People think we are out of our minds," she said, "but they're not complaining. No siree."

"I feel we should do this for the students... We do things to make them feel that Gustavus is their home away from home."

Arrested On Liquor Count

Pitt County ABC officers and members of the Sheriff's Department arrested Mary Burnette, 55 of Route 1, Grimesland, on charges of possession of tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale following a search of her home about 8 p.m. Saturday.

Officers reported two gallons and six pints of ABC whiskey were found in her dwelling during the search.

Attention Focused On 2 Major Items

By Sam D. Bundy

N. C. House of Representatives

Two major items were the center of interest this week.

First a merit selection of judges proposal will be on the House floor for debate Tuesday and predictions are that the vote will be close. The proposal is aimed at protecting judges from political activity and was approved by the Houses Courts and Judicial Districts Committee Wednesday. Under the proposal, judges would be appointed by the governor from three candidates recommended by a 150-member appointment commission. Second, a proposal revising the formula for the allocation of $30 million in state highway funds for secondary road construction was introduced in the Assembly Wednesday. The bill would provide for 50 per cent of the funds to be allocated for use in each county, based on its total secondary road mileage and 50 per cent based on its population. The proposed formula increases secondary road funds for large counties, but would mean a loss for smaller counties in the east and west. It would mean, however, very little change for Pitt and Greene Counties.

Finally, the visitation of school groups to the Legislative Building is picking up. It was my pleasure to greet groups this week from Robinson Union School in Pitt County and North Greene School in Greene County. See you next week.

Recommends Rotation For Battered Teachers

By CRAIG A. PALMER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A psychiatrist says "battered teachers" in violent schools may suffer something akin to combat fatigue and should be rotated every two or three years for periods of rest and recuperation.

Alfred Bloch, writing in the spring issue of "Today's Education," a publication of the National Education Association, reported finding physical and psychological symptoms among teachers kept in potentially violent situations in inner city schools.

Teachers who work under such stress conditions can survive if they have access to psychological and physical training, adequate security measures and the support of administrators and school board members, he said.

They should be rotated to less stressful schools after a maximum of two or three years, he said.

Bloch, a University of California psychiatrist and assistant clinical professor, described three "battered teachers" from inner city schools that he treated between 1971 and 1976:

—Howard K., 47, threatened and beaten several times by students during attempts to stop fights and thefts, and missing by inches a booby-trapped accident, suffers from depression, fatigue and leg pains. He underwent surgery for a stress-related disease and had to give up teaching after repeated requests for transfer were ignored.

—Ms. R., 31, whose hair was set afire by angry female students. Trying to report the incident, she was criticized for leaving the classroom and not maintaining discipline and was instructed not to discuss the assault with other teachers. She became agitated, anxious, severely depressed and suicidal and has been unable to return to teaching.

—Mr. F., 29, a popular and idealistic high school teacher and former college athlete, was beaten to unconsciousness by vagrants in the school. The principal advised him to return to class next day to "show the students that violence had not won." He developed physical complaints and experiences episodes of anxiety, paranoia, nightmares and fatigue.

Bloch said a school environment of threats, assaults, murder, rape, theft, arson, vandalism, bombings, destruction of equipment, fights, teenage gangs, knives, stiletos and guns creates an explosive situation.

Teachers assaulted or threatened with violence exhibit physical and psychological symptoms similar to symptoms shown by survivors of wartime disasters and sufferers of "combat neurosis," he said. Short of resignation, teachers lack even the alternative eventually available to soldiers in a combat area — rotation to a nonstressful place for rest and recuperation, he wrote.

During the last year of Bloch's study, the NEA, the nation's largest teacher organization, estimates 63,000 classroom teachers were physically attacked by students.

Rhodesia Should Be Seen On TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a one-hour display of kamikaze programming, CBS tonight airs a news special on Rhodesia and the guerrilla war there. ABC, in the same hour, displays the big Oscar awards show of Hollywood.

Millions will see the Oscar caper. But I suspect the number of viewers who'll see CBS' "Who's Got a Right to Rhodesia" could hold a mass rally on the tip of a ratings point. Which is a pity.

The show, written and reported by Irv Drasin, isn't all that good. It leaves a lot to be desired. But it should be seen.

It's valuable in that it recaps at length a major story that too often zips on and off newscasts and newspapers like a pesky mosquito on a summer night.

As reporter Drasin says at show's start, the report "is about a new Africa — and an old struggle," the fight by Rhodesian black nationalists to free the nation from its rule by the white minority.

If you see the show's early scenes of troops, military helicopters, door gunners, all ready for a firefight, you may do a Vietnam flash, wonder if and how soon we'll be in another war that started small.

Drasin notes of Rhodesia's troubles: "Inevitably, Americans must face the hard decisions that no longer can be ignored — decisions, both political and moral, about war and racial injustice."

But having said that, he doesn't get down to the nitty-gritty, namely under what circumstances might the United States get involved in Rhodesia's war, directly or indirectly.

Instead, he retells in narrative and interviews the tale of modern Rhodesia, a nation of six million blacks and 275,000 whites, a nation of long and enduring racial discrimination by whites in power.

We see familiar sights of determined whites grimly vowing to stay, to fight when necessary, to maintain the paternalistic status quo, the only white voices of conscience being a lawyer who is leaving Rhodesia and a Catholic bishop later accused of aiding terrorists.

On the black side, we see the poor housing, hear from the victims of discrimination, see the "Europeans only" signs and are constantly reminded of what Drasin calls "The bewildering network of laws that control his (the African's) life and his livelihood."

Black nationalist leaders declare their goal is to free their people from white rule. Prime Minister Ian Smith insists the issue in Rhodesia is communism.

Scant attention is given military logistics, such as whether Russia supplies the guerrillas with weapons. Or where Rhodesian troops got their combat wares, even though Drasin points out:

Tonight's program is too simplistic, doesn't show how Rhodesia's troubles could affect America's interests. But it's a fair primer that'll start many thinking and reading more seriously about the whys of that back-page war in a front-page country.

Tattoo Shows His Gratitude

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Some would do it with a thank-you note, but Marty VanNostran has expressed his gratitude to his employer by tattooing an advertisement for the business across his back.

VanNostran, 27, explained, "This is a kind of an advertisement because I owe an awful lot to Ron (Sherrill)," who owns R & R Cycle and Salvage here.

"He's teaching me the business and I've learned a lot from him. I want to see the shop do well," VanNostran said.

It took four hours and $175 — paid by Sherrill — to have a set of Harley-Davidson motorcycle wings and the names of the shop and city tattooed on VanNostran, a salesman at R & R Cycle for the last six months and a motorcycle buff for most of his life.

The tattoo joins six others, including his first, a colorful snake wrapped around a skull with a dagger through it.

Birthday For 4 In Family Today

GREENVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Pass out the favors and stand back. The Joneses are having a birthday party today.

Four of the 11 Jones kids, Tommy, Danny, David and Maureen, were born on March 28 — in 1961, 1962, 1966 and 1972.

"If we'd insured against this happening, we'd be rich today," said Mary Jones.

The odds against four such coincidental births are six million to one, according to an estimate by Carnegie-Mellon University statisticians.

Mrs. Jones, who spent three hours last week baking birthday cakes and another three cleaning up the kitchen, insists it was all an accident that four children were born on March 28th.

But her husband, Thomas, a radiologist at Greenville Hospital, says the U.S. Army may have had something to do with it.

He was sent to Korea six weeks after their marriage, and she was pregnant when he left. Fifteen months later, he came home on leave, and she was pregnant again when his leave ended.

Posthumous Oscar One Of Tonight's Questions

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's that time of year again, when nominees for the film industry's highest award wait to see which among them will be called to the stage to be handed a slim gold statuette named Oscar.

The ceremony at the Music Center, for those who in the judgment of their peers contributed the most to the motion picture screen, will be telecast nationally tonight by ABC.

One question was whether the late Peter Finch would be honored for his performance in "Network," the first such posthumous award in the Academy's 49 years.

The "best actor" statuette could also go to Sylvester Stallone, writer and star of the story of a Philadelphia boxer.

At curtain time, Stallone and "Rocky" seemed to be the favorites for the big prizes.

Regardless, it didn't appear that the acting Oscar would be spurred as it was in recent years by George C. Scott and Marlon Brando.

All of the living nominees were to be present except the ailing Laurence Olivier. Even publicity-shy Robert DeNiro, nominated as best actor for "Taxi Driver," agreed to attend.

Producer William Friedkin ("The Exorcist") has promised to keep the show moving. The only production number scheduled features Ann-Margret performing a new song, "Magic Circle," at the beginning and

Nominated for best picture were "All The President's Men," "Bound for Glory," "Network," "Rocky" and "Taxi Driver."

Besides Stallone, DeNiro and Finch, best-actor nominees are William Holden in "Network," and Giancarlo Giannini in "Seven Beauties."

The candidates for best actress: Marie-Christine Barrault, "Cousin Cousine"; Faye Dunaway, "Network"; Talia Shire, "Rocky"; Sissy Spacek, "Carrie," and Liv Ullmann, "Face to Face."

Red Skelton was picked to introduce a brief film celebrating 50 years of sound movies, and film clips outlining the career of Pandro S. Berman, winner of the Irving Thalberg award.

Although not nominated for best-actress honors, Barbra Streisand is appearing to perform "Evergreen, Love Theme from 'A Star Is Born.'" Other musical performers of nominated songs are Ben Vereen, Tom Jones, Eddie Albert and Lea Vivante.

ABC is telecasting the ceremonies beginning at 10 p.m. EST. Running time of 2½ hours could be extended by lengthy acceptance speeches.

A.—This is a perfect hand for a preemptive raise to four spades. You have little defense but great offensive potential, and your hand is much too weak for a jump raise to the three-level.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ ♥A8762 ♦A ♣Q952

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. You have excellent reason to suppose that the opponents are out of their depth. However, if you double, partner will read it for takeout rather than for penalties, and in all likelihood, he will remove to four hearts. Now you will be out on a limb. Don't change a sure plus score for an almost certain minus.

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1♦ Dbl. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your trump holding is not good enough to convert partner's takeout double to penalties. However, you have a bid available which will describe a hand of some value with a stopper in the enemy's suit, and one no trump fits the bill perfectly.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1♦ Pass 1♥ Pass 1♣ Pass 4♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Since a bid of three hearts would have been a slam invitation in this situation, partner must have a long, solid heart suit and at least one outside card to jump all the way to four hearts. Your three aces make slam virtually certain, and a grand slam is possible. However, you are not the one to take charge. Cue-bid your ace of clubs now, and let partner fix the final contract.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K873 ♥K752 ♣932 ♠6
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—One diamond. Though this is the weakest of your three suits, it is the most strategic bid to make. There is no reason why you should be declarer at a major suit contract. By responding in diamonds, you allow partner to conveniently introduce a major suit at the one-level, should he have four cards in either hearts or spades.

The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1♥ 1♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—It is close between pass and a bid of one no trump. Since your K J behind the overcaller in his long suit can be promoted somewhat, we favor an immediate bid of one no trump.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10872 ♥9654 ♣92 ♠A6
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—One diamond. We would not fault you greatly if you responded one heart, but we try to avoid responding in shabby suits. By choosing to tell a white lie about our diamond suit, we are perfectly placed to handle any rebid by partner.

'Darter' Halts A Second Dam

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Score another one for the darter fish family.

The three-inch leopard darter fish, a relative of the rare three-inch snail darter which stopped work on a multi-million dollar Tennessee dam, is halting construction of the proposed $31.5 million Lukfata Dam on the Glover River.

The leopard darter looks like a minnow and is said to be an endangered species. The Tulsa office of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said the project in McCurtain County is under review because completing a dam would have an "adverse impact on the leopard darter and its habitat and would adversely impact upland wildlife habitat, wetlands and fisheries without providing compensating net benefits."

"The leopard darter is found only in the Little River system, of which Glover Creek is a tributary," a corps official said.

The corps has spent about $2 million so far on preparation for construction of the dam.

The dam was supposed to have started in 1971, but it became necessary for the corps to restudy and reassess all aspects of the project with the passage of the National Environmental Protection Act.

The leopard darter's relative in Tennessee halted work on the $116 million Tellico Dam, more than 95 per cent completed. The dam on the Little Tennessee River remains at a standstill following a January court ruling that the snail darter had to be protected. The Tennessee Valley Authority plans to appeal the ruling.

In keeping with the manner of the snail darter — and now the leopard darter — one dead clam described as the size of a squash tennis ball forced a temporary halt Thursday to a dredging project on the Minnesota River.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers shut down its $281,335 project at Savage, Minn., after a half shell found at the site was tentatively identified as "lampsilis higginsii," an endangered species of clam.

The corps were to resume dredging Friday after divers turned up no other evidence of the endangered clams, commonly known as "Higgins Eye."

Like the snail darter, the clam has no commercial value.

X-Rated, But Dial-A-Movie

DALLAS (AP) — In the age of Dial-A-Prayer and Dial-A-Joke, we now have Dial-A-Movie — and not just any old movie.

An ad in a Dallas newspaper says you can order an X-rated film and projectionist to come to your home and provide the entertainment.

For $30, the male or female projectionist will just show the film for you. For $40 she, or he will do the deed topless. And for $50, you get a completely naked projectionist.

Stan Channell of the city attorney's office says he can't come up with an ordinance to prevent the enterprise.

"The closest we could come to it is the ordinance preventing the showing of a pornographic movie within 1,000 feet of a church, school or residence," Channell said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost more ground today, extending the decline that began a week and a half ago.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, off 39.14 in the last seven sessions, dropped another 2.08 to 926.78 in the first half hour today.
 Losers outpaced gainers by about a 4-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's weakness since mid-March has been blamed primarily on concern over the outlook for inflation and interest rates.
 Brokers have also noted uneasiness over the prospective impact of the energy plan President Carter is slated to propose on April 20.

Generally gloomy expectations for first-quarter earnings reports were accentuated Friday when Bethlehem Steel said it expected to show a loss for the quarter.
 Bethlehem Steel shares dropped 3/8 to 36 1/4 after a delayed opening today.
 Other steel issues were mixed, with U.S. Steel up 1/8 to 46 while Armco eased 1/8 to 28 1/2.

Frank B. Hall led the active list, down 1/4 at 17 1/4. A 119,700-share block of the insurance firm's stock traded at that price.
 Federal Resources, the early American Stock Exchange volume leader, gained 1/8 to 6 1/4.

Court To Hear Nixon's Appeal

By RICHARD CARELLI
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to hear former President Richard

M. Nixon's arguments against release of 30 White House tape recordings played during the Watergate cover-up trial of his top advisers.
 Nixon's appeal asked the court to overturn a decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington that the tapes "are no longer confidential" and that copies may be released to the public.

The ex-president's arguments in the lower court lost out to those of the three television networks, public television, a news directors' association and a recording company which want the tapes made available.
 In a 2-1 decision last October, the circuit court rejected Nixon's arguments that the tapes' release would invade his privacy and prove embarrassing to him.
 "The embarrassment Mr. Nixon fears is not republication of highly personal matters," the court said.

The tapes, transcripts of which were highly publicized during the Watergate trial of John Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, Robert Mardian and Kenneth Parkin-son, are of conversations within the White House Oval Office.

If released, the tapes would let the public hear for the first time the voices of Nixon and the Watergate figures discussing the scandal — the tones and inflections of voice used by each man.

Filing suit last year to have the tapes released were Warner Communications, National Broadcasting Co., American Broadcasting Co., CBS, the Public Broadcasting Service and the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

Warner indicated the desire to reproduce the tapes as phonograph records and cassettes.

Three requests for solicitation permits and one to block off a street for a picnic were approved by City Manager Jim Caldwell.

Approval was given to requests by Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Society for permission to sell doughnuts door-to-door on May 4 to raise funds for a scholarship.

St. James Junior High MYF for permission to conduct a walk-a-thon on March 26 to raise funds for needy families and an orphan fund.

Cub Scout Pack 33 of Wahl-Coates Elementary School for permission to sell first aid kits door-to-door on April 23; and by the Residents of Stratford Subdivision for permission to block off Avon Lane, from Sulgrave Road to Canterbury Road, on May 14 from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. for a neighborhood picnic.

Turkey Caller

EDGEFIELD, S.C. (AP) — Bill O'Daniel of Carlisle, who says he shot three turkeys himself last year and called out two more for friends, is the state champ turkey caller.

O'Daniel won the eighth annual competition, sponsored by the Edgefield County Game and Fish association, Saturday.

O'Daniel has been calling just a year and says the secret of his success is practice and more practice, plus learning a "good quality" call. He noted he intends to get his limit in the field this year, too.

Mark Simpson of Laurens won the youth division and Lewis Stowe of Gastonia, N.C., the open championship.

Participants included riders from Great Britain, Sweden, the Canadian Olympic team, state and national champions and riders from Massachusetts to Georgia.

Winners in the various categories were:
 Novice race (eight kilometers): Dan Starr of the Greenville All-Stars;
 Junior division (40 kilometers): Billy Pearlman of the Hearts Club, Chapel Hill;

Women's race (20 kilometers): Kathleen Craig of the Tidewater Bike Association;
 Veterans race (20 kilometers, entrants over the age of 39): Bobby Sloop of Wilson;

Senior 3 and 4 class (40 kilometers): Ray Barbehenn of the National Capital Belo Club, Washington, D.C.; and Senior 1 and 2 class (75 kilometers): Bobby Phillips of the Raleigh team, Washington, D.C.

The event was sanctioned by the U.S. Cyclists Federation and was sponsored by Miller Brewing Co., local merchants and the Greenville Jaycees. Almost $2,000 in prize money was awarded.

Public Hearing At Winterville
 WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board will hold a public hearing Monday at 7 p.m. at the town hall to consider reestablishing the Board of Adjustments.
 The public hearing will be held to consider an amendment to Article 10, Section I on the town's ordinances to reestablish the Board of Adjustments as five members instead of the present 10 members.
 The Friday, March 25 edition of The Daily Reflector incorrectly reported that the public hearing would concern the location of funeral homes in residential areas.

A BETTER BUY
 Sure mortgage interest rates are higher than they were, but so are the market values of homes and land. Please believe me when I say that even at today's inflated prices and interest rates, real estate is a better buy than anything else you can go after with borrowed dollars.
 Financing for other purchases often costs twice as much — and these things depreciate while a house usually grows in value. Check the trade-in value of your car when you turn it in for a new one. Also for the past ten years, real estate values have doubled the increase in the Dow Jones average.

In this sense, real estate is the most worth-while investment you can make, and your best protection against inflation. And don't forget the priceless dividends your family will enjoy as you live in your growing investment.
