

Vance Hopeful 'Eventual' SALT Accord Is Ahead

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance started home from Moscow today expressing hope for an agreement eventually to reduce the Soviet and American nuclear arsenals despite his failure to get negotiations started during his visit to the Soviet capital.

Vance flew to Bonn to confer with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and brief him on his fruitless five-day attempt to break the deadlock over a new Strategic Arms Limitations Treaty (SALT). He was spending the night in London and visiting Paris Friday for similar talks with British and French officials.

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev on Wednesday rejected two alternative American proposals, but Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko agreed to meet again in May.

"In my judgment this has been a useful visit," Vance told reporters at the Moscow airport. "Our objective was not a simple one. Reaching agreement on arms control measures can't be accomplished overnight."

"In the meantime, I'm sure that both sides will study the matter which we discussed and will find that their objectives are similar."

More failure awaited Vance in Bonn, where West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on Wednesday night rejected the Carter administration's urging that it modify its nuclear deal with Brazil and do more to stimulate the West German economy as an aid to international economic recovery.

Schmidt told a news conference West Germany's sale of a $4.8-billion nuclear installation to Brazil would be "one of the most important topics" in his talks with Vance. He reaffirmed his determination not to bow to the U.S. demand that the sale of a reprocessing plant that could make fuel for nuclear weapons be excluded from the deal.

"The American government has known since last year...that we are determined to abide by contractual agreements," Schmidt said.

Schmidt also reiterated that West Germany has done its share to spur international economic recovery, despite insistence by President Carter's advisers that it and Japan can do more.

President Carter told reporters in Washington he would consider a step-up in U.S. weapons development if the Soviets do not negotiate "in good faith" when Vance and Gromyko meet in May.

Vance proposed negotiations on one of two treaties:

—An interim pact putting into effect the numerical limit of 2,400 long-range missiles and bombers for each country agreed to by President Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok in 1974 but deferring negotiations for controls on the American cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

—A comprehensive treaty to reduce the number of missiles and bombers substantially below Vladivostok levels, cut the total of multiple warheads, ban the development and deployment of new strategic weapons and the means of delivering them and restrict the use of the cruise missile and the Backfire bomber.

Marijuana Law Study Findings Denied To Be Sympathetic In Nature

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report released today by the National Governors Conference says decriminalizing marijuana does not promote its use, but a sponsor of the project, New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, said the results could be read either way.

"I would probably read it in my state as sympathetic to decriminalization," Byrne said at a news conference. "But there are those who could see it the other way."

Byrne said that while the study, financed by an $85,000 federal grant, showed that as a general trend removing harsh penalties did not result in increased use of the drug, there were exceptions and the long-range findings are still incomplete.

Byrne, who as a member of the Governors Committee on Crime Reduction and Public Safety had requested the study, said the mood of the American people as well as elected officials is still opposed to marijuana in principle but appears to favor leniency at least in cases of first arrest for possessing small amounts.

The 375-page report, issued today by the National Governors Conference, also says states that have decriminalized marijuana possession have shown a "substantial" savings of tax dollars.

The report was prepared for the governors by the international accounting and consulting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., under a grant from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

It says reducing criminal penalties for pot possession does "not generally lead to an immediate increase in total marijuana use, although the long-term effect of penalty reductions are less clear."

The report said its findings on marijuana use in relation to penalty reductions "implies that harsh penalty structures do not in themselves deter personal possession and private use of the drug."

The study was based on a survey of previous data, visits to nine states in which a law decriminalizing marijuana possession has been enacted or attempted and on interviews with state officials, the governors association said.

"Statewide data were used when available," the report said. "When such data did not exist, local data and the subjective estimates of knowledgeable political, criminal justice and other officials were used. Care was taken to interview individuals with differing views on the issue."

Feel No Speed-Up In Weaponry Due

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior defense officials see no need for any drastic acceleration of U.S. weapons programs because of Russia's rejection of the Carter administration's nuclear arms limitation proposals.

However, the Kremlin's move could improve the controversial B1 bomber's chances of winning President Carter's approval for continued production.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, a member of Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty negotiating teams during the Nixon and Ford administrations, reportedly reacted with no surprise on learning of the negative Soviet response to the Carter administration's first formal arms control presentation.

Associates said Brown expects the Russians will come eventually to a new arms agreement with the United States on the basis of mutual benefit. Brown does not believe the human rights issue will stand in the way of such an ultimate accord, his associates said.

Brown's reaction to Wednesday's setback in Moscow seemed much milder than Carter's. The President said the United States will be looking for evidence of "good faith" when Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko meet in May.

"If we feel at the conclusion of next month's discussion that the Soviets are not acting in good faith with us, and that an agreement is unlikely, then I would be forced to consider a much more deep commitment to the development and deployment of additional weapons," Carter said.

Some Pentagon officials feel a continued Soviet hard line in SALT talks might impel the President to approve continued B1 production as a bargaining chip and as a hedge against possible failure of the arms limitation effort.

But Brown and other top defense officials are quick to believe there would be no need for any quick stepup in U.S. nuclear weapons programs to avoid a power imbalance. "Our programs are carefully constructed so we can adjust to developments," said one official. "We are in position to move ahead on weapons systems as needed."

Brown told Congress last month that "there is no reason for immediate or grave alarm about our ability to deter major military actions by the Soviet Union."

Some U.S. military chiefs have warned that the Russians could be in position to test the United States by 1981 or 1982, if growth in Soviet missiles and other military power continues unabated.

Brown reportedly feels the United States has a cushion of several years in which to act, if necessary, to overcome any potentially dangerous imbalance.

Sunset Law Supported

RALEIGH (AP) — Forty-six of the 50 members of the North Carolina Senate have signed a "Sunset" bill that would force more than 80 state agencies and regulatory bodies to prove their need for existence during the next six years.

Filed Wednesday by Sen. Willis Whichard, D-Durham, the bill is patterned after similar laws adopted last year by Colorado and Florida. Whichard said he expects the bill may be amended but will make it through the Senate in view of the number of co-sponsors.

ected by the bill deal largely with licensing and regulating businesses and professions. Among them are the regulators of architects, doctors, lawyers, veterinarians, barbers, salesmen, accountants, druggists, plumbers, house movers and others.

The bill specifies some to expire in 1979, some in 1981 and some in 1983. The law itself, Whichard said, would expire after six years.

An eight-member commission would be appointed to evaluate each program, report to the legislature and recommend further agencies for inclusion.

"For too long new government agencies have been created and their continued existence allowed without thorough evaluation on a periodic basis," Whichard said. "Sunset legislation provides for automatic termination of certain state agencies unless continued by the legislature."

Agencies and commissions affected by the bill picked up the immediate support of the North Carolina chapter of Common Cause, which pointed out that President Carter has supported the concept. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has also endorsed the concept.

Derailment

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-nine cars in a 102-car Seaboard Coast Line freight train derailed in an isolated wooded area just west of here this morning, spilling waste materials from a nuclear reactor, authorities said.

The spillage was contained in a small isolated area with no runoff into streams, Richmond County deputy Earl Dunn said preliminary reports indicated.

There were no injuries in the derailment, said R. L. Bullard, assistant vice president of Seaboard Coast Line in Jacksonville, Fla. However, a reporter who arrived at the scene later received burns on his hands from acid that was spilled by one of the cars, and was under sedation at Richmond County Memorial Hospital, said a spokesman for the Richmond County Daily Journal.

The derailment began with the thirtieth car at 7:21 a.m., Bullard said.

Bullard confirmed there was "some mildly radioactive material involved," and said specialists from Fort Bragg "were en route to take care of that."

The material, hexafluoride, was contained in two trailers on the train, Bullard said.

Another car caught on fire, but the Richmond County Fire Department had extinguished the blazes by 8 a.m., Dunn said.

Seaboard Coast Line officials are investigating the cause of the derailment and estimating the damages, Bullard said.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

SALE FOR PAPERBACKS

Is there any place in this area one can sell used paperback books?

We don't know of any place to sell paperbacks, other than in a flea market or yard sale situation. However, there is one store in town, the Book Trader at 1027 S. Evans Street, that specializes in, as the name implies, trading paperback books. The owner and operator, Ms. Mary Atkeson, said she "pays" 20 per cent of the original value of each book, which may be applied toward the cost of any other book in stock, each of which is "sold" at 60 per cent of the original cost. In other words, one may get one book for any three of equal value. If a customer does not wish to use all the credit he or she has, Mrs. Atkeson will give a credit slip, but will not give cash.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

DIRECT RESULT

Pitt County Extension Agent Addie Gore reports that the Extension Service has held and will hold a number of bread-making classes as "a direct result" of Hotline's item about the availability of bread-making courses in this area.

The "hands-in-the-dough" sessions are held for eight persons at a time. Sessions are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday of next week, from 9 a. m. to noon, but all places are filled, except for one in the Thursday class, Miss Gore said.

She said she has set aside the week of Apr. 18 to offer more classes—every morning, if necessary, and also at night if interest warrants it. Interested persons may call her at 758-1196.

Flew To Atlanta Game At Taxpayers' Expense

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and several state legislators were flown to Atlanta Monday at taxpayer expense to watch North Carolina teams play in the NCAA basketball games, according to Gary Pearce, the governor's news secretary.

The cost of the 2½-hour flying time was $625, Pearce said. Hunt also allowed other state officials to use the governor's plane at state expense to attend Saturday's games but did not go himself, Pearce said.

"That's just as legitimate a representation of the state — when you have two state teams playing in the national finals — as any other function," Pearce said.

Those who flew down Saturday were Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gaston.

Chancellor Dean Colvard of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, whose 49ers were in the NCAA finals along with the North Carolina Tar Heels, provided the game tickets Monday.

On Monday afternoon, Hunt and a group of state officials flew from Raleigh to Charlotte, picked up Colvard and his wife, and then went on to Atlanta.

The group returned Monday night after watching UNCC lose to Nevada-Las Vegas in the consolation game and North Carolina lose to Marquette in the championship game.

State Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten was in the group Monday along with state Rep. John T. Church, D-Vance; Rep. Robert L. Farmer, D-Wake; Rep. Edward S. Holmes, D-Chat-ham; Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg; Rep. William

Trudeau Spokesman Says Report Of Separation 'Highly Unlikely'

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — A television station's report that Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his wife, Margaret, have agreed to separate is "extremely unlikely," a spokesman for Trudeau's office said early today.

The prime minister's spokesman said if the report by Toronto station CFTO were true, "I'm sure I would know, and I don't know." He added that he was certain the office would have been advised if a separation was planned.

However, Trudeau's press secretary said he could not deny the report officially because he had not talked to the prime minister. Trudeau was reported at his official residence but unavailable for comment.

Unconfirmed reports said Mrs. Trudeau was in New York, but no official information on her whereabouts was available.

Mrs. Trudeau's parents, who live in Toronto, refused to comment.

Trudeau is 57, his wife is 28, and they have been married six years. They have three sons aged 5 and 3 years and 18 months.

There has been speculation that they were breaking up since she went to Toronto alone on their sixth wedding anniversary early this month, spent the weekend listening to the Rolling Stones rock group and then went to New York while Stones leader Mick Jagger and another member of the group were there.

Mrs. Trudeau denied she was having an affair with Jagger and insisted there were no problems with her marriage. Trudeau also denied that the marriage was in trouble but said his wife was canceling some public engagements to have more privacy.

Mrs. Trudeau said she was in New York to study photography and led a busy social life while there. She returned to Ottawa on March 12 and denied reports that she said she would live in Manhattan and commute to Ottawa. But she said she was going into photography seriously and would work occasionally in New York and "around the world."

Mrs. Trudeau underwent treatment for emotional stress at a Montreal hospital in September, 1974, and said later she needed to be away from household strains. She said then she longed for the day "when I will no longer be the prime minister's wife, when I can just be Pierre's wife."

OES Officers Installed In Friday Ceremonies

Officers for 1977-78 of Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of the Eastern Star, were installed Friday evening in ceremonies at the Masonic Temple.

Guests were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Hathaway, Mrs. Blanche Jackson and Mrs. Shirley Price. Mrs. Pattie Mizell and Mrs. Virginia Spencer presided at the guest register. Pages were Miss Sharon Briley, Miss Ann Clark and Robert Green.

The chapter room was decorated in the East with a pair of seven branch candelabra entwined with greenery and holding white candles. Arrangements of spring flowers, in yellow and white, with candles and greenery completed the setting.

Following the call to order by Worthy Patron A. E. Forrest, the program was opened by Mrs. Jean Riggan, Worthy Matron, presiding officer. Following the altar ceremony, Forrest led the Pledge of Allegiance and the national anthem was sung.

Distinguished guests introduced were: Mrs. Glenn Whitfield Garner, Associate Grand Matron; Mrs. Mamie Dodd Jackson, Grand Representative to Oregon; and Mrs. Nita Hooker, District Deputy Grand Matron of the Seventh District. Mrs. Riggan recognized other guests and extended a welcome to all members and visitors.

Following the farewell addresses of the outgoing Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron, Mrs. Garner was recognized as installing officer. Assisting her in the ceremony were: Mrs. Pauline O'Neal Mooney, Past Matron, Installing Marshal; Rev. Adrian Brown, Installing Chaplain; and Mrs. Corabob Turnage, Past Matron, installing organist.

New officers include: Worthy Matron, Mrs. Mayo James Rogers; Worthy Patron, Charles Ledbetter; Associate Matron, Mrs. Sarah Hodges Caprell; Associate Patron, Arbie Dean Taylor; Secretary, Miss Alya Ray Taylor; Treasurer, Mrs. Shirley Price; Conductress, Mrs. Irene Ledbetter; Associate Conductress, Mrs. Mildred Prebish; Marshal, Mrs. Grace Hill; Organist, Mrs. Marguerite Cook; Adah, Mrs. Blanche Jackson; Ruth, Mrs. Sheri Strickland; Esther, Mrs. Mary Freeland; Martha, Mrs. Lillian Hendrix; Electa, Mrs. Olivera Garris; Warder, Mrs. Ellen Bostick; and Sentinel, Jerome Bostick.

NEW OFFICERS. . . of Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of Eastern Star, are Mrs. Mayo James Rogers and Charles Ledbetter.

Acceptance addresses were made by the new Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron. Mrs. Rogers and Ledbetter then introduced their families and special guests. Mrs. Rogers introduced her mother, Mrs. Alice M. James, her sister, Mrs. Alice J. Teel, her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tripp of Tarboro, her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton James, of Richmond, Va. and Ledbetter introduced his wife, Irene, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Duff.

Following the introductions, past officers' jewels were presented to Mrs. Riggan and Forrest in recognition of their year of service.

The new Worthy Matron was presented a gavel for her use during the year by her sister, Alice, after which was presented red roses by her mother.

The new Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron were honored by a program presented by their officers and Junior Past Matron. Mrs. Rogers and Ledbetter were then paid tribute in song by Mrs. Elizabeth Adams, Mrs. Frances Glissen, Richard Glissen and Willie Briley, who sang "Precious Memories" and "Each Step I Take." They were accompanied by Mrs. Ginger Briley.

Following prayer by the Rev. Brown, a reception was held in the Sugg-Whichard dining room. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Lillian Hendrix, Mrs. Ethel Allen, Mrs. Sarah Caprell, Mrs. Ruth Harris, Mrs. Grace Hill, Mrs. Eufice Tetterton and Mrs. Mary Lucy Taylor.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth centered with an arrangement of yellow and white mums flanked by silver candelabra and white candles.

Good-byes were said by the Rev. and Mrs. Brown.

Approximately 150 were present for the ceremony.

Mrs. Jean Tharp will be installed as chaplain at a later date.

Let Your Fireman Rescue Himself

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and John (not his real name) is 29. We've been dating steadily for two years.

John is a fireman paramedic, which brings me to my problem. About three months ago John's squad responded to a car accident in which a very pretty 26-year-old blonde was slightly injured. (I'll call her Nancy.) Nancy wasn't seriously hurt, but she was hospitalized for 24 hours and then released. John happened to be the paramedic who treated her at the scene of the accident, and since then Nancy can't do enough to repay him for "saving her life."

She found out his name and station and wrote him a thank you letter, which I thought was very nice. But she didn't stop there. She's been dropping in to visit him at the station, bringing little gifts. She even baked him a birthday cake!

I think she's carrying her gratitude a little too far, don't you? John says he has no interest in her, but he can't stop her from coming to the station and bringing him gifts, and he doesn't want to be rude or hurt her feelings.

How would you handle something like this, Abby? Should I talk to Nancy and ask her to please lay off my guy?

IN LOVE AND INSECURE

DEAR IN: No. He's not "your" guy. (Nobody owns anybody else.) If John wants to discourage Nancy's visits and gifts, he'll find a way. Let him handle it.

DEAR ABBY: Our first child died shortly before his second birthday. In offering condolences some of our friends said, "You'll have another one." Or, "It's all for the best." Or, "It was a blessing."

In behalf of all of us who have lost children, I have this message:

We will never again see that child who was with us for such a brief time. He wasn't just "a baby." He was an individual—entirely different from any other child we may have in the future.

If my husband were to die, I doubt that anyone would say, "You'll have another one."

Abby, please tell those well-meaning people who want to say something comforting to parents who have lost a child to just say, "I'm sorry."

I hope you find this letter worthy of space in your column.

A MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I do. And thanks for setting many of us straight.

South Carolina has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Greg Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Callie Stocks spent the weekend in Virginia.

Amateur Chefs Hold Cook-In

By ROBERT MUSEL
MOUGINS, France (UPI) — One day a French chef looked up from his cooking to see a friendly fellow with a bushy mustache and bright, quizzical eyes staring at him. Behind him was a tall, good-looking chap, also alert and curious and sniffing with delight the Provencal cuisine of the French Riviera.

So began the gastronomic saga of four American amateur chefs who have now achieved what must be the dream of all those for whom cooking is a hobby and pleasure: one night a year they take over the kitchen of one of France's great three-star restaurants, the Moulin de Mougins.

To work in the sanctum of as celebrated a chef as Roger Verge is an event in itself. To actually cook a meal for which customers will pay $45 a head without wine is vouchsafed to few if any non-professionals — or few professionals.

The most recent annual cook-in was attended by friends and associates of the four Americans and an assortment of well-heeled tourists in this hill village above Cannes where Verge has converted an old oil-press mill into one of southern France's most attractive and famous restaurants.

They were greeted by four figures in tall chefs' hats and white aprons:

"We believe in making friends with our customers," said George Greif of Los Angeles, the poultry specialist of the team. Most of the diners had come from MIDEEM, the world pop music fair in Cannes. Greif is the discoverer of Jose Feliciano and others.

Ray Harris, executive vice-president of American Variety International of Los Angeles, the soup specialist, told newcomers that his contribution, "La Petite Soupe de St. Jacques a la facon de Ray Harris" (soup containing scallops), was even then simmering on the stove.

Bob Krasnow of Warner Brothers Records in Los Angeles said his fish creation would be a "delicious surprise."

Albert Grossman of New York, former manager of Bob Dylan and other pop stars, said he had two dessert-type items on the menu.

Harris, spokesman for the quartet, said their tradition began nearly a decade ago when he and Greif decided to stay at Moulin rather than Cannes during MIDEEM. Verge began to teach them how to improve the dishes they obviously liked doing best, poultry for Greif, soup for Harris.

"Naturally we couldn't pick up the whole range of French cooking in the limited time we had," Harris said, "but we came back at every opportunity and we improved all the time and (there) came a terrific moment when we had our names on dishes on the menu. About five years ago, we asked if we could do a meal ourselves for our friends, if for no one else, and Verge agreed.

Since the pop music industry always looks for angles, one frequent suggestion for the remarkable freedom given the Americans is that they might have helped Verge over early financial hurdles. But Seymour Heller, president of American Variety International, says he knows Harris has not invested anything but friendship.

There were no complaints about the food, although one New Yorker said he thought $200 for three people would have been steep even if Verge himself had been on duty.

The menu consisted of Harris's soup and le soufflé d'ecrevisse avec son coulis a la fine champagne (crayfish soufflé with champagne sauce);

Krasnow's le sorbet au vermouth et aux pamplemousses grapefruit juice ice with vermouth) and la volaille de l'allier en papillote, chicken in the style of the Allier district near Vichy;

Greif's le biscuit glace aux mandarines de Nice et de la vodka (ice cream over ladyfingers with tangerine and vodka sauce);

And Grossman's les goursmandises du moulin (petit fours).

Spectacular Toll Near-Certain

The possibility of an aerial disaster involving one of the "jumbo" 747 jets has been one of those nightmares poised over the airline industry ever since the sky giants were introduced. There never really was a question of the plane's safety; it has a most remarkable record in that respect. And, objectively speaking, it is only mildly blemished by the weekend's tragic accident. The big concern was that something happened, the factor of passenger loads (numbering in the hundreds) almost assured a terrible casualty list.

Well, it finally happened. And irony of ironies, the accident did not occur in flight, but on the ground in a collision of two of the sky giants. We hope the disaster in no way diminishes the confidence and use of the 747. The jumbo is still a safe, comfortable and very economical means of transportation for public travel to distant points. Still, the same cloud inevitably must hang over this great transportation symbol: when accidents do occur, the toll is apt to be spectacular simply because so many people are involved.

Might Hike The Price Of Smaller Cars

President Carter promises tough policies for energy conservation. Reportedly one of his proposals will be a stiff excise tax on autos which are heavy users of gasoline. Potentially the big cars could cost up to $1,000 more which in theory would cause auto shoppers to consider smaller models. One wonders though, if the competitive system works, won't we see the price of smaller cars take a corresponding rise? Possibly an excise tax on gasoline might better answer to the problem.

THIS AFTERNOON

Those Tax Breaks 'Fixed'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Fewer and fewer Tar Heel senior citizens are taking advantage of the homestead exemption on local property taxes. The reason is clear: for the past three sessions, the General Assembly has fiddled with the system—changing income levels and definitions; shifting the amount of property covered; changing the method of applying for the special relief. The result has been a steady drop in numbers of elderly who can qualify—or can figure out how to qualify. No statewide figures are available, but those close to the operation are satisfied that a couple of examples are indicative of the situation generally. In Mecklenburg County there were 10,500 elderly who qualified in 1973, and only 5,800 in 1975. In Wake County, the qualified dropped from 4,600 in 1974 to 4,000 in 1976.

for the exemption every year rather than just once and letting it run: —Application methods vary from county to county; simple forms in some, difficult in others; —The exemption is too low ($5,000 worth of real estate) in these times of inflation, and revaluation of property has pushed almost any house to double its previous worth; —Income restrictions have changed frequently, and some get breaks while others didn't. Once, all income was counted except Social Security, Governmental Employee Pensions, and Railway Pensions, obviously penalizing those who didn't have such pensions. The object of a homestead exemption is to provide some relief to retired people from local property taxes, and a subcommittee of the House Finance Committee is attempting to repair the problems.

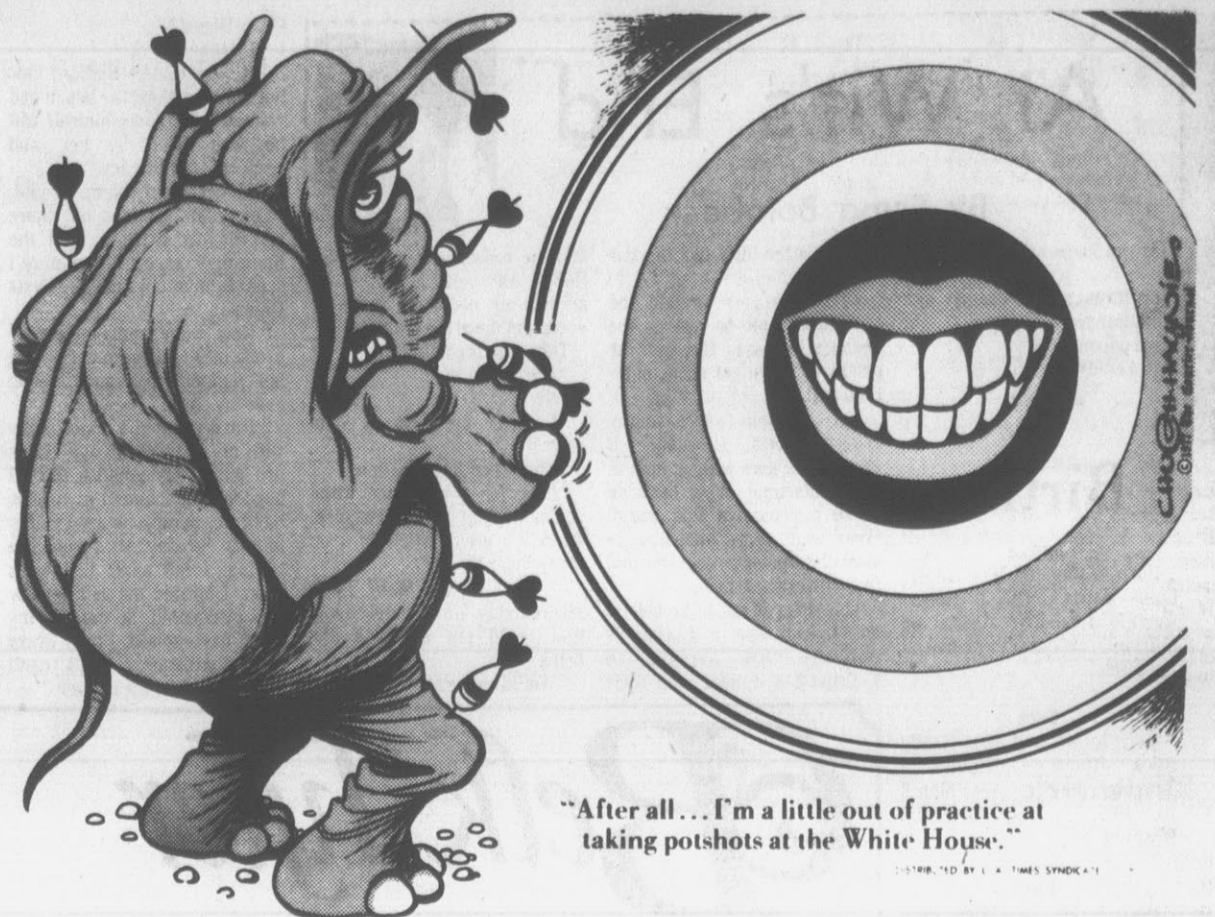

Lenoir County. Changes Set Lilley is chairman of the subcommittee which is pushing a measure to increase the amount of property covered, and the allowable income, and at the same time removing the various conflicts in definition of income. Upping the property exemption to $7,500 per year, and allowing $10,000 income regardless of source will cause local governments across the state to lose approximately $12.5 million each year. The present system is costing local governments about $7 million per year. There is some opposition to the change—as there has been to the present system all along. Larger counties don't object since the amount is small compared to overall tax activities. For smaller counties with largely rural populations and concentrated retirement settlements, the loss is considerable. Lilley, however, is convinced that the minor increase to help the elderly "will not result in a net loss to any of the counties. Increased property valuations will more than offset this." There is sentiment in the Legislature to sharply increase the homestead exemption to make it more realistic in today's real estate market. Study will begin later by a special legislative commission to propose some methods by which state funds can be used to offset the revenue loss to local governments in providing full relief from local property taxes to qualified elderly. The so-called "circuit-breaker" system is being tested in some states, whereby the low-income elderly do not pay property taxes as long as they live in the house. Taxes would be collected if the property is sold, or otherwise changes hands as at the death of the owner.

Justice Can Miscarry

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
Hard cases make bad law. The maxim is doubtless as old as the art of jurisprudence. It applied precisely last week in the case of Robert Anthony Williams, but the Supreme Court's bad law may not prove as bad as it looked at first glance. This was one more in a string of criminal cases that have come to be identified generically as "Miranda cases." They date from the June day in 1966 when Chief Justice Warren talked a bitterly divided court into a major extension of the rights of an accused person at the time of his arrest. The Court has remained bitterly divided on these issues ever since. The Miranda principle is sound. It derives from the protective provisions of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. No person may be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; and every accused person shall enjoy the right to have the assistance of counsel for his defense. As so often happens, the trouble arises in the application of these "due process" principles to particular cases. This was the difficulty in the matter of Robert Anthony Williams. Just before Christmas in 1968, he escaped from a Missouri mental institution and wound up at a YMCA in Des Moines. On Christmas Eve, Williams happened to see 10-year-old Pamela Powers, who had

Safety In The Belts

DETROIT (AP) — While the auto air bag vs. safety belt debate rages on in this country, surveys on mandatory belt use laws in Europe show the measures are meeting success in improving traffic safety. Preliminary findings on laws in seven nations show an increase in the number of motorists' buckling up — when police bother to enforce the law — and a decline in fatalities and serious injuries. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said today failure to reorganize the Supreme Court would allow the nation to drift again into economic depression. Wallace, speaking at an Augusta cattle show, urged Southern support for President Roosevelt's court program, describing it as a means of controlling the nation's course "before it is too late." He mentioned the court proposal late in his address, leading up to it with a discussion of general steps looking to continued improvement of Southern agriculture — better farming methods, maintenance of world markets, soil conservation and forest management. These steps, he said, are endangered by barriers which the courts have placed in the path of the President's social and economic reforms.

Reports that General Francisco Franco had imported 1,000 Italian colonial troops to stamp out revolt in Spanish Morocco, cradle of his rebellion against the government of Spain, fanned today the international fire started by the bloody civil war more than eight months ago. Simultaneously Great Britain and France joined in this flat warning to Franco: "Keep your hands off our ships." Barbara Mathews

THE INSIDE REPORT

Why A Rebate May Lose

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Despite his soaring popularity, Jimmy Carter today would be rebuffed in a vote by the Democratic Senate on his top priority $50 tax rebate scheme, with powerful Democratic Senators standing aside, hands in their pockets and blandness on their faces. Such a defeat might instruct the White House that a President's popularity in the country is not always manifest on Capitol Hill. Influential Democratic Senators feel the administration has bungled the economic stimulation bill containing the tax rebate. Angry over President Carter's crusade against water projects, these Senators are not enthusiastic about saving the mishandled rebate for him. This points to the diametrically opposed view of the world from opposite ends of Pennsylvania Avenue. The Carter inner circle believes Congress cannot obstruct a President with such phenomenal popularity. But grizzled Senate Democratic grandees believe Mr. Carter is hardly more popular at this honeymoon stage than were John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, all of whom quickly returned to earth. Viewing Jimmy Carter as just another President tips the balance of Senate arithmetic on the $50-for-everybody tax rebate. All 38 Republican Senators plus independent Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia are expected to vote against the rebate. To muster enough party-line support to win, Mr. Carter needs muscle from two key Democrats: Russell B. Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Senate majority leader. Their muscle will not be employed unless the White House changes their present attitudes. As of now, majority leader Byrd plans no major effort for the rebate; finance chairman Long plans no arm twisting. "And I think Russell would be twisting arms if he were happier about the way things are going," a Senate insider told us. That is shorthand for Long's displeasure that five water projects suspended in Mr. Carter's budget-cutting campaign are in Long's own state of Louisiana. While Bob Byrd has gotten mad about the President's shutting off the Senate's pet water projects, Russell Long has kept quiet — but means to get even. Even without the added burden of senatorial resentment over the suspended water projects, the tax rebate would be in trouble. The administration erred strategically when it did not fight the House action deleting incentives for business investment from the economic stimulation bill. Without the sweeteners, the bill has a sour taste for business. Furthermore, in its egalitarian fervor, the House barred the $50 rebate for taxpayers making more than $30,000 a year — a change that has not helped the measure in the Senate. "You have to remember," a senior Democratic Senator told us,

"that most Senators don't see or talk to anybody eligible for the rebate." Finally, as business indicators have improved and inflation is replacing unemployment as the chief economic headache, overall congressional interest in economic stimulation has declined. The lack of intensity is reflected in the super-deliberate speed of the Senate which may delay passage of a bill until after the Easter recess. Engrossed in its spectacularly successful campaign to keep up the President's popularity, the White House was unaware of the rebate's gradual fizzle until the eleventh hour. On the day before his committee voted, Long telephoned the White House to inform the President he had better get to lobbying Democratic Senators. Mr. Carter responded with personal calls to all Finance Committee Democrats. The rebate passed 10 to 8; it would not have otherwise. But why would Long save the President on the March 17 committee vote and then a week later decide to twist no arms? During 28 years in the Senate, Long has become an intriguing, skillful but inscrutable figure. Although nobody is sure exactly what

Other Editors Say Dubious Data

(Greensboro Daily News)
HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is off to a fast start in the health care field. He has already pledged, among other things, to track down fraud in government health care programs and put a lid on spiraling medical costs. Those initiatives are welcome, but the recent release of some HEW statistics concerning doctors' incomes from Medicare suggests HEW may be getting ahead of itself. Last week HEW released figures showing that a total of 1,752 medical groups, 409 individual physicians and 588 laboratories around the country received more than $100,000 apiece from federal Medicare funds in 1975. The list was released to conform to the new Freedom of Information law approved last year — on grounds that the public has a right to know where its tax dollars for health care are going. That principle is unarguable. So is the documented fact that abuse of the federal Medicare and Medicaid programs is a serious problem — both among recipients and, to a lesser extent, in the medical profession. However, the implication of the unadulterated HEW figures is that literally hundreds of doctors and thousands of clinics around the country are getting unconscionably rich off disabled and elderly people. A closer look at the facts, at least in many cases, suggests otherwise. In some instances, figures attributed to individual doctors actually applied to group practices or to whole hospital departments. In other instances, the figures were simply wrong — such as the $22 million figure applied to a Mayo-operated clinic in Minnesota which had total revenues of less than $1 million in 1975. The HEW statistics — and the wire service stories accompanying them — also left out other vital information. For example, some clinics specialize in diseases of the elderly — a phenomenon we assume should be welcomed in this day of elderly neglect. Obviously the totals for these groups are going to be higher. Also, the HEW statistics failed to note that by no means all of the Medicare money goes into doctors' salaries; some of it covers overhead and expenses. In response to complaints from all over the country, HEW has conceded the possibility of error and has promised to release a revised and clarified report. We agree with Secretary Califano that closer attention ought to be paid to the uses — and abuses — of federal tax dollars in the health care field. But that means getting the facts straight first. Compensation Is By Employers

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — So often you hear a worker rationalize his acceptance of unemployment compensation. "I paid into the pot and now I'm only taking my fair share," he says. Employers often agree. But it isn't so. In only two states, Alabama and New Jersey, do workers contribute. Almost the entire amount of payments, which rose to a rate of nearly $20 billion a year in the recession, comes from one source: employers. Oddly, many employers are unaware of the expense to them, even though it can be substantial. In all states the employer pays into the fund a percentage of the first $4,200 earned by each worker. The minimum is 3.4 per cent. At that rate, a company with 2,000 workers would have a taxable payroll of $8.4 million and an obligation to the unemployment compensation fund of more than $285,000. Next year the $4,200 base likely will rise to $6,000. Once a relatively minor cost for employers, unemployment taxes have gradually worked their way higher since the mid-1930s. An unemployed worker now can collect a total maximum benefit of $5,265 in Illinois, $6,318 in Massachusetts and $6,786 in Connecticut — and under a law passed by Congress late last year the numbers might go even higher. But, says Philip Kaplan, an authority, "If you ask a vice president-finance how much his company pays he would have to get hold of the controller or treasurer or the tax man." In most instances, he finds, the corporate executive thinks the amount involved is a nuisance sum. Many have the vague feeling that the workers contribute, as indeed did Gov. Ronald Reagan during his race for the Republican presidential nomination. Because of this attitude, he says, some companies deal carelessly with the situation. Simple measures, he maintains, could reduce costs for some companies from $270,000 to as little as $90,000. Kaplan's firm, Reed, Roberts Associates of Garden City, N.Y., claims to be the largest independent in the business of advising corporations and municipalities on unemployment compensation, with 7,000 clients around the country. Recently he told clients, among them companies such as Gulf & Western, Borden, Citibank and Allied Chemical, to reduce employment claims by avoiding outright layoffs. If business is bad, he advised, you can cut down the number of weekly work days or schedule shifts for two weeks on and two weeks off. "This will reduce payroll and maintain minimal unemployment tax liability. Yet, employees will be earning more than they would by collecting unemployment compensation," he explained. Challenge claims, he advises. In 37 states, employees fired for causes such as insubordination can collect benefits, but the payments are not chargeable to the former employer's account.

HEARING ONLY SQUEAKS AND KNOCKS
Many of us have driven with people who know so much about automobiles that they constantly listen for squeaks and knocks and voice doubts about the ability of the car to get us to our destination. But somehow we always do get there, much to the surprise of our mechanically well-informed friends. Many people go through life in the same way. To them life is a series of squeaks and knocks. They are highly sensitive to anything of an annoying nature which happens in their vicinity. They are the first to hear gossip and pass it on. They are sure that there is no such thing as statesmanship and that all politicians are crooks. To them the church is a weak and moribund institution full of hypocrites and led by a group of insufferable bigots. But somehow our human institutions, weak and imperfect as they are, help to get us through this life. And the church, weak and imperfect as it is, will help us gain life to come. —Elisha Douglass

In Switzerland, for example, where a belt law went into effect Jan. 1, 1976, usage is in the 87 to 95 per cent range, despite a fine for noncompliance of only $8. Preliminary reports indicate the death rate in the first seven months of 1976 fell 7 per cent from 1975.

A contrasting trend occurred in Finland, where surveys showed the vast majority of Finns buckled up when a belt use law first went into effect in the summer of 1975. But when motorists found out there was no fine for violating the law, belt usage began to slip dramatically. The country now is considering levying a fine for nonusage.

The results of mandatory laws in Switzerland, Finland and five other European nations — based on a variety of government and private surveys — have been compiled by researchers for the American Safety Belt Council, a trade association of belt manufacturers.

Council officials, admitting they have a built-in bias, said their group did not conduct the studies. They add that no definitive conclusions could be made on how many lives have been saved or injuries prevented because some data is still incomplete.

Oppose Him In Fisheries Post

NEW BERN (AP) — North Carolina commercial fishermen have lined up in opposition to the possible nomination of a state representative to be head of the state marine fisheries office.

The North Carolina Fisheries Association, the state's only commercial fishing industry trade organization, adopted a resolution Tuesday against Rep. Ronald Earl Mason, D-Carteret, who has lobbied for support of his appointment among state legislators and county commissioners in Care, Carteret and Onslow counties. Instead, the group which represents 1,000 fishermen, seafood dealers and industry workers, asked Gov. Jim Hunt to appoint Edward G. McCoy, a biologist who has held the $23,000 a year post since 1973.

Mason, a real estate broker, has claimed many fishermen are unhappy with McCoy and that the division needs new leadership.

In their resolution, the fisheries association said Mason was not qualified "by education, training or background" for the post, although his family is in the commercial fishing business.

"I think the governor is doing a disservice to Eastern North Carolina by not putting this thing to bed right now," said Norman B. Angel, association executive director.

Representatives of conservation groups and sport fishing organizations also have opposed the appointment of a politician.

McCoy's reappointment is being reviewed by Howard M. Lee, secretary of the state Department of Natural and Economic Resources and by the governor.

Rico have mandatory belt usage laws. Australia has the oldest, having put it on the books January 1972. The latest addition is Yugoslavia, as of Jan. 1 this year.

No state in this country has such a law, although the big automakers have endorsed it as a preferred alternative to a mandatory passive restraint system such as air bags — which inflate automatically to cushion occupants in front-end collisions.

The car companies say seat and shoulder belts cost less than air bags and provide as much protection for occupants as air bags — if the belts are used. But the auto insurance industry, the leading proponent of air bags, contends that a passive restraint system is needed because motorists won't "buckle up" on their own.

There have been several attempts by Washington to get people to use belts in the past 10 years, but none have met with great success and one was an outright failure.

Automakers were required to install warning buzzers and flashing lights that would go off when belts weren't buckled. But people either got around them, disconnected them or just ignored them.

Then the government tried a controversial interlock system on 1974-models which kept a car from starting until belts were buckled. The public raised so much fuss about that one, that Congress repealed the measure early in the 1975-model year.

Now, the government is in the midst of setting new regulations for occupant safety devices.

prejudicial misconduct that the conviction had to be reversed. In the majority's view, "the Christian burial speech" amounted to forbidden interrogation. The evidence should have been excluded. The Court gave Iowa authorities 60 days to decide on a retrial.

The decision, in my own view, was a palpable miscarriage of justice. Williams was perfectly aware of his right to remain silent. He had received more than abundant warnings under the law. His waiver of his rights impresses me as altogether voluntary. He was not "interrogated" in any rational meaning of the word; he was not coerced or bullied or beaten into a confession. It is nonsense, as I see it, to order such voluntary evidence excluded.

But a close reading of the six explosive opinions persuades me that the majority made no new law of significance. The Williams case turned solely on different perceptions of the facts. If Justices Powell and Stevens, the swing men, should take a different perception in another hard case, they will write better law. In the name of little girls, let us hope so.

he is up to, the guess in the Senate is that Long expected thanks from the White House for his favor — and did not receive it.

The thanks would have been a reprieve for some of those Louisiana water projects. But the men around Mr. Carter make clear he will not play that brand of politics under any circumstances.

Both Jimmy Carter and Russell Long are canny Southern politicians unbound by rigid ideology and seldom frozen into rigid positions. Yet, at opposite ends of the avenue, they are a world apart — one depending for power on his carefully nourished popular support, the other wanting the political power game played as it has always been played.

Threaten Sue Ohio Teamster Union's Benefit Fund

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department, broadening its crackdown on the Teamsters Union, is threatening to sue a union benefit fund in Ohio in connection with $2.5 million in fees paid to fund officials.

Sources familiar with the investigation say the department is challenging as excessive the fees paid to two Dayton attorneys who administered the Ohio Highway Drivers' Welfare Fund for 27,000 truckers since 1972.

The sources said the department is seeking to bring the fund into "voluntary compliance" with the 1974 federal pension reform law. Among other things, the government is demanding the ouster of the fund's administrator, Robert C. Knee Jr.

His father, Robert C. Knee Sr., administered the fund in the past.

Labor Department records filed by the Ohio fund show the father was paid $482,763 in 1972 and $575,573 in 1973 to administer the plan. His son took over in 1974 and received $878,915 that year and $627,746 in 1975, the last year for which records are available.

The fund's response to the government's demands have not been satisfactory, the sources said, and the government will take the fund to court under the pension law, unless the fund's officials change their minds soon.

The giant Teamsters Union has been the main target of the government's enforcement of the two-year-old law so far, primarily through an intense investigation of the $1.4 billion Chicago-based Central States Pension Fund.

Earlier this month, the government forced the ouster of Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons and three others as trustees of the Central States plan, which has been accused of mismanagement and ties to organized crime.

The Central States plan, covering 450,000 members in 33 states, is the largest of some 270 individual Teamsters pension, health and welfare plans.

The smaller Ohio welfare fund, with assets of $26 million, provides dental, surgical and other medical benefits to its members. As administrators, the Knees have been responsible for overseeing its daily operations.

Independent pension experts say the fees paid the Knees are far in excess of those paid to administrators of similar pension and welfare plans.

In contrast, Daniel J. Shannon received $61,000 last year as administrator of the 450,000-member Central States pension plan.

Knee Jr. declined comment during a telephone interview when asked about the fees and other aspects of the government's probe.

The Labor Department opened its investigation last May in response to queries from The Associated Press concerning the administrative fees. Shortly after the probe began, the fund's trustees began paying Knee a monthly salary instead of the customary fee based on a percentage of the employer contributions into the fund. The salary has not been disclosed.

20th Century Club Meet Set

The 20th Century Club will hold a call meeting Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at the home of Douglas Barnhill, 1009 W. Fifth St.

All members are urged to be present. The topic of discussion will be "The Monday After Easter". Members should bring their guest lists.

Offer Help On Mondays

R. M. Midgett, local revenue officer for the N.C. Department of Revenue, advises that personnel to assist in filing State Income and Intangibles tax returns will be available on Monday of each week through Apr. 15.

In addition, the office will give assistance with filing returns during the entire week of Apr. 12 through 15, he said.

The office is located at 300 W. First Street, Greenville. Hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Midgett requests that taxpayers bring the pre-addressed forms which were mailed them from Raleigh. Taxpayers filing their own returns should mail those which indicate a refund to the N.C. Dept. of Revenue, P. O. Box R, Raleigh, N. C. 27634. Other completed forms should be mailed to N.C. Department of Revenue, P. O. Box 25000, Raleigh, N. C. 27640.

Environmental Pledge Signed

A new Memorandum of Understanding pledging support for environmental concerns has been signed by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission and the USDA-Soil Conservation Service.

The agreement was signed in Raleigh recently by Executive Director Robert B. Hazel of the Wildlife Resources Commission and State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

The two agencies pledged to work together toward the following: enjoyment of a pleasing and healthful environment; conservation of total natural resources, with emphasis on soil, water, fish, wildlife and plants; the total welfare of man including his needs for food, shelter, clothing, protection and health.

Soil Conservation Service professional workers provide landusers with information about uses of land and water, and technical assistance for the protection and enhancement of soil, water, fish, wildlife, plant and other natural resources. They also provide technical assistance to conservation programs of soil and water conservation districts in all 100 North Carolina counties.

The North Carolina Wildlife Commission is charged with the responsibility for management, restoration, development, protection and regulation of North Carolina's wildlife resources, as well as administration of laws pertaining to fish, game and other wildlife.

Under terms of the agreement, which became effective upon signature, people in both agencies agreed to confer on mutual areas of concern and to work together in training, plans for best utilization of professional skills, and service to landowners.

Guest Chemist Directs Seminar

Richard B. Timmons, professor of chemistry at Catholic University, will direct this week's Friday afternoon seminar program in the East Carolina University Department of Chemistry.

His topic will be "The Kinetics and Mechanisms of Some Elementary Reactions of Atmospheric Significance."

The program will begin at 2 p.m. in 201 Flanagan Building and is free and open to the public.

The ECU chemistry seminar series is supported by the Union Carbide Corporation.

WHAT HANDICAP? — Wendy Wakeham never sits still long enough to think about being handicapped. She's too busy being 10 years old, playing soccer and the piano, skating, painting and dreaming of the day she'll be a famous artist or a nurse, to worry about having an artificial right leg and only three fingers on her left hand. Wendy was born with her right leg two inches shorter than the left, and her left hand with only a thumb and two fingers. Here, Wendy is seen skating near her Dallas, Tex. home. (AP Wirephoto)

Series Of Ten Collisions Is Reported For City Yesterday

One pedestrian was injured and an estimated $3,730 property damage reported in a series of ten traffic collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Investigators reported Mrs. Ethel Parker Cole of Jefferson City, Mo., was injured and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment after being struck by a car on Memorial Drive, 45 feet North of the Millbrook Street intersection about 7:30 p.m.

Officers identified the driver of the car involved in the mishap as Leslie William Whipple of Tarboro.

A 2:40 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involved cars operated by Sylvia Rebecca Walston Cooper of Branche's Trailer Ct. and Elmo Ruth Heath of Grimesland.

Damage to the mishaps was set at $400 to the Cooper car and $200 to the Heath auto.

Cars driven by Paul Arnold Thomas of Route 8, Greenville, and Joseph Albert Grimes III of Greenway Apts. collided about 2:50 p.m. on Memorial Drive, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Grimes car and $25 damage to the Thomas vehicle.

A 6:13 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet East of the Bismark Street intersection involved cars operated by Lenuia Ray May of Route 1, Winterville and Joan Copeland Luquire of 715 White Drom.

Police, who charged Miss Luquire with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $500 to the Luquire car while setting no damage to the May auto.

A truck driven by Omeile Ann Worthington of Route 7, Greenville and a car operated by Thelma Braxton Williams of Glendale Ct. were involved in a 3:12 p.m. mishap on Nursing Home Road.

Officers estimated damage at $50 to the Worthington truck and $400 to the Williams car.

A 12:58 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Greene Streets involved cars operated by Shirley Battle Stocks of 703 East Gum Rd. and Pauline Eason Albritton of Route 5, Washington. Damage from the collision was estimated at $400 to the Stocks car and $30 to the Albritton vehicle.

Cars operated by Ariand Edward Greene of 2609 Tyson St. and John Henry Clark of Glendale Ct. collided about 11:20 a.m. at the intersection of Howell and Perkins Streets, causing an estimated $2-$275 damage to the Greene car and $100 damage to the Clark vehicle.

At about 2:50 p.m., cars driven by William Coke White Jr. of 100C Eastbrook Apts. and James

Coffee Firm Hikes Price

CINCINNATI (AP) — Folger Coffee Co. has increased its wholesale coffee price by 25 cents to $4.43 for a pound of ground coffee, but consumers may not feel the effect immediately.

Folger, the nation's second largest roaster, blamed the increase Wednesday on the continuing rise in the price of green coffee beans, now more than $3 a pound, about $2 higher than a year ago.

The increase was Folger's fourth this year, for a total hike of $1.35 a pound.

The price hike may not be felt immediately, however. It can take as long as several months, depending on the individual grocer's pricing policy and inventory level, before wholesale price increases cause retail prices to rise.

Tucker Smith of Route 8, Greenville collided at the intersection of Dickinson and Columbia Avenues.

Damage was set at $150 to the White car and $200 to the Smith auto.

Thad James Wooten of 825 Fleming St. was charged with driving under the influence and failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Charles Street and Greenville Boulevard.

Investigators reported the Wooten car collided with a vehicle driven by Tony Dean Alcock of 303 Hillcrest Dr., causing an estimated $50 damage to the Wooten auto and $200 damage to the Alcock car.

A 1:10 p.m. mishap at the Tenth and Evans Streets intersection involved cars operated by Louis Graham Warren Jr. of 106D Eastbrook Apts. and Barbara Morris Minker of Kenland Manor Trailer Pk.

Police set damage from the mishap at $50 to the Warren car and $200 to the Minker car.

D. H. Conley Highlights

By Linda Cox

A typing contest for beginners was held Thursday, March 17. The first-place winner was Kathy Worthington; second place, Melissa Bailey; and third place, Tim Avery. Alternates were Carol Vandiford and Stacey Hibbard.

The top three place winners represented D.H. Conley at the district typing contest at ECU Monday, March 28 along with advanced typing students Frankie Cash, and Hannah Paramore. Alternates were Bonitta Best and Mary Venters.

Frankie Cash won the Gregg Shorthand Contest last week for earning the 80 word per minute speed award. Patty Joyner and Gail Suggs earned 60 words per minute awards.

Debbie Allen, Frankie Cash, Bonitta Best, and Mary Tyson earned theory awards. They wrote 100 theory words in shorthand and transcribed them in longhand with 90 per cent accuracy.

Mrs. Mildred Counsel talked with the seniors March 24 and 25 about sickle cell anemia and sickle cell traits.

Friday Pickups For Aluminum

The Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company will have its truck at Pitt Plaza every Friday in April from noon to 1 p. m.

Reynolds pays 17 cents a pound for aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum items like pie pans, foil, frozen food and dinner trays and dip, pudding and meat containers. Certain other types of clean all-aluminum items can be redeemed at slightly lower prices.

"Recycling aluminum takes less than five per cent of the original energy needed to manufacture aluminum from ore," says E. James Kelly, district manager for recycling.

Harsh Life For Young Pioneers In Belize Jungles

EDITOR'S NOTE — Rats invade the kitchen and boa constrictors attack the chickens. Droughts and floods wipe out crops. Money is scarce, work plentiful, travel tough. It's all a part of life for an American in the jungle of a nation once called British Honduras.

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer
BARTON CREEK, Belize (AP) — Several dozen young couples from the United States are buying jungle land for as little as $20 an acre in this Central American country the size of Massachusetts and once known as British Honduras. They are clearing it with machetes and trying to fashion the humble beginnings of their own farms.

Many didn't know what the deadly fer-de-lance snake looked like, how to slaughter a pig and when and how to plant crops.

Dozens who came here to get back to nature, as if hugging a tree every morning would solve everything, couldn't take the rigors and left.

Some, like Joseph Dunsmoor and his wife, have endured.

"I came down here to be a raw food guy and ended up wandering around chewing on roots and almost dying of starvation the first six months," Dunsmoor says.

After two years, he has a machete, a file, a hut, a cow, a horse and a few acres of beans and peanuts.

What he wants, but never has the money to buy when he gets out of the bush, is a flashlight, "so I can see what kind of things are making all those noises in my house after I snuff out the lamp."

Dunsmoor, whose wife was in the States to give birth to their second child, is the son of an Army man and lived all over the United States, including five years at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., before coming to this predominantly-black tropical area.

Barton Creek is hot and humid. Canopy jungle is mixed with secondary growth of vines and other plants so thick it can take an hour to chop through 100 yards of it.

With his mare in foal and worms starting to eat his harvested peanuts, Dunsmoor jumped at the chance to get two 100-pound bags of peanuts to market by getting a ride in a four-wheel-drive vehicle with an AP newsman and photographer. The four-mile jungle trail was so muddy it took four hours to make it to the nearest solid dirt road.

Jim and Annie Eackles are another couple living in the valley. Calling them Mr. and Mrs. creates an image of the middle class lives they left three years ago — he in College Station, Tex., and she in Nashua, N.H.

The Eackles sat around a rough timber table with Dunsmoor and two visitors in the 12-by-20 foot hut and talked about their lives, why they want to raise a child — their first is expected in June — on their farm.

"We're doing something we like," says Jim. "Some people come here looking for something noble and they can't do anything noble, so they go home."

On raising a child, Annie says: "The main thing is that a child growing up here will have an entirely different set of values than a child growing up in a big city back in the States. A child would learn here that everything must be earned with work, that no one gets something for welfare, food stamps

— the whole bit — and they could work if they wanted to work. We want our child to grow up different than that."

Saving Stories Of Survivors

DALLAS (AP) — Years from now, when no survivors of Pearl Harbor are left, scholars will be able to hear the voices of more than 100 Texans who were eyewitnesses to what happened Dec. 7, 1941.

Dr. Ron Marcello of North Texas State University, coordinator of the university's oral history collection and executive secretary of the National Oral History Association, based at NTSU, recently interviewed yet another Pearl Harbor survivor here.

Merle Newbauer, subject of the interview, was on the battleship Maryland on the historic day. A seaman I.C. then, he finished as a chief petty officer, and helped organize the Association of Pearl Harbor Survivors in Texas.

"I've visited all five Texas chapters of the association, and found nearly all my interviewees there," said Dr. Marcello.

Will Keep The Tourist Police

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The Thai government intends to make permanent the tourist police force set up in Bangkok last year after hundreds of complaints by foreign visitors. Officials claim the plan to have a separate police force for tourists has been successful, and will expand the program to other tourist centers soon.

The force deals with crime against local and foreign tourists. Its major advantage is that members speak English or other foreign languages. The current force of 200 men will be expanded to about 2,000.

Student Will Give Up Headline Predictions

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The 18-year-old Duke University student who predicted the Canary Islands airplane disaster a week before it happened says he's giving up headline predictions.

"I don't intend to do it again," Lee Fried told the Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

"I plan to be an engineer and that takes a lot of time. And actually I didn't expect news of this to get out of the Raleigh-Durham area," said the electrical engineering major who received national attention this week.

Fried, who says he's an amateur magician, sealed his prediction about the air disaster along with other forecasts in an envelope March 21 and gave it to Duke University President

Terry Sanford.

The envelope was opened and read Tuesday. Fried's headline matched that of The News and Observer in Raleigh, N.C.

However, the mystery surrounding the predictions appeared to break up Wednesday when a Raleigh merchant said Fried was a customer of his magic store. The store sells a $2 copy of a brochure entitled, "The Feature of Multiple Prediction and How it Works."

"I don't deny that I've read the book," Fried said. "But if that's all it is, someone would be predicting headlines every week."

The New Orleans native said he did the stunt as a personal test.

"I did it to see I could do it," he said. "It's been a goal of mine to do something like it. I do other, smaller things more regularly like tell someone what they had for breakfast the day before or tell them what their name is the first time I meet them."

Before he entered Duke, Fried gave magic shows for children's birthday parties, but said he hasn't had the time since entering college.

He makes no great claims about his ability.

The headline predictions required a lot of thought beforehand, he said.

After arriving at his latest predictions, he said he approached Sanford to participate because he "seemed above board."

The former North Carolina governor said Fried appeared to use a sleight of hand.

"But if he did, it was under the glare of lights and pretty good...I think it was a very entertaining act and I think that's all he intended it to be," Sanford said.

Sanford and a reporter had signed the predictions before sealing them and locking them in Sanford's office desk.

Five-Year-Old Charges Dropped

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — Five-year-old charges filed against two members of The Rolling Stones have been dropped by a District Court judge here.

Judge Anthony Dennis of Warwick District Court agreed Wednesday to "file" the charges after Warwick Police Chief John F. Cutcher conceded that singer Mick Jagger and guitarist Keith Richard could not be ordered to return to Warwick.

Say Concealed Weapons Needed

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Obscenity laws would be easier to prosecute and policemen could carry concealed weapons while off-duty under bills two law enforcement associations said they needed Wednesday.

Appearing before the Senate Law Enforcement and Crime Control Committee, police officials presented a list of 14 bills that they said would help solve some of the problems of policemen on the street.

Some of the proposals, including ones dealing with pornography and off-duty weapons, have already been introduced in the General Assembly and are awaiting committee action.

Other proposals would broaden the circumstances under which an officer could use "deadly force" in detaining a suspected criminal, would reduce the statute of limitations from three years to one year on lawsuits for false arrest, and would tighten laws concerning illegal use of prescriptions in obtaining drugs.

J.D. Myers, chief of police in Statesville, said one of the largest problems for policemen is the congested courts system, and that many judges are not adequately trained.

"I would suggest to you that we have judges sitting on the bench in North Carolina that don't know any more about criminal law than about second base, and that's a fact," Myers said.

Young policemen now are highly trained due to stiffer education standards, Myers said, but legislators have not provided similar training requirements for judges. "There are no standards for those on up the line," he said.

Myers, president of the N.C. Police Executives Association, made his comments the day after the House killed a move to provide for merit selection of judges, which its boosters said would take politics out of the selection process. The police proposals, supported by Myers' group and the N.C. Association of Chiefs of Police, do not deal with the judicial issue.

The deadly force bill would amend the statute which now says officers can use a deadly weapon against a "fleeing felon." The bill would broaden it to allow an officer to use such force to arrest or capture "a person who he reasonably believes" has committed a felony with a dangerous weapon or is attempting to escape with the use of a dangerous weapon.

Bob Thomas, police attorney for Charlotte-Mecklenburg, said the state association of police attorneys placed top priority on a bill that would reduce the statute of limitations from three years to one year for suits charging illegal arrest against police officers.

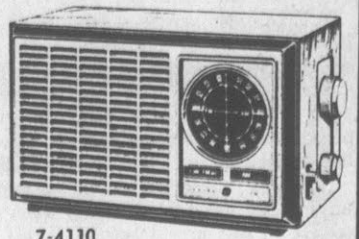

"Law enforcement officers and agencies throughout North Carolina have been besieged by frivolous suits," Thomas said, adding that judicial rulings requiring inmates be provided with law libraries have caused an increase in such suits. He said in Charlotte, one convicted criminal filed 44 suits, none of which were successful but each requiring time and money for the department to spend on defense.

Other police proposals for legislation would require a prescription to buy hypodermic needles and syringes, and clarify language in existing statutes.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow and rain are predicted Thursday for Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming, according to the National Weather Service. Rain is also expected for portions of the Gulf states and snow flurries are due in Maine. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cooler and drier air spread across North Carolina today behind a cold front that headed out to sea. A few brief showers were predicted along the coast and in the southeast portion during the morning ahead of the front.

Afternoon temperatures were expected to range in the 70s across most sections of the state while remaining a few degrees cooler in some mountain communities and climbing to the low 80s in the southeast.

The cooler and drier air will be noticeable across all of the state tonight. Under clear skies temperatures will cool into the 30s across the mountains and range to the upper 40s near the coast. Most communities across the Piedmont and northern coastal plain will have lows in the upper 30s to low 40s.

Under sunny skies Friday the highs will range in the 60s and low 70s.

Along with the rains that occurred across the state Wednesday, temperatures ranged from the 60 in the west portion to a high of 84 on the coast at Wilmington. New Bern was another warm spot with 82 while Asheville, Greensboro and Hickory all had a high of 67, and Charlotte 66.

The extended outlook calls for a chance of showers across the state again on Saturday.

Female Best In Dog Corps

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Army is finding females work better in some jobs than men.

In the dog corps of the military police, females do a better job at sniffing out bombs and drugs than male dogs.

"Narcotics training to a dog is one big game," says Sgt. Duane Clay of Ft. Bragg, N.C. "If he sniffs the stuff out, he gets to play ball. As soon as he starts scratching that he's found something, his handler immediately gives him the ball. It's his praise."

Equal training of the sexes is conducted at Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio, Texas. After basic training, canine-style, the brightest are singled out for advanced training in bombs or drugs.

Ft. Bragg MP's now have a squad of three dozen dogs, and they began adding females to the force a few months ago after they demonstrated superior training skills.

In addition to detection training, the dogs are taught to be protective of their handlers which almost backfires at times.

Clay said one handler was involved in a traffic accident. The dog was with him and although the animal was in shock, it lay down over the MP and would not let emergency personnel near until another handler was able to move the dog away.

CLOSED DISCUSSION
ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Daniel R. McLeod held a closed discussion with York County attorneys over whether Catawba Indians are entitled to 144,000 acres. McLeod said afterward, "It is inappropriate for public discussion at this time."

Sgt. Named To Advisory Council

RALEIGH — The U.S. Army Raleigh District Recruiting Command in Raleigh announces that Sergeant First Class (SFC) Bob McCombs, a Greenville recruiter, has been appointed to the Commanding General's Recruiter Advisory Council.

Only recruiters throughout the nation who display exceptional ability in enlisting young people of high education levels are appointed to this council.

McCombs, native of Mt. Holly, is a 16-year Army veteran who has been a recruiter since 1972. During his military career, he has been stationed at Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri, in Vietnam, in Germany, and at Ft. Belvoir, Virginia.

SFC McCombs holds the Bronze Star for Valor (with two clusters), the Army Commendation and the Good Conduct Medal (4th Award), the Meritorious Service Medal, the Gold Recruiter Badge, and the Gold Recruiter Badge with Sapphire Star.

Open Meeting Law Changes Discussed At Session

By DAVID NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A proposed change in the state's open meetings law and financial woes have dominated the two-day meeting of the North Carolina League of Municipalities here.

An estimated 400 mayors and city council members attended the meeting which was to conclude with an afternoon address by Gov. Jim Hunt and members of the Council of State.

Following a briefing session Wednesday on pending legislation which would affect municipalities, the local officials had informal discussions with legislators at a cocktail party.

Some strong opinions were expressed over a bill which would put criminal penalties into the open meetings law for holding secret meetings.

"It's just too bad," said House Speaker Carl Stewart of local government opposition to the meetings bill. "If they won't open the meeting, damn it, I'll do it for them."

Stewart and Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, sponsored the bill.

Mrs. Hunt also acknowledged a lot of adverse comments from municipal officials and said there are several portions of the bill which could be compromised to soften opposition. She did not elaborate.

Mayor Alfred Brown of Concord, third vice-president of the league, said, "What we're going to try to do is come up with something we can all live with. There's just not much about the whole bill that I like or the league likes."

Mayor Simon Sitterfen Jr. of Kinston, the League's president, said there are occasions when it would be inappropriate to have open meetings such as during discussion of dismissing a police chief.

On the other hand, some local officials had no quarrel with the bill.

"I think the reasons for having a secret meeting should be few and very critical," said Jim Quinn, a Raleigh councilman. "I think really if they break the law, they ought to be thrown out and let the people elect a new group. The hell with trying them (in court) or anything."

Municipal officers were also pressing legislators for money.

DOUGLAS, Ga. (AP) — Federal price supports and stabilization programs for tobacco producers could be endangered by a 600 million pound stockpile

Brown said a state revenue sharing program was needed, such as been established in other states and similar to the federal program.

Mrs. Bonner said she believes the state should give small towns of less than 700 population help with projects such as community centers which they are unable to fund alone.

David Bosley, mayor of Grifton, suggested that the legislature handle all municipal problems by simply changing the property tax assessment rules. Under Bosley's proposal, property values would be assessed for tax purposes without regard to improvements and additions. That way, he said property owners would be encouraged to build apartments, office buildings or other facilities which generally benefit the community.

"The legislature makes the rules and makes it economically profitable to live outside the city. All it has to do is change the rules so that it's economically profitable for people to live inside the city and the problem will solve itself," Bosley said.

Endangered By Leaf Stockpile

DOUGLAS, Ga. (AP) — Federal price supports and stabilization programs for tobacco producers could be endangered by a 600 million pound stockpile of tobacco left over from the 1976 market year, according to a state tobacco expert.

Dr. Robert Miles said that the tobacco, stockpiled in the stabilization program, is mostly low grade and cannot compete on the world market with less expensive foreign tobacco.

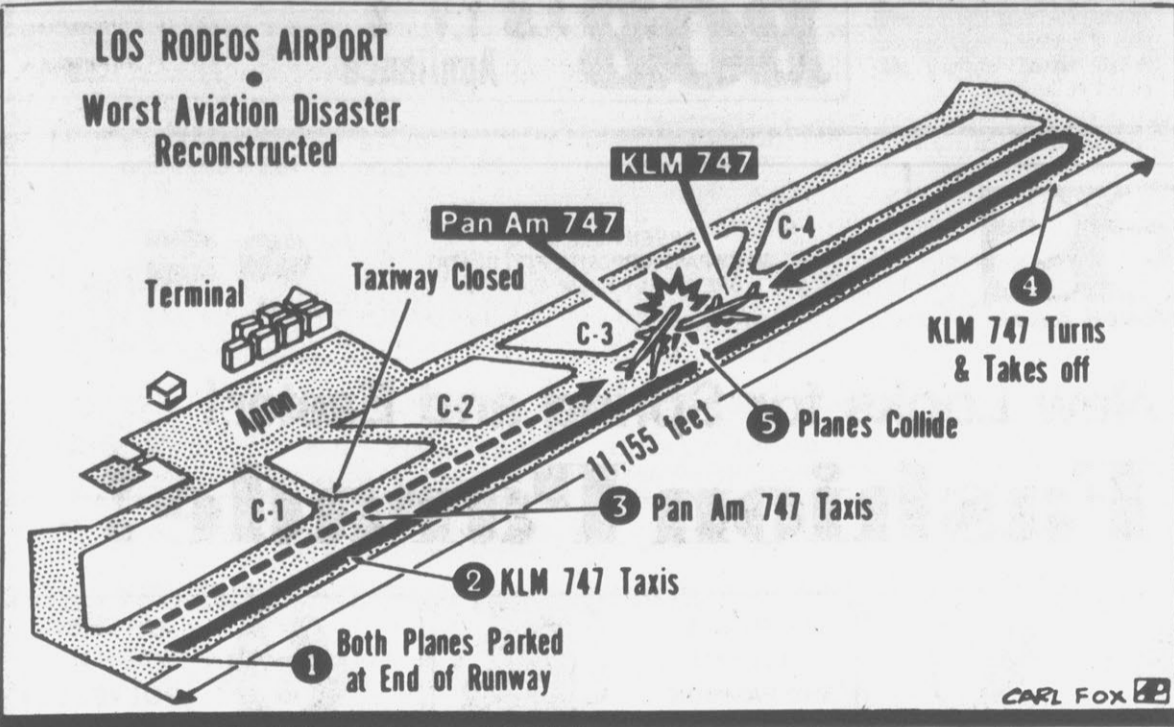

Speaking to a meeting Tuesday at South Georgia College, he cautioned that congressional support for the federal tobacco programs is diminishing, and suggested that agricultural officials and producers must find a means of reducing the surplus if federal programs are to survive.

Representatives of the University of Georgia Extension Service and the U. S. Department of Agriculture attended the meeting to discuss the 1977 crop with tobacco producers, warehousemen and county agents.

Bob Hieronymus, the chief of the tobacco branch of the USDA, said, in what he called a "semi-official" statement, that the level of government support for the 1977 flue-cured tobacco crop will average $113.80 per 100 pounds — about $7 higher than last year.

World-Wide Energy Cooperative Said Considered

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is considering the idea of a world-wide energy cooperative that would give all nations equal access to nuclear power for peaceful purposes.

Administration sources say the co-op concept is designed to aid in the development of poor nations and could halt the spread of nuclear weapons by giving non-nuclear nations access to atomic power without forcing them to develop their own nuclear technology. Administration officials stress that the idea still is no more than "a concept." One expert said, "It is not yet a project or a plan because its details have yet to be worked out with greater precision."

The concept would involve a global system under which interested countries could share in the ownership, development and management of nuclear installations and processes involved in the nuclear fuel cycle. The sources say the program could be a fallback compromise in case current strenuous U.S. efforts fail to stop West Germany and France from selling Brazil and Pakistan nuclear reactors. Along with the systems and technology for a nuclear power system, such sales can supply a weapons-making capacity.

Carter has spoken in the past about the idea of regionalizing certain aspects of the nuclear power industry on a worldwide basis. The original idea was that there might be one centralized enrichment operation serving West Europe, one serving the Middle East, one or more serving the Western Hemisphere and so on.

The same concept of regionalizing the disposal of radioactive waste, either by recycling to yield plutonium or by burial far from inhabited areas, has been discussed and still is considered a valid possibility. This would mutually deny member nations access to atomic arms material, but would not deny them the use of nuclear power.

Set Holy Week Revival Series

A "New Life Mission" service featuring Dr. Samuel T. Kamaleon of Arcadia, Calif., vice president-at-large of World Vision International, the Rev. James H. Bailey, minister of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, 11 Greenville citizens and a musical program will be presented daily, Sunday through Wednesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Dr. S.T. KAMALESON

Dr. Kamaleon will be guest minister at 11 a.m. Sunday. He will hold the evening services and conduct Monday through Wednesday at 10 a.m. a morning Bible Study. He will be introduced by the Rev. Bailey who will give a prayer.

The one-hour service is part of a Holy Week revival service and is being planned by the Commission on Evangelism with Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick as attendance chairwoman and Mr. and Mrs. T.R. Jones, Task Force chairpersons. Laymen and choir members from every church are invited to attend; a nursery will be provided.

Eleven other speakers who will be giving witness either in pairs or during the morning Bible Study, are Mrs. Lester Z. Brown, Mrs. Dick Douglas, Mrs. Joseph M. Taft Jr., Mrs. H. Lyman Ormond Jr., Mrs. Wm. M. Reading Jr., Mrs. Hugh C. Winslow, Dr. James W. Batten, Ma. Martin Morgan, Dan P. Powers and Dr. Pinkney B. Young III, and Mrs. Ralph C. Tucker.

Dr. Kamaleon was awarded the Master of Divinity and the Master of Theology degrees from Asbury Theological Seminary, the Sacred Theological Doctoral degree from Emory University and the Doctor of Medicine degree from Madras, India. He has participated in preaching missions in the U.S. as well as in Southeast Asia, and is the author of a number of books. About four couples will receive during the night services in the church vestibule beginning at 7:00 p.m. They are Dr. and Mrs. Chiard L. Capwell, Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton W. Everett Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Larry Freeze, Dr. and Mrs. William F. Grossnickle, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Irons, Dr. and Mrs. Jack Koontz, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. C. Lanier Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Jasper Lewis Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Luther Moore, Dr. and Mrs. David J. Middleton, Dr. and Mrs. Tom Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Knott Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. Ray M. Spears, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Tucker.

Childbirth Film Series Offered Men's Day Will Be Observed

A Men's Day service will be held at Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. William Wesley Cook, Jr., president of Cook's Funeral Home in Farmville, will be guest speaker.

Others appearing on the special program will be Deacon James W. Taylor and Morris Williams. The morning sermon will be delivered by the pastor, the Rev. F.R. Peterson. The public is invited.

Three childbirth films will be presented at Pitt Memorial Hospital's Education Center the first Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. The three films are as follows: Story of Eric, a lamaze method experience; Birth Without Violence, about the Leboyer experience; and The First Few Weeks Of Life, about newborn characteristics. The films will be shown again April 4 at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission and the public is invited.

Billy's Right, Claims Mother Media Society Hears Speaker

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — First Mother Lillian Carter says her hometown of Plains has been inundated by hordes of tourists and son Billy Carter is leaving town. Miss Lillian said Wednesday that tourists have become so bothersome since her other son, Jimmy, was elected President that she "can't even eat without someone looking at me."

She said Billy was correct when he told a travel convention this week that tourists have ruined Plains, but she added, "I don't think Jimmy intended it to be that way."

But the new U.S. concept of internationalizing the peaceful uses of nuclear energy appears to go beyond anything suggested in the past.

Club Undertakes A Hospitality Move

The members of the Red Oak Junior Extension Homemakers Club have undertaken a project which will demonstrate their "southern hospitality" to the newcomers of Greenville and surrounding areas.

In an effort to introduce the opportunities afforded through Extension Homemakers programs, the Red Oak Juniors have had 1,000 envelopes printed to be used by the Home Economics Extension Agents office in making up packets to be distributed to newcomers by the Welcome Wagon hostess.

These packets will contain a sampling of the various publications and services through the local Agricultural Extension Office.

Greenville is growing rapidly with a great influx of people from varied localities, many of which have had no prior association with consumer education programs provided by the Agricultural Extension Service. The Pitt County Extension Office is actively engaged in providing information to people of all walks of life in an effort to improve their standard of living, a spokesman said.

With inflation racing ahead much faster than the average worker's income, the Red Oak Juniors feel they can best extend themselves by promoting the extension programs in this county, said Jane T. Tripp, president of the Red Oak Juniors.

Plan Month Of Clean-Up

GRIFTON - Grifton's seventh annual Spring Clean-Up Campaign is scheduled to kick off Saturday at 9 a.m. and to continue throughout the month.

The annual campaign has been one of the outstanding anti-litter efforts in the Pitt County area. Because of the annual effort, Grifton has been selected for commendation on regional and state levels. The town was named first in a ten county region and third in the state for towns of 1,000 to 5,000 population for its anti-litter and beautification efforts.

Cleanup workers should meet at 9 a.m. at the water tower on Queen Street, bringing plastic bags, large grocery bags, and cardboard cartons if they can.

Children participating will be supervised by adults or older teens and work parties will be assigned to different sections of town. Adults and older teens will transport workers to different sections of town and supervise.

At noon, all workers will be treated to free hot dogs and drinks at the Rescue Squad building. Lions Club members will furnish drinks and Extension Homemakers will prepare the hot dogs.

Survey Of Social Study

A survey of social studies in North Carolina high schools is being conducted by East Carolina University.

Purpose of the survey is to discern the variety, content and length of social studies courses in the state's public schools. Findings will be reported to school personnel, officials of the state Department of Public Instruction, and professors of social studies education.

The survey is a joint effort of the ECU Department of History and the ECU School of Education. According to ECU Professors Hugh Wease and Joseph Congleton, survey coordinators, the social studies curriculum in North Carolina has been "broad and flexible" since the early 1970's.

Survey questionnaires have been mailed to social studies teachers in all North Carolina high schools as well as high school curriculum coordinators and social studies departmental heads.

Results will be tabulated in late April.

$1 Million Gift To Duke Univ.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - A Duke University alumnus and his wife have announced a gift of $1 million toward construction of Duke's new $8 million University Center.

Norb F. "Bud" Schaefer Jr., president of Inland International Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind., made the announcement in ceremonies following a luncheon on the campus Wednesday.

Schaefer is a 1952 graduate of Duke. He also is a graduate of Harvard University's advanced management program. His wife is the former Carolyn Mitchell of Terre Haute, Ind.

Former North Carolina governor Terry Sanford, Duke president, said Schaefer's gift brings to nearly $5 million the total committed to date toward the estimated cost of the center on Duke's West Campus.

The Duke Center is expected to be under construction before next fall.

TOP ATHLETES — The Greenville Sports Club named its top collegiate and high school athletes of the year last night at its annual banquet. Those named are, left to right, High School Female Athlete of the Year, Jennifer Counterman of Farmville Central;

Sports Club Honors Athletes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Four area athletes, two on the high school level and two from East Carolina University were honored as the Outstanding Athletes of the Year in Pitt County by the Greenville Sports Club last night.

Frank Howard, former head football coach at Clemson University, was the guest speaker for the club's annual banquet held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Donnie Perkins of North Pitt and Jennifer Counterman of Farmville Central were named the top high school athletes of the area by the club, while Debbie Freeman and Cary Godette were picked from East Carolina University.

Each of the five county high schools named their top male and female athletes for the competition, and those named were also guests for the banquet. They include Ellen Dixon of North Pitt, Janet Gantt and Rocky Butler of Rose, Vertha Dixon and Ogden Braxton of Ayden-Grifton, Mike Jenkins of Farmville Central, and Kevin Adams of Conley. Conley did not name a female athlete.

Perkins, a basketball star and much-sought after player at North Pitt, led his team to the number two spot in the state 3-A playoffs this year. Miss Counterman was a member of her school's tennis team and basketball Freeman was the state's leading scorer in basketball this past season, and was also the winner of the award last year from the Sports Club. Godette was an All-America selection this fall in football, and captured most of the post-season honors bestowed by the team.

Howard's talk was mostly humorous about his life and times in the world of collegiate athletics.

"Kids today have everything given to them," Howard said. "People who don't have to work for what they get don't appreciate it when they get it," he said.

He also encouraged parents to urge their children to participate

Only One Rule For Dick Motta

By The Associated Press
Coach Dick Motta of the Washington Bullets has just one rule ... and 400 National Basketball Association victories to go along with it.

"My only rule," Motta said after the Bullets' 110-103 triumph over the Atlanta Hawks Wednesday night, "is don't try to figure anything out. I mean the travel, the schedule, the officials, the players."

Motta's rule came true again. It was a game the Bullets did not figure to win.

"We lost Phil Chenier early, Elvin Hayes goes scoreless in the first half and we still won," Motta marveled.

The Bullets won because Tom Henderson, acquired from Atlanta in a trade Jan. 20, scored 22 points, dealt out six assists and took up the slack after Chenier was ejected early in the second period. Leonard Robinson, the player Washington swapped for Henderson, had a game-high 31 points and 12 rebounds for Atlanta.

Washington also pulled within 1 1/2 games of first-place Houston in the Central Division when the Rockets lost to the Seattle SuperSonics 111-105. Elsewhere, the Philadelphia 76ers shaded the Detroit Pistons 115-112, the Boston Celtics cooled off Chicago 90-88 and the New Orleans Jazz defeated the Phoenix Suns 112-100 for their seventh consecutive triumph, a club record.

steal with 21 seconds remaining that stopped a furious Chicago comeback as the Bulls pulled within 87-86 with 49 seconds left. Dave Cowens sank a pair of free throws with six seconds remaining for an 89-86 edge which offset an ensuing dunk shot by the Bulls' Artis Gilmore. Boston's Curtis Rowe added a free throw with one second remaining for the final margin of victory.

Jazz 112, Suns 100
New Orleans rolled to its team-record seventh consecutive victory behind Pete Maravich's 26 points. The game was tied seven times and the lead changed eight times before Pistol Pete put the Jazz ahead to stay with a long jumper two minutes into the second half.

NAVY'S NEWEST SPORT
ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The newest intercollegiate sport at the U.S. Naval Academy here is women's volleyball. In the opening games the women's Plebe team defeated Prince Georges Community College 15-10 and 15-7, then turned back Montgomery Community College 15-9 and 15-8.

Rankin Chases Cash In Winners Circle

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—A total of $305,000 is up for grabs in the Dinah Shore Winners Circle tournament beginning today, and that means Judy Rankin should be at the top of her game.
Mrs. Rankin has become the women golfers' answer to Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus — when those male counterparts were playing their best golf. Last year she had the most successful money season ever on the Ladies Professional Golf Association circuit, winning six tournaments and $150,000 to become the first woman golfer ever to top $100,000 in a year.

When there is a big purse at stake — and this tournament at Mission Hills Country Club is billed as the richest sports event for women — the 32-year-old Texan can usually be found at or near the top. She has the added edge of playing her home course in this rich tournament.

Mrs. Rankin won here last year, collecting $32,000 and a new car. This year the top prize for the 72-hole event over the par 36-36-72 Mission Hills layout spanning 6,370 yards is $36,000 and again a new automobile.
It is a pressure tournament, with big money at stake, large galleries expected, and a national television audience watching the final two rounds.

Stasavich In Hall Of Fame

HICKORY — Clarence Stasavich, one of Lenoir Rhyne's all-time great football players and coaches, will be one of the charter inductees into the Lenoir Rhyne College Sports Hall of Fame, it has been announced.
Stasavich, who died in 1975, served as head football coach and athletic director at East Carolina University from 1962 until 1970, and continued as athletic director until his death.
He joins three others to be inducted into the Hall of Fame on April 15 at the annual meeting of the Piedmont Educational Foundation, an organization which provides support for Lenoir Rhyne's athletic program.
Johnny Majors, newly named head football coach at the University of Tennessee, will be the featured speaker for the meeting.
The other three inductees are H. C. "Joby" Hawn, a three-sport athlete at LR, and a long time coach and official; Albert Spurlock, also a three-sport athlete at LR and later a coach; and Raeford Wells, considered the finest all-around basketball player in LR history.
A native of Illinois, Stasavich first came to North Carolina as a student at Lenoir Rhyne. He distinguished himself as both a student and athlete while earning a bachelor of arts degree in science. He later added a master's degree from UNC-Chapel Hill.
After his graduation from Lenoir Rhyne, Stasavich entered the coaching ranks at Campbell College in Buies Creek. Three years later, in 1938, he returned to his alma mater as football line coach, assistant basketball coach and head tennis coach.
His tennis teams won two conference championships.
World War II interrupted Stasavich's coaching career in 1942. He entered the U.S. Navy and served with distinction in the European, Mediterranean and Pacific theaters as an LST commander.
After discharge from the service in 1946, he returned to Lenoir Rhyne to build the only national championship football team that North Carolina has ever produced—the 1960 Bruin squad that captured the NAIA title.
In addition, Stasavich's teams won nine Carolinas Conference titles during the period 1946-1961, and they compiled a spectacular 120-37-7 record.
In 1962, Stasavich accepted a new challenge at East Carolina University. His eight years as head football coach there marked the most successful period ever in the school's gridiron history. Three of his teams in succession posted 9-1 records and won bowl games.
A member of both the Helms Hall of Fame, and the N.C. Sports Hall of Fame, Stasavich was twice named national small college coach of the year, once at each school, and five times won district honors.
He was the lone inductee into the East Carolina Sports Hall of Fame last fall.

Were the Marquette Warriors destined to win the national championship in coach Al McGuire's final year? Was some kind of unseen force following them, which wouldn't allow them to lose in the NCAA tournament?

Well, if Marquette did have some kind of magic this year, the Warriors weren't alone. A number of teams overcame seemingly impossible odds during the season and tournament. It was that kind of year.

Unlike previous seasons, no one team dominated the college scene this year. The only team that came close was San Francisco, which, after going undefeated for much of the season, seemingly fell apart at the end of the year, not even making it to the finals of the West regional.

There were a number of other surprises in the tournament as well. Second-ranked UCLA fell to Idaho State, 76-75, in the semifinals of the West regional while, on the same night, 17th-ranked UNC-Charlotte shocked number six Syracuse, 81-59. In another regional semifinal contest, fifth-ranked North Carolina slipped past tenth-ranked Notre Dame, 79-77.

The real shockers came in the regional final games when Charlotte stunned the top-ranked Wolverines of Michigan to win the Midwest regional, 75-68, and the Tar Heels eased past third-ranked Kentucky, 79-72.

In the Midwest finals, Marquette, eliminated a third team from North Carolina by beating Wake Forest, 75-68.

Those games, along with fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas' 107-90 win over Idaho State, put the nation's fourth, fifth, seventh and seventeenth teams in Atlanta's finals.

The 49ers of Charlotte were the real underdogs, but it took a miracle play with three seconds left for Marquette to eke out a 51-49 win in the semifinals.

North Carolina halted UNLV's run-and-gun offense in the other semifinal contest to take an 84-83 victory over the Running Rebels.

Then, in the final game, Marquette surged out to a 12-point lead over Carolina, only to see the Tar Heels come roaring back in the second half.

But, after tying the game, UNC lost its own momentum by going to the four-corners offense and failing to score from it. The Warriors have thrived on the controlled offense game all year and used it to their advantage to win, 67-59.

If there was one thing that was evident throughout the tournament this year it was that big leads were meaningless.

The Tar Heels came from behind in nearly every game. Charlotte built up a big margin against Michigan, only to see it fade away. The 49ers also got way behind both Marquette and Nevada-Las Vegas, but came back, only to lose in the end.

It was the kind of year where anything could happen — and usually did. The balance among the nation's teams added an excitement this season that is lacking when one team dominates the rest.

TO COMPETE IN STATE GYMNASTICS MEET — Susan McKnight, left, and Kerri Logue will be competing for Greenville in the high school state gymnastics meet this weekend in Raleigh. Two Greenville Girls Compete In State Gymnastics Event

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Two Greenville girls will begin a quest tomorrow for something that Greenville has never had before—a state title in gymnastics.

Most people probably didn't even know that there was a gymnast on the high school level in Greenville, but there is. Her name is Susan McKnight, a senior at Rose High School.

She'll be joined in the state meet at Raleigh Sanderson, by Kerri Logue, a freshman at Aycock Junior High. The two will be seeking to win individual titles for the city schools. Kerri, however, will be only an unofficial entrant, since she is not actually in high school.

They will be competing Friday and Saturday in Raleigh for titles in the intermediate class. Miss McKnight will take part in all four phases of the competition, the vault, the uneven bars, the beam and the floor exercises. Miss Logue, however, will not compete on the bars.

Competition is divided into two segments, compulsory and optional. The compulsories are Friday, and the top five people in each event make the finals. The optionals are Saturday, with the finals the same day. Again the top five advance. No combined scores are kept.

"Susan has a real good chance at winning the all-around title," Coach Steveda Chepko said. "We've taken her to three meets to compete unofficially, and she's scored tops every time." She added that winning the all-around title is more prestigious than winning one of the individual events.

The finals will be shown on the educational network across the state Saturday from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

Susan McKnight has been involved in gymnastic work for only about a year and a half. She started into it at the start of her junior year in high school, but has come on fast in the sport.

"I really don't know how I got into it," she said. "I just signed up for the program and here I am."

She feels that the floor exercise program is her best event. "Miss Chepko helped me set it up, and then you get ideas from everyone," Miss McKnight said. Her weakest event is the vault.

"I guess I just don't have the power it takes to be good in it. I have a lot of trouble with it."

Kerri Logue got into gymnastics in another way. A veteran with four years of instruction behind her, she first got interested by watching the sport on television.

While she will be competing for places in the meet, she cannot actually be a winner since she still is in junior high school. "I am more or less like an exhibition competitor."

"It's a good opportunity for me, however, because I can see what the competition is going to be like for the next three years when I am eligible," she added.

Both girls have hopes of competing on the collegiate level in the future. Miss McKnight plans to enter East Carolina next fall and become a member of the team there, while Miss Logue has hopes of going to Penn State when she finishes her high school career.

Neither of the girls is a Greenville native. Miss McKnight was born in Washington, D.C., and has also lived in Germany and Thailand. Miss Logue moved here last year from Virginia.

While both feel they can do well in the state competition, neither of them have any aspirations to become international competitors.

"I'd really like to coach," Miss Logue said. "I think it would be a lot more exciting to be able to coach an Olympian than to be one myself. If I could become a good coach and take several people to the Olympics, that would be my greatest dream."

"She works real well with children," Miss McKnight said of her teammate, "so she might make it."

Meanwhile, the state competition is first—both for them and for Greenville.

Conley Downs Jones By 6-2

TRENTON — D. H. Conley rolled to a 6-2 victory over Jones yesterday in a baseball game.

The Vikings pushed over single runs in the first and second innings, then broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth with four more runs.

Kevin Adams hurled the victory for the Vikes, allowing just three hits. He struck out nine and walked five.

Adams also led the hitting with two doubles, while Randy Edens added a pair of singles and Nuggie Worthington had a triple.

Conley got its first run in the first inning. Worthington had hit triple to open the frame, and he scored on a passed ball.

In the second, Craig Buck walked and stole up. Jeffrey Mills walked, as did Worthington, loading the bases. Edens then singled in Buck.

Jones came back to tie it up in the fourth inning. Toodle tripled and Burton reached on an error, scoring Toodle. Franks then reached on another error, and a following miscue allowed Burton to score.

Conley broke the tie with four runs in the sixth. Curtis Spencer walked and Buck reached on an error when he attempted to GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "There's nothing to go home to," Al Geiberger said in discussing his decision to defend his title in the $235,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament despite the death of his father in the crash of two jets in the Canary Islands.

"My mother passed away a couple of years ago. "There are no remains. We know my dad perished. That's not the question. But his body hasn't been identified. So there's nothing at home, nothing to go home to."

"I discussed it with the minister at home, and other people who were close to my father approached me — Dave Stockton and Peter Oosterhuis. And I talked with my brothers (Ralph, in Washington, D.C., and Don, near San Jose, Calif.) and we talked about it."

"Once I faced the reality of the situation — there's nothing I can do right now — and I let it rattle around in my mind. I was convinced this is the right thing to do. He was such an unselfish person, never making demands on anyone, and he

Tigerettes Win Again

JAMESVILLE — Williamston High School's softball team won its sixth straight game yesterday taking a 14-2 win over Jamesville yesterday.

Kristi Rogerson hurled the victory for the Tigerettes, who remained unbeaten.

S. Rogers had two hits for Jamesville, while J. Barber added a double. Rogerson had three hits, including two doubles, while Cindy Cullipher, Lisa Roberson, Jeannie Rogers and Gwen Williams each had two hits for Williamston. Clayvon Sherron added a double.

Williamston scored one run in the first, then added four in the second and five in the third. The Tigerettes picked up two more in the fourth and one each in the fifth and seventh. Jamesville got single runs in the sixth and seventh.

Elliott Blisters Opposing Hurlers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If Randy Elliott goes hitless in his next 12 at-bats, he will be batting a mere .500. That is not too shabby an outlook for someone who sat out the 1976 season following a shoulder separation and was not sure he ever would get another chance to play major league baseball.

Elliott's spring training saga has got to rate as one of the great rags-to-riches stories of all time.

A player knows he has it made when he can get two hits and his batting average DROPS 15 points to .643, which is what happened to Elliott Wednesday when the San Francisco Giants blanked the Oakland A's 5-0 in an exhibition game. Elliott knew he had it made when the Giants tore up his minor league contract following the game and promoted him to the varsity roster.

Elliott, a 25-year-old outfielder, was a No. 1 draft choice of San Diego in 1971 and spent parts of the 1972 and 1974 seasons with the Padres. But they released him after his 1975 shoulder injury, and so did the California Angels.

He spent last summer jogging on the beaches near his southern California home and wondering if he would get another chance. The Giants sent him to the Arizona winter instructional league, where he batted .311 and was on his way.

"I hadn't tried to hit a baseball in six months, but it all came back to me," Elliott said. "I knew if I didn't have a heck of a spring training I'd be back in Triple A ball. I figured this was my last time around to get a chance to make the big leagues."

Elliott has 27 hits in 42 spring at-bats. He also made a running shoestring catch to preserve Wednesday's shutout after the A's loaded the bases in the eighth inning.

Another non-roster rookie also was in the spotlight. Detroit's Dave Rozema hurled eight innings as the Tigers nipped the New York Mets 1-0.

Rozema, a 20-year-old right-hander who was invited to camp after a 12-4 record and 1.57 earned run average in the Class AA Southern League last season, became the first Detroit pitcher to go eight innings. In five appearances, his 25 innings, 1.80 ERA and 16 strikeouts are tops on the club.

Rozema may be this year's Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, who was scheduled to undergo knee surgery today and is expected to be out about two months.

In other developments, third baseman Graig Nettles agreed to return to the New York Yankees after a two-day absence over a contract hassle, the Cincinnati Reds said they would not bow to holdout Pete Rose's threat to boost his $400,000 demand by $25,000 a month if he is not signed by opening day, the Cleveland Indians asked waivers on veteran first baseman Boog Powell and the Giants signed Willie McCovey, another aging first baseman, as a free agent.

Back on the field, Nolan Ryan hurled seven strong innings as the California Angels defeated the Seattle Mariners 5-3, Reggie Smith's two-run homer in the seventh inning enabled the Los Angeles Dodgers to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 and Dick Ruthven worked six sharp innings in the Atlanta Braves' 3-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Jorge Orta's two-run ninth-inning homer off Rich Gossage gave the Chicago White Sox a 7-5 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates, two-run homers by Gene Tenace and Doug Rader powered the San Diego Padres past the Milwaukee Brewers 8-5 and Chris Chambliss delivered four runs with a homer and sacrifice fly as the New York Yankees beat the Boston Red Sox 8-5.

Rod Carew's two-run single with two out in the ninth inning overcame a pair of two-run homers by Houston's Cliff Johnson and gave Minnesota a 5-4 victory over the Astros that snapped the Twins' seven-game losing streak, and Larry Bitner drilled four hits and Steve Swisher drove in three runs as the Chicago Cubs beat the Cleveland Indians 9-4.

Compensation At Top Of NFL Working List

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — The National Football League was to plunk the Seattle Seahawks into their permanent American Conference West home today, one year ahead of schedule, then try to tackle the sticky problem of retroactive compensation.

Those last two words happen to be the dirtiest floating around these NFL meetings — and most clubs apparently would be happy to wash their hands of the mess, generated by the one year when teams could sign free agents without fear of losing anything in return.

The Seahawks were supposed to be part of the AFC Central Division this year, joining Pittsburgh, Houston, Cincinnati and Cleveland for the 1977 season before moving in permanently with Oakland, Denver, Kansas City and San Diego in the AFC West in 1978.

But when Tampa Bay, placed in the National Conference Central Division with Chicago, Detroit, Green Bay and Minnesota for the 1977 season, was assigned that berth for 1977 and beyond, too, the Seahawks decided to ask that they also be moved into their permanent home in 1977.

A little more than a year ago, the Rozelle Rule was declared illegal by a federal court judge. It was not until about a month ago that the gap was filled, that a basic labor agreement containing a systematic compensation plan was achieved by the owners and players union.

In the interim, none of the teams which lost players via the option-free agent route, got anything in return. Conversely, none of the teams which gained players had to give up anything.

Under the new bargaining agreement, teams would have to give up draft choices for free-agent players, making it retroactive to that period when compensation rule went out the window, and creating two problems:

- Some teams which profited would call retroactivity illegal, and,
- Washington does not have any decent draft choices to give away.

Continuity was missing last year in the so-called Rozelle Rule, that power which Commissioner Pete Rozelle used to employ to determine what compensation (a player, draft choice, cash or a combination) would be paid by a team which signed a player who had played out his option to the team which had lost that player.

The Seahawks and Tampa Bay will not begin divisional play (home-and-home series against the four other clubs) until 1978. This year each team will play each other plus the 13 other clubs in their respective conferences.

Wadkins Is Winner

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Greater Greensboro Open Pro-Am golf tournament was captured Wednesday by Lanny Wadkins, Bill Satterfield, Marvin Ward, Chuck Wiggins and William Lenker.

Wadkins earned $750 for his team's first place finish at Forest Oaks Country Club.

George Burns and John Lister tie for low pro honors.

Wadkins' team had a best-ball score of 53 which was 19 under par on the course. He contributed three birdies, but finished with a two-over par 74.

North Carolina Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw and Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin played in a team captain by pro Dave Stockton and finished 12 under par.

Large crowds turned out for the pro-am despite occasional rain. Celebrities included country singers Charlie Pride and Jimmy Dean.

Lady Pam Pack Captures Win

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Washington High School's girls swept first place in a three-way track meet yesterday at Williamston.

The Lady Pack finished with 71½ points, while Edenton was second with 57½ points. Hosting Williamston was far back with just 15.

Paula Bennett of Williamston set a new school record in winning the high jump, leaping 5 feet.

Washington won six individual events, while Edenton took four. Edenton won all three of the relays to help close the gap, but it wasn't enough.

Vice President's Half Brother Prefers Ozarks

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN
FREDERICKTOWN, Mo. (UPI) — To Lester Mondale, a hillbilly existence in the Ozarks strikes a balance between the intellectual and physical. He doesn't envy the lifestyle of his half-brother, Vice President Walter Mondale.

"Frankly, if I could be 48 again, and in as high a position as he is, I wouldn't trade with him even if it were being offered," the 72-year-old Mondale said in an interview at his split-level log cabin.

"I wouldn't take it under any circumstances, even for the trade in years. After all, I wouldn't want to relearn so much."

"But, that's his life. He loves it and his wife loves it. He's a man of great idealism. I'm sure he feels that in his position he's able to do things he couldn't otherwise. We've given him our support all along."

A retired Unitarian minister, Mondale and his wife, Rosemary, live in the cabin he built by hand in 1948-49. Their home rests on a granite shelf on the side of a wooded valley through which the St. Francis River flows.

Mondale owns 80 acres, but the 40 acres on the side of the valley opposite his cabin are accessible only by boat or swimming.

Visitors drive on an unmarked, unpaved road from which his half-mile-long dirt driveway narrowly winds through trees and brush to the cabin 14 miles west of Fredericktown in southern Missouri.

In the living room of his comfortably furnished cabin — with a picture window overlooking the splendid scenery — Mondale talked about the contentment of his lifestyle.

"In the mornings I do my chores, such as fixing things and cutting or splitting wood. The last few weeks I've been getting wood ready for next year. I'm rich in wood."

In the afternoons Mondale turns to his writings. He is working on his seventh book on religion.

He also answers his correspondence, which increased considerably since his brother achieved national prominence last summer.

"I have been combining an intellectual life with routine physical activity," he said. "That's the balance."

"It's one of the greatest tragedies of our time that the average man in the office doesn't use the muscles nature has equipped him with, except for getting tense. Then the emotions get going and the endocrines begin to play all kinds of tricks on him — the heart, the digestion and everything else."

"Somehow society has to be reorganized to permit men to go out and use those muscles for some kind of constructive, physical work. This idea of a man working five days a week and then going to a gymnasium on the weekend and just tearing around is ridiculous. It's not a general exercise."

"Here I split wood, I carry bolts of wood, I work in the garden. It's a general exercise."

As a testimonial to balanced living, Mondale is healthy and remarkably robust.

"I don't even have a doctor," he said.

Mondale also proudly calls himself a hillbilly.

"I have a great respect for these people in the hills. They're practical, common-sense people."

Although their nearest neighbor is a half mile away, the Mondales don't feel isolated.

"We know that if we had any trouble, like a forest fire or sickness, these neighbors will be around to help in a hurry," he said.

"Another thing is that we just don't recognize any class lines. You have a good time with people and they have a good time with you. People are recognized for what they are."

Mondale has the reputation of the family historian because of his book on the Mondales of Minnesota.

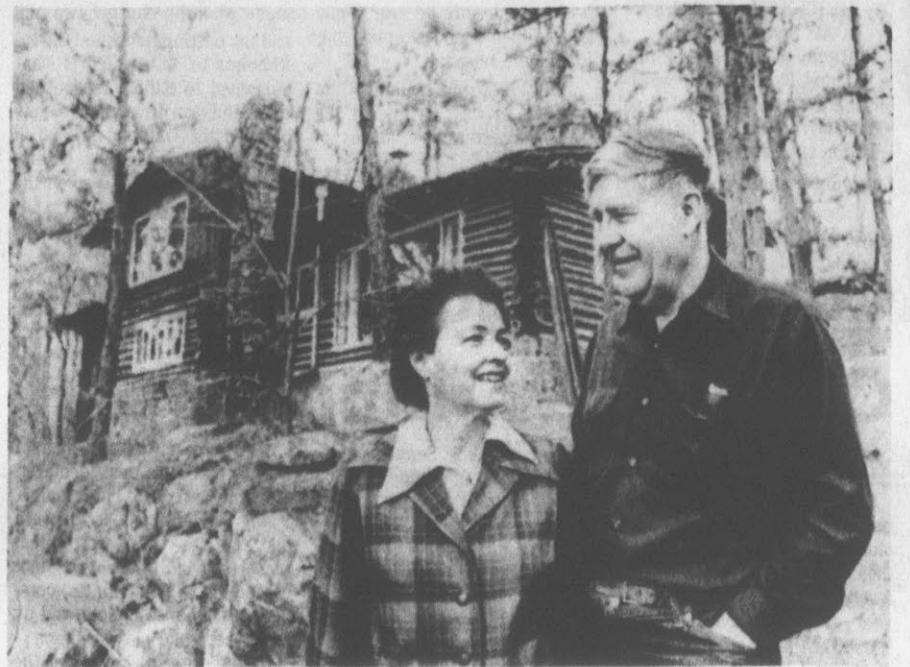

"Fritz" office assumes that any matter that comes in concerning the family history should be sent to me. I get letters from his office two or three times a week."

Mondale takes the occasional queries from news reporters philosophically.

"A Vice President's brother living out as a hillbilly is news, just as Jimmy Carter's brother is news," he said.

So far, tourists have not found their way to the Mondale home.

"The road in here," he said, "is not the kind that would invite people."

Use Plastics To Rebuild Teeth

HOUSTON (UPI) — Space-age plastics are making it possible to rebuild and repair teeth with little discomfort and less cost, according to a university dentist.

Dr. Frank Faunce, a professor at the University of Texas Dental Branch, says the plastic material is bonded to the tooth by using a dilute solution of phosphoric acid to etch the enamel. Preformed plastic is then placed over the tooth to rebuild the fractured area.

Remember 'Cannibal Of Slumgullion'

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (UPI) — A haggard man, wearing tattered blanket pieces on his feet, walked out of the Uncompaghre Mountains on April 16, 1883, and into history as Colorado's "man-eater, the cannibal of Slumgullion."

Alfred Packer, a former Union soldier and copper miner, had taken a party of six gold seekers into the mountains several months before. Their bodies were later found, partially devoured, their skulls split by an ax.

Packer, originally condemned to hang, was sentenced 10 years later to a 40-year prison term for the murders.

Students at Colorado University at Boulder named their student union grill for Packer in a possible irreverent allusion to institutional dining. This year, a 7x11 mural relating to the story is to be added in the grill.

Presentation of the mural will be just one of the events scheduled for the 9th Annual Alfred Packer Day at CU on April 20. The festivities include bands, beer chugging, eating contests and a Packer look-alike contest.

Packer, who was later called the "cannibal who gnawed on choice cuts of his fellow men," contracted in 1873 with 21 Utah prospectors for an expedition to Breckenridge, Colo.

The party set out on an Indian summer day, but soon hit a bitter winter. On Jan. 21, a band of Ute Indians discovered the ragged group and offered to share their winter camp with the prospectors.

After several weeks of good food, five of the group became restless and convinced Packer to continue. The five, Israel Swan, James Humphreys, George Noon, Shannon Bell and Frank Miller, set out Feb. 9, 1874.

Sixty days later, their guide emerged alone from the mountains, looking weary but not noticeably thinner.

At first, Parker said the group abandoned him. Several months later, his story changed while he was drinking. He said the party ran out of food and the men became desperate. Swan, 60, died of starvation and the men ate his body, he said.

Humphreys and Miller followed and their flesh sustained the survivors. The others, except Parker, were killed in a fight.

That version fell apart when Harper's Weekly artist J.A. Randolph happened onto a campsite overlooking Lake City, Colo., in the Uncompaghre Mountains and found five bodies, their skulls split by deep hatchet marks.

Packer was arrested, but escaped and remained free for nine years, despite a $5,000 reward offered for his capture. A chance encounter with one of the 21 original prospectors who remembered Packer's shrill voice put him in jail in 1883.

In his third confession, made that year, Packer said the party was starving, surviving on pine needles, rosebuds and boiled moccasin leather. He said he returned to camp after a fruitless hunt to find Bell, alone, roasting meat. He said Bell tried to kill him and died in the effort. He then noticed the bodies of the others.

"I tried to get away every day, but could not, so I lived off the flesh of these men for the bigger part of the 60 days I was out," said Packer shortly before the jury found him guilty.

"You have been, indeed, a poor, pitiable waif of humanity," said Judge Melville Gerry in sentencing Packer to death. However, a change in the Colorado death penalty saved Packer from the gallows, although elaborately printed invitations to the event had been sent out by the sheriff's office. He was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

At the age of 59 he was paroled and first settled in Littleton, a Denver suburb, where his candy-filled pockets and stories made him a favorite with children. He later moved to Deer Creek Canyon near his copper claim, purchased with money earned in prison. He died in 1907.

A widely reported story, later discounted, claimed that Judge Gerry's words at Packer's sentencing were:

"There was only seven Dimmycrats in Hinsdal County and you, you voracious, man-eatin', son-of-a-bitch, you eat five of 'em. I sentence you to hang."

ECU Host To Model Council

Students from 14 eastern U.S. colleges and universities were at East Carolina University March 25-27 as delegates to three 1977 Atlantic Coast Model United Nations Security Councils.

Each of the three model councils simulated proceedings and general structure of the United Nations Security Council, with a Secretary General and delegates representing the 15 nations currently comprising the UN Security Council: Benin, People's Republic of China, France, Libya, Pakistan, Panama, Romania, USSR, United States, United Kingdom, Federal Republic of Germany, India, Mauritius, Canada, and Venezuela.

The three ECU students serving as Secretaries General of the three model Security Councils were Dennis Caskey of Monroe, junior intermediate education major; Rachelle Jean Longnecker of Greenville, junior French and political science major; and Marc Stuart Adler of Park Ridge, New Jersey, sophomore political science major.

Campuses, nations represented, names of student delegates include:

PITT COUNTY, Greenville — East Carolina University (India, Venezuela, Panama, Pakistan, France, Canada) Steven Billet, Sheila Wilson, John Ritter, Lynne Yow, Richard Laupus, Yasmin Hussain, Kent Johnson, Lauren Brehm, Bill Stevenson and Connie Nanney.

Eight Attend Nat'l Meet

Eight members of the East Carolina University student chapter of the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA) attended the national NSTA convention in Cincinnati, Ohio last weekend.

The convention featured speeches by Margaret Mead, Jonas Salk, B. F. Skinner and Jules Bergman.

The recently-organized ECU student chapter is the first chartered NSTA student chapter in the U.S. and was so recognized at the national convention.

Two ECU delegates, Jo Duckett of Jacksonville and Jerry Everhart of Lexington reported on their research at the convention. Both are graduate students and teaching assistants in the ECU Department of Science Education.

Other ECU student delegates were Pamela Fisher of Wilmington Beth Hall and Tom Kabella of Fayetteville, Jonathan Pharr of Plymouth, Wayne Powell of Robersonville and Steve Stevens of Tuxedo.

Egg Hunt Is Set Tuesday

The annual Easter Egg Hunt for children of East Carolina University faculty, staff and students has been set for Tuesday, April 5 at 5:30 p.m.

According to the ECU Junior Panhellenic Council, sponsors of the egg hunt, eggs will be hidden in the grassy area in front of Fleming and Jarvis Residence Halls.

The area will be divided into two sections, one for children aged one through five years, and one for ages six through 10.

A "golden egg" will be placed in each section, and a prize will be awarded to the two children who find these special eggs, said Junior Panhellenic President Tracy Hembree. However, all children will be able to find some eggs, and an Easter Bunny will distribute chocolate treats.

Egg hunters should bring their own baskets.

Strictly Kosher

Holiday Tours

NEW YORK (UPI) — Special strictly kosher Passover holiday 10 to 12 day packages are being offered by Eastern Airlines and a tour operator to Florida, Puerto Rico and Mexico, beginning April 1. The package includes accommodations, three kosher meals daily, and fully conducted traditional Seder services at the Diplomat in Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Fla., El Conquistador in Puerto Rico and the Plaza International Hyatt Regency in Acapulco.

Research Report

In Math Journal

A research report by Carol B. Collins, graduate student in the East Carolina University Department of Mathematics, will appear in the national journal of Pi Mu Epsilon honor society in mathematics.

Her report, "Fixed Point Theorems in Metric Spaces," was presented to the 1976 Pi Mu Epsilon convention in Toronto, Canada, last August. She was the seventh ECU student to report on her research at the annual gathering in seven consecutive years.

Beautification Meet April 4

The first 1977 meeting of the Keep Pitt County Beautiful organization will take place at the First Federal Savings and Loan Association building on the 264 by-pass on Monday, April 4. The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m., with plans to finish by 3 p.m.

All persons interested in the continuing project of keeping Pitt County clean and beautiful are invited to attend.

FROG CRITIC — Herbert Charles is Seattle's newest critic. The man in the frog outfit appears on a local public affairs program and will soon venture out into "polite society". (AP Wirephoto)

New Critic-At-Large Is Planning Bigger Things

By TERI BURKHART
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The red Fiat pulls up in front of the theater and a frog, dressed in a tuxedo, climbs out. He straightens his white gloves and strolls inside to wait for the performance to begin.

It's Herbert Charles, Seattle's new critic-at-large.

Herbert Charles is the star of a local public affairs program. The trip to the theater in the red Fiat is in Herbert's future — he has big plans for a venture into Seattle's polite society.

"We were looking to add a piece of satire to the program," says the man in the frog suit, Arthur Wicks. He's public affairs director at KING-TV.

"We also thought of putting in some honest social criticism," says Wicks, "and Herbert Charles was the result."

Wicks says he wasn't sure how the combination would be received. He reports public reaction has been positive.

"Herbert made his first appearance Christmas Day, and talked about the topic 'Where is Christmas?' We were afraid some people would think it irreverent, but we didn't receive one bad comment," says Wicks.

So far Herbert Charles has appeared only on television. Problems with the mask have delayed his public debut, but Wicks says the mask now works fine. "Before Herbert couldn't eat or talk properly. But in the future he'll be going to restaurants and the opera."

Herbert lined up a couple of TV talk shows this month and arranged to write a guest editorial in a regional magazine in April.

The idea of using a "frog" as a vehicle for social criticism was dreamed up by Wicks and Walter Simon, who plays Herbert's faithful sidekick, Walter Coles.

"My only part in the show is to hold Herbert's leash. When he gets too carried away, I have to restrain him," says Simon.

"While the performance is tongue-in-cheek, the criticism is serious," says Simon. "I feel TV is not addressing the problems of culture. Herbert Charles is a kind of shock treatment. He takes you unaware — you're not used to hearing a frog talk about culture."

"I'm a rather large man," says Wicks. "And in a mask and tuxedo I present a rather incongruous appearance. A frog giving serious criticism is a funny thing. It's supposed to grab your attention."

"Everything about Herbert Charles is real, in that his background is my background. I'm a writer, and a critic in my own right," says Wicks. "I'm an actor, too, and when I put on that mask I am Herbert Charles."

Why would a man put on a frog mask just to talk about the theater, sports and cultural institutions?

"It's a gas," says Wicks, "a real gas."

Awards Go To Three Authors

NEW YORK (AP) — Three authors were recently honored for books published in 1976.

The American Revolution Round Table awarded its prize for the best book on the American Revolution to Charles Bracelen Flood for his book "Rise, and Fight Again," a history of four American defeats and how they were overcome.

The Society of Children's Book Writers gave its Golden Kite Award to Eve Bunting for her young people's novel, "One More Flight."

The winner of the award for the best book of belles lettres in English written by a non-native speaker of English from Africa or Asia was T. Obinkaram Echeva. The award is given jointly by the English Speaking Union of the U.S. and "Books Abroad," a literary quarterly sponsored by the University of Oklahoma. Mr. Echeva, a Nigerian, won the award for his first novel, "The Land's Lord."

Good 'Shelling' At Two Beaches

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Two of the best shelling beaches for Nassau and Paradise Island visitors are Adelaide and Yamacraw, where "finds" can include the lovely pink and white sunrise tellin. Collectors also come upon pink pen shells, murexes and the bleeding tooth, so-named for the red streaks through teethe-like projections in the shell's opening.

Phasing Out Incinerators

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The Buenos Aires municipal government has given owners of homes and businesses until the end of 1977 to phase out trash incinerators as part of an anti-pollution drive.

Trash is to be compacted or placed in air-tight containers for collection.

New emission standards have also been set for vehicles using diesel fuel.

Folk Groups Abound; People Anxious 'To Belong'

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (UPI) — An anthropologist, who readily admits the majority of his colleagues disagree with him, contends folk groups are proliferating in today's society. Only Alan Dundes includes surfers, computer programmers and pregnant women among his folk groups. He says they have intricate customs and lore rivaling those of obscure tribes and clans.

folk group as any unit of people who share a common experience or feeling, such as anxiety, and articulate it through rituals, art, jokes and other methods of communication. In this, he disagrees with others who stick to the traditional definition that folk groups are "a dependant, less civilized entity." "Actually," he told a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, "all groups are folk groups — adolescents, chemists, ballerinas and so on down to families." Using the example of adolescents, who experience a great deal of anxiety about their place in society, Dundes said the group defines itself with dress, language, what are sometimes considered bizarre mating rituals and other behaviors. "Each set of folk has its own particular set of problems which is reflected in the lore and rituals," he said. College students universally have fables about how a certain professor grades papers by throwing them down the stairs. Pregnant women exchange tales of long and painful deliveries. Surfers discuss the perfect wave, shark scares and injuries. Computer programmers have jokes about a computer which can replace humans. Jokes are a major form of lore for contemporary folk groups, according to Dundes, with the humor expressing both the anxiety and values of the group while also defining the unit.

In large cities and bulky corporations, folk groups have proliferated. Dundes said their existence is evidenced in office in-jokes, abbreviations, lunch customs and lore — all frequently transmitted via Xerox copy.

In the federal bureaucracy there is the language of government agency acronyms, the ritual of coffee breaks, the humor of lost paperwork and the art of desk decoration.

"The less identity a job has and the more bureaucracy, the more important folk groups are," he said. "The folk lore asserts the identity of the group and the traditions give the group identity."

Queen's Home To Be Opened

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth's staff says she's expecting 150,000 guests at her Sandringham House this summer.

The queen, observing her silver jubilee, has opened the home to the public for the first time.

Beginning May 3, sightseers will pay 51 cents to see the 70-acre royal gardens and grounds and another 51 cents to go inside Sandringham House.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Museum of Folk Art is presenting a display of paintings and watercolors, "Selected Masterpieces of New York State Folk Painting." The exhibition is the last of a series on New York State folk arts, and will be shown through May 22.

"People who are forced into little boxes fight back with greater and greater amounts of folklore. It tides them over. People are desperate to belong."

Appointed By Governor

Lt. Carl Gilchrist, executive officer of Highway Patrol Troop A headquartered in Greenville, is one of four men appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to serve on the Board of Commissioners of the Law Enforcement Officers Benefit and Retirement Fund.

Gilchrist's appointment was announced yesterday, along with Eugene F. Groce of Winston-Salem, Transylvania County Sheriff Milford Clyde Hubbard, and Greensboro Police Department Maj. Conrad D. Wade. Wade is already on the seven-member board and was reappointed. The Governor is required to appoint one sheriff, one police officer, one state law enforcement officer and one public member and they serve at the pleasure of the governor.

The state treasurer, the insurance commissioner and state auditor serve as ex-officio members of the board, with the state auditor serving as chairman.

Gilchrist is a Harnett County native and joined the Highway Patrol in March 1950. He has been stationed in Plymouth, Lumberton and Graham before becoming executive officer of Troop A in 1970.

'Society Of Solitary Cyclists' Devoted To Holmes

By RICK VAN SANT CINCINNATI (UPI) — On a recent cold and dreary night, members of "The Society of Solitary Cyclists" gathered for some mind-stirring discussion and discourse on their singular object of affection — Sherlock Holmes.

"The Society of Solitary Cyclists" takes its name from the short story "The Adventure of the Solitary Cyclist," one of 60 tales about the London detective that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle penned in longhand, an obvious labor of love, in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Thanks to Doyle's brilliant writing, Holmes remains the most famous detective in fiction. In fact, Doyle managed to make Holmes so lifelike that members of the "Society of Solitary Cyclists" and 100 similar clubs around the world take great delight in picturing Holmes as a real person.

So, it was not surprising when guest speaker Paul Herbert began his presentation with the tongue-in-cheek complaint that the local library had placed its Sherlock Holmes collection in the "fictional mystery" department.

"Of course," acknowledged Herbert, "the popular myth continues that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made up these accounts. That myth is propagated by the powerful estate of Doyle.

"We know, of course," Herbert continued in serious tones, "that Holmes lived and that Dr. John H. Watson actually authored the accounts of Holmes' detective work. Doyle appears to have been a literary agent who managed to get Watson's work published."

As Herbert spoke, a young man in the audience pulled on his deerstalker hat, the double-billed cap that has become the symbol of Holmes. The group was a mixed lot — men in business suits, long-haired young women, young men in jeans. Even the editor of the Cincinnati Post was on hand.

Herbert, who teaches social studies to seventh graders when he isn't re-reading his Holmes, has an insatiable "Sherlockian" appetite. In the past two years, for example, he has traveled to Cleveland, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Chicago, Rochester, Toronto and New York City to participate in Holmes-related activities.

Herbert told local club members of the widespread interest in Holmes. "Thousands of letters come in every year to 221 B Baker St. (Holmes' London address)," Herbert said. "Many of the letters ask advice on solving mysteries.

"Franklin D. Roosevelt was a member of the Baker Street Irregulars (a New York City-based Holmes club) and once wrote to see if Holmes might have some American ancestry. "A bibliography shows more than 6,000 items were published about Holmes before 1973. A new bibliography being prepared will have another 6,000 items.

"The 'Holmes National Archives' is in Santa Fe, N.M., where John Shaw has collected 98 per cent of all the English material ever published on Holmes. He even throws a birthday party for Professor Moriarty (Holmes' most feared enemy) every Halloween in nearby Moriarty, N.M.

"A Holmes club in New Jersey is named 'The Five

Orange Pips' on behalf of a Holmes story, and membership is limited to five persons. Each member delivers a scholarly paper on Holmes each year.

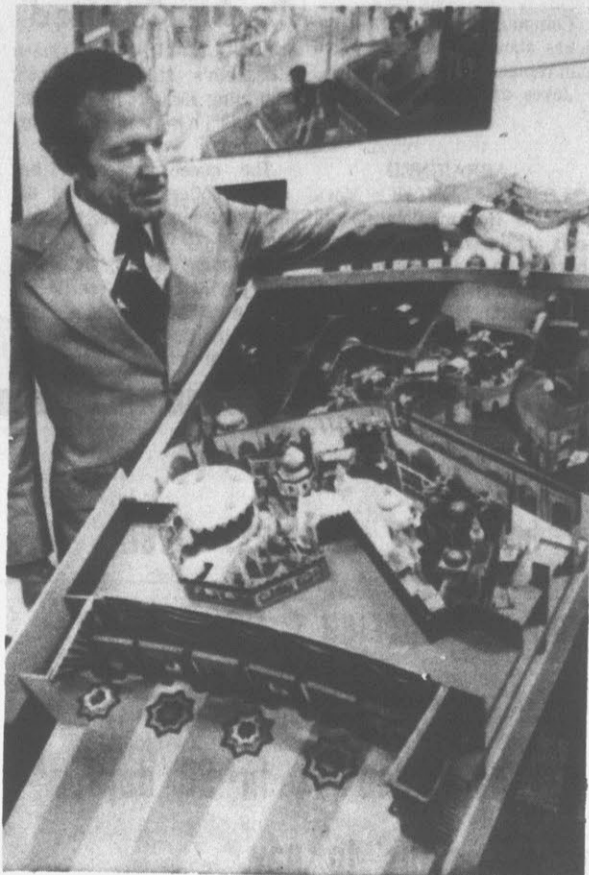

"The Baker Street Irregulars in New York is a male-only club. Their annual meeting was once picketed by female fans of Holmes, who later started a women-only club, 'The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.'

"The club in Boston, 'The Speckled Band' (named after another Holmes adventure) was even consulted by Boston police baffled by a big Brinks robbery there."

After Herbert's talk, the "Society of Solitary Cyclists" listened attentively to a recording of an old Rathbone-Bruce half-hour radio broadcast of a Holmes adventure.

Six-Hour Movie To Be Aired On Two Sundays

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — This Sunday night and on Easter Sunday, NBC is airing three-hour segments of a six-hour movie on the life of Jesus, "Jesus of Nazareth," directed by Italy's Franco Zeffirelli.

Britain's Sir Lew Grade, whose company coproduced the film with Italian TV, this week screened a 2½-hour edited version to give various clerics, critics and civilians here a rough idea of its contents.

He said that among the missing segments were Jesus' miracles, Mary Magdalene's conversion and the gathering of Christ's disciples. Then the curtains parted, the show began.

It started with the betrothal of Joseph, played by Yorgo Voragis, to Mary, played by Olivia Hussey, and from there traced the birth, crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus in remarkable detail.

From what I saw, the film is beautifully photographed and seems quite faithful to the Bible. Alas, its pace generally is so slow, so reverent, I fear only the very religious or patient will stick with it.

Robert Powell, a fine-featured English actor, portrays Jesus in His adult years. But save for a few occasions, he seems to be playing only a simpering mystic with a sad, firm gaze that could melt steel.

I don't think anyone would find his depiction offensive, only disappointing. Ditto Michael York, cast as John the Baptist.

York, as he goes about urging all to repent, to prepare for the coming of Christ, comes across only as a wild-eyed, ragged character who seems convincingly tetchy, not convincingly prophetic.

Peter Ustinov, appearing in Sunday's opener, turns in a good, if somewhat familiar performance as the bejeveled, ro-tund, and mad Herod the Great. Rod Steiger, cast as Pontius Pilate in Easter Sunday's show, is excellent and very convincing.

Sad to say, Miss Hussey, a very talented actress, seems to have little to do in her major role as the mother of Christ except look saintly or grief-stricken, as the occasion demands.

The film is an admirable and ambitious effort.

It does try to render the story of Jesus in realistic terms, to avoid stock tableau scenes. But tighter editing, a brisker pace, might have made the film a much better effort than the one I saw this week.

PREPARING FOR BEETHOVEN MARATHON — American pianist Balint Yazsonyi smiles as he sits at piano in London, England. He is preparing for the weekend of April 2 when he will attempt an unprecedented musical feat: to play from memory all 32 of Beethoven's piano sonatas in order, pausing only for meals and a night's sleep. The concert is to commemorate the 150th anniversary of Beethoven's death. (AP Wirephoto)

NOW, DO AS I DO! — Hollywood movie director Steven Spielberg, on location in Bombay, India, tells (top) 2,000 costumed Hindu movie extras to raise both arms for the film scene. Below is the first "take". Something was lost in translation, obviously. Six more takes and he got 4,000 arms raised on cue. He was filming "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." (AP Wirephoto)

STEER CLEAR OF BALDING TIRES
WASHINGTON (AP) — Bald tires, besides being much more likely to slip on wet roads, are 44 times more likely to go flat than new tires, says the Tire Retread Information Bureau (TRIB).

Ninety percent of tire trouble occurs when tires have 1-16 (or less) inches of tread remaining.

The bidding:

4♦ Pass Pass Pass

Looking at all four hands, four spades seems to be unbeatable. However, an imaginative falsecard by East literally gave declarer no chance.

The auction was quite straightforward. North showed a balanced 16-18 points and South indicated that he wanted to be in game, but preferably in a suit, with his jump to three spades. With excellent support, North had no hesitation in contracting for the spade game.

West led the top of his diamond sequence, declarer played low from dummy and East won the king. Since the play to the first trick marked declarer with the queen of diamonds, that card would provide a discard for the low heart in dummy. The obvious defensive tricks, therefore, were the one diamond and the ace of hearts. Two more tricks were needed to defeat the contract. Since it was unlikely that the defenders had a trump trick, the club suit would have to provide those tricks. Also, West would have to hold at least A-10 in the suit to give the defenders a chance.

At trick two, East shifted to the jack of clubs! As the cards lie, declarer could make the contract by covering with the queen and later playing West for the ten. But he quite naturally presumed that East would not lead the jack unless he had the ten behind it, so he ran the jack to dummy's king.

Trumps were drawn in three rounds, ending in the closed hand, and a heart to the king lost to East's ace. Continuing with his planned defense, East led another club, and no matter what declarer did West had to score both the ace and ten for the setting trick.

We have a great deal of sympathy for declarer. East had to play exactly as he did at each opportunity to set the contract. However, declarer should never have allowed East the opportunity for his brilliant piece of chicanery. Had he won the first trick with dummy's ace of diamonds and immediately conceded a trick to the ace of hearts, he would have been safe no matter what the defenders did because dummy's other heart honor would provide declarer with a club discard.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Be sure to steer clear of any arguments or confrontations and maintain good relations with others and you can easily gain your aims. Make plans for a more satisfactory future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If a co-worker is annoying, take it in stride, and then everything works out fine for you. Don't neglect your responsibilities.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) New ideas can help you advance in your line of endeavor. Attend the social tonight but avoid the expenditure of too much money.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try not to argue at home and increase harmony there. New appliances can make your home more functional. Be happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't be so critical of others in stating your views. Improved ideas can help you get ahead in career matters.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Consult business expert for advice on an important money matter. Health treatments now can improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what your true aims and goals are and go after them in a positive way. Take more time to improve your health.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you are worried over personal matters, keep calm and they will soon right themselves. Consult expert for advice you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Taking any risks with friends could lead to unhappy results today. Know exactly what your true ambitions and desires are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take the time for philanthropic work that can give you added prestige. Show others that you are a humanitarian.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new plan you have in mind needs more study before putting it in operation. Obtain the data you need from the right sources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure to keep promises you have made with others. Take no chances where your money is concerned today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A condition arises that is not to your liking, but sleep on it and tomorrow you will know exactly how to handle it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to solve problems easily and should have good, practical training early in life. Give the encouragement needed to improve development and bring out the fine talents in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Colby Cites 'Fuzzy' Law

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The original CIA charter was drafted with vague language and caused later abuse of power by the agency, said former CIA director William Colby Wednesday.

"Twenty-eight years ago when we wrote the law to provide for the formation of the CIA," he said, "we purposely used fuzzy, vague language that would allow us to do anything, and in subsequent years we acted outside of our proper authority in too many cases," he told an estimated 600 students in Memorial Hall on the University of North Carolina campus.

When those improper activities were brought to light, the resulting bad reputation of the CIA came because of poor public relations.

Colby said, "Though we had already investigated the charges on our own and put a stop to it, we forgot to tell the American people."

A dozen picketers protested Colby's appearance on campus which was sponsored by the International Affairs Colloquium and the Union Forum Committee. The protesting students called for an abolishment of the CIA.

The former director in his speech called for firmer controls on the intelligence-gathering agency, but stopped short of endorsing its disbandment.

Temperature Of 80 Degrees

Warm weather prevailed in Pitt County Wednesday. The high temperature was recorded at 80 degrees and the low temperature was recorded at 63 degrees, according to the Greenville Utilities Department. The rainfall was measured at .01 Wednesday and the river level measured 6.8 feet, according to the National Weather Service River Level Chart.

Thursday at 8 a.m. the temperature was recorded at 68 degrees. Thursday's weather included cloudy skies and warm temperatures. Friday's forecast includes clear skies and temperatures in the 60's and 70's.

New Arena Awaits Fiddler Gathering

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — The circus tent will be gone this year, but the country fiddling will be the same at the 53 annual Union Grove Old Time Fiddlers Convention.

J. Pierce Van Hoy's cow pasture will still be the site of the event which begins next Thursday night and runs through Easter Sunday. But it's being moved into a 12,000-seat arena which almost was not completed in time.

The event was begun in 1924 by Van Hoy's father to raise money for local schools, and has taken place on the son's Iredell County farm since 1970.

One earlier contestant who won't be competing is J.B. Prince, 20, of High Point, N.C. who took top fiddling honors last year.

"I don't like to get beat and I don't like to see other people get beat," said Prince.

In addition to fiddlers, there will be banjo, guitar, mandolin, bass, dobro, old-time band and bluegrass band categories.

Marketing New Board Game Is Tough

By TINA L. HORTON
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Art teacher Edward Jennings says a board game he has developed helps black children relate to their community in a positive way, but he's having a hard time getting it on the market.

"The goal of the game is to cooperate with the community in a profitable way," said Jennings, an instructor at Talladega College. "If you don't cooperate when a poll card is drawn, other players will vote against you, and you will lose the game."

Jennings and Malik Ali began working on "The Black Community Game" six years ago when both were students at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"Both of us felt that, for the most part, schools have failed to prepare black children for adulthood," Jennings said.

"We invented the game to try to teach the children, in a pleasurable manner, about things they come in contact with everyday and are not aware of, but will have to learn to work with as they grow older."

Jennings said the game deals with facets of life that are familiar to black children, such as unemployment, or aspects that may be present but which go unnoticed, such as institutions like the Chamber of Commerce.

Game situation cards include anything from being laid off a job to being in a car accident. Positive spaces on the board give players chances to donate money or time to the community. Negative spaces are marked by hypodermic needles for drug use or a bottle for using alcohol.

Dice are used to determine moves. Chips worth five points each are given for using "influence" in a beneficial manner.

"You get black chips for influence in a black community, red chips for political influence and white chips for influence in a white community," Jennings said. "In the game, influence in a white community means you have a friend there, and this is quite often how black people are actually helped."

"The game is not teaching about hate or segregation or integration or busing," he said. "The game is saying 'help improve your own neighborhood,' and I think that is what it's all about."

The game was produced by a Boston toy firm, Motherland, Inc., with Ali as president and Jennings, vice president.

Jennings said colleges have used the game in sociology and psychology courses. Stores in Atlanta, Chicago and Boston that stocked the games "sold out before Christmas."

"The game was bought by blacks, whites and Hispanics," Jennings said. "It has not turned off people with progressive minds."

Although it appears to have a market, Jennings said major producers of board games are not interested.

"Officials of one corporation said they didn't want to be bothered with it because they feared they would be accused of black exploitation," he said. "Another company was just not interested."

"Maybe these corporations are saying 'we've made it, and we don't want any of your competition,'" Jennings is discouraged by these reactions.

"I've been working on a coloring book for black children, but I don't want to become involved with it too much until we've worked something out with the game," he said. "I'm interested in the book because I feel black children need positive identification with black heroes."

Jennings seems baffled by the problems he is having getting the game mass-produced:

"It's safe and educational and helpful and it's going down the drain. But we're still struggling to go on with it."

FOAMY FISHING — Seemingly unaware that the bow of his craft is taking on foam, this stalwart fisherman grimly continues fishing. The foam is produced as water is drawn through the discharge pipes of the Lake Talquin Dam near Tallahassee, Fla. Fishing this spot usually produces a good catch, since the fish rest here after being drawn under the dam. However, this gentleman landed nothing but foam for his effort. (AP Wirephoto)

Nordics Seeking Improved Nutrition

By PHILIP M. STONE
STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Hamburgers are good but not with French fried potatoes. Try vegetables and boiled potatoes instead. It's more healthful.

That's the advice of the Swedish Social Board Health Council, a state organization formed to improve dietary and exercise habits.

Sweden's largest hamburger chain, operated by a state-owned company, serves French fries.

In Norway, Parliament has approved a government report saying people should eat less fat and sugar and more grain, potatoes, vegetables and fish. The state also is committed to maintaining a reasonable consumption of milk and milk products.

Counselor Per Aas of Norway's Ministry of Agriculture says the practical implications of a nutrition policy will be studied by a committee representing the ministries of fish, consumer affairs, social affairs, trade, education, environment, agriculture and foreign affairs.

The Swedes are the leaders in raising nutritional standards in the Nordic nations.

Vidar Hellstrom, a Swedish health council official, said: "We have succeeded in reducing fats in Swedish products. The use of coffee and bread has decreased, but unfortunately the consumption of sweets has gone up recently."

The council's $2.1 million budget allows it to send officials to schools, hospitals, factories and athletic organizations to advise on proper eating habits and exercise.

It issues posters and booklets urging citizens to live well and eat better breakfasts.

In January, it began telling supermarket personnel they have a responsibility for their customers' choice of food.

Stores were urged to advertise vegetables and foods with few calories, fats or sugars.

But a UPI check of supermarkets and grocery stores in Stockholm indicate the message may not be getting through.

"We receive such an enormous amount of printings from the authorities, and I cannot recall seeing that one," said Bert Sanderhem, head of a suburban supermarket. "Such a campaign would take us a week to carry out, and I am not sure we have the working force for it."

Sanderhem added that he now has special diet departments in response to customers' requests for more healthful food.

Finland, with the world's highest heart disease rate, has had campaigns to eat healthful food. The state-operated television network has run occasional anti-sugar campaigns.

In North Karelia, a state supported anti-smoking campaign and other campaigns to reduce fatty foods have reduced heart attacks markedly.

The Finnish government actively supports exercise promotion with funding of about $800,000 a year. It will increase cigarette taxes twice this year and intends to ban cigarette advertising as of March 1, 1978.

Most liquor sales in Scandinavia are handled by state alcohol monopolies. Their charters require them to try to reduce alcohol consumption.

In 1975, a Swedish alcohol monopoly advertising campaign asked readers to record their weekly alcohol consumption so they could see how bad their drinking problem was.

After completing his chart, Herman Lindqvist, a veteran war correspondent for a Stockholm newspaper, gave up drinking within one year and wrote the alcohol monopoly:

"I do not think any written text in any book or newspaper has ever had such an impact on me."

His letter is being published in the monopoly's latest advertising campaign.

100,000 MILES OR 3 YEARS NEW CAR WARRANTY

For 100,000 miles or 3 years we guarantee the motor, transmission, and rear end of every new Toyota we sell. This warranty is in the form of a legal document and supplements the new car warranty of Toyota Motor Sales, USA. Commercial vehicles are excluded. Copy of warranty is on display in our showroom.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willling to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.
