

Joint Committee Votes $8 Billion State Budget

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Joint House and Senate Appropriations Committee this morning adopted an $8 billion proposed state budget for 1977-79 that was drafted over the weekend by a special "super subcommittee."

It calls for general spending of $2.2 billion in 1977-78 and $2.3 billion in 1978-79. More than $400 million is set for highway-fund spending each year, and the remainder comes from federal sources.

The measure was approved after House opponents failed in their attempt to eliminate a 36 per cent pay increase for the lieutenant governor. Rep. H.M.

Michaux, D-Durham, objected to that increase, saying he had a "philosophical objection" to such a large increase while state employees and teachers are getting only a smaller hike.

The committee's next step is to decide on special appropriation bills, from the $10 million set aside for them each year.
Then the entire package then goes to the House and Senate floor.

Pay Study Has Tentative OK

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday gave tentative approval to a State Personnel Department study and recommendations which will result in pay increases for a number of county employees due to re-classification of their jobs.

In tentatively okaying the study, the board endorsed a minimum of 6½ per cent pay increase for all workers. Under the recommended reclassifica-tions, some employees would receive an increase of 11½ per cent or more.

The reclassification study was designed to get the county employees on a more equal pay basis with State workers.

Commissioners also tentatively approved four new employees yesterday, although others may be added before the budget is finalized.

The board gave a tentative okay to an assistant to the county fire marshal, a heating and air conditioning mechanic for the Department of Buildings and Grounds, one dispatcher for the Sheriff's Department and an additional agricultural extension agent.

The various county departments and agencies requested some 35 new employees be added, although County Manager Reginald Gray recommended only 15 new positions in his budget message to the board.
The board last night cut several requests recommended by Gray.

In other action last night commissioners indicated their desire to move toward a program that would allow the use of the county's data processing equipment to handle a portion of the next reevaluation of property in the county which is due to be completed by January 1, 1981. Funds for the work would come from reevaluation reserves already budgeted.

The board is expected to have several other meetings before the 1977-1978 budget is finalized.

Commissioners have indicated their intentions are not to exceed the 92 cents per $100 valuation tax rate in effect this year, for the new budget.

Bids Approved By Commission

By TOM BAINES

The Redevelopment Commission approved Zack Reddick Jr.
as a qualified bidder last night for a parcel located in the Southside project.

Commissioners qualified Reddick to bid on Disposal Parcel D-4, located on Perkins Street, including a residential structure.

Faye Brewington, project manager for the NC R-134 Southside program, reported that the disposal parcel contains some 15,000 square feet.

A date for the bid opening on the parcel has not been set, it was noted.

In other business on a brief business agenda, Mrs. Brewington informed the commissioners that one family was relocated from Southside since the May meeting. No relocation activity took place in West Meadowbrook, she said.

According to the project manager, the commission acquired one structure on Mc-Clellan Street in Southside and two structures were demolished.

In West Meadowbrook, two acquisitions, involving dwellings, took place since the last meeting and the demolition of one structure was completed.

Assistant Director J. C.
Lamm, reporting in the absence of Executive Director Joe Laney

and Real Estate Officer Kirby Boyd who are attending a meeting in Florida, noted that no acquisition or demolition took place in the Central Business District since May.

One relocation was completed in the downtown section, he said, involving gas pumps at Pugh's Tire and Service Center at the corner of Fifth and Greene Streets.

Ed Cobb, the staff's rehabilitation officer, told the board members that two property rehabilitation projects were completed in the Greenville Heights area since the previous meeting and three other rehabilitations are underway in the area.

Cobb said that contracts were signed Monday for a fourth rehabilitation project in Greenville Heights.

Bids for five other rehabilitations in the Greenville Heights area under the city's Community Development Program will be opened on June 30, it was reported.

No rehabilitation work was completed in the Southside or West Meadowbrook areas, he said.

Laney and Boyd are attending the annual meeting of the Southeast Regional Council of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials in Orlando, Fla.

TYPE OF CAMP WHERE SLAYING OCCURRED — A reporter walks past a tent in an area similar to the one where three young Girl Scouts were murdered at Camp Scott, Locust Grove, Okla.

ducting their investigation. (AP Wirephoto)

Officers Combing Scene Seeking Clues To Murder Of Girl Scouts

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — Harsh flood lights powered by thumping portable generators lit a 610-acre campground as officers searched through the night for clues in the murder of three young Girl Scouts.

"We've got a maniac somewhere around," said Wayne County Sheriff Glen "Pete" Weaver Monday. "This thing is horrible, it's the work of a demented person."

The night before, in contrast, was dark and silent as 100 Scouts began a week-long outing at Camp Scott, an isolated retreat about 45 miles east of Tulsa.

According to camp director Barbara Day, no one reported hearing anything unusual between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m., the time authorities believe a lone assailant beat and strangled the girls, then dragged their nude bodies in blood-soaked sleeping bags to the intersection of two dirt roads 150 yards away.

But a newspaper reporter said he overheard scouts telling others Monday that they had heard screams at about 3 a.m.

A camp worker said in response to the report that girls "often hear things and scream and giggle" during the first night of an outing.

Michelle Guse, 9, and Lori Lee Farmer, who would have celebrated her 9th birthday on Saturday, were apparently killed by blows to the head, authorities said. Doris Denise Milner, 10, was apparently strangled by a length of cord, her cries probably muffled by a towel found alongside her body. Her hands were bound behind her back with adhesive tape, one investigator said.

"Apparently, from viewing the scene and the bodies, the little girls were beaten to death," said Ted Lempe, a state investigator. "There is also some evidence of sexual molestation of at least one of the girls."

Autopsies were scheduled to determine the exact cause of death of the trio, who had been sleeping in a 12-by-14-foot tent pitched in a wooded area after arriving at the camp on Sunday.

Police said the tent was 150 yards from one in which four camp counselors slept.

Other scouts and their 30 adult leaders were sent home after the murders were discovered. Parents waited at the Girl Scout headquarters in Tulsa for the returning buses, wondering how to explain the murders to their daughters, of elementary through high school age.

"Mommy, what happened?" asked one little camper as her parents gathered her up in a hushed embrace. "We just got there."

Final Escapee Is Captured

BRUSHY MOUNTAIN, Tenn.
(AP) — The last of the inmates who fled maximum security

Brushy Mountain State Prison with convicted assassin James Earl Ray was recaptured today, authorities announced.

A Tennessee corrections department spokesman said no details were immediately available on how Douglas Shelton, 32, was apprehended. But guards had been concentrating their search for him in the area where Ray and Ray's cellmate, Earl Hill were seized late Sunday and early Monday.

Shelton worked on the prison's plumbing gang and is believed responsible for the makeshift pipe ladder used by the seven inmates to crawl over the wall. His capture keeps intact Brushy Mountain's record for allowing no successful escape.

Ray, meanwhile, was back in custody but not talking. Authorities said he, Shelton and Hill apparently spent weeks planning last Friday's break.

"As far as the escape, we feel at this time that we are looking at Doug Shelton, James Earl Ray and Earl Hill, initially," said Warden Stoney Lane.
"We know it's well planned because of the ladder."

Michaux Nominated To U.S. Attorney Post

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state legislator who was active in Jimmy Carter's campaign for the presidency has been nominated to become the first black U.S. attorney in the history of North Carolina and possibly of the South.

"I think it means that the President is committed to putting qualified people in positions, whether they are black or white," said State Rep. H.M.

"Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, of his nomination by Carter to be U.S. attorney for the middle district of the state.

A spokesman for the U.S.
Justice Department could not say Monday if Michaux would be the first black named in the South. Michaux, however, said he knows of three black U.S. attorneys in the nation and "I don't think that there has ever been a black in that position in the South."

If his nomination is confirmed by the U.S. Senate, Michaux would be the federal government's prosecutor for federal crimes committed in an area that encompasses 28 counties and stretches from Durham in the east to Wilkes and Surry in the west.

Another North Carolinian, George M. Anderson of Raleigh, was also nominated Monday for a U.S. attorney post. Anderson would represent the state's eastern district.

Carter has not nominated anyone for the western district, but Harold Edwards of Charlotte, counsel to U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., is reportedly being considered for the post.

Michaux, 46, is a graduate of North Carolina Central University law school and is a real estate broker in addition to practicing law. He is in his second term in the General Assembly was a Carter delegate to the Democratic National Convention last summer.

"This was a significant thing," he said of the U.S. attorney position. "You're really down at the working level."

Naming minorities to positions such as U.S. attorney is as important as having a black — Justice Thurgood Marshall
— on the U.S. Supreme Court, Michaux said.

Michaux once served 3½ years as assistant district attorney in Durham County.

"When a black walked into the courtroom, he had somebody he could relate to, whether it was somebody on his side or not. It showed the court was not necessarily prejudiced against him," Michaux said.

Anderson, 56, was assistant prosecutor in Wake County Superior Court from 1957 to 1960 and now is in private practice.
He was a classmate of Morgan at Wake Forest University and has been active in Morgan's campaigns.

MICHAUX NOMINATED FOR U.S. ATTORNEY — President Carter on Monday nominated N.C. Rep. H. M. "Mickey" Michaux (D-Durham) for U.S. Attorney for the middle district of North Carolina. Should be confirmed by the Senate, Michaux will become the first black to hold the post in the South.

No Changes In Telephone Book

In a ruling issued Monday by the North Carolina State Utilities Commission, the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company has been advised it must issue the 1977 telephone directory for the Greenville area in a format listing area towns individually.

George Clack, Business Officer Manager in Greenville for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, said that because of the restraining order, "we will close the acceptance of listings on June 30, and by August begin issuing the 1977 directory which will have an effective date of August 25."

Normally, Clack explained, acceptance of listings for the new annual directory is closed at the end of May.

"The format will be the same for the new directory as it has been in the past," Clack noted, "with individual listings given to the towns."

A Farmville attorney, Wilton
R. Duke, Jr., one of the proponents of keeping the directories in a format showing individual communities, said "I am very pleased about the outcome and the ruling of the State Utilities Commission. In view of the fact that towns are separate geographical communities, distinct and apart from each other, I feel separate listings will better serve the interests of all users."

In its ruling, which changes the overall commission's rules for the entire state of North Carolina, a telephone company planning to make a change in the format of a directory must first request permission to make such a change. Before a format change can be effective, the company must apply to the commission as well as notify subscribers of the intended change.

Five basic findings of fact were noted in Monday's commission ruling. These are: (1) A telephone company exists to provide telephone services; (2) People over a period of years have developed telephone use habits (i.e., having separate town listings to refer to); (3) Each community is a separate unit, not a single homogenous unit;

(4) Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company did not give adequate notice to subscribers of the proposed change; and (5)
The proposed change is not in the best public interest.

No Action On School

By BARBARA MATHEWS

LITTLEFIELD — The Ayden-Grifton Combined Advisory Council took no action last night in considering the State Board of Education Division of School Planning proposal that a middle school serving both the Ayden and Grifton communities be located near the Ayden-Grifton High School site.

The inaction was due to a lack of consensus between the Ayden and Grifton councils, which met separately to consider the proposal, called Alternative IV, before the combined meeting.

The Grifton council had voted 6-0 with one abstention to locate the new school at the high school site, despite the presentation of a petition with 500 names urging that the school be located in Grifton.

The Ayden council had decided 6-0 with one abstention to locate the school in Ayden.

The Ayden-Grifton Combined Advisory Council will report the results of the separate meetings to the Pitt County Board of Education for further action.

"RESEARCH"

I was sent a very official-looking letter saying I'd been selected to take part in a consumer research project. There was a money-back guarantee from Columbia Research Corporation that if I would send $15.95, I would receive at least $40 worth of new brand name products to try and give my opinions on. I bit, but have received nothing, except another "offer" for a trip to Las Vegas, for which I am supposed to send some deposit money. I almost know it's a big rip off now, but would you find out what you can about the company for me, and advise as to whether there's any hope of getting my money back. B. H.

First we called the Better Business Bureau of Chicago, the city in which the corporation is supposedly located. BBB said only "Formed in November, 1974, unsatisfactory business performance, record of unanswered complaints."

We then tried the Illinois Attorney General's Office, which directed us to Stephen Benowitz of the Cleveland, Ohio Regional Office of the Federal Trade Commission. He said the FTC filed suit against this company and its owners, whom he identified as Raymond, Joseph and Juanita Anderson, more than a year ago. He said the three previously owned Market Development Corporation, a similar enterprise, which has now gone bankrupt. He said the reason for suing the three personally is hopefully to prevent their later forming yet another such enterprise.

He said their "special selection" of names is nothing more than the procuring of a mailing list, as is done by so many other mail order operations.

Their money-back guarantee is seldom, if ever, honored, he said.

Merchandise is sometimes sent out, sometimes only partially, and sometimes not at all, he said.

The "free trips" are another part of the enterprise, he said, and of this, as well as the "research participation," the public should beware. He said the company continues to operate, even though the suit was brought last summer. He is hoping it will come to trial this summer.

He told us of a print out about the Andersons' business enterprises, which we will try to get and pass on to our readers at a later date.

He said any request for money to be returned would be "probably a wise move, with nothing to lose," though he was not optimistic about your chance of success.

You say you are going to make the request and also are going to contact the N. C. Attorney General's office and suggest that someone in that office talk to Benowitz and do whatever can be done to warn other North Carolinians about Consumer Research Corporation.

No Human Rights Progress In Russia

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the summer of 1975, the Soviet Union and 34 other nations, including the United States, signed a document in Helsinki, Finland, pledging to respect human rights of their citizens. What is the situation now in the U.S.S.R.? In this first of two articles on how Soviet dissidents and the Soviet movement view things, an AP correspondent gives the position of antigovernment forces.

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — "It's no secret that the human rights situation in the Soviet Union is bad and that it has not improved since the Helsinki accords were signed," says a document signed by 22 of the nation's most outspoken dissidents. "The Soviet Union had no real intention of ever complying with the human rights provisions of these accords." In contrast to the furtive meetings on street corners of a few years ago, dissidents now openly telephone Western correspondents and invite them to well-publicized news conferences at their apartments. The document, on special letterhead paper, was presented at one such news conference recently by a group formed a year ago to monitor Soviet compliance with the 1975 Helsinki accords, which pledged the 35 signatory nations to respect the human rights of their peoples. The accords, however, are nonbinding. The official Soviet government position is that it does indeed respect its citizens' human rights and that the dissidents are "renegades" who do not represent the views of the Soviet people. The Kremlin maintains that the dissidents are being used by the West to cloud the successes it claims the world Communist movement has achieved. In response to this, the dissidents, crowded together on chairs and benches at their news conference, noted that only two of the original 11 organizing members of their group remain free and active. "In the Soviet Union there is no free exchange of information; in particular there is no free press."

They also cite censorship of overseas mail and telegrams and the barring last December of an international seminar in Moscow on Jewish life. "Denial of the right of emigration and reunification of families." The dissidents say emigration of Jews, of religious minorities such as the Pentecostals, and of the 1.8 million member Volga German community, remains severely restricted. "Discrimination against national minorities." They cite the difficulties of Crimean Tatars in returning to their home area in the Crimea, after their dispersion under Stalin. Jews have also been complaining that they are the subjects of a new wave of anti-Semitism. Meanwhile, the dissidents said, those who speak out at meetings and in documents have been subject to arrests, searches and interrogations. They claimed they have been followed and their telephones have been cut off. The Helsinki group's founder, physicist Yuri Orlov, was arrested in February and has not been heard from since. The charges against him are not known. The same thing has happened to Alexander Ginzburg, a group member and the manager of a fund to aid the families of jailed dissidents. Another group member, Anatoly Shcharansky, was arrested in March and is said to be under investigation for treason, a charge that could bring the death penalty upon conviction. In the Ukraine, Helsinki group members Mykola Rudenko, Oleksa Tikhy, Marislav Marinovich and Mykola Matosevich have been arrested and are being held incommunicado on unspecified charges, the dissidents say. Their relatives and friends are undergoing searches and interrogations. In Soviet Georgia, dissidents Zviad Gamsakhurdia, Mera Kostava and Viktor Rtskhiladze have been arrested. In sum, the dissidents say, the positive effects of the Helsinki agreement have been only indirect ones: It has emboldened to demand their rights, and it has caused wider resentment among citizens over their restrictions.

This Cycle Club No Worry

CONCORD, N.C. (UPI) — The sight of a 25 motorcyclists pulling up to a disabled car might send chills down the spine of the driver, but if the riders belong to the Cabarrus Cycle Club there's no need to worry.

"We can see people rolling up their car windows and locking the doors," said Bob Baucum, president of the organization of cyclists who roam the state and east coast on pleasure trips during the weekends.

The members, said Baucum, a 42-year-old manager in a local utility company, delight at pulling over to help motorists.

But, he said, the driver is usually "real uneasy until we take off our helmets and chat awhile and they see what kind of people we are."

To make sure the strangers they encounter remember them as the "good guys," he said, the club has its own calling card members hand out.

The card reads: "You have been assisted by a member of Cabarrus Cycle Club, Concord, N.C. This bit of assistance has been given to you by a motorcycle rider in hopes of promoting a better relationship with the public for motorcycles. The Greatest Sport in the World."

Among the riders are a lawyer, newspaper production manager, hospital director, business owners, state employees and local government employees.

He said the group decided it would try to change the traditional image of motorcyclists after starting as "just several of the boys riding for pleasure" four years ago. They incorporated last June, writing bylaws stressing safety.

Baucum said in the past four years the members have covered cumulatively about 350,000 miles with only two accidents. "There were no broken bones, just a little asphalt rash," he said.

Before the group heads out on its longer trips, members pick up a letter of recommendation from Concord Police Chief J.K. Moore just to be on the safe side.

New Fibers Are Seen Unlikely

St. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — The costs of research and development will deter the introduction of any new man-made fibers, a Pennsylvania manufacturer said Saturday.

Most fiber producers are concentrating on finding new uses for existing synthetic fibers rather than trying to develop new ones, John Gregg, president of Avtex Fibers Inc. of Valley Forge, Pa., said in remarks prepared for 200 members of the Georgia Textile Manufacturers Association meeting here.

Gregg predicted his company's product — rayon — will grow in importance because it is produced from wood pulp, not oil.

In another address, a warehouse industry leader recommended a system of premiums and discounts to speed the flow of cotton to mills.

"You must come to the point where you tell the merchant: 'I will pay 59.50 cents in Warehouse A, 60 cents in Warehouse B, or 60.50 cents in Warehouse C,'" said W. Neely Mallory of Memphis, Tenn., president of the Cotton Warehouse Association of America.

"If you can develop such a system, I think you will be amazed at the shipping performance of the warehouse industry," he said.

Boozeless Bar Is Something Different On The Modern Scene

By JAMES LAWRENCE

DENVER (UPI) — A young couple wandered into Peg Martin's New Venture Lounge the other night and had three rounds of "Virgin Marys" while watching the packed disco dance floor.

Cigarette smoke formed a shapeless screen over the heads of the customers in the darkened room.

"They sat there looking nearly bombed until they overheard someone say this was a boozeless bar," recalls Mrs. Martin, the proprietor. "You should have seen their faces take on a whole new look when they found out."

The New Venture looks like your average tavern. It has a juke box and a pool table and the usual lineup of regulars at the bar.

You can do anything there you can at most bars, except drink booze.

Mrs. Martin is even thinking about bringing in some topless dancers during the lunch hours to lure in businessmen and construction workers.

"Think of it," said Mrs. Martin, who operates Colorado's only boozeless bar and one of the few in the nation. "Then, I'd probably have the only topless non-alcoholic bar in the country."

And, while watching the dancers, the customers can sip on a Virgin Mary, a Bloody Mary without vodka, a Salty Puppy, or maybe a "Spice of Life," a hot spiced cider.

There's also the Carter Special, a mixture of powdered sugar, milk and crunchy peanut butter named in honor of the President.

Mrs. Martin even bans vanilla flavoring.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but vanilla extract has one of the highest alcohol contents of any product found at the supermarket. It's possible that an alcoholic having one of our drinks mixed with vanilla extract could go back to drinking."

Mrs. Martin, who sometimes takes a drink herself, but not on the premises, said the problems of drunks prompted her to get out of the booze business. She decided to sell her popular lounge, "Somewhere's Else," the third bar she has owned over the past 20 years.

"I hated selling my place," she said, perched on a bar stool smoking a seven-minute cigarette. "But things were getting to me in the past year."

"Some of my favorite customers were leaving my place and smashing up their cars. Others were getting thrown out at home."

"I decided there had to be a better way, and I was determined to find it," she said. The New Venture opened its doors for the first time last March. The customers were about evenly divided between alcoholics, non-drinkers and youths out of high school but under Colorado's legal drinking age of 21.

"One of the best things about it was not having to throw out the drunks at 2 a.m.," Mrs. Martin said. Diane Martin, one the staff of five barmaids and a bartender, said she enjoyed waiting on sober customers because they don't become obnoxious or overly aggressive like those who've had too many scotch and tonics or bourbon and sevens.

"Don't get me wrong, our customers all get high here, especially on weekend nights," said Miss Martin, who has tended bar for four years. "But it's a natural high, with no alcoholic influence."

The New Venture's busiest nights are after meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. Members drift in for their favorite soft drink, to talk with friends, play billiards, or just sit around and listen to the jukebox.

Long Sheet Law Gone

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon Legislature has decided that the state doesn't need a law requiring innkeepers to have bedsheets at least nine feet long.

"This is probably the closest thing to a housekeeping bill that I have ever seen," said Sen. Mary Roberts during the debate Friday that preceded a 24 to 5 vote on a bill to repeal that law.

The bill, already passed by the House, goes to Gov. Bob Straub.

The law was adopted in 1909 and carried a $50-a-day penalty for violations.

Sen. Roberts said it was believed the sheet bill was originally sponsored by a senator who owned a laundry.

Sen. Keith Burbidge, D-Salem, who stands 5-foot-6½, cast one of the negative votes Friday.

Burbidge said he dreaded the thought "of being short-sheeted on some cold night at a motel on the Oregon Coast."

AYDEN — In a double ring private ceremony, Winnie Lorraine Vandiford of Rt. 1, Hookerton, and Dr. Charles E. Russell of Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at four o'clock in the afternoon. Performing the ceremony at the Little Creek Original Free Will Baptist Church, Rt. 1, Ayden, was the Rev. Joseph Lehmann.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heber H. Vandiford, of Rt. 1, Hookerton. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Charlie N. Russell of Jamesville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Ralph Bowen, organist, and Mrs. Hagar Blanchard sang "One Hand, One Heart" and "Seal Us, O Holy Spirit."

The bride was attired in a qiana jersey gown designed with a high neckline and Venice and Brussels lace bib front accent with pearls. The short cap sleeves were of Venice lace and a full built-in train flowed into a short sweep. Her matching lace headpiece was attached to an illusion veil of chapel length. She carried a nosegay of miniature carnations and pink sweetheart roses tied with white lace streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a coral full length gown with cape collar and a crushed cummerbund. The bridegroom's mother selected a full length aqua knit gown designed with a high neckline and empire bodice. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages.

In the center of the church background were palms and a tiered candelabrum. The entrances to the altar were adorned with brass vases filled with daisies.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University and is a teacher at Arendell Parrott Academy, Kinston. The bridegroom is a graduate of N. C. State University where he received his doctorate in adult and community college education. He is employed as assistant to the president of Pitt Technical Institute, Greenville.

Following a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride was honored at a candlelight dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. James Ray McLawhorn and son, James. A tea honoring the bride-elect was given by the mother and relatives of the bridegroom at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben C. Peele, Williamston, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom.

The bride was honored at a floating miscellaneous shower, given by friends of the couple, in the fellowship hall of the Little Creek Church.

MRS. DOUGLAS WAYNE ADAMS

Couple Unite In Marriage Saturday

Rebecca Lynn Stanley and Douglas Wayne Adams were united in marriage Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the Immanuel Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lee Whitlock.

A program of wedding music was presented by Lee Hendricks, organist, Tony King, vocalist, and Kay Sloppy played the marimba.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Miralyn Stanley of Aberdeen, and Mr. Al G. Stanley of Wilkesboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Stroud Wagner of Rougemont, and Mr. Forrest Adams of Durham.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown designed of ivory supple jersey featuring an A-line with a chiffon capelet. The fingertip length Venice lace edged capelet was fitted with a cummerbund at the waist and had a chapel length train.

Her face framed by Venice lace had an elbow length veil and blusher. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of daisies and baby's breath.

The honor attendant was Betsy Postel of Raeford. She wore a long apricot gown with a sheer cape in autumn colors. She carried a nosegay of daisies and baby's breath.

The flower girls, Lisa Stanley of Aberdeen, and Laura Mustian of Wilkesboro, wore apricot sundresses with sheer capes covered with daisies. They carried bouquets of daisies and baby's breath.

The best man was Mel Alex.

New Bern Bypass To Be Opened

A ribbon will be cut near New Bern Wednesday morning and hopefully the trip to Morehead City will become easier for travellers from this area.

The ribbon cutting will open a new stretch of highway that will seldom be used by Pitt County people. It will open to traffic the partially completed U.S. 70 bypass and bridge around New Bern. The east bound lane of the three and three-tenths mile section was hurried to completion in anticipation of the summer traffic.

The 26.7 mile bypass from Dover to James City, which cost an estimated $52 million will, be completed next fall.

The U. S. 70 route is used by Raleigh and Central Piedmont motorists to reach the Morehead beach area.

It will help those from our area travelling to Morehead because it will alleviate the crush of traffic on the Trent River Bridge at New Bern. Until this week U. S. 17 traffic from Northeastern North Carolina and U. S. 70 traffic converged at New Bern to cross the Trent River by the two lane draw bridge. The traffic jams which developed on Sunday afternoons are legendary.

The new bypass bridge will take U. S. 70 beach traffic around New Bern missing the Trent River Bridge entirely, hopefully eliminating the bottle neck. Partially opening of the bypass was ordered speeded up by Gov. Hunt, who along with Sec. of Transportation Thomas Bradshaw, Jr., is expected to be on hand for the opening.

This road project is one of so many that is much needed in Eastern North Carolina. The opening won't come a day too soon to solve one of our major traffic problems.

Diminishing Funds Affect The East

Without some change in the way that highway work is financed there aren't going to be many more projects like the U. S. 70 bypass at New Bern.

Inflation and higher road maintenance costs are simply eating into the dollars available for construction. The big loser will be the East since our area has been short changed for so long in highway construction.

The Legislature is not going to do anything about increasing the gasoline tax, or changing to a percentage tax on gas. It should, however, name a commission to study ways of financing new road construction. Obviously something is going to have to be done if highway construction is not to come to a halt in a few years.

Bargers Soak Public

Victor Hugo is authority for the political truism that no army can overcome an idea whose time has come. Under that guiding principle, the Senate should vote overwhelmingly this month for the imposition of user charges on the nation's barge operators. After 200 years, that sound idea is long overdue.

You can search all day and all night, through the whole range of federal activities, and find nothing that even remotely compares with the lush bonanza the taxpayers have provided the barge men. It is incredible. One looks at the figures in disbelief.

At a cost of some four billion dollars, the taxpayers have provided 25,000 miles of inland canals, locks, dams and waterways. Another four billion dollars have been spent on maintenance and operation of the system. And toward this monstrous cost, the barge operators have contributed not one red cent in direct user payments.

Today the barge industry collects annual revenues in the neighborhood of one billion dollars. The taxpayers provide subsidies estimated at $400 million a year to keep the system going — 40 percent of total revenues. This contrasts with subsidies of 1 percent for trucks and air carriers, and 3 percent for railway freight. The barge companies are resisting the payment of even one thin dime toward the $400 million burden on the general public.

What unconscionable arrogance is this! The opponents' arguments boil down to four contentions: No user charges ever have been imposed; therefore they ought not to be imposed now. User charges would raise the cost of barge-transported goods to consumers. User charges would divert some barge traffic to competing trucks and railways, thereby causing unemployment among the poor little barge operators. Finally, the question is so complex that it ought to be studied for another 18 months, at the very least, before congressional action is taken.

Humbly! There might have been some feeble justification, a century ago, for providing a "free" competitive service as a check against the railroad barons. That justification, if it ever existed, has no meaning today.

Yes, user charges presumably would be passed on to consumers, but the costs are fair and their burden would be infinitesimal. On barge-transported coal, for example, we are talking about 11 cents a ton. There is no reason under sun or moon why coal consumers should not pay this charge.

As for the poor, pathetic little barge operators: A handful of giant corporations control much of the waterway traffic. Let us shed a tear for the poor little Texas Gas Transmission Company and the Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates. Their corporate revenues annually run to $1.5 billion, over $200 million of which is in barge revenues. Together they own 3,000 barges and carry about half the coal traffic on the inland waterways. Or let us weep for U.S. Steel, Ashland Oil, Central Soya, and Dravo Corporation. Their collective sales exceed $16 billion a year. How do their spokesmen keep a straight face in opposing fair user charges for the facilities the taxpayers now provide them for nothing?

The question of user charges has been studied, and studied, and studied, ad nauseam and ad infinitum. Every president since Roosevelt has recommended a system of user charges. Thousands of pages of congressional testimony have been accumulated. Under the cynical orthodoxy of politics, the word study is spelled s-t-a-d-y. That is all this amounts to.

The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works has recommended a schedule of user charges that would be phased in over a ten-year period. Not until fiscal 1980 would the barge operators be assessed anything at all. Beginning in 1989, user charges would amount to 100 percent of the costs of maintenance and operation, and to 50 percent of the annual construction costs.

Nothing that I have said should be construed as criticism of the inland waterway system as such. Barge operations are an essential part of a comprehensive transportation program. But it violates every elementary concept of fairness to argue that the barge lines should get a free ride at the taxpayers' expense, while the railways go broke. That proposition is simply bilge — and the barge boys know it.

To the editor:

How have the people of Oregon and the people of Vermont been able to get good litter bills passed, while the people of North Carolina have not been able to do this?

In 1976 I read in the newspapers of the N. C. State University students working hard to get a litter bill through the legislature. The bill failed to pass. Evidently they received little help from the members of the legislature.

This year someone was concerned, so again, a litter bill was introduced. I wondered why so little attention was given by the newspapers. Soon I learned that this litter bill had failed because of the efforts of the beverage companies and the labor unions. It would be interesting to know how much the beverage companies spent to defeat this bill. The North Carolina Legislature seems to be more responsive to the lobbyists of the beverage companies than to the people of the State.

In contrast, Cuomo knows business taxes must be lowered and that money to cut taxes must come not from Washington but from reduced city spending. That hard-nosed lesson, applicable to all cities, is also appreciated by another candidate, Rep. Edward Koch. But Cuomo, not Koch, is given the best chance of breaking the Bella-Beame stranglehold.

Even if he loses the Democratic primary in September, Cuomo will have another shot in November as Liberal party candidate (a nomination dictated by Gov. Carey). Furthermore, he is the only non-Jewish, non-black, non-Puerto Rican candidate in a likely field of eight. As such, he may draw well in the ethnic wards of Queens and Brooklyn.

But beyond this, Mario Cuomo has political characteristics that make

Strength For Today

THE SUBSTANCE OF THINGS HOPED FOR
We can be sure of one thing — God is always ready to give.

The Epistle to the Hebrews tells us that faith is the giving of substance to things hoped for. It is the power within us which enables us to cooperate with the Holy Spirit so that God can give us the things he has always wanted to bestow upon us. Faith is the means by which hope is materialized into achievement.

If people only knew what faith can do for them in the solving of their problems, the quieting of their minds, the fulfilling of their desires, the achieving of their tasks, they would stop leaning on their own powers, which are broken reeds, and begin to lean on the everlasting power of God.

Religious faith is the greatest blessing a person can have. It raises the sorrowing to comfort, and the wicked into forgiveness. Greater blessings than these do not exist on God's earth.

Budgeting Frustration

By Bill Noblitt
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH—If the captain of the Ship of State Tar Heel was listening the other morning, he would have been inclined to lock up the gun cabinet and summons up the militia.

The crew was muttering awful things... if not mutiny, then certainly a little mayhem.

Gathered in the austere, overheated, crowded confines of the Appropriations Room of the General Assembly, half of the membership of that legislative body was trying to close out the budget-making process. The other half was in the Finance Room—cool, uncluttered, and not facing any tax increase proposals.

Here, in a much simplified nutshell, is what was going on in the Appropriations Room:

The Base Budget Committee had been working for months to cut current spending levels throughout state government, and had gone over a batch of subcommittee reports and recommendations.

Spending

A Senate appropriations committee had been going over new spending proposals and set priorities on a bunch of new outlays.

A house group had done likewise. Both had been mulling subcommittee reports recommending various spending priorities and proposals.

A Senate Base Budget group had made up some proposals, as well, and all the time legislative staff answering to legislative leadership had been writing up various proposals.

Suddenly, everybody was back together in that one room, hearing how this cut was being spent for that special project; how this high priority item in one group's mind was a low priority to another; how when all put together total spending would run $200 million more than even the best income estimates; and how after nearly five months of blood, sweat and tears they were not much closer to having the answer than they were at the beginning.

The muttering grew in intensity. Speeches got downright nasty. Private conversations were even nastier as one after another threatened to go home. Some Base Budgeters who earlier had stalked angrily from a meeting wanted to wash their hands of the whole thing.

Dump the budget into a "super sub" and let them do it and take blame or glory, some suggested.

Too Much

Beneath it all, however, was the growing realization among Tar Heel lawmakers that they are no longer able to cope with the complexities of handling a budget in excess of $3 billion per year; that state bureaucracies and programs and personnel and data flow has gotten away from them.

BILL NOBLITT

"We're stumbling along with a trial and error system... and we have been building on error rather than trial," one scornfully suggested.

"I have never been more frustrated in my life. I've been here five terms, and it's never been worse," replied another.

"Somebody is going to have to bite the bullet that we just don't seem able to bite—because we are politicians,"

THE INSIDE REPORT

Savior Of New York?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW YORK — Typical of the frustration in the politics of New York, Mario Cuomo could well be the last best chance to save this city from further disasters, but instead he is acquiring the look of a candidate running dead in the water after two months of campaigning.

Battle-hardened veterans here, regulars and reformers, consider Cuomo a loser. The 45-year-old appointive New York Secretary of State ran dreadfully in 1974 for nomination for lieutenant governor, his only previous race. He is an undisciplined candidate without experienced political managers or sufficient funds. Worse, he has the image of being Gov. Hugh Carey's creature.

Nevertheless, Cuomo could mean salvation for this beleaguered city, a safe harbor between the Scylla of Mayor Abraham Beame, leading the forlorn clubhouse regulars, and the Charybdis of ex-Rep. Bella Abzug, promising to storm Washington for federal funds. Neither they nor two-time loser Rep. Herman Badillo, a late starter, would bring the economies so desperately needed here. Without those economies, businessmen see him appealing to supporters from all bands of the political spectrum. That across-the-board appeal is what has intrigued politicians from the time in 1972 when he first came to public attention trying to compromise a bitter racial housing struggle in Forest Hills.

New Products From Old Ideas

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Ac-

customized to finding tomorrow's innovations in the far out concepts of scientists, Americans might be surprised to learn that some of their newest products are coming from old ideas.

The dirigible is coming back.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., which never quite gave up on the notion of lighter-than-airflight, now foresees a growing market for airships.

The most pressing need for them, says Morris Jobe, president of Goodyear Aerospace Corp., is in providing the capability of lifting huge cargoes, such as power generating equipment and military tanks.

Helicopters are incapable of lifting such loads. A battle tank, for example, weighs 63 tons, whereas the most powerful U.S. helicopter now available can lift only 16 tons.

The answer: An airship supported by 2.5 million cubic feet of helium and four attached helicopters. The company is now working on a vehicle that would lift 75 tons straight up. It expects to have it within five years.

Windmill power is coming back.

General Electric and United Technologies share a contract from the National Aeronautics & Space Administration to design and build the largest windmill ever, a 15-story structure that might be the prototype of many more.

Some authorities believe a thriving industry could be in operation within 15 years, and that wind energy could supply up to 20 percent of electric power demand by the end of the century.

Water power is going to be redeveloped.

The popular myth is that most hydropower sites already have been developed. Nonsense, says Development & Resources Inc., headed by David Lillenthal, former chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority and first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Lillenthal says there are thousands of sites for power development along small streams, canals, locks and the like, especially in the Northeast.

Such sites avoid environmental problems common to larger installations, he says. Furthermore, the dams often are in place, having been put there during the 19th century and then abandoned as big power utilities took over.

Reactivate them, he says, and a tremendous contribution would be made toward alleviating the nation's energy shortage.

Natural rubber might soon be cultivated domestically.

At present, the United States imports $500 million worth of rubber from Southeast Asia each year. But all along there has been growing wild in Texas the guayule bush, which provides near identical ingredients.

The National Research Council and the rubber companies are now experimenting with the idea that a world shortage of natural rubber might be averted in the 1980's by cultivating this long-neglected source of supply.

Sea farming is a growing business.

Throughout civilization, man has grown food crops on land. But perhaps the most bountiful supply, the fish in (continued on page 5)

Ten Americans Home From Cuba

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Ten Americans jailed in Cuba on drug charges have been freed and flown home, leaving 20 Americans still known to be in Fidel Castro's prisons.

The 10, set free by President Castro amid improving relations between the longtime enemy neighbors, arrived in Mexico City Sunday night aboard a Mexican commercial flight from Havana.

The U.S. Embassy said the Americans flew on to their homes Monday on various flights. The embassy said they refused to allow release of their names.

The State Department said six of those freed were arrested in 1975 on drug charges and were serving terms of three to seven years. It said the other four were arrested this year on drug charges but had not been sentenced.

When the United States and the Castro government agreed June 3 to establish lower-level diplomatic missions in each other's capitals, Cuba said it would review the cases of the American prisoners.

The State Department said release of the 10 "was not part of a deal," but officials said the remaining American prisoners would be a prime concern of the U.S. diplomats who are to be stationed in Havana this summer.

Seven of the remaining Americans are held on political charges.

President Eisenhower broke diplomatic relations between the United States and Cuba in early 1961, just before he left office. President Carter told a news conference Monday there was "no immediate prospect" for resuming full diplomatic relations.

One of the freed prisoners, Albert Polange, arrived in New York Monday night and told reporters he lost 25 pounds during his first three weeks in captivity.

Polange said he and several companions were arrested after a plane he was flying developed electrical problems.

"We flew into their airspace and they sent planes up after us," he said.

He said he and his companions were "charged with everything," sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $6,000. He said he had a Cuban lawyer but was not allowed to enter a plea.

Law...

beth Koontz, chairman of the state International Women's Year Committee.

One injustice, the report says, is the state's alimony law which "will provide subsistence and little more." Some 73 per cent of all divorced women work outside the home compared to 50 per cent of the women living with their husbands. A fourth of the women who are heads of households are on welfare, the report said. In addition, the report said 47 per cent of court-ordered support payments in the state are not paid by the husbands. Courts may penalize a husband who willfully disobeys a support order but that is difficult to prove, the authors said.

"Even after the separated wife has proved her dependency, her husband's misconduct, and her own righteousness, and has received an award from the court, there is no guarantee she will actually receive the support money," the report said.

In other findings in the report: —State law does not allow women as much power over their property as their husbands. The husband, for example, may lease a property for his lifetime without his wife's consent.

—Homemakers are not covered by disability insurance, though nearly all working persons are.

—Child support payments can be required only for children under 18, which "hurts women whose children remain in school or at home after their 18th birthday. There is no requirement that the father pay for the child's education."

—Though the state has a "no-fault" divorce law, a husband can still delay his wife's obtaining an absolute divorce and remarrying.

—Domestic services performed by a wife living with her husband are considered gratuitous. For the divorced woman to share in gains that came from her earlier efforts, she must prove that she has been her husband's business partner.

the waters, were left to develop haphazardly.

Aquaculture or aquaculture is now common on ponds in the Midwest and South. And some concerns have developed totally artificial breeding sites, in tanks through which food and oxygen are filtered.

Now some of the nation's big corporations are interested in mariculture, or the cultivation of marine life, such as salmon, lobster, shrimp and the like. Union Carbide already is in the business; Standard Oil (Indiana) is considering it.

By thinking simple another problem was solved.

The nation's superhighways are among the most dangerous of all places for pedestrians. Therefore, states and private companies long have sought effective communications devices for stranded motorists.

One big drawback to powered devices was vandalism. Furthermore, such methods were expensive and tended to suffer from downtime.

A small company, Solid State Technology, Inc., of Wilmington, Mass. solved the problem with an ingenious motorist aid call box that is batteryless and wireless, and because of so few parts, almost vandal-proof too. In fact, it reports vandals.

The device sends an electronic signal to a central point when a motorist activates it. And what supplies the power? The very act of pulling the lever to activate the device.

Remarkable how old is everything new.

crimes." And what is the primary need of public schools? "Order being restored," he says.

Yet, this apostle of law, order and fiscal conservatism is a favorite of some advanced liberals. The partial reason is that there is no trace of racial provocation in Cuomo's rhetoric. Beyond that liberals feel he is the mayoral candidate smart and tough enough to clean house. When Cuomo calls this city "a boondoggler's paradise, a patronage prize and the worst-managed city in the country," he sounds as though he means it.

Cuomo's many supporters on the left may frighten off potential supporters. Backing from Prof. Richard Wade of City University, battered survivor of many liberal campaigns, reassures nobody. Financier Felix Rohatyn is leery about Cuomo's association with Jack Newfield, the "new left" activist of the 1960s (with whom Cuomo says he disagrees on 60 per cent of the issues).

But Cuomo's heaviest cross is Hugh Carey. The governor's clumsy abandonment of Beame and endorsement of Cuomo has become a liability that can be eliminated only by clear demonstrations of independence (though not enough to discourage Carey fund-raising efforts).

Cuomo has hired the team that sent Jimmy Carter from Plains, Ga., to the White House — adman Jerry Rafshoon and pollster Pat Cadell. A further asset is his ability to concoct glittering one-liners ("Bella is John Lindsay with a hat").

But the real hope is that Cuomo's candor will appeal to New Yorkers sick of hypocrisy, which is asking a great deal indeed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next FBI director might be a black man who struggled up from the ghetto or a judge who once was invited to a war protester's victory celebration.

Or it might be a California prosecutor who once ran for Congress and lost. Or a Massachusetts judge who once was an Army counterintelligence agent. Or a career FBI man who worked in the South at the height of the civil rights movement.

President Carter announced Monday that these five men were recommended to him by a nine-member search committee which began work in February, screening more than 200 candidates and interviewing about 50 of them.

He said he and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell will talk with the five finalists personally. A Justice Department spokesman said Bell will begin his round of interviews "quickly, perhaps next week."

Carter's choice will need Senate confirmation to take over the FBI from Clarence M. Kelley, the current director who has announced plans to retire Jan. 1. Kelley, 65, has been head of the beleaguered investigative bureau and its 8,000 agents for 3½ years.

The committee offered Carter a diverse list with something of a "one of each" tone to it. There is one black — Sheriff William Lucas of Detroit; one Republican — U.S. Circuit Judge Harlington Wood Jr. of Chicago, and one career FBI man — Neil Welch, agent in charge of the Philadelphia field office.

The other two, who fall into no particular category, are John Van de Kamp, district attorney of Los Angeles County, and John J. Irwin, a judge on the Massachusetts Superior Court.

Lucas, Van de Kamp and Wood have worked in the Justice Department and Welch has worked at the FBI's Washington headquarters.

Lucas, 49, earned a law degree from Fordham University and became a New York City policeman assigned in 1962 to a detail protecting then-Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy during a visit to the city. Kennedy was impressed by him and brought him to the Justice Department.

Wood, 57, was former President Gerald R. Ford's choice to succeed John Paul Stevens on the federal appeals court in Chicago when Stevens took his seat on the Supreme Court.

Jerry Fines, who worked with Wood then and now is the U.S. attorney in Springfield, Ill., recalled the massive protest march of April 24, 1971. Wood had negotiated the arrangements with protest leader Renie Davis and others, and the antiwar groups thought the march turned out so successfully that they staged a victory party.

Wood, the only Justice Department official invited, went to the party, Fines recalled.

Van de Kamp, 41, worked at the Justice Department in the late 1960s when he helped organize teams to deal with racial and political unrest.

Welch, 50, began his FBI career in 1951 and rose steadily through the ranks. When the bureau opened its first office in Jackson, Miss., in 1964, Welch was appointed assistant agent in charge.

Irwin, 47, was appointed to the Massachusetts Superior Court last July by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Moms Sing the Mother's Day Blues

By Abigail Van Buren

1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Immediately following Mother's Day, and for several weeks thereafter, I received numerous letters concerning that special day we set aside to "honor" Mother. Some excerpts:

"...As far as I'm concerned, Mother's Day is a crock of cranberries! All my kids are married and have their own lives, which is fine with me, but weeks can go by and none of them thinks to call me, but on Mother's Day they all fight over me."

CHICAGO MOM

"...I had only one child, and I regret to say that it was a boy. He is married now, so every holiday he spends with HER mother. Whoever said: 'A son is a son until he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all her life' sure said a mouthful."

MILWAUKEE MOM

"...My husband gave me a card for Mother's Day, and I told him I wasn't his mother, so we got into a fight over it. I happen to be six years older than him, but I am not old enough to be his mother. Was I wrong to get steamed?"

NOT HIS MOTHER

(I told her she was indeed wrong—that she was probably overly sensitive to the age difference, and that provoked her anger.)

"...When my only daughter sent me a check for $25 with a note telling me to buy myself something for Mother's Day, I felt so bad I cried all day. If she's too busy, or lazy, or lacking in imagination to pick out a present, I certainly don't need her charity."

HURT IN WALPOLE, N.H.

"...My son who lives in another city forgot me again on Mother's Day, but he called me the next day and fell all over himself apologizing. The damage had already been done, and my Mother's Day was ruined. This is the third year he's done that. Next year I'm taking my phone off the hook."

EVERETT, WASH.

"...What do you do with a mother who sends back the Mother's Day gifts her children give her? She says, 'I don't need anything and I don't want anything, so please take it back!'"

D. AND S.

"...I wish my children would get together and buy me ONE useful gift. Every Mother's Day I get nine gifts I have no use for."

CLEVELAND MOTHER

"...How many times should a mother have to tell her children she's allergic to flowers? For Mother's Day I got five bouquets again! I told the delivery man to leave them on the porch, then I gave them to my neighbors."

PHOENIX

"...For Mother's Day I always get a useless gift like a fancy nightgown I'll never wear, cologne I don't care for, or some little brooch or bracelet I'll never take out of the box. With prices so high these days, I wish they would give me the money instead."

PHILA. WIDOW

"...I am a retired school teacher who never married, but I've always loved children. The young boy who delivers my newspaper knows that, so on Mother's Day he left me a sack of jellybeans and a lovely Mother's Day card, on which he wrote, 'You would have made a wonderful mother.' Wasn't that dear?"

TOUCHED IN TULSA

"...So once a year my children buy me a corsage and take me out to a crowded, noisy restaurant. Big deal! Where are they when I need my lawn mowed, my leaves raked and my screens put up? Little favors during the year would mean so much to me."

ANONYMOUS MOTHER

"...Mother's Day is just another commercial gimmick. I dislike getting gifts and flowers on Mother's Day. It seems so forced to me. If my children would show a little appreciation at any other time—because they really wanted to—I would feel better about it."

WINCHESTER, VA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl who many times has felt like going further than I should with a boy I really like. Abby, I'm going to ask you a question I wish I could ask my mother but can't because all I would get is a lecture.

Why should a girl be expected to wait until she's married to have sex? We all have normal passions that get stronger with adolescence. Married people have an outlet for their sex, but what about unmarried people?

Other countries like Samoa permit premarital sex. Why can't we? I can see logical reasons for not being promiscuous, such as danger of venereal disease and unwanted pregnancy, but when two people want sex and know how to prevent disease and pregnancy, why the big "No No"?

Our society is so advanced in other ways, but it insists that unmarried people either suppress their normal sex urges or pretend they don't exist.

If there is any good reason why kids who are in love should refrain from premarital sex, I'd like to know what it is.

SPEAKING FOR TEENS

DEAR SPEAKING: The big "No No" is not the relationship between two normal, healthy, MATURE, responsible people 'in love'; it's the use of sex by the immature, irresponsible, confused adolescent who mistakes his first sexual stirrings for "love."

"Knowing" how to prevent unwanted pregnancies and venereal disease is not enough to prevent them; witness NO decline in illegitimacy even with the Pill. And in spite of all the education concerning venereal disease, it's still a major public health problem.

When you are ready to accept all the responsibilities and commitments of "love" and a family, you will not ask me what is wrong with premarital sex.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast Tuesday for the Dakotas and from northern Georgia to the Atlantic coast. Temperatures are expected to be mild in the northern half of the country and hot in the southern half. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms diminished during the night over the high plains of Colorado, Texas and South Dakota. They also decreased from the lower Mississippi valley across the southern Appalachians into the Carolinas and the Ohio valley.

Most of the severe thunderstorms last night were over the Texas Panhandle and the West Texas plains.

Severe thunderstorms dumped locally heavy rain over parts of the front range of the Colorado Rockies. The storms then moved eastward over the plains. Flash flood watches were cancelled and severe thunderstorm warnings were posted.

The thundershowers to the south stretched into eastern and northern Kentucky and Ohio. Isolated showers and thundershowers fell from the Pacific northwest and the northern California mountains across northern Nevada and northern Utah. They also were in Idaho and western Montana.

Elsewhere skies were generally either cloudy or partly cloudy early this morning. Clear skies prevailed over Wisconsin, parts of central Texas and westward over the southern Rockies, through southern California.

Woman Pilot Finds Her Job A Good One

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — When First Officer Denise Blankinship went to work for Piedmont Airlines April 1, she became one of only about 15 women airline pilots in the nation.

And it was an especially proud moment for her father, Capt. Clyde D. Blankinship, a native of Fort Worth, Tex., and an Eastern Air Lines pilot for 22 years.

The Air Line Pilots Association said it knows of no father-daughter pilot teams flying for any airline.

Just getting a job with an airline is difficult, but for a woman to get a job as a pilot is almost unheard of.

However, Miss Blankinship, 26, said if a woman wants to fly, she should do it.

"I can't believe that I'm getting to do what I want to do, and somebody's paying me to do it," she said in an interview.

When Miss Blankinship was hired by Piedmont, where she flies the YS11 aircraft, she had 3,700 hours of flying time. She is based at Wilmington, N. C., and flies in reserve, which means her flights are never the same.

She has been flying since she was 18. Besides her college education, including a BS degree in home economics from the University of Georgia, she figures it cost her about $10,000 to qualify for her commercial pilot's license.

That's the rub, she says. Throw in a college education, which also is required, and a commercial pilot's license can cost $40,000.

"So far, everyone has been very nice to me," said Miss Blankinship, whose 6-foot height presents a stately figure.

Director Will Quit

LONDON (AP) — Kenneth MacMillan, director and resident choreographer of the Royal Ballet, Covent Garden, is quitting his directorship to concentrate on choreography.

He will become fulltime choreographer to the Royal Ballet in September and will be succeeded as director by Norman Morrice, a former artistic director of the Ballet Rambert.

MacMillan, 45, perhaps best known for his version of "Romeo and Juliet," said Monday it would be a "great relief" to end the clash of responsibilities of doing both jobs. He has filled both posts since 1970 when he succeeded Sir Frederick Ashton.

Soviet Relations OK Despite Press Attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter believes U.S.-Soviet relations are moving in the right direction, despite attacks on his policies by the official Russian press.

At a news conference on Monday, Carter suggested that the Soviet Union may have responded to his human rights statements by making him "a kind of scapegoat."

Saying he never intended to single out Russia in his human rights campaign, Carter appeared unconcerned about the Soviet response. If the Soviets interpret his support for worldwide human rights as criticism, "so be it," he said.

The President spoke after barbed criticism of him in the Soviet press.

"I have no hatred for the Soviet people," Carter said, adding that he has tried to give his campaign for human rights a broad base and that he has never attacked Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev personally.

Despite disagreements over human rights, Carter pointed to talks which began Monday on tightening restrictions on underground nuclear tests as an indication that the two countries generally "are moving in the right direction."

In addition to those talks, Carter said the United States and Russia will hold negotiations next week on demilitarizing the Indian Ocean.

At the end of the 30-minute formal news conference, the President chatted with reporters and told them that despite an agreement to exchange diplomats with Cuba, "There is no immediate prospect of diplomatic relations and exchange of ambassadors."

On other topics at the news conference, Carter:

—Unexpectedly made public a list of five men recommended to him as potential FBI directors. He said one of the five is likely to become his choice to succeed Clarence Kelley, current head of the agency.

—Said he is "completely convinced" that Soviet Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky has no past or present CIA ties. Shcharansky is under arrest in Russia on treason charges linking him to the CIA.

—Expressed optimism about the chances for his energy proposal in Congress, saying "I have never attacked the Congress on this matter at all. He also said he hadn't decided whether he would veto a money bill for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare if it contains a larger appropriation than he wants.

—Said free-speaking U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young has "been a superb representative of this country," and demonstrated to underdeveloped nations "a new sense of caring" about them.

—Said he believes the subject of retirement systems needs to be reviewed, and announced he intends to name a blue ribbon commission to undertake the task.

He said the commission will be charged with studying so-called single and double-dipping by retired federal workers who may draw their government retirement benefits even though they find new jobs, sometimes with the government.

Try To Clear Up Rights View

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will try to clear up confusion about President Carter's human rights policy at the annual meeting of the Organization of American States opening today.

A U.S. official said Vance would meet privately with the other 24 foreign ministers at the conference to impress on them that the Carter administration is serious about human rights and speaks "with one voice on the issue."

"There is still doubt among Latin American ministers on the seriousness of the U.S. position on this," said the official, who asked that his name not be used.

Latin American delegates said conservative military regimes will argue that security forces must violate human rights to control terrorists.

"Nobody's going to be soft on terrorism," the U.S. official said, "but the mark of civilized society is how you treat people who break the law."

Vance, who will spend two days at the meeting, will "listen to the Latin Americans as they throw objections at him and state their case," the official added.

The secretary of state also will seek greater cooperation with the OAS Inter-American Commission on Human Rights. A report to be presented this week criticizes Uruguay and Paraguay for refusing to permit on-site investigations by OAS teams.

"If countries won't allow on-site inspection, it seems to us that their cries about U.S. interference are not justified," the American source said. "They're trying to have it both ways, and they're not cooperating in the human rights field at all."

The seven-day conference also will consider a Latin proposal for collective economic security. The United States opposes the measure, which would set up a quasi-judicial body that could assess damages against member countries imposing preferential tariffs or other restrictive economic measures.

The American delegation also opposes the so-called Calvo Doctrine supported by the Latin Americans, which would require multinational corporations operating in Latin America to be treated as a domestic corporation by each country.

The United States has proposed cutting its contribution to the OAS budget from 66 to 49 per cent to give other nations a larger stake in the organization and reduce criticism that it is dominated by the United States.

Vance also will push for the OAS to play a stronger role as a peacemaker, a role the United States considers should be the organization's most important function.

Tris Makers Say Denied Due Process

By THOMAS C. COTHMAN
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) —

Textile firms were denied due process of law when they were ordered by a federal agency to stop marketing children's pajamas coated with the flame-retarding chemical Tris, say attorneys for one of the companies.

"They failed to allow us the opportunity to rebut what has heretofore been an extremely tenuous case," said Emmet J. Bondurant, an attorney for Springs Mills Inc.

Springs Mills filed a federal court suit asking for a permanent injunction against the order, issued a month ago by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. A temporary injunction was granted covering Springs Mills but not other textile manufacturers.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert F. Chapman said after listening to both sides Monday that he will rule on the matter later.

The commission cited reports linking Tris to cancer in issuing the order, which included a requirement that the companies buy back all unwashed, Tris-coated materials still on store counters.

Springs Mills said it would have to spend $2 million to comply with the order.

Chapman said he could rule the section of the federal Hazardous Substances Act under which the order was issued unconstitutional.

Attorneys for the agency and for the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF), which has joined the suit on the commission's side, urged him not to do that.

Robert Rauch of the EDF said the law's constitutionality "ought not to be ruled on until there are further proceedings."

Lawyers for the agency, represented by the U.S. Justice Department and the EDF said the commission acted in accordance with the regulations it operates under.

"It's our position that the commission did act within its regulations and the plaintiffs were not denied due process," said Ed Craig of the Justice Department.

He contended that Springs Mills' attorneys were attempting to construe one of the agency's rules to mean that it was required to provide the company with a hearing before issuing its order.

"Doesn't that mean that you have made a decision without affording them an opportunity to be heard on it?" Chapman asked.

Craig replied that under the Hazardous Substances Act, the agency was not required to hold a hearing before issuing its order, even though the order triggered a rule that the firms had to buy back the material.

The order was an "inter-

The commission acted properly, he said. "If there is any infirmity in what the commission did, it's in the statute."

The firm said in its suit and again in arguments Monday that it began using Tris, an acronym for tris(bromophosphoryl)phosphate, in 1971 when the U.S. Commerce Department ordered manufacturers of children's sleepwear to make them flame-retardant.

Wolfe Letters Still Missing

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The former curator of the Thomas Wolfe collection in Wolfe's hometown has surrendered on charges he embezzled four letters from the late North Carolina novelist's collection. But the letters are still missing.

Buncombe County Dist. Atty. Robert Fisher said Monday he understood the former curator, James J. Meehan, was helping in the attempt to recover the letters and that "could make a big difference" in Meehan's case.

If convicted, Meehan could be jailed for 10 years.

Authorities have determined that five letters were taken. Meehan returned one letter — one that was not mentioned in the charges against him.

Three of the letters were sold by a New York auction firm. Sources told the Asheville Citizen on Monday the other letter had been located in Boston, Mass.

Meehan, now of Richmond, Va., was arrested Monday. Fisher said he waived arraignment, posted a $1,000 security bond and was released. No trial date has been set.

Meehan was in Asheville two years ago at the Pack Memorial Library, where the collection is kept, but the letters were not discovered missing until earlier this year, when a friend of one of the donors saw their sale noted in an auction periodical and notified authorities.

An Asheville Citizen reporter located Meehan in Virginia and, according to the Citizen, Meehan admitted taking the letters. When he returned one of the letters to the city, officials determined that it wasn't one of the four they had believed missing.

A federal investigator told the Asheville Citizen on Monday that the FBI is still involved in the search for the letters and that there could be federal prosecution.

The missing letters were:

—A two-page letter dated Oct. 27, 1929, to Miss Margaret Wallace of the New York Times Book Review in which Wolfe thanks Miss Wallace for her favorable review of Wolfe's first novel, "Look Homeward Angel." It was sold by Hamilton Galleries of New York, N.Y., for $1,050.

—A 3/4-page letter written in pencil dated Nov. 21, 1933, to Mrs. Smith Ely Jelliffe in which he writes about the agony of his artistic work. It sold through Hamilton Galleries for $500.

—An eight-page letter to Mrs. Jelliffe written at sea on stationery of The French Line, dated March 6, 1935, containing a description of a storm. It sold through Hamilton Galleries for $200.

—A Feb. 1, 1938, letter to Mrs. Jelliffe, which sources said Meehan sold to Hamilton and which has been traced to The Rendells, Inc., a Boston, Mass., gallery, in which Wolfe discusses filing suit in a New Jersey court about notes being taken from him without permission. Sources told The Asheville Citizen the letter is being offered by Rendells in a circular for $4,500.

—A brief note, which Meehan returned to the city, to Mrs. Jelliffe declining a luncheon invitation. It was judged not to have significant value.

Meehan was indicted June 6 by the Buncombe County grand jury on charges to taking four letters, not including the brief note about the luncheon invitation.

Armed Robbery Penalty Tougher

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Senate and House have each given tentative approval to separate measures that would toughen penalties for armed robbery and tampering with vending machines.

The Senate voted 38-3 on second reading Monday night to approve a measure making it a felony to break into vending machines that use paper currency. The act would be a felony regardless of whether money was taken, if there was "intent" to take money.

Final action was delayed when Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said the bill was "a drastic measure."

In the House, a bill was approved on second reading requiring persons convicted of armed robbery to serve a minimum of five years in prison without chance of parole, pardon or release for good behavior.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. James Ezzell, D-Nash, was approved 97-8. Final action was delayed until today.

The House voted for the measure after rejecting an amendment that would have included breaking and entering in the mandatory five-year sentence.

The vending-machine bill was backed by Sen. James Garrison, D-Stanly, who operates an Albemarle oil company. He said gasoline companies are losing money because their self-service machines are being destroyed by vandals and robbers.

The act is currently a misdemeanor, punishable by up to two years in prison. Soles said the bill would raise that maximum sentence to 10 years.

In other legislative action.

MINORS

The Senate narrowly approved a House-passed measure that would allow doctors to treat minors without the consent of their parents. The Senate voted 24-22 for the measure on second reading and opponents delayed final action until today.

Supporters said state law currently prevents a doctor from being held legally responsible for treating a child for venereal disease without the consent of their parents. The bill, they said, would extend that to cover pregnancy, alcohol and drug abuse and emotional disturbances.

BIKES

The Senate approved a measure establishing traffic laws covering bicycles. Approved on a 40-1 vote, the bill was sponsored by Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford. The bill also makes it legal for law enforcement agencies to block off state roads for locally sanctioned bicycle races. Supporters said it would clear the way for a Murphy-to-Manteo bike race next year.

AMENDMENT

The Senate gave overwhelming tentative approval to a bill that would write into the state constitution a requirement that state government always operate with a balanced budget. The House-passed measure was approved on a 41-1 vote with only Sen. Jerry Popkin, D-Onslow, voting no. If approved on third reading, it will go before the voters this November.

Rate Drop A Surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. says its attention was focused on money costs, not on Washington, when it surprised the business community with a decision to drop its prime interest rate.

The nation's fifth largest commercial bank announced Monday that it was lowering its basic lending rate to its most favored customers by one-quarter per cent to 6 1/2 per cent.

Led by New York City institutions, most major banks increased their prime rate a half percentage point in two closely spaced steps last month.

"It just seems to us to be the right rate given current market factors," said a Morgan spokesman, adding that the move was influenced in part by supply and demand factors.

Manufacturers Bank of Los Angeles, a small California bank that sometimes moves independently of much of the industry, later announced the same cut in its prime rate.

The prime rate is used for loans to preferred commercial customers but can influence rates on consumer and other types of loans because it acts as a lending barometer.

Woronoff Is Page

Robert M. Woronoff, Jr. of Greenville has been named by Speaker Carl J. Stewart to serve as a page in the North Carolina House of Representatives June 13-17.

The appointment was made by Rep. H. Horton Rountree of the eighth district. Woronoff is a student at J. H. Rose High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Woronoff of 207 Steward Lane.

President Seen As Enforcer

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The President should supervise the nation's efforts at civil rights enforcement, currently failing because of a lack of coordination and direction, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said today.

The commission concluded that the White House needs "a capability to monitor, direct, coordinate and improve federal civil rights programs."

It said the President should create a cabinet-level position to help him assume responsibility for supervision of the federal civil rights enforcement effort.

A 201-page commission report said the lack of coordination and direction often means a civil rights officer working in a government agency determines his own priorities without direction from officials making decisions on a national scale.

"The federal civil rights enforcement program is beset with problems that are often directly attributable to and exacerbated by the absence of leadership from policymaking officials," the commission said. "Those legally charged with practicing equal opportunity were often provided with too little information as to what the laws demanded of them," the commission said. "Those whom our laws seek to protect were not fully informed of their rights."

The commission also wants a civil rights division within the Office of Management and Budget. It could "collect, compile and evaluate up to date information on the status of federal civil rights programs," the commission said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad gain today after an early burst of buying that greeted a prime rate reduction by New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 3.22 at 915.62. Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 5-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Trading was active. First-hour volume on the Big Board reached 7.48 million shares. After Monday's NYSE close, Morgan Guaranty lowered its prime lending rate from 6 1/4 to 6 1/2 per cent. The move put a stamp of confirmation on recent evidence of a letup in this spring's upward trend in interest rates. The Dow climbed about 6 points in the first half hour. After that it pulled back as some traders who had evidently been waiting for an opportune moment to dispose of some stocks sold into the rally. Tenneco was the most active NYSE issue, up 3/4 at 32. The 11 a.m. NYSE composite index was up .30 at 54.24. OAT 115.09.

Funds For City Schools

First District Congressman Walter B. Jones announced today the approval by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of funds in the amount of $3,455,38, certified for immediate payment to the Greenville City Schools under Public Law 874.

These funds are designed to provide financial assistance for schools located in federally impacted areas, which include large numbers of federal employees and also military personnel. Additional payments will be subject to such adjustments as may be required and by the availability of funds.

Decision Is Delayed

KERNERSVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Federal officials have delayed a decision on whether to declare Kernersville a disaster area so the town can get federal money to build a permanent water line to Winston-Salem.

Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., says the Forsyth County town of 5,000 "might have to wait another day or two" for a decision on the disaster funds by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration.

In the meantime, the town is getting its water from a temporary hookup to Winston-Salem and its own dwindling backup reservoir. Kernersville's main reservoir has not been usable since vandals apparently opened tanks at the De-structo Chemway Corp. on June 3 and dumped waste chemicals into the water.

Hunt Voices Approval Of Assembly's Work

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt today praised the 1977 legislature as "one of the most productive and progressive legislatures in the history of North Carolina," but said he was disappointed as well.

Hunt's praise was largely confined to the General Assembly's approval of his program, little of which has not been enacted. "By and large this has been a legislature that has passed my program," he said. "We've worked at it very, very hard."

Asked about disappointments, Hunt said, "I think failure of the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) to pass was certainly one of the biggest disappointments to me." He did not mention any other specific disappointment.

Hunt lauded the lawmakers for approving a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow the governor and lieutenant governor to seek second consecutive terms; for its likely approval of his reading and testing programs for the public schools; for his efforts to reorganize some of the agencies in state government; for enacting a number of his anti-crime proposals; and approving for his proposal to reorganize the state Utilities Commission by setting up a

In answer to questions, Hunt reaffirmed his refusal to get involved in the dispute between Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram and the insurance industry. "We're continuing to study the matter," he said. It is a matter for the General Assembly to resolve, he said, adding that he did not know if the state is on the verge of an insurance crisis as some industry spokesmen have claimed.

He also restated his opposition to a phasing out of the state inventory tax as was proposed by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Terrorists

Last Rites

By RICHARD DE WEGER
Associated Press Writer

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — South Moluccans from other communities converged on Assen today for the funeral of the six terrorists killed last weekend when government forces stormed the train on which the extremists held 51 hostages.

There were reports that several bus companies refused to accept charters from Moluccan groups wanting to attend the rites. But sources in the local Moluccan community said as many as 5,000 of the 40,000 South Moluccans living in Holland were expected.

A memorial service was to be held at the Moluccan Evangelical Church. Then the bodies of the five men and one woman were to be buried in a single plot on the southern outskirts of Assen.

Police said they were taking special precautions against violence by the Moluccans or by local Dutch in retaliation for the twin 20-day sieges of the train and the Bovensmilde elementary school.

The coffins were covered with the flag of the phantom South Moluccan republic, and loud, continuous wailing came from the homes of the dead. The Moluccans blocked the streets leading into their quarter with automobiles, and there was no violence.

Six other terrorists who were captured are being questioned, and a seventh who was wounded is in serious condition. The assault by Dutch forces early Saturday freed 49 hostages from the train and four from the schoolhouse.

The other two hostages on the train were killed. The Justice Ministry said it expected to know by midweek, after autopsy reports and ballistic studies, whether bullets from the marines or the terrorists were responsible.

Premier Joop den Uyl and Justice Minister Andries van Agt, the leaders of the country's two largest political parties, were to make a preliminary report to Parliament today on the government's handling of the crisis.

Older moderate South Moluccan leaders have said the great majority of the exile community do not support terrorist methods. But the exiles have refused to integrate into Dutch society and still cling to the apparently hopeless dream of independence for their native islands, which were part of the prewar Dutch East Indies and since 1949 have been part of Indonesia.

Ray, confessed slayer of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., and his former cellmate Hill are sharing a cell again in the prison's maximum security "D block" because of temporary overcrowding, officials said.

They were tracked down by bloodhounds and captured within hours of each other late Sunday and early Monday in the New River section of Anderson County, a snake-infested wooded area about five miles from here.

One prison spokesman said that when Ray was asked what he had been doing between the escape and his discovery Monday by a bloodhound named Sandy, he replied: "Nothing."

Asked if Ray was being hostile or difficult Lane said, "He's not being different than he usually is." The warden added that Ray refused an examination by a medic upon his return, but said he was looked over for possible snakebites or other apparent injuries.

Two investigators from the House Assassinations Committee, investigating King's death, talked with prison officials for more than three hours Monday about the escape.

Ray remained silent. "We came to the conclusion while bringing him in that any interrogation of Mr. Ray would be futile," Lane said. "He just wouldn't say anything."

Lane said the congressional investigators — Deputy Chief Counsel Robert Lehner and Edward Evans, head of the subcommittee staff for the King half of the panel's probe — had asked to talk with Ray. But he said a decision on a meeting will be up to Ray and his attorney, Jack Kershaw, who was to arrive here today.

State officials, under criticism for allowing the break to occur, already are considering measures to beef up security around the walls of the 85-year-old fortress.

Gov. Ray Blanton said Monday he was asking President Carter to take custody of Ray, 36, was sentenced to a 99-year term following his guilty plea to a state charge of murder in the 1968 slaying of King.

Blanton has blamed the escape on a 1970 federal court order saying Ray cannot be held in solitary confinement and has to be treated like any other murderer.

Charged In Death

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department has charged one person with murder and three others on accessory counts in the shooting death early Saturday of a 30-year-old Pinetops man.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Everett H. Loftin, 27, has been charged with the murder of Joseph McCoy Thorne of P.O. Box 141, Pinetops at the Starlight Inn at Fountain.

Sheriff Tyson, who noted that the incident was reported to the Sheriff's Department at 4:43 a.m. Saturday, said that Thorne died at the scene after being shot in the throat with a pistol.

In addition to the murder charge, the sheriff said that Phillip W. Wiggins, Marvin K. Hawkins, and Gail Kornegay were all charged with being accessories before and after the fact in the murder.

All four persons charged in the case are from Kinston, he reported.

Sheriff Tyson said that the shooting at the night spot apparently occurred following an argument over an incident in the club's parking lot.

Fisk's Long Single Keys Red Sox Victory

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Carlton Fisk knows when the odds are in his favor.

"There was a good chance for a hit," the Boston catcher said after his long single in the bottom of the 10th inning scored Rick Burleson from third and gave the Red Sox a 5-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox Monday night.

The victory moved Boston into first place in the American League East Division, one-half game ahead of the New York Yankees.

Fisk was batting with the bases loaded and one out.

"Their infield and outfield were playing in and their pitcher (Larry Anderson) had to give me something good to hit," Fisk said. "I was just trying to hit the ball hard."

Fisk lined the ball over the head of Chicago centerfielder Chet Lemon.

In other AL games Monday night, Texas blanked Cleveland 3-0 and Kansas City defeated the Yankees 8-3. In the National League, the New York Mets downed Atlanta 7-1, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 5-4 and Montreal nipped Houston 3-2. It was Boston's fifth straight victory and eighth in the last nine games.

Relief specialist Bill Campbell, Boston's fourth pitcher, picked up the victory by retiring the last six Chicago batters.

Rangers 3, Indians 0

Burt Blyleven's four-hit shut-out was backed by home runs by Juan Beniquez and Burt Campaneris as Texas downed Cleveland. Only John Lowenstein was able to bother Blyleven, 6-7, getting two of the Indians' hits and also walking once.

Beniquez, who also doubled, gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the fourth with his homer into the left field stands. It was the first hit off loser Dennis Eckersley, 6-5. Campaneris led off the sixth with his second homer of the year.

Royals 8, Yankees 3

George Brett scored from first base on a bloop single in the first inning, then slammed a two-run homer, powering Kansas City over New York and knocking the Yankees out of first place in the AL East.

Winner Paul Splittorff, 5-4, needed help from Doug Bird and Steve Mingori. Mike Torrez, 7-5, took the loss.

Mets 7, Braves 1

Pitcher Jerry Koosman backed his four-hitter with two runs batted in, leading the Mets over Atlanta.

Koosman, 5-6, struck out 10, walked three and held the Braves hitless until the fifth inning when Atlanta scored an unearned run following the pitcher's error. Koosman's two-run single came in the eighth when the Mets scored four runs.

Reds 5, Phillies 4

A home run by Dan Driessen leading off the bottom of the ninth lifted Cincinnati past Philadelphia. Driessen's sixth homer of the season gave the victory to reliever Pedro Borbon, 2-3, and saddled Phils reliever Wayne Twitchell with his fifth straight defeat.

Expos 3, Astros 2

Run-scoring singles by Tony Perez and Andre Dawson and a sacrifice fly by Gary Carter in the fifth inning helped Montreal beat Houston.

Santo Alcala, 2-3, hurled no-hit ball for 4 1-3 innings but was chased after giving up a two-run homer to Houston's Jose Cruz in the eighth.

Bartow Resigns UCLA Post

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gene Bartow, disenchanted by the pressures of coaching basketball at UCLA, has taken on a new kind of challenge as athletic director and head coach of the first basketball program at the University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Bartow's resignation from UCLA was announced in Los Angeles Monday night by Athletic Director J.D. Morgan and his hiring by Alabama-Birmingham was to be announced at a press conference early today. "Gene will serve as athletic director and head coach of the UAB basketball team we hope to field during the 1978-79 seasons," said school President Dr. S. Richardson Hill.

"He is one of the great coaches and leaders of young people in the country today, and we have confidence he will continue his outstanding leadership at UAB," Hill added.

"The thing about the Alabama job that appeals to him is that he is the athletic director," said Morgan in announcing Bartow's resignation. "He will be laying the foundation for the entire athletic program. It's a different challenge and a different set of circumstances for him."

Apparently the challenge of building a sports program from its foundation, combined with bickering among some UCLA supporters, motivated Bartow to abandon the most successful basketball program in the country.

Bartow succeeded John Wooden as coach of the Bruins two seasons ago. His teams won Pacific-8 Conference championships both seasons, advancing to the 1976 NCAA semifinals. But they failed to capture the national title and that led to heavy criticism of Bartow. Under Wooden, UCLA won 10 national titles in 12 years.

Bartow's apparent successor will be Gary Cunningham, former assistant to Wooden.

Cunningham, who served as assistant to Wooden when he was head coach and now is executive director of the UCLA alumni association, said Monday he was only mildly surprised by Bartow's departure. "I felt it would be about 50-50, I know how frustrated he was. The pressure effected Gene," said Cunningham, who was in Meridian, Idaho for a high school basketball clinic.

Bartow has been coach at five universities, with a 310-153 record in 16 seasons. In the past 12 seasons, Bartow's teams have participated in post-season tournaments eight times.

Prior to joining UCLA, the coach took three of his Valparaiso teams to the NCAA College Division tournament. In 1973, his Memphis State team went to the NCAA championship game before losing to UCLA.

Bartow's Move Not Surprising

BUIES CREEK, N. C. (AP) — Even before UCLA basketball coach Gene Bartow accepted the athletic director's job at the University of Alabama, his predecessor said he wouldn't be surprised.

Former UCLA coach John Wooden, whose act is hard to follow, commented Monday at the Campbell College Basketball School shortly before announcement that Bartow had taken the Alabama post.

Because of the large number of schools and professional teams in the Los Angeles area, said Wooden, fans and media "tend to be a little more critical and more demanding."

"My personal feeling is that the press as a whole has treated him well and that he has done a fine job," said Wooden, who, despite his phenomenal success at UCLA, admitted that he, too, was criticized.

Pirates Sign Last Basketball Recruit

East Carolina University capped its basketball recruiting season today with the signing of Dan Roberts, the leading high school scorer in the state of Indiana this past season, from Nashville, Ind.

Roberts, a 6-1½, 165-pound guard, poured in 33.6 points per game for Brown County High School, setting a new school record for scoring average and total points in one season with 638.

On four occasions, Roberts topped the 40-point mark and was never under 20 points in any game. His brisk pace of scoring produced consensus all-state honors.

SIU, USC Only Unbeatens Left

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Dewey Robinson of Southern Illinois was a 19th-round choice when the major league clubs culled the college ranks for talent earlier this month.

But Arizona State will attest that he's already a pitching craftsman.

"The mark of a good pitcher is to come up with the big pitch in the key situation," mused Arizona State Coach Jim Brock after Robinson stopped his No. 1-rated club 3-2. "And it was obvious that Dewey did just that."

Robinson, a 6-foot, 180-pound senior right-hander, surrendered 11 hits but continually pitched out of jams.

The victory left No. 4-ranked Southern Illinois, 40-10, and South Carolina, 42-10-1, the only unbeatens among the six remaining teams in the double-elimination tournament.

Jim Lewis scattered eight hits and struck out 14 to let

South Carolina stop crowd-favorite California State-Los Angeles 6-2. The two tournament unbeatens clash Wednesday night.

In completion of a game suspended by rain Sunday night, co-favorite Minnesota stayed in the chase by eliminating Baylor 4-3 in the 11th inning.

In elimination-round games Tuesday night, Arizona State, 53-12, faces Minnesota, 39-11, in a matchup of pretournament favorites and California State-Los Angeles, 41-21, tests Clemson, 42-9.

"I'm not an overpowering pitcher, so I have to change speeds and pitch smart to be effective," said Robinson, selected by the Chicago White Sox in the free agent draft.

"Sure, I gave up 11 hits because they're a good hitting team but I don't think that I was hit all that hard."

His club managed only four hits but coupled with three Arizona State errors it was enough. Neil Fiala drove in two of the Salukis' runs.

"When you hold a team to three runs you should be able to win," said Arizona State's Brock. "We didn't play well and that's my fault, I didn't have them ready to play."

Arizona State has come into the college classic as the top-rated team in four of the last six years but not captured the title. Now the Sun Devils are a loss away from elimination.

South Carolina struck for four runs in the third inning, two on a triple by Mookie Wilson, and then let Lewis take command.

The senior right-hander surrendered two runs in the bottom of the third, but thereafter allowed only one runner as far as third base.

"He's just the coolest pitcher under pressure that I've seen," said South Carolina Coach June Raines. "We made five errors — a season's high — behind him but he picked us up."

California State delighted the crowd of 9,641 with its phantom, comic bungled drill before the game but inflicted chances — 10 men left on — during the game.

"We had more than enough chances," said California State Coach Jack Deutsch. "We didn't come up with the big hit but a lot of that was because of Lewis. He pitched a great game and had the strikeout when he needed it."

Minnesota took only 12 minutes to send hard-luck Baylor home. Mike Bruss' run-scoring double gave the Gophers' an 11th inning run and then Brian Denman put the Bears down in order in the bottom of the inning.

"Denman's just a clutch player, there was no doubt he would be my pitcher when we resumed — and he'll be my pitcher tomorrow, too," said Minnesota Coach Dick "Chief" Siebert.

Baylor, 43-15, lost both its series games in extra innings by a run.

"It's very simple," said Baylor Coach Mickey Sullivan, "we got excellent pitching throughout but no one came up with the clutch hit when needed."

New York Mets' ace pitcher Tom Seaver, in Atlanta for a three-game set with the Braves, ponders his position prior to Monday night's game. Seaver has asked to be traded. The trade deadline for the major leagues is midnight Wednesday. (AP Wirephoto)

Finances Main Topic As NBA Owners Meet

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — It's been nearly a year since the owners of National Basketball Association teams cast a lifeline to the members of the sinking American Basketball Association, and those who grabbed it are finding the price of survival to be steep indeed.

Just how steep was expected to be a prime topic of conversation at the annual summer meetings of the NBA Board of Governors, which opened today and will continue through Friday at the Hotel del Coronado.

It was at last year's summer meetings, June 17, 1976, at Hyannis, Mass., that an agreement was announced which brought an end to the 9-year-old ABA, with four teams being absorbed into the NBA. Now, nearly 12 months later, those four survivors — the Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs — are still floundering.

And it's a serious plight — sources say at least one of the four clubs has debts in the ritzy neighborhood of $10 million.

Legion Team Tops Wilson, 9-4

WILSON — Right fielder Mike Shank knocked in three runs and scored one himself to pace Greenville's American Legion team's offense in a 9-4 victory over Wilson last night.

Greenville jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first five innings, scoring three runs in the third, one in the fourth and three more in the fifth.

Wilson scored three of its runs in the sixth, while Greenville scored two more in the seventh. Wilson finished up the scoring with one in the eighth.

Greenville coach Edgar Hooks said the game was a "good team effort." The team played alertly, he said and hit the ball well.

The two Greenville pitchers,

Mike Williams and Quinn Morris, pitched well, giving up only three hits. Williams had a no-hitter going until the sixth inning, Hooks said.

Greenville's winning runs came in the third. With one out, Ned Craft, Wright Hooks and Kevin Adams got three straight singles to load the bases. Craft came in on Greg Lee's walk, while Hooks scored on an error and Adams got home on a fielder's choice.

Greenville was led by Adams 3-5, Shank 2-5 and Craft 2-5. Greenville travels to Williamston tonight.

surge in scoring from his junior year when he averaged 18.9 points in leading coach Joe Davis' club to sectional and regional championships.

"We feel very fortunate that Dan Roberts has chosen East Carolina University," said new head coach Larry Gillman. "Dan's superior shooting will definitely be an asset to our club next season."

"Some of Dan's high school scoring feats will be very, very hard for anyone to duplicate. We are happy to have this caliber of shooter on our club for the next four years."

Roberts is the fifth recruit to sign with East Carolina. Earlier signees were Oliver Mack, Walter Moseley, Roger Carr and Bernard Hill.

Gillman is happy with his first recruiting year. "Even though we got a late start," he noted, "I think we got some fine players. We are most pleased with all five of our signees."

West Moves To Majors

Greenville native Joe West has been called up to the National League to fill in for an injured umpire.

West, who is a graduate of Rose High School, where he lettered in three sports, and Elon College, where he established a number of records as a quarterback, is in his fourth season as a professional umpire.

Last season, he finished the final week of the season at Atlanta, calling seven games.

Currently working in the 3-A American Association, he was notified yesterday that he was to report to San Diego for work during the next ten days as a replacement for an injured umpire.

West is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude West of Greenville.

Mine Workers Voting Today

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

With a bitter campaign over, some 277,000 members of the United Mine Workers are voting today to determine who will lead their strife-torn union for the next five years.

The three-way race for the union leadership pits incumbent President Arnold R. Miller against Harry Patrick, his former ally and the union's secretary-treasurer, and against Lee Roy Patterson, a western Kentucky strip miner and member of the UMW executive board.

The candidates wound up their campaigns Monday in the heart of the Appalachian coal fields, each close to home and predicting victory.

No matter who wins the vote count, the election probably won't settle the internal feuding that has fractured the union or curb the spate of wildcat strikes that have stalled production.

Patterson has already vowed to challenge the election if he loses, and both government and industry officials fear that protracted legal struggles will interfere with — if not delay — the start of contract talks this fall. The current contract expires in December and all three candidates have warned of a possible nationwide strike.

Eligible to vote are some 187,000 working coal miners and approximately 90,000 retired miners in 25 states and Canada.

Union tellers who supervise the election said most locals would open their polls about 6 a.m. and close at 6 p.m., although some would close earlier and some would stay open until midnight.

Ballots won't be counted officially until July 1, but each candidate will keep his own tally. UMW bylaws require ballots to be mailed to union headquarters in Washington, D.C., for the official tallying.

The silver-haired, 54-year-old Miller says election to a second term will give him control of his rebellious executive board, led by Patterson. He is confident of victory. "If there are 150,000 votes cast, I'll get 100,000 of them," he said in a recent speech.

"I feel fine and I'm confident we'll win the election," said Patterson, arriving home in Madisonville, Ky., for an election eve rally. "The only problem we could have will be because they've got the ballot rigged."

Patterson, 42, has blamed his opponents for drawing up a confusing ballot and plans to make that the basis of an appeal if he loses.

Patrick, 46, ran on Miller's reform ticket in 1972 but the two split last year. He's counting on a heavy turnout of younger miners. "Anything over 50 per cent will give him the election," said a campaign aide.

Campaign Period Ends In Spain With Explosions And Appeals

By LOUIS NEVIN
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's first free election campaign in 41 years has ended with bomb explosions and appeals for moderation.

The campaign ended at midnight Monday to give the 23 million voters a 33-hour "period of reflection" before they begin voting Wednesday for a new Cortes to replace dictator Francisco Franco's appointed parliament.

Ten bomb explosions were reported Monday, most of them apparently the work of Basque nationalists in northwest Spain. One man was killed, raising the toll for the three-week campaign to eight dead.

The army moved special units to power plants and television and communication relay stations. All army and police leaves were canceled, and all security forces were on a special alert to prevent any attempt to disrupt the elections.

Maoist and other ultra-leftist groups called for a boycott of the elections, and Basque separatists promised more violence. The police announced the arrest rest of 15 members of the fascist New Force and said pistols, grenades and baseball bats were seized with them.

Opinion polls indicate no faction will get a majority. But the Democratic Center Union, the moderate coalition headed by Premier Adolfo Suarez, is expected to come in first, with Felipe Gonzalez' Socialist Workers party second, and Santiago Carillo's Communists, Manuel Fraga Iribarne's rightist Popular Alliance and the Christian Democrats in a close race for third place.

In windup television speeches, Suarez, Gonzalez and Carillo appealed for moderation and national unity. They warned of hard work ahead to restore democracy.

Along with their unity appeals, all three promised regional autonomy to appease the Basque, Catalan, Valencian, Galician and Andalusian separatists. They also emphasized Spain's economic problems, including faltering industry hesitant over the future because of the political uncertainty, high unemployment and more than 20 per cent inflation.

Sedatives Said Cancer Linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two doctors warned a congressional subcommittee today that many sedatives purchased over the counter in drug stores contain a common drug linked with cancer in animals.

They called for more tests to determine the safety of the non-prescription substances, sold as daytime and nighttime sedatives.

Dr. William Lijinsky cautioned that many sleep aids sold without a prescription contain methapyrilene, a substance which can react with nitrites present in the stomach to form one of the most potent cancer-causing substances known.

The substance, dimethylnitrosamine, induces a high rate of liver cancer in rats, Lijinsky said.

According to the Handbook of Non-Prescription Drugs, methapyrilene is included in such sedatives as Alva-Tranquil, Compoz, Devarex, Dormin, Nite Rest, Nytol, San-Man, Sedacaps, Seadate, Sleep-Eze, Somnicaps, Somnex, and Sure-Sleep.

"Since everyone is exposed to nitrates, either that present in cured meats, or in saliva, taking of methapyrilene always poses the possibility of formation of dimethylnitrosamine," said Lijinsky, a cancer research scientist.

Dr. Ernest Hartmann, director of the Sleep and Dream Laboratory at Boston State Hospital, also warned that sedatives may pose a health threat.

Documents To To Go To State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A man who thought he was doing state officials a favor when he offered to sell them two historical documents at a $50 profit has been ordered by the state Supreme Court to hand them over for nothing.

The ruling Monday came as a shock to B.C. West Jr. of Elizabeth City, who offered in 1975 to sell two bills of indictment from the Salisbury district, dated 1767 and 1768, to the state for $850.

At a private auction in New York in 1974, West had paid $900 for the indictments, which were signed by king's attorney William Hooper, who later signed the Declaration of Independence.

In a 5-2 decision that drew a stinging dissent, the high court ruled that the state is the "lawful custodian" of all court records, even when individual employees dispose of them.

It also said no court had authority to order compensation for West, although the justices said he had bought the papers in good faith. Such an order would have to come from the General Assembly, the court ruled.

When he offered to sell the documents to the state, West said, he also offered to travel to New York on the state's behalf for a fee less than his expenses to bid on a letter from George Washington to a North Carolina governor.

"You'll cry when you hear this," West said. "They turned down my offer and went up to New York to make them give up the letter themselves. They failed miserably, so they came down here and sued me on these indictments to get themselves a court precedent."

The response to Monday's decision from Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten's office appeared to confirm West's statement. "It may influence some other documents out there," said a spokesman. "Bigger, much bigger. A letter from George Washington."

In a dissenting opinion, Justice J. William Copeland joined by Justice Dan K. Moore argued that the burden should have been on the state to prove that the state had not surrendered its title to the documents.

"To permit the state to ride freely on the backs of private individuals and libraries who have expended their efforts and money to recover and preserve these documents and records, without any reimbursement, does not strike me as fair," Copeland wrote.

West was joined in his lawsuit by archivists and librarians, who claimed there would be little incentive for private individuals to save potentially valuable documents from destruction by careless officials if the state could take the documents away whenever it pleased.

"It looks to me like the people who go out of their way to save these things ought to be the heroes," West said. "And instead, the state is making them out to be the villains."

One of the indictments West owned charged John Parker with "assault upon one Daniel Clary" and the other charged "William Nelson and Willis Smith" of Anson County with assault on a James White. All were acquitted.

Routine Test Reopens Murder

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — A routine polygraph test on a man applying for a private detective job in Chicago allegedly has led to the man's confession that he was the killer of a nurse found stabbed to death here six years ago.

Havelock police detective Don Cox and State Bureau of Investigation agent Isaac Edwards have gone to Chicago to investigate the report in hopes of finally solving the 1971 murder of Faye Hare.

Authorities said the two investigators are carrying extradition papers with them in hopes of bringing the unidentified man back to Craven County if the reports of his confession are substantiated.

The alleged confession was attributed to a man police said they understood was a friend of the dead woman's husband, a Marine stationed in Vietnam. The man had reportedly agreed to check on Mrs. Hare periodically during her husband's absence.

Police said reports indicated that while taking the polygraph test as part of an application for a job with the Pinkerton detective agency, the man's responses to certain questions showed up as lies, leading to the alleged confession.

Mrs. Hare, who had been employed as a nurse at Carteret General Hospital at Morehead City for two years, was found dead on the floor of her Havelock garage apartment on March 19, 1971.

A coroner's report said she had been stabbed 18 times, and that any of five of the wounds could have been fatal. The stab wounds were inflicted with a broad blade that was sharp on one side, the report stated.

The woman's body was found sprawled on a rug in the living room of her apartment by the husband of a friend and fellow employee at the hospital, concerned because Mrs. Hare had not shown up that day for work.

Time of death was placed at 10 a.m. The woman was last seen when she left her hospital job at 11:26 p.m. the preceding night, police reports said.

Mrs. Hare, a Wayne County native, had returned only days before from a month's visit with her husband in Hawaii.

Money Problem Is Chief Gripe

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The nation's mayors don't agree with the voters on every issue, but one problem always brings mayors and their constituents together — money.

The struggles to balance city budgets and to control soaring local taxes were seen — in a survey taken by the Associated Press at the U.S. Conference of Mayors' annual meeting here — as the most important gripes shared by mayors and citizens.

Mayors also complain about problems in attracting industry, developing downtown areas and improving housing in their cities. But they say the people themselves consider deteriorating streets, high crime rates, unemployment and even stray dogs as the major issues.

One hundred of the 300 mayors attending the conference responded to the survey, taken here Monday.

"Almost all our problems are related to money," said Mayor L.D. Ochs of Colorado Springs. But he added that his citizens make "demands for expanded services, while at the same time demanding that levels of taxes be reduced."

Surprisingly, only one mayor, L.T. Kramer of Paterson, N.J., said his city's biggest problems was quality of education, and he said his citizens agree with him.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles said his citizens complain most over lack of jobs, but that his own problem is broader, including crime, rising city costs and poor housing.

Twenty-nine mayors said their cities' biggest problems are the rising cost of government and other budget problems. Another 12 named economic development problems as their top concern. Eleven identified housing, and eight said lack of jobs is a problem. The other 40 gave a variety of answers that didn't fall into any of these categories.

According to 28 mayors, people in their cities complain most of rising local taxes. Another 19 said citizens gripe most often about poor streets while crime and lack of police protection was third on the list with 12 mayors saying that was their citizens' most frequent complaint.

Art Was To 'Cool' First

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Thieves who lugged four 50-pound sets of original John James Audubon prints out of a Florida museum brought the valuable art to North Carolina "to cool off" before selling it, an FBI official said Monday as the agency announced recovery of the art and the arrest of two men.

Edgar N. Best, special agent in charge of the FBI office here, said his agency believes "a rather professional museum gang" stole the Audubon art, and the recovery of the sets may lead to several more arrests.

The sets, each containing about 100 22-inch by 40-inch color prints of birds completed by the famed naturalists in the 1820s, were stolen May 27 in a slick heist from the Audubon House museum in Key West, Fla. Gerald Whaley, a museum spokesman, said Monday that someone apparently had keys to disconnect the alarm system and unlock the doors in the three-story converted house.

Broken locks on glass cases which housed the sets were the only signs of a burglary, Whaley said. The FBI said museum officials valued the stolen sets at $1.2 million, but Whaley judged that figure too high. He said four similar sets were recently auctioned off for $350,000.

FBI agents recovered three sets on Saturday when they swooped down on a house near Marion in the North Carolina mountains, Best said. The undamaged sets were found in the trunk of an abandoned automobile.

Although at least two people were questioned at the site, no arrests were made, Best said. Evidence from the raid will be turned over to a grand jury in Miami and as many as six indictments are expected, he said.

The fourth set, also undamaged, was recovered Saturday near Elizabeth, N.J., when FBI agents arrested Roy Louis Morrell Jr., 29, of Key West, Best said. A New York City man, Francis Dee Forrest Van Zandt, 30, was arrested shortly thereafter at his apartment.

Both men were charged with interstate transportation of stolen property, Best said.

Best said the FBI believes the burglary to be the work of a group responsible for other art thefts. Agents think they know the identities of "the fences who were to sell the stolen art and the mastermind," he said.

He declined to say how the FBI learned the whereabouts of the art, except to credit it to "some pretty good information."

Best said the thieves apparently planned to separate the prints and sell them individually.

"Our information is that the folios were stored for a time in the Key West area," Best said. "Then they tried to move them to cool them off and brought them to North Carolina for this purpose."

"They had moved one to try to fence it, probably in New York City," he said.

Court Rules On Trials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The conviction of a Stanly County man who had been sentenced to death for the first-degree murder of his wife has been overturned by the state Supreme Court, which ruled there was insufficient evidence to try the man in the first place.

In other rulings Monday, the court upheld four other first-degree murder cases and two rape cases and reversed a second-degree murder conviction.

Also in that set of rulings, the justices routinely vacated three death sentences because the U.S. Supreme Court last year overturned the capital punishment law under which the persons were convicted. Those sentences were changed to life imprisonment.

The court ruled 4-3 that there was not enough evidence presented by the state to support the murder charge and one of the 12 solicitation charges against Harold George Furr of Locust, who was convicted in March 1976 of first-degree murder in the Sept. 15, 1975, killing of his wife Earlene.

In addition to his death sentence, Furr had also been sentenced to 24-30 years in prison on the charges of trying to solicit the killing of his wife.

Furr and his wife had been married 21 years and had four children when they separated in 1973. At one point, Furr was jailed for contempt of court after his wife filed a civil suit over a property settlement.

While in jail, the court said, Furr asked two men to kill his wife, offering one of them a parcel of land and the other $3,000. They rejected the offer and court records show that he asked others to do the job and questioned several persons about where he could find a "hit man."

In its ruling, the Supreme Court held that the state had not shown Furr was at his estranged wife's home when the killing took place.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice I. Beverly Lake Sr., joined by Chief Justice Susie Sharp and Justice J. Frank Huskins, argued that there was sufficient evidence that Furr had killed his wife or had hired someone to do it.

In other cases, the court:

—Reversed the November 1976 second-degree murder conviction of Elbanks White in Wilkes County. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the death of Shirley Ingram Billings. The court ruled there was not enough evidence for a trial. White's conviction came on his third trial after two juries were unable to reach a verdict.

—Upheld the first-degree murder conviction and life imprisonment of Joseph Lee Perry in the Nov. 18, 1975, death of Roy Brent Bullock. Bullock's daughter, Lois Marie, 14, witnessed the killing in the Butler convenience store where Bullock worked.

—Upheld the first-degree murder conviction in Forsyth County of Michael Anthony May but vacated the death sentence. He was convicted of the February 1975 killing of Elijah Whitaker Jones.

—Found no error in the September, 1976, trial and conviction of Curtis Donnie Shuler in the Cumberland County murder of Ivey Jerome Lilly.

—Upheld the first-degree murder conviction of Willie Lee "Ajaba X" Woods in the December 1974 killing in Winston-Salem of Paul Toney, a customer gunned down during the robbery of a convenience store. Woods' death penalty was vacated.

—Upheld the first-degree rape and robbery conviction in Durham County of Allen Roberts. He raped Maureen Elizabeth Fahey, 26, an employee of Duke Medical Center, on June 10, 1974. His death sentence was vacated.

—Upheld the November 1976 second-degree rape conviction in Vance County of Eddie Lee Williams.

Discover Marijuana

Detective Capt. L. J. Russell said today that officers last week confiscated 10 marijuana plants about six inches high from the rear of an apartment building at 125 Avery St.

The police official, who said no arrests were made, reported that if the plants had grown to maturity, they could have produced an estimated 10 pounds of marijuana valued at about $100. He said the marijuana was discovered about 4:45 p.m. June 9.

Penney's Names New Manager

The J.C. Penney Co. has named Don Yeager as the new manager of the company's Pitt Plaza store here.

Yeager assumed his new duties on June 1, succeeding J. Fred Baumann who transferred to Paducah, Ky. as manager of the Penney store there. Baumann served as store manager in Greenville for 11 years.

The new manager, a native of Johnson City, Tenn., comes to Greenville from Miami, Fla. where he was district operations manager for the 11-store Miami district.

Yeager, who attended East Tennessee State University in Johnson City, has been associated with the J.C. Penney Co. for some 17 years. He joined the company in 1960 as a trainee and transferred to Paducah, Ky. before being promoted to merchandise manager in Nashville, Tenn.

Following his tenure in Nashville, Yeager was promoted to operations manager in the firm's Memphis, Tenn. store and then was promoted to his district post in Miami where he worked for three years.

The manager is married to the former Margaret Linville of Unicoi, Tenn. near Johnson City and they have a son, Jay, 18, and a daughter, Kelley, 9.

Yeager said that he will be relocating his family to Greenville soon.

Two Hurt In Crash

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two men were injured when a light commuter plane suffered an engine failure and crashed into trees 100 yards short of the runway at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The pilot, James R. Jones of Pinehurst, N.C., and his passenger, John Rhode, of Darien, Conn., were taken to Rex Hospital in Raleigh after the crash Monday afternoon.

Hospital officials said Jones was released after treatment for cuts and abrasions. Rhode, who was flying to Raleigh-Durham for a connection to New York, was held overnight for observation after complaining of abdominal pains, they said.

Jones told authorities that he and Rhode were inbound from Pinehurst when the engine quit and he was forced to land about short of the runway, just missing some high-tension wires.

dy to tell why he will never retire.

The theme of the annual Broadway Tony awards was survival, something Ebsen, "Barnaby Jones" on the CBS detective series, knows a lot about. He first started out as a dancer in 1928 in Ziegfeld's "Whoopee."

Ebsen's song was "September Song" from "Knickerbocker Holiday."

"I don't consider 'September Song' a survivor song, but there is one line which expresses why I'll never retire," he said. "That's 'these few golden days I'll spend with you.'"

The 69-year-old Ebsen, about to enter his sixth season as the foxy grandpa detective, said, "After this I'll just get into something else. Some other job. I can't do nothing."

Ebsen said he would like to write. "I have about six plays and I want to write 'My First 50 Years in Show Business,'" Ebsen said. "My mother, God bless her, saved every letter from 1928 on. Every clipping, pictures. She squirreled it all away."

He's already written at least one play, "The Champagne General," about Civil War general George McClellan, and he is working with his daughter, Bonnie, on a script for "Barnaby Jones."

He said he has more time for writing since the addition of Mark Shera as his partner. "I said we have two clever people on the show, Lee Meriwether and Mark Shera. I said why don't you do a number of shows in which they carry the load. They agreed to that and it gives me more time to do the things I want to do."

One of the things he devotes his time to is building catamaran boats. After finishing last season he helped deliver two boats to Florida. They had to take the boats through the Gulf of Mexico area he called "the hijacking triangle" because of the disappearance of boats in the area. Many sources believe the yachts were hijacked by drug smugglers.

When they got to that area one boat was taken overland and Ebsen helped sail the other to Sarasota, Fla.

"I figured if we were going to have trouble it would be someone following us out of port,"

Station Nixes Violence

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A South Carolina bank won't buy ads on television programs featuring "excessive violence," president W.W. Johnson has declared.

Johnson said in a weekend statement a recent poll in the state's three largest cities — Columbia, Greenville and Charleston — showed "a convincing reject of violence in entertainment" with 81 per cent of those responding feel TV violence leads to real violence.

"We are instructing our advertising agency to avoid shows with violence, regardless of their ratings and popularity," Johnson added. Specific examples of violence on networks he cited as Baretta, Starsky and Hutch, Kojack and Police Story.

Johnson, noting the Columbia-based bank buys TV ads on in-state stations, said the dollar amount "will not influence anybody. It's an expression that needs to be made."

And he said South Carolina television stations are not responsible for network programming.

Bank officials declined to say how much money Bankers Trust spends on TV ads and how much of its advertising budget that represents.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♦ 1♥ 2♥ Pass
3NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

Study the club suit in this hand. You can finesse either East or West for the queen of clubs. However, if you consider the hand as a whole, there is only one right way to play the suit.

North's bidding is enough to send partner to an early grave. He does not have anything like a free bid in a suit higher ranking than his partner's. All he can do is support his partner's suit at the two-level—any further move will have to come from opener. After North responded two hearts, we do not blame South in the least for making sure his side got to game.

Against three no trump, West led his fourth-best spade. Declarer held up one round and won the spade continuation with the king. Next, he led a club to the ten and, when this held, he cashed the king. When the queen dropped, declarer had time to knock out the ace of diamonds and come to nine tricks via two spades, three diamonds and four clubs.

Lucky guess in clubs? No, simply good technique rewarded. Let's see why declarer chose to play the way

After the spade lead and continuation, declarer realized that he could afford to lose the lead only once more before the opponents could run spade tricks. Therefore, he would not have time to set up hearts—he would have to get his tricks in the minor suits.

He could count on two spade tricks and three diamonds once the ace was removed. So, he needed four tricks in clubs. If East held the queen of clubs, there was no way declarer could make four tricks in the suit. The best distribution he could hope for was a 4-3 split, and all East would have to do to guarantee a club trick for the defense would be to cover the ten of clubs when led. The fourth club held by one of the defenders would have to be higher than declarer's six.

The only way to score four tricks from his club combination is to find West with the queen of clubs no more than twice guarded. Declarer played for that chance and deserved to make his contract.

Soviets May Charge Toth

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government today banned correspondent Robert C. Toth of the Los Angeles Times from leaving the country, saying he is being investigated for "the collection of secret information," the U.S. Embassy reported.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry handed an embassy official a note charging that Toth "has been engaged in activities incompatible with the status of a foreign journalist accredited to the U.S.S.R., that is, with the collection of secret information of a political and military character."

"Toth will be summoned for interrogation by the investigative organs in connection with which his departure from Moscow until the end of the investigation is not desired," the note said.

Friendship Tradition Continues This Week

By MIKE FEINSILBER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Pocahontas called on King James I and Queen Anne in London in 1616, she became the first American to visit a British monarch.

Ever since — with a few unpleasant interruptions around 1775 and 1812 — the relationship between the two countries has been marked by exchanges of visits, gifts, correspondence and courtesies between the British monarch and the American president.

The tradition continues this week. In observation of the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne, Princess Anne will be in Washington today and Wednesday to visit the White House, the Kennedy Center, the British embassy and the Smithsonian Institution's Museum of History and Technology.

At the museum, she'll see an exhibit of some of the artifacts of all those earlier Anglo-American ceremonial occasions. An engraving records Pocahontas' visit to the royal household. Done in 1793, it portrays her wearing an Indian regalia even though she is supposed to have donned English clothes for the occasion.

Other memorabilia on display include:

— A tourist-like letter home from the Prince of Wales to Queen Victoria, reporting on his visit to this country in 1860. Addressing it to "My Dear Mama," he wrote that Harrisburg, Pa. "is more like an Italian than an American town" and that President James Buchanan was "looking very well but has grown much stouter."

— A tureen, painted with scenes from 1776, presented by Elizabeth to this country as a bicentennial gift, and a three-foot tall bronze statuette depicting a cowboy riding a bucking bronco given her in return by President Gerald Ford.

Notes, written in 1834 in the shaky handwriting of old men, from James Madison and John Quincy Adams, responding to Princess Victoria's requests for their autographs.

— Victoria's letter of consolation — from one widow to another — to Mary Todd Lincoln written after Abraham Lincoln was murdered. The letter starts, "Though a stranger to you, I cannot remain silent when so terrible a calamity has fallen upon you and your country ..."

— A menu, printed on silk, for the dinner at Delmonico's restaurant in New York given for the Prince of Wales' visit in 1860.

— The royally-drafted "Trent memorandum" which soothed over a tense situation and lessened the prospect of Anglo-American combat during the Civil War, when U.S. forces intercepted and boarded the British packet Trent.

The exhibit opens Wednesday and runs through Labor Day.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Some of the greatest fiction in the world is being written these days by authors who will probably never be recognized.

I'm speaking of course of the catalogues that go out each year from nurseries describing their flowers, trees and shrubs.

Our neighbors, Babs and Jerry, never miss an issue. Last year, Jerry could hardly contain himself. "Look at this," he said thrusting the catalogue in our faces. "This amazing super-growing species soars into a magnificent tree in just one year. That's not all. It smothered itself in lavish masses of bouquets and its branches appear to bend from the sheer mass of the weight of the magnificent blossoms. It grows more in one month than most other shade trees grow in a year and when mature will spread to 50 feet. Plant now! Step back and watch out! Price: $3.95."

"Gee Jerry," said my husband, "that sounds too good to be true."

"You think that's terrific, listen to this one. Imagine the thrill of picking your own ripe, luscious bananas for breakfast or snacks, for fruit salads, pies and cakes. All this from the most spectacular tropical plant your neighbors have ever envied. Exciting and educational for the children."

Babs grabbed the book out of his hand. "Here's what I'm going for. Winter blooming flowers from Holland that bloom all winter. These flowers laugh at winter snow!" The picture showed a family of three standing at their picture window looking into rows of pink, yellow and blue flowers nestled above the snow. The flowers were laughing.

"And now for the zinger," said Jerry. "This one is going to not only amaze our friends, but rid our home of flying insects. Its a Venus fly trap that actually eats mosquitos and flies. When your home is insect free, it says you can feed it bits of raw hamburger."

"How about unplanned children?" I giggled.

"You haven't taken any of this seriously, have you? You'll be sorry when you have to fight your way into our yard with a machete knife."

We didn't see Babs and Jerry for several months. When we did our questions were obvious. "Hey, Jer, how's the amazing super-growing species that soars into a magnificent tree in just one year?"

"It spread to 50 feet all right, just like the ad said ... all underground and around the septic tank."

"And the banana tree?"

"We didn't get the crop we had hoped for. Someone set a cocktail in the pot and it caught cold and died. As for the Venus fly trap, it ate the winter blooming flowers because the laughing got on their nerves."

"Does this mean you're giving up?" "Indeed not," said Jerry, leafing through the catalogue. "We're getting a prayer plant. It says here it amazes adults and children and each leaf folds out like a pair of hands at worship ..."

Sex Barriers Falling In Field Of Science

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Sex barriers in the sciences are beginning to fall as women across America enter science fields in record numbers, according to a survey by the Women's College Coalition, an organization based in Washington, D.C.

Mary Lew Eldridge, 19, a chemistry major at Stephens College here, is one of this country's "new wave" going into the sciences.

I've always been interested in science," she said. "I guess that because my mother is a nurse I always considered science a logical field to enter."

But exemplifying the difference a generation can make, her own goals include medical school and a general practice in a rural community similar to Nampa, Idaho, where she grew up.

Her preference for a small, informal atmosphere is also one of the reasons she chose a women's college for her education, Ms. Eldridge says.

"I knew that I would get individual attention at Stephens, which has a good science program," said Ms. Eldridge, who will be a junior next fall. "It's important to have thorough knowledge of the basics in order to get into medical school. I feel that I am getting a good foundation here."

As a part of her studies, she is participating in a research internship at Harry S. Truman Memorial Veterans Hospital in Columbia, one of many such programs springing up across the country.

"We are doing research on the causes of high blood pressure," Ms. Eldridge explained. Under the supervision of Dr. J. Alan Johnson, endocrinology specialist, she will write a paper to present to the Missouri Academy of Sciences later this year.

"I'm pleased with the opportunity to do individual research," said Ms. Eldridge. "Our work in the lab reaffirms my decision to go to medical school."

Women's colleges have been excelling in expanded science programs in recent years, Women's College Coalition officials point out. During the 1976-7 academic year, over half of the National Science Foundation grants for women in sciences awarded to private colleges went to women's colleges.

Tons of rock fall from the Matterhorn daily and avalanches are so common that natives of the valley below the peak once believed it was inhabited by evil spirits who hurled rocks on ambitious climbers.

Some Reasons For Dad's Day

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — "My dad is the greatest lover because he rubs my mom's feet and calls her princess even if she is getting closer in age to the queen."

"My dad is the greatest cook because when mom is gone his cooking is so bad grandpa feels sorry for us and takes us to MacDonald's."

These were some of nearly 5,000 entries in a contest to find the world's greatest dad sponsored by Donaldson's department store, undoubtedly with an eye on promoting sales for Dad's Day, June 19.

Entry blanks were provided in nine "My-Dad's-the-Greatest" categories: Lover, Outdoorsman, Intellect, Cook, Entertainer, Ice Cream Eater, Traveler, TV Watcher and Sleeper.

Prizes range from a "Pampered in Pink Weekend" (Lover); two round trip tickets to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington (Intellect), and Ice Cream Zoo Party (Ice Cream Eater) to a Tour of a Twin Cities beef processing plant (Cook). Winners will be notified June 17, and an Awards Banquet will be held June 23.

Camera Obscura Gets A Look

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Visitors to a current show at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection in Williamsburg will see a reconstructed model of a camera obscura and will have an opportunity to trace one another's silhouettes by using the device.

The show, "Making Faces: Aspects of American Portraiture," includes a display of the various techniques, conventions and mechanical aids used by 19th-century portrait painters. It will be on view until Dec. 4.

The camera obscura was built by folk art curator Don Walters according to the 1826 directions given by Rufus Porter, an itinerant Yankee inventor and painter of murals and portraits. The device was long used to obtain the guidelines needed to create cut, drawn or painted portraits and was the ancestor of today's photographic camera.

Other mechanical devices and artists' aids featured include the pantograph, profile templates, printing techniques, collage techniques, drawing manuals and preliminary artists' sketches.

Many of these devices became outmoded in the 1940s with the introduction of photography, which had begun to fulfill the need for inexpensive, lasting images of friends and family. The change put out of work hundreds of portrait painters who could not compete with the realism of the camera, Walters notes.

Cut silhouettes, drawn and painted profiles, full-face likenesses on paper and ivory, pastel and graphite portraits and full-scale images in oil on canvas or wood are surveyed in this show in the context of what was known about the artists themselves and the methods they employed.

The portraitists whose work is represented include Justus Daley, Asahel Powers, Ruby Devol, Rufus Porter, Joseph Whiting Stock, Ammi Phillips, William Matthew Prior and others whose identity is unknown.

Also included are two paintings by Jonathan Adams Bartlett (1817-1902) of Rumford, Maine. Bartlett's proud documentary portrait of himself and the accompanying likeness of his fiancée, Harriet Glines, were recently acquired from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Tillou of Litchfield, Conn.

Together they represent perhaps the most important portraits added to the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection in recent years, according to Walters.

Women constitute only 3 per cent of all news editors, 33 per cent of all news reporters and 6.9 per cent of radio and television announcers, according to the Community Survey on the Status of Women by the Population Institute.

Dreams Tell Tale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The more people in a dream, the happier the dreamer is on awakening, according to two sleep researchers.

Dr. Milton Kramer, a psychiatrist at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Cincinnati, and Dr. Thomas Roth, an experimental psychologist at the hospital, came up with the finding in studies to determine the relationship between a night's sleep and the next day's mood and performance.

"The bad thing in a dream is to be alone, you feel worse," said Kramer in an article in the National Observer.

"You can relate this to waking psychology, where being alone leads to more unhappiness," the psychiatrist said.

The researchers also found the people who appear in a dream are far more important to mood than what occurs, and each person has a particular character whose appearance makes him happier in the morning.

Kramer said the character may be an older woman, a young man, or a brother figure.

"The nonemotionally ill typically have friends as their dream characters, not family members," said Kramer. He said people usually describe dream characters in words such as mother, husband, or daughter, even though the character is not the dreamer's own relative.

"People who are depressed have as their typical dream character a family member and schizophrenics have a stranger," Kramer said.

Kramer also found the sex of the dreamer, more than any other factor including age, race, education or marital status, accounts for differences in the people, activity, location, and feelings in dreams.

"When you compare men to women, you get a greater difference in dream content than when you compare, say, 20 and six year olds or black to white," he said.

The researchers are trying to determine if sleep regulates moods because then "by manipulating sleep we may be able to manipulate how well we feel and how well we perform."
