Forty-Two Persons Dead In Tennessee Jail Fire

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities say they will bring arson charges against a young prison inmate suspected of setting his foam rubber-padded cell afire and unleashing toxic fumes that asphyxiated 42 persons, 34 of them inmates trapped in their locked cells.

Attempts to rescue the victims were hampered when a deputy sheriff carrying keys to the Maury County Jail's 12 cells collided with fleeing visitors Sunday afternoon. He dropped the keys on the floor and was unable to find them for about 12 minutes, officials said.

One husband and wife, who both were prisoners, died in the fire along with his visiting parents and sister. In another family tragedy, a prisoner and five relatives died.

"All the victims had got down on the floor as far as they could, laying down to get some air ...," one official said. "It seemed like most of the victims were lifeless."

Dist. Atty. Gen. Robert H. Gay said he planned to charge Andy Zimmer, 16, with arson. Gay said he would ask to have Zimmer tried as an adult.

Zimmer was taken to a Nashville hospital and reported in critical condition, suffering from burns and smoke inhalation.

Authorities in Waukesha, Wis., said records show Zimmer, formerly of Superior, Wis., was reported missing from Lad Lake Inc., a residential treatment center in Dussman, Wis., for emotionally disturbed teenagers.

Zimmer had been removed from the jail's drunk tank on Saturday and placed in the padded cell because he had stuffed up a toilet and caused a flood, authorities said. State law requires that juveniles be segregated from adult prisoners, and officials said the padded cell was the only other facility available.

Chief Deputy Bob Farmer said Zimmer was pulled from the jail's padded cell. "Me and another officer drug him out," Farmer said. "He said he set it."

The sheriff said today that while Zimmer was in the padded cell just before the fire broke out, "one of the visitors gave him a cigarette."

Eight of the 42 victims were visitors leaving at the end of Sunday's one-hour visiting period.

There were 56 inmates in the jail at the time of the fire. Of the 22 who got out alive, 19 were flown by helicopters to two hospitals in Nashville, about 60 miles north of Columbia, officials said.

Authorities said 18 other persons, including two firemen, were treated for injuries at local hospitals.

Gov. Ray Blanton, who flew over the fire in a helicopter, said, "We know it has to be one of the greatest tragedies we've ever had in Tennessee."

Blanton promised an investigation. "When you have 42 persons dead within a few minutes," he said, "you need to know why they were lost."

Authorities said the burning foam rubber in the padded cell spewed heavy smoke and toxic fumes, including carbon monoxide and possibly some cyanide gas, through an air duct system, setting off panic among the inmates and visitors.

The fleeing visitors collided with Deputy Sheriff Jerry Dickey, causing him to drop keys to the cells. Dickey had to grope on the floor through the smoke for the keys, said Deputy Sheriff Howard Blake.

Each of the one-story jail's 12 cells required a separate key. The jail has a 60-prisoner capacity.

Firemen wearing oxygen masks eventually used a second set of keys kept in the prison office to help deputies go through the smoke and open all the cells. Authorities were trying to reconstruct the sequence of events to clarify why there was so long a delay in using the second set.

Big Decisions This Week On Future Of B-1

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Congress and President Carter are preparing to make crucial decisions this week that could determine whether the controversial B1 bomber has a future.

The House is to vote Tuesday on an effort to delete all production money for the B1 bomber from a $110.6-billion defense appropriation bill.

The appropriations measure also may be used as the vehicle for amendments that would outlaw assassinations and other interference in the affairs of other nations by U.S. intelligence agencies.

President Carter's aides say he plans to decide by the end of the week whether to put the strategic bomber into production or scrap it.

The House effort to chop all B1 production money out of the $110.6-billion defense bill is being led by Rep. Joseph P.

Addabbo, D-N.Y., who said Carter should oppose the B1 as he promised he would during his presidential campaign.

"President Carter announced during his campaign that the B1 was not a viable weapon," Addabbo told the House in opening debate. "That same fact is true today."

House defeat of the money for the plane could influence Carter's decision but it cannot seal the plane's fate. Should the House delete the B1 funds, the Senate could still restore the money and the two chambers would have to reach a compromise.

In other action this week, the House is to vote Wednesday on setting up a new intelligence committee.

Carter and the intelligence agencies want one committee so they can limit the number of congressmen to whom they must report secret operations, thereby limiting the risk of leaks.

Unless a special bill creating a windfall through the early collection of corporate taxes passes the General Assembly, the only capital improvement money for buildings at East Carolina University included in the 1977-1979 state budget is $3.82 million for construction of a bed tower at Pitt Memorial Hospital for use by the ECU School of Medicine.

Felix Joyner, vice-president for finances for the University of North Carolina system said, this morning that the $3.82 million is all ECU is slated to receive for the coming biennium unless the special tax bill passes. That bill would provide funds to renovate the old Wahl-Coates school building for ECU's drama and speech programs.

Joyner said the school's continuing budget included "nothing really different" and totaled more than $23 million.

New money, he said, included "some enrollment change money and salary increase money."

Court Bars Excess In School-Busing

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that lower courts went too far in ordering a school desegregation plan which required forced-busing of some 18,000 pupils in Dayton, Ohio.

The court, in sending the Dayton case back to the lower courts for a new remedy, told all federal judges to be sure to move cautiously in attempting to solve school segregation problems. But the court did not appear to break any new constitutional ground in such cases.

The justices, voting 8-0, ordered Dayton school officials to keep the desegregation plan in force for another school year, while the lower courts work out a more limited remedy.

The Dayton case had been viewed by busing advocates and foes as a potentially major school desegregation test. A majority of the high court had given indications that it wanted to rein the powers of federal judges to remedy proven discriminatory effects in education.

No new restrictions were laid down by the high court, however.

A desegregation plan ordered by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for all of Dayton's 68 public schools made necessary this academic year the busing of the 18,000 students.

The racial makeup of each school, within 15 per cent plus or minus, now reflects the racial makeup of the entire school district. That ratio is 52 per cent white and 48 per cent black.

AYDEN — Neighbors were credited with saving the lives of two small children early this morning during a fire that caused heavy damage to a home on Toyota Drive.

According to Ayden fire chief Melvin Fussell, the Eddie Tripp family was sleeping when a fire broke out in the kitchen area of the brick home.

Tripp ran into the yard and called for help, it was reported. Fussell stated that neighbors, Rick Spivey, and Paul Struther were credited with rescuing the Tripp's two children, Tonya age 2, and Charles age 4.

Spivey said he found the young boy unconscious in the hall of the home, and the girl was found in bed also unconscious. Spivey received a minor cut when he fled through a window, and Struther received minor burns on his feet.

Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney said at the scene that other neighbors helped contain the fire in the kitchen area by using a garden hose.

The children and Struther were transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment by the Ayden Rescue Squad. Tripp and his wife escaped injured. Damage to the house was listed as heavy.

Viet Refugees Begin Life In Israeli Desert

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Sixty-six destitute Vietnamese refugees began a new life in a desolate Israeli desert town today.

An Israeli freighter rescued the Vietnamese from a leaking fishing boat in the South China sea. Israel's new prime minister, Menahem Begin, gave them asylum after Taiwan, Japan and Hong Kong refused to take them. But an Israeli official said the United States may admit about half of them because they have relatives who escaped to the United States when the Communists took over South Vietnam.

The Vietnamese arrived Sunday, smiling and waving, aboard a West German airliner from Taiwan and Frankfurt. They were taken to an immigrant absorption center in the new town of Ofakim, in the Negev desert, where Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union are introduced to life in Israel.

Officials said the Vietnamese would stay at Ofakim several months. Those who choose to remain in Israel will then receive help in finding jobs and homes and can become citizens in five years.

Begin said they would "enjoy all hospitality."

The group includes 34 men, 16 women, some of them pregnant, and 16 children, including infants and toddlers clutching dolls. They got new clothes in Taiwan, and on arrival in Israel each was given $70 in local currency, canned food, a packet of tea and a "kova tembel," a cloth work hat worn by Israeli farmers.

"It is difficult for me to find words to express my emotion about the kindness of the government of Israel," said Dr. Tran Quang Hu, a former surgeon in the South Vietnamese army who acted as spokesman for the group.

Those who spoke English said they had been associated with the U.S. war effort in Vietnam and left because they feared for their lives.

"Conditions in Vietnam were unbearable," said Dr. Tran. "I couldn't support communism. I suffered too long from them."

The escape was planned by Le Dinh Quy, 38, an army major who said he spent eight years in a prisoner of war camp in Laos run by the North Vietnamese. He said he helped bury six American POW's who died while he was in the camp.

SODIUM?

We're being warned these days about sodium in our diets. I noticed there's a lot of sodium in diet soft drinks and I wonder if there's enough in them to be a problem. L. S.

Dietician Mary Ann Barnes answered your question for us. She said, "We have been led to believe that the sodium content of diet soft drinks is quite high and that if a person has been recommended a reduced sodium intake that diet drinks should be completely omitted."

"The sodium content of diet soft drinks come from sodium saccharin, an artificial sweetener and also from the natural and added chemical sodium in water."

"Sodium is a mineral needed by the body. Most sodium comes from table salt which is almost half sodium. The average American takes in 5,000 to 10,000 milligrams of sodium per day."

"Diet soft drinks do not contribute significantly to the daily sodium intake unless a person consumes more than two or three per day. However, one should always ask the doctor or dietician about specific foods or beverages relative to their individual dietary sodium prescription."

"The sodium content of popular diet soft drinks are: 10 oz. Diet 7 Up — 25 mg.; 10 oz. Diet Pepsi — 50 mg.; 10 Fresca — 50 mg.; 10 Diet Rite Cola — 50 mg.; 10 oz. Diet Dr. Pepper — 50 mg.; and 10 oz. Diet Shasta (all flavors) — 100 mg."

ECU Capital Improvement Funds Are Limited

Unless a special bill creating a windfall through the early collection of corporate taxes passes the General Assembly, the only capital improvement money for buildings at East Carolina University included in the 1977-1979 state budget is $3.82 million for construction of a bed tower at Pitt Memorial Hospital for use by the ECU School of Medicine.

Joyner said the school's continuing budget included "nothing really different" and totaled more than $23 million.

New money, he said, included "some enrollment change money and salary increase money."

As far as the School of Medicine is concerned, Joyner said "we'll just have some real problems if the funding is not changed in the Spring" when the General Assembly will re-convene to revise the budget for the second year of the biennium.

According to Joyner, $3.5 million in new operating money is slated for the medical school for the first year of the biennium. He noted that more than $5 million had been requested for the second year and at present all the university can expect is a continuation of the $3.5 million.

He emphasized that unless the $2 million is appropriated for the 1978-1979 fiscal year the addition of "new staff...new professors" will be difficult.

Pitt Rep. Horton Rountree said "the way things are moving now, we just can't say the money will be there for the second year of the biennium. A lot of stuff has been cut out (of the first year budget) to be reviewed next time."

Rountree noted there is a resolution to "close down (the General Assembly) at noon Thursday and re-convene May 31 next year, just after the primary" for a four or five week session.

He said "committees will continue to work during the year and be prepared for a short session...primarily a budget session."

Canada Detains 'Black Panther'

BRAMPTON, Canada (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, en route from Cuba to stand trial for murder in California, must remain in a Canadian jail at least until Wednesday.

Immigration authorities held a deportation hearing Sunday for Newton, whom they arrested shortly after his Havana-Toronto flight landed Saturday night.

Canadian officials said they were seeking to deport the 35-year-old co-founder of the Panthers because of previous criminal convictions. But Newton said he wanted 10 days of freedom in Canada to confer with his lawyers in preparation for his trial in the United States.

The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday when a Toronto lawyer representing Newton, Paul Copeland, asked for time to send for documents related to the California homicide case. He claimed the papers would show Newton is being held illegally.

Newton's team of lawyers produced letters from U.S. and California authorities saying they would not seek to extradite the black militant. The attorneys said the U.S. Justice Department is dropping a charge of unlawful flight, the only federal charge against Newton.

However, Newton was ordered back to jail until the hearing resumes, immigration officials said.

Newton's 27-year-old wife, Gwen, accompanied him from Havana and was allowed to enter Canada. She spent almost two hours with him at the jail Sunday and told reporters she was telephoning members of the U.S. Congress for help.

Newton was arrested in Oakland, Calif., in 1974 and charged with shooting 17-year-old Katherine Smith. She died two months later. Newton, who was also charged with pistol-whipping Preston Collins, jumped $40,000 bail.

In a telephone interview Friday from Havana, Newton told a Canadian reporter he wanted to return to the United States because he believed he had gathered information to disprove the charges against him. Newton claimed he was framed by the Central Intelligence Agency as part of a plot against the Black Panthers, which he helped found in 1966.

State Legislative Session Near Close

By SAM D. BUNDY
N.C. House of Representatives

Well, by the time you read this, the 1977 Session of the N.C. General Assembly will be in its closing stages. Adjournment is set for Thursday noon, June 30. The 1978 session is scheduled to begin May 31, 1978, with a four-to-seven-week session.

The big item is over, for both the Senate and the House have approved both the operating and capital expenditure budgets for 1977-79.

Activities Announced

Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church announces the following activities for the week:

Monday, traveling choir rehearsal, 7:30 p.m.; Tuesday, Pastor's Aide meeting in the education department, 8 p.m.; Wednesday, Home Mission special call meeting, education department, 7:30 p.m., and senior choir rehearsal, 8 p.m.

All candidates for baptism are asked to meet by 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the education department. Baptism will be at noon.

All members of the Y.P.C.L. are asked to meet Mother Emma Maye at 3:30 p.m. in the education department.

Sunday school will be at 9:45 a.m. Sunday, followed by morning worship, with the youth in charge, at 11 a.m. At 7:30 p.m. Sunday the Home Mission will present "Six Traffic Signs." All members are asked to attend.

The session always adjourns about one week after the budget is adopted.

Education gets the major portion of the total budget. For the 1977-79 biennium, the state will spend approximately $2 billion on the public schools, 227 million on the community college and technical institute system, and $686 million on the university system. For the two years, this totals right at $3 billion.

The Department of Human Resources will receive $720 million for the two-year period. Other agencies and departments make the total general fund expenditures total close to $4 and a half billion. The Highway Fund, for the two-year period, is set at $875 million. State Government has become big business.

Since the liquor-by-the-drink bill has been withdrawn by the proponents (They were 15 to 20 votes shy of the required number to pass it.), most of the controversial issues are out of the way.

It has been good to be with you each week. See you next year.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Coastal Area Management Act Foes Give Up Fight For 1977

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Eastern North Carolina opponents of the Coastal Area Management Act admit they've given up hope of altering or repealing the 20-county land use plan this year.

Bills to repeal the 1974 act were the subject of a heated three-hour public hearing earlier this month, but just days before adjournment they remain locked in committees in the House and Senate.

Under current plans by legislative leaders, only bills approved by one chamber of the General Assembly will be carried over to next year's shorter session. And if that is the case, repeal of the controversial act is dead until at least 1979.

"There's a growing number of people that realize planning growth in our coastal areas is essential," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir. Lilley represents two counties included in the land act and is sponsor of a House-passed bill that would alter the act to make it more palatable to property owners.

His bill was substantially amended by the House, however, and has been stalled in the Senate Natural and Economic Resources Committee at Lilley's request.

"The notion was we'd do best to keep the act, but just clean it up a bit," said Sen. James Speed, D-Franklin, chairman of that panel. "But the way the House amended it, the act would be just gutted."

Speed said his committee might try to remove those amendments next year. "The most we'll be able to consider about the act next year would be the Lilley bill. The repeal bills will be dead," he said.

If passed, Lilley's bill would have prevented the Coastal Resources Commission to designate "areas of environmental concern" — for special protection — if they were not unique to the coast. It would have also consolidated and simplified procedures for property owners to get permits to work on their land, such as dredge and fill operations.

But the House amendment, passed by a one vote margin, would have given 47 members of an advisory council the right to vote on the 16-member resources commission — which Lilley said would have rendered the commission useless.

Bills to repeal the act, meanwhile, have gone nowhere.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, is chairman of a five-man subcommittee handling his own repeal bill, and said he hasn't called for a vote on the measure because he fears it would be killed. But Chapin said he hopes legislative leaders will allow the bill to be carried over to next year and if not, that court challenges of the act's constitutionality will be successful.

"I chose not to bring it out," he said. "We'll see what the developments are — what the areas of environmental concern are and what happens with the court cases."

Rep. Charles Webb, D-Guilford, chairman of the House committee holding Chapin's bill and a supporter of the act, admitted he stacked the subcommittee against Chapin. But Webb said he believed much of the opposition to the act by eastern legislators has been "superficial," because of influential constituent opposition.

Petrochemical Industry Says 390,000 Jobs Are Threatened

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's energy proposal now before Congress includes a tax that would force much of the $40 billion petrochemical industry out of the country, industry spokesmen warn.

And that would mean the loss of many of the 390,000 American jobs now directly related to the industry, the spokesmen say.

Administration spokesmen refuse to comment directly on the industry threat. But they say the industry is going to be damaged anyway, if not by higher taxes — aimed at conservation — then by a scarcity of petroleum, the major raw material of petrochemicals. The policy does not "attempt to appease one interest or another," a spokesman said.

The main petrochemical-industry objections are to Carter's proposed tax on oil at the well and an additional tax on major industrial users of oil. The industry says the taxes would raise costs so much that foreign competitors would have an advantage.

The consumer would pay more in any case, either for more expensive foreign products or for domestic products whose prices would be increased to offset the new taxes.

Under the President's plan, the first tax, a $3 levy, would bring prices up to the world level by 1980; the "user" tax — applied primarily to the petrochemical industry — would start at 90 cents a barrel in 1979 and increase to $3 by 1985.

But the petrochemical industry says the taxes, currently being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee, would increase "feedstock" costs from $3 below world price levels now to $3 above the levels by 1985. Feedstock is oil that is used as a raw material in a refinery or petrochemical plant.

"The question is: What do you do if you're non-competitive?" said Robert Mitchell, executive vice president of Celanese Corp. "The first thing is that we lose our export markets ($10 billion of the $40 billion in annual sales). Then, the foreign competitor can compete in the U.S."

"This positive impact on our nation's balance of trade would be lost over the next few years as the Carter taxes phase in," said Ronald S. Wishart, director of energy policy for Union Carbide. "... In place of oil imports, we might be importing more chemicals as well as other energy-intensive products such as steel and aluminum."

How would the dozens of U.S. petrochemical firms react?

"Given a free world for investment purposes," Mitchell said, "what will evolve is a shift of the petrochemical industry — assuming a degree of political stability — to the Mideast."

An industry spokesman said firms might simply abandon their American plants if they found that "it was not economically beneficial to run them."

But Jim Bishop, an administration spokesman, added that if Carter's conservation-designed proposals are not accepted, the industry soon will have to deal with critical shortages of raw materials — a problem every bit as serious as increased taxes.

Officials said there are no plans to protect the industry by imposing quotas on imports of petrochemical products.

Subcommittee Weighs Saccharin Ban's Delay

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee is considering a bill that would delay a government ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin while further tests are made.

The House health and environment subcommittee planned hearings today on legislation that would order a one-year federal study of a number of food additives, including saccharin, in an effort to determine which cause cancer.

The hearings follow a rash of activity in Congress, prompted by the Food and Drug Administration's ban on saccharin in foods and beverages.

The House voted last week to withhold funds during the next 15 months for the enforcement of the saccharin ban. But a Senate panel rejected this proposal after assurances were given that legislation setting an 18-month delay of any saccharin ban is being prepared.

After new evidence on saccharin came to light, the FDA promised to reopen its hearing process in order to evaluate it.

The new evidence was an unpublished Canadian epidemiologic study concluding that saccharin is a human carcinogen. Data collected during the research showed that males using saccharin have a significantly higher risk of developing bladder cancer.

The American Medical Association's House of Delegates voted to support continued sales of saccharin as long as it carries a label warning that it could cause cancer.

Legislation to do that has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of a subcommittee on health and scientific research. It will be considered at a hearing on Wednesday.

Kennedy said the FDA will have prepared an evaluation of the Canadian study by that time.

The FDA's original saccharin ban was based on another Canadian study showing a link between the sweetener and tumors in laboratory rats.

Plan Organizing A Women's Congress

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Women from across the state have plans of forming a Women's Congress with the expressed purpose of scrutinizing North Carolina legislators and administrators on issues of concern to their sex.

"The Women's Congress would monitor each session of the General Assembly, the actions of the governor and other leaders with regard to equity and justice," said Grace Rohrer, one of organizers.

The women's assembly was one of many ideas spawned at the state International Women's Year meeting here June 17-19, which nearly 800 persons attended.

Formation of the congress would be the most immediate effect of the meeting. Mrs. Rohrer said. "This congress is geared toward continuing what was done at the state meeting."

The congress, to be composed of people who support economic and legal equality for women, will meet every two years on election year. After reviewing candidates and issues, the group will support those candidates which favor women's issues, Mrs. Rohrer said.

"It is important that the legislators understand that there is a large number of women looking to them for some action," she said.

Gov. Jim Hunt has expressed support for the congress. "I think it is essential that women monitor government, just as every citizen should do, to see what is done is right and fair," he said.

The women's assembly will promote resolutions adopted at the International Women's Year meeting. These include legislation to protect the civil rights of all persons regardless of sexual preferences, new states rape laws, help for homemakers displaced by their spouses' death or divorce and funding for workshops to teach women how to use the political process.

A coordinating committee will meet next month to work out plans for the congress, Mrs. Rohrer said.

Coronary Heart Disease Control

A special protein, "carnitine," seems to have beneficial effects on the heart. Patients with anginal pain and those who have had heart surgery seem to have benefited by this substance, which is referred to as the "heart vitamin."

Although all the studies are not definitive, it seems that carnitine already has established itself as having potential in the control of some cases of coronary heart disease.

Dr. James H. Thomsen, at the Middleton Memorial Veterans Hospital in Madison, Wisc., believes that there is sufficient evidence to continue to investigate carnitine.

Somewhat related is a study released on the value of massive doses of vitamin E for the treatment of heart disease. Dr. Dennis G. Caralis, at the United States Public Health Service Hospital in Baltimore, says, "Even large doses produced no measurable improvement in the 14-month trial study in patients with angina. But vitamin E did no harm, either."

On the other hand, Dr. Evan V. Shute, of Canada, believes that vitamin E has some potential in strengthening the vascular supply to the heart.

Long-term studies are being contemplated to finalize scientific thought about any value that vitamin E may have for benefiting the heart.

Small varicose veins were treated about 50 years ago by injecting a chemical into the veins and "blocking them." Then the technique was discarded, apparently because of "inadequate materials and methods."

Now Dr. John T. Hobbs, of the St. Mary's Hospital Medical School in London, has revived the method and reported some of its advantages. If his findings can be substantiated, and if his new techniques prove of value, it may very well be that there will be renewed interest in this treatment for small varicose veins.

After a stroke, some patients develop a "foot drop" which interferes with their gait.

A remarkable biofeedback approach to this problem has brought great hope to many of these incapacitated people.

Dr. John V. Baasman, a pioneer in biofeedback, has been rehabilitating many of his patients at the Emory University Rehabilitation Center in Atlanta.

He and his co-workers are impressed with the value of biofeedback for this and other deformities caused by nerve problems.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Miss Anderson, Mr. Lewellyn Wed Sunday

Trinity Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the marriage joining Miss Loretta Mae Anderson and Donald Ross Lewellyn Sunday at 3:00 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George A. Anderson of Greenville, and the late Mr. Anderson. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Lewellyn of Walnut Cove.

The Rev. Van Dale Hudson performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Shirley Moore, organist, presented a program of wedding music. She accompanied Sammy Pittman of Nashville, Tenn., soloist, who sang "Colour My World," "The Wedding Song" and "Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her brother, Gregory L. Anderson, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza over peau de soie. The empire bodice of Venice lace and bridal pearls featured a deep V-neckline. Bishop sleeves cuffing at the wrist were accented by appliques of Venice lace. A deep flounce and a band of lace completed the full skirt and chapel length train. Her fingertip mantilla of silk illusion was edged in floral Venice lace. She carried a bridal cascade of white sweetheart roses, daisies, miniature carnations, stephanotis, and baby's breath.

Mrs. Nelda A. Highsmith of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Kaye A. Anderson, sister-in-law of the bride, Miss Cynthia Anderson, Mrs. Barbara P. Corey, Miss Vickie House, and Miss Paula Stillwell, all of Greenville. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Kelly Anderson of Charleston, S. C., and Miss Camilla Anderson of Lake City, Fla., nieces of the bride. Miss Beth Joyce of Walnut Cove, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of shrimp silk organza designed with a soop portrait neckline featuring a ruffled bertha collar. The modified A-line skirt was designed with a deep flounce and bustle effect falling from a silk rose in the back. They wore imported shrimp braid garden hats applied with Venice lace motifs and encircled with shrimp illusion falling in streamers at the back. The junior bridesmaids' hats featured a band of shrimp Venice appliques and scattered appliques on the brim. The flower girl wore a floral headpiece of shrimp flowers.

The attendants carried colonial nosegays of shrimp miniature carnations, white daisies, lavender statice, and baby's breath. The flower girl carried a basket of mixed summer flowers.

Mr. Lewellyn served as his son's best man. Ushers were Howard Corey and Stoney Creech of Greenville, Barry McHone of Hickory, Tony Neal of Richmond, Va., and John McClintock of Asheville. Junior ushers were Earl Lewellyn of Walnut Cove, brother of the bridegroom, and Ronald L. Anderson Jr. of Charleston, S. C., nephew of the bride. Bradley Anderson of Greenville, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow tied with satin ribbons.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Anderson chose a formal length gown of yellow chiffon featuring a jewel inset on the waistline. The mother of the bridegroom selected a mint green formal gown of chiffon over taffeta enhanced by a fingertip sheer capelet. Both mothers wore white cattleya orchid corsages. Mrs. Camilla C. Moore, maternal grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Nonnie Lewellyn, paternal grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages of mixed summer flowers.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Peggy Paige. Miss Karen Jo Anderson of Amelia, Va., cousin of the bride, presided at the register and Shawn Anderson of Charleston, S. C., nephew of the bride, passed out wedding scrolls to the guests.

Immediately following the ceremony, the mother of the bride entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C., the couple will reside in Walnut Cove before returning to Greenville, S. C., in September.

Greek Orthodox Ceremony Unites Mr. Russos And Miss Cathy Stox

Miss Cathy Elaine Stox and Harry Nick Russos were united in marriage Sunday at 4:30 p.m. in the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church, Raleigh. The ceremony was performed by Father Murtos.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Chester Stox of Ayden. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Nick Gus Russos of Raleigh.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. David Ward, church organist, and the church choir.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza over peau de soie. Rosepointe lace appliques centered with pearls edged the scoop neckline and the short sleeve caplets which continued on the back bodice. Lace and satin ribbon encircled the empire waist. Bordered by a wide trim of lace and appliques, the A-line skirt flowed into an attached chapel length train. Attached to a Camelot cap of rosepointe lace and seed pearls, the bride's chapel length mantilla was of nylon illusion. The bride carried a white Bible with a bouquet of gardenias.

Presiding at the guest register was Mrs. Diane Pollard, cousin of the bride.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Royal Villa. Mrs. Mamie Ruth Cayton, aunt of the bride, served the wedding cake and Mrs. Pauline Hartofelis, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch. The bridal party led the traditional first dance to music provided by a Greek band.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., and the coast, the couple will reside in Waynesville.

The bride attended North Carolina State University. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is presently employed with Employment Security Commission of Waynesville.

Parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and guests at a dinner party held at Ballentines, Raleigh.

Held at the Velvet Cloak, Raleigh, a bridal luncheon was given Saturday by Mrs. Pauline Hartofelis.

Miss Nichols Weds In Ahoskie

The Ahoskie United Methodist Church was the scene of the marriage vows of Miss Patricia Helen Nichols and Benjamin Foster Roberson. The Rev. William D. Tyndall and the Rev. Nathan H. Byrd officiated at the candlelight double ring ceremony Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Cleo Nichols Scott of Greenville. A graduate of East Carolina University majoring in early childhood education, the bride is a teacher with the Bertie County Schools and is a graduate student at E. C. U. The bridegroom, a teacher at Ahoskie High School, attended Atlantic Christian College and received a B. S. degree in biological science. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roberson of Williamston.

Mrs. Alphas Doughtie directed the wedding. Lynn Copeland, soloist, and Randy Wood, guitarist, presented a program of nuptial music.

The church was decorated with two white tree candelabras entwined with white mums, pom pons and scattered greenery.

Flanked by two standing palms, a white fan candelabra was placed behind the altar. The altar table was draped with a white cloth which accented the two lighted white candles. Honor pews were marked by white satin bows with white candles and greenery was placed in the stained glass windows of the sanctuary.

Given in marriage by her brother, Glenn Nichols, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silk organza over peau de soie designed with an open V-neckline which was outlined in floral Venice lace. The empire bodice was overlaid with panels of matching lace that extended around the waistline. Self-fabric covered buttons and closures highlighted the back of the gown. The full bishop sleeves were cuffed with floral lace.

Accented with a deep ruffled flounce trimmed in floral Venice lace, the modified A-line skirt continued into an attached chapel length train. Attached to a Camelot cap accented by lace and beaded pearls, the bride's veil was fingertip length. She carried a white lace-covered Bible enhanced by satin flowing streamers. Yellow sweetheart roses, white baby's breath and white bridal satin ribbons accented the Bible.

Mrs. Paula Mills of Winterville, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown was of Nile green designed with a deep V-neckline, full draped front, empire waist, handkerchief sleeves and a string tie. Her headpiece was a Nile green ruffled brim garden hat with a matching satin ribbon bow around the inner edge of the hat. She carried a yellow hand bouquet of pom pons intermingled with white baby's breath accented by white lace and yellow streamers.

Janet Dail, Carolyn Cattel and Lottie Miller, all of Ahoskie, Sherry Roberson of Williamston, sister of the bridegroom, Sharon Pickelsimer of Coram, N.Y., and Barbara Alcorn of Greenville were bridesmaids for the ceremony. They wore yellow gowns styled identically to the matron of honor's, and wore yellow garden hats trimmed with yellow satin ribbons around the inner edge of the hat. They carried green hand bouquets of

Abby Is A Closet Sexist

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Don't tell me you've been a closet sexist all these years. How can you say flatly, "There is no such thing as a 'frigid dear'—only clumsy men?" I thought that satisfying sex was achieved through the loving cooperation of both partners, and not dependent on the male's aggressiveness or degree of expertness.

Or maybe you will agree to another sexist corollary: "There are no impotent men, only emasculating women."

That way you can offend BOTH sexes.

EQUAL PARTNER

DEAR PARTNER: Generalizations are dangerous, but you may have stumbled on a truism. I wouldn't be surprised if more than half of the cases of male impotency were due to "emasculating women." Witness the number of men who can't perform at home but are tigers with their mistresses.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for four months to a man who was married and divorced twice, and unless his terrible table manners improve, he is going to be a three-time loser.

I saw him eat a few times before we were married and was appalled at his table manners, but I thought I could change him after we were married.

Maybe it's a case of not being able to teach an old dog new tricks, but every time I mention the way he eats he becomes irritated and the battle is on.

When he starts to eat, he puts his face right down into the plate like a dog, and he doesn't speak or look up until he's cleaned his plate.

He is a good man, a good provider, and believe it or not, he's well-educated. How he escaped learning table manners is a mystery to me.

I love him and don't want to divorce him, but he's repulsive at mealtime. Any suggestions on how to save an otherwise good marriage?

NEAR ATLANTA

DEAR NEAR: Yes. Don't bring it up when he's eating, but catch him when he is in a good mood and tell him how important it is to you that he improve his table manners. If he's as wonderful as you say he is in all other respects, you may have to be a little more tolerant. Divorcing a man because he lacks table manners is like chopping off a man's head to get rid of the dandruff.

DEAR ABBY: We have a big, headstrong, disrespectful 17-year-old son who uses abusive language and breaks the furniture in order to get his way.

Now he is demanding the $900 he earned and put away in a savings account.

My husband wants to give it all to him right now, and then completely disown the boy when he turns 18 (legal age).

I want to hold back some of that money to pay for the damage he's done to our house and furniture, plus a deposit for further damage until he leaves. What do you think, Abby?

OREGON MOM

DEAR MOM: I would not give him any of the money until he reaches legal age. And then I would deduct the cost of repairing the damage.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box, No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Tobacco Is Always Threatened

We never recall a time when the tobacco industry wasn't threatened with major problems.

The industry has survived them all, from depression to droughts and floods, from abruptly changing world markets to inflationary costs.

No one, however, should underestimate the seriousness of health attacks on tobacco, or the possibility of governmental action which would be detrimental to the tobacco farmer.

The Associated Press in a recent article reported that heavy rains were an immediate worry to the tobacco grower. They have cut an estimated $25 million from this year's tobacco crop value.

But of more long range importance is the continuing attack by anti-smoking forces on tobacco.

There is a move underfoot now to exclude tobacco from the Food for Peace Program, something that has already been approved in the House of Representatives.

This wouldn't have a big effect on the tobacco export program since it only involves about one percent of exports. Its passage, however would be a psychological victory for the anti-smoking forces, and it could lead to further action in Congress.

There are those who would love to eliminate the price support program for tobacco and they will do anything they can to get Congress to act in this direction. Thanks to a diligent tobacco bloc in Congress the vital-to-the-farmer support program has as yet been untouched. No one knows, though, how long the line could be held once anti-tobacco forces gain a victory in Congress.

Those forces don't concern themselves with the thousands of persons who would lose their incomes if the tobacco industry is wrecked (133,000 farmers in North Carolina), nor do they appear interested in the fact that the production would simply shift to other parts of the world.

It's going to take all our elected representatives can do in the years ahead to save the tobacco program, and they are going to need the full support of everyone in this tobacco producing area.

LOCAL IDEA OF A PUBLIC NOTICE!

Could Blaze A Trail

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Unless constitutional experts, some leading trial lawyers and a number of attorneys serving in the General Assembly are wrong, the legislature is about to enact a clearly unconstitutional law.

Experts say the bill to close adult book stores and movie theaters as public nuisances will be struck down the first time it is enforced. But, legislative leaders say the measure will be enacted anyway.

In addition, the legislature may ignore another proposal that would likely accomplish the same purpose but pose no constitutional problem.

Sponsored by Sen. I. Beverly Lake, D-Wake, the nuisance bill passed the Senate with only three dissenting votes, all on constitutional grounds.

"Everyone in this chamber knows it is a bad bill, with the possible exception of Beverly Lake," said Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, after his "no" vote.

A leading member of the House, who is a lawyer, commented that the bill is blatantly unconstitutional but will pass anyway. "It's the sort of bill lawyers laugh about but let it go, knowing it will be struck down."

The reason such a bill will pass is political. Critics say legislators who knowingly vote for an unconstitutional bill are afraid to face constituents who know nothing of constitutional principles but who know they want to get pornography out of their neighborhoods.

But, there's another view. "Maybe it's better to give them (the public) what they are demanding so they can see that it is wrong," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. But, he admitted, that would also foster public contempt for the courts.

"If this bill is enacted and then struck down in the courts, it would cause more public despair and deepen the belief that nothing can be done against pornography. We'd be worse off than we are now," another lawyer said.

Thanks to Prof. Arnold Loewy of the University of North Carolina law school, there is an alternative: make selling pornography less profitable. Loewy offered the idea at the committee meeting and Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, (continued on page 5)

Public Forum

To the Editor:

In Wednesday night's paper, 6-22-77, is the story of a proposed name change for Pitt County Memorial Hospital. I hope the citizens of Pitt County will respond in great numbers and oppose any such name change.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital is, was, and forever should be named just as it is. PCMH is primarily for the citizens of Pitt County. Any regionalism should be secondary.

Perhaps a hyphenated name — Pitt County Memorial Hospital - E. C. Regional Medical Center — is more palatable, but, in any case, let us in Pitt County keep our hospital and its proper name: Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Early Opening Allows Early Conversion

In only a month the Eastern Belt Tobacco Markets will open.

The opening date for the big Eastern Belt was set for July 25 by the Tobacco Advisory Committee of the industry.

The mid-summer opening is far different from the days when tobacco-selling was considered an activity of the fall.

Nevertheless the early opening allows farmers to quickly convert their tobacco product to cash.

Lawyers Told 'Clean Nest' War For Parking Space

By Bill Noblitt
RALEIGH—Carefully, but with the message plain for the discerning student to see, Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. bearded North Carolina's legal lions in their own den the other evening.

Lawyers have got to take the lead in changing the public attitude that the legal brotherhood is "more interested in getting somebody off than in seeing justice done," Hunt told members of the state's Bar Association at an Asheville gathering.

Making it clear that he—as an attorney—thinks it is a "bum rap," the governor conceded that many people "are left with a bad taste of the system."

No Confidence

"The simple fact the people could vote as to whether or not lawyers should play a leading role in the operation of our trial courts, they would, I am afraid, reject our leadership and turn to those who say that lawyers, not defendants, are the problem," Gov. Hunt admonished.

And with only passing reference the governor pointed a finger of guilt at the General Assembly for some of its failures: "I am concerned that many of the fine lawyers in the General Assembly are viewed by the public as trying to impede the fight against crime."

The lawyers who comprise the largest single bloc in the Legislature are on occasion subject to accusations that they deliberately write the law to benefit themselves. Hunt did not carry through with such a charge, but rather praised lawmakers for the steps taken in this session to improve criminal justice in North Carolina.

But he zeroed in—after the praise—on "one area that is a disappointment to me in this session... that is the presumptive sentencing bill put forth by the Knox Commission... (it) is one of the most effective approaches to preventing crime, but has not gone forward..."

Certainty

That proposal would establish certain sentences for certain classes of crimes and require the judge who decides on something different to justify in writing his reasons. It would allow some latitude in length of sentence, probation, or fine, but at bottom would seek to establish guidelines "regardless of whether they are convicted in Manteo or Murphy, and regardless of whether the judge was in a good mood or a bad mood."

The major change in law has run into opposition from judges and lawyers who say it would remove court discretion to deal differently with certain people on basis of unique circumstances.

BILL NOBLITT

Many judges say it would take their discretion. The proposal to provide certainty of punishment in the criminal justice system developed from study by the commission on prison reform chaired by former state senator Eddie H. Knox of Charlotte, an attorney and close friend of Hunt.

The governor asked the lawyers to study the proposal, research disparities in sentencing, and come back with recommendations for later General Assembly consideration.

Meanwhile, he told the attorneys, "it is our obligation to make the system work and not to work the system." The lawyer has a "sacred duty" to help the client, but not to the point where "we fight changes in the courts and in the laws that make the system work."

Hunt said lawyers forget that "our system of laws is to protect the great body of citizens as well as to guarantee a fair and impartial trial to an individual defendant," and that as leaders, officers of the court, and as citizens, lawyers have a duty to help restore public confidence in the system; a confidence torn down "because of their experiences as a witness... as a juror... a victim... or by reading the newspaper about certain criminal trials."

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—Futurists are now predicting that the world will end with neither a whimper nor a bang. It will end when enough people can't find a parking place. In Washington they are voting stern parking measures for their streets, which could change the American way of life as we know it.

In the past, commuters from the suburbs as well as Maryland and Virginia have driven into the city and have parked their cars all day long in front of someone's house, and then at the end of the day driven them back to the suburbs where they pay their taxes, and, according to all the real estate ads, live the good life.

But a court ruling has changed all this and now motorized incursions from the hinterlands will be prohibited. It could turn Washington into another Beirut. When you take a person's parking spot away from him, you take away the dearest thing in his life. We are not really talking about parking—but the territorial imperative man has always been willing to go to war over real estate, and there is no land as precious to an American as a place where he can leave his car.

To quote Winston Churchill, "The storm clouds are gathering." In suburban shopping center malls militant parking leaders are inciting suburbanites to prepare for battle. City-dwellers are calling for armored tow trucks to repel an invasion. Hardliners from both sides are rallying the mobs.

A spokesman for the city-dwellers said, "We've had it up to here with the suburbanites' cars. They come in the winter and make potholes which we city-dwellers have to pay to repair. They come in the summertime and pollute our air. They make obscene remarks to our women, and think they can buy anything with their money. Well, now the courts have decided they can't park all day, wherever they want to. If they want to live in the suburbs let them stay there."

A leader of the out-of-town Free Parking Movement clenched his fist.

"The Declaration of Independence provides for the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," he said.

"But it doesn't say anything about parking," I told him.

"What do you think the 'pursuit of happiness' translates into?" he said bitterly. "There is no greater pursuit of it than trying to find a place to put your car. Americans spend more time looking for an empty parking space than they do watching television. Ninety percent of all their leisure time is wasted searching for a parking spot. We will not be told where we can and cannot park. If they lay a finger on the bumper of just one of our loved ones, it will mean civil war."

The voices of moderation are trying to find a peaceful solution to the problem. One that has been offered is that the West Bank of the Potomac be given to the (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say: Oil Boosts Canal

(The Wilson Times)

There is so much double-talk on the Alaska oil pipeline's effect on the Panama Canal you do not know how much to believe. One article says the new pipeline could prove a bonanza for the Panama Canal.

As the crude oil began to flow into the pipeline this week the prospect that a portion of it would eventually be transhipped through the canal raises growth projections for canal traffic. It said both canal officials and the government of Panama view the prospect with enthusiasm and see it as enhancing the value of the 63-year-old waterway.

It could play a role in current negotiations over the future of the Panama Canal. If traffic projections for the next few years indicate an increase Panama's desire for control of the waterway may well become more insistent. The canal has been in the hands of the United States all of its total history.

For several years traffic through the canal has dropped owing to the end of the Vietnam war, the worldwide recession, and the reopening of the Suez Canal. At present the average number of ships transiting the canal daily is 36. It was running in the mid-40s several years ago.

On the other side of the question, it will be some time before any of the Alaska North Slope crude reaches the canal, but plans are being made to take the oil. Officials here note that California and the Western states do not have the refinery capacity now or on the drawing boards to handle the oil flow.

A good portion of the Alaskan oil will have to be shipped to the Gulf of Mexico and East Coast ports, and the Panama Canal is the natural artery for this traffic.

But the canal is not wide enough for the huge 265,000-ton supertankers that will pick the oil at the Alaskan port of Valdez. So whatever oil transits the canal probably will have to be transferred to smaller tankers somewhere on the route. The process is not new but it is cumbersome.

It is said the Alaskan oil does boost Panama Canal stock and the government of Panama is negotiating with a U.S. firm to construct a terminal for storage and shipment of crude oil to Puerto Armuelles on the Pacific Coast of Panama.

Preliminary agreements with the firm Northville Industries were signed in mid-June and final agreement should be ready in a month for the $42 million facility. When completed two years from now the facility is expected to have a capacity of 5 million barrels of crude oil. According to present plans, the bulk of the oil that eventually reaches Puerto Armuelles and the canal will go directly through the canal to the U.S. for refining.

THE GALLUP POLL

Carter's Shift On Energy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Although President Carter was rescued from grave error by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill at a crucial moment in the great energy war between the White House and Congress, the administration's undisciplined tendency for overkill to sell its case continues to boomerang.

The O'Neill rescue of Jimmy Carter the day after a House Commerce subcommittee voted to deregulate natural gas prices was successful as far as it went. Alarmed that the President had decided to go "live" to the country over nationwide TV on the morning of June 10 to lambast that subcommittee decision, O'Neill quietly and correctly advised against it. There was much that would happen before Congress came even close to final action on gas regulation — and a score of only marginally less important energy decisions. O'Neill told Mr. Carter: cool it, for God's sake, and save your ammunition.

The President cooled it — but not before instructing his press secretary, Jody Powell, to read the same riot act that he himself had planned to deliver on television.

Powell seized the occasion with relish, not only blasting Congress for caving in to the oil lobby but for costing taxpayers "a paltry $71 billion ripoff."

When the page one banner headline appeared in the Washington Star a few hours later — "Congress Caves In on Energy, Carter Says" — presidential aides started beating a retreat. Waiting to tape a Chancellor-Brinkley interview on the battle with Congress for that evening's NBC news, Powell pleaded (wholly unsuccessfully) with NBC reporter John Hart: "Now don't say I was attacking Congress because I wasn't."

But where on earth had that "$71 billion ripoff" come from? It came not from Powell but from energy experts in the office of Dr. James Schlesinger, President Carter's energy chief.

Instructed to make the worst possible case out of the gas deregulation bill then awaiting action by the House Commerce subcommittee, these experts drafted two case studies alleging to show the huge cost of gas deregulation under two differing sets of circumstances.

"Case 1" showed a revenue increase to gas producers of $56.7 billion; "Case 2" an increase of $86 billion.

A document containing both "cases" was rushed to each member of the House Commerce subcommittee 20 minutes before the vote on Rep. Robert Krueger's deregulation bill. It had little impact, Krueger's amendment carrying by a 12 to 10 vote.

Krueger, a moderate Texas Democrat who sports an Oxford Ph.D. and has become the acknowledged super-expert in Congress on the gas-and-oil industries so important to his state, was first surprised — then angry. The cost allegations in the administration's two "cases" ignore the extra cost of gas to consumers under Mr. Carter's own bill. That cost is conservatively put at $15 billion.

Before examining the rest of the data in the administration's documentation of the cost of his deregulation bill, Krueger bitterly complained to Dr. Schlesinger's office. That accounted for Powell's curious use of the "paltry $71 billion ripoff." He took the higher $86 billion cost estimate in "Case 2" and simply subtracted the cost of the President's partial decontrol program.

But the arithmetic used to project the cost of Krueger's deregulation bill to astronomical levels gets curiously. For example, the administration's documentation appears to make an assumption that much if not (Continued on page 5)

RAPIDS ALONG THE COURSE

Most rivers have cataracts and rapids somewhere along their courses. There are a few which run placidly and unimpeded from source to distant sea. But such are the exception, not the rule.

There are some lives which appear to be lived peacefully from early years to old age. Perhaps if we knew the truth we would know that even in such cases there is considerable agitation beneath the surface. But we can be sure that in most lives there are rapids and cataracts in the form of disappointment, pain, and sorrow from many sources. Loss of loved ones, loss of a job, these are only a few of the things which can break up the normal flow of our lives.

But life will always be this way. This is the normal pattern of its course. But we always have one source of consolation and confidence. The stream flows with greater depth and certainty after the cataracts and rapids have been passed.

Unusual Guide For Investors

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The Council on Economic Priorities has published perhaps the most unusual guide this year for stock market investors.

It says nothing about profits. It talks about pollution abatement instead.

If you were to use the guide, you might consider Owens-Illinois, Armco, Atlantic Richfield and Pacific Gas & Electric, because these concerns are said to have the best pollution abatement records in their respective industries.

Those industries — pulp and paper, steel, petroleum refining and electric utilities — are considered the most polluting domestic industries. The council seeks to praise those who do their best, and censure the rest.

Among those with the poorest records were Great Northern Nekosa in paper, Gulf and Texaco in oil refining, Republic and National in the iron-steel industry, and Central Maine Power among electric utilities.

A young stock analyst, Alice Tepper Marlin, set up the council back in 1969 after dwelling on the notion that the most profitable companies perhaps weren't the most desirable concerns in terms of what's best for the country.

The council is now funded by grants, donations, publications sales, subscriptions and consulting fees, with individual grants and donations providing by far the largest part of the income.

Almost from the beginning it has been controversial, but it has earned respect and sometimes praise too, from individuals, legislators and corporations. Some companies have made internal records available to the council. Others have balked.

Based on the best information available from public and private records, the council now has published "The Pollution Audit — A guide to 50 Industrials for Responsible Investors."

Among petroleum refiners, the top scorers were Arco, Shell and Exxon. Gulf and Texaco were ranked lowest.

In iron and steel, Armco was found to pollute significantly less than the others of the top seven producers. Inland was second, but far behind Armco. And Republic and National ranked lowest.

Behind Owens-Illinois as the best pollution abater among pulp and paper companies, the council ranked Hoerner Waldorf and International Paper. Twenty one companies were examined. Great Northern Nekosa, American Can and Continental Can ranked lowest. Pacific Gas & Electric ranked first among electric utilities, but Oklahoma Gas & Electric and Southern California Edison followed close behind, with Houston Lighting and Power in fourth place.

The lowest ranked utilities were Virginia Electric Power, Iowa Power & Light, Florida Power & Light and Central Maine Power.

Each of the industries studied, and summarized in "The Pollution Audit," is the subject of longer, detailed reports running to more than 300 published pages.

The council says its members typically spend many months analyzing information, contacting chief executives, checking regulatory agencies, verifying data with companies involved and on site studies.

Would Ask Hunted Son To Surrender

By DENNIS ECKERT
Associated Press Writer
LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — The mother of Gene Leroy Hart, the man charged with the slayings of three Girl Scouts, says if the evidence against him is as strong as authorities say, she'd "ask him to turn himself in" if she had any idea where he is.

"I'd even walk with him," Ella Mae Sullateskee Buckskin said Sunday.

"I just pray about it, that one of these days he might show up," Mrs. Buckskin, 51, said of the eldest of her seven sons. "I think he's out of state. If he was around this part of Oklahoma I believe he'd come to anyone's house and ask for something to eat. He can't live off this land."

Mrs. Buckskin talked with two reporters Sunday afternoon before attending church in Tahlequah, 25 miles south of here.

Authorities have been searching a 40-square mile area of rough and low rolling hills for Hart, who was charged Thursday with the first-degree murder of the three Tulsa area Girl Scouts. The girls were beaten and sexually abused in the early hours of June 13 at summer camp here.

Meanwhile, sources close to the investigation said Sunday that at least one other possible suspect is being considered in the case. They would not elaborate.

Mrs. Buckskin said Sunday she last heard from her 33-year-old son in a letter from Canada dated November 25, 1973, after he had escaped from the Mayes County Jail where he had been serving time for rape and burglary.

"Momma, I'm sorry it had to happen this way ..." Mrs. Buckskin, a widow, recalls her son writing.

"One of these days he said he'd probably write to me again," the mother recalled. The letter had no return address.

Several of Hart's relatives met here Sunday and said they believe the accusation against Hart is a frame-up. And they said many town residents believe Hart is a scapegoat because police don't know who killed the girls.

Mayes County Sheriff Glen Weaver said he believes Hart is the killer and that friends have aided him in this rugged countryside of northeastern Oklahoma. He added that the suspect, known as a resourceful backwoodsman, may be able to survive until winter.

Cumberland Sheriff To Respond To Allegations

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Cumberland County Sheriff Otis Jones planned to appear before a county grand jury today to answer allegations that he has abused the office of sheriff.

A State Bureau of Investigation agent has charged in a sworn affidavit that Jones "willfully and corruptly omitted, neglected and refused to discharge the duties of his office" by failing to return a warrant to the clerk of Superior Court.

The affidavit, drawn at the request of SBI Special Agent W.F. Dowdy, alleged that Jones suppressed a warrant against Adam Fletcher Hales, a Democratic Party official, in return for Hales' support in the next sheriff's election.

Jones, who has denied the charge, said Sunday the allegation was "politically motivated," and declined further comment "until this is over."

He announced Saturday that he wished to appear before the grand jury, scheduled to consider the allegation at 3 p.m. today.

The SBI's affidavit was part of supporting documents used to obtain a warrant to search Jones' office last week. The search reportedly recovered the warrant for Hales from the office of Maj. Charles Smith, chief of the department's detective division.

Dowdy charged in the affidavit that Jones refused "to return this executed arrest warrant to the clerk of superior court...and stated he would never return it unless Adam Hales refused to support him in the next sheriff's election."

Hales, a member of the 7th District Democratic Committee, is charged in the allegedly suppressed warrant with receiving a stolen revolver. The warrant was issued May 12 by a Cumberland county magistrate.

In another sworn affidavit, Hales said Jones told him, "I was going to work for him (the sheriff) in this election...and if he heard anything that I said about him, he was going back in his desk drawer and pull the warrant out and serve it on me."

Hales reportedly supported another person in the 1974 Democratic primary for sheriff.

The proposal would divide adult businesses into four areas — book stores, movie houses, peep shows and massage parlors. It would forbid any two being in the same building. Morgan said book store owners have told him it would put them out of business because profits would be too slim. Adult book stores usually have at least two of the four categories.

Two of North Carolina's leading law enforcement officials agreed that the plan would probably work. It would make prosecution simple and there would be no fear of constitutional challenges, they said.

Loewy said he hasn't heard of such an approach being taken elsewhere. What it boils down to is that North Carolina has an opportunity to blaze a new trail and possibly become a model state in the fight against pornography. But, will the legislature seize that opportunity?

most of the interstate (price-controlled) gas flowing through pipelines the day a Krueger-style deregulation bill became law would quickly rise to about $2.40 (per 1,000 cubic feet). Krueger claims, to the contrary, that nothing in his bill would permit abrogation of existing delivery contracts — some running for almost 20 years — which would continue to control the price for their lifetime.

That bit of administration arithmetic, Krueger says, is a mistake worth another $17 billion in Powell's $71 billion "ripoff."

Such claims and counterclaims may be par for the course in the high-stakes game of gas deregulation, but administration overkill is clearly damaging Mr. Carter in the eyes of Congress, and the President is clearly becoming aware of it. Thus, while his energy experts spread fear about the Krueger bill on Capitol Hill, Mr. Carter has tamed his rhetoric — at least for now — and instead is making quiet telephone calls gently twisting the arms of House members to win key votes.

Just such tactics may be essential to overturn the gas deregulation vote in the full Commerce Committee in the next few days. That is O'Neill's advice, and the advice of insider O'Neill is beginning to count heavily with outsider Jimmy Carter.

Found Shot To Death In Yard

Raymond Paul Grady, 51, was found shot to death in the back yard of his 1703 Sulgrave Rd. home this morning in what investigators described as an apparent suicide.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Grady left his home for work as usual about 5:30 a.m. He was found lying in the back yard by his wife about 7 a.m.

The chief said Grady had been shot in the left chest by a projectile from a .22 caliber rifle.

suburbanites for all-day parking. They would have free access to Washington, providing they come over on foot. The Bethesda Heights would be offered for alternate day parking, and the Dulles Airport strip would be declared a neutral zone for tourists.

But both the city-dwellers and the suburbanites are reluctant to accept the agreement.

The militant suburbanites, backed by their militant politicians, have declared that "Parking is not negotiable. Those parking spaces have been ours for 50 years and we will not give them up."

The equally militant city people are prepared to fight back. As one of their leaders said, "The first gas-guzzling commuter car that parks illegally on one of our streets will find a parking meter shoved up its tailpipe where it belongs."

$23 Million In Ministry Funds

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham said his organization has been reluctant to discuss finances, including a secret $22.9 million fund, for fear the public would think it too rich.

The Charlotte Observer reported Sunday that Graham spoke publicly about the fund for the first time last week, admitting his ministry has tried to keep it hidden from public view.

Graham said a second reason for the secrecy was to avoid being inundated with requests for help.

The fund, known as the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund of Dallas, Tex., includes assets in land, stocks, bonds and cash that have been amassed in an apparently legal manner over the past seven years, the newspaper reported.

It supports such groups as Campus Crusade for Christ, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Baptist World Alliance and Young Life, and reportedly was purchased in 1973 from the Broad River Corp. The corporation's founders include Edward Dawson Roberts, also a founder of the Bank of World Commerce in Nassau, the Bahamas, the newspaper said.

Law enforcement officials have found the bank to be involved helping organized crime figures disguise money that was illegally acquired, the Observer said. But in an interview with the newspaper, Roberts said his only involvement with the bank was to draw up the papers of incorporation.

Graham, his associates and lawyers and realtors involved in the transaction said they knew nothing of Roberts' reported connection with the Nassau bank, the newspaper said.

"For anyone to insinuate that we have any connection with a group in the Bahamas is ridiculous," T.W. Wilson, one of Graham's closest associates, said Sunday. "We never heard of these people, much less met them."

The land was to be used for a "laymen's training center" when it was purchased, but the Graham organization later found a more suitable piece of land for the institute on a 1,100-acre site near Asheville, Wilson told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Montreat, N.C.

has given away as much as $1.2 million in a single year.

Between 80 and 90 per cent of the fund's receipts each year come from the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, the main arm of the Graham ministry. But the two million contributors a year, whose gifts to Graham's ministry average less than $10 each, have never been told of the fund, which makes the ministry far wealthier than ever reported, the newspaper said.

Among assets of the World Evangelism fund, according to the Observer, are 2,600 acres of prime undeveloped land in Buncombe County, N.C., valued at $3.6 million, and a $19.3 million portfolio of blue-chip stocks and bonds, including AT&T, Exxon, General Electric and IBM.

Graham told the newspaper last fall he thought it would be wrong for his organization to own stock because such ownership could be construed as endorsement of a corporation. The evangelist said last week, however, he felt it was acceptable for the World Evangelism fund to have such holdings because the fund does not carry his name.

Included in the Buncombe County holdings is a 500-acre tract of mountain land about 15 miles east of Asheville, which

Fear Of 'Bar On Every Corner' Said Prevalent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Marcus Waller, a University of North Carolina psychology professor, says fears of "bars on every corner" and "quick money businesses" may be what's behind the fierce, emotional fixation against liquor by the drink.

An N.C. State University psychologist suggests two related reasons: A fear of the "evil of saloons," and an ingrained conviction that "people shouldn't make money selling booze."

Some explanation is needed because statistics and polls point to a puzzle — Many people who drink alcoholic beverages and who do not protest liquor by the bottle sales are leading the fight against liquor by the shot.

According to the North Carolina Institute for Alcohol Studies, 68 per cent of Tar Heel adults drink liquor, and the state says they spent $124 million in ABC stores last year on liquor.

Reporters for The News and Observer conducted a survey late last week which showed that 85 of the 120 House members drink alcoholic beverages and 25 are teetotalers, with 10 unavailable for comment.

In the Senate, which passed a local-option liquor by the drink bill last week by two votes, 39 of 50 members drink, three are teetotalers, five refused to comment and three were unavailable.

Still, liquor-by-the-drink supporters in the House found themselves postponing the fight because they knew they would lose in the vote.

"You've heard the old saying," said one legislator. "People stagger to the polls to vote against it." Another said that if his colleagues "voted our convictions, the vote would be 100 to 19" for passage.

The difference, of course, lies in the chasm between personal beliefs and political necessity. Legislators sympathetic to the bill openly admit that vocal opposition back home turned them against it. Liquor, they say, is an emotionally volatile issue.

Many legislators said their constituents viewed the issue in strictly emotional terms — as a choice between "wet" or "dry." Voters did not, they said, understand the bill's technical aspects, which would have allowed local communities to choose whether to permit liquor by the drink sales.

Meanwhile, ministers who led the fight against liquor by the drink, said drinkers would consume more alcohol at any one sitting if it were available by the glass, as opposed to brown-bagging.

They rejected the notion of outright banning alcoholic beverages as "impractical."

Files Notice

Jack W. Richardson, director of Pitt Memorial Hospital, filed notice June 21 of intent to incur a capital expenditure for the purpose of constructing and operating a neonatal intensive care unit. The project is scheduled for completion in March, 1978, and cost is estimated at $835,000.

The project proposal has been submitted to the North Carolina Department of Human Resources, State Health Planning and Development Agency, for review under provisions of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

Copies of the proposal have been referred to the Facility Services Division of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources and to the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, Inc., for review, as required by federal law.

The Department of Human Resources will receive the advice of the state and regional agencies and then decide on a recommendation to be made to the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare concerning the project.

Pope's Protege Among Five Named Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI created five new cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church today, including a protege believed to be his choice for his successor.

Pope Paul elevated the new princes of the church at the sixth and smallest consistory of his 14-year reign. It increased the College of Cardinals to 137 members, but 18 of them are over the 80-year limit for participation in election of the next pope.

Foremost among the new cardinals was the new archbishop of Florence, Giovanni Benelli, 56, who for 10 years has been the Vatican's deputy secretary of state. Some observers said the consistory was being held now to improve his candidacy for the papacy should anything happen to Pope

Paul, who will be 80 in December.

The four others receiving the cardinal's red hat, or biretta, were Archbishop Bernardin Gantin, 55, of Benin, who heads the Vatican's Justice and Peace Commission; Archbishop Joseph Ratzinger, 50, of Munich, West Germany; Bishop Luigi Ciampi, 67, theologian of the papal household and an adviser on doctrinal matters to three popes, and Bishop Frantisek Tomasek, 78, of Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Bishop Tomasek was chosen last year by Pope Paul when he named 20 cardinals, but the choice was kept secret — "in pectore" — because the Vatican at the time was engaged in negotiations with Czechoslovakia's Communist government.

Kim, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Tugwell of Farmville, is a graduate of Farmville Central High School.

Ford Praises Carter Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's attempt to balance the federal budget is winning praise from former President Gerald R. Ford, who says "Congress ought to be spanked" for irresponsible spending.

But Ford also said he believes the Carter administration must back up its words with action, although he conceded the President's style has impressed Americans.

He made the observations in a copyrighted interview in U.S. News & World Report released Sunday.

In a review of Carter's first five months in office, Ford said he was pleased that his successor is "more conservative on spending than the Democratic Congress."

Ford said many Americans have adopted a wait-and-see attitude on Carter's ability to deal with major problems.

"I am saying that the public obviously approves overwhelmingly of the style," he said. "But my impression is that the public now wants to see how the President and his administration will deal with substance and the tough decisions that have to be made."

Ford said Carter got "off on the wrong foot" in relations with the Soviet Union, and that it is "hard to visualize" a new strategic arms limitation agreement by the Oct. 3 deadline.

He said the United States should be careful of pushing for full diplomatic relations with Cuba and Vietnam. Ford accused Vietnam of "lying to us" about American servicemen missing in action. Cuba, he said, is cooperating with the Soviet Union in undertaking an expansionist foreign policy in Africa.

Ford said he'll not decide for several months whether to seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980.

Body Taken From Grave

FOREST PARK, Ill. (AP) — The remains of movie producer Michael Todd were removed from his grave in a cemetery here sometime over the weekend and police are trying to contact his former wife, Elizabeth Taylor, to see if any ransom has been demanded.

Forest Park police investigator Michael Thompson said Sunday that the rubber bag containing Todd's remains was discovered missing from his casket in Jewish Waldheim Cemetery after a woman visiting a nearby grave noticed that Todd's grave had been tampered with.

Todd, who was married to actress Elizabeth Taylor at the time of his death, and three other men were killed March 22, 1958 in a plane crash in the Zuni Mountains of western New Mexico.

Authorities knew of no motive in the case. But a spokesman said authorities are trying to contact Miss Taylor, 45, to learn if she has received any threats or demands for ransom.

Police said that someone had to dig about 4½ feet to reach the casket and estimated that it probably took them several hours.

FBI Jargon Conceals Some Of Agent Activities

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If

you're looking for an ironclad assurance that the FBI is obeying the law these days, don't ask:

Attorney General Bell, don't try FBI Director Clarence M. Kelly.

As remarkable as this may seem, neither is willing to vouch for the bureau's lawfulness.

Both say they believe and hope no wrongdoing is occurring and they're taking steps to prevent it. But they leave the public with lingering doubt, perhaps because they have some doubts of their own.

At a House subcommittee hearing recently, Bell showed signs of the frustration he feels at trying to come to grips with the traditionally secret society of the FBI.

Are you convinced, he was asked, that the FBI no longer burglarizes homes and offices, opens private mail, illegally taps telephones and plots dirty tricks against political activists?

"I don't want to say whether anything is going on or is not going on. There are 20,000 people in the FBI. It's too big. I wouldn't know that," he confessed.

With the optimism of a new man on the job, Bell said the continuing Justice Department investigation of FBI misdeeds should settle the question, and "I think I will reach the point" of certainty that no wrongdoing is occurring.

Kelley may not share Bell's optimism because he knows from his own sad experience that a man takes risks if he swears to the FBI's good behavior.

Two years ago, he confidently asserted that there were no FBI burglaries against domestic targets after 1966. He trusted the FBI men who had told him that.

As it turned out, there were numerous FBI burglaries after 1966, many of them carried out in New York in the bureau's frantic search for Weather Underground fugitives.

Department investigators have spent more than a year probing evidence about the burglaries and illegal mail-opening and wiretap operations. As a result, one FBI man faces serious criminal charges and Bell is considering whether to authorize additional indictments.

In a nationally televised interview last August, Kelley uncomfortably admitted, "I know that I was deceived. I think they should have told me, at least not make me stand out on a limb with this knowledge they had and should have imparted to me."

Facing reporters at a news conference two days later, he was asked for assurance that burglaries were finally a thing of the past.

"I wish I could say categorically, unquestionably, that this is not going on." But he could not. He had been deceived and from that, he had learned he "can no longer make categorical, sweeping statements."

And he's sticking with that position even today.

Bell touched on one of the barriers for anyone trying to find out what goes on in the bureau. As he put it, the "internal operating controls" aren't very good.

Or as other department officials repeatedly complain, "They tell you what you ask and no more. You have to know exactly how to phrase the question."

The key is understanding the FBI's language, an idiom far different from ordinary English and even more obscure than the jargon of other government agencies. The purpose often is to communicate the key information only to the few who understand the code and to conceal it from all others.

For example, FBI files often refer to information obtained from "contact with highly confidential sources." That has turned out to be a frequent code phrase for an FBI burglary.

The curious language is not the only barrier to enlightenment about the FBI's activities. Few if any records were kept on some operations, particularly those most likely to embarrass the bureau. The post-1966 New York burglaries, for example, were recorded only in a separate set of files in a safe in the New York field office and were not discovered in a search of other files in that office and bureau headquarters. Bell says he wants to correct the situation and he's telling FBI agents to get their instructions in writing so there's a clear line of accountability.

If there are any questionable operations, Bell wants the records on paper, identifying everyone responsible from the street agent all the way to the top.

Legalizing Sale Of 'Gator Meat'

By ROYAL BRIGHTBILL

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — If the idea of buying alligator meat for your table seems silly, consider the regulations needed to permit it.

The Louisiana House Saturday passed a bill, 86-6, to put into state law definitions for "alligator parts," "alligator parts dealers," "alligator parts transaction forms" and more.

The bill, which sponsors hope will lead to marketing of meat taken during an annual alligator hunt, requires regular record keeping of the disposition of the meat from beginning to end.

An alligator part is defined as anything other than the hide.

"I think we have reached the extreme of the regulatory mind with this bill," said Rep. Jock Scott, D-Alexandria.

"Even the restaurant dealer would have to fill out a form every 60 days and say where it is now. It's going to be a lot of problem to keep up with it. Especially after someone has eaten it," he said, drawing howls of laughter.

"It's going to be a dirty job. We're not going to be able to get anybody to do it."

Scott's district has few, if any, alligators.

Rep. Conway LeBleu, D-Cameron, said his bill was necessarily odd because it attempted to anticipate federal requirements for permission to sell the meat.

"If you look at this bill it will seem kind of nutty but all its trying to do is comply with those nuts in Washington," said Rep. Conway LeBleu, D-Cameron.

LeBleu represents an alligator-infested coastal area of southwest Louisiana, the only area of the nation where the creature is not on the endangered species list.

Each year the state holds a controlled hunt of about 4,000 alligators in the area. The hides are sold to be made into high-fashion purses, wallets and shoes but federal law forbids sale of the meat.

What the hunters don't eat or give away is thrown in the swamp.

State Wild Life and Fisheries experts said the meat, which has a consistency of pork chops and the subtle fish taste of frog legs, could bring up to $2 a pound.

Sonic Boom An Unlikely Boon

By WARREN E. LEARY

AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

People complain about the sonic boom from supersonic airplanes but some New York scientists say it sounds good to them.

In what may be the first known benefit of sonic boom, scientists say the low-frequency sound of the Concorde supersonic airliner's boom is valuable in studying the upper atmosphere.

The sound waves bouncing through the atmosphere and detected at ground stations allow scientists to regularly monitor high altitude winds and temperatures better than before, they say.

The unexpected development is reported in the July 1 issue of the journal Science by Drs. Nambath K. Balachandran, William L. Donn and David H. Rind of the Lamont-Doherty Geophysical Observatory of Columbia University.

Sonic boom is the sound from a shock wave generated by an aircraft passing through the air faster than the speed of sound.

Donn said in an interview the observatory, located in Palisades, N.Y., continuously monitors sounds in the atmosphere. These sounds, mostly of natural origin like sea waves, change in speed and frequency because of temperature and wind.

But control and precision of measurement suffer from not knowing the exact source and location of the original sounds. This changed on May 24, 1976, when the Concorde began a 16-month trial of regular flights between Europe and Dulles International Airport outside Washington, D.C.

"We saw this signal on alternate days and it was very strong, unlike natural signals," Donn recalled. "The waves lasted about a minute and we wondered what could be causing them."

"Then someone mentioned the Concorde tests and we checked the flight schedule and found the sound arrived about a half hour after the plane landed at Dulles," he continued.

"Then we realized we had something unique as a probe of the atmosphere," Donn said.

The scientist said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration fires off a small rocket weekly that sets off a series of small explosions. Although this allows precise sound measurements, it is expensive and relatively infrequent.

"With the Concorde, we get it free," Donn said. Since the plane flies a regular schedule, scientists know the exact location of the originating sound and its characteristics from which to make measurements, he added.

Donn was asked if the Concorde experience had influenced the scientists' views of the controversial Anglo-French plane, which is being barred from trial flights into New York City because of environmental concerns.

"Let's just say we are more favorably disposed to the Concorde now than before," Donn said.

No 'Uninvited' Guests On Hand

LONGMIRE, Wash. (AP) — About 40 persons who have seen, or believe in, unidentified flying objects, attended the New Age Convention over the weekend just outside the gates of Mt. Rainier National Park.

It was 30 years ago last Friday that Kenneth Arnold, a Seattle-area pilot, sighted nine pulsing objects weaving around Mt. Rainier at about 1,700 miles per hour. His description led to the term "flying saucers."

To the dismay of the convention goers, no "uninvited" guests showed up.

Watson Overcomes Blunders

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer
OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — With a stroke of luck, Tom Watson overcame his own blundering and putting problems to win his fourth tournament of the 1977 pro golf tour.

He admitted he played poorly on the hole that clinched his one-stroke victory Sunday in the Western Open.

Heading into the 17th hole, the Masters king held a one-shot lead over Johnny Miller and Wally Armstrong. Ahead of him was a tough, par-four hole with a pair of sand traps and trees on the left side of the fairway.

He aimed for the bunkers, intending the ball to fade to the right and the middle of the fairway. It didn't. Playing his second shot from a hard dirt lie in the rough, he made a fine recovery as the ball landed on the rear fringe of the green, leaving a 16-foot putt.

"It was entirely too hard. But it hit the back of the cup and went in," said Watson. "If it missed the hole, it's five or six feet past the hole."

Watson's birdie gave him a two-stroke margin and provided the cushion that enabled him to three-putt from 20 feet for a bogey on the 18th hole and still take his second Western Open crown in four years.

Watson, who earned $40,000 for the victory to push his tour-leading earnings to $269,115, won with a five-under-par 283, a stroke ahead of Miller and Armstrong, who shot 69 and 70, respectively on Sunday. Tom Weiskopf, with three double bogeys and two eagles in an erratic round of 71, was one stroke back at 285.

Watson rebounded from a 75 Saturday to fire a three-under-par 69 Sunday.

The difference between the rounds, he said, was "stupidity. Yesterday I played one shot I wasn't ready for and on one shot I used the wrong club."

Armstrong, who was tied for the lead with Watson and Weiskopf after three rounds at two-under-par, said, "I was in there close the whole day. I didn't look at the scoreboard. I just tried to stay with Tom."

Armstrong, 32, joined the tour in the fall of 1973 and has improved his earnings each year. His $18,500 check Sunday brings his take this year to $41-055, 39th on the money list.

Earlier this year, Watson won the Bing Crosby and San Diego Open back-to-back and captured the Masters by two strokes over Jack Nicklaus, who did not play at the Western Open.

U.S. Tennis Boom Produces Wimbledon Success Stories

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The great American tennis boom has produced some startling U.S. successes at the century Wimbledon tennis championships, which enter their second week today.

Record crowds at the All-England club were kept buzzing last week by the brilliance and composure of 14-year-old Tracy Austin, who double-backhanded her way into a second-round clash against defending women's singles champ Chris Evert.

The center court contest drew some remarkable tennis from the spindly-legged youngster although the more experienced Miss Evert won 6-1, 6-1.

Chris later said it was the toughest match mentally she had ever played and at times she looked across the net and thought: "I wonder if she is going to be No. 1 in the world some day."

Tracy, who has been playing for seven years, is a well-groomed product of relentless and costly coaching. Her mentor, Coach Bob Lansdorp, thinks the fair-haired Californian will be Wimbledon champ within three years.

Another promising girl is 18-year-old Anne Smith of Dallas, who took a set from Billie Jean King before succumbing in the second round. British commentators said the Texan was one of the most athletic newcomers to appear on the women's tennis scene for years.

But it's in the men's singles that the new names are challenging the established star-sufor Wimbledon glory.

This year, 18-year-old New Yorker John McEnroe, who was ranked No. 270 in the United States before he left for Europe, and 20-year-old Billy Martin, a pro for two years whose family moved from Evanston, Ill., to Palos Verdes, Calif., for the sake of Billy's tennis.

McEnroe had to play three qualifying rounds before entering the men's singles, and in the meantime was scheduled to play in the juniors competition. But with accurate serving and all-round aggression, he put out four veteran players to reach the last eight: Ismael el Shafai of Egypt, Colin Dowdeswell of Rhodesia, Karl Meiler of West Germany and American Sandy Mayer.

McEnroe, ranked No. 2 among U.S. juniors, has been coached by Harry Hopman.

Some of the best tennis during the first week's play came from Tim Gullikson of Onalaska, Wis., who only just failed to reach the quarter-finals after a five-set marathon with Phil Dent of Australia on Saturday. Gullikson, whose twin brother

Tom also has joined the tour after they both started pro teaching careers, lost the fifth set to Dent 9-7.

As the final rounds begin, the top eight women's seeds remain unbeaten, while 11 of the men's seeds have fallen. Nevertheless, the top two seeds, Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg, remain the men to beat.

NBA Grew Up Under Former Commissioner

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Former National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy has left a legacy of change that resulted in the betterment of basketball.

The professional basketball world, which grew up under his firm but gentle guidance, reacted with deep regret to his death Sunday night.

Kennedy, who was 64, died of cancer at St. Joseph's Hospital in Stamford, Conn.

NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, who succeeded Kennedy in 1975, said: "Speaking from my heart, I have admired Walter Kennedy for the last two decades, first from his reputation, then from our personal acquaintance."

"No one has made more of a contribution to sports and basketball in particular than he did. It was a challenge for me to succeed him and I know that he will be sorely missed by the NBA staff and all our members across the country."

Kennedy was the 49-year-old mayor of Stamford, Conn., when he was chosen to replace 73-year-old Marice Podoloff, who retired Sept. 1, 1963.

"I do not anticipate any more difference with the nine men (the number of owners in 1963) than I had as mayor of a city of 100,000 people," Kennedy said on being named commissioner. "Nobody ever looks for Utopia because you know you'll never find it."

When Kennedy took office, his two major objectives were to return the NBA to national television and to expand the league. He accomplished both. Today there are 22 teams in the NBA, which boasts strong local and network television support.

Kennedy, who called himself "a man for my time" during his 12 years as commissioner of the major pro basketball league, had wanted to be a commissioner for life. However, he retired in 1975 because he was fed up with the high-pressure world of sports. The continuous congressional hearings, the lawyers, the high priced contracts, somehow didn't fit into his world.

"I'm retiring because of my health and because I think this is a new era," Kennedy said in an interview about three months before he retired on June 1, 1975.

Kennedy served as the publicity man for the league when it was known as the Basketball Association of America, from 1946-49, and for two years after it became the NBA. He also assigned game officials for two years.

At various times, he was associated with the Harlem Globetrotters and Little League baseball and was a coach and official in high schools and prep schools in New England. From 1943 to 1946 he was publicity director for Notre Dame, his alma mater.

A spokesman for St. Joseph's Hospital said Kennedy underwent surgery one year ago for a malignant melanoma of the back and for the past year was receiving immunotherapy treatments. Two months ago, blood tests revealed the cancer had spread to the liver.

Kennedy is survived by his widow, Marion; his two sons, David and Robert, sports editor of the Stamford Advocate, and his daughter, Kathie.

Funeral arrangements were to be planned by Leo Gallagher and Sons of Stamford.

Snow Hill Tops Louisburg, 7-5

LOUISBURG — Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team held off Louisburg in the ninth inning for a 7-5 victory yesterday.

Snow Hill scored two in the first and one in the second, while Louisburg came up with a pair in the third. Three runs in the sixth and another in the seventh by Snow Hill made it 6-2, but Louisburg rallied for three in the ninth to pull to 7-5 before Snow Hill ended the rally.

The leading hitters for Snow Hill were Russell Brann, who was 3-4, and Mike Chase, Jerry Speight and Ronnie Whitley, who got two hits each. Pete Holmes, Dennis Tabron and Franklin each had two hits for Louisburg.

Chase led off the three-run sixth inning for Snow Hill with a single. Carraway followed with a base hit and Brann walked to load the bases.

Chase scored on a wild pitch, while Jeffrey Warren reached on a fielder's choice as Carraway was thrown out at the plate.

Warren stole second and, after David Winborn's walk loaded the bases again, Ronnie Whitley singled home Brann and Warren.

The win leaves Snow Hill with a 5-5 record. The team will play at Williamston tonight.

The University of North Carolina's decision to no longer play East Carolina (or anybody else in the state outside the ACC) is not to be seen as a slap at the Pirates.

Or at least, so says UNC athletic director Bill Cobey.

Except for a few Carolina fans, there are few in the state that see it that way, however. The story, when run in the Chapel Hill Newspaper, carried the headline "Goodbye, Pirates," and the accompanying editorial cartoon, seen elsewhere on this page, courtesy of John Branch of that paper, left little doubt as to the feeling in Chapel Hill. On the editorial page, however, the paper favored a continuation of the series.

For those in Charlotte, it might have seemed like the nailing shut of the coffin for UNC-Charlotte's hopes of playing the Tar Heels in basketball, while in Boone, the same may have been true for ASU's hopes of a football date in Chapel Hill.

Nevertheless, the real danger seems to have been the Pirates of East Carolina.

Those close wins and the defeat that have occurred during the past meetings against East Carolina must have been too much for the Tar Heel alumni to bear. Reportedly, much of the pressure for the policy switch came from the embarrassed alumni.

Apparently, losing, or coming that close to losing is too much for those Tar Heels to bear at the hands of dinky ECTC.

Fortunately, neither N.C. State or Wake Forest seem to feel that way. Duke University, while agreeing to a meeting on the football field next year, is still mum on the future.

Dollars apparently mean little to the North Carolina people. They make their money from the alumni by winning basketball games and passing out those valuable ACC tournament tickets to those respected (and well-heeled) few.

So filling up their football stadium against East Carolina means little to them. They are just as happy with smaller crowds against other schools—from outside North Carolina.

Where Does the Future Lie?

Thus, after the 1981 season, North Carolina and East Carolina will no longer meet. Unless, of course, the Tar Heels find that there is more pressure to play than not to play.

East Carolina, meanwhile, will probably still be playing N.C. State before top crowds, and doing well in attendance further up the road in Winston-Salem against the Deacons. Too, by then, Ficklen Stadium will be enlarged, and those games with those teams will be drawing crowds here.

Losing Carolina from the schedule will hurt, of course, since there are still so many people in this state that think the sun rises and sets in Chapel Hill.

But it isn't the end of the world. East Carolina's program should continue to grow. And it should no longer need North Carolina by 1981, if it truly needs it now.

But we wonder if something might not backfire on the Chapel Hill powers?

Sports Boycott

Carolina has stated that its plan calls for the embargo against in-state schools in only football and basketball.

They want to continue playing in-state schools in other sports for financial reasons: the cost of travel, overnight stays, etc.

But what would happen if the rest of the schools in the state got together and told the Tar Heels to forget it. If they aren't good enough for one sport, then perhaps they aren't good enough for any.

Let North Carolina go outside the state for all its games, in all sports. They seem to have the money to afford it.

Even now, we are hearing reports that North Carolina wants all in-state schools played to come to Chapel Hill for games in other sports, with no travel for the Tar Heels.

What will they want next?

Four-Hit Game Sunday Puts Carew At .403

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Rod Carew, who narrowly missed his fifth straight American League batting championship in 1976 because of a slow start, isn't taking any chances this year.

Carew rocketed to .403 with his sixth four-hit game of the season Sunday and rekindled talk of the magical .400 plateau which hasn't been reached since Ted Williams hit .406 for Boston in 1941.

"I am just swinging exceptionally well right now and I really feel good," explained Carew, who doesn't worry that the .400 talk will affect his play.

"I've been asked about .400 so many times, that I know what to say and how to handle it," continued Carew. "It's still a long season, but if I'm around .400 in September, then I'd say my chances would be pretty good."

Carew, who drove in six runs and scored a club-record five runs in Minnesota's 19-12 victory over the Chicago White Sox Sunday, raised his average seven points with two singles, a double and homer. He also walked once and was retired on a ground ball to second base.

Farmville Downs Bill Clifton

Farmville's five runs in the third inning proved the winning edge as Farmville defeated Bill Clifton 7-2 in a Senior Babe Ruth baseball game yesterday.

Farmville scored two in the second and then broke loose for five in the third to take a 7-0 lead. Clifton's single runs in the fourth and sixth were as close as it could come.

A. Moore led off the third for Farmville, reaching on an error. He scored when Ted Dunn doubled. Rackley and Evans walked to load the bases and Jones brought Dunn in with a sacrifice fly.

Rackley scored on an error, while Evans and Moore, who had reached on a fielder's choice, scored when Hines got on by an error.

A. Moore and Dunn each had two hits to pace Farmville. Bill Clifton 000 101 0-2 2 7 Farmville 025 000 x-7 6 5

Post 39 Splits Pair Of Weekend Contests

Greenville's American Legion baseball team split a pair of games over the weekend, defeating Snow Hill by a 10-8 score on Saturday night and losing to Dunn on Sunday, 6-5.

In Saturday's game, Greenville fought back from a 4-0 first-inning deficit at Snow Hill to tie the game at four in the third inning.

Post 39 got five runs in the fourth for a 9-4 lead, but Snow Hill came back with a run in the sixth and three in the eighth to cut it to 9-8. Greenville added its final run in the ninth.

Al Butts led off Greenville's big fourth inning with a single and he went to second on Billy Mitchell's bunt. Both runners advanced on Nuggie Worthington's infield out and a walk by Mike Shank loaded the bases.

Ned Craft's single brought Butts in and Wright Hooks got a base hit to score Mitchell and Shank. Hooks and Craft came around when Kevin Adams doubled.

Hooks was 4-5 to lead Greenville's hitting, while Adams was 3-4 and Butts 2-4. Jay Caraway paced Snow Hill with a 3-5 performance and Mike Jenkins and Russell Brann were each 2-5.

In Greenville's Sunday contest at Dunn, the locals gave up six runs in the first five frames to trail 6-1. Post 39 scored two in the sixth and two more in the eighth, however, to pull to 6-5, but left the tying run on second in the eighth.

Greenville's hitting was led by Ned Craft and Kevin Adams, who both had two hits, while Al Lockamy was 3-4 and Bobby Hill 2-3 for Dunn.

Dunn put the game away with its pair of runs in the fifth inning. Ed Bullard reached on a fielder's choice and went to second on Tim Marbell's single. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch and came in when Gary Wood reached on an error.

Graniteers Win

The Graniteers scored two runs in the fifth inning to come from a 2-1 deficit and take a 3-2 victory over Auto Specialty in a Prep League baseball game yesterday.

The Graniteers had taken the lead on Ricky Owens' first-inning run, but Scott Johnson tied it with a run in the third and Jeff Boyd's fifth-inning tally gave Auto Specialty the lead.

In the bottom of the fifth, however, Vince Hankins led off with a double for the Graniteers and he scored on an error. Crowell Pope then singled, went to second on an infield out and scored on Bill Bost's base hit to win it for the Graniteers.

Brazil's Movies Are Improving

By MARC LIFSHER
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Brazilian-made films finally are making it in Brazil. Traditionally, Brazilians have turned up their noses at domestically produced films. They queued up instead for the latest Hollywood superproduction.

But now they are breaking box office records to see the Brazilian-made product.

Moving pictures came to Brazil from France and the United States 80 years ago. The Brazilian industry began producing its first 16mm films in 1917. But Brazilian film makers were unable to compete against the collective power of Hollywood and the European film-making centers.

In 1976, however, two major Brazilian films were released. They grossed more than $7.3 million in the past seven months.

The big money maker, "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands," adapted from the best-selling novel of the same name by Brazilian writer Jorge Amado, has already been seen by 15 million Brazilians. According to producer Luis Carlos Barreto, it should easily break the Brazilian attendance record, recently won by the U.S.-made "Jaws."

Barreto said the success of his film and the other big earner, "Xica da Silva," were possible because "the distribution and accounting at the box offices were vigorously controlled throughout the country and not just in the big capitals of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo."

"By the city-by-city indices we have, 'Dona Flor' should have an average income of from 30 to 35 per cent above 'Jaws,'" Barreto said, "and in the city of Recife in the northeast 'Dona Flor' has already grossed more than 'Towering Inferno,' 'Earthquake,' 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest' and 'Jaws' put together."

The domestic films have a significant advantage. The Brazilian government now requires Brazilian films be shown 112 days per year in the nation's movie houses.

But Barreto said he thinks 'Dona Flor' has finally brought together box office draw and artistic quality in a Brazilian film, a quality he said has been difficult to achieve in the past.

Barreto said he wants an even more protective barrier to foreign films.

"I'd like to see a law of true protection which prohibits the importation of foreign products when similar national ones are available," he said. "Brazil imports 600 to 700 films per year, but of them about 500 are the trash of international films and the volume of films with cultural and artistic interest is only about 200 films per year. Despite the taxes, these would still be shown because of their high income ability."

To produce, 'Dona Flor' cost a paltry $350,000. The state film company, Embrafilme, advanced Barreto 30 per cent of the production costs.

"The solution that Embrafilme seeks is to have quality but also access to large audiences, so the theater can receive a better product," said Gustavo Dahl, commercial director of Embrafilme. He believes "Dona Flor" and "Xica da Silva" indicate this is now being achieved.

In the past, Embrafilme has tended to finance poor-quality, slightly risqué sex farces called "Pornochanchadas."

Brazilian films enjoyed an artistic flowering in the late 1950s and early 1960s, Barreto said. He called it the "New Cinema" period. Directors like Joaquim Pedro de Andrade, Nelson Pereira dos Santos and Glauber Rocha won prizes at the Mar del Plata, Cannes and Karlovy-Vary festivals.

But many of the award-winning films were abstract or experimental. Brazilians did not rush to see them.

"The pornochanchada people say Embrafilme only finances cultural films, and the cultural people say it only finances pornochanchadas," Dahl said. "But we now have a program of non-stimulation of pornochanchadas."

In addition to financial and technical problems, the Brazilian producers and directors also face government censorship.

Dahl defended it. "As the chief of the censors says, censorship exists in 156 countries and has existed ever since society first organized itself as a state. I think that censorship is used as a scapegoat for a lack of creativity in Brazil."

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ 7 ♠ A9552 ♦ A4 ♦ ♣ 843
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—While you have taken two bids thus far, you have not made any great show of strength. North has gone out of his way to show a good hand with a single heart, so the two hands should fit excellently. A bid of five clubs would show your added values, but partner might fail to bid on fear you have too much in hearts. We should show our interest in slam by bidding four diamonds now, which has the added value of hinting at our shortness in spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 84 ♠ A7 ♦ AKQ1087 ♠ A105

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?

A.—Your hand is strong enough to double and then bid your diamonds over partner's likely response in a black suit, and you would not fault you if you were inclined to leap to three no trump—a contract which should have a play, especially if you don't give the opponents the chance to learn that you are weak in the spade department.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ AK10762 ♦ K8654 ♠ J6

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—We are not one of those hand-hogs who insist on playing the hand no matter what. However, this hand is so unbalanced that we can't believe that it will play better in no trump than in a suit. Therefore, we would complete the description of our holding by bidding four diamonds.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ A ♠ A9 ♦ KQ1052 ♠ Q9853

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three diamonds. What action do you take?

A.—If a double were for penalties, that would be our choice. Unfortunately, partner would read it for takeout, and rightly so. He is bound to respond in a major and we have nowhere to go—we won't take too many tricks at no trump with our hand. The wisest course is to pass and hope the opponents' finger in three diamonds—after all, at this vulnerability undertricks are worth 100 points apiece.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 74 ♠ AK83 ♦ AJ6 ♠ 9762

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—With a balanced 12 points, we are reluctant to force partner to bid at the two-level by making a takeout double. We would pass, but we would not fault you greatly if you did elect to compete by doubling.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ KQ76 ♠ A92 ♦ 8542 ♠ 93

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have enough for only one bid. If you respond one spade, you would have a difficult problem no matter what partner rebids. However, a raise to two hearts leaves you well placed. Should partner act over a simple raise, you have ample values to drive to game.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ AKJ107 ♦ A1062 ♦ K73 ♠ 2

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?

A.—Double. An overall of one spade risks losing the heart suit. You are strong enough to bid spades voluntarily should partner respond to your double with diamonds. If partner shows a major, you should raise.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ J107632 ♠ K952 ♦ 85 ♠ 9

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Dble. ?

What action do you take?

A.—There is no reason not to make your normal bid of one spade. It is sheer optimism to hope that, if you pass, the opponents will end up in a spade contract. It is much more likely that your side might buy the hand at spades, but if not, you have at least stolen the one-level from your opponents by your action, making it that much more difficult for them to enter the auction and judge the hand's potential.

CRUNCH IS ALL HE HEARS — Avery Schreiber braces for someone to yell "Crunch" as he has his picture taken.

Avery Schreiber Keeps Braced For A 'Crunch'

By JAY SHARBUIT
AP Television Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

(AP) — Avery Schreiber, the man with the jolly face and bushy mustache, sat in a corner of the posh chow hall here, braced for all intruders who might dash up and say, "Crunch."

For six years, he's put the bite on a corn chip in those snack food commercials, causing minor earthquakes each time. The pay is excellent, the fame greater than he's ever known.

Alas, he sighed, "Everywhere I go I find a maitre d' coming up with a bag of Doritos and saying, 'Crunch.' Even in some of the gourmet hot-shot spots."

"Truck drivers park in front of me, pull me over, say 'Crunch' and have a big laugh. Meanwhile, traffic backs up. Things like that."

Fortunately, crunching hasn't bitten that much into his performing life. For example, he recently finished a part in the new movie by British comic Marty Feldman, "The Last Remake of Beau Geste."

And this fall, he'll do a serious drama for public TV, "The Ascent of Mt. Fuji."

For laughs, he'll be seen next fall in a new syndicated TV series with the distinguished rock music group, Sha Na Na. He'll play a joke-cracking cab driver called "Herb Gross, the Hack Comic."

Schreiber, 40, is a Chicago native who got started in 1960 as a member of Chicago's famed "Second City" improvisational troupe. It was in said troupe three years later that he met Boston comic Jack Burns.

Which led to creation of the sketch comedy team of Burns and Schreiber, who quickly established names for themselves on late-night talk shows, variety shows and on the concert circuit.

The team split up once in 1970, Schreiber says, after deciding the act had gone as far as it could, but reunited for a school benefit a few years later. That led to an ABC special, then a summer series.

About 2½ years ago, Schreiber added, there was another parting — "Jack wanted to write and produce and I wanted to perform."

"I get my kicks in the theater, in live performances," added the mustachioed comic, who moved here permanently from New York nine years ago with his wife, Shelley, and their two children.

He said he'd recently done a few turns on the stage at Los Angeles' Improvisation comedy club, working solo, "but stand-up comedy is kind of difficult," he wryly admitted.

During the interview, no one approached the man who bites corn chips on TV and said, "Crunch," Schreiber looked quite relieved.

But when he stepped outside in the Beverly Hills sunlight to pose for a quick picture beneath a palm tree, a good-looking blonde driving by in a VW gave him a big smile and said something.

"Crunch," is what she said.

Women already make a majority of the country's credit purchases, according to Associated Credit Bureaus, Inc. Until recently, however, they often made the purchases with cards issued in their husband's names, even on joint accounts.

DJIBOUTI (AP) — The republic of Djibouti, a Massachusetts-size patch of salt and sand at the southern end of the Red Sea, became Africa's 49th independent state early today amid fireworks and 21-gun salutes.

Formerly known as French Somaliland, Djibouti in 1967 was renamed the Territory of Afars and Issas, for its two major tribes. The Afars have ties with Ethiopia while the more numerous Issas, who provide Gouled's major support, are ethnic Somalis.

Leaders of Somalia and Ethiopia were invited to the independence ceremonies but did not come. Some 15 countries, the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and the Arab League are represented.

Gouled said the republic will pursue a neutral foreign policy. He said it will join the Arab League but will allow Israeli ships to use the strait.

BALTIMORE (AP)—A North Carolina public safety director is one of hundreds of former Baltimore city police officers and firefighters who are holding down full-time jobs and collecting disability pensions, according to the Baltimore Sun.

Recipients of the disability pensions receive at least two-thirds of their final salary for the rest of their lives.

In the second of a series on disability pensions, the Sun reported Monday that more than 60 per cent of the approximately 500 special disability pensioners reported working full time on forms returned to the city annually.

The pensions cost the city about $250,000 over a man's lifetime, which is more than double the tab of an ordinary retirement pension.

Most of the jobs are generally in the salary range of $10,000 a year.

Maj. Norman E. Pomrenke, chief of Baltimore's police training school, wrenched his back in March 1969 when a car collided head on with the police car in which he was being chauffeured.
