

Department Of Energy Signed Into Being

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, with flourishing pen and abundant praise, today signed into being a Department of Energy, the first new Cabinet agency in 11 years.

He said it will help him to cushion "the impending crisis of energy shortages."

Born in one of the biggest government shuffles ever, the new energy agency raises the number of Cabinet departments to an even dozen.

As expected, Carter nominated James R. Schlesinger, his top energy adviser, to be the nation's first secretary of energy. In anticipation of the nomination, the Senate energy committee has already begun confirmation hearings on Schlesinger, and his nomination seems assure of Senate approval.

In a ceremony in bright sunshine in the White House Rose Garden, Carter signed legislation establishing the department, which absorbs nearly all of the federal government's energy programs. They number about 50. He called it "extremely complicated" legislation.

The new department will have 20,000 employees and a budget of $10.6 billion. It will be run by James R. Schlesinger, presently the President's chief energy adviser.

Asked whether Schlesinger will become an "energy czar," White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said

Carter aides are avoiding those words.

Schlesinger said he hopes to put the department into operation by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

"An outstanding job," Carter declared Tuesday when Congress approved the new department. He had asked that Congress create it to administer his comprehensive energy program, the details of which are now before the House. The program is surviving relatively intact.

In a major victory for the President, the House refused Wednesday to remove federal price controls on natural gas. Carter praised that as "a courageous action," and Powell told reporters the President was "extremely pleased" with Congress.

The Senate energy committee held a confirmation hearing for Schlesinger even before Carter formally submitted his nomination to head the department. Schlesinger, who headed the Defense Department, the CIA and the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission under past Republican administrations, is expected to be approved overwhelmingly.

Schlesinger's credentials have been applauded even by critics who say legislation creating the department puts too much power in the hands of a single person. Senate leaders plan to put his expected nomination to a vote before the end of the week.

Praising Congress for "giving us the tools" to carry out a national energy policy, Schlesinger told the committee that dismantling existing energy programs and transferring them to the new agency will be a difficult job. But he said the task is already under way.

Carter had asked for the secretary of the new department, the first to be created since the Department of Transportation in 1966, to have broad powers to set energy prices. But Congress gave this power to a new five-member commission. Its members also require confirmation.

As a result of the reorganization, three existing agencies — the Federal Power Commission, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Federal Energy Administration — will be abolished and the Interior Department will lose most of its power over energy matters.

Federal Tax Increase On Gasoline Appears Doomed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to raise the federal gasoline tax by five cents a gallon appears doomed in the House, a victim of opposition from the folks back home, says the chief backer of the tax hike.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., says the provision apparently will fail by about 100 votes when it comes to a vote today in the House. The proposal is being debated as lawmakers plow ahead with debate on the 580-page energy bill.

House leaders hope to have the measure passed and sent to the Senate by the end of the week when Congress is scheduled to begin its month-long summer vacation.

In a major victory for President Carter on Wednesday, the House voted 227-199 to continue federal price controls on natural gas.

But Howard blamed voter opposition for the lack of support for the proposed higher federal tax on gasoline, which Carter sought as a way of forcing conservation efforts.

Carter's energy program taxes "take money out of people's pockets 18 ways, but they only understand the gasoline tax: ding, ding, ding," he said, mimicking a gas pump.

Other tax provisions in Carter's program could add up to another nickel, tacking on 10 cents by 1980. The current tax is four cents.

The bill also would end the income tax deduction for state and local gasoline taxes.

The tax hike is important since the revenue would be earmarked for money-starved federal mass transit programs and badly needed state road and bridge improvements, Howard said.

House leaders and the administration want the gasoline tax hike to prompt the public to reduce consumption.

The nickel tax is all that is left of Carter's original request for authority to impose a tax of up to 50 cents per gallon of gasoline, a request killed in committee earlier this year.

Approval for Carter's natural gas pricing plan came after three Texas congressmen, Reps. Charles Wilson, Bob Eckhardt and Majority Leader Jim Wright, drafted a compromise.

Information 'Shocking' But Asks Immunity

GREENSBORO, N.C. (A) — The head of a Maryland firm that sells electronic spy equipment worldwide says he has information relevant to the trial of Northwestern Bank Chairman Edwin Duncan Jr. "that will shock the living hell out of people."

But Martin L. Kaiser, head of the Cockeysville, Md. firm that bears his name, said he would not testify unless he is granted total immunity from prosecution.

Kaiser said he wanted immunity not because of wrongdoing on his part, but to show his customers that he will not voluntarily give information.

"If I am under immunity, I have to speak, I have to speak honestly," said Kaiser when asked if he would be reluctant to testify against Duncan.

Kaiser and his attorney, Bernard Fensterwald, Washington lawyer who represented Water-gate James McCord, were summoned Tuesday to testify before the grand jury hearing evidence in the Northwestern Bank case.

"I took the 5th, God knows how many times," Kaiser said of his grand jury appearance.

"Without my testimony they have nothing," he said.

$ Day Traffic Cheers

Indications from downtown and Pitt Plaza merchants suggest that today's Dollar Day Sale is attracting heavy traffic, in most instances "better than last year."

Several merchants on the downtown mall said traffic was as heavy or heavier than last year but could give no real indication because of the late opening hour.

One observer said, "Traffic looks real good on the mall," while a number of merchants said their stores were full just after opening.

Slim Short, executive director of the Pitt Plaza Business Council, said traffic looked "pretty good" but "we'd like for it to be more."

Short said early shoppers at the plaza did not appear as numerous as last year because of the 10 a.m. opening hour.

Greenville Police Press Probe Of Pistol Theft

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"We are conducting an in-depth investigation of it," Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning in connection with the theft of a revolver from a locker in the Greenville Police Department's Detective Division last March.

Cannon's comments came after he revealed that the .357 magnum pistol was recovered by members of the Aydeh Police Department the night of July 29.

The chief said Ayden officers stopped a car driven by Janet Lynn Wallace of Route 2, Ayden for a traffic law violation and discovered the .357 caliber pistol and a 44 Special caliber revolver on the dashboard.

Miss Wallace owned the 44 special pistol, Cannon said, while a passenger in the vehicle, Alvin Richard White of Route, Ayden claimed ownership of the .357 revolver.

Ayden officers entered both weapons in the N.C. Police Information Network's link with the National Crime Information Center files and discovered the weapon had been reported stolen from Greenville and notified police officials here.

The chief said the weapon was one of several taken during a break-in at a local sporting goods store. It had been recovered but was being held as evidence in the trial of the case.

He noted that when officers moved to return the pistol to the store in March, they discovered it was missing.

Cannon added that shortly after the pistol was reported stolen, the city paid $137.92 to the firm for the missing weapon.

The chief noted that firm leads in the case had run out until the pistol was recovered Friday, adding that since that time, the pistol has been positively traced to White and one other individual.

"This investigation has been going on ever since the incident occurred," Cannon emphasized, "and a full-scale investigation is underway."

"Any further comments at this time," the chief noted, "would only hamper and delay the investigation."

Commenting on rumors that one or more Greenville policemen might be involved in the case, Cannon said "at the present time, there is nothing to say a policeman is involved."

Syria Visit Is Toughest For Vance Peace Effort

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met President Hafez Assad today, beginning the toughest round of talks so far in his effort to win approval of a new plan for preliminary Middle East peace negotiations.

The talks opened against a backdrop of skeptical comments in Syria's state-controlled press on the proposal — arranged by Vance and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat — that Middle Eastern foreign ministers gather in the United States to prepare for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference.

Press reaction contrasted sharply with the warm reception Syrian newspapers gave Vance on his first visit to Damascus last February.

"It is not a secret that discrepancies are still very wide between the Syrian and American points of view on the basic issues concerning the Middle East conflict," the government newspaper Tishrin said.

"The issues have become very clear and there is no need for all these complications and discussions over marginal issues," said the semiofficial daily Al-Thaura.

The newspaper commentaries did not indicate outright rejection of the proposed foreign ministers meeting, but they did appear to signal Syrian impatience over what the government calls Israeli-initiated stalling tactics.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

YARD SALE ITEMS NEEDED

Mrs. Faye Cayton and her husband, Henry, are holding a yard sale at their home at 1705 Treemont Drive Saturday, Aug. 13, to benefit a young leukemia patient's family which has accumulated staggering medical bills during the child's illness.

Mrs. Cayton said she does not wish to have the family identified publicly, but knows of their financial straits. She said she and her husband decided that the way they could best help would be to multiply their resources through the yard sale effort. They are asking anyone who would like to donate anything saleable for the sale — household items, clothes, plants, food items, whatever. She said anything not sold will be donated to the Salvation Army with the tax writeoff going to the family of the leukemia patient.

From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., chicken pastry dinners will be sold at $2 each. Donations toward the cost of the fixings will also be appreciated, Mrs. Cayton said.

The Caytons' house is located on the corner of Treemont Street and Berkeley Road, the latter of which runs past Picklen Stadium. Items donated may be left there or the Caytons will pick them up. Their phone number after 6 p. m. is 756-2375.

Ponder Creating More Community Colleges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The head of the state Community College Department says officials will consider converting some of North Carolina's technical institutes into community colleges as a means of complying with proposed federal minority enrollment guidelines.

"If one of the expectations is that we increase the number of minorities in college transfer programs, then this is something we're going to have to consider," Ben E. Fountain Jr. said in an interview Wednesday.

He said the change may be necessary in the state's large cities with large black populations.

"In the urban areas in particular, where there are concentrations of minorities and there are technical institutes without a liberal arts program, we're going to have to review the situation to see if a college transfer program is needed to serve those minorities," Fountain said.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has issued guidelines calling for greater minority enrollment in the state's higher education system.

Another official said community colleges must revamp their efforts to recruit blacks.

"We're just going to have to go out to the boondocks or wherever and tap resources that have never been tapped before," said Major M. Boyd, associate vice president for policy and planning in the department.

Minorities make up 24 per cent of enrollment in the community college system, but blacks account for only 16 per cent of enrollment in the college transfer programs.

Clash With 5 Guerrillas

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops clashed with five Arab guerrillas near an Israeli farming settlement today, killing two and seriously wounding another, an army spokesman said.

Israeli radio said the guerrillas had crossed into Israel from Jordan, apparently planning a terrorist attack to coincide with the Middle East peace mission of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

The Israeli soldiers had found footprints and a break in the security fence along the Jordan River near the kibbutz Ashdot Yaacov, north of the Israeli-controlled West Bank region and 3 miles south of the Sea of Galilee, the state radio said.

The soldiers tracked the guerrillas to an olive grove outside the kibbutz and opened fire, it said. Two Arabs were captured and no Israeli casualties were reported.

The military spokesman said the guerrillas were carrying Kalashnikov rifles, 10 hand grenades, torches, a hatchet, food and medicine.

Vance, currently in Syria, is trying to win approval of Arab and Israeli leaders for a new plan to continue preliminary peace negotiations. He is scheduled to arrive in Israel next Tuesday.

After today's fighting, work was immediately halted in the fields of northern farms, and civilian farmers took up sub-machine guns and patrolled their villages in case other terrorists were in the area, the state radio reported.

Campaign Fund Is Fined $27

RALEIGH (AP) — A campaign fund within the Wake County Sheriff's office has been fined $27 for failure to file expenditure reports by a legal deadline.

Sheriff Robert J. Pleasants originally had been charged with failure to file the reports, but Wake County Dist. Atty. Burley Mitchell revised the charges to name the department as a whole.

The fund paid $680 in political contributions between January, 1974, and February of this year. Most of the money was spent on food for county Democratic party conventions.

May Require No Bail For 5 Indicted Telephone Officials

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The five current or former Southern Bell Telephone Co. officials indicted by a grand jury here may not have to post bond, Mecklenburg County Dist. Atty. Peter Gilchrist indicated Wednesday.

"Bond is for the purpose of assuring an appearance in court. We wouldn't have any reason to think that anyone would flee," said Gilchrist, in his first public statement on indictments that were handed down Tuesday.

The indictments charged the company and the five men with conspiring to embezzle and defraud the company.

The indictments were the result of a 2½-year probe by Gilchrist's office and the state attorney general's office, Gilchrist said.

Missionary Hour Sunday

The Usher Board of Wells Chapel Church will sponsor an aspirant's missionary hour Sunday at 3 p.m.

The following ladies will be speaking, Mary Duncan, Olivia Moore, Jessie Harper, Debra Corey, Sally Hill, Ermie Williams and Belise Grice.

The public is invited to attend.

"We're still working on the case," he said, but he declined to say whether more indictments are expected.

Gilchrist said during a news conference that judicial ethics prevented him from discussing specifics of the "long and complicated" investigation which led to a 25-count indictment against the company, Southern Bell president L.E. Rast of Atlanta, former vice president John J. Ryan of Charlotte and three current executives.

The cases will probably go to trial early in 1978, Gilchrist said. No arraignment date had been set.

The indictment, which also named vice presidents Nathaniel Reeves Johnson and James William Travis of Atlanta, and Robert Joe Clontz of Columbia, S.C., charged that 24 employees were illegally directed to divert some $44,872 to political contributions. Ryan, who first admitted the existence of a political slush fund in 1975, was also charged separately with 16 counts of embezzlement.

Rast, in a statement issued Tuesday on behalf of himself and the three current officials, has denied the allegations. Ryan has declined to comment.

The 50-page bill did not specify what led to the charge against the company, and Gilchrist would only say, "A corporation can be charged just as an individual for violations of the law." The company would probably be fined for a conviction, he said.

A year ago, Gilchrist moved to prosecute other Southern Bell officials in the slush fund case. Eleven officials were indicted on charges of falsifying expense vouchers but the charges were later dropped when the company assumed responsibility for their actions.

The five men indicted Tuesday were not among the 11, but six of the 11 were named in the indictment as employees who were directed to channel money into political contributions.

The six are:

—Judson M. Palmer, public relations manager for the company in North Carolina.

—Henry Helms, general sales manager in the state.

—Frank Roberts, a commercial supervisor in the Charlotte office.

—F. Bryan Houck, the company's lobbyist in North Carolina.

—Edward F. Sykes, a division commercial manager in Charlotte.

—George P.W. Harmon, formerly with Southern Bell in Wilmington.

Probe Drowning During Outing

MORGANTON (AP) — Officials at the Western Carolina Center are investigating the drowning death of a 38-year-old mentally retarded woman who perished while on a campout with center residents and staff.

A center nurse said Elizabeth R. Smith was discovered missing at 7 a.m. Her body was recovered from a creek in Optimist Park in Burke County 3½ hours later.

The woman was with 26 other residents and five staff members on the camping trip.

Miss Miller, Mr. Harrison Are Married

BLACK MOUNTAIN — Miss Margaret Rae Miller and James Nathaniel Harrison were united in marriage Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in a private family ceremony at St. James Episcopal Church here. The Rev. J. Hampton Price performed the service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond William Miller of Coral Gables, Fla. She attended East Carolina University and graduated from the University of South Florida. She is presently teaching in Black Mountain.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison of Greenville. He attended Montreat Anderson College and is attending Asheville Technical Institute, Asheville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white satin. The neckline and long sleeves were of net and alencon lace. The dress featured a full flared skirt with alencon lace panels interspersed along the hemline and accenting the bodice.

She wore a circlet of roses and gypsophylla in her hair and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of miniature white roses.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of beige chiffon and the bridegroom's mother was attired in yellow and white dotted voile.

Immediately following the wedding, a reception was given by the parents of the bride on the south lawn of the Grove Park Inn. It was attended by friends and the families of the couple.

A pre-wedding dinner was given by the bridegroom's family the evening before the wedding in the Francis Marion Room at the Grove Park Inn.

The couple will reside in Black Mountain.

Joyful Wakes Are Disturbing To Teen

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend's mother died recently, and I attended her wake. There were many people there. Most of them were telling jokes, drinking and laughing as if they were at a wedding or some kind of celebration. I thought it was disgusting, and it made me both angry and sad. When I asked my mother why people behaved that way at a wake instead of being solemn and serious out of respect for the dead, she said, "That's just the way it is. The only time some people see each other is at weddings or funerals."

I'm only 14, but I think people should save the jokes and laughter for weddings, not funerals. What do you think, Abby? If you print this letter, maybe people would change the shameful way they act at wakes.

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: It's more than mere coincidence that the two words most frequently interchanged by accident (?) are "wedding" and "funeral."

It's not the lack of respect for the deceased, it's the human tendency to make the most of the opportunity to catch up on old friendships and family ties that accounts for the partylike atmosphere at most wakes. Add to that the fact that alcohol tends to break down inhibitions.

Don't be angry or sad, John. Were the deceased able to express his opinion of the apparent merrymaking at his own wake, I'll wager he'd be all for it. (I would.)

DEAR ABBY: I would like to voice a complaint against teenagers in general: A teenager had a transistor radio on a public bus yesterday, and he just about blasted the whole busload of passengers off the bus with rock and roll music. Why don't those teenagers show a little respect for the rights of others?

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Why condemn ALL teenagers? Only one was guilty. The bus driver (an adult) was responsible for the comfort of his passengers. Didn't HE shirk HIS duty?

DEAR ABBY: I am so mad, I have to unload on someone, so here goes.

My husband is self-employed. A year ago he did a job for a customer who lives in a home much more beautiful than anything we could ever afford. After a year, we received a check for this job. The check was misplaced (I thought it was stolen), so I called the lady and asked her to please stop payment on it.

I found the check today and called the lady back to tell her I had found the check and to apologize for any inconvenience I had caused her. She asked me to SEND HER ONE DOLLAR, as this is what it cost to stop payment on that check!

After waiting a year for our money, how could anyone be so miserably cheap?

CLEVELAND

DEAR CLEVELAND: For people who are miserably cheap, it comes naturally.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have written two books, play a ukelele and can drive a car without looking at my feet, but do you know what singular thing impresses women when I am in a group?

The fact that I have survived a two-year old.

In all modesty, I must admit

I am not the only woman in North America to endure the terrible 2s, but I am possibly one of the few who can talk about it without knotting my handkerchief.

One of the reasons I think I was so successful is that I adjusted earlier than most women. My kids were born being two years old. They seemed to have a full set of teeth for biting, an emergency supply of saliva for spitting and little legs that ran the mile under three minutes.

One evening, I said to my husband, "I cannot go on like this. I am exhausted."

He said, "You're just a little tired."

"When you fall asleep on an obscene phone call," I said, "You're exhausted."

"Do you mean to tell me a bald baby a yard high with a smile that could defrost Mount Everest is getting you down?"

"You don't understand," I said. "Between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., he put the cat in the dryer, got his arm caught in a rake, put his training pants in the oven, ate a guppy, pulled over the flour canister, sat on my geraniums, put his orthopedic shoes in the bathtub, dropped a television knob down the register, tore up my card for jury duty and talked 15 minutes without operator assistance to a housewife in New Mexico."

"Have you tried naps?" asked my husband.

"I've tried, but he keeps crawling in my playpen and slobbering. 'Mama, play...'"

Then, my husband remembered an old Burt Lancaster movie in which he was a prisoner of war. In order to maintain his sanity, he disciplined his mind to concentrate on things other than the pain he was enduring.

The next time my two-year-old oiled his tricycle with my $5.50 jar of cream that was to bring everlasting youth to my chins, I smiled and recited the Declaration of Independence.

When I looked up from bridge one night and saw him sitting on the steps with nothing on except a 45 rpm phonograph record slung over one ear, I recited the alphabet backwards.

Come to think of it, I was the only woman on our block who could recite all the vice presidents from John Adams to Alben Barkley.

Making Time In Prison 'Pay'

Over at the Greene County Prison Unit of the N. C. Department of Corrections last week a group of prisoners completed a course in fire fighting techniques.

The inmates were the first group in this state to complete a prison-community program with the prisoners actively participating in public service.

The climatic day came when the inmates passed a demonstration test in fire fighting techniques. Twenty-five inmates received certificates as qualified fire fighters following the test.

Jim Byrum, superintendent of the Greene County unit, said the idea for the training came from a former prisoner. The ex-inmate acknowledged that he deserved the prison term but he didn't want to waste his time while in prison.

With the idea born, Byrum turned to Maury Fire Department, Lenoir Community College and the Fire Service Training Division of the N. C.

Department of Community Colleges.

The course was undertaken voluntarily by the prisoners and Byrum said that those who completed it were dedicated.

The program will be evaluated by the N. C. Department of Corrections and could lead to other programs.

"The best thing that has come out of this is the pride the prisoners have taken in being part of something where they can be of help to the community, and at the same time help themselves when the time comes for their release," Byrum said.

Sounds like a good approach to us. No prison program is going to turn every inmate into a public spirited citizen. If, however, this and other programs help some prisoners find their way into public service it will all be worth it.

Long Wait For A Decent Rain Here

At long last we have seen a decent rainfall in this area this week.

There were heavy rains in Greenville Monday and Tuesday. Despite extensive dry weather damage to crops, farm agents saw it as helpful, possibly adding a couple of million dollars in value to tobacco, soybean and crops.

It was a long wait through an exceptionally dry June, but rain even at this late date will help.

THIS AFTERNOON

Await Focus On Quality

By NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The big rush just to provide enough classroom space and teachers for the rapidly growing population of school-age youngsters in North Carolina appears ended.

That raises a more pressing question: will the public schools be able to put emphasis on the quality of education rather than—as in the past—devoting most attention and resources to meeting growth demands?

A study of available birth-rate figures, census data, population shifts, and geographical development trends suggests to experts at the Institute of Government that, "Increases in the school enrollment experienced during the period 1950-70 are unlikely to be repeated in the foreseeable future."

Instead, the general scenario seems more likely to be one of slight decreases and eventual stabilization of overall enrollments.

More Quality

"This development may allow North Carolina to shift its educational focus increasingly to the quality of education, rather than being diverted by the problems of accommodating to a rapidly increasing number of students."

Harry M. Rosenberg, senior research associate at the Carolina Population Center, headed a team of experts in producing the enrollment study published in the current issue of "Popular Government."

The birth rate in North Carolina peaked at 26.1 per 1,000 in 1957, and has since plummeted to 14.9 per 1,000. All signs point to continued slight decline or stabilization as families trend toward smaller units.

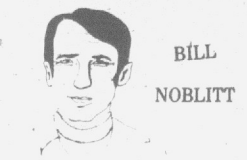

The conclusion, says Rosenberg, is that "we can anticipate reductions in the total size of the state's elementary school population for at least five to 10 years."

Not even the reversal in migration patterns which now produces for this state more in-migration than out-migration offsets that prediction.

As for high schools, they will follow the trend in elementary schools with about a 10-year lag, leading to the prospect that, "it appears unlikely that high school enrollment will in the foreseeable future exceed the most recent levels by very much."

There are now about 1.124 million students in public and private schools in the state; down some seven per cent from 1970 levels.

BILL NOBLITT

Size Differences

Accompanying the population drop, however, is some significant shift in population patterns which Rosenberg finds will "make it difficult to develop administrative units that are neither so small that they restrict educational resources and opportunities, nor so large that they are unwieldy."

State education officials and local school leaders must eventually face some probing questions from the public as increased funds for school programs are sought. Already heard is the public question: why should it cost more to run schools with fewer pupils?

Teachers are already expressing concern that jobs will be eliminated as the decline continues.

State funds are parceled out to local units on the basis of average daily attendance, and the declines will ultimately mean fewer state (and federal) dollars for local school efforts, and some of the specialty programs (counseling, librarian, music, art) will likely face cuts.

But much of this impact can be more than offset by the savings resulting from fewer demands for expensive school construction or for expanded employment of large numbers of teachers.

For local school leaders, the condition raises some important questions which need to be faced now so that policy can develop to shape future directions. As Rosenberg puts it: "We believe that in the future, enrollment trends will permit an increasing emphasis on the quality of education."

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Solar Energy For Carter

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter may not be fixing to put solar collectors on his roof, but so far everything is looking sunny for the use of solar energy at the White House.

His energy adviser, James R. Schlesinger, asked the Energy Research and Development Administration to study the possibility of installing solar energy at the White House.

The study, just being wrapped up, found that use of solar energy there, particularly for heating water, is technologically and architecturally feasible and economically promising.

Ronald Scott, assistant director of the energy agency in charge of its solar heating and cooling division, is putting the finishing touches on his report to Schlesinger. He began studying the feasibility of a solar powered White House about two months ago.

He pulled together a task force that included White House staff members — not Carter advisers but those familiar with the operation of the building itself — and representatives of the General Services Administration, which runs government buildings, and the National Park Service.

They were concerned not only with the technology of solar energy and the energy needs of the White House, but also with the economy and the aesthetics of the solar collectors that are needed to gather the sun's rays.

Use of solar energy at the mansion "is technologically feasible, no question about it," Scott said.

He said it was architecturally feasible and, indeed, "some of the designs are very pleasing."

The economic aspects are promising, he said, but he would not discuss any cost estimates.

Although use of solar energy to provide heat and air conditioning may be just as viable as using it to heat water, it would be more expensive, he said.

Developments in the solar energy field have progressed so far, Scott said, that questions about its technical feasibility will play only a minor role in the decision.

Although the task force found that installation of solar energy units at the White House was feasible, Scott said he had no idea whether Carter would go ahead with it, although the President has encouraged use throughout the country of solar energy where possible.

"I really don't know what the conclusion will be on the part of the White House," he said, although he was encouraged by administration interest.

Problems facing anyone trying to install a solar energy system are magnified at the White House, which is now heated by steam, because by law the equipment needed to collect the sun's ray may not detract from the mansion's appearance.

Designers must also find space in the White House, where most available space is already taken, to place tanks to hold the hot water from the solar collectors.

Emma Gray got a fine sendoff from the White House the other day.

Mrs. Gray, who had cleaned and dusted White House offices for 23 years, retired last week. On her next-to-last day on the job, she put on a fancy dress, came to work three hours before her 9:30 p.m. starting time and shyly asked a staff member if she could have a

Strength For Today

THE MEANING OF SYMPATHY

The word "sympathy" comes from a Greek word which means "to suffer with." Sympathy, therefore, is sharing in suffering.

Some people regard sympathy as an emotion. It is rejoicing with those who rejoice and weeping with those who weep. But this is a superficial interpretation of the word. We can be sorry about a neighbor's trouble, and perhaps even shed tears over it, but we really sympathize only when we take some of the neighbor's suffering on ourselves, carry it, and try to the best of our ability to relieve it.

General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, once said that a woolen coat given to a cold man was worth a lake of tears shed over his misery. In the same way, the person who quietly goes to work to alleviate sorrows and suffering in this world is giving real meaning to the quality of sympathy. The person who only wrings his hands and says how sorry he is might better save his breath.

Harassment Should End

A federal judge last week cooled some of the FBI's flaming zeal against the Scientologists — and high time. Our government's continuing harassment of these oddballs is getting to be a matter of general concern.

What troubles me in this affair is the sheer, crushing power that our government can bring to bear when it chooses. Even if the Scientologists prevail in the end, they will have been put to stunning legal expenses. Their normal operations will have been disrupted for months. And all for what? Is the FBI's purpose prosecution or persecution?

The Church of Scientology is either (a) a religion, or (b) a tax evasion racket, founded by a Nebraskan named L. Ron Hubbard some 30 years ago. Hubbard's disciples, bearing titles of "the rev.," naturally contend that they have formed a bona fide church, precisely as the Catholics, Jews, Methodists and the Three Seed in the Spirit Predestinarian Baptists have created bona fide churches. The FBI, by contrast, appears to take the view that the Scientologists are a bunch of con artists, busily cheating the Treasury out of the taxes that ought to be paid on $100 million in annual revenues.

Other Editors Say: Nessie's Cousin

(Greensboro Daily News)

It's summer, and that means, among other things, all manner of weird sightings of extraterritorial and subaquatic creatures. A Bigfoot hoax has already come and gone in Vancouver. They've sighted UFO's in Chile, among other places. The telescopes and sensors aimed at Loch Ness have been dusted off for another summer's vigil. And out in the South Pacific, a Japanese fishing crew hauled up — and then discarded — a rotting mass of flesh that looked for all the world like a plesiosaur, an aquatic reptile thought to have been extinct for about 65 million years.

This may be no joke. The alleged plesiosaur was snared in the trawler's nets at 1,000 feet. The fishermen hauled the 2-ton carcass to the surface and photographed and measured it. They described it as having been 32 feet long with four flippers and a long neck and tail.

The crew considered bringing the creature back, but thought better of the idea when the animal's ripe stench began to permeate the boat. It was also feared the smelly cargo might spoil their catch.

Too bad. This encounter had some real possibilities. While the discovery of a plesiosaur would be astounding — one scientist called it "possibly the find of the century" — it's not outside the realm of possibility. The plesiosaur, unlike its more vulnerable dinosaur counterparts on land, was a fairly agile creature, well adapted to aquatic life. It could use its paddle-like limbs to swim forwards or backwards or even to rotate. Its sharp teeth and long neck made it possible for the plesiosaur to swim through a school fish of fish, nabbing unsuspecting prey on all sides.

Scientific appetites are further whetted by the discovery, nearly 40 years ago, of a live coelacanth, a primitive fish which was thought to have been extinct for as long as the plesiosaurus. It turned out that the fish wasn't as rare as scientists thought; residents of the Comoro Islands commonly caught and ate them.

Whether plesiosaurus turns out to be as common — assuming it exists at all — is doubtful. Nonetheless other trawlers off the New Zealand coast have been alerted to bring back another one, preferably alive.

The odds are about as long as a plesiosaur's neck. The search for the similar Loch Ness monster, in a much smaller setting, has been going on fruitlessly for years. If Nessie has a long-lost South Seas cousin, it's likely to be a long time before he or she surfaces for another visit.

I am perfectly willing to plop down on the side of the Scientologists. Every organized religion has tenets that some skeptics will regard as mildly bizarre if not downright looney. The Catholic doctrines of bodily ascension and transubstantiation, the Faith Healers' doctrines of immunity against serpents, the fundamentalists' giddy confidence that the world will end at such and such a date in 1981 — all these are manifestations of a holy spirit.

What is so different about the Scientologists and their E-meters? The E-meter, according to the papers, is a simple little device — any bright sophomore in high school could build one — used as an aid in riding oneself of bad or painful recollections. The Roman confessional booth serves somewhat the same purpose. The Scientologists pursue a state of mind known as "clear." In other religions, practitioners seek a state of grace; the Buddhists seek nirvana. So far as the law of tax exemption is concerned, what's the difference?

The Church of Scientology reportedly has 24 churches in the United States, including the "founding church" out on

Doing His Own Thing

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Tex. (AP) — Instead of donning a business suit and battling rush hour traffic, John McMahon walks to his office wearing an Aussie hat, a swimsuit, a sharktooth necklace and a smile.

Twelve years ago, McMahon left his job in a machine shop in New York, moved to this island resort off the south Texas coast and began "doing whatever I feel like doing."

"He was known as 'Mr. Muscle', then 'John, the Baptist' and now he's 'Boomerang Billy,'" said a long-time resident. "I think he's happier as 'Boomerang Billy.'"

"Boomerang Billy" lives up to his name each day as he draws a crowd of tourists to his "office" on the beach and displays his wares and talent.

"I was into weightlifting a few years ago," said McMahon, whose 175 pounds ripples over his 5-7 frame. "I entered a body-building contest about two years ago and finished second. The contest was rigged. I'll never do that again."

But what he does again and again is dazzle beach crowds with his ability with a boomerang.

"I have several world records," he said.

McMahon also claims nine other record feats with his boomerangs, which he makes and sells.

"I've made 108 consecutive one-hand catches without a miss," he began. "And 96 straight behind-the-back catches."

His most impressive show involves several boomerangs. He takes five boomerangs, throws them into the wind one at a time and then catches the whirling objects after they make a wide circle.

"I did that 14 times straight without a miss," he said. "I did it three times with six boomerangs and once with seven."

His "world record" list is completed with this: "I threw four and caught them 17 times, threw three and caught them 25 times, 26 catches of two boomerangs and 388 straight catches of one boomerang."

"I've been on national TV and I've auditioned for the Johnny Carson show twice."

But why would a 34-year-old man play games with boomerangs?

"It's what I want to do," he explained. "Boomerangs are just like the tide, they go out and come back."

Billy said he makes a good living selling his boomerangs for $5 to $10. He also sells shark's jaws and necklaces spiked with sharks teeth.

And, like the businessman in a three-piece suit, Bill charges the sales tax.

Recharging The Old Disputes

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The growing American trade deficit, which totaled $12.6 billion through June, is recharging old disputes and reinflecting old wounds, some of them on an international scale.

Workers in various industries throughout the country are complaining of jobs lost to imports. The value of the dollar has been under pressure. Americans are claiming Germany and Japan are following anti-import economic policies.

The U.S. steel industry is claiming unfair, sometimes subsidized, competition from imports, particularly from Japan. The shoe, television manufacturing, textile and sugar industries — in fact, industry in general — are making similar claims.

The Special Committee for U.S. Exports this week called a news conference to stress again the need for retention of incentive programs for U.S. exporters, particularly what is called the DISC program of tax deferrals.

At the same time, two researchers have issued a paper claiming floating exchange rates, which were supposed to have restored dollar competitiveness, have turned out to be far from a panacea.

The separate issues, difficult in themselves to resolve, are made all the more so by the larger context of which they are a part, that is, the pursuit of free trade and the avoidance of protectionism.

Protectionism, in the form of tariffs on imports and subsidies on exports, is seen by some as required to restore competitive balance. But a preponderance of views, including that of the Carter administration, fears it as a form of economic warfare that could collapse world trade.

There is confusion also about the trade imbalance, which simply means that Americans are spending more abroad than foreigners are spending here.

Some analysts maintain that the competitiveness of American goods is still strong but that the level of oil imports, running at a rate of $44 billion versus $31.8 billion in 1976, tips the scales into imbalance.

But others, such as Merrill Lynch Economics Inc., point to weak export growth — sluggishness in exports of machinery and food, for example — as important contributors to the problem.

Carrying the analysis further — to determine why exports should be weak — involves one immediately in the intricacies of international trade and the myriad pressures and policies that seem to produce chaos where order is sought.

The countries that make up the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, for instance, have slowed their imports of capital goods, in part because of an inability to make use of what already has been imported.

Another cause of reduced world trade, it is claimed, are the slow growth policies of Germany and Japan, which seek to stabilize their internal economies and protect them from the threat of rising inflation.

David Garfield, vice chairman of Ingersoll-Rand and chairman of the Special Committee for U.S. Exports, believes one way to help industry is to reinstate the full tax benefits of DISC — Domestic International Sales Corporations — incentive program.

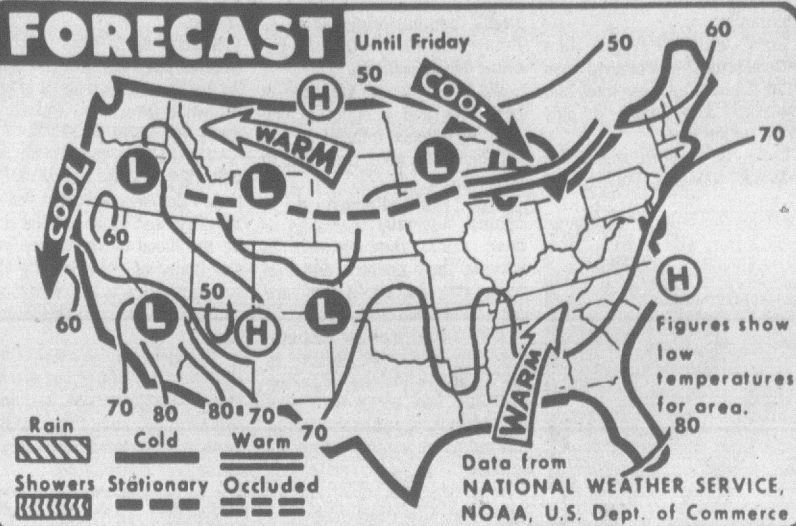

The main benefits of the program, begun in 1971, were taken away last December because, some congressmen said, the benefits represented a windfall for the companies involved.

Now, with the trade deficit mounting — perhaps to $23 billion for the year, compared with $5.9 billion in 1976 and surplus of $11 billion in 1975 — those incentives are needed, Garfield said in an interview.

The paper questioning the effectiveness of dollar devaluation and floating exchange rates in relations to exports was the work of Lawrence Fox, vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and S. Stanley Katz, of the Commerce Department and George Washington University.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is forecast today for the Great Lakes and Pacific coast, but most of the country is expected to have warm weather. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The stationary front that brought much needed rain to North Carolina has begun to dissipate and high pressure built westward from the coast today. The result will be warmer temperatures for the next few days.

Considerable moisture remained in the atmosphere, so with warming temperatures and help from the dissipating front there still was the possibility of showers and thunder-showers.

The best chance of shower activity today existed along the southern coastal area. With high pressure building, the chance of rain shower activity will become less Friday over the state.

High temperatures today were expected to climb well into the 80s and it will be a little warmer Friday with readings getting up around 90. Lows tonight will range from the 60s in the mountains to the low to mid 70s on the coast.

Mrs. Hoyt mentioned the request to the First Lady, who insisted that Mrs. Gray could not leave the White House without a personal sendoff from the President himself.

In no time at all, there was the President of the United States greeting the cleaning lady on her way to retirement and posing with her for a picture.

And that is how Emma Gray, who shyly wondered whether she could have a picture of the President, left the White House.

Tough Stance

On 2nd Offense

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The North Carolina Sheriff's Association adopted a tough stand on sentencing for second offense breaking and entering defendants Wednesday on the last day of the group's annual meeting here.

The sheriffs Wednesday approved a resolution asking for prison sentences of not less than two years without parole or probation.

The officials also approved a resolution criticizing formation of any statewide police force that would supercede the sheriff's office.

Stolen Plants Crowd A Jail

LEXINGTON, S.C. (AP) — The Lexington County jail probably resembles a greenhouse more than a law enforcement center, and Sheriff James R. Metts does not find the situation humorous.

The sheriff's department has collected nearly 500 plants since breaking open a plant theft ring several days ago. Some of the plants have been returned to their rightful owners, but many are still lodged at the sallyport of the county jail.

Metts is growing exasperated with those who think the situation laughable. "It's not funny to me," he said. "Every florist in the county called me last night at my home."

Ever since it was reported that hundreds of stolen plants had been recovered, the sheriff says, his office has been besieged with telephone calls from anxious persons whose plants are missing.

"I've never seen a public response like this," Metts said Wednesday. "Our whole operation has been disrupted."

He said many of the plants are being returned to their owners with the help of three men who have been charged with grand larceny.

They were identified as Richard G. Elliott, 21, Ronnie Knox Holmes, 19, and Eugene L. Bunch, 20, all of Lexington County or nearby Columbia. Elliott and Bunch have been released on $500 bond each. Holmes is still being held.

Metts said the ring had been operating for about 18 months, and many of the plants are gone forever. Other plants were lost when one of the men charged in the thefts dumped them into the Congaree River.

The thieves apparently were selling the plants, said Metts, who added the two-day investigation has not been completed.

Among the plants the department has collected from 15 locations in the county so far are rex begonias, philodendrons, ferns, elephant ears, African violets and a rare 8½-foot cactus reportedly worth more than $300.

S Street here in Washington. Its headquarters are in Los Angeles. The Internal Revenue Service has approved 13 of the 24 for purposes of tax exemption. The other 11 have not necessarily been disapproved; their status is quo.

Records now coming to light indicate that our government has been harassing the Scientologists for at least 20 years. The FBI has infiltrated some of the churches with covert agents; the FBI has cultivated informers and embraced apostates. Meanwhile, says the Department of Justice, the Scientologists have been doing the same things in reverse: They have infiltrated government offices, swiping documents and running their own little Watergate.

It is not easy to discern the truth, but the pattern of harassment is clear. Government agents staged a massive raid in 1963. They staged another one a few weeks ago. At 6 o'clock on the morning of July 8, roughly 134 FBI agents simultaneously hit the Washington, Hollywood and Los Angeles offices. They descended with crowbars, battering rams, sledge hammers and power saws. They invaded living quarters, where married members of the church staff were still in bed. FBI agents brought their own stenographers, even their own typewriters. For 18 to 20 hours, they ransacked church files, including files that deal with the church's pending lawsuits against the government. It was gangbusters all over again.

Overkill? That's how it strikes me. That's how it struck William B. Bryant, chief judge of U.S. District Court here. He ordered all the material seized in the Washington raid impounded. The FBI's warrant, in the court's view, was overly broad; the warrant amounted to a "general warrant," permitting the FBI to seize everything in sight. The government prosecutors are expected to appeal.

Rains Helped Nurseries, Too

By BARBARA MATHEWS
Reflector Staff Writer

The recent rains have helped nurseries as well as farmers in Pitt County.

George Braddy of Coastal Growers Nursery in Greenville said the rains have helped lessen the need for irrigation of plants.

"The rain will be a help and will eliminate our irrigation problems," said Braddy.

"We were having to irrigate twice daily during the drought. The cooler temperatures will help, too."

"We have a good irrigation system, and that helped us keep our plants in good shape. But we were really glad to see the rain."

David Starling of the Farmville-Fountain Nursery said the recent precipitation has brightened the plant outlook.

"I lost quite a few plants recently," said Starling.

"I have had to do a whole lot of irrigation. But everything's looking a whole lot better now."

Rainfall measured 0.16 inches yesterday at the Greenville Utilities Commission's weather station. Yesterday's high temperature was 88 degrees, the low was 71 degrees and the Tar River measured 3.6 feet on the National Weather Service gauge.

Today's 8 a.m. temperature was 73 degrees.

Leaf Mart Prices Continue Improve

Prices continued to improve Wednesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market as local warehouses recorded an overall average of $96.04 per hundred pounds.

The market sold 781,479 pounds yesterday for $750,516 in recording its highest average so far for the 1977 marketing season.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said that Stabilization receipts accounted for only 8.2 per cent of total sales yesterday.

Top practical price paid was $1.30 per pound, he said, with some of the top quality offerings selling for as high as $1.34 per pound. Offerings consisted mostly of primers, lugs and non-descript tobacco, the sales supervisor reported, with some leaf grades beginning to show up on the warehouse floors.

Season average now stands at $90.18 per hundred pounds based on sales of 5,346,342 pounds for $4,821,196.

Advocates Old-Fashioned Patriotism

By RON CLARK
Associated Press Writer
RISING FAWN, Ga. (AP) — Desmond T. Doss, the only living conscientious objector to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, says the United States needs a resurgence of old-fashioned patriotism.

Doss, who served as an Army medic in World War II even though his religious convictions forbade him from carrying weapons, is troubled by high crime rates and drug abuse.

"Our young people — the leaders of tomorrow — if all they know is wild life and drugs, that's the kind of life our country is going to end up in," he said. "But if they realize the cost of our freedom and learn to love and respect our country, we'll have a better country than we have now."

Doss, a Seventh-Day Adventist who devotes most of his time to his church and an Adventist school in this quiet Lookout Mountain community, received the Medal of Honor for his acts as a medic during the battle at Okinawa in April and May, 1945.

The only other conscientious objector so honored was Army Cpl. Thomas W. Bennett of Morgantown, W. Va., who was awarded the medal posthumously in 1970 for service in Vietnam.

Doss' citation credits him with rescuing 75 wounded men from behind Japanese lines and lowering them down a cliff while under fire.

Later, he crawled among the wounded, dodging bullets and shells, administering aid to so many men his own uniform became blood-soaked.

Wounded by a grenade in both legs and a bullet in one arm, he patched himself up and continued to give first aid to other men.

Doss said although it is against Adventist teachings to bear arms, they believe in serving their country and can be in the military if they are not called upon for combat.

"I'm a conscientious cooperator," he said. "We believe in saving a life instead of taking one. We can serve both God and country and honor without having to go against our conscience."

Doss, 58, a native of Lynchburg, Va., was drafted in 1942. He refused to touch weapons, and insisted upon observing the Sabbath during basic training. He was the target of jokes and threats for his convictions before the Army made him a medic. Nearly deaf, Doss said he doesn't keep up with the news as he should, but he approves of what President Carter is doing for world peace.

"I don't think there is anyone who appreciates peace more than I do. Because when you've literally been soaked to the skin by the blood of your men, you see many of them paying the supreme price in order that we can enjoy the freedom we now have."

"Freedom is not free," he said. "It is very expensive. Many lives have been lost, and before it's over, we know there's going to be some more wars."

Widow Wants Benefit Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A young widow says she will fight to receive survivors benefits that the state is denying her due to a technicality in the law.

Margaret Maness, 34, of Holden Beach is trying to receive $5,051 in state retirement funds that her husband, Nelson Maness, contributed to the system before he died of cancer June 4.

Maness, 37, filed for pension payments May 25, but the Law Enforcement Officers Benefit and Retirement fund requires members to live 30 days after filing before survivors can receive benefits.

Mrs. Maness would have received $244 a month for herself and three children aged 11 to 15 if her husband had lived 19 days longer.

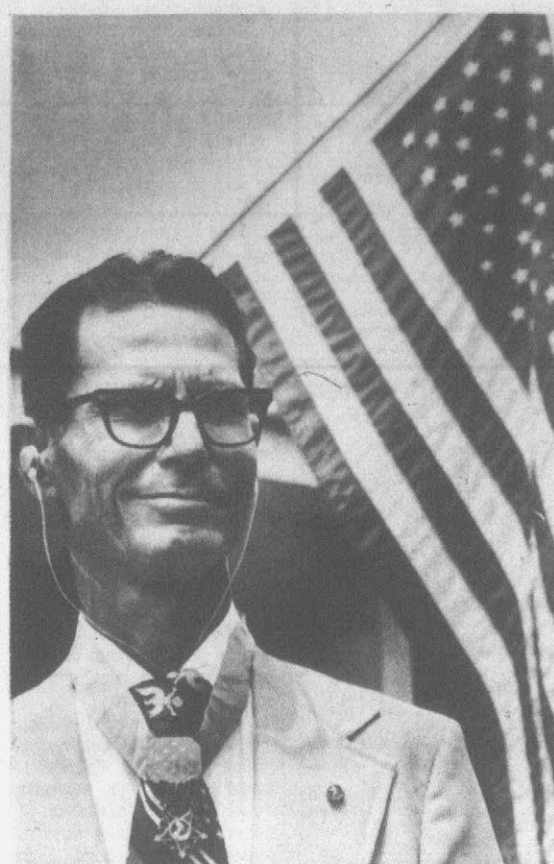

"With the facts that have come to my knowledge, I believe the state is bound legally and morally to help this young widow and her children," said the woman's attorney, Mason

H. Anderson of Shallotte. Anderson said the booklet describing the fund for employees does not mention the 30-day waiting period.

Mrs. Maness and Anderson met Wednesday with an assistant to Howard Lee, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development. Mrs. Maness' husband had been employed by the natural resources agency for 12 years as an inspector in the division of marine fisheries.

No settlement of the matter was reached Wednesday.

Steve L. Meehan, a spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources, said, "We've done what can be done to help her legally, and it does not look favorable up to this point. Maness would have had to live 30 days for her to receive the type of benefits she seeks."

FOR PATRIOTISM — Desmond Doss, the only living conscientious objector to win the Medal of Honor, says the United States needs a resurgence of old-fashioned patriotism. (AP Wirephoto)

Jimmy Green Ponders Bid For Sen. Helms' Seat

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has joined nine other Democrats in considering a run for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms.

In an interview, Green said he is pondering the race because so many supporters have approached him. He would be interested only if he could have some assurance of adequate public support, he said, adding with a smile, "I'm sure there are those in this state who would like me to make the Senate race to get rid of me." A Green supporter said recently that the lieutenant governor has the credentials to take much of the conservative support Helms must have in the Democratic party to win re-election.

Whatever Green decides, there is no shortage of possible candidates to oppose the colorful Republican who was once an editorialist for a Raleigh TV station and now is a national spokesman for the conservative wing of the Republican party.

Helms is hard at work developing his own campaign with fund-raising and organizational drives well under way. About $1 million has been given his campaign, mainly from out-of-state backers and some Democrats have announced they will support him.

Also reporting being approached by backers is Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram.

"A lot of people are talking to us and we're still listening to them. A lot of folks are saying this office has been damaged and that we should think about the office of the Senate," Ingram said.

Speculation on an Ingram candidacy was prompted by the legislature revising state insurance over Ingram's objection that his power to protect the people was being taken.

Charlotte banker Luther Hodges Jr. was the first Democratic candidate to put together a campaign organization. He has hired a staff and opened offices in Charlotte and Raleigh. His initial campaign has been to gain some political savvy and to convince the people his is more than the son of a former governor, an aide said. For qualifications, Hodges has emphasized his banking background and work in the Democratic party.

So far, Hodges has raised more than $60,000. But, he is still trying to explain away the $500 he donated to help former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser repay 1972 campaign debts.

Like Hodges, two state senators are entering their first statewide races but are slower getting started because they were tied down by the General Assembly.

Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, has partially built a campaign organization and is trying to build his statewide recognition. He is a senior partner in the state's largest law firm.

Smith is known as a "liberal," but he says that term is inaccurate, that he is for individual liberties. He supports issues such as ERA and opposes capital punishment.

Sen. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth, is also seeking recognition. He has been travelling the state since the legislature adjourned. Davis is considered a political moderate. During the 1977 legislature, for example, Davis voted for ERA but he opposed a bill to give the attorney general more authority in consumer protection.

It will be September or October before Atty. Gen. Rufus L. Edmisten announces whether he will make the race. He is having a statewide poll conducted and won't decide until studying the results of that.

Edmisten, who served as an aide to former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., was elected to fill the remaining portion of Robert Morgan's term when Morgan went to the Senate in 1974. Edmisten won easy reelection last year.

One of the possible candidates, Raleigh attorney Hugh Cannon, appears on the verge of dropping out. He announced last year that he would seek the seat but has done nothing to organize a campaign.

He said he will announce his intentions in about a month or two.

Fayetteville newspaperman David McKnight, 29, is busy walking across the state to boost his candidacy. He began in April and is to finish in October, planning to cover about 50 of the 100 counties and trek more than 1,000 miles. He characterizes his walk as a chance to meet voters and to learn what their concerns are.

Once the walk is over, McKnight said he will build a campaign organization and begin traditional appearances.

Another possible candidate is Charlotte Mayor John Belk. He said supporters have asked him to run but that he has made no decisions.

Joe Felmet of Winston-Salem has been waging his campaign for months. The cable TV salesman was one of the first to make his intentions known.

Like his unsuccessful bid for congressional nomination in 1974, Felmet is running as a world peace candidate. Felmet spent a year in jail during World War II as a conscientious objector.

WORLD TRAVELLER — This is Owney, the pampered mascot of the Railway Mail Service in the late 1800s. He has been preserved by a taxidermist and resides at the Smithsonian in the hall of Stamps and Mails. Owney, a mongrel, traveled all over the United States on mail trains and around the world by steamship. He was first befriended by employees at the post office in Albany, N.Y. in 1888. He soon began riding mail trains and accumulated 1,017 tags, tokens and medals from the various cities and towns he visited. (AP Wirephoto)

Reason To Hope Sunken Ironclad Is Preserved

HAMILTON, N.C. (AP) — Preliminary reports show mud has preserved the Civil War ironclad Monitor, which has survived 114 years under water, scientists say.

Gordon P. Watts Jr., underwater archeologist for the North Carolina Division of Archives and History, said much of the vessel's exposed wood and metal appears intact, and that submerged portions may be protected by burial in the mud.

Divers photographed the Civil War vessel in a three-week expedition which ended this week.

The ship lies upside down 16 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

A kerosene lantern recovered near the wreck Tuesday is believed to have been used as a distress signal when the ship sank while being towed to shore, Watts said.

The encrusted, brass lantern and a piece of deck plating were brought here where state archives officials have set up temporary facilities. The artifacts will be transferred to the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington for safekeeping until they can be analyzed.

Half of the armor belt around the vessel appears embedded in mud, Watts said.

"If that's the case, the preservation of what we haven't seen is likely to be considerably better than the portion of the armor belt and plate we have been able to examine," he said.

The recovered plate was heavily eroded from its original 3-by-4-foot size.

Scientists will test the plate to determine how well the wreck could support itself in a recovery attempt.

BARN LOST TO FLAMES — Eastern Pines firemen extinguish hot spots yesterday after flames destroyed a barn and shelter owned by Mayhew Cannon of East Tenth St. extension. According to officials, the barn was destroyed when firemen arrived. Also destroyed in 1973, show some drug testing was carried on in "safehouses" in San Francisco and New York City without the knowledge of the subjects. The safehouses were dwellings under CIA control where agents could store drugs or administer them to test subjects with little fear of discovery. He said the records do not disclose the names of the individuals given drugs without their knowledge, but efforts will be made to notify them and "determine how to go about fulfilling the government's responsibility in the matter."

CIA Director Avers Return To Drug Research Not Likely

By HARRISON HUMPHRIES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner says it's extremely unlikely the spy agency will resume testing mind-altering drugs on unsuspecting humans, partly because there's a chance of someone "blowing the whistle."

Turner told two congressional committees on Wednesday the CIA is watched more closely than it was in the past. "I can envision even a CIA employee writing to the Intelligence Oversight Board and blowing the whistle" if secret drug test were resumed, he said.

Also, Turner said, there is a greater awareness of "human rights" issues today than there was in the 1950s, when the agency was conducting secret drug experiments.

"This kind of activity could not happen today without it coming to the attention of authorities to stop it," he said.

Appearing before Senate panels on intelligence and health, Turner declared, "I assure you that the CIA is in no way engaged in either witting or unwitting testing of drugs today."

Discussing a past experiment, the CIA director said Project MK-ULTRA was launched 25 years ago out of "concern for our being taken advantage of by other powers using drugs against our personnel."

Before it was phased out in 1964, Turner said the experiment changed from a defensive to an offensive project and ultimately involved at least 185 non-government researchers and 80 institutions, including 44 colleges, 15 research foundations or chemical companies, 12 hospitals and three prisons.

Turner appeared before the two committees voluntarily, several days after informing Congress by letter that documents relating to the drug tests had been found in CIA files.

He testified that the documents, believed to have been

Terrorists Claim 'Credit' For Death In Bombing

By MICHAEL PRECKER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A Puerto Rican independence group whose bombings have frustrated authorities for three years has struck again, this time killing a man and forcing thousands to flee Manhattan skyscrapers.

The pandemonium that ensued — with police and fire vehicles screaming to buildings where additional bomb threats sent almost 100,000 persons streaming into rain-soaked streets — knotted a city already shaken by the attacks of a killer known as "Son of Sam."

Two bombs planted by a cabal that calls itself the FALN exploded an hour apart in two midtown office buildings Wednesday.

The first blast, at 9:37 a.m. in the U.S. Defense Department office in the Christian Science building at 43rd Street and Madison Avenue, injured no one.

The second explosion, at 10:44 a.m. in the Mobil Oil Corp. building at 42nd Street near Grand Central Station, killed 26-year-old Charles Steinberg of Manhattan.

Seven persons were injured, two of them seriously.

Almost 200 bomb threats telephoned to various locations — many of them hoaxes, police said — caused massive traffic jams as about a dozen skyscrapers were evacuated.

Estimates on the economic losses caused by interruptions of services throughout the city ran as high as $5 million. The Long Island Rail Road started rush-hour service in mid-afternoon for home-bound workers forced from their offices.

Most of the bomb threat calls did not lead to evacuations, but in two phone calls identifying themselves to WABC-TV, the FALN warned of four other buildings where bombs purportedly were set.

Among the buildings emptied were the twin 110-story towers of the World Trade Center, from which 35,000 people fled after a bomb threat, and seven floors of the Empire State Building.

Since Aug. 31, 1974, the FALN — initials for Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional (Armed Forces of National Liberation) — has claimed responsibility for about 60 bombings in New York, Newark, N.J., Chicago and Washington.

An FALN note left in Central Park after the blasts Wednesday was similar to previous communiques. It demanded independence from the United States for the island commonwealth, an end to alleged oppression of Puerto Ricans and other minorities and the release of five Puerto Rican terrorists, jailed some 20 years ago for trying to kill five U.S. congressmen and then-President Harry Truman.

The letter also sounded a more ominous note: "Since the colonial case of Puerto Rico is to be discussed soon in the United Nations, we seize this opportunity to demonstrate to the world that the Puerto Rican independence movement is willing to sacrifice (sic) everything in order to achieve the independence of Puerto Rico."

The message referred to a Cuban resolution that declared Puerto Rico a colony of the United States. The resolution is to be discussed Aug. 15 by the United Nations decolonization subcommittee.

Bank Robbed By Patient

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Police charged an escapee from a state mental institution here with common law robbery Wednesday shortly after the main office of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. was robbed of an undisclosed amount of money.

Goldsboro Police Chief C.M. Gilstrap said Billy Ray Reed, 32, of Goldsboro escaped from Cherry Hospital shortly before the 1:13 p.m. robbery. Reed was unarmed and offered no resistance when police apprehended him, Gilstrap said.

"The guy walked in and said, 'This is a holdup. Give me your money,'" Gilstrap said. "The teller gave him the money and he ran out the door. The manager followed him outside and pointed him out to a police officer. He was arrested a minute or two later."

The money was recovered, he said.

Magistrate R.P. Yelverton charged Reed with the felony of common law robbery, placed him under a $1,000 bond and ordered him held in the Wayne County Jail.

"I understand they're going to send him to Dix," Yelverton said, referring to Dorothea Dix Hospital, a state mental institution in Raleigh.

J. Field Montgomery, director of Cherry Hospital, refused to say how Reed managed to leave the hospital grounds. "I can't tell you anything other than he's an unauthorized absence," Montgomery said in a telephone interview.

Dr. James W. Osberg, director of mental health programs for the Department of Human Resources, said he had been advised by the attorney general's office not to disclose how Reed escaped.

"Our advice to us is we should maintain the confidentiality of the patient's record and his right to a fair trial," Osberg said.

Timber Faller Says Good Ax Deserves Gentle Treatment

By JIM BOYD
Eugene Register-Guard
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — "When you've got a good ax, you treat it gently, like you would your woman," said Bob Waibel, holding his five-pound Australian racing ax.

Waibel, 42, is a 6-foot-1 timber faller from Sweet Home, Ore., who carries the nickname "Rhinstone Logger" because of the jeweled red suspenders he wears in lumberjack competition. He's one of the top three competitive axmen in the country.

Like the "rhinstone cowboys" who ride the rodeo circuit, he takes off from his job to compete for prize money around the United States. He's got a list of 70 timber carnivals he could attend this year.

"I got to 23 last year and that's just about as good as a guy can do," he said, estimating his winnings at "way over $2,000."

He's been chosen for the U.S. chopping team each year there has been an international competition. He went to Australia with the U.S. team in 1970 and 1974 and plans to return there next March. He was in Spain last year.

"Spain has endurance choppers," he said. "They don't believe in chopping less than four (posts) at a time, one right after another. We went over there and cut eight."

Why does Waibel spend seven hours a day cutting timber with a chainsaw and then devote his weekends to chopping and other logging sports?

"I enjoy these trips and I like to travel," he said. "And there's a little ham in almost everybody and it's a good feeling to win."

So he's adopted a logging lifestyle that permits him to work and compete. "I couldn't do what I'm doing if I worked in a sawmill or ran a machine, a tower or a loading machine or a truck, because I couldn't drop that and go," he said. "But as a timber cutter, I can work ahead and then take a few days off."

Waibel started competing in the ax-throwing event at the 1955 Albany (Ore.) Timber Carnival. He went into chopping because the prize money offered would permit travel.

"The first time I chopped a 14-inch log at Albany, I was five minutes and I got blisters on my hands and they busted and I wouldn't quit," he said.

Now he cuts through a log in 20-25 seconds. Maybe less.

Like many loggers, Waibel has had his share of accidents.

"I've been packed out of the woods three times," said Waibel, whose father was killed in a woods accident.

"My mother says, 'When are you going to give up that foolishness. You're too old for that.'"

"But I've seen Aussie choppers that are better than us that are just white-headed, with white hair on their arms."

"The time you quit is when you can't win anymore," he said.

Firemen Plan October Parade

DUDLEY — The Dudley Volunteer Fire Department in Wayne County will sponsor its second annual Fire Prevention Week Parade Saturday, October 15, at 11 a.m.

The parade will feature over 150 units, including the Dunn Clowns, the Shriners Motorcycle Unit, state, county and federal officials, beauty queens, high school and military bands and fire, rescue and emergency units.

A number of related events have been scheduled.

Dudley is located on U.S. highway 117, eight miles south of Goldsboro.

Convicted In Tax Trial

TRENTON — Paul S. Braxton of Winterville, was found guilty in U.S. Eastern District Court here Monday of attempted income tax evasion for the year 1970.

Federal Judge John Larkins sentenced Braxton, a Winterville-area farmer, to one year in prison, but suspended the active sentence on condition he pay a $10,000 fine and placed him on probation for five years.

On July 15, Braxton was convicted in U.S. Eastern District Court in New Bern for attempted tax evasion for 1971 and 1972 and given a two-year active sentence and fined $20,000. During last month's trial, Braxton testified that his farming operation volume exceeded $900,000 per year.

A person convicted of a criminal tax offense, in addition to whatever sentence is imposed by the court, is also required to pay the taxes determined to be due, together with any interest and civil penalties which may be assessed.

In Braxton's case, for 1971 and 1972, he faces a $127,000 bill for taxes, interest and civil fraud penalty, in addition to the jail term and fine imposed by the court.

Driest Since '30

Last month was the driest July since 1930, according to Ed Ring, WITN-TV staff meteorologist.

Rainfall totaled only 0.88 inches, almost five and a half inches below normal. The highest temperature of the month occurred on July 9, when the thermometer reached 104 degrees.

The temperature topped the 100-degree mark on six days.

Alston Gets Track Award

Calvin Alston, who capped his outstanding sophomore track season at East Carolina University by attaining all-America honors in the 200-meter dash, was named last week as the Southern Conference Track Athlete of the Year by a vote of the league coaches. The honor covers the indoor and outdoor seasons, along with national competition.

The 5-7 speedster from Henderson finished fifth in the 200 meters at the NCAA Championships in Champaign, Ill. in June to gain his all-America status. His time of .20.71 (automatic timing) was a personal best.

Alston claimed four conference titles in the Pirates' final season in the Southern, one indoor and three outdoor titles. He took the 400 indoors with a time of 50.6, while winning the 100 meters (10.5), 200 meters (20.8) and leading off in the winning mile relay (3:12.6). All times were conference records. Alston ran a 47.0 led on the mile relay effort.

Alston holds or shares seven school records to date. His 50.0 clocking in the 440 at the Delaware Invitational indoors was a record, as well as his 46.9 440 outdoors at the Pitt Invitational.

In the relays, Alston was in on the 3:16.7 mark run at Delaware, as well as outdoor records in the 400-meter relay (39.99), 880-yard relay (1:24.09), mile relay (3:10.3) and 1,600-meter relay (3:10.2).

"Calvin Alston is a class individual," said assistant track coach Curtis Frye. "He gives his best effort at each meet and keeps coming back with better efforts at the next."

Alston beat three Olympians (Harvey Glance, Johnny Jones and Calvin Dill) at the nationals to gain the fifth place finish.

Success Came Fast To Lietzke

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The summer months have been a return to reality for Bruce Lietzke.

"I was confident that I could play, that eventually I would succeed in pro golf," the articulate Lietzke said before teeing off today in the first round of the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open Golf Tournament.

"But I certainly didn't expect it to happen so soon. I didn't expect all those things that happened early in the year. I expected to make a more gradual climb."

"Of course, it was welcome. I enjoyed it. Sometimes it almost seems as if it wasn't real, like it was a dream."

"But now, I guess, I'm paying the price for it. I hope I'm wrong, but it seems I used up all my good play, all my luck early in the season."

"I've kind of come back to reality now."

Lietzke, 26, a second-year man, was the sensation of the early season. He won twice and finished second twice. His cross-handed putting style put him on top of the money-winning list for a while, but he's since drifted back to third behind Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus, both absent in this event that is being played immediately before the PGA national championship.

"With the start I had, it was difficult not to relax, figure I'd already done more for the year than I'd expected to do," Lietzke said. "It's difficult to come back from an attitude like that. I think that was part of my problem."

'BIB' THE MICHELIN MAN

IN AN EMOTIONAL ceremony last Saturday, five of football's greatest players were inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, a group that ranks with the best ever enshrined in the Hall.

Three of the players were products of the late Vince Lombardi, generally regarded as the greatest professional football coach of all time. They are Frank Gifford, who played under Lombardi with the New York Giants, and Bart Starr and Forrest Gregg, who both played for the Green Bay Packers in the Lombardi years.

The other two were running back Gayle Sayers and lineman Bill Willis. Sayers played for the Chicago Bears, while Willis was a Cleveland Brown.

Although not as widely remembered as Jackie Robinson and the Brooklyn Dodgers, Willis broke the professional football color barrier when he joined the Browns in the All-American League in 1946. He was one of two blacks to play in the league that year.

Willis was all-league for seven of his eight seasons in professional football, first in the All-American League and later in the National Football League. He is also credited with the launching of today's standard 4-3 defense in the pros.

GA. LE SAYERS, the only other black among this year's group, is the youngest player ever to be inducted. He is 34.

Although his five-year career with the Bears was cut short by a nagging knee injury, he was one of the game's finest rushers. He ran for nearly 5,000 yards in those five seasons, scored 22 touchdowns his rookie year and tied an NFL record with six touchdowns against San Francisco in 1965.

Forrest Gregg was once said by Lombardi to be "the finest player I ever coached," probably the greatest honor he could have received. He played offensive line for the Packers for 15 years at both guard and tackle before ending his career in Dallas.

Gregg, who is now the coach of the Cleveland Browns, once played in 188 consecutive games. He was named NFL coach of the year by The Associated Press last season.

Starr quarterbacked the Packers to five NFL titles and victories in the first two Superbowls during the 1960's. He was one of the best quarterbacks ever and has returned to football as the coach and general manager of the Packers.

Gifford has the distinction of being named to the Pro Bowl at three separate positions — running back, defensive back and flanker.

He played both ways for several years at New York and suffered a near-fatal concussion which sidelined him for the 1961 season. He returned as a flanker, however, and is now a well-known broadcaster.

The Hall of Fame has seldom inducted a more distinguished group.

Area Players Star In Games

Greenville's area athletes showed up well in recent all-star games involving last season's high school seniors.

In the Boys Home football game, held Saturday before last in Ficklen Stadium, the standouts were Ted Dunn of Farmville Central and Jeffrey Warren of Greene Central.

Dunn, named the game's outstanding back, was a starter at cornerback for the winning South squad and from that position he intercepted a North fumble and returned it 78 yards for a touchdown. He also handled all of the kicking duties for the South, averaging over 35 yards on punts, kicking two extra points and putting most of his kickoffs inside the 10 yardline; two of them were taken at the North two yardline.

Warren was a linebacker for the South and was one of the game's most enthusiastic players. He received an award during the week of practice for having the best attitude and showing the most sportsmanship. He was credited with a number of tackles during the game and was named the contest's outstanding lineman.

FOR HIS outstanding play, Warren, who had planned to attend Elon College, was given a grant-in-aid by East Carolina football coach Pat Dye as reported in today's sports pages.

North Pitt's Donnie Perkins, headed to N. C. State on a basketball scholarship, was one of the top performers in the East-West All-Star basketball game in Greensboro last week.

Perkins was the top scorer in the contest with 20 points, hitting eight of 14 shots from the field and 4-4 from the foul line. He also pulled down four rebounds and dealt three assists.

Ricky Butler of Rose High was the starting offensive center for the East in the East-West All-Star football game last Thursday. In addition, Sam Short of Williamston started for the East at linebacker and recovered a West fumble.

Anderson Awed By Foster's Blast

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sparky Anderson has been in baseball 25 years and he's seen his share of home runs, but George Foster still makes him wonder.

"I've never seen a ball hit like that, never," said Anderson, a touch of awe in his voice, the sight of Foster's eighth-inning blast fresh in his mind following the Cincinnati Reds' 5-3, 10-inning victory over the Chicago Cubs Wednesday night.

"That's my all-time all-time," added Anderson, who estimated at 550 feet the shot hit off Cubs reliever Willie Hernandez.

The ball jumped off Foster's bat like a shot and headed down the left-field line on a steady rise. It was still rising when it landed to the right of the foul line, in the third row of the third tier at Riverfront Stadium — the red seats, which have been reached only five times in the eight years the stadium has been in use.

"It was a pretty sight," said teammate Pete Rose.

In other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 8-1, the Houston Astros blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0, the New York Mets edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 14 innings, the Montreal Expos beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Foster's home run was his 36th of the season and gave him 105 runs batted in — tops in the majors in both categories. It tied the score at 3-3, then Dan Driessen cracked a two-run homer in the 10th to win it.

Afterwards, despite his game-winning homer, Driessen could only talk of Foster's blast.

"He's got ungodly power," said Driessen. "I'm trying to find out what he eats for breakfast so I can try some. He makes it look so easy, he makes the rest of us look bad. I'll take mine, but mine was just nothing compared to the one he hit."

Foster provided some extra incentive for himself during batting practice before Wednesday's game when he stroked a practice pitch all the way to the red seats.

"You do it in batting practice," Foster said, "and you think to yourself, 'I want to do it in a game so everybody can see it.'"

The game started out as a pitching duel between the Cubs' Rick Reuschel, going for his 16th victory, and Reds rookie Paul Moskau. The only run of the first six innings was Swisher's homer in the fifth.

Phillies 8, Padres 1
Steve Carlton, 15-6, stopped San Diego on six hits, striking out 12 and walking just three. He also drove in three runs with three singles as the Phils moved within one game of first-place Chicago in the National League East.

Astros 3, Pirates 0
Joe Niekro, 7-3, scattered nine hits for his second consecutive shutout and third straight complete game for the Astros. Jose Cruz drove in two runs with a fourth-inning double and Bob Watson knocked in a run with a single.

Mets 4, Dodgers 3
Lee Mazzilli's pinch single in the 14th gave the Mets their victory over the Dodgers in a marathon which twice was delayed by rain for a total of nearly two hours and took over 5½ hours in all. The Mets sent it into extra innings with two runs after two were out in the bottom of the ninth.

Expos 4, Giants 2
Jackie Brown evened his record at 8-8 by stopping the Giants on seven hits, with ninth-inning relief from Don Stanhouse. Ellis Valentine's 18th home run of the season and RBI singles by Andre Dawson and Dave Cash paced Montreal's attack.

Cardinals 5, Braves 1
Eric Rasmussen pitched a four-hitter to five St. Louis its 11th victory in the last 13 games and the season series against Atlanta 11-1. Jerry Mumphrey led the Cards' offense with four hits, scoring three runs and driving in another.

Jets Trade Newsome To Bills Wednesday

By The Associated Press

When Billy Newsome came to the Jets from New Orleans, he thought he had found a home in New York. But the Jets neglected to tell him that Buffalo is also located in the Empire State.

The Jets, who acquired Newsome from the Saints for a first-round draft pick in 1975, traded the 6-foot-5 defensive end to the Buffalo Bills Wednesday for an undisclosed future National Football League draft pick.

Newsome, originally drafted by Baltimore in 1970 and played on the Colts' Super Bowl championship team the following year, missed 12 games last season because of an injured knee.

While the Bills may be happy over the acquisition of Newsome, worries surfaced over the condition of O.J. Simpson.

The star running back missed practice to keep an appointment with an eye specialist. The former University of Southern Cal star has experienced "occasional blurred vision in his left eye" since being hit above the eye in a game last season.

The physician who examined Simpson refused to comment on the halfback's condition until he evaluates tests.

Oakland Raider safety George Atkinson, who recently lost a libel suit against Pittsburgh Steelers Coach Chuck Noll, said that New England Patriot tight end Russ Francis "has a problem of mouthing off."

Francis, whose nose was broken by Atkinson in a playoff game last winter, stated in a recently-published interview that "I don't believe in revenge, but I do believe in getting even. I won't get him the way he got me — with a cheap shot — I'll get him the right way, and when I do, I'm going to blast him."

Francis may have to wait before he takes on Atkinson but he'll get in some practice when New England meets the New York Giants in East Rutherford, N.J., Friday night as the first full week of exhibition football gets under way. Fourteen games are scheduled this weekend, highlighted by a contest between the Minnesota Vikings and the Rams Saturday in Los Angeles. The Vikings beat Los Angeles 24-13 for the National Football Conference championship last season.

In training camp developments, the Dallas Cowboys announced that running back Charles Young will undergo knee surgery and probably will miss the entire season; the Cleveland Browns, who finished two-day workouts, signed veteran offensive tackle Barry Darrow to a multi-year contract; the Saints cut rookie wide receiver David Zumbach and the Kansas City Chiefs released seven players including Rick Burleson of Texas, their sixth-round draft choice.

Allison's Car Flunks

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bobby Allison's Matador failed inspection Wednesday, one day before qualifying runs began for Sunday's Talladega 500 stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

NASCAR official Bill Gazaway disallowed Allison's American Motors car because of a new front grille the factory has built and is trying to market.

Allison's crew in Hueytown, Ala., went to work to put the old grille back on. Allison said he'd be present for the qualifying runs.

The popular driver said,

"AMC changed the grille on the Barcelona, and it has finally hit the street. I was hoping NASCAR would approve it, but they didn't."

He said he would continue to seek approval of the grille, which lessens wind resistance. Gazaway cited a NASCAR rule that forbids model changes after April 15, 1976.

Tennis Winner

Fred Matney of Greenville won four matches last weekend to become the 14-and-under champion of the New Bern Jaycee Junior Open Tennis Tournament.

ECU Signs Warren

East Carolina University head football coach Pat Dye recently announced the signing of Jeffrey Warren of Snow Hill to a football grant-in-aid.

Warren was a linebacker and fullback at Greene Central High School and was selected to play in the North-South Boys Home All-Star Game in Ficklen Stadium, where his play resulted in the grant.

"We knew all along that Jeffrey was a fine player," said Dye. "But his injuries during his senior year prevented our being able to completely evaluate his play. With his performance in the all-star game, we knew we wanted him."

Warren, playing linebacker, was named the game's outstanding lineman by the media covering the contest.

He was coached by Stewart Smith at Greene Central.

Snake Doctor Displays Good Cageside Manner

By PAUL MITCHELL
St. Augustine Record
ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — There are still some uncrowded, challenging professions in this world.

Snake doctoring is one.

Dr. Jack Shuler, a young St. Augustine veterinarian, moves warily but determinedly into this uncluttered field in conjunction with his more routine services to the animal kingdom.

One of his snaky ungrateful patients is a deadly, nasty-tempered Eastern diamondback rattler with a sore mouth. Dr. Shuler makes house calls to treat the ailing rattler and other reptiles at the St. Augustine Alligator Farm on Anastasia Island.

First moves include "getting a handle" on the patient, Shuler says. His assistant — and snake doctors must trust their assistants fully — is Ross Allen, world-famous reptile expert and exhibitor. Allen performed for 47 years at Silver Springs and now does his thing daily before wide-eyed spectators at the Alligator Farm.

"I've been handling snakes — the non-poisonous ones — since I was a child and I guess it grows on me," Shuler said.

Here's how a day goes in a snake doctor's life:

Allen brings out his patient, the ailing rattler, in a metal tool chest.

The lid is raised and Allen, unbelievably nearing age 70, zips his hand in and brings out the big rattler. He maintains a firm grip behind the snake's spear-shaped head. Allen's left hand grasps the snake's coiling body as he lifts him clear of the tool box.

Shuler moves in quickly with a cotton swab saturated with a red mixture containing iodine. The rattler responds to the pressure of Allen's fingers on a strategic spot on its neck by opening its mouth fully, exposing the curved white fangs capable of squirting a deadly hemotoxic poison that attacks the blood components and muscles of the snake's victims.

Shuler slowly maneuvers the swab around the fangs and paints the deep recesses of the rattler's inflamed throat.

Carefully, and with the ease of many years spent handling deadly snakes, Allen lowers the snake to a table. The snake doctor moves in closer and dabs medicine on an infected area on top of the rattler's head.

Treatment over, Shuler steps back and Allen lifts the patient and puts him slowly back into the metal box. His final movement — dropping the snake's forward section and quickly slamming the lid — takes a split second.

"There's not a lot written down about the diseases and treatment of snakes," Shuler explained. He hopes to change this by working extensively with sick reptiles — and health 9, too — and by publishing his findings in American and international veterinary journals.

"Snakes have problems, too," Shuler added. "They can get pneumonia and are bothered by parasites."

What was wrong with the rattler he'd just swabbed?

"I treated him for a bacterial infection, primarily of the fang sheath and venom sacs," Shuler replied.

"During capture and early handling, the snake had a rough time adjusting and he struck so aggressively at his cage that he injured his mouth. This caused swelling, and the parasitic bacteria present in the snake's mouth moved in and caused serious infection of a type that is usually fatal if not treated."

Pneumonia is more prevalent among snakes in captivity than those in the wild, Shuler said.

Living with other snakes and reptiles, some snakes succumb to ailments that man has done little research on, he added.

Cancer and tumors also plague the reptile world, Shuler noted.

Shuler became aware of the death of basic research on reptiles before he graduated in 1974 from the School of Veterinary Medicine of Auburn, Ala., University.

Shuler now has many of the world's available books and papers on treating reptiles on his desk in his clinic on U.S. Highway 1 South.

"My present goal is to build experience and read what is available on reptiles and amphibians, including gators, snakes, turtles and frogs," he said.

"We also hope to work out normal values for these animals and to recognize their diseases in the wild and captive states, and to learn to control environmental factors bearing on their good health. This includes housing and nutrition."

Locator Of Missing Heirs Loves His Successes

By SERGIO LALLI
Associated Press Writer
WILLOUGHBY, Ohio (AP) — When Lawrence E. Morrow tells people he has located money that they didn't know was theirs, reactions range from exultation to suspicion that he's a con man.

"But I love this work," Morrow says, shrugging off the innuendos of chicanery that attend his job. "Sure, hopefully I like to make a good buck. But I also like to find people. I like the investigation and the responses. And I make better money than working in a factory."

Morrow is a "finder," or heir locator. From scouring of state records or from contacts with lawyers, he identifies persons who have unclaimed assets in estates or funds or insurance policies. These assets are held by banks or insurance companies but must be claimed through the state commerce department. The department earlier this year issued the names of about 240,000 persons who, unknown to them, own $18.5 million in assets and accrued interest.

Despite public advertisements, most people never learn about their possible riches. I. Charles Rhoads, deputy director of the commerce department, said that during the last half of 1976 the department paid back about $300,000.

Morrow, who runs Fingers Diversified Inc. here, tries to find persons who are owed $1,000 or more. Morrow says he informs the prospective claimant how much money he can expect to recover and proposes a contract calling for a fee of 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the money recovered.

Some of Morrow's assignments are serendipitous. "I was in the library in Cincinnati once looking at city directories. I met a multimillionaire who was trying to locate heirs to some property in Kentucky which he wanted to buy because he wanted the coal rights to it."

"Well, I got this job which involved tracing heirs to property rights which were deeded in 1877. My investigation took me to southern Ohio, to northern Ohio, to Canada and to Chicago. There I found a relative of the man I was looking for. She was 92 years old and living in a nursing home. She remembered that part of the family had moved to El Paso. I called the library in El Paso and there I found some wills. The case is now in court."

Morrow, 32, adds that he spends most of his time on research and travel.

"I started doing this work two years ago. At that time I had a restaurant and I read an article about a finder in New York. The line of work intrigued me," he recalls.

So Morrow sold his restaurant and set up shop. There's no certification of training for the work, and Morrow says he had to learn everything as he went along. In 1975 when he started, he says he had to tend bar at night in order to make ends meet. Last year, he continues, his business began to pay off; and in two years he says he has returned half a million dollars.

Rhoads says he has had no indications of problems with Fingers Diversified, but he advises people who are contacted by a finders group to seek references on the organization and to make sure they know how much money is involved in the contract.

He cautions people to do this before signing a power of attorney to the finders group. Rhoads adds that other than making public records available, the commerce department provides no extra services to finders groups.

"When I give people a contract," Morrow says, "they can take it to a lawyer if they want. Most of my clients will back me up. I helped one person who was so grateful he said he was going to offer my name at mass for five years."

Swine Seminar At Goldsboro

The Eastern Carolina Veterinary Association will hold its annual swine seminar Monday at the Agricultural Center in Goldsboro at 7:30 p.m.

Speaker will be Dr. Ralph Vinson, who writes a swine health column. Dr. Vinson will discuss "Management in the Control of Swine Diseases."

The program will include current concerns of swine health such as pseudorabies and atrophic rhinitis immunization. The seminar is open to the public.

Overeaters To Hear Speaker

An "outside speaker" will speak to Overeaters Anonymous members and guests tonight at 7:30 at Arlington Street Baptist Church.

She will discuss the 12 steps of recovery from overeating. Anyone who feels he or she has a compulsive eating problem is invited to visit or join the group.

Tested Boar Sale Tuesday

A N.C. tested boar sale will be held Tuesday at the Livestock Arena in Smithfield. Boars will be shown at 6:30 p.m. and the sale will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Fifty-nine boars will be sold. For further information, contact Mike Regans at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

No Help From Ike's Family

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In Mel Shavelson's script of a planned ABC movie, "Ike: The War Years," there's a scene that reportedly outraged the family of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It showed President Harry S. Truman in 1952, burning two letters in the presence of his military aide, Harry H. Vaughn. One, written shortly after the end of World War II, was from then-Gen. Eisenhower. In it, Ike purportedly told his Army boss, Gen. George C. Marshall, he wanted to come home from Europe, divorce his wife, Mamie, and marry his wartime driver-secretary, Kay Summersby.

shall, purportedly tells Ike he'll "bust" him out of the Army if he goes through with the idea. The account of the letters is based on an interview Truman gave toward the end of his life to writer Merle Miller. Truman was quoted as saying he destroyed the letters, but how isn't specified.

Ike's son, John, in a coming collection of Ike's wartime letters to Mamie, some released to the Los Angeles Times last June, says the letters prove to him the divorce correspondence mentioned in Miller's book is an "egregious falsehood."

He also says there's "no evidence" Ike seriously considered divorce.

Problem is, nobody knows if the divorce letters exist. Vaughn says he retrieved for Truman some Eisenhower-Marshall letters, but neither read them nor saw Truman burn them. Marshall's biographer, Dr. Forrest C. Pogue, is quoted as saying no divorce correspondence is among Marshall's papers and doubts such exists.

Which leaves veteran screenwriter Shavelson, 60, mulling over that controversial scene in his six-hour dramatization of Ike's war years, which ABC may air in 1978. No filming of it has begun yet.

Shavelson says the whole flap developed after the Eisenhower family, understandably protective of Mamie, saw the first draft of the screenplay he sent them and thought it was the version ABC would air.

"It was not," he said, emphasizing that there "never was any intent to blow that thing

(the divorce letters account) into something distasteful..." The problem "was that at the time I was writing the first draft, none of this stuff had surfaced," he said, referring to the comments of Vaughn, Dr. Pogue and Ike's son about the purported letters.

He said he'd talked with John Eisenhower and Ike's grandson, David, "to find out what the family sensitivity was" to mentioning the wartime romance Miss Summersby, now dead, claimed she'd had with Ike.

He declined to say what they told him, other than they felt the planned movie "had no meaning at all as far as Ike was concerned."

He also said the family didn't want to help him with the project.

Tony Orlando Said Hospitalized Because Of Emotional Exhaustion

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Tony Orlando, confused and emotionally shattered, is being treated at a private hospital for stress brought on by the deaths of his sister and his pal Freddie Prinze, says a friend of Orlando.

"I was fortunate enough to get him where he is now without anyone knowing," said Orlando's press agent, Frank Lieberman, on Wednesday. "He is physically and emotionally exhausted. He's under a doctor's care in a hospital outside Los Angeles. His wife is with him."

Orlando began singing professionally in New York at the age of 16. He had a hit record in 1961, "Half Way to Paradise," but his singing career sputtered. He then worked several years as a promoter for a division of Columbia Records.

He returned to the performing side of the business in 1970, recording two big sellers — "Candida" and "Knock Three Times" as part of a group called "Dawn." It was composed of Orlando and two female singers named Telma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson.

But after the two hits, they became "Tony Orlando and Dawn" and went on to an even bigger song — "Tie a Yellow Ribbon" — and a TV variety special for CBS. Things were golden for Orlando.

Then, in early 1976, Orlando's sister, Rhonda Marie, died. She had been mentally retarded and stricken with cerebral palsy, and Orlando had cared for her since she was a year old.

His TV show was canceled in December. A month later, his personal world was shattered by the suicide of comedian Freddie Prinze, who, like Orlando, had known the opposite worlds of New York's Hell's Kitchen and glamorous Hollywood.

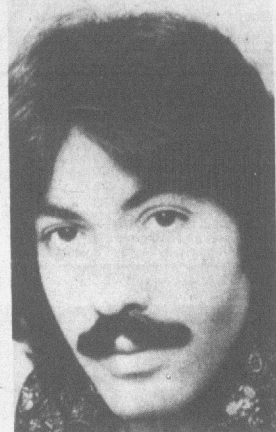

"When Freddie died, he was there," said Prinze's mother,

Maria Pruetzel. "He was there all 33 hours. He was there at his bedside. He was there at the funeral. He was really a gorgeous, gorgeous, human being."

Prinze's death apparently haunted Orlando.

"The time I spent with him afterwards, there was a lot of rambling, a lot of things said," Lieberman said. "What happened, why it happened ...

TONY ORLANDO

Orlando surprised the entertainment world last month by announcing he was quitting. Lieberman said many pressures led to the decision.

"It's like a balloon," he said. "You can fill it up and fill it up and finally it pops."

When the balloon popped for Orlando, he was working the summer theater circuit. On July 23, he was a little late coming onstage at Cohasset, Mass.

When he did appear, he told a surprised audience that he was "quitting show business in the name of Jesus Christ."

"All the shows I do from now on will be with a guitar beside a hospital bed," he said.

Orlando also canceled a booking at the Warwick, R.I., Music Theater.

Buster Bonoff, owner of the Warwick, said he planned to sue the singer for the $200,000 in advance tickets he had to refund.

"We're probably not going to end up with anything," Bonoff said, "because the reason for his quitting is going to be that he was temporarily insane, or a nervous breakdown, or something. I can see it coming."

Winning technique often requires some detective work. You need the ability to assemble clues derived from the bidding and play to solve the problem. Consider this hand from the London leg of the Philip Morris European Cup.

The auction made it obvious to South that he could expect to find useful values in his partner's hand, so he balanced with two hearts. With control of all the side suits and reasonable trump support, North elected to gamble out four hearts.

West was reluctant to lead from any of his high honors, so he chose his lowest diamond. Declarer played low from dummy and captured East's queen with the king. Prospects did not look too bright. Once East had shown up with the queen of diamonds, West had to hold the ace of spades, king of clubs and king-queen of hearts for his trump opening bid. Thus, there was the danger of losing a trick to each of those cards. However, declarer realized that he might be able to salvage a trick either by establishing dummy's spades or snaring West in an endplay.

To test the various possibilities, declarer led a spade at trick two. West rose with the ace and continued a diamond to dummy's ace. Declarer cashed the king of spades, discarding a club, and led the jack. East discarded a club and declarer ruffed.

A diamond ruff provided the entry for another spade ruff, as East let go another club. Declarer, down to A-10-8 of hearts and Q-10-9 of clubs, could now have made the hand by simply playing ace of hearts and another, but this risked losing the contract if West had a fourth diamond. Instead, declarer led a club to the ace and returned a club to the jack, queen and king. West could do no better than play a third club, but declarer knew the lie of the cards.

He ruffed the club with the jack of trumps and led a trump to the eight. The finesse for the nine succeeded. West had to win the queen of trumps, but he was left with K-5 in hearts and had to lead into declarer's A-10 tenace. So declarer lost only one heart trick and made his contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Pathologists Have Admirer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Preston L. Schiller has concluded that pathologists are non-aggressive, family-oriented people with the lowest divorce rate and one of the lowest suicide rates among physicians.

To frost the cake even further, Schiller says they're verbally fluent, candid talkers, visually oriented and very artistic. His hypothesis about pathologists is contained in a 485-page dissertation that represents interviews with 35 pathologists, 200 hours of recorded interviews, the results of months of reading and a year spent following pathologists around observing their daily routines.

Schiller is in Winston-Salem as a fellow from St. John's University in Minnesota where he is a professor. He was selected as one of the social scientists in a three-year program working with physicians at Bowman Gray School of Medicine studying social science aspects of medical education and health care.

He remembers that when he was a student pathologists were not popular with doctors.

"Pathologists don't have a private practice, and they put medicine on a more scientific footing than most doctors," Schiller said.

"They have a more cerebral specialty than others, and many are threatened by the fact that young available doctors who may have gone into pathology are going into other areas, like internal medicine."

In 1976, Americans bought 25 million cans of soft drinks and beer.

Schiller said another reason for the unpopularity of pathologists is their "association with the autopsy of the body." Schiller added, "There is a definite problem in drawing recruits. Pathologists had 'fallen from grace' in the medical world and that is recognized."

Schiller says his typical pathologist does not resemble Quincy, the medical examiner and pathologist in the NBC television program of the same name.

"Quincy," Schiller said, "is unlike any pathologist I encountered in my medical research. He is atypical."

Hot Baths Ease Aches, Pains

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Argentine experts claim the natural springs in San Juan province are among the most healthful in the world.

The best known spring in the province is Pismanta, about 450 miles northeast of Buenos Aires, where a state-run hotel has space for 130 persons and excellent meals based on provincial cuisine.

San Juan province, long noted for its mineral springs, is the source of the bubbly bottled water that is a regular feature of Argentine dinner tables, but the baths at Pismanta, perking along at a comfortable 120 degrees Fahrenheit, are also noted for soothing all manner of aches and pains.

Once Wild Town Hub For White Water Rafter

By JILL LAWRENCE
THURMOND, W. Va. (UPI) — This tiny New River village of 86 persons, barely a mark on most maps, was a notorious center of sin and commerce at the turn of the century.

Today, it boasts a whitewater rafting operation that attracts close to 5,000 adventurers each summer.

The Fayette County town, which never numbered more than 500, is commonly cited as the scene of a 14-year poker game and the only town in the world where railroad tracks serve as the main and only street. In addition, until 1921, there was no road leading into or out of town.

During its 50-year heyday between 1875 and 1925, Thurmond built a reputation as the "Dodge City of the East" in "the meanest county in the world."

Gambling, prostitution, coal mining and the railroad contributed to an atmosphere of violence, where "scarcely a new day failed to dawn on the lifeless body of one or more men stretched out along the railroad tracks," according to a 1946 article by Eugene L. Scott.

At its peak, Thurmond was more important as a rail and coal center than many larger cities, according to Scott's article in the West Virginia Review. Scott says Thurmond contributed nearly $5 million or nearly one fifth of Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad's total revenue for the year 1910, while Cincinnati, for example, contributed less than $2 million that year.

Visiting businessmen in those days often stayed and held parties at the famous 100-room Dun Glen Hotel, scene of the 14-year poker game. The hotel was built in 1903, three years after Thurmond incorporated with a population of about 300.

Local legend has it that "every type of sin" was available at the Dun Glen until an arsonist burned it down in 1930. Most of the coal mines were played out in the 1920s, while the depression finished off the town's bank and many other businesses.

After nearly half a century as a ghost town, Thurmond was reborn in 1969 as a center for white water rafting. Starting with a truck and two rafts, two brothers from Pennsylvania guided rafters through the rapids on the New River. Wildwater Unlimited ("Rapid Transit on the New River") now employs eight custom-made rafts, 27 guides and several buses over its eight-month season.

"This is not the kind of trip where the guide has a motor in the back of the raft, and he tells you about the flora and fauna and the moose who comes down to the river to drink," said Jon Dragan, 34.

Dragan and his brother Tom, 27, ran rafts down the Youghiogheny River in Pennsylvania before coming to Thurmond. Adventurous souls from as far away as Washington, New York and Michigan drive the winding roads to Thurmond to take a 15-mile trip down either the upper or lower New River or a two-day tour of both sections.

On a recent trip, the ten paddlers on "Old Yeller," a bright yellow $6,000 raft, ranged from a group of Cincinnati schoolteachers to two counsels to a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee.

The three young teachers, accompanied by their assistant principal and his wife, gave the good-natured impression they had little choice in making the trip.

"He told us we could either go rafting or start looking for new jobs," one said.

Between instructions on how to maneuver through "Surprise," "Dudley's Dip" and other colorfully named shoals, guides Tom Dragan and Larry Case traded jokes with vacationing coal miners camped along the river.

Once persuaded to stop clowning, Tom Dragan proved he knew as much as anyone about New River Gorge. As the raft drifted down the lower stretch, he pointed out abandoned mining towns and coal tipples, beavers and the spectacular New River Gorge Bridge.

Dragan also pointed to some smoke rising above the trees — the remote home of an 80-year-old woman who hikes two miles down the railroad track to Thurmond for her groceries. Mrs. Fields, he said, is now the lone inhabitant of what used to be the thriving town of Beury.

While the banks, hotels, pharmacies, jewelry stores, theaters and groceries that once graced Thurmond no longer exist, the town does offer the Bankers Club, a hotel and restaurant housed in an old bank along the Chesapeake & Ohio tracks across the river from the Wildwater Unlimited base camp.

To reach the Bankers Club, motorists must negotiate a shaky, one-lane railroad bridge high above the river. Then they can edge along the railroad tracks on foot, or drive halfway up the hillside and back down again, past rusted cars, a church, and most of Thurmond's homes.

Erksine Pugh, his wife Jackie, two sons and daughter-in-law worked for two years to remodel the Bankers Club, and reopened it three years ago.

Pugh, a soft-spoken middle-aged man who drives a school bus in the winter, is the local entrepreneur, raconteur, and politician. He won Thurmond's last mayoral election by a landslide, capturing all 17 eligible votes.

"This town used to boom with coal mines every two miles, but all the mines are finished," Pugh said quietly, puffing on a cigarette. "There's no young blood. The old die and they're not replaced. That really hurts."

Although the Bankers Club owes its livelihood to visiting rafters, Pugh says he's never gone rafting on the 283-mile New River. "I wouldn't go if I had the chance," he said. "The only time I ever got wet there, I was watering my horse and I had to break some ice."

Though he insisted he was too busy to take the rafting trip, Pugh soon admitted that was "a lot of talk" and gave the impression he was more scared than busy. Nevertheless, he had some encouraging words for would-be rafters.

"Once you hit those first shoals and the water hits you in the face, you'll forget about being scared," he said.

Mrs. Pugh, chief cook at the Bankers Club and a native of the area, was able to shed some light on the mood of Thurmond during its early days.

She said a friend told her his father had to escape a "night."

wrestling match at the Dun Glen through an upstairs window, after spectators who had gambled on the match became displeased with the outcome and threatened to lynch him.

"My grandmother came here in the early 1890's," said Mrs. Pugh. "She said it was nothing to hear of a murder every night."

Wisdom of Genetic Counseling

There are a number of problem children in my family. One brother is retarded. My uncle was born with a birth defect. I am married and 26. My wife is 23. We both want children. We're frightened, although we have been assured that the chances are slight for having a problem child. What do you think about this? — Mr. & Mrs. S.S.B., N.J.

Dear Mr. & Mrs. B.: I think that you both show exceptional wisdom for making extensive inquiry now, about the possibility of genetic problems, before conceiving a child.

Unfortunately, a great many young people are willing to risk that chance, without the benefit of modern genetic counseling. In a recent edition of a magazine, "The Exceptional Parent," this specific problem is carefully reviewed. In it is stated that there are four high risk groups who definitely should seek genetic counseling.

- 1) Couples in which one or both partners is a member of an ethnic group that is prone to a particular disease, when there is a history of it in the family. For example, sickle cell anemia, Tay-Sachs disease, thalassemia, or other congenital disorders.

- 2) Women who are over 35. The chance of a woman having a baby with Down's syndrome increases with age. At 25, the chance is about one in 2000; at 35, it is one in 350; at 40 one out of 100; at age 45, one out of 50.
- 3) Marriage partners who have a relative with a genetic disease. The disabled relative need not be a close relative.
- 4) Couples who have already had a child born with a genetic defect. Also, women who have had multiple miscarriages with no apparent reason.

Since you fall into the third category, you most certainly should get the advice of a genetic counselor. Your total case history will be studied in detail and the mathematical chances of having a normal, healthy child will be clearly outlined.

The counselor will not make a decision for you. Instead, you will be guided and given a greater understanding of the total picture of genetic defects.

Your own doctor undoubtedly knows of a genetic clinic in your local community or in a town nearby, especially where there is a major hospital or a university complex.

That Lonely Pet May Misbehave

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — America's pampered pets are a myth, say two veterinarians and animal behavior specialists.

"Ninety-nine per cent of pets aren't pampered," says Benjamin Hart, professor of veterinary medicine at the University of California at Davis.

In fact, many owners don't spend enough time with their dogs and cats, says Hart's colleague, Victoria Voith. She attributes many cases of animal behavior to the owner's needing to spend more time with the pet.

time and rewarding the dog when he returns for being good."

She said an owner should leave several times a day for several weeks, returning at longer intervals to help the animal adapt to departures and returns.

This is only part of the solution, she said. Many other factors are involved.

Sometimes they try to improve an owner's relationship with his pet. "There might be a case where the owner is not dominant enough over his dog," Hart said.

Aggressive behavior by a pet may require surgery.

Both Hart and Ms. Voith maintain private practices in addition to their university positions studying animal behavior and trying to help change pets' undesirable conduct.

Some pet owners are referred to them by veterinarians who cannot find the cause of an animal's bad behavior.

Hart and Ms. Voith often consult veterinary neurologists if a brain defect is suspected.

Owners seeking help are asked to describe their pet's behavior in detail.

The university vets use three approaches in dealing with problem animals: they modify the animal's behavior, improve interaction between owners and pets and prescribe drugs or surgery.

Behavior modification often involves rewarding an animal for desired behavior.

"If your dog's tearing up the place," Hart said, "he could be lonely or he could need more exercise."

"If he's lonely," said Ms. Voith, "the owner can teach the dog to anticipate his return by leaving for a certain period of

For particular types of aggressive behavior," he said, "we might castrate the animal. For others like 'urine spraying' by cats, we might remove a small part of the brain."

But Hart said these methods are the "last resort," to be used only when all other approaches have failed.

He said "urine spraying" by cats might indicate the animals need a change in surroundings. A cat usually sprays urine to mark his territory or indicate his presence.

"If you've had a cat for a long time, and suddenly you bring in two new cats, the older cat might become upset and begin to spray," Hart said.

In such a case, he said, the two new cats might have to be removed.

"Cats are solitary creatures," Ms. Voith said. "They reach a point where they just can't take any more."

She said owners should not blame themselves if their pet has a behavioral problem.

"We've had many cancellations because friends have told the owners crazy pets belong to crazy owners," she said.

California Chemical Plant Is Closed Due Sterility Reports

LATHROP, Calif. (AP) — The men noticed it first, swapping stories over lunch at the chemical plant where they worked in this tiny central California town. None had fathered children lately.

That was a few years ago. Today, part of the Occidental Chemical Co. plant is closed and doctors are scrambling to

Twenty-six men work in the section of the plant which makes farm chemicals. According to a company spokesman, 23 of the men agreed to tests a month ago after initial studies raised questions about their sexual fertility. Eight of them had already had vasectomies.

But James Lindley, Occidental vice president and Western Division manager, said that of the remaining 15 men tested, 10 were totally sterile or had almost non-existent sperm counts.

"At this point, we just don't know what the cause is," Lindley said Wednesday. Most of the men are in their 20s and 30s and had fathered children before they started to work at the plant, he said.

According to William Steffan, head of the Occupational Health Branch of the California Department of Health, the prime suspect in the baffling sterility is a soil fumigant called DBCP (dibrom and chloro-propane).

Steffan declined to pin definite blame on the chemical but said that current medical evidence "focuses strong suspicion that ... DBCP is implicated in the induced sterility."

He said there is no federal or state standard which sets safe amounts for DBCP handling. "It was never thought to be particularly toxic," Steffan said.

A union steward at the plant, Jack Hodges, said he first suspected the malady during "lunchroom talk."

"I started looking around and there weren't any children being born," he said. The union, the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International, began efforts to persuade the men to get tested for sperm counts about a year ago, but Hodges said it was a "delicate matter."

Finally, last month, the men submitted to the tests. Results disclosed last week confirmed the sterility. Farm chemical production at the plant was halted last Thursday. On Tuesday, limited production resumed but stopped a short time later at the request of the state.

Steffan said the farm chemical section will remain closed until the state investigates further. Watching for results with special interest, of course, will be the workers.

Said employee and father of one Mike Trout, 24: "My wife and I have been trying to have another child. It got me a little depressed."

America Discovers The Moped

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Mopeds, the curious Gallic hybrid of a bicycle with a baby motor, born in the austerity of the Marshall Plan era, have given independence to youth and mobility to workers in Europe since World War II.

By day, their buzz is familiar in European cities. In darkness, the sound drills through the countryside as kids ride home from a dance in the next village or farmers head out to the fields at dawn.

Now, Americans are discovering the virtues of the vehicle that sips only a gallon of gas every 100 miles or so and is easy not only on the pocketbook, but on the environment, the leg muscles and the nerves during rush-hour traffic jams.

But, says Jean Chasanel, secretary-general of Motobecane, France's largest producer, "There's a lot more talk about mopeds than there are mopeds on the roads in the United States."

U.S. sales last year were only about 50,000, but Chasanel is optimistic. "We expect total industry sales of 100,000 units there this year, that's in the 31 states which have passed laws favorable to the moped."

The Department of Transportation is optimistic, too. It forecasts three million mopeds on U.S. roadways by 1980.

Some 30 manufacturers are vying for the U.S. market. The biggest are Motobecane, which pioneered the moped in 1949 and expects to supply one-fourth of those sold in America this year; Steyer Daimler Puch of Austria and Batavus of Holland. The lone U.S. manufacturer is Columbia in Westfield, Mass.

Basically, a moped is a strengthened bicycle powered by a motor about one-fifth the size of a cylinder of an old Volkswagen. It usually is chain driven.

A recent New York court decision says it's a moped if it goes no faster than 17 miles per hour, a motorcycle if it goes faster. Europe is more lenient, allowing 25-30 m.p.h.

France has the most mopeds in use, some six million, followed by Italy's three million and Holland's two million.

The popularity of the moped stems from its economy and the lack of restrictions on the rider. Of moped laws passed in 31 states thus far, half require no vehicle registration. Many don't require a driver's license, and none requires crash helmets or liability insurance.

But as accident rates increase in Europe, crash helmets are expected to become compulsory soon in France and Germany. And already in the States there is sentiment to make the laws more stringent and uniform.

Moped sales rose markedly in Europe in 1973-74, but Chasanel strongly opposes the idea that the oil crisis was responsible.

"We always say we believe the increase was because of interest in the basic qualities of the vehicle itself."

"We were shown to be right when deliveries dropped back in 1975-76 at the height of the economic crisis, and also because laws making crash helmets compulsory started coming in."

In the United States, he says, it "is still too soon to say if mopeds have become fashionable. We need to see how sales develop. But President Carter's energy program might help."

An aide pointed out that relaxed laws for mopeds only began appearing in the last couple of years, after lobbying by the Motorized Bicycle Association, strongly supported by the French industry. Across Europe, the youth market dominates moped sales — for transport as well as sport.

But in London, more and more white collar workers are seen weaving through dense rush hour traffic on mopeds.

In many European countries the legal speed limit for mopeds is 30 kilometers (about 20 miles) per hour. Mopeds are supposed to be built not to exceed that speed, but its a ham-fisted youngster who can't make minor adjustments to leave the speed limit behind.

In the Netherlands, where flat terrain lends itself to mopeds, the little bikes are second only to the car as the most popular form of motor transport, and in Denmark, there were 459,400 mopeds at the end of 1975 for a population of a little over five million.

But Swedish authorities say the number of mopeds dropped from 750,000 in the early 1960s to around 400,000 now. They attribute it mainly to the fact that mopeds have developed from being bicycles with auxiliary motors into baby motorbikes, and thus become more expensive.

Mopeds are popular in the poorer areas of southern Spain, particularly with construction and farm workers.

In Switzerland, the energy crisis brought a brief switch from larger to smaller cars, but no significant change in sales of the long-popular moped. If people are turning from cars to mopeds, it usually is because of traffic and parking problems, the Swiss say.

The outstanding problem of the moped however, is the vulnerability of the rider in accidents. The figures are higher in France, with twice as many mopeds as any other country. Last year in France, 1,232 people were killed on mopeds, compared with 503 on larger motorbikes.

The French government is promoting special moped lanes, like bicycle paths, for urban travel.

In Britain, with more than 500,000 mopeds in use, there were 121 fatalities in 1976, low compared with France but still a rise of 36 per cent over 1975.

The British Ministry of Transport says moped riders are not entirely to blame. "Time and time again car drivers say: 'I'm sorry, but I just didn't see him,'" a Ministry spokesman said.
