Spacecraft Off To Jupiter And Saturn

By BARNEY SEIBERT
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A Voyager spacecraft, carrying a gold-plated recording for any extra-terrestrial civilization that might recover it, blasted off on a 1.4 billion-mile voyage to Jupiter and Saturn Saturday and ran into trouble almost immediately.

But at least one of the problems was corrected within a few hours. A balky gyroscope aboard the spacecraft was discovered to be working normally Saturday night, ending fears of a possible navigation problem.

said, "The general health of Voyager is much better than originally believed."

NASA officials still gave the Voyager 2 mission a green light, but have not made a decision on whether to keep the launching of Voyager 1 on schedule for Sept. 1.

A second problem, the lack of indication that a boom carrying the spacecraft's two television cameras had fully deployed, remained unresolved. But space scientists hoped to learn the extent of that problem later in the night by initiating a "plasma experiment," which requires the spacecraft to lock onto the sun.

Scientists had feared the boom was flopping around in space and could not carry out its functions.

NASA spokesman Al Lavender quoted space agency scientists as saying there was a "small possibility" that the six-foot scientific instrument boom had fully extended. Even if it didn't, they hoped that the lock-on to the sun would tell them whether the boom was in a fixed position even if not fully extended.

The other two booms, one 12-feet long for communications with the Earth and the other carrying the three nuclear powerplants, are deployed properly, officials said. Along with all the scientific instruments, the spacecraft carries a gift to any civilization that might capture the Voyager — a gold-plated recording that offers a 110-minute glimpse of Earth in the 20th century.

By means of it, otherworlders would hear sounds of a human kiss, blues performed by Louis Armstrong, the harsh sound of automobile gears meshing, spoken greetings in 60 different languages and the triumphant strains of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. They would hear it, that is, if they are smart enough to assemble the little turntable, cartridge and needle thoughtfully provided by NASA.

The problems encountered early in the Voyager 2 flight had threatened to thwart what NASA's chief project scientist, Dr. Edward Stone, called a "very exciting decade of discovery."

Though Jupiter and Saturn, the giants of our Solar System, loom large in Earth's night sky, they cannot be studied closely even with the largest telescopes available on Earth.

Astronomers have seen enough though to whet their curiosity — the great red spot on Jupiter's surface, Jupiter's many moons, the rainbow-like rings of Saturn, and the mysterious and far away Uranus, where rings were sighted only last spring.

Voyager 1 is scheduled to beat Voyager 2 to Jupiter by four months even though it will be launched later. And holding to the present schedule, Voyager 1 will come into television camera range of Jupiter, which is 10 times larger than Earth, Dec. 15, 1978.

It will beam back 25,000 photos of the striped planet's gas clouds and its moons.

Between the two, the Voyagers will scan all five of Jupiter's inner satellites — Io, Europa, Ganymede and Callisto — and Titan, the largest known moon in the Solar System.

The composition of the moons seem to differ from that of Jupiter itself, which scientists theorize to have no solid surface. Rather, they believe it to be a rapidly spinning ball of gas and liquid almost 779 million miles from the Sun.

Space scientists say Io appears blanketed by orange beds of salt and sulphur, which are possibly the remains of extinct seas. Ganymede may be a 3,270-mile thick mass of mud and ice.

Titan's thick atmosphere has sparked the interest of Dr. Bradford Smith of the University of Arizona, who said it may be producing organic molecules that are precursors of life.

As the Voyager 1 hurries by Jupiter, it will get an extra velocity boost from the Jovian gravity and slingshot off for a flyby of Saturn, 1.4 billion miles from Earth. It will snap another 8,000 pictures there where the key interest will be the ringed structures that circle the planet. One scientist speculated the circles may consist of hand-sized snowballs.

Voyager 2 could follow Voyager 1 to Saturn or be directed toward Uranus.

The $500 million Voyager project is the last deep space mission planned by the United States in the next decade, during which NASA will concentrate on the manned Space Shuttle flights.

Annual Return

ECU News Bureau

Brace yourself, Greenville. The long, hot summer is ending abruptly — and earlier — for activity and the beginning of the Fall semester by East Carolina University. Faculty and students of ECU are returning to campus by hundreds this weekend and in a flood that will reach thousands by midweek.

Registration for between 11,500 and 12,000 students begins Tuesday.

On campus this means long lines of students, with cards, papers and checks in hand waiting outside the various offices in various buildings where registration desks are manned, at the cashier's office where checks for tuition and fees are accepted, and elsewhere students and faculty will tract business.

As the school year, the 68th in ECU's history, begins, the pace of activity in the entire community — and that includes all of Greenville — will quicken. Stores, shops and restaurants will be geared for the crush.

The economic impact of East Carolina University upon the business community of Greenville is considerable and, to some extent, measurable.

Enrollment for the Fall semester will be at or very near a record.

"It looks good, very good," says Dr. John Horne, Director of Admissions. Horne predicts a campus enrollment of nearly 12,000.

Groucho Marx Dead At 86

By ROGER GILLOTT Associated Press Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — Groucho Marx, whose patented duck walk and flick of a cigar combined with an irreverent wit to make him the most famous of America's zaniest team of comedians, is dead of pneumonia at age 86.

The bushy-eyebrowed, mustachioed Groucho, who recently was the center of a bitter court battle over who should be his guardian, died at 7:25 p.m. PDT Friday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. First word of the death was withheld for 50 minutes, giving the family time to quietly slip out of the hospital and into seclusion.

"I guess you could call this an end of an era. But I don't believe Groucho will ever leave us. He's too impudent," said Erin Fleming, his longtime companion.

Groucho had practiced his irreverent, chaotic brand of slapstick comedy for more than 65 years in vaudeville, films, radio and television.

Earlier in the day, a distraught Miss Fleming had told

The Associated Press by telephone: "Groucho's just having a nice little dream now ... He's just going to have a nap and rest his eyes for the next several centuries."

With Groucho when he died were his son, Arthur, daughter-in-law, Lois, and grandson, Art.

County School Bd. To Meet Tuesday

A special call meeting of the Pitt County Board of Education will be held Tuesday, August 23 at 8 p.m.

Items on the agenda to be considered include a status report by Superintendent Arthur Alford on the school district lines; a recommendation for conditions for transfer of students from one school system to another; and a policy matter on student attendance.

Four Candidates Filed Friday

On Friday, August 19, the kick-off day for citizens to file as candidates for the offices of mayor and city council members for the City of Greenville, four persons signed the dotted line to get into the biennial race.

Incumbent Mayor Percy Cox, incumbent council members Rev. William J. (Bill) Hadden and Millie McGrath, and a youthful first-time candidate, Judy Greene are the four who made early bids to enter the 1977 political arena.

Greenville native Percy Cox, a veteran of 14 years in city hall, is seeking his second term as mayor. Before being elected mayor in the 1975 elections, Cox served six terms as a city council member.

Owner of Cox Armature Works, Inc., Cox is married to the former Janice Brown of New York City. The couple has five children and several grandchildren.

During World War II Cox served in the U.S. Army. He is active in church work, is past president of the Moose Lodge, is a Mason and has been active also in programs to bring industries to Greenville.

Rev. William J. (Bill) Hadden is seeking a second term on the City Council. A native of Philadelphia, Hadden has been a resident of Greenville for 18 years. Currently, he is the Episcopal Chaplain at East Carolina University, and rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Farmville.

In World War II, Hadden served in the Navy's V-12 program with the rank of Lt.(jg). He is married to the former Margaret Shumaker, and they are the parents of three sons and one daughter.

Hadden received his education at Lynchburg College, Va., the Masters of Divinity degree at Vanderbilt University, Tenn., and the Masters in Education degree at Austin Peay State College, Tenn.

"My most vital concern for the city are the Community Development programs and the neighborhood development programs," Hadden commented. "I'm also interested in the concept of more community involvement in these programs. One thing I'm pleased about is the success and development of the public transportation system in Greenville."

Judy Greene, a four-year resident of Greenville, is campaigning to fill one of six seats on the Greenville City Council.

Mrs. Greene 29, has worked in Greenville since 1969 and is employed as secretary and office manager for Dickerson-

Adams and Associates, a local engineering firm.

A native of Pinetops, Mrs. Greene is married to Bruce M. Greene, and they have one son Mitchell, two-and-a-half years old.

A member of the First Free Will Baptist Church, Mrs. Greene enjoys music, reading, history and antiques.

Stating her decision to run for office, Mrs. Greene says, "After attending City Council meetings for the past year, I realized a growing desire to become actively involved in our city government. I feel that being on the City Council is the best way to accomplish that goal."

Mrs. Mildred McGrath filed Friday afternoon for reelection to her third full term as a member of the City Council.

Bloodmobile Drive

A three day Blood Drive has been announced by Red Cross Director Mrs. Ruth Taylor. The drive will be conducted on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 22, 23 and 24.

The Bloodmobile will be at the Moose Lodge from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday; from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, and at Union Carbide on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4

Mrs. Taylor says the quota for each day's visit of the Bloodmobile is 180 units.

"We are hoping for a good turn-out," she said, "as there's always a shortage of blood this time of year. We have had to send donors to the hospital each day this past week, and we are very much in need of donors with all types of blood."

Run Reported On Presley Records

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer The death of rock singer Elvis Presley Tuesday has caused a run on his records and a book released about two weeks ago on his life, a local survey has indicated.

Record outlets reported the records on-hand were selling well. However, most reported being sold out.

Typical was a comment from employees at Apple Records. They said "we sold what we had... 8 to 10 records and four tapes," although more are on their way. "They did go the day after his death."

Spokesmen at the Record Bar said "we ran out of Elvis Presley records the day after he died," but said they received 60 of his latest release — Moody Blue — yesterday and many of them have been sold.

They noted that the Record Bar has ordered 100 Presley records direct from RCA, but were told the RCA stock was "dwindling fast."

The spokesmen said the 50 or 60 records and tapes on hand when Presley died went fast when Presley fans bought as many as eight or nine at one time.

By CHARLES R. SMITH
UPI Senior Editor
HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party's 11th National Congress confirmed Hua Kuo-feng as Chairman Mao Tse-tung's successor, expelled Mao's widow and pledged Hua will lead the world's largest nation "into the 21st century," Peking radio said Saturday.

In a speech broadcast less than 48 hours before Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's arrival for the Carter administration's first high-level talks with Chinese leaders, Hua declared, "the Soviet Union and the United States are the source of a new world war."

Hua called on China's more than 800 million people to press "unrelenting" worldwide struggles against the two superpowers.

The week-long party congress in Peking's Great Hall of the People formally approved the expulsion from the party of Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and her three cohorts in the "Gang of Four," Peking Radio said.

A communique said the discredited radicals "completely perverted" the policies and theories that made Mao "the greatest Marxist of our time."

The session, which ended Thursday, also ratified a political report that took Hua four hours to read, adopted a new party constitution and elected a new 333-member central committee — 201 full members and 132 alternates.

The 1,510 delegates, representing 35 million party members, elected Hua chairman of its 223-member presidium at the outset of the congress.

"The minds of the delegates were at ease and they spoke freely," the radio said.

Marshal Yeh Chien-ying, Teng Hsiao-ping, Li Hsien-nin and Wang Tung-hsing were elected vice chairmen of the presidium. They were expected to be elected party vice chairmen when the new central committee holds its first plenary session.

Wang, Mao's former bodyguard, also was named secretary general of the presidium.

Hua paid tribute in his political report to Mao and other party leaders who died during the past two years.

He said the purge of the "Gang of Four" and the campaign to eliminate their supporters laid the foundation for a development plan to modernize China and make the nation a superpower by the end of this century.

Yeh, the No. 2 man in the power structure, delivered a report on the new constitution and praised Hua's leadership, saying he was a worthy successor to Mao and had been "chosen by Chairman Mao himself."

Teng, a two-time purge victim who was reinstated to No. 3 rank in China less than a month ago, delivered the closing report to the congress.

Bolivian Youth Stable Following Surgery At Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Virgilio Pinto, a 19-year-old Bolivian brought to Duke Hospital through the contributions of North Carolinians, was reported in stable condition Saturday night after undergoing sensitive surgery earlier in the day.

Physicians said they would determine Monday the next step in the treatment of Pinto's hemangioma, an overgrowth of blood vessels that distorts and disfigures his lower face. The mass has been threatening not only his brain, but his trachea, the breathing passage.

Pinto was discovered in Bolivia two years ago by volunteer medical missionaries. The volunteers, Dr. Richard Griffin of Hickory and Dr. James Bramham of Tarboro, decided Pinto's only hope for survival, and possible reconstruction of his face, lay with Duke specialists.

Medical authorities in Argentina had already concluded Pinto's case was hopeless.

Pinto's trip from his home in remote Trinidad, Bolivia, to Durham two weeks ago was made possible by contributions of more than $5,000 from North Carolinians.

Extensive testing and preliminary surgery at Duke revealed that the growth had disseminated from the main artery into a network "too large to be removed surgically."

In Saturday's procedure, surgeons planned to use radioactive materials to attack the growth among blood vessels, near the brain, a procedure the physicians say is a "first" in that area of the body although similar treatment has been applied successfully in the abdominal region of other patients.

Hospital officials could not confirm if surgeons had performed the procedure as scheduled Saturday, but they acknowledged that the surgery required the skills of a plastic surgeon, a radiologist and a neurosurgeon.

Pinto, according to interpreter Julia Williams, has "won the affection and admiration of doctors since his arrival."

"A highlight of his day," Mrs. Williams said, "has been mail that poured in for several days. He keeps us busy reading and translating." The mail has included additional contributions of $300, plus small gifts, religious medals and clothing.

When Pinto arrived, his small suitcase contained only presents for the people he would meet here.

N.C. News Briefs

Feels No Conflict

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The former executive director of the Soul City Foundation has been named assistant secretary for Community Development in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

In her new post, Eva Clayton will run the office that provides funding for local housing, community assistance and employment programs.

Department Secretary Howard N. Lee said Friday he does not think Mrs. Clayton's close ties with Soul City, a "new town" development for minorities, will present a conflict of interest.

Will Not Charge Boy

TARBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Edgecombe County Sheriff Phil Ellis says a 6-year-old boy who admitted killing his older brother with a shotgun will not be charged because he's under the 7-year-old age limit for juvenile prosecution.

However, Ellis said Friday that he would take action in the case.

"I do plan to talk to the district attorney and see if he thinks we should bring mental health (officials) into it," Ellis said.

$5 Million Plant Plans Set

WENDELL, N.C. (AP) — A manufacturer of technical measuring devices has announced plans to erect a $5 million plant near Wendell that eventually could employ about 400 persons.

James E. Starr, president of Vishay Intertechnology Inc., said his firm is considering three sites near Wendell for the plant which will manufacture products used in measuring whether mechanical devices are strong enough for their intended purpose.

Water Shortage in Ocean Towns

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — There may be a shortage of fresh water at the Outer Banks resorts of Nags Head and Kill Devil Hills, but that isn't holding back the tourists who want to plunge into the salty surf.

Restaurants in the Dare County resort towns no longer serve the customary glass of water with meals unless it is specifically requested. But officials say the missing water glass has not affected the annual summer tourist invasion that brings up to $2 million a day into the county.

Nearly 100,000 weekend tourists have been coming into the region, they said, and that figure is comparable to figures past.

Black Met With Friday

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Black leaders met with University of North Carolina President William Friday to raise 10 "areas of concern" according to Elbert Rudisill, a spokesman for the blacks.

"Of those 10, we found the university moving in a positive direction on seven," Rudisill said.

Friday said the meeting was "a profitable, constructive exchange" and said he would meet with black leaders again early next year.

Second Challenge To Smut Law

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The second court challenge to North Carolina's new smut law was filed Friday by a group of massage parlor and adult book store owners in Fayetteville.

Another suit, which also challenges the law on constitutional grounds, was filed last month in Mecklenburg County.

The law makes it possible to close adult businesses as public nuisances through civil lawsuits.

Defendants in the suit are the state, Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten and Cumberland County Dist. Atty. Ed Grannis Jr. Grannis had said he would enforce the new law and predicted a challenge suit would be filed.

Duncan Pleads Innocence

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Former Northwestern Bank board chairman Edwin Duncan Jr. pleaded innocent to the criminal charges against him in federal court Friday, as his lawyers sought a dismissal of the indictments.

Judge Eugene Gordon in U.S. Middle District Court tentatively scheduled Duncan's trial for Sept. 13 at the federal court house here. At the same session, Gwyn E. Bowers, senior vice president of the bank, and Jerry Starr, a security officer, each pleaded innocent to five counts involving bugging of FBI agents during an investigation at the bank's North Wilkesboro headquarters.

Trains Backing Angers Drivers

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — After being hauled off to court several times because local residents were angry about long waits at rail crossings, a Southern Railway freight agent decided to fight back.

Now a conductor is taking the heat.

Samuel B. Hayes of Durham was in court Thursday morning to answer the latest in a series of warrants charging him with allowing trains to block the Ellis Road crossing for more than 10 minutes — the maximum allowed by state law.

At least a half a dozen times before, Hayes had pleaded guilty as charged. This time, he fought the charge and won. "I'm afraid we got the wrong man," said District Court Judge Samuel F. Gantt.

Later in the day, L.P. McLawhorn, who had initiated the most recent case against Hayes and had pressed similar charges at least twice before, swore out a warrant against Tom Jeffries of Raleigh, a Southern conductor.

The latest incident to provoke McLawhorn's wrath occurred at the Ellis Road crossing April 16.

When he arrived at the crossing at 8:06 a.m., McLawhorn said, traffic was already blocked by a Southern train. The train continued to shift back and forth across Ellis Road before the track was finally cleared at 8:18, he said.

McLawhorn said he went into the freight office "and told Mr. Hayes he had violated the ordinance again. I said I was going to get another warrant and he got angry and said I was staging a personal vendetta against him."

Hayes told authorities Southern's yard near the crossing handles up to 350 railway cars a day and that he is responsible for seeing that each one gets hitched to the right train.

But he is not the one who does the hitching, he said, and crews have instructions not to block the crossing for more than the 10 minutes allowed by law.

"If he was captain of a ship, I'd convict him in a minute," Gantt said in dismissing the charge against Hayes. "But this is not a military organization. I'm afraid we've got the wrong man — we ought to have the conductor up here."

Hayes identified the conductor of the train in question as Jeffries. Gantt, who said he had done some waiting at the Ellis Road crossing himself, asked that the conductor's case be set before another judge.

"I've got a preconceived notion that he's guilty," Gantt explained.

After McLawhorn swore out the warrant against Jeffries, Magistrate Monroe Taylor set a District Court trial for Sept. 8.

Hayes has not had his final day in court, however. Mrs. Elizabeth Murray took out a warrant against him Aug. 11, charging she was forced to wait 23 minutes at the Ellis Road crossing.

That trial is scheduled for Aug. 25.

Problems, Progress Discussed In Caucus

Approximately 350 black leaders from across North Carolina met in Greenville today to discuss problems and progress of blacks in the state.

The occasion was the state meeting of the Black Democratic Leadership Caucus, held at Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church beginning at 1 p.m. State Senator (D-Wake County) Clarence Lightner, a former mayor of Raleigh, conducted the meeting.

Lightner expressed great pleasure at the responsiveness of blacks down to the grass roots which has resulted, he noted, in a very effective political organization in about 80 of the state's 100 counties.

Director of State Personnel Harold Webb, presented an approved affirmative action policy that is a revision of the old policy, but one that contains seven major new points. Among these are — one requiring each department to develop an internal reporting system to measure progress in employing minorities as well as handicapped persons; and a measure to assess the extent of underutilization of minorities, women, and handicapped.

"Black leaders were satisfied with the meeting, and with the way President Friday received the group," Rudisill said, "but they were not satisfied with the revised plan of desegregation."

In discussing the higher education desegregation question in North Carolina, Mrs. Jean Fairfax said that "justice for blacks in higher education is a political issue." Mrs. Fairfax is National Director of the Division of Legal Information and Community Involvement, NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund.

One of the speakers took issue with press reports on the meeting with greater UNC President William Friday that took place with representatives of the Black Demo Caucus on Friday. Elbert Rudisill, Consultant to the Coalition of Alumni and Friends of the five state supported black institutes of higher learning in North Carolina, noted that press releases stressed that black leaders were pleased with the meeting.

sions made by Hunt during his first eight months in office. Larkins indicated he was pleased with progress made to date.

E. V. Wilkins of Roper, chairperson of the black caucus of the First Congressional District, applauded the reports given from the 21 counties in the district and said he sees tremendous political growth being made.

The Pitt County unit chairperson, John Taylor, remarked "there is no question that the black leadership caucus will continue its efforts to effectively open doors for all of our people, not only here in Pitt County but across the state."

"North Carolina is going to live up to its potential in human relations," he said.

HUNG — "Chief", a 5 1/2-year-old appaloosa, is comforted during the four hours he was trapped on an 18-foot-high train trestle in the Craven County town of Vanceboro Thursday night. The horse had thrown his rider and galloped up the tracks before hanging his left rear leg between ties. An approaching train, its light visible in the background, was halted and Chief, put to sleep with anesthetic, was hauled off the tracks. Within an hour, he was on his feet, suffering only superficial cuts. (AP Laserphoto)

A Trail Of Rails Not Good Choice For Horse

VANCEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A passing motorist managed to stop an oncoming Southern Railway freight train just in time for the engineer to avoid striking a helpless victim sprawled across the railway tracks.

Only in this case, the victim was a five-year-old Appaloosa horse named Chief, who escaped with only minor cuts.

Chief's ordeal began at 6 p.m. Thursday when something spooked the horse, according to its rider, Herman Watson, 16. The animal galloped to a nearby railroad trestle, which is 18 feet above a creek.

Its left hind leg fell through the ties, sending it sprawling across the tracks.

Bobby Acker, 23, of Vanceboro, got out of his car and waved his arms to stop the train. "I was waving my arms until the engineer saw me, and then I pointed to the horse," he said. "I really didn't think the train was going to stop."

But Chief made it. "Theascal got through this thing 100 per cent," said Dr. M.H. House, a Greenville veterinarian. "I swear he was lucky."

House gave Chief an anesthetic, and then pulled his hind leg free with help from 10 other men.

Brent Locklear of Vanceboro, the horse's owner, led his still groggy animal away from the scene for a happy ending.

Special Day For Madams

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (UPI) — Brassy-haired bar girls in black net stockings and scruffy miners in pink long-johns lined the streets Saturday to honor the forgotten heroines of Western history — madams.

A boisterous mad mining town in the late 1800's, Central City hosted more than its share of prostitutes — from high class sporting house girls and fur wrapped madams to less classy camp followers.

Louisa Bunch, who was once described by a fellow madam as having a pig's snout for a nose, was the last to operate a house in the mining town. Her girls were — Buckskin Nell, Dynamite Ann and The White Hope.

On Saturday, her contributions in and out of the bedroom and those of countless and unnamed other ladies of the night were commemorated with a bed race through town and full dress ball.

The participants were local businesswomen, shop tenders and visitors. Gail Sheftel, the state's only licensed madam, says the attraction is simple.

"Every woman wants to play the role of being a hussy without the hassle," said Mrs. Sheftel, who owns a bar licensed as Madam Gail's. "It's playing the role but not the game."

Miss Bunch, known as Lou, operated her house on sandy Gunnell Hill above the town from 1899 to 1916. She closed the doors because World War I cut into the trade in Central City, but set up a new business in Denver which flourished.

More than a just bordello, Lou's establishment was a social center which featured $2 beers and a piano player. The only known picture of the proprietress shows her as portly, jeweled and smiling.

In a land where amenities were few and where women ventured out only with husbands, ladies were a treasured species. Dance hall girls not only provided companionship but wrote letters for the illiterate and nursed the sick.

Lou Bunch Day traditionally honors them all with festivities starting at the train station where local men clad in long Johns of varied hues greet the steam engine, throwing the disembarking lovelies in front of them on horses.

The bed race follows with an aged, red metal model as the sole vehicle in the time race. Entrants wear crash helmets atop their period costumes. Two miners and a dance hall girl make a team with the men switching off between reclining and pushing.

The Miners and Madam's ball, held in the Eureka Room of venerable Teller House of local opera fame, follows. Pantaloons and patent leather slacks, boas and six-shooters, garter and top hats are traditional attire.

As the band strikes up "Bird in a Gilded Cage" the parade of contestants for Madam of the Year and Lady of the Night begins with 40 contestants, ranging in age from 21 to 50 strutting around the dance floor.

What's In A Name?

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The judge's eyebrow arched only slightly, because there isn't much his honor hasn't seen.

Still, Judge Sam Gantt hesitated a split second before he read the defendant's name aloud: "Jackie Shorts," he said, gracefully refraining from making it a question.

Shorts and two friends were accused of breaking into a van and stealing some groceries. Gantt handed them two-year suspended sentences and three years on probation, and ordered them to pay $175 to the van owner.

And he offered a few words of consolation to Shorts. "I remember when I was in the Navy," Gantt said. "The commander of the Atlantic Fleet Supply was named Strong Booser."

Elvis Keepsake
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A record 262,000 copies of the Charlotte Observer rolled off the presses Friday to satisfy Elvis Presley fans.

The paper offered an eight-page "keepsake section" Friday, a tabloid-sized section featuring pictures and stories in memory of the late entertainer.

"The only thing that we can find in the records that comes anywhere near this is 195,000 copies for the first walk on the moon and that was above normal," said Jack Doyle, Observer circulation director.

News Briefs

SCLC Ends Convention

ATLANTA (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference ended its 20th anniversary convention Friday by passing several resolutions critical of President Carter and insisting that the once-powerful civil rights group is not dying.

The resolutions included measures asking that Carter bring more blacks into his administration, that he back SCLC's request for "equal time" on television to respond to his major addresses and that he meet regularly with leaders of major civil rights groups.

Pennsylvania Passes Budget

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed a $5.1 billion budget to end seven weeks of wrangling that had stopped payments to state employees and welfare recipients.

About 8,000 state employees had called in sick Friday to protest the budget delay.

The state Treasury Department kept its vaults open over the weekend and checks were to be processed immediately.

Looking For Water Source

CARRBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Orange Water and Sewer Authority, which supplies water short Chapel Hill and Carrboro, has begun looking for new emergency sources of water after negotiations with the town of Hillsborough reached an impasse.

Among the alternatives OWASA decided Friday to investigate are pumping raw water from county-owned Lake Orange or pumping treated water from the Graham-Mebane system. Either plan would require agreements with other jurisdictions and would involve pipeline construction.

Counterfeiters Sentenced

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Three men arrested in June on federal counterfeiting charges have been given sentences ranging from 18 to 30 months in prison.

David Laird Borden, 29, of Winston-Salem, pleaded guilty to a single count of counterfeiting $100 bills and was sentenced to 30 months in prison by U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Gordon.

Terry Worth Sparks, 21, pleaded guilty to two counts of passing counterfeit bills and was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

David Lee Whetzel pleaded innocent to charges of passing counterfeit bills. He was tried before Gordon on a jury waiver and given a 24-month prison sentence.

Refund On Presley Concert

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Asheville Civic Center will begin making refunds Monday to fans who bought tickets for an Elvis Presley concert scheduled for Aug. 26 which has been cancelled as a result of the singer's death.

James M. Evans, manager of the center, said the entire ticket must be turned in in order to receive a refund and that refunds will be made only at the box office. He said refunds must have been obtained by Sept. 23.

Evans said he regretted it would not be possible to give a refund and allow a ticket holder to keep his ticket.

Investigation Underway

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Greensboro Police Chief W.E. Swing says an internal investigation into charges that officers allowed prisoners conjugal visits is nearing completion.

Swing said Friday he expects to release a statement on the investigation next week.

Of Grave Concern

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Expressing "grave concern," the United States has asked South Africa whether there is truth to Soviet reports it plans to test a nuclear bomb, the State Department said Saturday.

A department spokesman said the inquiry — made this month — was accompanied by a warning that any nuclear tests by the South African government would carry "serious implications."

Spokesman John Medeiros said the first reports that South Africa was nearing the nuclear testing stage appeared in the Soviet press about two weeks ago.

Will Not Seek Indictment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell will not to seek an indictment against a New York FBI official who supervised an agent charged with illegal wiretapping and opening of mail, it was learned Saturday.

A defense attorney said he was "hopeful" the decision not to prosecute John F. Morley, former special agent in charge of the security division of the FBI's New York office, meant Bell also would drop prosecution against two other former New York agents he represents.

May Sell Lance's Stock

ATLANTA (UPI) — Budget Director Bert Lance's stock in the National Bank of Georgia may be sold to an Indonesian financier who has been negotiating to buy it, according to reports Saturday.

Thomas Mitchell, Lance's financial trustee, has worked out a deal whereby Mochtar Riady of Jakarta would purchase Lance's 200,700 bank shares for about $17.06 each, the Atlanta Constitution reported. A similar account appeared in Saturday's New York Times.

Mitchell, a Dalton, Ga., businessman, told the newspaper he will probably decide early next week whether to sell the stock to Riady.

Quake Hits Indonesia

By HARI HARTOJO
JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A massive earthquake on the Indian Ocean floor created a tidal wave nearly 100 feet high that left scores of persons dead or missing in Indonesia's eastern islands, officials said Saturday.

The earthquake that sent the tidal wave, or tsunami, rushing toward land may have been the most powerful jolt in the earth's crust in recorded history, seismologists in Europe said.

Sumbawa island east of Bali was devastated by the roaring wall of water, reports from the area said. The tidal wave swept more than 650 feet inland and obliterated every trace of the fishing village of Ai Kaptang. Initial casualty reports reaching Jakarta said 31 persons died on Sumbawa. At least 75 persons were reported missing on Sumbawa, including the 32 residents of the demolished fishing village, and the neighboring island of Lombok.

At least 10 persons were seriously injured by the wave, which swept across the thinly populated islands at midday Friday.

A STEADY STREAM OF PEOPLE HONOR ELVIS — Thousands of Elvis Presley fans file past his final resting place in a mausoleum, left, here Saturday. At least 10,000 were expected to day to make the one-mile walk from the front gate and pay their respects to Presley who died Tuesday and was entombed Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Historic Year For ECU Ahead

East Carolina University begins a new session this week and it will be an historic one for the institution.

The university will begin for the first time operating on the semester system, a major change from the quarter system that has previously been followed.

Then 28 men and women will begin their studies in the ECU School of Medicine this week, the first class whose members are expected to continue and obtain doctor of medicine degrees on the local campus.

Going to the semester system was a desirable change, and not only because it puts the university in step with most other major colleges and universities of the state. It also meant that the entire curriculum had to be examined and revised to accommodate the semester courses. This process has given every school and department and every professor the opportunity to reexamine the programs. The beginning of classes in the medical school is not really a radical change since first year classes have been taught here previously and sent on to Chapel Hill to complete their studies. A core faculty for the medical school has been on campus for a number of years.

What is exciting about Fall, 1977 is the fact that the full four-year School of Medicine is at last a reality and this class won't stop until its members are full fledged physicians.

East Carolina University seems to be in robust health as the fall semester begins. A record number of students will report to the campus this week. Internal changes are being made which will make the institution's programs more effective. Finally new programs are beginning which will provide huge benefits to the people of our state.

We look for an outstanding year.

A Laudable Safety Record For Plant

Employees of the big Kinston Dupont plant were recently given bronze medallions commemorating the plant's world safety record of 66,645,399 injury-free man hours.

The record stretches back to March 26, 1964, 13 years ago and the plant continues to add to the injury-free hours worked each day.

This is a laudable safety record and it shows that employees and management alike are extremely conscious of plant safety. We hope the record will stand for many years.

Research Is 100 Years Old

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The North Carolina General Assembly in 1877 passed a law establishing an "Agricultural Experiment and Fertilizer Control Station... to aid... in suppressing fraud in the sale of commercial fertilizers... carry on experiments on the nutrition and growth of plants... and carry on other investigations as the Department of Agriculture may direct."

Now, 100 years later, the Experiment Station is recalling a "Century of Service" with a review of what has been accomplished, and what may lie ahead.

While still called "station," the program in reality is no longer one "place," but rather an umbrella-type organization working as the research arm of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at North Carolina State University.

The program also works with the forestry resources program, with the school of home economics at UNC-

Greensboro, and with the state and federal departments of agriculture.

The Payoff
The most important part of the program is what it accomplishes in the field: the "payoff" to North Carolina farmers. Station scientists have developed more than 200 new and improved crop varieties, developed techniques to mechanize peanut and tobacco farming, improved methods of fertilizing and liming Tar Heel soils, and contributed to control of insects, diseases, weeds, nematodes, and other pests.

One contribution alone—will-resistant Oxford 26 tobacco—has been worth more to the state than all the money ever spent by the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Research in the dairy industry has increased productivity by 60 per cent in one generation, and the state's modern pickling, country ham, and dairy industries have been built largely on Station research.

Future developments in agriculture are in the laboratories at this time. One of the most important recent steps has been success in "cloning" plants.

BILL NOBLITT

The laboratory experts have taken small pieces from a loblolly pine, and in small bottles of special nutrients caused cell division resulting in a complete new plant.

The genius of this is that thousands of small plants can be produced in a short time, each faithful to the genetic characteristics of the single parent plant. The clones can be produced from the best plants, retaining the strengths, in a short time while root cuttings or growing seedlings are both time consuming, and not guaranteed to produce the best plants.

What's Ahead
Work is now moving ahead on other agricultural crops. Work by station scientists led to "Sweet Acidophilus" milk with bacteria which aid digestion. That product is now marketed across the country.

Researchers are now working on a way to sterilize milk so that it requires no refrigeration. Rapid heating by injecting steam into the milk to bring it up to 90 degrees above boiling in less than one second may result in a new way to prepare milk for market. At the same time, researchers are looking into ways to package the product since current methods are not suitable for sterile milk.

North Carolina wine may one day be a major product due to development of Dixie, a new muscadine grape which averages more than seven tons per acre, and can be mechanically harvested.

Sunday Morning Notes

A friend recently joined a tour group on a trip to Europe.

One of the guys on the trip was assigned to a room in which he found a stone that had been thrown and broken a window.

It was late so the traveller cleaned up the glass, tossed the stone outside and went to bed.

The next morning he awoke to a strange, pressure on his chest.

He opened his eyes — to find a pigeon staring back at him.

The bird had found the broken window during the night and made its way in to roost on the man's chest.

Talk about strange bedfellows.

Okay we have an explanation of how Dog's Head got its name.

The area, as we wrote a couple of weeks ago, is along Dickinson Avenue.

George Saad, proprietor of Carolina Grill, called and asked, "You really don't know how Dog's Head got its name?"

We allowed that we didn't.

He explained that when Center Brick Warehouse and Cannons Warehouse were in existence in that area, there were bunk rooms upstairs. Farmers coming to town to sell their tobacco, and others could stay there overnight.

"Looking out at the intersection of Ninth, Dickinson and Atlantic Avenues, it had the appearance of a dog's head," Saad explained.

So that's it... and as unofficial mayor of Dog's Head, George ought to know.

By ADAM ZAGORIN
CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Not since Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt centuries ago has there been fewer Jews in this ancient land of the pharaohs.

The second exodus began after the Suez crisis in 1956. Within two years, more than 90 per cent of the 40,000 Jews in Egypt had gone.

Now, calling his decision "a contribution to the peace for which we are striving," President Anwar Sadat has said those who left since the creation of Israel in 1948 are welcome to return.

Most who left went to Israel, others to the United States, Canada, South America and Europe.

Today only about 200 remain, 50 less than last year.

A Friday night visit to the Ismaili synagogue in downtown Cairo finds a group of eight waiting to begin the Sabbath. Not one is under 60.

"We don't start the prayer without at least ten people" — the quota, or "minyan" decreed by Jewish law, said Emil Pinto, assistant rabbi and unofficial community spokesman. He said services rarely begin on time.

The synagogue was built in 1907 to hold 5,000 worshippers. Tall marble columns, ornate chandeliers and gold leaf stars of David adorn the walls. They are reminders of a time when Jews were among the wealthiest businessmen in Egypt.

"Our last wedding was more than 20 years ago," Pinto, 73, said. The last fulltime rabbi died in the United States six years ago.

But despite the departure of friends and relatives, most Jews who remain do not want to leave.

Dr. Victor Bromberg, 55, a Cairo dentist, is an example.

Public Forum

To the Editor:

I would like to express my disappointment in the way The Daily Reflector handled the information sent to them regarding the 1977 National Scout Jamboree.

There were no articles regarding the Jamboree during the time the Jamboree took place and only one afterward which had very little significant information.

I see no excuse for this because the hometown correspondent, John Hendrix, of Jamboree Troop 625 sent information out periodically the entire week. John was not given any recognition at all for the work he did to inform the people at home.

There were 64 Scouts from the eastern part of North Carolina attending the Jamboree and 22 Scouts from Pitt County alone, and yet not a single name was mentioned.

I hope that in the future when we have boys from this area participating in a national event such as the Jamboree, that more care is taken in informing the public of what is going on.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Postponing China Policy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance arrives in Peking Monday (Aug. 22) restrained by President Carter's decision to postpone — though definitely not to reject — the aggressive new China policy urged on him by expert Sinologists in his administration.

That decision was made at a Washington meeting July 30 presided over by the President himself. Vance in China has authority to talk and listen — but not to grant the condition demanded by the Communist regime as the price for full diplomatic relations with Washington: abandonment of Taiwan.

Abandonment was unmistakably pointed to by a top secret policy paper prepared by the administration's resident China experts, and that paper by no means has been repudiated. Rather, the July 30 meeting determined the time was not propitious for so dramatic a shift. "The thinking was," one official told us, "that an awful lot had been attempted in foreign policy, with not that many good results."

This suggests the President has not yet decided the China question, a difficult foreign policy area where he has been tugged and pulled at by advisers. After first hinting at the abandonment of Taiwan, candidate Carter shifted ground in the second presidential debate by pledging "the preservation of the independence and freedom of the people of Taiwan."

Sinologists brought into the Carter administration regarded this as a campaign

"retreat" from the ambiguous Shanghai communiqué of February 1972, in which President Nixon moved toward eventual recognition of Peking to the exclusion of Taiwan. So a speech by Vance on June 29 went beyond the Shanghai communiqué by acknowledging the existence of only "one China," and one day later the President chimed in by promising only to "make sure that the peaceful lives of the Taiwanese, the Republic of China, is (sic) maintained" — moving away from his campaign support of Taiwan.

Behind this rhetoric is one of Washington's most closely-held and widely-criticized documents: PRM-24, an inter-agency report on China policy. Although the style of listing competing options results in no formal recommendation, there is little disagreement that PRM-24 leads remorselessly to this policy:

A rapid rupture of diplomatic relations with Taiwan and abrogation of the U.S.—Taiwanese defense treaty, permitting full diplomatic relations with mainland China—perhaps setting this up during Vance's trip to Peking. All U.S. governmental facilities would be pulled off Taiwan. However, military aid to Peking would be inadvisable for now.

Behind the smokescreen of competing options, PRM-24 is wrestling with these puzzlers: if diplomatic and military ties were broken with Taiwan, how could the island be protected? By military aid without a defense treaty? By coaxing Peking into some guarantee?

Whether or not the President's advisers finally realized they were facing an inherent contradiction, the consensus gradually grew in the administration's upper reaches that PRM-24 could not now be followed to its conclusion. The fact Mr. Carter had his hands full — Israel, Panama, Korea, Cuba — was the reason for the July 30 decision to make Vance's journey a goodwill, exploratory visit.

Even so, China policy remains in the hands of the three principal authors of PRM-24. Sinologists Michel Oksenberg of the National

Strength For Today

PRINCIPLES OF PRAYER
The famous Dr. Grenfell, whose ministry some seventy-five years ago to the people of barren Labrador is one of the brightest spots in the history of the church, spoke and wrote much about prayer.

"The Good Physician of the North," as he was sometimes called, once explained, "Prayer to me means speaking to my Father in heaven... I approach Him exactly as I would approach anyone else to whom I would make petitions, and I address Him as my common sense suggests, in perfect confidence that that is the way He would wish me to treat Him. I credit him with knowing how much I want a thing, and whether I am willing to do everything in my power to obtain it. I expect he will look to me to be willing to pay the price. I never expect Him to do my share."

Grenfell here expressed two major principles of prayer. The first is that we should approach God simply and with confidence. The second is that we should accept responsibility for fulfilling our part of the bargain.

Portfolio Managers Cautious

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A current analysis of the shares of International Business Machines by Merrill Lynch foresees earnings rising from $15.94 in 1976 to $17.50 or more this year and to $20 in 1978.

Many other analysts also foresee rising earnings for the world's largest electronic computer maker, but that doesn't mean they see the price per share rising also, as you might expect.

IBM, in fact, is now selling about 20 points below its 1977 high of $286.12 and has fallen as low as $244.50, even though the company itself entered the market with an offer of $280 for its own shares.

The IBM case illustrates what could be a chronic problem with the stock market — or at least an explanation for its lack of sustained drive.

That problem is the interpretation of the prudent man principle — not the principle itself but the interpretation of the principle — which calls for fiduciaries to exercise the same diligence in managing other people's money as would a prudent person in managing his own.

The principle has long been a part of fundamental common law, but now it has been put into statutory form as part of ERISA, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, and that seems to have scared portfolio managers.

Not just those who manage pension funds, either. By logical extension, the reasoning involved in ERISA easily could apply to mutual funds and others.

Underlying the situation is uncertainty. What does the law mean? That the manager of a fund should diversify for safety? Should eliminate risk, insofar as possible, even if it lowers income?

Portfolio managers seem to have chosen the course of least risk. Some are diversifying to the extent that they have a fair representation in all areas of the market. "Nobody will accuse us of favoritism," they say.

Others have decided to look at the fixed-income market, choosing to lower their risk and perhaps their income in order to be assured of a certain level of return, however unglamorous.

In effect, to fear risk is to fear the stock market. It is a deadly attitude.

In the process, IBM, the biggest holding of institutions, has been sold heavily, not solely because of any doubts about its growth prospects, but because of institutions' fears they would be accused of overemphasizing the holding.

More than $140 million of IBM shares were liquidated by mutual funds alone in the first quarter of the year. Again in the second quarter IBM was the stock most heavily sold by the funds, according to Vickers Associates.

The problem, for IBM at least, is accentuated by the well known tendency of institutions to be as much concerned with the trading patterns of their competitors as they are with fundamentals. There is a think-alike attitude. The fears that were spread by putting into law the prudent man principle, and tendency of institutions to think alike, is often overlooked by analysts who refer to the market as representing the public mood.

The public might have other ideas. As the Wall Street Journal noted, "One of the best-documented cases of schizophrenia in the stock market has been the divergent paths taken lately by the big institutionally favored stocks and the stocks of smaller companies."

Briefly stated, while the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue chip stocks has dropped 12 per cent over the past 12 months, the market value index of the American Stock Exchange has climbed more than 15 per cent.

The public's idea of prudence seems to be different. Individual investors do not have to fear what others will say; it's their money, their fate, and they're free to act as they please.

And acting as they please, they seem to be a lot more positive than the institutions.

Carter Has Jewish OK

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although President Jimmy Carter has been criticized by many Jewish leaders for his Middle East policy, a large majority of the Jewish public in the U.S. overwhelmingly expresses approval of Carter's performance in office.

Analysis based on six national surveys conducted between May and June shows 66 per cent of Jews saying they approve of the way Carter is handling his job as chief executive, while 17 per cent disapprove and 17 per cent are undecided.

Much of the criticism directed at Carter is due to proposals regarding disposition of territory on the West bank of the Jordan River, now held by the Israelis. The President has said the U.S. expects Israel to withdraw from this territory as part of a Middle East solution.

Majority Approval Found In All Groups

In today's special analysis of Carter's popularity, two-thirds of Jews express approval of the Carter performance, closely paralleling the approval vote given by other groups within the population. Roughly two-thirds of Catholics and Protestants, for example, also approve.

Carter's popularity profile, in fact, is characterized by a consistency of approval by the major population groups. He wins majority approval from all groups, except Republicans. Yet with this group, too, approval outweighs disapproval.

And despite persistent criticism on the part of labor leaders toward what they view as Carter's failure to aggressively pursue pro-labor policies, members of labor union families hold views which closely parallel those of non-union people.

Little Difference By Region Of Nation

Although Republican incumbent Gerald Ford received a majority of the popular vote in the Far West in last fall's presidential election, Carter's job rating is as high there as elsewhere.

The dissatisfaction expressed by black leaders with the efforts of the Carter administration on behalf of blacks is not reflected in the approval vote given Carter by blacks as a whole. Both Northern and Southern blacks give a two-thirds approval vote to Carter.

The sharpest differences in the survey are found on the basis of education. Although persons with college training tend to be more Republican than groups with less formal education, approval of Carter is higher among college-educated respondents today than among those with less education.

In terms of occupation groups, farmers are least likely to approve of the way Carter is handling his job, but a majority, 54 per cent, nonetheless approves.

Following is the question asked:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Carter is handling his job as President?"

Security Council (NSC) staff and William Gleysteen of the State Department want existing ties with Taiwan broken. The third collaborator, NSC director Zbigniew Brzezinski, is far less interested in deserting Taiwan than in strengthening the U.S.-Peking link at the expense of Moscow.

The gray eminence guiding this policy is Sinologist Doak Barnett at the Brookings Institution, who warns that failure to formalize relations with Peking could provoke Sino-Soviet rapprochement. Harvard Professor-emeritus John K. Fairbank is the policy's father-figure; his New York Times article urging the U.S. to meet Peking's demands for cutting ties with Taiwan is cited favorably by high-ranking U.S. officials.

PRM-10, the secret inter-agency document on world-wide U.S. military force structures, reflects the hold of the Barnett-Fairbank thesis. It compares a "current presence baseline" (Alaska-Japan-Korea-Okinawa-Philippines) in the Pacific with a "reduced presence baseline" (Alaska-Japan-Okinawa-Guam); nowhere in the massive document is the military significance of Taiwan even mentioned. What reappears intermittently is fear of Sino-Soviet rapprochement.

Despite the administration's human rights campaign, the moral argument against abandoning 17 million citizens of Taiwan who live in incomparably greater freedom than 800 million mainland Chinese does not interest the President's Sinologists. Less idealistically, the President might want to consider what the hard-headed gentlemen in Peking think of a super-power with so little faithfulness toward small allies. By giving Vance a limited mission, the President gives himself more time to compare the advice of his Sinologists with competing advice from others.

ment of Motor Vehicles, got behind a car which was traveling exactly 55 miles per hour recently.

The speed of the vehicle never varied until the man slowed to pull into a service station.

Carl pulled in behind and commended the man for running exactly at the speed limit.

"You won't catch me running over 55," the man answered. "Let me show you something."

They went to his car and the man lifted the gas pedal. He had fashioned a hollow reed and dropped it over the accelerator rod, cut to the proper length to hold the car to 55 miles per hour.

Then he showed Carl a letter. He had been convicted of running over 70 and a second conviction would have meant revocation of license.

A Conservative View

Troublesome Questions On The Airbag Edict

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania has taken the lead in the House. Bob Griffin of Michigan has taken the lead in the Senate. If they're successful, both chambers will have an opportunity to vote the airbag edict up or down before October 9. These are rollcalls that ought to be taken.

No aspect of American life touches more families more closely — not even education or health care — than the family automobile. Upwards of 130 million Americans are licensed drivers; they operate 100 million passenger cars. Anything that significantly affects the automobile significantly affects just about everybody. On such issues, the people rightfully may expect their elected representatives to stand up and be counted.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams issued his controversial order on June 30. Under this mandate, manufacturers and importers must see that all new automobiles are equipped with passive restraint systems. The order becomes effective on large cars with the 1982 model year, and extends to all cars by 1985. Congress has until October 9 to overturn the decree.

The issue presents serious questions both of fact and of philosophy. The Department of Transportation's requirement of a passive restraint system would embrace the passive seat belt, now in use on certain Volkswagens, but what everyone seems to be talking about is the airbag. This is the device, installed in front seats, that inflates instantly upon head-on impacts at 11 to 17 miles per hour. The DOT believes that once all automobiles were so equipped, 9,000 lives would be saved annually; personal injury premiums would be "substantially" reduced; total economic savings would amount to the billions.

Shuster has raised some troublesome questions of fact. At bottom, he challenges the validity of the statistics having to do with "real-world" testing of the airbag. Upwards of 11,000 automobiles have been used since 1973 for experimental purposes. They have been involved in 153 crashes that have resulted in airbag deployment. Twelve inadvertent inflations have occurred. Four persons have died despite the airbag protection, but it is acknowledged that they would have died anyhow.

It is not a great deal to go on. Joan Claybrook, administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, concedes that "the fatality data are insufficient to permit drawing statistically supportable conclusions." Professional statisticians are in furious disagreement, charging one another with "scientifically inexcusable" procedures, in their analysis of the extrapolated data.

On the issue of reliability, the proponents have the better case. These devices do work. What is unknown, and for the time being unknowable, is how well they will work in mass production, over the average 10-year lifetime of a passenger car. Estimates of cost vary widely. The DOT says the airbag will add $97 to the cost of a new car. The Delorean Corporation, experts in the field, says $112. General Motors says $193. Ford says $235. Estimates of annual operating costs are even farther apart. The device weighs 38 pounds. Including some expense for occasional inspection and maintenance, Ford puts the lifetime cost of operation at $88. That isn't much if it saves a life.

Reading the conflicting literature, you get two different stories on what will happen to insurance rates. You get two different pictures as to safety. Shuster is concerned that the sodium azide, used to inflate the airbag, presents a serious safety hazard, and his objection seems to be well taken. You also hear some earnest arguments from the seatbelt manufacturers; discounting their obvious self-interest, they make some good points. It all cries out for thorough public airing.

Hearings on the overturn resolutions are set for September 8-9 in the Senate, for September 9-12 in the House. Shuster fears, with some reason, that the House subcommittee, controlled by airbag proponents, will simply sit on the measure. "If I can ever get it to the floor," says Shuster, "it will pass handily." He has 161 co-sponsors, a good start toward the 218 anti-airbag votes he would need.

My own objections, for what they may be worth, are wholly philosophical. The requirement strikes me as one more costly manifestation of the Big Brother syndrome. If there is any real popular demand for the devices, a free market will fill it. If the people don't want airbags, why should government compel them to buy the things? The questions of fact are important. It would be useful to hear these other questions argued, too.

Then There Are Times To Try Mother's Soul

There are many distressing things in this world — war, pestilence, famine, ONE DAY AT A TIME's return to prime time television — but there is nothing more heart-rending than the sight of a sobbing mother scraping her child's curls off the floor of a beauty parlor.

When Phillip first mentioned that Meg needed a haircut, I almost went to pieces.

"She does NOT need a haircut!" I shrieked. "Her hair is just right!"

"Sure," Phillip said. "And what do you call the style — English sheepdog?"

"That's not fair. You know I keep it out of her eyes with a barrette."

"Yeah, for the five minutes every morning before she pulls it out. And look at all that hair on the back of her neck. You know it's uncomfortable. Face it — she NEEDS a haircut."

"She does not!" I insisted. "What is a little discomfort when beauty is at stake?"

"You have a PLAYBOY philosophy. You want to make your daughter suffer just because she's a girl. Now is that fair?"

"You just don't understand."

"I moaned, fondling the blond curls that tumbled to my daughter's shoulders. "Where were you all those months of measuring her one hair with a ruler? I even made up a growth chart. Where were you when I was drawing bows on the back of her skull with magic markers just so that she wouldn't be mistaken for a boy? It's not me that's unfair — it's a society that thinks all babies are born boys and that sexual differentiation doesn't occur until age six."

"You look BEAUTIFUL!" he said when we got into the car. "Did you behave for the nice lady?"

"The lady cut Meg's hair," Meg giggled. "I like that."

"Did Mommy behave?" Phillip asked.

"Mommy crying."

"Mommy's silly," he said, glaring at me.

"Mommy try to bite lad's lady's arm," Meg continued. "GAIL!" he groaned.

I just stared ahead, clutching the curls I had managed to retrieve from the floor.

"Okay, what is it you don't like about it?" he said when we reached the restaurant.

"It's short."

"So is my sister. But you like her."

"You know what I mean," I said, my lips quivering. "She looks like a boy."

"She does NOT!" he said. "She looks like a beautiful little girl with stylishly short hair."

Just then, a man walked by and said, "Isn't that boy kind of old for a doll?"

"I don't know about that," Phillip snapped. "But I do know one thing for certain — a woman your age shouldn't be wearing pants in public."

"I don't know about that," Phillip snapped. "But I do know one thing for certain — a woman your age shouldn't be wearing pants in public."

Call Gary Stewart The 'King Of Honky Tonk'

FORT PIERCE, Fla. — He's called the King of Honky-Tonk and commands $1,000 a night on European tours. Country music star Gary Stewart could live anywhere he wants.

He stays in Fort Pierce, Florida, explaining, "It's the South, and I'll never leave. It's nice and slow here. Everybody's family." Indeed, the local phone directory lists over 30 Stewarts, "and every one of them claims to be Gary's kin," said a man who claimed to be his uncle.

Stewart comes home from singing his special brand of country music to a modest frame house on a dirt road. He relaxes in a rocker on the front porch, or waxes his black '41 Buick out in the yard.

"If I get caught up in big cars and fancy homes, I'll lose touch with the people," he explains. "My music is simple honky-tonk. It's nothing too eloquent, cause I'm a simple man."

He likes his wife's simple cooking. Mary Lou pickles her own corn, green tomatoes, cabbage and green beans in crocks on their front porch. Then she fries them in fat back when her husband comes home. Stewart's other favorites include okra and porkchops... and beer.

"You know, up until a few years ago, all our friends were always kidding Gary about being lazy," Mary Lou said. "We never could get him up off the sofa to go to the beach or nothing. But now he is working hard — no question about that. Being on the road really takes it out of you."

But all those years before, he was far from lazy. He came to Fort Pierce when he was 12. The family's coal mine failed in Payne Gap, Kentucky, and they moved farther south. By 15, Stewart had quit school and was playing guitar in local bars. Two years later, he married Mary Lou Taylor, four years his senior, and worked in an aircraft factory by day. By night he wrote songs.

When his music began to sell, the Stewarts moved to Nashville, the country music capitol. During one period, four of his creations were listed on the country top ten charts.

"At first the songs came without much effort," Stewart said, "but after a while we lost what we had. I wasn't living what I was writing. I felt like I was doing the songs 'assembly line,' just to make money. It got to where my heart wasn't in it any more."

The family, which by that time included two children, moved back to Fort Pierce. Stewart started a musical group, an act with "real class" — pink tuxedos with glitter lapels. Eventually he began recording his own songs, some of them more rock than country.

"My country music is influenced by rock," Stewart explains, "and my rock music was influenced by country. You might call it rockabilly, a cross between rock and hillbilly. Ronnie Milsapp calls it 'crock.' Rock is a driving music, and it comes out in my country

Born in Tel Aviv in what was then Palestine, Bromberg grew up in Cairo, studied later at the Faculte Francaise in Beirut.

"I had many Egyptian friends, but I didn't speak Arabic because I went to a foreign school — like many people in those days," he said.

Bromberg managed to hold onto his clinic after the Suez crisis when the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser nationalized most Jewish property and deported many Jews. He was detained for more than a year after the outbreak of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, along with an estimated 225 Jews, the last of whom were released in 1970.

Bromberg's Tunisian-born wife, Sarine, explained her husband's desire to remain in Egypt.

"He could leave, but why should he? We like it here, and you must also know what living in New York costs now," she said, showing off the spacious clinic where her husband has practiced for more than 20 years.

When it comes to politics, the Brombergs have little to say.

"We are not interested in that sort of thing. We deal with the Egyptian people and they don't change. That is all we care about," Bromberg said.

Said another community member, who is over 70, "At my age I can do nothing, but if I were 20 years younger, I would leave."

He said his only friends were Jewish and claimed most community members left because of limited employment opportunities.

Concerning the future of Israel, he said "We never speak about this. Please don't ask me anything more about politics."

The 'Happy' Gulf Coast Clams Stir Appetites

By BILL CRIDER

Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —

Happy clams lie snug in the mud in Gulf Coast bays, living out their 17-year span undisturbed by man, except for offshore oil drillers or pipeline dredges.

Somehow the hungry Cajun coast, which does not disdain even the lowly crawfish, never got around to clams. They like oysters, they like redfish, shrimp, trout, even red beans and rice — but hardly anybody has tasted the simple but noble clam chowder.

Since nobody here eats them, nobody catches them.

"The market has always been up East," said Ron Dugas, a biologist for the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Department. "It's like, you can have gold, but if nobody wants to buy it, it is worthless."

But now the eastern clam market is worried. A combination of overfishing and the pollution of metropolitan sludge have combined to reduce the harvest of surf clams along the Atlantic Coast.

It has been a strain to the clam industry, which is bigger than you might think.

The latest statistics showed a commercial catch by 17,000 fishermen, nearly all along the East Coast, of 113.2 million pounds of clam meat, with a dockside value of $43.7 million.

Some 130 clam processing plants employed 3,775 people in 1975. The wholesale value of the processed meat was $106.8 million.

The industry employs about 3,775 people in 130 clam processing plants in 1975 and the wholesale value of the processed meat was $106.8 million.

Fishermen who go after hard clams, the type harvested off the Louisiana coast on an experimental basis, were paid $21.7 million for the 14.8 million pounds of meat shucked in 1975.

The rising price of clams caught the eye of Capt. Baldo Pausina of New Orleans, an oysterman. He kept posted on the impending Great Chowder Calamity. Last fall he was granted the first clam lease in Louisiana history.

The lease covered a section of Battledore Reef, which lies 23 miles east-southeast of Pointe a la Hache, an area dotted by offshore oil platforms.

Converting an oyster boat into a temporary clam dredger, Pausina scratched up 7,000 bushels in three months, alternating between a day of dredging and a day of traveling.

On the New York market, hard clam meat brings about $2.02 a pound. A bushel averages five to six pounds of meat. So Pausina didn't lose money on his venture — but he didn't make his accustomed profit, either.

Oysters, for instance, bring about $8 a sack here and move fast, compared to $2.50 to $3 for a sack of clams, with one buyer, a big chowder maker with a standing order for all the clams anybody wants to bring in.

Despite the disparity in price, clamming offers a great advantage to Louisiana oystermen.

The clam business fits neatly and profitably into the months when oystermen, if they don't want to overfish their beds, have to pull back and let the oysters spawn and grow.

"Most oystermen lay off during the summer," said Dugas.

"I hope clamming catches on. I would at least like to see as a part-time thing to take the pressure off the oysters."

Groucho Marx Dead At Age 86...

drew. Miss Fleming left about 15 minutes earlier.

His early comedy years were spent with the family, the five Marx brothers. With Groucho's death, only Zeppo, 74, is still alive. The least known brother, Gummo, died this year. Chico died in 1961 and Harpo in 1964.

In recent years, a new era of affection for Groucho and the Marx Brothers had emerged, spawned by television reruns of their films, the "You Bet Your Life" game show and live theater revivals.

On May 6, 1972, Groucho embarked on what was to be a series of concerts. "An Evening of Groucho" at Carnegie Hall in New York that first night was sold out the day after it was announced. More than 3,500 youths — many dressed as the various Marx Brothers — were turned away from the theater.

It was the 37-year-old Miss Fleming who brought Groucho out of retirement for the Carnegie Hall appearance, and friends credited her with keeping him alive by her stimulating influence.

Friends also said Groucho was never aware in his last few months that his name was in the headlines during the court fight over who should be named guardian of his $2.8 million estate.

The struggle was between Miss Fleming, a former actress who was hired as Groucho's secretary in 1970 and had been his almost constant companion. The battle ended last July when the comedian's grandson, 27-year-old Andrew, was named permanent guardian.

Groucho, whose given name was Julius, was born Oct. 2, 1890, in New York City, the son of Jewish immigrants.

His father, Sam, was an East Side tailor who lived to 101. His mother, Minnie, was the daughter of a wandering magician and sister of Al Shean of the famed Gallagher and Shean vaudeville team. She raised her five sons in poverty but managed to save enough to give the boys music lessons. She was immortalized on Broadway in the musical "Minnie's Boys."

Groucho was the third of five sons. His brothers were, in order of birth: Leonard (Chico), Arthur (Harpo), Milton (Gummo), and Herbert (Zeppo).

The brothers never considered themselves a comedy act until one day in Nacogdoches, Tex., when a runaway mule started a minor riot outside the theater and caused most of the audience to leave.

The infuriated brothers began joking and lured the audience back inside with their antics — the comedy act was born.

The brothers' first movie was a film version of "The Cocoanuts" in 1929. "Animal Crackers" was next, followed by "Monkey Business," "Horse Feathers," "Duck Soup," "A Night at the Opera" and "A Day at the Races."

The brothers retired in 1941 after "The Big Store," but returned in 1946 to make "A Night in Casablanca" and "Love Happy" in 1948.

Groucho and his first wife, now Mrs. Ruth Garrity, were divorced in 1943 after a 22-year marriage. Their two children, Arthur and Miriam, are writers. He and his second wife, Kay Gorcey, were divorced in 1950. They had a daughter, Melinda.

Groucho was divorced from his third wife, Eden, in 1968 and was ordered to pay a $1 million settlement.

However, employees at The Book Barn reported only one of five copies of the book was sold yesterday there, adding that "a couple of glossy pictures" of Presley were also sold.

Radio stations in Pitt County say they have been playing more Presley records than usual since his death.

Radio WNCT in Greenville and WFAG in Farmville reported every other record they played the day after his death was a Presley record, while yesterday, every third or fourth record was a Presley tune.

The Farmville station and WOOW in Greenville indicated they are staging special shows featuring Presley records and items about his life.

because of housing," he says. "If there's enough housing in town, we'll have more. If not, we'll have about the same as last year."

Dormitory housing on campus is full and there is a waiting list, according to Dan Wooten, ECU housing director. Off campus housing is reported to be scarce.

Returning students and faculty will find, in addition to transition to the semester system, some noticeable changes on the campus. These include the widening of some streets on campus and along the perimeter, alterations and remodeling of some buildings, a new drainage system for parts of the campus, extensive tree-trimming and beautification, and a purple and gold (yellow) paint job on the railroad trestle spanning Charles Boulevard near the ECU athletic complex.

The front of Whichard Building which houses the offices of Admissions and Registrar, along with others, is being remodeled to correspond with that of adjacent Wright Building on the circle of the ECU fountain. These are among the oldest landmark buildings on the campus. A new and more spacious Student Supply Store is nearing completion in the annex of Wright Building.

Troy W. Pate Jr., of Goldsboro, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, is scheduled to address the traditional opening-of-school faculty convocation at Mendenhall Student Center at 9 a.m. Monday. Pate will fill in for veteran chancellor Dr. Leo W. Jenkins whose recent illness may force him to miss the first convocation he has not attended on campus in 30 years, or since he came to East Carolina in 1947. Last year marked Jenkins' 29th year of attendance at the faculty convocation.

Jenkins is reported making favorable progress toward recovery after a mild heart attack suffered in July, but his doctors have recommended restricting his activity. It was not certain whether he will make an appearance at the convocation Monday. Jenkins is to retire as chancellor in 1978.

School and departmental staff meetings will be held following the convocation, and representatives to the Chancellor's Advisory Council will be selected.

A meeting of all new faculty members — and there is a large number — is scheduled Monday afternoon. Also, there will be an organizational meeting of Faculty Senate committees.

All faculty advisors will be on duty 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Wednesday to assist students in drop-add procedures and in completing registration.

Classes for the Fall semester begin at 8 a.m. on Thursday. It is one of the earliest openings of the school year in ECU annuals.

Of particular note is the launching of the long-awaited, new four-year ECU School of Medicine with admission of its first class, numbering 28 students. Medical school officials reported excellent progress in preparing for the admission of the first class, chosen from 350 applications received within a relatively brief period after provisional accreditation of the school was awarded last Spring.

CHICAGO (AP) — One out of 20 of the nation's physicians is a D.O. rather than an M.D., says Dr. George J. Lulbel, president of the American Osteopathic Association.

Most doctors of osteopathy are general practitioners, and they treat 10 per cent of the patients, Lulbel says.

Population Of Loving County, Tex., Still Shrinks

By R. MICHAEL PATTERSON
MENTONE, Tex. (UPI) — The latest birth in Loving County was in 1921. The most recent death was in 1971. There are no doctors, lawyers, hospitals, civic clubs, newspapers or cemeteries.

Only two graves are registered in the 648-square mile county. One belongs to a cowpoke who was dragged to death by his horse. It is not known who is buried in the other.

The water is too salty to drink. Fresh water must be hauled in tanks from Pecos, Tex., 25 miles away. A foyer in the courthouse has big glass water bottles lined up for the drinking fountain.

The drinking fountain is next to the four book shelves that comprise the county's library.

Crime is virtually nonexistent. Mary Belle Jones, who minds the sheriff's, tax assessor and collector's office for her husband, simply locked up and left for the rest of a summer day.

This west Texas town — located four miles east of the muddy Pecos River and south of the New Mexico border — claims the distinction of being the seat of the least-populated county in Texas.

At last count, 112 persons resided in Loving County, 42 of them in Mentone, the only town.

Entertainment has been noticeably absent since Newt Keen had the pool tables removed from his cafe.

"Everybody reads a lot," said Edna Reed Clayton, the district clerk. "And everybody works all the time."

Mrs. Clayton, who served from 1945 to 1947 as the state's first woman sheriff, also ranches with her husband on the sandy desert.

A deep well on the ranch furnishes water to use in a washing machine or bathing, but it is undrinkable.

"You get used to anything. You don't have to haul it very often. And you've got to go to town anyway," she said.

The population is dropping. "A lot of people move out," Mrs. Clayton said, "but they keep their voting rights here."

"Oh hell, you get used to it," said Keen, the owner of Keen's Cafe, located across the two-lane highway from the courthouse.

The cafe has a wooden bar that smells of spilled beer, a wooden floor, a half-dozen tables. A jukebox stands in a corner.

Service in Keen's Cafe is informal.

"Would 'ya like some more iced tea," Keen asked. He shuffles around the room in a pair of worn high-heeled boots and a white tee shirt. He is a former cowboy with a sly, boyish grin.

"There ain't no such thing as a former cowboy," an eaves-dropping customer said. "You either is or you isn't."

But neither could handle the pesky flies around the bar. "Boy," said Keen, holding a fly swatter. "I ran out of that good fly spray and they just about took over."

Jack, who took his first snuff when he was 5 or 6 years old, once had the distinction of being the only kid in town.

Now the handful of children attend the town's school until sixth-grade, then are bused to the next county.

Since there aren't any drive-in grocery stores handy to grab a loaf of bread or half-gallon of milk, Keen tries to keep enough on hand in his disorganized stockroom to help folks in a bind.

"I try to sell it to them for about what it costs me," he said.

The county is named after Oliver Loving, a rancher who helped blaze cattle trails to markets in the north. Loving was once attacked by Comanches, shot and left for dead.

Chewing on an old kid glove for nourishment, he crawled five miles for help. Some traders found him, and charged the ailing cattleman $250 to haul him to Fort Sumner, N.M. Loving later died of the wounds. A partner packed his body in charcoal and took it to Weatherford, Tex., where he wished to be buried.

A French surveyor named Mentone after his home on the French Riviera.

Canning Book Is Expanded

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — A paperback cookbook that has been a classic for generations of home canners is going into bookstores shortly.

"The Blue Book" will continue to be sold by mail by the publisher, Ball Corp., manufacturers of canning and freezing supplies. The updated and enlarged 30th edition contains more recipes than previous ones, including a special diet section for today's weight-conscious consumers and several pages of tips in a chapter called "The Problem Solver."

The latter lists conditions in home canned, preserved and pickled foods, causes and prevention.

Among the more unusual recipes in the new edition are blackberry cordial, peanut butter to be processed in a boiling water bath for long-term storage, canned shad (a variety of freshwater fish that is very expensive in stores), prickly pear marmalade and dilled Brussels sprouts.

The company also is distributing nationally through retail stores a line of home canning utensils, including a flexible plastic wand for freeing bubbles from packed jars before sealing. The plastic is preferred to the old-fashioned use of a metal knife because it avoids the risk of invisible scratches that could cause a jar to break under pressure canning conditions. The neck of the new plastic canning funnel is premarked to indicate the recommended one-quarter inch fill line.

Find Consumers Willing To Save

READING, Pa. (UPI) — Consumers are increasingly willing to change living habits to reduce the daytime use of electricity, a recent survey shows.

Returns on 60,000 questionnaires sent to householders in New Jersey and Pennsylvania by General Public Utilities Corp. showed 53 per cent of those responding have changed their household routines, compared with 42 per cent in a study a year earlier.

"Consumers of electricity are realizing that the construction of costly new generating plants can be minimized by reducing the daytime peak demand for energy, and that this will help limit future rate increases," said Robert W. Smith, the company's manager of consumer affairs.

MORE RICE
BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina expects to harvest some 330,000 tons of rice this year, or 7 per cent more than in the 1975-76 season, according to this country's Secretary for Agriculture and Livestock.

Big Changes In Test-Tube City

By JEFFERY L. SHELER
NILES, Mich. (UPI) — Out of the wooded hills and farmland near this southwestern Michigan town soon may rise a "test tube city" that could set the course of urban life in the 21st century.

Brookfield Farm, proposed population, 20,000, is the brain-child of an Indiana urban planner who wants to give scientists, sociologists, engineers and educators a practical testing ground for their theories.

"It would primarily be a bedroom community, with no heavy industries as such," said T. Brooks Brademas, head of the Mishawaka, Ind., development firm that designed the Alaska pipeline port city of Valdez. The company recently bought 550 acres of farmland west of here. Brademas hopes to break ground on the project within four years.

Families would live in modern, multiple dwellings, heated by solar or other nonfossil energy, nestled in a natural setting of trees and open space, he said.

"The day of the single family home is quickly coming to an end. So much space is consumed by row after row of houses. But by building multiple dwellings, we will have more room for recreation, natural parks, open areas where people can back-pack or ski.

People who inhabit Brookfield Farms would be "average Americans" who would not be screened or recruited, Brademas said.

"However, they would have to come in knowing they are part of a continuing research project. If, for instance, they do not want to expose their children to an experimental educational system, they may not want to live here. We would try to set down the ground rules beforehand.

"It doesn't make sense the way we do a lot of things in our urban areas today," said Brademas, 49, brother of Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind.

"There is so much waste: wasted energy, wasted land, wasted materials. And there are so many untested ideas on improving urban life that are never going to be tested under the pressure of making a buck. "But a new community, built from scratch as a continuing research project under the direction of a university, could provide an ideal laboratory where these ideas could be leisurely checked out and evaluated."

Brademas said advances in solar heating, home construction, waste recycling, land use, education, recreation, social structure and governmental organization could be tried and tested in the community "in a leisurely fashion over a period of 20 years.

"If they work, we then can train young men and women in these various fields to go out and apply these ideas to other communities, to make a better America. That's what it's all about."

While the experts will play a major role in planning details of the community, Brademas said, he has some ideas of his own.

The educational system would be conservation-oriented.

"There would be no schools. Instead, community television would beam daily lessons into the home, eliminating the need for expensive classrooms."

All religions would worship in the same facility, Brademas said, "cutting the waste of space and energy resulting from separate church buildings that are used only one or two days a week."

Brademas said the University of Notre Dame about 20 miles away is interested in the project. He said he hopes the university will agree to oversee the community's long-range research.

Brademas said he has not estimated the cost of building Brookfield Farms. He hopes it will be underwritten by grants from federal agencies and private companies wanting to test new energy-saving products and techniques.

"It is definitely not designed as a profit-making venture," he said.

Although he has not yet made official requests for permission to proceed with the project, Brademas has conferred with Berrien County and Bertrand Township officials.

They are not enthusiastic about the project. They fear the impact of a city of 20,000 growing up in their backyards "overnight."

"There is some deep-rooted concern here about the added tax burden of providing a new school system, new roads, and other services to a city that springs up out there in what now is agricultural land," said Bertrand Township Supervisor Albert Siekman.

"Most people I know of who are aware of the project are a bit skeptical," he said.

Study Car Cost And Save More

ROCHESTER, Minn. (UPI) — Americans have a running love affair with the automobile and even the energy crunch isn't likely to change that right away.

But motorists can effect economies if they study their car costs in the same manner as many corporations which have large numbers of employees on the road, according to an auto-use management firm.

Instead of handing out flat-rate mileage reimbursement for salespeople using their own cars, companies are achieving a break-even arrangement through a two-part plan that accurately analyzes car-operating expenses, says Runzheimer and Company.

The analysis involves standing costs and operating expenses. Among the standing or fixed costs are fees for registration and license, insurance premiums and depreciation.

Rufus Runzheimer, who heads the firm, advises his clients to figure these costs on a monthly basis for reimbursement purposes. For a late-model, mid-sized, air-conditioned Chevy or Plymouth, they add up to $1,584.85 a year, he said.

"Running expenses" consist mainly of gas, tires and maintenance. For the same type of car, running expenses amount to a little more than six cents a mile.

Runzheimer offers the following tips on other ways to save on operating costs:

— Consider going to a smaller car. A large percentage of companies surveyed have already moved down from standard sized to intermediate or smaller cars this year.

— Lengthen the trade-in cycle on your automobile. Many outfits (18 per cent) are operating their cars for longer periods of time.

— Use a self-service gas station whenever possible. Prices at attended pumps are one to two cents higher per gallon.

— Take higher deductibles on collision and fire-theft insurance policies. Auto insurance costs have soared and now gobble up 13.6 per cent of annual vehicle expenditures.

A Big Book On Writing That Readers Will Love

SUBJECT OF EXHIBIT — Archibald DeBow Murphey, lawyer, senator and judge, who outlined brilliant plans for the state of North Carolina, but did not live to see them carried out. is the subject of an exhibit at the N.C. Museum of History, Raleigh.

PAGES: The World of Books, Writers, and Writing By Matthew J. Bruccoli, Editorial Director. Detroit, Michigan. Gale Research Co., Book Tower, 304 pp., $24.00.

This book about writing is for readers, and it's as if Life magazine had used words instead of pictures, although the book has plenty of the latter. There are astonishing interior portraits of writers, perhaps more revealing than they realized, delightful gossip items, revealing photographs of poets full of youth and promise and photographs of these same people ten or twelve years later relaxing into maturity or driven and fearful; a book auction at Sotheby's; a series on your favorite detective heroes; essays on writing for movies and TV; a peek at Maruice Sendak's monsters and not-so-monsters; and, as they say, much, much more!

The collection opens with James Dickey's "Notes for Works in Progress" in which the author puts himself in the extreme danger and we shall have to wait and see if he can get himself out. He outlines his ideas for two novels which will be strongly connected, his ideas of the basic concepts to be explored, i.e., the fabulous death and the dangerousness of ideas, and his ideas of the novels' worth.

"...I truly believe that Alnilam and Crux will create a new sensibility for mankind," he writes. "Of course this is extravagant and immodest as one applies it to oneself. Nevertheless, it is true. If I can bring this thing off, Tolstoy will seem a minor writer."

So Dickey has jumped into the deep water with Miller and Solzhenitsyn and we'll watch with fascination their struggles to reach shore with the great American novel, or a change in the course of Russian history or a new sensibility for mankind. These talented and ego-driven men make usual heroes pale by comparison.

Malcolm Cowley's essay on Erskine Caldwell could not have provided a more dramatic contrast as the critic charges the writer with not having aimed high enough. "Writers learn from life, if they are lucky, but they also learn from other writers, and Caldwell has learning less than his contemporaries..."

These differing aims and levels of quality are not confined to the writers, of course. Publishers get in their licks. Patrick O'Conner of Popular Library talks about paperback publishing and merchandizing. Bantam Books paid $1,850,000 for the rights to Ragtime; Woodward and Bernstein's All the President's Men got more than $1,000,000; and James Michener's unpublished Interview With The Vampire brought $700,000. Popular Library publishes between 20 and 24 books per month, with each book having a short life span.

"...The mass-market paperbacks...are not chosen by anybody. Each publisher has his quota of racks in the bookstore, which are filled up at regular intervals by the guy who drives the truck...For the important titles, perhaps as long as six weeks or two months in the sun; for most others, out with the old lot and in with the new every time the driver makes a delivery."

If this makes you despair turn to Vernon Sternberg of Southern Illinois University Press who publishes a book just because it should be published. "...He's a servant of good books...an ingenious fox who regularly takes big risks, publishing works that larger, financially more comfortable houses would not touch for fear of loss or embarrassment." SIU Press is needed to publish such people as Isak Dinesen and R. Buckminster Fuller whom most of us would assume any press would grab. Any press won't, that's why SIU Press must.

If publishing isn't your interest, PAGES throws in an essay on what the old whalers read. Did you ever wonder?

Wallace Markfield adds a humorous note on the high level of idiocy to be found in that stratum of society known as college professors — English professors in particular. He feels that "...serving as writer-in-residence can be like working as playground director in the Kremlin."

Jesse Stuart, to the contrary, feels that three teachers (two were college professors), were the making of him. "...Three teachers and a book have been the great influences to send my books to libraries, schools, and homes over American and to countries and peoples on six of the earth's continents."

Finally, there is a tribute to a great reader, Charles E. Feinberg. This rare human, whose "...life would have been a desert without books," has spent his life collecting anything connected with Walt Whitman and has, instead of hoarding or merchandizing the material, given it to the American people through the Smithsonian Institution. He continues to collect and pass on to the Smithsonian. "...I don't know how you can go through life without sharing if you have things that you want to share with others."

Perhaps that is the essence of this book — a sharing with the reader of the writer's world. I loved every page and so will you.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JOE STINES

Fantasies involving animals have an air of timelessness about them which appear to attract readers young and old. There are many great animal fantasies including THE WIND IN THE WILLOWS, WATERSHIP DOWN, MRS. FRISBY AND THE RATS OF NIMH, and ALICE IN WONDERLAND, to name a few. Most of these are characterized by intriguing plots, unforgettable characters, and master storytelling.

HIGH TREASON AT CATFISH BEND (1977) by Ben Lucien Burman is the latest such fantasy to be added to Sheppard Memorial's collection. Character development is strong with unusual individuals such as: Judge Black, the vegetarian blacksnake trying to live down the snake's bad reputation; J. C., the sporty fox, always tormenting the silly Rabbit with a rabbit's foot; and a Bible toting rattlesnake from the Tennessee hills. These and other carefully drawn characters set off across the great western plains hoping to find greener pastures in California. The route is treacherous causing great loss to the adventuring band of animals. The plot is somewhat weak and fizzles near the end, but the story is worthwhile for its characters alone. HIGH TREASON AT CATFISH BEND is a genial satire on the absurdities of our time, a rich entertainment, an adventure story, and a sly commentary on the generation gap. It's simple but none-the-less appealing.

Another unusual animal fantasy is GEORGE STONE'S A LEGEND OF WOLF SONG (1975). This is the story of Wolf, a teacher and prophet among his kind. Wolf, guided by a vision, struggles to overcome taboo and fear among his fellow wolves bringing song back to their lips. He dares to be different realizing that only through the young can he accomplish his mission. With his mate, Shewolf, at his side he patiently nurtures his dream. Stone has poetically captured an inner drive within Wolf so characteristic of the sometimes overpowering desires of man. The following excerpt illustrates that drive. "Slowly his head arced upward, ears back. His jaws parted slightly, lips cupping forward. And for the very first time, he began to sing. Lowly and nervously. The air seemed to still as his voice rose, and his entire consciousness poured into his song. It stirred his spirit as nothing ever had. He was at one eager and afraid, ecstatic and melancholy. But the compulsion that drove him was absolute. And he gave himself to the night."

Stone's writing style is refreshing and he makes great use of vocabulary. A LEGEND OF WOLF SONG is an adventure, a revelation and an unusual love story.

Red Rocks Amphitheater Is 'Just Awesome'

By K.C. MASON
DENVER (UPI) — A natural amphitheater, starlit nights, mild mountain temperatures and good music are drawing nearly half a million visitors to Red Rocks this summer — 9,000 at a time.

Formed by mother nature 60 million years ago, the 170-foot Creation Rock to the north and Shiprock on the south provide the natural acoustics for a variety of performers ranging from Willie Nelson to Ethel Merman.

"There is hardly anything that doesn't sound good in there," said Barry Fey, Denver's top concert promoter. "It's a little too mellow for hard rock, but it's just an exquisite place to play."

Fey and his Feyline Productions will have put on 25 concerts at Red Rocks before the summer ends. The Denver Symphony Orchestra's scheduled guests include violinist Eugene Fodor, singer Ethel Merman and comedian Red Skelton.

"An entertainer sees the place and just stands there with his mouth open," said Fey. "It's inspiring to the artists and to the crowd, well, it's just awesome."

Backing the performers is Stage Rock, about half the height of the dynamic 45-degree angle monoliths which bind the audience. The crowd faces east. The higher level seating gives a majestic view over Stage Rock to the night lights of Denver.

The amphitheater is a portion of the 639-acre Red Rocks Park, taken over by the City of Denver in 1927. Theater construction began in 1932. The WPA and the Civilian Conservation Corps provided most of the workers.

The architect was Bernham Hoyt of the Architectural Forum, who used native red sandstone to blend necessary buildings, seating and steps into their natural setting.

"For a setting of weird natural beauty, this theater is unrivaled in the world," Hoyt was quoted as saying at the time of construction. "It's a superb example of what an architect can do with a helping hand from God."

The theater was opened formally on June 15, 1941. The Denver Municipal Band featured soloist Helen Jepson for the Rotary International Convention. Festival concerts in the late '40s featured Helen Traubel, Igor and Soulima Stravinsky, Jose Iturbi, Lauritz Melchior and Agnes Davis.

In later years came the grand productions of Wagner's "Die Walkure" and Haydn's "The Creation." Pucini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West" was performed in 1959.

Saturday night square dancing was a regular feature in the '50s. Then came the Beatles in 1963, and the beginning of rock music at Red Rocks.

"That was probably the most momentous moment for Red Rocks," said Roberta Niles, an administrative assistant in the Denver Parks and Recreation Department. "A lot has changed since then."

Feyline productions in August alone include Renaissance, Grover Washington, Dan Fogelburg, Jackson Brown, Jimmy Buffet, Waylon Jennings, Neil Sedaka, Seals & Crofts, Bonnie Raitt and George Benson.

"Dan Fogelburg insisted on playing Red Rocks," said Fey. "He gave up two or three other offers to come here."

There is no reserved seating. The more hardy folk wanting front row seats take their sleeping bags and camp overnight. The middle-area seating usually goes to those who bring picnic lunches and play in the afternoon sun.

Upper level seating goes to the late arrivals, but they often get the best parking places and a terrific view of the city.

"Getting traffic in and out of there is the biggest problem," said Richard Fischer, supervisor of the Denver Parks Police. "Free movement is awfully restricted. We usually keep a tow truck pretty busy."

Feyline hires a squad of huge men to keep more enthusiastic fans away from the performers and their equipment. Capt. Jerry Kennedy of the Denver Police Department hires 35 off-duty officers for crowd and traffic control.

"Our biggest thing is trying to keep the freeloaders out," said Kennedy. "We've got parking and vehicle movement pretty well organized."

Kennedy worries most about drunks and marijuana smokers losing their equilibrium on the rocks or steps. Fischer's men patrol the park all week to keep people off the monoliths and other rock formations.

"It's unlawful to climb the rocks, but it doesn't stop them," said Fischer. "Even in dry weather, it's easy to fall off. We get a minimum of two and a maximum of 20 deaths and about 50 injuries every year."

The prohibition doesn't stop concert goers from climbing up for a better view. Feyline warns the fans to get down, but the police rarely force them off. Nobody wants a hassle at Red Rocks.

Class Provides Driving Tips To Older Drivers

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer
ROSEVILLE, Minn. (AP) —

Cy Weis says he has been driving for 55 of his 75 years without ever having a fender-bender, but says he doesn't enjoy driving as much as he used to.

Weis, who said driving was no more difficult for him than it ever had been, did confess that he got a little more tired now that he was older.

So the St. Paul man enrolled in a class for older drivers sponsored by the Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association.

The refresher course is designed specifically to train older persons how to react in potentially dangerous situations they might encounter while driving.

Using the National Safety Council's defensive driver's manual as their workbook, the senior citizens attend eight hours of instruction including sound movies, lectures and discussion. The classes, held throughout Minnesota, cost $2 and normally number 15 to 35 students.

An estimated 2,500 senior citizens have attended the classes.

Volunteer instructor Werner Schaezner, 72, told a recent class that "People 65 and over are the most cautious drivers." Schaezner noted that while older drivers have experience and, it is hoped, good judgment, their physical and sensory facilities may have deteriorated.

Ninety per cent of a driver's information depends on his eyes, he said, and it takes even seconds just for the eyes to adjust to bright headlights or a flash of lightning.

Harry Bruncke, 72, Falcon Heights, another of the course teachers, says he doesn't like headlights shining into his eyes and therefore no longer drives after dark. And when he's in the mood for a leisurely Sunday drive, Bruncke avoids freeways where drivers zip along at about 55 miles per hour.

Bruncke said driving courses were appropriate for senior citizens because "there are a lot of us who just learned as we drove."

Esther Tessman, St. Paul, was a class member who fell into that category. She has been driving since the days of the Model T Ford, drives in New York, Washington and other large cities, has never been in an accident and has never taken a driver's test.

Mrs. Tessman was licensed before tests were given and she kept renewing the licenses. She has 120,000 miles on her present car and 100,000 on the preceding one. In retirement from her job as a public health nurse, the sprightly widow drives about 1,000 miles a month and said she found the course very helpful.

Among the hints Schaezner passed on to his students was to get a good night's rest before starting a drive. The students are also told about the dangers of driving while under the influence of alcohol, amphetamines, barbiturates, tranquilizers and other drugs.

Singleton Sparks Orioles Past Twins

By BRENT KALLESTAD
AP Sports Writer
BLOOMINGTON (AP) — Baltimore's Ken Singleton really doesn't care what opposing pitchers throw him, but like all good hitters he prefers strikes. "I've had a lot of good luck against Minnesota, so they've switched tactics against me," said Singleton after the Orioles' 6-2 victory Saturday.

boosted Baltimore into a 3-0 lead.

"The home run pitch to Singleton was a good, low strike, but it was over the plate," said Minnesota pitcher Pete Redfern, who dropped to 5-8. "It was a good pitch. But when you're hot, you're hot, like Singleton."

Singleton, who hit .278 with 13 home runs and 70 RBI last year, already has 19 homers and 75 RBI to accompany a .334 average—second highest in the American League.

"We didn't think we were as bad as everyone made us out to be," said Singleton. "When the season began, everybody just gave the Eastern Division to the Yankees or Boston, and that wasn't right."

Baltimore, which has won eight of its last 10 games, took a 1-0 lead on Andres Mora's RBI single in the second. The Orioles chased Redfern in the top of the seventh when they built their lead to 4-0 on Al Bumbry's RBI single.

Grimsley lost his shutout bid in the seventh when Craig Kusick belted his 11th home run of the season for Minnesota, which has lost six of its last eight games to drop out of first place in the American League West.

The Orioles added a pair of insurance runs to take a 6-1 lead in the top of the ninth when Dave Skaggs singled in Mora and Doug DeCinces.

Mora singled and DeCinces, trying to bunt, popped up to Twins third baseman Jerry Terrell, who elected to let the ball drop and try for a double play. The ball skipped through Terrell's legs and both runners were safe.

Minnesota scored in the ninth against Martinez when Larry Hisle drove in his 95th run of the year when he singled home Roy Smalley, who doubled off the center field fence. Skaggs, Bumbry and Mora each contributed two hits to Baltimore's 13-hit attack.

Rod Carew singled in four trips to the plate to extend his latest hitting streak to 10 games, but his average dipped to .381.

Martinez picked up his third save of the season.

The Orioles clinched the season series against Minnesota with the victory. Baltimore has a 6-3 edge with the season finale between the two clubs scheduled Sunday.

Hard Workout For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

If things keep up the way they have been University football coach Pat Dye may think about carving out a practice field next door to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

That way, the injured won't have too far to go.

"We've got a lot of people hurt" Dye said Saturday evening after a three-hour game-type scrimmage. "We've had to do a lot of hitting, but there is no other way to get done what he have to without hitting."

A number of players were on crutches or were limping before the day was out. Among them were safety Gerald Hall, fullback Vince Kolanko, second string center Jeff Hagans, and offensive lineman Matt Mulholland.

"We did get in some good licks," Dye said of the scrimmage. "And we got everybody into the game and gave them a chance to show what they could do. That's one thing we really wanted to get done."

For the most part, the offensive and defensive units that are expected to draw starting duty did most of the scoring, grinding out a 38-14 victory over the subs. But the work was spotty, with both teams looking good at times and not quite as good other times.

"We gave our first offense and defense a lot of work against North Carolina State's offense and defense, and we should learn a lot from the practice. But we still made a lot of mistakes, a lot of silly penalties, and we left the ball on the ground too much," Dye said.

The injuries worry Dye despite the fact that the Pirates have the best depth they've ever had. "We just don't know if we have enough people to be winners when we go against the type of competition we are going up against."

Dye was pleased with the punting on Rodney Allen during the day. He also felt that Barry Johnson got in some good blocks from the tight end position. "Steve Greer did some good things at quarterback, and Leander (Green) and Jimmy (Southernland) had some good plays, but were not consistent," the coach added.

"I really can't tell a lot until we look at the films. That will show us a lot that you can't see at eye-level."

Dye did feel that the passing game of the Pirates has shown improvement. "There's no question that it's better than it's been. I think we threw the ball a lot more today than we have been."

"We had a good day's work, but we've got to get our walking wounded back and get people off crutches. Maybe a day off will pick them up," he said, referring to the Sunday break.

"I think we can be a good football team, but we're not close to being one yet. Right now, with everyone on crutches, we look like Pitt Memorial Hospital, so we're going to have to slack off on the hitting for a while."

The workout ended two-day drills for the Pirates, who will look at the scrimmage films on Monday prior to practicing. Tuesday, registration will be held for school, with classes getting underway on Thursday.

"We've got a lot of work to do to polish off our offense and iron out our defensive mistakes. And it's going to be time to play before we know it," Dye said.

That first game is now just 13 days away.

CHICAGO (AP) — George Mitterwald's RBI single with two out in the eighth inning scored Bobby Murcer from third base Saturday to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Murcer opened the inning with a walk, was bunted to second and moved to third on an infield out before scoring on Mitterwald's single. Mitterwald had earlier hit his ninth home run of the season.

The loss cut the Dodgers' lead over Cincinnati to 9½ games in the National League West as the Reds defeated the New York Mets.

Steve Yeager doubled home a Dodger run in the second and singled home a run in the sixth after Garvey doubled. The Dodgers added a run in the seventh on a hit batsman, a balk by starter Bill Bonham and a single by Bill Russell.

Charlie Hough, 5-9, was charged with the loss, while reliever Willie Hernandez, 7-4, got the win with help from Dave Giusti, who worked the ninth to earn his first save for the Cubs.

The Cubs trailed 3-1 going into the seventh when Bill Buckner hit a three-run homer, his 10th, to put Chicago ahead. But the Dodgers tied it in the eighth with an unearned run.

Steve Garvey singled, went to third on an error and scored when pinch-hitter Manny Mota

North: Win Will Happen

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Andy North, holding a solid, three-stroke lead, takes a philosophical view of the chances for his first pro golf tour victory Sunday over the last 18 holes of the rich Westchester Classic.

"It's just something that's going to happen sometime," the lanky North said Saturday after taking command with his six-under-par 65.

"If it happens tomorrow, that's fine. If it doesn't happen tomorrow, that's fine, too."

"All I can do is go out and try to shoot a decent score."

"I've been in this position before, been in position to win, and I tried to force it and I couldn't play at all. You can't force it, can't force the birdies. All you can do is play your best and try to let it happen."

North's third-round effort unlocked the biggest tangle of players tied for the top in this decade and made him the man to catch in the event that offers a total purse of $300,000.

"And this," he noted, "is not an easy course to play catch-up on."

finished with a 201 total, 12 under par.

"I played very, very well over the front nine," he said, "and then just kind of hung on. I was very fortunate to get it in as well as I did."

He missed five of the last nine greens but one-putted to save par on four of them.

Tom Weiskopf and big Howard Twitty put on closing rushes to tie for second at 204 with 18 holes to go in the chase for a $60,000 first prize. Weiskopf closed birdie-eagle, lashing a two iron second shot to within five feet of the flag on the final hole, and Twitty finished off birdie-birdie-birdie. Each had a two-under-par 69.

Leonard Thompson shot a 70 in the mild, breezy weather and was next at 205, four shots back.

Next came a group of four at 207, six under par. They included Tom Watson, winner of both the Masters and British Opens this season, former Master title-holders Charles Coody and George Archer, and Mac McLendon. Watson and Archer had 68s, McLendon 70 and Coody 72.

Thompson, Twitty, Weiskopf and Coody all started the day in a tie for the lead with Rod Curl, Miller Barber and Jim Wiechers, all of whom drifted back in the pack. Wiechers and Barber had struggling 73s and three round totals of 208. Curl was 74-209.

Jack Nicklaus shot 68 but was an all-but-impossible 12 strokes back at 213. Johnny Miller had 69-208. Defending title-holder David Graham was out of it at 72-217.

On the front side, he didn't miss a green, three times getting his approaches inside of five feet and made those putts for birdies, holed another from about eight feet and dropped his longest of the day, a 15-footer, for still another birdie. He was five-under-par for those nine holes and had five "3's" on his card.

But he was lucky to save par on the next two holes, missing the green on each, then finally making bogey on the 12th.

tween shots to warm the muscles in his chronically-ailing back.

"It's such a screwy game," he said. "The last three weeks I felt great, was really wanting to play. I played horrible, missed the cut in all three tournaments."

"I came here overly tired, not feeling very well, and I'm leading the golf tournament. I can't explain it."

He played the two nines as if he were two different people.

Golfer Andy North tiptoes a look at his chip shot to the green on the seventh hole of the Westchester Country Club Saturday. North sunk a birdie putt on the hole. # Maryland Again Looks Like Champ

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

The Atlantic Coast Conference begins its 25th football season with Maryland's Terrapins giving every indication they can continue dominance of the other six league schools.

Coach-of-the-year Jerry Claiborne, who has made the Terps the 14th winningest school in the NCAA during the past five years, is after a fourth straight ACC football crown and an extension on Maryland's 20-game winning streak against ACC opposition.

But lots of offensive power returns from a year ago at most schools, like Mike Dunn at Duke, Mark Mangas at Maryland and Ted Brown at North Carolina State. Spectacular Wake Forest running back James McDougald is back after his rookie-of-the-year season that saw him become only the third freshman in NCAA history to gain over 1,000 yards rushing.

Both Maryland and North Carolina made bowl trips last year, and the Tar Heels get the chance to avenge their Peach Bowl loss to Kentucky by opening Sept. 10 with a rematch at Lexington.

Game attendance should be higher than ever, as most schools report record ticket sales. Last year 1.3 million fans attended ACC home games, for an average of $6,145 per contest.

There will be one new face on the sidelines: Coach Charley Pell takes over at Clemson.

Here's a capsule review, in order of each

MARYLAND
Maryland enters the season as nearly everyone's choice to win a fourth consecutive ACC title. The last time the Terps lost to an ACC opponent was in 1973 against N.C. State, and this year everybody will be gunning for them.

"It is harder to stay at the top than it is to get there," says Coach Jerry Claiborne, who led the Terrapins to a perfect 11-0 regular season last year. "Once you get your head above the crowd, everybody tries to knock it off. People want to beat us for all kinds of reasons."

Maryland may have lost a little of its invincible luster in losing 30-21 to Houston in the Cotton Bowl last New Year's Day. But opponents can't look for any encouragement from the Terp backfield.

Leading the offense again at quarterback will be Mangas, who threw for 12 touchdowns and accounted for 1,500 yards last year. Chuck White, Vince Kinney and Dean Richards return as favored targets. And tailback Steve Atkins, who led the team in rushing before being slowed by injuries, should be healthy.

The defense should be sound with All-ACC linebacker Brad Carr and guard Larry Seder returning. The only question mark will be on the offensive line, where Mike Yeates, a 245-pound senior, is the only returning starter.

Last year the Terps drew criticism for an easy schedule. This year should be a little tougher, with a key test coming early against Penn State.

NORTH CAROLINA
How do you replace a workhorse who was the fifth leading ground gainer in collegiate history? North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley surely wonders as he looks at five untested candidates for graduated tailback Mike Voight's cleats.

Leaders in the class appear to be Doug Paschal and Terence Burrell, but Dooley is giving 250-pound fullback Billy Johnson a try at that slot. Don't be surprised if Dooley alternates his tailbacks every play as he did in 1974.

The Tar Heels have lost seven starters from last year's 9-3 Peach Bowl team, and their biggest rebuilding problem is the offensive line where four regulars are gone, three to the pro draft.

At quarterback, Matt Kupec won the starting role midway through last season, but to keep it he'll have to out-perform P.J. Gay, who was redshirted last year. Either is capable and could add a solid passing attack which Carolina lacked last year.

Mel Collins, a 170-pound senior wingback, is explosive and speedy if either signal caller can get the ball to him. On the line, Mike Salzano is a quick guard.

But Carolina's strongest spot is the defensive line, where tackle Dee Hardison is a potential All-America and tackle Rod Broadway is back after a year of injury. The defense came through on big plays in 1976, but it can't afford to give up 4,000 yards again this season.

WAKE FOREST
The return of sophomore running back James McDougald is enough to keep Wake Forest fans confident that this year's team can equal or better last year's 5-6 mark, even with a tough schedule.

McDougald gained 1,073 yards, 10 touchdowns and a 4.4 yard-a-carry average last year, and yet he wasn't turned loose as a starter until the sixth game.

This year, Coach Chuck Mills won't be so reserved with his potential All-America. Together with senior quarterback Mike McGlamry, center Larry Teary and wingback John Zeglinski, the Demon Deacons should be tough on offense.

Defense is a bit weaker, with a crop of green freshmen and sophomores still competing for the vacant end positions. The secondary will miss graduated Bill Armstrong, but James Royster and Dan Smadning return with experience.

DUKE
Duke will be counting heavily again on Mike Dunn, a junior quarterback, with hopes of improving on last year's 5-5-1 record. Dunn won the ACC total offense title last year, passing for more than 1,000 yards and rushing for another

Gretel II, Sverige Battle Again

By JOHN SHURR
Associated Press Writer
NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) —

Skipper Gordon Ingate of Gretel II threw the America's Cup challenger semifinals into another deadlock Saturday, beating Sweden's Sverige by 45 seconds and leaving one berth in the finals still unfilled.

Gretel II's victory tied the semifinal series at 3-3 going into Sunday's final race in the best four-of-seven series. The winner meets Alan Bond's yacht Australia when the foreign finals begin Aug. 25.

Meanwhile in the defender finals, 1974 winner Courageous traded wins with sister King's Point Syndicate yacht Independence on Saturday, picking up her first loss of the current series.

Courageous, with Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner at the helm, led all the way in the first encounter and crossed the finish line 54 seconds ahead. However, skipper Ted Hood turned the tables in race two and finished 43 seconds out front.

Austin Holds Lead Over Laura Baugh

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Scrambling to a par 72 by overcoming some admittedly poor putting, Debbie Austin held a two-stroke lead over LPGA glamour girl Laura Baugh following Saturday's second round of the $50,000 Wheeling LPGA Classic. She had a 36-hole total of 139.

back of Miss Baugh was another non-winner, Kathy Farrer, one of two golfers to shoot three-under-par 69s on a bright sunny day over Oglebay Park's rugged Speidel course.

Jan Stephenson also fired a 69, tying U.S. Women's Open champion Hollis Stacy and Joyce Kazmierski at 143. Miss Stacy, shooting an erratic round that included five birdies and five bogeys, had a 72, while Miss Kazmierski salvaged an eagle three on the par-five, 450-yard 18th hole for her 73.

Miss Baugh, perhaps the best-known player on the ladies' circuit despite the fact she has yet to win in five years on the tour, fired a two-under-par 70 for a total of 141. A shot over the par-72, 6,150-yard Speidel layout and Miss Massey fired a 71.

Gretel II won the start of Saturday's duel by a surprising 32 seconds after Sverige crossed the line early and had to gybe and begin again. The Australian yacht then stretched the lead to 1:29 at the first mark.

The time difference changed little on the next two reaching legs. However, Sverige came on strong going to windward again when Gretel II's genoa ripped, rounding the fourth mark just 55-seconds behind. Sverige, skippered by designer Pelle Petterson, kept pushing hard on the next leeward leg and Gretel II's lead was cut to 22 seconds as the yachts entered the final windward leg. But, from there Gretel II picked up time to the finish.

Indians Slip Past Oakland

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND (AP) — Reliever Jim Kern pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the 11th inning and Andre Thornton hit his 23rd home run of the season leading off the 12th to give the Cleveland Indians a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Thornton was the first batter to face A's reliever Doug Bair, 1-2. The Cleveland first baseman hit a 3-2 pitch into the left field seats, sending Oakland to its 18th defeat in its last 20 games.

The A's went six innings without a hit or a baserunner before scoring once in the seventh on Indians' starter Rick Waits. They tied the score at 4-4 in the ninth with three runs, the last two coming on a home run by Jim Tyrone, his third of the season.

Kern, 6-7, struck out six batters in 32-3 innings. He fanned Rich McKinney and Jerry Tabb to end the 11th after the A's loaded the bases on Marty Perez' triple and two intentional walks.

Practice Starts

Rose High School's girls' tennis team will open practice tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the Jaycee Park courts.

All girls wishing to participate in this year's program are urged to be there for the first session.

Coach Gwen Waller noted that it was important that those who wished to try out for the team come at that time, since the season opens early, and she will make cuts early because of that.

Super Bowl XII will be played in the Louisiana Superdome on Jan. 15, 1978.

Breezing Up

Ted Turner sailing Courageous, foreground, suffers his first loss in America's Cup Final Trials for the defense candidates Saturday. ## Brewers Down Chicago, 4-2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jim Wohlford's two-run single capped a three-run second inning as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Chicago White Sox 4-2 Saturday.

White Sox starter Steve Stone, 13-8, hit Jamie Quirk with a pitch to lead off the second. Quirk advanced to third when shortstop Al Bannister let Lenn Sakata's ground ball go through his legs.

Charlie Moore followed with an apparent double-play ball, but third baseman Eric Soderholm hit Quirk in the middle of the back with his throw to the plate for an error. Sakata and Moore moved up on a sacrifice

Driessen Leads Reds To Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Driessen drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and left-hander Fred Norman celebrated his 35th birthday with a five-hitter as the Cincinnati Reds ripped the New York Mets 8-2 Saturday.

Johnny Bench also drove in a pair of runs in the 14-hit Cincinnati attack.

The Reds jumped on loser Craig Swan, 8-8, for three runs in the first. Joe Morgan singled with one out and Ken Griffey and George Foster both walked. A passed ball by catcher Jerry Grote allowed one run to score before Driessen's double to right made it 3-0.

In the third, Morgan singled and stole second, Griffey reached on an error by Swan and then Foster doubled home one run. Bench's sacrifice fly made it 5-0.

Consecutive doubles by Driessen and Bench after singles by Morgan and Griffey made it 7-0 in the fifth and kayoed Swan.

U.S. Cagers Defeat Poland

By DAVID MINTHORN
AP Sports Writer

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Calvin Nat't scored 16 points and helped the U.S. men's basketball team to a 91-63 victory over Poland today at the World University Games.

Nat't, a 6-foot-5 reserve forward from Northeast Louisiana, had six field goals and hit four of five free throws.

Starting guards Darrell Griffith of Louisville and Freeman Williams of Portland State had 13 points each. Forwards Phil Hubbard of Michigan and substitute Walt Jordan of Purdue added 11 each as the Americans grabbed their third straight victory in the 31-nation tournament.

The Americans broke open a tight game with five minutes left in the first half after the Poles had closed the score to 30-28.

Working a fast break to perfection and forcing the Poles to commit turnovers, the Americans spurred away with 15 points and held their rivals scoreless for the rest of the period for a 45-28 halftime bulge.

But Dunn can't do it all, and his backfield will be green with all three starters graduated. He'll have to depend on all-ACC split end Tom Hall, who collected 44 passes at 13.5 yards a throw last year. Among four returning line regulars is bruising guard Mike Sandusky at 245 pounds.

Middle linebacker Carl McGee, a junior, has the size to lead the Blue Devils on defense. Two starters will be back in the secondary, but Duke will have to have more consistency on defense to better last year's mark for Coach Mike McGee.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE
North Carolina State will begin with a certain degree of desperation, needing some wins early to forget last year's 3-7-1 showing in Coach Bo Rein's debut. "We certainly left ourselves a lot of room for improvement from the 1976 season," he admits.

Seven starters will return on offense and seven on defense, and the one that gives Rein the most hope is Ted Brown, a junior running back who rushed for more than 1,000 yards his first two seasons and averaged 5.5 yards a carry last year while scoring 13 touchdowns.

Also returning is quarterback Johnny Evans and wide receiver Elijah Marshall.

On defense, a tender spot for the Wolfpack last year, the secondary will be led by Ralph Stringer, who sat out last fall with a shoulder injury and lost his vision in one eye during the off season. Up front, the Pack will be counting on Bubba Green, a 270-pound sophomore tackle.

Virginia
At Virginia, Coach Dick Bestwick doesn't have the talent to offer a lot of hope for improving on last year's 2-9 record. The quarterback and receivers positions are still big question marks and the Cavaliers have a tough schedule, opening at N.C. State and following with a trip to

Pearson Is Tops
CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — Veteran racer David Pearson hit a blistering 160.346 m.p.h. pace Saturday to take top qualifying honors for Sunday's Champion 400-mile stock car race at Michigan International Speedway.

The qualifications were marred by a head-on crash into a pit wall which sent driver Henley Gray to the hospital with compound fractures of both legs. Hospital attendants said Gray was in stable condition.

Clemson
Charley Pell comes to Clemson as the only new ACC coach this year, and Tiger fans hope he'll provide relief from the 3-62 drought last season.

Gray told track officials he believed the left front ball joint broke as he was entering the pit road, sending him into the wall.

Pearson will share the two-car front row Sunday with Cale Yarborough, who posted 160.192 m.p.h. in his qualifying run. Pearson will be in a Mercury, while Yarborough drives a Chevrolet.

Junior Steve Fuller, who completed 58 of 116 passes last year, returns at quarterback. The offense shifts from a veer to an "I" and little Warren Ratchford, 5-foot-8, 154 pounds, should be at tailback.

Thirty-six drivers qualified for the race. They will line up in 18 two-car rows for the start.

Junior Jerry Butler at split end is a talented receiver, and Trav Webb is a returning starter at tight end.

Pell was defensive coach at Clemson last year, and has seven returning starters on that squad. Archie Reese, a 263-pound senior, is expected to move up to a starting role at one tackle, and Jim Stuckey returns at the other. The secondary appears weaker with the loss of three starters from last year who graduated or moved to other positions.

Wood Gives Sox Lead

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Wilbur Wood made three changes and put the Chicago White Sox in first place.

The knuckleballer changed his delivery, his pitching style and his losing ways Friday as he hurled the White Sox to a 3-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday. It was Wood's first victory since July 22.

He traced his recent problems to dropping his elbow and pitching hand as he delivered the ball. Now he is throwing straight over the top.

About the second change, he said, "I normally throw about 80 to 85 per cent knuckle balls, but I threw a few more fast balls than normal tonight because I've just been walking too many men."

"I struck out (Don) Money on a fall ball in the ninth inning. It may have caught him by surprise, although it was kind of a gamble. But he was the leadoff hitter and I just didn't want to walk him."

"If he hits a home run, so what? We still have a one-run lead. Maybe he'll hit a fast ball 400 feet for an out. The important thing was not to walk him," Wood said.

The victory boosted the White Sox into first place in the tight American League West race by two percentage points over Texas. The Kansas City Royals and Minnesota Twins are tied for second place, one-half game behind the White Sox and Rangers.

In other AL games Friday, Baltimore edged Minnesota 3-2, Kansas City bombed Boston 9-3, New York clobbered Texas 9-1, Toronto defeated California 3-1, Cleveland nipped Oakland 2-1 and Detroit downed Seattle 6-4.

Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble belted successive homers in the second inning to back Wood's five-hit pitching. The left-hander, who increased his record to 6-5, was hit hard only in the fifth inning when the Brewers scored their lone run.

Royals 9, Red Sox 3

"My back only hurt twice all night," said Kansas City's George Brett, who returning to the lineup Friday after rested for four days because of his ailment. "It hurt when I stooped low to pick up ground balls. It hurt a little bit when I swung at low pitches."

Brett picked on a low pitch off Mike Paxton and drove it over the fence in the first inning. "Whatever pain I felt disappeared when the ball went out."

Amos Otis and John Mayberry joined Brett in the Royal home run parade as the Red Sox' AL East lead narrowed to 2½ games over Baltimore and New York.

Otis hit a three-run blast in the sixth and Mayberry slammed a two-run shot.

Orioles 3, Twins 2

Andres Mora slammed a two-run homer to back Mike Flanagan's pitching as Baltimore stopped Minnesota. Flanagan, 9-9, allowed the Twins just two hits over the final seven innings as he gained his first victory since July 24 and handed Minnesota its fifth one-run loss in a week.

walked two, facing just one batter over the minimum after the second inning. The 25-year-old Oriole left-hander outdueled Twins ace Dave Goltz, who gave up just six hits but lost his first game in six weeks and dropped to 15-7.

Yankees 8, Rangers 1

Mike Torrez hurled a four-hitter and Reggie Jackson and Roy White powered home runs as New York captured its sixth straight victory. Torrez, who earned his sixth consecutive complete-game victory, increased his record to 14-10.

The Yankees scored five unearned runs off starter Roger Moret, 2-1, capped by Jackson's two-run single.

Blue Jays 3, Angels 1

Jerry Garvin, with relief help from Pete Vukovich, snapped a 10-game losing string as the Blue Jays toppled California. The loss prevented Nolan Ryan from becoming the major leagues' first 18-game winner.

Winless since June 5, Garvin went the first 6-3 innings to increase his record to 8-13. Ryan, who struck out 13 Blue Jays to extend his major league record to 101 games with 10 or more strikeouts, is 17-11.

Indians 2, A's 1

Cleveland right-hander Al Fitzmorris pitched a five-hitter before needing ninth-inning relief help as Cleveland handed Oakland its 17th loss in its last 19 games.

Fitzmorris, 5-7, gave up a run on three hits in the first inning and then allowed only a seventh-inning single by Mitchell Page and a leadoff single by Marty Perez in the ninth before being relieved. He retired 11 batters in a row over one stretch.

Tigers 6, Mariners 4

Steve Kemp slammed two homers, driving in four runs, to power Detroit past Seattle. Kemp's hitting boosted Dave Rozema's record to 14-4, although he needed relief help in the ninth. Rozema, who gained his seventh consecutive victory, had hurled eight straight complete games.

Kemp lashed a three-run homer in the first inning and followed with a solo blast in the seventh. The Mariners picked up runs in the fourth and seventh on solo homers by Ruppert Jones and Dan Meyer.

Foster Cracks 40, 41 As Reds Sweep A Pair

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The beat goes on for George Foster—and the beatings go on for the New York Mets.

Foster continued to succeed with the long ball and the Mets continued to fail Friday night as the major league's leading slugger blasted his 40th and 41st home runs to help the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1, 4-3 doubleheader sweep.

The power display by Cincinnati's lean left-fielder gave him a special distinction, although he tended to play down the fact that he had become the first major leaguer to hit the 40-homer plateau since 1973.

The last time that figure was reached, four players did it—Willie Stargell had 44 with the Pittsburgh Pirates and Dave Johnson had 43, Darrell Evans 41 and Hank Aaron 40, all with the Atlanta Braves.

Foster's RBI total reached an astronomical figure of 116 after Friday night's performance. That averages out to nearly one a game.

Just for the record, though, Foster is within shooting distance of Hack Wilson's National League record of 56 home runs in one season and is 20 away from Roger Maris' major league mark of 61. The Reds have 40 games left.

The defeats were the eighth and ninth for the Mets in their last 11 games.

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals bombed the San Diego Padres 12-4, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-2, the Philadelphia Phillies outscored the Houston Astros 9-5, the Pittsburgh Pirates turned back the San Francisco Giants 6-1 and Atlanta trimmed Montreal 5-3 in the first game of a doubleheader before dropping a 7-2 decision in the nightcap.

with a home run, double and single, pacing a 16-hi attack that carried St. Louis over San Diego.

The stocky Tyson, a .231 hitter at the start of the game, smacked a bases-loaded double, drying in three runs during a five-run rally in the first inning.

Tyson belted his seventh homer of the season following a single by Ken Reitz in the fourth and capped his offensive flurry with a run-scoring single during a five-run fifth.

Cubs 6, Dodgers 2
Bill Buckner smashed two homers and two singles and drove in five runs against his former teammates to lead Chicago past Los Angeles.

Ivan DeJesus, also a former Dodger, had three hits and drove in the other Chicago run and Steve Ontiveros added

Southern Champs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Hub City Little League of Hattiesburg, Miss., is on its way to the World Series in Williamsport, Pa., after taking the southern regional championship.

Centerfielder Craig Walker batted in the winning run Friday night as Hub City shutout Belmont Heights Little League of Tampa, Fla., 1-0 for the southern regional title.

The single run in Friday's game came at the top of the sixth inning. Winning pitcher Charles Hayes allowed Tampa only one hit in the first when a ball hit by Willie Johnson bounced over the fence in left field and was ruled a double.

Teams from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia opened tournament play Monday at St. Petersburg's Southern Regional Headquarters Complex for Little League Baseball.

three hits to the 15-hit attack the Cubs launched against Tommy John, 14-5, whose string of 22 scoreless innings came to an end before he could retire a batter.

The Cubs' hefty offense made it easy for Mike Krukow to rack up his eighth victory in 18 decisions.

Phillies 9, Astros 5

Pitcher Larry Christenson hit a three-run homer and benefited from three other homers, winning his eighth straight game as Philadelphia beat Houston. Christenson, 12-5, homered over the center field wall in the sixth inning with Bob Boone and Ted Sizemore on base. The homer, his second this year, came off Houston starter Joe Niekro, 8-5, who gave up eight runs and nine hits in six innings.

The Phillies got three runs in the first on Bake McBride's single, a double by Greg Luzinski and Richie Hebner's 15th homer. Boone hit his 10th homer of the year in the second and Jay Johnstone hit his ninth in the sixth.

Pirates 6, Giants 1

John Candelaria pitched a five-hitter and Bill Robinson hit a two-run homer to lead Pittsburgh over San Francisco. Robinson's homer, his 22nd, came in the first inning off losing pitcher Bob Knepper, 6-7, and followed a walk by Frank Taveras.

Candelaria, 13-4, allowed only two walks and no hits over the initial 4-3 innings before Alexander lined a single to center. Derrel Thomas scored the only San Francisco run in the eighth when he tripled and came home on a sacrifice fly by Rob Andrews.

Braves 5-2, Expos 3-7

Right-hander Phil Niekro hurled a six-hitter and struck out six batters to increase his National League-leading total to 191 as Atlanta won the opener from Montreal.

Tony Perez's three-run single highlighted a four-run fifth inning that sent Montreal past Atlanta in the nightcap. After Perez smashed his bases-loaded single, he later scored the fourth run of the inning on Del Unser's base hit.

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Lions have obtained placekicker Fred Steinfort from the Seattle Seahawks in exchange for future considerations.

Steinfort was a fifth-round draft pick of the Oakland Raiders in the 1976 National Football League draft. He appeared in seven games during the regular season before an injury forced him out. Oakland placed him on waivers last week and he was picked up by Seattle.

Steinfort is a left-footed, soccer-style kicker who attended Boston College, where he set the school's career scoring mark of 215 points.

Additionally, the Lions placed kicker David Posey on waivers Friday. Posey had been picked up on waivers last week from the San Francisco 49ers.

WINNIPEG (AP) — The Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association will conduct their fall training camp in Sweden next month, General Manager Rudy Pilous announced Friday.

It will be the second season the Jets have conducted their initial training in Europe. The Jets will take part in a tournament in Sweden in September, and will also play exhibition games in Sweden and Finland.

Sipe's Surprise Bomb Allows Cleveland To Down St. Louis

By TOM CAAVAN
AP Sports Writer
Who thought mild mannered Brian Sipe would ever unleash a bomb? Certainly not the St. Louis Cardinals.

NFL Roundup
163 yards.
In Friday night's other game, Baltimore defeated Minnesota 29-7.
In NFL preseason action Saturday, Buffalo played at New Orleans, Green Bay at Tampa Bay, Pittsburgh at New York Jets, Chicago at Houston, the Giants at San Diego and Denver at Atlanta.
On Sunday, Los Angeles plays at San Francisco and Cincinnati is at Detroit. New England visits Philadelphia Monday night.
Sipe, who was to play only one period, found himself at the helm in the fourth quarter because St. Louis was blitzing so much.

The Cardinals moved into a 3-0 lead on a 35-yard field goal by Jim Bakken. The Browns, 2-1, took the lead for good as Sipe passed to Larry Poole for three yards, then fired the strike to Rucker to set up Poole's 10-yard scoring run. Don Cockroft, who later missed a pair of extra point conversions, made it 7-0 with 2:47 left in the quarter.
On the third play of the second period, free safety Thom Darden intercepted a Jim Hart pass and returned it 19 yards to the St. Louis 34. That set up the Browns' second touchdown, an 18-yard pass from Sipe to Rucker.
The Cardinals cut the margin to 13-10 with a 68-yard drive near the end of the half, capped by a one-yard Hart pass to Wayne Morris.

The Colts converted two first-half fumble recoveries into touchdowns, one on a Bert Jones pass, and frustrated four Viking scoring drives in handing Minnesota its first preseason loss.
Following a 28-yard Toni Linhart field goal midway through the first quarter, Baltimore scored on Lydell Mitchell's 12-yard touchdown run and a six-yard pass from Jones to Glenn Doughty scored in the second quarter on a four-yard run by Sammy Johnson in the nationally televised game.
The Colts added a fourth-quarter touchdown on a pass from Bill Troup to Freddie Scott.

Trevino Back As A Winner

GLENEAGLES, Scotland (AP) — His back is better and Lee Trevino has returned to what he does best—making people laugh ... that is when he is not winning golf matches.
Trevino rallied for a 3 and 2 victory over Welshman David Lewellyn in an early match, then halved with close friend Brian Barnes of Scotland, leading the United States team to a pair of 2 1/2-1 1/2 victories in the Double Diamond World Golf Classic Friday.
In the match against Wales, Trevino trailed four strokes after eight holes, but won seven straight holes in beating Lewellyn.
"I set the grass on fire on the back nine," Trevino said after he had lost four of five holes, beginning at the fourth.

Fourteen-Year-Old Sets Second Record In National AAU Swims

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Tracy Caulkins is becoming the United States' latest swimming sensation, at the tender age of 14.
The Nashville, Tenn., youngster set her second American record in two days Friday night in the National AAU Swimming Championships at the Mission Viejo International Swim Complex.

Miss Caulkins swam the fourth-fastest women's 400-meter individual medley ever, 4:48.93, in breaking the American mark of 4:51.74 she set earlier this year.
Miss Caulkins set a United States record in the women's 100-meter breaststroke Thursday night with a time of 1:13.05.
For her efforts, she has been selected to the USA team that will compete against East Germany Aug. 27-28 and the Soviet Union Sept. 3-4. She will swim both events in the dual meets.
Nancy Hoghead of Jacksonville, Fla., who finished second to Miss Caulkins Friday night, was also under the previous American record. Miss Hoghead's time was 4:50.28, and she was also picked for the national team.

Finals were held in three other individual events and two relay events Friday night.
Jesse Vassallo, 16, of Mission Viejo, Calif., won the men's 400-meter individual medley by four meters over Brian Goodell, also of Mission Viejo. Vassallo was timed in 4:27.62 to Goodell's 4:30.16. Both were picked for the national team.
Jim Montgomery of Madison, Wis., a standout at the University of Indiana, won the men's 200-meter freestyle and Gail Amundrud of Canada captured the women's 200-meter freestyle.
Montgomery, 22, was timed in 1:51.14 in winning over runner-up Rick DeMont of Long Beach, Calif., who was clocked in 1:52.25. Montgomery was the lone selection from that race for the national team.
Miss Amundrud, 20, won a hotly-contested race that saw Wendy Boglioli of Ocean, N.J. and Cynthia Woodhead of Riverside, Calif., tie for second.

SCOREBOARD

Table with columns for NFL, Transactions, Baseball Leaders, and Football. Includes scores for various games and player statistics.

AREA HUNTERS could get a big break in hunting wood ducks this season if an option offered by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) is put into effect by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission (NCWRC).

Waterfowl hunting guidelines are set up by the USFWS and state hunting laws are enacted to comply with these guidelines. One of the options open to southeastern states this year would treat the wood duck as a regular bird during a portion of the waterfowl season prior to Oct. 15. Previously, the wood duck has been given special consideration with lower bag limits all season. If this option is enacted, hunters could take four or five wood ducks per day, depending on the option chosen, during the early season.

The guidelines chosen for law by the NCWRC this season are important to area hunters because the wood duck is the most plentiful species in Pitt and surrounding counties as well as the entire state.

The NCWRC is inviting all interested persons to a public meeting at the county courthouse in New Bern on Tuesday night, Aug. 23, at 7:30. "We are holding these meetings (in New Bern and elsewhere) so that we can discuss the various options with sportsmen across the state and learn their wishes," according to a NCWRC spokesman. "This will help us choose the federal option which is most desirable."

A NUMBER OF OTHER options are being offered under the federal framework. North Carolina can choose either a 45- or 50-day duck season, which must be held between the dates of Oct. 1, 1977 and Jan. 20, 1978. If the 50-day season is selected, it must open at noon on a Wednesday. A 50-day season is also offered for Canada geese and a 60-day season is offered for snow geese. The 1976-77 snow goose season ran 30 days.

A split season can be chosen under the federal guidelines without a loss of total days. In a 50-day split duck season, both parts of the season must begin at noon on a Wednesday.

Three basic bag limit options are being offered for ducks hunting by the USFWS:
• A total of four ducks per day with a maximum of two black ducks and two wood ducks.
• A total of five ducks per day with a maximum of one black duck and two wood ducks.
• A point system similar to that enacted by the state several years ago. This system would be based on 100 points. Under the system, 10-point ducks would be blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, pintail, shoveler, gadwall, scaup, mergansers and sea ducks. 25-point ducks would be drake mallards, widgeon, ruddy ducks, buffleheads and all other species not otherwise specified. 70-point ducks would include hen mallards, wood ducks, black ducks and hooded mergansers.

Southeastern states also have the option previously mentioned which treats wood ducks as ordinary ducks for a portion of the season if the four- or five-duck bag limit system is chosen.
If a 50-day Canada goose season is chosen, the bag limit will be one per day and if a 60-day snow goose season is picked, the bag limit would be two per day.

OTHER OPTIONS offered to states by the USFWS include a daily scaup bonus of two in certain coastal areas during the season if the conventional bag limits are chosen over the point system. In addition, under a conventional bag limit system, a daily blue-winged teal bonus of two per day may be offered for the first nine days of the season. A special 105-day sea duck season is also being offered as an option for certain designated coastal areas.

All interested sportsmen are being urged by the NCWRC to attend this meeting and express their choice of the options being offered.

A Late Summer Portfolio Drawn From The Fullness of Nature

Summer's fullness brings to outdoor lovers an almost infinite variety of things to see in nature. Late summer flowers, full grown insects, ripening fruits and berries, edible and non-edible — these are but a small segment of the discoveries to be made as summer days begin to draw to a close.

BERRY CLUSTER...non-edible for humans, a feast for birds.

CIDER SAMPLING...A partially rotted apple on the bough in all probability provides this small bee nectar that is the insect equivalent of cider.

NOT ROBED DANCERS IN THE MOONLIGHT...but a sweet pea flower cluster hanging airily in an open space in front of a shadow filled niche.

FANTASTICALLY BRILLIANT...scarlet, gold, cream and green flowers of a variegated Canna lily reflects sunlight in the hollows and contours of silky petals.

PLAN YOUR HOME

DESIGN USES GARAGE FOR ZONING
THREE BEDROOM HOME, INVENTIVE FLOOR PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Exceptional in approach, this three bedroom design uses the double garage as a zoning tool that results in carefully etched sleeping space and separate, open activity areas.

The Wendhurst, a hipped roof design, shows a simply stated facade layered with horizontal siding. Arranged to suit a sloping lot, the home calls for a walk-out basement with bedroom, full bath, recreation room, and workshop.

On the main level, entry is into a closeted foyer that mingles with living areas and suggests an even larger home. Space flows freely between living room, family room, and corridor kitchen and caters to relaxed, informal living.

The living room sprawls the width of the home, and windows on three sides admit natural light. Neighboring family room, set for dining as well, hides a handy laundry niche, and the corridor kitchen maintains an unrestricted flow of space while offering ample counter space and a broom closet.

At this point, the garage juts into the plan for an automatic zoning effect. Two bedrooms and an outstanding compartmented bath are set at the other side of the garage and away from major activity areas.

On the lower level, a walk-out basement arrangement assures ideal light and ventilation for living areas. The large bedroom can serve as a teenager's private world or as a guest room, and a full bath opens into the bedroom and hallway for efficiency. A 26-ft. recreation room shows sliding glass doors to the patio, and a sizable work and storage room is also provided. In all, the Wendhurst covers 1361 sq. ft. of living space per level.

At least once a year, you should use at least a portion of one day for no other purpose than to decide what must be done when you have the energy to do something.

It applies, of course, to home owners, who are continually making mental notes of things that have to be done in the future. Most of them never actually get done, for one reason or another, but chiefly because they are remembered only when there isn't time to do them. When the time is available, they are conveniently forgotten.

One possible solution to the predicament is a deliberate checklist in which a pencil and notebook are an integral part of the process. You simply make a tour of the outside of the house, taking plenty of time to observe everything. Write down anything that needs attention.

What this does is to give you a list that you can refer to any time you get the urge to fix something. Even if the urges are few and far between, the list is permanent. While it is in existence, you cannot excuse your inaction on the grounds that you simply forgot what it was you wanted to do.

If you are serious about getting to work, the list performs a valuable function. It shows you everything that has to be fixed so that you can decide instantly which items are to get priority. How many times have you tackled a minor project only to remember later that you forgot the really important fix-it job?

As you do the checking, make up your mind that you will overlook nothing, no matter how insignificant it might seem at the time. That tiny gap between the wall and a window, for example, might not be large enough to admit a pencil, but if left neglected, could become an entranceway for a driving rain that ruins an entire wall. Therefore, check all openings, especially around doors, window frames and places where dissimilar materials are joined. A quarter's worth of caulking compound could save you hundreds of dollars later.

Look at the gutters and downspouts. Remember how, in the recent heavy rain, the water poured over the gutter at that point to the left of the bedroom window? Mark it down. Is the flashing intact at the point where the chimney comes out of the roof? Do the window wells need a cleaning so they don't overflow again? How about those two flagstones in the walkway that have sunk a bit? Make note that the mortar has started to deteriorate at several places in the brick wall. And don't forget the post in the wooden fence that is beginning to tilt. What about those gaps in the concrete patio floor? Shouldn't they be fixed before water moving into them makes the separations wider?

All right, now you have a long list. What are you going to do about it?

(Sweating windows and walls, patching plaster and concrete, noisy plumbing and toilet tank repairs are among the 35 subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Q. — We have just installed an outside structure of western red cedar. We would like to get the silvery gray effect I have seen in this kind of wood. How do we go about it?

A. — Almost everything said in the previous answer about redwood also applies to western red cedar, especially the part about the gray. Left unfinished, the cedar usually will turn gray. If you wish to hasten the process, use a bleaching agent, being very careful to follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Q. — How do I cut gypsum board?

Q. — Use a wallboard or trimming knife or any similar cutting tool. Guide the cut with a straightedge, cutting through the facing paper and into the gypsum core. Snap the board along the cut line, turn the board over and cut through the paper to complete the job.

Q. — We have knotty pine paneling in one of our rooms. It has been there about 20 years and is getting seedy looking. We now have decided to paint it. Should the knots be sealed before painting and, if so, with what?

A. — First, a shudder at the idea of painting the knotty pine paneling. Wiping it down with denatured alcohol and applying a clear finish might make it look new again. But, if you insist, it is unlikely the knots are going to cause any problems after all these years. If you want to seal them, however, you can use either diluted shellac or a knot sealer sold in most hardware stores.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11473.)

Allay The House-Renting Fear

By VIVIAN BROWN

A big basement storage bin or a large closet in an apartment where some furnishings might be stored could solve the fears of damage that keep many people from renting or exchanging their homes.

And many people, especially retired folks, are in the mood to consider such a solution after a costly vacation that has been paid for by belt-tightening while their own homes had remained vacant.

One couple chose that solution after discussing why they didn't want to rent their home: they didn't want their furnishings abused. They decided that a padlocked basement closet is the answer for them and the do-it-yourselfer will build it during the winter.

While that closet will be a tidy built-in, a big bin could serve the purpose and can be made inexpensively from used or cheap lumber. If you have the space, into it could go something as large as a chair or as small as an ashtray if you build a couple of shelves. Jewelry, silver and personal papers can go to a bank box. Some boxes are big enough to hold collections of stamps, coins, ivories and porcelains.

The prospect of an almost-free vacation may inspire a potential house-renter or trader to buy things especially to be used by the tenants — bed linens, pads, pillows, lamps, table linens. These things can be stored in the bin when your furnishings are not in it.

People who rent their homes have found that light scale furnishings, china, glassware and slipcovers may suffer wear and tear breakage. Anyone concerned about certain kinds of damage might rent replacements such as sturdier furniture or they might find some things in used furniture shops.

Storm Door Sales Seen

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Memories of last winter's bitter cold, plus expected tax incentives to spur energy conservation, are expected to push up sales and shipments of aluminum storm and replacement windows and doors this year.

A survey of manufacturers shows this would be on top of a 30 per cent increase last year.

The Aluminum Association says aluminum shipments for windows, doors and screens in 1976 climbed to an estimated 890 million pounds, about 200 million pounds more than the previous year.

Of the 890 million pounds shipped, about half was made into residential prime doors and windows, 25 per cent into storm doors and windows, and the remainder into screens and non-residential products.

Storm windows can cut heating fuel use 10 to 20 percent, a National Bureau of Standards study indicates. At average 1977 fuel prices in a 6,000 degree-day climate, such as in Chicago and Cleveland, the investment in storm windows and doors can be recovered in five years, the bureau said, based on current heating oil prices.

The payback period could be as few as two to three years for electrically heated homes.

A place should not look dreary, however, or you may not find a tenant. Most people are content with a minimum of decorating extras, providing a home is cheerful and comfortable. And many do not want furnishings that require special care, especially if there are children.

Except for a little breakage of glasses and china which was replaced at a cost of about $18, one family had no complaints on their first experience at exchange. Another woman had a tear in a slip cover. A wise rule is not to leave anything in your home that is irreplaceable, such as an heirloom, unless you know the people well.

Many renters and exchangers spend considerable time choosing the ideal family to live in their home. Sometimes the arrangements work so well that the same families exchange or rent year after year, and there is no necessity to store anything.

You don't need to build a bin, a closet or anything else if you have a big basement and can slide everything into an area that will not be used by the tenants. But most people prefer a line of demarcation, and they can also throw a tarpaulin over everything to protect it if the furnishings are in a bin.

A bin can be built at ceiling level. Or it could be built into a corner of a basement where it would be more useful. Six-inch boards — old or used — might be used horizontally for the kind of bin one might find in old houses where coal bins still exist. A large gate forms one side of the bin so that large pieces can be moved into it. Shelves can hold special books, out-of-season clothing, lamps or whatever.

Setting 2 by 4 posts in concrete may not be necessary, and one diagonal brace on the gate frame may suffice. It depends on how much effort the do-it-yourselfer wishes to expend. You will need some clearance between the post and gate so that it can swing out smoothly, but it does not need to touch the floor, nor need the bin boards reach the ceiling. Most people close such bins with a big padlock. Actually, if a corner of a basement is used, there is only one side to build and one gate plus the posts.

Encyclopedic Book For Homesteaders

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you are planning to escape to the country to try your hand at homesteading, a good book to take, along with your adze and scythe, is "Build It Better Yourself."

The editors of "Organic Gardening and Farming" magazine have put together an encyclopedic work, 960 pages of 325 indoor and outdoor projects, many fully illustrated.

The book recently published by Rodale Press ($16.95) is divided into five sections: indoor gardening projects, including making planting flats and grow-lights; outdoor gardening projects devoted to such things as arbors, compost bins, hay rakes, irrigation projects; food storage projects such as building a smokehouse; around-the-homestead projects including outdoor furniture building and making portable creek bridges; and finally, the construction of outbuildings such as sheds and barns and livestock housing.

If the book has one failing, it is that most projects are excessively functional. The lawn furniture project looks solid, to be sure, but appears designed by an overweight, paranoid pioneer who feared sitting in anything that wasn't made from two-by-six planks.

Some other projects also could have been designed with a little more grace, even though most are meant for homestead use.

The joinery is simple and functional, and directions for building are very well written. The section on tools and their uses is excellent. Beginning-to-intermediate craftsman would gain much from it.

The variety of projects also is excellent. They range from simple one-hour projects (making a bench hook, for example) to all-month affairs such as building a complete barn.

Q. What are some good cool season crops I can plant in the fall? (R. D., Benson)

A. Broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, Kohlrabi, mustard greens, turnips and turnip greens, collards, kale, rutabaga, radish leaf and head lettuce, beets, carrots, Chinese cabbage, green-bunch onions and garden peas. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

A. What is a good soil mixture to use in potting or repotting house plants? (Mr. A. W., Burlington)

A. A good, basic mix of three parts garden loam and one part organic matter, such as leaf mold, compost or peat. A good source of garden loam is the vegetable garden, especially soil that has produced Irish potatoes. Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. The stems on my zinnias break about the time the flowers open. What could be the problem? (R. E., Rocky Mount)

A. Most likely an insect—the European corn borer. Many corn fields in the state have dried up under the impact of hot, dry weather. Corn borers have turned to more succulent plants, such as zinnias, dahlias, and gladioli. Moths lay eggs on the plant leaves, and the worms which hatch from these eggs bore into the stems, causing them to weaken and break. Prune out infested stems and treat every three days with Sevin. (Jom Baker, extension entomologist)

A. Some of the pods on my okra rot. They are covered by a gray hairy mass. What could be the problem? (D. F., Lexington)

A. A fungus known scientifically as Choanephora cucurbitarum. Now for the good news. This fungus only infects unfertilized okra pods. The cause of unfertilized pods is not always clear, but it usually involves stress which might be brought on by such things as soil pH, heat or improper fertilization. Incidentally, this same fungus is known to occur on fruits of squash, southern pea, pole bean, cucumber, pumpkin and pepper. (Charles Averde, extension plant pathologist.)

Evaporation Problem Besetting Lake Mattamuskeet

THE SOUTHEAST SIDE...impoundment at Lake Mattamuskeet shows it almost completely dry, dry enough so that a four-wheel drive vehicle might be able to go all the way across, as happened in 1954, the last time the lake went so low.

MATTAMUSKEET — Lake Mattamuskeet, Hyde County's 40,000-acre fish and wildlife paradise, is evaporating away at an alarming rate, and now stands at its lowest level since 1954.

One of the driest summers in more than two decades, the drought that has cost North Carolina farmers an estimated $5 billion in crop losses, has taken a heavy toll along the shallow lakebed of Mattamuskeet.

According to Lee Fulton, assistant manager of the Mattamuskeet refuge, total rainfall at the lake measuring station since June 1 is 6.40 inches. That figure included the minuscule amount that hit the area during Monday afternoon's heavy but scattered showers in the area.

Normal rainfall during that same period would be in excess of 15 inches, and Fulton said Monday that as of now, it would require 12 inches of rain "dumped within a period of two days" to even come close to bringing the lake back to normal.

Under normal conditions, the level of Mattamuskeet at the refuge measuring spot ranges between 3.3 and 3.6 feet. Monday afternoon's level was less than two feet, Fulton said it is ranging from 1.80 to 1.40, and that the drop since June totaled 2.44 feet.

"It's been going steadily down since, I imagine, April," Fulton said. "The fellows who have been here for 20 or 30 years say the only thing comparable was in 1954. That was the last time the impoundment went dry. They drove across it then in four-wheel drive vehicles."

Fulton explained that Mattamuskeet, which is simply a huge catch basin for runoff water from the surrounding area, is evaporating. The lake is not fed by springs or rivers. It is a huge, shallow depression which relies on rainfall and runoff to maintain its level.

What about the effect of the drought on fish and wildlife in and around the lake? According to Jim Roberts, the refuge manager, the greatest loss has been to the fish population. There have been some minor fish kills because of algae bloom in the four drainage canals (which feed drainage from farmlands into the lake), but no huge losses so far.

Roberts did say, though, that it will probably take three to four years for the fish to recover their normal balance in the lake.

"In a normal year," Roberts said Tuesday, "we like to have some drawdown. This allows the edges of the lakebed to serve as germinating grounds for some vegetation."

"This year, though, it's dried so much that everything dies out."

Roberts said that extensive beds of spikerush have been destroyed, and that the marshes are "not in good shape and not producing." Within the lakebed itself, he said, large areas of wild celery, a favorite food of all ducks, have been "seriously damaged."

Roberts projects, "It doesn't look like a good food . . . year" for migratory bird populations. Although just as many birds may be attracted to the lake this year, the lack of food will force them to leave much sooner than normal.

One of the things compounding the problems for the refuge managers is that there is no way to control water. Drainage from farmlands feeds into the lake, and the canal network in turn drains into the Pamlico Sound. To prevent the intrusion of salt water into the lake, a series of "salt water flaps" or tidegates, close when the sound level is higher than the lake. As of Tuesday, the sound stood approximately 1.5 feet higher than Lake Mattamuskeet.

"We're holding all we can," Roberts said, "but there's not any to hold." Roberts said the lake, which is normally no more than five feet deep anywhere, never contains a vast amount of water despite its size. At an average of about two feet deep, he said, "you're only talking about 80,000 acre-feet of water, which isn't a vast amount." That amount of water over such a large area doesn't last long in a drought.

Roberts added, however, that he cannot envision the lake as drying up completely. It would take a much longer dry spell to do that.

"Hyde County's problem," Roberts said, "has always been too much water, not too little. I've heard of farmers losing crops because of too much, but not because of too little."

Memorable Marxisms

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Groucho Marx was as famous for his one-line wisecracks as for his bushy eyebrows and duck walk. Here are a few:

Woman: (passionately) "Closer darling."

Groucho: "If I were any closer, I'd be in back of you."

Man: "You love your brother, don't you?"

Groucho: "No, but I'm used to him."

Man: Stop at a Western Union office. I want to wire my father.

Groucho: What's the matter? Can't he stand up by himself?

Man: "He doesn't believe in wearing shirts."

Groucho: "Oh, an atheist, eh?"

He once resigned from a prominent country club, claiming, "I couldn't join any organization that would accept me as a member."

One night the daughter of actor Alan Ladd appeared on Marx' radio and TV quiz show, "You Bet Your Life." She remarked that her father was in the movies.

"Is your dad Laddie, son of Lassie?" Groucho asked.

On another show, Marx told an Egyptian contestant: I used to know a red-hot mummy from Egypt. We were terribly wrapped up in each other."

Once a jackpot hopeful said he designed everything from a safety pin to a locomotive.

"Wait a minute — why would a locomotive need safety pins?" Groucho interrupted. "Oh, I guess when they change engines."

Two Received Degrees

BOONE — Two Martin County students were among 897 graduates receiving degrees from Appalachian State University during the school's 98th summer commencement.

Margaret Best Everett of Palmyra received a B.A. Degree in anthropology and Benjamin J. Hopkins of Williamston was awarded a B.S.B.A. Degree in accounting.

No Provisions For Blacks In New South African Plan

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A plan for sharing limited political powers with Indians and people of mixed race — but not blacks — is reported

Membership Drive Begun

"Farmers will continue to find their strength in numbers," according to D.R. House, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, announcing the organization's 1977 membership drive is now underway.

House said the local Farm Bureau hopes to add at least 300 members in order to reach an all-time high goal of 3,500 members in the county.

Noting that the Farm Bureau is working on many fronts in behalf of agriculture, House said "unity of effort through their general farm organization is the main avenue of progress for farmers."

"A strong and active Farm Bureau is the modern farmer's best tool for carving out a better future for himself and his family," he said.

under consideration by South Africa's white government.

Prime Minister John Vorster and several cabinet members met privately this week with community leaders representing the Indians and the "coloreds," as people of mixed race are called, to discuss the proposal.

No specifics have been announced, but the plan, as pieced together from newspaper accounts and government sources, proposes separate parliaments for South Africa's 4.3 million whites, 750,000 Indians and 2.5 million "coloreds."

There are no provisions to bring South Africa's 18 million blacks into the new system, despite growing pressures on the white minority to offer a greater political role to the black majority.

The nation's farmers this year will plant 55.7 million acres of soybeans — almost 11 per cent more than last year — and 83.9 million acres of corn — about 2 per cent less than last year.

Blacks hold political rights only in their nine rural homelands — or tribal reserves — that constitute 13.7 per cent of South Africa's land area.

The ethnic parliaments would have full autonomy over the affairs of their own people, but the existing all-white parliament would retain control in issues of national concern — like defense and foreign policy. The white parliament would also keep certain constitutional veto rights, including the power to dismantle the new political arrangement if it finds it necessary.

Indians and "coloreds" would be given a minority voice in national affairs through a multi-racial presidential council.

Hog Show, Sale Is Cancelled

The Pitt County Market Hog Show and Sale scheduled for Oct. 4 has been cancelled.

"The response to my previous letter concerning the show was such that for all concerned it will be best to wait a year," says Michael Regans, assistant agricultural extension agent. "Pitt County will have new fairgrounds with a new livestock barn, so hopefully we can have some type of livestock show next year."

"I hope this cancellation has not caused any inconvenience, and if anyone has suggestions for future shows I will be happy to hear them," he said.

Morning Meet For Teachers

Superintendent of Greenville City Schools Glenn Cox has announced dates and times for teachers to report for orientation and meetings for the forthcoming school year.

All teachers are to be at the Allied Health Building at 8:30 a.m. Monday, August 22 for an opening session to be conducted in the auditorium. The session will last the entire morning and will be devoted to general information, with Cox on hand to answer questions.

At 1 p.m. teachers will report to their respective schools to meet school principals for information sessions relative to the opening of school.

Walk-a-thon Is Given Approval

City Manager J.E. Caldwell has approved a request by the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Organization of Women to conduct a walk-a-thon Saturday.

The purpose of the walk is to raise funds for the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and to celebrate Women's Equality Day. The request was approved contingent upon the group receiving a parade permit from the Greenville Police Department.

HORSEBACK HORSEPLAY — Two Khirgiz riders raise their riding crops in a galloping horseback game recently in their mountainous region of the Soviet Union where riding competitions are very popular. Soviet sportsmen in the Khirgiz specialty bred these horses for participating in the competitions. Because of the rugged terrain in the area — many mountain paths are still impassable to motor vehicles — horses are commonly used for day-to-day locomotion as well as sport. (AP Laserphoto)

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After World War II, the United States helped put war-torn nations back on their feet by giving them vast sums of money under the Marshall Plan.

Now the money is coming back, in the form of investments by foreign companies and individuals in the U.S. And one banker thinks the current amount of foreign investment in the U.S. "is a trickle," compared with what is potentially available.

Last year, direct foreign investment in the U.S. totaled more than $30 billion, and this year's figure is expected to be considerably higher—a far cry from the $13.7 billion total in 1971.

"If we can give advantages to this sort of capital, there's going to be a flood," says Jack Shaffer, senior vice president for foreign business at Sonnenblick Goldman Corp., a New York mortgage banker.

Shaffer, who is an agent for foreign institutions and individuals looking to make investments in the U.S. and cents among his customers the Shah of Iran, says foreign investors are careful about where they put their money.

Most of the investment is in the form of real estate ventures like hotels and office apartment buildings.

There also has been some commercial development. West Germany's Volkswagen, for example, is building a $200 million auto production plant in Pennsylvania, and Switzerland's Nestle and the British Dutch soap and food maker Unilever have long had extensive U.S. holdings.

But foreign investors usually seem to avoid commercial properties. "There aren't a lot of big ventures waiting to be sold," Shaffer says, noting that foreign investors are wary of organized labor.

About two-thirds of the foreign investment comes from Western Europe, especially France, Britain and West Germany. But recently, the stakes of Japan and the oil-rich Arab countries have been increasing.

Even Canada, beset by economic problems, is a major source of investment—perhaps as much as $2.5 billion this year.

One impetus to foreign investment is tax incentives. Many U.S. localities offer tax breaks to encourage investment, and foreign governments are often very liberal in their tax laws. West Germany, for example, levies little tax on profits from foreign investments by West German firms and citizens.

Where the foreign financiers invest their money often depends on their country of origin.

"Principally, they like the state of California and the Sunbelt," observes Shaffer. But Europeans, he says, are particularly fond of Texas and Louisiana in the southern half of the U.S.

And everybody seems to like the Midwest.

"The Midwest is going crazy right now with foreign purchasers into agriculture," Shaffer said. "Their thinking is a lot more basic than ours—they think in terms of long-term shortages of food, which we don't think about."

Major business developments this past week included:

—Several major U.S. banks, including Citibank, the nation's second largest, raised their prime interest rate—the rate charged the best corporate borrowers—from 6 1/2 per cent to 7 per cent.

The Carter administration is counting on slower increases in food prices to cut the annual inflation rate from 10 per cent at the beginning of 1977 to 6 per cent by the end of this year.

—The government said housing starts increased 8.1 per cent in July, a 46.1 per cent rise from June, a level not seen since July 1976.

Much of the increase came from an 18 per cent rise in multi-family housing starts. Single-family starts rose 4.4 per cent.

—Ford Motor Co. announced it was recalling almost 750,000 late model cars to replace possibly defective engine cooling fans, which have been linked to one death and several injuries.

The recall affects some 1976 and 1977 full-sized Ford and Mercury cars and some 1977 Lincoln, and is in addition to 425,000 1972 Fords recalled for the same problem in June.

WILL NOT INTERVENE — Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall talks with reporters Friday and says he would like to put to rest speculation that his department will intervene in some way to end wildcat strikes by coal miners in West Virginia and several other states. He also told the news conference that the department is investigating complaints from several United Mine Workers districts of irregularities in the miners' health and welfare fund. (AP Laserphoto)

Avoids Overfill

FREEPORT, Ill. (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency reports that 613 petroleum storage tanks were overfilled in 1975-76, spilling more than 780,000 gallons of fuel oil.

Rena Charlotte Horne Weds Stanley G. Corbitt

In a candlelight ceremony Friday evening at seven o'clock, Rena Charlotte Horne became the bride of Stanley Gray Corbitt. The Rev. Richard R. Gammon conducted the double ring ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church.

Daughter of Mrs. William C. Horne of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Charles Horne Sr. The bride wore a formal length gown of ivory imported French chantilly lace designed with a portrait neckline encircled with a double layer of gathered cluny lace edged in miniature Venise lace trim. The fitted empire bodice was encircled at the waistline with ivory satin ribbon with edging of the floral Venise lace. The long fitted lace sleeves were cuffed with ruffled cluny lace and the miniature lace trim. The modified A-line skirt was enhanced with bouffant tiers of the imported lace bordered in ruffled cluny lace that extended into a flowing chapel length train.

She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in the miniature floral Venise lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in the matching lace. She carried a cascade of pale yellow sweetheart roses and baby's breath with ivy streamers.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Corbitt of Rt. 2, Farmville, are parents of the bridegroom.

Robert Steven Brown of Richlands presented a program of wedding music. Emason Hobgood, Farmville soloist, sang "Love Theme From Romeo and Juliet," "If" and "Where There Is Love."

Mrs. Robert Steven Brown of Richlands, matron of honor, wore an aqua polyester crepe floor length gown with an empire waistline with a matching jacket. She carried a long-stemmed pale yellow rose with matching streamers.

The church was decorated with two seven branch candelabra and palms. A vase held an arrangement of pale and deep yellow gladioli in honor the bride's deceased father. Family pews were marked with ivory bows accented by baby's breath and ivy.

Bridesmaids were Miss Pam Bowers of Robersonville, Miss Jana Harden of Dallas, Tex., Miss Lois H. Sherman of Winterville, Mrs. William Burnett of Rocky Mount, and Mrs. David McNamee of Greenville, both cousins of the bride.

Miss Sherman wore a formal length gown of blue organza over blue taffeta overlaid with white flocking in a floral pattern designed with a scoop neckline and empire bodice with ruffled capelet sleeves trimmed in miniature Venise lace. Miss Harden chose a baby blue polyester floor length gown with a modern waistline and buttons stemming from a V-neckline. Miss Bowers wore a formal length polyester mint green dress with an empire waistline and princess sleeves.

Mrs. McNamee wore a formal length polyester light blue gown that had an empire waistline and miniature rolled shoulder straps. Mrs. Burnett selected a formal length polyester mint green gown with an empire waistline and cape sleeves. The bridesmaids carried a long-stemmed pale rose with matching streamers.

The mother of the bride selected a formal length blue chiffon gown over blue taffeta. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal length polyester forest green gown with a V-neckline. Both wore carnation corsages. The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Charles O'Hagan Horne Sr., wore a corsage of white carnations.

The bridegroom's brother, James Robert Corbitt Jr., of Farmville was best man. Ushers were Jeffery L. Corbitt of Farmville, brother of the bride, Donnie Brown of San Antonio, Tex., Mervin Taylor and Billy East, both of Farmville, and David McNamee of Greenville.

Mrs. Robert Steven Brown of Richlands directed the wedding and Mrs. Ray MacKenzie of Greenville presided at the register.

The couple will live in Fountain after a wedding trip to Bush Gardens and King's Dominion.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and is attending Pitt Tech. The bridegroom is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and works with Collins and Aikman, Farmville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall immediately following the ceremony.

The refreshment table was accented by lighted candles and a center arrangement of pale yellow gladioli. Mrs. Charles Horne Jr. served the cake and Mrs. James R. Corbitt Jr. poured punch after the traditional ceremony wedding toast by the bridal couple and cutting of the cake.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held at the home of the bride given by her mother Thursday.

Child Abuse Is Everybody's Business

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I witnessed an incident at the beach last Sunday that ruined my day. A young mother was trying to teach her daughter, who appeared to be about three, to swim. She held the child's head under the water and yelled, "If you don't learn to enjoy the water, you'll never learn to swim!"

Meanwhile the poor child was hysterical as she clung to her mother for dear life, crying and begging her to stop. The mother tore the child's little hands loose, and pushed her head under the water time and time again, insisting she had to learn to "like" the water. The child came up repeatedly, gasping, choking and pleading, but the mother showed her no mercy.

I wanted to say something to the mother, but I was afraid she'd tell me to mind my own business. Later I heard her tell her friend that a swimming teacher had told her that this was the only way to teach a child how to swim.

I had a similar experience when I was young. I'm now 32, I never learned to swim, and I'm still afraid of water.

CONCERNED IN GA.

DEAR CONCERNED: Whether or not the mother knew it, she was abusing that child, and child abuse is everybody's business. You should have told that mother what you told me.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend's parents are celebrating their golden wedding anniversary this month, and have planned a big bash at a very fancy country club.

They say it's only family and close friends, and you guessed it—I'm not invited! I have lived with their son for three years, and if that doesn't make me "family," I don't know what does.

I could marry him if I wanted to, but if I did I would lose the alimony I'm getting from my last husband, and also the child support from my kids' father. (My second husband.) I also think marriage is very old-fashioned today.

Everybody in town, including my boyfriend's parents, knows that we have been living together, so why shouldn't my kids and I be invited.

I hear that my boyfriend's ex-wife and her kids will be there. I ask you, is that fair? I think it's rotten for his folks to treat me this way. Am I wrong?

LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT: Yes. On two counts: (1) Marriage is NOT "old-fashioned"—it's as popular today as it ever was. (2) Your boyfriend's parents are free to invite (and exclude) whomever they wish. It's their party.

DEAR ABBY: Are there any foods or beverages which will help a person sexually? I have heard there are several.

WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: I know of none. But if you believe that a certain food or drink will "help you" sexually, by all means try it. It probably will.

Travels With The Family Pet

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures
Fido goes camping, fishing, skiing and beachcombing with the family, but sometimes there is a lack of communication when the family pet gets away from home base. A dog may breathe hard, stick out his tongue, or hit flies with his paws which might indicate a little attention is needed — such as air, water and shade. But dogs must often accept their fate when they get away from home routine.

Even on a shopping trip, things can go awry. Recently a woman left her beautiful poodle locked in a car. The windows were closed and the car was parked in the brilliant sun. Crowds gathered as the dog wilted. People tried to pry open windows with wire coat hangers, nail files and so on, as the police went through the store and even used loud speakers to try to attract the woman's attention. Returning to the scene, she was horrified. It was almost too late for her animal. Intent upon getting a bargain, she had neglected her dog's comfort.

When taking a dog away from home, the family should be even more aware of their pet's comfort. A tote bag might be packed with dog's necessities — the number of units of food needed for the trip, dog biscuits or other snacks, a vacuum bottle of water, grooming aids, a bowl, leash and towel. If food is canned, bring a can opener. Fresh water would be appreciated occasionally along with an airing when you reach a gas station or parking place. If it is a long trip, wash him with a wet towel.

Pack a long leash — 20 feet or so — so that you can exercise your dog and let him take care of his physical urgencies. A short leash also may be needed. A dog shouldn't run loose near highways even if he normally responds to commands. There is a danger to drivers as well as dogs if they get out on a highway. If you locate a good wooded area along the route where your dog can be watched closely, he might roam a bit, but generally a dog should be exercised in a more controlled manner until you reach your destination.

Even though most motels will accept pets, you should know where you are going to be able to spend the night with your pet. Too many people become enervated looking for a guest house, motel or hotel that will take animals and the pet may end up sleeping in a hot car all night.

A dog may have fun walking about a station wagon or putting his head out of a window, but you should not permit it. He should stay in one place. He'll get the idea if you give him something of his own to lie upon. He can be hurt moving about and putting his head out of a window.

Dogs can be unnerved by travel. A veterinarian might supply pills for a nervous dog, but any dog needs reassurance. Pack a couple of playthings in his tote so that he doesn't whine or cry if you leave him alone in a strange room. His grooming aids will help make him comfortable. Give him a good brushing after a long trip, and if he's been in wooded areas, check for ticks. Try to cool the dog some way or give him a bath.

Your dog should wear identification. So should your cat. If you get a clear collar for a cat you can print his name and address and paste it to the back of the collar so that it can be read. Or get the cat an identification tag and collar. An outdoor cat should wear the collar some days before you depart. He may not like it. A cat carrier is the best way to transport a cat.

Animals can be transported with a minimum of confusion providing your attitude is good. If they are farmed or boarded — and rates have gone up — you may feel genuine concern about their comfort.

You can have a lot of fun taking animals on a vacation — if you have a sense of humor.

Technology Gives Fashion Boost

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
That fashionable suit or dress you take for granted may be a technoloo of new fabrics. In fact, taming lapels or sleeve cuffs to get a smooth, quality look takes a good deal of know-how.

A lot of missing links are pieced together by expert Rose Russo and her group of 12 at a research center that assists manufacturers in using fusible, nonwoven interfacings in construction of garments to control shape and provide better fit.

A great many interfacings may be tested until one unites properly with the fabric.

Mrs. Russo was recently named director of the 12-year-old apparel research and development center established by Pellon, which she had joined at its inception. The company has been an innovator in nonwoven textiles for 25 years.

"These days fewer skilled operators are available in garment manufacture at a time when some new fabrics, such as stretchy ones, are difficult to handle. Fusing helps provide a better garment and a tailored look," she explained.

"For example, many things must be controlled — the rolling of lapels, puckering or bubbling, shrinkage, or nap problems such as those presented by velvets and corduroys, which require different fusing methods," says Mrs. Russo. Her mother was a seamstress and her father was a tailor, which reinforces her professional wisdom.

New fusibles are developed in their company laboratory at Lowell, Mass., and the tests are made at the center. One of the newest of hundreds is one that can maintain see-through quality, developed to suit the sheer fabrics now being used in blouses and dresses, she points out. It's a soft, sheer, mottled kind of nonwoven that blends right into the fabric.

Fusing is being used by manufacturers and designers of garments ranging from $5 to $500, said Mrs. Russo, who had just returned from California, where she spoke at a seminar of 250 manufacturers.

"We recommend how interfacing should be cut for a particular fabric, how grain lines should be used, how to put a garment together, the proper tension of the thread that should be used," she said. "Some fabrics might be stretchy, some might buckle." A graduate of the Fashion Institute of Technology and a former pattern maker for McCalls, Mrs. Russo may even find that the pattern itself is at the root of a manufacturer's problem.

Twenty professional dry cleanings and rigorous tests in the washing machine may be needed to determine whether a piece of fabric gets a seal of approval.

The research center has seven fusing machines, and a manufacturer may need help in choosing the proper machine for a particular garment. Mrs. Russo says. Instructions are offered in setting a machine to get a proper bond and on the time and pressure that may be required to fuse a garment.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My neighbor, Wanda Weird, was complaining to me the other day about her son. "That kid is going to drive me crazy," she said. "Everytime I turn around he wants to be paid for what he does. Do you know what he had the nerve to give me last Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said. "From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterprise system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a down payment to buy Nevada.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision-maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken buses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?" Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next question. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,154 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a lifetime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

Miss Branch, Mr. King Wed On Saturday

WINTERVILLE — Miss Dawn Arlyn Branch and Jeffrey Elwood King were united in marriage Saturday evening at six o'clock. The double ring ceremony took place in the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church with the Rev. Jack Mayo officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Franklin Branch of Winterville, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Alston White of Cove City. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Elwood King of Ayden are the parents of the bridegroom. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph King of Clinton.

A program of contemporary wedding music was presented by Mrs. Gladys Corbett, organist, and Guyla Corbett, pianist. Vocal selections performed by Emerson Hobgood included "My Sweet Lady," "Evergreen," "The Wedding Song" and "One Hand, One Heart." Accompanying him on the guitar was David Hines. Mrs. Debby Gray directed the wedding.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white maracaine jersey. The empire bodice featured a deep V-neckline bordered with a row of Venise lace braid. Lattice work of the same lace braid adorned the sides of her long fitted sleeves. The A-line skirt flowed into a full chapel length train, also bordered in lace braid.

Her three tiered veil, trimmed in matching Venise lace, was attached to a Juliet cap which featured rows of pearls in an open lattice design. She wore a pearl necklace, which was a gift of her grandmother, and carried a cascade of miniature white carnations accented with seed pearls and satin streamers.

Serving her sister as maid of honor was Cynthia Branch of Winterville. She wore a formal length gown of polyester knit in teal blue. The gown featured a deep cowl neckline, empire waistline with side ties and cap sleeves. She wore a white floral headpiece and carried a nosegay of miniature blue carnations and white baby's breath tied with satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss JoAnn Hines and Ms. Patricia Buck, both of Winterville, and Mrs. Teresa Smith of Greenville. Their attire and nosegays were identical to that of the honor attendant.

Miss Angela Branch of Winterville, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and Miss Theresa Waters of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. Both wore identical long dresses of sheer floral print over a white background trimmed in light blue. From the shirred empire bodices flowed the long skirt ending in a deep ruffle. Both wore floral headpieces in light blue.

The bridegroom selected his father as best man. Ushers were Dwight King brother of the bridegroom of Ayden, Kenneth Crawford, cousin of the bridegroom of Ahoskie, J. A. Branch III, cousin of the bride of Winterville, and Moreland Gueth of High Point. Serving as ring bearer was Patrick White of Grifton, cousin of the bride.

The mother of the bride selected a formal gown of aqua which featured a V-neckline with a matching jacket trimmed in deep aqua braid. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal length sleeveless gown of maize yellow polyester knit featuring an overlay of chiffon. Both mothers wore corsages of white miniature carnations.

Grandmothers of the couple were remembered with carnation corsages.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Winterville Community Building. Miss June Dail King of Clinton presided at the register.

The traditional bridal cake was served by Mrs. Rose White of New Bern and punch was poured by Miss Patricia Stocks of Ayden and Mrs. Helen Heath of Raleigh. Other refreshments were served by Miss Judy Brown and Mrs. Leona Brown of Winterville, and Mrs. Carolyn Branch of Chesapeake, Va.

Rice bags were distributed by Miss Doreen Heath of Raleigh. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Branch Jr. of Winterville said good-byes. Candelabra and greenery accented the building and the refreshment table was decorated in blue and white.

A graduate of D. H. Conley High School, the bride is attending N. C. State University where she is a Johnson Scholar. She is majoring in architecture and a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Delta Lambda honor societies. The bridegroom, a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School, also attends NCSU and is majoring in electrical engineering. He is a member of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity.

The couple will reside in Raleigh following a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C.

On Saturday morning, the bride and her attendants were honored at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Elaine King, Ayden. Mrs. Tina Slavin and Mrs. Louise Haddock were assisting hostesses. The parents of the bridegroom entertained the bridal party at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday with pig pickin' at their home.

Teens Design Diamond Ring 'Of Dreams'

NEW YORK (AP) — The traditional engagement ring style — the diamond solitaire — is still favored by the nation's teen-age girls, the results of a ring designing competition indicate.

Six of the 12 winning designs in a contest conducted by the Diamond Information Center, and almost half of all the entries, used a single diamond, usually centered in a slim band with a contemporary flair.

The diamond group invited the 50 state winners of America's Junior Miss Pageant to enter the diamond design contest, giving each a kit of jewelry design transfers from which to design "the diamond engagement ring of her dreams."

The 12 equal winners were each awarded a $300 scholarship. Jewelry manufacturers have made up the winning designs, working directly from the girls' sketches to create a special collection which will tour the country and later be available through retailers.

Fancy-shaped diamonds proved popular among the young designers, high school seniors, aged 16-19. The pear shape was the most frequently used, although the brilliant cut, emerald and oval shapes were also favorites.

Simplicity was the quality the girls most admired and settings were slim and gracefully curved, the Diamond Information Center reports. Side stones, if used at all, tended to be small, serving to accentuate the center stone, which ranged in size from 1-3rd to 3/4ths of a carat.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Summertime, when fresh dill is in markets and gardens, is a great time to use it with cucumbers. You may find, as we do, that the two are an irresistible combination.

We like to add finely chopped cucumber and minced dill to cottage cheese for a noontime salad. Served with lettuce and sliced ripe tomatoes, the two-some is not only refreshing and filling but usually pleases calorie-watches.

For a spread you might like to mix cream cheese or farmer cheese with minced cucumber and dill. The mixture is delicious on squares of fresh bread or on crackers.

Chilled cucumber soup sprinkled with a copious amount of minced dill and served in ice-cold glass bowls is a lovely starter for a company supper.

Another great way to use fresh dill is with braised cucumbers. For cucumbers are just as good cooked as they are raw. Tasters at our house who thought they wouldn't like cucumbers cooked have succumbed to them after they tasted them prepared this way.

If you try braising cucumbers with dill you may have the same fulfilling experience! BRAISED DILL CUCUMBERS 3 medium cucumbers, pared and sliced 1/4-inch thick (about 4 cups)

3/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
Dash of white pepper
Minced fresh dill, as much as you like

Sprinkle cucumbers with the salt; stir well and let stand 30 minutes. Turn into a colander and drain well; do not press. In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter; add the cucumbers and pepper; stir well. Cook, covered, over moderate heat and stirring several times, just until as tender as you like — 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in the dill. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

The North Carolina Museum of Art is offering a new traveling exhibition to schools, libraries, churches and other organizations' a collection of 20 of the 51 North Carolina etchings by Louis Orr.

The etchings, which depict historic places in the state, were created between 1939 and 1951.

The late Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville was instrumental in urging Orr to create this black and white collection of what Humber called "some of the most outstanding architectural monuments in America."

Orr, born in Connecticut in 1879, moved to Paris in 1906 where he lived most of the time until his death in 1966. Dr. Humber, who also lived in Paris during the 1920s and 1930s, became a friend of Orr and convinced him to turn his talents to a series of etching.

For 12 years, Orr intermittently spent time studying at length each of the 51 N. C. subjects chosen for "The North Carolina Etchings." From the pencil drawings, he made copper etchings, which were eventually faced in steel.

The entire 51 subjects are permanently on view at the Greenville Art Center. They can also be seen at Sheppard Memorial Library.

Stars from the worlds of jazz, blues and country music will be featured performers for the second annual "Carolina Street Scene," a free festival of music, dance, theater, arts and crafts which will be held on the streets of downtown Winston-Salem Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 10-11.

The musical highlights for the two day event include jazz flutist Herbie Mann and his Family of Mann, Eddie Harris and his quartet, and the Mose Allison Trio.

Festival hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1-7 p.m. Sunday.

An array of performing talent from Winston-Salem and other areas of N. C. will range from cloggers to ballet, bluegrass to classical music, mime to street theater. Approximately 350 artists and craftsmen from the Carolinas will exhibit throughout the downtown.

The single ring ceremony took place on the lawn at the home of the bride. The Rev. Lotis Joyner of the Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church performed the ceremony. Paula Cherry of Stokes presented a program of organ music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk illusion styled with an eyelet lace bodice and bishop sleeves. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and wore a full length veil of bridal net.

The only attendant was Kimberly Stocks of Fayetteville, cousin of the bride. She wore a long dress similar to that of the bride in green and carried a basket of daisies.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length polyester gown of pastel blue with a V-neckline and short sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom was dressed in a formal length polyester gown of mint green with a matching jacket. Both mothers wore corsages of white carnations.

Bobby Riggs of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Gregory Strickland, brother of the bride, and Greg Glisson, brother of the bridegroom, both of Greenville.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a burgundy ensemble and wore her mother's corsage. The couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and the bridegroom is employed by Boise and Cascade Co., Greenville.

Following the ceremony, a reception took place at the home of the bride given by Mrs. Doris Stocks of Fayetteville.

Mrs. Wanda Bland of Greenville, sister of the bride, and Miss Tammy Glisson of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, assisted in serving.

Boat Safety Exams Set

Stanley Zicherman, Vessel Examination Officer of Flotilla 16-5 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, a civilian component of the U.S. Coast Guard, has announced locations where boats can be examined during the coming week.

On Wednesday, August 24, examiners will be at King's Parking lot from 6:30 until 9 p.m.

On Saturday, August 27, examinations will be conducted at the Grimesland Boat Ramp from 10 a.m. until noon; and at Tranter's Creek Ramp from 1 to 3 p.m.

At least three examiners will be on hand at each location. Inspections should require no more than 15 minutes for each boat.

Safety decals will be placed on boats that meet safety standards and have the equipment required as outlined in federal and auxiliary requirements.

There is no charge for these courtesy examinations and all boat owners are urged to take this opportunity to have boats checked.

French Has New Accent In Quebec

By JOHN F. SIMS
MONTREAL (UPI) — The language spoken by the majority of Quebecois is recognizable as French — but just barely.

Quebecois learn the same grammar and syntax as the French. The vocabulary differs but the language is basically the same.

It's the accent that makes life difficult for non-Quebecois French-speakers.

The accent and dialect are known locally as "cheval," the French word for horse. That name was chosen precisely because in the Quebecois accent it comes out as "zhowalle."

"Maybe a provençale would understand the accent," said a French visitor to Quebec. "But it is not easy for the rest of us."

Most Quebecois can speak with a straightforward French accent if the situation demands, but speaking among themselves they prefer the local patois.

The difference does not end with the accent.

"There is a close relationship between Quebec French and American English," explained Jean-Louis Roy, director of French history studies at Montreal's McGill University. "There is a generous use of Anglo-Saxon words in Quebec's French."

Example: in elevators the signs say "Pressez le bouton" instead of the more correct "Poussez le bouton."

Many English words found their way into Quebecois French in the past because of the big Montreal mail order firm, Eaton's.

Eaton's catalogue was in English only, so that when a backwoods Quebecois referred to an object whose name he knew only in English, he would just give it a French pronunciation. In time the Frenchified words were accepted into the language.

An illustration: an Anglophone Quebecer who learned "French" French was driving in the country when one of the tires on his car went flat. Discovering his spare also was flat, he went to a garage to seek help.

The local mechanic did not understand him when he asked: "Veuillez vous reparer le pneu (will you repair the tire)?"

After much sign-language the mechanic finally got the drift and said: "Ah, vous voulez dire fixer le pneu (You mean fix the tire)."

A Walk Can Cut Stress

NEW YORK (AP) — A walk around the block; time out for meditating or reading; lunch hour exercise at a health spa. These are some of the ways business professionals find relief from job stress, reports a registered nurse in the occupational health field.

Interviews conducted by Dawn D. Kinsler, health administrator of Texas Commerce Bank, Houston, revealed individual workers' personal habits played a major role in creating stress, she says. Among them: poor dietary habits, elimination of daily breaks from work routine and skipping breakfast or lunch.

Ms. Kinsler, writing in "Occupational Health Nursing," official publication of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses, suggests a number of ways to reduce excessive work stress.

These include understanding organization objectives, having ready access to superiors, starting a task with adequate facilities and supplies, maintenance of maximum organization and efficiency, a positive attitude toward success of an endeavor, being assertive rather than aggressive and not relying on others for positive self-affirmation.

Relaxation at home, according to Ms. Kinsler, can carry over into the work setting for a general sense of well-being. Weekends with proper rest and good nourishment, leisure time spent with entertainment, sporting events, exercise programs and generally "doing your own thing" were advocated.

Congressman's Wife Is Cutting A Record Album

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita Jenrette sat curled up on a sofa, her guitar in hand, singing love songs she had composed for her husband of one year, the handsome congressman from North Myrtle Beach,

S.C. In a time when many political wives are struggling for an identity of their own, Mrs. Jenrette is no exception. At 27, she is cutting a record album under her maiden name of Rita Carpenter. With a working title of "One

More Time," the album will include several songs that Mrs. Jenrette composed while she was in Washington and her husband was campaigning back home in South Carolina's 6th Congressional District.

In an interview in the couple's Capitol Hill townhouse, Mrs. Jenrette, a native of Austin, Tex., said she decided to pursue an interest in music as a diversion from the routine of receptions, teas and chicken dinners familiar to most political wives.

"You get lost in the Washington facade," she said. "I go to my husband's receptions until 1 a.m. almost every morning...People don't realize how unglamorous this life is. People from the district come up to Washington once a year for a convention, and they expect John and his wife to be there."

"I'm telling you, it's not glamorous. One cocktail party is just like another."

Mrs. Jenrette, dressed in blue jeans and a vibrant turquoise blouse that highlighted her platinum blonde hair, sat in the couple's small upstairs den where at 5 a.m. every day, she begins practicing voice exercises.

"John wakes up to this every morning," she said, letting her voice take off like a runaway roller coaster.

Mrs. Jenrette picked up the guitar she plays by ear and then, in rich, low tones, began to sing one of her songs.

"Baby, do you love me?"
"Baby, do you miss me?"
"Hold me in your warm arms again..."

"Tonight you're in South Carolina,"
"I'm here all alone,"
"Wonderin' if you love me,"
"And when you're coming home."

Rita Carpenter met Jenrette two years ago when she was working as a researcher for the Republican National Committee. Jenrette, a 41-year-old second-term congressman, had recently divorced his wife of 14 years.

Mrs. Jenrette is quick to concede she has no professional singing experience. She was "discovered," she said, after appearing on a New York local television show with her husband. An agent heard her sing and persuaded her to do a record. Now his company is working to promote her public image.

"They're blunt," she said.

"They told me one cheek bone is higher than the other. John never told me that. They want my hair darker because they say it will be more natural." Mrs. Jenrette said she has had "nibbles" from several recording companies but no contract. "I may fail," she said. "But I'm not going to wake up when I'm 40 and say I didn't try."

A DIVERSION — Rita Jenrette, wife of Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C., relaxes at the couple's Washington home as she tells of her plans to cut a record album. (AP Laserphoto)

New Strain May Save Chestnuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American chestnut tree, nearly wiped out by a fungus blight, may be revived by a new strain of the same parasite, according to Dr. Richard A. Jaynes, an associate geneticist at the Connecticut Agricultural Station in New Haven.

Jaynes thinks there is a good chance that the new "H" (hypovirulent) strain may take over the killer fungus and sap its debilitating powers.

The original fungus was imported from Japan in 1904 along with a few Japanese chestnut trees. It first appeared in the New York City Zoological Garden, then swept across the forests of the eastern United States like a forest fire. By 1950, little was left of the 9 million acres of American chestnuts.

Jaynes says it will take at least two more years of study to know whether the "H" strain is strong enough to overtake the virulent strain and to spread naturally through the forests, but he is hopeful.

Some owners call the FIAT 124 Sport Spider "zoom with a view". To others it's "the young classic." Both groups are right. The styling is Pininfarina at the top of his form; sculptured steel that is at once classic and contemporary. The Spider's impressive performance is delivered by a 1756 cc. twin overhead cam engine, coupled with a fully synchromeshed 5-speed gearbox with console-mounted shifter for smooth, precise control. Interior appointments feature a wood grain dash with full instrumentation, including an electronic tachometer and luxurious reclining bucket seats — standard. Also standard are radial-ply tires and disc brakes on all four wheels. Timeless good looks, searing road performance, and a convertible top — an incredible automobile at an uncommonly reasonable price. Discover the FIAT 124 Sport Spider today.

We'll put you in your place.

If You Now Rent . . .
Do you feel out of place in that rented house or apartment? Nice enough place to live but just doesn't feel like "home" — right?

Well, you may be closer to home ownership than you think. Home Savings is out to put a lot of people in their place. We've got the mortgage money right here at Home to finance your new place in life. Why wait?

Don't get unnecessarily caught up in the "delaying game". Right now may be the best time for you to buy.

Housing and land costs will continue to rise. So waiting until you can "afford" to buy can be false reasoning for putting off your goal of home ownership.

It never hurts to ask . . .
If you're a little apprehensive — try this: Pick a home on today's market that is the house you want or one that is comparable in size and style. Come by Home Savings and ask any one of our loan counselors to do a preliminary "work-up" on the costs involved, estimate monthly payments and educate you as to the various requirements.

We'll be happy to take the time and work with you. Knowledge of the process can eliminate any apprehension you may have. You'll probably find that you're ready to be in your place. Home Savings is certainly ready to put you there. Come to see us.

Education Eyes The Individual

President honors Teacher of Year

The 1977 Teacher of the Year has very definite ideas about teaching, and she doesn't hesitate to speak her mind. President Carter found that out at a White House ceremony honoring California social studies teacher Myrra Lee when she took the opportunity to remark, "It's exciting to know that we affect people's lives. That's why people go into teaching. It's certainly not the money, which is not very great, nor the prestige and status." Her comments brought a knowing chuckle from the President, who had presented the La Mesa, Calif., high school teacher with a Steuben crystal "Apple for the Teacher" and a commemorative plaque.

Mr. Carter stated that "one of the most delightful experiences in the life of any person is to have a teacher who develops a personal relationship with the student that affects his or her whole life. I know; I've had that experience."

"To choose one person to exemplify that is a hard task," Mr. Carter said, "and to be chosen is a great honor. You represent all the other teachers of this nation. I know they are all proud of you, and the President of the United States is proud of you too."

Ms. Lee also received a National Education Association plaque "for distinguished service" from NEA President Willard McGuire at a reception at NEA headquarters. She responded that "many thousands of teachers across the United States could just as easily have received this honor."

"Teaching today invites thinking, creative people who have a desire for service. I see myself as a symbol. It is important to have recognition of what teachers do, and this is the merit of the Teacher of the Year Program."

That, of course, is exactly what the program is designed to do—focus public attention on excellence in teaching. Ms. Lee was chosen as this year's symbol of outstanding teachers everywhere in a nationwide search by the program's sponsors, the Council of Chief State School Officers, Encyclopedia Britannica, and Ladies' Home Journal.

The dynamic 50-year-old Myrra Lee has taken on some of the most potentially controversial courses at La Mesa's Helix High School—Minorities in American History, Social Living (ranging from sex education to drug abuse), and Women in America.

In addition, she uses what most people would consider non-traditional methods. Yet, she says she gets "a tremendous amount of support from parents as well as administrators." How does she manage it?

"This is a question that people ask me all the time because I teach in quite a conservative community."

PRINCIPALS IN TRAINING—Everyone has to go to school once-in-a-while. Principals gather to discuss better methods of leadership muses Ms. Lee.

"I think it's primarily because my program is academically sound. I don't go off half-cocked and we don't do one experimental thing after the next. Everything is done on a number of levels—academically, intellectually, emotionally."

"My students are excited, and they communicate that. Parents tell me that my courses are the ones that students talk about all the time."

Myrra Lee points out that "the one thing that we don't do is read the chapter and answer the questions at the back of the book."

"I use a lot of simulations and a lot of discussion. I don't answer any questions. What I try to do is provide all the means by which students can answer either questions they raise or that I pose for them."

In closing, Ms. Lee, who has been in teaching for more than 25 years, spoke to her teacher colleagues around the country: "I think the in a workshop on the ECU campus recently.

you're doing as academically sound and by having students who are excited and enthusiastic, you will be able to do what you want to do. This is the function of teaching, to open the minds of our students, to make them want to do something for themselves and the world.

"We can do this. I don't think we're necessarily as limited as we think we are."

Each marches to a different drummer

NO ONE GETS WRITTEN OFF as an academic failure in the I/D/E/A Change Program for Individually Guided Education. Students in IGE schools learn to set their own learning goals and objectives, rather than attempt to compete within the rigid structure of the uniform grading system.

They're not peas in a pod! Kids need individual help

By Dr. Samuel G. Sava
Executive Director, Institute for Development of Educational Activities

When a teacher looks at a classroom filled with 25 children of the same age, he or she knows that they differ dramatically in their intellectual abilities, their aptitudes for one subject or kind of learning, and their preferences for one method of instruction over others—just as they differ in sex, height, weight and color.

Educators recognize these differences, and some teachers do respond by altering the instructional setting to make sure each student learns as much as he or she is capable of learning.

But too often, the common practice is simply to classify these differences with A's, B's, or F's, and to write off those students who fall below certain standards as "lacking in scholastic aptitude."

If guiding each youngster to the maximum development of his or her personal potential is a realistic and feasible goal for education today, then what can school districts and teachers do to realize this goal?

At I/D/E/A, (the Institute for Development of Educational Activities, Inc.) the educational affiliate of the Charles F. Kettering Foundation; we believe one answer is the I/D/E/A Change Program for Individually Guided Education (IGE).

Today more than 1,400 schools in 39 states and over 47 American-sponsored schools overseas are using the program because it presents a responsible, validly-tested means for individualizing learning for children and youth and for making continuous improvement a way of life within our schools.

One of the guiding concepts was that the individual school is a strategic unit of educational improvement. Each school—with its students, principal, teachers, parents, and residents of the surrounding community—is a strategic and significant vehicle for bringing about educational improvement.

As a process for individualizing learning and continuous school improvement IGE has two primary elements. The first is a process for individualizing learning by tailoring instructional methods to individual differences rather than requiring all children and youth to learn in the same way and at the same pace.

The second is a continuous improvement process that makes it possible for schools to evaluate their own performance, alter their instructional procedures where indicated, and advance toward successively higher levels of effective teaching.

An IGE program refers to how students learn. It isn't a set of neatly packaged course outlines replete with classroom activities and instructional materials.

It is a process by which individual learning situations are designed and the way other factors such as time, space, personnel, are managed to facilitate learning.

An IGE program has its beginning in whatever the community, the school board, administration, and teachers say should be taught.

IGE is a means by which these ideas are translated into a valid, viable, and lively process of individualizing individualized learning for students.

The IGE learning program combines the appropriate teacher, materials, and activities for an individual child's learning objectives and needs.

This provides a systematic approach to planning and creating opportunities for children learning "one at a time, together."

I/D/E/A does not work directly with schools. Instead, we work through a network of "intermediate agencies" such as state boards of education, colleges or universities, and local school districts.

The IGE program is captured in "35 Outcomes" which define what we believe is the ideal school environment. Although some school staffs accomplish many of the outcomes easily and early in the program, some of the others become long-range goals or continuing processes.

The first outcome is "All staff members have an opportunity to examine their own goals and the IGE outcomes before a decision is made to participate in the program."

The second: "The school district has approved the school staff's decision to implement the I/D/E/A Change Program for IGE."

The other outcomes help a school reorganize into Learning Communities, personalize in-service programs for teachers, develop individualized learning programs for students, use outside resources, provide each student with an advisor, and involve parents and the community into the activities of the school.

The I/D/E/A Change Program was first completed for elementary schools after refinement of the elementary school model I/D/E/A developed similar programs for middle and junior high and high schools.

You can request a list of the institutions currently participating in the Change Program—and other information about I/D/E/A—from: I/D/E/A 5335 Far Hills Avenue, Dayton, Ohio 45429.

Getting the most from a college dorm room

College students are moving back on campus, reversing the trend of recent years to set up their own apartment. Practical concerns are the primary motivators—expense and convenience. But college dormitory rooms and suites have limited space and some thought should be given to compactness in packing and limiting yourself to essentials.

Something no college student should be without is a good, reliable iron. And now an iron is available that's lightweight, easy to handle and offers the same basic features as a standard size iron. General Electric's Light 'N Easy™ iron does all the ironing jobs of a full-size steam iron but weighs less than 1 1/2 lbs.

GE's Light 'N Easy makes a versatile and appreciated housewarming gift for graduates or newlyweds who are setting up their own apartments. It features a two-way water window and a surge of steam or spray for extra moisture. GE's Light 'N Easy iron—it makes light work of your ironing.

Calendar For Year

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County students will report August 29 for one-half day of orientation to begin the 1977-78 school year.

Ott Alford, county schools' superintendent, said the first day is designed for students and teachers to meet and prepare for a full day of instruction on August 30.

Cafeterias will be in operation and school buses will transport students on the first day.

A long Labor Day weekend, extending from Friday-September 2 through Monday-September 5, will be the first student-faculty holiday of the new school year.

During the week of August 22, staff development activities will be held in all programs and occupational teachers will be engaged in various workshops, according to Alford. The purpose of the workshops will be to share new ideas and organize for the rest of the school year.

Also, at 8 p.m. on August 23 a special meeting of the Pitt County School Board will be held to initiate activities for the 1977-78 school term.

The superintendent said the 1977-78 school calendar which runs from August 15-June 14 appears as follows:

Parents help develop good reading habits

By Charles R. Putney
Public Information Officer International Reading
Association

Although reading teachers are always looking for ways to improve the reading ability of their students, more recognition is being given to the role parents must play in this process.

The experiences children have before coming to school will have a great impact on how well children learn to read once in school.

There are so many things parents can do to develop the reading ability of a child—few of which take much time or money. All that is really needed is the effort and desire to prepare the child for later education.

Simple things such as talking to children, reading to children, taking children on short trips to the store or post office, will expand their ability to think and to use language.

Reading is, after all, one more step in a child's development after the child learns to talk. Much as crawling leads to walking, talking should lead to reading. Without the basis of talking—good oral language abilities—the child might have difficulty learning to read.

Parents should read to their children, ask their children questions, play games with their children, and try to show the children the world around them.

The home is the first school a child will know, and what is learned in the home has great impact on how well school is handled.

Television has helped prepare children for many of the skills they will acquire in school, especially the visual orientation. Television, however, does not require a response from children—they do not need to talk back to the screen.

Parents who want to use television to help their children learn should watch television with their children and ask questions about what is happening and what the characters are saying.

One of the most important activities a parent can engage in is reading to a child. Children will learn early that practically anything they might want to learn has been written in a book and that it can probably be found in the home or the library.

Parents may begin introducing a child to books at the age of three or four months by holding the child and reading to him or her, or letting the child look at pictures in a magazine.

A child will find pleasure in being held, listening to the parents' voice and seeing the colorful pictures, thus promoting a good, warm inner feeling and stimulating the senses of hearing, sight, and touch.

Parents should set aside a time for reading each day—before naptime or bedtime can be good, but other times will work as well. Make experiences with books happy experiences. You don't need to "teach" reading at this age.

Once the child is interested in books, it is important that books be available to the child in the home. If books are not available in the home, children will not be able to read when they want to.

Parents also must keep in mind that their children will try to imitate them as they grow up. If children see that their parents read, they will feel reading is a worthwhile activity. If they never see their parents reading, it will be hard for the children to get into the "reading habit."

The International Reading Association has two free brochures for parents which give many helpful hints on how to turn the home into the child's first school, and how to encourage reading. For copies write: Public Information Office, International Reading Association, P.O. Box 8139, Newark, Delaware 19711.

COLLEGE—FOR WHAT PURPOSE? Aside from the obvious advantages of a college education such as training for a specific career, we should not forget the true meaning of a liberal education as the refinement of an individual's knowledge in many areas and the development of abstract learning skills that will provide the basis for a lifetime of intellectual enrichment. ## 2nd Year

"This will be the second year of an excellent beginning for our cultural program in art and music," boasts Ott Alford, Pitt County schools' superintendent.

"Last year was the first full funding of the program," he added, "and Myriam Harris provided excellent leadership, along with our local principals, music and art teachers."

"This year is going to even be better," the superintendent said. "We are developing a quality program and during the next few years it will become obvious to the people that we are."

Buses Roll On Aug. 29

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

Roughly 190 county school buses will roll on August 29 on Pitt County roads and highways and a few Greenville streets, says Ott Alford, superintendent of Pitt County schools.

"When the buses start rolling, there will be more vehicles moving at a slower pace and we encourage motorists and parents who see any bus being operated in a reckless manner or students standing up to get the number of that bus and give us a call," Alford said.

"If they see anything hazardous or unsafe we would appreciate it if they would let us at the Pitt County Board of Education know," he added.

Pitt County school buses will transport approximately 8,500 students daily to and from school.

"OH! MAINLY IT'S ALL RIGHT...is the way Todd Landon first expressed his feelings about soon being back in school. Todd, who will be in the ninth grade at Aycock this year, added "actually, I'm about ready to go back. I've just finished a summer of working in tobacco and am about ready for school."

Missing a shoe size check-up can hurt your child.

Most parents remember to have their children's teeth and eyes checked regularly. But parents who care have their child's feet checked, too.

The fact is, a child's feet change quickly, in width as well as length. So even the best fitting shoes don't fit well forever.

We recommend that you have your child's feet checked at least every three months. One of our children's shoe specialists will do it free.

Free size check-ups are just one of the ways we make sure every pair of Stride Rite shoes fit properly.

Books Are Beautiful

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

In the opinion of Kay Whitehurst, Director of Secondary Education in the Greenville City Schools, students today have a tremendously exciting world of books and visual aids to add interest to learning.

"One of the most impressive things about books today is that they are so beautiful to look at," Mrs. Whitehurst said as she pushed aside stacks of paperwork "so that I can kick my shoes off and rest my eyes while I'm talking to you.

"The feel of the pages, the lettering, the whole visual range is really marvelous, so much different than when you and I were in school."

The Veteran educator has a life-long love of books, one fostered by her own ever changing phases of life styles that are as colorful as the books of history and adventure she loves to order for the students. As a girl she lived in a river houseboat on the Mississippi. Later she served in the Women's Army Corps, then married a Navy man, lived for years in the Orient, raised four sons, and ten years ago finally settled down in Greenville.

"What we are trying to do in our libraries (she does not use the new term media center) is to zero in on our heritage, our national heritage and our own here in North Carolina."

"To do this we've been adding books and visual aids with a definite appeal to all types of youngsters, such as the really excellent Time-Life series of books. Another exciting possibility to help students learn more about North Carolina is the series of pamphlets and booklets put out by the N. C. Division of Archives and History.

"These cover so many things that are part of our history, the Cherokees, the N. C. Revolutionary Navy, historic places, any number of things. Students respond to books that speak to them of their own area."

Mrs. Whitehurst noted that she will often "order one or two copies of a particular title, and then present it to a teacher to look over. More likely than not, the teacher soon comes back to me, eager to know if a few more copies can be ordered for classroom use.

"At this point," she changed the basic subject briefly, "I do want to say that I've never before seen the pre-school enthusiasm that our teachers are showing in getting ready for school. So many of them have come in early to fix up and add personal touches to their classrooms, to think about books that might supplement regular textbooks. There's been any number of indications that make me feel good about the school year coming up. There's a real ferment of expectation afoot."

Visual Aids

From a file cabinet near her desk, Mrs. Whitehurst showed a series of boxed material containing film strips and accompanying texts.

"These I have on a trail basis," she said. "It is a series entitled Personal Conflicts in the Revolutionary Era. This is outstanding material, superbly photographed and exhaustively researched. If our teachers are interested, I am hopeful there will be funds to order a couple of sets.

"We are using much more visuals in all fields of education," Mrs. Whitehurst explained.

"We are of course relying heavily on audio visuals, but that is not all the story. What we terms as manipulations, that is objects, not just pictures, is an important and practical way to teach.

"These are objects that can be touched, handled, examined, models of things in nature and in the sciences that delight students. Being delighted, they learn much more readily. It is more interesting than the printed word alone, much as I love the printed word and want students to feel the same."

Other developments in visual aids include color television receivers in schools. "We have videotape capability," she added, "and we can make our own tapes in copies of programs on PBS we feel will be especially helpful in any of our classes.

"Not only that, but it has also been ruled legal to make Videotapes of newscasts provided that after use we wipe them out. This is an excellent way to help youngsters understand the contemporary World around them."

Special Help Project

Books and visual aids are aimed at all levels of students. "We have to plan for the gifted student and the slow learner," Mrs. Whitehurst said.

"To make sure the slow learner gets all the assistance possible, we have put considerable emphasis on low-level reading material for students who are not reading on the high-school level.

"All this material has been carefully researched and designed to so that those who are behind in their ability to read well can have many opportunities open to them. I feel this approach will go far to doing what is most needed to raise the reading level of this group of students; that is, to get them into the habit of reading.

"For anyone who loves books the way I do," she said, "I feel whatever effort it takes to interest young people in learning to read well and to get in the habit of reading, is an important part of this business we call going to school."

"BOOKS ARE MORE BEAUTIFUL"....Mrs. Kay Whitehurst, Director of Secondary Education in the Greenville City Schools, declares that books today are more beautiful than ever, and are extensively researched to bring the finest information to students.

Students are throwing good nutrition away!

Each school year 25 million American children are served meals daily through the $4 billion National School Lunch Program. According to estimates widely reported this past year, at least $600 million worth of this food is thrown out by the children because they find it unappetizing, with fresh fruits and vegetables held in particular disdain!

Both parents and teachers should fully appreciate the serious implications of such a report.

Children learn lifetime food habits, good and bad, by the examples and the meals planned—first at home, then later in school. And unfortunately, most children are falling victim to the rising popularity of convenience foods—children whose parents have been acclimated to fast foods and frivolous taste indulgences.

It cannot be assumed that most children receive adequate intake of the essential vitamins and minerals—or even ordinary calories for normal growth and energy—at home. Every government survey has revealed alarming percentages of children among all income groups to be deficient (below U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance) in their intake of such key factors as iron, calcium and vitamins A and C.

What about your children? Are they learning to recognize and prefer foods that contribute optimally to their growth and health? Or are they tossing away good nutrition because their taste buds have been desensitized to all but the exciting concoctions of the junk food generation?

Taste for food is learned, and you can help to prepare your children against the nutritional ignorance, indifference, and food fads so prevalent today.

To teach children (and their parents!) how nutrients generate health and energy, what constitutes a balanced diet and why it is so important to eat the proper foods, the Vitamin Information Bureau offers some attractive and highly informative aids to start them on the road to better eating habits.

The leaflet "Vitamins in Your Growing Years" unfolds into a scoreboard/checklist to identify and record the vitamins consumed in the foods your child selects and eats over a week's period.

The Bureau also offers a large, colorfully-illustrated wall chart of "Vitamins and Minerals in the Growing Years" that will give the children a "guided tour" of the micronutrients that work in the human body, giving the U.S.R.D.A.'s for each age group, explaining the role in the body of each micronutrient, and showing good, popular food sources.

For two copies of the leaflet/checklist send your name and address with 25¢ or two stamps to the Vitamin Information Bureau, Dept. MA, 664 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611. Better yet, for permanent display and long-term benefits, send $3.00 for the attractive and educational wall chart.

If you mention the name of this paper in your order, the Vitamin Information Bureau will include the leaflets free with your $3.00 chart and pay all postage.

TWO SISTERS....Angela Thompson (left) and Lisa Thompson both gave the definite impression they are eager to be back in school. "Man, it's nice, I'm really glad," Angela, a sixth grader at Wahl-Coates smiled. "It's going to be fun going back to school," Lisa agreed. She is a seventh grader at Agnes Fullilove.

College fees are soaring

The increase in tuition and fees from 1975-76 to 1976-77 for the nation's state colleges and universities was well above the rise in inflation for the same period and was the largest percentage jump in four years, according to a study by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

Based on a survey of 323 member campuses, AASCU found that the average undergraduate tuition and fees increased 8.3 percent for state residents and 9.8 percent for non-residents, raising tuition and fee costs per year to $582 and $1,466, respectively.

Graduate tuition and fees rose 6.4 percent for residents (to $1,849) and 9.4 percent for non-residents (to $2,654).

The six percent increase in room and board rates was slightly less than the rise in the Consumer Price Index for the same period.

That was no quarterback, ...that was my kid sister!

When Congress wrote Title IX regulations banning sex discrimination in college and university programs, the greatest public attention was focused on athletics and a furor arose over the predicted radical alterations in intercollegiate sports.

The past five years have not fulfilled the dire predictions. On the campuses of the nation's state colleges and universities, Title IX has not torn asunder the fabric of intercollegiate sports, and, while some financial problems do exist, the pressure for women's competitive sports has not bankrupted athletic departments.

What has occurred for the most part is a gradual and steady maturing of women's athletics; an evolution in skill and competition with its genesis before Title IX.

Queens College of the City University of New York has had a nationally ranked women's basketball team for years; and Eastern Oregon State College has run a successfully integrated men's and women's athletic program for the past seven years.

Wright State University (Ohio) ascribed little of its equitable athletic policy to Title IX because, as with most of the state universities founded in the past 10 to 15 years, there was no "long-established monolith of male-dominated athletic programs" to counter. A sport was incorporated "from scratch" and automatically provided an equal degree of administrative support.

Summing up the impact of Title IX, the associate director of intercollegiate athletics at the State University College at Buffalo (New York) commented, "I really don't think Title IX caused this new vitalization in women's athletics, but it will support the efforts being made in this direction."

In the past three years the number of women participating in college varsity sports has doubled to approximately 100,000. Continued escalation is probable with the increasing support prompted by Title IX.

At the State University of New York College at Cortland, the budget for women's athletics has increased over 500 percent in the past 10 years.

While the dollar margin is still greater than two-to-one for men's athletics, it is narrowing; this year the women's budget increased 24 percent while the men's decreased 1.5 percent.

The potential for career opportunities in athletics has prompted Mississippi University for Women to design a new major in athletic administration and coaching at the collegiate level.

The director of women's athletics at Central Michigan University sees women coaches of the next decade devoting more time to recruiting and promoting as increased publicity leads to demand for a "product to entertain spectators." She thinks that there will be more pressure to conform to the established pattern of men's sports.

Future development also should break free of the controversy created by Title IX. As the sports information director at the University of Northern Colorado points out, "The hue and cry that men's athletics would be destroyed has largely died out... the record shows that men and women can exist side by side."

The attention initially generated by Title IX is shifting from public controversy to public interest in the caliber of women's sports.

This seems to have been a major benefit of Title IX:

the skill and competition nurtured by state colleges and universities over a period of years are now emerging into a public spotlight which should continue to arouse enthusiasm and support.

1,400 Back To Work

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

Beginning August 22, some 1,400 employees will report for work in the Pitt County school system, according to Ott Alford, superintendent. About 650 of these will be certified professional staff members.

The rest will be aides, secretaries, maintenance workers, transportation people and cafeteria employes, Alford noted.

The Superintendent offered a few various and sundry facts pertinent to the opening of the 1977-78 school year.

"We will be operating on a budget of $14-million funded by county, state and federal monies," he said. "This is in the neighborhood of about three-quarters of a million dollars more than last year."

Pitt County schools should enroll within the first several weeks about 11,500 boys and girls. "I would guesstimate that 800 to 850 of those will be first-time students and students moving into the area," he added.

Approximately 825 seniors will graduate next spring.

"We will feed in the neighborhood of 10,000 people per day and will transport in the neighborhood of about 8,500 per day," he said.

"We serve breakfast in most schools," he added. "But the option is left to that particular school's administrator; we don't force it."

Lunch prices for students in grades K-8 will be 45 cents, 50-cents for high school students and 75-cents for adults.

"Students are not required to eat in the cafeteria, but they are not allowed to go home during lunch either," he said.

Alford said approximately $2-million of the operating budget will be spent in the lunchroom program.

'Some day' projects to do

Alone at last! Now that the children are back in school and your days are your own, take advantage of your newfound time and freedom.

Begin by catching up on all the projects you've always wanted to try "some day." You might consider some of these ideas, too:

- Be ambitious! Go to school part-time or take just one course that has always interested you—tennis, sculpture, floral arranging, or even astrology.

- Be cultured! Get tickets to a play, go to a foreign film or read those best sellers you've been saving all summer.

- Be carefree! Streamline your laundry routine and cut out pre-soaking. Instead, pretreat your family's clothing with Spray 'n Wash® laundry soil and stain remover. Just spray it on the extra grimy spots, wait 60 seconds, and wash the clothes as you normally would.

- Be healthy! Get together with friends at someone's house and form your own private "health spa." Begin the morning by doing calisthenics to an inexpensive exercise record.

- Serve a low-calorie lunch to everyone, and spend the afternoon giving each other facials and manicures or experimenting with new hairstyles.

WOMEN'S VARSITY SPORTS participation has doubled in the past three years to about 100,000 nationwide—and still growing. Here, a Bowling Green hurdler heads for victory.

Students everywhere striking up the band!

The Pied Piper of Hamelin has a modern counterpart. It's the school band director.

From coast to coast, youngsters are heeding the sounds and signing up for band.

In Staten Island, New York, an all-island stage band was started with 22 students from public, parochial and private schools. Today, the program has grown to three stage and three concert bands formed to accommodate the hundreds of students clamoring to join up.

Chicago's Bowen High School, which had an indifferent instrumental music program as recently as 1975, now has a program that involves hundreds of students in a beginning band, intermediate band, marching band, concert band, jazz ensemble and classes in woodwinds, brass and percussion.

The Tempe, Arizona, high school band marches to a different beat—the strums of guitars. This band was started last year and now can be seen in full uniform, performing at football games as well as in concert.

Whether they are in uniform or street clothes, in groups of barely a dozen to units that top 250, American school bands offer students the opportunity to belong to a unique group, to perform before family and friends, to learn new skills, to develop discipline, cooperation and a new sense of self-worth.

In music class, students can learn the fine points of a Haydn march as well as the technicalities of interpreting the Beatles.

They also may have the opportunity to travel around the world, performing for audiences that range from parents and friends to heads of state.

According to research by The American Music Conference, about 50% of the nation's elementary and high school music students belong to a band group.

While parents and educators focus on the educational benefits of band members, one California clarinetist summed it up for the students:

"Band people are unique. Everybody seems so close. It's like living with two different families, one at home and one in the band."

The American Music Conference is an educational and research association funded by the music industry to encourage American music participation.

Bus back to school for money-saving ease

New York, N.Y.—Returning to college for the school year is a combination of confusion and hysteria. Packing, loading the car, and traveling hundreds of miles to school can be a mind-boggling experience.

Even worse, many parents lose a day's work, and must pay for gas and an overnight hotel.

This mad situation can easily be avoided. Students can take advantage of inexpensive bus travel, as well as ship luggage, stereos, skis, and furniture needed for the school year along with them.

Buses provide the ideal "back to school" shuttle as they serve more than 15,000 communities (only 980 are served by airlines and trains combined).

Trailways offers many economy bus fares. For example, a special $75 one-way fare to any point in the country will be available until September 30, but must be purchased before September 15.

In addition, Trailways has a new, expanded Package Express service which provides transportation for larger and heavier packages. Now, packages which weigh up to 150 lbs. and measure up to 75 inches long can be transported by Trailways—before, during, or after your trip. This service is offered by no other national bus company.

So, this year, avoid the back-to-school blues—return to college by bus.

Stylish head of class

INDISPENSABLE TOOL FOR BEAUTY IN SCHOOL Active campus coeds and aspiring high school scholars need a fast and easy beauty routine that will keep them looking their best through long hours of study, sports and social activities without long hours of preparation. The Remington® Super Salon 1000 hair dryer is a convenient complete beauty boutique in a box that combines the features of a blow dryer, styling comb and curling wand in one compact space-saving unit. The Super Salon 1000 packs 1000 watts of power and comes with a hot air styling comb, a pistol drying nozzle, a spot concentrator nozzle, circular styling brush and a curling wand attachment that uses hot air for a set that's kind to the hair.

HISTORY IS YOURS FOR THE MAKING with a beautiful hobby kit from Swiss Boutique that shows you how to recreate a classic wooden clock from any period you choose from the 14th to 19th centuries. With these unique hobby kits, students can actually recreate a clock mentioned in Dante's Divine Comedy—or assemble mechanisms that were sparked by the genius of Leonardo!

Pre-plan for snack raids

With more and more mothers working, attending classes at local schools or colleges, or participating in a variety of community projects, there's a good chance that many children will be making their own after-school snacks.

A tradition in many American homes, the after-school snack perks up youngsters after a long day at school and helps tide them over until dinner.

With a bit of pre-planning, a busy woman can supervise what her children eat, even though she may not be present. Here are some low-calorie snack suggestions that won't interfere with dinner:

- Young children will enjoy looking into the refrigerator and finding portions of fresh or canned fruit—pineapple, grapes, orange sections, or even melon chunks. Another delicious treat is applesauce sprinkled with cinnamon.

- For the child with a "sweet tooth," prepare a mixture of raisins and nuts, or a crunchy, whole wheat cereal. Also, try instant puddings, gelatin desserts.

On a hot day, home-made ice pops, made with fruit juices and pieces of fresh fruit, are not only fun but refreshing as well.

- To avoid the monotony of cookies and milk leave a bottle of Canada Dry Club Soda in the refrigerator. Club soda contains no sugar or artificial sweeteners and no calories. Your children can make a tasty fruit drink by mixing club soda and their favorite fruit juice.

- If your children are vegetable lovers they will enjoy nibbling on fresh vegetables from the garden. Cut up some carrot and celery sticks and add some olives and slices of cheese.

Good-looking good vision

WHETHER THEY'RE COMPETING in the classroom or on the playground, active youngsters need good vision to do their best. An annual back-to-school check-up by an eye care specialist can uncover vision problems that may be hampering daily activity. If glasses are prescribed, it's wise to rely on a professional fitter to help select frames that are flattering and comfortable. "Bavaria" by Bausch & Lomb, a kid-size version of the classic aviator style, combines sturdy metal construction with sleek good looks. The right frames can enhance a child's personality.

School pride sparks the community

A tremendous idea for promoting community pride in the school systems is underway in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The Colorado Springs Teachers Association has instituted a "Be Proud" poster campaign, co-sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce.

This project will feature graduates of the Colorado Springs schools who have "made it" in the world.

The posters carry the message that "your school system is working," and will be displayed in storefronts during the Christmas season.

Creative reproduction...

History to make at home—hobby clocks turn back wheels of time

Why should your child merely study history when he or she can actually recreate it—and acquire new handicraft skills in the process!

This year you can give your child a deeper appreciation of history and add a real feeling of excitement to the learning process with some very special educational hobby kits.

Just imagine the proficiency and knowledge your child can acquire by making a reproduction of the 14th-century wooden wheel clock mentioned by Dante in the Divine Comedy. Or you and your budding scholar could work together to assemble a 15th-century pendulum clock influenced by the genius of Leonardo da Vinci.

Clock historians agree that the first wheel clock driven by weights was a remarkable advance for its era, ingenious in its very simplicity. The craftsmanship and ingenuity that went into these early wooden wheel clocks is an important bridge to the past that deserves to be remembered.

Thanks to a unique Swiss company, you can now purchase hobby/craft kits to make perfect reproductions of antique clocks from the 14th to 19th centuries. When your young student has finished putting this piece of history together, the clock will keep running with all of the efficiency of its original predecessor.

These kits, imported from a 1,000-year-old village in Switzerland, are made of genuine hardwood and are ready to be assembled from clear, concise diagrams.

For a free color booklet on these beautiful historical clocks, write to Swiss Boutique, Dept. CC, Suite 802, 608 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10020.

Give pre-schoolers 'get ready' fun with instructive 'school-at-home'

When older kids march off to school, preschoolers often want to go, too. To keep the little ones happy, let them go to school—that is, to their own school-at-home. Set aside some "school time" each day to help them learn and improve their basic skills.

Play-Doh Modeling Compound is an excellent medium to use in these sessions. It's been used by teachers for many years as a teaching tool. For example, tots can learn how to identify and mix colors using the illustrated color blend chart on the package.

They can also learn to make different shapes, and to relate these shapes to objects at home. The older preschooler can learn to form alphabet letters and put them together to spell simple words; numbers and counting can also be learned this way.

With one of the newest Play-Doh sets, the Fuzzy Pumper Barber and Beauty Shop, children can learn about real life situations while they're having a marvelous time at play.

In the set are four Fuzzy Family figures which are filled with Play-Doh and placed on the barber chair; once the crank is turned and the Play-Doh is,

PRESCHOOLERS CAN HAVE GREAT FUN being "barbers" with the new Play-Doh Fuzzy Pumper Barber and Beauty Shop, from Kenner.

"pumped," amazing hair and amusing beards start to "grow" on bald heads or cute faces. Safe scissors and clippers, a comb, play "razors"—even a dust pan and brush for cleaning up—are included.

This is a fun way to introduce the concepts of good personal care—and if your little ones are hesitant about going to the real barber or beauty shop, you can use this set to show that there's nothing to be afraid of. Another new educational toy is the Play-Doh Workbench. Children can extrude, pound or press out many colorful shapes and work on them with the safe tools which are included.

With Play-Doh toys on hand, your preschoolers will enjoy their own school-at-home—and you'll be preparing them for that big day when they, too, march off to a real school.

Fashion honors list

A PLUS IN FASHION—Down jackets head the honors list of back to school wardrobes this year. These lightweight, practical garments are scoring high points at all grade levels. They're perfect for fall . . . warm all through the coldest winter days . . . and comfortable to wear in early spring. There's a wide range of styles and colors to choose from . . . or you may want to make one from a do-it-yourself kit. The kits are fun and easy—and they save money, too. Either way—kit-made or store-bought—a down jacket is the smart way to go to school this year.

Tips for tip-top wardrobe to take you to top of class

The sound of school bells ringing signals the end of summer vacation, and, once again, you are faced with getting your children's back-to-school wardrobes in order. If you don't know exactly where to begin, here are some basic clothing care tips which will help keep your youngsters' clothes in tip-top shape:

- Give yourself ample time to thoroughly inspect and repair your children's wardrobes, especially if they were not properly stored away in the spring.
- Split seams and tears on clothing should be mended immediately to prevent further damage; replace all missing buttons and reinforce those that are loose.
- Zippers should be examined to see that they are moving smoothly; trim away any fabric or threads that are catching. Also, check all knits and polyesters for runs and holes. Minor defects may be camouflaged with a sew-on applique.
- All items should be inspected for last year's spots and stains. Washable items should be laundered according to manufacturer's instruction; be sure to read the labels. Most common spots will respond to a treatment of Spray 'n Wash® laundry soil and stain remover.
- Just spray the pretreat directly on the spot, wait 60 seconds and launder normally. For extra-tough spots, try another spray and washing.
- Many spots and stains on dry-cleanable items can be removed with an application of K2r® Spot-lifter. Just apply it to spotted areas, let dry to a fine white powder and brush soil away.

You can cut down on expensive dry-cleaning bills if you begin to use the spot-lifter on a regular basis.

- Sweater-knits should not be placed on hangers because they will begin to sag and lose their shape. It's best to keep them folded neatly in a drawer or on a shelf.
- Double-knits are sturdier and can be hung on padded hangers. Corduroy trousers should also be hung on padded or wooden hangers to avoid the marks made by the clip-on type.
- Any items that are very worn or damaged beyond repair should be tossed away. If clothes have been merely outgrown, make any necessary repairs or alterations and hand them down to younger children. Or, offer them to a charitable organization.

These simple refurbishing tips may help add dollars to your savings and will prolong the life of your children's clothes, too. You'll also find your shopping list trimmed considerably, consisting now of only those yearly necessities needed to complete your youngsters' wardrobes.

IMAGINE, EVEN A BOY'S ROOM can be kept neat and organized with the use of a Cado/Royal System wall unit.

Dream of a room for dreaming 'superstars'

The athlete—a man with vigor, conviction and determination. The aspiring athlete—a boy with a dream and the drive to realize that dream. A boy's room—his fantasy land.

So when our young man returns to school and runs back onto the playing-field, the objects of his dreams should be close at hand—stored conveniently on Cado's handsome and durable Royal System wall units.

Special brackets suspended from wall rails which are screwed into the wall, or on adjustable poles for room partitioning, hold shelves, cupboards, drawers and tables in as many combinations as one's mind could conjure up!

All-in-all a space-saving solution to what would otherwise be a cluttered room and a haven for a boy who dreams of one day being another O. J. Simpson or Joe Namath.

A creative work center encourages new talent

If your children are eager young artists who like to practice their talents at home, encourage their enthusiasm by setting up a creative-work center.

Choose an out-of-the-way spot—in the playroom or perhaps, in their own room—where their creativity will not distract the rest of the household.

A table unit, with a large, washable surface that provides ample room for several children to work simultaneously, is ideal.

Use the area under the tabletop for storing your child's supplies by adding a small chest of drawers. The chest can house all the inevitable clutter you want to keep out of sight such as books, games, puzzles, messy finger-paints, clay and other assorted supplies.

Use one of the deeper drawers to save all the household items that can be recycled into ingenious crafts.

A craft booklet, "Crafty Critters," offers simple ideas and tells how a variety of toys and crafts can be made from empty plastic cleaner bottles. It is available, free of charge, by writing to: Consumer Relations Department, Box N; Texize Chemicals Company; P.O. Box 368; Greenville, SC 29602.

Your children's works of art will merit your admiration but it's hard to be enthusiastic about paint-splattered walls and floors, and all those smudged-clay fingerprints.

Remember, although children can be messy, you don't necessarily need a barrage of buckets and mops to straighten-up after them.

Clean-up of a child's work-play area can be easy with Fantastik® spray cleaner. Just spray it on dirty washable surfaces and wipe with a clean cloth or a damp sponge.

Sensational stick-ons pull your special look together

Whichever way the fashion winds blow, there's still only one way to be a stand-out in a crowd: be an individualist.

Lively little extras about your clothes—even your room—turn standard fare into something special. The problem is—where to find them?

The answer is simple. Don't hunt—make! And here's a clue. Borrow the stick-on idea that's sweeping the younger set and scale it up to a nifty new thing: glue-ons!

Just take some trusty Elmer's glue and scraps from the sewing box—then take a look at all the good things they can do. To get you started, check out these ideas:

- Identify yourself on your book bag or notebook by gluing on giant initials cut from gingham or calico scraps.
- Jazz up jeans with yarn-painting! Draw a simple design and fill it in with bright yarn, following the outline of the shape and gluing as you go.
- Try a daisy or a bicycle on your hip pocket—or how about a giant tic-tac-toe for the back of your jacket? Hint: If you apply them with Elmer's Fabric Mender Cement they won't come out in the wash!
- Spark your room with a wall hanging that's all you. Glue felt or burlap to a large piece of artist's illustration board, then glue on colored felt shapes to make a picture. It could be anything from a landscape or a bunch of flowers traced from a painting to a giant replica of one of your own sneakers!
- Get a new outlook at a dreary window by decorating the shades with glued on trimming—fancy fringe, a border of dimestore flowers, maybe cartoon cut-outs! (Give paper cut-outs a spray of Crystal Clear Krylon to protect them.)
- Carry things off in a child's lunch pail, turned into a fashion prop! First spray it a super new color with an easy-to-use spray paint like Krylon. (It lets you spray on two or three light coats, helps avoid runs and drips.) Then add your own special touches. Decorate it to match a fall outfit. For instance, spray it beige and glue on plaid ribbon to go with your khaki-and-plaid number. Or, glue on cut-up jeans—be sure to include a hip pocket on the lid to hold a bandana!

NEED A NEW OUTLOOK? Take a plain shade and stock shutters, glue on colorful braid and presto—a full-dress window treatment! And, you can do it all with Elmer's Glue-All, plus a can of spray paint for the shutters—clever concealment for an ugly radiator. Left-over braid makes shade pull, even skinny-mini bulletin board on wall! Hint: neat, flat look of "Calcutta"-textured shade is a result of hanging it so roll faces window instead of room.

The glue-on idea opens the door to all kinds of possibilities. In fact, once you latch on to that handy Elmer's bottle, you'll find there's no end of things you can do to show the world, "I'm doing it my way!"

Raggedy Ann and Andy head the class

TWO PRIZE PUPILS, Raggedy Ann and Andy, relaxing back to back, compose Syroco's new wall-hung garment rack "tidy-up." Are they daydreaming of homework, or thinking of how much fun school really is? In either case, this 22" x 14" "tidy-up" is a perfect addition to any youngster's room. In bold, vibrant blues, reds and yellows, it has five white pegs, perfect for hanging all those little overalls and jackets after a "hectic" day. The "tidy-up," of durable plastic, is easy to clean. This practical accessory retails for approximately $16.00 and is from Syroco's new "Raggedy Ann and Andy Collection" of clocks, wall plaques and mirrors. Syroco is a division of Dart Industries Inc.

Reading development is a community affair

Parents and the general public are important forces in the reading education of a community. Besides encouraging activities in the home which help children develop reading skills and foster a love of reading in their own children, parents often become involved in school and community reading programs.

Dr. Jack Cassidy, member of the International Reading Association Board of Directors and supervisor of reading for the Newark, Delaware School District, suggests that parents find out what their community is doing in the area of reading and then participate. In the school, people can actively participate in a volunteer tutoring program.

THOUGH HE WON'T MAKE IT to this year's World Series, here's the newest baseball sensation, "Super Jock" Baseball.

Playing along . . .

Sluggers strikes a hit!

As the baseball season nears its climactic end with the World Series, youngsters six and up can play along right at home with "Super Jock" Baseball, the newest "Super Jock" sports game from Schaper.

A two-player game involving precision timing and player coordination, "Super Jock" Baseball consists of a "pitcher" who is placed on the "mound" and rests against a hidden mechanism that holds the baseballs.

With a flick of a lever behind the pitcher, players send the balls flying out toward the rugged, slugging batter.

When whacked on the head, the batter then swings his adjustable bat to meet the balls and slug out base hits. "Super Jock" Baseball comes complete with decals, scorepad and field markers.

'Critter crafts' to help lift the rainy day blues

It's raining! It's pouring! The kids complain it's boring . . .

Keeping youngsters happily occupied on days when they can't go outdoors to play can be a challenging problem, but there is a simple solution—treat them to an arts and crafts session right in your own home!

Many odds and ends around the house, like the empty trigger and refill bottles from household helpers such as Fantastik® spray cleaner, Glass-Plus® glass, appliance and cabinet cleaner, Grease relief® degreaser and Spray 'n Wash® laundry soil and stain remover, can easily and inexpensively be transformed into useful "treasures."

To find out how, send for a copy of "Crafty Critters," a free booklet filled with ideas and directions for making a variety of toys and crafts out of these empty plastic bottles. Write to: "Crafty Critters," Consumer Relations Dept., Box N; Texize Chemicals Company; P.O. Box 368; Greenville, SC 29602.

LUNCH WITH A CARTOON PAL is always more fun. King Kong is the choice of many youngsters today.

Portable pal makes lunch a feast of fun

A child's lunch box needn't be just a container for carrying sandwiches. It can be a colorfully decorated kit containing a variety of foods that make lunch a fun affair.

The grade school lunch have a special pal to sit down with if they carry a lunch box imprinted with King Kong, Howdy Doody or another cartoon favorite. And parents can be sure the kit is safe if it contains an unbreakable Roughnecks bottle by Thermos. These bottles contain no glass yet keep beverages cold all morning—an important feature for safety-conscious parents.

A nice addition to lunch kits is a Snak Jar. They contain no glass and are ideal for keeping salads and desserts.

Both the insulated jar and lunch bottle can be kept in the refrigerator and capped when ready to use.

Just as it's important for lunch toeters to select their favorite characters, it's important for them to be in-olved in planning their menus.

A weekly planning session also doubles as a nutrition lesson for them. Here are two child-tested recipes your youngster will want to try.

CHOCOLATE BANANA

1 ripe banana, sliced
1 cup orange juice
1 cup cold milk
1 tsp. chocolate syrup
Place all ingredients in blender. Blend until smooth. Makes two, 1 cup servings.

FRUITY CUSTARD

4 eggs, beaten
½ cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
1 cup milk
Beat ingredients together in blender or electric mixer. Pour into individual custard cups. Place molds in pan of water and bake at 300 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes or until slightly firm. Refrigerate at least one hour before serving. Makes 8 servings.

Denim goes on a silver streak

DENIM, THE PERENNIAL FAVORITE of school children everywhere, has taken a shine to silver this fall. "Good skate," at left, wears slightly-flared jeans from Pretty Please designed in a Cone Mills easy care, blended denim and accented with silver stars on the patch pockets. The pint-sized boxcar racer, at right, wears denim overalls outlined in silver and topped off with a quilted "aluminum" jacket, all by Ted Batton for Magic Years.

Colleges place emphasis on improved writing skills

Writing problems affecting the academic performance of college and university students are the focus of many new programs on campuses across the nation.

A continued decline of scores on the verbal portion of standardized tests taken by students entering higher education and an increase in the number of students who cannot meet minimum entrance requirements for competency in basic English composition have forced universities into action to remedy the situation.

Efforts consist of a variety of new courses and tutorial programs along with the establishment of writing skills centers on some campuses, according to the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC), whose membership includes all of the nation's major public universities.

"The ability to write well is the most important outcome of a liberal education," said Harry Levin, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Cornell University.

In 1976 the college established what they believe to be the first deanship in the country concerned solely with the new courses and programs for the fall, 1977 term.

A major aspect of the Cornell approach will involve the new dean in work with a number of colleges and departments to serve the writing needs of a variety of students.

An experimental course format employing a writing instructor in addition to the course content instructor, tried in a few courses in business and in city and regional planning, received such an enthusiastic student reception that the university hopes to expand the format to other departments.

The University of Califor-

THE CAMPUS COMES ALIVE each fall as students begin another year of college study. nia, Santa Cruz, is also experimenting with methods of incorporating writing instruction into a broad range of academic programs. The university has hired a half-time lecturer for each of its colleges to teach four courses in writing.

All campuses of the University of California are devoting an increasing amount of attention to the teaching of writing, spurred on by some frightening statistics concerning the basic English writing skills of their students.

In 1975 the university found that 76 percent of its entering students—the top eighth of California's high school graduates—had scores below the minimum required by the university on the College Entrance Examination Board's English Composition Test.

One university approach to the problem, started four years ago by the Berkeley campus, is the Bay Area Writing Project, considered to be the largest writing reform effort in the country.

It was designed to help teachers in selected area elementary schools, high schools and colleges develop new techniques to help students improve their writing ability.

FLIP UP OR UNDER: Saucy pert flip styles can be turned into classic trim pageboys with the way you use your brush. Spray with Miss Breck Lasting Hold for a smooth, shiny look. And to keep hair off the face, try a pair of combs so popular now.

The ups and downs of hair care: just a flip of the brush does it all!

Up or down, curly or straight, long or short—there will be a variety of hair styles this fall, many created with just a flip of the brush.

Shoulder length hair is again the most popular length because of its versatility. Hair this length can be waved or curled, pinned up into a top knot or brushed in a smooth straight style.

However you like to wear your hair, start with a good professional cut. After a summer in the sun and water it is a good idea to trim the ragged edges off the bottom of long hair and reshape hair any length.

Choose a shampoo such as Breck Gold Formula designed for your hair type—dry, normal or oily. Even if you consider your hair normal, you may want to try a shampoo for dry hair at the end of the summer. A lot of top New York models have both types of shampoo on hand so they can switch to suit the condition of their hair at the moment.

A wet set will last longer than blow drying hair or setting on hot curlers. Use different sized rollers depending on the natural curl of your hair and the end result you want. The smaller the roller the curlier the result. For deep open curls or pageboy styles use large rollers.

Combine large and small curlers for smooth tops and masses of small curls on the end. Then it is the way you flip your brush that determines your final style.

Freshman fashion orientation includes good-looking head start

Although the main reason for going to college is to improve the inside of your head, you'll be a lot happier this fall if you make some outside improvements before heading off to school.

With classes, exams, parties and sports taking up your time, you won't want to worry about your hair. But you can't just "let it go" like they did in the '60s.

The '70s student has cleaned up his or her fashion act and if you want to get in the swing of things on campus, you should start this summer.

The hair care pros at Helene Curtis offer these tips for getting your head together for the fall semester.

• Start your college prep at a quality beauty or men's styling salon in your home town. A professional haircut will last until your Thanksgiving break and allow you easy care hair throughout the fall.

• This is the year to be permed. Perms today are not what they used to be. No longer must you hide under a hat until your "frizz" settles. You can have curl—bouncy tight-or-loose as you like curl—that adds style to your haircut, class to your act.

A VISIT TO A BEAUTY OR MEN'S STYLING SALON for a good cut and a perm like the Helene Curtis Form 3 or UniPerm Body for Men, is just as important for college prep as the trip to the bookstore. For her, short, wash-and-wear bouncy curls that keep-on-dancing day and night. For him, just the extra body he needs for that well-groomed look.

• If you're not into the curly look that's making a comeback, you should still consider a perm. Your salon stylist can give you a gentle Form 3 wave just to add all-day support to your sleek, blown-dry or roller set bob.

• Men are also prime perm candidates. With UniPerm Body for Men, you can get a really naturally curly look or a just-for-body wave for that lots-of-hair look when blown dry.

• Stock up on shampoos and conditioners, brushes and blowers at your local salon so that you'll be using the professionally recommended products your hair needs.

Remembering good times with annual school photos

From pigtails to braces to sophisticated young lady. From short pants and shyness to assured young man. It's a journey filled with so many important events and good times.

And they are all reflected in the pictures taken annually by professional photographers of students in kindergarten through senior year in high school.

Perhaps no one appreciates the photos more than the youngsters and their parents who can look back over their growing collection of class and individual pictures, savoring the memories they capture.

An estimated 32 million U.S. students each year sit for the school photographer's camera. Nearly 75 per cent of these photographs are made in the first months of the school term—and the packets of pictures are ready in time to be swapped with new class friends, presented to relatives during the holidays or used by school officials for records and community publicity.

This widespread photographic service has grown by leaps and bounds since the early 1900s when C. K. Hennington took the first known school pictures of 12 students at Oyster Creek school in rural Texas. By the mid-1940s, school photography was such a widespread practice that Hennington had attracted national news coverage and was dubbed the "Wizard of Wolfe City."

of the child. Often he or she is portrayed in three-quarter view with backdrops and props that add a note of realism.

Professional photographers recommend children wear bright-colored, wrinkle-free clothing when they pose for the camera. Hair should be recently trimmed and neatly combed away from the face.

Writing instruction is in demand

A new Writing Skills Center at the University of Utah is experiencing a tremendous demand for its services. The center is set up to give students additional training in composition and grammar before they enroll in regular entry-level English courses and to provide guidance to students in the writing of papers and other assignments.

had a single class in high school in which they were taught about writing principles," observed center supervisor, Dr. Sara Sanders.

The University of South Carolina recently received a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to expand its efforts in combatting "writing illiteracy" in the state.

The grant, supplemented with university funds, will allow for expansion of a free tutorial service, "The Writing Laboratory," so that it can assist more students who have writing problems.

The Writing Lab also plans to offer writing workshops for persons in the community, such as professionals in law and business, prison inmates, senior citizens, persons for whom English is a second language and others.

Children learn geography with help of model trains

Most youngsters like the subjects they're taught in school, but some have trouble with certain subjects like geography and history.

A growing number of wise parents are discovering how to make these subjects easy and fun to learn. They're using model railroads as teaching aids.

Many of the nation's great and small railroad lines bear the names of the routes they follow. By tracing the routes on a map of the United States, the youngster quickly learns the locations of state boundary lines, mountain ranges, rivers, major cities and other geographical landmarks.

Natural curiosity will stimulate the child to learn more about the history of America through the railroads that have played so important a role in its growth and prosperity.

Recognizing the value of model railroading as a supplement to classroom lessons, Lionel has just introduced three new train sets in its HO series that provide additional learning activities for the young engineer.

One is the historic Union Pacific, which became the nation's first transcontinental railroad on May 10, 1869. On that date the last symbolic gold spike was driven into the track at Promontory, Utah.

The two other new sets are the Southern Railroad and Norfolk & Western Lines. Each set includes an authentic railroad route map, an information booklet about the real railroad, die-cast truck, accessories, and an iron-on insignia.

Historically great trains in Lionel's new larger-model 027 series include the Wabash Cannonball, the Rock Island Line, the Rocky Mountain Special, and the Heartland Express.

An important lesson for parents selecting train sets for their youngsters is this: children under 10 have an easier time handling and playing with the bigger, more rugged 027 models; children over 10 can operate both the 027's and the more delicate HO models.

Push Primary Reading Program

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

The big story in the Pitt County school system this year is the implementation of Governor Hunt's primary reading program.

A total of 60 classrooms with a reading aid for each class will give county schools about 60 per cent coverage of all classes in grades 1-3, according to Ott

Alford, superintendent.

"This year we have 26 classrooms in grades 1-3 in which there will be an aid placed to work with teachers," Alford said. "Their main energies will be diverted towards those activities that will enhance reading skills."

The Superintendent said Governor Hunt channeled federal funds provided by CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) into the reading program and thus enabled the county school board to augment its program by 34 classrooms with aids.

Aids will be located in the following manner: six at Bethel; eight at Belvoir; seven at G.R. Whitfield; six at W.H. Robinson; six at Ayden; nine at Sam D. Bundy; five at Stokes Elementary; three at Pactolus; three at Chicod; three at Grifton; and four at Falkland.

"These 60 aids will be working with those students who are in the greatest need," he said. "All of them will have been involved in a four-day workshop prior to the week of August 22. Then all of them will be in a two-day workshop for a total of six days — outlining and helping each other understand the roles they are to play."

Alford said the aids will learn such approaches as how to teach phonics, assist youngsters to attack words and to comprehend more completely and accurately.

The state will expend about $6 per child for reading materials. "The workday is spelled out from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.," the Superintendent said. "And there is the possibility that some youngster or a group of youngsters will be engaged in reading throughout the day."

However, he added, reading aids are not to interpret the teacher's duties but to assist.

"In some cases, the child just doesn't have the intellectual makeup oriented towards reading, while he may be competent in other areas."

"Also, many authorities say that by age six a child has already developed those skills, an inquiring mind, a discerning mind, and they go further to say during the first two years and the pre-natal period when the mother may not get an adequate diet, the stimulation between parent and child — closeness, hugging, etc. — may be missing.

"Then some youngsters who have the ability are just not going to learn to read unless motivated or until they have matured."

In any case, Alford is optimistic about the program and feels it will work and benefit students who are involved.

Breakthrough in contact lens care

WITH ENOUGH COMPLICATIONS in the complicated world of campus living, it's refreshing to find a product that takes the hassle out of disinfecting, rinsing and storing soft contact lenses. The Soft Contact Lens Division of American Optical has introduced a new sterile saline solution that's easy to use and helps safeguard against eye infection. Called Lensrins®, this saline solution is more convenient than the old method which involves shopping for salt tablets and distilled water, measuring and mixing, cleaning and storing separate containers, and worrying about contamination. This is especially annoying for travelers and today's active, fast-moving young person around the high school or college campus. Lensrins solution eliminates these complications, is compatible with Bausch & Lomb's Soflens®, the Softeon lens, and the AOSOF®, Aquaflex®, Hydrocurve®, and Naturvue® lenses. Lensrins is now available through retail pharmacies as well as through eye care specialists.

Tests show significant rise in reading scores

While many people are asking the question, "Why can't children read as well as they used to?" recent figures from the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) cast doubt on the idea that children are not reading as well as their parents.

Figures from NAEP, based in Denver, Colorado, indicate that children are, in fact, reading as well, if not better, than students in the past. The NAEP figures are just one source of information indicating an improvement in reading test scores.

The NAEP figures indicate that the reading ability of nine-year-olds has increased significantly over a four-year testing program, and that the reading ability of 13- and 17-year-olds has shown no decline.

The National Assessment collects these, and other school achievement data, as part of a federally-funded project.

Reading educators have been generally surprised at the NAEP data, according to Roger Farr, vice president-elect of the International Reading Association, especially in the face of reports that reading skills are declining.

Many statements about that decline do not provide the data on which the statements were made, said Farr, and for that reason cannot be verified.

The even more hopeful news in the recent NAEP data is that nine-year-old students in the Southeast region of the U.S. are catching up with students in other areas, and that black students in the Southeast region are catching up fastest of all.

"Part of Governor Hunt's program also involves testing and we'll be testing third graders with standardized tests to see what's happening and if the goal is being achieved," he said.

"Youngsters in the program in the first grade must also be in it through the second and third grades," he noted. "They are requiring continuity through the third grade."

Literary competency in Pitt County is just over the 10th grade level.

Assessing the new program before it begins, Alford said, "It can't help but help. I'm convinced that like other things you have to do by doing."

Another plus is the fact that "we've got 60 teachers in reading sessions and it can't help but sharpen their skills too," he added.

If the program fails, a multiple of factors will be involved, he said.

Tips for perking up a home study area relieve 'the homework blues'

Do your children find homework just another chore they could live without? If so, with a bit of imagination and some understanding, you can turn your children's study time into a fun experience. Here are some useful suggestions:

Help your children establish a study routine that is compatible with other after-school activities.

For example, during the spring and fall months, your children may like to play with their friends after school and do their homework after dinner; when the old, winter months arrive, they may prefer to do their homework right after school to leave enough time for indoor games and TV.

Motivation is important for children. To provide a quiet, comfortable environment for your youngsters to work in, set-up a home-study work center. Choose an out-of-the-way spot—preferably not near a window—where their concentration will not be disturbed.

A table unit with a large surface that provides ample working room is ideal. For a special touch, you might want to add some basic desk accessories and a matching pen and pencil set.

Also, add an inexpensive shelving unit above or near the work area to store school books, reference materials, trophies and other assorted memorabilia that most children treasure.

Children seem to be messy by nature, but straightening up after them needn't be as troublesome as you may think. When you choose furniture for the kids, look for durable, washable materials like plastic laminates or Formica. These materials can be cleaned easily with Fantastik® spray cleaner. Just spray it on washable surfaces and wipe with a clean cloth or a damp sponge.

If your children like to be around you while they're working, try having them study at the kitchen or dining-room table. However, only become involved in your children's homework at their invitation and resist the temptation to do the work for them.

Save suggestions concerning posture and neatness until after homework is done so resentments do not build up. Instead, try lending a sympathetic ear and offering some cookies and milk to ease the hunger pains until dinner.

Gift pack for school

WHETHER HE OR SHE IS GOING BACK TO SCHOOL or back to college, a pleasant surprise is a back-to-schools gift package. An assortment of pens, pencils and felt tip markers is useful, not to mention a yellow highlighter to make key passages from college textbooks stand out. To be well-groomed, Remington has the Smooth & Silky for her and the XLR for him. Both electric razors come with a blade razor and a challenge. Shave with the Remington razor and with the blade. If the electric doesn't shave as well as the blade, return the electric along with the sales slip to Remington for a full refund. Several jeans and sweater outfits are a must for today's school crowd and a collegiate dictionary can be worth its weight in good grades.

Vic Tayback: 'I Really Just Don't Know What The Key Ingredient Is'

Vic Tayback, star of the comedy series "Alice," beginning its second season on Sundays at 9:30 p.m. on CBS-TV, is most impressed with the Greenville Daily Reflector "TV Showtime."

Vic Tayback, who plays the seedy diner owner and cook, Mel, in CBS-TV's "Alice," honestly doesn't know what has made the series such a hit.

"I really just don't know what the key ingredient is," he frankly admits. "When it first originated with 'Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore,' to me, my part in the film was just a job. I was pleased to do the job, and — Bang — the picture was a hit.

"Then, some two years later, the decision came to make a TV series out of it, and I said to myself, 'Where do these things come from?' An actor never knows where something might pop up from."

To this day, Vic says he can't go back three years to the time when the movie was being filmed and say that he never thought this would become a running character. "It's a complete surprise to me."

Vic Tayback is well-pleased with the series' comedy dialogue. "I'll tell you one thing...I think we have probably as strong a group of people, character-wise and acting-wise, as a lot of the shows on TV."

There will be a few changes in the format when "Alice" begins its second season this fall. The most obvious change will be a de-emphasizing of Alice's home. "The intention is to keep everything confined to the diner," Vic explained, "and work with the people coming into the diner." We've added a set that will be my storeroom in the back of the kitchen. And that's going to be functional to any of the characters. Anything we want to happen away from the immediate diner, area, we'll let it happen in the storeroom."

Vic says he's "notorious" for changing words. "And it's only because I can't remember them all. I never have been able to remember the script exactly like it was written.

Remember or not, he's effective in his role of Mel, and there will be no changes in the character this season. "I'm going to keep letting the girls know that I have another life, and I'll keep being the 'cruddy' character I (Mel) am."

Two Find The Answer In Deep South Drama

Would a northern black urban family be welcome in the rural deep south today?

That's the question tackled by Chicago-born playwright Melvin Van Peebles in "Just an Old Sweet Song," which will encore on Thursday, August 25, 8 to 9:30 p.m., on CBS-TV. Starring Cicely Tyson and Robert Hooks, the original contemporary drama meets head-on the reflexive apprehensions and prejudices of some northern blacks.

"This was really one hell of a script, and it's a first," says Hooks, the actor-producer whose two real-life sons, Eric and Kevin, play his children in the production. "It is an honest portrayal of a contemporary black family. The problems are real."

The problems Hooks refers to confront the Detroit family when his mother-in-law, Beah Richards (Oscar nominee for "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner") who's up from her small Georgia farm for a visit, prompts Hooks and his wife (Tyson) to decide to drive her back home. Father and sons have never been south, and they're apprehensive. Mother remembers the prejudices she faced there before moving north, so she's equally fearful.

Has the south really changed? They aren't sure.

The drama was filmed on location in a small farmhouse in Conyers, Ga., whose actual inhabitants moved out during the day to make room for the cast and production crew. At the end of ten days of living and working in and around the tiny rural town, life had imitated art, and at least two members of the cast had answered from their own experience the question posed by Van Peebles in his play. "I'm a Mississippian," says Beah Richards. "When I lived in the south I was in blinders and straightjacket, so to speak.

REMEMBRANCE OF THINGS PAST is triggered when Aunt Velvet (Minnie Gentry, foreground) tells Priscilla and Nate (Cicely Tyson and Robert Hooks) how it used to be down on the southern farm they visit in "Just an Old Sweet Song," airing as a "GE Theater" drama special, Thursday, Aug. 25 (8-9:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Good Music Returning

"Good music seems to be coming back. Disco is softer, lyrics are back, too. Not only will this benefit television, but the change will be reflected on our future 'Midnight Special' shows. We've always tried to translate the mood of the music scene."

This is Ken Ehrlich and he had just completed four taping sessions as the new producer of NBC-TV's "The Midnight Special." The popular 90-minute late-night musical (1 to 2:30 a.m.) is in its fifth season and is seen following the Friday presentations of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

"Good lyrics are coming back. You can hear them sung by Peter Frampton, James Taylor and Leo Sayer. And Barry Manilow is basically a lyricist," Ehrlich continued.

"The re-appearance of good lyrics means a lot to television. The medium requires a certain intimacy. FM can capture it and now TV can get on an even footing.

"Television can present story songs, like those of Rod Stewart, better than it can rock and roll numbers and we hope to emphasize this on our upcoming telecasts of 'Special.'

"The return to better lyrics will give us something other than just a beat to focus on.

"The heavy rock and roll music doesn't translate as well as this kind of story or lyric performance and we will take advantage of it in the kind of show we present."

After a one-month hiatus, "Special" returns to taping Sept. 6.

STILL TAKES THE BUS TO WORK

Bill Anderson, co-host of the new game show, "The Better Sex," is probably best known as a country music singer-composer.

Looks Like 'Bogie'

When actor Jerry Lacy was in college, someone told him he looked like Humphrey Bogart. Little did Lacy know at the time what an impact this statement would have on his life.

"I was so excited that I practiced in front of the mirror, then tried my impersonation out on friends."

So effective was his impersonation of Bogart that he subsequently gained national fame through his popular role of the great actor in "Play It Again, Sam," both on Broadway and in the movie.

For the past four years Jerry has been portraying Rick Latimer in the CBS-TV daytime series, "Love of Life." Rick owns a club in the fictitious town of Rose Hill and is generally considered to be one of the show's villains.

Does Jerry see any of himself in the character he portrays?

"Yes, quite a bit," he responded. "Characters on soaps tend to develop a lot of the characteristics of the actor who plays the part after awhile. By virtue of the fact that writers tend to pick up on some of your personal mannerisms and speech patterns, along with your personality."

As far as the difficulties he encounters in playing a role in a daytime drama, Jerry feels that the worst is fighting the inconsistencies in the script and the character.

"It's unavoidable, I know," he says, "to have these inconsistencies, because they (the writers) don't know the end product of the script when they're writing it a great deal of the time. We'll say one thing one day, then turn around and say the opposite the next day, so it falls on the actor to make these adjustments and to make it work."

NBC To Expand News Specials One-Third

NBC News will expand its hours of special television news programming by one-third in the 1977-78 season.

Several new programs representing a substantial increase in television hours are now in development, and plans call for longer forms of programming than the one-hour broadcast and a wide variety of formats.

"Weekend," the magazine program regularly scheduled for the first Saturday of each month, will be presented in prime time during the summer of 1978.

In addition to the new programs planned for next season, NBC News will present in 1977-78 the first programs in three special series—one with former President Gerald R. Ford, another with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, and the third with Mrs. Betty Ford, the former First Lady.

In his first program, Mr. Ford will examine the role of the President of the United States as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces. It will be telecast in late January or early February of 1978, with correspondent John Chancellor, co-anchorman of "NBC Nightly News," as reporter.

"NBC Reports," a series of one-hour documentaries dealing with important subjects and issues in American life, will be continued during the next season. A three-hour special program—"Medicine in America" —will pre-empt an entire evening of prime-time programming on the network next January. This will be the eighth time since 1963 that NBC-TV has preempted an entire evening of prime-time programming to explore in depth a problem of national or worldwide importance.

The NBC Forum, which received widespread praise when it was first held last March, will be scheduled again next spring, Wald said. The 1977 NBC Forum was an examination of the American political process of business and labor, journalists and academicians expressing their ideas. A special two-hour program of highlights of the discussions was presented.

Several topics of national concern are now being considered as the theme of the 1978 NBC Forum.

Vocal Band Visits Pepperdine Campus

Tinfoil clothes, a haunted amusement park, and a Renaissance man-in-the-street are all part of "The Starland Vocal Band Show," starring the Starland Vocal Band, on Sunday Aug. 21, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The Band—Bill and Taffy Danoff with Margot Chapman and Jon Carroll—sings Danoff's "Baby, You Look Good to Me Tonight," for a picturesque audience at a Hollywood drive-in.

Other musical highlights include "Mr. Wrong," written by Danoff, Carroll and Gwen Davis, and sung at a concert at Pepperdine University's Malibu campus; another Danoff song, "Ain't It the Fall?," performed at a recording studio; and "The Man Who Couldn't Get Away," sung from the stage of the Band's traveling van at Turkey Run Farm, Va.

In an unusual number, the band visits the empty Glen Echo amusement park near Washington, D.C., against the background of such lively sound effects as a kiddilyand, shooting gallery and fun house.

Comedy sketches include Jeff Altman and writer-performer Dave Letterman showing the latest in men's apparel—tinfoil clothes; political satirist Mark Russell commenting on government goings-on; and Altman being interviewed at the Renaissance Pleasure Faire.

Rip Torn: Name Blows Computer At Universal City In Hollywood

Back in the 60's the computer at Universal City Studios in Hollywood blew up when it tangled with the card stamped Rip Torn.

"That should give you an idea of Hollywood's opinion of me," says Torn, who co-stars as the Ku Klux Klan Imperial Wizard in "Attack on Terror: The FBI Versus the Ku Klux Klan," a two-part special movie presentation being rebroadcast on CBS-TV, beginning Monday, Aug. 22, and continuing Aug. 24, at 9 p.m.

The data the machine couldn't digest might have read something like this: remarks: "When I went to Hollywood, they wanted to straighten my nose, fix my teeth and change my name. Where could they find a more Hollywood name than mine?" Birthplace: Longview, Texas.

Schooling: Texas A and M and the University of Texas. Various pursuits: architecture, agriculture and drama. Extracurricular activities: reporter on school paper. Personal remarks: "After I did my first play, the editor of the paper came over to me and said, 'What a ham. You ought to stick to writing." Reasons for choice of career: the drama department had all the pretty girls. Personal remarks: "I decided to become an actor when I decided I wouldn't make it as a bank teller." Miscellaneous reasons: "Jason Robards couldn't play all the parts."

On the subject of Hollywood: "I love doing movies. But in order to develop more facets of myself as an actor I have to work in the theater. I like to think that when I return to movies, I am more valuable to them for the experience." Additional remarks: "Naturally, the more indulgent, goody-box life in Hollywood appeals."

Marital status: Married to Geraldine Page, they have four children, one by Torn's previous marriage. They have a fruit orchard growing on the roof of their Manhattan town house. They also have a reputation for artistic excellence rarely attained by other husband-and-wife actors.

Favorite mode of transportation: motorcycle; the bike often being impounded by police. On driving through city traffic: "It's the way one should live — to know every time this could be it." Habits of dress: informal; to detail, tieless, sports shirt, windbreaker, and rumpled slacks.

This, in capsule form, is the Rip Torn who messes up computers.

"ANTS" IN HIS PLANS Gerald Gordon, who plays Dr. Mark Dante on "General Hospital," will make a guest starring appearance in the TV movie "Ants."

Burt, Diane Star

Burt Reynolds stars as a hard-nosed private eye in "Shamus," on the "Monday Night Movie," Aug. 22 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Dyan Cannon also stars in this Columbia Pictures release.

Tough Brooklyn detective McCoy (Reynolds) lives so shabbily he uses a pool table for a bed. When he is offered $10,000 by a rich eccentric, Hume, to recover some stolen diamonds, he is more than happy to accept.

In the course of his investigation, McCoy uses the talents of Springy, a character with a computer-like mind for sports facts, Bolton, a health club bouncer, and syndicate head Dottore to lead him to a corrupt military officer who deals on the international black market. As the puzzle unravels, McCoy learns that, in reality, the stakes are much bigger than stolen diamonds.

Dyan Cannon portrays Alexis, a sister of one of the suspects who hires McCoy on a job of her own.

FACT FINDING — Burt Reynolds, as Brooklyn detective McCoy, has a meeting with Alexis (Dyan Cannon) to determine the whereabouts of a cache of stolen diamonds in "Shamus," a drama to be rebroadcast on "Monday Night Movie," Aug. 22 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Romance Previews Tuesday

Yul Brynner, Eli Wallach, Jane Birkin and Lainie Kazan star in "Romance of a Horsethief," a rollicking comedy-adventure airing on the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," August 23 at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Eli Wallach and Oliver Thomas plays Kifke and Kradnik, two crafty peasants in 1904 Poland who eke out a living selling — and stealing — horses until Cossack Captain Stoloff (Brynner) appropriates all available horses for the Russo-Japanese war.

Trouble, Laughter Reign

There's trouble, and laughter, ahead when a not-so-gung-ho ex-Marine-turned-maintenance-man locks horns with a gang of mischievous teenagers in

"Sheehy and the Supreme Machine," on "The ABC Comedy Special," Monday, Aug. 22, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Sheehy (John Byner) is "drafted" to teach some discipline to the "Supreme Machine" gang, who are disturbing the tranquility of their apartment building. At first, Sheehy thinks what's needed is a healthy dose of good old drill instructor discipline and physical exercise to put the miscreants back on the straight and narrow. But the ex-Marine hasn't reckoned with the resourcefulness of his young charges — or the fact that it's been more than a few summers since he himself learned, and scaled, the ropes at boot camp. He realizes he's up against it when, for example, he finds a compact car in the passenger elevator.

Also starring on "Sheehy and the Supreme Machine" are John Cassisi (Victor on the "Fish" series) as Dirt; Jimmy Baio (Billy on the new series "Soap") as Borgen; Pierre Daniel as Teddy; Moosie Drier as Evel; David Arnott as Pantsface; Tige Andrews as Mr. Cagle and Gwynne Gilford as Mrs. Bogen.

Precision And Timing Are Key

Factors In Massive Auto Crash

Mathematical precision and split-second timing went into the execution of the crash sequences of "Smash-Up on Interstate 5," encoring as "The ABC Tuesday Night Movie" Aug. 23, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Starring in the film, which depicts events in the preceding 48 hours in the lives of people involved in a 39-car accident on a freeway at the close of a holiday weekend, are Robert Conrad, Buddy Ebsen, Harriet Nelson, Vera Miles, David Groh, Scott Jacoby and Sue Lyon.

Masterminding the smash-up scenes was one of Hollywood's top stunt coordinators, Charlie Picerni, who is also stunt coordinator on "Starsky and Hutch."

Working closely with director John Llewellyn Moxey, Picerni laid out the entire sequence on a table top with miniature cars in much the way a military strategist would lay out battle

Some of the cars used in the film were in fair running condition; others, known as "clunkers," were fugitives from a local automobile graveyard. When the scenes were completed, many of them were piles of twisted metal.

In the completed film, the crashes take place in a rapid series of shots, but filming them on a two-mile stretch of unfinished freeway near Glendale, Calif., was a tedious and arduous procedure. Each had to be done separately and done right the first time, with four cameras going at different speeds.

The most difficult stunt involved the car supposedly driven by Buddy Ebsen and Harriet Nelson as a passenger; a stuntman and a dummy were used for the crash.

Many lives cross tragically in a flaming 39-car crashup on a holiday weekend in "Smash-up on Interstate 5," the "ABC Tuesday Night Movie," Aug. 23 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV. The all-star cast

Benny Gets Long Laugh

March 28, 1948 was an uneventful Sunday evening. As usual, millions were gathered around their radios listening to "The Jack Benny Show," — letting their imaginations enhance the antics of people they already knew ... Jack, Mary, Don Wilson, "Rochester," Phil Harris and Dennis Day. Then it happened, Jack left the Ronald Colmans next door, quickened his pace through the darkness; a stickup man approached and delivered his ultimatum ... "Your money or your life." Instantly, the world visualized the look on the face of the cheapest man in America...and they almost never stopped laughing.

That moment, the longest recorded laugh in radio history, is one of many fond remembrances of America's most loved entertainer. CBS is currently telecasting the best of "The Jack Benny Show," Tuesdays at 8 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Josefsberg, now producer of Norman Lear's "All In The Family," wrote that famous Benny joke and describes its inauspicious origin. "As we started to write the scene with the holdup man, I paced the floor while my collaborator, John Tackaberry, reclined on a sofa. I told Tack, supposing we have the crook pull the classic threat on Jack — 'Your money or your life.' Jack will get screams just staring at the crook and the audience — and if we get a good snapper on it, it'll be great." Tackaberry seemed to ignore the need for a good punch line. Josefsberg's patience was at an end. "Dammit, if you don't like my lines, throw in a couple of your own," to which Tackaberry snapped — "I'm thinking it over."

And so, March 28, 1948 Jack Benny stood facing the crook. The silence was infectious. After what seemed like an eternity of laughter, the stickup man menaced, repeating himself ...

"Your money or your life" and Benny replied — "I'M THINKING IT OVER." At the end of the show Benny walked off-stage and, passing his writers, said with confidence — "I could have looked at them and kept that laugh going until Wednesday."

'Lawrence Of Arabia:' Award Winner Airs On Sunday Movie

Peter O'Toole and Anthony Quinn (l to r) star in "Lawrence of Arabia," the epic adventure which won seven Academy Awards, on "The Sunday Night Movie," Aug. 21 (8 p.m.-12:07 a.m.) on ABC-TV.

"Lawrence of Arabia," a motion picture which has become almost as legendary as the man it memorializes, a film which won seven Academy Awards — including Best Picture of the Year — will air as an expanded version of "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Aug. 21, at 8 p.m. Produced by Sam Spiegel and directed by David Lean, who also created "Bridge on the River Kwai," "Lawrence" was written by three-time Academy Award-winner Robert Bolt and made stars of Peter O'Toole (in the title role) and then-newcomer Omar Sharif. Other principal roles are played by Oscar winners Alec Guinness, Anthony Quinn and Jose Ferrer. The nation's critics saluted "Lawrence" as "One of the most magnificent pictures, if not the most magnificent I have ever seen" (LA Times), "an awesome and overpowering spectacle" (Philadelphia Bulletin) and "a staggering masterpiece undoubtedly one of the great films of all time" (San Francisco Examiner).

"Lawrence of Arabia" portrays that curious moment in history when a brash young British officer encounters the beginnings of the allied revolt in the Arabian desert against the Turks, and comes to play an almost godlike role in uniting the feuding tribes into an effective fighting force. Peter O'Toole, in his first major screen role, plays the enigmatic T.E. Lawrence, a student-turned-warrior, a man of destiny who doubts himself. Alec Guinness is the soft-spoken Prince Feisal, leader of the Arab revolt who used Lawrence and is used by him.

Harriet Nelson Returns With Sadness Behind Her

Harriet Nelson made her first acting appearance since the death of her husband, Ozzie, in "Smash-Up on Interstate 5," to be rebroadcast as "The ABC Tuesday Night Movie" Aug. 23, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV. Her role as the wife of Buddy Ebsen in the dramatic film about a group of people involved in a massive 39-car crash on a holiday weekend also marked her first appearance without Ozzie in 40 years. The past few years have not been easy ones for Harriet.

"When suddenly your main interest in life is taken from you, and so is your work, it's rough going," she said. When she received the call asking if she wanted to return to acting in the ABC film, her answer was an immediate "yes." "My first day on the set was something of a trial," she said. "Working without Ozzie for the first time in so many years was frightening at first but everybody went out of their way to be helpful. After a few hours I began to relax — and then I didn't have time to be scared."

Harriet has no plans to sell the house in Hollywood hills in which she and Ozzie lived for 36 years. "I don't know what in the world I would do with all our files," she said, pointing out that these include 435 "Ozzie and Harriet" scripts, six filing cabinets of photos and countless bins of records. "And besides," she said, "it's where our sons David and Rick grew up and it's full of warm and wonderful memories."

Hicks Considers Role Most Important Ever

Hilly Hicks considered his role in "Attack on Terror: The FBI Versus the Ku Klux Klan" to be "the most important thing I have ever done as an actor — period." Hicks portrayed one of the three civil rights workers, two white and the other black, whose disappearance in Mississippi in 1964 plunged the Federal Bureau of Investigation into a lengthy fight against the Ku Klux Klan. The challenge to the Federal Government's enforcement of civil rights laws has been dramatized and will air in two parts on Monday, Aug. 22, and Wednesday, Aug. 24 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV. "I spent the first 14 years of my life — because I was considered a child prodigy — as a minister," Hicks says.

Rogers And Mason Set Precedents In Drama

Thesians Marilyn Mason and Wayne Rogers set precedents with their roles in "Attack on Terror: The FBI Versus the Ku Klux Klan," a drama that depicts a landmark case in the FBI files. It will now encore as a four-hour two-part broadcast on "The CBS Monday Night Movie" and "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Aug. 22 and 24, 9 to 11 p.m. both nights, on CBS-TV.

The drama is a factual dramatization of the 1964 disappearance of three young civil rights workers in Mississippi and the four-year-long struggle by the Federal Government to adjudicate the case.

Ms. Mason thinks that she may have made screen history in her role. For the first time, she says, the home life of an FBI agent is prominently featured in a story — and she plays the wife.

"The producers wanted to show that FBI agents really are human," she says, adding, "It's something that hasn't been brought out before, the fact that such men really do have wives and kids and a home life."

As the wife of special agent Dan Foster, played by Rogers, Marilyn Mason brought a large measure of domesticity to a story which would have been strictly "macho" in the old days of Hollywood FBI storytelling.

For Rogers who, for a goodly number of seasons, played Trapper John, the charmingly cunning medic on "M*A*S*H," it was a decided change in his screen plumage.

With his "M*A*S*H" "yahoo" character now dampened by gray business suits and a subdued demeanor, Rogers was, at first not at all sure the switch of roles was to his liking.

"It's hard for me to act," he says. "I thought the part might be too drab. I wanted to play one of the villains, a Ku Klux Klanner. I could more readily picture myself in bib overalls and slaid shirts than in the humdrum coloring of one of the FBI men. Then I read the script. It was real. It was what happened, based on a case that was a milestone in civil rights history."

Of hiding his personality behind the gray-flannel facade of an FBI agent, Rogers said it wasn't as tough as he thought it would be.

"I tried to do a complete character, from the way the agent would talk to the way he wore his clothes."

Coming from Alabama, it was no sweat for Rogers to deliver a Southern accent. "Each area of the South has its own speech nuances," he said. "But the base to the speech pattern is the same. All I had to do was to remember everything about my speech I'd worked so hard to erase while studying acting."

Regular Roles Cast On 'Oregon Trail'

Darleen Carr and Charles Napier have been set for starring roles, and William Windom has been signed for several guest appearances, in NBC-TV's new historical adventure series, "The Oregon Trail," now filming in Flagstaff, Arizona for the 1977-78 season.

Carr will play Westward-bound spinster Margaret Davlin and Windom will appear as her improvident father, Packy Devlin. Napier will portray the wagon train's scout and guide, mountain man Luther Sprague.

Carr, recently seen on NBC-TV in the role of Army wife Tommy Damon in "Once an Eagle," also is familiar to TV audiences as Karl Malden's daughter in "Streets of San Francisco," and Henry Fonda's daughter in "The Smith Family." Her motion picture credits include "Death of a Gunfighter" and "The Impossible Years."

Napier starred in the NBC made-for-television movie, "Ransom for Alice," and has had guest roles on "Baretta," "Streets of San Francisco," "Baa Baa Black Sheep," "The Rockford Files" and "Kojak." He appears in the motion pictures "Citizens Band" and "Thunder and Lightning."

Windom is a frequent guest star on television in both comedy and drama. His one-man show on the work of James Thurber, an outgrowth of his role in NBC-TV's series "My World and Welcome To It," has taken him to many of the nation's college campuses.

Rod Taylor stars in "The Oregon Trail" as Evan Thorpe, the focal character, an Illinois farmer who decides to move to the Oregon Territory to provide a better future for his three motherless children.

Switched Roles To Poltergeists

Ruth Gordon, a petite, vibrant actress, has been taking life by the horns for a long time now — about a hundred years, to quote her husband, writer-director Garson Kanin. Not quite, but she shows no signs of slaking her pace.

Appropriately, she began her stage career playing in "Peter Pan." Much later, she switched from pixies to poltergeists, for her role as the devilish neighbor in the film "Rosemary's Baby." When she accepted her Oscar for that performance, Miss Gordon announced, "I can't tell you how encouraging a thing like this is."

Now, in yet another spirited performance, she appeared as guest star of the "Kojak" episode "I Want to Report a Dream..." to be rebroadcast Thursday, Aug. 25 at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

"It's point blank one of the best acting jobs I've ever done," she says, even though Miss Gordon has a lengthy career of accomplishments to look back upon for comparison. "They were the best people, the script was exciting and I put in a fine performance."

Miss Gordon started her acting career by flunking out of drama school. Nonetheless, she has gone on defying expectations ever since. She arrived in New York City from England, much against her father's protests, and lived on nickels and dimes for a while. Within four years she had made her way to Broadway success.

"Nothing is impossible," she contends, reflecting back on her life. "I've been an actress so long I can imagine myself at anything."

Although she doesn't reject any possibilities, Miss Gordon admits that she is not a psychic believer. But she didn't find her disbelief a handicap to her acting on "Kojak," in which she portrays a woman who envisions a murder and fears her dream will turn to reality.

"When you're a wonderful actress you can get into anything," she says. "You don't have to commit a murder to play a murderer before the cameras. I think you can learn to play anything if someone will just take the trouble to teach you how to do it."

Pike's Peeks

By Charlie Pike
 TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — "CHiPs" promises to be an action show on NBC in the mold of "Emergency" and-or "Adam 12," but because of a lot of use of motorcycles it's more dangerous perhaps than those other two shows. And all one has to do is ask Erik Estrada about that to prove it. Erik stars with Larry Wilcox in the show about two California Highway Patrolmen who spend most of their time on motorcycles, and recently in a scene staged on a yet-to-be-opened freeway Erik's bike slid to its side, severely scarring Erik's right arm and legs. Ironically, the accident happened in one of the few scenes where the two are actually on bikes. For most of the chase scenes stuntmen fill-in for the two young stars.

It's been almost eight months since Victoria Mallory stepped in to replace Janice Lynde on daytime's "The Young and the Restless," but only recently has Victoria begun visiting with the news media. But it wasn't because she wanted to avoid all those obvious questions that the actress avoided interviews, it was because it's her very first TV role in her career, and admittedly, she was frightened. She's not anymore, and the fan acceptance of her in the role is all the evidence that is needed.

It won't be mid-season before ABC moves "The Hardy Boys" to a more favorable timeslot because of the immense popularity of Shaun Cassidy and Parker Stevenson among the young TV viewers. The odds of that show winning its timeslot opposite "The World of Disney" and "60 Minutes" are insurmountable, so the network will move it if it gets off to a bad rating position.

While there are understandably a lot of skeptics about "Logan's Run" becoming a TV series, if the quality of the weekly segments is equal to that of the pilot look for it to be the surprise of the season.

Shock is phrasing it mildly when it was announced that Robert Blake has filed for a divorce from his wife after 14 years of marriage. Insiders are predicting, however, that impulsive Bob will withdraw his divorce petition and seek a reconciliation.

'Peyton Place' Revisited

 (6,7) Tonight Show: With host Roy Clark
 12:30 a.m. (3N,9,11) CBS Late Show: "A Matter of Wife...and Death" Rod Taylor and Joe Santos. A pool hustler, who is also a private investigator, is confronted by both the police and "the organization" about the bomb killing of a former private-eye associate. (repeat, 2 hrs)
 (3W,5,12) Thursday Night Special: "Peyton Place Revisited" Peter Lawford is the host of this show with guests Mia Farrow, Ryan O'Neal, producer Paul Monash, Chris Connelly, Patricia Marrow, Russ Tamblyn and others. (repeat, 90 min)

Mia Farrow, Barbara Parkins, Lana Turner, John Kerr, Chris Connelly, Patricia Marrow, Russ Tamblyn and producer Paul Monash are brought together for "Peyton Place Revisited," a reunion of former residents of that mythical New England town in films and the long-running television series, which will be presented as the "Thursday Night Special," Aug.

25 at 12:30 a.m. on ABC-TV. "Peyton Place Revisited" will air highlights of the television series, including scenes involving the most famous of all romantic triangles on TV — Mia Farrow (as Allison MacKenzie), Ryan O'Neal (as Rodney Harrington), and Barbara Parkins (as Betty Anderson).

Shamus Tracking

In "A Matter of Wife...And Death," Rod Taylor stars as Shamus, a free-wheeling private investigator whose attempts to track down the killers of a small-time hoodlum get him involved in a big-time gambling operation. The film will be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie," Thursday, Aug. 25 at 12:30 a.m. on CBS-TV.

Paulie Barker (Tom Drake), in a late-night call to Shamus, pleads for help but the private eye arrives on the scene too late. Paulie's fire-bombed car tells the story. Shamus becomes personally involved and assures Paulie's widow (Anita Gillette) that he'll find the killers. The trail leads him to one of the town's biggest bookie rings, headed by tough Joe Rudy (John Colicos) who wants Shamus to regret ever getting involved.

Joe Santos appears as Lt. Vince Promuto, Eddie Firestone as Blinky, Luke Askew is Snell and Anne Archer portrays Carol.

PRIVATE EYE — Rod Taylor (r), as Shamus, works to solve a case involving a small-time informer and Dick Butkus portrays Heavy, in "A Matter of Wife...and Death," to be rebroadcast on the "CBS Late Movie," Thursday, Aug. 25 at 12:30 a.m. on CBS-TV.

McGlory Goes From 'Gong Show' Contestant To Guest Celebrity

Margee McGlory is living proof of that good things come to those who wait. And good things happened to Margee over a four-day period in October.

Margee is a multi-talented black entertainer. She sings, acts, dances, does impressions. She worked on concert tours with Duke Ellington and Count Basie many years ago, but couldn't get her career launched into musical comedy due to either racial discrimination or the mere lack of parts for black ladies. So, deeply disillusioned, she went to Europe.

For the past 15 years, she has worked steadily in Europe singing in French, German, Japanese and English and doing impressions, in the same languages, of internationally known figures such as Josephine Baker, Edith Piaf, Maurice Chevalier, Marlene Dietrich, and Eartha Kitt.

Three months ago she returned to the United States, got an audition on NBC-TV's "The Gong Show," and was accepted. On October 19 she appeared on the program doing impressions of Walter Brennan, Bette Davis, Pearl Bailey and Louis Armstrong. She won the grand prize.

Her cousin, Linda Fontanette, a friend of Redd Foxx, told the comedian about the act and he watched "The Gong Show" on his lunch break during "Sanford and Son" rehearsals. He was impressed and asked Linda to bring Margee to his office the next day.

On October 20 Margee did more impressions for Redd and his colleagues and was signed to a three-year personal management contract with the popular entertainer, who also stars in and books a weekend act at The Thunderbird in Vegas and is planning to produce television variety specials.

On October 22, Margee had her first job, a small part on NBC-TV's "Sanford and Son," in "Sanford and Gong" (to be col-orcast Friday, Aug. 26 8-8:30 p.m. on NBC-TV). In the segment she plays a contestant on "The Gong Show" rehearsing her impressionist act.

Margee saw "Sanford and Son" for the first time in Guam five months ago although she was familiar with Red Foxx and his comedy act before she went to Europe. "I can't get over it," she said. "I struggled so many years just for one little break and then in one week Redd Foxx gives me the chance of a lifetime. It's all been worth it."

Cornel Wilde stars as a veteran diver who penetrates a shark-infested sea to recover a sunken fortune, in "Sharks' Treasure," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Friday Night Movie," Aug. 26 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Frisbee Special Airs On CBS

Ashley Whippet, world champion "K-9" Frisbee catcher who set the world distance record by racing 106 yards to catch the elusive disc, demonstrates his leaping ability for veteran broadcaster Tom Brookshier, host of "CBS Youth Invitational...Frisbee," airing Saturday, Aug. 27 (1-1:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

"CBS Youth Invitational...Frisbee," second in a series of half-hour specials featuring young people competing in young people's sports, will be presented Saturday, Aug. 27, 1 to 1:30 p.m.

The special, which follows the popularly received "CBS Youth Invitational...Skateboarding," first in the series, presented last February, will feature eight of the world's top junior and senior champions — young men and women — competing in a number of events, as well as demonstrating other unusual and exciting skills with the saucer-like disc.

The special was taped on July 12 and 13 at Six Flags Over Georgia, a 276-acre family entertainment center with six themed areas, in Atlanta, Ga. All of the Frisbee events were integrated with rides and attractions of the park.

Tom Bookshier, veteran CBS Sports broadcaster and host of the special on skateboarding, will be on hand, along with Peter Bloeme, World Senior Frisbee Champion, who will provide the commentary on the sport and demonstrate his Frisbee skills.

Webster's Dictionary says that the original word "Frisbee" (later changed to Frisbee) was taken from Mother Frisbee's cookie jars, which were used for a game by Princeton students. Others say it began with pie plates. Today, it is a trademark for a plastic saucer-shaped disc tossed back and forth.

The first professional model was produced in 1964, and the game has become one of the country's most popular free-wheeling pastimes.

Headliners for the exhibition match include reigning women's world champion Monika Lou of Berkeley, Calif., and two dogs — Ashley Whippet and Hyper Hank — trained to catch the flying discs in the air.

The young champions will each perform their exciting flying disc wizardry while competing on and around the rides of the park, including an accuracy competition which takes place at the 225-foot parachute jump, appropriately named The Great Gasp. Members of each team were placed in adjacent gondolas of the parachute jump and were awarded points for each throw and catch between the parachutes while ascending on the ride. Also, while at the top of

The Great Gasp, the teams competed in a long-distance accuracy event, which entailed throwing a Frisbee to a point in the park approximately one-quarter mile away.

TO S. VAN HALL, LYNCHBURG, VA.: You're right. That is Dieder Hall — Dr. Marlene Evans on "Days of Our Lives" — who's Lorie, Electrowoman on "The Kroffts Supershow." Many actors "double-up" with more than one show because viewer-exposure is the name-of-the-game, as far as their careers are concerned.

TO G. SINGLETARY, FLORENCE, S.C.: Although Farrah Fawcett-Majors considers herself a "rank amateur" as a skateboarder, she mastered the sport for the chase scene in a segment of "Charlie's Angels" that was rebroadcast recently.

TO N. SHROPSHIRE, LYNCHBURG, VA.: Both Rudy and Falconetti were shot in the final segment of "Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II." There are no plans to bring "R.M., P.M." back this fall.

Robards' Roots

Jason Robards had a nostalgia session that was more than mere trivia during the filming recently of "Washington Behind Closed Doors," and ABC "Novel for Television" which will air in September. Robards discovered that a crew member, Fred Fisher, had worked as a stand-in and double for the actor's famous father in Hollywood 40 years earlier. Robards got Fisher to dig into his collection of movie lore and de-dust a number of early photographs of Jason Robards Sr., which were then presented to the appreciative son.

Russian Gymnastics To Feature Women Gold Medalists On CBS

Olympic medalist Olga Korbut, Nellie Kann and Liudmila Tourischeva are featured in an expedition by the entire Russian gymnastic, modern gymnastic and aerobic teams which will be a segment of CBS Sports Spectacular. It will air Saturday, Aug. 27, at 4:30 p.m. Brent Musburger and Muriel Grosfeld, former U.S. Olympic women's team gymnastics coach, were in Wembley Stadium, London, to comment on the dynamic performances.

During the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany, it took Olga Korbut about five seconds to captivate millions of television viewers and spectators.

At 4-feet-10, 83 pounds, she was quite possibly the tiniest of the 9,000 athletes in Olympic Village. By the time they'd all gone home, she was possibly the most famous. Certainly, the most endearing.

From her first performance in the Olympics Olga, a 17-year-old school girl from Grodno, Byelorussia, the youngest of four sisters, daughter of an industrial engineer and a restaurant cook, quickly caught the fancy of everybody.

Under the scoring system of gymnastics, Olga led the all-around competition with just three exercises remaining as she entered the second round of the Olympic action. Virtually flawless to that time, she threatened to upset Liudmila Tourischeva, who won the world championship in 1970—when Olga could not so much as make the six-girl Soviet team.

Sadly, there was no title for Olga that night. She came to the uneven parallel bars, where, two nights earlier, she had stunned her competition with a move called "back somersault to a catch." The judges, however, valued her performance at 7.5, a relatively poor score.

Coaches Face Challenges

The Minnesota Vikings will host the Miami Dolphins on Friday, Aug. 26, at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV in a NFL preseason contest.

After breezing to their eighth divisional title in nine years, the Vikings went on to lose their fourth Super Bowl in as many attempts to achieve the glory of the classic. While leaving the Super Bowl as the second-best team in all of pro football land isn't all that bad, it is still a big step down from being number one.

Looking at the new season, head coach Bud Grant says, "Our major aim for the 1977 season is to get back to where we were...where we can beat a team like Washington in the playoffs, where we can beat a team like the Rams in the conference championship game. In order to improve, obviously, we've got to win the Super Bowl. Our job is not just to improve until we reach the point we were at last year; our job has to come after we reach the point of proficiency we reached last year. I think it is significant, though, that this team has been able to stay on the top as a contender when a lot of other Super Bowl teams from the past have been unable to stay up there."

The Vikings have met the challenge each year of staying competitive and have done this with an 80 percent change in their roster for 1968, when they won their first divisional title.

The Vikings are now preparing to charge after another with hopes that this title will lead them to a victory in Super Bowl XII.

As to the Dolphins, who defeated the Vikings in Super Bowl VIII to claim their second consecutive Super Bowl crown, they are faced with the challenge of getting back into the winning groove.

Bengals Tangle

Quarterback Greg Landry and the Detroit Lions tangle with two-time NFL passing champion Ken Anderson and the Cincinnati Bengals in an inter-conference National Football League pre-season contest to be broadcast live by CBS Sports Sunday, Aug. 21, 1 to 4 p.m.

Brent Musburger, play-by-play, and Tom Brookshier, analysis, will provide the commentary from Pontiac (Mich.) Stadium.

Landry had a solid 1976 season, completing 168 passes in 291 attempts for 2,191 yards, 17 touchdowns, and only eight interceptions. Spearheading the running attack for the Lions will be Dexter Bussey, coming off 696 and 858-yard seasons (1975 and 1976), and Lawrence Gaines, who racked up 659 yards as a rookie in 1976. Wide receiver Ray Jarvis is a solid long threat.

Defending women's champion Margo Overg competes against five other finalists in the Women's World Cup Surfing, a segment of "CBS Sports Spectacular" airing Saturday, Aug. 27, at 4:30 p.m. The event took place on a north shore of Oahu Island, Hawaii. The $8,000 purse presented the largest-ever for women in this sport.

Although surfing takes place in 14 countries around the world — including Australia, South Africa and South America — all finalists in this competition are either from Hawaii or Southern California.

Overg's stiffest competition comes from last year's runner-up, Becky Benson, a student at Brigham Young University, and Lyn Boyer. Lyn, 20 years old, is the youngest among the finalists.

In this exciting event, each woman rides 36 waves and is judged only on her four best ones. The women face walls of California Angels' hurler Frank Tanana thinks he will last as long as the great Warren Spahn and the other southpaw Hall of Famers. "Some people don't like the way I throw across my body," he says.

"But take a look at my follow-through. That's where I take the strain off my arm."

Hal McRae, designated hitter for the Kansas City Royals, remembers his days with the Cincinnati Reds well. "Pete (Rose) was the guy I admired. He made me feel how important it was to be a regular. And he always had money in his pocket, wore good clothes and jewelry."

Gould Hosts Live

Elliott Gould hosts "NBC's Saturday Night Live" airing August 27, from 12:30 to 2 a.m. Featured along with Gould are the Not Ready for Prime Time Players.

"Saturday Night Live," which is the conglomerate effort of a combination of unique people who are obviously all on the same zany wave length, premiered in October, 1975. The show was considered to be a 'sleeper' by NBC-TV, but it took off like wild-fire, and won several Emmys the following spring.

At the helm of the show is producer Lorne Michaels, who has gathered around him what could be TV's most widely diversified group of writers and actors.

"Our writing staff is made up of the best creative talents in the industry," said Michaels, adding, "...unfortunately, the industry is tuna fishing.

If the last part of Michael's comment doesn't make sense, don't worry. It's not supposed to. It's indicative of "Saturday Night Live."

Michaels views the entertainment arena from its two principal vantage points: onstage and backstage. He first worked as a writer in London, England, and then, back in his native Toronto, was with an advertising agency, wrote the script for a short film and was a writer for CBC Radio.

Later, he and Hart Pomerantz, a college friend, former a performing and writing team. They appeared on CBC-TV and then went to New York, writing monologues for Woody Allen and Joan Rivers.

They also wrote for a Phyllis Diller series and "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and wrote, produced and starred in a series of CBC specials. Michaels won an Emmy as a writer for a Lily Tomlin special, as a writer for 'Saturday Night Live' and as producer of the series.

Bert Jones Leads Colts Against Dallas Cowboys

Bert Jones will lead the Baltimore Colts into National Football League action against the Dallas Cowboys Saturday, August 27, at 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.

In 1976, Jones took his place as one of the elite quarterbacks in the NFL with an assault on the Colts record book which left him only a fraction shy of winning the league's passing championship from Oakland's Ken Stabler.

His 3,104 yards passing was the third best single season mark in Colt history. He also fractured his own completion percentage record of 59.0 percent with a new reading of 60.4 and moved to the head of the class in the Colt record book with a career completion percentage of 56.0.

Bert connected for three touchdowns in each of four games last season and finished with 301 aerial yards in one of those. To further amplify on his passing accuracy, only nine of his 343 passes fell into enemy hands.

As the 1976 season closed, Bert found himself a member of the Pro Bowl squad and with the pleasant chore of having to enlarge his trophy case with these awards: NFL Players Association MVP; All NFL by Associated Press; Newspaper Enterprise Association and Pro Football Writers Association; All-Pro team by the AP, NEA and PFWA, and the Kansas City 101 Club's AFC Offensive Player of the Year.

Bert holds a NFL record with 17 consecutive completions in a 1974 game against the New York Jets. That game was also his most productive with 385 yards and four touchdowns. He and his father, Dub, are the only father-son combination in the NFL record book. Dub scored a record six touchdowns against the Chicago Bears on November 25, 1951, when he played for the Cleveland Browns.

There have been many changes in pro football since Dub Jones's days on the field. "The day Bert signed with the Colts, he picked up more money than I made in my entire career," he pointed out. "And there's no comparison to the news media exposure of my time to today. Thanks to television, Bert is known from one coast to the other. Back in the '50s, I was a 'name' player, but outside of the season ticket holders in Cleveland, nobody knew me."

The one thing Dub has stressed to Bert about pro football is patience. "I told him not to expect things to happen overnight. You've just got to hang in there."

Bert's had little time to deal with patience since he found his football home in Baltimore.

STARTLING SECRETS OF THE WILD KINGDOM

"CALIFORNIA, HERE I COME!"
By JOE NAMATH

THE KEANE BROTHERS: KIDS WITH THEIR OWN TV SHOW

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ROBERTA PETERS, Metropolitan Opera star
What did you say to Mrs. Mondale and Ruth Carter Stapleton when you met them in Washington? — S.B., Caldwell, Idaho

● Since Joan Mondale and I have kids of the same age, we spoke about them — plus the pros and cons of college. When I met the President's sister, going up in an elevator, we broke the ice by singing — or perhaps it was harmonizing — "You Are My Sunshine."

FOR FRANK GIFFORD, ABC-TV sportscaster
Do you believe in giving teenagers a weekly allowance? — C.H., Johnson City, Tenn.

● Yes and no. I run a loose ship and believe in adjustment and negotiation. Before my son Kyle went to college, his allowance was partly salary — it included caring for the pool and garden. My daughter Vicki never wanted a set amount. Every few weeks she'd outline her needs and plans. We'd pay for her school lunches and extras, such as birthday gifts for friends. Any time they needed cash for things not run-of-the-mill, we'd sit down and discuss it.

FOR THOMAS TRYON, author of Crowned Heads
Were you an actor before becoming a writer? — M.D., Logan, W. Va.

● Yes. After a Navy stint in World War II, I studied at New York's Art Students League and worked as a painter at the Cape Playhouse on Cape Cod. I made my stage debut as a spear carrier in Caesar and Cleopatra. My Broadway debut came in Wish You Were Here, and I started in films in 1955. In fact, my acting career is longer than my writing one (which began in 1971). But I'll stick to novels.

FOR KAREN GRASSLE, star of Little House on the Prairie

What do you hate most about acting? — M.P.R., Keyesport, Ill.

● Sitting under the dryer every morning at 6:50, getting my hair set for the show. You have no idea how much I detest that ritual. I can't bear the feeling of heat on my head and tight curlers pulling my scalp. I feel suffocated by the tight net. I also hate having to get up at 5:00 to undergo that torture. I'd do and give anything not to have to go through that routine every day.

FOR CHERYL TIEGS, cover girl and model
Are you naturally thin, or do you have to work at it? — C.H., Provo, Utah

● I have to work at it every day. Six years ago I found myself gaining weight and got up to 150 lbs. (I'm 5' 10"). I gradually lost it and am now down to 120. Every day it's a challenge — if I relax one day, then the next is all diet. I'm very conscious of what I eat and how much. It's never easy to lose weight. You must put yourself in the right state of mind and be determined to make yourself the best you can be.

FOR FORREST TUCKER, starring in the movie Walking Tall

Are you scared of death? — M.H., Santa Fe, N.M.

● The word "death" has a sound of finality to it, with which I don't agree. I prefer to call it "the next step of the journey." I don't know where that journey will take us, but leaving this world is merely one of a series of stages. When we take our last breath, it's not the end; it's the start of something new. So, in answer to your question, no, I'm not scared. Not one bit.

FOR MEL TILLIS, songwriter and singer
Is your stutter for real or part of your act? — G.K., Portland, Ore.

● It's for real. I caught malaria at 3, and it affected my speech. Some said the problem would go away, but it didn't, and as a youngster I became very sensitive and introverted. Then, in the late 50's, I decided the stammer was something I could live with and realized it's much better to face the problem head-on. Now it pays off as comic relief in my act.

FOR MICHELLE PHILLIPS, star of the movie Valentino
I bet you're always asked silly questions, but what's the silliest question you've asked someone else? — O.M., Mason, Mich.

● When I met Henry Kissinger in Hollywood a couple of years ago, he said, "When you come to Washington, give me a call and I'll show you the city." I was so taken aback at the invitation that I didn't know what to say, so I said, "But I don't know where to reach you. Where's your office?" He stared at me and said, "Just call the White House and ask for Henry Kissinger."

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR
If I see Farrah Fawcett-Majors on another magazine cover, poster or T-shirt, I'll scream. Is there anyone who is not impressed with her? — G.B., Osnabrock, N.D.

● Spooky Singh, owner of the Hollywood Wax Museum. He knows from experience that today's VIP is often forgotten. So he's waiting before including Farrah. Last time he cashed in on an overnight success, the actor was getting 20,000 letters a week. The moment his show was dropped, the mail collapsed, too. Singh melted down the mannequin for a more enduring personality and made candles with what was left over.

FOR THOMAS BERTRAM LANCE, director, Office of Management and Budget

How do you rate yourself as a speaker? — N.L., Wheaton, Md.

● I'll answer that by telling you one of my favorite stories. A deer hunter took his nagging wife on a trip. He left her alone to try her luck. Shots rang out and back rushed the hunter to the scene. There was his wife engaged in an argument with a cowboy. "O.K., O.K.," sighed the cowboy. "Give me back the saddle and you can keep the horse." I'm as good an orator as she was a hunter.

PRO AND CON

Should Innocent Victims of Crime Receive Federal Aid?

PRO Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr. (D.-N.J.)

There is a higher cost to crime than the expense of police, courts and prisons: the cost of human suffering. Of the thousands of people injured by criminal acts each year, the majority are poor, and many are elderly and sick. We have an obligation to assist them to recover from their injuries and financial losses. Twenty states now have programs to compensate crime victims for unreimbursed medical costs and other expenses, but the Federal Government needs to help present state programs expand and to encourage other states to begin such programs. The Government spends thousands of dollars toward the detention and rehabilitation of convicted criminals. It's time we show some consideration for their victims.

CON Rep. Charles E. Wiggins (R.-Calif.)

Before launching another enormously expensive welfare program, we must ask whether compensating victims of state crimes is truly a Federal responsibility. The state enforces its own criminal laws; Washington doesn't, nor can any other state. Therefore, if compensation is due, a state should compensate its own crime victims without shifting the burden to those not sharing its law-enforcement powers. To do so is to require the taxpayers in Idaho to pick up the tab for street crimes in New York. The public is already paying vast sums to provide medical and rehabilitative care to needy crime victims and nonvictims alike. The charge that victims are neglected is simply false.

A FRESH LOOK AT THE WILD KINGDOM

Illustration by Debbie Young

By Boyce Rensberger

Over the centuries, man has developed many colorful myths about wild animals. We have classified them as good or bad, heroes or villains. We have given them definite personalities, believing that lions are noble, wolves are rapacious, hyenas are cowardly. More recently, environmentalists have tended to label all wild animals as inherently good, and man as a spoiler of the wilderness.

Fortunately, the facts about animal behavior are at least as entertaining as the fantasies to which we have clung. Here's what painstaking, scientific observations have revealed about some of the most misunderstood beasts.

LIONS — Far from being the noble beasts depicted in royal emblems or the lovable creatures popularized in the "Born Free" books and movies, lions are one of the most misunderstood of animals. Although centuries of fable and folklore stand behind the images most people have of lions, recent studies of how these beasts live in the wild demolish almost every belief.

We now know, for example, that lions are not primarily predators, or beasts of prey. They prefer to scavenge, and in many parts of Africa lions get more than half their food by stealing the kills of hyenas and wild dogs.

When food is scarce, the adult lions take it, often leaving their cubs to starve. At least half of all lion cub deaths are caused either by starvation while adults eat, or parental abandonment.

Female lions do more than 90 percent of the hunting and slaying of prey. Then the magnificently maned males rush in first to gobble most of the kill. The males do little for the lion pride, which is chiefly a matriarchal unit, except sire litters and chase off rival males.

An old myth about lions is that, unlike man, they do not kill except for food or in self-defense. In fact, lions sometimes go on killing binges, catching and killing dozens of animals that they never eat.

Recent studies also show that lions and many other species murder their own kind far more often than do human beings. In fact, if one calculates the murder rate observed during a three-year study of about 200 lions in Tanzania's Serengeti National Park, it works out to be about 2,000 times higher than the murder rate in the United States, which is among the highest in the world. Even if World War II fatalities are averaged into the world rate for those years, mankind is still far more peaceable than are lions. Similar high murder rates have been found for wolves, cougars, hyenas, black bears, monkeys, gulls and several other species.

HYENAS — Unlike the lion, the hyena has now been found to be primarily a predator rather than a scavenger. The confusion of these two animals' reputations must rank as one of the great wildlife misunderstandings of all time. Far from being slinking cowards, hyenas are highly skilled hunters capable of bringing down zebras, antelopes and even the massive African buffalo.

Among the more remarkable features of hyena life are the different hunting techniques used for each prey species. Biologists have found that the hyena clan actually meets before a hunt and decides, for example, that it will be zebra tonight. The hyenas then set off in search of zebras, ignoring convenient prey of other species along the way.

WOLVES — Thanks to stories from Little Red Riding Hood to Jack London's novels, the wolf has been known as one of the most bloodthirsty and rapacious beasts ever to face a human being. In fact, there is no documented instance of a nonrabid, free-living wolf attacking a human being, much less killing one.

Face to face with a person, wolves will run away. Even if cornered, wolves put their tails between their legs, bend their heads and whimper like beaten dogs.

Wolf packs, far from being howling mobs, are small, tightly knit families led by a dominant pair that are usually the parents of the other members. Wolves typically mate for life. Unlike lions, which leave their young to feed on their own, wolves disgorge predigested meat for their pups whenever the little ones signal for it. When a mother wolf goes on a hunt, another adult will baby-sit for the pups.

GORILLAS — Despite their image as ferocious monsters bent on wreaking havoc wherever they go, gorillas are by far the most gentle and shy of the apes. Their loud, chest-beating behavior is a ritual designed to scare intruders, and if it doesn't work, the gorilla runs away.

Notwithstanding all the King Kongs nimbly scaling skyscrapers, gorillas are poor climbers and sometimes fall out of trees. They spend most of their time on the ground, in little family bands, munching wild celery and bamboo shoots, and only go into trees at night in order to make a crude nest to sleep in safety.

Their sexuality, despite some 60 commercial fiction films released over the last 70 years that depict them carrying off fair damsels, is remarkably low. Male gorillas typically mate only about once a year, and the female initiates the contact.

CROCODILES — Although these cold-blooded, scaly beasts that crawl on their bellies and lurk in low places have long been a symbol of evil — probably inspiring the myth of the dragon that can be slain only by a virtuous knight — they are surprisingly intelligent, family-minded creatures.

Mother crocs guard their eggs in a buried nest for three months, never leaving, even to eat. When the hatchlings begin peeping, mother croc digs them out, gathers them in her mouth and tenderly carries them to the water. She and the father closely guard them for several months until they can fend for themselves.

Crocodiles have also been found to hunt prey cooperatively, sometimes on land where they can run as fast as a man, and to share their food.

As man's population growth continues to demand that more land be converted from wilderness into farmland, the reasons for conserving wildlife come under increasing challenge, especially in the poor countries where most of the wildlife remains and where human needs are at least as legitimate as our wish to protect animals.

If we wish to believe myths about animals, then there is little point in arguing that they be protected. The real animals might as well vanish while we cling to our storybook animals.

Only if we are prepared to accept wild animals for what they are does it make sense to work for their conservation. Part of a mature appreciation of wildlife should be a desire to understand each species as it truly is.

PELE

This incomparable athlete is almost single-handedly responsible for the recent soccer explosion in the United States.

By Geoffrey Bocca

The world's most popular sport has suddenly caught on in the United States, where attendance at North American Soccer League games is surging. (New York's Cosmos recently played the Tampa Bay Rowdies before more than 62,000 fans.) In addition, soccer is growing faster than any other NCAA team sport (60 percent of the colleges have teams), and there are now 830,000 soccer programs for players under 19.

Why has soccer suddenly exploded, suddenly become an "in," chic sport in most areas of the country? Well, it has few injuries, both boys and girls can play, and the action is fast and continuous, so overly zealous parents can't interfere, and all 11 players on each side get to touch the ball.

Much of the credit, however, must go to one Edson Arantes do Nascimento, better known as Pelé, a 37-year-old forward with the Cosmos who is the greatest player in the history of the game.

He was born to an impoverished family in the small town of Três Corações (Three Hearts) in Brazil. At age 3 he was kicking, barefoot, a knotted bundle of rags, and at 16 he led his country to the first of three World Cup championships.

His fame zoomed. Back in 1958 word passed throughout the soccer world of a Brazilian prodigy, a boy with soccer talents almost beyond human capability. Today, in his 22nd and final professional season, he remains matchless.

Other sports invite comparisons: would Joe Louis in his prime have beaten Muhammed Ali? Was Koufax better than Seaver? But in soccer, Pelé is supreme. Let us take just one example. Outside of Brazil, the greatest number of goals scored by a player in one season is 60 by Dixie Dean of Everton, England, back in 1928. In 1959 Pelé scored 127. In other seasons he has scored 110, 101, 87, 76, and his lifetime total is nearly 1,300 — double or triple that with his assists, those flicks and passes through a maze of opponents to a teammate waiting to plant it in the back of the net. To approximate such an achievement in baseball, a player would have to close a 20-year career with a lifetime average of .750. Last year he was voted the NASL's Most Valuable Player in a runaway.

After 1958 Pelé was the hottest soccer property in the world, an obvious target for the big-money teams of Italy and Spain. Alarmed, the Brazilian Government proclaimed Pelé a national treasure; not to be bought, sold or exported. He became a millionaire through endorsements and sound investments, but he has never allowed the acclaim to go to his head. He remains deeply religious and a good family man, taking an active interest in youth soccer.

A genius, by definition, must possess something that is beyond the human norm. When Nijinsky, the world's greatest ballet dancer was X-rayed, it was found that certain bones around his ankles were not like other men's; they resembled more the bones of a bird. The most noteworthy feature of Pelé are his strange, haunting, bulging eyes. Many believe they give him a wider arc of vision than normal men, that he can, in effect, almost see behind him.

His catlike grace and intellectual cunning permit him the most extraordinary liberties. As if the ball were tied to his foot, he can switch from standstill to a sprint and back to a standstill without the ball ever leaving his instep. (A soccer ball is always kicked with the instep, never the toe.)

Pelé even uses the legs of his opponents the way a pool player uses the cushion. Ordinary players sometimes kick a ball against an opponent's legs so that it rebounds out of play. With Pelé, however, the maneuver is sheer magic. I have seen him put an English on the ball so that it spun like a top from the leg of one opponent to be deflected off the leg of a second opponent and slither between the legs of a third, leaving Pelé to streak past all three and score. I have seen him stroke the ball forward a good distance, feint with his shoulders so that three defenders scattered in the wrong directions, and then dart through, having beaten three opponents without touching the ball.

He often has been hacked, tripped, kicked and injured. For example, in the 1966 World Cup, a player sent him flying with a lethal trip, then kicked him again in mid-air. But Pelé never loses his cool or his sense of sportsmanship.

Next year is World Cup year again, to be played in Argentina. For the first time since 1958, Pelé will not be there to give the competition grace and glory. The World Cup will never be the same again.

There's an impression that I signed with the Rams to enhance my possibilities for a career in Hollywood.

I do nothing now I'm ashamed of.

The fans taught me to accept criticism.

I feel good about this season...

I left New York for two reasons.

Overall, my years in New York were great—until last year.

Ken Reagan / Camera 5

A youngster at my boys' camp in Dudley, Mass., recently asked me whether I thought I owed football anything. My first instinct was to say no, that I had worked hard and that you deserve what you earn.

But after thinking it over, I knew that football has been responsible for most everything that has happened to me in my adult life, and I've made many friendships with people I expect to associate with after my playing days. I don't know when that will be; I guess it will be a year-to-year situation.

So the answer is yes. From the day I left home in Beaver Falls, Pa., for the University of Alabama, through 12 years of many highs and some lows in New York with the Jets, to now as a member of the Los Angeles Rams, everything I've accomplished and the rewards I've had have been because of football.

It gave me the opportunity to attend college. In those days, I preferred baseball, and for a while I missed baseball after giving it up because it conflicted with spring football practice.

I liked basketball, too, and, oddly, it was through it that I met Chuck Knox, head coach of the Rams. He was the basketball coach at Elwood Junior High back home, and I played against his teams.

When I went to high school, he moved to the University of Kentucky, and he tried to recruit me. Then when I was at Alabama, Coach Knox joined the Jets' staff as an offensive line coach. He spearheaded their interest in me and was the one who signed me to a contract.

At Alabama coach Bear Bryant and his staff had a strong influence on me. They taught me right from wrong, how to stand behind my convictions and that you have to work with others—nobody achieves anything on his own.

Since turning pro, people have asked me whether I would have liked more of a private life. Well, I could have had one if I had wanted. However, I do nothing now I'm ashamed of. It's true that when I was younger, not as mature, I did some things I later regretted.

Also, some things did upset me, such as differences with the media. I remember, for example, a newspaper picture showing me with a paper cup in my hand. The caption implied I had been drinking early in the day. It was untrue.

But I've gotten over those kinds of things and accept that a professional athlete is in the public eye. Sometimes those things happen innocently; other times they are done by people merely to create controversy.

Overall, however, my years in New York were great—until last year.

This is the last time I'll talk about last year because it's behind us, and as bad as it was, with the defeats, the coaching problems and the personnel changes, I benefited from it. The Jets were (and are) in a major rebuilding process, and the chaos kept building. It had been great playing in New York until then.

It became a frustrating situation in which a man could lose confidence in himself and a team lose confidence in itself. I know that I was tested by it and that I became a stronger person because of it.

The fans were great. Over the years I believe that I got to know them and that they got to understand me.

Fans are important to sports and vice-versa. Pro football is a business for guys like me, but it's where the fan can get his mind off his own problems.

The fans taught me to accept criticism. A lot of people who criticize can't take it. Take Howard Cosell, for example. Once I criticized him, and he almost broke a blood vessel. "How could Namath say that about me?" he complained.

Now I'm going from one group of fans to another. But fans are the same everywhere. They've become pretty intelligent critics. At times they don't understand what we're doing on the field—why a play succeeded or failed—but that's part of the game, too.

There's an impression that I signed with the Rams to enhance my possibilities for a career in Hollywood. Someday I'd like to get into acting, but I'm not in Los Angeles necessarily for that reason. I've had the opportunity to get into the entertainment industry but haven't pursued it at this stage because I haven't had the time. In short, I'm in Los Angeles primarily to play football.

I have a one-year contract, and the Rams and I are both happy with it. We'll see how I feel physically and how this season goes before considering next year.

I thought about retiring after last season mainly because my left leg still aches. It's a bit of tendonitis around the knee. I was examined earlier this summer, and the doctors said I can play. I've played with pain for a long time and have learned how to put it out of my mind. I'm a positive thinker.

I'll wear a brace on my left knee like the one I wear on my right knee. It'll help keep the knee from rotating incorrectly and thus irritating a tendon. But I never like to stress my injuries.

I left New York for two reasons: I didn't want to get lost in the Jets' rebuilding program, and the winters there weren't helping my leg problem. The Los Angeles climate is more desirable, but I also want to play with a contender and to have one more chance at a championship. I look at the Rams' personnel—people like Harold Jackson, Ron Jessie, Lawrence McCutcheon, John Cappelletti, the terrific offensive line and a defense which is one of the best in the business—and it excites me to work with such a solid group.

I've gotten as ready as I can. To take weight off my legs, I'm the lightest I've ever been (188—my playing weight was 202). I went on a simple diet: I cut out junk food and salt.

As a quarterback I have a new system to learn. I began working out in April in Alabama, and I wasn't sure where I'd be playing then, or if at all. Then in June, I moved to my boys' camp where my days were full of anticipation for the season—work with the kids in the morning, then a workout in the weight room. I ran and threw long hours in the afternoons, and in the evenings, I relaxed, fishing for bass on Webster Lake, studying the Rams' playbook.

I have a good feeling about this season because I like feeling stronger than the other team. Isn't that part of what life's all about?

HOW MUCH EXERCISE DO YOU NEED?

More than you might think, so the secret is to develop a physical fitness program that gives you a good workout on a regular basis.

By Hal Higdon

Men and women do not need to engage in competitive programs to keep physically fit; they merely need to remain active. What is the minimum amount of exercise needed to maintain fitness?

Chuck Sheftel, teaching pro at a Chicago racquetball court, offers some common-sense words of advice: "Once a week is not enough. You have to break a sweat at least three days a week for 20 minutes each time. That's when you're in shape."

But is three days a week enough? According to Noel Nequin, a cardiologist at Chicago's

Frederic Lewis

Swedish Covenant Hospital. "In order to maintain your fitness level, you must reinforce your body with exercise every 60 hours. We used to say a minimum of three days a week was necessary. Now we talk more about four days a week because that comes closer to the ideal of never resting more than 60 hours between exercise periods. To maintain your fitness level, you want gentle hills rather than tall peaks and deep valleys. Weekend athletes are not as fit as people who do maybe one-third as much but on a regular basis."

Bill Bowerman, former track coach from the University of Oregon, utilized a pattern that has always appealed to me. He alternated hard with easy days. His athletes ran extremely hard on one day, took a relatively easy workout the next, then were rested enough to go hard again on the third day. I use this pattern, and so do most of the better distance runners. Moreover, it is easily adaptable to other sports, such as swimming, cycling or tennis.

Considering the schedule limitations of most working people, I would modify the pattern slightly to accommodate those warriors who must wage their athletic battles primarily on weekends. Perhaps only dedicated jocks get an hour of physical activity every day, but everyone should be able to exercise on alternate days. Listed below is a four-days-to-fitness program:

Saturday: Three sets of aggressive tennis.

Sunday: Two hours of cycling.

Monday: Total rest to recuperate from weekend activities.

Tuesday: A half-hour swim.

Wednesday: More rest.

Thursday: Two to three miles of gentle jogging or walking.

Friday: Rest to store up energy for weekend athletic wars.

The person who follows a schedule similar to this may not ever become a world champion — or even club champion — but he will remain physically fit.

Despite what you may have heard, there is no easy route to physical fitness. You cannot get in shape by exercising five minutes a day or a half-hour a week.

Some people are fortunate enough to be adept at a sport that offers optimum physical benefits while satisfying their craving for competition and sociability. But for those who seek fitness and are not exceptionally skilled in one sport, I suggest you not worry about it. Instead, when the snow falls, ski; when it melts, jog; when the melted snow warms, swim; when the lake cools, cycle; when it freezes, skate.

AMERICA'S BEST HOPE FOR THE MILE

A college junior has come from nowhere to make a serious run at the world record.

Steve Scott, our No. 1 miler.

By Ed Burg

When track stars meet for the World Cup games next week in Düsseldorf, West Germany, a 21-year-old American named Steve Scott will be there. Scott is America's top miler, but he is so new to the international track scene that he had never even run a sub-four minute mile before this year.

Now he's collecting praise from all corners. Marty Liquori, a pretty fair miler himself, calls Scott "this country's brightest hope in the mile." Olympian Frank Shorter says Scott "will probably be the first American under 3:50." And Scott's coach, Len Miller, believes the American record (3:51.1) is "within his reach this year."

Scott, a junior at the University of California-Irvine, has a strong build (6'0", 185 lbs.), which is topped off with floppy blond hair. His best time for the mile is 3:55.1, tops for an active American, and his 3:37.3 in the 1500 (the "metric mile") is also the nation's best mark.

In the past there was always a great American miler — men like Glenn Cunningham, Jim Ryun or Liquori. But today the world's best come from New Zealand (John Walker), Kenya (Wilson Waigwa) or Tanzania (Filbert Bayi). College track coaches have even begun to look overseas for champion milers. So Scott's domestic competition is Waigwa, who runs for the University of Texas-El Paso; Niall O'Shaughnessy, Arkansas' best, who grew up in Ireland and Mike Bolt at Stanford, who, like Waigwa, calls Kenya home. When recently asked what the major obstacle facing Americans in the mile was, Scott replied with one word: "Kenya!"

Giving foreign athletes scholarships that might otherwise be used for Americans is a growing point of controversy, but Scott sees the bright side. "I'm going against the best in the world at college meets," he says. "And if I beat them, I know I've beaten someone who's good."

Why the shortage of great American milers? "People in other countries are subsidized by their governments," Scott explains. "When a guy here gets out of college, there's no way he can support himself or a family and continue running seriously. So most of them quit at 23 or 24, and their peak ages aren't until 26 or 27." At 21, Scott's best years are yet to come.

Five years ago, track was the furthest thing from Scott's mind. As a high school junior, he was a disgruntled baseball pitcher. Enter Bob Loney, a math teacher who doubles as the track coach. When Scott turned out for cross country, Loney recognized his outstanding track potential. After a little coaxing, Scott threw down his glove and put on track spikes.

Choosing UC-Irvine wasn't difficult for Scott. "Coach Miller was different," he says. "He seemed to care." Miller's leadership has paid off for Scott, who defeated world record holder Walker at the San Diego Indoor Games last February and later nipped Bayi, the 1500 record holder, at a meet in Jamaica. In June he defeated Waigwa at the AAU meet.

The rise has been fast for Scott, who hasn't really had time to comprehend it all. "When they replay my races on TV," he says, "it seems like I'm watching somebody else. 'Who is that guy?' I'll say to myself."

That guy is now America's top miler, and he'll be at the prestigious World Cup Games as America's sole competitor in the 1500. So although he's a newcomer to big-time track, it's a good bet that Americans will soon be familiar with Steve Scott. Regardless of the outcome at Düsseldorf, he has already shown one thing: the great American miler has returned.

Give our country a college education.

As an Army ROTC graduate, you bring more than training and gold bars to your new job in the active Army, Army National Guard or the Army Reserve.

You also bring a college education which makes you one of our country's most valuable assets. Why? One reason is the wealth of experiences and ideas you bring with you. This enables the Army to better relate to an ever-changing society.

And since you'll be an Army officer, you'll have plenty of opportunities to put your ideas to work. In fact, you'll be running your own show, right out of college.

Another reason we value your education so highly is that the people you'll be leading are better educated and more highly motivated than ever before. This makes your job as an Army officer more of a challenge.

To help you meet this challenge when you get out of school, we'll help you while you're in by giving you a living allowance of up to $1,000 each year you are enrolled in Advanced ROTC.

There are also opportunities for scholarships that cover tuition, books and lab fees.

That way, you can make the most of your education. And when you graduate, our country can make the most of it too.

Tracy may play tennis like an adult, but off the court she remains a typical 14-year-old. "When I play, it's usually against older people," she says, "but all my friends are my age, and I don't feel any different from them." She giggles a lot and has the same passion for hamburgers, rock music and magic shows that her friends have. At one sports banquet, a magician put on an act in which he seemed to drop an orange onto a table and then to scoop it up underneath. Tracy organized her friends into following him from table to table. "We've got to sneak behind this guy and see if he's got secret holes in the tables," she said.

Like Chris, she burst onto the national sports scene as a teenager with the ability to beat older, stronger and more experienced players. Chris, however, was an "old lady" of 16 when she first made her mark in national competition; Tracy is only 14. Earlier this summer she became the youngest performer ever to compete at Wimbledon, and she will be the youngest competitor in the upcoming U.S. Open. Tracy played a respectable match against Evert at Wimbledon, leading some observers to speculate that this little tyke in pigtails and braces might have a chance to dethrone the defending champion at Forest Hills. Tracy, however, doesn't feel she's capable of going that far. "I don't think I can beat Chris this year," she says. "But maybe next year."

Tracy has won 128 tournaments in her young career and has not been beaten by a girl in her own age group since she was 7. After she defeated the world's eighth-ranked woman, Diane Fromholtz of Australia, in the $110,000 Family Circle tourna-

Her older sister took her outside so she could regain her composure. "When I came back, they apologized so much for upsetting me that I cried again," Tracy recalls.

Although she is looking forward to when she can turn pro and win big purses, Tracy plays tennis primarily because it's fun. "If it wasn't a fun game, I wouldn't be playing it," she says. Tracy comes from a tennis-mad family. Her father, a physicist, plays tennis and so do her mother, sister and three brothers. The Austins have won more than 400 tournaments.

One secret of her success is that she started early. Her father recalls that he used to toss tennis balls at her when she was still in diapers. "We have pictures of her hitting at 2, and she showed remarkable form."

Tracy's parents insist, however, that they never pushed her into tennis and that she developed her own enthusiasm for it. In any event, her picture made the cover of World Tennis magazine when she was 5, and she was soon beating both girls and boys years older than herself. Her mother works afternoons in

There are four good reasons to see your good neighbor agent.

When Don and Vicki Cooper of Roseburg, Oregon, bought insurance for their home from State Farm agent Ken Clark, one thing led to another.

"I liked the coverages and felt good about being with State Farm," says Don. "But most of all, I liked the way he treated Vicki and me. We could tell he had our interests at heart."

Later, the Coopers decided to make Ken their life insurance agent. And then, their auto agent, too.

"It's a great convenience to have one agent handling the family insurance," says Vicki.

"If anything should happen, it's nice to know that all I have to remember is one name."

"And when you call him, you get a fast response," adds Don. "You know he's there, and you know he's working for you."

Ken says, "Knowing that families like the Coopers are well taken care of is very satisfying.

It's the most rewarding part of my job." There's a State Farm agent like Ken Clark in your neighborhood.

the pro shop at the Jack Kramer Tennis Club, and Tracy began playing there after school. She took lessons from coach Robert Lansdorp, who was impressed by her intensity and self-confidence. "She believes she has the capacity to become the best in the world, and she quickly made a believer out of me," he says.

She began to play tournaments in California almost every weekend and won everything in sight. She moved into the adult world when she played in a number of Virginia Slims tournaments and won headlines when she came close to beating Rosemary Casals, the country's 4th-ranking woman player. She then duplicated Billie Jean King's achievement by walloping Bobby Riggs in an exhibition match. Observers said Riggs was more embarrassed at losing to the "kid" than he was when Billie Jean licked him.

Tracy has been keeping up her school work even while practicing every day and going to tournaments. "I like school," she says, "though not as much as tennis." She doesn't like to miss school to compete on the courts because "that would set me apart from the other girls." And, surprisingly, all the attention she has received hasn't turned her head. "She enjoys it, but she shrugs it off," says her father. "She's not a one-dimensional youngster, fortunately. When she's with her peers, she behaves just like them. She's not different from any of them — except when it comes to playing tennis."

THE MOST UNDERRATED FISH

Drawing by Tom Caravanaugh

The bluegill, a scrappy fighter, thrives in the rivers, streams and lakes of most every state.

By Fred Nofziger

No freshwater fish offers more pure joy to the fisherman than the bluegill, a superbly abundant fish found over a vast range. It also is catchable by numerous fishing methods, is a diminutive demon on the hook and becomes an utter delight in a skillet.

All anglers, regardless of age or experience, can catch the bluegill. It is the fish most youngsters learn on because it is the fish most likely to inhabit the waters fished by them.

No other freshwater fish exceeds the 'gill in ounce-for-ounce fighting ability, which means the skill and desire of a young angler are quickly honed. The angler may, with experience and age, concentrate on the bass, trout, walleye or any of several other species. But as he pursues fishing — one of the top participatory sports in the nation — he will probably drift back from time to time to bluegill waters.

Lepomis macrochirus is its generic name. In the South, the bluegill is called a bream or brim and is as respected as hominy grits. It was once found only in the Great Lakes, the south Atlantic states and the Mississippi Valley, but clamor for the fish by anglers who had been introduced to bluegill fishing resulted in successful transplants that placed it throughout the country and in some southern Canadian areas.

A true democrat, the bluegill thrives in streams, rivers, lakes, ponds and borrow pits. It is a school fish, so when you catch one it is wise to anchor as there will be others nearby.

Fred Nofziger, a free-lancer specializing in outdoor articles, has been a freshwater fisherman all his life.

A member of the many-specied sunfish family, the bluegill's color depends on the condition of the water in which it swims. Usually, it is handsome, with a dark, olive-colored back that has a purple shine and iridescent transverse green bars. Its cheeks are marked with blue, its gill cover is jet black, its belly is either bright copper or pure scarlet. It is distinguished from other members of its family by a black ear flap and a black spot on the end of its dorsal fin.

Bluegills are prolific breeders, and the male is as diligent a parent as he is a wooer at spawning time. After mating, the bull prepares the spawning nest by fanning a depression two feet in diameter and six inches deep with its tail.

The male also stays with the young, guarding them against predators until they are strong enough to face their watery world alone. And the fathers do their jobs well; male bluegills have been seen holding off a bass twice their size and will even attack booted feet.

The 'gill's size is generally in the one-quarter to one-pound range, although two pounders are not uncommon. It will sample just about anything that is not large enough to bite back, but it is particularly fond of worms and crickets, though grasshoppers, minnows, crawfish, hellgrammites, small lures and flies catch their share of bluegills. The angler should use No. 8 or 10 hooks, no more than a four-pound test monofilament line and a light spinning or casting rod.

The bluegill likes cover — sunken brush piles, weed beds (but not weed-choked waters), a canopy of lily pads and deep holes around stumps, sunken logs, docks and bridges.

The 'gill becomes active when the water temperature hits 67 degrees and is most active when the water is 70 to 75 degrees. It is found in deep water during the heat of the day and moves into shallow water as the temperature drops.

The late Carl Allen, for many years a conservation officer in northern Michigan, once told me that he was fishing in a clear lake at about a seven-foot depth one fall day when a large bluegill swam leisurely up to his hook, hidden in a worm, "or so I thought. The 'gill looked that worm over, seemed to see something odd and swam away,

When I hauled the hook and line up and looked at the worm, I could see that the hook poked through the worm, making an odd shape. I hid the barb and dropped the line again. Within a few seconds I had a bite, and within the hour I had my limit of bluegill. So — hide the hook."

Another fishing acquaintance of mine, who professes to be a bass addict but likes bluegills, too, told me he uses a fly rod while his son uses a cane pole, hook and line and bobber.

"It's usually nip and tuck as to who catches the most and the biggest," he told me recently. "Bluegill fishing takes a finely honed reflex and a stout heart."

So remember, then, when the bass or trout are getting all the praise, don't overlook Mr. Bluegill for some fine catching and eating.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PRESCRIPTION EYEGLASSES

If you own prescription eyeglasses, you've been getting unfair treatment. You've been paying much too much!

Harsh words, but true. That's what the FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection says. That's what distinguished Senators and consumer experts say. And that's what your own common sense says.

You know the price you paid for your prescription eyeglasses...$50, $60, even $90. Terribly high. And getting higher all the time.

Why those high prices?

The reason is simple. The people who have been selling eyeglasses have kept you in the dark. You have been screened by laws that prohibit advertising eyeglass prices!

If you can't shop, you can't compare. This causes "prices for prescription eyeglasses to be maintained at artificially high levels," says the Bureau of Consumer Protection.* In other words, you pay too much!

Time for a change.

It's high time someone did something about this situation. As a buyer of prescription eyeglasses, you deserve better treatment.

The laws are changing, slowly. And the NATIONAL EYEGLASS SERVICE has done something—now.

GYMNASTICS IS FLYING HIGH

Tom Salvas

State sportswriters recently voted Nini Wuensch Vermont Athlete of the Year.

This booming sport develops grace, poise and self-confidence, is fun for blind children and is used to treat learning disabilities.

By Penelope Lemov

After years of being ignored by school physical-education departments, gymnastics has swung into the limelight. There are college scholarships for the gifted and thousands of parallel bars, balance beams and trampolines set up to serve the youngsters who enjoy the sport.

What's turned the gymnastic world upside down? It really started with Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci. Their performances in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics made it clear that young women could be athletes and still be graceful and feminine. "When television showed Olga flying around on the uneven bars and Nadia performing a perfect routine on the balance beam, everyone could see that gymnastics was more than a bounce on the trampoline," says Ruth Ann McBride, head of a regional women's committee for the United States Gymnastic Federation. "Nobody knew what it was all about before."

Mrs. McBride, who runs MarVaTeens Gymnastic Club in Rockville, Md., knows that throwing flip-flops and aerials on her thickly padded practice mats develops strength, flexibility, poise and grace. Youngsters learn to control their bodies as they move through space, and unlike many other sports, gymnastics does not overdevelop any one part of the body.

"Here you have a sport that builds muscles and body control, doesn't penalize the little guy and builds confidence," says Stanford Lavine, an orthopedist specializing in sports medicine, who is the team doctor for the Washington Redskins.

Researchers also are finding gymnastics has therapeutic value for children who have problems perceiving left from right or who have reading disabilities stemming from similar perceptual problems. The trampoline has also been used effectively to help blind children who have coordination problems. Robert Measley, a physical-education instructor at the Washington State School for the Blind in Vancouver, reports, "Rebound tumbling at our school has proven to be a thrilling and rewarding activity. We have a few children who have severe problems with coordination and balance, and for some of these students the improvement in control has been quite remarkable."

Competitive gymnastics requires heavy sacrifices. Girls on Mrs. McBride's advanced team spend four hours a day, six days a week working out. "They don't have much of a social life," admits one coach. When they start competing on a national level, things get even tougher. Jennifer Huff, for example, is 14, and ranks 26th in the country. She has her eye on the 1980 Olympics, but she has given up a lot to get this far. When her father's job required him to move to Arkansas, Jennifer stayed behind in Maryland and moved in with her coach. "It was that," says Mrs. McBride, "or she could forget about the Olympics."

Jennifer isn't alone in making such a decision. Former Olympic coaches Muriel Grossfeld and Vannie Edwards, with gymnastic schools in Connecticut and Alabama respectively, also provide live-in accommodations for their elite stars. The scarcity of top-level coaches and the gymnasts' drive to excel make a live-in arrangement the only way for some youngsters to achieve their goals.

These athletes also part ways with anything resembling chocolate shakes or banana splits. Their diet is strictly high protein-low calorie, and daily weigh-ins are routine.

Meanwhile, whether youngsters become competitive creatures or stay with gymnastics simply for fun, they find the sport rewarding. And there's a lasting effect. "You may lose the flexibility and strength you develop once you stop working out," says Mrs. McBride, a former competitor herself, "but the poise, grace and confidence you gain will stay with you always."

TV'S KEANE BROTHERS

At 13 and 12, Tom and John, the youngest entertainers ever to host their own show on television, are already veteran composers, instrumentalists and singers.

The Keane Brothers Show can be seen Aug. 26 and Sept. 2.

By Rosemary Lord

"When I was 5 years old, I was writing songs about women in their 40's. One was called 'Woman At Large.'" That is Tom Keane speaking at the ripe old age of 13. Tom and his 12-year-old brother John burst upon the entertainment scene last year when they appeared on the Bill Cosby Show. Since then, they have appeared on all the major talk shows and are ascending toward the top of the music charts. This month they became the youngest entertainers to host their own TV program, The Keane Brothers Show.

The boys already have recorded an album, The Keane Brothers, with all but one of the songs written by Tom, and they have released two singles, one of which, "Amy (Show the World You're There)" is their tribute to the President's daughter.

Tom and John Keane have grown up with music. Their dad, Bob Keane, was a Los Angeles-based record producer and a protégé of Artie Shaw. He developed such talents as Barry White, Frank Zappa and the late Sam Cooke. At age 3, Tom took up the classical piano, and with 2-year-old John, they memorized songs their dad brought home.

"But I didn't really get into heavy music until I was 4," says veteran Tom. "I began originally as a drummer, but my dad got kind of angry because I would let all the neighborhood kids come in and bang around on them, so he finally took them away. I was forced into taking it out on the piano, which is what got me into song-writing." Now Tom plays five instruments and writes songs, John plays three instruments, and they both sing.

Despite at least four hours of rehearsal a day at home and a busy studio recording schedule, Tom and John are still normal, mischievous kids. After work they meet friends, play basketball or go skateboarding.

"I think they have lots of dimensions to their lives," offers their manager David Gershinson. (He also manages Burt Reynolds.) The boys jet around the country and dine out in restaurants most teenagers would never see. Their dad is with Tom and John much of the time, advising them about their performances, seeing that they don't eat too much junk food and making sure they get to bed on time. During shooting they get up at 6:00 A.M. ("We have to make our own beds," they complain.) and rehearse from 6:30 until 8:30 at home before going to the studio. Bob tries to have them in bed by 9:30 at night.

Tom is the taller of the two and is protective of his younger brother; however, when they fight, John usually wins, "because he's smaller and people are on his side," Tom sighs. "Yeah — it's usually about who sits in the front seat of the car, stuff like that," John mutters. "Hey, but you get to stretch out in the back," Tom says, trying to sell the virtues of the back seat.

They love working together; otherwise, "he's a bother..." Tom says good-naturedly. They have an older brother, Bob Jr., who is 18 and an actor-dancer. "He's a bother, too," Tom says throwing a straw at John, and laughing. "Yeah," says a small voice — and John grins, revealing glistening braces on his teeth.

They don't get much time at home, which is in Encino, Calif., where they live with their father and stepmother, but once there, they usually work on their music. "Music is the most important thing in our lives, and we understand that we have to make certain sacrifices to be as good as we possibly can be. But we love it," John explains. "We're lucky 'cause Dad taught us a lot about jazz," he adds proudly. They both have an extensive knowledge and appreciation of all forms of music; Sarah Vaughan has even made recordings of songs they've written. "We're not bubble-gum artists," they insist. "We don't make that kind of teeny-bop music. We're serious musicians."

Since they can no longer attend regular school, they have a private tutor, an attractive blonde, who is a constant target for the boys' good-natured pranks. "She's foxy," Tom says with admiration.

Girls, in fact, are Tom's favorite subject. His lyrics are often, as he says, "about women," and he loves the fact that "girls are constantly hanging around us. They send us fan mail and want to know everything about us — even what size shoes we wear," he says happily. "I met Jody Foster on the Merv Griffin Show. She's a classy chick. Then we were on with The Mouseketeers — have you seen Lisa? She's two months older than me, and I'm absolutely desperate for her," and he clutched his heart dramatically. The two boys collapsed into giggles.

They love to tease each other, not giving a thought to their great talent, the respect they have earned from professionals four times their ages — or the great future that lies ahead of them. "We don't want to lose our heads," they say. "Besides, stardom is not what we're looking for." John's aim in life is to have four remote-control cars with a one-mile range. (He already has one.) Tom wants "just to be a Master of Music, studying with anyone that's good." Their goals may change as they get older, but both boys have the talent and dedication to succeed at whatever they attempt as well as a sense of humor that will enable them to keep their accomplishments in perspective.

Swap Shop

If keeping your child in new clothes is costing you an arm and a leg, starting a children's clothing exchange with other mothers in your neighborhood may help trim your budget. (Most garments are outgrown before they have a chance to wear out.) Here's how.

- Contact friends or send a note to school with your child asking classmates' mothers to call you if they'd be interested.
- Get together to decide where and when to hold the exchanges. (Before seasonal changes is best. For example, in late September for winter clothes.)
- A week or two before the exchange, the person holding it should call the other mothers to have them collect their children's outgrown clothes that are clean and in good condition and drop them off on a specific date. Steer clear of shoes — it's too hard to achieve the proper fit children need.
- After the clothing has been deposited, mothers meet to sort it, tagging the articles for size and condition.
- Any leftovers should be reclaimed by mothers to save for the next swap or to give as a tax-deductible donation to a charitable organization.

What To Do After A Burglary

What should you do if you return home and suspect your house has been burglarized? According to Lt. Harold F. Smith, commanding officer of the Manhattan (NY) Burglary Squad, you should do as little as possible — let the police handle it. "As soon as you suspect your premises have been burglarized, back off and call the police," says Smith. He advises calling from a neighbor's home or public phone. "Even if you think the burglary is past, the burglar could be in another room. But even if it's over, you won't be disturbing fingerprints or other evidence that might be valuable to the police." Smith says that one tipoff to a burglary in progress is a jammed door — frequently burglars will jam the lock to keep from being surprised. You'll make it much easier to recover stolen property if you've marked valuables with an etched or scratched identification number and if you've made a list with a description and serial number of the items.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Sight Saver

Amblyopia, or "lazy eye," is one of the most common eye disorders among young children. A child with this problem sees better with one eye than with the other and favors the good eye, allowing the "lazy eye" to weaken further. Most cases of amblyopia can be improved if they are treated before the age of 4. After 4, the percentage of improvement drops, and vision may be permanently reduced. How to tell if your child is amblyopic? Dr. Edward Raab, dir. of Pediatric Ophthalmology at N.Y.'s Mt. Sinai Hospital, says an eye examination is the surest way. Although he says that children's eyes should ideally be examined before then, he recommends having an examination no later than age 3 or 3½. You can check your preschooler's vision in your own home with a free kit prepared by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. To get your home eye test — which is not intended to replace a visit to an eye-care specialist — write: National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Dept. FW, 79 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. Write "Family Weekly Eye Test" on the outside of the envelope to speed processing.

Detecting MS

There's still no cure for multiple sclerosis (MS), the often-crippling nervous-system disease that afflicts more than 250,000 Americans, but there are two new tests that can detect the disease years earlier than older methods. The two procedures, which are called evoked-responses tests because they measure the time it takes to evoke a response to a stimulus, such as a light or sound, can detect MS damage to the optic nerve or brainstem. The more delayed the patient's response to the stimulus, as monitored by a machine like the one above, the greater the nerve damage. Unlike previous procedures, the new tests are painless. Dr. Robert R. Young, director of the clinical neurophysiology laboratory at Mass. General Hospital, says, "It's good for people to know as early as possible they have MS so they can plan."

Adopt-A-Horse

If you have a horse lover in your family but no horses, here's an offer you may find too good to refuse. The Bureau of Land Management will give you one or more Nevada mustangs free of charge if you have the desire and a place to keep (they can be boarded) the animal(s). The only other restrictions are that the animals can't be used for commercial purposes and must be picked up in Nevada. Jan Bedrosian of the Bureau of Land Management says that 1,350 horses of all ages, suitable for pleasure-riding, showing or ranch work, will be available for adoption in the next few months. Currently, an estimated 40,000 wild horses are in Nevada, and because of overpopulation, the excess animals must be either adopted or destroyed. To get more information about adopting a horse, write: Adopt-A-Horse, Bureau of Land Management, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Preparing Your Child For School

Worried because you think your child has fewer skills than his kindergarten classmates? Relax, says a Univ. of Chicago-affiliated kindergarten teacher; the best preparation you can give your child is self-confidence. Vivian Paley, who is beginning her 18th year of teaching kindergarten, says, "Children who feel good about themselves are the only ones who have a head start in school — the average child can learn to do everything if he feels confident." One way of boosting your child's confidence is to "emphasize what a lot of things he knows, not all he has to learn," says Paley. "Don't emphasize that he can't tie his shoes yet — tell him how well he puts together his puzzle." Another way of making the transition to the classroom easier, says Paley, is to emphasize the familiar. "Don't build up school as a place where unfamiliar things go on. Say that the teacher likes to read stories and to play games, not that the child will have to work and learn to behave himself."

Quick Takes

What does an hour of TV add up to? When you watch an hour-long TV show, you see an average of 47 minutes of programming. The rest of the time is filled with commercials, lead-ins, credits and previews... Basketball players are the highest-paid professional athletes, with an average salary of $126,000, more than 3 times their average salary 7 years ago. NHL hockey players average $90,000, and football and baseball players earn an average of $50,000... Youth may not be all that impulsive — at least when it comes to purchasing big ticket items. A Yankelovich, Skelly & White study reports that younger buyers — those 18 to 34 — do more comparison shopping, take longer to make up their minds, are more price-conscious and are more likely to seek advice and to consult advertising than their older counterparts... It takes longer to stop a car when you're wearing platform shoes than with ordinary footwear, according to a Univ. of Missouri study. Researchers say that the difference in stopping distance at 55 mph is almost 8 feet — which may mean the difference between a crash and a close call... Last year, pet owners spent $2.997 billion on food for their dogs and cats, an increase of 8.4% over 1975.

Loaded With Homework

College students who drink beer while studying should have a few more just before taking their exams, says Dr. Ronald C. Petersen. He says tests conducted on Army volunteers indicated that material learned "under the influence" is best remembered under the continued influence of the same substance. Petersen says past tests indicate that alcohol produces the memory phenomenon and that a continual "dose" would be needed to maintain the knowledge.

HOW 'BOUT IT? MAY I GO FISHING WITH YOU?

C'MON! PLEASE, HUGO. MAY I GO FISHING WITH YOU?

OKAY, OKAY.

HEY, THERE'S NO SHADE AROUND HERE.

IT'S TOO HOT.

YIPES! THAT UGLY BAIT MAKES ME SICK.

YUCC! THERE'S CATERPILLARS AND BUGS AND ANTS.

YOU'VE DONE NOTHING BUT GRIPE ALL DAY! WHY DID YOU COME ON THIS TRIP?

OH... JUST FOR THE FUN OF IT.

Our Story: DAY AFTER DAY, PRINCE VALIANT RIDES THE DESERT SEARCHING FOR WORD OF THE MISSING ALETA AND THE CHILDREN. THEN ONE DAY HE MEETS A WOUNDED WARRIOR LIMPING HOMEWARD.

"YES, I WAS WITH THE QUEEN'S GUARDS," HE RECALLS, "BUT KHAZAN'S RUTHLESS OUTRIDERS CAUGHT US IN A MOUNTAIN PASS. ALL OUR MEN WERE SLAIN BUT NAUGHT WAS HEARD NOR SEEN OF THE QUEEN AND HER CHILDREN AFTER THE BATTLE."

VAL TAKES THE WARRIOR BACK TO CAMP TO HAVE HIS WOUNDS TREATED AND TO LEARN THE DETAILS OF THE BATTLE SCENE.

"BUT THERE IS A MYSTERY TO QUEEN ALETA'S DISAPPEARANCE. I STOOD IN FRONT OF HER DURING THE FIGHTING AND, THEN WHEN ALL HOPE WAS LOST, I TURNED TO TELL HER TO FLEE BUT SHE WAS NOWHERE IN SIGHT."

IT HAS NOT TAKEN YOUNG GALAN LONG TO FIND A BOAT AND GO EXPLORING THIS NEW LAND.

HE COMES TO THE CAVE IN THE CLIFF THROUGH WHICH THE FAMILY HAD ESCAPED FROM KHAZAN'S KILLERS AND DECIDES TO EXPLORE IT FURTHER.

AND ABOUT THIS TIME KHAZAN BREAKS CAMP AND BEGINS HIS MARCH OF CONQUEST. TO FIND AND PILLAGE THE CITY OF PETROPOLIS IS HIS FIRST OBJECTIVE.

PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS COMPANY CLIMB THE NARROW MOUNTAIN CLEFT TO THE ENTRANCE OF THE PASSAGE.

AFTER A LONG JOURNEY IN THE DIM LIGHT OF THE CAVE, GALAN COMES OUT INTO THE SUNLIGHT.

NEXT WEEK - Galan Leads the Way...
