Jenkins Saluted At Faculty Convocation

An overflowing throng of faculty and administrators gave a standing ovation in dramatic salute to East Carolina University Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins this morning at the traditional Faculty Convocation.

Jenkins was making his first public appearance since suffering a heart attack in July when he attended the convocation at Mendenhall Student Center.

The veteran chancellor who will retire next year has attended the annual convocations for the past 30 years. This was his thirtieth and last as chancellor.

"These have been 30 wonderful years," Jenkins told the audience. He said the East Carolina faculty has always been "a good family."

During his tenure, he said, he has had the pleasure of welcoming more than 2,000 new faculty members who have come here through the years.

Only three faculty members who were here in 1947 are still serving; Prof. Marguerite Perry, chairman of the department of Foreign Languages and Literatures; Herb Carter of the ECU School of Music and Nell Stallings of the Department of Health and Physical Education.

Dr. Jenkins expressed gratitude for the expressions "of kindness" and encouragement during his recent illness, and said "I shall not forget..."

Jenkins, president and chancellor of East Carolina

University now beginning his 18th and final year at the helm of ECU, was praised as a man whose legacy "will remain forever."

"We will reap dividends from his leadership for years to come," said Troy W. Pate Jr., of Goldsboro, chairman of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees. Pate spoke at the traditional, opening-of-school convocation. ECU's 68th school year begins this week with what Pate said is "the largest faculty in our history and a record number of students."

An on-campus enrollment of 12,000 or more is anticipated.

Jenkins, 64, is making a "favorable" recovery from a mild heart attack suffered in July.

"Every year new objectives are set and new heights achieved," Pate said of his alma mater, ECU. Over the years, he said, ECU's many achievements and "unparalleled growth" have been due in large part to Jenkins' "outstanding leadership."

With the exception of two of the more than 700 faculty, he said, every member "came here during the 30 years of Leo Jenkins."

"Some 80 percent of the students who have graduated since the founding of this institution (more than 44,000) did so during his association here. This record is unparalleled in higher education today.

"It is no wonder that we regard Dr. Jenkins as a permanent and everlasting part of East Carolina University and North Carolina."

Pate spoke not only as ECU trustee chairman but also as chairman of the Chancellor, Selection Committee which is working to choose candidates to succeed Jenkins in the chancellorship upon his retirement next year.

"The task before us (the committee) will make this year especially challenging," Pate said. "We do indeed have our hands full in trying to replace this man."

UNC Bd. Adopts A Lowered Goal

RALEIGH (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors adopted with only one nay vote today a revised plan of desegregation for the UNC system which considerably lowers the goal set in guidelines laid down by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In a surprise move, Julius Chambers, black Charlotte attorney long associated with civil rights litigation, submitted his resignation from the board before it began its consideration.

Chambers termed his resignation a protest over the board's handling of the desegregation matter. He said he did not feel he had any conflict of interest, but thought he could be more effective off the board. He is president of the Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP.

J. J. Sansom, a black member of the board from Raleigh, voted against acceptance of the revised plan, and another black board member, Louis Randolph of Washington, abstained.

Sansom spoke against the plan, saying, "Unless we have goals and quotas, we will never desegregate."

He also took issue with the board's contention that the University of North Carolina system, embracing 16 institutions of higher learning, is not segregated. "If it weren't segregated, we wouldn't be in court now," he said.

Board chairman William A. Johnson of Lillington praised Chambers, saying they had not always agreed, and another board member, John Jordan of Raleigh, also praised him for following the dictates of his conscience.

UNC President William Friday said Chambers, first black graduate of the University of North Carolina Law School, finishing first in his class, was particularly helpful in upgrading the law school at North Carolina Central in Durham.

Chambers left the meeting before the board took up the revised desegregation proposal.

The plan, which calls for a 32 percent increase in black enrollment in predominantly white colleges, was approved last week by a board committee, and also is backed by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Approval by the full board is expected today, but HEW's reaction to the proposal remains unknown. The federal agency had proposed a 150 percent increase in black enrollment, as opposed to 32 percent.

"I hope they'll agree with us, but I have some serious doubts," said board member David J. Whichard II of Greenville.

The university system currently is operating under an HEW-approved desegregation plan drawn up in 1974. University officials contend the plan remains valid.

In addition, UNC administrators maintain in the alternative plan that racially identifiable enrollments at different institutions do not necessarily indicate segregation in the system as a whole.

"Black citizens and white citizens do participate differently in the University with regard to both the extent and manner of their participation in its constituent institutions and programs, and do so in ways that reflect in part the formerly segregated pattern of higher education in this state," the report states.

Autopsy Held On Jogger

A 30-year-old Greenville attorney, Samuel Johnston Manning of 808 East Third St., was pronounced dead at Pitt Memorial Hospital at 7:12 p.m. Sunday after being found lying on a sidewalk near the intersection of Fifth and Student Streets, Greenville Police reported.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Manning had been jogging and was seen to stagger and collapse about 6:40 p.m.

According to the chief, a passing police car stopped and officers began to resuscitate Manning until members of the Greenville Rescue Squad arrived and transported Manning to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Quentin A. Mewborn, Pitt County Medical Examiner, said an autopsy done this morning showed that Manning suffered from "severe coronary artery disease."

Mewborn said the family was notified this morning of the findings, which included the fact that the main artery was three-fourths blocked. He said that Manning apparently was not aware of the health problem, that he had no medical history, "apparently had never been sick." He said he was told by friends of Manning that he was active physically, jogging about three times a week and enjoying playing softball and basketball. "Evidently, he'd had no symptoms at all before," Dr. Mewborn said. "If so, they may have saved his life."

Dr. Mewborn said he himself was one of several who attempted to resuscitate Manning in the Hospital Emergency Room after attempts by "some college students, police, and Rescue Squad members" had been unsuccessful. "The conditions found during the autopsy probably explain why all these tries were not successful," Dr. Mewborn said.

Man Charged In Three Deaths

SMYRNA, N.C. (AP) — Robert Edward Wade Jr., 24, was charged Sunday with murder in the deaths of his wife and two children.

SBI agents and the Carteret County Sheriff's Department reported arriving at the family's mobile home off U.S. 70 here at 9 p.m. Saturday.

They found Mary Jean Wade, 24; Robert Edward Wade III, 2½; and Sue Anne Wade, 5, all dead from apparent stab wounds.

The father also was found injured and was taken to Carteret General Hospital where he was listed Sunday in stable condition.

Rhodesia Terrorists Slay Men, Women, Children

By JUDY YABLONKI
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian security forces were hunting for a band of black guerrillas who attacked the black living quarters on a farm in eastern Rhodesia and slaughtered 16 men, women and children.

In another development, Rhodesian authorities reported that guerrillas fired 20 to 30 rockets from Zambia into the popular Rhodesian holiday resort of Kariba on Sunday. They caused no casualties or damage.

It was the second shelling of the town in two months. In the last rocket attack, on June 4, one man was injured and some cars and buildings were damaged.

Officials said the guerrillas who raided the east Rhodesian farm herded some of their victims into a circle and shot them. Others were bayoneted, and one was burned to death when the attackers set fire to the compound.

"It was a terrible sight. There were men, women and children lying in the bushes nearby — some of them dead and some were screaming with pain," said the white owner of the farm, Marius Sleigh.

A pregnant woman was among those killed.

The farm 17 miles north of Umtali is near the Mozambique border, an area in which militant black nationalists have stepped up cross-border raids in their five-year war against Prime Minister Ian Smith's white government.

Sleigh said a security fence around the compound was to be completed by today.

"I rather think they were after the fencing gang," he added.

A spokesman for the security forces said the guerrilla band numbered about 26, carried automatic weapons and apparently planned simultaneous raids on Sleigh's residence and the black quarters about a quarter of a mile away.

Sleigh said he had gone to bed when the guerrillas arrived at the black compound during a beer party and demanded to see the black foreman. When one of the farmhands told them the foreman was away, the guerrillas started beating him with sticks.

"The rest of the people in the compound, mainly women and children, obviously panicked and tried to run away," Sleigh continued. "It was then that the terrorists opened up on them from behind with the women and children screaming to get away."

The farmer said he heard "terrible screaming", grabbed an automatic rifle and rushed outside.

"I realized the compound was under attack from terrorists and decided to open up in the general direction I could see them firing from. The moment I started firing another group of terrorists who were on the other side of the house opened up with rockets and small arms."

The second group did little damage, Sleigh said, and one bullet set off an alarm siren which scared the guerrillas off.

Nothing Left Standing In Path Of Tornado As It Ripped Through Town

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer
NEOGA, Ill. (AP) — Only a pile of rubble remains where a tornado ripped through this lakeside community, killing five people and injuring another 50. A two-by-four driven like a nail into the side of a mobile home attests to the storm's violence.

"In the path of the tornado, itself, there was nothing left standing," said Mark Busekrus, Coles County emergency services coordinator. "Everything in the path was reduced to rubble. No walls. Nothing."

A twister touched down at 1 p.m. Sunday, demolishing dozens of homes on the western side of Lake Mattoon in east-central Illinois and splitting buildings on the eastern shore. Summer cottages were flattened, mobile homes blown from their pedestals and hurled into the lake. About 50 homes were destroyed.

Boats were swamped and overturned. Trees, telephone poles and power lines were smashed.

Although there were no reports of missing persons, several officials said they believed it likely that more dead would be found in the waters of the lake or under piles of rubble.

Cox Points To Growth Needs

Mayor Percy Cox, who filed Friday for reelection in the upcoming municipal balloting, said this morning that he was prompted to seek office again "because we have so many projects in the works that I feel are important to the growth of Greenville."

Cox said that one of the key projects involves an east to west thoroughfare including a tie-in of Tenth Street with Farmville Boulevard to provide motoring access.

The mayor also cited several important street and thoroughfare projects designed to provide a parallel boulevard on both sides of the railroad tracks.

"We are working on getting the right-of-ways to continue Arlington Boulevard from Hooker Road to the hospital and over to NC 43," Cox mentioned, "and we are also working on something I'm excited about; a long range bicycle thoroughfare plan that we hope to get approved in the next 12 months or so."

The city bus system needs to be expanded in order to get the price per rider down to "where we can live with it," he continued.

Cox said that the city will have to have a great deal of citizen participation in order to continue to receive federal funds under the Community Development program.

"We are working on a program to upgrade our zoning ordinance and a study is underway on annexation that would bring us up to the 50,000 population figure which seems to be the magic mark used by the federal government in its funding programs," he observed.

Cox said that he would like to follow through and complete in the "next couple of years" some of the key programs currently underway and projected for Greenville.

Merit Scholarship For Sudie Jenkins

Sudie A. Jenkins of 2602 Tryon Drive, Greenville, has been named the winner of a Hanover College Merit Scholarship, it was announced today by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Illinois. She joins a total of more than 3,800 Merit Scholars in the 22nd annual (1977) competition.

A graduate of J.H. Rose High School, Miss Jenkins was a member of National Honor Society, Beta Club, Band, Choir, MathScience Slub and Future Homemakers of America. She served as Youth Fellowship president and five president, Student Government Association representative, Graduation Marshal, Hi-Y Club president and chaplain, and was the winner of math awards on local, district and state levels.

Miss Jenkins' four-year scholarship is sponsored by Hanover College which was founded in 1827 and is the oldest private 4-year college in Indiana. Located in a triangle composed of Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Louisville, it is a residential college enrolling some 1000 students.

The Merit Scholars were selected from among 14,000 Finalists in this year's Merit Scholarship competition. The more than 3,800 awards being offered in 1977 have a total value of over $11 million and are supported by some 575 program sponsors.

U.S. Dept. Of Justice Probes Hawke's Role

RALEIGH (AP) — The U. S. Department of Justice is investigating whether there was any violation of law or ethical standards by a Raleigh Republican who formerly headed the Coastal Plains Regional Commission.

In a report carried in The Charlotte Observer Monday, Jack Hawke said, "I guess if you take a strict interpretation of the conflict-of-interest laws, then I violated them."

He was pictured as a $50,000 a year executive looking toward the future when he might leave his post with a change in administrations, so he helped a friend obtain a business loan with the idea of joining the business.

Hawke, 36, said he asked for the investigation himself in the wake of certain allegations made by some commission employees. At issue, the newspaper report said, was Hawke's help in getting the friend, Herbert Caudle, a $650,000 federal loan to start a new business which Hawke planned to join as head of sales.

Hawke said he never joined the firm, deciding he and Caudle could not work together.

The request for the loan was submitted last November and the money was made available last February, the newspaper report said. "I've helped dozens of people get loans just because I wanted to help them," Hawke said.

Hawke later bought a bankrupt Raleigh florist shop which he said he learned about through his friendship with Caudle.

An FBI spokesman acknowledged Monday that the investigation is under way, but declined any details.

City-County School Lunch Policies Are Announced

Pitt County and Greenville City schools today announced free and reduced school lunch price policies for children unable to pay the full price of meals and milk served under the national school lunch, breakfast and special milk programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

Family Size	Free Meals and Milk	Reduced Meal Price
1	0 — 3,930	3,931 — 6,120

2	0 — 5,160	5,161 — 8,050
3	0 — 6,390	6,391 — 9,970
4	0 — 7,610	7,611 — 11,880
5	0 — 8,740	8,741 — 13,630
6	0 — 9,860	9,861 — 15,380
7	0 — 10,890	10,891 — 16,980
8	0 — 11,910	11,911 — 18,580
9	0 — 12,840	12,841 — 20,030
10	0 — 13,760	13,761 — 21,470

11	0 — 14,680	14,681 — 22,890
12	0 — 15,590	15,591 — 24,310

Each additional family member 910 1,420

Children whose family income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. (An extra one-half pint of free milk is available to those who are eligible for free meals.)

In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school.

The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

To discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the application forms contain a statement above the space for signature certifying that all information furnished in the application is true and correct.

An additional statement is added to warn that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of federal funds, that school officials may verify the information in the application and that deliberate misrepresentation of information may subject the application to prosecution under applicable state and criminal statutes.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk, the parents should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy the principal will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis.

However, if he wishes to make a formal appeal, he may make a request either orally or in writing to Thomas L. Craft Jr., associate superintendent of county schools, by writing P.O. Box 776, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or by calling 752-6106, for a hearing to appeal the decision. Parents in the city school system may call Mrs. Carolyn Qualtney, director of food services, at 752-7500.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals or additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Each school and the offices of the Pitt County and the Greenville Boards of Education have a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by interested parties.

Schlesinger Thinks Big Oil Will Accept Govm't Controls

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how much profit petroleum companies make, says Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, they always want more, and they don't really need it.

But Schlesinger says he thinks the companies will accept the energy bill passed by the House, even with its price controls and taxes, rather than fight it to a standstill in the Senate and be stuck indefinitely with existing regulations.

In his first on-the-record interview since taking office on Aug. 5, Schlesinger said the prices allowed by the bill offer petroleum companies adequate incentives to produce more oil and gas, and higher prices would risk generating excess profits for company stockholders.

"Greed, of course, is an unflattering term," Schlesinger said in answer to a question about the companies' intentions.

"But if one employs it, one must recognize that greed is the virtue that drives the free enterprise system, the desire to acquire substantial profits."

As the nation's first secretary of energy, Schlesinger also said he will take a close look at the jacking up of world uranium prices by an international cartel, and the possible involvement of U.S. energy companies.

On another subject, he said the Carter administration may favor an overland pipeline through Canada for Alaskan natural gas if it would be cheaper for U.S. consumers than a pipeline through Alaska that would require costly tanker shipments to the West Coast. U.S. and Canadian representatives are discussing the pipeline question.

Schlesinger said he may enter negotiations with Canada in time to permit a policy recommendation by President Carter soon after Congress reconvenes next Sept. 7.

In the interview, conducted for an hour and a half last Friday in his White House office, Schlesinger also:

—Left the door open for administration consideration of a proposal to allow petroleum companies some higher profits to be "plowed back" into further energy development.

—Said the Carter administration will not try to keep oil and gas companies from moving into coal, uranium and other energy resources, at least for the present.

—Said Carter's effort to discourage the spread of nuclear fuel technology that could be used for nuclear weapons has had "partial success," achieving international agreement to work on the problem.

In discussing petroleum industry hopes for the energy bill pending in the Senate, Schlesinger said:

"Whatever we had proposed, I think one might anticipate that industry would have asked for more."

"Even if we had gone immediately to world oil prices for all oil, there probably would have been a desire for subsidy of some sort or another."

Sec. Vance Opens Talks With China Leadership

Five Died In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Five persons were killed in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina highways, the state Highway Patrol reported today. The deaths raised the fatality count for the year to 896, compared with 923 for the same time last year.

Two persons died Saturday night in separate accidents.

Charles William Vaughn Sr., 56, of Stone Mountain died at 8:50 p.m. when the car he was driving went out of control and overturned on N.C. 216 in Cleveland County. Vaughn was pinned under the car.

A car-motorcycle accident killed William Andrew Krieg, 22, of Fayetteville at 8:25 p.m. on N.C. 87 near Olivia in Harnett County. Krieg was operating a motorcycle, which crossed the center line and struck an oncoming car.

Marvin Edward Pearson, 60, of Wilmington was killed in a wreck Saturday on a rural road 4½ miles south of Wilmington. The patrol said Pearson's car made a left turn while another vehicle was passing him.

A Friday night accident claimed the life of Lawrence Freeman Peace, 26, of Skyland when a car made a left turn into the path of a motorcycle he was riding. The wreck occurred on U.S. 25 three miles south of Asheville.

Judy Eliane Williams, 11, of Elizabethtown was killed Friday night when a car in which she was a passenger overturned on a rural road eight miles south of Elizabethtown.

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, here to explore chances of establishing full diplomatic relations with China, opened talks with Chinese leaders today by emphasizing the two countries' common political interests in various parts of the world.

In a sitting room in the Great Hall of the People, Vance began his first meeting with a Chinese team headed by Foreign Minister Huang Hua by saying there are areas where the two countries have "mutual interests."

One of these areas is Africa, where both the United States and China are eager to blunt Soviet penetration. They are concerned about inroads the Russians are making in east Africa and with insurgent movements in southern Africa.

American officials said the "international discussion," as Vance called it, was aimed at persuading Peking that a closer relationship can be built with Washington on the basis of shared objectives.

This phase of the talks is likely to occupy the first two days of Vance's four-day visit to the Chinese capital, serving as a buildup to the dominant subject — a mutual desire to move toward full relations.

Outside the Great Hall, and along the Avenue of Tranquility, in Tien An Men Square and elsewhere, tens of thousands of Chinese marched behind banners proclaiming the completion of the 11th Communist party congress.

The celebration bore no relationship to Vance's visit. The congress formally selected Hua Kuo-feng as party chairman, thereby ratifying his policies of economic advancement and greater openness toward the outside world.

Vance's arrival was low-keyed, with Huang Hua, Vice Foreign Minister Wang Hai-jung and Huang Chen, chief of the Chinese Liaison Office in Washington, heading a modest welcoming delegation at the airport.

But the festive atmosphere, with clanging cymbals and exploding firecrackers that had children covering their ears, lent a special dimension to this first high-level U.S.-Chinese contact in two years.

Chairman Hua had signaled Vance beforehand that Chinese policy has not changed on the Taiwan question, and that the United States would have to end all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese if it hopes to establish full relations with Peking.

Police Probing Alleged Assault

Greenville Police are continuing an investigation into an alleged assault that occurred about 9:40 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Fourth and Laurel Streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Carolyn Dixon of 305 Ashe St. reported she was walking when someone came up behind her, placed a hand over her mouth, struck her in the head.

Cannon, who said Miss Dixon reported she was unconscious for a short time, said when she came too, her assailant was gone.

The woman suffered scratches to her face and stomach, the police official noted.

Angry Words May Be Slip Of Tongue

CHICAGO (UPI) — Angry words need not be true, says Dr. Martin Harrow, a psychologist.

When your spouse apologizes for having yelled something dreadful at you during an argument, Harrow says, you can believe his nastiness may have been a slip of the tongue.

He or she probably blurted out those words under the stress of argument.

Harrow, who heads the psychology department of Michael Reese Hospital's Psychosomatic and Psychiatric Institute here, says the words "... were not necessarily your spouse's only real underlying thoughts about you, but were probably one of five or six conflicting thoughts, some of which are below the usual level of awareness."

Some of these thoughts about you may be very positive, some moderately positive, and some negative.

Anyone under emotional stress can say the wrong thing at the wrong time without meaning it, he added.

At such times you may also speak disordered sentences and not make as much sense as usual. This "cognitive slip-page" can occur in anyone under pressure, he said.

The psychologist says most people have an editing function in their brains that reviews what they are about to say before they say it. This "editor" usually starts working during childhood. It keeps most people from saying things that will get us in trouble: for example, that an old acquaintance looks "fat."

Your mental editor may not operate as efficiently under stress, or when you are very tired or are under the influence of certain drugs or alcohol.

That's one reason drunks blurt out things they would never say when they are sober, Harrow said. Words are put together in odd ways, as they are during an argument, and the person is left to defend them when sober.

If this occurs often, he said, it may be a sign to seek the help of a psychologist or psychiatrist.

BUYING VS RENTING

To buy or to rent — that is the question. Both have their place. First, renting can be the answer for families who know they'll only be in the area for a short time or who prefer not to contend with maintenance. It's also the only solution for anyone with insufficient funds for the down payment on a home.

The main disadvantage of renting is a financial one. As living costs rise — so do rents. A lease may protect you temporarily, but when it expires, the landlord is free to increase the rent — even under rent control when justified. Rent payment cannot be deducted from income tax as the homeowner can deduct real estate taxes and interest on the mortgage payments.

Your best buffer against inflation is to own your own home. You'll also be pleasantly surprised to find it also is one of the best financial investments you ever made. Your payments will remain level while your resale value — especially in this area — will continue to rise.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO. 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Couple Exchanges Vows In Garden Ceremony

The marriage of Barbara Evelyn Bruton and Morris Marion Bryan III was solemnized in a garden ceremony held at the home of the bride's parents here Saturday at high noon. The Rev. John Price, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, performed the double ring ceremony. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Earl Dudley Bruton Jr. of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Marion Bryan Jr. of Jefferson, Ga., are parents of the bridal couple.

Jan Ward of Washington provided a program of guitar and vocal selections for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white accordin pleated linen styled with a batteau neckline and empire waistline trimmed with white satin ribbon. The hemline featured a ruffle of Irish lace and linen.

She carried an arm bouquet of long-stemmed daisies and yellow roses tied with long white streamers. The bride wore a halo of daisies, blue baby's breath, lemon ivy with streamers of white satin picot ribbon.

The matron of honor was Leslie Schneider of Sherill's Ford, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Marta D. Hall of Efland, Janet Schade of Atlanta, Ga., and Caroline Bruton of Greenville, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore sundresses in varying hues of yellow and carried arm bouquets of long-stemmed white daisies with long ribbon streamers. They wore clusters of daisies and baby's breath in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Michael Klank of Atlanta, Ga., Steven and Joseph Bryan of Jefferson, Ga., brothers of the bridegroom.

Following a wedding trip to Europe, the couple will reside in Atlanta, Ga.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The bridegroom graduated from Georgia Tech, Atlanta, Ga., and is now in the landscaping business.

A champagne luncheon followed the ceremony and was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. James Bradley, cousin of the bride, served the wedding cake following the luncheon.

Correction

In the Hartley-Switzer wedding writeup printed in yesterday's issue of "The Daily Reflector," Bruce Ray Tripp Jr. should have been listed as a groomsman and the officiating minister was the Rev. Graham R. Nahouse.

FASHION FORECAST—Men will be looking toward chill-defying fashions for the cold months, reports the Men's Fashion Association. Wheat-flecked, bulky wool twist-knit pullover, left, is styled with softly rolled shawl-type collar, tan suede elbow patches and bold brown stripe around rib-knit waistband. The 100 per cent wool country compose, center, starts with a tan and white glen plaid two-button jacket with flapped bellows pockets and suede gun patch. It's teamed with a brown flannel five-button vest and stitched-down double-pleated flared slacks. Right, 100 per cent wool shetland tweed natural shoulder sportcoat in blanket plaid is cut with straight flap pockets, notched lapels and center vent. Style And Warmth Combined In Winter Fashions For Men

NEW YORK (AP) — Men's fall and winter fashions will show a distinct British look in tailored clothing, while casualwear will be in an "antifreeze" mood: practical, functional and ruggedly stylish, reports the Men's Fashion Association.

A highly adaptable style that looks as good in the city as it does in the country, the "British Accent" features a well-defined but not too snug waist, softer shoulders, a slight flare to the skirt of the coat and a close-fitting chest. It is also going to be seen in double-breasted treatments.

The vest, which is not only popular with the British look, but with most other European and American-type models, might even be stronger than last year, says Chip Tolbert, MFA's fashion director. He predicts that 85 per cent of all winter suits sold in 1977 will be vested.

The British Accent ranges from worsteds in dressy darks for town wear to softly colored, earth-tone tweeds, shetlands and chevrons in subtle patterns for country looks and tailored sport coats.

Sportcoats in big, bold, softly shaded plaids will be found in typical English fabrics such as shetlands, and tweeds in heringbones and other neat, small effects. And blazers, English in origin, will remain solid fashion news.

Dressy slacks for the fall show a move toward plaids, checks and tartans as well as a host of twills, flannels and other unpatterned fabrics. Many will be pleated, Tolbert notes.

The "British Warm," chesterfields and wool versions of the trench coat, plus a continuing revival of the camel hair polo coat, will be among tailored topcoat and overcoat options. In rainwear, single and double-breasted trenchcoats, plus very full cut balmacaans will be some of the stay-dry choices for men, with many featuring removable linings and collars in fleece or flannel. And the color range: big.

Accessories also will be affected by the British Accent, beginning with shirts returning to classic British stripings, tattersall checks and small checks. Also expected to show some growth are Oxford cloth shirts in classic colors and patterns. The collar styles, for most, will be button-down or typically British pin or spread models.

Dress gloves will be classic in concept in either smooth glace leathers or soft suedes. Designed with a minimum of detail, many will be lined. Most casual gloves will be lined in either fleece or knitted fabrics and will appear in rugged brushed suedes, grained leathers and knits.

The dress shoes complementing the British look will be such familiar styles as wing tips, cap toes, buckled monk

Husband Can Pay His Part Of Tip

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went to a restaurant with my best friend and her husband, who I'll call "Al." The bill came to $65, and the men paid the bill with $60.

The waiter didn't return with the change, so Al called him back and asked for the change. The waiter looked puzzled, but he gave him the change and a dirty look.

Well, this couple asked us to go on a vacation with them, and we said we'd go, but that was before we knew that Al didn't believe in tipping. (He says as a matter of principle he refuses to pay somebody else's help.)

We'd really like to vacation with them because we enjoy their company, but my husband isn't sure he can put up with the embarrassment of being with a guy who refuses to tip.

Answer soon because we don't know what to do.
STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: If you enjoy their company, go! Your husband can tip for HIS share of the check while Al sticks to his principles.

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if chickens had teeth, and you said they didn't.

Essentially you were correct, but if you want to get technical, every chicken is born with a single tooth. It's called an "egg tooth," and is located on the end of the upper beak. This egg tooth is the means by which a chick breaks the eggshell to gain entrance into the world. The tooth falls off a couple of days after hatching.

HENRY HAHN

DEAR HENRY: You certainly laid a new one on me with that story about the egg tooth. Sure it's not a yolk?

DEAR ABBY: This is for the bride-to-be who wanted her real father, instead of her stepfather, to give her away, even though she said that her real father had disappeared during the most important years of her life, and her stepfather had been more like a "real" father to her.

I had that decision to make a few years ago, and the circumstances were identical. My parents were divorced when I was 2 years old. (My father left my mother for another woman.) I figured that my real father had already "given me away" once, so when it came time for me to marry, I chose my stepfather to give me away. I have never regretted it.

series of violent incidents. Although Mrs. Sizemore and her doctors are certain that she is a healthy, whole person now, it was not the first time it had looked as though her life would resume a more normal course.

After two years with Thigpen and Dr. Hervey Cleckley, in 1954 they had been satisfied that a final integration had taken place, Mrs. Sizemore said.

She then married Don Sizemore, her present husband, and tried to settle into a life of domesticity. But her problems reappeared, along with blinding headaches, fainting spells and amnesia.

"We were led to believe when we got married that all I had to do was love Chris and everything would be all right," her husband said. But then it started again.

"We didn't know when the next one was going to happen so I just learned to live with it," he continued.

Learning to live with it, he said, meant waking up one morning to a terrified woman who claimed she'd never seen him before. And it meant dealing with periods of blindness and muteness, too.

"I was so ashamed," said Mrs. Sizemore, making a tent of her fingertips and settling into a deep chair. She spoke calmly and with self-assurance, her round face creasing often into a smile.

"I thought I shouldn't be alive. I thought someone with a thing like that inside them didn't deserve to live."

But Mrs. Sizemore said she gradually came to understand herself. And when the Retrace Lady "died" she was sure her nightmare was over. For the first time, she's absorbed the memories of all the women and is "learning to deal with life differently," she said.

Mrs. Sizemore said she was starting to enjoy herself again. "I see things I've never seen before," she said. "Like bees on a leaf or grains of sand."

"That sounds so corny, I know, but it's true. I've been so busy existing, I haven't had time to live."

("I'm Eve" is published by Doubleday).

As part of a long therapy with Dr. Tony Tsitos, she has written her own story, 20 years after the film was made, one year after she saw it for the first time. "I'm Eve" was co-authored by Mrs. Sizemore's cousin, Elen Sain Patillo.

In an interview in her New York hotel room, Mrs. Sizemore talked about her strange past, about her lives as Eve White, the Strawberry Girl, the Bell Lady, the Freckle Girl and others, all named for a character quirk manifested during their period of domination.

She recounted the circumstances of what seems to be her ultimate recovery. "It was at the death of the Retrace Lady," she recalled of her final "face." "It was the 19th of June in 1974, by the way. I remember the exact instant."

"When she died, there I was. Almost instantaneously, I was ready to create another one (personality). I felt so alone and terribly afraid."

Mrs. Sizemore said her fear was mixed with relief. At last, the woman who emerged seemed to be an adult version of the tortured child who had shut herself off from the world long ago, in a tiny North Carolina town, after a traumatic

Dramatic Breakthrough Seen

Dramatic breakthroughs come in medical science which change the world. Development of penicillin was one of these; so was the Salk polio vaccine. Now government medical scientists report a new drug which may attack certain viral diseases. It is seen as a major advance by Dr. Richard Krause of the National Institute of Health. If its benefits can be extended physicians will be able to do something directly about such virus-caused diseases as influenza, common colds, smallpox, yellow fever, measles, hepatitis, tick fever, rabies and polio. It is far too early to determine how effective the new drug will be against the virus-caused diseases. The development may be quite important, however, and scientists may at last be on the track of something that can control many diseases that so far have eluded cure. Editorial

Always A Chance Of Serious Dealings

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has been a little more conciliatory toward President Carter in recent comments. He said last week that Carter's statements "sound positive". "If a good initiative appears anywhere, we are always ready to respond to it," Brezhnev said.

It is typical of Soviet leaders that there is a period of sizing up when a new U. S. president takes over. Perhaps this has been done for the Carter administration and the two governments can now get down to serious negotiations.

Adult Illiteracy Growing

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It is not enough in this modern and complex world, for a person simply to be able to read, write, and cipher in order to get along. The definition of adult illiteracy needs to be changed, and the educational system geared up to meet the new demands being placed on people just to get along. Officials of the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges are in the process now of trying to change the common definition of illiteracy—to broaden that term considerably—and to design some test programs for teaching people more about living in modern society. 50 Years At the rate we are going, say the experts, it will take 50 years just to get all the adults who are classified as illiterate into upgraded educational programs. Figuring that there are 30,000 high school dropouts every year; that many high school graduates aren't even able to read and do math at all well; and that 1.8 million adults (63 per cent of the population) never finished high school, officials say the problem is growing. Beyond the difficulty the adult illiterate has in simply functioning in his daily life, Community College people foresee a problem for the state: if we don't upgrade the adult level of education, industries which require technical skills and are needed here to upgrade wages won't locate in North Carolina. "The currently limited definition of literacy is no longer adequate. We cannot define literacy simply as the ability to read... but also how to use these tools in solving problems, coping and adjusting to situations in daily life and work," says a proposal now going the rounds in state and federal government. The project is labeled "A Comprehensive Functional Literacy"; approach, and community colleges already have a quarter of a million dollars in hand and are awaiting federal approval of a like amount to fund two pilot projects to test the concept.

Charles M. Barrett, associate vice president for educational programs in the Department of Community Colleges puts the situation this way: Wider Duty "We have been overly bound in education by the task of just teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic to adults. We had better take a hard look at teaching problem solving... teaching people to carry on normal day-to-day living: shopping, working, involved in the community." The goal of the new approach in adult education will be to teach literacy skills, and at the same time teach people how to apply those skills in daily activities. The payoff for such an approach, says Barrett, will be simple to measure: did the adult student learn enough to broaden life experiences such as joining a club, subscribing to a newspaper or magazine, registering to vote, getting a new job or a promotion or raise in the old one, or get involved in community activities? Adult illiterates—even though they may know the simple basics of reading and writing but lack the ability to use those skills—often can't perform routine tasks such as looking up a telephone number, keeping a household budget, filling out a job application. Such a handicap makes getting a good job and raising a family difficult, and society pays the bill in terms of aid to such families, and in support of thousands who are in prison, in part "victimized by ignorance and illiteracy," officials say. Barrett hopes the pilot programs can teach people to use basic skills to solve problems, cope in daily life and work, and broaden such activities as consumer knowledge, family living, job knowledge, home management, and civic responsibility.

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Agonizing Choice

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Carter must decide soon between permitting or blocking criminal prosecution of former CIA director Richard Helms, an agonizing choice of whether to fulfill his campaign pledges for "open" government at the cost of the nation's higher interests. So dangerous to this country are the implications of the unprecedented grand jury investigation of Helms on suspicion of perjury that Mr. Carter has been secretly warned by informal advisers he must never let the case go to trial. One eminent Democrat, deeply involved in high intelligence matters for many years, has said privately that Helms's indictment and trial "would be the single most damaging thing that could be done to this country." These "damaging" consequences would include further deterioration of U.S. intelligence, an end of any further intelligence cooperation with the U.S. by allied nations and exposing the nation and its recent Presidents to obloquy. In short, self-flagellation of the nation would reach a masochistic peak. To prevent this, the President must block the grand jury, now well into its second year of probing the truth of Helms's 1973 Senate testimony on Chile. Mr. Carter almost certainly would have to instruct Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell to veto an indictment and thereby prevent a trial. Such a move would infuriate the liberal community, including large segments of Congress and the press. Moreover, Mr. Carter's campaign trail was strewn with pledges calculated to make him appear different from President Ford, for government operating "in the open," as he declared in the first presidential debate. That the grand jury is moving toward indicting Helms by no means suggests guilt. In fact, experienced lawyers and politicians here believe the chance of finding the former chief spy guilty of perjury is, in the words of one lawyer, "exactly zero." Nevertheless, in his defense, Helms would be compelled to reveal the most secret Oval Office and National Security Council deliberations. This unquestionably would involve former Presidents in what the CIA's critics call the seamy, squalid side of the intelligence game. Helms would be relieved from protecting sources and directions given to him, even by a President, if forced to defend himself in a public trial. The President could be taken off the hook by George A. Carver and Robert G. Andary, Justice Department criminal division lawyers in charge of the Helms investigation. They could simply rule the grand jury had "no case." The President is not going to be so lucky, well-informed sources have told us. The youthful investigators who have spent so many months hunting Helms down want to confront him in open court as prosecutors. The grand jury probe has subpoenaed every scrap of paper in the Central Intelligence Agency bearing on clandestine operations against the late Marxist President of Chile, Salvador Allende. It has questioned for long hours scores of top CIA officials and former officials. Included are Thomas Karamessines, who for many years ran clandestine operations, and Elizabeth Dunlevy, Helms's longtime confidential secretary. Interoffice memos, personal logs, calendars and records of every traceable telephone call made out of Helms's office during his seven years as CIA director — as well as thousands of calls from CIA's Latin-American section — are under grand jury scrutiny. Accordingly, prosecutors Carver and Andary would no more welcome a presidential order barring indictment and trial than would liberals in Congress, the media and elsewhere who have expended so much righteous energy against the once super-secret CIA. That righteous energy and Helms's predicament both stem partly from bad decisions made in the Ford White House and Justice Department during the post-Nixon demand for purging Watergate wickedness. The grand jury probe of Helms was started by Ford's Attorney General, Edward Levi, an action viewed by one seasoned lawyer here with liberal connections as "an outrage." But Levi had plenty of company. Helms, who gave 32 years of honorable service to his country, was summoned to the White House from his post as ambassador to Iran in January 1975 to be warned by presidential counsel Philip Buchen. Helms was informed that anything he told the President (identified by Buchen as "the nation's chief law enforcement officer") could be used against him in the investigation Levi was then contemplating. WASHINGTON—Dr. Rene Richards, the transsexual tennis player, is suing the U.S. Tennis Association, and the Women's Tennis Association for banning her from the U.S. Open at Forest Hills at the end of this month. The reason she has been banned is that she could not pass a sex chromosome test given to women athletes, to make sure they are what they say they are. Dr. Richards claims the sex chromosome test is unfair and since she's allowed in professional women's tennis locker rooms, she should be allowed to play as a woman at Forest Hills. The other side maintains that if Dr. Richards is permitted to compete as a woman it will open the floodgates for a wave of transsexuals playing in women's sports. Many men would have operations just so they could compete against women. It's possible. As a tennis player who rarely can beat a man on the courts, I've considered an operation similar to Dr. Richards' many times. After a discouraging set the other day I even discussed it with my wife. "If I could only have a transsexual operation," I told her, "I know I could improve my forehead." My wife was very sympathetic. "Do it if you think it will help your game." "The problem is I'm not sure. If I had the operation and then women started beating me, instead of men, it would make me sick." "Women beat you now," she said. "I know," I replied "and it makes me sick. But with a transsexual operation I might be able to psych them out." "If they knew I was once a man, and they now had to play me as a woman, it could make them so nervous they might double-fault and lose their serve, particularly if I didn't shave my legs." "It's a gamble," my wife admitted. "The only problem as I see it is that if you had the operation and you still kept losing at tennis, there would be no way of going back, if you know what I mean." "I've thought of that," I said. "But it did wonders for Dr. Richards' game." "But she was a good player as a man. She's just become better as a woman. If you're a lousy player as a man there is no guarantee you'll play better as a woman. Wouldn't you feel more comfortable taking tennis lessons?" "Do you know what they charge for tennis lessons these days? At least I could get the operation under Blue Shield and save some money." "There is a compromise," my wife said. "Instead of going to all the trouble of an operation, why don't you play in women's tennis clothes? Then if it didn't work out you wouldn't have lost anything." "That is a thought," I said excitedly. "If I wore your tennis dress when I played I might be able to beat a woman. It would certainly give me an edge when they looked across the net." "I think you'd look nice in my tennis dress," my wife said. "But suppose they make me take a sex chromosome test?" "Refuse to take it. I think if you're willing to wear a tennis dress, they have no right to ask you any questions." "What a brainstorm," I said. "With a dress on I could even beat Ethel Kennedy."

Checks Senate Chance

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Four years ago, it was commonly assumed that Atty. Gen. Rufus L. Edmisten would seek Democratic nomination to run against incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms next year. Edmisten was fresh out of Washington, having served a decade as an aide to Sen. Sam Ervin. He was known for his role in the Senate Watergate hearings. Also, Helms' 1972 victory was considered a fluke just like the victory of Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser in the same election. The scene has shifted in the last four years. Edmisten is no longer considered a sure candidate and Helms is considered to have a strong chance of reelection. Edmisten is taking a poll to help him decide whether to run. Chances are good Edmisten will not run, particularly if Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green or Insurance Commissioner John Ingram jump in the race. Edmisten, 36, is a slightly pudgy and rather jolly fellow. He has a casual style, insisting that everyone, even teenagers, call him Rufus. That friendliness has brought flocks of young people and elderly ladies to his support. But, they are not a strong political base. The attorney general has a sharp memory: Many people who have met him are stunned when he can later recall their names and where they met. It's impressive but few voters can be reached that way. Edmisten is also candid, sometimes to the point of eating a lot of shoe leather. That has hurt his image as the state's leading law enforcement officer. Edmisten has never faced a real political test. His first victory was in getting the Democratic nomination. He was chosen over a number of other candidates by party leaders rather than in a primary. His back-slapping style and Ervin connections played a major role.

To the Editor:
 This letter is in regard to The Daily Reflector article of August 16, concerning the assignment of Lake Ellsworth's school children to the city schools. First, may we say that the article was very misleading in its assumption that all of Lake Ellsworth's parents were represented by the "contingent" of parents who attended last Monday night's city school board meeting and expressed their desire for their children to return to the city school system. We think it should be noted that many of those parents how send their children to private schools and intend to continue to do so until their children are old enough to go to the new Middle School. What right do they have to speak for those of us whose children have from the beginning of this subdivision attended the public schools, both city and county? Second, the only other objection to the results of the city school board meeting is that none of the parents who were known to prefer the county schools were informed of this meeting, so that we, too, could express our feelings about the matter. We're not saying that the other parents did not have the right to speak up for what they want for their children. We just think it could have been handled in a more just way. So, to reiterate, most definitely the article in your paper did not accurately reflect the feelings of all the people concerned in Lake Ellsworth. Bill and Dianne White

Money Supply Debate Is 'Hot'

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
New York (AP) — It sounds so cold, dull and abstract but it is really so hot and volatile, and immensely important to everyone, this debate over the money supply. Every time the Fed attempts to expand or contract the amount of money circulating in the economy it gives rise to the argument over whether it is good or bad for jobs, incomes, the stock market and the general welfare. And the debate seems endless, because the Fed is always watching the money stock, and always watching the rate of inflation, which it considers to be the most dangerous enemy of prosperity. But this isn't the whole story. There is the debate also over the independence of the Fed and its chairman, Arthur F. Burns, and over its interpretation of economic events, which many a critic says has been faulty time and again. Should the Fed be more responsive to Congress and, in theory anyway, more responsive to the American people via Congress. Or should it religiously avoid any tempering by Congress as an economic crime against the people. Burns has attempted to keep a lofty distance between himself and the legislative body, condescending to testify each month, seeming to patronize members of the House and Senate banking committees because, well, politics is part of the job. During these sessions he has the majesty and mystery of an oracle putting forth what he sees to be self-evident truths, mainly that inflation is Lucifer lurking. The often doctrinaire posture in itself appears to goad some members of the House and Senate banking committees, who consider themselves just as concerned and qualified to deal with inflation as the unflappable, pipe-smoking Burns. But there is a larger issue. Congressmen sometimes wonder how one man can exert such power over the economy, even to the point of opposing the President. They worry over what appear to be subjective decisions by the Fed. There is another aspect to the debate, as there always is. Should the Fed lose its degree of independence, and instead become a vehicle for congressional or presidential policy. Would inflation then be a bigger threat? Conceding the dangers, critics still ask: Who determines whether the Fed is interpreting events correctly? Who disciplines it for wrong decisions? Who, in fact, really knows why the Fed acts as it does? Now that the Fed is tightening up a bit, forcing up some basic interest rates, the debate is reheating. The Fed, say the critics, has again stepped on the brakes too soon. "The Federal Reserve Board has once again, as in mid-1975 and mid-1976 prematurely impaired the rate of economic recovery by raising the cost of credit," claims one critic, John Wright, of Wright Investors' Service. Wright isn't alone in that criticism. Numerous informed critics have argued the Fed is too nervous about inflation, acting to slow what it feels is an overheated economy even when millions are jobless and factories are operating well below capacity. Burns, himself, has indicated that such a mistake might have been made in the past couple of years, the consequence being to stall the recovery from recession, and prolong unemployment and underactivity. The chairman has many, many defenders, even among those who sometimes are opposed to his decisions, and who would prefer that the Fed be more open to suggestion and more communicative in regard to its decisions. And because he has so many defenders, as well as detractors, the debate continues very much the same as it was 10, five and two years ago — and probably will be a decade hence.

THE PERENNIAL QUERY
 If a man dies, shall he live again?
 This question has been asked throughout the ages. The Egyptians had a very confident belief in immortality. Greek philosophers several centuries before Christ was born thought and wrote much on this theme. Immortality is of course, central to the Christian tradition. Common sense tells us that God would hardly go to the pains He has to create human life only to wipe it out after a few brief years. Also, the whole of human life and institutions appears to be characterized by incompleteness. Something is needed beyond the reaches of our restricted world to finish what is here begun. Man hungers for immortality, and since this is a natural hunger, it is reasonable to suppose that there must be something provided somewhere in the universe to satisfy that hunger. Of course, immortality can never be "proved," it must be accepted on faith. And when it is accepted in this fashion, it becomes a living reality. —by Earl Douglass

NO TEARS — Puerto Rican nationalist Rafael Cancel Miranda, imprisoned in the United States since 1954, gives a clenched fist salute Saturday as he was greeted by several thousand supporters at his father's funeral. Cancel, 46, was given permission to leave prison facilities in Marion, Ill., where he is serving a sentence of 25 to 81 years for his role in a 1954 shooting attack on the U.S. House of Representatives in which five Congressmen were wounded. Cancel told mourners to "raise their fists in farewell to my father, because men such as he are not buried with tears." — (AP Laserphoto)

Space Problems Apparently Resolved

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 2 spacecraft is speeding toward Jupiter, Saturn and beyond while scientists try to analyze its shaky start and the problems that threatened the mission. Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here ordered the spacelab, equipped with television cameras, to turn several of its instruments on and off late Sunday night to test them. They were to analyze the results of those experiments today. But the scientists said the Voyager 2 appears to have overcome its earlier troubles and was sailing smoothly to the outer planets and eventually out of the solar system. Most troubling of the Voyager 2's apparent problems was the possible failure of a boom containing cameras and scientific tests to project itself away from the craft's body. But engineers now believe the boom did extend and is within one degree of its proper position.

That diagnosis was made Saturday night when mission controllers ordered a sun sensor on the boom to turn toward the sun so it could absorb solar rays. That command was obeyed, said mission controller Jerry Stilwell, and data fed back to Earth began showing the absorption of solar heat.

The Voyager's problems, including an unstable gyroscope — used to keep the craft on course — and a malfunctioning computer, began about an hour after its launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla., Saturday morning.

Cape Canaveral spacecraft manager John Casani met with his engineers on Sunday to make sure the Voyager 2's twin, Voyager 1, doesn't have the same kind of problems when it is launched Sept. 1. Voyager 1 is scheduled to arrive at Jupiter before Voyager 2 because it is traveling a more direct route. The two spacecraft are being sent on the voyage in a $500 million effort to study, among other things, plasmas — gases composed of charged particles — in the atmospheres of Jupiter and Saturn.

Quake Toll Up For Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The death toll in the Indian Ocean earthquake and tidal waves in the Lesser Sunda islands of Indonesia has risen to 72, Social Affairs Minister M.S. Mintareja reported today.

Mintareja said there were 52 dead on the island of Sumbawa, 18 on Lombok and 2 on Bali. He said nothing about any missing persons, but the head of the Sumbawa government, Hassan Usman, reported more than 65 persons missing earlier.

Tidal waves as high as 16 feet crashed over villages on the coasts of Sumbawa and Lombok and demolished more than 150 homes. Mintareja said he believed hundreds of persons were injured.

One village chief on Lombok said the waves rose from the ocean like giant hands. He said most of the villagers were struck with awe and wonder, and by the time they realized what was happening, their tiny village was washed away.

A landslide triggered by the quake buried a village on Sumbawa.

The quake Friday afternoon was centered between Indonesia and Australia about 930 miles southeast of Jakarta. Earth tremors rattled buildings more than 1,000 miles away in Perth, Australia, and after-shocks buffeted Indonesian islands for the rest of the day.

The main tremor registered between 7.7 and 8.9 on the Richter Scale on seismographs around the world. Austrian scientists said their reading of 8.9 was one of the highest in history.

Flu Strikes In South America

ATLANAA (AP) — Influenza has struck parts of the Southern Hemisphere this summer, but the national Center for Disease Control says it's too early to tell which variety would prevail in any outbreaks in the United States this winter.

But officials consider a widespread incidence of swine flu to be highly unlikely. Fears of swine flu prompted last year's ill-fated mass vaccination program.

The "flu season" in the Northern Hemisphere is from late fall through early spring. Typical influenza spreads quickly because the viruses are carried in the air. It is characterized by chills, fever, headache and aching muscles.

It usually kills about five of every 100 persons it strikes, generally the old and infirm. But some epidemics have been extremely lethal, such as the 1918-19 pandemic which killed about 21.6 million persons, including 800,000 in the United States.

So far, flu outbreaks have occurred from May through July in Kenya, Malaysia, Australia and New Zealand, the CDC said. Viruses in those outbreaks were associated with the A-Victoria flu which has occurred in the United States in recent years.

One strain in Trinidad resembled the milder A-Texas, which first appeared at an air base in Texas last January. It later was reported in Alaska, and health officials said it could be the cause of any outbreaks in this country.

An outbreak in Argentina last month still is being studied by the CDC, which shares surveillance with the World Health Organization in Geneva. The CDC surveys the Southern Hemisphere, and the WHO surveys the Northern Hemisphere.

The CDC also said Australia reported a virus similar to B-Hong Kong, another variety of flu found in the United States in recent years.

Public health officials in this country most recently became alarmed when an outbreak of A-New Jersey virus, known as swine flu, killed one person at Ft. Dix, N.J., in 1976 and infected about 500 others. Epidemiologists said the virus was similar to that of 1918.

But last winter only three cases of swine flu were documented—two in Wisconsin and one in Minnesota—and some evidence was found in a few more.

The swine flu vaccine which more than 46 million persons received before the program was suspended still will provide some protection against other viruses this year, researchers said.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has ordered the unused swine flu vaccine stored in case of a new outbreak.

Because flu viruses change quickly, vaccine must be changed every year so it can fight the predominant strain.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has decided that the 1977 vaccine will contain antibodies to fight viruses comparable to A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong. This would include A-Texas, which is considered a "drift" from A-Victoria.

Cite Possession Of Marijuana

A 16-year-old Ayden youth was arrested by Greenville Police early Sunday morning on marijuana possession and driving under the influence charges.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers stopped a car driven by Thomas Eugene Sharkshnas about 4:25 a.m. at the intersection of Charles and 14th Streets and charged Sharkshnas with driving under the influence.

Investigators then found a small amount of marijuana in his possession and charged him with possession of the illegal weed.

Sponsors Frank and Mary Jean Hlavac said Naughton's throw fell five feet short of the world record.

The couple provides sun-dried chips from the pasture of their Black Angus herd and "plastic gloves for the not so hardy," Mrs. Hlavac said.

MCFARLAND, Wis. (AP) — Glenn Naughton of Madison got his cow chip to sail 174 feet, 4 inches to win the weekend cow chip throwing contest at the Frank Hlavac farm.

Edmisten is an attorney, but he has not practiced law. He is not wealthy, depending on his salary for his livelihood. If he were to run, it would cost him his current job. He could end up unemployed.

Despite the disadvantages, Edmisten has admitted a desire to return to Washington as a senator, a role he is familiar with.

Though he has made some mistakes, Edmisten has what is generally considered a good record as attorney general.

One of his strongest points as a candidate would be his knowledge of Washington and the connections he would have because of his association with Ervin.

But, how much weight voters would give that, especially in a race against Helms who has six years senatorial experience, is hard to gauge. And that, essentially, is what Edmisten is trying to find out in his poll.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady, with supplies moderate, demand good, weights desirable.

The dock weighted average price for this week is 41.71 cents per pound for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers picked up at processing plant. Estimated slaughter to date 1,365,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined steadily again today as an increase in the prime lending rate spread rapidly through the banking industry.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off nearly 60 points in the past four weeks, was down 4.25 at 859.23 by 11:30 a.m. today.

Losers outpaced gainers by close to a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

First-hour volume on the Big Board came to 4.19 million shares.

Numerous banks across the country today joined in a 1/4-point increase in the prime rate to 7 per cent.

Analysts pointed out that the rise in the basic rate banks charge on blue chip loans had been expected because of a recent surge in open market money rates.

But they said investors still seemed concerned that the upward trend would continue in the months ahead.

Texasco was the most active NYSE issue, down 1/2 at 27 1/2.

On Friday the company announced a gasoline price cut. Analysts have noted recent concern among investors over the possible effects on the oil industry of large supplies of crude oil and gasoline.

The 11 a.m. NYSE composite index was off 13 at 53.25.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .24 to 118.44.

Police Recover Missing Plants And Furniture

Greenville Police Friday night recovered 52 plants and a number of pieces of lawn and porch furniture taken from various homes in the city over the past several weeks, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

The chief said the plants and furniture were recovered from apartments at Georgetown Apartments and from a trailer at Hillcrest Trailer Pk. No charges have been filed, he noted, pending further investigation.

Some 12 plants, valued at $441, and some 15 items of furniture ranging from an ashtray and plant stand to tables, chairs and a couch and valued at $965, had been returned to their owners by noon, today, Cannon said, noting that they were in connection with 11 cases.

He added that the other plants being held by the department — some 40 plants of various varieties — would be returned to their owners if they can be identified.

Legionnaires Hit Canal Giveaway

The Pitt County American Legion Post 39, meeting recently, passed a resolution opposing the negotiated treaty between the United States and Panama that the American Legion contended "would eventually turn over the Panama Canal to Panama."

The resolution pointed out that "after 13 years of negotiating by successive American administrations with Panama, the terms for a treaty have been completed by negotiators of the two parties for the step by step conveying of control and ownership of the Panama Canal to the government of Panama until full, complete, and sovereign power over all the Canal and the Canal Zone is effected."

The American Legion Post, according to the resolution, "is deeply disturbed and sorely disappointed by the present position of the United States at the brink of its decline into subordination amongst the nations of the world."

The resolution stated that the post deemed it an "affront to the USA that Panama has demanded, under threat, the turn-over of the Canal. We deem it a show of weakness and servility when we submit to these demands and give away the Canal."

The Legion also resolved: "We consider that the Canal is essential to the military defense of the USA, and to its economic viability. We assert that the Canal Zone is the property of the American people who paid for it three times: to Columbia, to Panama, to private owners of the land."

In addition, the resolution noted, "We maintain that a major effort by the US administration, the media, by various non-political organizations, have been made to induce the American people to accept the give-away of the Canal. We are completely opposed to this action," the Legion resolved.

PTA Instruction School Slated

Greenville will host the District PTA School of Instruction to be held Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. at Wahl-Coates Elementary School.

Topics will include the role of PTA, why PTA?, duties of officers, parliamentary procedure, and programs and projects.

All principals, teachers, PTA officers, and concerned citizens are invited. Lunch will be available for $1.75, according to PTA City Council President Linda Seykora.

Art Selected By RJR In 'Search'

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Corp. selected 21 works of art here and in Boone this weekend in the first phase of their statewide art search.

The Winston-Salem-based firm will display native art in its world headquarters, which is opening later this fall.

Five works entered by faculty members at Appalachian State University were chosen from 200 entries at Boone. In Asheville, 17 works were selected from 600 entries. Many were mountain craft items.

Other contests will be held in Wilmington, Beaufort, Greenville, Durham, Charlotte and Winston-Salem.

Cannon
Mr. William Earl Cannon of Bridgeport, Conn. died at his home Sunday. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at the Norcott and Company Funeral Home in Ayden.

Cox
Mr. Pete Eugene "Bunk" Cox Jr. of the Venters Crossroads community of Pitt County died at his home Sunday.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete at the Norcott and Company Funeral Home in Ayden.

Gilbert
Mrs. Ethel Mewborn Gilbert of 714 Liberty Street, Ayden died Saturday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Norcott and Company Funeral Home in Ayden.

Hart
Mr. Wayland B. Hart, 70, died Saturday at his home, Stratford Arms Apartments here.

A funeral service will be held Tuesday at 11 a. m. at Memorial Baptist Church here by the pastor, Dr. E. T. Vinson. Interment will be in Cherry Hill Cemetery. The body will lie in state in the church one hour prior to the time of the funeral.

Mr. Hart was a Greenville native who had recently retired from the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D. C. He was a member of Memorial Baptist Church.

Surviving him is a sister, Mrs. Jack L. Wallace of Livermore, Calif.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock and at other times may be found at the home of Mrs. E. W. Hellen, 1907 E. Fourth Street.

The family suggests that those desiring to make memorial contributions consider the Memorial Baptist Church.

Free Manure To Circus-Goers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Visitors to the 124th Ohio State Fair have been invited to help cut down on cleanup costs for the visiting Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Thrill Circus by taking home animal manure.

Leaflets handed out at the fair Sunday offered fairgoers all the animal waste they can carry home, for use in gardens or farms as a soil enricher.

Circus officials estimated they would have a ton of waste from elephants, llamas, and other circus animals, to dispose of daily.

Manning
Mr. Samuel Johnston Manning, 30, died Sunday in Greenville.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 3 p. m. at the First Christian Church in Williamston by the Rev. Will Wallace and the Rev. Claude McDonald. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery in Williamston.

Mr. Manning, an attorney in partnership with Sam Underwood Jr. here, was a member of the First Christian Church of Greenville. He had lived in Greenville for about four years.

"is doing just fine" in recovering from illness. He predicted "he will soon be back in his normal routine."

Pate noted a smooth transition to inauguration of the semester system at ECU by "excellent planning and preparation." Planning for the switchover has been going on for some three years.

Also, he said, "we are beginning with our long-awaited medical school." Recruitment of an outstanding faculty and a "pioneer" class of 28 students "culminate over a decade of hard labor by Dr. Jenkins, Vice Chancellor Monroe, Dean Laupus and others who stood with them in the struggle.

Our goal of a medical school is now reached. However our next objective in this important health area will be equally challenging. We are totally committed to producing our share of the finest medical doctors in the nation, dedicated to the specialty of family practice. This achievement will complete our vision for this medical school."

He noted several new programs such as the master of science in nursing, environmental health and a program for college-level instruction of the deaf, plus new six-year programs. "We have approval to plan others," he said.

These many achievements reflect the outstanding leadership of Dr. Jenkins and the administration, and emphasize the superior quality of you who teach and guide our students as well as strive for excellence in your profession and discipline. Also reflected in these new programs are the superb cooperation and support we are given by President (William C.) Friday and his staff in the U N C General Administration."

To the faculty, Pate pledged "we will continue to place fair compensation for our people as a number one priority and we will also strive to achieve our goals in terms of growth and quality in programs and capital improvements."

Tampa Wins; Loses QB

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

John McKay had waited more than a year to experience the thrill of victory.

However, it took only one night to rediscover the agony of defeat.

It was a jubilant McKay who said, "This one counts for our pride," after his victory-starved Tampa Bay Buccaneers upset the Green Bay Packers 10-7, snapping a 19-game losing streak Saturday night in a National Football League pre-season game.

It was a more somber Tampa Bay coach who announced Sunday that No. 1 quarterback Mike Boryla had suffered a knee injury in the game and would be lost for the season.

"This is the most devastating single blow we've had," McKay said after learning that Boryla's torn ligaments in his right knee would have to be surgically repaired.

"It hurts us. The team seemed to identify with Mike while he was in there. We'll have to put him on the injured reserve list," he added.

Boryla, who started last season for Philadelphia, was signed by the Bucs in early June when the Eagles forgot to notify him that he would be kept during his contract-ending option year.

Derek Smethurst, who until last week was playing for the Tampa Bay Rowdies in the playoffs of the North American Soccer League, gave the Bucs a 3-0 lead with a 22-yard field goal in the second quarter.

Green Bay took a 7-3 lead in the third quarter on Randy Johnson's 28-yard scoring strike to Ollie Smith, but Tampa linebacker Richard Wood recovered a Green Bay fumble early in the fourth quarter, giving the Bucs the ball at the Packers' 32. Seven plays later, Eddie Williams scored on a one-yard plunge, giving Tampa Bay its first victory since 1976.

Other Saturday night games saw Denver beat Atlanta 10-2, New Orleans trim Buffalo 20-17, Chicago down Houston 14-10, Miami beat Dallas 20-14, San Diego whip the New York Giants 29-17 and Pittsburgh top the New York Jets 26-13.

In Sunday's games, San Francisco upset Los Angeles 23-

14 and Cincinnati edged Detroit 17-13. New England visits Philadelphia tonight.

Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw completed 13 of 16 passes for 125 yards and two touchdowns as the Steelers breezed past the Jets. Four of the completions and one of the TDs were to Lynn Swann.

Don Strock, trying to usurp Bob Griese as Miami's No. 1 quarterback, fired touchdown passes of 56 and 69 yards to running back Nat Moore as the Dolphins remained unbeaten in exhibition play.

James Harris threw two touchdown passes, a 45-yard bomb to Charlie Joiner and a 31-yard toss to Johnny Rodgers, and Don Goode scored on a 34-yard interception return as the Chargers won their second game in three preseason outings, against the Giants.

New Orleans' Bobby Scott threw a 40-yard pass to Larry Burton, setting up a one-yard scoring burst by Tony Galbreath that gave the Saints a 20-10 lead with three minutes left in their game against Buffalo. The Bills closed out the scoring when quarterback Ken Johnson hit running back Curtis Craig Penrose threw a 28-yard touchdown pass to Riley Odoms and the Denver defense held the puncheonless Atlanta Falcons to 145 total yards and seven first downs as the Broncos remained undefeated.

Chicago scored on two fourth-down plays, handing Houston its third loss in a row. Mike Phipps hit Johnny Musso with a two-yard scoring pass and Roland Harper scored from a yard out in the fourth quarter for the Bears.

Quarterback Jim Plunkett tallied on a five-yard run, putting San Francisco ahead, then heaved a 48-yard scoring strike to Kenny Harrison as the 49ers posted their first victory this season, against Los Angeles. The Rams took a 14-0 lead on touchdown passes by Pat Haden and Vince Ferragamo, but their offense sputtered in the second half when Joe Namath, working mostly with second-stringers, completed only six of 15 passes and was sacked several times.

Archie Griffin scored on a six-yard run, capping a 71-yard scoring drive with the opening kickoff as Cincinnati defeated Detroit. Rick Kane, a rookie running back, scored twice on one-yard plunges for Detroit.

Vikings Look To Experienced Backfield As Key To Success

By JIM KYLE

Reflector Sports Writer

D. H. Conley football coach Chuck Dunn is counting on an experienced offensive backfield to carry the Viking football hopes this season and he will put his squad to the test early as Conley gets a jump on most other high schools in the area by opening the 1977 campaign Friday night.

The Vikings kick off a ten-game slate by travelling to East Carteret this week before hosting West Carteret the following Friday. The first Eastern Carolina Conference game for Conley will be a Sept. 23 encounter at North Lenoir.

"Basically, we have a mixture of a few experienced players and a whole lot of inexperienced players," Dunn said before the Vikings, Friday night scrimmage game. "How well we do this season depends on how well the inexperienced players mature as they get experience."

Much of the Viking experience lies in that offensive backfield where three starters from last year's squad return.

At quarterback, Jeff Allen (5-8, 150), a junior, is battling with sophomore Curtis Spencer (5-10, 145). Allen was a starter for the Vikes in the final three games of last season after senior Jeff McDaniel was hurt. The fight for the starting spot is being "hotly contested," at this point, according to Dunn.

Three-year starter Nuggie Worthington returns to his fullback spot. The 5-10, 170-pound senior is "the kind of player with a whole lot of desire," according to Dunn. "He is a good blocker and, for his size, a hard runner."

Senior Bernard Hawkins (6-0, 165) is expected to get the nod at the halfback spot as Conley sets in a Wing-T or I formation. "He's got good quickness and speed. He is a second-year starter and was our leading ground-gainer last year."

The only backfield spot which lacks experience is wingback.

Peter Carmon will be the probable starter there. The 5-11, 155-pound junior was a starter in the Viking defensive backfield last year, however, so he has plenty of game time.

Kenny Phillips (6-0, 175) gives depth at the fullback slot. The junior is also a starting linebacker, while the other offensive backfield reserves are sophomores, Dunn said. They are Curtis Joyner (5-6, 145) and Victor Evans (5-10, 150) at tailback and Arnell Credle at wingback. Credle (5-8, 145) is also a defensive back, who is expected to start.

The offensive line is the team's big question mark, according to Dunn. It features three experienced players, who should all start, but little experience beyond that.

Tight end Randy Edens (6-1, 160) is a three-year starter and the senior is a good blocker and receiver, Dunn said. Tackle Allen Meeks (6-2, 230) and center Holden Rouse (6-1, 160) are the only other returnees in the offensive line. Both are juniors.

Filling in at the other tackle will be senior Dale Bailey (6-0,

North Gets 1st Victory

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Andy North almost skipped the tournament that provided him the breakthrough into the winners' ranks of the pro golf tour.

"I was so discouraged after the PGA, really down, I didn't know if I'd even come here," North said after winning his first pro title by two strokes in the rich Westchester Classic.

"This is the screwiest game there's ever been," the 6-foot-4, 27-year-old North said. "You can play two rounds exactly the same and shoot 65 one day and 80 the next. It's just the difference of the ball bouncing right or wrong, making a putt here and there.

"It's a crazy way to try to make a living."

North, who missed three cuts in a row when he was playing well and feeling good, came to suburban New York with an aching back and some reluctance. And he became the ninth first-time winner this season, shooting a final-round par-71 over the hilly, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course.

His 12-under-par total of 272 was two strokes better than former Masters champion George Archer, who came out of the pack and took second with a final-round 67.

"I never really got that close," Archer said. "He (North) made a couple of key putts to save par on the 13th and 14th. That left him four in front with four to play and I didn't have much chance after that."

"He knew he had it won and got a little careless at the end. I really made a charge at him, but he never lost control."

"I'm just glad we finally ran out of holes," said North, who bogeyed two of his last three. "They say the first one is the hardest to win. I'm glad it finally came."

North started the mild, hazy final round with a three-stroke lead, and wasn't really challenged. His closest pursuers took themselves out with a variety of problems, a double bogey-bogey start by Leonard Thompson, double bogey-bogey by Howard Twitty on the eighth and ninth holes, and a double bogey by Tom Weiskopf on the 11th.

Weiskopf, however, hung on for third at 72-276, four strokes back of the winner, with George Burns, 66, and Andy Bean, 69, next at 277.

Masters and British Open champion Tom Watson was another shot back after a closing 71. He beat Jack Nicklaus, who had a closing 66, by one stroke. Watson picked up $10,200 from the total purse of $300,000, lifting his season's money-winning total to $291,687. He is within sight of becoming only the third golfer to earn $300,000 or more in a single season. Nicklaus now has $273,342.

North more than doubled his season's earnings with the $60,000 first prize and now has won $112,687. Archer won $34,200 and, with $72,568, is assured of a spot in the top 60 money-winners and an exemption for next year.

Robinson Will Retire

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)

Brooks Robinson, whose defensive exploits have earned him a reputation as one of the finest third basemen in baseball history, says his first World Series was his biggest thrill in a 23-year professional career.

"The 1966 series has to be the biggest thrill of my career," the Baltimore great said Sunday after announcing his retirement as a player. "We were in four, but the first was the best."

He also said winning the American League's Most Valuable Player award in 1964 and a pinch-hit, game-winning homer he hit in April of this season also ranked as special personal moments.

Robinson, who became known as "The Human Vacuum Cleaner" for his defensive excellence, was regarded the premier third baseman of his time. His defensive ability brought him 16 consecutive "Gold Glove" awards from 1960 through 1975.

The Orioles, who are embroiled in a furious battle with the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox for the American League East title, asked Robinson to step down because they wanted to activate catcher

Rick Dempsey. "Our club will be a little stronger this way," said Robinson. "I wish I had 20 more years."

"I knew when I came back I'd get a lot of playing time if the young guys didn't play well," said Robinson, 40. "Just the opposite happened though. The young guys have performed extremely well."

"It's not really that big of a transition since I've been a coach all year," he said.

Robinson said he would remain as a coach through this season, but that he would then leave baseball.

"I have no ambitions to be a coach or manager," said Robinson.

"Despite the logic of the move, it was a very difficult decision to make, considering Brooks' tremendous achievements and the love we all have for him," said Baltimore general manager Hank Peters.

Oklahoma Boasts Lots Of Speed

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The 1977 University of Oklahoma football team is hoping it can run its way to a sixth national championship.

The offensive backfield is loaded with speed burners who also happen to be big, and the tentative starting 11 on defense average a stunning 4.67 seconds in the 40-yard dash.

The Sooners' wishbone attack could field a quarterback and two backs who hit 4.5, and another back who has dipped to 4.35. But that's the second string.

The starting backfield will be composed of three 4.4 sprinters and one slow guy who'll trot along at 4.5. They're led by junior Thomas Lott, a 5-foot-11, 200-pounder who became the No. 1 quarterback midway through last season.

Coach Barry Switzer calls him "the best we've ever had." That includes such company as Jack Mildren and Steve Davis. Dean Blevins, a senior, is Lott's backup.

The only concern about Lott is his passing. A true halfback, Lott simply did not know how to pass last year and his statistics bore that out: 12 attempts, two completions, three interceptions.

"But I've worked hard in spring practice and this summer," Lott says. "I'm confident I can get the job done." If not, Blevins is a proven passer and probably will get the nod in obvious passing situations.

Besides Lott, there are two other 4.4 sprinters in fullback Kenny King, up from 190 to 210, and left half Elvis Peacock, 205. King, a junior, was the team's leading rusher last year, and Peacock, a senior, had an excellent spring. He may be set for the super year everybody was predicting when he came to OU as a Florida prep star.

At right half, sophomore Bill Sims and junior Jim Rogers will fight it out. Sims is bigger, 210, but Rogers, 190, has the edge in experience.

The offensive line is a plus. Only one starter is gone — All-American tackle Mike Vaughan. His backup, Sam Clapham, a 6-6, 284-pound senior, will take over.

The rest of the line is intact, including tight end Victor Hicks, a 6-3, 250-pound junior who has started since his freshman year. Switzer says he's "the best in the Big Eight."

The major problems come on defense. The end slots are a shambles. Out of the top three prospective starters, two are injured and one fell victim to grades. Whoever starts there when the Sooners open at home against Vanderbilt on Sept. 10 will be inexperienced.

Karate Champion

Tony Lopez of Greenville smiles from a fighting stance following his victory over Lenny Ferguson in Charlotte Saturday for the World Super Lightweight karate championship. Ferguson was unable to answer the bell for the fifth round of the scheduled nine-round bout.

Lopez Takes World Title

CHARLOTTE — Tony Lopez of Greenville became the super lightweight world karate champion here this weekend when his opponent in the title bout, Lenny Ferguson of Los Angeles, was unable to answer the bell for the fifth round of the scheduled nine-round fight.

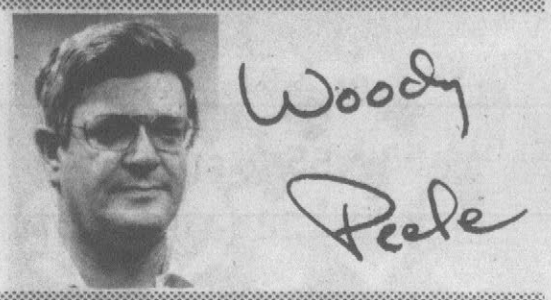

Demetrius Edwards of Greenville won the East Coast light-heavyweight championship in a seven-rounder against Danny McCall.

Bill McDonald, trainer-coach for both fighters, said of the bouts, "I was worried in the first round of Tony's match at Lenny dropped him with a hard kick to the stomach. Tony took the 8-count and was able to continue."

"In the fourth round, Tony landed a hard round kick to Lenny's head and Lenny was out on his feet. When the bell sounded for the fifth, Lenny's manager stopped the fight."

McDonald said Edwards dominated his opponent throughout the fight, which went the distance, picking up a decision.

Two other local fighters, Jerry Leggett and Burly Gardner, lost matches here this weekend.

Woody Peete

While only time will tell the outcome, Duke University is reportedly putting a lot of emphasis on the attendance figures for its game with East Carolina on September 10.

Unconfirmed reports from Duke say that the attendance at the game will determine whether future games with East Carolina will be scheduled.

East Carolina has drawn well in previous games with N.C. State and North Carolina, and Duke is looking for the same type crowds at its game with the Pirates.

East Carolina's game last year with N.C. State was officially recorded at 49,700, although many observers said that it was a bigger crowd than the listed State record to 50,700 a year earlier against North Carolina. It still is the third largest in Carter Stadium. A total of 49,000 attended the ECU-UNC game last fall, a sellout. Three other games in Carter, and two others in Kenan have pulled in more than 40,000 fans.

But there is a general acknowledgement that State and Carolina draw their own fans, despite the foe. Naturally, East Carolina draws too.

But Duke's record over the past few years has been less than spectacular.

Wallace Wade Stadium in Durham seats 44,000, and can expand to over 50,000 with temporary bleachers.

But in the past eight years, Duke has averaged only 27,373 fans per game. There were 39 home games during those days, and they were against such foes as North Carolina, N.C. State, ACC champion Maryland, Penn State, and Georgia Tech.

Naturally, we hope that Duke and East Carolina will sign for more games in the future. But we don't think that the Blue Devil athletic bosses should expect a full-house just because East Carolina is coming to town.

After all, anything over 30,000 is an improvement.

Sales Going Well

Reports from both East Carolina and Durham, however, are that sales are going well.

We have reports from over the weekend that only some 2,500 tickets remain for sale for the N.C. State-East Carolina game, virtually assuring another sellout crowd. Student tickets at East Carolina, by the way, go on sale tomorrow.

Meanwhile, ticket sales for the Duke game are running a little slower, but that is to be expected since the emphasis is now on State. A report from Durham is that sales are running ahead of schedule for the game, however, and Duke officials are more optimistic than they were several weeks ago.

East Carolina Athletic Director Bill Cain notes that it is "imperative" that the Pirate fans give full support to the Duke game, if the series is to have any hopes of being continued.

The "H" You Say

The letter "H" probably keeps popping up in the minds of Pat Dye and his staff. Seems like everywhere they turn, there is a player with a name that begins with that name.

Last year, we had the H&H Trucking Company when Willie Hawkins and Eddie Hicks started running the ball all over the field. They're getting competition from Sam Harrell now, adding another "H" to the backfield.

And across the line, there is Gerald Hall, Steve Hale and Willie Holley in the defensive backfield.

There's also another Hawkins on the team, Michael, a freshman running back, and there are also two Butlers, Rocky and Dean, both freshmen.

There will also be two Smiths, Mitchell and Nelson, both on the offensive line.

You might also hear the name Kepyale again. Captain Crunch's little brother David is on the team, along with Bill Pinkney, Reggie's little brother.

Going back to the "H's" there are a total of 16 players on the team, counting freshmen recruits whose last name starts with that letter, more than any other letter can claim.

Quiz Answer

Here's the answer to our baseball quiz of last week. Remember a team gets three triples, a double, two singles and a pair of stolen bases without scoring.

The first batter hits a triple, and is thrown out trying to extend it into an inside-the-park homer. The second does the same thing. The third batter doubles, and the second reaches on a base hit to deep short, failing to move the runner on second up. Both them steal up a base. The next batter hits one on a chop down the third base line, beating it out for another infield single, loading the bases, since neither runner could advance because of the location of the ball.

That gives two triples, a double, two singles and two stolen bases.

The final batter hits the ball out of the park. As the three baserunners down the third base line, excited about the grand-slam, they form a welcoming committee IN FRONT of the plate, forgetting in their excitement to cross the plate. The instant the batter passes the first of them, he is out, and becomes credited with only a triple.

While the total sequence has not happened to anyone's knowledge, the final part—the false homer—has.

180), Dunn said, while the guard spots will be taken by junior Linwood Pugh (5-9, 165) and senior Buster Payton (5-9, 170).

Wide receiver Tim McLanahan, the second-leading pass catcher on the team last year, returns at split end. The 5-10, 150-pound senior has "real good hands," Dunn said, to "make up for his speed."

Overall, the offense has "a long way to go right now," Dunn said. Although depth is a problem, "potentially, we can have a good offense. We can throw or run," according to Dunn.

On defense, the Vikings have "a lot of new people who will probably be starting," Dunn said. Two experienced linemen, linebackers and defensive backs return to anchor the unit, but the rest of the places will be taken by new players, Dunn said.

Tackle Broderick Best (6-3, 200) and nose guard Danny Barrett (5-9, 165) are the returnees in the line. They are both seniors. The other tackle spot will be filled by sophomore Ben Daniels (6-2, 260), while the ends will be senior Dale Bailey (6-0, 180) and sophomore Victor Evans (5-10, 150).

The two leading tacklers on last year's team return to take over linebacking duties for the 1977 squad, Dunn said. They are junior Kenny Phillips (6-0, 175) and senior Mike Phillips (5-10, 175). They aren't related, but both go after the football, Dunn said.

Senior Jonathan Waller (5-10, 165), who started for the first half of last season before an injury, joins McLanahan as the experience in the defensive backfield. McLanahan is a second-year starter. They will be joined by Credle and sophomore James Chapman (5-6, 135).

The defensive backs are "all quick, all good hitters with a nose for the ball," Dunn said. "We could have a good, solid backfield."

Dunn sees no "clear-cut favorite" in the ECC race this season, although Farmville Central, Ayden-Grifton, Southern Nash and Greene Central should all be strong. In addition, North Lenoir could be a threat, according to Dunn.

As for the Vikings, "I think if the younger guys come around and the experienced men provide good leadership and we don't get any injury trouble, we can be right there with any of them."

Rogers Wins Roanoke Event

Top-seeded Jimmy Rogers of Tarboro won the men's finals of the Roanoke Tennis Tournament by defeating third-seeded William Abeyounis of Bethel, 6-3, 7-5 here Sunday.

Rogers teamed up with Walter Connors of Rocky Mt. to take the men's doubles with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Ron Hignite and Wes Hankins of Greenville.

In veteran's competition, Craig Reid of Rocky Mount downed Greenville's Tom Sayetta 6-3, 6-2 to win the singles finals and Herbert Ward and Henry Rogers of Williamston won the doubles with a 6-4, 6-4 win over Reid and Billy Jenkins of Rocky Mt.

Anthony Giacomini of Farmville defeated Kelly Abeyounis of Bethel to win the seniors finals, 6-3, 6-1.

Their Bets On Understanding

By JACK CHEEVERS
Associated Press Writer
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — What would you think if Don Quixote and Hamlet clashed in a comic joust on your television screen to settle whether Shakespeare or Cervantes was the better writer?

The producers of "Villa Alegre," a show aimed at kids aged 4 to 8 who speak Spanish or English, are betting that their following message will come through — different doesn't mean better or worse where culture is concerned.

The Public Broadcasting Service is banking that the kids will get the message, too. It has tapped the year-old public TV show to lead off this season's after-school lineup, just ahead of such heavyweights as "Sesame Street" and "Electric Company."

Endorsed by the National Education Association, "Villa Alegre" is established as the model for a new kind of show aimed at an estimated five million bilingual youngsters in the United States, as well as their monolingual brothers and sisters.

The show — its name means "Happy Village" — uses animation, Latino music and Spanish and English-speaking actors to teach lessons on subjects such as energy and human relations.

Most of it occurs in a small village, where characters like El Capitan, Dona Luz and Dr. Tina act in sketches designed to help young viewers improve communications and problem-solving skills.

The skits also help demonstrate bilingual benefits. In the Don Quixote-Hamlet squabble, Hamlet's English answer to Quixote's question posed in Spanish helps clarify the question.

The show's basic message, says producer Rene Cardenas, is to "validate cultural differences" by polishing the image of the bilingual child's minority culture while exposing English-speaking kids to a variety of American ethnic groups.

"American education has traditionally reflected a kind of white, Bible-belt lifestyle," Dr. Cardenas said. "We want to show how much of American culture is derived from different racial and cultural tributaries."

Last year, a special Nielsen ratings survey showed that about 4.8 million children were watching "Villa Alegre" daily, compared to 14.7 million for "Sesame Street." But Cardenas says the two are not alike and should not be considered together.

"Sesame Street" is like a warm, sticky womb," he said. "Villa Alegre" teaches children to thrust out, to take advantage of the outside world."

The show currently appears on about 250 stations, plus 50 cable TV outlets. Dr. Dave Berkman, who administers federal

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A most interesting time of changes, new beginnings. Avoid getting involved in some confusing situation that can bring adverse results unless care is used with all facts and figures concerned. Some long-time ambitions can be attained now if looked at from a fresh and new angle. Be outgoing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan to add new interests to current ones and become more affluent, interesting. Put hunches to work if you are not sure how to proceed.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make the collections that are possible and due and pay bills without delay. Do whatever will bring true rapport between you and the one you love. Avoid one who has an axe to grind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to understand better what your associates desire of you and state your own expectations as well. A situation arises which shows you how to handle some civic matter well. Be active.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) First be sure you have all the facts and figures; then you can get your work done properly. A more mature person will assist you if you contact early.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can be happy at the amusements you like with congenials so make plans early for such. A special thought for your mate brings good results. Avoid one who could bring you trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how best to handle those who dwell with you so that your lives are more ideal. Invite an important person to your home. Avoid the temptation to overspend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Stop deliberating so much and put your ideas in operation since you can accomplish a good deal thereby. Go after the information you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate on adding to present assets instead of depleting what you have, spending foolishly. Listen to what a money expert says.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can advance more quickly if you do those things at which you are most proficient. Enjoy company of a good friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go to the right sources for information you need and then use it wisely. Show true affection for a loved one. Take no chances with reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take time to help friends with their problems and gain support yourself. Sociability is the keynote, but after your work is done.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact powerful persons you know and gain their aid for your projects, interests. Avoid one who could lead you in the wrong direction.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to make big plans and carry through with them provided you equip with an adequate education. A good speaker here who can relate well with others. The field of imports and exports is especially fine here. Add foreign languages to the curricula.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Sickness After Drinking Binge

Twice, after a night of carousing and drinking hard liquor, I became nauseated and vomited blood. When I behaved myself again, this stopped. I still worry that I might possibly have trouble. — Mr. E.L., Mo. Dear Mr. L.:

Nowhere in your letter did you indicate that when you became a "good boy" you went to your doctor to find out if the drinking binge was the only reason for your vomiting blood.

The condition you describe is technically known as "hematemesis." Since you have identified the possible relationship between hard drinking and this occurrence, the chances are that you are correct.

Yet there are many other reasons that could be responsible. Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis, especially in heavy drinkers, may be the cause. These conditions in the liver can, in a complex way, produce enlargement of the veins in the esophagus. Sometimes, one of the veins breaks and vomiting of blood occurs.

There are probably dozens of other reasons to account for your experience. Stop worrying and go to the doctor. In the meantime, you might stop all that drinking.

Whenever I sneeze I lose my water. It's most embarrassing. — Mrs. D.A., Mich.

Dear Mrs. A.: Bladder disturbances frequently occur in women who have given birth to a number of children. Stretching of the muscles and the ligaments that support the bladder and the uterus may be an aftermath.

Some times, the urinary bladder may bulge into the vagina and be responsible for frequency of urination, inadequacy of emptying the bladder, and losing urine after sneezing, laughing or coughing. Incidentally, this can also occur in women who have not had any children, but it probably happens less frequently to them.

When this condition becomes really bothersome, a vaginal plastic repair is performed. The operation is most gratifying because, within two days, these unpleasant symptoms usually disappear.

In some cases, a pessary is used, but this is not nearly as effective as that which results from any one of the modern, refined and excellent surgical procedures that are now available.

Simple examination may reveal whether there is any other cause for your discomfort.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Recent History Shows Presidential Defense Is Slim Reed To Aides

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another time, another president went to the defense of an embattled aide and friend, saying he admired the man, respected his integrity, needed him in the White House.

But Dwight D. Eisenhower's support did not settle the problems of Sherman Adams. They got worse and three months after that presidential endorsement, Adams resigned.

When congressional investigators reprimanded Harry Truman's old friend and military aide, Harry H. Vaughan, the president snorted an expletive to dismiss suggestions that he quit or be fired. Vaughan stayed.

Now President Carter has rallied dramatically to the side of Budget Director Bert Lance, whom he once described as one of the closest friends he has in the world.

The three cases differ, of course. While Vaughan and Adams denied wrongdoing, investigators found improprieties in their affairs.

That isn't so with Lance. To date, there have been only questions and allegations, and the one official finding in his case so far is that of federal banking investigators, who reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in his transactions.

Furthermore, Vaughan and Adams were accused of accepting or offering favors as White House officials. The questions raised about Lance involve his private affairs, before he came to the government.

But in another way, the three episodes are similar, for in each case, the target of inquiry and criticism was a personal friend of the president he served. In such circumstances, presidents tend to fight back, even if it is politically risky.

Carter is. His defense of Lance amounted to a dare to anyone to challenge the personal loan and banking practices that brought the budget director under government investigation.

The President said that as far as he is concerned, the questions were answered and the matter was settled when federal banking officials reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in Lance's banking transactions.

But the report was not quite as sweeping as Carter made it sound. Indeed, Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann said Lance's affairs raised unresolved questions as to what should constitute acceptable banking practices.

And whatever the merits of the case, it is not likely to lapse into the past tense as quickly as Carter tried to put it there. The investigations are not over, Republicans are hungry for issues, and Lance may yet be a political target.

After all, Carter made the rules. He set tough standards in his campaign statements, and in the code of conduct he fixed for administration officeholders. Carter said it was important to avoid not only wrongdoing but also, wherever possible, even an appearance of wrongdoing.

Against this background, Carter's efforts to pronounce the Lance ordeal at an end may have been premature. The political opposition hasn't spoken yet, but it probably will.

Carter Enjoys Rustic Retreat

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — Before Jimmy Carter took office, there was talk about saving money by closing Camp David, the presidential retreat about 60 miles north of Washington.

Then the new President had a chance to look around the hideaway, a kind of personal country club with a membership of one. The talk stopped.

Carter returned to the White House on Sunday after his first extended stay in Maryland's Catoctin mountains. It was his seventh trip to Camp David and every sign indicates he enjoys the retreat, with its rustic atmosphere, its tennis court and its swimming pool.

Camp David gives Carter privacy and relief from the highly organized schedule he follows at the White House. "There is no set routine," says Tim Kraft, the President's appointments secretary and one of a handful of aides who accompanied the Carters on their vacation last week.

Carter is free to put on casual clothes and wander alone through the woods. Or he can indulge his interest in softball.

But the symbols of the presidency are never far away.

A Marine in a red and blue dress uniform raises the President's flag on the Camp David flagpole the instant the President's helicopter touches down.

When Carter leaves, a Marine stands at attention and then marches to the flagpole to lower the flag the instant the helicopter lifts off.

The camp is situated in the Catoctin Mountain Park, run by the National Park Service. It is surrounded by two chain-link fences topped by barbed wire. An electric fence runs between the two other fences. The perimeter is patrolled by rifle-carrying Marines in battle fatigues.

Every President since Franklin Roosevelt has used the presidential retreat. FDR called it Shangri-La. Dwight Eisenhower renamed it Camp David, after his grandson, David Eisenhower. It is about 20 miles south of the Eisenhower farm in Gettysburg, Pa.

Richard Nixon retreated to Camp David for weeks on end as the Watergate scandal unfolded and chipped away at his administration. He reportedly enjoyed the rustic atmosphere so much that even during the height of the 1973-74 energy crisis he turned his air conditioning on full blast so he could keep the fireplace in his lodge glowing during the summer.

When Carter and his family make the 30-minute helicopter flight from the White House, they guard their privacy jealously. Few staff members accompany them.

Occasionally, they invite a friend to join them. Carter's confidant, Charles Kirbo, spent a night there last week and the parents of one of Carter's daughters-in-law visited in February.

But most of the time Carter spends his weekends at Camp David with his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy and, occasionally, with one or two of his sons and their wives.

The FARM SCENE

By Leroy James
Agricultural Extension Agent

As we approach the end of the 1977 peanut season, ask yourself two questions: am I spending $10 to $20 an acre that's not necessary? Am I losing $100 or more an acre that I don't have to?

If your answers to both of these questions aren't "no" they should be.

If you're among some growers in North Carolina you may be using a nematode at a cost of $10 and $20 an acre — when you don't have a problem with nematodes. Or you could be losing $100 or more an acre if you have a nematode problem and are not using a nematocide.

We have found that nematodes are likely to be a problem on about 15 percent of the peanut acreage.

How To Detect Problem Fields

You can find out if you have root knot nematodes by looking for symptoms and/or taking soil samples.

Root knot nematodes feed on roots and pods. Root damage reduces the ability of the plant to take up water and nutrients. This causes stunting, yellowing of the foliage and sometimes death of the plant. Root knot nematodes may cause yield losses of several hundred pounds per acre without showing above ground symptoms. The best time to take soil samples is while peanuts are in the field within the last 30 days before digging. Samples can be taken from corn or other fields where peanuts are to be planted next year, but the results are not as reliable. The reason for this is that there are other types of root knot which do not feed on peanuts.

Before sampling a field, divide it into five to ten acre blocks. One sample should represent no more than five to ten acres. Nematodes are usually present in high numbers only in certain areas within a field.

For further information, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 758-1196.

Two Added To ECU Faculty

ECU News Bureau

Gerhard W. Kalmus and Andrew N. Ash have joined the faculty of the East Carolina University Department of Biology.

Dr. Kalmus holds degrees from the University of California at Berkeley and Rutgers University and is a specialist in embryology. His career has included teaching positions at Rutgers and Pennsylvania Universities.

Among his research activities have been projects concerned with cellular and biochemical aspects of chick development which he has reported in numerous published articles in scientific journals.

He is a member of the American Institute of Biological Sciences, the American Society of Zoologists and the Tissue Culture Association.

Dr. Kalmus will hold the rank of assistant professor at ECU.

Andrew Ash, who will assume a lecturer's position at ECU during the fall semester, has degrees from Virginia Military Institute and N. C. State University and is a candidate for the PhD degree from the University of Toronto.

His field specialization is population ecology and his research has included studies of the effects of environmental changes on populations of blue grouse.

His professional memberships include the British Ecological Society, the American Association of Naturalists, the Ecological Society of America and two major wildlife organizations.

Set Classes In Sign Language

ECU News Bureau

Classes in beginning and intermediate sign language will be offered at East Carolina University during the fall semester.

The non-credit sign language instruction is sponsored by ECU's Program for Hearing-Impaired Students and is available free of charge to ECU students, faculty and staff members, and interested persons in the local community.

About 200 persons were involved in classes offered during the summer sessions. The sign language classes were planned in anticipation of the admission of deaf students to ECU this fall and instruction involves basic skills of manual communication, both fingerspelling and signing techniques.

These classes will meet on Tuesday and Thursday on the second floor of Joyner Library; beginning 3-4 p.m.; intermediate, 3-4 p.m.; beginning, 7-8:30 p.m.; intermediate 7-8:30 p.m.

Anniversary For Gospel Group

The Gospel Ensemble of Farmville will celebrate their third anniversary Saturday, Aug. 27, at St. Delight Missionary Baptist Church, Wailstonburg, at 6:30 p.m.

Registration will begin at six o'clock. Choirs and choruses in the surrounding area are invited.

Repurchase To Be Expensive

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) —

Former New River Valley land owners, who will get the chance to buy their property back next month, may find the price of the land has doubled or tripled since they sold it to the Appalachian Power Co. in the late 1960s.

The company acquired the land in Ashe and Alleghany counties and Grayson County, Va., for a hydroelectric power plant. But Congress last year designated the New River as part of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Federal law prohibits dams on streams in the system.

An independent appraiser will put a market value on the 16,346 acres, which company figures indicate were purchased for $5.8 million.

Current land valuations in Ashe and Alleghany counties total $2,372,215. The Virginia land is taxed on an appraised valuation, instead of at fair market value. The appraised value of $2,390,600 is much lower than actual market value.

"We have not made any studies or come to any conclusions as to what the land might bring," said W.A. McClung, company public affairs director.

But Worth B. Folger of Sparta, a lawyer who represented the company in Alleghany County land purchases, said property values had increased two or three times since the land was bought in the late 1960s.

Previous owners, not their children or relatives, will be offered the land first, McClung said. If they are not interested, the general public will be allowed to submit bids.

The utility company could have retained the land, but decided instead to sell it when the project was blocked.

Swim Show

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department girls synchronized swimming show will be held Wednesday, August 24, at 7 p.m.

The girls will swim to several selections of music and perform stunts and routines taught them during a 12-week session of classes.

The event will be at the Greenville City Pool. No admission is charged, and the public is invited to attend.

In the event of rain, the show will be held Thursday, August 25 at the same time.

More To Fight Forest Fires

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An additional 38 North Carolina state forestry workers were dispatched Sunday to help fight forest fires in the western United States.

Tom Hegele of the State Forest Service said the request for additional crews came Saturday night. The relief firefighters will go to a command center in Idaho, and from there will be sent to wherever they are needed most.

Some 300 North Carolinians are manning fire lines in the west, mostly in California and Oregon.
