History-Makers At ECU

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN and RICHARD E. MEYER Associated Press Writers WASHINGTON (AP) — Bert Lance pledged stock dividends as part of the collateral for a $2,625,000 loan from a New York bank, then broke the agreement by putting up the same stock dividends as collateral for a loan from another bank.

closed in bank records of Lance's personal loans, made public by federal banking investigators. Government officials interviewed Thursday said they saw no violation of federal law. But Robert A. Baer Jr., special assistant to the U.S. comptroller of the currency, said, "Lance may have violated a contract he had with Manufacturers Hanover."

don't dispute that up until the end of the documentary record of the loan. Manufacturers thought they were going to get the stock dividends, they didn't get them and the language that Lance signed indicated that he would in fact send them any such dividends? "That's all true," Dietsch replied. "It's all there and it's all in the written record. It's also true that the loan was not called. It's also, I think, true that there were additional discussions about what was adequate collateral on the terms of the loan."

ABUSE OF ELDERLY

I know an elderly man who is being abused by his adult children, mentally, emotionally, and at times even physically. Yet when the police are called, they say it's a domestic situation that they can't touch.

Report the situation to the Pitt County Department of Social Services. The agency must, by law, begin an investigation within 72 hours.

An investigation will be done, even if you report the situation anonymously, not even giving the Social Services person you talk to your name.

According to Beverly Wheeler, the Adult Services social worker we talked to, though, a case of adult abuse, neglect or exploitation (which is the way the N. C. Protective Services for Adults law describes such cases) has never been taken to court in Pitt County.

Vance Briefs Japan Premier On China Talk

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer TOKYO (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew from Peking to Tokyo today to brief Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda on his visit with China's new leaders and relay President Carter's concern over a nuclear plant Japan is planning.

Vance and Fukuda first met in the presence of their aides, and then huddled alone for 40 minutes, Japanese spokesmen said. Details of the talks were not disclosed, but Japanese sources said they included discussion of Japan's plans to build a nuclear reprocessing plant 60 miles northeast of Tokyo.

Vance handed Fukuda a message from Carter, his aides said. Carter's special nuclear nonproliferation negotiator, Gerard C. Smith, was expected to arrive here Saturday for further talks on the reprocessing plant.

Japanese sources said Fukuda also raised the question of U.S.-Japan trade. The U.S. government is known to be critical of Japan's $5 billion trade surplus.

Vance ended his four-day visit to Peking "better informed" about the policies of the new Chinese regime, he said, but he made no claims that any progress had been made toward establishing diplomatic relations between the United States and China.

Following his 80-minute meeting Thursday with Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, it was clear Mao Tse-tung's successor did not soften the demand that the United States cut its diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist regime on Taiwan.

"The Chinese position on a number of matters relating to Taiwan has been expressed publicly," Vance told reporters. "I think it would be best if I left it there."

Nor would Vance discuss the substance of his talks with Hua, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and Foreign Minister Huang Hua. He said they were "very useful," and "I go away from here better informed, there is no question about that."

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was "impressed" by Vance's reports of the Chinese government's "constructive attitude."

The secretary of state said there would be further discussions with the Chinese on normalizing relations "in the months ahead." This could mean more meetings with Huang Hua when he attends the U.N. General Assembly in New York next month.

While he came to Tokyo, Vance sent his assistant secretary for Far Eastern affairs, Richard Holbrooke, to South Korea and Taiwan to brief the governments there on his Peking visit.

Along with the talks about China, Japanese officials were prepared to argue with Vance about the Carter administration's efforts to curb foreign production of plutonium because it can be used in nuclear weapons.

So far, American pressure has helped to delay operation of a $200-million nuclear fuel reprocessing plant in Tokai, 60 miles northeast of Tokyo, because plutonium would be a byproduct. But Japanese officials are determined to go ahead with the project because otherwise the nuclear power industry they are developing to take the place of energy from imported oil would be entirely dependent on enriched uranium from abroad.

PLO Rejects

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — today rejected U.S. mediation efforts in the Middle East, denouncing "Zionist and United States imperialist plots to liquidate the Palestinian cause."

The rejection came in a communique issued after a lengthy meeting here of the 55-member central council, the PLO's policy-making body.

The communique appeared to contradict reports that the PLO was considering an American proposal that it accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 in return for recognition of the PLO by the United States.

By accepting the 1967 resolution, which laid the groundwork for Mideast negotiations the Palestinian organization would recognize Israel's right to exist and would in effect rescind its long-standing demand for the dismantling of the Jewish state.

Suzi Disclaims Knowledge Of Influence Role

By JIM ADAMS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Suzi Park Thomson says she gave parties for her friends in Congress and got help washing dishes from her guests. But she denies knowing about alleged South Korean attempts to buy influence in Congress.

The Korean-born Ms. Thomson said Thursday she naturally associated with people who are the focus of a House influence-buying investigation. She said she hosted parties for congressmen and U.S. and Korean officials, including a reputed Korean Central Intelligence Agency station chief, Gen. Kim Yung Hwan.

Speaking with reporters after a closed session with House ethics committee investigators, the former secretary to retired House Speaker Carl Albert said she did not know the Korean general was with the KCIA. She said she never was involved with the KCIA, and said she invited the general to parties only "because I liked him."

"You exaggerate my parties," she said. "I cooked and my guests washed dishes." However, she and her lawyer, Philip Hirschkop, said she did give five large parties as well as the small ones.

Ms. Thomson answered questions from House investigators for nearly five hours under threat of contempt of Congress action.

She had insisted twice before on answering questions only in public, saying she was afraid her closed-door answers would be leaked and distorted against her. But the committee threatened her with the contempt action on Wednesday.

Mrs. Thomson said she gave parties entirely on her own, not at the urging of any South Koreans, and said no South Koreans paid for them.

She said she knew both Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, a central figure in the investigation, and former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo.

Thousands Of Women Marching Today Down Pennsylvania Avenue

By PEGGY SIMPSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again, thousands of women demanding equal rights gathered here today to march down Pennsylvania Avenue.

When they tried it 64 years ago, they were met with jeers and heckling. This time, their leaders were invited to meet with the President.

President Carter, reiterating his support for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, arranged a morning ceremony to sign a Women's Equality Day proclamation.

In addition, congressional sources said Carter would name his daughter-in-law, Judy Carter, his personal emissary for the ERA.

Meanwhile, more than 70 groups organized a parade to coincide with the 57th anniversary of women's suffrage. March sponsors said they hoped to dramatize support for ERA from labor, women's, civil rights and church groups.

The proposed amendment, approved by 35 states, must win endorsement from three more by early 1979 if it is to become law.

On the eve of the march, 76 groups said they planned to send up to 50 persons each, many wearing white and carrying banners with the slogans that suffragettes hoisted while marching up Pennsylvania Avenue in marches in 1913 and 1917.

The ERA march is starting at the spot where the 1913 march was disrupted by hecklers and continuing to the White House. Then, across Pennsylvania Avenue, a rally is being held in Lafayette Park.

An antique trolley was provided for the frail suffragettes who marched decades ago, and at least one feminist mother, former White House counsel Barbara Kilberg, planned to pull her two young tots in a toy wagon.

Odessa Komer, vice president of the United Auto Workers, said the march was partly to "tell the President that as a man from the South, he certainly could pull in three more states."

She said the march is a reminder to Carter that thousands of women voted for him because of his pledge to do all he can to win ERA ratification.

"It's kicking off the last campaign of the ERA," said Eleanor Smeal, head of the National Organization for Women. "This shows the overwhelming support for it from a tremendous diversity of groups," she said.

The original sponsors of the march today were NOW, the National Women's Party, the League of Women Voters and the Federation of Business and Professional Women.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are forecast today for a broad band of states ranging from the Great Lakes region through the northern Plains states and into the Rocky Mountain region.

By The Associated Press
Temperatures have become some cooler across North Carolina, thanks to a front that has become stationary to the south of the state, and high pressure is building along the middle Atlantic coast as the front weakens.

This is resulting in variable cloudiness across the northern portion of the state and mostly cloudy skies over the southern and mountain sections. This situation will continue through Saturday, with a chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms over southern and mountain sections. Mild temperatures were expected to prevail today and tomorrow, ranging from the mid 70s to the mid 80s with nighttime lows from around 60 in the mountains to around 70 along the coast.

High temperatures around North Carolina Thursday were far different from July readings that bumped around the 100-degree mark. Thursday's highs included 77 at Greensboro and 79 at Elizabeth City. Hickory had 80 and Raleigh and Fayetteville were no warmer than 81. Asheville had a high of 80, Wilmington 82 and Charlotte 84.

Showers are also anticipated for the Mississippi Valley. Temperatures throughout the nation are generally expected to be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

$124.95 Day In Greenville

The Greenville Tobacco Market recorded an average of $124.95 per hundred pounds on Thursday as 1,139,323 pounds of tobacco sold for $1,423,592.

Stabilization receipts accounted for 2.24 per cent of total sales, according to the sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, J. N. Bryan.

Top practical price paid yesterday was $1.43 per pound, he said, with some of the top quality offerings sold to buying companies for $1.44 to $1.47 per pound.

Offerings consisted of leaf, cutters, lugs, primings and non-descript, Bryan said, with an increase noted in the latter category.

Season totals stand at 16,969,255 pounds sold so far for $18,537,032, an average of $109.24 per hundred pounds.

Opening Day School For Pre-Schoolers

St. Paul's Episcopal Church Day School for Pre-School Children will begin the new school year at 9 a. m. Wednesday, Sept. 7.

There will be two classes for four-year-olds, meeting on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays and two classes for three-year-olds meeting on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Teaching again this year will be Mrs. Cyndra Gasperini and Ms. Ebbie Jo Rogerson, both of whom hold B. S. and Master's degrees from East Carolina University in child development and family relations.

The four-year-old classes are limited to 12 students and at present are filled to capacity. There are a few vacancies in the three-year-old classes, each of which will be limited to 10 students. For further information' one may call Mrs. Gasperini at 758-8101 or Ms. Rogerson at 758-4506.

In response to requests from parents, St. Paul's held an experimental two-year-old classes last spring. Results were favorable, so three separate classes for this age group will be held this school year: a one-day-a-week class and two two-day-a-week classes. Mrs. Paula Kirkland, who has an Elementary Education degree, and Mrs. Phoebe Caldwell, who has a nursing degree, will be the teachers. Each class will be limited to 10 children. Both are filled to capacity. One of the features of these classes is that a mother or father will be present at all class periods to assist.

The rector, the Rev. Lawrence Houston, holds chapel services twice-weekly for the older students. He said one of the goals for this year is to hold workshops and seminars for parents to assist them in learning what can be expected of children at different ages and to help identify unrealistic expectations of young children's capabilities.

Charge Son In Shooting

LA GRANGE, N.C. (AP) — The La Grange police chief's son, who had been fired as assistant chief because of "nerve problems" was arrested Thursday and charged with shooting and wounding his father.

Chief Walter H. (Jack) Willford was mowing his lawn Thursday, when a neighbor said a man drove up, jumped from his car and fired three shots at the police chief. The neighbor said the man's assailant chased him to the back yard and further gunshots rang out.

Jimmy Willford, 29, was captured four hours later and charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. He is being held on $10,000 bond, Lenoir County Sheriff Leo Harper said.

The elder Willford, who had been chief of the six-man La Grange police force for 28 years, was listed in stable condition in Wayne Memorial Hospital, where three bullets were removed from his legs and abdomen.

Authorities began searching for the younger Willford after talking with his father. Officers also cordoned off the town hall, which houses officials of the police commission that fired Jimmy Willford.

Police Commissioner Norwood Sutton said the man was dismissed July 1, because he "had nerve problems."

The son was arrested at his mobile home, just outside of La Grange at 4:30 p.m.

New Footwear Emphasizes Refinement

NEW YORK (AP)—“Refinement is the keynote for fall footwear, according to The Footwear Council. Elegance and a sweeping attention to detailing will be the hallmarks of men’s, women’s and children’s shoes.

The easy silhouettes and interesting textured fabrics of ready-to-wear will be complemented by glazed leathers, higher heels, and lots of new boots.

In men’s shoes, smooth highly polished leathers will be most important for dressy styles. Joining the ranks of browns and blacks will be a whole new range of lighter colors. Taupes, wheats and brightened greens will start going to the office. Styles will include tasseled (dressy) loafers, wing-tips, eyelet ties and plain-toed, ankle-high boots.

Understated trims and small metal touches will be the preferred details. Tassels, especially on dressy slip-ons, and soft graining mark this return to refinement. Patent leathers will begin to make inroads in the men’s areas, and the council predicts burgundy, wine and gray will become the new “must have” colors.

Updated classic looks are what will count for leisure wear. toes will be softer, blunter. The shape of this type shoe will be wider than dressy styles. Crepe soles and “hand-stitching” will share the spotlight along with Western-type boots with pitched heels, lumberjack boots, highly styled sneakers — look taken off the sports fields — and unlined moccasins.

Trend-setters will own more than one pair of boots. An absolute minimum would be a short pair to wear for dress, a riding boot, to tuck pants into, a Western pair, and perhaps a pair of lace-ups for riding one’s motorcycle.

Children will be just as fashionable as their elders, although many of their fashion statements will be visible only when their feet are off the ground. The kids are into “signature” footwear, says the council, but the interest here is on the sole!

The mainstays will be oblique toes, flat “earth shoe” type bottoms, heavy sculptured bottoms, crepe soles and wedge heels. Upper detailing will also show up strongly. That means lots of leather lacings, contrast and self-stitching, back tabs and padded collars — more influence from the athletic field.

Children’s styling will continue to be mostly “unisex” with the shoes, Western and hiking boots, fleece-lined boots, and moccasins finding favor with both boys and girls. Fashion looks for girls will include wood-based clogs, shiny “slicker” boots in bright colors, black patent t-strap (with gold trims for a very special dressy look). Boys want suction-soled oxfords, and “dressed down” boots and shoes with casual bottoms.

Smooth leathers will remain the No. 1 material for children’s shoes; but burnished leathers for boots and combinations of suede and smooth leathers will become more important.

Women’s shoe styles will closely follow major ready-to-wear classifications. Functional styling (the “great outdoors” look) will require casual-sport shoes and boots. Dressy shoes and boots will be worn with sportswear separates, the dressier feminine fashions will need sandals or open-shank shoes and dress boots. In general, heels will be higher and thinner, toes narrower.

Boots will complement culottes and gaucho skirts, and — in satin and velvet — will even be worn in the evening. Weather boots will become as stylish as they are functional, and rugged outdoor boots will move from mountain trail to shopping center as part of the Survival Look.

For daytime wear, closed toes and stacked heels will be essential. Crepe and rubber soles make news, too. And the pump is due for a return to the fashion forefront, the Footwear Council reports.

The oxford will probably be the most influential silhouette for wear with classic, tailored sportswear. Slip-ons, with hand-sewing, and penny moccasins will also be worn.

Evening styles are bare, open. Heels are high — up to 3 inches. Bottom interest will include wood, lucite, metallic finishes. Other important details will be ankle straps, mules, knots, gold trims.

Colors will range from clean earth tones, particularly for

WORK OR PLAY—Whatever the occasion, the fashion conscious man won’t have any trouble finding the perfect shoe this fall for his multifaceted lifestyle, according to The Footwear Council. (Three shoes at left from Lefcourt Shoes; shoes and boot on right from Church Shoes.)

sporty styles and cowboy boots, taupes, red-hued browns to chocolates. Black, wine rust and gray will be used for both day and evening styles. And for gala evenings, silver, gold, platinum and clear vinyl will be showing up at the best parties in town.

Fast Service And Smile Maketh The Salesclerk

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I work at a store with a girl I’ll call “Sue.” She’s a nice girl and very efficient, but she never smiles. When she says, “Thank you,” she sounds like a recording. No sincerity, no cheerfulness, just a long face and about as much personality as a robot.

I always smile when I wait on customers. I think that’s the way to get them to come back. Sue says the customers don’t care whether you smile or not. They come in to buy, she says, and if they’re satisfied, they’ll come back, regardless.

What’s your opinion?

BETTENDORF, IOWA

DEAR BETT: What customers want more than anything else are efficiency and courtesy—not smiles. The salesperson who is too busy chatting with another salesperson to notice when a customer is waiting, or the clerk who can’t make change or write up a sales slip efficiently will never compensate with a smile.

But the salesperson who is courteous, efficient, ready to serve and smiles, too—ah, her price is above rubies, her paycheck shall runneth over, and her boss will rise up and call her “buyer.”

DEAR ABBY: I’m a guy, age 18. Last night I dated a 17-year-old girl because I liked her looks and wanted to get to know her better.

Like most guys, I tried to see how far I could get with her. After one wrong move, she hauled off and slapped my face really hard.

Abby, I never knew a slap could feel that good. I wanted to thank her for slapping me!

I wish you’d advise more girls to use that technique. I sure have a lot of respect for that girl now. Just because a guy puts up a little fight doesn’t mean he wants to win.

ST. JOE SHMO

DEAR SHMO: Thanks for your honesty. Too many girls think if they don’t let a guy go as far as he wants, they’ll never see him again.

DEAR ABBY: I recently saw a documentary on television that made me sick. I couldn’t get it out of my mind for days.

It was about 13- and 14-year-old girls—just kids themselves—who are expecting babies! They were being interviewed, and one 14-year-old said she got pregnant because she wanted someone to love!

What happens when she discovers that this bundle of love needs more than just the love she can give it?

Who takes care of it?

SICK IN CLEVELAND

DEAR SICK: Either the girl’s parents or the taxpayers. One of the reasons I am such a true believer in Planned Parenthood is their stand on sex education, and their motto: “Every child a wanted child.”

Study Describes New Canner

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

If you picture the typical convert to home canning as a price-conscious homemaker with a do-it-yourself tendency, you are correct.

A recent study by a major manufacturer of canning and freezing supplies indicates that description fits women who have never canned before but who are mostly likely to start up before they reach middle age.

It also suggests that future converts are more likely than not to be homebodies, but with a family income in the range of $10,000-$25,000 a year.

They are young, married, white, with high school or some college education and have one or two children and a one-family home with either a vegetable garden or fruit trees on the property.

They live not just in rural or small town areas, but also in suburbs of big cities, almost anywhere in the United States, but particularly in the midwest and south. They do not tend to take part in community affairs.

The study was made by The Market Facts, Inc., a national consumer mail panel facility, for Ball Corp., Muncie, Ind. The panel mailed questionnaires to 4,000 women, household heads, throughout the continental U.S. last November. More than 2,800 replies were tabulated. The company also conducted 200 WATS (Wide Area Telephone Service) telephone interviews with a sample of women who had not answered the questionnaires.

The survey confirmed the belief that recessions and inflation intensify canning activity.

Thrifty and having one’s own source of produce were the two most mentioned reasons for starting to can.

Others included a desire for better tasting or higher quality food and family tradition.

Conversion to home canning is youth-oriented, the study found. The percentage of recent starting canners under 35 years of age is more than twice as high as among the total population of women in the U.S.

New canners tend to come more often from a larger household than a smaller one.

They also are above average in having moved in the recent past, and will probably move in the near future. They are optimistic about the future, the study showed, but less than average in stylish dressing, opinion leadership and urban orientation.

They ranked above average in agreeing with 14 statements, running from “Mother taught me” to can and “Canning is one of the few things I enjoy” to “Home canning is the proud homemaker’s answer to Women’s Lib” to “Home canning is a labor of love.”

Credit Women Hear Speaker On Tuesday

Ken Lombardo, sales representative with Credit Bureaus, Inc., was the guest speaker at the meeting of Greenville Credit Women-International Tuesday.

He has been employed in a management position with CBI for 10 years and lives in Rock Hill, S. C.

Lombardo's program topics were “What Is a Credit Bureau” and “Sensitivity Is Sensible.”

President Carol Hardee conducted the meeting and recognized several guests including Faye Mallard and Katherine Graves, Kinston, and Margaret Dees of the Credit Bureau, Goldsboro. Other guests included Glenda Loftin, Greenville Credit Bureau, David Ruffin, JoAnne White, and Shirley Pitt.

Plans for the bosses' night banquet in October were discussed and Angelene Venters reported on the fall board planning meeting and the state picnic which were held in Concord Aug. 21.

It was announced that a membership campaign would begin immediately and end April 30, 1978.

Louise Mills was named a new club member.

New Product Item Is Welcome

One of America's most successful products will soon be manufactured in Pitt County. Procter & Gamble has announced that an addition to its facilities north of Greenville will manufacture Pampers disposable diapers. P & G already operates a facility of 400,000 square feet in manufacturing Pringle's New Fangled Potato Chips on the site between River Road and Industrial Boulevard.

Construction has already begun on a 240,000 square foot addition to the facilities. It had not been known what would be manufactured there until the Pampers announcement Tuesday. It is expected that the construction will be under roof by April. Pampers production is expected to be underway by Fall, 1978. Plant officials wouldn't cite figures but it was said that employment expansion will "definitely occur." It was an exciting announcement when P&G said it would build the Pringles plant here. It is equally exciting that the highly successful Pampers product will soon be manufactured here.

Funds Cut-Off Is Almost Unbelievable

The possibility of the University of North Carolina system losing $100 million yearly in its desegregation dispute with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is rather remote. UNC officials are pointing this out. HEW does have that ultimate power, but to invoke it would be totally irresponsible. Hundreds of thousands of young people from all walks of life would be affected. We can expect a long fight over the desegregation guidelines, but a cut-off of funds would be unbelievable.

THIS AFTERNOON

Study Not Only Medicaid

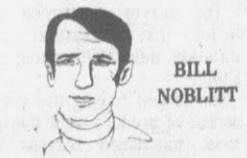

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—A study commission of the North Carolina General Assembly is now gearing up to begin work on what promises to develop into one of the most controversial and far-reaching subjects in the state.

The significance of the activity has been largely overlooked because the subject is draped in a "Medicaid" covering, and that social-welfare program was the impetus for launching a study. But those legislators who will make up the commission—and those who carefully structured the legislation establishing the commission—fully intend for the study to go far beyond Medicaid.

Cost Containment
Informally, the study group is known as the "Medicaid Study Commission." Its official title in the law is "Legislative Commission on Medical Cost Containment," and the legislative action establishing the commission authorizes a thorough probe of all health costs and establishes the latitude necessary to propose new cost-containment approaches. A clue to the importance attached to this study was the recent appointment by Lt. Gov. James C. Green of one of his closest political allies—State Senator Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg—to chair the body. Another clue is in the law which specifies that only lawmakers will serve on the commission. Many commissions contain experts from the area being studied, and reflect that input. And while legislative leaders say they want input from health care providers during the study, it is plain from their conversation that it is expected that the study and resulting legislative proposals will not be to the linking of the health professionals. Green hinted at this in a recent interview. He has visited a number of hospitals and nursing homes—some of the biggest contributors to escalating health costs, and when reminded that the study commission is authorized to look at methods of controlling rates in such institutions, Green didn't flinch: flinch:

"There is a point where one can render a proper service and realize a proper profit... and we can impose that kind of restriction... Reasonable... "I don't want to talk about a freeze. But, we ought to talk about a reasonable return on the dollars invested in these facilities... people who need them are at the mercy of the owners and operators, and not in a position to negotiate. I believe," Green said, that this is "obviously a very complicated problem, but I am confident we can solve it." Another clue to the serious nature of the study can be seen in the political jockeying surrounding appointment of legislators to the commission. On both the House and Senate side there is the realization that the commission will eventually be a "glamor" spot with lots of publicity and the chance to win public notice in the debates and proposals due to come. Legislative staff now preparing the library of materials predict at least two years of intensive study and another two years of legislative debate before final shape is seen to proposed reform. State Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, who set up the legislation for the study and hopes to be co-chairman, has this to say: "Health care people largely talk a whole different language and live in a different world which we don't often understand... we have allowed them to live in isolation, make their own rules, run their own licensing programs. We don't do that in other fields." Kaplan believes control is needed over proliferation of exotic equipment, excess building, rates charged in public (not private) programs, and charges made by public hospitals and nursing homes.

There is serious talk now going around of a State Health Commission (similar to the Utilities Commission) as one way to monitor the entire system, including rates.

THE GALLOP POLL

One In Four Is Volunteer

By George Gallup
PRINCETON, N.J. — Volunteerism, the spirit of helping others that played such a vital role in building America, is still alive and flourishing more than 200 years later. Despite claims by some social observers that Americans are becoming increasingly alienated from one another, one person in four, 27 per cent, reports being engaged in volunteer activities such as helping the poor, sick, or elderly. Traditionally, the church has been near the center of much of the charitable activities and social volunteerism of Americans, and, not surprisingly, some of today's spirit of helping appears to be religiously motivated. Church members, for example, are far more likely to say they are involved in some sort of charity or social service work (30 per cent or claim) than are non-church members, among whom 19 per cent say they are engaged in this kind of work. Furthermore, among those who consider themselves evangelicals, 42 per cent say they are involved in such activities, a finding that seems to contradict one of the major criticisms of evangelicals — that they are socially apathetic and concerned only with the winning of souls. No difference is found between the reported degree of activities among Protestants and Catholics. Age Differences Young people — that is, those under 30 years of age — are less likely to be involved in this kind of work than are their elders. While 16 per cent of those between the ages of 18 and 29 years say they are performing some kind of volunteer work, the figure for those between 30 and 49 years is almost twice as high, 28 per cent, and reaches 34 per cent among those 50 and older. One possible reason for this discrepancy is the fact many young people are in the process of trying to establish themselves and have not had time to put down roots in their respective communities.

Educational background is also a key indicator of volunteerism. Nearly four in 10, 38 per cent, of people with a college background report they are involved in some form of volunteer work with the poor, sick or elderly. Among those with a high school or grade school background, however, the proportion drops to near one in five, 22 per cent. This was the question asked: "Do you, yourself, happen to be involved in any charity or social service activities, such as helping the poor, the sick, or the elderly?"

Strength For Today

UTOPIA
Movements to improve the condition of mankind have discussed for many hundreds of years. Out of such hopes has come the dream of Utopia. Sir Thomas More used this term in the sixteenth century to describe the ideal commonwealth. But very few people, when they use the word "Utopia," realize that it means literally "no place." Utopia has never existed and never will. Throughout our lives all of us will have to face a world order far removed from the exalted dreams of utopian reformers. Does this mean that all attempts at reform should be abandoned? By no means. While Utopia is only a dream, the world can be improved in manifold ways using means that are readily available.

But at the outset this will require a change in attitude on the part of all of us. We must admit our own failings and acknowledge that meaningful improvement can only come when we try to follow the will of God rather than our own wills. —Elisha Douglas

Plumbers Should Know

WASHINGTON — Investigators claim that $1.5 billion were wasted building the Alaska pipeline. You are probably asking, "Where did the money go?"

To find out, I spoke to Stanton Carruthers, my plumber. Stanton wasn't surprised at the overrun since he's had similar ones fixing the pipes in our house. Although he didn't work on the pipeline himself, he has some good ideas why the Alaska pipeline cost so much to install. "I figure a billion of the overrun went for labor," Stanton went. "It's not easy to

To the editor:

On Aug. 26, 1920 a news story broke which was the culmination of years of labor by a group of individuals dedicated to equality, fairness and the democratic system. The 19th Amendment to the Constitution had been ratified by the states and the Women's Suffrage Proclamation was signed by Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby that day.

It was the triumphant end of the Women's Suffrage struggle which had often seen emotional and bitter attacks against its leaders. Dire predictions had been made that this would be a prelude to the end of the family and the beginning of a unisex society.

The National American Woman Suffrage Association soon became the National League of Women Voters, an organization dedicated to educating our citizenship and encouraging involvement in government and improved legislation.

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County feels this is a most appropriate time to look back at the Suffrage experience and focus on another challenge facing our country today — the future of the Equal Rights Amendment, as we join a national campaign effort to achieve ratification of the 27th Amendment to the Constitution. This, we believe, is an Amendment which means fairness and equality for all people.

To the editor:

A million cars were stolen in the United States last year, with millions more being vandalized or stripped. What can you do to prevent the theft of your car and your valuables from the car?

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women offers the following tips that may help prevent this crime:

1. Most cars are stolen by amateurs, simply because they are easy to steal. 80 per cent of all cars stolen in 1976 were unlocked and 40 per cent had the keys in the ignition. Remember to remove your keys.
2. Lock your doors and roll windows up tight.
3. Always keep keys in your pocket, not hidden in your car where a thief can find them.
4. Change door lock buttons to the slim, tapered kind as they are harder to pull up with coat hangers.
5. Never leave your car running while you are not in it.
6. Have your equipment such as CB's, radios, tape players and such marked for easy identification. Contact the Greenville Police Department or plan to visit one of the Mark-A-Thons sponsored by the Greenville Police Department and the Pitt County Association of Insurance Women. One such Mark-A-Thon is planned for October.
7. Make it time-consuming to steal your car and the thief will probably try his luck on someone else's.

get a plumber to make a house call in Alaska. Then there was the pipe. The cost of pipe is going up every day, and probably the people who bid on the job didn't take this into consideration at the time. Then, of course, there were the washers. You have to have a lot of washers on a pipe 800 miles long. "It sounds like one of your jobs," I said.

"Well, there's not much difference in building a pipeline and installing plumbing in someone's house. You have to expect an overrun or the plumber wouldn't make a profit. The guy who got the Alaska contract also forgot to include the joints in the pipe. Joints really add up, particularly if you have to thread them before you join them."

"I guess you do have to have joints in an 800-mile pipeline. You would have thought the plumber would know he needed joints."

"You only find this out after you start the job. Remember that sink I installed for you?"

"The one you said would cost $200 and wound up costing me $500?"

"That's the one. Well, what happened was after we installed the sink and the pipe we forgot to hook it up to the main water line."

Exhibit Detroit Result

By LARRY McDERMOTT
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A handful of governors will get a firsthand look at how the state and Detroit are working hand-in-hand to rejuvenate the nation's fifth largest city.

Gov. William Milliken said Thursday that next month's National Governors' Conference in Detroit won't stay holed up inside the massive $355 Renaissance Center, a gleaming high-rise business and convention complex built on the city's riverbank by public and private interests.

"This intensive 2 1/2-day conference could well be one of our most productive meetings ever, as the governors see up close the factories, hospitals, police precincts, board rooms and parks — and especially the imaginative governmental and private programs that are designed to help make one city a desirable place in which to live," Milliken said.

To see what the city and state are doing to fight crime, a committee of governors will go into Detroit's once-notorious Fifth Precinct — a high-crime area on the east side.

Scheduled to make the tour are Govs. David Pryor of Arkansas, Mills Godwin, Virginia; James B. Hunt Jr., North Carolina; Mike O'Callaghan, Nevada; Brendan Byrne, New Jersey; Otis Bowen, Indiana; and Ed Herschler, Wyoming.

The area's homicide rate dropped from 39 during the first half of 1976 to 25 during the same period this year. In addition, the state is paying for 48 plainclothes policemen who ride buses watching for crime.

"It's looking pretty good here now," said police Sgt. Mike Bossuyt. "There still are some bad areas. But the mini-stations are encouraging people to come in and talk with their neighborhood policeman."

The mini-stations are small, storefront police operations established by Mayor Coleman Young. They house officers who walk neighborhood beats.

Bossuyt said the governors won't have to worry about their safety, but he wouldn't say what plans have been made for the Fifth Precinct tour. "We're going to have more than an adequate amount of personnel for anything that might come up, but we don't anticipate any problems," he said.

Milliken said the Sept. 7-9 conference will let the governors see "what one great American city is doing — with the help of the state — to overcome supposedly insurmountable obstacles."

The Republican governor, who is in line to assume the conference's leadership, also plans to take some of the governors through Detroit's old "Black Bottom," an area where urban decay has been replaced by new townhouses in a variety of price ranges.

The state has poured millions of dollars into the city in the past few years and has approved special city tax programs to help it rehabilitate old areas and attract industry.

Fresh Look At Saturday Mail

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, which seemed ready to end Saturday mail deliveries a few months ago, is taking another look at whether the public would accept the cutback.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said Thursday that before any decision is made to reduce service, "We intend to do a comprehensive study of what the public wishes."

The Postal Service still is considering the cutback, but will delay its decision until a new public opinion survey is completed, Bailar said.

Last spring, the Commission on Postal Service recommended that Saturday service be eliminated, saving the financially troubled Postal Service an estimated $400 million a year.

Bailar praised the study group at the time and said the service was considering the move.

Then, in late June, the agency put the proposal on its agenda for a July meeting of the Postal Service's governing board. But when the meeting was held, the item was passed over.

Bailar's speech to a convention of the National League of Postmasters in San Juan, Puerto Rico, was the first public explanation of the delay.

A survey conducted by the

A.C. Nielsen polling organization for the study commission found 79 per cent of the public would be willing to forego the sixth delivery day if it would help hold down postal rates.

But now the Postal Service is having second thoughts about that study.

"The results of subsequent surveys... have differed enough with the Nielsen figures to make us want to more thoroughly analyze the public's acceptance of this move," Bailar said Thursday.

A spokesman, explaining the "subsequent surveys," said results from a new poll commissioned by the Postal Service are confusing. That survey found 81 per cent of the public "couldn't think of any reason they would have to receive mail on Saturday," the spokesman said.

"This would seem to confirm the Nielsen results," he said.

But, in answering a second survey question, only 45 per cent said they approved of eliminating Saturday deliveries, he added.

Now, he said, "We are trying to find the discrepancy."

Before deliveries could be reduced, the Postal Service would have to submit its plan to the independent Postal Rate Commission, which would then hold public hearings on the issue.

MAN KILLED IN EARLY MORNING ACCIDENT — A Farmville man was killed early this morning when his car overturned near Farmville. According to trooper A. G. Wright, Gary Eugene Petersen, 23, was dead at the scene, and a passenger, Steve Lynn Lawman, was injured. Wright said Petersen rounded a curve and ran off the left side of the highway and traveled about 300 feet before overturning several times, throwing Petersen out of the vehicle. The patrolman attributed the accident to a high speed and drinking. Investigation into the 3 a.m. accident is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Britain's Air Traffic Tied Up By Pay Strike

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Travelers flying to and from Britain and within the island faced long delays or flight cancellations for the next four days as assistant air traffic controllers began a weekend strike for higher pay.

Airport officials said they hoped to keep 60 per cent of the scheduled traffic in the air. But the strikers' union claimed 75 per cent of all traffic through British air space would be halted, up to 5,000 flights.

Flight operations continued at the seven struck British airports because the senior controllers who direct operations belong to another union and were not on strike. But flights were delayed or canceled because the 850 striking assistants were not on hand to make out flight plans, compile logs and perform other such tasks.

British Airways (BA), the national airline, was hit hardest by the strike, which began at midnight Thursday, and by a 10-day slowdown at London's Heathrow and Gatwick airports that preceded the walkout. The line canceled 30 per cent of its flights Thursday and today and waited to see if more cuts were necessary.

"Other airlines have refused to share the cancellations," said a BA spokesman. "They said it was a British row and nothing to do with them."

A TWA spokesman said his line planned no cancellations, but he predicted some delays. Pan American, the other major U.S. international carrier, did not announce any cancellations.

Today was the start of the four-day Bank Holiday weekend in Britain, and travelers jammed the airports Thursday to beat the strike. The slowdown by the assistant controllers, who were refusing to use computers and doing their work by hand, delayed departures from Heathrow and Gatwick an average of three to five hours during the day and caused cancellation of 160 flights in and out.

The strikers, who now earn up to $4,250 a year, are demanding that the government give them a 20 per cent pay increase agreed to in 1975 but postponed by the Labor government because of its anti-inflation ceiling of 10 per cent on wage increases.

The dispute has developed into a major test of the government's attempts to block a wage explosion following the end of formal pay restraints July 31.

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — An overwhelming majority of local school superintendents and mayors in cities of 50,000 or more oppose letting municipal governments assume total responsibility for local schools, according to a national survey.

Charles Recktenwald, director of instruction for the Sampson County school system, contacted 503 superintendents and 410 mayors in his year-long study.

Two Duke University professors, Richard Leach of the political science department and Robert Pittillo of the education department, supervised the work.

A few superintendents contacted and one-fourth of the mayors felt the mayor should have control over schools, through a municipal education commissioner, Recktenwald said.

The findings are in conflict with proposals from some mayors, such as New York City Abraham Beame, that central school boards be abolished and the responsibility for public schools shifted to city hall.

Growing interaction between school systems and municipal agencies has gradually drawn mayors into educational decision-making, the study showed.

Mayors from the Northeast and those from cities with strong mayor-council forms of government felt urban school systems will come under more control by municipalities in the future, Recktenwald said. He added that deterioration of inner cities in many northeastern cities has contributed to increased city-school related problems and concern over educational quality.

"I remember that," I said. "I had to shave without water for a week. I cut up my face pretty bad."

"That can happen. So what we did was tear out the installation, drill a hole in your wall and hook up the pipe with the water. That's why we had to charge you $300 more than we figured the job would cost."

"And something like that might have happened on the Alaska pipeline?"

"I'm sure of it. They probably got the whole thing built and then discovered it wasn't hooked up to the oil. Then they had to tear it up and begin all over again."

"They said a lot of the welding was of poor quality and the X-rays and records were forged."

"That's possible," Stanton said. "When you're working with pipe, you can do a lot of sloppy work. It's like that shower head I installed for you and it leaked all over the bathroom, and we had to come back and put in a whole new faucet system. That was faulty welding."

"Why did you charge me for it if it was faulty?"

"Who was I going to charge—the guy next door? Everyone thinks plumbers are infallible. We're human, too. We make mistakes."

"That's for sure," I said. "But the one in Alaska was a lulu."

"You can say that because you didn't do the work. But if you were a plumber, you'd think differently. Look, the pipeline was supposed to cost $1 billion. Instead it cost $8 billion. Most of that probably went for overtime. The $1.5 billion that went down the drain was ordinary spillage that anyone has on a job. I'd say for a billion-dollar original bid, bringing in a pipeline for $8 billion is just about right."

"Then you don't see anything wrong with how they constructed the Alaska pipeline?"

"Even if I did, I wouldn't say so. In our profession, it's unethical to criticize another plumber's work."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The new state insurance rating bureau, which will have the upper hand over Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram in rate-making, was formed Thursday by the state's insurance companies.

The new bureau will file statewide rates for homeowners, automobile and workmen's compensation. Three separate rate bureaus formerly handled the separate categories.

Under a controversial law passed this year, the commissioner will have the right to veto rate increases, but the hikes will remain in effect pending court appeals of the veto. In the past, the increases could not go into effect without the commissioner's approval.

Either Fell, Or Pushed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro police say they are unsure whether Dr. Thomas Wade Lamb of Chapel Hill was pushed or fell to his death through a sixth-floor hotel window.

Lamb, 44, went through a hallway window at 2:50 a.m. Thursday after struggling with a Hilton Inn employee. Police said the employee told them he was attempting to stop Lamb from seeing a member of a band that had played at the hotel.

Det. Sgt. F.M. Melton said the woman band member apparently said she did not want to see, and then the "confrontation" between Lamb and the employee began.

The employee's name is being withheld pending results of a police investigation.

"Our investigation is not complete. We don't know at this time whether any charges will be filed and we won't know until it is complete," Melton said.

Dr. John Butts of the North Carolina Medical Examiner's Office in Chapel Hill said he found no evidence that Lamb was beaten. He said the physician died of massive internal, bleeding and a broken neck, back and spinal cord.

Former Los Angeles Ram Now Plays In Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the last 15 seasons, Merlin Olsen has spent Sundays in the fall working for the Los Angeles Rams, jumping on folks he felt needed jumping on. Like quarterbacks.

It's safe to say the jumpers are relieved this 6-foot-5, 225-pound All-Pro defensive tackle has retired and starts a new career this fall as an employee of NBC, both as a sportscaster and as an actor.

The acting is being done in "Little House on the Prairie." He'll start appearing in it on Sept. 12 — three days before his 37th birthday — as regular, a farmer-woodsman named Jonathan Garvey.

It's his first series, but not his acting debut. That came, he says, in 1969 when he and another actor, Roman Gabriel, now with the Philadelphia Eagles, were in a John Wayne flick, "The Undefeated."

Merlin played a good guy, a blacksmith. "I did have a fight scene in it, but I was — provoked," he said with a low chuckle that sounded like reveille in Mount Vesuvius.

It led to other off-season acting roles, he added, but usually as a heavy: "They figured anybody as big as I was had to be a heavy."

considerable smarts, Olsen, owner of a Phi Beta Kappa key and a master's degree in economics from Utah State, says he never formally studied acting.

But when he signed to be the biggest man in "Little House," he commenced intensive work with Charles Conrad, a veteran acting coach here.

Olsen, who started his sports-casting career during off-seasons at TV station KTLA here and his business career with a Porsche dealership in suburban Encino, was asked why he's taking a serious shot at emot-

"Well," the ex-Ram rumbled, "it really puts me on somewhat of the same performance cycle I've been on during all my football career."

"And that is intensive preparation, then performance, and then a chance to get it all back together again and start all over again."

"I felt if I could find something similar in its challenge to professional sports — which in its own way is part of the entertainment world — I was going to make the adjustment (to civilian life) more easily."

"And so far, it's working." Olsen, who lives in San Marino, near Pasadena, with his wife and their three kids, was asked if he feels Ram withdrawal pangs, if it feels odd not to be cranking up to smite football opponents again this fall.

"No, I haven't had any real problem with the adjustment," he said, a disappointing answer for fans expecting his eyes to mist with regret at not trying just one more season.

A hand played by U.S. internationalist, Harold Ogust, and published in this column, has been named "Hand of the Year" by the International Bridge Press Association. To prove it was no accident, here is another effort by Ogust that should be a strong candidate for next year's award.

East's three spade opening is not a bad third-hand shot at rubber bridge. Not surprisingly, Ogust made a takeout double, and East gave away his distribution when he elected to double four clubs. Ogust retreated to four diamonds, and that became the final contract.

West led a low spade. East won the queen and continued with the king, ruffed by declarer. It seemed from the lead that West had three spades, leaving East with six spades and four clubs. Declarer led the king of diamonds, and East's jack suggested that trumps were 4-1. Looking at all four hands, it appears that declarer has five losers — one spade, one heart, two diamonds and a club. But Ogust made two of them disappear!

Just in case East had a doubleton queen of hearts, declarer cashed the ace and king of the suit, then gave West a trick in hearts. West exited with a club, won by the ace. A heart ruff was followed by a spade ruff. A club to the king reduced West to nothing but three trumps.

Declarer simply exited with a club from dummy, and West was ruined. He was forced to ruff and then lead away from his trump queen into declarer's K-10 tenace. The only tricks the defenders collected were a spade, a heart and a ruff. It's just as well West refrained from doubling!

Vern Gosden Had Late Start In Music Career

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE (AP) — Age 43 is not the prime time to become a professional country music singer. The kids are in college or preparing to get married. The doctor wants to examine you every six months. There are jokes about being over the hill.

Vern Gosdin did it. His middle age spread consisted of recording three Top 10 country songs within seven months.

He's been so successful that he gave up his glass and mirror business in suburban Atlanta, where he made $36,000 one year. He turned it over to his son, who at 19 is at an age when many country music singers begin their career.

"I miss the guys I ran into on the job — the contractors and all," the soft-spoken Gosdin said in an interview in a Music Row record company office.

"But I'll go back and see 'em." He's been on a 30-day promotional tour of the United States and Canada. He worries about talk shows and interviews.

"I hope I didn't bore you," was his farewell to a reporter. Minutes earlier, he confessed: "I don't know everything about the music business. Let me ask you some questions." And he did.

Because of his background and his likeable personality, one Atlanta record reviewer has called him "country music's Rocky."

"I want to go as far as I can," he said about his new career, forged through the hits "Yesterday's Gone," "Hangin' On" and "Till the End." "Since I was 6, I've lived for music. I never really gave up."

"I can get in a bad mood, pick up my guitar and in five or 10 minutes it's all gone," said Gosdin, who once drove a truck delivering ice.

He got his "break" this year when Nashville producer Gary S. Paxton agreed to produce "Hangin' On." Gosdin and Paxton had met some 10 years ago in Los Angeles when both worked in rock music.

He also got help from country singer Emmylou Harris, who sang backup vocals on "Yesterday's Gone" and "Hangin' On."

He had tried careers in rock music, bluegrass and gospel, but nothing appealed to him like country.

"Country is my favorite," he said. "It's more comfortable for me. I like doin' it and I've been successful with it. There's about every reason you can think of." His style has been compared to Waylon Jennings, Larry Gatlin and Don Williams.

After "Hangin' On" was followed in the Top 10 by "Yesterday's Gone," Gosdin turned over the Arrowhead Glass Co. to son Steve.

"I called the contractors and explained that my son is new," Gosdin said. "They'll help him any way they can. The only thing I do now is take some calls at home."

One's Overdrawing More Serious Than For Lance

DRIVER INJURED — One person was injured early this morning when a car struck the bridge on highway 43 at the Craven-Pitt County line. According to North Carolina State Trooper A. G. Wright, Kenneth Gaskins was injured in the accident and transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released. The trooper reported that Gaskins was alone in the vehicle at the time of the accident. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Now there is a new adage to go with the old one that says it's tough to get a loan unless you can prove that you don't need money all that badly.

The new one is that the less money you've got, the more serious it is to overdraw your checking account.

At least that seems to have been the White House rule in the cases of two aides to President Carter — who now acknowledges that he has overdrawn a check or two himself.

One of them, Greg Schneiders, was dropped from consideration for a top White House post because of a shaky financial record that included bad checks and unpaid debts, although almost all of them were settled before he came to prominence as Carter's right-hand man during the campaign.

The other is Budget Director Bert Lance, who Carter has defended vehemently and dramatically against criticism stemming from his banking transactions, personal loans and overdraft checks.

The latter item is, of course, a familiar problem. It would be hard to find anyone with a checking account who has not inadvertently overdrawn it once in a while. An unbalanced checkbook is situation comedy stuff.

"... Obviously it's better not to write overdrafts," the President said in his latest defense of Lance. "I can't deny that I have written overdrafts from my own bank account on occasion, and so has my wife, not deliberately, but because of an error..."

Carter isn't alone, even among presidents. Gerald R. Ford said he'd never had an overdraft, but he did acknowledge writing personal checks in excess of the sum in his account. "I think a few people in this country have written checks and then waited until the end of the month and then mailed them," he said.

It all sounds familiar to household money managers trying to stay ahead of the bills. But the sums involved in the Lance overdrafts at the Calhoun, Ga., First National Bank were anything but ordinary. Government banking investigators reported that at times during the fall of 1974 and the winter of 1975, Lance family overdrafts reached the neighborhood of $450,000.

Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann said the overdrafts were an unsafe and unsound banking practice.

Carter didn't really try to excuse the overdraft checks, but he did try to explain them. He said Lance and his family almost invariably had enough money in other accounts in the Calhoun bank to more than cover the overdraft checks.

"... There was an agreement between not only Bert Lance but the customers of the bank as a general policy that if you had more than one bank account and were overdrawn in one but you had more than enough money to cover that overdraft in other accounts, that this was accepted by the bank and the checks were honored," Carter said. He said that was common in country banks.

But Schneiders did his banking in the city, and besides, he was nearly broke. So when he wrote overdraft checks, they bounced.

His problems stemmed from his stint in the Washington restaurant business. Schneiders owned two places, both losers, but they were sold before he signed up with the Carter campaign.

"What we were doing was making daily cash deposits to cover checks that were written the day before," he said. "... We were constantly playing catchup and if we had a bad day, a check would bounce."

It all caught up with Schneiders after he had become Carter's closest personal aide during the presidential campaign, and seemed headed for the White House inner circle as appointments secretary to the President.

An FBI check raised questions about his business affairs, and Schneiders withdrew from consideration for the appointments post.

"I have real confidence in Greg, and it is typical of him to want to take whatever action is necessary to avoid embarrassing me or the Carter administration," Carter said at the time.

Schneiders got a lesser position, as director of special projects.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Groucho Marx left his three children the bulk of his estate, estimated at between $2.5 million and $6 million. He remembered his longtime companion, Erin Fleming, with $150,000.

The sole sentimental bequest in the comedian's last will and testament, which was written in 1974, was leaving to Miss Fleming the "boutonniere of the Commander des Arts et Lettres," an honor bestowed upon him by the French government.

Groucho, who died Aug. 19 at the age of 86, made it clear that he wanted to prevent legal fights among heirs.

The will, filed for probate late Wednesday, orders that any heir who challenges it should receive $1, with the remainder of that person's bequest going to the Jewish Federation Council of Los Angeles.

Zeppo Marx, the only surviving member of the brothers' comedy team, was left $50,000, and one of Groucho's three ex-wives, Catharine Marie, was to receive $25,000. The comedian left each of his four grandchildren $5,000.

After the specific bequests, the remainder of Groucho's fortune goes to his three children, Arthur, Miriam and Melinda.

His collection of memorabilia — including his Academy Award "Oscar," scripts and films — was willed to the Smithsonian Institution along with "such other items as Erin Fleming determines."

Miss Fleming was named as consultant to the Bank of America, which is executor of the will.

She was to aid the bank in managing Groucho's "intangible rights in television shows, motion pictures, plots, copyrights and contract rights and the reproduction of the entertainer's likeness."

Profits from these rights were to be distributed among the children, with Miss Fleming receiving "a reasonable fee for consultation services," the will said.

Distributing A New A&P New Directory Opens Sunday

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. is distributing its new telephone directory, according to Don Collier, district manager.

Collier urged subscribers to discard their old directories after receiving the new listing to eliminate the possibility of using numbers that have been changed.

About 55,000 directories will be distributed in the district, he reported, which indicates an increase over last year's delivery.

The district manager said that customers who do not receive their new directory by Sept. 1 should call the telephone company business office.

Permafrost, or permanently frozen ground, underlies about 20 per cent of the world's entire land surface.

New A&P Opens Sunday

The new 32,400 sq.ft. A&P Grocery Store will open in the Greenville Square Shopping Center Sunday, Aug. 28, at 9 a.m.

According to R.L. James, manager, the store will be open 24 hours a day, and is the only major grocery store in this area to do so.

James has been employed with A&P for 28 years. He began in the Dickinson Avenue store, and in 1954 became a manager in Plymouth. He returned to Greenville in 1959.

The new location is almost three times larger than the store on Tenth Street, said James.

The store on Tenth Street will close down, effective Saturday, Aug. 27, at 10 p.m.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered another broad setback today amid persisting concern over rising interest rates and talk of an economic slowdown.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 8.75 on Thursday to its lowest close since the end of 1975, fell another 6.06 to 848.06 by 11:30 a.m. today.

Losers overwhelmed gainers by more than a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was moderately active. First-hour volume on the Big Board came to 5.50 million shares.

The decline also pushed the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks into new low territory for the year. The index, which had held all summer above its May 31 low of 52.56, fell .38 to 52.29 in today's first hour.

Brokers blamed the selloff in the last two days in part on a forecast by the firm of Tucker, Anthony, R.L. Day of "a mini-recession within six to nine months."

They also cited widespread expectations of an impending increase in the discount rate—the charge the Federal Reserve sets on loans to its member commercial banks.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, dropped 3/4 to 61 1/2. A 200,000-share block traded at 61.

The 11 a.m. American Stock Exchange market value index was off .50 at 117.16.

Occasional Beer Helpful

BOSTON (AP) — Here's news to drink to. A new medical study says that a daily bottle of beer may help prevent heart attacks.

A study conducted in Honolulu has found that men who sip one or two beers a day have just more than half as many fatal heart ailments as teetotalers.

"This finding is consistent with a possible direct beneficial effect of alcohol intake on the risk of coronary heart disease," the researchers wrote.

Their findings were published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers stressed that the people with healthier hearts were moderate drinkers. An accompanying editorial in the journal warned that while a few beers may be helpful, heavy use of alcohol can cause serious heart trouble.

The Honolulu study also found there was no evidence that coffee drinking causes heart attacks. This possible link had been reported in earlier studies.

board of that agency.

He has served actively in professional organizations, as past president of NCEA, past president of the N.C. Personnel and Guidance Association, and served as Board Manager for the State N.C. Congress of Parents and Teachers. Last year he was president of the Division of Higher Education of NCAE and was parliamentarian of the N.C. Personnel and Guidance Association.

Aside from education and politics, Dr. Fuller has an abiding interest in music. "I have over the years formed a fine record collection of all types of music," he commented.

Speaking on his decision to run again, Dr. Fuller said "I'm particularly anxious to continue work in the community development area that we have started. It is extremely important for Greenville, a continuation of urban development.

"Also," he added, "we need to expand the bus system. I had a great deal to do with developing this in the first place, and the success so far has vindicated our decision to move ahead with it. I'm also interested that we get as much as we can in public services from the tax dollar. We have a good management system now, and we can help it to be even more efficient."

Some Students Free To Work

In parts of the county where farmers need help harvesting tobacco during the opening week of school, Pitt County students who work in the fields will be able to report Monday and get their names on the rolls and leave school for the remainder of the week, according to Ott Alford, county schools' superintendent.

Students working in tobacco will be free to leave school and help harvest the crop with no penalties or reductions in grades, Alford said.

However, he said, the students must be needed for the harvest and must only work in tobacco.

Other students will attend classes as usual.

Demonstration For Legislature

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The New Hampshire Senate, trying to find a way to keep the money-short state government operating after Oct. 20 without enacting new taxes, has had to seek professional help.

Interrupting a debate on the need for mental health centers and programs for the retarded, the senators on Thursday watched a magician saw his wife in half in the Senate chamber.

The magician, a Laconia man known as "Nascimento," said he wanted "to show them how to cut the budget without drawing blood."

New Hampshire, the only state without a general sales or income tax, is operating on a temporary budget until Oct. 20. The lawmakers have been unable all summer to agree on how to reconcile dwindling revenues from other sources with the escalating costs of state government despite three attempts to come up with a balanced budget.

Jaguars Seek To Defend ECC Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
 Farmville Central's football team did it all last year, sweeping through its Eastern Carolina Conference schedule, going to the 3-A playoffs and coming very close to winning the state championship, being defeated in the eastern championship game in sudden death overtime.

But that was last season and the stars who guided that team — Kenno Farrow, Ted Dunn, Carroll Griffin, Mike Jenkins and the rest — are all gone now, leaving the Jaguars with a pile of inexperienced players to defend that conference title.

"I'd say that we're going to be inexperienced and small in number and size," according to Farmville coach Gene Brewer. Over 20 players from last year's squad either graduated or didn't come out for football this year, leaving Brewer with only five full-time starters and one part-time starter from last year's squad around which to build this year's team.

In addition, having swept wins from every other team in the league last season, many by lopsided scores, Farmville is a marked team this year. "We don't think we beat anybody unreasonably — we didn't run up the score — but everybody is always trying to knock off the first-place team from the year before," Brewer said.

Nevertheless, "we have got some good football players," Brewer said and, with a little luck, the Jaguars just might be in the running for another championship.

Two full-time starters and one part-time starter will be back on offense this season, but the entire offensive backfield has been replaced.

Three players, Walter Blow (5-9, 170), Donald Reid (6-0, 170) and Rufus Mayo (5-10, 155), will be splitting playing time at the two running back positions, according to Brewer. "They're all young," Brewer said, Blow and Reid are sophomores, while Mayo is a senior but didn't play last year.

The three have above-average speed, but Brewer is unsure what to expect from them not having seen them perform against outside competition.

Donald Freeman is expected to take over the reins of the club at quarterback. The 6-1, 165-pound junior was a backup quarterback last season and Brewer feels "he's got a lot of ability. We're expecting him to develop into a real good quarterback."

Scott Evans (5-9, 152), a senior, will be a backup quarterback, as well as a backup flanker. He also logged some playing time at quarterback last year.

The starting flanker will be junior Billy McLawhorn (5-10, 140). "The biggest asset he's shown so far is that he catches the ball pretty good," Brewer said. All the receivers are inexperienced, however.

The Jags will run two tight ends and three people are vying for the starting spots, Brewer said. They are junior Allan Moore (5-9, 158) and sophomores Tony Eason (5-11, 158) and Jeff Tyson (6-2, 154). Although the tight ends are utilized primarily for blocking, they must have the ability to catch the football, too, Brewer said.

Returning starter Len Hunt (6-3, 250) and Philip Gordon (6-0, 185) are expected to get the nod at the starting tackle spots. Hunt is the most experienced lineman on the team, while Gordon played some defensive tackle last season.

The guards will be Woody Edwards (5-9, 170), Ronald Reid

(5-11, 170) or Rodney Faulkner (5-5, 180) with Carl Davis (5-8, 145) at center.

Overall, the offensive line has good quickness, although it lacks a bit in size, Brewer said. "I don't feel that bad about the line; it will take awhile to get their timing down, however."

The offense should be able to throw or run, Brewer said, and the Jaguars usually try to gear their attack to what the defense will give them. "We usually have something in mind, but generally we try to do what we feel like we have the advantage doing," Brewer said.

The team's defense should be one of its strong points, especially in the early going, according to Brewer. The defensive unit has been enthusiastic during practice and has looked good at times.

Blow and Jackie Norris (5-11, 150), a sophomore, are the starting ends. Blow was a starter last year, while Norris is new to the position, "but he's got a lot of quickness and pretty good savvy," according to Brewer.

Faulkner and Gordon will start at the tackles, while Edwards, Davis and first-year senior William Maye (6-0, 170) are battling for the defensive guard positions. Maye has come along real well to be a first-year man, Brewer said.

Ronald Reid will join twin brother Donald as the team's linebackers. "Both of them have shown a pretty good nose for the football," Brewer said. "They've done some things real well and there are some they need to improve on."

Evans and Mayo will start at the defensive halfback spots, while Moore, Eason and sophomore Warren Carlton (5-9, 144) are working at the safety position.

Brewer, like most of the other coaches, sees the Eastern Carolina Conference this year as one of the most balanced fields ever. "Three to five teams stand a real good shot at winning the championship," he said.

D. H. Conley and Greene Central both have a lot of people back, while Ayden-Grifton has a good returning nucleus, according to Brewer. In addition, C. B. Aycock returns a strong backfield and North Pitt should be stronger.

For the Jaguars to have a successful year, "We're going to have to have our young people develop quickly, stay away from injuries and have the competition stay on our level."

"We've got some good football players, but I don't know now whether we've got enough to be a real good football team," Brewer said.

Improvement In Buc Work

Pat Dye put his East Carolina University Pirates through another game-type scrimmage last night, and afterwards, the glimmer of a smile broke through.

After a number of days of poor practices in Dye's eyes, the Pirates looked much improved during the long workout under the lights.

The Purple unit, made up of the first unit, gained a 48-19 victory over the rest of the squad.

"The offense looked good overall," Dye said afterwards. "I was impressed by the work of both of the quarterbacks (Jimmy Southerland and Leander Green). I was thrilled with what they did."

Dye added that the offensive line got off the ball real well.

"(Eddie) Hicks and (Willie) Hawkins ran the ball well, and (freshman) Anthony Collins also looked real good with the ball. The session was much better overall in concentration and execution."

Defensively, Dye said that it was tough to make a judgement due to the competition. "But it was obvious that we made too many silly mistakes and had too many silly penalties," he said.

Willie Holley stood out at one point, picking off an interception and returning it for a touchdown.

Several Pirates were still sidelined for the workout. Among them were offensive tackle Matt Mulholland, safety Gerald Hall, nose guard Clifford Williams, nose guard Blake Camp, and fullback Vince Kolanko.

Dye said that the Pirates would go light for the next couple of days, then get in some more contact work on Monday and Tuesday as the final week of preparation for the N.C. State game gets underway.

The Pirates face the Wolfpack a week from tomorrow in Raleigh's Carter Stadium. Another sellout crowd has been assured.

Las Vegas Rolls Two-Year Ban In Toss Of Dice With The NCAA

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
 KANSAS CITY (AP) — The University of Nevada-Las Vegas, a run-and-gun basketball powerhouse, has been socked with a two-year probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Following the announcement Thursday at the NCAA's office in Kansas City, UN-LV officials scheduled a news conference for today in Las Vegas, reportedly to discuss the matter.

The NCAA's investigation centered on UN-LV basketball program activities from 1971 to 1975 and included numerous violations and what the NCAA calls "questionable practices." Included in the NCAA's summary were instances of illegal gifts to players, illegal cash allowances, promises of free dental care for prospective players, free airplane trips home for players and promises of free airplane trips to the UN-LV games for the families of players.

UN-LV will be prohibited from participating in any post-season competition during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 academic years. The team also is restricted from appearing in NCAA-controlled television programs during the two-year period.

In addition, the university will be permitted to award only three new basketball scholarships each year for the two years.

UN-LV Basketball Coach Jerry Tarkanian, cited in several of the violations and questionable practices listed by the NCAA, said Thursday the three-player recruiting limit will be "a hindrance." But he added: "We'll be as strong as ever; we'll be back."

The NCAA's ruling said the university must take "appropriate disciplinary and corrective action" against the persons cited for the violations. As a result, former head basketball Coach John Bayer, Tarkanian, a former assistant basketball coach and eight athletic boosters will be disciplined by the school.

After talking with school officials Thursday night, Tarkanian said he would stay at UN-LV. Earlier, UN-LV president Dr. Donald Baepfer and University of Nevada Board of Regents Member Chris Karanamos both said they do not believe the disciplinary action required by the NCAA will include Tarkanian's ouster.

But the NCAA Committee on Infractions or the NCAA Council will have final say in whether the schools disciplinary and corrective action is sufficient.

Talk of the NCAA's investigation into the UN-LV basketball program has run rampant for nearly a year. But even as the talk continued, the basketball team has flourished.

The Runnin' Rebels have, for the past two years, been the highest scoring team in the nation. Now, UN-LV holds nearly every NCAA team offensive record. Last year, the Rebels finished third in the NCAA post-season tournament.

Tarkanian, the winningest active major college coach, has won more than 100 games in four seasons at UN-LV.

Arthur R. Reynolds, the NCAA's infractions committee chairman, said the panel was particularly concerned with Tarkanian, who he said encouraged certain principals in the case to provide false information on some of the NCAA regulation violations.

Snead's Putts Put Him Ahead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
 PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Positive thinking, said J.C. Snead, is very important in pro golf.

But, he added with a funny little smile and a slow, Virginia drawl, positive thinking only works when you're getting results.

"Let's say I think I can run through that wall," he said. "Well, I take a run at it. About the 10th time I bounce off that wall, I'm gonna start thinking maybe I can't run through it after all."

Or, he said, there is the matter of attitude; being positive, cheerful, full of smiles, is something to be desired.

"But if you see a guy who's three-putted four holes in a row and he's still smiling, he's either faking or he's crazy as heck."

The putts started falling for the slump-ridden Snead and the door in the wall opened just a bit as he fired a sparkling, eight-under-par 63 for the first-round lead Thursday in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

But Snead — winner of six tour titles and an Australian Open and a key figure on two U.S. Ryder Cup teams — was not ready to pronounce an end to his season-long slump, a slump so severe he had considered quitting the game in which he has won $750,000 in the last six years.

"I've played one good round," said the former pro baseball player. "I don't know if I'm over the hump or not. This stupid game, you never know what's going to happen. Nobody ever really beats it. I'll just have to go out and see what happens."

Snead one-putted 10 times, including eight in a row, as he came within one stroke of the record on the No. 2 course, at the Pinehurst Country Club, a revered, 7,007-yard layout in the Carolina sandhill country that yielded some of the lowest scores in its lengthy history.

Leonard Thompson, who grew up about 20 miles away and has played here for almost two decades, was one stroke back after a 64, by three strokes the best he ever has scored here. "I never thought I'd shoot 64 on No. 2," he said.

Hale Irwin and Lon Hinkle had 65s and Mike Morley a 66 in the mild, hazy, almost windless weather.

Defending champion Ray Floyd was five shots back after a 68. Masters and British Open winner Tom Watson had a 70. Bobby Locke, a 60-year-old South African inducted into the Hall of Fame Tuesday night, shot 83 in his first round in the United States since 1956.

"I'm hitting the ball quite well, just a bit more frequently than I used to," Locke said.

Brock Swipes Two More Bases, Trails Cobb By Just One Theft

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Gary Alexander almost went into the trivia book with Al Downing, Ralph Branca and Tracy Stallard.

Alexander, the San Francisco catcher, was behind the plate Thursday night when Lou Brock stole his 25th and 26th bases of the season to increase his career mark to 891 and pull within one of the major league record set by Ty Cobb.

"I thought about the situation last night (Wednesday) because I knew I was going to be playing," said the rookie catcher. "But I really didn't mind. He is going to set the record sooner or later. I'm just glad it wasn't off me."

For non-trivia buffs, Downing, Branca and Stallard are all pitchers. Downing gave up Hank Aaron's 715th home run, which broke Babe Ruth's career mark. Branca served up Bobby Thompson's celebrated home run in the final game of the 1951 playoffs to give the New York Giants the National League pennant. Stallard was on the mound when Roger Maris hit his 61st home run in 1961 to break Ruth's single-season mark.

"The crowd tried to intimidate me by yelling at the top of its lungs," said Alexander.

In the first inning, the 38-year-old Brock singled. Two pitches later he stole second. He attempted to add third base to his theft total and was two-thirds of the way when Garry Templeton fouled off a 2-2 pitch.

A double by Keith Hernandez scored Brock with the game's first run.

In the third, Brock beat out an infield hit and stole second again. This time he scored on Templeton's single and the Cards were in front 2-0.

It didn't stay that way long as San Francisco starter John Montefusco, who scattered eight hits through six innings, drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning single as the Giants downed the Cardinals, 4-2.

In other NL games Thursday, Pittsburgh edged Los Angeles 2-1, Atlanta defeated Chicago 8-6, Cincinnati nipped New York 3-2 and Houston squeezed by Philadelphia 6-5.

Pirates 2, Dodgers 1
Reliever Larry Demery finished up what John Candelaria started, then gave a fan an unexpected souvenir of Pittsburgh's victory over the Dodgers.

"A guy kept calling me a bum," Demery said. "I showed him different."

Reggie Smith, the first batter Demery faced when he entered the game in the sixth inning, smashed his 24th home run of the season, narrowing Pittsburgh's lead to 2-1. That started the fan's heckling.

But Demery held the Dodgers to only one hit and one walk the rest of the way, earning his first save of the season as Candelaria increased his record to 14-4. And, when the game ended, Demery trotted over to stands and tossed the ball to the heckler.

Braves 8, Cubs 6
Rookie Junior Moore smashed his first major league grand slam in the first inning to highlight Atlanta's victory over Chicago. Right-hander Dick Ruthven, 5-10, hurled the first five innings for the Braves, scattering five hits to earn the victory.

Reds 3, Mets 2
A seventh-inning single by Dave Concepcion drove in two runs and carried Cincinnati past New York. Concepcion's hit scored Johnny Bench and Dan Driessen.

Len Randle slammed his fifth homer of the year for New York.

Fred Norman, 12-10, scattered five hits through seven innings and struck out seven, including the 1,000th strikeout of his career, to get the victory.

Astros 6, Phillies 5
Consecutive home runs by Bob Watson and Joe Ferguson and a run-scoring double by Cesar Cedeno rallied Houston over Philadelphia. It was the Phillies' second straight loss after winning 19 of 20.

The Phils jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning, but Houston scored twice in the second and Watson led off the fourth with his homer. Ferguson followed with his round-tripper on the next pitch.

Houston pinch-hitter Wilbur Howard singled to open the Astros' seventh, was sacrificed to second and scored the winning run on Cedeno's double.

According to a spokesman for Hunter's family, he was believed to be in Chicago this morning, and was to have contacted him home later today.

Chicago Gets Unexpected Help In Keeping Pace With Royals

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago White Sox got some power from an unexpected source Thursday night. And it helped them keep pace in the American League West.

Wayne Nordhagen belted his first two major league home runs, driving in four runs as the White Sox defeated Baltimore 6-4. The victory moved Chicago back into second place in the AL West, two percentage points ahead of Texas and Minnesota and three games behind first-place Kansas City.

"My big plus in the minor leagues always was driving in runs," said Nordhagen, 29, who spent nine years in places like Kingston of the Carolina League and Oklahoma City in the American Association. "But I don't hit too many home runs. The most I ever hit was 16."

The White Sox do hit a lot of homers — 162 so far this season — but they don't usually rely on Nordhagen for run-production. Except against Baltimore.

"I play against left-handers a lot and they have three lefty starters," noted Nordhagen, who has gotten six of his 12 runs-batted-in this season against the Orioles. "I hit two curve balls for the homers. I haven't seen any curves since who knows when."

AL Roundup

Eric Soderholm, who the White Sox do pay to hit home runs, slugged his 20th of the season and Lerrin LaGrew recorded his 20th save.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston broke a seven-game losing streak with a 9-6 victory over Texas. New York defeated Minnesota 6-4 and Kansas City ran its winning skein to nine with a 9-6 triumph over Milwaukee.

Red Sox 9, Rangers 6
The Red Sox rallied for six runs in the seventh inning to overtake Texas and remain two game behind New York in the AL East. Butch Hobson's 25th homer of the season, a three-run shot in the seventh, and George Scott's run-scoring single and 30th home run were the key hits for Boston.

Yankees 6, Twins 4
New York continued its hot streak, winning its 11th game in the last 12 as Reggie Jackson singled home the winning run and Chris Chambliss doubled home an insurance tally in the eighth inning. Mickey Rivers also singled in a pair of runs and had three hits in the contest, raising his batting average to .334.

New York relief ace Sparky Lyle, 9-4, got the victory while Minnesota bullpen star Tom Johnson, 13-6, was the loser.

Royals 9, Brewers 6
Kansas City's surge continued thanks to John Wathan's first major-league homer, a three-run shot in a six-run third inning. The nine straight triumphs set a club record.

Paul Splittorf, 11-6, got the victory while Jerry Augustine, 11-15, absorbed the defeat.

Vikings, Dolphins Square Off Tonight

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes there's nothing more exciting in a pro football game than the action in "the pit," where behemoths collide on every play. And when two behemoths go at each other are trying to win jobs, it makes the collisions even more fearsome.

Which is why, when you're not watching Fran Tarkenton, Bob Griese or the rest of the more obvious players on Minnesota and Miami in tonight's National Football League game on ABC, you might glance in the trenches. Vikings defensive tackle Joe Jackson and Dolphins offensive tackle Wally Pesuit will be raising some dust.

The long weekend of exhibitions moves into high gear Saturday night with Baltimore at Dallas, Los Angeles at Kansas City, Cincinnati at St. Louis, San Diego at Oakland, Detroit at Seattle, Washington at Green Bay, the New York Jets at New Orleans and Tampa Bay vs. Atlanta at Orlando, Fla. On Sunday it's Pittsburgh at New England and Denver at Philadelphia, then the weekend ends Monday night with Buffalo at the New York Giants and San Francisco at Houston. Thursday night, Cleveland beat Chicago 14-7 as Brian Sipe easily outdueled former teammate Mike Phipps. Sipe had two short TD passes in the first half and completed 14 of 27 pass attempts while Phipps was sacked five times and hit only three of 13 passes.

Jackson, trying to make a name for himself as a member of Minnesota's vaunted Purple Gang, has been wowing Bud Grant. The glacial head coach, usually tight with the compliment, has had a few nice things to say about the New Mexico State alumnus, a one-time New York Jet picked up on waivers from Washington.

"This is a game where you have to take advantage of opportunities and Joe has done well whenever he's had a chance to play," Grant said.

On the other side of the scrimmage line will be Pesuit, Dallas' fifth-round draftee out of the University of Kentucky and now trying to hook on with the Dolphins as a free agent. He's replacing Wayne Moore, sidelined for at least a couple of games with a bruised triceps.

History Was Unfair To Samaritans

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV (AP) — Since Joseph begat Ephraim and Manasseh, history has been an ingrate to the Samaritans, caught in a free-fall toward oblivion. The hint of a respite from the dark line downward is appearing only now.

The descendants of the sons of Joseph and the Biblical Good Samaritan, who Jesus revered for his rescue of a wounded man ignored by priests and Levites, have barely managed to set up camp on this side of extinction.

One hundred twenty-six generations ago, according to their chronicles, there were 750,000 Samaritans in what is modern Israel. Today, four families, the Danis, Cohens, Marchivs and Tsedakas, 470 people in all, maintain the sect's rites and traditions, half of them living in a grubby Tel Aviv suburb called Holon and the others in Nablus, near the Samaritan holy site of Mount Gerizim where Joshua blessed his people.

Nablus is in occupied Jordan and in the 10 years since the Six Day War, the Samaritans have fallen on the windfall of free passage between the formerly separated communities to meet, marry and beget. Since the war, 102 Samaritan children have been born, increasing the world's Samaritan population by almost a quarter. But for the sect's historian, the births are barely a jot on a graph of precariousness 20 centuries long.

Benjamin Tsedaka, a 125th generation descendant of Manasseh who runs a bi-weekly Samaritan newspaper, takes the development without much excitement. "We shall see," he

Few Of Migrant Camps Checked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Of the 700 migrant worker camps in North Carolina, only 131 have been inspected for unsafe or unsanitary conditions, a state official has said.

Charles Jeffries of the state Department of Labor told WPMY-TV of Greensboro that of the camps inspected, 95 per cent had violations, most of them minor.

"The whole situation is a mess," Jeffries told the station, which has been conducting a series of broadcasts on migrant problems in the state.

Jeffries said enforcement manpower is spread too thin to be effective.

Al Weaver, also of the Labor Department, told the station that even if all the camps could be inspected, regulations governing living conditions for migrants were not strong enough to make much of a difference.

Jose Fernandez, who heads wage and hour enforcement for the U.S. Department of Labor in 48 North Carolina counties, said he had nine inspectors to hunt violations in all industries within his jurisdiction, including farms.

Fernandez said it would be impossible for him to do more to protect migrants from abusive employers than he does now.

not a story that builds your trust in anything."

Tsedaka maintains that the Samaritan Community, described by a chief rabbi in Jerusalem as a "branch of the Jewish people", was equal in size to the Jews — descendants of the tribe of Judah for the Samaritans — at the time of Jesus.

He interprets Jesus' fondness for the Samaritans as based on similar differences with the Jews on matters of law and religion. The Samaritans assisted Jesus in Samaria, Tsedaka said, "but Jesus' disciples didn't understand the situation, thinking he wanted us to be

Three Accidents In Greenville Thursday

An estimated $3,850 property damage resulted from a series of three collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 3:45 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth Street and Dickinson Avenue involving cars driven by William Ransom Hoots of 2612 Crockett Dr. and David Dixon of 1500A Ward St.

Investigators, who charged Dixon with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $750 to the Hoots car and $650 to the Dixon vehicle.

Daniel Earl Brown of 1114 West Wright Rd. was charged

Correction

A news article appearing in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Reflector reporting on an accident on Eastern Street Monday, indicated that a car driven by Owen John Kingsbury Jr. of 207 North Eastern St. was moving at the time of the collision.

Actually, the Kingsbury car was parked at the time it was struck by a car operated by Elizabeth Lewis Frye, which rolled into the parked Kingsbury car.

Even speed demons tend to ease up on the gas pedal when they see a road sign about children. No one wants to hurt a child.

Yet many of us hurt even the children closest to us. Maybe, as parents, we tend to try to make them think we're too perfect. And when they discover our feet are clay, they are disillusioned.

Maybe we give children too many things, and too little of ourselves. Maybe we forget how fleeting childhood is, and put off too much until a tomorrow that comes too late.

Most of all, maybe we neglect introducing our children to the Church, so that God's home may become a part of their lives. Let's do the most important things for our children — include church school in their fall curriculum.

Veterinarians Labor To Repair Deformed Pony

NEGLECTED PONY — A 10-year-old Shetland pony is led into its new home at the University of New Hampshire by Peter Saunders, the SPCA investigator who found the pony. (AP Laserphoto)

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — Veterinarians are laboring to repair the deformed hooves and legs of a Shetland pony con-finer for four years in a nailed-stall piled high with manure. "I've seen a lot, but that still shocked me," said Peter Saunders, an investigator for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), who examined the pony shortly after he was found two weeks ago in the town of Plaistow, near the Massachusetts border.

"The pony's hooves are enormous, about a foot and a half long and curved back until they almost touch his knees," Saunders said. The deformity is called laminitis, and some veterinarians said they had never seen such a severe and painful case. The pony's legs were also damaged because of the distortion of the hooves.

In addition, the pony had "hay belly," a distension caused by a diet of all hay and no grain. "That pony must have one hell of a will to live," said Saunders.

King, a 10-year-old gold-colored pony with a light mane, was found in a garage after an SPCA investigator received a tip that some type of animal was being kept in the building. "I couldn't believe what I saw," said Plaistow Animal Control Officer Don Sargent. "I looked into a small window and saw a pony standing on top of a pile of manure as high as the window."

"I can't believe that anything could live in that filth. We pried the boards off the stall so we could get the pony out and the maggots and flies just swarmed out."

The pony was owned by a woman named Barbara Reed, but police and the SPCA are refusing to say where the woman lives or why she locked up the animal because of distress over the incident in the town of about 5,000 persons. They fear that publicity might prompt some "over-zealous animal lover to take some rash action against the woman." The SPCA now owns the pony.

Mrs. Reed has been charged with cruelty to animals. In New Hampshire the charge is a misdemeanor which could result in a sentence of one year in jail, a $500 fine or both. "We only go to court when we know we'll win ... It was blatant cruelty," Saunders said.

THE 30's
BEAT THE HOUSING SHORTAGE — We've got 2 brand new homes nearly ready for you right here in the city. Central air, 3 bedrooms, 2 baths — and call us today to select wallpaper and carpet.

AWAY FROM THE CITY — If country living is your style. Great room with large fireplace and beautiful built in desk and bookshelves. Mudroom — half bath off kitchen, 3 bedrooms, 2 other extra large baths, and nearly an acre lot.

THE 40's

THIS HOME IS ROOMY — 1685 square feet of heated living area! Carpeted throughout with 3 nice bedrooms and a den with exposed beams in the ceiling and large fireplace with mantle. Central air, 2 baths, and a parking pad for your extra car.

FOUR BEDROOMS — and all of them are large. This home features one of the most workable floor plans you'll find, including formal living and dining rooms and cozy den. Private full bath in the master bedroom and another one down the hall. Freshly painted, too.

THE 50's
EXTRA LARGE — can aptly describe all the features of this valuable French Provincial. From the oversized lot to the pool room with 667 square feet you'll have room for everyone to feel at home. Only 3 years old, it has 3 bedrooms and careful quality construction.
FAMILY LIVING — was in the mind of the designer who planned this home. The large den is perfect for evenings at home. No congestion on school mornings either because the spacious hall bath has double sinks. Extra low utility bill in this 3 bedroom too.

San Quentin Gangs 'Locked Down' To Assure Peace

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Burly "Big George" Sumner, warden of San Quentin Prison, glared across the shiny conference table and spit out the words like they were tough meat: "We will be in control!"

Despite all the authority the 6-foot-3, 250-pound prison boss put into the statement, it remains more hope than fact. For San Quentin, in the 125th anniversary of its tempestuous existence on a sunny hook of land jutting into San Francisco Bay, is a prison in crisis.

In July, gang-inspired racial battles left three convicts dead. Now, nearly a third of the cons are "locked down" in the east block — 600 men penned in their cells all day under maximum security.

Another 100, hardened gang leaders and members, are isolated under the gun in the north block with little likelihood of ever returning to the main population. The rest go about their business within the walls in an uneasy peace Sumner prays will stick. Officers scan this last group for "underground" gang members who face the north block if found.

"I don't have any reason to believe the same thing would not happen again," Sumner admitted ruefully of the day of violence. His main complaint is one shared in varying degrees by most of the men who have held the warden's post at one of the world's most notorious penitentiaries.

In short, trouble brews when hard cases are mixed with peaceful inmates who are unable to defend themselves against hate-filled crazies whose solution to disputes is sudden death at the end of a filed-down spoon.

"I think the great, great majority of inmates want to have a peaceful, tranquil place," he said in an interview. "But we've been at the mercy of gangs for some time. We were controlled."

"If they decided they wanted to kill somebody, we weren't in a position to do a heck of a lot about it."

WARDEN GEORGE SUMNER

As Sumner told it, the whites mistakenly killed a Muslim in the morning, thinking he was a member of the Black Guerrilla Family. The Muslims, who profess to be law-abiding and aloof from the troublemakers, backed up a standing threat to retaliate when one of their members is hurt.

Nine hours later, the warring factions clashed with clubs and knives, turning prison corridors into a bloody battlefield. When it was over another two inmates, whites, were dead, including a man who was hurled from a third-story tier.

Within a few percentage points, the racial mix at 2,200-inmate San Quentin is fairly representative of the statewide prison population: White, 41.9 per cent; black, 39.7; Mexican-American, 16.7; other, 1.7. The average age at Q is about 30.

Sumner says there are signs peace may return to the old bastille now that the gangs are isolated from the mainline. The warden guesses the "really hopeless bad guys" make up no more than 2 or 3 per cent of all inmates, and "the guys that belong to the gangs and have to do what the gangs decide at between 15 and 20 per cent at most."

He admits to much anxiety about the crowded east block, calling it a "large, unmanageable situation," and the inmates there "600 question marks." He adds wistfully: "It's hard to really know in-

State Workers Required Move

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At least 257 state workers now in Fayetteville and Winston-Salem would be required to move to Raleigh under a proposed change in the Department of Human Resources.

The regional offices in those two cities would be closed and their operations would be transferred to a single regional office in Raleigh.

"If we did centralize to Raleigh, then the employees would have no choice but to move to Raleigh or to commute from where they are," said Gene Barrett, a department planner, adding no jobs would be cut.

Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of human resources, rejected such a plan in May, but planners say the idea is not dead. The state legislature has ordered the department to prepare a report on regionalization January.

"We plan to bring it (consolidation) up again," said Richard Rideout, an adviser to Dr. Morrow.

Officials in the offices that would be affected are not enthusiastic over the proposal.

"Decentralization ought to continue and more delegation of authority ought to be given to the regional offices rather than less," said John Kanupp, assistant regional director for mental health in Winston-Salem.

"We are more accessible and more sensitive to local programs," said Robert Stewart, regional director of social services in Fayetteville. "I think that might be compromised if we moved to Raleigh."

Department planners said in May that a new Raleigh region would be better located geographically than the two existing offices.
