Hurricane Anita Growing As It Churns Westward

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hurricane Anita churned slowly westward in the warm Gulf of Mexico today, some 300 miles from New Orleans, growing stronger while thousands of jittery coastal residents worried and watched.

A weather service advisory located the storm center near latitude 26.3 north and longitude 91.3 west, south-southwest of New Orleans. Gales extended 150 miles to the east and 100 miles to the west.

Anita drove high tides onto the low-lying Gulf shore, causing bayous and rivers to run over their banks, and was within easy striking distance of land if it veered north.

A total of 4,500 offshore oil workers were evacuated to shore Tuesday and 10,000 residents at vulnerable points along 430 miles of coast were advised to head inland to avoid becoming trapped.

"Hurricane watch" status extended from Louisiana's Vermilion Bay, which lies south of New Iberia, westward to the Mexican border, with residents warned to be ready to move if necessary.

Multimillion dollar drilling rigs and manned production platforms, battened down and closed, stood deserted in the turbulent sea.

Emergency valves were closed on thousands of offshore oil gas wells. That action stopped the daily flow of about half a million barrels of crude and millions of cubic feet of natural gas through underwater pipelines.

Even as the weather service announced its hurricane watch Tuesday, thousands of Gulf coast residents moved inland — about 6,000 from Louisiana's sparsely populated Cameron Parish, where nearly 600 people drowned when Hurricane Audrey struck 20 years ago.

Another 3,000 left Grand Isle, La., 50 miles south of New Orleans, before midnight high tides put the highway under water. At Baytown, Texas, people whose homes are subject to tidal flooding were advised that tides up to four feet above normal could hit them.

Rhodesians Vote On Plan Of Settlement

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia's white voters, electing a new parliament today, were expected to give Prime Minister Ian Smith a mandate to negotiate with moderate black leaders for a political settlement excluding guerrilla leaders.

Opinion polls indicated Smith's Rhodesian Front party, opposed by ultra-right-wing whites and a small multiracial party, would win at least the two-thirds majority in the 66-seat Legislative Assembly needed to amend the constitution.

Soldiers in camouflage fatigues and farmers clutching rifles were among voters who queued up at polling stations across the nation in the 12-hour voting period.

The pattern of voting was expected to be clear by late today, although the final outcome was not expected until Thursday.

That's the day Smith is to meet with British Foreign Secretary David Owen and U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young, who are carrying a British-American plan for transition to majority rule.

Smith indicated little chance he would accept the plan. But he said he was prepared to study it and then show his own proposals.

In an election-eve address Tuesday, Smith said he was not ruling out continued talks on the U.S.-British plan, but he said its reported terms showed an "apparent determination to encompass our downfall."

The 58-year-old prime minister said he had "some very positive proposals" to offer Owen. He made no reference to Young, evidently because officially the initiative is led by Britain, the colonial power from which Smith broke in 1965 to preserve white rule.

Smith said in his television and radio address Tuesday that his proposals would be "in keeping with the principles which we regard as fundamental to any settlement." These, he said, were the retention of white confidence and expertise, the maintenance of the present security forces and continued alignment of Rhodesia "in the Western camp."

"I would be misleading you ... if I were to express any undue optimism about his (Owen's) visit because I already have seen ... the effects of the influence exerted on him by the so-called front-line presidents," Smith said Tuesday.

Canal Pact Support Is Building Up

By RICHARDE MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is piling up endorsements, pitching for local support and planning the biggest formal blowout the White House has ever seen to promote his treaty to give up control of the Panama Canal.

White House mail is overwhelmingly against the treaty.

"This is one of those items that falls on the shoulders of leaders which is not a popular thing," Carter said Tuesday in a sales talk to civic leaders from Florida and Georgia. "Many American citizens, well-educated and very patriotic, think the treaty is not a good idea."

"To change their concepts is my responsibility — not to cajole, not to pressure, but, in a way, to educate, to lead. I would like you to join with me, if you can in good conscience, in that effort."

Carter got immediate help from former Secretary of State Dean Rusk. He was part of the Georgia delegation to a briefing by the President and his aides in the state dining room at the White House. Afterward, Rusk, secretary of state during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, was brought out to talk to reporters.

He said Congress should give Carter the treaty or unlimited power to defend the Panama Canal from guerrilla warfare.

If the Senate rejects the treaty, Rusk said, "I think it would be irresponsible for the Congress not to exempt Panama from the War Powers Resolution." It requires presidents to justify any troop deployments that last longer than 60 days.

Will there be guerrilla war in Panama if the treaty dies?

"I would hope that would not occur," Rusk said. But to suppose that, he added, would be "foolhardy."

Carter also has won treaty support from former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who served in the Nixon and Ford administrations.

As Carter planned similar briefings for other state and local leaders, the AFL-CIO formally endorsed the treaty, calling it an "enduring basis for harmony in the Western Hemisphere." The United Auto Workers union followed suit.

The President's staff set to work planning a White House state dinner next Wednesday for visiting heads of state who will observe the treaty signing at the headquarters here of the Organization of American States.

"Outside of a funeral for a President, never have there been so many heads of state for an official state function," said Mary Hoyt, a spokeswoman for First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

As of Tuesday, 18 heads of state were planning to attend the signing ceremony. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said the final figure may exceed 20.

But the ceremonies will be meaningless unless the Senate ratifies the treaty, actually two agreements yielding control of the canal by the year 2000 and guaranteeing the United States perpetual rights to defend the waterway against any threat.

Setting Up Shop In Cuba

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — American diplomats are in Cuba to set up shop for the first time since relations were broken between the two nations 16 years ago.

The arrival of Lyle Lane, 51, the career diplomat assigned by President Carter to head the new "U.S. Interest Section" was low-key Tuesday in keeping with the limited upgrading of Washington-Havana relations.

Lane, accompanied on his trip to Cuba by aides, arranged to visit the old U.S. Chancery today. The mission he heads will be located in the building, but a Swiss flag will fly outside.

Switzerland has handled U.S. concerns in Cuba since diplomatic relations were broken between the two countries in 1961.

The former chancery as well as the ambassador's residence are being renovated.

Some of the Americans assigned to the interest section will live in apartments in the capital's Cubanacan section, considered the best location in Havana.

Lane comes to his new post from Lima, Peru, where he was the No. 2 diplomat for the United States. He will run a staff of about 10 Americans in Havana.

As part of the agreement, the Cubans are opening their own diplomatic office under a Czech flag in Washington.

While the State Department calls it a procedural step to make dealings between the United States and Cuba easier, the interest section arrangement is seen as an important move toward the eventual normalization of diplomatic ties between Havana and Washington.

State Department sources in Washington have said that the new interest sections will devote themselves largely to matters such as cultural and sports exchanges and will not deal with substantive policy issues which divide the two countries.

Recent steps toward closer relations between the United States and Cuba have included a modification of the U.S. trade embargo against the Cuban regime, the opening of Cuba to American tourists, suspension of U.S. surveillance flights over the island and new fishing agreements.

Earlier this month Cuban President Fidel Castro, after talks with Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, agreed to allow more than 80 Americans to leave the country and take their families with them. Previously the government would not allow the Americans' Cuban-born families to depart.

Ipock Files For Federal Pay Is To Be Raised

By RICHARDE MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — White-collar federal employees and the military will get a pay raise in October. President Carter will decide next month how much.

Carter announced Tuesday that he has decided to increase the pay for 3.4 million government employees, excluding those at the highest income levels.

That exempts members of Congress. Their salary went up by nearly $13,000 to $57,500 a year in February.

The increase is designed to make government salaries comparable to pay in private business.

Presently, a GS3 clerk makes $7,408; a GS9 economist $14,097; a GS13 engineer $24,308; and a GS17 bureau director, the highest level affected, $46,423.

Alan Campbell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, said Monday that Carter is inclined toward granting a 7.05 per cent across-the-board increase recommended by the commission, the Office of Management and Budget and the Labor Department.

But the President said in a White House statement issued Tuesday he has received a second recommendation. It is from the Federal Employees Pay Council and urges an 8.8 per cent raise. Council members are federal employe union leaders.

The Civil Service Commission said the 7.05 per cent increase would cost taxpayers $3.4 billion, and the White House said there is an allowance already in the budget to cover the cost.

The commission added that the 8.8 per cent hike would cost about $850 million more.

Ipock Files For City Councilman

William H. (Billy) Ipock Jr. filed this morning as a candidate for the City Council.

Ipock, a Greenville native, is president and sole owner of Happy Stores of North Carolina Inc., Greenville based convenience store chain.

The candidate is the current president of the North Carolina

Association of Convenience Stores which represents some 1,600 convenience stores in the state.

He serves on the board of directors of Sigma Nu fraternity in Chapel Hill and also the board of directors of the Rose High School Booster Club.

Ipock, a 1966 graduate of Rose High School here, graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1971. He was president of Sigma Nu fraternity at UNC.

In announcing his candidacy, Ipock noted, "I love Greenville and Greenville has been good to me. I feel obligated to do my part for the city of Greenville."

He added, "I think this year will go down in history as the big 'shakeup' in the Greenville City Council. The people of Greenville are tired of not being represented properly. I think you'll see a lot of new faces on the City Council after Oct. 11."

Ipock said that reducing crime in the city is a major concern of his and he added that he would like for Greenville to be known as the city with the "lowest crime rate and highest quality of life in North Carolina."

Extend Benefits

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Extended unemployment benefits have been resumed to eligible jobless workers in North Carolina, the state Employment Security Commission said today.

The benefits were discontinued last month when state and national unemployment figures dropped below minimums required for the additional payments. Although the state unemployment rate is 2.8 per cent, national levels have climbed to 4.5 per cent in a 13-week average, the employment commission said.

Unemployed workers may receive 13 additional weeks of benefits under the extended payments program, after their 26 weeks of state aid has been exhausted.

The extended payments coverage will begin this week. The commission said it did not know how many persons would be eligible for the program.

Central Prison Scene Of 'Real Nice' Wedding

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) —

Chaplain Julian Moorman said the wedding was "real nice. I just performed the same kind of ceremony I have hundreds of times before."

When the simple ceremony was over, the bride and groom had an hour together. Then the groom, Larry Eugene Smith, 33, returned to his quarters behind the 100-year-old stone walls of Central Prison.

Parole and a permanent reunion with his bride, 27-year-old Janice Flanagan of Newark, Del., are possible in 1979.

The newlyweds have courted for three years by mail and through the glass and wire mesh of prison visiting rooms. The courtship began in 1974, after Smith escaped while serving time for breaking and entering. Smith has spent 15 years of his life behind bars.

They met while he worked briefly for a cousin in Delaware, and when he returned to High Point, N.C. and was captured, he began corresponding with her.

"When I met her I just went crazy about her," he said in a pre-marriage interview. "There was a closeness there with her, something I ain't never had. She was a remarkable gal, there's no question about it."

"My record is terrible. That's the only thing I've got in 15 years is a bad record," he said. "Somebody like her could help me. She don't like me being in the penitentiary. I think she'll be good for me and I'll be good for her."

"You're talking to someone who's been in confinement all his life," he said. "I come here from the training school. Since 6-years-old I've been in one institution or another."

He said he hopes now that he is married, his wife can get custody of his 6-year-old son, Larry Jr., now in a Randolph County foster home.

The new Mrs. Smith said she was not shocked to learn Smith was an escapee.

"For about nine years I've been a barnaid, where you have to deal with people all the time," she said.

Since they met, she said, "I've dated other guys. It's not like I've just waited. But he's always been there."

Death Cause Unfound

The July 20 death of 21 year old Mary Iva Flanagan has been ruled "undetermined as to cause and manner" with "no evidence of any drugs" found following an exhaustive autopsy.

Dr. Jack Koonitz, Medical Examiner for Pitt County, today released a statement on the results of the autopsy.

"The autopsy of Mary Iva Flanagan has been completed," Dr. Koonitz stated.

"Exhaustive anatomical and toxicological studies have failed to establish a cause of death."

"Specifically," he added, "no evidence of any drugs or other chemical agent were found."

"Therefore, her death remains designated as undetermined as to cause and manner."

Kick-Off

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Luther Hodges Jr. kicks off his U.S. Senate campaign next Wednesday with a day-long tour of the state with stops in Greenville, Raleigh-Durham, Eden, Asheville and Charlotte.

The schedule includes breakfast in Greenville, a 10 a.m. meeting in the Raleigh area, lunch in Eden, Hodges, birthplace, an afternoon appearance in Asheville and dinner in Charlotte.

Hodges, wife and two children will go along. The Democratic senatorial candidate is the son of the late former governor, Luther H. Hodges.

TAX ON NEWSPAPERS?

Why do we have to pay sales tax on newspapers in supermarkets? Aren't newspapers supposed to be exempt from sales tax? E. B.

North Carolina Revenue Office Lemuel Harris said sales tax must be paid on newspapers. The Daily Reflector, for example, must turn in sales tax on all papers sold over-the-counter, in racks on the streets, and on issues sent through the mails. The carriers who retail them for us are exempt from paying tax on their sales, however, Harris said.

Denim Manufacturers Gearing To Go Blended

By RANDI ROSENBLUM
NEW YORK (AP) — Calling it the first big improvement in years, most of the nation's denim manufacturers are gearing up to go blended, and some even think the days of 100 per cent cotton denim are numbered.

The new product, a combination of cotton and polyester called a minblend, takes dye like cotton, looks like cotton, fades like cotton but doesn't shrink like it, according to the Denim News Service.

"In making this blend we found we could accomplish what our customers wanted us to accomplish," said Larry Addison of Swift Textiles which, he says, will be producing only blended denim by the end of the year. "The advantage," he says, "is that if you buy a size 7, it will stay a size 7."

Blended denim has stirred up a small controversy with the cotton growers and Cotton Inc. has mounted an advertising campaign against adding synthetics to denim, noting that it takes five or six times more energy to make a pound of polyester, which is petroleum based, than to make a pound of cotton.

Polyester advocates counter that if you have to weed it or feed it, the fiber costs too much.

There will be an extensive TV and radio campaign addressed to the consumer, starting during the back-to-school buying period, supporting the "virtues of 100 per cent cotton as the true denim," according to Don Kleckner, vice president, marketing services, of Cotton Inc.

"Cotton Inc. is telling people to look at the label," he says. "That's what they've been getting, been satisfied with and if they want the traditional type of denim jeans or new neat look, they can get them in regular 100 per cent cotton or the new 100 per cent cotton with the new shrink reduction finish, 'Sanforset,' that overcomes shrinkage."

Although some mills have been making a synthetic denim for years, it has only been in the last 18 months that they have developed a mixture they consider suitable, industry sources say. "In the early days we couldn't get total dyeability," noted Ben Sampson of Cone Mills.

In the new fabric, which is 65 per cent cotton and 35 per cent polyester, the cotton is forced to the outside of the yarn when it is spun so that the finished product takes dye and feels like cotton, the manufacturers explain. "We didn't want to lose any of the esthetics of cotton," said Sampson, adding that the day may come when all denim will be polyester blended.

Although all of the seven top mills are now experimenting with blended fabrics, some are still cautious about its acceptance. "I doubt if we ever will go entirely to the blend," said Brian Clarke of Burlington Industries. "There are still a lot of people who want cotton."

Canton Textiles is continuing to make only cotton denim, although it is now running blend samples. "If the market demands blends, we can make them," said spokesman Jim Wheeler.

Both Burlington and Canton are using similar chemical processes to give cotton denim an easy-care finish and to reduce shrinkage, but they admit this is more costly than going synthetic.

The seven mills — Burlington, Canton, Cone, Dan River, Graniteville, J. P. Stevens and Swift — supply most of the denim used in the United States. They report an increasing percentage is blended to meet consumer demands.

"The minblend is here," said Chester Braman of Graniteville, "because of the desire of the consumer for greater neatness."

"The consumer will ultimately decide," said Sampson. "Only when he comes back for the second pair will we really know."

Dog Tags The Best Pet Retriever

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I recently drove past a dog that was wandering aimlessly across a busy highway. It looked so lost and bewildered that I stopped to see if I could help. She was an old dog, thoroughly exhausted and utterly filthy from what must have been many days or weeks of travel. The poor thing was too weak and tired to object when I put her in my car. She was a large dog, part collie and gentle as a lamb.

I made inquiries (no leads), stopped at an animal hospital (closed), drove to the police station (the animal warden's van was not available) and finally drove her to our SPCA, where she was given food, shelter and a chance for her owners to find her.

Later I searched the lost and found columns, only to be shocked by the number of advertisements for lost pets, such as, "Generous reward for our beloved pet," or, "Entire family grieving."

Abby, where are these people's brains? They are spending money now when it's too late, when for $1 they could have bought an I.D. tag with the animal's name, and the owner's address and phone number!

If you care for animals, please print this for pet owners to think about.

HEARTSICK IN PA.

DEAR HEARTSICK: I agree, there is no excuse for "losing" a pet. Pet owners out there—are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: My husband says that I am "sick" and in need of a doctor because I complained about the following: Before I am out of the car, my husband is already in the car "waiting" for me before I am out of the house.

When we go to a restaurant, I'm not even out of my chair and my husband is out of the door. Recently, at the funeral of a relative, all the other husbands were standing beside their wives, and I didn't even know where mine was until it was all over.

Please comment.

DEAR NELLIE: If it is "sick" to expect common courtesy, then you are indeed "sick."

DEAR ABBY: In our home we have a lovely guest room with a comfortable queen-size bed. A married couple came to stay for a week, and when we showed them their room, the man said, "A DOUBLE BED! We haven't slept in a double bed for years. At home we have twin beds."

His wife gave him a dirty look, so he kept quiet. We would have offered them our bedroom, but we have a double bed, too.

After they went home, we heard from a mutual friend that they didn't enjoy their stay with us because they aren't used to sleeping together.

Needlework: A Royal Pastime

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Some of Britain's queens have been more adept with the needle than with the scepter of state, according to a recent exhibition dedicated to a non-sewing queen.

"Threads of History," a treasure-trove of embroidery assembled by the Royal School of Needlework, honored Queen Elizabeth on her 25th anniversary as monarch.

Its 254 dazzling embroideries included work made or worn by 10 British queens, including Queen Elizabeth II.

She was represented by the astounding train she wore at her coronation in 1953 — a magnificent sweep of imperial purple velvet, embroidered with gold and trimmed with ermine, which trails 18 feet from shoulder to tip.

"Isn't it gorgeous?" said an official of the sponsoring Needlework school. "We roll it up every night for safekeeping. In the morning one of our best apprentices spreads it out and gives it a good but careful dusting."

A surprising number of the queen's relatives and ancestors, however, produced needlework of professional quality. Some are still doing it.

Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, is Queen Victoria's sole surviving grandchild, a member of the Needlework school's council and "a really dedicated needlewoman," the official said.

"She's 94 now, and still sewing away."

The first Queen Elizabeth had more scepter work to do, but the exhibit still holds a beautiful panel she embroidered as a cushion cover gift for her governess. It contains Elizabeth's initials and her royal coat of arms.

Mary Queen of Scots was the most dedicated royal embroiderer. Several of her works are on show.

The most poignant is an odd set of child's reins — a strap to go around the baby's chest and two reins for mom to hold — she made for her son, later King James I of England.

"She always kept them with her," the official said. "She took them to the scaffold and handed them over just before her head was chopped off to a member of the family which has had them ever since."

Dozens of other items worked by or worn by royalty adorn the exhibition, which spans needlework from about 1350 to a quilt "finished a few days ago," the official said.

There are curiosities like a wedding dress made of banana and pineapple leaves and a child's sampler reputed to be the smallest in the world — the complete alphabet and six numerals on a scrap of canvas less than an inch square.

One huge hanging, completed just in time for the exhibition, is from the needlewomen of Alabama. Its 100 squares worked in wool and canvas depict events and themes connected with that American state.

Besides honoring the Queen's Silver Jubilee, "Threads of History" was also intended to raise money for the Royal School of Needlework.

A private charity founded in 1872 by one of Queen Victoria's daughters, the school fills a dual function of teaching and restoration. Some instances of its restoration of ancient or historic fabrics are in the exhibition.

But the school's skilled stitchers also undertake special commissions — not all of them from royalty.

Queen Elizabeth's coronation train is the school's work. But so was a beautiful coat of gold embroidery on dark blue wool made for Taffy, mascot of the Royal Regiment of Wales. Taffy is a goat.

SAFE SCHOOL LUNCHES

It's back to school time again! Children hurry off to school wearing new outfits and toting new school supplies.

You may pack a special treat in your child's lunchbox. That's a great way to start off the new school year. Kids love lunches from home, especially when there is a treat or surprise inside. Be careful, though, to avoid packing a dangerous surprise in your child's lunchbox—food poisoning.

Packed school lunches can be dangerous if they are not prepared carefully. Bacteria and germs, which cause food poisoning, grow rapidly at temperatures between 40°f. and 140°f. And, warm temperatures in school lockers and desks provide a playground for growing germs and bacteria.

Here are some tips that will help you prepare safe school lunches for your children:

Keep Food Cold. Sandwiches containing meat and poultry products can be frozen the night before they are packed for lunch. Take them out of the freezer just before leaving the house. They will thaw slowly in the locker and be just right by noon. By keeping sandwiches cold, you inhibit the growth of germs and bacteria.

To keep school lunches cold—get a freezer gel device. Place one in each lunch bag. If you don't have one—make your own by taking a clean margarine container, filling it with water and freezing overnight. Just before your children leave for school, place the homemade device in the center of their lunch bags. This will keep lunches cold and safe.

Liquid food products can be kept cold by pouring them into a vacuum bottle or other insulated container.

Keep Foods Hot. During the fall and winter months—as the weather outside gets cool and crisp—soups and hot chocolate become popular lunchtime treats. To keep these foods warm until noon, pour them into a vacuum bottle or other insulated container when they are boiling hot. Put the cap on immediately. Steam escaping from the food should be kept inside to help keep the contents warm

ECU Produces Mammogram Film

ECU News Bureau
A film to show radiologists and radiology technicians how to take mammograms is under production at the Audio-Visual Services Center of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. Produced at the request of the American College of Radiologists (ACR), the film will be ready for release by the end of September.

Mammograms are X-rays of the breasts often ordered by physicians who suspect cystic or tumor growths in their female patients. It is the best diagnostic method to date for accurately detecting growths within the breast and reached national prominence during the Ford administration when the cancers of Betty Ford and Happy Rockefeller were discovered by having the test.

As in all diagnostic testing procedures, technique is important in achieving accurate results. The film is designed to teach radiologic techniques of taking mammograms of women with unusually large or small breasts, or atrophic breasts as in cases of elderly women. The film is directed by Wayne Williams, director of the center.

Williams explained that the X-ray techniques now used for mammography of breasts of average size and shape do not provide accurate studies of all variations in breast conformation, hence the purpose of the film.

He said the film demonstrates techniques using both conventional X-ray equipment and a special mammography machine designed in France. When conventional equipment is used, the mammogram is taken with the patient lying down while with the French machine, the patient is seated.

Shooting of the film took place at a private radiology clinic in the suburbs of Washington, D. C. Denise White, a radiology technician at the clinic and consultant to the ACR who narrated and wrote the script for the film, demonstrates the techniques in the film using actresses who are radiology technicians.

Marriage Planned

Patricia Ann Landeck of Atlanta, Ga., and Charles Benjamin Smith of Ayden announce their plans to wed on Saturday, Sept. 17, in the First Christian Church, Ayden.

Williams said the center is hoping the ACR will commission them to do other medical education films.

Besides Williams, credit line will be given in the film to Dr. William L. Logan, Director of the Center for Educational Development and Evaluation who will do script revision along with Paul Mehne Associate Director of the Center.

Dave Balch, a member of the Audio-Visual Services Center staff, will assemble and edit the film and Bill Gray, of Salem Films, Inc., of Winston-Salem, will receive credit for the photography.

Governors Want Natural Gas Price Deregulation

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Governors of 10 southern and border states have sent Congress a message: Deregulate the price of natural gas.

The energy resolution, adopted 10-2 Tuesday by the Southern Governors Conference is similar to one that Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma guided through the Midwestern Governors Conference.

Only Govs. James Hunt of North Carolina and John D. Rockefeller IV of West Virginia voted against the resolution. Hunt said he believed free market pricing of gas would increase the inflation rate.

Does anybody pay attention to the Southern Governors Conference resolutions?

"Apparently there is some interest in the administration in the Panama Canal resolution, to the extent of contacting some of the governors. I would hope that would (also) indicate an interest in the energy resolution and that the administration would look at the energy resolution," said Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, conference chairman.

A resolution opposing the proposed treaty that would gradually transfer control over the Panama Canal to Panama fizzled when Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana decided not to push for a vote. A 3-3 tie in the resolutions committee had stalled the Edwards resolution.

Debate on the 14-page energy resolution focused on a provision asking Congress to remove wellhead price controls on new natural gas, with a requirement that windfall profits be reinvested in the search for more gas. The governors asked for gradual deregulation "to mitigate its impact on consumers."

"There are good reasons for continuing to regulate the price of natural gas as we do for other public utilities. . . . We do that because there is no competition. You can't go out and shop for it," said Hunt.

He said that if gas prices rose to $2.50 per 1,000 cubic feet at the wellhead instead of the $1.75 regulated price recommended by President Carter and approved by the House, the inflation rate would rise another 1.6 per cent.

"It would put us back in the inflationary situation that had a lot to do with the recent and severe recession we just experienced," Hunt said.

Boren said Hunt overestimated the effect of deregulation and asserted that "the impact on consumers would not be anywhere near as great as increased dependence on foreign sources."

Gov. Pierre duPont IV of Delaware agreed with Boren and said gas regulation had been a failure.

"In Delaware last winter, we ran out," duPont said.

The governors also heard appeals from a conference agency, the Southern Growth Policies Board, for more money to lobby against efforts to drain federal funds from the South to the North.

"There are seven north-eastern lobbying coalitions currently at work in Washington, and we in the South are going to be eaten alive if we don't wake up and react," said Georgia Gov. George Busbee, incoming chairman of the board.

A formula heavily weighted against the South by the use of data on existing houses built before 1939 is being used in devising 1978-81 formulas for community block grants, he said.

"The northeastern coalitions are known to meet and strategize on a daily basis. We have just begun to advise our congressmen of the effects of some of these formula changes," Busbee said.

He said he doubted that Carter, a former Georgia governor, "knows that we are being discriminated against."

He added, ". . . And I am going to let him know."

Further Psychiatric Tests Of David Berkowitz Are Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — In the first of a series of psychiatric examinations, David Berkowitz, accused as the "Son of Sam" killer, has been found unfit to be tried, but one prosecutor says further tests will clear the way for a trial.

In a report unsealed Tuesday, court-appointed psychiatrists said the 24-year-old former postal employee was suffering from paranoia, delusions of persecution or grandeur. His chances of recovery were described as "guarded," meaning they do not know whether his mental condition will ever improve.

But Brooklyn Dist. Atty. Eugene Gold asked for and received the right to have psychiatrists of his choosing examine Berkowitz. He predicted that the suspect eventually will be judged competent and will stand trial for the murder of six persons and the attempted murder of seven more during a year-long shooting spree in New York City.

Justice Gerald Held of State Supreme Court, sitting in Brooklyn and presiding over the proceedings, gave the state until Oct. 4 to present any data that might open the way to a trial.

Dr. Daniel W. Schwartz, chief of forensic psychiatry at Kings County Hospital where Berkowitz is being held in a mental ward cell, and his colleague Dr. Richard L. Weidenbacher, found the suspect "incapacitated."

"As a result of mental disease or defect," they wrote in summing up eight typewritten pages, Berkowitz "lacks capacity to understand the proceedings against him or to assist in his own defense." This precisely meets the state's criteria for mental incompetence.

Legal experts say a final court ruling of incompetence would mean that the suspect would be confined to a state facility for the criminally insane for an indefinite period. If his mental state improved, he could be brought to trial, assuming that witnesses were still available, but it is also possible that within a few years all charges against him would have to be dropped.

The report that Berkowitz was not competent to stand trial was not taken pleasantly by friends and relatives of his alleged victims.

Neysa Moskowitz, mother of the killer's last murder victim, said, "I can't buy it. I'm sorry."

She said Berkowitz should be "pulled apart bit by bit." Berkowitz has been indicted for killing the woman's 20-year-old daughter, Stacy, and for attempting to kill her date, Robert Violante, also 20.

Will Train Volunteers

Parents, or other adult volunteers are being sought to take a training session as assistants for a forthcoming Hearing Conservation Program to be conducted in September.

Mrs. Lynn Shine, Speech, Hearing and Language Coordinator for the Greenville City Schools, has announced the date of a two hour training session for volunteers.

This will be on Wednesday, September 14. At that session, volunteers will be taught the fundamentals of assisting in the hearing screening program which this year will cover students in the city schools in kindergarten and grades one, three, five and nine.

Deadline for volunteers is Friday, September 9. All persons interested are to call the city school office, 752-4192.

Recruiting For Job Training

ATLANTA (AP) — The federal government is recruiting women, veterans and other minority groups for 880 openings in the Southeast in a training program for construction and industrial jobs.

The program is under a grant from the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Cities and the estimated number of training openings in the South are: Raleigh-Durham, N.C., 100; Epes, Ala.-Tupelo, Miss., 80; Greensboro, N.C., 75; Lexington, Ky., 75; Nashville, Tenn., 150; Orlando-Cocoa, Fla., 200; Savannah, Ga., 100; Wilmington, N.C., 75 and Charlotte, N.C. 25.

$134.14 Day On Market

FARMVILLE — The Farmville market had the highest average of the season Tuesday, with quality grade cutters and leaf selling for as high as $1.47 per pound. Top practical price paid was $1.43.

Less desirable grades remained steady. The volume of sales was heavy and all firms had a full sale. Leaf and cutter grades accounted for most of the volume.

Stabilization receipts were low, accounting for only 1.83 per cent of the gross sale.

The To date, market Tuesday sold 428,142 pounds for the Farmville market this season has sold 11,219,434 pounds for $12,615,543 for a season average of $112.44 per hundred pounds.

Playhouse Sets Audition Hours

Auditions for the opening play of the new season for the East Carolina Playhouse are being held two nights this week, Thursday and Friday, September 1 and 2.

The auditions will take place from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. in McGinnis Auditorium on campus for a musical comedy, Bye Bye Birdie!, to be directed by Edgar Loessin. The play is scheduled for performance October 10 through October 15 at McGinnis.

Persons needed for roles in the comedy range in age from high school students to their parents. Auditions are open to the public, to ECU students, faculty and staff. "Anyone interested is invited to try out," Loessin said. Loessin, Chairman of the Department of Drama and Speech at ECU, is also Artistic Director of the Playhouse.

He added that "people who audition should be prepared to sing a song of their own choice. We'll provide an accompanist." Those trying out should also be prepared to dance, and choreographer Frank Wagner will lead each auditionee through some movements.

Bye Bye Birdie! was written by Michael Stewart with music by Charles Strouse and lyrics by Lee Adams. The play tells the story of a rock and roll singer about to be inducted into the army. "The play was inspired by the success of Elvis Presley in the late 1950's," Loessin said, "and we thought it would be a fitting tribute to his passing."

Offerings consisted of leaf, cutters, lugs, primings and more non descript tobacco than evident the past few sales days.

For the season, the market has sold 18,503,614 pounds for $20,493,714, an average of $110.76 per hundred pounds.

Cite A Vacancy In 3rd Judicial District Post

The state Judicial Nominating Committee announced that a vacancy exists in the office of Superior Court Judge of the Third Judicial District comprising the counties of Pitt, Pamlico, Craven and Carteret.

The committee reported that any qualified person desiring to be considered for nomination, or any person desiring to recommend a qualified person for nomination, may do so by writing the executive secretary of the committee in Raleigh in time to reach the office on or before Sept. 19.

According to the announcement, the committee established by Gov. Jim Hunt will nominate to the governor qualified persons to fill the vacancy.

"It is the purpose of the committee to seek out and nominate to the governor for appointment as Superior Court judges persons selected solely on the basis of ability and fitness to hold judicial office, without regard to political consideration," it was pointed out.

Full consideration, it was mentioned, will be accorded to all qualified persons, regardless of race, sex, or political affiliation.

The vacancy must be filled by a resident of the Judicial District. No particular form of application or recommendation is required.

College Degree Still Of Value

The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association bulletin reports on a recent study concerning the value of a college education.

The study concludes that a college degree is still worth it, although the value of a diploma has diminished in recent years.

"College graduates are less susceptible to unemployment than any other group in the labor force," the study says. "They are three times less likely to become unemployed than noncollege graduates."

"College educated persons have higher incomes than high school graduates. Although the difference has been narrowed in recent years, the 1974 statistics revealed that college men over 25 years of age earned 36 percent more than men whose education stopped with high school."

The advantage should continue for the next decade because:

- Fewer young people will be entering the labor market due to the decline in the birthrate.
  - College enrollment growth is slowing down.
  - College graduates are entering a broader range of white collar jobs than in the past. This is influencing job specifications.
  - Professional and technical employment is expected to expand more than total employment, thereby increasing the demand for college training. Employment is predicted to expand 29.5 percent in professional and technical classifications by 1985, compared to 20 percent in all occupations.
- College graduates in some areas of study have found it difficult to find jobs in recent years. The statistics are still on the side of those who go on to and complete college, however. And there will be an advantage to graduating from college for some time in the future.

Excellent Beginning For Area Schools

Area schools have opened in orderly fashion.

Both Greenville City and Pitt County Schools reported that the school systems got underway this week with few problems.

That's an excellent way to start and we hope it portends an outstanding year for the two school systems.

THIS AFTERNOON

See Link In Jobs-Schools

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Labor supply is the single most important determining factor to an industrial prospect looking around North Carolina for a place to build a new plant.

So much has been said about the supply of labor in the context of "chea," labor that few people bother to look beyond the running debate about unionism and right-to-work laws.

But state officials feel attention needs to be given to labor supply in terms of people who are trained to work, well educated, and have a good attitude. That is what they mean by labor supply being critical to landing new industries, say state development experts.

Commerce Secretary D. M. (Lauch) Faircloth and Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. both feel there are sections of the state where entry level jobs (so-called cut-and-sew) are needed to help people move into industrial jobs for the first time.

Trained To Work

They see such operations training people to work, and helping to develop a labor pool which will eventually attract more sophisticated industrial operations into which the employed workers will move at higher wages.

For other areas of the state where the labor supply is already well educated and well trained, the state will use an aggressive approach to industrial recruitment: targeting specific firms which appear best suited for certain areas; seeking to disperse industry to small town and rural settings so people can remain "at home" and still find jobs; pushing North Carolina as a state with a favorable business climate and a popular "Sun Belt" location.

But running through all of the developmental approaches is one constant theme: the need for educational advancement to upgrade the labor supply. At all levels of the educational community, and among industry hunters, this is a recurring theme.

The need lies behind Gov. Hunt's constant attention to reading, testing, and competency measures; it undergirds efforts by the Community College System to bring new directions to adult basic education—broadening that field to include more than simple illiteracy.

There is, studies show, a direct link between education and income.

Studies by the Research Triangle Institute and the state are being used to demonstrate that relationship. The state's low level of educational achievement among residents is seen as both a result of the low per capita income in the state, and a reason for it.

BILL NOBLITT

No Success

Accepting the proposition that industry must be assured of trained or trainable workers, there are some areas of the state which could not attract modern, sophisticated plants at this time say the experts.

North Carolina consistently ranks at the bottom in per capita income and in industrial wages paid. She also ranks at or near the bottom in median school years completed (10.6 years), and near the toop in numbers of people with less than five years of school. Ten per cent of the population fall in that category. Nationally, more than half the people have a high school diploma. Here, putting us 48th, slightly more than a third are high school graduates.

In other measurements, the state's high school dropout rate is high (one third of the entering ninth graders never graduate), and Tar Heels rank fifth in the nation in numbers of men who can't pass the tests for military service.

State officials see other relationships between school and jobs: school dropouts are likely to be job dropouts; discipline problems may show up in resentment of supervisors on the job; tardiness and absenteeism set patterns for later years.

One of the goals in the state's reorganized economic development program is to pull together activities of the public schools, community colleges, Department of Labor, and Employment Security Commission to help educate a labor supply which will help attract higher paying industry.

Involve Right-To-Life

WASHINGTON—Every time you have a "Son of Sam" type incident, there is an outcry for some kind of national gun legislation which will hopefully prevent guns from getting into the hands of the "sickies," of which this country seems to have more than its share. Then, as soon as the publicity dies down, the matter is forgotten until the next main media event gets people excited again.

The reason you can't get Congress to pass any decent antigun legislation is that one of the strongest lobbies in Washington is the National Rifle Assn., and the weakest groups are the antigun people.

Finstermeister, who has been trying to get Congress to address itself to the problem, may have come up with a solution.

He told me, "We can't get congressmen or senators to budge on gun control because no one pays any attention to us. They think we're kooks."

"You're a voice crying in the wilderness," I admitted.

"But there is a solution. I think the gun control people should hook up with the Right to Life proponents."

"They're against abortion," I said.

"That's true. But why are they against abortion? Because they maintain you're killing someone when you remove a fetus. Since they're interested in saving the life of a person, it follows that they should work for gun control as well."

"But the National Rifle Assn. maintains that guns don't kill people—people kill people."

"That's true, but the ma-majority of people killed were killed with guns. Now there is some question of whether or not a fetus is a person. For the sake of getting the Right to Life people on our side, I'm willing to buy 'the fetus is a person' theory if they'll buy our thesis that a person being shot by a gun is also a live human being and should have the same protection as an unborn baby."

"That's a tough one for the Right to Life lobby. Being anti-abortion is one thing. But when you want them to come out against killing real people with guns, you're opening a whole new can of beans."

"It's the same can," Finstermeister insisted. "You're either for life or against it. Whether it's a doctor who takes a life performing an abortion or someone with a handgun drilling his wife or best friend, you're snuffing out someone. The Right to Life people should be able to understand that. Even HEW Secretary Joe Califano should be able to understand it."

Options Being Studied

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is at work on new measures to reduce inflation, possibly including voluntary standards for wage and price increases.

Administration economists have concluded the April program announced by President Carter will be insufficient to reduce inflation much below the current rate of between 6 and 7 per cent, it was learned Tuesday.

Work on developing wage and price standards is scheduled to begin within a month, and, if approved, they could be ready within six months. They would vary from industry to industry.

The administration's goal is to reduce inflation to about 4 per cent by 1981.

Although it was understood that one administration official favors the wage-price standards as the best of the various options under consideration, it is not certain they will be adopted.

"It hasn't gone very far yet.... At this stage, it has not advanced further than an option under consideration," said one administration source.

The standards would have to be cleared with the Labor-Management Group, a 16-member body of top corporate and union executives, most of whom have argued against anything that resembles wage and price controls.

The Carter administration believes that no anti-inflation program will be successful unless it receives the cooperation of top labor unions and businesses. As a result, the Labor-Management Group has become the key sounding board for anti-inflation plans.

One provision of Carter's April program called for administration officials to meet regularly with the Labor-Management Group to discuss ways of controlling inflation. Administration officials believe these meetings have been so fruitful that it now will be possible to undertake new measures without arousing fears they will be the first step toward wage and price controls.

To the editor:

A recent item in the Reflector about our hospital emergency room quotes Dr. Howard Gradis as saying there are few differences between the new and the old emergency rooms. He goes on to speak of what he refers to as "abuse" of the emergency room. It does appear the attitude of personnel in the emergency room is unchanged.

Let's consider a few facts about the nature of illness and medical care:

1. It is a fact that illness and disease strike at any hour of the day or night—not just on weekdays.
2. It is a fact that many people cannot obtain needed medical care nights and weekends, for a variety of reasons.

It seems to some of us that our medical care system is designed to maximize physician income and make available medical care at the time most convenient to physicians.

I am sure that some do "abuse" the emergency room. Others, however, in good faith go there because they are really worried about their symptoms. They have no way of knowing in advance if their problem is life-threatening or not. After all, how could they know before being examined by a physician?

The article quotes Dr. Gradis: "If you've been sick for four days, don't come in at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. Call your doctor, or come to the emergency room during the day." Symptoms sometimes worsen without much warning the night or on a weekend. If this happens, what are we to do if we have not yet chosen a doctor or if we are new to the area or if we cannot reach our doctor?

I get the same message now that I did earlier when I visited the old emergency room — You'd better not come here unless you are just about dead. If it turns out death is not imminent, you will be considered an abuser of the emergency room.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A One-Way Disarmament

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A proposal to slow development of space weapons essential for protecting U.S. intelligence and communications satellites in an all-out war is expected to go before President Carter soon in Presidential Review Memorandum (PRM) 23.

Although finishing touches have not yet been put on PRM 23, the thrust of the interagency study is certain at this writing. It will seek to lead the President away from the Ford administration's push for swift development of outer-space weaponry.

The importance of developing top-secret technology to defend against possible

Soviet attacks on U.S. satellites would seem obvious on its face. A Soviet attack destroying communication and spy satellites would leave the U.S. helpless. Nevertheless, the arms control lobby, now riding high with Paul Warnke as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), looks to outer space for an early test of the Warnke thesis on arms control.

Warnke's thesis: The U.S. should unilaterally abandon new weapons systems as an example to the Russians, assuming the Kremlin would then follow that example. This thesis, unsupported as yet by any evidence during the past 30 years of U.S.-Soviet relations, would be applied at once to outer-space warfare — if the President accepts the thrust of PRM 23.

In its dying days, the Ford administration conducted two secret studies into how the U.S. should respond to alarming Soviet advances in the technology of offensive outer-space warfare — satellite-killing Soviet satellites, sometimes called satellite interceptors. The Ford answer: Full speed ahead for the U.S.

A footnote: Compounding the U.S. danger was the conviction last spring of two Americans on espionage charges in TRW's top-secret weapons plant in California. They were charged with passing to Moscow this nation's most advanced outer-space warfare technology, immediately making U.S. satellites more vulnerable to potential Soviet attack.

distinguished Sovietologist Boris Klosson as the State Department's senior member of the U.S. SALT delegation.

Gelb chose for the job Frank H. Perez, who will leave his post as political aide in the U.S. embassy in Brussels soon for the SALT delegation in Geneva — the first non-Sovietologist ever named to the job. The Perez-for-Klosson switch continues rapid transformation of the SALT team from skeptical defense-oriented experts to inexperienced arms control advocates' headed by Paul Warnke.

Gelb offered a second-level drafting job in the U.S. delegation to Klosson, a well-known professional diplomat. Klosson rejected it and has not been offered another post. So, his ouster by Gelb apparently ends a notable diplomatic career at age 58.

Competition In A Monopoly?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the name of competition, says its critics, the Securities and Exchange Commission is seeking to establish a monopoly in the securities industry's recordkeeping or settlement-clearance function.

"In my long experience as a state and federal legislator I can remember no other instance where competition was fostered by creating a monopoly," says Rep. John Moss, D-Calif. The concept, he says, is "somewhat bizarre."

The Justice Department has expressed doubts about the plan. And Bradford National Corp., which handles paperwork functions for the over-the-counter market and Pacific Stock Exchange, has sued to prevent the monopoly.

If put into practice, says Peter Del Col, chairman of Bradford, it would soon muscle his company, which designs, installs and operates sophisticated computerized recordkeeping systems, out of stock clearance and settlement.

His company's business, he continues, then would go almost wholly to the National Securities Clearing Corp., created by combining the clearing operations of the New York and American stock exchanges and the National Association of Securities Dealers.

That, says Del Col, would mean a noncompetitive, government regulated monopoly that would fix rates for most transactions and force competing clearing associations, and in the end regional exchanges, out of business.

"It means," said another Bradford spokesman, "that New York brokers, with the help of the SEC, have already seized control of an emerging national securities market by capturing its underlying transaction processes."

Del Col says this was never the intention of Congress in passing the Securities Act Amendments of 1975. Those amendments, he and others point out angrily and with frustration, were intended to bring competition to the industry.

"The theory of the SEC is that they'll form a monopoly and watch it closely," says Del Col. But, he continues, the proliferating costs of regulation can produce skyrocketing government expenditures and ruin innovation.

Almost all innovations in clearing and settlements during the past 20 years have come from clearing corporations not affiliated with the American or New York exchanges, Del Col observes. That's the nature of competition, he says.

"It's what I call competitive free enterprise," he says. "I start from the basic premise that this country is built on competition and that it runs better that way than with monopoly."

What the SEC wants, he says, "is like having competition in the auto industry but a monopoly in tires. The cars will run on those tires, but you'll never have improvements in them."

Del Col says it isn't only his company, which he says is "the nation's largest company providing computer-clerical processing and record-keeping services to financial institutions, industry and government," that is endangered.

A monopoly, he says, could serve to stifle regional competition, such as from the Pacific Stock Exchange and the Midwest Exchange, the presidents of which have been critical of the power exercised by the New York-based institutions.

Del Col maintains that a system of competitive clearing and settling organizations not only would result in more efficiency and lower costs, but that it could be implemented sooner than with monopoly."

Strength For Today

THE GREAT MIRACLE

"Wherefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things are passed away; behold, they are become new."

How true this has been found to be by anyone who has experienced the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit! When a person accepts Christ as Lord and Savior, he finds his life not simply improving, but fundamentally transformed. He becomes a new creature. The things he formerly loved have passed away, and new interests have come to take their place.

Even the best things of life are suffused with a new glory. The noted evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, declared that when he was converted, not only was his inner life illuminated in a dazzling fashion, but the very appearance of Boston Common, across which he walked, was gorgeously transformed.

When we yield our hearts to Christ, we come to see the whole of life in its proper relation to the Creator.

Found Guilty Of Gasoline Price-Fixing

BALTIMORE (AP) — Five independent oil companies, their trade association and its executive director were convicted of conspiring to fix the price of 17 billion gallons of gasoline sold from New York to Virginia worth $4 billion.

A U.S. District Court jury of six men and six women handed up its verdict Tuesday after five days of deliberations in the 3½-month trial.

The defendants missed a felony charge by three weeks, but they still face an expected flood of triple damage suits.

The three weeks is the time between the end of the seven-year period covered by the indictment and when President Ford signed the Antitrust Procedures and Penalties Act of 1974. The act upgraded price-fixing conspiracies to felonies.

The corporate defendants face fines of up to $50,000 and Robert R. Cavin, 55, faces a $50,000 fine and up to a year's imprisonment. The Vienna, Va., resident is the executive director of the Society of Independent Gasoline Marketers of America, (SIGMA), based in St. Louis.

Under the new felony law, individuals can be fined up to $100,000 and sent to prison for three years. Companies can be fined $1 million. The Justice Department filed a civil suit against all of the defendants in 1976 and the presiding judge, C. Stanley Blair, has consolidated triple damage suits filed by exterminators, taxi fleets, bakers and other large purchasers.

The jury returned guilty verdicts against SIGMA, Cavin, Ashland Oil, Inc., Amerada Hess, Petroleum Marketing Corp., Meadville Corp., and Kayo Oil Co. The jury acquitted Continental Oil Co. — which owns Kayo — and Crown Central Petroleum Corp.

Three corporate officers were acquitted by the judge at the conclusion of the prosecution case on Aug. 10.

During the trial, the jurors heard testimony from oil industry officials — many of them testifying under immunity — who said price fixing was so pervasive that, according to Hess' former marketing coordinator, "it was inherent in every phone call."

The government claimed that the companies schemed to stamp out discounts and eliminate national, regional and local price wars. Prosecution witnesses said they relayed advance notice of price war situations in telephone calls to competitors.

The corporate defendants admitted extensive contacts but insisted that they were related to refinery exchanges, supply shortages or routine talks among large corporations.

Two School Entry Cases

WINTERVILLE — Winterville Police Chief G. I. Jones says there have been two incidents involving unlawful entry of schools since Winterville schools opened.

He said about $200 damage was done to three different doors of W. H. Robinson School Monday night when someone tried to pry them open. Entry was apparently not gained. He investigated and is continuing to investigate the incident.

Officer G. W. Williams discovered during routine patrol last night that someone had entered the kindergarten classrooms of the same school. Nothing was missed, but there was evidence that the rooms had been ransacked, Jones said. Williams reported the incident at 9:15 p. m.

"Apparently someone thinks there is money kept in the schools," Chief Jones said. "But the principals tell me that absolutely none is left in any of the buildings."

Another theft reported was that of two potted plants from the porch of Mrs. Ed Flake. Jones said Mrs. Flake estimated the value of the two at $20 to $25. She made the report at 7:05 a. m. today, he said.

Find Marijuana In Man's Room

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Alphonzo Calvin Mayo, 27 of 10 Ford St. on charges of possession of marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Mayo was taken into custody following an 11:25 a.m. search of his residence where investigators found six bags of marijuana in a bedroom.

helps explain a philosophical conflict over tax reform within the Carter administration.

Blumenthal billed the government for his higher-priced seats to save physical wear and tear flying across the Atlantic Aug. 4 and returning Aug. 7. Why, then, should not a businessman continue to get a tax deduction equal to the full cost of first-class tickets? Blumenthal says he should.

But influential aides at the White House strongly disagree. They support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's long-standing proposal to permit tax deductions only of tourist class fares. What's more important, President Carter feels the same way.

Similar disagreements abound. Blumenthal is skeptical about other Kennedy-style proposals — such as crackdowns against expense account business luncheons and interest deductions on vacation homes — that would cause irritation without generating much tax revenue.

But the mood at the White House is set by the President. "I know they really don't amount to much, but Jimmy wants them," a key presidential adviser told us. So, the bill to be sent to Congress by Oct. 1 is expected to reflect Jimmy Carter more than Mike Blumenthal.

While options besides wage and price standards are understood to be under consideration, one administration official believes that they are among the few possibilities available since Carter is ruling out controls.

However, other administration officials are known to be skeptical that the standards would win support or would be workable.

the SEC-endorsed system. The NSCC has estimated it would need up to two years to consolidate its systems into one national clearance and settlement organization. Del Col says a competitive system of interfacing agencies could be achieved in six to nine months.

Moss, chairman of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, has written Harold Williams, SEC chairman that "a number of other options are open to the Commission which are much more in tune with the Congressional charge of fostering competition and competing service entities."

Del Col, whose company has delayed through court action any implementation of the NSCC for the time being, claims his requests to the SEC to rethink its decision were left unanswered until recently.

Within recent days he says he received a notification from Williams, who took office this spring, that he could meet with the full commission from 10 to 11 a. m. on September 29.

"Mark it on your calendar," says a determined Del Col. "The laws says this (monopoly) shouldn't be, Congress says so, the Justice Department says so, I say so."

CB Radio Theft Rate Also Lower

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent decline in Citizens Band radio prices apparently has reduced the number of persons interested in ripping off your CB rig.

The FBI said thefts of all kinds rose 5 per cent last year, the only crime category to show an increase.

And while its statistics didn't specify the types of theft, an FBI spokesman said the bureau's informal contacts with law-enforcement agencies indicated that CB thefts made up a substantial portion of the theft category.

But the latest FBI statistics for the three-month period ending March 31 show the theft rate down 11 per cent from a year earlier, compared to an over-all crime-rate decline of 9 per cent.

An FBI spokesman cited the harsh winter as a possible cause of the decline, saying the snow and cold weather could have discouraged criminals from venturing outside.

But at the same time, the prices of CB radios were dropping rapidly, due in part to the glut of 23-channel units on the market after the introduction of 40-channel radios last January.

Some feel the incentive for CB theft 'dropped' simultaneously.

Spokesmen for three major automobile insurers — Allstate, State Farm and Aetna Life and Casualty — said in interviews their firms do not keep records of individual items reported stolen.

But Tom Belcher, director of Aetna's personal insurance department, says, "While we can't say there's been a drop off in the number of (CB) thefts, we sure think so."

Spokesmen for all three firms reported the number of claims for thefts of all items from automobiles had dropped in recent months.

State Farm started keeping records of CB-theft claims last January and says that, since then, it paid $15 million through the end of June.

A lot of money, perhaps, but based on what it assumed it had paid in the previous two years, it was less than half of the $3.75 million it expected to pay in the first half of 1977.

The spokesmen for the three firms acknowledged that part of the lower number of claims may have been due to decisions by CB owners not to buy the additional coverage needed to protect them from CB theft.

Suits Hike Insurance

NEW YORK (AP) — Within the past few years lawyers have been increasingly joining the ranks of doctors as defendants in malpractice suits.

As a result, malpractice insurance premiums have gone up, says Francis J. McCarthy, general counsel of The Travelers Insurance Companies.

"Most claims have been settled in the $6,000 to $10,000 range, but others have been in the six-figure category," he says.

McCarthy points to a recent study of approximately 2,000 law firms in San Francisco Bay area which concluded, "The results are alarming." One out of every 20 law firms appears to have been sued for malpractice.

The authors of the study state that at that rate, "and even without the acceleration of claims, almost half of the law firms may have one or more malpractice claims over a 10-year period. The best general estimates are that clients are suing their lawyers almost twice as often as they did four years ago."

Polar Bears Are 'Stabilized'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of the Interior has reported an apparent stabilization of the world's polar bear population at a "conservative" 20,000.

According to the department's Fish and Wildlife Service, the greatest threat currently posed to the bears is oil and gas exploration, drilling and extraction on the Alaskan North Slope. The Alaskan area is one of six isolated spots near the north polar region where polar bears can be found.

Since 1972, polar bears in Alaska have been protected by the Marine Mammal Protection Act, which allows hunting only by Alaskan coastal natives for subsistence or for manufacture of traditional native clothing and handicrafts.

Pronouncing Arkansas Is Tricky Deal

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Newcomers to Kansas inevitably stumble on a way to quickly irritate a native son or daughter — by pronouncing the word, "Arkansas," as Ar-kin-saw.

But those who fail to accent the second syllable to keep the "Kansas" in "Arkansas" can be comforted in the knowledge that they've had plenty of company in the past century.

As one state newspaper writer noted, "The name has been a source of confusion to outlanders and bewilderment and frustrated pride to Arkansas Citians who bristle at their town being called Arkansas City."

The river that winds through the western and southern parts of the state is the Ar-KAN-sas River to Kansans, but it's Ar-kin-saw River to the rest of the country. The same pronunciation holds true for the south-central Kansas community of Arkansas City.

But it took battles in two different centuries to keep it that way.

Kansans' pronunciation of the river and the city — they do call the state of Arkansas as natives there would have it — is derived from the Kansas Indians who lived in this territory.

"We named it after the Indians here in Kansas," said Mary Ann Wortman, an Arkansas City resident who has studied the subject. "To me, keeping the Kansas in Arkansas is much more correct. We went with the way the Indians pronounced it."

In Oklahoma and Arkansas, and elsewhere eventually, however, the river was pronounced with the French interpretation of the Indian tribe name.

The pronunciation of the state of Arkansas also probably derived from the fact that the territory, when it was drawn up in 1819, was spelled "Arkansaw" in its charter.

But William E. Woodruff, founder of the Arkansas Gazette, led a campaign to replace the final "w" in Arkansas with a final "s" although the pronunciation — outside Kansas — stuck.

Not until more than a century later was the issue of pronunciation and spelling revived. The Arkansas City band was invited to march in the 1970 Rose Bowl Parade in Pasadena, Calif.

But the national television announcers raised the ire of city residents by referring to the band as the "Arkansaw City Band from Kansas."

The Arkansas City Chamber of Commerce reacted by saying it would give top priority to changing the city's name to "Ark City" to avoid confusion on its pronunciation. But polls of residents by the Chamber and the city's newspaper, the Arkansas City Traveler, found overwhelming opposition to the change and the matter was dropped.

Oscar Barahona, current manager of the Arkansas City Area Chamber of Commerce, said there were no plans to revive the effort to change the name, even if it still confused telephone operators, postal officials and newcomers to the state.

On Chamber of Commerce letterheads, however, the "Ark City" in "Arkansas City" is printed in bold type "so people kind of get our nickname also," he added.

Jim Foster, public affairs manager of the Wichita Chamber of Commerce, said that when he headed the Arkansas City chamber in the 1960s, "the sentiment was quite heavy to change the name, particularly among business and professional people."

He noted that some mail and freight shipments were sent mistakenly to Arkansas City, Ark., a situation that Barahona says still exists.

But Foster says that there are some outside Kansas borders who respect the native pronunciation.

"When I go into water hearings in Washington, the people back there are sharp enough to call it Arkansaw when they talk to people from Arkansas and Ar-KAN-sas when they talk to people from Kansas."

Wm. McGonagall Outselling Tennyson, Browning

By PETER J. SHAW
LONDON (UPI) — The muse first inspired William McGonagall, one of the worst poets in the history of literature, 100 years ago this summer. These days he's outselling Browning and Tennyson.

McGonagall, a humorless Scot whose verse was amusingly awful, penned the immortal: "Lines on the Death of an American Playwright" "A pathetic tragedy I will relate "Concerning poor Fred Marden's fate

"Who suffocated himself by the fumes of gas
"On the 18th of May and in the year of 1888, Alas."
And, never one to let a disaster go unrhymed:
"Twas in the town of Sunderland, and in the year of 1883,
"That about 200 children were launched into eternity..."
McGonagall died a pauper in Edinburgh in 1900. But tens of thousands of bookshelves on both sides of the Iron Curtain have a treasured place for the volumes by the handloom weaver and part-time actor whom the eminent Times Literary Supplement several years ago deemed "a real genius, for he is the only memorable truly bad poet in our language."

A McGonagall cult has mushroomed in Asia, east and west Europe and is growing, more slowly, in the United States and Canada. In 1971, about 220,000 volumes of his poems had been sold. Last February, sales topped the 500,000 mark.
McGonagall won posthumous fame after a poetic career that doused him with little other than scorn, hurled eggs and rotten vegetables.
He wrote that in 1877 he was inspired by his muse. Wrongly thinking it was the muse of poetry, he quickly penned a poem to a departed friend:
"Rev. George Gillilan of Dundee
"There is none can you excell
"You have boldly rejected the confession of faith
"And defended your cause right well
"The first time I heard him speak
"Twas in the Kinnaird Hall
"Lecturing on the Garibaldi movement
"As hard as he could bawl..."
For the next 13 years, McGonagall prolifically spun out what he called his "poetic gems" and in 1890 paid the Dundee publishing firm of David Winter and Son to print some copies of them.
He hawked them in the streets and recited them in halls and taverns to callous audiences who sometimes pelted him with eggs and rotten vegetables, once hit him in the mouth with a wet towel in the full flood of inspiration, and jeered at his pretensions.
He described himself as "poet and tragedian" — the latter because he once paid a theatrical manager one pound (then worth about $5) to let him take over the title role in Macbeth.
In order to get his money's worth, McGonagall strung out the duel scene with Macduff until the other actor was too exhausted to deliver the coup de grace. His coworkers in a weaving firm packed the house and he took his bow before "dying."
McGonagall went to New York, almost starved there and had to beg his way back to Scotland. He left literature with:
"Oh mighty city of New York
"You are wonderful to behold
"Your buildings are magnificent,
"The truth be it told,
"They were the only things to arrest my eye
"Because many of them
"Are thirteen storeys high..."
McGonagall went to his grave believing — alone — that he was famous. Today his fans include most of the British royal family, particularly Prince Charles and Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, herself a Scot.
As the years passed, literary critics discovered McGonagall. One called him "Scotland's best worst poet." David Winter and Son began getting requests for his "poetic gems" and the demand continues to grow.
His poems have recently been translated into Japanese, Thai and three Chinese languages. The publishers say Asian readers like his rhyme because it translates well for them.
Wicter's biography of McGonagall, published in 1971, shows where he went wrong — or right, in the light of his present popularity.
Almost all of McGonagall's poems are tied to news events. When his muse said "write, write" (his own quotation of the fateful call) she probably meant journalism and a snappy front-page story for the next edition of the local newspapers.

other similar series.
The project had a budget of more than $350,000, supported in part by Exxon Corporation. The production was under the supervision of the Agency for Instructional Television; the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, Toronto; the Utah State Board of Education; the South Carolina Educational Television Network, and the South Carolina Department of Education.
Excerpts were played for state school officials recently in Washington, where agency officials noted the series' flexibility.
The video cassettes can be played at any time on a recorder-player or a player; thus, teachers can use the materials at times which best fit into their plans. Further, they can stop them at any time for instant replay or for questions.

Portable cassette equipment can be shared by several classrooms. The equipment must be purchased, however.
As part of an experiment, in a change from a limit imposed earlier, stations leasing the agency's series may now allow participating school systems to retain recordings for use during an entire school year.
The agency, a nonprofit U.S.-Canadian organization formed in 1973, has its headquarters in Bloomington, Ind., with regional offices in Washington, Atlanta, Milwaukee and the San Francisco area.
The series, called "Measure-Metric," is divided into four clusters: length, area, volume-capacity, mass-weight.
In one program, a teen-aged metric wizard, Murray, takes his younger cousin, Randolph, on a tour of Toronto, where they measure everything from battleships in the harbor to the size of a pizza they order.
It is advertised as being 45 centimeters in diameter, or about 18 inches. When it arrives, Randolph measures it and finds it is closer to 40 centimeters. Murray tells the waiter that the place owes him five centimeters, and that, therefore, their next pizza must be 50 centimeters across.

principle, denouncing strong drink and the Home Rule movement in the same couplet. No doubt today's permissive society and the talk of limited home rule for Scotland and Wales would have fired him to ear-grating odes.
Before he died in poverty, McGonagall composed an epitaph that summed up his unfortunate life:
"Pity the sorrows of the poor poet
"When he wants bread,
"Help him living
"For he requires no help when dead."

Speed Skating Is Satisfying To A Champion

SELF-SATISFYING — Forrest Allmond finds all the hard work and practice to be a champion speed roller skater a lot of fun. "It's self-satisfying, like jogging", he says. (AP Laserphoto)

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A roller skater who competes in races must battle obscurity, inconvenience and an image problem. But for Forrest Allmond, it's still fun.
"It's self satisfying, just like jogging," said the 28-year-old Allmond, who recently won his eighth straight Eastern regional Roller Skate Rink Operators Association championship.
"It's a very good exercise. I use it to keep in shape, so I won't get old and sluggish," he added.
Not many people are even aware of the sport of speed roller skating exists. Most of the publicity in roller skating belongs to roller derby, and people often ask Allmond if he's a jammer or a blocker.
"When you tell people you roller skate, they think of roller derby. And they say, 'Well, I don't want my kid playing some kind of funny game in a roller rink,'" said Allmond, who has the nickname "Buggy."
"Rolling is a noncontact sport. In fact, there are strict penalties for charging or tripping," said the 5-foot-7, 140-pound Allmond.
Speed skating is similar to track. The sport has been popular in international circles for years, where competition is outdoors. When Allmond competed in Austria two years ago, the event was held on a 400 meter track used by ice skaters in the Olympics.

Like Olympic speed skaters, practice is a problem. The only Olympic-size outdoor ice skating rink is in West Allis, Wis. There is no outdoor roller rink. "That's the inconvenience of it. I train where I can to suit my own schedule," said Allmond, a carrier for the U.S. Post Office here.
Allmond has been skating for 18 years. He works out about two hours a day, five days a week. Practice sessions usually come at midnight when patrons at area roller rinks have finished skating to the mellow waltzes played on an organ.
Sometimes, weather permitting, he skates outdoors on a circular road at Keystone Industrial Park in the northern suburbs. He also jogs and cycles to keep in shape.
Allmond competes in four events: 1,000, 1,500, 3,000 and 5,000 meters. His best time in the mile is 2 minutes, 56 seconds, considerably faster than a runner.
Another problem is cost. A good pair of racing skates costs about $100, and skaters must pay their own way to practice sessions and meets.
"We bear all the expenses, and it's tough at times," Allmond said.
"The biggest satisfaction is meeting people through skating. I've met people all over. And I'll always have friends there," he added.
"It is an amusement, but I'm more serious about it than that. I also dance skate. That's my enjoyment part," he said.

Television Series For Schools Teach Metrics

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting this fall, a lot of school children in fifth and sixth grades are going to be seeing television programs that deal with such subjects as a 45-centimeter pizza.

Twelve 15-minute programs and related materials aimed at teaching 11 to 13-year-olds about the metric system of measurements have been completed and are now available to educational television stations and to schools in the form of video cassettes.
The series was financed and developed by a consortium of 24 state and Canadian provincial agencies under supervision of the Agency for Instructional Television, which has produced other similar series.

The project had a budget of more than $350,000, supported in part by Exxon Corporation. ## Sculptor Putting Wolf On Pedestal STILLWATER, Minn. (AP) — Sculptor Wally Shoop says he's using his art to persuade people to stop maligning the wolf as a vicious, diabolical, bloodthirsty beast.

As one way of putting the timber wolf on a pedestal, Shoop is sculpting in clay a life-size pair of wolves which he intends to give to the state of Minnesota. He wants them placed at the entrance to the Minnesota Zoological Gardens when it opens near Apple Valley next spring.
In his passion to protect the wolf from destruction at the hands of "thoughtless, prejudiced and ignorant" humans, the young sculptor has allied himself with actor Robert Redford and singer John Denver. The three are urging Congress to support three sanctuary areas, including one in Minnesota, where wolves could not be trapped.
Shoop says the timber wolf has been labeled for centuries. He says it's really no more fierce-looking than a big dog would be if it were turned loose to battle for survival in the wild.
The sculptor says the "big bad wolf" image began in Europe, with the mythical "werewolves." No creature in history has been subjected to such character assassination as the wolf, says Shoop.

"Little Red Riding Hood is probably the worst ripoff of the wolf's real nature and behavior of anything ever written," he says. "Then, you know the old adage, 'Keep the wolf from the door,' another figment of somebody's pen or imagination."
Shoop says wolves, coyotes, foxes, eagles and hawks help keep nature in balance by killing rodents.
Shoop says he has loved untamed animals since he was a boy being reared on western Army posts, where his father was in the old horse cavalry, and later a railroad section foreman in South Dakota. His father was part Iroquois Indian and Shoop says "It's the Indian in me that loves creatures, unfettered and free."

To Coordinate Coming Event

ECU News Bureau
WINSTON-SALEM — "Getting From Here to There: Issues in Early Education," is the theme of the annual study conference of the N. C. Association for the Education of Young Children scheduled here Sept. 29-Oct. 1.

The conference, coordinated by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education is open to NC-AEYC members and other persons involved in the education and development of young children. Over 1500 persons are expected to attend.

Sessions will be designed to be of interest to pre-school, kindergarten and primary teachers, day care personnel, college and university education faculty, health care professionals and parents of young children.

The conference was planned by an eleven-member committee which includes Lucy C. Peterson of the Pre-School Satellite Program of the N. C. School of the Deaf in Morganton, current NC-AEYC president.

The opening session will feature a special multi-media presentation produced especially for the conference and a keynote address by Jeanne W. Quill, director of the Seattle, Wash., Head Start State Technical Assistance and Training Office.

Special sessions for group discussion feature several major issues and subjects in education; mainstreaming; licensing and certification; infants and toddlers; curriculum; the family; parenting; sexism and racism; and legislation and public policy.

Most conference sessions will be held at the Benton Convention Center and the Centenary United Methodist Church.

Descriptive brochures giving further details about the conference are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville N. C. 27834.

Member Of ECU Faculty Wins Ph.D. At MSU

Obi Basil Achunine of Nigeria, an East Carolina University faculty member, has recently completed requirements for a Ph. D. degree in urban and regional planning at Michigan State University.

He has been recognized for outstanding achievement by the American Institute of Planners for the proposal deal with in the doctoral dissertation.

Achunine plans eventually to return to Negeria and work closely with the Institute of Social and Economic Research, which oversees housing. Until the return, he will be a professor of urban and regional planning at East Carolina University, being responsible for the undergraduate program and the establishment of a graduate urban planning program.

He received the B. S. degree from the University of Nigeria at Nsukka and the M. S. degree from Michigan State University. He and his wife have twin daughters.

Courses Open

PARIS (UPI) — Tourists who would like to visit a historic area in France and learn an old or modern trade during their stay may join some of 300 courses organized for them this summer.

Activities range from pottery, manufacture of jewels, wood and stone carving, to weaving, embroidering and many other handicrafts. Details on these activities are contained in a newly edited set of brochures published by Vie Creatrice (9 Place Saint Liphard, 45130) Meung-sur-Loire, France.

Environmental Education Study Program Readied

By Francine Perry
ECU News Bureau

Plans to involve northeastern North Carolina public school students in studies of the outdoor environment and their local communities have been completed by a task force of university and school educators. The project, "Exploring Your Environment," included specific activities for students in grades K-9 and was directed by Dr. Carolyn H. Hampton of the East Carolina University Department of Science Education.

Assisting Dr. Hampton were educators from the Gates, Hertford, Bertie, Chowan, Martin and Perquimans County school systems and ECU faculty members Charles Coble, Robert Dough, Carol Hampton and James Nicholson.

Purpose of the project was to introduce environmental education into the regular school curriculum by helping teachers upgrade their knowledge and skills.

The suggested activities range from actual field study of living things (trees, plants, insects, birds, animals) for kindergarten classes to studies of population patterns, industrial development and energy sources for ninth-grade social studies classes.

The environmental education project was born when Richard Baker, director of the Alliance for Progress, Inc., a commission representing the six-county area, asked ECU's science education department to develop a program which would enable school children to learn more about their environment.

"It was the general consensus that there was not an effective environmental education program in the Alliance area, in spite of the priority placed on improving environmental education by the State Department of Public Instruction," said Dr. Hampton.

Environmental education efforts within the Alliance were limited by lack of funds and teacher experience, she said.

"At best, environmental education meant 'talking about' pollution, because teachers usually lack the training and the resources to lead children in a variety of classroom or out-of-doors experiences."

Early in 1975, ECU science education faculty members and school superintendents from the six counties met and agree that the initial effort should focus on outdoor education at the elementary and junior high school levels, through incorporation of field studies in the regular school curriculum.

Mildred Elaine Graves, 24, of Alamance County, was with other patients of the Murdoch Center in Butner at the restaurant. Dr. James Elliot, Murdoch director, said the woman began choking on food. A nurse with the group tried to remove the food but was unable to do so. The woman died at Durham County Hospital.

Elliot said she had been a patient at the center for nearly 12 years.

create great problems which eventually require costly solutions."

Unrestrained use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides have already proved hazardous to the area, she noted, resulting in periodic fish kills in the Chowan River. Potential environmental threats lie in disposal of growing municipal, boating, industrial and animal wastes.

"It is imperative that public education make a strenuous effort to alert students and adults to the problems and to provide them with a background which will aid them in making necessary critical decisions," said Dr. Hampton.

A long-term benefit of the project is a more informed citizenry which understands the processes and needs of its physical surroundings. The short-term benefit is that teachers are now able to make environmental studies meaningful through participation in the project's staff development aspect.

Guidelines for teachers are included in two project publications. Each volume consists of approximately 250 pages of specific approaches to an area of environmental education.

The section for eighth-grade earth science, for example, contains 12 activities which enrich the student's understanding of the earth and its function.

Among them are "Construction and Use of a Soil Bore Apparatus" and "Earthworms and Soil." In each case the guide tells the teachers how to involve their classes in actual laboratory projects, which relate to regular classroom study. All activities are easily carried out and none requires great expenditure of funds.

Use of the "Exploring Your Environment" guides in the Alliance for Progress School Systems can supplement other classroom skills besides science, noted Dr. Hampton.

Even the youngest children can increase their language arts skills if they are encouraged to write and tell about what they observe on their field trips around the schoolyard, and the lessons provide many opportunities to integrate art with environmental activities.

The environmental education project was funded by the U.S. Office of Education, a division of HEW, under provision of Title I of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are forecast today from Texas to the Great Lakes. A hurricane watch is in effect along the Texas coast and part of the Louisiana coast. Warm weather is expected for the East. Cool, sunny weather is due in the West and most of the Plains states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A high pressure system remained entrenched over North Carolina today as a weak front moved south through Virginia. The front was expected to have little effect on North Carolina's weather and generally fair skies continued under the influence of the high pressure.

Temperatures climbed into the upper 80s and low 90s around the state Tuesday and thundershowers developed in the northwest mountains. As they moved eastward during the evening they became isolated showers over the northern Piedmont.

High readings today were expected to range mostly in the 80s with some readings in the 90s and there was a prospect of some scattered afternoon thundershowers in the mountains.

Around the state Tuesday, Charlotte and Rocky Mount shared a high temperature of 93. Fayetteville and Goldsboro were 92, Greensboro and New Bern 91, Raleigh 90, Wilmington 88 and Asheville 86.

Low readings this morning generally were in the comfortable 60s with Asheville dropping to 62.

Help For Lisa Runs Into Snag

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Lisa Haney may have to wait until May for money to pay her medical bills after she was paralyzed last year in a school bus accident.

Sen. I.C. Crawford, D-Asheville, introduced legislation that would have set aside a $70,000 fund to take care of outstanding medical bills.

But Crawford suffered a kidney stone and was out of action while his bill was being processed. In his absence, the legislation was combined with another bill to pay damages arising from the collapse of Siloam Bridge over the Yadkin River in which four persons were died and 16 were injured.

The bill ended up setting aside the $70,000, but failed to specify that it was for Lisa Haney. It just said the money was for victims of school bus accidents.

Now the attorney general's office has notified Yancey County school officials that they can't authorize payment to Lisa Haney or her creditors until the law is cleared up.

Crawford said he went to Raleigh last week and persuaded the Advisory Budget Commission to authorize the payment if the attorney general's office would agree.

Lisa Haney was almost totally paralyzed when the bus in which she was riding rolled down an embankment after its brakes failed.

School insurance reportedly covered about $6,000 of her medical bills, but another $11,000 remained unpaid.

Crawford said if he cannot get the attorney general's office to agree to a payment under the current law, "we are going to do something about it in May. It will be my first interest."

The General Assembly will hold a brief session next spring to clear away pending legislation.

Women Choked On Food, Died

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—A young woman patient at a state center for the mentally retarded died Tuesday after apparently choking on food she ate at a Durham restaurant while on an outing.

Mildred Elaine Graves, 24, of Alamance County, was with other patients of the Murdoch Center in Butner at the restaurant. Dr. James Elliot, Murdoch director, said the woman began choking on food. A nurse with the group tried to remove the food but was unable to do so. The woman died at Durham County Hospital.

Elliot said she had been a patient at the center for nearly 12 years.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Fair, Friday through Sunday. Highs will be near 90 except 80s in the mountains. Overnight lows in the 60s to near 70, except slightly lower in the mountains.

Stately Home To Become A Haven For Butterflies

By GREGORY JENSEN
SHERBORNE, England
(UPI) — Robert Goodden is nearly ready to move the world's largest butterfly farm into the first stately home for butterflies.

"It's just ideal for our butterflies," Goodden said of his newly acquired 407-year-old stately home. "We'll be ready to open next Easter."

"Butterfly farmer" is a term which brings to mind a quaint old gentleman in puttees waving a gauze net. Instead, Robert Goodden is a hard-driving, sandy-haired lepidopteral tycoon at 37.

He has been obsessed with butterflies since the age of 4. He began raising butterflies commercially in the cocoon of his parents' attic and built a business which outgrew the attic, outgrew the house and fluttered into Worldwide Butterflies, Ltd., the biggest butterfly farm anywhere.

When he moves it lock, stock and wings into the 50 large rooms of nearby Compton House — owned by other Goodden family members for 255 years until Robert bought it recently — the venture will cap a remarkable career.

"I was always told I couldn't succeed in this business," Goodden said amid the nets and cages of his present farm, a sprawl of low buildings and net-dotted gardens near Sherborne, 120 miles west of London.

"And in fact it's hard graft most of the time."

"But we're unique in the world. Nowhere else can you see a farm of this scope and size, supplying butterflies alive, equipment and books and specimens to almost every country."

Some 65,000 visitors a year come to the farm, where the brief lives of beautiful butterflies and moths are on display in several different environments.

"These are pairing cages," Goodden said in the main showroom, pointing to mesh cubes hanging from the ceiling. "You see the whole process of mating and laying eggs here."

Below these are cages containing cocoons from which butterflies and huge Indian Moon moths emerge.

Outside, amid the gardens, are long half-round huts of green netting where butterflies fly free. These "runs" are filled with the exotic plants butterflies need — Goodden had to make himself a gardening expert to grow them in Britain's climate. He raises passion flowers for lacewings from Thailand and orange trees for tropical swallowtails.

"Over here is our new jungle," he said. "It's the only one of its kind."

He led the way to a large glass-walled room within a room where some 100 brilliant butterflies flitted among tropical flowers. The sealed room is an artificial jungle, its climate automatically controlled, for about 15 species of hot-weather butterflies.

"We've really gone out to show people what we do," Goodden said of his farm, "and to do it out in front of them rather than behind the scenes."

But behind the scenes Goodden becomes a scientist. He ruffles the rough ranks of shallow-drawer filing cabinets holding many of the world's 140,000-odd species of butterfly and moth, including the rarest.

As a self-taught scientist, Goodden's reputation is of the highest. He's the author of several butterfly books, a frequent broadcaster, a respected researcher on insect topics.

He and his wife Rosemary founded the British Butterfly Conservation society. They're making a special study of the almost extinct Large Blue, a small British butterfly whose peculiar life cycle was first discovered by Rosemary's grandfather.

As a butterfly farmer Goodden raises and supplies specimens to scientists, museums, zoos and collectors all over the world. He has provided butterflies for James Bond movies and television shows.

Slightly imperfect specimens are mounted for sale through gift shops on two continents. Goodden also ships staggering numbers of butterfly eggs and cocoons to far-flung destinations.

Recently he provided 100,000 moth eggs, separately boxed, to British schools in connection with a television education project.

MOVING OIL THE ROUNDABOUT WAY — Tugs push the oil supertanker SS New York toward supertanker MV British Resolution in the Bay of Parita, 65 miles from the Panama Canal, after the New York arrived with the first Alaskan oil destined for the U.S. East coast. About 1.8 million barrels of oil were pumped onto the Resolution which is being used as a temporary oil terminal in the bay. It will be reloaded in smaller tankers that are able to traverse the Panama Canal. The smaller ship at left is the Washington Trader, a smaller vessel. The supertanker will remain a temporary transfer depot until a mainland terminal for the oil is completed by Northville Industries Corp. (AP Laserphoto)

First Nevada Woman Sheriff Avers Things Going Her Way

GOLDFIELD, Nev. (UPI) — The sheriff here wears dresses, doesn't pack a weapon and hasn't made an arrest since taking office in January.

Yet, Sarah Carter, Nevada's first elected female sheriff, says things are starting to go her way after a rocky beginning.

"I had a lot of doubts whether I could handle it," says Mrs. Carter. "But its six months later, and I'm feeling more confident."

She is sheriff of Esmeralda County, a sprawling rural area with only a few thousand residents. But she talks as if she is preparing for a return to the turn of the century when violence was a way of life in the once thriving mining town.

"We're going to get a new car this year and bullet proof vests ... two new shotguns ... and safety equipment we've never had before," she says with pride. "And we've got a budget increase of $20,000. I have the county commissioners behind me."

Since taking office in January, she hasn't made a felony arrest. Most problems concern marital disputes or traffic violations, mainly drunk driving. She has acquired three radar guns in an effort to slow motorists who tend to zip through town, ignoring the speed limit.

Mrs. Carter told friends earlier that she would not seek another term because she was not satisfied with the job.

"At times I have felt very low," she said. But she has changed her mind and will run for reelection next year.

"I'm feeling good right now, and everything is going up. Talk to me next month, and I may be crying all over your shoulder," she said. "That's the way this job is."

Nurse, legal secretary and housewife, Mrs. Carter had no law enforcement experience when she was elected last November to fill an unexpired two-year term. Many changes have since occurred.

She has divorced her husband, Harley Carter, a local attorney. She acted as her own lawyer in filing the suit and processing it through the court in Tonopah. Part of the reason, but not the main one, she said, was her job as sheriff. But she declines to elaborate.

She is also getting use to telephone calls at odd hours. One Friday she was awakened at 3:30 a.m. to help some stranded motorists. "I didn't mind. It was a beautiful night with a beautiful moon," she laughed.

Mrs. Carter, 50, wears her badge mostly on dresses instead of a uniform.

"They elected a woman," she said. "I want to stay one. I need their (the women's) help. But I'm not a women's libber anyway."

She said she could make more than her $10,800-a-year sheriff's salary just by taking care of her investments in Las Vegas. But she feels there is more to the job.

"I owe the women something because I feel a woman can do a good job as sheriff," she said. "I believe I'm at the most disadvantaged spot for a woman to try it. By that I mean I'm in a small county. We do not have the manpower. I get more salary than the men. In this instance, it should be the other way around because they are out there doing the heavy work."

"But a woman can do this job and be good at it. And if I step down it will be a long time before they give another one (woman) a chance."

The sheriff prides herself on getting the jail cleaned up. She said it "was in some kind of a mess."

She said the sheriff's office phone is answered 24 hours a day, seven days a week, which never happened in the past.

Her staff consists of two part-time deputies in Silver Peak and Fish Lake Valley and two deputies in the main office.

Mrs. Carter said she hasn't encountered resistance from male law enforcement officers because she is a woman. She said she has had outstanding cooperation, especially from the adjoining Nye County sheriff's office.

"We have a lot of things to look forward to," she said. Asked if she might forego a second term, she added, "I don't know if I can give it up and just go back to being nothing."

Speaking of Your Health... Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Check Out Swallowing Difficulty

Every once in a while I find it hard to swallow even moist food. Sometimes I have to force food down with water. Is this something that happens when you get past the age of 65? — Mr. T.T., Mass.

Dear Mr. T.:

There are many changes in the functioning of the body that can be attributed to age. Yet one must be extremely careful not to use age alone as an overall answer to all problems.

Difficulty in swallowing is a symptom rather than a disease. The symptom indicates the need to track down its exact cause. If I were to speculate about the reason for your condition I might be responsible for a further delay in your getting the medical advice you should have.

If I listed the possible reasons for your discomfort I might give you an unnecessary sense of anxiety which would be far more destructive than the condition you now have.

Therefore, the real help I can give you is to urge you to see your doctor. He will undoubtedly take some simple X-rays of the esophagus to find out if there is any spasm, pouch, or obstruction to account for your complaint.

My own reaction to your problem is that since the symptom occurs only occasionally there probably is no great cause for concern. But be sure to have this checked.

Do you know what an oatmeal bath is? I have dry, itching skin and a friend of mine suggested this as a treatment. How does one take this bath? — Miss L.R.E., Iowa.

Dear Miss E.:

The oatmeal bath, sometimes known as the "colloid" bath, is often used to relieve some skin disorders associated with severe itching.

Two cups of oatmeal are placed in a gauze bag that is loosely tied. This is put in boiling water until it thickens. Then, a cup of ordinary baking soda is dissolved in a tub of tepid water.

The oatmeal bag is then swished around in the bath until the water becomes milky. The bag itself can be used as a washcloth to go over the irritated surface of the skin.

I frequently get painful infections around my nails. Can this be a sign that my resistance is low? — Mrs. D.L., W. Va.

Dear Mrs. L.:

I doubt it. The most common reason for infections around the nails (paronychia) is due to injury. Cutting the nails too deeply, especially around the corners, can open the skin. Germs are then introduced and infection sets in.

Humphrey Can Go When Ready

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who underwent surgery two weeks ago, can leave University of Minnesota Hospitals when he thinks he is ready, the senator's physician says.

"It's pretty much up to him when he leaves," said Dr. John Najarian, chief of surgery. "He's in a period of rehabilitation and he wants to be fully recovered before he leaves the hospital."

The surgery Aug. 18 showed that Humphrey, 66, has inoperable cancer of the pelvis. Najarian said Tuesday that he believes the Minnesota Democrat will leave the hospital later this week. He said Humphrey's condition and disposition continue to be "superb."

Humphrey will recuperate at his lakeside home at Waverly, 40 miles west of Minneapolis, but hopes to return to his Senate duties sometime after Labor Day.

Will Discuss Corn Threat

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service is having a meeting on Thursday night at the Moose Lodge to discuss with farmers the problem of Aflatoxin in corn, a problem which is threatening the marketing of the corn crop.

Pitt Extension Chairman Ed Yancey said today that the problem of Aflatoxin, which is caused by a mold, poses a real threat to farmers in their corn marketing situation and also to the farmer who stores corn on his farm.

According to Yancey, some markets in North Carolina have already closed because of the problem and most of the Georgia and Florida corn markets closed a week or so ago because of it.

He said that there is some thought that the problem of Aflatoxin is more prevalent during distress seasons when extremes in moisture or dryness are experienced.

"We want to get the farmers together to talk about this problem," the Extension official added.

Thought He Was In Peril

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-seven-year-old Ronald Ingle, a mountain man from Weaverville, was in the Fayetteville area for a two-week Army Reserve training mission and was driving down Hay Street, notorious for its topless bars and pornographic parlors.

When two men approached him and one reached in his pocket, Ingle said he thought he was about to get jumped, so he took off. Ingle says he was never shown a badge, although the two later turned out to be plain-clothes officers. But at the end of the street, a car roared into his lane while another pulled up behind him.

Ingle got out of that one by slamming into both cars. Then, he says, he saw men with guns getting out of the cars so he took off again. "They told me later I was on Raeford Road when I saw a police car and flagged him down. I told him there were some men chasing me, trying to kill me."

The policeman took off to toward town, Ingle said, and his pursuers arrived. He says his ribs are still sore from where one of them hit him. Ingle is now free on $5,000 bond, awaiting trial on multiple traffic and assault charges.

Fayetteville Police Chief Danny Dixon has ordered an investigation of the incident.

Few Editorial Voices Supporting Bert Lance

Lance's circumstances is likely to be an embarrassment as long as he is on the job."

In another editorial calling for Lance to step down, the Cleveland Plain Dealer said that the budget director's "wheeler-dealer financial history has become an embarrassment to the Carter administration."

"As director of the Office of Management and Budget he was expected to be cautious and tight-fisted. But his background turned out to have been fast and loose," the paper said.

The Buffalo Courier-Express said of Lance on Monday: "He has been involved in so many questionable transactions and situations that his credibility has been eroded beyond repair... The nation will best be served by his prompt return to the role of Georgia banker."

Lance got support Tuesday from the Atlanta Constitution, which said: "It occurs to us that if the

North Pitt Fields Experienced Offense; But Defense Is Green

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
An experienced offense, coupled with an inexperienced defense, will carry the North Pitt football hopes this season. Coming off a 1-9 season a year ago, things have just about got to get better for coach Pat Smith's Panthers and, with eight of 11 offensive starters returning, moving the football shouldn't be a big problem.

Only two starters return on defense, however, and that unit remains a big question mark.

"On offense, we should be a pretty good ballclub," according to Smith. "On defense, we're so inexperienced that we just don't know what we've got until we go into a ballgame."

The Panthers plan to line up in a split backfield over offense, Smith said, and will also utilize a pro set at times.

Anchoring the offensive line is three-year veteran Sammy Mayo, a 5-9, 175-pound senior. Mayo has "probably the best blocking technique on the team," Smith said. Mayo will start at left guard, while the right guard will be senior Mike Manning (5-9, 173), a first-year player with whom the Panther coaches have been "pleasantly surprised," Smith said. Junior Mark Nelson (6-0, 155) will back the guards up.

At center is Steve Whitehurst, another senior, who stands 5-10 and 160 pounds. "Anything he lacks in ability, he makes up with heart. He's a real little hustler," Smith said.

At the tackles are senior Lawaskia Jenkins (6-2, 215) and sophomore Willie Little (5-9, 180). Jenkins is "real quick for his size and could probably be one of the best linemen in the league if he wants to be," Smith said. Little is starting in place of the injured Reuben Matthews, a 6-2, 180-pound junior who was hurt in the Panthers' scrimmage game against Roanoke. Matthews is expected back sometime during the season. Junior Russell Cliff (5-8, 155) is listed as a backup tackle.

Another three-year starter, junior Tim Corey (6-1, 180), returns to his tight end position. Corey is used mainly as a blocker and has improved "100 per cent" in that category, but needs some more work handling passes, Smith said.

Two players are battling for the starting split end spot, seniors Carl Wilson (5-9, 138) and Roy Briley (6-2, 170). "Carl has the better speed, but Roy has better hands," Smith said. "They'll both probably play a lot."

In the backfield, quarterback John Hunt returns to guide the offense. A starter last season, he missed five games with a foot injury. The 5-8, 160-pounder is "fairly quick, reads the option well and is just as good at working the pitch as any high school quarterback I've seen," Smith said.

Because of his size, Hunt has trouble passing over his offensive linemen, Smith said, and for that reason the Panthers will use more sprint-out pass plays this season.

One running back spot is pretty solidly held down, while the other is currently unsettled with two players fighting for it.

Calvin Carmack (5-7, 145), a senior, will start at one halfback spot. He is "quick, fairly elusive and, if he can turn the corner, he can break one." He is backed by sophomore Terry Moore (5-9, 130).

At the other slot, senior Don Warren (5-7, 160) is battling junior Donnie Daniels (5-11, 200) for the starting position. Warren "had a good night against Roanoke and is a strong, stocky-type runner." Daniels "could be a bull, but due to his working he has been here less time than we wanted and right now has lost his starting position."

Overall, Smith said, "We are expecting the offense to be able to control the ball a little better than last year."

The Panthers will line up in a basic 5-2 defense, according to Smith, with some variations off of that. The defense is "inexperienced and young," but Smith feels "our defense will get better, of course, as it goes along."

North Pitt defense should be strong at the tackles, but the question marks are at noseguard and linebacker. "Right now, I'm worried about the linebackers. They're quick, but they're not big enough to take on an oncoming guard the way we like them to be able to be."

Two first-year football players are currently battling for the starting noseguard slot, seniors Ricky Stokes (6-0, 180) and Robert Parker (5-7, 170). Both will see a lot of action this season and they also serve as backup offensive linemen, Smith said.

Jenkins and Mayo should start at the tackles, backed up by sophomore Marty Barbour (5-10, 170). At the ends will be Corey and James Joyner, a 5-5, 150-pound junior. Despite his size, Joyner is "quick as a cat and loves to hit," Smith said.

Knight will start at strong safety. He is an outstanding defensive player with 4.8-4.9 speed in the 40. A good open-field tackler, Knight contains plays well, according to Smith. At free safety will be either of two juniors, Jerry Pitt (5-6, 145) or Raumont Barnes (5-6, 130).

At the corners will be sophomore Carl Knight (5-9, 155), William's brother, and either Wilson or senior Larry McLawhorn (5-7, 155). Knight is a first-year player who is getting better with every practice. He'll be at the weak corner and Wilson and McLawhorn are battling for the strong corner position.

Daniels will team with junior Jerry Tyson (5-9, 160) as the Panthers' linebackers. Daniels has size and quickness, while Tyson has extremely good lateral movement and a good pass drop, Smith said.

On the specialty teams, Hunt will handle the punting duties, while William Knight and Barbour will share the placekicking. Carmack and William Knight will be doing the runbacks.

"We can't afford any injuries," Smith said. "But, the guys we do have attend practice regularly, are in the best shape of any team I've ever had and play together better."

A point on the Panthers' side is that they play 2-A schools in their first three games and will have a chance to come around before facing 3-A competition.

Smith agrees with the Eastern Carolina Conference's other coaches in that the league is as balanced this year as ever before. He lists Farmville Central, Ayden-Grifton, C. B. Aycock and Greene Central as the favorites, but adds, "I certainly feel that D. H. Conley, North Lenoir, Southern Nash and even possibly us are capable of giving someone a fit on a given night."

Orantes, After Winning U.S. Pro, Hopes History Will Repeat Self

By JOHN SHURR
Associated Press Writer
BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Manuel Orantes has a new reason to grin. He heads to the U.S. Open today with another championship and a chance for history to repeat itself.

The ever-smiling Spaniard conquered Eddie Dibbs in a three-set final Tuesday to win the $125,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Moving toward the U.S. Open at Forest Hills this year, Orantes is rolling across the North American clay court circuit with successes similar to those in 1975.

Two years ago, Orantes captured the U.S. Clay Court title in Indianapolis and the Canadian Open championship before the U.S. Open, where he beat Jimmy Connors in the final. Last year Orantes was plagued by elbow problems and lost to Sweden's Bjorn Borg in a five-set quarter-final match at Forest Hills.

Similarities are remarkable between his 1975 success and this year. Orantes took two titles in August 1975 and it is the same this year, having downed Connors three weeks ago at Indianapolis.

Would a repeat performance be in order in 1977? "The only big tournament is the Open, so I will have to play tough," he said.

Against Dibbs Tuesday night, Orantes recorded a 7-6, 7-5, 6-4 triumph.

He survived a threat in the first set, taking a 5-1 lead before Dibbs rallied to tie. However, Dibbs' comeback stalled at 5-5 and Orantes went on to take the tiebreaker, 7-3. Dibbs threatened again in the second set, taking a 5-2 lead. From there it was all Orantes.

ECU Pace Picks Up

East Carolina University's Pirates seemed to be getting into the swing of things yesterday as practice wound down toward the opening game Saturday night.

Coach Pat Dye expressed a little more pleasure in the workout yesterday. "It looked better today until the later stages of practice," he said afterwards.

While he didn't single out too many individuals, he did say that Theodore Sutton looked good at fullback.

"The offense was looking smoother, doing things a lot better," Dye added.

"It appears we're getting more concentration. It looks like the team is more ready to play now."

The quarterback situation on the team, however, appears going down to game time before a starter is named. Both senior Jimmy Southerland and sophomore Leander Green are doing a fine job with the team, and Dye feels that they will probably both see a lot of playing time in alternating roles. Both could be considered "starters."

Walk-Ons Will Lead Pirates

East Carolina coach Pat Dye has put special emphasis on his walk-ons this season. And Saturday night at N.C. State, Dye will climax that emphasis by making a dream come true for the senior walk-ons.

Seven young men who originally entered East Carolina without aid to play football will serve as captains for the opening game.

Those seven are Junior Creech, kicker from Smithfield; Rickie Holliday, center from Williamston; Barry Johnson, tight end from Farmville; Eddie Murphy, nose guard from Raleigh; Larry Paul, linebacker from Raleigh; Harold Randolph, linebacker from Greenville; and Jimmy Southerland, quarterback from Wilmington.

"These four young men came here four years ago with nothing except a promise to play and try to make the team," said Dye. "Each of these seven has stuck it out for the four years and made contributions in many ways. I think for them to be captains Saturday night is just great."

Five of the seven have earned scholarships since joining the team and five of the seven are also likely starters against the Wolfpack. Creech, Holliday, Johnson, Randolph and Southerland are all slated to start.

"It's almost unheard of to have four starters and five seniors on scholarship that were originally walk-ons," Dye said. "That's great."

Murphy, termed by Dye as "the best scout team and team man I've had at East Carolina," said, "Being selected as a game captain is a great honor. It's just a tremendous thrill."

Southerland added, "The first year I got here I was the 11th team quarterback. You can't get discouraged that first year. Being selected as a captain, I feel, is a reward for four years of hard work."

And perhaps Holliday sums up the feeling of the entire group best. "It was tough coming as a walk-on," he said. "Really tough. During my freshman year, there were several times I considered quitting. I never thought I'd play here. But with work, I found myself playing a lot my sophomore and junior years. To walk on and stay with it, you just have to love the game. Being captain is a great feeling. It's one of the greatest feelings I've had since I've been here. I have no regrets at all being a walk-on."

Courageous Is Cup Pick

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Three years ago, over a two-hour dinner at Christies restaurant here, America's Cup skipper Ted Turner and boat designer Britton Chance Jr. were discussing the relative merits of the 12-meter yacht Mariner. "Britt, why can't this boat go?" asked Turner. "There's nothing wrong with the boat, Ted," Chance replied. "Then Britt, why are there no square-tailed fishes in the sea?" asked Turner. "Why?" asked Chance. "Because the pointy tailed fishes ate them all up," said Turner. Chance, who designed the pathetically slow Mariner with her chopped off stern, and Turner, who had the dubious honor of skipping her, were dining that night on crow. Mariner was eliminated from the defense series in early August, and Courageous finally was picked to defend the Cup against Australia's Southern Cross. Tuesday, Courageous — with Turner at the helm this time — was picked again and will defend against the new yacht Australia. Turner now is dining on a more palatable bird, the Bird of Paradise. "I think seven or eight of the guys were with us with the ill-fated Mariner," Turner said of his 1977 crew. "And I think we have a lot to show. We wanted to come back and show not necessarily that we were the world's greatest, but that we weren't a bunch of hacks like we looked last time." The New York Yacht Club's selection committee made the decision to eliminate Enterprise, the last of Turner's opposition, shortly after Courageous beat Enterprise by 1 minute, 26 seconds in the final defense series. Independence, Courageous' sister yacht in the Kings Point Syndicate, was eliminated Monday. Australia won the right to make the 23rd challenge for the Cup by beating Sverige of Sweden by 13:19, one of the most lopsided races in Cup history. It was an embarrassing end to what had been a reasonably competitive challenge by the Swedes, who never had been in the America's Cup. Sverige got to the final by beating Gretel II, the 1970 Australian challenger, but she lost four straight to Australia in the best-of-seven series. The challenge will be land developer Alan Bond's second straight. He heads the Australia syndicate and held that same position in the Southern Cross challenge three years ago. "We're very happy," said Turner, 38, who won his fame not by sailing yachts, but by buying the Atlanta Braves baseball team in January, 1976, then being banned from baseball for a year by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for tampering with outfielder Gary Matthews, then a member of the San Francisco Giants.

Wade's Meeting With Richards Has Become Open's 'Hate Match'

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Virginia Wade has two women on her mind — Chris Evert and Renee Richards ... not necessarily in that order. For the next 12 days, Ms. Wade's goal is to dethrone Miss Evert as the women's singles fittest at the U.S. Open tennis championships, which began today at the West Side Tennis Club. To do that, she will have to beat Dr. Richards — and that is just fine with her.

Thursday's first-round pairing of Ms. Wade, the Wimbledon champion and No. 3 seed, and Dr. Richards, the 43-year-old transsexual who had to go to court to gain a spot in the women's draw, is taking on all the trappings of a "hate match." The participants have lashed at each other verbally over the past week, adding interest in the match which will be played on the main court in the famed horseshoe stadium. When the draw was held and Ms. Wade was paired against Dr. Richards, the Wimbledon titleholder was reported to have snapped, "If she beats me, she ought to be checked out." To which Dr. Richards said, "Virginia has been against me from the start."

Ms. Wade tried to clarify her feelings on the eve of the tournament. "I have nothing against Dr. Richards personally," she contended. "I think she has conducted herself well in this situation. I simply am not comfortable with the whole idea. I am not sure in my mind about the precedent we may be setting."

Dr. Richards, a leading New York ophthalmologist and ranking 35-and-over men's player as Richard Raskind, underwent a sex change operation two years ago. She had been barred from major women's events, but a court ruling earlier this month opened a spot for her in the U.S. Open final.

The Richards-Wade match has overshadowed just about all the other first-round pairings as the 128 men and 96 women began their chase for first prizes of $33,000 apiece from a total purse of $462,420. Miss Evert drew Sharon Walsh of Mill Valley, Calif. as her first-round foe Thursday in a march toward what she hopes will be a third consecutive women's title. That would reassert her position as the premier player in women's tennis, a position that was shaken somewhat by Ms. Wade's triumph at Wimbledon.

Other prime challengers for the women's crown include second-seeded Martina Navratilova, the Czech expatriate who opens against Mary Hamm of San Antonio, Tex., and fourth-ranked Sue Barker, the young Britisher whose first-round opponent is Katja Ebbinghaus of West Germany. The men's division is considered more wide open, with over a dozen contenders for the title won last year by Jimmy Connors. Bjorn Borg is seeded No. 1 following his stirring five-set triumph over Connors in the Wimbledon final. His goal is to reverse last year's U.S. Open final, when he lost to Connors 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4.

Connors, seeded second, would like nothing better than to beat Borg and reclaim his No. 1 rating. But he is not up to par physically, having been

Russian Training Ways Will Get Close Look

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

When the world's premier athletes gather in Dusseldorf, West Germany, this weekend for the World Cup Track and Field Championships, Americans may be looking suspiciously at their rivals from the Soviet Union.

Is there something funny about that guy in the red shirt throwing the javelin? What about the long-legged fellow with the hammer and sickle on his chest? Are his eyes glassy, or is it just imagination?

Hey, what's going on here? These CCCP guys winning all the gold medals — are they human or are they zombies from outer space?

Quite human, says Dr. William Kroger of Beverly Hills, Calif. They are athletes under the influence of hypnosis and autogenic training, a method of increasing athletic performance, he adds, which the Soviet Union has honed into a science.

Dr. Kroger, author of a definitive medical and psychological treatise called "Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis," is not blowing the whistle on the Russians or yelling foul.

On the contrary, he is adopting the role of a modern Paul Revere, warning, "The Russians are coming," and urging U.S. Olympic brass to adopt similar measures.

"The U.S. Olympic team is in greater danger of being left behind by Soviet athletes in the 1980 Olympics than in any previous Olympics in history," insists the clinical professor of anesthesiology at UCLA.

The World Cup Friday through Sunday promises to offer an interesting preview of the Moscow Games, matching hand-picked athletes from various countries. USSR, East German and Cuban athletes will be studied with particular interest.

The event will be televised the last two days by the ABC network.

"The Soviets have developed the practice of psyching up athletes for sports competition into a science," Dr. Kroger says. "They have used hypnosis, autogenic training and other psychological methods."

The techniques were first employed by the Soviet cycling team in the 1972 Olympics, he added, but now generally are promoted by an institute in Kharkov, staffed with special trainers and psychologists.

The methods have proven effective in inducing relaxation and relieving stage fright among competitors, he said, and have made winners of chronic losers in many sports.

"There is no reason why a competent hypnotherapist should not help an athlete to eliminate detracting psychological factors which prevent his highest efficiency," Dr. Kroger says.

The UCLA professor says tests have shown that athletes under hypnotic conditioning — in track and field, basketball, golf and boxing — can reach higher levels without endangering their physiologic limits.

Dr. Daniel Hanley of Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, said that what Dr. Kroger was preaching was a technique that athletes had been pursuing for years — on their own.

"Most great athletes use self-hypnosis — they go into trances, talk to themselves and pump up adrenalin," he said. "There would be no rule against hypnosis but it could have a deleterious effect."

Sports Briefs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals cut seven players to meet the mandatory roster limit of 52, but named only four of the players Tuesday.

Dropped by the National Football League Team were defensive back Dwayne Crump, wide receiver Jim LaJay, defensive lineman Ernest Lee and running back Alonzo Emery.

Neither Director of Operations Joe Sullivan nor his assistant, Larry Wilson, would comment on whether or not a trade was imminent.

The Cardinals also announced that the team had picked up defensive back Carl Allen from the Cincinnati Bengals for a future draft choice.

The team must pare its roster to 43 players by Sept. 12.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Planners of a celebration to salute the national runner-up Little League baseball team from the big suburb of El Cajon say a 24-hour delay will not dim the festivities.

El Cajon Western's Little League All-Star team became snarled in airline travel problems Tuesday and failed to arrive for a celebration planned at their home field. The weather was blamed for the delay. Officials of the team telephoned regrets, saying bad weather in Washington forced postponement of the scheduled Tuesday night arrival.

So this afternoon, a police escort was to rush the team from San Diego airport to El Cajon and tonight an anticipated 3,000 fans are to honor the squad.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have traded offensive lineman Steve Young to the Miami Dolphins and have acquired rookie wide receiver Larry Seivers from the Seattle Seahawks.

In exchange for Young, the Bucs will receive an undisclosed future draft choice, a spokesman for the National Football League team said Tuesday.

Young, a two-year veteran with the National Football League team, was a third-round draft choice in 1976 from the University of Colorado.

Seivers is a two-time All-American from the University of Tennessee. The Bucs gave an undisclosed future draft choice for Seivers, it was announced.

Colts Waive WR Johnson

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wide receiver Marshall Johnson, who missed the 1976 season following knee surgery and underwent another operation during the offseason, was declared physically unable to perform today by the Baltimore Colts.

The National Football League team also waived wide receiver Mark Durden and running back Glen Capriol, and placed guard Ron Baker on the injured reserve list. All were rookie draft choices.

Perry Tosses Four-Hitter At Royals

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Early in the season, Milwaukee Manager Alex Grammas said you could go into a coma waiting for Dave Rozema's fast ball to reach the plate...and that seems to be what happens to the Brewers against Detroit's rookie pitching sensation.

Rozema scattered nine hits Tuesday night for his 15th victory in 20 decisions and beat the Brewers for the fourth time in as many outings.

"I really don't care what they say about my fast ball," Rozema said after the 4-2 triumph. "I've got what I've got. I just use what God gave me, and thank God I've got some other pitches."

Elsewhere in the American League, the West Division tightened up when the Texas Rangers whipped the Kansas City

Royals 8-2 and the Chicago White Sox downed the Cleveland Indians 3-1. That left the Royals two games ahead of the White Sox and the idle Minnesota Twins and 2½ in front of the Rangers.

In the East, the New York Yankees edged the Seattle Mariners 6-5 in 11 innings to remain three games ahead of the Boston Red Sox, who trounced the Oakland A's 7-2, and four in front of the Baltimore Orioles, who blasted the California Angels 8-2.

In winning for the eighth time in his last nine decisions, Rozema had help from a tworun homer by .194 hitter Aurelio Rodriguez.

Rangers 8, Royals 2

Willie Horton drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly, double and his 12th homer of the season. Seven of Horton's homers have come against the Royals.

Meanwhile, Bert Campaneris delivered four hits, including the 2,000th of his career on a first-inning bunt. Tony Harrah also homered and Gaylord Perry checked Kansas City on four hits.

White Sox 3, Indians 1

Ken Kravec came within one out of his first major league shutout and Lamar Johnson singled home two unearned runs as Chicago handed Wayne Garland his 16th loss against 10 victories. Kravec ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first victory since July 23 but needed relief from Lerrin LaGrow and Dave Hamilton with two out in the ninth.

Yankees 6, Mariners 5

Mickey Rivers homered off Diego Segui on the first pitch in the bottom of the 11th to give the Yankees their 20th victory in the last 23 games. Graig Nettles, the defending AL home run champion, matched his 1976 total of 32 with a three-run smash in the fifth. Relief ace Sparky Lyle posted his 11th triumph in 15 decisions after Seattle came from behind with three runs in the eighth.

Red Sox 7, A's 2

Fred Lynn drove in three runs, two with his 15th homer, Rick Burleson drove in a pair and Denny Doyle had a perfect night with two singles and two doubles as the Red Sox ended Oakland's longest winning streak of the season at six games.

Orioles 8, Angels 2

Eddie Murray's two-run single snapped a 2-2 tie, capping Baltimore's four-run sixthinning rally, and Jim Palmer scattered seven hits for only his second victory since July 31. Al Bumbry singled home two Baltimore runs in the seventh and stole another run by scoring from third on a foul pop when the Angels left the plate unguarded.

Maddox' Cut May Have Been The Most Unkind As Clubs Reduce

By The Associated Press
Involuntary retirement came to hundreds of players in the National Football League on cutdown day Tuesday, but the unkindest cut of all may have come in Kansas City.

Bob Maddox, a defensive end who had been playing on sheer courage since 1975, was told that the physical pain would finally come to an end. Now, the emotional pain begins.

"They gave me all the chances to do well, so I don't feel badly about anyone," Maddox said in reference to the Chiefs' organization. "But every day was difficult. If I can now just get through this day, I can get through anything."

Maddox, an inspiration to the Chiefs, has been playing on a bum knee described by Dr. Howard Eilfeldt, the team physician, as "the worst knee injury I ever saw."

He and other doctors said Maddox would be lucky to walk again. Maddox proved them wrong, embarking on a torturous rehabilitation program that brought him off the injured list midway through the 1976 season.

"I don't know of a man who climbed a higher mountain," said Kansas City Coach Paul Wiggin. "Everybody liked him. He's that kind of guy."

"There is an inequality in life. When you put together a final squad of 43, they are not necessarily the ones who tried the hardest."

Maddox was robbed of his career by an injury. Age took its toll with Bill Munson, the 36-year-old quarterback whose experience was no longer a ticket on the Seattle Seahawks.

Munson, a 13-year-veteran, was the fourth wheel on a second-year club going with sophomore quarterbacks Jim Zorn and Steve Myer and rookie signal caller Sam Adkins.

"I knew it was coming," Munson said of the release. "(Coach) Jack (Patera) sort of told me the handwriting was on the wall. I asked him to do it now so I would have time to catch on some place else."

Munson, who completed 20 passes in 37 attempts in five games last season with Seattle, had his best seasons with the Detroit Lions. In 1968, he completed 181 of 329 passes for 2,311 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Another veteran cut Tuesday was Jim Cheyanski, a line-backer who was second in tackles for the Baltimore Colts last season. At the age of 32, Cheyanski was told by the Colts that he wasn't needed on the field, but they could use him on the sidelines.

Other name players cut Tuesday, as the NFL clubs sliced their rosters to the legal limit of 52, were Carlos Brown, Green Bay quarterback; Jeff Kinney, a fullback at Buffalo; Harold Hart, a running back at Washington, and Steve Mike-Mayer, a placekicker with San Francisco.

In other player shifts, running back Rob Scribner and wide receiver Willie Miller were placed on injured waivers by Los Angeles; running back Woody Green was placed on the injured reserve list by Kansas City, and Washington guard Paul Laaveg retired.

In other trades, Tampa Bay acquired rookie wide receiver Larry Seivers from Seattle for a draft choice and dealt offensive tackle Steve Young to Miami for a draft pick; Philadelphia acquired tight end Richard Osborne from the New York Jets for a draft choice, and St. Louis acquired defensive back Carl Allen from Cincinnati.

Roger Carr, the wide receiver who caught passes that netted him 1,112 yards last season, signed a series of one-year contracts with Baltimore, leaving defensive tackle John Dutton as the team's lone holdout.

day night. California first baseman Gil Flores makes the tag and umpire Marty Springstead makes the call. (AP Laserphoto)

Marcis May Drive

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Dave Marcis is looking for a ride in this year's Southern 500, and Bobby Allison may be able to oblige him.

Allison, of Hueytown, Ala., has been suffering from a histial hernia since the Talladega 500 and he has contracted Marcis as a backup driver.

"The hernia is right above my stomach and I couldn't digest my food. The hospital really gave me the business and couldn't find anything but the hernia," explained Allison. "I talked to Marcis and he said he would help me out if he didn't get a ride. I just don't know when I might get sick."

Marcis notified Darlington Raceway officials Tuesday that car owner Roger Penske had withdrawn his entry.

"I want a competitive ride. I talked to a couple of car owners and they're trying to see what they can work out," said Marcis, president of the Union Darlington Record Club.

"If I can't find a ride, I will be in Darlington Thursday morning to help Allison with his Matador. I want to spend as much time as possible in Allison's car. You know you can't get too much practice at Darlington," Marcis said.

Allison is seeking to become the first four-time winner of the Labor Day classic at Darlington. He won the Southern 500 in 1971, 1972 and 1975. The latter was his last NASCAR Grand National victory.

Seek To End Losses

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Winston-Salem State University will try to end 18 straight losses to North Carolina A&T Saturday, as both teams begin their 1977 season together at Greensboro Memorial Stadium.

Winston-Salem has never beaten A&T. But the Rams may have a chance this year in the second season for head coach Billy Hayes, who made the team a CIAA contender last year.

The Aggies will be guided by first-year coach Jim McKinley. He expects to rely on both the running and passing abilities of quarterback Ellsworth Turner.

Kaat Captures Victory 253 As Phillies Crush Braves, 11-2

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Jim Kaat of the Philadelphia Phillies knows it takes more than endurance to win 253 games and pitch 4,001 innings.

"I threw relaxed. I got ahead of the hitters and had good stuff," he said Tuesday night. "And I also got a lot of runs."

Kaat scattered 10 hits in raising his season record to 6-7 and tying Carl Hubbell for 25th place on the all-time list for career victories. He ranks 25th for number of innings pitched.

"Those are nice honors, but you can't lean on them," the 38-year-old left-hander said.

The Phillies backed Kaat with a 15-hit attack, crushing the Atlanta Braves 11-2 to retain their four-game lead in the National League East race. The Phillies have won 21 of their last 27 games.

Jay Johnstone paced Philadelphia's assault with three hits, scoring three runs, while Garry Maddox added a three-run homer.

In other NL games Tuesday, Cincinnati edged Montreal 4-3, Houston defeated New York 6-2, San Diego stopped St. Louis 7-4, Pittsburgh downed San Francisco 3-1 and Chicago defeated Los Angeles 4-1.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 1
Rick Reuschel became the major league's first 19-game winner, hurling Chicago over Los Angeles. Gene Cline drove in two runs and Jose Cardenal collected three hits to lead the Chicago attack.

Reuschel, 19-5, walked two and struck out four in gaining his fourth consecutive victory. Bruce Sutter came on in the ninth to gain his 26th save of the season.

Reds 4, Expos 3
George Foster smashed his 44th home run of the season and drove in three runs, increasing his major league-leading RBI total to 126 and helping Cincinnati beat Montreal.

The Expos made it close in the bottom of the ninth inning when they scored two runs off reliever Pedro Borbon and had the tying run thrown out at the plate to end the game.

Pirates 3, Giants 1
The Pirates equalled the NL season high by stealing six bases against San Francisco in support of a four-hitter by John Candelaria, 15-4. Phil Garner swiped three and Frank Taveras two as Pittsburgh recorded only its second victory against the Giants this year.

Candelaria was the winning pitcher in the other game, too.

Astros 6, Mets 2
A two-run double by Enos Cabell sparked Houston's four-run outburst in the fifth inning as the Astros defeated New York behind Joe Niekro's 11-hitter. Niekro captured his fourth complete-game victory in four home starts this season and increased Houston's winning streak to six games.

Padres 7, Cardinals 4
George Hendrick and Jerry Turner combined for five hits and five runs batted in to lead San Diego over St. Louis. It was the Cardinals' sixth straight loss.

Rookie left-hander Bob Owhinko, 7-9, got the victory, his fourth straight over St. Louis this season, with relief help from Dan Spillner.

Former Champion Suggests New Format For U.S. Amateur Event

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer
NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. (AP) — Gary Cowan suggests that the U.S. Golf Association should discard its match play format for the National Amateur Championship.

"You don't even get the feeling that you're playing in a national championship," said Cowan, the Canadian, who won the title in 1967 and 1971. "I'm not particularly fond of it (match play)" said Cowan, best remembered for the 135-yard chip shot into the cup on the final hole to win the 1971 Amateur.

Cowan is one of 200 of golf's top amateurs who started the first of eight rounds in the 77th National Amateur today over the 6,958-yard Aronimink Golf Club course in suburban Philadelphia. He opened against Jay Vincent of Norwalk, Conn. In addition to Cowan, there were four former Amateur champions in the field — Bill Sander (1976), Vinnie Giles (1972), Fred Ridley (1975) and Bill Campbell (1964). Both the U.S. and British Walker Cup teams also are competing.

Cowan, whose two Amateur titles were in medal play, at Merion, Pa., in 1967, and in 1971 at Wilmington, Del., was asked why he entered if he was so set against match play competition.

"If you want to win the National Amateur, you have to play in it," he replied.

Cowan, an insurance salesman from the province of Ontario, has several indictments against match play.

"Golf is supposed to be fun in the amateur end of it," Cowan said. "It's a chance to renew old friendships. In this thing, you say hello to a guy, and may not see him again. Your paths may never cross. You may be here one day and you're gone.

"Then, in medal play about 150 tee it up, while in match play there are 200 matches. And one-third get byes. Some good players are gone before they tee it up. This is not a way to determine a national champion.

"And that's not taking anything away from the guys who win it. If you play well, you'll win it in any form. But if you take a survey of players as to which format they like, you'll probably get a surprising answer."

Cowan, 38, and the father of four children, qualified this year for the Amateur with a 73-70-143. He plays on the average of twice a week. In addition to his two National Amateur titles, he has won the Canadian Amateur, North-South and Porter Cup titles.

Three Hours On Energy Crisis

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tonight, CBS is bumping its usual entertainments for a three-hour news special on a topic many viewers might consider a sure cure for insomnia: The energy crisis.

Competing against ABC reruns and only 1½ hours of first-run frivolities on NBC, the special, anchored by Walter Cronkite, is "Energy: The Facts...The Fears...The Future." It starts at 8 p.m. EDT.

Its inquiries range from the cosmic issues — such as international implications of the energy crisis and President Carter's energy proposals — to questions about windmill power and whether long lines at gas pumps are again in store for us.

"We've done energy stories before, of course, on the evening news and '60 Minutes,' and we were preparing a fresh look at it when the Carter energy proposals came out," says CBS' Bill Small.

After the proposal was pondered, added Small, senior vice president at CBS News, "it just seemed the dimensions of it were such that the only way to do it properly was to do it thoroughly."

Still, three hours for a news special, while nothing new, still is mighty long for such a broad subject as energy in one night. Why not air it in one-hour chunks on three consecutive nights?

Well, he replied, "the network asked which is the best way to do it, and the best way seemed to be to do it in one evening. So they made the time available."

Among other things, the show, 11 weeks in the making, did 200 man-in-the-street interviews on whether citizens really feel they face serious energy shortages.

And, Small said, "we found a lot of cynicism on the part of the average person because he or she can't see that crisis."

The aim of the show is to help them see the crisis from various angles, from energy legislation and a covey of Capitol Hill lobbyists trying to influence same to how conservation may ease power woes.

But in trying to help folks understand such a big, seemingly amorphous subject as the energy crisis, might not three hours of explanation and analysis strike folks as a reason to switch to other things tonight?

"Well, the individual has got an important stake in this," Small said, meaning the item called energy.

"It's true there's going to be (viewer) apathy. A lot of people are going to want to go out and watch the Dodgers play, or stay at the beach late at night. But one would hope enough of them will find this slow of sufficient interest to watch."

"And if it doesn't get the biggest audience any broadcast ever had, we'll just have to live with it," he added sardonically, aware that news specials aren't exactly known to get king-sized ratings.

In the news business, we make a mistake if we say we just want to do things that are going to be popular and attract big audiences.

"We have to do things that are important — and there's nothing more important at this moment than the energy crisis."

Amendment Slapped By GOP Chairman

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Republican party Chairman Jack F. Lee of Fayetteville has disagreed sharply with former governor Jim Holshouser over a proposed amendment that would allow North Carolina governors to seek reelection.

Lee calls the proposed amendment a "power play" by Gov. Jim Hunt. Holshouser gave the idea a ringing endorsement Monday at a luncheon he hosted with former Democratic governor Terry Sanford which kicked off a campaign for the proposed amendment.

Holshouser said it would be "shortsighted" to oppose the measure just because Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green would be the first to benefit.

Lee told a news conference Tuesday morning that the true issue is not succession. The true issue, he said, is the "continued power grab by Hunt."

But Lee said he thought Holshouser "has every right" to support the proposed amendment. "We're all a bunch of individuals in the Republican party," he added.

Hunt, whose legislative forces led the successful General Assembly battle for the proposed succession amendment, has not actively campaigned for it, nor has he said he would seek reelection if it is approved by the voters in the November general election.

Lee said Republicans as a group spoke against the succession proposal at their Charlotte convention last April by passing a resolution of opposition.

He also said North Carolina Republicans will shift their emphasis to local organizations this year and concentrate on getting Republicans elected to local offices.

"We've let the local organization slip. This will be reversed," he said.

Offer Children's Tour Of Palace

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A special tour for children which will show them how youngsters lived 200 years ago is being launched by the Tryon Palace Restoration complex.

The tour will take youngsters through a typical colonial day in the 1700s. Students will participate in daily activities that colonial children experienced, like using the kitchen mortar and pestle, carding, spinning, weaving wool and using flint and steel to get a flame going.

Children's games and toys will have an important part in the new tour. Toys were different in the colonial period, many of them whittled by the boys with their jackknives. Girls played with dolls from England and France, whose clothes provided colonial dressmakers with patterns for the latest styles in real clothing.

Here's a 'Take Charge' Job for a Person Ready to Move Up

You've put in your time on the board... at least 4 years of it... you've honed your drafting technique to a fine edge.

And now you're ready to take charge as Senior Designer in our rapidly growing Kinston transformer plant. You should be familiar with mechanical layout, and capable of initiating prints from actual component parts.

Requires a minimum of 2 years H.S. drafting plus a technical school degree. Some electrical drafting and/or art background would be a plus.

You'll receive a good starting salary with liberal benefits. Working conditions are ideal. And there will be frequent opportunities for advancement.

Apply in person bringing samples of your work, or call:
 Mr. Frank Sikorski, Engineering Manager (919) 523-0121

Atlanta Building Better Terminal

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Olympic marathoner Frank Shorter, in Atlanta for a long-distance race, told reporters he'd never run here before. But then he added, "Of course I've run that 10-mile loop around Atlanta airport. Everybody who changes planes does."

It's a familiar, if exaggerated, complaint for the 27 million non-marathoners who came through the world's second-busiest airport last year, 70 per cent of them stopping only to change planes.

Officials hope to satisfy their complaints — and others — with the huge $400 million terminal and plane concourse beginning to take shape near the patched-up, outgrown present terminal at Hartsfield International Airport.

The airlines estimate passenger traffic through Atlanta — a hub connecting flights among hundreds of cities — will rise to 55 million by the late 1980s.

The new facility is designed to handle that many passengers with ease, providing them with large parking lots near the two-building terminal, zipping them to plane concourses as much as a mile away on underground trains and moving sidewalks.

Or so the designers say. A passenger running to catch a connecting flight still could face as much as a half-mile on foot, but that's not as bad as some jaunts to far-flung gates at the present terminal.

Passengers and pilots alike will cheer the new terminal's location between major runways, a location that will end the current need for many planes to cross a major runway to reach their gates.

Eventually, airport planners expect to slice off the ends of the present terminal building — and lop off its top few floors — to make room for a fourth major runway and provide a good approach for it.

The new airplane concourses are expected to be expanded from the original 104 gates — capable of parking 104 "jumbo jets" at once — to 135 gates.

But all that would come after completion of the new terminal — which is scheduled to open in 1981 — and the new terminal at present is no more than plans on paper, a little concrete and a lot of dirt and dust.

Bulldozers and other earth-moving machines work long days at the site, which is mostly on property that was already within the confines of the present airport.

Signs of progress include a mountain of dirt piled up by the machines and a long trench where the "people-mover" subway is becoming recognizable. Squabbles about city demands for black participation in contracts delayed the start of construction for months, but the dry summer that has hurt Georgia farmers has helped the airport construction crews get back on schedule.

The infield construction has caused a few headaches for air controllers "having to open and close taxiways, switch planes around," but in general there has been little disruption of scheduled flights, said John Braden, of the city's aviation department.

The airlines agree. Some of the airlines, which will foot the bill for most of the construction cost, were slow to give approval for the project which was first proposed a decade ago, just a few years after the 1961 dedication of the present terminal.

But the airlines are solidly committed now, and Braden said airline leases have been signed for all 104 gates.

City officials have been solidly behind the project for years and also have pushed for a second major airport.

The need — or desire — for expanded airline facilities in Atlanta is due to its nearly unique status as a connecting point. It is significant that the world's busiest airport — Chicago's O'Hare International — also serves as a hub for flight connections.

Several airlines — Delta and Eastern in particular — have found it profitable to plan their routes around Atlanta, thereby choking the Atlanta airport with travelers who never set foot on Georgia soil.

"Seventy per cent of the people coming through here get off one plane and get on another," Braden said.

Without that relay traffic the present airport would be adequate, but the city wants the traffic for a wide variety of reasons ranging from economic considerations to a feeling that it lends "major-league" status to the city.

It also provides Atlanta residents with as good air service as any city in the world, Braden said. Atlanta may be only a stop on a Houston resident's journey to New York, but that connection status means an Atlanta has a number of nonstop flights to both those cities.

Atlantans can reach 100 cities nonstop on scheduled flights and more than 140 with non-stops or one-stops, Braden said.

And that access is bound to expand if the government agrees to one of a number of airline requests for nonstop service between Atlanta and London, which would make Atlanta a jumping-off place for international flights originating throughout the South and West.

City officials who relish the situation say that despite the current expansion at Hartsfield, a second major airport is a necessity for the Atlanta area before the end of the century.

In fact, the city has purchased land at two possible sites 30 or more miles north of Atlanta.

But work on a second airport has been held up by long, detailed federal procedures, by residents' protests that they don't want jets scaring their farm animals, by debates over other possible sites.

And, as airport manager Grady Ridgeway said, the final go-ahead for the Hartsfield project has taken the "umph" out of pressures to build the second airfield quickly.

Composer Sings Plays Guitar, Delivers Babies

By DOUGLAS MONROE
ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Alfonso Sainz turned down the air conditioning in his six-bedroom mansion, settled onto a sofa he brought over from Spain and talked about life as a singing obstetrician.

His surroundings are plush. He lives in a large Spanish-style home shaded by towering oaks and palms in the fashionable suburb of Winter Park. There's a swimming pool and a couple of expensive cars out back.

But Sainz does not lead the life of the idle rich. He stays busy. First, there's a medical practice he shares with another doctor in Orlando. Between them, they deliver 30 babies a month.

And then he takes time to compose and sing. He recently cut an album as a solo artist and he's chairman of the board of a new company that's getting into record production and possibly television.

"I like to do my music again," he said with a thick accent, "instead of playing golf or tennis as other doctors do."

Sainz was the leader of "Los Pekenikes," a 1960s rock group in Spain that once played with the Beatles and had hits in countries throughout the world, although they never made it big in America.

"We were the first rock 'n' roll group in Spain," Sainz said. "We had the first electric guitar and bass guitar ever used in Spain. In Spain, we were like the Beatles in England."

He says girls used to try to tear his clothes off. Now, he says, his patients sometimes ask him to sing while they're in labor. He obliges.

"Sometimes I take my guitar to the labor room. We have a little party with the husband and wife. We have a good time."

Sainz is a strikingly handsome man with longish brown hair and brown eyes. He looks much younger than his 33 years. And he is single.

Los Pekenikes were so successful that they chose to play only on weekends and holidays, which gave Sainz time to attend medical school while still in the band.

He came to Orlando, where his family had vacationed before, in 1970 and took his residency at a local hospital. He set up a practice that now flourishes.

For the past seven years, he says, he hasn't devoted much time to music.

"I didn't have too much time. I was working hard building my practice. My main goal was to be a good doctor."

He says no matter how successful he may be with his new album, titled "Quedate" (Stay With Me), and a single, "Sunshine Days," he won't give up medicine.

"I never will give up my practice. I always wanted to be a doctor, since I was a little kid. I love medicine and I love music too."

"No matter where I go, I think of music or medicine. Even sailing, I have a guitar or a medical book."

Sainz has some strong feelings about politics, but adds that "all my songs are just romantic songs, love songs and sometimes sad songs."

He says he chooses to live in the United States because "I believe in free enterprise. I'm no socialist, I'm no communist, that's why I don't live in Europe at present."

"I get frustrated when I see society moving to the left." Cuts from his new album already are breaking into the Latin American market, where he is still remembered from his days with Los Pekenikes. His goal is to crack the American market.

Recreated 19th Century Life

By ARTHUR P. BUSHNELL
STURBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The entrance to Old Sturbridge Village is a time tunnel, transporting 20th century visitors into a typical New England village of 150 years ago.

A sign saying visitors "are invited to investigate the life most of us would have lived 150 years ago" is the first hint the 40-building, 200-acre village is not the typical exhibits-in-glass-cases museum.

Historical "interpreters" costumed in 19th century work clothes staff exhibits, giving demonstrations as they work their way through a typical day in the past. Their chores change with the seasons at the village, which is open year-round.

A shoemaker works in the cobbler's shop, making shoes that will eventually be worn in the village. The blacksmith spends an entire day making a knife blade that will be used in another village building. Farm hands tend the animals and work the large, cultivated fields. And farm women prepare meals, make cheese and do other farm chores.

The museum takes great pains to "recreate the everyday life of ordinary people who lived in the early 19th century," says Laurance S. Morrison, director of public information for the village.

"We have a pursuit of authenticity about the past. We try to be as authentic as we can when you consider this is 1977. The livestock is a good example. Our animals look and behave differently than modern animals. We have reversed the genetic process and backbred them so they are very close — and in some cases right on the button the same — as animals who lived 150 years ago in New England."

As a result of the "restoration breeding," the sheep produce less than half the wool normal sheep produce, pigs look like reddish boars, the cows have squared instead of rounded backsides and the chickens tend to wander off a lot, he says.

Each of the exhibit buildings in the village once stood in a real New England village.

Some were transported in one piece to Sturbridge and others taken apart completely and then moved.

But when the village store, which formerly was a real store in Dummerston, Vt., had to be dismantled the village had its plaster analyzed so it could recreate the actual plaster mixture. Some of the buildings and yards have a "very messy, lived-in look" that Morrison is proud of. "Many museums which have a very fundamentally different approach are pristine and gorgeous — and that just is so unreal," he said. There are, however, some display buildings at the village, including what Morrison terms "the world's finest collection of antique clocks." It is this initial collection that gave birth to the village.

"We are not hung up on dates," Morrison says. "The date isn't the point. We are much more interested in the everyday lives of the people who today would be called the man in the street. We are interested in all of the common things that were so taken for granted in their time that there is no evidence of them today."

He says the village's researchers have to learn to "sometimes do research between the lines" to discover the "intricacies of day-to-day life." "We strive to show that today is the sum of all those yesterdays," he said. "If you understand life yesterday, then maybe it's possible to better understand our own condition. So ultimately the point is not the past but the present and the future."

"A person who wants to walk around the village and talk to the interpreters has the opportunity to understand their own condition. There are lessons to be learned, but for other people it's also a chance to show the kids a bit of history in a parklike atmosphere, to look at millions of dollars worth of antiques or to do serious study."

Morrison believes "some things recur. And one way to understand the present is to try to pay attention to the past because it can be useful."

Plans call for the present village to become the Center Village when a new Mill Village opens in five to seven years. Morrison says planning for the second village began more than nine years ago and initial work at a 1,000-acre site is now under way.

The second village, he said, will be "a textile mill village meant to show the origins of the industrial revolution in America."

"The two villages together will show that period when we moved from farms to factories."

Medical Kit Is Wise Item For Those On Road

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whether you're flying to a foreign country or taking a cruise, you'll be wise to pack some items from the family medicine chest.

To stock your own black bag, consider your regular medications and health regimes, as well as some of the ailments associated with travel in general and with your particular destination.

The most frequent vacation ailments include a variety of aches, coughs, nausea and vomiting, insect bites, upset stomach, cuts, sunburn and, frequently, constipation and diarrhea.

To minimize the impact of these illnesses and to maximize your vacation fun, consider packing these travel companions:

Aspirin alone or in combination with codeine can relieve troublesome pains and aches from muscle cramping, dental cavities or tension headaches. Codeine, a basic ingredient of cough medicines, is also effective for hacking coughs and other throat irritations.

For nausea caused by motion sickness, non-prescription Dramamine can alleviate discomfort and relieve the need to vomit. Dramamine is available almost anywhere in the world.

For indigestion, antacids containing magnesium and aluminum hydroxide are effective and safe. Sodium bicarbonate, otherwise known as baking soda, is one commonplace short-term remedy.

For minor cuts and scrapes, let nature do the healing. Wash the cut or bruise carefully with mild soap and water and cleanse the wound area. Common household antiseptics such as tincture of iodine may be useful.

Constipation is probably one of the two most common and unwanted companions on any trip. To aid digestion, physicians recommend a mild, bulk-producing fiber-containing product instead of a chemical laxative. Metamucil, a bulk-producing laxative derived from psyllium seed husks, is a natural source of fiber and is available in most countries.

The other common problem is diarrhea, often called "tourista" or "Montezuma's revenge." Lomotil may be one of the frequently prescribed remedies.

Because an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, take along an effective sun screening agent. Products with PABA, paraaminobenzoic acid, block the sun's harmful rays. Solarcaine, or other relieving agents, can temporarily soothe skin exposed to too much sun.

Insect repellent is another "ounce" of good prevention. Should you be afflicted with chiggers, prickly heat or insect bites, try using hot water compresses. Calamine lotion or other topical agents can also help relieve a great many bothersome skin problems, including itching.

If you wear glasses or contact lenses, pack a second pair in case one is lost or broken. Be sure to carry hospital insurance cards, and, if you have a medical problem of any kind, a medical-history tag or card.

Unexpected Publicity Paid

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP) — In 1837 when Mary Lyon, the founder of Mount Holyoke College here was looking for a name for her new institution, a friend from nearby Amherst suggested "Pangynaskean Seminary."

This Greek term for "all the powers of woman — physical, intellectual and moral," — never caught on, but it caught the attention of the press which laughingly reported the proposal. The unexpected publicity paid off.

Suddenly, Lyon's fledgling institution, which was based upon what was then considered the daring and revolutionary idea of higher education for women, became known in households all over New England. Then there was a burst of financial and moral support for the venture which a few months later was named for a nearby mountain — Mount Holyoke.

Small Part Of Pension Assets In Index Funds

Interstate Securities Corporation

Pension fund assets totaled $320 billion at the end of 1976. Despite all the publicity and discussion, less than 1 percent of that total was invested through index funds. In the first half of this year, the amount being indexed more than doubled, to $3.8 billion. The popularity of index funds is increasing and variations on the concept are being developed.

The beginning of index funds can be traced to passage of the employee Retirement Income Security Act — ERISA — and to increased attention being given to the efficient market theory. ERISA legislation extended legal liability for pension fund management to money managers as well as trustees. Subsequent legal interpretations of the long-standing "prudent man rule" said, in effect, that a competent money manager's performance should at least match that of a widely accepted market average.

The efficient market theory, in effect, concludes that you cannot beat the market, since all available news is known to everyone and immediately reflected in stock prices. Given little hope of beating the market and a substantial risk in underperforming the market, money managers became risk-averse.

Index funds are structured to match, in composition and performance, a particular market average, the most popular one being the S and P 500. This market value-weighted index is designed to reflect the aggregate market and its 500 stocks account for 79 percent of the market value of all NYSE listed stocks.

In defense of this concept, indexers point to the fact that active money managers have not proven they can consistently outperform the market. They believe downside risk is no greater in an index fund than in one which is actively managed. Diversification is provided by investing in a broad group of stocks. Finally, they point out that overall costs of running an index fund are lower than in an actively managed fund.

On the negative side, index funds represent passive stock selection since managers buy the index. Since they follow essentially a buy and hold theory, it is passive management, much the same as the one-decision concept of a few years ago. Detractors also add that index funds tolerate poor performance since, when the index is going down, so is the fund. They also argue that since four percent of the stocks in the S and P 500 represent 40 percent of the value of the index, there really is not much diversification. And, the S and P index might be performing poorly at a time when some other index is doing well. The most convincing argument would seem to be that the goal of a money manager should be to meet the objectives of the particular pension fund. The performance of the S and P 500 may not meet the fund's objectives.

Indexing may make sense for very large pension funds. The huge amount of assets under management links their overall performance to the market anyway, and it could reduce costs. Beating the market is difficult to do on a sustained basis, but it is possible and recent studies prove it. It remains to be seen how history will treat indexing since it has yet to go through a complete market cycle. Indexing funds remain a small percentage of pension fund investments and they are not likely to dominate common stock investing in the future.

Would Revise Licensing Tests

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — One method of promoting energy conservation would be to change the licensing examinations for architects, contractors, engineers and accountants, according to a University of California study.

The study, conducted by the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, concluded that licensing boards are in a position to force schools to teach energy techniques by changing the content of licensing exams.

At present, the study said, such exams in California do not address energy conservation in any way.

Superfestival For Hamburg

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) — The Hamburg State Opera will put on a super festival in 1978 in celebration of its own birthday: on Jan. 2 the world-renowned opera will be 300 years old.

Other opera companies from many parts of Europe will fete the Hamburg with guest performances throughout the year. Among these will be the State Opera of Dresden and the Zurich Opera.

Sales Boom For U.S. Paintings

NEW YORK (UPI) — American involvement these days in tracing their roots also has inspired another trend.

It's collecting American art. During the past season, American paintings had their greatest collecting boom since 1974, reports the Coe Kerr Gallery of New York. Gallery chairman Frederick Woolworth attributes the boom in part to American's "continuing interest in their 'trunks' as much as their 'roots,' as it were."

Aspiring Singers On Air Five Shows A Day Just Part Of A Dream For Youngsters

By JERRYBUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — This seems to be the year that television has discovered aspiring singers.

First, there was "3 Girls 3," which NBC has occasionally aired. Then the CBS summer series "A Year at the Top," in which two Simon and Garfunkel type singers achieve sudden success with the help of the devil's son. Now comes ABC's "Sugar Time!," a situation comedy about three young girls trying to break in as rock singers.

Hopping off her skateboard, Barbi Benton explained that "Sugar Time!" is adapted from the English series "Rock Follies." Barbi, brown-haired beauty with a slight pug nose, was only kidding round in the rehearsal hall with the board, but she does use it to get back and forth to her car across the huge Metromedia Square lot.

Barbi stars in the summertime series, seen on ABC on Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. EDT, with Didi Carr and Marianne Black. It premiered two weeks ago and will run for five weeks.

The music on the show is largely written by Paul Williams, who also occasionally makes an appearance to perform.

"In the first show we got our first job, working for free in a tacky little night club," said Barbi. "The dressing room is loaded with pipes, crates, one mirror and only one light bulb that burns. It's like all the clubs I've worked in for the past four years."

Barbi, a country-pop singer and onetime girl friend of Playboy's Hugh Hefner, said she's also worked in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe but prefers the little clubs "where you can let your hair down and the audience really responds."

Didi Carr also worked the club circuit and Marianne Black was in "A Chorus Line."

Barbi wore a yellow "McCloud" T-shirt, picked up when she played a famous rock singer on a "McCloud" episode about record piracy. She said it was her only other TV appearance. Her only movie role was in a German film she didn't want to talk about.

Asked if there were any parallels between herself and her character in "Sugar Time!," she replied quickly, "I hope not."

She said, "I play an incredibly naive girl. I'm much more worldly than Maxx, the girl I play. I can identify with her in some areas. She is what you could become if you didn't read and keep up with current events."

"In the first show I played her as smart putting on dumb. They liked the dumb so now I'm really dumb. My remarks are so dumb now that other characters think I'm putting on."

Barbi said she was invited to try out for the series because the casting director had previously hired her for a commercial.

"I passed the cold reading and did a screen test," she said. "There were 12 girls testing and we'd change around in the roles. After a second screen test I was selected."

Sigmund Freud published "Studies in Hysteria" in Vienna in 1895, a date often used to mark the founding of the science of psychoanalysis.

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD
SANTA CLARA, Calif. (UPI) — It's billed as "The World's Biggest Curtain Call."

If it doesn't live up to that motto, the musical bill of fare at the Great America Amusement Park certainly takes a good shot at it.

Retired troupers might groan about the exhausting "two a day" of years past in the big time, but youngsters here think nothing of five shows a day.

The performers play to audiences of up to 1,600 persons packed into theaters located amid such amusement rides as the "Tidal Wave" and the "Turn of the Century" roller coaster.

"If you can handle this you can be prepared for anything show business can offer" in the way of hard work, said Terri Homberg, 20, of Sunnyvale, Calif., one of the army of singers and dancers who put together a total of 100 shows a day.

"I have a girl friend in 'Annie Get Your Gun' and she says that's easy compared to this."

In all, including stage hands and musicians, there are 400 youths, with an average age of 19, who offer 20 different shows with repeat times scattered throughout the day.

Terri and Steve Scott, 20, Huntington Beach, Calif., had just completed their roles in "Broadway," a 45-minute show featuring great Broadway musical numbers.

"This either gets you in great shape or tears you down," said Scott, who has appeared in more than 300 shows. "But after a while you gain tremendous timing and have it down cold."

A visit back stage bears Scott out.

A member of the audience would easily think that, with all the costume changes and set movements, near chaos would be taking place in the wings. But a surprise visit by a newsman found teamwork as smooth as basketball's Portland Trailblazers. The only minus came when the newsman opened the stage door in his sneak visit and let light ruin a blackout scene.

The man behind the shows that range from "Sugar Time! Magic World" to "The World's Biggest Curtain Call." The review of America's musical music — is Gene Patrick, a music major in college who now keeps a hectic schedule of deadlines and rehearsals.

He holds extensive auditions, looking at 10,000 young people before cuts the list to the final 400.

Some people don't have the sound constitution needed for some of the thrill rides but come along to be with the kids.

The results of a bridge match don't always tell the tale of the drama of a particular hand. Anyone looking at the result of this hand from the quarter-finals of the Grand National team competition would have thought that it was a stand-off, since Montreal made five diamonds when declarer guessed the diamond suit, while Texas made four hearts with the same cards. But let's see what actually happened at the table where Montreal sat East-West.

The opening two club bids was artificial and the two diamond responses denied an ace. The rest of the auction was natural, and West led his fourth-best club against South's four heart contract. Sitting East was Joe Silver of Montreal, one of Canada's most imaginative players. He won the ace of clubs and found a brilliant switch—he returned the three of diamonds! He knew from the auction that his partner held the ace of diamonds. To fully appreciate the plan behind this play, let's consider what might have happened had West won the ace and continued a diamond.

Declarer would surely have played Silver for a singleton diamond and taken the finesse. Now East would win the queen to complete the defensive book, then continue with the queen of clubs, forcing dummy to ruff. The queen of trumps would become a sure defensive trick, insuring a one-trick set.

Unfortunately for Montreal, West did not read the situation. He won the ace of diamonds and reverted to clubs. Declarer ruffed with dummy's ace, finessed the ten of hearts and then played king and another. When the trumps split evenly, declarer claimed the rest of the tricks.

Montreal lost 1 International Match Point on the deal. Had they defeated four hearts, they would have gained 12 IMPs. What was most distressing was that Montreal lost the match by only 2 IMPs, and with it perhaps the chance to represent North America in next year's international team championship.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" ## FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 1, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The day starts out with some good ideas for making quick progress in your line of endeavor. Later you are able to utilize to advantage improved plans for the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your ambitions well and then you will know how to attain them. Take no chances with your fine reputation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You know exactly what you want to accomplish but need to make arrangements early for best results. Show others you have wisdom.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can't accomplish much with friends during day but tonight is fine for such. Show mate that you are truly devoted.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Civic affairs should be handled early in the day for best results. Be sure not to neglect to pay an important bill today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan time to study every phase of a new interest that could bring you benefits in the days ahead. Make the evening a happy one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't neglect to handle routine duties now, even though you may be tempted to go off on a pleasure spree. Express kindness to mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Anything that concerns association affairs should be handled before the day is done. Take steps to improve your public image.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can receive many benefits now if you conscientiously handle all that work ahead of you. Take needed health treatments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) More study is needed before you get good results with a creative idea you have. Come to a better understanding with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have an inspired idea early in the day which should be pursued with vigor. Be sure to handle home affairs wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Utilize wise ideas you have early in the day and reserve the evening for amusements you enjoy. Fine day for self-expression.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan now how to have greater abundance in the future via right outlets. Take no risks where money is concerned. Be wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should be sent to the right schools that will bring out the pioneering qualities here. Give as many cultural advantages as you can and don't neglect religious training. There is musical talent in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Barbara Cartland 'High Priestess' Of Romantics

"When I was young one was wooed. And it wasn't just one man; it was all men. And no gentleman ever rushed up and said 'come to me.' We were ladies and you simply didn't behave in that disgusting manner."

By GAIL GREGG
HATFIELD, England (UPI) — Barbara Cartland comes at you in a flurry of false eyelashes and bright silk, her quick tongue already forming the barrage of words with which she will lecture you on love.

Her lecture may sound more like an attack than a lesson, however. For the woman who believes herself to be the high priestess of love seems defensive about her reputation in some circles as the "Queen of Corn."

Writing at the country estate where former occupant Beatrix Potter created Peter Rabbit and his playmates, the prolific Mrs. Cartland has churned out an average of four books a year for 54 years, wooing her reading audiences with passages like:

"It was the future that was important, a future that held Jim, a future where she would be his wife."

"She didn't ask how it was possible, she only knew that he was with her, that they would be married and be complete."

"It was so wonderful that the room seemed golden with sunshine. She felt her heart dancing with the joy of it."

"I...love...you..." she whispered and saw the happiness in his eyes."

Every one of her 176 romantic novels — bearing such evocative titles as "The Daring Deception," "The Flame Is Love" or "Kiss the Moonlight" — has featured the same virgin heroine, the same spirited hero waiting to be whipped into line by pure love. Only their names and the settings are different.

But each novel sells out within weeks of hitting the bookshop shelves in the most unlikely countries — down-to-earth Denmark, promiscuous France or the wife-swapping United States.

"The reason I think my books have such tremendous sales," she pronounces, jabbing at each word in her husky voice, "is first the virgin heroine, and secondly that the books are factual. I take an enormous amount of trouble in my research."

"And I think everyone is fed up with everybody shooting each other, with violence and rape. Most women want beauty and love and beautiful clothes and to feel glamorous."

"There's nobody else who writes romantic novels with beautiful women, which is why there are 45 million of my books in circulation in the U.S. and now France has gone mad, mad, mad and is bringing out two books a month."

"In the middle of my books is a lot of teaching of the right sort. In other words, purity, religion, honesty, pride — all the things we ought to have. And it's all beautifully dolled up with stars and jam — but it's not just a pretty story."

"And that is why women write to me thanking me. They write and say, 'When I'm in my kitchen you make all the difference. It all seems full of sunshine.'"

In the face of attack from those who advocate that women be allowed to choose career, home or both, the 76-year-old storyteller plants her well-shod feet on the rich carpet of her turquoise-trimmed country home and fights back.

"You can't have it both ways. You cannot run successfully two jobs. You're the one if the

Speed Aids Efficiency

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Doubling your reading speed can increase your comprehension by about eight per cent, says a Purdue University professor of developmental reading. "Increased reading speed sharpens your mind generally," notes Professor Merrill May. "You often become mentally more efficient."

According to May, almost anyone can be trained to read better, doubling and sometimes even tripling reading speed. Poor readers, he says, are that way because they haven't read enough. They usually lack vocabulary and have bad habits. Some unconsciously resist change because they think the slow reader gets more out of reading.

The best readers, says May, tend to be those with a broad vocabulary, familiarity with sentence patterns and a variety of life experiences. These individuals can quickly learn to read 1,800 or 2,400 words per minute with excellent comprehension. But, he notes, the 10,000-words-a-minute speed reader "is about as rare as a Mozart." Most people read about 250 words per minute and, according to May, college students should be able to read about 600 if they want to get their lessons done.

boiler is broken, if the children are sick or if the au pair has fallen down and broken her knee — you're the one who copes, not the man.

"You can't expect your husband to come home and cook the dinner. Men have always been dominant — I like them dominant. I loathe the men who aren't dominant. I think there's nothing more degrading than a man in a plastic apron doing the washing up."

"You see, women have always been crying for the moon and now they want the moon, the sun, the stars and everything else in the world. But it's not going to work. It doesn't work."

Mrs. Cartland pauses to repowder her face and redraw the mobile red lips. She leans back in the deep chair, fringed and pillowed. Around her are somber paintings which are the mark of her financial success.

Mrs. Cartland has rearranged her stole, fluffed her already fluffy white hair and she's ready to go again.

"When I was young one was wooed. And it wasn't just one man, it was all men. And no gentleman ever rushed up and said 'come to me.' We were ladies and you simply didn't behave in that disgusting manner."

"So you were something apart. And you grew up realizing your responsibilities, realizing that you had to give. And my mother always said the prettier you are, the more talents you have, the more intelligent you are, the more you have to give to the world. You've got to help other people."

"You've got to look up. And the most important thing in the world is to hitch your wagon to a star."

What about women who want to hitch their wagons to careers? "Then they whine when they lose their husbands. You can't have it both ways. That may be against women's lib, but so what. Women libbers very rarely have husbands."

"It's a woman's responsibility to keep the marriage going," said Mrs. Cartland, who divorced her first husband, Alexander George McCorquodale, in 1933. She married his cousin Hugh in 1936. "If a man leaves you, it's your fault."

"What has happened now is that wives who have very nice husbands think they must carry on with the milkman when he's gone to work."

"Women are supposed to be on a pedestal. Women are wonderful, pure and inspirational. That's exactly what we want to be."

"Why should women want to have fun and go to bed? You don't want people to treat you as a cheap prostitute. You can be wooed and run after and loved and people want to be serious with you."

"For the average woman who's born into a decent, respectable household, going to bed with a man is a sort of tremendous, traumatic experience."

"A man can make love without it being anything but a physical action. It can mean no more to him than a good or bad meal and is as quickly forgotten."

"God made it that if a woman goes to bed with a man, it always affects her personality."

"Women have this wonderful way of turning what is material into what is spiritual. You see, if you take love-making in its ordinary form, it's what a dog does, what horses do. We make it spiritual. And if you're going to limit the spiritual — which is what pornography does — you're going to get the mere mechanics, which is very dirty, very ugly and very unpleasant."

"A social worker recently told me, 'I'm so sorry for the men.' When I asked her why, she said, 'You see, all these women arrive with sex manuals now and say, 'I'm entitled to this,' and men are terrified." And after our conversation, a professor in America came out and said the same thing. He said men were going impotent or queer because women are making such terrific demands.

"Women never sort of think of men naked. I've done a survey among my young friends in which I said, you had a fantasy in which you're being made love to, is the man dressed or undressed. And they all said, 'Oh, dressed, and if possible in uniform.'"

"All this talk about being natural. It's revolting. I hate to think about people lying about naked. People are much better when they aren't so over-natural. When they don't walk about with very large hideous bodies all exposed."

"All these Americans lying around on beaches half-baked. I don't blame their husbands when they run off with go-go girls. White skin is much nicer."

Mrs. Cartland, who makes hundreds of television and radio appearances each year and who has written 41 non-fiction works and a five-volume autobiography in addition to her novels, credits her own white skin and vitality to a strict regime of vitamins and honey.

"Look at me," she says, throwing open her arms. "I'm 76. I do more than anybody else. I hold two world records (for writing 21 books each of the past two years). I work frightfully hard. And I feel wonderful."

"I've answered 10,000 letters on my health this year. I dictated 6,500 words of my latest novel before you arrived today, as I do every day from 1:30 to 3."

"My second son listens to the chapters, can you believe it? I feel rather like (romantic novelist) Elinor Glyn who sat in St. Petersburg reading her book to the czar and czarina."

"I say, I can't see myself doing that in Buckingham Palace..."

Mankind Fast Depleting 'Unlimited' Fish Supply

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — Centuries ago a proverb spread through the western world based on what was seen then to be the inexhaustible riches of the sea.

It had a number of variations but one of the most popular was: There are as many good fish in the sea as ever came out of it.

What was true then — and had been since the beginning of time — is no longer so. There aren't plenty of fish in the sea any more. Man hunting the water dweller for food for himself and his domestic animals has fished a number of species to danger levels in some traditional areas and depleted the stocks of others.

Roaming the seas as, for example, the Soviets do, in giant factory ships that locate fish with the latest electronic devices and suck them up as though with a giant vacuum cleaner, man has gathered too much of the harvest of nature in vast stretches of the oceans. As one thoughtful observer put it:

"The world's fishing fleets are now too much for the world's fish."

The fish desperately need time to breed but the pressure on one of our oldest and, until now, most reliable food sources never relaxes. Every year 70 million new mouths join the soaring population of the world. Every year there are more cattle and poultry to be fed. It is ironic that only in wartime when men are killing each other ashore and afloat do the fish flourish and multiply.

So experts such as Dr. Ian Payne of the Department of Biological Studies at Lanchester Polytechnic and others involved in fish problems have been contemplating a bleak future dramatized recently when the nine-nation European Community had to declare a moratorium on fishing the once abundant herring at least until October.

The alternative, said Britain, in whose waters the species is most numerous, is the end of the North Sea herring.

In Denmark and Holland, where it is a national delicacy, that must seem inconceivable. But the extermination of the passenger pigeon probably appeared just as far-fetched to the Americans whose skies they darkened in flocks of tens of millions in living memory.

What the fish scientists are talking about is not the near future, say the year 2000 when the world population will have doubled again. They are talking about now, though the changes caused by the shortage of some fish and the high prices of others are so gradual as to cause irritation rather than alarm in the minds of consumers.

"The crisis has been threatening for the past 10 to 20 years," said Dr. Payne. "It was predictable. It was avoidable. And it was precipitated by the very interests that had the information and the influence to prevent it."

Talks with fish experts usually come down to these stark probabilities: The oceans will never again be able to supply fish to everybody who wants it and certainly not at a price they can afford.

Those nations whose waters are rich in fish — Britain, for instance — will restrict fishing by other nations to husband a precious national resource.

Those nations which have to import fish will pay higher prices. Many millions of people will have to learn to eat species not now generally welcomed at the table. In Britain the working class is munching away at the grey flesh of coley, which used to be food for the family cat.

Less notice was taken of an obituary pronounced in the House of Commons by A.J. Beith who represents a Scottish constituency. He told Parliament that there were now too few herrings for the famous Craster Kippers, known to gourmets everywhere, and they would only reappear if and when the herring shoals, sucked up by the Russians and netted by everybody else, regenerated themselves.

One of those who did see the item was Mrs. Jill Carlyle, British housewife, who said she wished more husbands were aware of the shopping difficulties their wives were facing. "My husband," she said, "once told me that if steak was too expensive I ought to buy fish. Turbot was the one he mentioned. His jaw dropped when I told him turbot at that time was three pounds ($5) a pound. Worse than steak. And fresh salmon, it was the start of the season, was five pounds ($8.50) a pound. "Why, cod has been selling at a pound ($1.75) a pound. One of the few reasonably priced fish is mackerel. But he thinks it's too oily."

For how long will mackerel be reasonable? Robert Hicks, director of fishery research, says about 500,000 tons of mackerel are being taken off Cornwall every year — 100,000 tons by the British, 200,000 tons by the Soviets and 200,000 by other nations. According to scientists of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, this is double the advisable annual catch.

Said Member of Parliament John Peyton:

"If there is no change of mind on the part of those who now claim an almost unfettered right to fish in the northeast Atlantic the fishing stocks in those waters may be virtually wiped out in very few years."

The international friction engendered by the fish issue was obvious in the Commons debate in which he spoke. James Johnson accused Common Market countries of cheating on size of catches. Donald Stewart said it was not the East Europeans who were the worst offenders but the Common Market Danes.

The report of the White Fish Authority was quoted. It said it was curious that the Common Market wanted fish to be treated as a common resource — and British waters contained 66 per cent of the available fish. M.P. Enoch Powell said Britain should not rely for its fish "on the very people who have hitherto pillaged and looted them."

Patrick Wall said Britain had lost its valuable fishing rights off Iceland, the Faroes and Norway, all in a matter of months with traumatic effects in its fishing ports. Large numbers of big trawlers of the distant water fleet were laid up and many sailors and fisheries workers laid off.

Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries John Silkin promised Britain would carry out fish conservation measures with or without its European Community partners. Later he said he had warned the Community that unless Britain was given an exclusive fishing zone of 12 miles and "dominant preference" up to 50 miles it would return to its original demand of a 50-mile exclusive fishing zone.

He said Britain had emphasized to the Community its right to take unilateral conservation measures where necessary and would do so in the case of the herring when the original ban on fishing expires in October "because we are really faced with the possible extinction of the herring stock and that I am not prepared to countenance."

The Community's 200-mile fishing zone in which other nations must apply for licenses will cut down the Russian catch — they were estimated to have taken 600,000 tons of fish in 1976, equal to 20 per cent of the entire Common Market catch. But the small mackerel fishermen of Cornwall are worried that the giant British trawlers, made idle by Iceland and other bans, will head their way instead and start a "mackerel war."

Dr. Payne said over-exploitation of the herring is part of a modern phenomenon, "the industrial fishery," where fish are caught to feed pigs, poultry and cattle, rather than people. One dramatic result of this practice was the drop in the yield of the Atlantic-Scandinavian herring from 1.5 million tons to below 10,000 tons.

"A similar fate may lie in store for some of the demersal fish, particularly those of the North Sea. The catches of cod and haddock have been consistently above the estimated sustainable yield," he said.

He said fishermen of the developed nations, notably those of Russia and eastern and southern Europe along with the Koreans and Japanese were working the waters off West and South Africa for sardines, mackerel, tuna, hake, sea bream and taking 70 per cent of the total catch.

There were, he said, parallels with the North Sea already beginning to appear in the decline of the African pilchard catch. And in a world being segregated into "private fish ponds." Third World nations are not receiving the fish they need more urgently than developed countries.

Payne said the solution of the present worldwide fisheries crisis is a system of realistic national quotas, with licenses for traditional fishers in the waters, the acceptance as food of unfamiliar species of fish, even those whose flavor might be an acquired taste, and more expert preparation of such fish in the kitchen.

He said Russia was the worst offender when it came to intensive fishing. He is dubious of meaningful international cooperation until "each country has learned to act as custodian of its own immediate assets."

Hunt Ancient Wrecks With A Sonar Device

By LARRY THORSON
ACRE, Israel (AP) — A thoroughly modern tugboat is crisscrossing Haifa Bay in a sonar-guided search for the wreck of a Phoenician boat, a type that may have sailed to the Americas 30 centuries ago.

"There must be one here," the American sonar expert, Dr. Harold Edgerton, said, uttering the unofficial motto of the students and professors of marine archeology engaged in the tedious search of the bay's bottom.

"We are looking here," the Israeli archeology expert, Dr. Mishla Linder, said, "because Acre has been an active harbor for 4,000 years, and the Phoenicians were here." There are some drawings of Phoenician boats, he said, "but not one complete wreck has been found yet."

Linder is director of Haifa University's Center for Marine Studies and his research has an academically respectable aim: to exhume a wreck from the bay-bottom silt, find out how the Phoenicians lived as the master seafarers of ancient times, and learn more of how they fitted into patterns of maritime civilizations that thrived in the Mediterranean before Christ through the seaborne merchants of Venice.

"But if a complete wreck is found, volunteers are waiting to help Linder's research to a more adventurous test. They want to reconstruct a Phoenician boat and attempt to sail it across the Atlantic in a Thor Heyerdahl-type expedition.

Linder recruited Edgerton, a professor emeritus of electrical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to show how to operate the sonar. In the right hands, the sophisticated side-scanning sonar gives a sharply detailed picture of the bottom.

The two scientists carefully lowered the sonar "fish" over the side, and Edgerton sat down at a console which translated signals sent up the cable from the five-foot-long, torpedo-like "fish" into shades of brown on thermofax paper.

"The boat keeps a steady three knots, and we get a record here of the bottom for 100 yards on each side of the boat," Edgerton said. Using the rangefinder in the tugboat lent by the Israeli navy, Edgerton occasionally noted the vessel's position on the margin of the paper rolling slowly out of the console.

Sandy bottom was recorded in a mottled brown, mud was white, and rocks were dark brown with white "sonar shadows" showing how high they stood.

And so it went all morning: sand, mud, rocks — none of the out-of-the-ordinary marks that might indicate something promising, a mound or the shank of an anchor.

"We cover a lot of territory this way, but it still could take six years to find anything," Edgerton said, with a glance at the sweep of this very large bay.

Archeologists are noted for their patience, but Linder brought Edgerton's sonar expertise into the search because it would have taken impossibly long — or improbable luck — to find a wreck by using divers to examine the bottom.

Rough seas also can render the sensitive sonar instrument useless, delaying the search for a boat which may have sailed to the British Isles, as the Phoenicians are known to have done in their heyday about 1000 B.C.

Thor Heyerdahl showed in 1969 that ancient Egyptian reed boats could sail across the Atlantic. There are people who believe the Phoenicians' sturdier boats could have reached the Americas 2,500 years before Columbus.

Age 79, Happy As A Volunteer

NEW YORK (AP) — Freda Kohn, 79-year-old great-grandmother, says her work as president of the Kew Forest Chapter of Women's American ORT keeps her busy, but "it keeps me happy and healthy."

She is the oldest president among the 30 chapters of the Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training in the Borough of Queens Region, according to a regional spokesman.
