Hurricane Anita Churns On Toward Texas Coast

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Dawn broke over a serene Lower Rio Grande Valley today, but Hurricane Anita — moving ever closer over the Gulf of Mexico — drew a bead on that land of citrus groves and beach resorts. The season's first hurricane lurked less than 200 miles off the lower Texas Coast, packing 105-mile-an-hour winds around its center and throwing out gale force winds 200 miles north of the center, located at latitude 25.9 north and longitude 94.3 west. Brownsville sits at latitude 26.

A hurricane watch posted earlier for an area between Vermilion Bay, La., and Matagorda Bay in Texas was discontinued by forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami as low pressure continued to suck the hurricane on a slightly southwestern track.

Moderate temperatures and scattered clouds gave scant indication of the storm's approach early today. But some thunderheads were visible on the horizon off Corpus Christi to the north and tides along the coast swelled up to eight feet above normal, causing some flooding of highways and roads.

Price Index Is Up

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Wholesale prices inched ahead by one-tenth of a per cent in August as a fourth consecutive monthly decline in farm prices nearly offset increases in other areas, the Labor Department reported today.

The small August increase in wholesale prices followed two months of decline in the government's Wholesale Price Index.

Farm prices declined another 4.3 per cent, the fourth consecutive month of decline, which is a welcome trend for consumers but continuing bad news for farmers, who have seen their farm income steadily eroding in recent months.

Lower prices were recorded during the month for coffee, eggs, livestock, grains and poultry, while prices increased for fresh and dried fruits and vegetables.

Prices trends at the wholesale level are eventually reflected in prices consumers pay for the finished product, although not all at once.

Program Abused

By The Associated Press

The Labor Department is looking into charges of abuse in a federally financed job program in three cities after ordering Chicago to repay nearly $1 million allegedly used for political hiring.

Announcing the start of a nationwide crackdown, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Wednesday that an investigation found Chicago used a "political referral system" to fill jobs intended for the long-term unemployed and financed under the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

Under the CETA program, the government is paying states and cities $5.5 billion to put 725,000 unemployed persons in public service jobs. The program is intended to create new jobs to ease unemployment and requires applicants to have been unemployed for a minimum of 15 weeks.

Marshall said he did not think abuses of the CETA program were widespread but that "I intend to find out." He described the alleged abuses in Atlanta, Gary, Ind., and New York as "serious enough to look at fully."

Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic denied any illegal actions by the city in the jobs program. However, he said the city agreed to repay the $965,460 allegedly misused, to avoid a fight that would "needlessly take the time" of federal and city employees.

"We have a difference of opinion with the federal government," Bilandic said after Marshall's announcement. "We have not admitted any wrongdoing."

Chicago officials also will no longer participate in the processing of applicants for CETA jobs in the city, Marshall said. The Illinois Bureau of Employment Security has been given that job.

Abuses were found in about 250 of the 7,500 CETA jobs filled so far this year, Marshall said. Chicago was allotted $129 million for 15,000 jobs, paying about $10,000 a year.

Marshall said Chicago officials had handed out the 250 jobs as political favors to persons recommended by local politicians instead of allotting them to the unemployed on a first-come basis.

Public Should Not Rush Canal Treaty Verdict: Morgan

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

N.C. Senator Robert Morgan strongly advocates a policy on the part of the public to "wait until all the facts are out" before forming opinions on the controversial issue of a treaty on the Panama Canal Zone.

Morgan, in an early morning appearance on WNCT-

TV's "Carolina Today" program, spoke rather extensively on the canal issue.

Observing that three former presidents—Johnson, Nixon and Ford, all "felt strongly about adjustments in the status of the canal," Morgan added, "it certainly is incumbent on me to at least wait until all the discussions, pro and con, have been made before I arrive at conclusions." He called on the listening public to do the same.

One of the program's panelists, remarking that "we've been hearing only reasons why we shouldn't give it up," asked Morgan if he could provide reasons

Rescue Team Is On Way

A nine-member competition team from the Greenville Rescue Squad flew to St. Louis, Mo. today to participate in the heavy duty rescue competition sponsored by the International Rescue and First Aid Association in connection with the organization's annual conference.

The N. C. Department of Insurance is sponsoring the flight, using one of the state's airplanes.

The state's Commissioner of Insurance, John Ingram, said during a visit here earlier this month, "We're going out there September 1 to bring back the bacon."

Greenville placed second in the international heavy duty rescue competition last year in Baltimore, Md., and has over the years, been a top competitor in both state and international heavy duty rescue and first aid competition.

Aflatoxin Tests

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The damage to North Carolina corn from a produced poison seems to be no worse this year than last year, according to Dr. T. Everett Nichols, grain marketing economist at North Carolina State University.

He said testing shows the state's crop is in better shape than in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, where half the corn is contaminated with aflatoxin.

Nichols said North Carolina corn in the southern Piedmont and coastal plain regions has sustained the most damage from aflatoxin, but state officials are not sure how the rest of the state's crop has fared.

Results of a statewide survey are being compiled and will be released as soon as possible, he added.

Corn Aflatoxin Problem To Be Talked Tonight

Farmers and others interested in the corn marketing program are scheduled to meet here tonight to discuss the problem of aflatoxin that is showing up in

BILLFOLD RETURNED

Mrs. Alice Hill of 200 Glenwood Drive here says she has a two-fold purpose for telling Hotline about the theft and subsequent return of her billfold last Friday.

She wants to warn others not to make the mistake she did: she left her pocketbook unattended in a grocery cart for just long enough to turn around and choose some bacon. "It was long enough," she said, "for someone to take my billfold out of my pocketbook and close it carefully so I wouldn't notice until I got to the check-out counter. A friend of mine had this same thing happen in a grocery store not long ago," she said. "I should have learned from her experience, but I didn't. I'd advise everyone who carries a pocketbook to keep it with her at all times. Don't even put it in a shopping cart."

Mrs. Hill also wants the world to know about the kindness of Eugene Hudson of Memorial Drive, who saw her billfold with contents scattered in the intersection of Arlington Street and Hooker Road. "He took the time," she said, "to stop and pick everything up and call me and tell me he had it. I'm out the $82 I had in the billfold to pay for my groceries, but, thanks to Mr. Hudson, I have my driver's license, car registration and a lot of other things valuable only to me. I think he's a wonderful person."

Rep. Jones Expects Carter To Serve U.S. Well

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Congressman Walter B. Jones had breakfast with members of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce this morning and shared with them his observations on several current issues.

The Farmville representative, speaking at an early morning session arranged by the Chamber's Congressional Action Committee, offered at the outset his reaction to the Carter administration and termed the new president "one of the most sincere, dedicated men I have had the pleasure of meeting."

Jones said that if Carter has one particular weakness, it is his "no compromise" attitude. The congressman added that he hopes that attitude will mellow but he said that for now, Carter will listen "but it doesn't seem to...sink in."

The president, according to Jones, "has made one serious mistake" in surrounding himself with non-professional people who are not experienced at the Washington level.

The Democratic representative, who commended Carter for selecting Bob Bergland as Secretary of Agriculture, noted that, "By and large, I feel the nation will be well served by Carter and his administration."

In response to a question concerning the Social Security program, Jones acknowledged that it is in serious trouble "although the so-called experts say it is actuarially sound."

He said that he feels a point of diminishing returns has been reached on increasing taxes to meet program needs and he asserted that a great deal of opposition will be voiced by those who feel money could be taken and invested in a private retirement plan. The question, he said, is whether the private plans would be set up if they were not required by law.

Saying he would feel reluctant to vote for increased taxes, Jones said that in the long run Congress has a "moral obligation" to pay for the program through general fund revenues.

Asked to comment on the Labor Reform Act of 1977, the congressman told the gathering that he would not vote for a bill that would supersede "North Carolina's and 20 other states' right-to-work laws." He said he did not think Congress has the perogative to override the states.

Jones reported that his vote on the controversial Panama Canal Treaty would be a "definitive no." He explained that a great price was paid for the Canal with lives and money and if "we were dealing with a stable government...then it would be another matter."

He said his main objection would be that the United States would be signing a treaty with an unstable government and nothing could be gained by paying Panama to take the Canal back.

If the Senate rejects the treaty, the House will be "off the hook," he joked. Jones serves on the Merchant Marines and Fisheries Committee and the Panama Canal Sub-Committee which will study the matter if it reaches the House.

The guest speaker said that he is one of the alarmists in the field of energy and thinks "far too little" is being done about the energy situation. Pointing out that the creation of the Department of Energy under one head rather than a stair-step arrangement as in the past was a wise procedure, Jones said that he thinks that direction of the energy programs will be better from "here on out."

Although solar energy is a potential source, Jones said that he did not think it would be a factor "our lifetimes" and he suggested that the nuclear energy approach might be the best bet for the "short haul."

Jones admitted that health care costs are astronomical but he said he still can not "reconcile putting restraints on hospitals" unless restraints are placed on the commodities they must buy.

There will be a national health insurance bill at some time in the future, he predicted, but it will be incumbent upon Congress to be very sure of the legislation before it is enacted.

The tobacco program, he announced, is intact in spite of severe attacks and proposed legislation to phase out the price support program in three years.

"We've had to take tobacco and convince the anti's that the economic factor is one part and the health factor is another," Jones added.

The congressman said that he planned to attend a meeting tonight in Greenville to discuss the serious toxin problem that is threatening the corn marketing program in the state. Saying that the problem "sprang up almost overnight," Jones promised that he would offer his services "for any remedial assistance" in meeting the problem.

Dear Abby

Both Are Symptoms:
Her Mannish Ways,
His Plot To Leave

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 18 years, and I'm ashamed to have my wife meet my business associates or customers.

She has her hair cut very short—just like a man, and she never wears any makeup. She hasn't worn a dress in two years. She always wears pantsuits.

When I ask her to try to look more feminine and let her hair grow, she gets angry and asks me why I married her. Well, Abby, she didn't look like that when I married her. She had pretty long hair, and she dressed like a girl. She says it's easier to wear her hair short, and she doesn't care what anybody thinks. Well I care.

She can well afford to go to the beauty parlor once a week, but she says it's too much trouble. If it weren't for the two kids, I'd leave her now. But I'll stay a few more years until the kids go off to college. That is, unless you can come up with some ideas to get her to change.

STUCK IN FLORIDA

DEAR STUCK: Your marriage is suffering from a serious communication gap. It's more than her mannish haircut and suits. She doesn't give a hoot what you think. Meanwhile, you are secretly plotting to leave her.

Level with her about your feelings, and please consider counseling if you want your marriage to survive.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure we've all been bored by people who are in the habit of telling long, drawn-out stories that are usually pointless and seem endless.

May I share a wonderful suggestion given to me by a very wise friend?

To test the interest of your audience, if someone interrupts you in the middle of a story and no one says, "...and then what happened," shut up!

I've tried it many times over the years, and I must admit, I have had to shut up a lot.

OLDER AND WISER

DEAR WISER: Thanks for a valuable suggestion. And in that connection, if you hear yourself saying, "...so, to make a long story short," it's too late already.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and no raving beauty, but I am not ugly, either. I was over at my girlfriend's house one night and she called up a boy I like. (I'll call him "D.") She asked him what he thought of me, and he didn't come right out and say he LIKED me, but he didn't say he HATED me, either. (I was listening in on the other phone.)

I was going to ask "D" to our club dance, but now I'm not sure. He has never asked me out, but whenever we were accidentally thrown together, he acted like he sort of liked me. I am all confused. What should I do?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Forget "D" and ask a boy who has asked you out. And if you want to be well-liked by both boys and girls, don't be a party to calling up boys. And NEVER listen in on the other phone. It's dishonest and childish.

Shadow Puppets Draw Crowds

By KENNETH L. WHITING
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Drama presented by the shadows cast by puppets might not wow them on Broadway, but it's been pulling in crowds here for more than a thousand years.

The wayang kulit, or shadow puppet show, is not an Asian version of Punch and Judy. It's an ancient art form with modern political clout. The wayang of 1977 is mass entertainment deeply rooted in Javanese mysticism; the spirits of the dead are believed to inhabit the shadows of the puppets.

More than 20,000 puppetmasters, called dalangs, are active in this country of 135 million, most of them on Java and the resort isle of Bali. Bali accords these itinerant storytellers the same status as priests.

"The dalang, whose talent is more complex than that of a simple puppeteer in the Western sense, is believed to join the characters of the mythology in a world outside time, without past or future," according to one expert.

Sometimes the puppetmaster deals with current events.

A spokesman said the government had long been aware of the key communications role played by dalangs in a country where only two per cent of the population read newspapers, and radio and TV have limited impact.

At the government's bidding, dalangs have promoted birth control on overcrowded Java, better rice growing methods and the political status quo.

The multiple talents of Indonesia's puppetmasters start with sheer stamina. Wayangs are all-night affairs lasting nine hours or more. Some extravaganzas require several nights to complete.

Dalangs have memorized the lines of scores of verse plays and rattle them off in different accents for dozens of characters. The dalangs sing and chant while weaving through the complex story, and they simultaneously direct a 20-member gamelan, or orchestra, by coded tapping on a foot knocker.

The dalang manipulates his cast from behind a translucent white screen lighted from above to make the puppets appear as black shadows to the audience. Elaborate punched-out patterns give their shadows the look of fine lace.

Themes for the wayang come mostly from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, Hindu epics brought here 1,500 years ago from India. These, blended with earlier tales of Javanese ancestor cults and historical legends, are presented by flickering shadows.

The wayang is a village ritual in Java, held to mark births, weddings, circumcisions or the "purification" of a home or the entire community.

Musicians play an overture on their gongs, xylophones and drums, while the dalang burns incense and offers prayers before moving behind the screen for his overnight stint.

About three hours are devoted to outlining the plot and introducing the main characters, which every Javanese child knows by heart.

To end certain acts the dalang may bring on three characters called Garang, Petruk and Semar, whose slapstick exchanges carry any message the puppetmaster is trying to put across. The trio is used to summarize main points and to comment on current events and government policy.

A star among dalangs, who authorities say are born with semidivine talents, may collect 50,000 rupiahs (about $120) for a single performance, approximately the average annual per capita income for Indonesians.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My son said to me the other day, "Did you ever hear of death by listening?"

"What's that supposed to mean?"

"It means you and Dad are driving us crazy. Ever since we decided to backpack through Europe you've treated us like babies. After all, we're 22 and 19 years old."

"Okay, spit it out. Was it the name tags I sewed in your pajamas?"

"It was the pajamas. I told you we are not taking pajamas. We are roughing it."

"I understand about roughing."

"Mom! Roughing it to you means a phone with only a 10-foot extension cord."

"If you objected to the string around your neck with the pencil coming through each sleeve, just say so."

"We told you. Don't worry. Isn't it enough that we have to listen to Dad's hypothetical situations?"

"He just wants you to have a wonderful time."

"A wonderful time. Listen to this: 'You are standing in line at immigration when you realize someone has just stolen your passport and all your traveler's checks, a junkie has just planted a shoebox of heroin in your backpack and the immigration officer does not speak English."

What do you do?"

"That's not so bad," I said. "You don't know what misery is until a passport officer looks at your picture and then you and sees the resemblance. Now THAT is trauma time. Are you taking sun tan lotion?"

"You know what this reminds me of? Of the time we went to camp and you made us take a popcorn popper."

"And it would have worked out beautifully if you had had electricity."

"Okay, son," said his father, coming into the room. "Let me give you another problem to solve. What do you do if it has rained steadily for 15 days, your airline ticket home is smeared, you have both picked up a high grade infection that is untreatable, and your mother and I are visiting your Aunt Mary for four or five days?"

"Are you taking at least one sportcoat and tie? What about a tennis racket? A shoe bag?"

"Okay, here's another one," said father. "You have just dropped your camera into the Seine when a gang of midgets surrounds you and offers you $50 for the jeans you're wearing and your underwear is full of holes and where did they go. Mother?"

"They left... and they didn't even say good-bye... or did they?"

Garden Wedding At Home Of Bride

CHESTERFIELD, S. C. — Miss Ruth McCullough Perry became the bride of Michael Eugene Higson in a double ring ceremony in the garden of her parents' home Saturday at 6:00 p.m.

The Rev. Chester A. Molpus and the Rev. Ryan Eklund of Woodruff, S.C. officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Louis Perry of Chesterfield and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Franklin Higson of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight organza with long full sleeves, accented with Venice lace, and a Victorian neckline. The chapel-length sweeping train fell from the waist. The caplet of soft candlelight tulle was edged in matching lace. She carried a bouquet of stephanis, white daisies, baby's breath and snapdragons.

Prior to the vows, a program of organ music was given by Frank E. White Jr.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Arden Perry Field, sister of the bride, wore a floor-length dress of giner jersey with a scooped neck and capped sleeves. The empire waist was accented with a single bow on either side. She carried a bouquet of light bronze gerbers, baby's breath and daisies.

Other attendants were Miss English Perry of Chesterfield, Mrs. Larkin Graves of Chapel Hill, Mrs. Ellen Thurman and Mrs. Melinda Jordan of Columbia, and Mrs. Linda Adams of Greenville, N. C. Their dresses were of bittersweet coral and they carried bouquets identical to that of the honor attendant.

Larry Green of Greenville served as best man. Ushers-groomsman were Joel W. Perry of Columbia, William K. and Bill Perry of Chesterfield, and Donnie Cannon, James Earl Higson, Wayne Higson and Linwood Brown, all of Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Duvall Jr. of Cheraw and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kirven Jr. of Darlington greeted guests as they arrived and invited them to sign the bridal couple's guestbook.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length ginger open knit dress. Mrs. Higson, mother of the bridegroom, wore a long blue jersey dress. Both mothers wore corsages of white glamsias.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and the University of South Carolina. She received an M. S. degree from East Carolina University and is employed as a counselor for the N. C. Division of Vocational Rehabilitation in Eden.

The bridegroom served in the U. S. Navy prior to his present employment as a job placement specialist with the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bridal couple and their parents received guests in the garden where the wedding had been held. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and was centered with an arrangement of sweetheart roses, white snapdragons and baby's breath.

The cake table was centered with a three-tiered cake decorated with pink roses and baker's fern. The cake was served by Mrs. J. Calvin Rivers Jr. and Mrs. Parks Coble.

Assisting with serving were Mrs. Faye Bell, Mrs. Harry Huntley, Mrs. John Alexander of Myrtle Beach, Mrs. Jerry Perry, Mrs. William Olliffe, Mrs. Nan Watson, Miss Libby Lear, Misses Leigh Ann and Susie Stroud, Miss Sharon Tarleton, Miss Mary Margaret Sowell, Miss Kathy Page, and Misses Melissa and Melinda McCrorey.

For travel, the bride wore a natural color crash cloth gaucho ensemble.

Friday Mrs. William Olliffe, Mrs. W. F. Mrs. Charles Pusser, Mrs. R. Milton Thomas, Mrs. John Alexander, Mrs. H. F. Bell, Mrs. N. J. Watson, Mrs. Tpmmy Gullidge, Mrs. Harry Huntley and Miss Susie Shannon honored the couple with a dinner at the Carolina Restaurant.

The table was decorated with pink and white altheas, gardenias and baby's breath and ivy, flanked by white candles. After the dinner, the bride and bridegroom-elect presented gifts to members of the wedding party.

The couple was honored with an after-rehearsal dance Friday at the Green River Country Club. About 150 persons attended the event, hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Jerry Perry, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Duvall Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kirven Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Pete Fields, William K. Perry, Joel Perry, Miss English, and Bill Perry.

Other Tropical Storms Ahead

Anita, the season's first hurricane, is aimed at the Gulf coast at this writing. Unless it radically changes its course the storm probably won't affect our area. There will, however, be other tropical storms which will form in the Caribbean this season. Each will be given a name and some will reach the wind velocities which will classify them as hurricanes. There is always the possibility that some of the hurricanes will aim their fierce winds at the North Carolina coast. It has been many years since major hurricanes slammed in to our area. Those who recall, however, know that even with the distance of Pitt County from the coast, we are not safe from the damage a hurricane can bring. Public officials should be making certain now that Civil Defense emergency measures can be instituted quickly if a hurricane should strike. Every individual business and family should review emergency procedures to make certain we are prepared. Hopefully we in this area won't be faced by the damage a hurricane can cause this year, but we should be ready.

Capable People Serving United Fund

The Pitt County United Fund is in the process of announcing chairmen for its various divisions in preparation for its upcoming drive. Some of the county's most capable people have agreed to serve.

It becomes a reminder to all of us that the United Fund Drive will soon be underway. We can all help those who have volunteered their services by pledging promptly to United Fund.

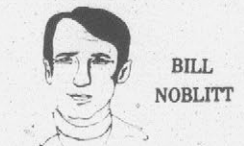

THIS AFTERNOON

Morrow Wants A Change

BILNOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina communities have not done enough to help in rehabilitation of people afflicted with problems, Dr. Darah T. Morrow feels, and that is where her strongest efforts will come as secretary of Human Resources. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, Dr. Morrow says, "and I think this is the area where North Carolina has fallen short in the past." The state department "will be working with families, employers, the court system, churches, schools, and other organizations across the state in our prevention and early intervention efforts." Crisis Oriented Speaking particularly of alcoholism and drug abuse problems as a new assistant secretary in that area of concern was appointed, Dr. Morrow said the system is "letting far too many persons become severe alcoholic or drug addicts before we become involved in trying to treat them." That, she adds privately, is also true in other areas of social concern—job rehabilitation, aid to children, learning disabilities, mental or emotional troubles. Much of the state's effort has been directed at curing the problem after crisis is reached. That approach has not produced notable results, and Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. is calling for a changed direction: "We must emphasize prevention and early treatment. There will never be enough money to repair the lives that are already broken." That is where Earl W. Griffith comes in. Recently head of the prevention and education program for the South Carolina Commission on alcohol and drug abuse, Griffith agrees that community involvement in spotting problems, pushing for help, and local efforts to provide that help go much farther than bureaucratic state approaches. And he is a firm believer in prevention and education. Can the down-and-out drunk be helped? Yes, Griffith said. "I don't think anybody is beyond rehabilitation. But it costs a lot more money, and should not be done to the exclusion of others. We have to set our priorities."

A Change
To date, those priorities have largely been directed at local alcoholic rehabilitation centers and state institutions where the repeat rate is alarming. All told, state, federal, and local dollars were pumped into alcohol and drug treatment programs last year to the tune of $22.3 million ($5 million federal; $5.6 million local; $11.5 million state). Nobody can say how many individuals were helped since admissions figures contain a lot of people who are repeaters. Recidivism is running better than 30 per cent in North Carolina.

BILL NOBLITT

A few random figures, however, give a clue to the enormity of the abuse problem in this state. Community treatment facilities handled 31,610 cases; state institutions admitted 12,722.

There were a total of 61,687 arrests by state and local law officers on charges of driving under the influence. "We just can't treat them all... we have got to do something before it starts, through prevention. The emphasis," says Dr. Morrow, "too often has been to wait till the individual hits rock bottom. By then it is too late. We must get the individual when first arrested... when the problem first comes to somebody's attention... and do something at that time. "And there is where the community — schools, churches, courts and so on— must get involved." The state shares a large share of the blame for past failure to bring order from the chaos of social programs. Individual agencies within her department have gone their ways, not sharing information and concerns with one another. And relationships with local programs have not always been cordial and effective. Dr. Morrow hopes that by giving Griffith the power to cross over those agency lines with the clout of an assistant secretary, many of those troubles can be resolved.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Watching That Neck Vein

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If a vein in President Carter's neck has been throbbing lately, reporters haven't noticed it. The state of the President's vein becomes a matter of potential interest because, according to his mother, "Miss Lillian" Carter, a throbbing neck vein is a dead giveaway that the chief executive is angry. But why, you might ask, would Carter be angry? For starters, consider the mixed notices that have accompanied disclosures of the former banking practices of Bert Lance, the President's old friend, lender and budget director. Although Carter now stands squarely behind Lance, the White House acknowledges that incoming mail is critical of the hulking Georgia moneyman by a two-to-one margin. Such problems are not calculated to contribute to presidential serenity. Even so, no throbbing vein was evident last week when Carter, holding his 14th formal news conference, was besieged with Lance questions, many of them as pointed as any he has faced. But three days later, at a private, informal question session with a group of visiting editors and broadcast news directors, Carter gave at least a hint that the persistent questions about Lance were getting under his skin. Carter told his visitors, for example, that all their questions had been substantive and important, adding: "Quite often, in the national press conferences here, the major emphasis, almost exclusive interest, is on a transient question." The President did not cite an example but there was at least a suspicion in some quarters that he had the Lance affair in mind. The suspicion was not lessened by the fact that the visitors asked not a single question about Bert Lance. But who can be sure? The self-contained Carter is hard to read. With reference to the Lance controversy, we have the testimony of Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, that there are no outward manifestations of presidential emotion. "He has not appeared to be noticeably concerned or disturbed. I've seen no signs of exasperation, paranoia or stomach upset." The press secretary continues to maintain friendly relations with most Washington reporters, although his own sensitivity sometimes seems to shine through his infectious banter.

persistent and erroneous reports in the American press." Opinions "It is the malady of our age that the young are so busy teaching us that they have not time left to learn." — Eric Hoffer. "When you're afraid, keep your mind on what you have to do. And if you have been thoroughly prepared, you will not be afraid." — Dale Carnegie.

SPIRITUAL LIFE AGLOW
The Biblical parable of the ten virgins deals with the necessity of vigilance and resourcefulness in spiritual matters. Five of the young women had made prudent provision for the occasion by taking with them a reserve supply of oil. The other five found, upon the approach of the bridegroom, that their lamps were going out. They had brought no oil with them. Since oil in the Bible always symbolizes the divine influences which are bestowed by the Spirit of the Lord, and a lamp symbolizes the spiritual life, the parable means that we are to keep our spiritual lives aglow. To do so we must be diligent to see that the spiritual influences direct from God are flowing into our hearts day by day. It is not enough that we try to make our spiritual lives glow when we are confronted with misfortune or death. We must build up a great reserve of these spiritual influences by Bible reading, contemplation, and prayer.

THE REAL TEST!
By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
Vastly Overblown Case
WASHINGTON — The controversy over Bert Lance, at this writing, seems to have simmered down to a few snorts and sputters. Unless a Senate committee turns up something really hot next week, the budget director probably is home free. The worst of the storm has passed. The affair, in my own judgment, has been vastly overblown. The vacuum cleaners of the press have sucked up every speck of lint, every dropped ash, every dog hair on the carpet, but when the whole collection is dumped out for analysis, it adds up to — not much. Nothing in the ragtag bag of allegations suggests that Lance is dishonest; and nothing indicates that he is not competent to head the Office of Management and Budget. Why all the smoke? My guess — it is only a guess — is that the Washington press corps has been trying to prove something to itself, to wit, that it can be just as tough on Jimmy Carter the Democrat as it was on Richard Nixon the Republican. A feeling persists over much of the country that my brothers of the Washington press operate on a double standard. The charge has been repeated so often that reporters have grown painfully sensitive on the matter. Along came Bert Lance, in the midst of the August doldrums when nothing else was going on, and he was made to order. Investigative reporters spit on their hands and went to work. The Post's aging cartoonist, Herb Block, who had been mellowing in recent years, happily dipped his pen in acid. We'll show 'em! As they used to say of frog giggering down on the pond, it has been fun for the boys but hell on the frogs. Lance has suffered dreadfully in all this. The President has been damaged also, but the damage — unless something else emerges — probably is less than it seems. Lance will not be quite as effective as he might have been in his appearances on the Hill; Mr. Carter will have trouble maintaining his administration's image of absolute rectitude. But life goes on. It is more than ever important to the two of them that Lance stay on the job for at least a few more months. If Lance resigns now, the act will be seen as confirmation of misconduct, and the head of Bert Lance, like a stuffed moose, will hang above the Press Club bar. The trouble with these incidents is that they never can be overcome entirely. Who remembers — quickly, now! — exactly what it was that Bobby Baker did? Who sent the vicuna coat to Sherman Adams, and why? Who was Harry Vaughan? In time, "The Lance affair" will take its place with forgotten episodes from the days of Lyndon Johnson, Dwight Eisenhower and Harry

To the editor:
With so many issues and labels dividing the body politic, I think it wise to return to a lucid understanding of the principles set forth in our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution. The Declaration was the first civil document to recognize liberty as an inalienable right. God, the Creator, was declared the source and giver of liberty. Liberty, once declared, had to be secured in the Constitution. This blueprint for a representative form of government embraces four elements: the legislative branch (to originate policy), the executive branch (to implement policy), the judicial branch (to judge compliance with the Constitution in the administration of policy), and the individual who is sovereign and has inherent rights. A system of checks and balances keeps the four elements in balance — much like the four wheels on a car. The Founding Fathers never intended that administrative agencies be created which could originate, implement, and judge compliance with their own policy. Nicholas M. Butler penned these words decades ago: "The representative republic erected... under the Constitution of the United States is a more advanced, a more just and a wiser form of government than the socialistic and direct democracy which is now proposed... To put the matter bluntly, there is underway in the United States at the present time a definite and determined movement to change our representative republic into a socialistic democracy. That attempt, carried on by men of conviction, men of sincerity, men of honest purpose, men of patriotism, as they conceive patriotism, is the most impressive political factor in our public life of today... It uses attractive formulas... but if it is successful, it will bring to an end the form of government that was founded when our Constitution was made..." Let us strive to elect representatives who will represent us instead of administrate us.

Eager Space Buffs

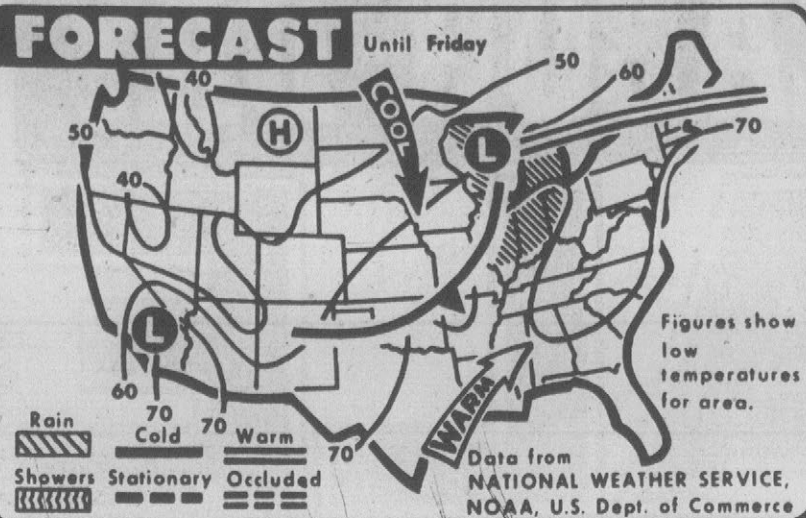

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Some were "ordinary blokes." Others were physicists, astronomers or engineers. And there was a 70-year-old British woman who said she was looking for something useful to do. They were among thousands of applicants wanting to become Western Europe's first astronauts and its half of the two-man team that will fly the joint U.S.-European Spacelab mission planned for 1980. The European Space Agency (ESA) in Paris asked its 12 member countries and Austria, an observer member of the agency, to submit a maximum of five nominations by today. Britain, Italy and the Netherlands announced their choices Wednesday. "It never occurred to me that an ordinary bloke could actually go into space," said Geoffrey Firmin, a 39-year-old nuclear physicist who was one of the five chosen from among 600 Britons. Firmin applied in answer to a government ad in The Times of London and scientific journals. Academics, schoolboys and grandmothers were among those who responded. "I have wanted to be an astronaut since I was 6," said nominee William Grut, a 27-year-old metallurgist and captain of Britain's world champion freefall parachute team. So far, no women are among the European nominees. The Italian and Dutch governments said their female applicants flunked the medical-psychological examination. Two British women who made it into the final 100 failed the academic test. Tests and interviews will be given to all nominees and the list cut to six by the end of the year. Further testing will bring the number down to three by next June. These three will join the ESA staff as experiment specialists, and one will be chosen for the Skylab mission. The other two will serve as backup and ground support. The two astronauts will be put aboard the Spacelab by the American space shuttle, the reusable spacecraft now undergoing tests at Edwards Air Force Base in California. They are to ride the space station for seven days in orbit, performing some 80 experiments designed by the European and American space agencies, including research on atmospheric, astronomy, weather and solar physics.

A Nervousness Is Settling In
By JOHN CUNIFF
Ap Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — While the Carter administration continues to publicly stand behind a set of economic goals that many economists feel are unrealistic, a nervousness, even foreboding, seems to be settling into place. Wall Streeters, timid all year long and decidedly more so of late, are in the forefront, with some analysts ready to run up the white flag and surrender to recession. But there are other indicators, too. There's the official one, the index of leading economic indicators, which has been in decline for three straight months, signaling to some interpreters that a decided worsening of conditions is upcoming. The White House itself is responsible for some of the unsettling news, letting float the reports that voluntary wage-price standards are being discussed as a way to keep some degree of economic equilibrium. There's crusty George Meany to contend with, too, the outspoken leader of the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations says President Carter is listening too much to Arthur Burns. Burns, the head of the Federal Reserve Board, is a dedicated inflation fighter, so much so that Meany and many others contend his mind always follows a track to the right when other options are open. Burns espouses a conservative viewpoint. He believes the essential economic problem of our time is not unemployment but inflation. To those who claim unemployment is the root problem, Burns replies in effect that inflation is the seed. And then there are the blacks, led by Vernon Jordan Jr., president of the National Urban League, who contend that they have been forgotten in the economic scheme of things, that they have lost ground, and that they must make it up. It is impossible to say which of these problems is the worst for Carter because they all are serious. But if you were to poll the business community, you might find that it is the prospect of wage-price standards. Businessmen already are asking this question: If the administration really believes we can reduce unemployment and inflation below 5 per cent by 1981, and balance the budget too, why is it worrying about such standards? The notion of wage-price standards, voluntary or otherwise, is unsettling to business, especially after so many people thought the Carter people had abandoned any such ideas. Conceivably, fears about government intrusion in the marketplace — it is always considered an intrusion, no matter how benign the intentions — could work to undermine the administration's efforts to encourage capital spending. Those who invest heavily in plants, huge installations of equipment, and long-term debt like to feel that they can get their money back on a specific time schedule, undeterred by standards other than those set by the marketplace. All these problems, to say nothing of the imbalance in international trade receipts, may very well be in their embryonic state, and could grow to very sizeable proportions. But even now they are enough to create a changing atmosphere. It is part of the kaleidoscope effect. The economy has not yet turned down sharply; its rate of expansion is merely slowing. The battle against unemployment hasn't been lost; unemployment, viewed over a period of months, is falling. But there is a different shape to things, it can hardly be argued. Businessmen and others could choose to see the reports that capital spending might rise, or that car sales will be near record highs, but they and others choose not to. That's not the viewpoint at the moment, it seems, and it might be up to the Carter administration to make sure it doesn't become imprinted for the long term.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild to cool temperatures and sunny skies are forecast today

Kilpatrick...

Truman, but no one will remember what "the Lance affair" was all about. It will be recalled only that something vaguely discreditable happened—but what was it? Lance was that banker fellow, wasn't he? Hard to say.

A careful reading of the relevant documents in the case persuades me that Lance has not acted illegally, unethically or immorally. On the record, he is a bold, aggressive banker, both confident and ambitious. The "unsafe and unsound" banking practices attributed to him were not as invidious as the phrase suggests. True, he and his wife and members of her family helped themselves to interest-free overdrafts for two and a half years at the Calhoun bank he headed, but their fellow stockholders suffered little and the depositors suffered not at all. The other charges of improper banking practices are trivial.

Over this past weekend, some additional hot air was pumped into the fizzing story. It was suggested that Lance had concealed information from the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs last January. The confirmation hearings disclose that Lance acknowledged the overdrafts in his response to the very first question posed by Chairman Abe Ribicoff. Later Lance opened himself to questioning by new York's Senator Jacob Javits on the debt still owed from Lance's campaign for governor of Georgia in 1974. The committee had a wide-open opportunity to explore all these matters.

Lance has personal financial problems that would have most of us gnawing our fingernails. He is head over heels in debt; he has taken a massive loss in order to serve his friend Jimmy Carter; he has made heavy sacrifices in both money and reputation. But the past eight months have not produced a breath of scandal in his conduct of the OMB, and he still is capable of running an efficient agency. If the point has been sufficiently made that the press plays no favorites, I suggest we get on to matters that truly matter.

Dispute Closes Port Facility

By The Associated Press
High pressure continued to control North Carolina's weather today, providing generally sunny skies through the day with temperatures again ranging around 90 degrees.

Charlotte wound up Wednesday with one of the day's highest readings, 95 degrees, while Rocky Mount hit 94 and Fayetteville 93.

Other readings Wednesday included Greensboro 91, Goldsboro and New Bern 90, Hickory and Wilmington 89, and Asheville 86.

There was a chance of thundershowers this afternoon or evening in the mountains, where high temperatures were expected to range in the 80s.

Several Accidents In City Wednesday

Several accidents occurred Wednesday on the streets of Greenville.

Police reported that at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday, John Walter Jenkins, 17, of Ayden was charged with following too close and failure to reduce speed following an accident involving two other cars at the intersection of Third Street and Memorial Drive.

The Jenkins car, approaching from Fifth Street, struck a vehicle operated by Patricia Kelly Worthington, 24, of 507 New Circle Drive and pushed it into a third car being driven by Clayton Barnhill, 38, of 207 Glenwood drive.

Damages were estimated at $1,000 to the Worthington car, $400 to the Barnhill vehicle and $100 to the Jenkins car.

At 2:15 p.m. Michael Glenn Rogers, 18, of Greenville Rt. 9 was charged with following too close after his car struck a vehicle in the rear while entering a parking lot at Cotanche Street and Reade Circle, police said.

Damages were estimated at $400 to the other car operated by James Parker Bateman, 20, of Pinetown and $200 to the Rogers vehicle.

Ausmus Goodwin Wells, 72, of 2505 E. Fourth St. was charged at 4:10 p.m. Wednesday with a safe movement violation after he drove his car into the intersection of Elm and First streets and collided with a vehicle operated by JoAnn Godbold of Turkey.

Damages were estimated at $250 to the Wells car and $300 to the Godbold vehicle.

Corn Aflatoxin Sen Morgan...

areas where corn has experienced severe drought, is something that is threatening the marketing of the corn crop.

He explained that the Food and Drug Administration regulates the level of tolerance allowed in corn to be moved in interstate commerce.

Locally, the toxin problem affects grain dealers that accept corn for storage under the government loan program, he noted. Since most dealers are not equipped to get an immediate measurement on the level of aflatoxin in the corn they would be storing, there is a degree of risk for those dealers.

If they accept the corn for government storage, he added, they must guarantee that when the corn comes out of storage it will not exceed the toxin level it carried when it was first stored.

Some dealers use a black light which indicates the present of the aflatoxin mold but there is no measurement as to the degree of the contamination, Yancey said.

The test can offer some basis on which to buy or reject corn with some confidence, according to the spokesman, but the only real test involves a chemical procedure which takes some five hours to complete.

Under the loan program, the farmer could place his corn in storage under the present government support price of $1.92 per bushel, which is substantially higher than the present market price being paid for corn. The corn still belongs to the farmer who pays a storage fee.

Fred Webb, who operates a grain elevator in Greenville, said that the aflatoxin threat puts his business at "virtually a standstill" since "we don't know enough about aflatoxin with respect to what will happen to corn in storage."

Webb said that he is not prepared to take the risk involved in accepting the corn for storage and many farmers who were planning to take advantage of the government program will be hurt.

He added that his firm is still buying corn for immediate shipment but only on a very scrutinizing basis. He has set up a testing laboratory with the help of a representative from the Research Peanut Station in Georgia to measure the level of toxin in corn he buys.

Webb, who predicted that the problem has the potential of

for approving the treaty.

"There are many reasons," Morgan said. "For one thing, we didn't buy or pay for the canal. We took it with armed force in 1903. At that time there was no country of Panama, it was a province of Columbia. When we offered to pay $40 million for the zone, the Columbian Senate rejected the offer. We fomented a rebellion that resulted in independence for Panama. Our warships would not let Columbian troops land to protect what was really their own territory.

"Not only that," Morgan added, "but the man we signed the treaty with on the Panama Canal Zone was not a Panamanian, but the chairman of the Board of Directors of the French Company." (A French syndicate originally attempted to construct the canal, and when the efforts failed the U.S. took over the task.)

Morgan also cited the long standing insular attitude of Americans living in the zone, and noted the affluent conditions within the zone in contrast to the poverty adjacent to the area.

At another point in the morning show, Morgan expressed concern over developments in Mexico, which he said could be affected by the American decision on the Canal Zone.

"Along with the energy situation and inflation, I consider the Mexican situation one of our three or more most important problems," Morgan said.

"There are about ten million Mexicans living in this country, and 60 million Mexicans in Mexico," he said. "It's a Catholic country and does not believe in birth control. It's estimated the population will go to over 100 million by the turn of the century. With conditions as they are there now, Mexico is ripe for a Communist take-over. We cannot afford a Communist dominated nation on our border."

Morgan said that public opinion in Mexico, "as in many Latin American countries, is that the U.S. has not treated Panama fairly. We only pay $2 million a year in tolls," he added. This situation, he pointed out, "is in direct contrast to the Philippines, where we have renegotiated treaty rights several times, and pay millions for base rights there."

Morgan said "it is my strong belief that the strongman president of Panama, Torrijos (General Omar Torrijos Herrera) would be pleased if we fail to ratify the treaty. Nothing would please him more. His power comes from the dissatisfaction, and if that is removed, there's nothing to justify his remaining in power."

Morgan, who said he had visited the canal, added, "I must confess that many of our people who live in the zone are ugly Americans."

On the subject of the role of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, of which Morgan is a member, Morgan says he feels the committee is a vital instrument in regulating any possible rash action a president might take in clandestine activities.

"The safeguard is not absolutely foolproof," Morgan said, "but the president has to report to us on any action he plans to take in this regard. If it's an emergency situation, he has to report within 24 to 48 hours. We can't stop him on any action, but we can apply pressure, and take it to the Senate."

"If we had had this back in the '60's," Morgan added, "we would not have had some of the things that took place then."

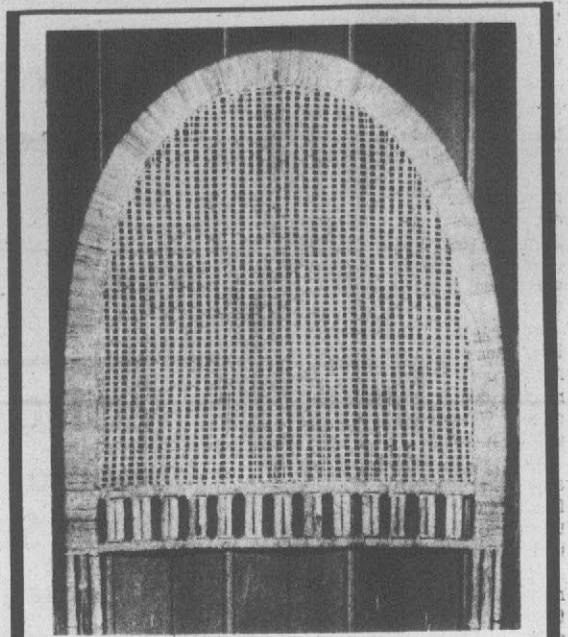

Currently, the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, Morgan noted, "is writing for the first time a charter for the FBI, for CIA and for NSA. Also, we're working on legislation for a wiretap bill, one that will regulate wiretaps in the interest of national security.

"Always before," Morgan observed, "such action has never been controlled by legislation, but by what has been deemed by the president to be in the interest of national security."

Touching on a local matter, Morgan expressed delight with the progress of the new hospital and the East Carolina University Medical School. "I've seen the new hospital just briefly, and it's really beautiful and impressive. It's easy to see the tremendous changes in medical care now and 15 years ago. I'm amazed at the number of specialists available for our people as a result of the new hospital."

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

Challenging Safety In Nitrite-Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, concerned over the possibility that sodium nitrite may combine with other substances in processed meats to cause cancer, is challenging food manufacturers to prove their products are safe.

For five years the government has questioned the long-standing use of sodium nitrite in meat products such as bacon, hot dogs and bologna. Nitrites and their chemical parents, nitrates, are added to processed meats to prevent the growth of deadly botulism spores and to color the products.

On Wednesday, the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department announced that the government is considering banning the chemical additives.

Officials said the two agencies are giving food manufacturers 60 days to prove that the additives don't pose any health hazard to humans.

The FDA regulates the use of nitrites in poultry and other foods, while the Agriculture Department has jurisdiction over the use of the additives in red meat — beef, veal and pork.

Officials said they are concerned over evidence showing that these nitrites and nitrates combine with certain amino acid compounds when bacon is fried to form nitrosamines, substances shown to cause cancerous tumors in laboratory animals.

Officials said they are equally alarmed over the possibility that the potential cancer-causing substances may form in the stomach after processed foods are eaten.

The FDA said it will seek a ban on using the additives in poultry products if scientific studies it is compiling show that potentially cancer-causing substances are formed in the food before it is eaten.

The agency also said it would move to ban the use of nitrites in any poultry product if the processor refused to commit itself to conducting any tests the agency deems necessary to resolve safety questions.

At the same time, the Agriculture Department said the red-meat industry will be expected to produce similar scientific studies justifying the continued use of nitrites.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said the government's immediate objective "... is to identify and propose to eliminate all uses of nitrites and nitrates in products in which cancer-causing nitrosamines are formed."

Richard Lyng, president of the American Meat Institute, responded to the government's announcement by declaring that virtually all cured red meats are free of nitrosamines. He said the government's announcement "... should pose no serious problems."

Lyng said the red meat industry has been conducting extensive research on the use of nitrites and nitrates for years.

"Only in bacon cooked at very high temperatures have we continued to discover minuscule amounts of nitrosamines and recent research indicates that we are right on the edge of technology needed to totally eliminate even these amounts," he said.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Speak up. There are 20 million persons in this country who don't hear well.

That's about one in 10 persons, reports the Health Insurance Institute. And some two million Americans have so little hearing capacity that they are unable to understand normal speech. The two groups with the highest incidence of hearing problems are premature children and the older population.

Rule Firm Is In Contempt

NEW YORK (AP) — Citing "persistent" violations of federal labor laws, an appeals court has found textile giant J.P. Stevens & Co. in civil contempt for failing to undertake a program of labor-organizing rights.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit said Wednesday that the company "has flaunted its disobedience of our orders, undermining respect for this court and for the rights of employees recognized in the National Labor Relations Act."

The three-judge panel cited incidents in 1972-73 in Stevens plants in Turnersburg and Roanoke Rapids, N.C., and Wallace, S.C., involving organizing efforts by the Textile Workers Union of America.

"As in prior cases, the evidence of antionian action is overwhelming in some instances and near the border line in others," the court ruled. "The pattern of using minor or nonexistent rules to harass union organizers is unmistakable."

Threatening "more drastic sanctions," unless Stevens obeyed, the court told the NLRB to submit an order on proposed fines. The board had suggested $120,000 fines for future violations, and $1,000 per incident for those already involved.

A.R. Reese Dies Today

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Addison H. Reese, retired chairman of NCNB Corp. and North Carolina National Bank, died today at a Charlotte hospital. He was 68.

Reese had been a patient for some time at Mercy Hospital, whose board of trustees he headed as chairman. Death was attributed to cancer.

At the time of his death, Reese also was chairman of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Reese gained national distinction for his leadership in development of a one-city bank in Charlotte into the largest financial institution in the Southeast.

He retired as chief executive officer of NCNB in December 1973.

Survivors include the widow, Gertrude Craig Reese, and a brother, Charles F. Reese of Baltimore.

Funeral plans were incomplete.

Pilot Safely Ejects In Crash

OCRACOCKE, N. C. (AP) — Maj. William C. Jones ejected safely from his Virginia Air National Guard jet plane moments before it plunged into Pamlico Sound Wednesday, a National Guard spokesman said.

Jones of Richmond, the pilot of the F105, was taken to Seymour Johnson Air Force Base Hospital near Goldsboro for observation.

$127.51 Day On Greenville Mart

An average of $127.51 per hundred pounds was recorded Wednesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market as 1,122,263 pounds of leaf sold for $1,431,271.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, said that Stabilization purchases accounted for only 1.73 per cent of sales yesterday.

Top practical price was $1.43 per pound with some of the top quality tobacco selling for as high as $1.47 per pound, he said.

Leaf, cutters, lugs, primings and non-descript tobacco made up the volume of tobacco available on the warehouse floors.

Rose High School's Rampants, with a new outlook on life, open the 1977 football season Friday night, looking for an upset victory over one of the top teams in the state last season.

The Rampants, who won the state 4-A championship two seasons ago, fell off to an improbable 1-9 record last year, as nothing seemed to go right for them.

But as pre-season drills come to an end, there is a new spirit in the Rose camp, and they are hoping to get the season off on a winning note.

"This is a whole new year from last year," Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "We have a different attitude, a different morale, and a different way of thinking both among the players and the coaches. The players feel they can be an improved team. They are better trained this year and they know more. They have more 'gusto.' It makes for a completely different difference in how we look at the season."

The Rampants return 17 lettermen, all of whom saw some starting duty last year. "We have some who got a lot of experience on the junior varsity who will help us a lot too," the coach added.

There are fewer sophomores than in the past, with just two moving up to the varsity, running back Calvin Paige and center Ron Butler. Butler has already carved out a starting role for himself, following in the footsteps of his brother Rocky, now a freshman at East Carolina.

Offensively, Bumgarner has been pleased with the way the Rampants have moved the ball in pre-season drills. "We moved it well against Williamston in the scrimmage the other night. But we fumbled too much and had too many penalties that stopped us. We've got to cut that down." That was the primary problem with last season's team, which moved the ball well, but had trouble scoring due to penalties and fumbles.

"I've seen an improvement during the week in practice. The kids are easy to coach and this is an asset," Bumgarner said.

The coach had not been pleased with the passing game in the scrimmage, but he said that this was primarily due to the blocking for the passer, and that the team had put special emphasis on that during the past week. Rose will still be a running team, primarily, but expects to be able to throw more this year.

Scott Brady appears to have captured the starting quarterback slot from Ronnie Chapman, who will still see starting duty at split end. Chapman may also play some at quarterback. Brady played the position some last year, as did Chapman. However, the split end position is new to him.

David Northrup returns at fullback, as do his running mates, halfbacks Mac Washington and Mike Joyner, both three-year starters. They will be backed up by Robert Morehead, Reggie Selby, Paige and Jamie Adams, all of whom are expected to see action.

In the line, there are three veterans, tackles David Murray and Franklin Clark, and guard Bernie Fleming. Joining them are Butler at center, Quentin Eaton at the other guard and Bobby Woronoff at tight end. Eaton played on the junior varsity last year, while Woronoff did not play.

"I think we'll be strong defensively," Bumgarner said. "But I won't really know until we play. We have experience and we have good size. Butler is about the only one without a lot of experience."

There will be a lot of Rampants going both ways, however, with occasional spells of rest. "Our speed and quickness is good; it may be the best ever. For instance, there is no better defensive halfback around than Mac Washington, and he will hit you."

The Rampants will use both a 5-2 and a 4-4 lineup, depending on the situation.

Raymond Wooten returns to one end, while Joyner will handle the other. Dusty Darden, who has not a great deal of experience will take over one tackle spot, while Curtis Little, who has moved over from fullback, will be at the other tackle. Clark will also be a backup to Darden.

Fleming is likely to get the call at middle guard, with Bryant Morton, originally slated to start here, hampered by an injury. Eaton will also see action here.

Butler and Northrup will be at the linebacker spots, with Mike Shank and Bill Collier returning as corner backs. Washington and Doug Selby will be at the safeties, where both saw action last year.

Yusef Barakat, a transfer, will handle the PATs, field goals and kickoffs, with Jeff Aldridge doing the punting.

Depth overall could be a problem for the Rampants. "We have 22 good players. But I wouldn't want to get anyone hurt. We have a good number of backs, but we are sort of thin in the line."

In the conference race, Bumgarner calls it an even race between all six teams. "I know most people are picking Rocky Mount, but I think any one of us could come out on top. I think our league is strong this year, and well-balanced. The first five games will probably tell the tale. The team that get through those non-conference games healthy will probably be the winner."

Against Goldsboro, Bumgarner looks for a typical "black and blue" game. "They are a well-coached team, and a good one on defense. They lost a

Pittsburgh Can Blame Giants

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

If the Pittsburgh Pirates don't win the National League's Eastern Division this season, they'll know who to blame.

"If we don't win the pennant," said the Pirates' Dave Parker, "I'm sure we'll think back to how the Giants owned us."

For the 10th time in 12 meetings this year, the Pirates fell to San Francisco. Jim Barr's eight-hitter and Darrell Evans' four hits, including a three-run homer in the first inning, boosted the Giants to a 6-2 victory Wednesday.

The Giants, fourth in the West, are 10 games below .500. But, to the Pirates, they are world-beaters.

Especially Evans, batting a mediocre .238 against the rest of the league, but who had 17 hits in 30 trips against the Pirates for a .567 average. Evans hit four homers and drove in 15 runs against Pittsburgh.

Barr, 12-12, yielded only five hits after the Pirates rallied in the second inning to tie the score 3-3. Bill Robinson hit his 24th home run and Fernando Gonzalez stole home in the inning.

The Giants scored the winning run on Derrel Thomas' sacrifice fly in the fifth.

The loss dropped Pittsburgh five games behind Eastern Division-leading Philadelphia.

Elsewhere in the National League, Tom Seaver blanked Montreal 6-0 on three hits, Steve Carlton won his 19th game with an eight-hit, 6-1 triumph over Atlanta, Houston beat New York 5-2, Los Angeles shut out Chicago 5-0 and San Diego edged St. Louis 2-1.

Reds 6, Expos 0
Seaver collected his eighth victory in a row and ran his lifetime strikeout total to 2,501 by fanning six Expos. Joe Morgan hit his 21st homer of the year to help the Reds' ace.

Phillies 6, Braves 1
Carlton won his 15th straight game at home to become the second 19-game winner in the majors. He struck out nine and walked one as Philadelphia won its 22nd game in the last 28 and 14th in a row at Veteran's Stadium.

The Phillies sent 10 men to bat in the fifth inning against Phil Niekro, 13-17, and scored four runs to put the game away. The big hit was Greg Luzinski's two-run single.

Astros 5, Mets 2
Houston took its seventh straight victory while handing the Mets their seventh loss in a row. Mark Lemongello, 6-14, scattered eight hits and Enos

Cabell knocked in three runs. Dodgers 5, Cubs 0

Two veterans, Vic Davalillo and Manny Mota, starred for the Dodgers. Davalillo, whose age has been listed as either 38 or 41, had three hits in the game. Mota, 39, tied Jerry Lynch for second place on the all-time pinch hit list.

Rick Rhoden, 16-8, pitched 7 1-3 innings of five-hit ball before tiring and giving way to Lance Rautzhan. Mike Garman pitched the ninth.

Padres 2, Cardinals 1
San Diego handed St. Louis its seventh straight loss as Bob Shirley and Rollie Fingers collaborated on an eight-hitter with Fingers collecting his 30th save.

Gene Richards tripled in a run and George Hendrick added an RBI double for San Diego.

Pirates Get Ready To Play

Things seem to be picking up at East Carolina University's football camp as the time draws near for the opening game.

"You can seem to sense a change in the surroundings of the practice field," Dye said after Wednesday's workout. "I believe things are beginning to head in the right direction."

Dye said that during the past two days, the defensive unit has especially picked up and seems ready to go.

Offensively, Dye said he was still concerned, however. "We left the ball on the field too many times. The quarterbacks may have been a little tight. The offense is still not as smooth as I would like for it to be."

Dye noted that there are a lot of young players on the team, "and young kids make mistakes. I just hope that they are not the type mistakes that will kill us."

"They are hungry kids, however, and I think they'll make this an exciting weekend for the fans."

Dye also pointed out that four years ago when he first came to East Carolina, that the Pirate fans seemed to be happy when they could make a good showing against N.C. State. "Now they and the players feel that they can go to Raleigh and win, and they are not satisfied with anything less."

Dye will be making several radio and television appearances during the next months over regularly scheduled programs. His "Pat Dye Show" can be seen on Sundays on WNCT-TV, with the first show Sunday at 6 p.m. The "Pat Dye Telephone Show" will be heard on Thursdays, starting next week on WRQR and WFAG in Farmville. And the "Pat Dye Radio Show" will be heard on WOOW at 7 p.m. Fridays, starting this week.

Among area stations carrying the game are WOOW, WRQR, WITN-FM in Washington, and WKTC-FM in Tarboro.

Harris Tries To Show He Was Best Leader

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Harris firmly believes he was treated unfairly by the Los Angeles Rams and should have continued as their No. 1 quarterback.

Tonight he'll try to prove his point as he runs the offense for the San Diego Chargers in the Los Angeles Coliseum, opposing the Rams who employed him for three seasons.

This preseason, Harris has completed 27 of his 48 pass attempts for 331 yards and three touchdowns. He's been intercepted three times as the Chargers split four decisions.

Pat Haden, the former Rose Bowl star from Southern California, took over late last season as the starting Los Angeles quarterback and this preseason has hit 22 of 42 passes for 334 yards and three touchdowns, also with three interceptions.

Veteran Joe Namath will play the second half against the Chargers in his bid to dislodge Haden from the No. 1 position. Namath is 12 for 27 with the Rams with one touchdown pass and two interceptions.

Another Rams starter of 1976, tight end Bob Klein, will be in a San Diego uniform. The club promises that he'll see service against his former teammates.

Klein announced he was retiring after failing to reach contract agreement with the Rams. Los Angeles then traded negotiating rights to the Chargers, who signed him for a reported $125,000.

Although Harris is slated to start at quarterback for San Diego, Coach Tommy Prothro, formerly of UCLA and the Rams, is expected to use rookie Cliff Olander from New Mexico State in the second half. Olander stands 6-5 and weighs 196.

Los Angeles has been disappointing in the preseason with a 1-3 record, the worst since Chuck Knox took over four years ago. He can be expected to use his veterans and other probable starters much more than in the previous exhibition games.

The Rams' backfield will have Lawrence McCutcheon and John Cappelletti starting at halfback and fullback, the combination expected to start the season. And Rich Saul, the regular center last year who was a holdout this fall, comes back to open at center.

McCutcheon, who had been nursing a hamstring injury, worked nearly a half against Kansas City last week in a 27-19 loss and gained 47 yards in 10 carries.

Rookie Wendell Tyler leads the Rams' rushing attack with 166 yards on 30 carries.

The contest, scheduled for 7:30, PDT, kickoff, starts a football-filled Labor Day weekend.

On Friday, Chicago is at St. Louis, Detroit at Baltimore, Philadelphia at Pittsburgh, and Denver at Seattle.

On Saturday, Tampa Bay is at Buffalo, San Francisco at Oakland, New Orleans at Miami, Minnesota at Cincinnati, Dallas at Houston, and Cleveland at Green Bay.

On Sunday, New York Jets play the New York Giants and Washington meets New England.

Atlanta plays at Kansas City Monday night.

Walsh To Be Aide

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina associate basketball coach Donnie Walsh has announced he will leave the school to become an assistant coach with the National Basketball Association's Denver Nuggets.

Walsh, 36, has been an assistant at South Carolina for 12 years and had been expected to succeed head coach Frank McGuire when the 62-year-old head coach retires.

Walsh told a news conference Wednesday, "I would like to return here. Whether it will be as a lawyer or as a coach, that the future will tell. I don't want to talk about that right now."

The former University of North Carolina star holds a law degree but has never practiced. He recently completed a refresher course in order to take the South Carolina Bar examination.

McGuire, who coached Walsh and Nuggets' head coach Larry Brown at UNC, said he had tried to persuade Walsh to remain at South Carolina.

"He's only taking, as far as I'm concerned, a temporary leave from Columbia and will be back very shortly," McGuire said.

A MULTITUDE of sports forecasting newsletters are published each year and one which crossed The Daily Reflector sports desk last week, SCORE, lists East Carolina University as the number 18 college football team in the nation.

The newsletter, which boasts (like most of the others) of being the number one rated forecaster in the nation, ranks the Maryland Terrapins as the nation's best team. The Pirates' ranking is higher than any team on their schedule. None of the Bucs' 1977 opponents are listed in the top 20.

None of the other pre-season rankings we've seen have even mentioned the Pirates in the top 20 or put Maryland any higher than seventh or eighth. The newsletter justifies the Terrapin ranking by saying that 18 of the team's top 22 defensive players return from last year's Cotton Bowl team.

Two ECU opponents in the school's opener Saturday night at N. C. State are listed as all-America picks. State quarterback-punter Johnny Evans is listed as a first team punter, while defensive tackle Bubba Green was named to the third team. Green is reportedly injured and is listed as a non-starter for the ECU game.

SCORE ALSO mentions a humorous story about professional football coach Hank Stram of the New Orleans Saints.

Stram is reportedly a perfectionist and is said to have used an entire practice session recently teaching his team how to line up in numerical order for the playing of the national anthem before ballgames.

Several of the players reportedly had trouble learning the drill and nearly all of them were disgruntled that so much time was taken with such a trivial matter.

The players' grumbling continued as the team went to the locker room following the practice session and Stram allegedly burst in on the scene and challenged anyone who had any complaints to step outside.

When some two dozen players took him up on the offer, Stram is said to have backed down and been led away by a pair of assistant coaches.

Walk-ons Get Chance at ECU

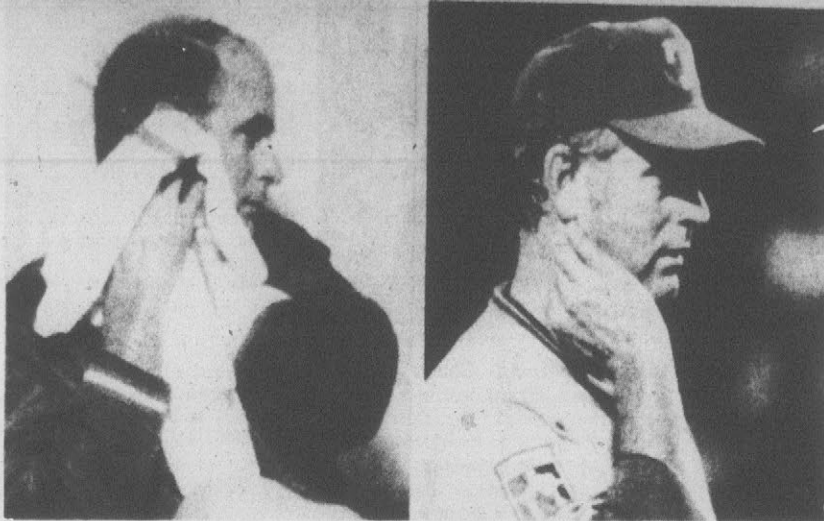

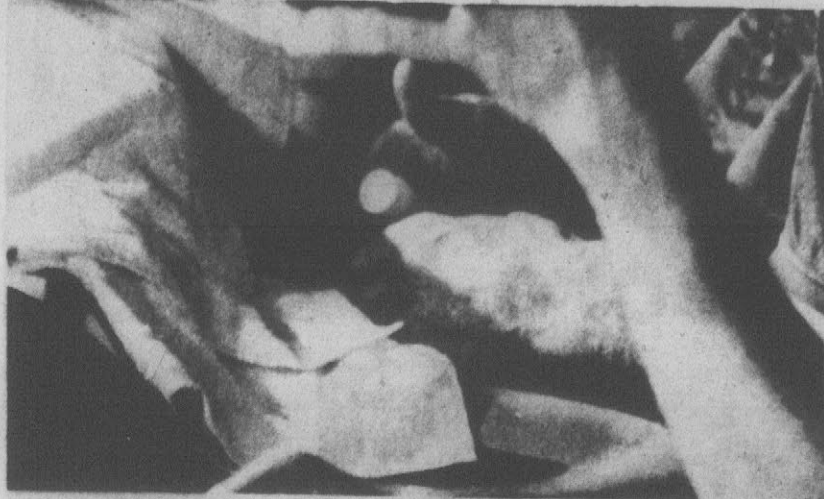

Walk-ons, football players who try out for a team without a scholarship, have always been special to East Carolina coach Pat Dye.

Dye has often said he admires walk-ons for their dedication to the game as they fight the odds and work to make the team. "If football means enough to a youngster in college to come out, with the demands so great on individuals' time, then they are going to be something special to us," he says.

Since coming to ECU in 1974, Dye initiated an "open door" policy in regards to walk-ons, giving them equal treatment with scholarship players and an equal opportunity to make the team.

That policy has been a beneficial one for the Pirates as nearly one third of this year's team — 27 of 90 after spring practice — are walk-ons. Five of those players are expected to start against N. C. State.

"I think there is a feeling here that a walk-on can play, so we seem to get more out than some programs," Dye said. "In some cases, we have signed

Gaylord's Mystery

mound (bottom right photo), his pitching hand touches the right side of his neck. Perry, who pitched a four-hit 8-2 victory over the Royals, said afterward: "I had super stuff tonight — curve, hard slider, fast ball. All my stuff." It is not known what the tube contained, nor what he was doing with it and the towel. (AP Laserphoto)

Nicklaus, Watson Top World Series Entries

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, the current ruler of world golf and the man who would replace him, head an international field of 20 players for Friday's start of the $300,000 World Series of Golf.

It is the last time Nicklaus and Watson are expected to face each other this year, and there is the distinct possibility they could hook up in another dramatic duel, such as the ones that saw Watson win the Masters and British Open.

And it is almost certain that, between them, they will decide Player of the Year honors and the money winning champion in the exclusive event that is designed as a climax to the golf season.

Presently, Watson has the inside track on both. A Nicklaus victory — and he has to be considered the favorite — could change things dramatically.

In addition to the two major titles that stamped him as the most likely successor to Nicklaus' long-time position as the game's top performer, Watson has won three American events this year and collected a leading $298,428. Nicklaus is a three-time winner on the U.S. tour and trails Watson on the money winning list with $273,343.

Should Watson win, he would have both titles clinched.

A Nicklaus victory, however, almost certainly would make him the leading money winner (for the ninth time), would give him a record single-season accumulation and would put him in position to challenge Watson for Player of the Year honors. The biggest prize in golf, $100,000, awaits the winner.

Watson, among others, objects.

"The money should be unofficial," Watson said before a practice round over the 7,130-yard, par 70 South course at the Firestone Country Club.

Other former winners at Firestone in the elite field are Watson, PGA champion Lanny Wadkins, Lee Trevino, South African Gary Player, Ray Floyd and Tom Weiskopf.

some to scholarships that maybe were not as good a football player as one should be to get a scholarship, but they were such good people we signed them anyway."

A total of 13 walk-ons have earned scholarships for 1977 and seven of them, the senior walk-ons, will serve as captains for the State game.

DeCinces Second Hit Fatal For California

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

There really was no reason for Frank Tanana to be concerned when Baltimore's Doug DeCinces stepped to the plate in the eighth inning of a tie game Wednesday night.

Even though DeCinces had walked twice and been hit by a pitch, he showed only one hit in 18 career at-bats against Tanana.

That number is now 2-for-19. DeCinces cracked a tie-breaking home run to give Baltimore a 4-3 victory over the California Angels and boost the Orioles into a second-place tie with the Boston Red Sox in the American League.

The Orioles and Red Sox, who lost to the Cleveland Indians 4-3, are four games behind the New York Yankees, who edged the Seattle Mariners 5-4. In the AL West, the Kansas City Royals nipped the Texas Rangers 5-4 and increased their lead to 2½ games over idle Chicago. The Minnesota Twins, 4-3 losers to the Oakland A's, are three games out, while Texas trails by 3½.

In the only AL game between non-contenders, the Detroit Tigers downed the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2.

Tanana had beaten the Orioles three times this season, the last two by shutouts, and had a near-invisible 0.62 earned run average against them. This time, though, he failed to hold an early three-run lead.

Indians 4, Red Sox 3
Jim Norris drove in the tie-breaking run with a pinch double in the ninth inning after the Indians erased a 3-0 deficit in the seventh inning. Rico Carty, who drove in the first Cleveland run with a double and scored on Ron Pruitt's game-tying two-run double, singled off loser Bob Stanley. Then Pruitt walked and Norris grounded a double inside third basen scoring pinch-runner John Lowenstein.

Yankees 5, Mariners 4
Graig Nettles, the defending AL home run king, surpassed his 1976 total with a pair of solo shots, including the tie-breaking ninth-inning blast that provided the winning run. Along with home run No. 34, Nettles also drove in a run with a single and Chris Chambliss hit a two-run homer while relief ace Sparky Lyle tied a major league record by winning for the third time in as many games. Royals 5, Rangers 4

Fred Patek drilled a tie-breaking two-run double and scored on a double by Frank White as Kansas City scored three runs in the sixth inning and held on to edge the Rangers. A double by Joe Lachoud and Darrell Porter's single touched off the Royals' tie-breaking uprising. Winner Jim Colborn needed relief in the seventh after surrendering Toby Harrah's 22nd homer.

A's 4, Twins 3
Wayne Gross brought Oakland from behind with his first home run in almost six weeks, a two-run shot in the fifth inning. The A's got the winning run in the sixth on Mitchell Page's triple and Jerry Tabb's sacrifice fly for their seventh victory in eight games, a streak that has lifted them out of last place in the West. Larry Hise homered for Minnesota.

Tigers 5, Brewers 2
Ben Oglivie drove in two runs with a single and his 17th homer while unbeaten Mill Wilcox checked the Brewers on eight hits for his sixth victory since the Tigers brought him back from the minors in June.

Rein: Bucs Quickest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State coach Bo Rein says his team will be up against a fast-moving defense Saturday when it opens its season with East Carolina University.

"There is no quicker defensive team than East Carolina," Rein told the season's first meeting of the Raleigh Sports Club. "And that includes Maryland. They lost some people at the offensive line, but they are very strong at the skilled positions."

Rein lost 23-14 to East Carolina last year, but says he has no special tricks up his sleeve for preventing a recurrence.

"We haven't changed much in the way of preparation," he said. "There are only so many hours and you have to prepare for everything. There are only so many things you can say, too. But I will say I think we'll be ready."

Rein also said that Maryland would be the team to beat in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — "We've got a lot of nagging injuries," University of Kentucky football Coach Fran Curci said, but the Wildcats are expected to be healthy for their Sept. 10 game against North Carolina at Commonwealth Stadium here.

Vilas May Be Favorite With Others Injured

By CHRISTIE BARBEE
AP Sports Writer
FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Two days ago Guillermo Vilas was stalking the big game at the U.S. Open tennis championships. The faithful, including some of the men he stalks, noticed, but maintained their homage to the obvious contenders — Bjorn Borg of Sweden and Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill.

But today, with the two top seeds suffering aches and pains that kept them out of first-day matches, other players were more apprehensive about the prospect of Vilas, who is seeded fourth.

"The way he's playing now, I don't see anyone beating him on clay," said Manuel Santana, the 39-year-old former clay-court giant who was Vilas' victim in the first round at the West Side Tennis Club Wednesday. The triumph was the 40th consecutive on clay for the 25-year-old Argentine.

Vilas disposed of Santana, the 1965 Open champion from Spain, 6-1, 6-0. It looked effortless.

"There is no way you can win a point from him," said Santana. "It seems he has no weaknesses at all."

Smith New Club Owner

ROCKY MOUNT — Terry Smith, a native of Ayden, has become the owner-operator of a par three golf course in Rocky Mount.

Smith, 31, graduated from Ayden High School, and has worked as a golf professional for over ten years.

He took over the operation of the Ru-Bob Par Three Golf Course in Rocky Mount today, after resigning as pro at the North Green Country Club in Rocky Mount.

He served for three and a half years as the assistant professional at the Benvenue Country Club in Rocky Mount, then was head pro, greens superintendent and manager of the Hanover Country Club in Ashland, Va., for four years.

Three years ago, he returned to Rocky Mount to serve as pro at North Green, working for a year there in the designing and opening of that course.

In addition to the course, he will also operate a full-time club repair service and a discount golf shop, along with giving lessons.

Smith is married to the former Marjorie Tucker of Ayden. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dalward Smith of Ayden.

Goldsboro, coming off an unbeaten regular season last year, suffered heavily from graduation. "We could have beaten them last year," Bumgarner said. "We just made too many mistakes in the first half. I hope we do better this year."

Kickoff is at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Quarterbacks Back On Street

By The Associated Press
One quarterback's gain turned out to be another quarterback's loss as more National Football League teams announced roster reductions to reach the limit of 52 players.

Gary Marangi, the 25-year-old backup quarterback at Buffalo, was traded to Green Bay for an undisclosed draft choice, giving the Packers a surplus of passing arms.

Exit Randy Johnson, 33, the journeyman quarterback who had completed 74 per cent of his passes in the preseason. Marangi's gain is that he gets to play for Bart Starr, the former quarterbacking great of the Packers.

"We just felt that, looking at our ball club analytically, this was a better arrangement for us," said Starr, now Green Bay's head coach.

The Packers signed Johnson as a free agent last Nov. 16 after regular quarterback Lynn Dickey suffered a separated shoulder. Johnson started Green Bay's final game, a 24-20 victory over Atlanta, and was impressive in this year's training camp.

"We were pleased to have Randy late last season, and he contributed a great deal to our final victory," Starr said. "However, we also have to think about our future."

Joe Gilliam is also thinking about the future today. He's out of a job, ending, for the moment, his comeback from drug addiction.

Gilliam, a promising quarterback with Pittsburgh before drugs ambushed his career, had cleansed his system and was given a chance with Kansas City. But, after a strong start in training camp, the man they called "Jefferson Street Joe" began missing practices and team meetings.

"I fulfilled the promise and responsibility I made to him a year ago," Kansas City Coach Hank Stram said following the announcement. "I have no regrets whatsoever. I'm just very sorry it didn't work out."

Another quarterback without a team is Steve Spurrier, who was waived by the Denver Broncos after a tryout. Spurrier played last year for Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who finished 0-14 in their first NFL season.

Winston Hill, Joe Namath's body guard for some years with the New York Jets, was waived by Miami. Hill, an offensive tackle, had been traded by the Jets after 14 seasons.

The Jets traded kick return specialist Lou Piccone to Buffalo also cut defensive end Billy Newsome, a former Jet.

Super Bowl champion Oakland traded defensive lineman Art Thoms to Philadelphia for a future draft pick.

In other cuts around the league, St. Louis dropped linebacker Al Beauchamp, who was in his 10th year; Atlanta cut rookie quarterback June Jones, and Kansas City cut quarterback Mike Nott.

All-pro linebacker Jack Lambert is a happy man after signing a contract reportedly worth $1.2 million over a five-year period.

"This contract is going to make Jack the highest paid defensive player in the game," said Bucky Woy, Lambert's agent.

Marcis May Now Replace Petty

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Stock car racer Dave Marcis, who Tuesday was named as backup driver for Bobby Allison, has wrenched teams for Labor Day's 28th annual Southern 500.

Marcis says he will now assist Richard Petty, who suffered severely bruised ribs during last Sunday's NASCAR Grand National race at Bristol, Tenn.

Marcis put Petty's STP Dodge through its paces during a practice session at Darlington Raceway Wednesday. His own Cam 2 Mercury was withdrawn by car owner Roger Penske.

Petty also logged a few practice laps but was still a bit sore from the accident.

Allison has replaced Marcis with Neil Bonnett, a fellow Hueytown, Ala. resident.

available if Bobby needed help, I decided to help Richard," said Marcis.

"Richard plans to qualify his car and start it in the race — and, who knows, he may go all the way. But I'll be standing by if he needs relief," he added.

Bennie Parsons and Buddy Baker emerged on Wednesday as the favorites to take the front row for the 367-lap race at Darlington Raceway. Parsons, a Chevrolet driver from El lerbe, N.C., posted the quickest practice lap at 151.227 miles per hour. Baker, of Charlotte, N.C., was right behind at 150.273 m.p.h.

In developments today, Rookie of the Year candidate Janet Guthrie is expected to take her Darlington rookie test. She could become the first woman to participate in the event.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The only horse ever to defeat Native Dancer was Dark Star, the front-running winner of the 1953 Kentucky Derby, who beat The Dancer by a head.

Like so many race horses, Dark Star got his name from both his sire and dam. The sire was Royal Gem II, which explains the Star. The dam was Isolde, in legend a beautiful girl. Her lover, Tristan, was wounded in battle and asked a messenger to go for Isolde. He was told to fly a white sail if successful, a dark sail if not. Tristan when told the sail was dark, died.

Time-Of-Day Electricity Pricing Seen For N.C.

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It is virtually certain that North Carolina will adopt some form of time-of-day pricing for electricity because of the five new members of the State Utilities Commission, a consumer spokesman has predicted.
J. Mark McDaniel Jr. of High

Point, head of Concerned Citizens for Responsible Regulation of Utility Rates, made the prediction Wednesday after urging the commission to take such an action. He was one of several witnesses at a hearing on experimental time-of-day pricing and load management proposals.

"There are five solid votes," McDaniel said of the commissioners appointed to the seven-member board this year by Gov. Jim Hunt. Consumer groups have called for time-of-day pricing because it would conserve energy and save consumers money.

Another witness, Craig Johnson of the Federal Energy Administration (FEA), told the commission it should implement such pricing schemes immediately for large volume customers because FEA studies in other states have proved the concept will work.

But, utility spokesmen asked the commission to move cautiously. Time-of-day pricing would put a higher price on electricity when it is in greatest demand and a lower price when in least demand. It is similar to different charges for long distance telephone calls.

Backers say it would make more efficient use of generating plants and would minimize the demand for new plants which has pushed rates up dramatically in recent years.

"Customers do, in fact, shift usage from peak periods to off-peak periods," Johnson said, citing study results in Connecticut, Vermont and Arkansas. During the period of the year's highest demand for electricity, customers under such a pricing plan used 17-40 per cent less electricity than other customers, with the average being 25-35 per cent, he said.

"Customers have adapted quite well to time-of-day pricing both in usage patterns and in customer attitudes," Johnson said.

The commission had held hearings on such pricing plans before, but the hearings were reopened Wednesday to allow the companies to alter their proposals and to present the evidence to the five new commission members.

Even though such pricing plans would save customers money, small users of electricity may not be able to participate because they would not save enough to pay the estimated $200 the new meters would cost. Several speakers predicted that possibly customers who use 1,000 kilowatt hours a month or less could not participate unless meter prices went down.

Spokesmen for Duke Power Co., Carolina Power & Light Co. and Virginia Electric and Power Co. urged gradual implementation of such programs.

If customers manage to save large sums of money it could upset a company's financial equilibrium and require rate increases, they said.

State Sen. McNeill Smith, D-Guilford, who sponsored the 1975 legislation allowing time-of-day pricing and load management, urged firm action. "Customer reaction will be far more certain if they know you are going to do it," he said.

Under the proposal submitted by Duke Power, 1,250 of its customers would be allowed to participate initially. The voluntary program would provide for a 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. summer peak period, Monday through Friday. The winter peak would be 7 a.m. to noon weekdays. Saturdays and Sundays would be off-peak for all the proposals.

CP&L proposed the longest peak period for its voluntary program. It would allow 1,000 customers to participate initially. CP&L's summer peak runs from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. It proposed a winter peak of 6 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4 p.m.-9 p.m.

Because it is experimenting with a number of pricing techniques in Virginia, Veeco said it wanted to limit its voluntary program to a water heater study. Customers with large capacity heaters would be allowed to have a special meter that would cut off power to the heaters during peak hours.

The strongest objection to time-of-day pricing was by the North Carolina Oil Jobbers Association. A spokesman said such pricing plans would encourage the use of electric space heaters which are not as fuel-efficient as oil and natural gas heaters.

Extra Time To Order Plates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Anyone who wants to reserve a special license plate for 1978 had better hurry. Catchy phrases like "PUSH ME," "IM-FREE," "YOU & ME," and "HAPPY" are already taken.

But the Department of Transportation announced Wednesday that it will extend the Sept. 1 deadline for reserving such license plate mottoes to Sept. 15. The personalized messages are limited to combinations of six letters or numbers, with no tag having fewer than three characters. And the messages must be G-rated.

"We sometimes have trouble with that, since letters are just letters when you're working with them," said Nancy Davis of the Motor Vehicle Division.

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's a lonely sounding statistic. But here it is.

Community College Plan Before Education Board

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Education will take up a proposal today that may lead to another confrontation over federal desegregation guidelines.

Ben Fountain, president of the state's 57-campus community college and technical institute system, has submitted a plan to the board that calls for an enrollment increase of 855 black students during the next five years.

A board committee approved the plan with certain changes Wednesday.

The plan falls short of proposed federal goals for boosting minority enrollment in college transfer programs at certain two-year institutions.

Last week, the UNC Board of Governors adopted a plan that rejects some federal desegregation guidelines as "unreasonable," and instead calls for a 32 per cent increase in black enrollment at traditionally white schools within five years.

Both the UNC and community college plans were developed after a federal judge ruled that current Department of Health, Education and Welfare guidelines were not speeding integration.

Gov. Jim Hunt will review the plans before he submits them to HEW by Monday.

HEW's concern with community college programs mainly involved the number of minority students enrolled in two-year programs designed as preparation for transfer to four-year institutions.

Only 15.6 per cent of those enrolled in the preparatory programs were minority group members. An overall total of 22.1 per cent of all students at community colleges and technical institutes are black.

Fountain's plan calls for each institution to conduct a feasibility study on adding a liberal arts transfer program.

But his plan also states that, "the completion of such a feasibility plan in no sense can be considered a guarantee that a liberal arts college transfer program will be added."

Major Boyd, associate vice president of community colleges for policy, emphasized Wednesday that the feasibility studies did not mean technical institutes would be changed into community colleges.

Of the 37 technical institutes and 20 community colleges, 21 offer college transfer programs. Only Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte offers the program in an urban location.

Fountain said that if more academic programs are located in urban areas with large black populations, the result could be more black students eventually entering four-year institutions.

Another HEW proposal for a statewide affirmative action minority hiring program for faculty and staff members was rejected by Fountain in favor of an individual hiring plan for each institution.

Disability For 1 In 20

LOS ANGELES (AP) — About one in 20 patients hospitalized in California in 1974 suffered a disability caused by medical care, a malpractice study concluded.

But less than 20 per cent of those disabilities were caused by improper treatment, according to the study. It said the vast majority of disabilities were unavoidable results of correct treatment for whatever was wrong with the patient.

The California Medical Association paid three doctors who are also lawyers $700,000 to conduct the study, which was based on a 1974 sample of 20,684 hospital charts from 23 hospitals.

Expanding the findings to the more than 3 million patients hospitalized that year in California, the report estimated that 140,000 persons suffered disabilities as a result of medical care. Eighty per cent of these were temporary disabilities, and only 5,300 were "lasting, functional disabilities," the report said.

E. Kash Rose, president of the CMA, said Tuesday he was "pleased with the results" because the report showed few cases of poor medical treatment.

The CMA House of Delegates will consider the report this October, when it makes recommendations on how to deal with rising malpractice insurance rates.

The report estimated that 13,600 people died in 1974 from treatment-caused disabilities, but one-fourth of those "probably would have died independently within one year from unrelated, underlying diseases or conditions."

The report's chief author, Don Harper Mills, a doctor-lawyer from Los Angeles, said it was a first step to considering alternatives to the current system of dealing with malpractice claims.

Acquitted Of Fraud Charges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Pinehurst Mortgage and Loan Co. president Frederick N. Boswell has been found innocent of defrauding investors who lost an estimated $2 million when the company declared bankruptcy last year.

Boswell was acquitted in Wake Superior Court by a jury that had heard more than two weeks of evidence. None of the evidence came from Boswell's attorneys. The state tried to show that Boswell misrepresented his Southern Pines company to investors as financially secure with insured investments.

Veterinarians Opine Deformed Pony Will Recover

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — King, a 10-year-old Shetland pony confined for four years in a nailed-shut stall piled high with manure, will recover completely now that almost a foot-and-a-half of deformed hoof has been removed, veterinarians said today. Dr. Walter Hilton, who is directing King's treatment, said after evaluating laboratory tests and X rays that "the film showed no growth abnormalities in King's legs, nor any signs of underlying disease." "King's about the most tenacious pony I've ever seen."

Hilton said of the pony that has gained national attention. "He's got an unbelievable will to live and that's probably why he is still around."

Earlier this week, Hilton, and blacksmith Bill McPhee, undertook a three-hour intricate procedure in which they sliced, chipped, and filed away pounds of deformed bone and hoof which had accumulated during the pony's imprisonment. About three weeks ago, officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals discovered King trapped in the fly- and maggot-infested stall, standing atop a four-foot-high pile of manure in a garage in Plaistow.

The Palamino-colored pony was suffering from the most severe case of the deformity called laminitis the veterinarians said they had ever seen. Its hooves had grown about 18 inches beyond their normal length and they curved toward his knees like the runners on a rocking horse.

In Tuesday's operation, at the University of New Hampshire, the grotesquely curved hooves were carefully whittled back to almost their normal size.

But even as King stepped gingerly on normal hooves for the first time in years, doctors were saying that only X rays would give a clear picture of whether the pony was walking to a new life, or to eventual destruction because of possible hidden bone damage.

Today's optimistic prognosis ruled out the somber alternative.

"One of our biggest problems now," said Hilton, "is making sure they don't kill him with love."

A hand-printed sign in King's stall says "Please leave all apples, carrots and sugar cubes outside."

Since his rescue the 3½-foot-tall pony has become an international celebrity. Hundreds of letters, get-well cards and telephone calls stream in every day. Many of the cards and letters contain money to pay for King's treatment. Others promise a "friendly and caring" home.

King's former owner, Barbara Reed of Plaistow, a 58-year-old widow, is scheduled to appear in court Sept. 13, to face cruelty charges.

Plaistow police said they are maintaining a watch on the woman's home because of threats and the fear someone would seek revenge on the animal's behalf.

"Emotions are running high all over the place," said SPCA investigator Peter Saunders. "People are vehement about this type of cruelty."

Pressure On Coastal Act

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A state official who helped write the Coastal Area Management Act has said there was pressure in a legislative committee to eliminate Martin and Jones counties before the committee passed the act.

Dr. Arthur W. Cooper, former assistant secretary of the state Department of Natural and Economic Resources, said counties were selected for inclusion in the act if they were part of the coastal salt water environment.

Martin and Jones counties fell into that category, he said, but were knocked out because of the political pressure.

The testimony came in a Superior Court trial of two lawsuits by landowners in counties which are affected, which claim the law subjects them unfairly to development restrictions that other counties do not have.

The lawsuits seek to have the law overturned.

Cooper is now a member of the Coastal Resources Commission, which will administer the act.

Emerging From Behind Desks

NEW YORK (AP) — John Chancellor and David Brinkley, seeking to dispel the notion that television anchormen are "high priests of the news," will come out from behind their desks when a revamped "NBC Nightly News" is aired next Tuesday.

The show will be divided into four segments, NBC said Wednesday, and is intended to engage the audience more and add both depth and more stories at the same time.

Chancellor, who co-anchors the show from New York, will lounge in a swivel chair and perch in front of three small, visible TV monitors and a 32-inch color set for talking with correspondents or Brinkley, who works out of the Washington studio.

NBC denies it, but the changes seem designed to counter the faster pace initiated by ABC News as well as the credibility image of CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite. At stake are ratings, which represent millions of dollars in advertising revenues.

FACES DRUG CHARGES — Country-western singer Waylon Jennings appears at a court hearing in Nashville, Tenn. Wednesday as news cameramen recorded the event. Jennings and his business manager, Mark Rothbaum, were bound over to a federal grand jury. Both are facing cocaine charges. (AP Laserphoto)

Formal Charges Face Waylon Over Narcotic

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Waylon Jennings and an aide face action by a federal grand jury on cocaine charges.

Jennings and Mark Rothbaum, who works for the singer, were bound over to the grand jury Wednesday after the government presented testimony which it said links the two men with a shipment of cocaine sent from New York to Nashville. The drug is classed as an illegal narcotic.

The two men are charged with possession of cocaine and conspiracy to possess the narcotic. They were allowed to remain free under $7,500 bond pending grand jury action.

At the same time, U.S. Magistrate Kent Sandidge III dismissed charges of conspiracy to possess cocaine and possession of the drug against Jennings' secretary, Lori Evans.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Ray Whitley presented testimony from two special agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration to show probable cause that the defendants should be bound over to the grand jury.

William S. Rosenberger, a New York agent, testified that the DEA had records on both Jennings and Rothbaum. He testified about the 27 grams of cocaine the government contends Rothbaum shipped. Rosenberger said Rothbaum sent the cocaine to Jennings on Aug. 22, but the package was intercepted by authorities.

William Tucker, a Nashville agent, detailed the raid on the Music Row studio in which Jennings and Miss Evans were arrested. Tucker testified a small amount of cocaine was seized at the studio.

Defense attorneys said there is no evidence to show that Jennings ever knew the package was being delivered to him or that he asked it be delivered to him.

The hearing began with two attorneys for Jennings, Tom Binkley and John Archer, asking the court to exclude reporters from the small courtroom. The magistrate denied the order.

Neither Jennings, Rothbaum or Miss Evans offered any testimony during the two and one-half hour hearing, and the defense lawyers offered no proof in their efforts to have the drug charges dismissed.

In dismissing the charges against Miss Evans, Sandidge said there was no evidence to show she knew what was in the package.

Advise Cutting Tobacco Stalks

"A healthy crop is the name of the tobacco game because that is the kind that pays the bills and puts dollars in the hip pocket," says Gaylon Ambrose of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. "R-6-P, the simple job of tobacco stalk and root destruction, is basic, in fact the first step, in the control program for a profitable crop. "Disease control is complicated and no one practice will do the job, and that is why the system plan was developed," he said. "Growers can select one of six control systems that fits their disease and production situation."

"R-6-P is step one of all six control and productive systems. This means that stalks must be cut and roots destroyed for anyone of the systems to provide the desired protection," he said. "Growers are encouraged to cut stalks, disc or plow out stubble, return two weeks later and disc or plow under all tobacco crop refuse and then seed a cover crop where needed," Ambrose said. "This is the basic practice for a good disease and insect control program. "R-6-P is valuable because it reduces carry over population of six to nine important disease and insect pests of tobacco, including root knot, mosaic, brown spot, budworms, hornworms, flea beetles, weed, grasses and vein banding."

"The resistant varieties perform best following R-6-P," he added. "The cropping system, the chemical soil treatment and other methods of disease and insect control perform best when following a high quality R-6-P job."

"The last field job of stalk and root destruction is the first step in the control program of future crops," he said. "It pays to the tune of $200 per acre by way of pest reduction. A healthy crop is the name of the tobacco game because this is the kind that pays the bills and puts dollars in the hip pocket."

"Start the control program the day harvest is completed by a high quality job of stalk and root destruction," he said.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Some hands contained a built-in trap for the experienced player. This hand, from the Monte Carlo leg of the Philip Morris European Cup, is such an example.

Four hearts was a popular contract, usually reached on an auction as shown above. South's good six-card spade suit made his hand well worth an opening bid, and once the 4-4 heart fit was located North went on to game on the strength of his distribution.

A club was usually led, and declarer saw at once that he would have to bring in the spade suit for his contract. To a man, declarer won the ace of clubs and led a spade to the nine. West won the jack, cashed a club and shrewdly shifted to a diamond, forcing out declarer's entry.

Declarer could not afford to draw trumps, for then he would not be able to set up and run the spades, so he went after his long suit immediately by leading the king of spades for a ruffing finesse. West ducked, and ducked again when spades were continued. But this time East ruffed and the contract could no longer be made.

The average player would have little difficulty with this hand. The first thing he tends to do is draw trumps. See what a difference it makes if, after winning the ace of clubs, declarer cashes the ace and king of hearts before leading a spade to his nine and West's jack.

West can cash the queen of hearts and queen of clubs and then shift to a diamond. But now declarer can take a ruffing finesse for the ace of spades and, after ruffing it out, he can still get back to his hand with a diamond ruff to run the spades for his contract.

It's true that this line could result in a huge set if trumps were 4-1, but declarer cannot be too concerned with that prospect if he wants to make his contract. He has to do two things—draw trumps and set up a long side suit—and this is one of those rare cases where drawing trumps first significantly increases the chances of establishing the side suit. Who could imagine that the ace and king of trumps could actually be liabilities and had to be cashed immediately for the contract to succeed?

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Central Alarm, Best Security

NEW YORK (UPI) — A central alarm system monitored 24 hours a day is the best security currently available for homes and apartments, says William Wray, a protection services company executive.

Unfortunately, installation charges start at $1,200 for a small apartment and may go up several thousand for a house, Wray says. And there are monthly service charges.

Many real estate developers now plan houses with central alarm systems as part of the basic "package," he adds, but there are other ways of protecting your living quarters, even though any lock made by man can be picked by a professional burglar.

The more ingenious the mechanism, the more skillful the thief becomes, says Wray, vice president of Honeywell Protection Services.

The invention of locks about 4,000 years ago made no appreciable dent in the practice of larceny.

"It's getting more profitable all the time," he added. "Last year American burglars took home well over a billion dollars."

Sixty-three per cent of the take comes from apartments and private homes. Burglars used to concentrate on business and commercial properties. Today they hit homes not only in the inner cities but, increasingly, in suburban and rural areas. In 12 years, residential dollar losses have increased 706 per cent.

Wray attributes this to a great number of businesses installing sophisticated alarm systems capable of summoning police and/or guards when an intruder triggers one of half a dozen different kinds of hidden sensors. A burglar has to be an electronics expert and invest in possibly $3,000 to $5,000 worth of equipment to disarm such a system.

Most private homes signal that they're "open house" to any amateur burglar, he said.

A flimsy lock is an invitation to enter. While no lock is impregnable, one that's pick-resistant and can't be readily "loided" (opened with a celluloid card) is a strong deterrent to burglars who look for quick and easy access.

A paneled door or one made of thin plywood is easy to kick in. Outer doors should be sturdy, with inside hinges. Apartment doors, particularly in houses where visitors are not screened by a doorman, are more secure if steel-cased.

Overgrown shrubs and trees near the front or back entrance of a home provide a convenient screen for illegal entry. They should be kept cut back, doorways should be well lit, and branches of trees that might provide access to second-story windows should be kept pruned. Ground floor and basement windows should be kept closed and locked when nobody is at home. A full mailbox is a giveaway. Arrange to have a neighbor pick up your mail, Wray says, or notify the post office to hold it. Suspend delivery of all newspapers and publications when you're planning to be away. Notify the police if you plan to be gone for an extended period.

A timer that turns a radio on, another that flicks a light on and off is even more effective as a burglar deterrent if the same lights and radio are operated on schedule on a day-in-day-out basis. This makes it much more difficult to figure out whether the occupant is away.

In suburbs, the absence of a pet tells an observant burglar that the dog is boarding in a kennel because the owner's away. Even a name on a mailbox on the side of the road is a hazard. All a burglar, or a group of teen-agers bent on vandalism, need do is look up the name in the phone book and call. If there's no answer, forced entry may well be the thief's next step. If the name on the mailbox is indispensable, the phone number should be unlisted. A garbage can that's empty for days is another clue that shouts "nobody home." Either leave it indoors when you go away or arrange with a neighbor to put some garbage in it, Wray said.

Do-it-yourself electronic alarm systems are available that set off loud and piercing noises that may well scare off a prospective burglar. But they often go off accidentally, and even when there is an intruder, strangers are increasingly reluctant to become "involved."

Treat Calluses With Silicone

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Glendale, Calif., podiatrist has concluded after an 11-year study that painful calluses on the sole of the foot often can be treated by injections of medical grade fluid silicone.

Dr. S. W. Balkin, presenting a paper at the annual meeting of the American Podiatry Association, won an award from the Armour Pharmaceutical Company for his research. Dr. Balkin's research involved 53 patients — 22 males and 31 females — with 102 plantar calluses. All were injected between 1964 and 1970 and received follow-up exams in one to 10 years. The silicone, now under control of the Food and Drug Administration, proved the injections an effective buffer between the skin and bone of the callused areas.

ACTION Chief Finds No Resistance To Effort

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some days, Sam Brown finds himself sounding like a Republican, which he definitely is not.

That bit of irony is part of the story of two government managers, running the same agency in successive administrations, and pursuing what sounds like a common goal: the decentralization of federal authority.

"When it's at its best our program grows out of the community," said Brown, the activist Democrat who runs ACTION, the federal volunteer services agency.

He said his effort to move power in that direction is going smoothly, without bureaucratic resistance. That is in marked contrast to the account of Michael P. Balzano, who headed ACTION during the Republican administration and says he encountered roadblocks at almost every step of his reorganization effort.

Balzano has published an account of his frustrations, suggesting that they point to some of the problems President Carter will face as he tries to overhaul the federal bureaucracy.

"... He will probably encounter most of the roadblocks that we did," Balzano said in a paper issued by the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington study group.

He said those barriers included resistance in Congress and in the bureaucracy, with employee opposition ranging from foot-dragging to legal action against reorganization steps seen as threatening the power or position of federal workers.

"Mergers and consolidations imply the possibility of changes in grades, salaries and duty stations," Balzano wrote. "Understandably, this possibility gives rise to fears and opposition, which could become the President's greatest obstacle."

Carter moved to head off that prospect soon after taking office, promising federal workers that no one will be dismissed or demoted because of reorganization.

But Balzano questioned whether there can be a meaningful reorganization of the bureaucracy in which no one loses rank.

He headed ACTION, the $200-million agency that includes the Peace Corps, VISTA and other volunteer activities, for four years, until the Democrats took over the White House.

He said he found the agency in dire need of an overhaul. Balzano said it took ACTION an average of 148 days to process a Peace Corps application, 102 days for a VISTA volunteer. By the time the paperwork was done, he said, the program that had sought volunteer help in the first place had sometimes been cancelled.

Furthermore, he said, AC-

TION's volunteer programs in the United States were dominated almost totally by Washington. "In many cases, those who had the most say about the style and substance of a program activity in a given community had never seen that community," Balzano wrote.

But Balzano said he ran into a sort of bureaucratic guerrilla war against efforts to disperse that power — which would in turn have diminished the grade, and thus the salary levels, of some positions in Washington.

Brown said he has encountered no such thing in his efforts to bring change to ACTION. And he is no less committed to the dispersal of power, suggesting at one point that what is needed is a sort of progressive federalism.

"I find myself sounding like a Republican sometimes," he said in an interview.

Brown said agency employees are cooperating with his program. He said he thinks the difference is that many of them suspected the Republicans wanted to keep the agency docile, quiet and under political control.

Balzano denied that he was sent in to dismantle or downgrade the agency, but acknowledged that many of its personnel feared that was the case.

There never has been any question about Brown's determination to make the volunteer agency more active, more visible and probably more controversial. At 33, Brown is a veteran of Democratic politics and of the protest movement against the Vietnam war. He resigned as Colorado's state treasurer to take the ACTION post.

He said he intends to decentralize to put authority closer to the poor and needy. The volunteer program is supposed to serve. He also promises democracy in the management of the agency, to give the 1,700 people on its payroll a voice in running the operation.

Sun Valley Attractive In Summer

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Chances are that if someone mentions Sun Valley most Americans will think of skiing, skating and other winter sports.

But summertime in the famed resort in Idaho also has its attractions as more and more bargain-conscious vacationists are discovering.

Many are drawn by the sports facilities, such as the 46 tennis courts and the two 18-hole championship courses draped around Mt. Baldy's base.

Others are attracted by the profusion of wildlife and the beautiful scenery. Baldy, which is part of the Sawtooth range of the Rocky Mountains, is the home of fox, mule deer, elk and other animals. Small brown bears are often glimpsed in thick berry patches — they are cute but beware — and chipmunks and flying squirrels are everywhere.

Bird watchers will find the regal bald eagle and smaller golden eagle, the red-tailed hawk and many other species, including warblers, gold finches and swallows in the thick forests that separate Sun Valley's 16 ski runs from each other.

The ski mountain is, in fact, off limits to motorized vehicles and the best way of exploring the wilderness is on foot or horseback.

Even the caretakers who man lookout perches at Roundhouse and Lookout, two mountaintop winter restaurants, have replaced their authorized jeeps with horses which, they note, are a lot easier to start on chilly mornings.

In addition to pack trips, there are various other expeditions on foot up Old Baldy. Climbers can tackle the more challenging faces of the mountain while anglers can try their luck — and skill — in remote streams and pools. There is hunting in season, too.

At the base of the mountain, a different atmosphere exists in the summer from that of the winter. More families are in evidence, perhaps lured by the variety of children's schools and camps.

There is one of the nation's most complete ice skating schools, offering instructions by former Olympic coaches in figure and dance skating, plus an ice hockey camp for youngsters. The Sun Valley skating facility includes three rinks, one of which is indoors. All are open year round.

Other schools for youngsters offer instruction in crafts, such as ceramics and photography, as well as dance. For the more adventurous, there is rock-climbing instruction; white-water and calm-water kayaking; and gliding.

There are cultural attractions, too. This summer, the nationally acclaimed Dance LA company is in residence, offering both workshops and performances.

A 50-member professional orchestra under the direction of Daniel Stern, musical director of the Boise Philharmonic orchestra, and including nine noted solo performers, is presenting eight concerts for summer visitors.

About 3,000 rooms — some with kitchens or facilities — are offered by inns, lodges and motels in the area. Prices are lower in the summer than in the peak winter season, but reservations are a must.

Sun Valley is about 90 minutes by car via U.S. 93 from Twin Falls, which can be reached from east and west by U.S. Interstate 80N. There is a commuter air service between Boise and Hailey, about 10 miles south of Ketchum (formerly Leadville), gateway to Sun Valley and the Sawtooth National Recreational Area.

A 'Policeman' Guarding Against Animal Nuisances

By JAMES CARRIER
Associated Press Writer
ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Richard Wetzel likes to think of himself as a policeman, directing traffic between the animal kingdom and mankind. But it is often dirty work, more like that of an exterminator, because the rules are man's alone.

When a woodpecker starts tapping a new cedar home in a wooded lot the homeowner asks Wetzel how to get rid of it.

When blackbirds darken a corn field, eating profits, farmers call him.

And when the eastern timber wolf, an endangered species, kills a calf or a chicken or a dog, Wetzel must take steps to stop it.

From behind a metal desk in a barren federal office, Wetzel directs animal damage control in Minnesota for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

A stuffed owl, his eyes eternally open, sits on a row of filing cabinets filled with pamphlets on controlling rabbits, rats, chipmunks, pigeons, bats, gophers and woodchucks. On a nearby desk, piles of pink call-back telephone slips pile up as Wetzel is interviewed. People, he says, call about the damndest things.

"People complain of grackles flying over swimming pools, dropping nest cleanings in their pools. They want to vacuum it, and they want me to do something. But grackles always drop it in water, lakes streams, ponds — or swimming pools."

"They want to know how to stop squirrels from burying nuts in their Scotts grass lawn — he's doing what comes naturally."

"A woman called and said a lizard is in my toilet. What do I do? I told her to flush it. Another asked how to get rid of snakes in her yard. I told her to cut its tail off — right behind the ears."

But many of his tasks are more serious: reducing crop damage from birds, scaring sea gulls away from airport runways or starved deer away from orchards.

It is a thankless job for a wildlife biologist like Wetzel, one that makes him a black sheep in his own wildlife service. But he accepts it philosophically.

"We feel if any individual accepts accolades for increasing wildlife, he should also answer the problems that increase causes."

"I have no problem with wildlife. The underlying cause is people. They keep moving in on wildlife, or making an area more conducive to wildlife."

And as for "taking" wildlife, the euphemism hunters and wildlifers use for killing, Wetzel feels that people will do it themselves anyway, possibly hurting other wildlife or humans in the process.

Success in wildlife control is often temporary. Although the official damage control section wasn't created until 1914, Congress in 1855 appropriated $3,000 to study the habits and damage of red-winged blackbirds in corn fields. The blackbirds problem still isn't solved.

"I've seen 10,000 blackbirds in a farmer's field in Minnesota," said Wetzel. He recommends a chemical be applied to one in 100 kernels of cracked corn and spread by airplane, one pound to the acre, on the corn field. When a random bird eats the treated kernel it goes crazy, squawking and flapping its wings, scaring off the others in the flock.

Under the law a farmer can shotgun all the blackbirds he wants on his own land. That is an exception in the law because all birds in America except English starlings, sparrows and pigeons are protected.

The endangered eastern timber wolf has been one of Wetzel's biggest and costliest dilemmas. For despite livestock kills by some of 1,200 hungry wolves in northern Minnesota, not even Wildlife Service biologist have been allowed to kill it.

For the last three years, trappers hired by Wetzel have snared troublesome wolves in traps and trucked them to the Superior National Forest for release.

Public pressure has forced the government to reclassify the wolf from "endangered" to "threatened" after Oct. 1, allowing government wardens to kill wolves damaging private property.

So far this year the four trappers have caught 22 wolves. Last year they moved 51 wolves away from harassed livestock. But it has been a temporary solution.

Bill Paul, a 25-year-old biologist-trapper, has caught 14 wolves near one farmer's land this year. The farmer called for help after losing two calves.

Hammock Sales Continue Good

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 10,000 hammocks will be sold in the United States in 1977, according to a National Geographic Society survey of the $5-million-a-year industry.

The society says Christopher Columbus and his men were the first Europeans to see a hammock, which was used by the Arawak Indians. They called it a "hamaca." They soon found that the highly portable sleeping device was ideal for island living as well as sea travel.

British sailing tars were allowed 14 inches of width in which to sling their tough canvas hammocks in the heyday of English naval power. Petty officers were given two feet. The U.S. Navy did not give up using hammocks until World War II.

Fewer Feeling Responsibility

NEW YORK (UPI) — How do you, son or daughter, feel about your role in taking care of elderly Mom and Dad? Or, is this a governmental problem?

One national survey found some 37 per cent of those polled agreed that grown children should feel financially responsible for their parents. Another 34 per cent disagreed, while 30 per cent had no strong opinion. So reported the American Council of Life Insurance.

Knights Templars Keep Ideals

BY ARLETTE BAUDET
GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — They no longer wear shining armor as in the Middle Ages but the Knights Templars still exist, preserving the same lofty ideals of chivalry as when their order was founded 859 years ago.

Alfred Zappelli, their Grand Prior, lives in Geneva. He wears a dark grey suit, is softspoken and modest.

"I am discreet," he said. "I would prefer to remain anonymous as I don't want any publicity for myself."

As Grand Prior, he holds one of the three highest positions in the order of the Knights Templars. The others are the Grand Master and the Regent. A Swiss, Zappelli, in his 60s, joined the order 10 years ago. He is a financial consultant and manages a bank which is strictly reserved for members of the order. He also is president of the Geneva-based International Federation of Knightly Orders.

Nothing about his downtown Geneva office resembles a priory except for two white flags with embroidered red Templar crosses and a few decorations on the walls.

But he is, all the same, deeply attached to the medieval knightly tradition and agrees with the Templars' official historian, Nicolas Haimovici, that the order is experiencing a revival.

"With wars and economic instability, people nowadays are completely disillusioned," Haimovici said. "They are looking for something to hold on to, like moral guidelines."

Haimovici, a 49-year-old French doctor, became a knight in 1971. He runs the Templar Center for Philosophical and Esoteric Studies.

For him, the order is not a remnant of the past but a way of life. He says that unlike many current spiritual movements, "we have the advantage of a long and solid tradition behind us."

Created in France in 1118 during the crusades, the order's aims were both military and religious.

It began with a band of nine knights sent to Jerusalem to protect pilgrims and the holy sites from thieves. Ten years later, they received papal support at the Council of Troyes and rapidly became one of the most powerful organizations in Europe, with as many as 9,000 branches known as "commanderies." They brought treasures back with them and established the first European banks by the end of the 12th century.

The order's financial control over Europe aroused the jealousy of King Philip IV of France, known as Philip le Bel

("The Handsome"), who persecuted them, confiscated their riches and banned the order.

The Grand Master, Jacques de Molay, was burned at the stake in 1314 along with many other knights.

The order has survived, however, in secret up to the present day.

Zappelli said, "There is nothing occult or satanic in the order and it has nothing to do with freemasonry."

"We are proud of being Knights Templars but don't believe in propaganda," he said.

Men over 25 may become knights but Haimovici said "our rules are very strict and require a certain maturity."

The candidate must hold a social position "worthy of a knight" and must not have a criminal record.

Some 50 applicants will become knights at the next annual international meeting of the order to be held in the Swiss medieval town of Fribourg in September.

The ceremony will take place in a cathedral and the rites will be exactly the same as 800 years ago, Zappelli said. Knights will wear long white robes with, on the left shoulder, an embroidered red cross.

A knight can be expelled from the order if "he causes public scandal, betrays his country, threatens social order, does not abide by the laws of his church and refuses to pay his annual dues of Swiss francs ($83)."

The order is no longer restricted to Roman Catholics. All that is necessary now is to believe in one God.

Most knights come from the upper-middle and upper classes. They are bankers, business executives, professors, doctors and artists. The order is anticommunist in outlook.

The movement has spread from western Europe as far afield as Africa, Latin America, Canada and the United States, where there are 70 commanderies with between 50 and 200 knights in each.

Two of them were founded in the U.S. last year, one in New York and another in New Jersey. Haimovici often flies to New York to give lectures on the history and philosophy of the Knights Templars.

"We believe the order will flourish in America because people over there are always looking for new ideas, even medieval ones," he said.

Already Buying For Christmas

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brace yourself, all you last-minute Christmas shopping types.

The word is that many people already have started their holiday buying, especially for personalized greeting cards. They're doing it in various vacation spots where there are gift shops and where there is no frenzied pace, reports Harry J. Cooper, executive director, the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers. Customers can order in quantity and get what they want.

Cards and Shards, a shop in Cohasset, Mass., says part of the early buying may be psychological — "it feels good to see those snow scenes in late summer," says owner Bob Fesler.

Chores Skipped By Workers

NEW YORK (UPI) — One way for the working wife and mother to ease her day is to let household chores go undone.

In a wide survey to find how working women coped, Woman's Day magazine asked one question: "What chores do you never do?" Ninety-eight per cent didn't pick up in the children's rooms. Sixty-nine per cent skipped spring cleaning. Thirty-four per cent didn't iron; the advent of permanent press had lessened that chore. One working mother from Eugene, Ore., boasted she didn't even own an iron. Bed-making? Thirty-four per cent said they didn't bother with the job daily.

Motor vehicle accidents are the number one cause of death among Americans aged 15 to 24. Murder is the number two cause of death and suicide ranks third.

Asheboro Once Hotbed Of Literary Publications

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — At a recent meeting of the North Carolina Writers Conference in Asheboro, there were some snide remarks about the host town's literary history.

Well, let those who sniggled turn beet red, for we discover — too late to bring to the attention of the august audience — that Asheboro (or Ashborough, as it was then spelled) was virtually a hotbed of literary publications a century and a quarter ago.

Even if the entire body of literature consisted of Braxton Craven and R. H. Brown, they gave Asheboro the distinction of publishing three literary magazines in two years.

These were in addition to Brown's weekly newspaper, the "Herald," which he edited from 1845 through 1851 and possibly later.

Braxton Craven is best known for having succeeded Brantley York as principal of Union Institute in Randolph County and for having converted that school into Trinity College, the forerunner of Duke University.

A troubled youth who was brought up in the home of Nathan Cox, Craven went to a neighborhood school, attended New Garden Boarding School (now Guilford College) for two years, and became a "boy preacher" to Randolph Methodists.

During the Civil War, Craven served for a few months as a captain, then for two years was pastor of Edenton Street Methodist Church in Raleigh. He returned to Trinity in 1865 and strengthened the little college prior to his death in 1882.

At the tiny community of Institute in northwest Randolph County, Craven must have felt isolated from the literary world. So, in addition to teaching and running Union, in 1850 he launched a bold adventure.

In March, with a "bow, smile good humor, and fraternal feelings," he issued the first number of the bimonthly "Southern Index," described by him as "a stranger, about whose appearance and utility there has been some curious speculation."

With the first issue, the speculation ended, for what Craven published was perhaps the first literary magazine in the area.

In defense of his plans, he wrote, "Every other section has such a publication, and why should not ours?"

The "Southern Index" was mainly a review of books and periodicals. Wrote Craven, "He that wishes to read, may learn the proper book, its cost, and where it may be found. Should you want a paper or magazine, the 'Index' will inform you of its locality, price and character."

Craven's reviews were sometimes saucy, even sassy. Reviewing Hedge's "Logic," he wrote, "Whether 'little learning is a dangerous thing,' or not, it is very sure that little 'Logic' is." The book, he said, "looks bad, and is worse . . . an indignity the memory of Aristotle never deserved."

The editor objected to all of Parson Weems's writing which promoted "impiety and false notions." To know what to read, Craven said, is about as important as to know how to read.

But the "Index" was more than a review of books and periodicals. It was also a vehicle for the editor's lectures in education and morals. He described the attributes of a good teacher, characteristics of a good school, and coursework of good education.

His 15 rules for the government of children read like regimentation compared with today's permissiveness. Here for instance, is how he suggested that the day begin: "At the appointed time, call the scholars to order by some appropriate signal (nevel bawl out 'come to the books') and let all be seated on the nearest benches; then reverently open your Bible, and read them a portion of the sacred word . . . Bid them go to their work."

In a lengthy evaluation of other colleges, Craven suggested that Greensboro Female College was too much concerned with producing ladies rather than educating women.

He chided the University of North Carolina for stressing the classics to the exclusion of grammar and arithmetic, saying: "We pronounce anathema upon the College that returns us a graduated blockhead. Latin, Greek and Mathematics! and the booby cannot correctly write a receipt or make an entry in a Day Book." The "Southern Index" ended with No. 3, and that issue was late. The editor explained, "The Index is just recovering from a severe visitation of the Mumps, and therefore, begs to be excused for any ill-digested articles as the chewing apparatus has been deranged . . ."
