

Greenville Team Rescue Champs

A Greenville Rescue Squad team became the world champions in heavy duty rescue Saturday by placing first in the heavy rescue competition at the 30th annual conference of the International Rescue and First Aid Association held in St. Louis, Missouri.

The international rescue championship was the second for the Greenville squad. A Greenville team in 1962, became the first team from the United States ever to win first place in an international heavy duty rescue competition.

In addition to the first place rescue trophy, the Greenville team received the Pat Lombardi Award — a trophy given for the first time this year for safety and teamwork.

The late Lombardi was a member of the Roche rescue team sponsored by the Roche Chemical Co. of Nutley, N.J. He had competed in a number of heavy rescue championship contests, some of them against teams from Greenville. The award was sponsored by the chemical company in his honor.

The two new trophies will be added to nine other international rescue and first aid awards won by Greenville teams since 1961, and 24 trophies given by the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads — including 14 state first aid and rescue championships — during the same period.

Placing second in the Saturday competition along the banks of the Mississippi River, was a Bayway, N.J. team sponsored by the Exxon refinery there, while the Roche rescue team placed third in the competition. In fourth place was a team sponsored by the Exxon refinery at Venetia, Calif., and in fifth place was a team from Trevoze Fire Department, Trevoze Heights, Penn.

A total of 75 points separated the first and second place teams, while 35 points separated the second and third place winners. Fifteen points separated third place Roche from the fourth place California team while five points separated the fourth and fifth place spots.

Greenville Fire and Rescue Division chief Ray Smith, along with North Carolina Commissioner of Insurance John Ingram and deputy commissioner B. E. "Buck" Lattimore, were present when the awards were presented at a banquet Saturday night.

Ingram, commenting on the honors received by the Greenville team, said "we're not only bringing back the bacon, but bringing back the whole hog," referring to the Lombardi safety and teamwork award.

"Hard work and dedication paid off in the highest tradition of the rescue service," Ingram commented, "where people from all walks of life give so unselfishly of their time and talents by going the second mile for their fellow citizens."

The Department of Insurance, which maintains a Fire and Rescue Services Division to train fire department and rescue squad personnel in the state, flew the Greenville team to St. Louis on one of the State's airplanes.

Ingram said yesterday, "we hope to be able in the future to take the team representing North Carolina to this international competition."

"This year," according to Ingram, "approximately one dozen teams from countries other than the U.S. participated in this international competition (including first aid and rescue), in addition to approximately three-fourths of the states in the nation."

Two of the heavy duty rescue problems in the Saturday contest involved lowering victims from the Ead's Bridge — the first railroad bridge built across the Mississippi River — while the third problem involved the rescue of a victim from a below-deck compartment aboard the minesweeper World War II U.S.S. Inaugural, moored along the waterfront near the Gateway Arch.

According to Ingram, "we're real proud of the record of the Greenville Rescue Squad and know the people within this area appreciate the total commitment these men give for the protection of lives. They're second-mile people in the truest sense of the word in going the second mile to help their fellow man."

Members of the championship team included: captain Tony Brannon, co-captain Harold Ross, Stuart Savage, Bill Beavans, Michael Branch, Joe Burris, Pratt Williamson, Robert O'Neal, and Tony Buck.

Three of the men, Brannon, Ross and Savage were members of the 1962 international championship team.

Also attending the awards banquet were Dawson Nethercutt of Chapel Hill and Wilburn Small of Greenville. Nethercutt was a member of the 1962 team while Small participated as a member of a number of Greenville competition teams. Both men are now rescue instructors with the Insurance Department's Fire and Rescue Services Division.

The Greenville team is scheduled to travel to Charlotte September 16 to compete in state rescue and first aid competition.

Brannon, assistant chief of rescue, emphasized that winning in competition is not the most important benefit from the many man-hours of training required to compete against the best teams in the state and in international competition.

"Training for competition keeps the men on their toes, and better trained to handle the day-to-day emergencies," he said.

The Greenville Rescue unit includes 10 full-time paid men and 34 volunteers, and all must meet the same training standards.

The city provides financial support for the squad's vehicles, equipment and expenses of the paid personnel. The volunteers, however, provide their own uniforms and travel expenses to out-of-town training programs and events such as state and international competition through fund raising projects and donations.

'Babe' Falters On Hitting Louisiana

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — Hurricane Babe blustered and weakened as it stormed inland across the Louisiana coast this morning, leaving heavy rains behind but apparently little damage.

"Nothing much to it," said Fred Marshall in the Civil Defense office in Morgan City where the storm came ashore. Some streets and highways were flooded, and tides along the marshy coast were reported four or five feet above normal.

However, forecasters warned that tornadoes could spin out of the storm as it moved slowly toward Baton Rouge. Southern Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and northwestern Florida were put under tornado watch.

The low-lying area had been evacuated well before the hurricane hit land. The impact was lessened because of the Labor Day weekend, with shops closed.

As the hurricane dragged across the land, the storm winds wore down. The National Weather Service located the storm about 50 miles south of Baton Rouge.

Highways leading into Plaquemines Parish were opened and refugees were told they could return home.

Weather service radar tracked Hurricane Babe as it came ashore about 5 a.m., 25 miles south of Morgan City — about 75 miles southwest of New Orleans. It was poorly organized with top winds of 75 miles an hour — about half the strength of Hurricane Anita's winds that lashed Mexico last week.

However, forecasters said up to four inches of rain could fall as the storm inched along. Officials in cities like New Orleans said four inches of rain would be no problem for flood-control facilities.

But the main concern along the swampy coast was that heavy rains would combine with the already-sodden ground and cause local flooding. Last month was the wettest August in Louisiana this century.

"It wasn't too bad," said St.

Mary Parish Sheriff Chester Baudoin. "We don't even have any broken limbs in the road."

Babe's erratic movements prompted some evacuations Saturday, but a change of direction allowed residents in some places to return home when sunshine broke through Sunday morning.

Promoters closed the annual Morgan City Shrimp Festival here because of the threatening storm Sunday night, but the partying died out slowly. An afternoon crowd of about 900 had dwindled to about 100 by midnight.

Light winds and occasional drizzles gave little hint of the 80-mile an hour winds 75 miles away.

"This is the size hurricane to have a hurricane party," said Fred Marshall, a civil defense radio operator at Morgan City. "But you can't even have a good hurricane party when it's not raining."

Sea walls and levees that have endured rougher storms surround Morgan City. And despite the street drinking, there were some preparations, with windows boarded up and civil defense officials standing by.

At the resort community of Grand Isle, the Labor Day holiday was ruined by evacuation orders. The only road north goes under water quickly when storm tides rise.

It was the third time Grand Isle — and several other coastal communities — had been evacuated in a week, including the evacuation for Anita.

Pressured To Void Tickets

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A State Bureau of Investigation report shows that Lumberton policemen were pressured to void traffic tickets by city officials, says Robeson County Dist. Atty. Joe Freeman Britt.

Britt said the S-B-I report, which he did not release, documents 26 cases of ticket-fixing. The district attorney said no criminal intent was shown, and no indictments would be sought in the case.

The Fayetteville Times reported earlier this year that Lumberton policemen allegedly were pressured by city council members to void tickets for political reasons.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —

State and federal health officials are checking for other possible cases of Legionnaires disease after confirming the illness has stricken four Columbus-area women, killing one of them.

Dr. Thomas J. Halpin, chief of the Ohio Health Department's Communicable Disease Division, said Sunday a fifth woman may have the disease, first diagnosed among 180 persons, most of whom attended an American Legion convention in Philadelphia last year.

Sunday a relative confirmed that Catherine M. McCoy, 56, of Columbus, died of the mysterious disease. The death occurred Aug. 6, five days after she entered Riverside Methodist Hospital, where all five cases have been treated.

None of the remaining confirmed victims has been identified, but health officials said they are ages 50, 39 and 51. A 65-year-old woman may also have the disease.

Halpin said the 50-year-old woman recovered after being treated for the disease and was discharged from Riverside Friday. The 39-year-old woman is doing "fairly well," but the 51-year-old woman and the suspected

VOYAGER LIFTS OFF — Voyager 1 lifts off at Cape Canaveral this morning, enroute to planets Jupiter and Saturn. The Voyager is part of a twin space probe. Voyager 2 has a nearly nine million mile head start. (AP Laserphoto)

Spacecraft Takes Off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of holiday beachgoers applauded as Voyager 1 blasted smoothly into space today, taking a shortcut that will put it near Jupiter and Saturn ahead of its twin craft, which was launched 17 days earlier.

"Everything looks good," a Kennedy Space Center spokesman said.

Scientists said the three-day delay in launch to give engineers time to put extra springs on Voyager 1's arms had paid off. A spokesman said the arms, loaded with cameras and scientific equipment, were locked in position.

"We have confirmation that both booms are fully deployed with everything locked in place," the spokesman said.

A similar boom on Voyager 2 failed to move completely into position after launch and scientists worried that the mission would be crippled. It is now believed to be within a fraction of its assigned spot.

Project scientists, trying to avoid the same problem with Voyager 1, delayed launch from Sept. 1 and installed extra springs on both arms to give them more of a push to put them in position.

Voyager 1's launch on its multibillion-mile journey to the outer edges of the solar system went smoothly from the start. The spacecraft lifted off into clear blue skies at 8:56 a.m. EDT, carried aloft by a TitanCentaur rocket that left a long white tail in its wake.

The Titan portion of the rocket separated shortly after liftoff, and an hour later the Centaur broke away, leaving Voyager 1 on its own. At that point, the Voyager's nuclear engines took over, propelling the craft at 32,481 miles an hour.

Even as Voyager 1 lifted off, Voyager 2 was speeding through space with a head start of nearly 9 million miles logged since its Aug. 20 launch. But Voyager 1 will fly a more direct route and will be first to arrive near Jupiter and Saturn, scientists said.

Boat Wreck

HOUSTON (AP) — Five persons were killed, one was missing and eight were plucked from the San Jacinto River near Houston after a three-boat collision.

The Coast Guard and Harris County deputies were waiting for daybreak before continuing their search for the missing person. Names of the victims were being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The Coast Guard said two pleasure boats collided around 9:30 p.m. Sunday. One of them hit the other broadside and the two vessels hit a nearby boat that was docked.

One of the boats overturned and sank, dumping its passengers into the river near Channelview, a community some 15 miles east of Houston, the Coast Guard said. Another of the boats sank moments later.

The eight survivors were pulled from the water by Coast Guard units and Harris County Sheriff's Department boats.

The third boat was towed to a nearby marina.

PENALTIES EQUAL?

Are women who break the law subject to the same penalties as men? I say they are not; my wife says they are. W. H.

According to a booklet put out by the Commission on Education and Employment of Women and called N. C. Women and the Law, your wife is probably right. It states that North Carolina laws do not state any difference between men and women in imposing penalties for felonies or misdemeanors.

However, there are differences between work assignments which may be given to men and women prisoners. Only men can be assigned road and forestry work and no woman can be sentenced to work on city streets. Also, no woman can be assigned to work under the Department of Correction if her term of imprisonment is less than six months or if she is under 16 years of age.

Anyone wishing a copy of the booklet quoted may obtain it from the Commission on the Education and Employment of Women, N. C. Information Project, Office of the State Library, Dept. of Art, Culture and History, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Legionnaires Disease Strikes In Columbus, Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —

State and federal health officials are checking for other possible cases of Legionnaires disease after confirming the illness has stricken four Columbus-area women, killing one of them.

Dr. Thomas J. Halpin, chief of the Ohio Health Department's Communicable Disease Division, said Sunday a fifth woman may have

Halpin said the 50-year-old woman recovered after being treated for the disease and was discharged from Riverside Friday. The 39-year-old woman is doing "fairly well," but the 51-year-old woman and the suspected

victim are in "somewhat serious" condition, he said.

"The women didn't know each other at all," Halpin said. "They didn't know each other by name, there was no connection or link between their employment or their husbands' employment and their relatives don't know each other."

Halpin said Riverside's infectious disease chief became suspicious following

Mrs. McCoy's death when a second patient with serious pneumonia did not respond to normal treatment.

The federal Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta confirmed the first three cases were Legionnaires disease Friday and the fourth Sunday night.

Halpin said officials expect to know the results of tests on the 65-year-old woman within a week to 10 days.

Meantime, a CDC team of two physicians and a microbiologist are in Columbus to help state health officials investigate the cases.

Legionnaires disease is a severe respiratory illness. CDC researchers discovered in January it is caused by a previously unknown bacteria-like living organism, which has no name as yet.

Chinatown Shooting Rampage Left Five Dead

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —

At first it sounded like firecrackers, but then patrons of Chinatown's Golden Dragon restaurant realized in horror that three men were shooting at them and that people were dying.

Three masked gunmen — who police say might have some connection with Chinese street gangs — burst into the restaurant about 2:40 a.m., and opened fire with rifles and shotguns into a crowd of 100 diners.

Five persons were killed and 11 others were wounded.

The shooting took less than one minute. The assailants slipped out, leaving behind a chaotic scene of bloodied bodies and broken dishes.

Only one of the wounded was released from the hospital. Two others remained in critical condition early today.

"They fired at the ceiling first, and then all over the restaurant," said Jimmy Tam, a 26-year-old artist who suffered a leg wound.

"All of a sudden we heard noises that sounded like firecrackers," said Francine Novick of San Francisco who with her husband, Paul, was a regular Golden Dragon customer. "I saw fire coming out of the end of a gun. My husband yelled, 'Get down!'"

"I heard 'bang, bang, bang' and looked up and saw a guy with a gun," Paul Novick said. "We got under the table."

Mrs. Novick said she started to get out. "I heard a strange sound. It was a bullet that went right past my head and past my husband's head and into the mouth of the girl behind us. She was sitting on the floor and I saw a bullet hit her face."

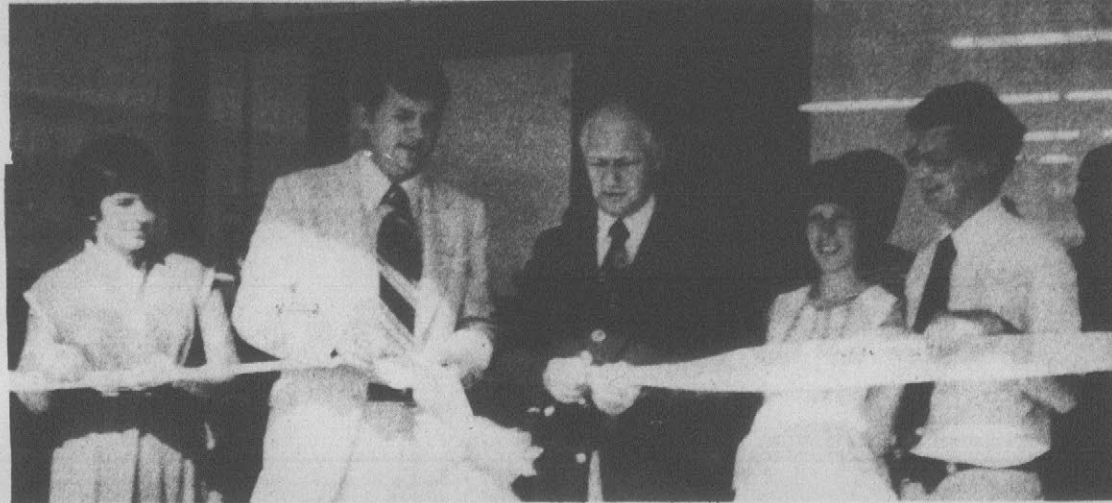

"It seemed like the shooting took forever, but it only lasted a minute. There were bodies all over, people screaming. My husband was the first one up. I ran towards the kitchen and then I guess I passed out."

"You hear about these things, you read about them," her husband said Sunday. "It was just like we went to a movie last night. Only it was real."

Based on the sketchy description by one diner, police believe the gunmen were Oriental youths.

Police said late Sunday that "no witness has come forward" with information about a possible motive from the shooting.

RALEIGH — Americans still like meat. From January through June, their consumption of red meats (beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton) reached an alltime high of about 96 pounds per person. It is now expected that per capita red meat consumption for all of 1977 will be only slightly below last year's record figure of nearly 193 pounds.

In addition, per capita consumption of poultry has been rising steadily for a number of years and in 1976 it reached a record 53 pounds.

Commercial red meat supplies decline and with good prospects for a large corn crop, feeder cattle prices will likely begin to rise by the end of the year.

Indications are that the U.S. cattle and calf inventory as of next Jan. 1 will total 117 to 118 million head. This would be about the same as in 1972 and well below the 132 million head on hand at the beginning of 1975.

"This points to lower beef production and higher cattle prices for the next few years. It also indicates higher retail beef prices," said the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Pork production during the last half of 1977 is expected to be slightly higher than in the first half but about the same as a year earlier. The market price for slaughter hogs this fall likely will be $3 to $5 above last fall's average of $34 per 100 pounds.

Producer intentions as of June 1 pointed to a five per cent increase in the fall pig crop. However, a larger pig crop than originally planned is now likely this fall because of improvement in hog prices during June and July and prospects for a large corn crop.

With a continued favorable hog-feed relationship, hog producers are likely to expand further during the first half of 1978. The spring 1978 pig crop could be up eight to 10 per cent, and this suggests higher levels of pork production for 1978 with declining prices.

A Managerial Revolution In American Labor Movement

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The American labor movement is undergoing a managerial revolution that has produced the most sweeping leadership changes since the 1940s, with power passing to a new breed of union official.

AFL-CIO President George Meany still dominates the giant labor federation, but for the first time his legislative lobbying and political tactics are being challenged. Some of the new, younger union presidents have even urged him publicly to retire.

"He's 83 and he should get out and let somebody a little younger and a little closer to us get on with it," says the outspoken William W. Wimpisinger, newly elected president of the International Association of Machinists. At 53, he is 30 years younger than Meany.

Death and retirement in the last three years have brought to power a new generation of leaders in the construction trades, the clothing unions and more than a dozen major industrial unions.

This year alone, the nation's three largest industrial unions — the machinists, the auto and steelworkers — elected new leaders. By year's end, only two of the 33 union presidents who make up the AFL-CIO's policy-making executive council will have served on the council longer than eight years.

The new leaders generally are younger and better educated than the old-timers of labor's rough and tumble days. Several have law degrees. They are also, for the most part, more liberal politically and more militant in their attitude toward organizing new members.

"Today's labor leader is far better equipped to handle the tough economic issues that come up at the bargaining table, and they know how to read a profit and loss statement or a computer printout," says Al Zack, the AFL-CIO's long-time spokesman. And, he adds, "They all read the Wall Street Journal."

But Zack and other observers think the new group of leaders will have more impact on style than on substance.

"The changes are not as apt to be as dramatic as some people think because the basic fundamentals of wages, hours and working conditions will still be the fundamentals," says another labor veteran.

The building trades unions, traditionally the labor movement's most conservative element, are beginning to show change under new leaders.

Long criticized for their exclusionary policies, the craft unions are actively recruiting minorities and women. They also have begun easing restrictive work practice rules to become more competitive with nonunion contractors who are taking a larger share of building jobs.

New leadership in the needle trades has given new life to these unions, now campaigning to organize Southern textile factories and restrict clothing imports that have caused the loss of American jobs.

The emergence of Wimpisinger, Douglas Fraser of the auto workers, Glenn Watts of the communications workers and Lloyd McBride of the steelworkers is likely to give new strength to labor's liberal wing.

They believe organized labor should shed its "middle-class image" and focus attention once again on broad economic and social policy issues.

"If you're going to rally support behind your programs you're going to have to show concern not only about your members but all the people in our society," says the 60-year-old Fraser.

"You've got to prove to the people of this country that the labor movement is concerned about all the people, not just those who happen to be paying dues into the labor organizations."

But until and unless Fraser can bring his union back into the AFL-CIO, he will have no say on federation policy. The UAW left the AFL-CIO in 1968 in a policy and personality dispute between Meany and Walter Reuther, who was then UAW president.

Fraser, a political liberal who rose through his union's ranks after going to work as a metal polisher in a Chrysler Corp. plant, favors reaffiliation on the grounds that a united labor movement is in the best interest of workers. But there is strong opposition within the UAW, in part because of rank-and-file objection to Meany's continued leadership.

The AFL-CIO's Zack rejects the criticism from the new leaders and young union members. He contends that, under Meany, the labor federation is already "liberal and leftist" and notes that it led the fight in Congress for the Civil Rights Act. And now, Zack adds, the AFL-CIO is in the forefront of the battle for a higher minimum wage and the establishment of a national health insurance program.

Within the past year, perhaps in response to pressure from the new union presidents, the AFL-CIO has become more aggressive toward organizing new members and has made reform of federal labor law to ease organizing its No. 1 legislative priority.

As for Meany, there had been speculation that he would retire this year. But, with his health improved after recent ailments, he now says he will seek another two-year term at the AFL-CIO convention in December. He is not likely to be opposed.

Slow N.C. Acceptance Of Electronic Banking

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Electronic banking is slow in catching on with North Carolina companies.

"We'd like to see the system go much faster, but when you compare North Carolina to other states, it's going like gangbusters," said Michael J. Shade, executive director of North Carolina Automated Clearing House Association, which developed the statewide system.

Companies can make electronic payroll deposits directly into employees' bank accounts and collect bills by electronic payment. Only 62 companies have signed up for service, ranging from the Fayetteville YMCA to a Raleigh mortgage banking firm.

Although 68 of the 90 banks in the state participate, only 11 originate electronic transactions.

"We have not created the volume I thought we would by now," said William R. Allen, vice president for data processing for First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. in Raleigh. "It's largely because the consumer is satisfied with what he has now."

"There's no incentive for him to have this service. I don't think the banking industry in North Carolina or the nation has promoted this like it could or should."

Marketing costs have hindered further system promotion. In addition, Allen said the electronic processing needs large volumes before banks can cut down on paper-handling costs.

Shade estimates a corporation can save 30 per cent of its payroll processing costs with electronic payroll deposits, based on a firm with 500 employees paid every two weeks and with half the employees subscribers to the system.

Electronic bill payments could save one North Carolina mortgage company $6 per account per year.

Payroll deposit transactions began in North Carolina in July, 1976, through a central computer in the Federal Reserve Bank branch in Charlotte. Automatic bill payments started last April.

Shade remains optimistic, and predicts North Carolina's clearing house will process 280,000 monthly bill payments by 1980 and 130,000 payroll deposits.

based on a firm with 500 employees paid every two weeks and with half the employees subscribers to the system.

Electronic bill payments could save one North Carolina mortgage company $6 per account per year.

Payroll deposit transactions began in North Carolina in July, 1976, through a central computer in the Federal Reserve Bank branch in Charlotte. Automatic bill payments started last April.

Shade remains optimistic, and predicts North Carolina's clearing house will process 280,000 monthly bill payments by 1980 and 130,000 payroll deposits.

Baritone Giving Recital Sept. 11

Baritone Clyde Hiss will perform songs by Schubert and Poulenc Sunday, Sept. 11 in a recital at East Carolina University.

The program, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall, is free and open to the public. Dr. Hiss has been a member of the ECU School of Music voice faculty since 1965.

His recital will consist of Franz Schubert's "Schwanengesang" a set of 14 songs set to the poetry of Seidl, Relstab and Heine, and the "Chansons Gaillardes" by Francis Poulenc, eight short songs based on anonymous 17th century texts.

Hiss will be accompanied by pianist Ellen Reithmaier Nagode of the ECU keyboard faculty.

Labor Scene In Portugal Changed

LISBON (AP) — An estimate issued by the Free Union of Domestic Workers confirms what every lingering aristocrat and newly arrived foreign businessman knows: Portuguese maids are a dying breed.

A union spokesman put the current figure at 90,000 maids — more than the nation's 62,000 soldiers but 27 per cent less than the 110,000 live-in domestics listed in 1970, when they accounted for about 3 per cent of the labor force. The figures do not include daily maids who live outside the houses where they work.

The owner of a 20-room townhouse shook his head recently after giving a lunch for eight in his 250-year-old dining room. Crystal, rare china and finger-bowls were used in the five-course meal.

"A few years ago, you would have had three or four to serve the table," he said. "Now we have one."

Such scenes of relative hardship in the best families seem certain to spread, given the inflation, rising aspirations among young women and leftist ideology in post-revolutionary Portugal.

Until 1974, dictatorship had kept socially leveling forces at bay for half a century. Some believed unofficially that Portugal retained the highest per capita ratio of live-in maids in Europe.

Now, proposed labor legislation for maids could cut further into their numbers.

Most observers agree reforms are overdue on set hours, vacation pay and notice of dismissal. But some say reforms would spur unemployment since employers would balk at new costs and restrictions.

Perhaps fortunately, they say, Prime Minister Mario Soares's Socialist government is preoccupied with larger problems and appears to have put the maid bill at the bottom of the legislative stack.

Union officials say live-in maids earn an average 2,500 escudos — $63 a month — plus room and board, although diplomatic and other non-Portuguese households have offered up to 8,000 escudos — $200 — for well qualified women.

Maids who do not live in earn 25 to 30 escudos — 63 to 75 cents — an hour. In comparison, the national minimum wage is 4,500 escudos — $113 a month.

Not so long ago, thousands of young farm girls broke their rural monotony every year by becoming maids in Lisbon.

"Most of the girls were ignorant about modern electrical appliances," said Jose Joaquim Calvo, owner of a maid employment agency. "Until they learned, the effects on madam's washing machine and refrigerator were both disastrous and expensive."

Despite working 60 or more hours a week on near-legal terms, many maids stayed for life and developed surprisingly free relationships with their employers.

Umbelina Magarida, illiterate and a cook for the same Lisbon family for half her 60 years, said, "I have never hesitated to give my mistress a piece of my mind and I don't need to join a union to do it."

The maids' decline might even be hastened by the conflict between two rival maids' unions, locked in a battle of the backstairs that reflects much of Portugal's social ferment.

Both unions were formed after the revolution — the Free Union of Domestic Workers, with 8,000 members and Roman Catholic backing, and the Domestic Service Union with 6,000 members and links with the Communist-led National Labor Federation.

Maria da Conceicao Brites, an official of the Free Union of Domestic Workers, said she hoped for "Italian-style legislation to dignify the maid trade by providing for courses in child care and geriatric nursing."

Her union, meanwhile, has established ties with Catholic charities that help working mothers, and has set up two boarding houses where 30 daily maids can live cheaply and cook in communal kitchens.

Maria Helena Freitas Pereira of the Domestic Service Union said it sought a radical transformation of the maid's role from servant of the rich to helper of the working masses. The union is organizing a cooperative to provide ready-cooked meals and parttime cleaning services to homes where both adults work.

Miss Edwards, Mr. Ellis Wed In Farmville Yesterday

FARMVILLE — Miss Charlene Edwards became the bride of Larry Devon Ellis in a double-ring ceremony at St. James Free Will Baptist Church here Sunday at 3:00 p. m.

The Rev. Alfred Dixon officiated and the bride's brother, Donald Wayne Edwards of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave her in marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Doris Edwards of Farmville and the late Solomon Edwards. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ellis, also of Farmville.

Traditional wedding music was presented by Ronnie Bolden, pianist, and Miss Erma Jean Baker, who sang "Because" and "Whither Thou Goest" and then "The Lord's Prayer" as the bridal couple knelt on the prie-dieu.

The church was decorated with two seven-branch spire-tier candelabra flanked on each side was a basket of mixed pom poms and gladioli and a background of greenery. Pew markers were used.

The bride wore a formal-length gown of traditional white bridal satin with beaded Alencon lace. The lace bodice featured a ruffled v-neckline with empire waist and full-length tapered sleeves with ruffled cuffs. Alencon lace patterns were inserted in the sleeves. Covered bridal buttons trimmed the bodice and fastened the sleeves. The full-length bridal satin skirt was bordered with Alencon lace encircling the hem of the skirt. The headpiece was a Juliet cap overlaid with Alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of baby's breath, lilies of the valley and rosettes, centered with a white cattleya orchid.

Mrs. Dorothy Brunella Wooten of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal-length dress with plunging front and back v-neckline extending into side ties. Her headpiece was a matching wrap with a rosette to the right side. She carried a mixed bouquet of fall flowers, with accenting ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Brenda Lynette Harper of Brooklyn, N. Y. and Miss Sylvia Denise Edwards of Farmville, sisters of the bride; Miss Lou Ellen Tyson of Farmville and Miss Sharon Russell, also of Farmville, cousin of the bridegroom. They wore yellow dresses made identically to that of the matron of honor and matching headpieces and carried bronze mums, accented with variegated ribbon.

Miss Felicia Edwards of Greenville, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore an ankle-length dress of yellow and white eyelet with front and back gathered into a fitted high waist bodice, with scooped necklines and matching front shawl. She carried a basket of miniature pom poms.

Best man was James Thaddeus Dixon of Farmville. Ushers were Marvel Nelson Edwards of Greenville and Willard Raye Edwards of Farmville, brothers of the bride, Donnie Le Micheal Ellis of Farmville, brother of the bridegroom, and Jackie Elmer Tyson of Charlottesville, Va.

Wendell Marvel Edwards of Greenville, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Myrtle Joyce Wooten of Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Sylvia Moye Edwards of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Winston Salem State University, where she received a B. A. degree in business administration. The bridegroom is a graduate of Elizabeth City State University, where he received a B. A. degree in sociology. He is employed by the Boy Scouts of America in Durham.

Attendants of the bridal couple were presented gifts during an after-rehearsal dinner at the home of the bride given by her family.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Durham.

Ethnic Meals Being Tried In Schools

By JAMES L. OVERTON
HOUSTON (UPI) — Some schools across the United States plan to experiment this year with multi-cultural or ethnic menus to spice up traditionally dreary cafeteria fare.

The project is a joint effort of the association, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and various state education departments, says Josephine Martin of Atlanta, president of the American School Food Service Association.

"We believe the school food service program provides an opportunity for children to learn to eat, and to eat a variety of food," Ms. Martin said in an interview at the association's annual meeting here.

The association thinks adoption of the program will not only add variety but will also help reduce waste and ultimately serve to educate parents as well.

"A child has to learn to eat, just like he has to learn to read. It is not something he is born with," she said.

Ms. Martin said schools across the nation are taking a long look at their food service programs, with the idea of attracting more students to the cafeterias and with better results, particularly in multi-racial areas.

"In every community there is a cultural mix of students. People learn to eat at home. People do not learn to eat in restaurants."

"Because of this cultural mix, there would be some children who would never have the foods of their culture," she said.

"We would like to think the young people will learn to appreciate the foods of different cultures, not just eating and enjoying the food, but also learning the history of the cultures."

"We are also concerned about food waste. It is a culture problem. Our society is a throwaway society. Our culture is disposed of disposing of things. There is a trend now across the nation to offer choice within the framework of the school meal."

The program will also attempt to tie the cafeteria program in with social studies programs, teaching rituals are associated with food.

"One of the concepts that we try to teach is that all foods are health foods. An apple is a health food. Milk is a health food. There is a nationwide interest in substituting nutritious snacks for those which just supply calories ... those things found in vending machines."

Ms. Martin is school food services administrator for the Georgia Department of Education. She said most schools will prepare meals from scratch on site. Some commercial products will be used when fresh ingredients are not available.

"In September, we will have a Mexican food program. In most instances, the school will buy the taco but will prepare the filling. There are certain convenience foods. We haven't learned the fine art of making tacos," she said.

"When fresh fruits are available at a price the schools can afford, we will use them. But sometimes we use a combination of the fresh and canned fruits."

Another goal of the program is to make nutritious food more attractive to reduce the craving for junk food, the result of which is shown in weight problems.

"Ten to 29 per cent of American school children are said to be obese. We believe the total daily dietary should be almost like a budget, this much protein, this amount of carbohydrates and this amount of fats. We look at this, and we know the vitamins and minerals we need every day."

Selection of foods will also stimulate the children to eat, she said.

"Eating is psychological. We like to have a choice. We don't like to be told we have to eat something. The choice item is generally started at the secondary level. A young child follows the examples of adults, and his family."

"About the time the child goes into adolescence, we have another problem. The child has a need to make his own decision. The child wants to try things himself. He wants to be the decision maker."

Ms. Martin hopes for passage of a bill pending in Congress that would make money available to states so schools could start nutrition programs to teach children good eating habits.

"The way we are going to improve eating habits of parents is to improve the eating habits of the children. What we have to do is start with a nutrition program that begins in the school."

Phone Caller Has Right To Privacy

By Abigail Van Buren
1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: In my judgment, you are somewhat misguided concerning telephone courtesy. The proper answer to someone who asks, "Who's calling, please?" is, "None of your business!" The exception might be a daughter who is not allowed to speak to anyone on the phone without her parents' permission, which in this enlightened age is ridiculous.

If the person who is called REQUESTS that the person answering the phone ask who is calling, it is perfectly proper to ask, but the caller should never get the impression that he must identify himself before he can find out if the party he is calling is available to speak.

The point I make is this: It's the obligation of the person answering the phone to tell the person who is wanted that he has a phone call. And only if the person called WANTS to know who is calling, should the party who answers the phone ask, "Who is calling?"

T.E.F.

DEAR T.E.F.: I agree, people should respect each other's privacy, and one should ask, "Who is calling, please," only when the callee wants to know. Your suggested, "None of your business," response is both ill-tempered and ill-mannered, and therefore ill-advised. And in the case of minor children, it is indeed a parent's business to know who is calling his or her child.

DEAR ABBY: I am a gal—well over 21. I mind my own business and wish other people would mind theirs. I have a friend (male) who buys my groceries. In return, all I give him is home cooking—believe it or not. He's in the process of getting a divorce, and hates to eat out. I think it's a good deal for both of us.

He usually sleeps here on weekends because we have wine with dinner and he's afraid to drive after he's been drinking on account of he doesn't have a driver's license. Some of my neighbors have slipped some very insulting notes under my door. I haven't done anything to be ashamed of. Is it fair to be judged on appearances?

$50 Won't Buy Much Pre-Teen School Wear

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Half a C-note doesn't go very far these days in outfitting a daughter for the new school year.

We asked a nationwide chain of variety stores to select $50 worth of school clothing for a pre-teen girl.

They showed us two outfits: jeans with a shirt, pullover sweater and nylon ski jacket and a two-piece skirt set with a tie-belt, shawl-collared coat sweater and regular length, belted, hooded coat. Total cost: $53.97. Plus tax if your community and/or state levy sales taxes.

Actually, all represent good value. The skirt set, sweater and coat were in bone with brown tones. But the same outfit is also available in blue and could be mixed or matched with the jeans outfit.

Taken individually, the most expensive single items are the jacket at $19.99 and the coat, $31.99. The blue tattersall checked shirt is less than $5.50, the blue shetland pullover is $6.99 and the coat sweater, $9.99. The jeans of sturdy polyester and cotton navy denim are $9.44, and the bone and brown two-piece skirt set is $11.99. If you put a price on your time, you'd be hard put to match those tags in made-at-home duplicates.

The styles, as usual, follow the fashion message of the adult world: the military look for sporty clothes, the bulky look for sweaters and coats, and hoods on both the coat and jacket.

As for spring, Kathleen Walker has a message from her 10 nieces: "They're predicting a terrific comeback of skirts and blouses."

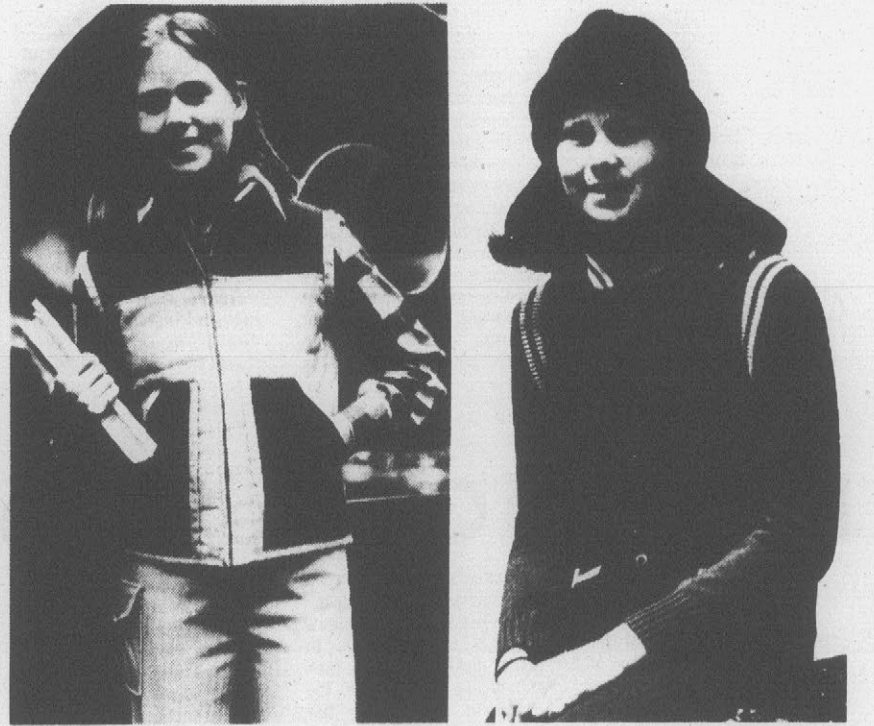

It's already here in women's wear. Miss Walker is senior assistant buyer for girls' wear for the F.W. Woolworth Co.

She expects to get more trend ideas for spring when the company's merchandise managers meet in New York City next month.

"They come from all over the country. They can tell me, for example, if gauchos are selling all over or if the trend is dying. "Customers want value today, not fads."

Miss Walker's pipeline to the world of little girls also has outlets in her office, where she talks with colleagues about what their daughters and younger sisters are wearing.

For parties, the clothes look like miniatures of grown-ups dresses: she showed us two floor-length dresses with tiered skirts, ruffled necklines and cuffs and tie belts. One was bone polyester with dyed-to-match lace trim and navy velvet ribbon sash and the other, navy and white challis prints with self-sash. So far they are expected to be available in 48 of the company's 200 stores throughout the United States. Each is $11.99.

Among older girls, traditional kilts are expected to be as popular as with their mothers and older sisters.

In its August issue, "Seventeen Magazine" predicts kilts will be worn with six entirely different tops, including a dressy, ruffled, high-collared white blouse and dark cotton velveteen blazer accessorized with a ribbon choker, opaque tights, bow-topped patent leather pumps and a leather pouch.

For spectator sport, an oversized wool cardigan sweater and matching muffler, accessorized with wool mittens, ribbed knee-high socks, all-weather shoes and a tweed newsboy cap;

For the classroom, a crew-necked shetland wool sweater and tartan scarf layered over a shirt, accessorized with a leather shoulder bag and ghillie oxfords over dark knee-highs;

For dating, a drawstring blouson lace-trimmed cotton camisole, white tights and ballet slippers and a frilly petticoat.

Other back-to-school predictions from the magazine: the classic look of penny loafers updated with stacked heels; dark suede Mary Janes with rubber soles and leather oxfords with thick, rippled soles and maybe even saddle shoes. Big sweaters in bright Nordic designs and sweater coats are also forecast for the teen-age set.

Day To Honor 'Workingperson'

Labor Day is today. One reference we consulted defined it as "a day set aside for special recognition of the workingman." It is observed on the first Monday of September as a holiday in the United States and Canada.

We suppose, given the nature of the labor market today, any updated definition would refer to working person. Regardless, the holiday honors all of us who work and produce, which is the majority of us.

Labor, as a term, often refers to organized labor, and Labor Day is frequently thought of in terms of gains won by organized labor for working people.

We should not forget, however, that the labor market includes all of us, probably more workers in the unorganized category than organized.

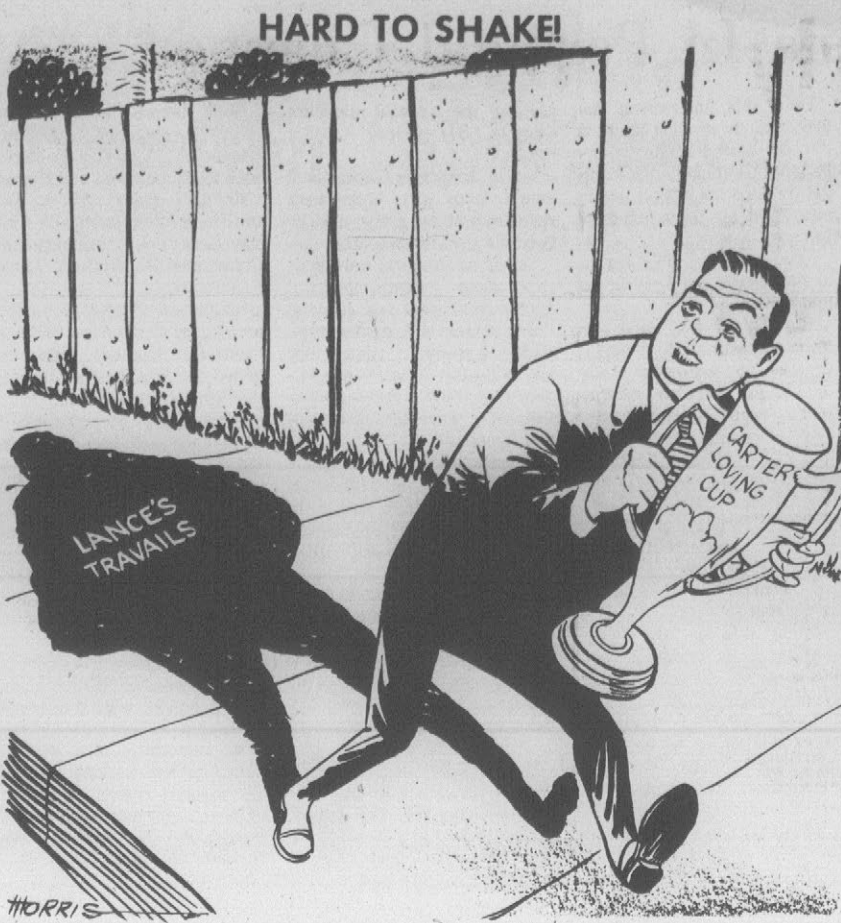

If government really wants to help all these people, its planners will start thinking about what it can do about the problem that is affecting them most these days, and that is the one of rapidly rising living costs — in other words, inflation.

Since government is the greatest cause of inflation it should not be difficult for government to find ways of getting inflation under control.

Right now, it appears, the federal government is on the verge of granting pay increases of seven to eight percent to employees. For those on the lower end of the scale this might be justified, but for an employee in the $30,000 range, this would mean another $2,400 annually — and this is compounded by all the multiple benefits that government offers.

We don't begrudge anybody more income, but the inflation caused by huge federal government spending is hurting the working persons in this nation. Congress had better become aware of this, and Labor Day, 1977 might be a good time for the politicians to start thinking about the average wage earner.

Time Of Day Pricing

By DAVID R. NELSEN Associated Press Writer RALEIGH (AP) — It seems a good bet that time-of-day pricing will eventually be available to most North Carolina electric customers, consumer advocates are now saying.

Time-of-day pricing has been hailed as a conservation tool and a means for saving consumers money.

Under the concept, a higher price is charged for electricity when it is in most demand, generally daytime hours on weekdays. That is called the "peak demand" period. In the short run, consumers could save money by shifting their lifestyles so they use electricity when it is cheapest.

In the long run, everyone would save because power companies would not need to build as many generating plants. New plants are constructed to supply electricity at those times when it is in greatest demand. Lower that demand, and fewer of those $1 billion plants are needed.

How well time-of-day pricing works will depend on what the Utilities Commission orders into effect. In last week's hearing, the Duke Power Co. proposal showed the greatest potential for success.

Duke's plan would have a fairly brief period when electricity would be at the high rate: 1-7 p.m. in the summer and 7 a.m.-noon in the winter. Few customers would be unable to shift most of their electricity use to low-cost periods.

Carolina Power & Light Co., on the other hand, has proposed a 12-hour period of high-priced electricity in the summer, running 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. In winter, it would run 6 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4 p.m.-9 p.m.

"That doesn't amount to a damn thing but a rate increase," one utility official commented.

To take maximum advantage of time-of-day pricing, customers would need to have timers on their water heaters. They should plan meals so cooking is during the off-peak period. And, heaters or air conditioners should be turned off, or at least operate less during peak.

The CP&L peak period would make air conditioners virtually useless because it is generally cool enough to do without them during off-peak hours. Also, families with school-age children would be unable to hold supper until after 10 p.m. And, what housewife wants to start doing laundry after 10 p.m.?

Information supplied by the companies shows that CP&L and Duke take different views of what makes a peak demand period. Duke would charge the high rate for the period when 95 per cent of the total generating capacity is required to supply demand.

CP&L, however, wants to impose the higher charge in the period when 90 per cent of its generating capacity is demanded. Duke officials say if they took the 90 per cent view, they would also have a 12-hour peak period.

The Utilities Commission has the freedom to modify the CP&L proposal before ordering it into effect. If it doesn't, one consumer advocate said, the time-of-day pricing experiment for CP&L is destined to failure.

Lance No Asset To An Integrity Image

Bert Lance may have done nothing illegal in his bank dealings prior to becoming President Carter's budget director, but there have certainly been many questions raised about his bank dealings prior to accepting the position.

Consequently we have strong doubts that he can carry out the duties of his office effectively, nor that he can be an asset to the Carter administration.

Everyone would be better off if he left his position in as dignified way as possible. If the Carter administration wants to maintain its integrity it will start looking for ways to accomplish this.

Pushing Criminal Reforms

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — The foundation is currently being laid for some significant changes in North Carolina's criminal justice system during the next two years.

Some of the changes are so complex and controversial that public acceptance (and consequently endorsement of the General Assembly) will be hard to come by.

But Gov. James B. Hunt and his chief advisors in this area are convinced the changes are necessary and action is moving ahead on several different fronts to devise the strategy to move the issues through the General Assembly.

Hunt knows that the chief strategy must be his solid endorsement of the reform measures; an endorsement which was not given in the General Assembly session this term as the governor had his eyes set on other achievements.

Other Matters With his "Priority" program now pretty much set and moving forward, Gov. Hunt says he can turn attention to other things.

The Legislature set up its primary reading program, the testing and competency program in public schools, reorganization of some state agencies to put emphasis on economic development; and approved the machinery for voter action this fall on the question of a governor seeking a second term, a $300 million road bond issue, and a water bond question.

The Legislature balked, however, at a proposed sweeping change in the criminal justice system, affecting the courts. Merit selection of judges as opposed to popular election went down with no real battle involved and Hunt did not put his clout on the line for the idea. Since, however, he has set up a limited merit system which he hopes will prove the merit of the idea and demonstrate to the public and legislators that it can work.

Presumptive sentencing of convicted criminals also met solid resistance, as did the counterpart notion that the parole system should be converted into a monitoring function rather than one which sets the dates for release of prisoners. The whole idea behind presumptive sentencing is that crimes be classified as to severity and a narrow range of sentencing alternatives be set. A convict would then be assured of a sentence, and a date certain for release.

Lawmakers, in fact, set longer terms for armed robbery and burglary in the recent session. A companion suggestion that public drunkenness and a host of other "victimless" crimes such as bad-check writing, personal gambling, as opposed to gambling for profit, simple drug possession be removed from the criminal sanctions list ran into legislative resistance.

The Push Given such widespread misunderstanding and resistance, can such measures be expected to succeed in a future legislative session?

"That depends," says Gov. Hunt, "on how hard I press for their passage... I can push them through."

The strategy is already at work: Hunt has called on the Bar Association to study presumptive sentencing and come back with recommendations. The understanding is that in exchange for backing of this step by the legal society, merit selection of judges will be pushed for them. In his touting of the state, Hunt is keeping crime high on the priority list.

Corrections Secretary Amos Reed is also joining the fray, and in civic club talks around the state is suggesting something wrong when North Carolina ranks first nationally in per capita prison population; fifth in actual numbers under the gun.

Are Tar Heels worse than others, Reed wonders, and suggests to the contrary that our law may be too harsh; there are many in prison who don't belong there and alternatives should be considered.

All The News That Fits

WASHINGTON — It's very hard to come back from anywhere during the summer and try to catch up on the news. I always depend on my druggist, Harry Dalinsky, to brief me. Dalinsky's store is in Georgetown, so he not only gives me bits and pieces from the press but stuff he's heard from his talkative customers.

"You heard about Vance?" Dalinsky said.

"Yeah, he made a lot of bad loans in Georgia."

"That was Vance," Dalinsky said. "Vance went to the Middle East. He had a lousy trip."

"And that's why the President wasn't talking to him?" I asked.

"The President was talking to Vance — he wasn't talking to Vance. While Vance was talking to the Arabs and the Israelis, it turned out that Lance was accused of a lot of fiddle-faddle with overdrafts and loans in Georgia. So the President thought its best not to speak to him until it was cleared up."

"I thought Sen. Ribicoff cleared Vance of any wrongdoing."

"Vance was never accused of any wrongdoing. Lance was accused of wrongdoing, and Ribicoff did clear him. But that was in July. Then came August and Ribicoff had egg all over his face."

"Then as far as August is concerned, Vance is okay."

"He is except he couldn't get anywhere with China."

"I should think if he couldn't do that, the President would be madder at Vance than he was at Lance."

Dalinsky said patiently, "Lance's banking problems and Vance's China problems are two different things. The President can handle Vance, but since he's a bosom buddy of Lance's he had to keep him at arm's length in case he was tainted with any kind of scandal."

"Okay, I think I got it straight," I said. "What else happened in August of national significance?"

"Chip Carter has moved out of the White House."

"What a pity. Did he get behind in paying for his meals?"

"No, it had something to do with his wife. No one is quite sure what it's all about, but Chip has moved back to Plains with his wife and baby." People magazine said the President was really mad at him.

"What's Chip going to do in Plains?"

"Run the peanut farm," Dalinsky said. "At least that's what the White House said."

"The peanut farm? I thought that was in a blind trust."

"It is. Billy Carter was running it. But he decided to give it up, so Chip is taking it over. Since the President isn't talking to Chip, there won't be any chance of him finding out what's going on down at the farm."

"Was the President talking to Billy?"

"More than he was talking to Vance, but less than he's talking to Vance."

"So then what happened?" I asked.

"There was so much talk about Carter not talking to Vance that the President decided he had to do something about it."

"What did Carter do?"

"He played tennis with Vance, which squelched all the rumors that he thought Vance had done something wrong by being overdrawn on his bank accounts in Calhoun, Georgia."

"So Carter started talking to Vance again?"

"Well, he had to tell him the score, didn't he? Then the comptroller came out with a report saying Vance hadn't done anything criminally wrong with all the loans he made to buy his stock. And the President said on television he was happy the matter was cleared up once and for all, and now the country could

Other Editors Say: Labor Reform

(Rocky Mount)

Last January, Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., introduced a bill entitled "Labor Reform Act of 1977" and designed it so as to assist the AFL-CIO in organizing nonunion workers by requiring bargaining without employe elections and by imposing massive penalties upon employers who might dispute union claims.

That bill, which presumably was to be quickly passed by Congress following the expected passage of common situs picketing legislation, has failed to gain broad-based support, in part because of the unexpected defeat of the odious common situs bill, and in part because it is such an obvious pro-union, anti-management proposal.

In the months since the defeat of common situs, the news media have reported a continuing drive by the AFL-CIO for "labor law reform," organized labor's euphemism for legislation making it easier for them to organize workers who may well wish to remain nonunion.

During these months negotiations between the unions and the Carter administration have been reported, during which labor has sought to develop a proposal which meets its needs but which has enough surface appeal to gain presidential support and, presumably, ultimate enactment.

Well, on July 18 and 19 the AFL-CIO realized its goal. On the 18th Carter issued a message to Congress backing "labor law reform" and Secretary of Labor Marshall issued a statement supporting the President's pitch.

On July 19, Rep. Thompson introduced a bill in the House while another was offered in the Senate. The bills are identical efforts to carry out the negotiated agreement between the AFL-CIO and the administration.

A cursory review of the bills indicates that despite the inclusion of a few provisions seemingly designed merely to disguise the true purpose of the proposals, the bills are a blatant attempt to assist organized labor in organizing nonunion employes who, were given a chance to learn the facts, might prefer to remain nonunion.

And employe rights and employer rights are not only disregarded, they are subverted in the rush to help organized labor in its designs.

Nixon Provides Surprise Finale

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's televised interview series has ended with the former president saying he would have destroyed his White House tapes had he thought they contained criminal conversations. For Watergate buffs that may have to suffice until his memoirs are published.

Nixon also denied having anything to do with the famed 18½-minute tape gap and said "no incident has ever been so blown out of proportion to create an appearance of guilt as this incident."

In a surprising ending, Nixon said he is convinced "there would have been no Watergate" if Martha Mitchell's emotional problems had not kept her husband from paying close attention to the Nixon re-election campaign he was managing.

The interview, fifth of a series begun in May, was shown on some stations Sunday and is scheduled for broadcast by others throughout September. Interviewer David Frost paid Nixon $600,000 plus a share of the profits, and it is reported the former president received around $1 million for his appearances.

C. Robert Zelnick, executive director of the series, said at a media preview that he has not been concerned with the financial arrangements, but he understands Nixon will get 20 per cent of any profits from the show, as he did from the first four.

Nixon volunteered his feelings about the Mitchells, without being prodded by Frost. While appearing to want to get it off his mind, he was hesitant in the actual delivery.

"I'm convinced that if it hadn't been for Martha, and God rest her soul, ... if it hadn't been for Martha, there'd have been no Watergate because John wasn't minding the store," Nixon said. "He was practically out of his mind about Martha in the spring of 1972. He was letting (Jeb) Magruder and all these boys, these kids, these nuts, run this thing."

Mitchell, who managed both successful Nixon presidential campaigns and was U.S. attorney general, is serving an eight-year prison term for taking part in the conspiracy to hide White House involvement in Watergate. His wife, Martha, died last year of cancer.

Nixon said he isn't blaming Watergate on Martha Mitchell. "It might have happened anyway," he said. "Other things might have brought it on."

Frost's first question to Nixon in the 11 days of taping the interviews last spring, was why he didn't burn the tapes that helped bring about his downfall. The question led off the fifth show.

"First, I didn't believe that there was a reason to destroy them," Nixon said. "I didn't" (Continued on page 5)

THE INSIDE REPORT

Political Game Unchanged

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON — A study recommending a federal rail yard for Delaware instead of Massachusetts was consigned to oblivion after the intervention of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., making clear that politics in Jimmy Carter's Washington is played today much as it has been for nearly two centuries.

O'Neill is not only the most powerful member of Congress but a loyal son of Massachusetts intent on federal favors for his state and her sons. The Carter White House is increasingly attentive to O'Neill and other Democratic members of Congress, particularly those with difficult fights for reelection.

Since this is the way business always has been conducted in this town, politics as usual under President Carter is remarkable only in view of his campaign's vows of righteousness. In ways less convulsive than supporting Bert Lance, the President all summer has been quietly shedding layers of campaign sanctimony.

Tip O'Neill has been a major catalyst in the change. Presidential aide Hamilton Jordan's cavalier treatment of the speaker in handing out inaugural tickets is a distant memory of a bygone day. Most notably, O'Neill has won presidential selection of a political crony from Boston to the Federal Election Commission over obviously better qualified candidates and kept Fort Devens operating despite expert recommendations that the old Massachusetts Army base be closed to cut costs.

O'Neill's latest intervention concerns a new heavy maintenance facility for Amtrak in the Northeast corridor. A study prepared by the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) for Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams recommended Wilmington, Del., over competing sites in Washington and Boston.

But O'Neill considered Boston infinitely preferable. "The Speaker made it very, very clear," one federal railway official told us, "that the one thing he wanted was the Amtrak facility located in Boston." Secretary Adams informed the FRA that he was "dissatisfied" with the report, and was widely expected to select the Boston site by Aug. 1.

That has been delayed by persistent efforts of Delaware's three-member congressional delegation. During the week of Aug. 1, Republican Sen. William Roth repeatedly telephoned Adams, but his calls were not returned by the usually congenial Secretary of Transportation. When Roth charged an "arrogant and persistent political coverup," Adams denied political motivation and said no decision had been made.

Nevertheless, that FRA study recommending Wilmington has been kept from members of Congress and is significantly harder to obtain than a top secret national security document. Moreover, there is little doubt — even among Delawareans — that ultimately O'Neill will not be disappointed by the location of the Amtrak rail yards.

The speaker meets less resistance in influencing federal appointments. Nobody but O'Neill's inner circle knows how many officials he has placed in the government this year, but the length of the speaker's arm is measured by one obscure appointment: general counsel of the commodity futures trading commission.

The White House preference had been designated, when the speaker's office telephoned chairman William Bagley with a late entry: John G. Gaine, 34, who worked summers between 1959 and 1965 as a legislative intern for Rep. Edward Boland of Massachusetts, O'Neill's closest pal. Bagley informed (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

FROM LITTLE TO MUCH

Many years ago, when the Coulee Dam was being built, it became necessary to pass a heavy chain through a long pipe laid horizontally through the masonry construction. How was this to be done? The pipe was too small for a man to crawl through and too long for any other means of getting the chain through it.

Finally it was decided to tie a string about the body of a cat and encourage the animal, in a number of different ways, to make the trip through the pipe. This the cat did. After the string was through the pipe, it was easy to draw a piece of small rope, then a larger rope, and finally the chain.

Every skill is the result of beginning with something simple and working onward toward something more complex, just like the string and the chain. From the smaller to the larger is a rule of growth. From weakness to strength, from awkwardness to skill — this is the highway, and it is arduous to follow.

Concert Rise Of N.C. Wage Scales Said Goal

By KEVIN P. MCKENNA
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — This Labor Day finds state officials encouraged by recent gains in the average earnings of North Carolina workers, but many are wondering just how much has changed from Labor Days past.

In July, the latest month for which figures are available, North Carolina passed Mississippi in average hourly manufacturing wages. That moved North Carolina from 50th to 49th in the nation, but the average wage here is even farther behind the national average than in 1976.

North Carolina is the least unionized state in the nation, with only 6.8 per cent of its two million nonagricultural employees represented by organized labor. Union leaders contend wages would be higher if unionization were closer to the national average of 25 per cent.

But state and industry officials attribute the low pay scales to the kinds of industries that have always dominated the state's economy. And they say any attempt to effect a dramatic increase in wages could devastate a large portion of the state's economy.

"Most industries can pass on labor costs by charging higher prices, but we have developed industries — apparel, textiles, furniture — that can't raise their prices to reflect their production costs," said Kenneth E. Flynt, economic adviser to Gov. Jim Hunt.

"The apparel industry is intensely competitive and it's competing with Asia, the Caribbean and other places that have an abundant supply of cheap labor. If they had to pay higher wages to stay here, they would either have to go to reduced production, go offshore or go out of business."

The state's 254,700 textile employees averaged $3.74 an hour in December 1976, and the 72,400 workers in the apparel industry averaged $3.03 an hour.

Those two industries are largely responsible for North Carolina's low standing in average wages, said Tom Broughton, director of the state Division of Economic Development. "The average manufacturing wage is related to the traditional economic base we have," Broughton said. "We're heavy in textiles, and their average manufacturing wage affects the state's."

A study by Capital Associated Industries, a Raleigh-based management-consulting firm, indicates North Carolina's standing would not seem so bleak if other states had a similar "industrial mix."

Citing April 1976 figures, the study concludes that the difference between state and national wage averages would shrink from $1.37 to 56 cents an hour if industries were distributed nationwide as they are here.

Flynt said the Hunt administration goal is to raise the state's hourly wage standing steadily but gradually — up to 46th by 1981. Attempts to suddenly change wage scales or the traditional industrial makeup would do more damage than good, he said.

"We're trying to raise the average wage, but what we need is a smooth transition to increase wages and increase job opportunities," Flynt said. "It's not just a matter of where you want to be. You have to remember where you are."

Wilbur Hobby, president of the state AFL-CIO, says there is no excuse for where North Carolina is.

"I've been in office eight years, and the first time I was elected I campaigned against the incumbent by dwelling on the fact that wages here were about 78 cents an hour behind the national average," Hobby said.

"Well, I've been working night and day ever since then, and now we're $1.49 behind the national average, and we're going further and further behind at a faster and faster rate."

Strictly in terms of dollars and cents, Hobby has an argument. In December 1975, the average North Carolina wage was $3.65 an hour, $1.35 behind the national average. A year later, the average hourly wage was $3.98, but the gap between state and national averages had increased to $1.43.

Computed on a 40-hour week, the most recent figures — showing a difference of $1.49 an hour between the state and nation as a whole — meant a North Carolina worker was earning $59.60 a week less than the national average.

Some argue that the lower cost of living in the South makes the difference in wages between North Carolina and other states irrelevant.

A study by First Chicago Bank reports that after adjusting income figures to reflect the cost of living and taxes in each state, North Carolinians in 1975 had a disposable income higher than residents of such industrialized Northern states as Massachusetts, New York, Wisconsin and Rhode Island.

The cost-of-living advantage south of the Mason-Dixon line could be lost if wages rise rapidly and force producers to raise their prices, some argue.

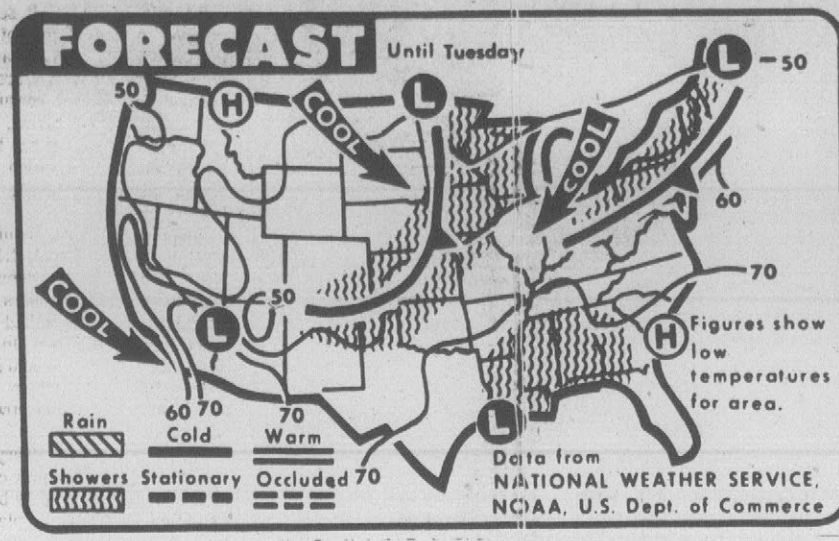

"What happens when we have both increased wages and increased prices?" Flynt said. "Is anyone really any better off? Economists have been asking that question for 100 years."

Dr. Emil Malizia, an economics professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, prepared a report for Gov. Jim Holshouser's administration in 1975 that came to a different conclusion.

Malizia argued that irrespective of the cost of living, North Carolina's wages were still among the lowest in the country. His report, which urged the state to support unionization as a means of improving the economic standing of its citizens, was never implemented.

"The issue comes down to unequal pay for equal work," Malizia said in an interview. "The cost of living may be 5 per cent less here but the earnings gap is three times that large. And I see no evidence that any attention is being given (by the state) to the inadequacy of earnings in North Carolina."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Hurricane Babe was located on the Louisiana coast this morning, bringing rain and showers to the central Gulf coast. Seasonably mild temperatures are expected for most of the country with warmer weather due in the Southeast. (AP Laserphoto Map).

By The Associated Press
A wet Labor Day appears to be in store in many areas of North Carolina.
Periods of rain with some thundershowers are expected today in the mountains and southern Piedmont. There is also a chance of scattered afternoon thundershowers elsewhere in the state.

The showers should spread throughout the state by Tuesday, with a chance of heavy rain in the mountains as a distant side-effect of Hurricane Babe.

The rain expected Sunday in North Carolina never materialized, and warm weather was the rule throughout the state. Charlotte and Goldsboro were the hottest spots with highs of 92.

Highs today and Tuesday should be generally in the 80s under cloudy skies.

Nixon said also that he didn't think any authority could get the tapes out of the White House, a theory shot down by the courts.

"If I had thought that on those tapes — with the possibility, which there always was, that they would come out — that there was conversation that was criminal... I sure as the dickens would have destroyed them."

One of the early post-Watergate conversations in the White House — between Nixon and staff chief H.R. Haldeman — was found to have been erased and the culprit has remained a mystery.

the White House of the new development and was given this reply: we have no objection to anybody the speaker wants. Gaine started work July 31.

Politics as usual is by no means O'Neill's exclusive property. During a group meeting of Congressmen with the President this summer, Republican Rep. William Cohen of Maine asked whether his state's delegation might have the same chance to convince the Pentagon that Loring Air Force Base should be kept open that O'Neill's Massachusetts delegation had with Fort Devens. The President cordially agreed, telling Cohen to call to set up the meeting.

That was less than pleasant news for Democratic Sen. William Hathaway, who might have to run for reelection against Cohen next year. Hathaway telephoned the White House, which quickly took corrective action. The Senator was authorized to say the White House had asked him, not Cohen, to arrange a meeting. When Cohen called the White House to set up the meeting promised him by the President, he experienced the same fate as Sen. Roth and other Republicans: unanswered phone calls, one after another.

There is nothing new or improper in a Democratic administration favoring Democratic Congressmen for federal goodies. It is, however, foreign to the tone of the President's rigidly high-minded campaign, but that may soon be of interest only to purists and perhaps a few naive voters.

Canal Zone Described As A Military Resort

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The American military is using the Panama Canal Zone as a plush resort for top-ranking officers, says Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., who says he's undecided on whether to back a controversial Panama Canal treaty.

"There is hardly a general or an admiral in the service who at one time or another hasn't managed to finagle a short tour of duty in Panama who he can get his family there," Morgan said Saturday during an appearance in Swannanoa.

The Democratic senator toured Panama last December in connection with a secret investigation of Central Intelligence Agency activities. Morgan also visited with Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, Panama's strong arm leader.

"I doubt he (Torrijos) even wants a treaty," Morgan said. "He would rather have a cause than a treaty. He's got to say that he does, because if he doesn't he's got nothing to rattle-rouse his people with."

The treaty would give Panama control of the canal by the year 2000.

Morgan told the Asheville Citizen that he wants to hear more discussion of the treaty before deciding which way to vote, but said the canal's history "is one of the most shameful chapters" in American history.

Morgan appears in the minority of North Carolina's congressional delegation, most of whom already have said they'll vote against the proposal.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has been one of the most vocal opponents of the treaty, and was among three U.S. senators who traveled to the Central American country recently on what was called a fact-finding tour.

Spokesmen for Democratic Reps. Walter B. Jones, L.H. Fountain and Lamar Gudger said in a survey that the three all were opposed to the treaty.

Democratic Reps. Charles Whitley, Ike Andrews, Stephen Neal, Charles Rose and William Hefner also said they opposed the treaty, but some said they still were open to arguments on both sides.

"If I had to vote today, I'd reflect the feelings of my district and they're overwhelmingly against it," said Rose.

Republican Reps. James Martin and James Broyhill also oppose the canal treaty.

Democratic Rep. L. Richardson Preyer said he was withholding judgement until the treaty's effect on national defense is better understood.

The News and Observer of Raleigh polled the congressional delegation on the issue.

Denies Saying Lance Will Be Forced Resign

NEW YORK (AP) — White House aide Stuart Elzenstadt says a statement attributed to him in Time magazine that Bert Lance will be forced out as budget director because of controversy over his banking practices is "a blasphemy" and "an incredible falsehood."

And White House Press Secretary Jody Powell denied a report in the magazine's current issue that President Carter had twice talked the former Georgia banker out of resigning. Time said it based that information on a "well-placed Atlanta businessman who is close to both Lance and the White House."

The newsweekly also said that another Georgian quoted Elzenstadt as telling him, "It's quite obvious Bert won't survive all this."

"I never privately or publicly said anything to anybody that was in any way negative about Bert," Elzenstadt said Sunday. "Bert is not only a close colleague but a personal friend. It's the worst of bad journalism."

Powell said he had "checked with the President and the statement about Bert offering to resign is incorrect. It is flatly and totally untrue."

Lance was reportedly preparing for Senate hearings on his financial activities by sending a top aide to Georgia to comb through the embattled budget director's records.

The aide is A.D. Frazier, who has headed the drive to reorganize the President's Executive Office, according to Robert W. Dietsch, Lance's spokesman in Washington.

Frazier "is looking at everything he has to in order to get ready for the hearings," and is being paid personally by Lance, Dietsch said.

The hearings begin Wednesday before the Governmental Affairs Committee, chaired by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn. The panel held Lance's confirmation hearing last winter.

Graham Mission Visits Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Billy Graham has opened his first mission to a Soviet bloc country, and it's going to be one of his smallest in a long time.

The 58-year-old American evangelist preached to a crowd of 5,000 Sunday at a religious camp 20 miles north of Budapest. About 300 persons heard him Sunday night at the Central Baptist Church of Budapest.

Graham's aides said the crowd of 5,000 probably would be the largest of his weeklong visit to Hungary. Roman Catholicism is the dominant religion of the country, and Graham's visit has not been publicized by the government-controlled media. But the aides said the visit might lead to visits to other Soviet bloc countries.

The evangelist who preached about the evils of "godless Communism" two decades ago avoided East-West politics Sunday and said in one of his sermons he came to Hungary "with an open heart and an open mind." He told his other audience:

"During the past 5 or 10 years my mind has been changing and enlarging to take in the whole world. I have come to realize that the church is the church whatever society it may be in, and the church has both a redemptive and a social responsibility to society."

He said he brought a personal message of good will from President Carter to the Hungarian people.

"He called me just before I left and told me he would be praying for us this week," he said.

Graham spoke in English, and his words were translated simultaneously into Hungarian by one of his associates. His outdoor audience at the religious camp included Baptists and other Protestants from Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Yugoslavia as well as Hungarians.

Suspect Fresh Bombing Wave Find No Cause For Behavior

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard believes the capture of more than 300 pounds of explosive gelignite en route from Dublin to London means that the Irish Republican Army is planning a new bombing campaign in English cities.

Police sources report the IRA's Provisional wing also may be planning to assassinate leading British politicians, including Conservatives urging tougher action against the IRA in Northern Ireland.

Sources close to the Provisionals in Belfast, Northern Ireland's capital, disclosed recently that pressure has been building up to revive the second front in the IRA's guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic.

This pressure, which has been opposed by IRA leaders in Dublin, intensified after the guerrillas' failure to wreck Queen Elizabeth II's Silver Jubilee visit to Northern Ireland last month.

The sources said many young guerrillas also feel something spectacular must be done to counter the propaganda effect of President Carter's recent appeal for peace in Northern Ireland and his warning against clandestine American aid to the guerrillas.

The gelignite was discovered in Dublin last week.

Grief For Elvis Turns Into Gold

MEMPHIS (AP) — T-shirts, posters, bumper stickers, records — Elvis Presley's fans are determined to keep his memory alive and many merchants, happy to help, are turning grief into gold.

"I guess a lot of us, especially around here, took Elvis for granted," said Jim Godown, owner of T-shirts International, which is selling Elvis shirts as fast as they arrive.

"We all expected him to die an old man and all of a sudden, he was gone. I think the overall demand for Elvis souvenirs has naturally come because of the death thing."

Godown's firm had not printed any Elvis shirts before his Aug. 16 death.

Novelty shops are doing as big a business in Elvis momentos as T-shirt stores.

The Fun Shop carried a poster of Presley for a number of years in its regular selection of movie actor stills. Now, anything the store can offer featuring Elvis, someone wants.

"They are buying anything," said M.P. Anderton, whose brother owns the shop. "We can't keep things in stock. All this started when he died and we're selling as soon as we get something in."

Fans who come to Memphis to see where the rock 'n' roll legend lived and was entombed often want more than posters or t-shirts to take home.

They are clipping grass at the Forest Hill Cemetery mausoleum where Presley was entombed Aug. 18, breaking branches from trees that overhang the walls of Graceland mansion and pieces of rock from the wall that surrounds it, and buying copies of his will.

Newspapers, magazines and paperback books featuring Elvis have sold out as fast as they reached the shelves.

A special edition of Elvis' home town newspapers, The Commercial Appeal and Memphis Press-Scimitar, has sold more than one million copies and orders were still being received.

Mrs. Pat Boren of the Memphis Publishing Co. said the company has 30 people working weekdays and about 15 on weekends to process the 30,000 orders a day.

Firemen Lost 1,000 Pounds

ROME, Ga. (AP) — What has 236 legs, puts out fires and weighs 1,000 pounds less than it did eight months ago?

The 118 members of the Fome Fire Department.

Fire Chief Raymond Smith put his department on a diet last January after finding that many of his firefighters had problems associated with high blood pressure.

"Everyone involved in the program is pleased with the results," Smith said Sunday. "Some of the men are even engaged in friendly wagering to see who can reach a certain goal first."

Smith said one fireman lost 48 pounds, while many others have shed between 10 and 40 pounds.

He said the weight loss has made his men better firefighters.

"We are now able to go the 'extra mile' without over-tiring," the chief said.

crime," Jones said. "At the same time, the politicians and citizens are become more concerned about crime, and they want the answers criminologists can't give them."

Under the circumstances, he said, it is not surprising that more conservative ideas about who's to blame for crime are now in vogue. "It's what people want to hear," Jones said.

A national study released this week on "The Criminal Personality" claims that people do not turn to crime because they are insane, come from poor or broken homes, watch too much television or have drug habits.

Rather, the 16-year study of 255 men at a federal mental institution concludes that criminals from all races and backgrounds share patterns of thinking that are usually evident by the age of 4.

Dr. Jack Price of Duke University questioned the study's conclusions.

"In a technical sense, people in mental institutions usually haven't been convicted of anything, so they aren't criminals in the usual sense," Price said. "Anyway, I don't know of any way to pick out a pattern of thinking in a child who is 3 or 4 that will make him a murderer or a burglar as an adult."

Dr. John Humphrey of UNC-Greensboro also found fault with the national survey. He said theories speculating that people turn to crime for biological or genetic reasons are nothing new.

"If you can say that crime, or violence is genetically produced, then you can say that economic inequities in society don't have anything to do with it," he said. "These kinds of studies are picked up pretty quickly by people who want to maintain the status quo."

VACATION HOUSE & TAX DEFERMENT

Among the benefits of being a homeowner are the unique tax advantages available. One of them to be wary of is the provision which allows you to defer paying income tax on any profit made from the sale of your home if you buy a more expensive one within a certain amount of time. It does not apply in all cases.

For example, if you sell a vacation home at a $2,000 profit and promptly buy a much more expensive place, can you defer paying the income tax on the profit? The answer is no!

This tax break is available only when both the house sold and the house purchased serve as your principle residence. A vacation house doesn't qualify.

However, if you owned the dwelling for more than the required time to allow the profit to be taxed as long term capital gains (nine months during calendar year 1977 and one year after that), the $2,000 profit would only be taxed at half the normal rate.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO., 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Kiddy Day At The Open

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — It was kiddy day at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships as two youngsters, pixie Tracy Austin and John McEnroe, knocked off top seeds.

Fourteen-year-old Miss Austin, the big serve and steady strategist behind the pigtailed and pinafore, downed four-seeded Sue Barker of England Sunday, 6-1, 6-4.

Eighteen-year-old McEnroe, in a match that was interrupted when a man was shot in the stands, defeated ninth-seeded Eddie Dibbs of North Miami Beach, Fla., 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

The shooting victim was identified as 33-year-old James Reilly of New York. Police said a bullet that seemed to come from directly overhead had penetrated the man's left thigh. He was taken to a local hospital and was to be released as soon as the object could be removed. No suspect was arrested and police were continuing the investigation.

Miss Austin, the 5-foot-1, 93-pound wonder who startled Wimbledon by making it to the third round, repeatedly trapped the blonde Englishwoman in the corner with her two-fisted cross-court backhands.

"I'm vey happy," the Rolling Hills, Calif. youngster beamed through her braces. "I just tried to keep it away from her forehand. I just played steady to her backhand. I knew she had a great forehand."

Miss Barker, who's been pegged a rising star among the women, particularly after a semifinal appearance at Wimbledon, said only that she hadn't been confident of her shots.

McEnroe, who also made his mark at Wimbledon by attaining the semifinals where he met Jimmy Connors, seemed unruffled by the commotion in the stands soon after he'd started the contest. Dibbs led 1-0 at the time of the incident.

"It didn't seem to have too much to do with the outcome of the match," the youth from nearby Douglaston, N.Y. said. "As soon as I started serving again, the incident seemed to go out of my mind."

In other third-round matches, top seed Bjorn Borg of Sweden dispatched a listless Onny Parun of New Zealand, 6-1, 6-3; while Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed and defending champion, eliminated Zan Guerry of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-1, 6-4.

Chris Evert, the top women's seed, had a good workout with Sweden's Helena Anliot, beating her 6-2, 6-2, and seventh-seeded Billie Jean King fought off Sheila McInerney of Rome, N.Y., 6-1, 2-6, 6-1.

No. 5 Betty Stove of the Netherlands beat Laura Dupont of Matthews, N.C., 7-5, 6-4 and Australia's Kerry Reid defeated Zenda Liess of Daytona Beach, Fla., 7-6, 6-1.

Third seed Brian Gottfried of Lauderhill, Fla., advanced to the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

Dodgers Count Towards Title

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers are counting down ... and it's the Cincinnati Reds they are trying to count out.

"I've never won 20 games, so it's hard to say if that's a goal," Dodgers pitcher Tommy John said Sunday after gaining his 17th victory, hurling Los Angeles to an 8-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. "Things like that and the Cy Young Award are not the most important things right now."

Reds 5, Phillies 2
Dan Drissen complemented Foster's long-ball hitting by driving in three runs with a pair of singles as Cincinnati halted Philadelphia's five-game winning streak. The Reds pounded 16 hits in support of the seven-hit, seven-strikeout pitching of Fred Norman, 14-10.

Cardinals 8, Giants 2
Ken Reitz drove in four runs with three doubles, powering St. Louis over San Francisco. Keith Hernandez also doubled home two St. Louis runs in the eighth.

NL Roundup

"The most important thing is our winning games. We've still got to win 16 more — or get 16 losses from Cincinnati — in order to eliminate the Reds and win this thing."

"This thing" is the National League West title. And the Dodgers rapidly are closing in on that goal with a 10½-game lead over the Reds with less than one month left in the season.

Cincinnati, going after its third consecutive World Series title, kept pace Sunday, riding the bat of George Foster to a 5-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"The main thing is getting a good pitch to hit," said Foster, who has found enough good pitches to lead the major leagues in home runs with 45 and runs batted in with 127.

In other NL games Sunday, the Atlanta Braves defeated the New York Mets 7-5, the Houston Astros downed the Montreal Expos 7-1, the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 8-2 and the Chicago Cubs nipped the San Diego Padres 2-1.

Cubs 2, Padres 1
A pinch-hit single by Jose Cardenal in the eighth inning scored Jerry Morales with the winning run as Chicago edged San Diego, snapping the Padres' five-game winning streak.

Ray Burris, 12-14, got the victory with relief from Bruce Sutter, who earned his 27th save.

Astros 7, Expos 1
Bob Watson belted a grand slam home run and had another run batted in, leading Houston over Montreal. Winner Joe Niekro, 11-5, struck out four and walked none in hurling his seventh complete game in nine starts. Niekro also singled home a run.

Braves 7, Mets 5
Biff Pocoroba homered and drove in three runs, including the tie-breaker, leading Atlanta over New York. After the Mets tied the score with two runs in each of the first two innings against winner Phil Niekro, 14-17, Pocoroba doubled home Willie Montanez in the third inning off reliever Rick Baldwin, 1-2.

The Dodgers used home runs by Dusty Baker, Steve Yeager and Reggie Smith to back John's pitching, completing a three-game sweep of the Pirates.

Gullett, Pattin Wait

Don Gullett and Marty Pattin have learned to play the waiting game to perfection, but they do it for different reasons.

Gullett sits and waits because he is injured. Pattin waits because his manager, Whitey Herzog, wouldn't have it any other way. Sunday, however, wasn't one of those waiting days for either pitcher.

Pattin tossed a five-hitter as the Kansas City Royals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-2 for their 16th victory in the last 19 games. It also was Pattin's seventh straight triumph, but one he waited 12 days to achieve.

AL Roundup

"It's tough going in there after 12 or 14 days rest. You never know how your control is going to be," said Pattin.

However, it was his pride that seemed to be suffering. "Let's face it, I'd like to pitch more," Pattin said. "I still have my pride and it hurts my pride to be used like this."

Pattin, whose shutout was broken up by Don Money's tworun homer in the ninth, was making only his 27th appearance of the season and first start since Aug. 24.

But Herzog has his reasons for keeping Pattin in reserve. "He's amazing," said Herzog. "He can really spot start and he's always better late in the season. Two years ago, he made 15 appearances from the bullpen in September and gave up only two runs. Next year, we're not going to let him suit up until June 1. We might even wait until the All-Star break."

Yankees 4, Twins 0
Gullett, ending a month layoff due to a shoulder injury, did not allow a runner past first base as the Yankees gained their 24th victory in the last 27 games.

Cliff Johnson provided Gullett with all the support he needed, blasting his second career grand slam in the first inning.

Red Sox 8, Rangers 4
Rick Wise retired 13 consecutive batters and Rick Burleson drove in two runs with three hits, including a homer on the first pitch of the game, as Boston remained 4½ games behind the Yankees.

Wise, who entered the game in the third in relief of starter Luis Tiant, collected his 10th victory in 15 decisions. Bill Campbell came on in the eighth and earned his 24th save.

Orioles 7, White Sox 5
Eddie Murray's two-run homer capped a three-run ninth inning rally, allowing Baltimore to remain five games behind the Yankees in the AL East.

Al Bumbry and Rich Dauer singled opening the ninth against reliever Clay Carroll. One out later, Bumbry scored the tie-breaking run as Lee May grounded into a force play, then Murray followed with his 19th homer of the season.

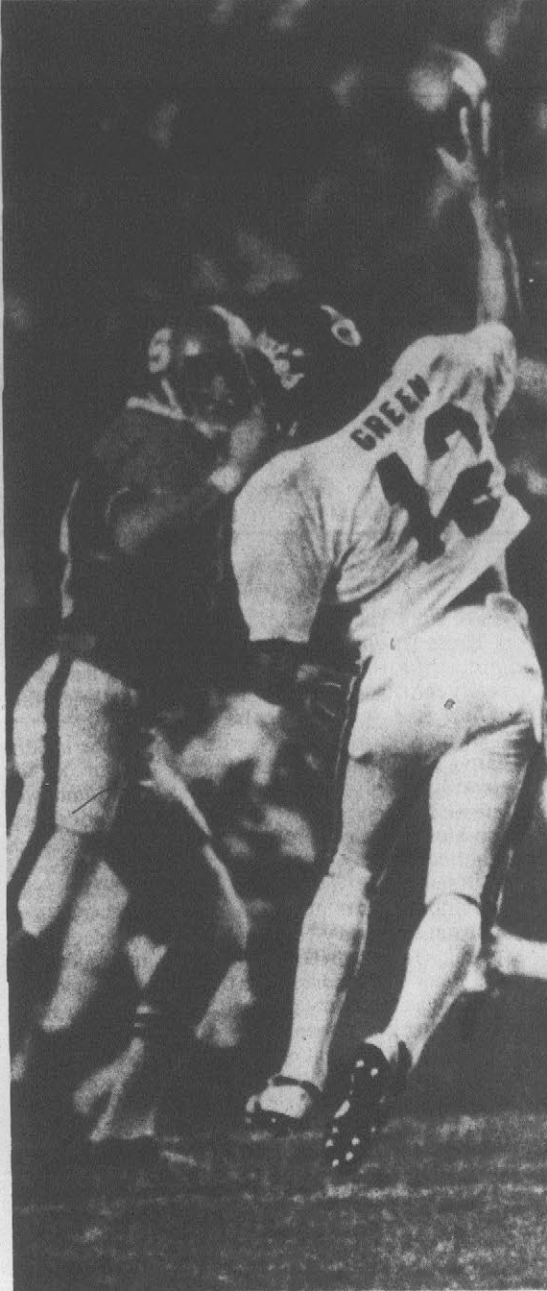

Marlins 7, Blue Jays 2
Steve Braun and Jimmy Sexton hit consecutive homers in the fifth inning, capping a fourhomer outburst against starter Jerry Garvin as Seattle handed Toronto its eighth loss in a row.

Lee Stanton started the home run barrage against Garvin with a two-run shot in the first inning and Ruppert Jones smashed a two-run homer in the third.

Angels 7, Indians 3
Don Baylor blasted a two-run homer and Thad Bosley drove in two runs with two singles as California won for only the second time in its last eight games.

Ken Brett, 12-10, scattered six hits and was the winner although needing relief from Dyar Miller.

A's 7, Tigers 5
Mitchell Page drove in four runs with a pair of home runs and Jerry Tabb hit a solo shot as Oakland defeated Detroit rookie Dave Rozema, 15-6, for the third time this season.

Wadkins: No Change

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — "I'll tip it and go," said Lanny Wadkins. "I'm not going to change my strategy."

The third-round leader in the World Series of Golf never flinched despite a severe threat from the conservatism that has made Hale Irwin the scourge of the American tour.

"If I thought his philosophy was better," Wadkins said of Irwin, "I'd use it. The worst thing in the world I can do is lay up. I'll hit a driver off every tee except 17."

Irwin matched Hubert Green's tournament record with a five-under-par 65 Sunday and moved within one shot of Wadkins, who had a 67-202.

Only four others broke par for three rounds over the 7,180-yard Firestone South monster.

Tom Weiskopf, the midway leader Saturday with Wadkins, and Mark Hayes were a distant third at 207. Hayes shot a 70, Weiskopf 72.

South African Gary Player, with 70-209, and Ray Floyd, 71-209, were the others under par.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, rallying with a 68, and Australian Graham Marsh, with 71, equaled par 210.

Irwin's conservative approach has produced only six bogeys in 126 holes the last two weeks on two of the world's greatest layouts, Pinehurst No. 2 and Firestone South.

The former University of Colorado football star says it is the same style he is using to tame Firestone.

"It's a carryover," he said. "I'm putting the ball in the fairways and playing to the safe side of the hole. I'm eliminating potential big scores. This course is filled with low percentage shots."

South African Cole Gets Buick Open Win

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Bobby Cole has managed to grin and bear it, playing golf for nine years in the shadow of Gary Player on the Pro Golf Association tour in the United States.

But after winning the $100,000 Buick Open with a come-from-behind, five-under-par 67 to finish at 17-under 271 Sunday, the 29-year-old Cole was simply grinning.

"Gary Player has always been the man against whom all South African golfers must measure themselves," Cole said following his first tour victory. "I know Gary, and I think very, very highly of that man."

"This victory today, while it perhaps doesn't yet put me in Gary's class, nevertheless makes me extremely happy," Cole said.

Cole started the final round at 204, two strokes behind third-round leader Peter Oosterhuis. But the Johannesburg native appointed at missing a chance at what would have been his first victory since joining the tour three years ago.

Oosterhuis finished in a tie for third at 15-under 275 with Jeff Mitchell of Lubbock, Texas. Mitchell fired a final-round three-under 69.

Cole's share of the prize money was $20,000 and free use of a new car for a year.

Patriots Continue To Impress

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

The New England Patriots, facing an extremely tough regular season schedule, continue to impress in National Football League exhibition play which has one more weekend to go.

The Pats crushed the Washington Redskins Sunday behind quarterback Steve Grogan's two long touchdown passes, and two touchdowns apiece by running back Andy Johnson and tight end Russ Francis. Grogan, playing only the first half, hit on scoring passes of 55 yards to Francis and 46 yards to rookie Stanley Morgan, and scored on a five-yard run.

It was the Patriots' fourth victory in five exhibition games, while the Redskins suffered their second setback in five games.

In Sunday's other NFL game, Richard Todd guided the New York Jets to their first victory over the New York Giants 10-0 in their exhibition series since 1971.

NFL Roundup

Tonight, Atlanta visits Kansas City. In Saturday night games, New Orleans downed Miami 17-10, Cleveland topped Green Bay 19-14, Houston beat Dallas 23-14, Cincinnati ripped Minnesota 26-7, Oakland routed San Francisco 33-0, and Buffalo beat Tampa Bay 17-6.

The long weekend began with San Diego edging Los Angeles 26-25 Thursday night. On Friday night, it was: St. Louis 23, Chicago 14; Baltimore 21, Detroit 10; Pittsburgh 21, Philadelphia 13, and Denver 27, Seattle 10.

Pat Leahy's 19-yard field goal in the first period and Todd's six-yard toss to Jerome Bark-um, culminating a 78-yard fourth-quarter drive, gave the Jets their victory over the Giants.

The Jets marched toward TD after the Giants' Willie Spencer fumbled on the Jets' 25-yard line. Bruce Harper, a rookie free agent running back from Kutztown State (Pa.) gained most of his 59 yards during the drive as the Jets evened their record at 3-3 and the Giants dropped to 1-4.

Meantime, Miami Coach Don Shula was worried about Bob Griese. The star quarterback left Saturday night's game against New Orleans because of blurred vision, apparently caused by contact lenses which he just began using this season.

Greg Pruitt ran for 126 yards, including a 70-yard touchdown jaunt, in 12 carries and Don Cockroft booted four field goals as Cleveland, 3-2, handed Green Bay its fourth loss in five games.

Don Hardeman scored twice while rushing for 109 yards and Skip Butler kicked three field goals, leading Houston over the Cowboys.

Cincinnati boosted its record to 4-1, beating Minnesota, 3-2, with the help of two interceptions. Rookie Jerry Anderson raced 95 yards for a touchdown with one and Marvin Cobb sped 57 yards with another.

Ken Stabler and Dave Casper combined for two scoring aerials and Oakland picked up 400 yards on offense in crushing San Francisco, which was held to less than 100 yards.

O.J. Simpson collected 127 yards rushing in 12 carries and raced 62 yards for a touchdown after taking a screen pass from Joe Ferguson as Buffalo raised its record to 2-3 and dropped Tampa Bay 1-4.

C'mon, Ref!
East Carolina University head football coach Pat Dye has words with an official after a flag was thrown in the first quarter of Saturday night's game against N. C. State. The penalty was against State, however, and Zack Valentine's interception return for a TD was good. (AP Laserphoto)

Dye Is Speaker

Pat Dye, head football coach at East Carolina University, will be the featured speaker at the Greenville Sports Club luncheon Tuesday at the Ramada Inn.

The luncheon gets underway with a buffet at 12 noon, and the program starts at 12:30 p.m. Memberships for the coming year are $25 each, and will be accepted at the meeting.

The club will meet on the first and third Tuesdays of each month through March, president Tommie Little has announced.

Woody Peeler

After the initial yells and cheers in the East Carolina locker room at Carter Stadium Saturday night, the mood turned solemn.

A ceremony was held, and before it was over, players were weeping openly. They were paying homage to one of their fallen leaders.

"We didn't make a big thing of it in our pre-season preparation," Coach Pat Dye said. "But this game (N.C. State) was dedicated to Rick Bankston."

Bankston was killed last June 28 when his house exploded due to a gas leak. A female companion was also killed, and two others injured. Rick was the defensive line coach of the Pirates.

The emotional scene began with the team prayer, and continued through the presentation of the game ball to Athletic Director Bill Cain, to be placed, in Bankston's memory, in one of the Pirate trophy cases.

The victory, which came with an outstanding goal line stand, and then a game-ending stop just two yards from the goal line, was a fitting memorial to Bankston.

Must Play Better

"I know one thing," Dye said Sunday afternoon as he reflected on the game. "We've got to play a hell of a lot better if we expect to beat Duke. We're going to have to play just as hard and we're going to have to eliminate the mistakes we made."

Those mistakes, fumbles, penalties at crucial points, kept the Pirates from turning the game into a rout early on. After two drives failed to run the score to at least 17-0 and possibly 21-0, the Pirates allowed a late touchdown by State that closed the gap to 14-7. One wonders what State's attitude would have been if it were down 21-0 at the half.

"I haven't had a chance to look at too much of the defensive film yet, but we had to have put on the worse performance of pass defense we've ever done," Dye added.

"And by pass defense, I mean the whole thing. We didn't rush the passer or contain him like we should have. Our linebackers didn't give us the proper coverage underneath, and we didn't cover well deep in the secondary. It was the worst I've seen since I've been here."

More Work This Week

There will be a lot of work on this phase of the game ring the coming week as the Pirates get ready for Duke. "We haven't scratched the surface of how good we can really be," Dye said.

He was also unhappy with the Pirate kicking game. "It was poor to just fair. Our kickoff coverage was terrible. We covered the punts well but we had too many little mistakes. And I expect our kickers to get better. They've done better in practice."

Offensively, Dye said that there were some great individual efforts at times. "Like the way Barry Johnson and Terry Gallaher threw the blocks that sprang (Leander) Green loose on his touchdown run. I saw enough to tell me that we can be good."

Dye was also very pleased with the play of both quarterbacks, Green and Jimmy Southerland. "Their play, and that of Theodore Sutton (fullback) made me proud of them. You know, we started seven people who never had started before on offense."

While Dye was generally unhappy with the defense, he felt the team did well against the rush. "That goal line stand was perhaps the finest thing I've seen here. (Harold) Randolph made a lot of good plays, and (Mike) Brewington was outstanding a couple of times, like when he stopped the screen play for a loss. Then, (Ruffin) McNeill's play at the end was a great one. (Noah) Clark, (Wayne) Poole and (Zack) Valentine all had good games, I believe."

But overall, things have to get better on defense if the Pirates are to keep winning. "A lot of it is coaching, and we'll get to that. We still have a lot of work to do before we are the team that we can be."

Four Skiers Place

WILSON — Four Greenville water skiers won places in the Lake Wilson Ski Tournament held here Saturday and Sunday.

Kristi Overton won first place in the junior girls masters division and picked up the overall trophy for the outstanding female performer.

Jackie Rollins was first in the junior girls expert division, while Becky Overton was second in the womens division and Jack Rollins placed third in the mens division.

Steelers' Fuqua Hurt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A broken thumb has sidelined veteran Pittsburgh Steeler John Fuqua for an indefinite period.

A team spokesman said Sunday that Fuqua fractured his right thumb during a kickoff play in the Steeler's National Football League pre-season game against the Philadelphia Eagles on Friday.

Fuqua isn't the only Steeler running back out because of injury. Laverne Smith has already missed two pre-season games with a sprained toe.

Studio Tour Tradition Witnessing End Today

By MICHAEL PRECKER
Associated Presswriter
NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Kate Jackson memorized the book to get her spid down letter-perfect. Gene Rayburn, the game-show host, was desperate for the $20 a week. And actor Richard Benjamin juggled the numbers to make his audience "ooh and aah."

All got their starts in show business as NBC pages, cheerily escorting visitors through the maze of radio and television studios, soap opera sets, news centers, and technical operations at the network's headquarters in Rockefeller Center. Their fellow alumni include Gregory Peck, Dave Garroway, Captain Kangaroo, Eva Marie Saint and Efram Zimbalist Jr.

Today's tours in the midtown skyscraper mark the end of the 44-year tradition that has become a victim of TV's migration to Hollywood.

The FARM SCENE

By MICHAEL E. REGANS
Asst. Agricultural Extension Agent
Now's the time to think about renovating pastures. Pasture renovation is defined as the introduction of a legume into a grass pasture. The highest quality pasture is ladino clover, a legume, grown in combination with one of the cool season grasses such as tall fescue or orchardgrass. Orchardgrass is adapted to the Mountain and Piedmont areas of North Carolina and tall fescue is generally well adapted statewide except for a few very sandy soils of the Coastal Plains. The interest in legumes has increased because these plants manufacture their own nitrogen and also supply nitrogen for the grass being grown with them. With high nitrogen fertilizer prices and the uncertainty of future nitrogen fertilizer availability, the practice of growing legume-grass pastures has become very popular.

On new land or pasture with a poor stand of the desired grass, a newly prepared seedbed is often the best method of establishment. However, much pasture in the state has good stands of fescue. On these pastures where lime and fertility practices have been maintained, ladino clover can often be added without loss of the existing grass. The methods of adding ladino clover to existing fescue sods are referred to as mechanical and chemical. Both methods consist of reducing competition from the existing fescue so that the introduced clover can become established.

The mechanical method of adding clover to a fescue pasture can be used in the fall for seeding in October or in the spring for seeding in late February or early March. In general, no more fescue seed will be needed and usually 3 to 5 pounds of ladino seed will allow for a good grazing mixture. The first step in the mechanical method is to allow the existing grass to be grazed closely. After testing the soil to determine soil fertility needs, apply lime and fertilizer. As the legume will supply nitrogen, little or no nitrogen is required. Disk or rip heavily to mix lime and fertilizer with soil and smooth seed-bed with lighter equipment if needed. Seed the ladino clover in October or late February to early March being sure to inoculate the ladino seed. Smooth the seed-bed with roller to insure firm seed-soil contact. As seedlings become established, graze as needed to control shading from the fescue.

On many pure grass pastures, disking may not be desirable because the equipment is not available or the land cannot be smoothed and firmed properly. In this situation the chemical method can be used. The steps in the chemical method are the same except that a chemical is used to retard the grass growth, the sod is not disked, and the legume is seeded with a "Zip-seeder."
Light weight calves and cows that produce very little milk are often the result of poor quality pastures. Take a look at calves, cows, and pastures and consider renovating grass pastures.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J98 ♥Q63 ♦A8752 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♥ Dble. Pass
2 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Bid three spades. By first doubling and then bidding his own suit, partner has shown a good hand with at least a five-card suit. Far from being broke, you have a very useful hand for partner with three-card spade support headed by an honor, an ace and a ruffing value—and that discounts your queen of hearts, which might be another asset. You owe partner another bid.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q62 ♥A1093 ♦AJ94 ♣A10
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Even though your intermediate cards make you hand the equivalent of a no trump opening, a penalty double would be affordable only if you are prepared to have your wallet lightened. If your left-hand opponent happens to have the balance of the missing high cards, instead of partner, a double could have drastic consequences. On a close decision like this, a discreet pass is the better part of valor.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ62 ♥AJ95 ♦KQ87 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
Pass 1 ♦ ?
What action do you take?

A.—You could afford to double if you were sure that partner would respond in a major suit. Unfortunately, in the real world he always seems to bid clubs and that would leave you in a most awkward position. It is more practical to make a trap pass to see how the auction develops.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A95 ♥KJ98 ♦QJ104 ♣83
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?

A.—It is close whether you should double for takeout or pass. We would certainly enter the auction if we were not vulnerable. However, at this vulnerability, we are inclined to be more cautious.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K10763 ♥8 ♦KQ1082 ♣A7
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A.—Some action is clearly indicated, but there is not much to choose between alternatives—you could either double or overcall. We slightly prefer the overcall, and we would choose to bid three diamonds, not two spades. We intend to show both our suits, and should the opponents persevere in hearts, we will have a comfortable three spade rebid. If we bid spades first, we would be forced to show our diamonds at the four-level.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ95 ♥AJ ♦AQJ6 ♣KQ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
What action do you take?
A.—Pass. Partner's response is a specialized bid that shows good trump support and denies first- or second-round control in any side suit. Therefore, slam has to be a bad bet. You have a certain club loser and, at best, you will need finesses in both red suits for twelve tricks.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK852 ♥AJ ♦AQ7 ♣KQ8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 NT Pass 4 NT Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's bid is not asking but a quantitative raise in no trump. Since you have 23 points and a five-card suit, you are at the top of your range and should accept. Therefore, we would not fault you if you chose to bid six no trump. However, the hand might play better in a suit, so our choice would be six spades to show our five-card suit and allow partner the option of picking the slam.

Q.8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K10874 ♥85 ♦K93 ♣752
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Dble. 1 ♣ Dble.
Pass Pass 2 ♣ Pass
What action do you take?
A.—Two spades. Partner made a takeout double of one club and then passed one spade doubled for penalties, so there is good reason to believe that he has some sort of holding in spades. Therefore, we would correct to our long suit, not because we suspect East of some chicanery, but because the hand should be easier to handle with our long suit as trumps, instead of partner's.

COME GROW WITH US

Your flair for dealing with people and your self-starter abilities can pave the way to management opportunities and a remarkable salary in one of America's largest and most dynamic growth industries.

We need a person who relates well to all people, a college graduate or with a strong successful sales or business background. He must take pride in his professionalism, realize that better salaries are a direct result of better work.

We have a total training program, so are more interested in work habits and character than in experience in our particular field. To the right person we can offer a salary of up to $600 per month while training. Last year our sales force averaged $15,125 per person.

A Tumor Is Not Always Cancerous

These are some of the questions patients ask about tumors.

What is a tumor?
A tumor is an abnormal growth of tissue cells. It can be found on the mucous membrane lining of the mouth, on the skin, in the intestinal tract, and in every organ of the body. The technical name for a tumor is "neoplasm," which means "new growth."

Is a tumor always a cancer?
No, it is not. This must be emphasized because so many people are terrified when they hear the word "tumor." Tumors are divided into two major classifications. The first, a benign tumor, is a harmless, noncancerous, peaceful growth which does not invade, harm or destroy its neighboring tissue.

The second, a malignant tumor (cancerous), is one whose cells do invade and destroy its neighboring tissues.

Can noncancerous tumors ever become cancerous?

Only occasionally does a benign tumor undergo malignant changes. All tumors are kept under constant observation by physicians. If a tumor assumes any new or unusual characteristics, or seems to change in appearance, or begin to bleed, surgical removal is often suggested.

Some benign tumors may become so large that they press on surrounding organs. The symptoms caused by this pressure do not indicate that the tumor has undergone cancerous change. For example, a benign fibroid tumor of the womb may, by its size, press on the bladder or on the large intestine. Even though this tumor is benign, surgeons may prefer to remove it, after careful deliberation, in order to relieve the symptoms. Are there other subdivisions of benign, noncancerous tumors?

Both benign (noncancerous) and malignant (cancerous) are subdivided and classified according to the tissue where the tumor arises. "Neuroma" originates in the nerve cells. "Myoma" starts in the muscle. "Osteoma" takes place in bone tissue. These happen to be three of the many benign tumors. Malignant tumors have their classifications, too, depending on the site of origin. They are known as "sarcoma" and "carcinoma." Attached to these names may be the added term signifying the tissue of origin.

Are all tumors biopsied?
A biopsy simply means the removal of a small piece of tissue from a tumor, benign or cancerous. It is then prepared for microscopic study. In this way, its exact character is

Mystery In Shark Teeth

CRUMPLER, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old mystery remains unsolved here in the northwestern North Carolina mountains, where sharks' teeth between five million to 22 million determined, and the choice of treatment is decided. Here, too, it must be emphasized that the mere taking of a biopsy specimen does not in itself mean that a tumor is cancerous. It is the doctor's way of making sure of the exact nature of the growth.

years old surfaced one day near a tobacco field.

"I didn't know what they was," says Booker Howell, now 84, who was shoveling dirt on his Ashe County farm. "I never seen a thing like them. I thought they looked sort of strange so I picked them up and put them in my pocket. And they stayed around here maybe a year."

The teeth were passed to his granddaughter, and eventually went to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Experts there identified them as relics from the Miocene Epoch, a time period which spanned 17 million years and ended 5 million years ago.

The authorities said in 1967 that they couldn't explain how the fossils got into the mountainous area.

Walt Wheeler of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill said the area once was covered by ancient seas, "but not in periods as geologically young as the Miocene — it's just yesterday, geologically speaking."

Another local geologist, Dr. Fred Webb of Appalachian

State University in Boone agreed, saying only a remote possibility existed of Miocene seas in the area.

Wheeler and Webb say the teeth probably were brought by Indians, who used the teeth as jewelry. But, even the geologists are not sure.

Sponsor Films On Childbirth

The Greenville Childbirth Educators will sponsor three films to be shown Thursday, Sept. 15, at 7:30 p.m.

The films are: "The Story of Eric," "Birth Without Violence," and "The First Few Weeks of Life."

The films will be shown at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital conference room.

The public is invited, free of charge.

Childbirth classes in the Lamaze technique are available.
