

County Orders School Bd. Merger Study

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners yesterday afternoon named a committee to study and plan for the merger of the Pitt County and Greenville city school systems.

There was no discussion, either before or after Gaskins named County Manager Reginald Gray and County Attorney W. W. Speight to the study committee.

However following the afternoon session, Gaskins said he felt a merger of the two school systems would be welcomed by many people. In addition to the merger committee, Gaskins named Gray, Speight, county planner Larry Hurlocker and Health Department sanitarian Willie Pate to a committee to study and plan for the implementation of a solid waste disposal system using 40-cubic yard containers located at various points throughout the county.

In other action yesterday afternoon, Commissioners gave the go ahead to a plan to franchise independent solid waste collectors now operating in the county.

According to a schedule presented yesterday, haulers will meet with officials September 15 to indicate their interest in securing a franchise. Following that meeting, the county will be divided into districts to be served by the haulers, and on October 3, the Board of Commissioners will meet to give tentative approval to the franchise agreement and tentatively adopt an ordinance to regulate the program.

The schedule then calls for the assignment of districts to the haulers prior to a November 16 public hearing on the plan before final adoption of the program by Commissioners on November 28.

Under the proposed sequence of events, the franchise system would go into effect January 1, with residents paying a set fee to the contractors if they wish their solid waste picked up at their home.

The 40-cubic yard container program, when instituted, could be used by persons not wishing to have their waste picked up.

Commissioners yesterday also approved the hiring of a full-time attorney for the Department of Social Services, and appropriated $50,000 to fund demolition work at the old hospital building.

Under the demolition project, walls and other items at the old medical facility would be taken out before bids are taken to remodel the building for county office use.

27 Nations To Be Represented

Treaty-Signing Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Panamanian head of government Omar Torrijos will sign the Panama Canal treaty tonight, celebrating the finale of a 13-year negotiation in a ceremony witnessed by 19 chiefs of state.

The historic moment also was to be televised to audiences in the United States and most of Latin America. Representatives of 27 nations were on hand for the signing.

The Organization of American States, host for the occasion, has been the scene of many anti-American confrontations in the past. Now it is the forum for a rare display of hemispheric unity.

The treaty has won much more acclaim in Latin America than it has in the U.S. Senate, which could render the festivities an empty exercise by failing to ratify the treaty by the requisite two-thirds majority.

U.S. officials believe Senate defeat of the treaty would trigger guerrilla warfare and mob violence in the Canal Zone.

The treaty calls for phasing out U.S. control over the canal by the year 2000.

Panama then would assume full operational control with the United States reserving the permanent right to intervene militarily against any threat to the canal.

But many Americans retain a strong emotional attachment to the canal and wonder whether Panama, with a long record of political instability, could be trusted to run it.

Carter has been holding separate meetings with the visiting dignitaries, taking advantage of their presence to push for his favorite foreign policy themes: human rights, nuclear nonproliferation and cutbacks in weapons purchases.

Carter is hopeful that the bipartisan flavor of tonight's activities will help in his struggle to win public acceptance for his canal strategy.

Senate Campaign Begun By Hodges

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Luther H. Hodges Jr. announced here this morning that he is a candidate for the United States Senate.

Making the announcement at a breakfast meeting on the East Carolina University campus, Hodges said he would provide an effective, positive presence for North Carolina in Washington.

The announcement here began a day-long barnstorming tour of the state including stops at Raleigh-Durham, Eden (Hodges' birthplace), Asheville and Charlotte.

Hodges said he was "very, very proud," to "start our journey here at the capital of Eastern North Carolina," adding that, "the future of North Carolina lies here in Eastern North Carolina."

The candidate said, "I am no longer testing the waters. I am running because we need another effective Senator in Washington to work with Robert Morgan."

"I want to stand for North Carolina's well-being. I also want to stand for its heart. I run to present our people leadership free from fear and obstruction."

Hodges, 40, is the son of the late Luther H. Hodges who was governor of North Carolina from 1953 through 1960 and U.S. Commerce secretary under President John F. Kennedy.

Hodges attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and received his masters degree in business administration from Harvard University in 1961 before joining the faculty of the UNC School of Business Administration.

After one year on the UNC faculty, Hodges began his career with North Carolina National Bank. He became chairman of the board of NNCB — the largest financial institution in North Carolina and in the Southeast — in 1974 at the age of 37. He resigned as chairman June 30, to begin his Senatorial campaign.

In announcing his candidacy, Hodges said "I take this step because I feel my training and my experience in the economic and civic life of this state equip me to make a real contribution to North Carolina, and a difference in Washington."

"My desire to serve," he said, "is based on a simple premise: a deep love for North Carolina."

A Democrat, Hodges said that incumbent Republican Sen. Jesse Helms is "out of touch and out of tune with the concerns of modern-day North Carolina."

Hodges said, "who we have in the Senate, and what kind of leadership is offered in Washington, affects each and every one of us directly."

"The Senate is not a shelf," he continued. "Nor is it a soapbox. It is the means by which the people of North Carolina have a voice...a presence...a force in policy, in issues, in finding solutions, and in addressing the future positively."

"If we're to have a positive

Schedule Hearing On School Merger

By KEITH MILLS Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education voted yesterday to hold a special meeting following its October regular session for the purpose of hearing county residents express their feelings concerning the August 2 adopted resolution calling for the merger of Ayden and Grifton Middle schools.

Russell Houston III, a Grifton attorney, addressed the board and asked that the meeting be held at night to provide parents with school-aged children with an opportunity to attend and express their sentiments concerning the merger.

Since its regular session meets in the afternoon, the board agreed to reconvene at 7:30 p.m. in Ayden-Grifton High School for the purpose of holding a public hearing in the matter.

During the August 2 meeting, the board voted unanimously to build a consolidated middle school serving the Ayden and Grifton communities at the site of Ayden-Grifton High School.

At that time, Mrs. Janet Haseley of Grifton said the study on which the decision was based failed to consider the question of whether or not the Grifton population would decline in the future.

Mrs. Haseley said new industry, new housing and new families would increase the Grifton population.

Site Work Progressing On Southside Housing Project, Says Laney

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer

Site work is progressing at the new housing project location in Southside in preparation for the development of 111 units, according to Joe Laney, executive director of the Housing Authority.

Laney informed Housing commissioners Monday night that the site, located off Evans Street south of 16th Street, has been grubbed and cleared and contractors have already started setting up pads for the housing units.

In addition, the street that will divide the site has been laid out, Laney reported.

The director, who supplied the commissioners with a site plan diagram of the new development, said it appears now that only 1,000 cubic yards of "bad soil" will have to be removed from the site in contrast to a much higher estimate offered earlier by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ralph Hall, who will serve as clerk-of-the-works for the new project, is on the job now, Laney mentioned. He also reminded the commissioners that the project has been referred to as Southside but they might want to be thinking of a possible name for the development.

In other business last night, the commissioners approved the budget for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1978 and also approved a final amendment to the current budget for the fiscal year ending on Sept. 30, 1977.

The amendment, according to

J. C. Lamm, assistant director, was necessary in order to balance the rental income figures, which were higher than anticipated for the current year, with utility costs, which were also higher than expected. The excess from the rental income was applied to the utility costs to balance the figures, it was explained.

Commissioners voted to charge off 20 uncollected tenant accounts totaling approximately $1,100. The uncollected accounts, which amounted to only a fraction of the overall rental receipts of the Authority, were some $500 less than last year, Lamm said.

Laney reviewed with the board members two proposals that have been received for Section Eight bond underwriting services involving the proposed units for the elderly in Greenville. He said that the proposals were received from Johnathan Lee Peeler Inc. of Durham and Interstate Securities of Charlotte.

Commissioners agreed not to take any action on the financing proposals at this time since the working drawings on the new units have not been completed. Laney said that the possibility still exists that the Authority may be able to obtain conventional financing for the Section Eight housing and eliminate the underwriting costs that would be involved in the bond proposal.

Laney told commissioners that the Greensboro office of HUD had asked the Authority to provide the board members with a review of the Section Eight existing housing program in the event the city might be interested in participating in the program.

In the past, he explained, most of the Section Eight emphasis had been placed on new construction as a means of providing low income housing. Under the program, however, housing may also be provided through existing and substantially rehabilitated housing.

Laney said that because of the low market rents involved in the existing housing program and in view of the low vacancy rate in Greenville, it is not anticipated that there will be broad interest in the program.

The commissioners indicated that they would like to study the existing housing program before taking any action.

A meeting with the architect for the Southside project was set for the end of this month to review and select brick for the new units.

Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, reported that only one vacancy existed in the units operated by the Authority at the end of August and that unit is now occupied.

Average rents in the various projects included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook) $55.28; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park) $60.51; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood) $63.53; N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood) $60.92; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown) $71.03. Overall average was $62.51, she said.

The housing staff completed applications for continued occupancy during the month, she reported.

"LITTLE CHANCE"

I ordered three countertop dishwashing machines from Madison House in Miami, Fla. Nov. 10, 1976, responding to an ad in Family Weekly, your newspaper's Sunday supplement. I sent a cashier's check for $100.14, hoping to get the machines before Christmas for use as gifts. I kept getting notes about delays in shipping, so I finally sent a letter May 10, 1977, asking for a full refund. I received no answer from this. Mrs. D. R.

Hotline knew that Madison House was part of a mail order firm best known as Greenland Studios Inc. We published an item last Mar. 2, saying that the group of companies, which includes Greenland Studios Inc., Madison House, Improvement Books, Health House, and Palm Company, had filed a Chapter 11 declaring bankruptcy Dec. 27, 1976. However, we quoted a company representative as saying that the "company is continuing to operate in hopes of being able to resolve its problems."

Orders sent in after Dec. 27 would go in fine, the spokesman, a Mrs. Angelo, said. So when your request came in in August, we decided to inquire once again. We wrote to the company and sent a copy to the Consumer Services Department of Family Weekly. We haven't heard from the company, but have received a call from Mary Ayres of Family Weekly. She said the Greenland Studios group is now completely out of business. She said Family Weekly was as surprised as anybody and, indeed, lost thousands owed for advertising.

She said Family Weekly now has a petition in the courts in Florida to have any funds that may be available once the stock is liquidated divided among customers first. "Our company and all the others can write off the loss," she said, "but it's harder on individuals like Mrs. R., who's out $100."

She said she doubts if there's much hope of recovering a very large portion of the money lost. She promised to call you and tell you personally the same facts she gave us. She also promised to send any further information learned about the situation to you and to us. We'll pass along anything else we get to our readers, as we know from past calls that this was a much-used mail order firm in this area.

Two Explosions Shatter Washington's Quiet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two explosions, one on the grounds of the White House Ellipse and another at the downtown office of the Soviet airline Aeroflot, shattered the pre-dawn quiet in Washington today.

A bomb planted at an alley entrance tore apart a wall in the Aeroflot building shortly after 2:30 a.m. Police said no one was injured.

About 20 minutes later, another explosion was heard. It took police more than an hour of intense searching to track it down to an area across the street and south of the White House.

Following that explosion, a security guard patrolling the White House grounds said, "We heard it, but we don't know where it is."

Sixty minutes later, following fruitless and frenzied searches of nearby office buildings, police found evidence of the explosion at a set of flower pots next to the Ellipse.

Ten police cars — their headlights carving a path of light into the darkness — were sent sweeping across the Ellipse, looking for evidence.

Police Inspector Raymond J. Remick said several news organizations received calls from an organization claiming responsibility for the blasts. He said police were investigating the possibility of involvement by a "Cuban group," but he did not elaborate.

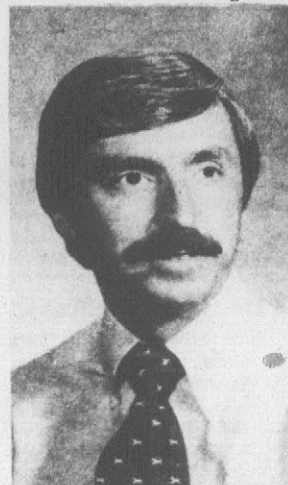

As one explosion sounded, and then the other, security was heavy at the White House.

The area was illuminated by security floodlights. A police helicopter hovered overhead. Security officers scurried into nearby government buildings, and police drove down alleys looking for a hint of the second explosion or the bombers.

The damage was to concrete flower pots on a triangle near the Ellipse gathering area where sightseers begin their tours of the White House and where the national Christmas tree is placed each December. President Carter has played softball on the knoll.

The six-story Aeroflot building, where police said damage was restricted to broken windows, is five blocks from the White House.

GLENN WILLINGHAM

Willingham Bids For Councilman

T. Glenn Willingham announced today that he is entering the race for one of the six City Council seats available in the Oct. 11 municipal elections.

Willingham, a Burlington native, is currently external vice president of the Greenville Jaycees. He has served on the chapter's board of directors for the past three years.

The candidate has resided in Greenville since entering East Carolina University in 1966. Following graduation, he began his employment with the civil service as an administrative technician for the Department of the Army here and currently serves in that post. He is an officer in the US Army Reserve.

Willingham was selected as an Outstanding Young Man of America for 1977 in recognition of outstanding professional achievement, leadership ability and service to the community.

He and his wife, the former Peggy Holland, reside in Westhaven subdivision and have no children.

"My interest within the city of Greenville is complete and I feel Greenville is on its way to becoming one of the central cities of North Carolina," he said in announcing his candidacy.

"With this growth, the economic development of Greenville is of utmost importance," Willingham added. "This growth should not be too fast and should be done in a conservative manner with the best interest of the entire community as its foundation."

He said that the "City Council is a viable force in the development of Greenville and I want to be a part of this force."

Utilities Arrange For Energy Audit

Greenville Utilities has arranged for a team of energy specialists from N.C. State University to conduct an energy audit of the Utilities' entire operations, according to Reese Helms, Energy Conservation Manager. The energy audit is scheduled to be conducted on Wednesday, September 14, and will include an inspection of the main plant, the Waste Treatment Plant, and the administrative building facilities.

The purpose of the audit is to identify potential energy conservation opportunities which can be turned into real and substantial energy savings.

The energy audit represents the second phase of a comprehensive energy management program which Greenville Utilities is currently implementing. When the audit has been completed and areas for potential energy savings have been identified, the next phase of the energy program will begin — setting target goals for reduced energy consumption and implementing a step-by-step plan to achieve these goals.

All Utilities employees will be involved in the energy management program. The first phase of the program, in which all Utilities personnel are participating in energy conservation training sessions, has been substantially completed.

In addition to helping Greenville Utilities pinpoint specific ways to save energy and thus reduce operating costs, the energy audit team will instruct a group of Utilities personnel on how to perform an energy audit.

"We hope to be in a better position to assist our commercial and industrial customers in establishing their own energy management programs from the experience we gain and the instruction we receive from the N.C. State Energy Audit Team," Helms said.

The five individuals who comprise the energy audit team are all members of the Industrial Extension Service of the N.C. State School of Engineering.

Dr. H. M. Eckerlin, team leader, has over 15 years experience in thermodynamic design of special purpose heat recovery systems. Prior to joining NCSU he was senior research engineer at Corning Glass Works.

Other team members include Albert S. Boyers, Professional Engineer, who has had a varied experience in industry and has taught at the University of Michigan prior to joining NCSU; Moustafa Karmous, Mechanical Engineer, with over 20 years experience in industry and education; Stuart Lindsey, Mechanical Engineer, currently pursuing a Masters Degree at N.C. State; and Gerald Percifield, a licensed architect whose experience includes work with the North Carolina Energy Division of the Department of Commerce, and as an architectural planner for the Peace Corps.

The Energy Conservation and Management Office of Greenville Utilities plans to utilize the services of the team of energy specialists in still another way.

During the month of October, the N.C. State energy team, in conjunction with Greenville Utilities, will present a workshop on how to establish an energy management program including how to conduct an energy audit of a business facility.

The workshop will be open to all commercial and industrial Utilities customers. Details about the workshop will be announced later this month.

"We are pleased to have the opportunity to work with the N.C. State team of energy specialists. Their services will be a significant boost to the Utilities' community energy management programs," Helms stated.

Gartman Taking UF Drive Role

William T. (Ted) Gartman Jr. has accepted the chairmanship of the Goal Busters Division of this year's Pitt County United Fund.

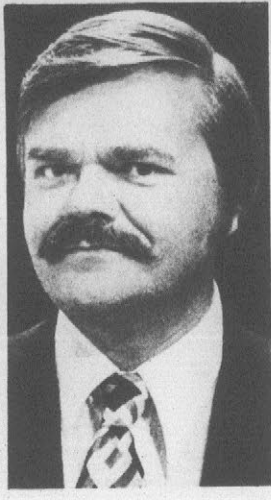

"Ted has been a community, civic and church leader," UF campaign chairman Jerry Powell said in announcing Gartman as a member of the campaign staff, "and his leadership ability should enable his division to reach its fund goal for 1977-78."

Gartman, currently an associate professor of Social Work at East Carolina University, is a former social worker and director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services.

A Portsmouth, Va. native, he received his B.S. and M.A. degrees at East Carolina University and earned the M.S.S.W. degree at Virginia Commonwealth University.

A past recipient of the Greenville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award, Gartman is current president of the Boys' Club of Pitt County.

Gartman and his wife, Martha, are the parents of two children and reside at 2106 Charles Street. The family at-

Commenting on the United Fund, the division chairman asserted, "I believe that a person becomes a member of the community when he supports, with his time and money, the human service activities of the community."

He added, "The people I will be working with in the United Fund campaign are members of and supporters of our community, Pitt County, and I look forward to working with them."

Reese Helms Will Speak

Reese Helms, Manager of Greenville Utilities' Office of Energy Conservation and Management, will speak to the members of the Greenville Chapter of the National Electrical Contractors Association on Thursday, September 8, at 7:00 p.m. at Parker's Barbecue.

The purpose of the presentation is to inform the Association members of the activities and programs which the Energy Conservation Office will undertake, and to answer questions about the Energy Conservation Office, its goals, and the services to the community that it will offer.

According to Helms, the Office of Energy Conservation and Management welcomes the opportunity to meet with various clubs, organizations, and civic groups in the community.

"The task of solving our nation's long-term energy problems is possible only with the support and active participation of our professional associations, civic organizations, and other community leaders. The best and most workable solutions to our energy problems will come from the local level, not from federal mandates," Helms stated.

More Variety For Necklaces

NEW YORK (UPI) — Necklaces for the coming fashion season are more, not less.

Monet jewelers, wrapping up the highlights, said the variety of necklaces never has been greater. They're soft or structured, long or short. There are classic collars in both burnished and textured designs, slim and sleek chains with unusual center motifs, and plenty of pendants for the high-up and cowed necklines on the fall scene.

N.C. Fisheries Industry Booms

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina' commercial fishing has mushroomed into a $27 million industry in the last 10 years.

Inflation and higher volumes of dinner table-bound catches have caused the dockside value of Tar Heel fisheries to almost triple in the last decade.

Mike Street, chief of research and development for the North Carolina Fisheries Division research and development, noted that the value of commercial fish has jumped from $9.5 million in 1965 to $27.4 million in 1976.

Catches bound for fish meal processing and other industrial purposes still account for a large segment of the industry, but Street said edible finfish landings now surpass industrial species.

Street gave an overview of various seafood industries and their average wholesale prices.

Shrimp has been the most valuable seafood catch in North Carolina since 1966. Landings in 1976 were above average, and strong demand for brown shrimp drove prices to a record average of $1.23 per pound.

The severe 1977 winter cut down on white and pink shrimp catches, but brown shrimp in the southern coastal area was above average in abundance.

Oyster figures are down, but state officials say that may be due to fishermen avoiding the statistics program by selling direct to the public. Pamlico Sound production is increasing.

Blue crab landings have declined from 1970 levels, but demand has held the price at 40 to 50 cent a pound during spring, 1976.

Flounder, croaker, spot and gray trout catches are near or above record levels. Flounder is considered the state's second most important edible seafood catch.

However, flounder fishermen complain that fluctuating prices force them to halt activities for short periods. The Fisheries Division is currently investigating marketing practices at inshore and offshore flounder fisheries.

Menhaden, an industrial variety, boasts the largest volume of any species. However, catches have declined by two-thirds from 1958-1961 peaks. Overfishing has been blamed for the downturn.

Kmart CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

Designer Turns To Home Field

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The pretty designer with the parrot-green hair, Zandra Rhodes of London, whose dress fashions include the chains, safety pins, holes and tears of the street styles known as "punk" fashions, is taking a more conservative approach in designing home fashions for Americans.

"America has turned the home furnishings market into a fashion industry, a moving market," she says. "Americans care terribly how their homes look and they are proud of every room. In Europe people don't invite you to see their bedrooms or bathrooms as they do in America."

Although "the sky is the limit" in American home fashion, she says, the bath rugs she has designed are conservative, considering her reputation. But she points out she has always seemed "more vivacious in the media" than she really is.

Only her little "squiggle," a worm-like motif, shows up as the motif on the rug. The squiggle, which has become more or less a trademark, "works its way into many things and more or less takes over," she says.

Zandra's street fashions and her line of topsless nightgowns and slips are widely known. Her fashion inspiration has come from many sources. One dress, sunbursts on a red background, is based on a trip to Mexico; a beautiful green accordion-pleated silk chiffon is the color of an early morning landscape. She isn't sure what her summer trip to Utah will provide but she was taking her sketch pad with her.

"I trained as a textile designer at the Royal College of Art in London, but in the '60s all the factories considered my work too extreme and too personal. I decided to set up my own print works and for two years I sold my work to dress designers. I didn't like what they were doing with them so I began to make my own dresses."

Her success was built on personal initiative with "some American backing," she says. Her day began at 5 a.m. and she had one operator helping her do everything. Now she has 30 people working for her and has three shops in England.

"After getting a lot of publicity about my dresses, I can get back to do what I was trained to do in the home fields, such as sheets, and the rugs for Regal."

Jaycettes Begin Candy Sale

The Greenville Jaycettes launched its annual candy sale this week to benefit the crippled and handicapped in Pitt County.

They will be selling caramel creamers at $1.00 per bag door-to-door and at various stores and locations.

Proceeds will fund projects such as purchasing clothes, braces, crutches and orthopedic shoes for those in need and funding a Christmas party for crippled and handicapped children in the county.

Candy sale co-chairmen are Susie Clark and Donna Hatcher.

Homemade Baby Food Gets An Okay

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you decide to feed your baby home-prepared food instead of the commercial variety, are you taking a chance?

The issue has been subject to some back and forth for years, but now a major baby food manufacturer has provided some clues to the safety and health questions as the result of an unusual legal settlement.

In short the verdict is that homemade baby food can be "completely acceptable."

The case began after consumer groups in California objected to a "Dear Mother" letter Baker Beech-Nut Corp. sent to about 760,000 persons in December, 1975. The letter allegedly contained disparaging remarks about homemade baby food.

The two parties settled the matter out of court, with the company agreeing to send an equal number of mothers a corrective letter to be included in a promotional package it mails out. The original recipients of the disputed letter, except possibly those who have had another child in the interim, will not get the new one since their children by now will have passed the infant food age.

The company also agreed not to say in its advertising that there could be a risk of bacterial contamination or food poisoning from homemade baby food.

In the interest of shedding light on the question, here are the salient parts of the Beech-Nut letter:

"Dear Mother:

"It appears that a letter we sent out about a year ago may have generated some confusion as to our views regarding homemade baby foods. We're sorry if we confused you. Beech-Nut believes that baby foods prepared by a parent in the home are completely acceptable as long as the parent exercises reasonable care in the selection, preparation and storage of such foods.

"That's why we suggest that parents should avoid feeding very young or sick infants spinach, carrots and perhaps beets because these vegetables

Couple Takes Tumble Without Insurance

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I fixed up our backyard with a slide, swings and a sandbox for our grandchildren to enjoy when they visit us on weekends.

The neighbors' children (and there are many) asked if they could play in our backyard during the week, and we saw no reason to refuse them.

Well, last week a neighbor girl fell off our swing and broke her nose and two front teeth! (They were not baby teeth, so they have to be replaced.)

The girl's father informed us, through his lawyer, that we are liable for the doctor and the dental bills.

Our own lawyer said we had to pay it because it happened in our yard. Abby, we're just average middle-class people, and this has hit us hard.

I hope you'll print this as a warning to other naive, big-hearted people who can ill afford such generosity.

STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Will do. But if you had spent just a few dollars for insurance, you would have been "covered"—not stuck! Readers, talk to your insurance agent, and be sure YOU'RE protected.

DEAR ABBY: I have a European man friend who lives abroad but comes here very often on business for his government.

We are very close physically and emotionally, have even spoken of marriage and have exchanged "I love yous" many times.

The only thing I don't like about him is that he's cheap. Last Christmas he sent me a seashell and a T-shirt. The seashell was beautiful—if you like seashells. And the T-shirt was obviously secondhand. I have nothing against secondhand clothes, but I don't think they are appropriate for a gift.

I didn't mention it for several months, but it kept bugging me, so I finally wrote him and got it off my chest! Well, I haven't heard from him since.

All his letters up until then were lovey-dovey. Do you think I made a mistake telling him I thought he was cheap? I'm sorry now. Should I write him again and apologize? I miss him, and I do love him.

GIRLFRIEND

DEAR GIRLFRIEND: A secondhand T-shirt is a firsthand indication of his chintziness. However, it's the thought, not the value of the gift, that counts. You were right to level with him, but if you love him and miss him, write and tell him so. And if you get him back, I hope you realize you'll have a man who's cheap.

Can Offer Best Local Service

The fantastic Greenville Rescue Squad did it again! It became the world champions in heavy duty rescue competition Saturday.

The squad competed at the 30th annual conference of the International Rescue and First Aid Association which was held this year in St. Louis, Mo.

This was the second time the local squad had won the international rescue championship. The first was in 1962.

Also presented to the local squad this year was the Pat Lombardi Award, given for safety and teamwork.

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who arranged to fly the team to St. Louis, commented, "Hard work and dedication paid off in the highest tradition of the rescue service where people from all walks of life give so unselfishly of their time and talents by going the second mile for their fellow citizens.

The winning team included nine men but they represented a unit of ten full time and 34 volunteers which provide local rescue service.

While the honors are nice what really counts is how this expertise is put to practical use in serving the public.

Assistant Chief of Rescue Tony Brannon commented on this.

"Training for competition keeps the men on their toes and better trained to handle the day-to-day emergencies," he said.

The highly trained squad is in a position to provide the best in rescue service locally. Their winning in international competition furnishes goals for other state rescue squads to seek.

More Of The Story Yet To Be Heard

One of the questions of the Watergate scandal, was why weren't the White House tapes destroyed before they reached the point of becoming evidence?

Well, the former president says in a recent interview with David Frost that he ordered his chief aide H. R. Haldeman to destroy the tapes. For some reason it wasn't done, and the tapes eventually brought Nixon down.

No doubt we will soon hear Haldeman's account of that.

THIS AFTERNOON

Disagreement On Rules

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — In what was obviously a political power play by some of the lawyers on the Judicial Nominating Committee, that group and the governor got at cross purposes at the very first meeting just minutes after being sworn into office.

Gov. James B. Hunt had said before, and repeated at the installation ceremony, that he wanted the very best nominees so that he could pick any one and know he had gotten the best possible person for a Superior Court vacancy.

The proposed rules outlined by Charles H. Young, Raleigh lawyer, chairman of the Bar Association committee on merit selection, and the governor's chief aide in drawing up the nominating procedure, called for nominees to "be certified to the Governor in alphabetical order."

Without fully discussing the consequences of its action, the nominating committee amended those rules to require that names be submitted in the order of the panel's preference; some felt that the committee would be in the best position to single out the best qualified.

Upset Hunt
Gov. Hunt was not present at the organizational meeting, but when informed of the action later he was visibly upset: "That is simply not proper. That was not my intention and never has been, and such a procedure is just not acceptable."

Close observers concede that if the nominating committee, or the local panels working on specific judicial district vacancies, lists the candidates in order of preference, the potential for political repercussions are enormous should the governor pass up the "top ranked" nominees in favor of those lower on the list. Further, there would be opportunity for politicking within the nominating process to gain preferential listing.

Such political machinations would be possible despite official secrecy rules imposed by the nominating committee, some of the governor's advisors fear.

Another aspect of the nominating committee's machinery may run into some opposition: without specifically saying that only lawyers will be considered, the process is such that laymen would be effectively excluded.

BILL NOBLITT

Legal Background
Most of the items on a questionnaire for prospective nominees have to do with legal degrees and experience, and even the "general" topics such as asking for reference have legal implications: name persons "who are well acquainted with your legal ability," for example; or name "five state or federal judges before whom you have appeared in the last five years."

Debate continued both in this state and nationally over whether judicial posts should be available only to lawyers.

Considerable emphasis is placed byrules on confidentiality of the process, an element which Chairman Dan K. Moore, Supreme Court justice and a former governor, insists is necessary to getting full information about prospective nominees.

Except for public hearings to receive names for consideration, all proceedings of the committee will be closed to the public, along with minutes, reports, documents, communications, and "writings of any kind." Members are led never to discuss publicly or privately, directly, or indirectly any information about proceedings or actions.

Such secrecy is permitted by state law regarding personnel considerations, but the committee even went so far as to declare that the organizational meeting to consider the rules would be closed to the public on grounds that this was "not an official state agency subject to the open meetings law" according to Jack Cozort, legal counselor to the governor.

Only an appeal directly to the governor gained admittance to that session by reporters.

ORGANIZED LABOR

Industries Under Siege?

Editor's Note: North Carolina is the least unionized state in the nation and ranks 49th in average wages. This third installment in a four-part series examines how existing industries might be affected if all that were to change.

By KEVIN P. MCKENNA
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Industries that have long held the lion's share of North Carolina's work force may feel as though they are under siege.

On one front, they are engaged in a struggle with organized labor, which is determined to organize a large number of workers in a state that traditionally has been among the lowest in both unionization and wages.

At the same time, higher-paying industries are moving or expanding to the South in increasing numbers, and state officials are engaged in an active economic-development program to encourage those industries to settle here.

Established North Carolina industries such as textiles and furniture, which have had relatively few unions or high-paying competitors to deal with in the past, see both trends as potential threats to their economic survival.

"Anytime you have a fairly tight labor market, and one significant source of employment is able to pay a higher wage — yes, that is a threat," said Kenneth E. Flynt, economic adviser to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Many industries here are labor-intensive, relying on workers rather than machines to perform most of their production, and they have much to lose if unions and new competitors cause higher wages and lower productivity, as they fear.

"They're competing in a world market," said J. Franklin Kreiger, president of Capital Associated Industries Inc. of Raleigh, "and if you push the labor costs too high, they're just going to move elsewhere."

And many of the industries are fighting back — though the counterattack takes many forms.

The struggle that has commanded the most attention is being fought between the J.P. Stevens Co., the world's second largest textile manufacturer, and the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union of America.

Stevens said last year that it was acting to "protect the right of employees not to be represented by a union" and said union organizing efforts and boycotts jeopardized "the jobs and the livelihood of thousands of Stevens workers."

However, a federal appeals court in New York ruled last week that Stevens was in contempt of court for "massive violations of its employees' rights" at plants in Roanoke Rapids and elsewhere in the Carolinas.

Industries considering locating in North Carolina have sometimes met with comparable resistance.

Most recently, a panel of Person County business and community leaders informed the Brockway Glass Co. of Brockway, Pa., that a unionized, high-wage plant could have an adverse effect on the county.

The panel said the county would welcome Brockway, but suggested the company lower its $4.95-to-$8 hourly wage scale and that its plant be nonunionized.

Both the Stevens and Brockway incidents have been controversial, and some question whether higher wages and unionization are indeed threats to established industries.

Strength For Today

INNER CHANGE
"Is it he that shall save his people from their sins?"

This was the question asked by many of Jesus's contemporaries as, with disillusionment and disappointment, they contemplated his ministry. They wanted a messiah who would crush their enemies. They wanted a strong military leader like David or Joshua who would drive the Romans from Palestine and establish an invincible Jewish kingdom.

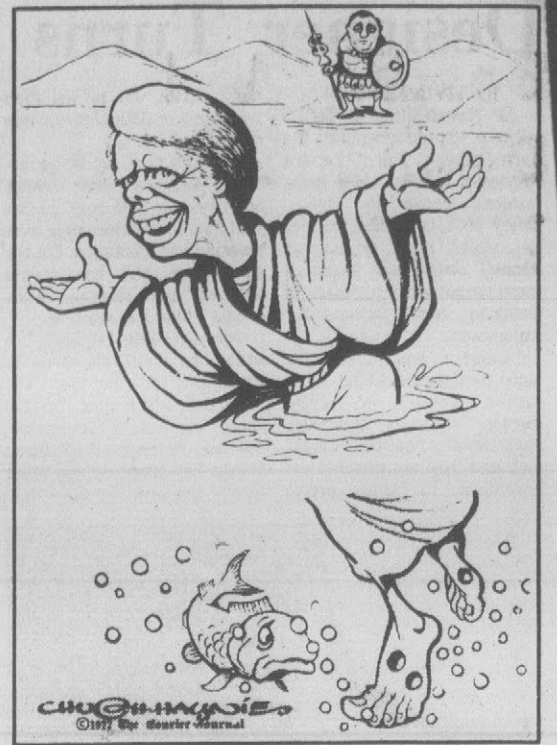

But Jesus came to save people from their sins. And this was vastly more important than expelling the Romans from the Jewish homeland.

Yet even today we tend to think of salvation in material terms. All over the world there are people who are looking for a messiah who will save them from some political, military, economic, or social oppression. These people do not realize that what needs to be changed before God's kingdom comes are these sinful hearts of ours.

The Last Ditch Battle

WASHINGTON—Americans haven't had a good "gut" foreign issue in several years. Finally one has come along that will divide brother against brother, family against family, conservative against liberal, hardhat against student, and Sen. Strom Thurmond against President Jimmy Carter.

The issue, of course, is the Panama Canal and the battle has started already. I was in the Purple Onion bar the other night when the issue erupted after the seven o'clock news.

"Dammit," said Planter, "If the Panamanians want the Canal they're going to have to fight for it."

Ellstrom said, "Let them have the bloody ditch. The only thing it's good for any more is sailboats."

Planter got red in the face. "How can you say that and call yourself an American? We bought it, we paid for it and we died for it."

"That's how much you know about it, Ellstrom said. "We stole it from Colombia and forced the Panamanians to sign a treaty they wanted no part of."

You could see Planter was getting mad. "You didn't learn that in no American school. You must have read it in some Commie paper. The Panama Canal was built with American blood. Twenty thousand of our boys died to join the Atlantic and Pacific oceans."

"They weren't American boys," said Ellstrom. "They were mostly West Indians hired to do the dirty work. All we put up was our know-how and money. It ain't worth fighting about."

Planter rolled up his sleeves. "Well, I'm ready to fight about it. We were given the Panama Canal in perpetuity. That means for life or forever, whichever comes first."

McCarthy, the bartender, said, "Let's have no fighting in here about the Canal. You want to fight about it you buy a ticket to the Canal Zone and slug it out there."

Someone tried to bring up the Washington Redskins, but Planter wouldn't be deterred. He turned to Ellstrom. "How can you sleep at night knowing some banana republic is occupying our canal."

"Very easily," Ellstrom said. "If you would read up on it you'd realize nothing of value can go through it any more. Our aircraft carriers are too big for it, and most oil tankers can't get into it. All we're doing is supporting a bunch of Americans in the Zone who are living the life of Reilly."

Ellstrom didn't realize it, but Reilly was in the bar. "What's that? Who's living my life in Panama?"

"The Americans who work down there," Ellstrom said. "Well, it can't be much of a life," Reilly laughed. "Would anybody like to buy me a beer?"

"Giving up the Panama Canal is nothing to laugh at," Planter said. "I say if the Panamanians try to take the Canal from us we should drop the bomb on them."

McCarthy, the bartender, said, "That wouldn't be a bad idea. At least it would widen it enough for American Navy ships to get through."

Ellstrom stuck to his guns. "I'm not about to go to war over Panama."

Planter said, "Well, you might not be, but there are millions of Americans who

Ban Is Bad To Eskimo

By ROBERT WELLER

Associated Press Writer
BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The Eskimos, who have survived 2,000 Arctic winters through subsistence hunting, could face tougher winters if a ban is upheld on killing the bowhead whale, which is on the endangered species lists.

"We may be on it ourselves soon," said one Eskimo.

The International Whaling Commission, meeting in June in Australia, unanimously approved a ban on killing — including subsistence hunting — of the bowhead, a slow-moving mammal whose head is almost a third of its length.

The state sharply limited the hunting of caribou, a large species of deer. The hunting of ducks and geese had been banned earlier.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration will hold two days of hearings here beginning Thursday on whether the United States should challenge the whaling ban. The federal government has until Oct. 1 to oppose the ban.

The price of food here suggests that dietary substitutes to whales and caribou would be expensive. Milk is $3 a half gallon; eggs $2 a dozen.

One bowhead whale can supply 40 to 50 tons of food and raw materials, enough to sustain a small village from one hunting season to the next.

Mike Jeffries, an Alaska Legal Services lawyer for the Eskimos, says "the whale cannot be replaced with food stamps. They plan festivals around it; their whole lives center around the hunt."

Some local businessmen say the Eskimos don't pay any attention to caribou restrictions, which bar all but subsistence hunting, and aren't likely to observe a ban on whales either.

Eben Hopson, an Eskimo and mayor of Barrow, says: "We are used to overcoming the physical obstacles while hunting the whale. We are resourceful enough to overcome human obstacles. Our people will not go hungry."

The bowhead, which stay close to drifting ice and occasionally use their brow to break through the ice for a breath, was protected from commercial

Statistics Versus More Jobs

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The difficulty facing the Carter administration in seeking to cut the jobless rate is documented by two sets of statistics now being studied: the number of employed rose in August; so did the number of jobless.

The most sympathetic interpretation of such news is that it wasn't the economy or the administration that failed, therefore, but that fate intervened in the form of more job-seekers entering the market.

Little acceptance of that view is likely, however, especially when a further breakdown of the numbers shows that blacks, with a jobless rate of 14.5 per cent, have made almost no gains since the 1973-1975 recession.

Now, with the upward cycle of the economy losing its push, it seems unlikely that any sharp improvement can be expected in that rate. It is chronic and, say many blacks, unattended to by government.

You can have your pick of other reasons as to why the combined black-white jobless rate seems to be stuck at 7 per cent, give or take a few tenths of a point.

Many business groups, especially those representing small business, maintain that a minimum wage of $2.30 an hour prevents many teenagers from being employed.

Lower the rate and you take them off the streets, it is said, in addition to providing various attendant benefits: apprenticeship training, self-respect, reduction in crime, more vigor in the business community.

That's one way to reduce the jobless rate, believers say. Another is to develop computer banks of jobs available. Business spokesmen for years have complained they have many thousands of jobs going begging.

Some of this situation, it would seem, might result from geographic distance between the available job and the interested applicant. But a good deal, it seems safe to say, is a consequence of poor communications.

If you share the viewpoint of the National Association of Manufacturers, you probably offer another explanation, that government involvement in the market place is discouraging business from expanding as swiftly as it might.

Another possible explanation, although not a solution, is to be found in the nature of the job market and the way it is measured.

The market is ever-changing. When a worker becomes so discouraged that he no longer seeks work he is conveniently dropped from the labor force. In a statistical sense, he ceases to exist. He just isn't counted.

When, however, that same individual senses an improvement in his chances he pulls himself together and re-enters the market by seeking a job. He might not get one, so he adds not only to the size of the labor force but to the unemployment rate as well.

But none of these factors really changes the situation of black unemployment, which is being widely interpreted as socially explosive and politically damaging to the Carter administration.

Unemployment is the biggest waste of all, bigger even than the still conspicuous waste of energy. The more important human factor aside, each second of idleness is that much talent lost, that much productivity denied to society.

Boston Will Embarrass Delinquent Taxpayers

McKenna Col...

 "You can't tell me that Burlington Industries is suffering because its employees got a union at the denim plant in Erwin," said Wilbur Hobby, president of the state AFL-CIO. "I just don't buy this stuff."

Tom Broughton, director of the state Division of Economic Development, said efforts to bring higher-paying industry here are essential if North Carolina is to provide jobs for its growing population and raise the average wage. And Broughton doesn't believe existing industries should feel threatened.

"I don't believe there should be this fear of higher-wage firms coming in," he said. "It has been shown that with the coming of higher-wage industries, the labor market improves for everybody. A number of existing manufacturing firms are some of our best promoters."

Broughton said the state's hourly-wage and unionization levels — 49th and 50th in the nation, respectively — are not used to attract industry here.

"We work with anybody who is interested in North Carolina," he said. "We do not feel unionization correlates to attracting industry, although if a plant desires to be nonunion, they may look into it. What some people forget is that no industry comes here pre-unionized. That's up to the employees to decide."

Likewise, it is up to the employees to decide whether or not an established firm will become unionized. And North Carolina employers are being advised that they can head off unionization by keeping their workers happy.

Kreiger's firm, Capital Associated Industries Inc., is one of five private, regional organizations in the state that serve as consultants to management on labor relations. The organizations serve more than 1,000 North Carolina firms employing more than half the state's industrial workers.

Kreiger believes the late blooming industrialization of the South may cause the region to develop differently than the North, particularly in terms of labor-management relations, if employers act prudently.

"We're not interested in the schlocks," Kreiger said of companies that engage in what some would call union-busting. "We train supervisors to treat their employees with respect, as human beings. We feel this minimizes the need for a union. People don't become dissatisfied with their employer for no reason."

Kreiger, whose office bookcase contains a loose-leaf folder labeled "Unionized Industries," characterized the work of his organization and others like it as "preventive medicine."

The consultants instruct clients in what they can and cannot do under federal labor-relations laws, train employers and supervisors in "how to deal with people," and offer model programs for wage and benefit packages, Kreiger said.

"The whole thrust of good labor relations is convincing employees that individual and company success are intertwined," he said. "Never undersell the ability of employees to judge fairly."

BOSTON (AP) — The city is planning to embarrass some of its prominent residents into paying their delinquent property tax bills by splashing their pictures and tax bills on wanted posters in various public spots.

Details of the poster campaign are still sketchy, according to George Regan Jr., Mayor or Kevin H. White's press secretary, but the handbill-size posters were expected to be up this week. Possible locations for the posters include city hall and on the downtown Park Square billboard.

Regan, who would not identify any of the tax delinquents, said putting pictures on wanted posters would be harsh. But he said it would get the point across — that the city is serious about collecting an estimated $50 million owed in property taxes for the last three fiscal years.

Boston has recently used several tactics to get that point across, all of which have been somewhat successful. Last week, city officials, along with a pilot and television crews, tried to confiscate attorney F. Lee Bailey's helicopter at the Plymouth Airport. Bailey owes the city $18,000 in back taxes for his downtown law office. The plan was to land it at City Hall Plaza and display it as testimony of the city's determination to collect its taxes.

Bailey apparently caught wind of the plan and locked the helicopter in a garage. However, his office did come up with a $5,000 payment. Also last week, the city confiscated two taxi cabs whose owners have large, outstanding tax bills. One owner, who owes $16,000, immediately paid $6,000 and promised quick payment of the remainder.

The most successful effort to collect taxes was last spring when the city released and the Boston Globe published the names of 6,000 delinquent taxpayers. Tax Collector Newell Cook estimated that action brought the city about $2 million in the last six weeks of the last fiscal year.

Meanwhile, in nearby Revere the mayor was the first resident embarrassed by efforts to get the names of delinquent taxpayers publicized.

Mayor William G. Reinstein gave the city tax collector a check for $4,017.92 Tuesday, a few days after the Lynn Evening Item reported that he had not paid last year's property tax bill. Reinstein told the Boston Globe he had forgotten about the bill until the item printed the story Thursday.

Addiction To Imported Oil Growing

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of kicking the habit, the United States is becoming more addicted to costly imported oil, and most Americans apparently don't know it.

More than four months after President Carter's warning that the energy problem could become a national catastrophe, a good many people don't believe there is a real problem.

Carter said the problem should be confronted as the moral equivalent of war, but a public opinion poll ranks energy seventh on the list of national concerns.

According to a CBS News-New York Times survey, the voters don't think energy is the equivalent of inflation, unemployment, crime, health care, education or defense, let alone Carter's hypothetical war.

Those attitudes can hardly be encouraging for the White House team that now must press for approval of Carter's energy legislation in the Senate, where the going is likely to be more difficult than it was in the House.

The Carter program passed the House shorn of one of its stiffest provisions, the standby tax with which Carter proposed to increase the cost of gasoline a nickel a gallon each year the nation's consumption exceeded conservation targets.

Carter got most of what he sought from the House, and James R. Schlesinger, the new secretary of energy, has said he believes Congress will approve the administration package of consumption taxes and conservation incentives without many more changes.

Before he gained the White House, Carter said he meant to use the office as a platform to mobilize the nation to action on persistent national problems. But there's only one platform, and there are many problems. While the President is campaigning for Senate ratification of new Panama Canal treaties, his aides and lobbyists have some heavy convincing to do on energy.

The new poll, conducted July 27 to 31 among 1,463 adults, supports that view with numbers. Among them:

—Fifty-seven per cent of those surveyed said they don't believe the nation is running out of oil and natural gas, and do not think things are as bad as Carter claims. Only 33 per cent said they believed the President's warnings.

—Forty-nine per cent said they thought Americans were being warned of shortages just so that oil and gas companies can charge higher prices.

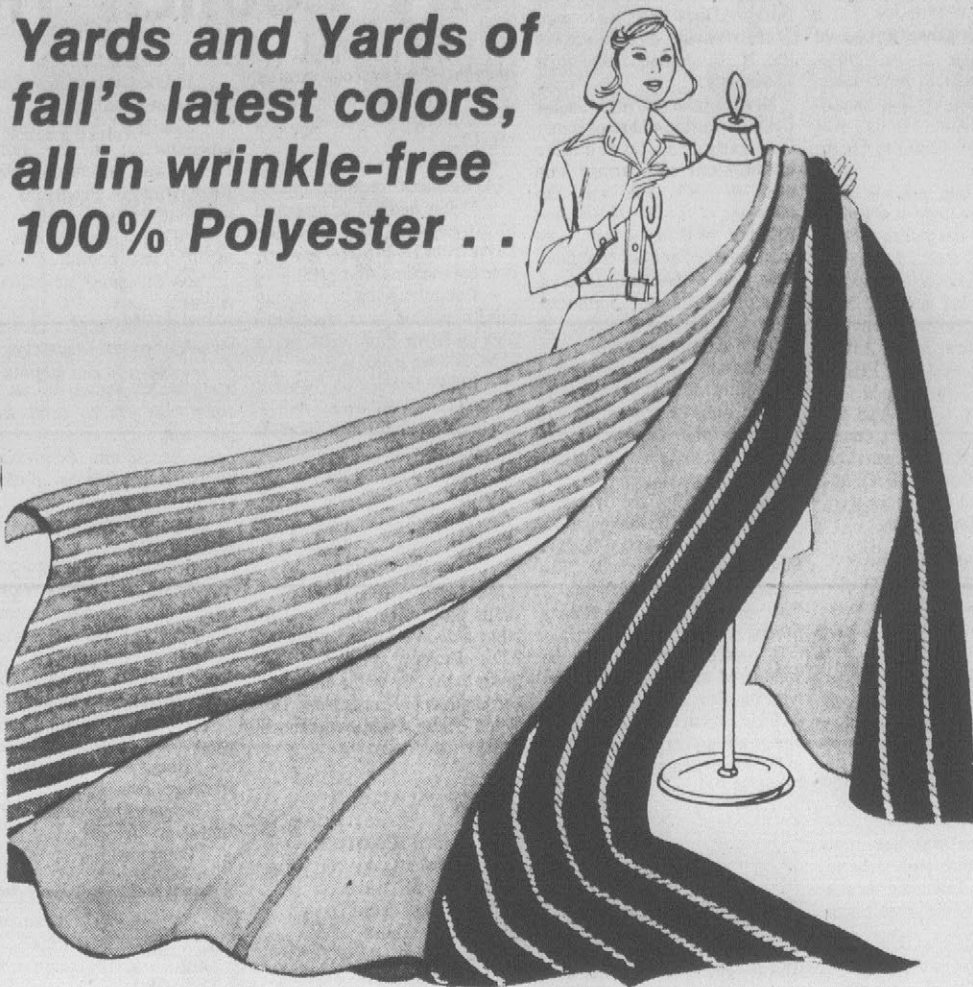

—One-third of the people polled believed that the United States produces all the oil it needs, and does not have to rely on imported oil. Forty-eight per cent were aware that oil must be imported, but few of them knew how much.

In fact, the United States buys almost half of its oil abroad, at a price of about $3.8 billion a month. Oil imports have increased by 31 per cent in the past year, according to the Federal Energy Administration.

The administration cites those statistics as evidence that there must be action to cut consumption and thus imports.

Three presidents have been saying that over the past four years, but it isn't happening.

Big Job Growth For Unmarrieds

NEW YORK (AP) — Unmarried persons accounted for 90 per cent of the growth in the United States labor force between 1975 and 1976, according to figures supplied by the American Council of Life Insurance.

In 1970, the council also reported about 27 per cent of the labor force was never married, had separated or was divorced. In 1976, that figure rose to about 32 per cent.

The council attributed the increase to a greater propensity among young people to marry later in life, a record high in the divorce rate and the growing number of youthful job seekers.

POPULATION RISE
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Czechoslovakia's population has reached 15 million, according to CTK, a news agency.

Two-thirds of the population lives in Bohemia and Moravia, the agency said, while the others inhabit Slovakia. If the population follows current growth curves, it should reach 17 million by the end of this century.

$133.83 Day On Market

The highest average so far this season was recorded Tuesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market, according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade.

Bryan reported that the market sold 1,158,186 pounds yesterday for $1,549,947, an average of $133.83 per hundred pounds.

Stabilization receipts amounted to only 1.19 per cent of total sales, he said.

Top practical price paid on Tuesday was $1.47 per pound with good quality leaf purchased by the buying companies for $1.50 per pound.

Offerings reflected an increase in leaf while cutters and less lugs showed up on the warehouse floors along with non-descript tobacco.

For the season, the market has sold 21,543,749 pounds for $24,429,150, an average of $113.39 per hundred pounds.

The market is in its seventh week of sales.

How the small farmer and the family farm support the economy of our state; and how the tobacco farmer's products which are sold abroad support the nation by reducing our international trade imbalance.

According to Hodges, "tobacco is more than a product. It's a way of life for our people," and brings in $6 billion in taxes each year. "For every $1 the tobacco farmer receives," according to Hodges, "the government gets $3."

The candidate said, "When you come right down to it, effectiveness is the acid test of this campaign. As a Democrat, I believe my ideas will be listened to by the Senate majority and the Carter administration. And as a Democrat, I think I can have an effect."

Helms, according to Hodges, "is not helping to solve problems. He is not effective."

"His voice is weak," Hodges said of Helms. "And when it is heard, it is always saying the same thing. No."

"No to education. No to programs to help children. No to finding jobs for people, and helping people while they look for work."

By RICHARD C. GROSS
ELON MOREH, Israel-occupied Jordan (UPI) — Deborah Chen, who left her friends in New York to settle in Israel, now gets frightened to think that she and her two children live at a strategic outpost guarding an approach to Tel Aviv.

Yet she and hundreds of others like her have given up material comforts to live at such spartan outposts on the West Bank of the Jordan River. It is their conviction, inspired by the Bible and sparked by a war Israel nearly lost, that this rocky land should forever be Jewish.

This civilian settlement straddling a hilltop and protected by a military camp at its western end might appear resemble a stockaded fort in the middle of Indian territory in the American West a century ago.

But Elon Moreh and a Fort Apache differ.

For one thing, the settlement of 230 persons is not under siege by the native population in the 10 Arab villages that surround it.

Rather, Elon Moreh and 30 other settlements like it planted among the 640,000 Palestinians in the West Bank are under attack from the Arab nation as a whole and even from Israel's only reliable ally, the United States.

By opening new settlements in the West Bank, thousands of Jews, most of them religious, have further complicated to the already complex, the United States.

By opening new settlements in the West Bank, thousands of Jews, most of them religious, have fuitant movement called Gush Emunim (Bloc of the Faithful), an increasingly powerful rightwing group that has the support of Prime Minister Menahem Begin and most of his government. It is not a political party, yet.

Begin recently legalized this and two other settlements set up more than a year ago, much to the dismay of President Carter, who had signaled his desire for an end to further settlements, at least until after the Geneva peace conference reconvenes.

But Begin's move only encouraged Gush Emunim to strike out in new directions. It brought forth plans to settle 14 sites with the apparent support of such powerful figures as Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. His policy states the only way to achieve peace in the Middle East is for Arab and Jew to live side by side.

West Bank Arabs questioned on this policy said they disagreed with it because, one said, "It is nice on paper but is not reality."

But it is difficult to discern exactly what the Arabs think. Like any invaded people who may have to switch sides at the stroke of the sword, they choose the middle of the road so as not to create problems for themselves.

They may fear the Palestine Liberation Organization will brand them traitors if they cooperate with the Jews. They may fear reprisals by the Israeli military authorities if they do not cooperate. It is hard for them to be themselves because they do not govern themselves.

The best illustration of this emerged during conversations in English with Arab elders at Kfar Kadum, a village of 2,000 persons and dusty, unpaved streets situated several miles up the winding asphalt road from this garrisoned settlement. The garrison is called Camp Kadum.

The elders said they never held a formal meeting with the Jews at Elon Moreh nor did they want such a meeting. They said they did not want a Jewish settlement on what they said had been village land before the 1967 Middle East war, when 7,000 persons lived at Kfar Kadum.

David Levine, 31, and Yitzhak Yafin, 29, insisted such a meeting occurred two months ago between seven village elders and seven members of the settlement's secretariat, the elected town council-like body. There is as yet no mayor.

To these two men, the meeting at Elon Moreh, undertaken at the invitation of the settlement, was proof Arab and Jew could live together peacefully. Even so, some of the settlers bitterly opposed the meeting because, Yafin said, "There were some who thought we should ignore the Arabs."

"We talked about digging a well and sharing the water and the possibility of Arab employment here since none of us are skilled at technical projects such as construction," Yafin said, sitting in the wood shack that was the secretariat office.

Whatever it was, the Arab elders had their reasons for denying such a meeting took place. Other meetings also are on the agenda with other Arab villages.

The hilltop where Elon Moreh is situated was a Jordanian army base before the war. The settlement has been allocated 175 acres.

Most of the men in Elon Moreh are professionals — doctors, lawyers and teachers. Half of them commute to Tel Aviv or other cities in the area. Three couples, including one that runs the combined vegetable-grocery store, are of American origin.

Elon Moreh is situated below a rounded, barren hill the military has designated Hill 510. From its summit, the skyscrapers of Tel Aviv 25 miles to the southwest and the burnished glint of the sea beyond are visible on a clear day.

This settlement, in effect, is at a strategic military point on the road west because it overlooks and thus guards one of the approaches to Tel Aviv, Israel's biggest city.

"It's so scary when I think of it," said Mrs. Chen, 25, auburn hair pulled back in a pony tail. "I'm putting myself and my two children in a strategic position to protect Tel Aviv."

She and her husband David, a surgeon at Ichilov Hospital in Tel Aviv, have a 2-year-old daughter and an 8-week-old son. They have been married four years and lived in Tel Aviv before coming to Elon Moreh a year ago.

Mrs. Chen said she did not want to leave "my friends and all I knew" in the Far Rockaway section of New York City to come to Israel. But now she lives with the conviction that it is the duty of the Jews to settle the land the Bible says was given to them.

This conviction is a byproduct of the October, 1973, war, which Israel regards as having been lost despite its military victories. Gush Emunim rose from the ashes of depression in which Israel wallowed in the months after the war. The movement has an estimated 25,000 followers and is beginning to get financial contributions from Jews abroad.

"The war had a tremendous impact," Mrs. Chen said, serving iced juice outside her tiny prefabricated caravan, one of 30 set at various angles on the hilly settlement. The trailer-like caravans were donated by the United States for housing Soviet immigrants.

"We had to think about what we were doing here in Israel — particularly the religious people — because we almost weren't here," she said. "We wanted to do something, to change things."

What Gush Emunim did was to force the issue of settlement in the West Bank by squatting in an abandoned railroad station in Sebastia, the ancient capital of Israel situated near Elon Moreh. Hundreds of troops repeatedly evicted them. Mrs. Chen was one of the squatters and one of the soldiers was her brother, David.

Many of the soldiers refused to obey orders to evict their fellow Jews and the army had to call on officers in training, who could not afford to give up their commissions.

The government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin finally permitted the squatters to settle temporarily at Camp Kadum in late 1975. It was an unauthorized settlement until Begin legalized it, a promise Levine said he made to Gush Emunim before his trip to Washington. It was here that Begin declared the West Bank "liberated Israeli territory" after his election victory over Rabin May 17.

Rabin said in a recent exclusive interview he did not think the settlements were an issue in searching for a Middle East peace. He said he never promised Washington to stop erecting new settlements, most of them set up along the Jordan Valley.

"As long as we settle quietly without making a show of it, we agree to disagree (with the United States) without making public statements," he said. Washington opposes settling the occupied territories on grounds it violates international law and is an obstacle to peace.

Levine agrees with Rabin. He came here from Stamford, Conn., 18 months ago. He designs gold and silver jewelry he sells to Israel's five-star hotels and exports to the United States and Canada. His wife, Sari, 27, is from Monsey, N.Y., and is eight months pregnant.

"We do not think this settlement and others like it are a deterrent to peace," the thin, black-bearded Levine said. "We think a strong Israel is a deterrent to war and a strong Israel includes Judea and Samaria (the West Bank)."

There is widespread agreement at the settlement with Begin's view that to return the West Bank in a peace agreement would mean Arab tanks on the new frontier only 10 miles across the narrow waist of Israel from coastal Netanya. It would leave Israel prey to being cut in half by an armored thrust.

"Let's face it, the Arabs don't want us here at all," Mrs. Chen said. "Begin is right. They would cut us in half."

Yet the impression is that if it were not for international politics in Jerusalem, Cairo, Washington, Damascus, Amman and elsewhere, the Arabs who live in the stone villages and the Jews who live in fenced-in settlements could possibly make a go of it in this tiny contested corner of the world.

The reason: Arab or Jew both, at bottom are concerned mostly with the business of life and getting the most out of it. The making of war is the business of governments.

Yafin may have put it best when he said:

"We have spontaneous relations with the Arabs, not on the political or ideological level. One of our cars would break down on the road and one of the Arab villagers would help us fix it. They offer their help without us asking for it. And we help them when we pick them up when they hitchhike.

"The people here are just villagers and we talk about common problems. They're not interested in high politics and neither are we."

Typical 1st Week In ECC

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
The first full slate of football competition in the Eastern Carolina Conference was typical of what a first week should be — a number of good plays, a number of mistakes and a number of things which obviously need work in the coming week.

Two of the area's four ECC teams got by their non-conference opponents, while the other two were not so lucky.

The biggest win came to rookie Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls who watched his Panthers rack up the first victory of his coaching career with a 20-8 decision over Roanoke. Farmville Central also won its first game of the season, downing Williamston, 19-13.

In the loss column were D. H. Conley (now 1-1 after getting the jump on the rest of the teams), which lost 14-0 to West Carteret and North Pitt, which was on the short end of a 28-14 score against Enfield.

All four teams are in action against non-conference teams again this week. North Pitt is the only team playing at home as the Panthers will host South Edgecombe. Ayden-Grifton travels to Tarboro, Farmville Central goes to Eastern Wayne and D. H. Conley is on the road at Washington.

Ayden-Grifton
"I was real pleased with the effort we got from our players," Sauls said of his win. Despite the fact that the Chargers fumbled seven times and lost five, they were able to overcome their mistakes, he added.

"It was a typical opening ballgame. We made a lot of mistakes, but they are things we can correct."

Sauls was pleased with the Chargers' defensive effort, "except for a few breakdowns," and he praised the play of tackle Mike Teachey on both offense and defense, along with the entire secondary.

Running back Terry Morris, who piled up 130 yards rushing, and quarterback David Smith also caught Sauls' eye. Smith "showed a lot of potential and a lot of poise. He completed some key passes," Sauls said.

A-G's Terry Morris

This week, Ayden-Grifton faces one of the favorites in the Northeastern Conference, Tarboro. The team features a talented tailback in Kelvin Bryant, who runs about a 9.7 100, Sauls said.

Tarboro has "excellent team speed and a veteran quarterback," despite the fact that it lost its opening contest against Rocky Mount.

The Chargers are "hoping to go down there, eliminate some of our mistakes and take advantage of their weaknesses, especially the secondary," Sauls said.

Farmville Central
After falling behind 13-0 in the first half, Farmville Central was able to tie the game up in the third quarter and then executed a 99-yard fourth-quarter drive to defeat Williamston 19-13.

FC's Donald Reid

Although the first half of the game didn't please Farmville coach Gene Brewer, he saw some things he liked after intermission.

"We showed our inexperience and youthiness in the first half, fumbling the ball and not being consistent, but in the second half, we moved the ball well."

Brewer said he thought the defense played well most of the night, but the offense was not able to give them much breathing room in the first half.

Brewer said the Jaguars' two running backs, Walter Blow and Donald Reid, along with lineman Len Hunt, looked good on offense, while Blow, Woody Edwards, Ronald and Donald Reid paced the defense.

The Jaguars still have a lot to work on, Brewer said. "We are by no means a polished ballclub yet." In addition, they never seem to play well against this week's opponent, Eastern Wayne.

"It's going to be a typical tough ballgame for us; they always play us real tough."

The Warriors are coming off a win over Smithfield-Selma and Brewer said he expects "a pretty exciting ballgame — it usually is."

D. H. Conley

After winning their first ballgame against East Carteret, D. H. Conley's Vikings evened their season record a 1-1 with a shutout loss to West Carteret Friday night.

"We just had, overall, a pretty poor effort," Dunn said, "Our offensive line made mistakes all night."

Compounding the Vikings' troubles was a pair of injuries that sidelined starting fullback Kenny Phillips and linebacker Peter Carmon. Phillips had to have surgery on his hand, while Carmon suffered from heat exhaustion during the game.

Defensively, the Vikings made a few mistakes, but overall, the defense was better than the offense.

Standouts in Friday night's game were running back Nuggie Worthington, who rushed for 113 yards and cornerback Arnell Credle, Dunn said.

Washington, Conley's foe in this week's game, is "big and strong." The Pam-Pack runs a lot of power offense and the Vikings have "a lot of work to do to get ready for them and correct the mistakes we made," Dunn said.

North Pitt

Fumbles were a big problem for North Pitt in its 28-14 loss to Enfield last week. The Panthers fumbled six times and lost five.

Coach Pat Smith said the team "had a few players that played pretty good and some that didn't." He liked the play of halfbacks William Knight (65 yards) and Calvin Carmack (62 yards).

The defense played in spurts, Smith said, and was hurt by the big play. Sammy Mayo and Steve Whitehurst were the standouts on the defensive side.

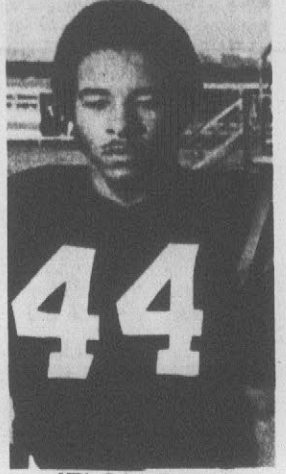

Of this week's game with South Edgecombe, Smith said, "South Edgecombe is 0-2 and we're 0-1, so somebody's going to finally win one, unless it's a tie."

"They're big and strong, but we might be a little quicker," Smith said.

Two Panthers were hurt during the game, Jerry Tyson with a shoulder separation and Johnny Daniels with a cut over his eye. "We're getting down to the skimpiness," according to Smith.

The South Edgecombe game "should be a good ballgame—we're both hurting," Smith said.

Dye: Big Fight Ahead For Bucs In Duke Contest

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For Pat Dye, victory was a pleasure, but it's going to take a lot more effort if the Pirates are to win a second straight game against an Atlantic Coast Conference foe.

Dye was the featured speaker yesterday at the first meeting of the Greenville Sports Club, and spoke on his team's success against N.C. State and its chances against Duke University this Saturday.

"I'm happy to win; our kids worked hard for it. We have a lot of young football players, and next year's team may be our best ever," Dye told the group.

While he noted that the Pirates made a lot of mistakes, he said they played well enough to win. "We will be okay if we cut our mistakes. The offense did some things real well. If we get better, we can be a great offensive team. We have more talent than ever before."

Dye said that Theodore Sutton gives the Pirates the best fullback they've ever had, while he has supreme confidence in his two quarterbacks, Jimmy Southerland and Leander Green.

The coach said he was surprised by the way the defense played against State. "I never thought State would pass for 300 yards against us. I knew that our secondary was young, but I thought that we'd intercept more than we did (one time), or get a better pass rush. But we never got the rush, and when we did, we were unable to contain (Johnny) Evans.

"Our linebackers and defensive ends didn't do the job they should have in providing coverage underneath, although I was pleased with the job everyone did against the rush."

The coach also noted that the kicking game needs improvement.

He did single out several defensive players for their work. Among them were end Zack Valentine, linebacker Harold Randolph, linebacker Mike Brewington, tackle Noah Clark, and end Fred Chavis.

"One game doesn't make a season, however," he warned.

Dye called the game with Duke the biggest and most important game ever in the school's history. "This is the direction I want our program to go. Duke has one of the greatest football traditions in the country. They have national prestige and it is great for our program just to be playing them."

"When you think that 13 years ago we were upsetting Elon, and now we're playing Duke, well, that's damned important," he said.

Beating Duke will be no easy task, however. "We will have to fight for our lives. Duke has had three weeks to concentrate on stopping East Carolina, and we've had only one week to prepare for them. Duke is always good in its opener, and you can bet that Mike McGee will have his team well-prepared."

Dye added that Duke has great athletes, and that Mike Dunn is one of the best quarterbacks in the country. "He is a great runner, an excellent passer, and a super competitive individual. His ability can neutralize our quickness on defense. He has excellent receivers and a big, strong, experienced offensive line to work with."

To win, Dye said, the Pirates will have to improve in every phase of the game.

The next meeting of the Sports Club will be Tuesday, September 20. The guest speaker will be Smith Barrier, Executive Sports Editor of the Greensboro Daily News and Record.

Seahawks Sign Hunter

Former Rose High School running back Al Hunter has signed a contract with the Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League.

Hunter, who attended Notre Dame and became that school's first 1,000 yard a season rusher, lost his final year of eligibility due to a dormitory rules infraction, and was drafted last month by Seattle in the supplemental draft on the fourth round.

Reportedly, Hunter signed a one-year contract, and has until the second game of the season to make the team. He will not be counted toward the team's maximum number of players until that time, unless activated earlier.

So there will be no rematch with Connors, no new data for the computer in its effort to decide whether Borg or Connors is No. 1.

Connors downplayed Borg's default. "He's out of the tournament? Oh," he deadpanned. Then he joked, "I got one round farther than he did, maybe I'm No. 1 on the computer now."

He was certainly No. 1 on the court Tuesday night when he devastated Roscoe Tanner, the No. 11 seed from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-0, 6-2 in a match that took 55 minutes only because it takes time to change courts every odd game.

Connors and Stockton joined Manuel Orantes and Brian Gottfried Tuesday in advancing to the quarter-finals of the Open. Orantes, of Spain, the No. 5 seed who is playing marvelous tennis, easily handled 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y., 6-2, 6-3.

Stockton was to meet Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina was scheduled to play Ray Moore of South Africa in the quarter-finals today.

Five more women Tuesday moved into the quarter-finals, including top-seeded Chris Evert, who whipped Nancy Richert, San Angelo, Tex., 6-3, 6-0.

Miss Evert meets Billie Jean King, a four-time champion here and the No. 7 seed, tonight in a quarter-final match. Other women winners Thursday were Wendy Turnbull of Australia, Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade of England, Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and second-seeded Martina Navratilova, the Czech expatriate now making her home in Dallas.

In today's other women's quarter-final matches, phenomenal Tracy Austin, the 14-year-old retriever from Rolling Hills, Calif., was matched against 32-year-old Betty Stove of the Netherlands.

Borg Defaults Due To Injury

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — A computer, in its infinite wisdom, spewed out the seedings in the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament, predicting that top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden would meet No. 2 Jimmy Connors in the finals, a rematch of their grand, five-set thriller at Wimbledon earlier this summer.

The computer didn't know about the pectoral muscle. It didn't know about pain. So it certainly didn't expect Borg, the Wimbledon champ, to be sitting on his stool when the bell rang for the second game of his third set with Dick Stockton of Dallas on Tuesday.

And the computer never will understand that only the severest kind of pain to his injured muscle could make the 21-year-old Swede default his fourth-round match, robbing him of the chance to win the only major tournament that has eluded him.

"I'm very disappointed. I wanted to do really well this year, especially after coming so close (second) last year," said Borg after he defaulted his match to Stockton 3-6, 6-4, 1-0. "This was the worst. It was much too painful to serve, and what can you do if you can't serve?"

So there will be no rematch with Connors, no new data for the computer in its effort to decide whether Borg or Connors is No. 1.

He was certainly No. 1 on the court Tuesday night when he

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough has become the first driver this season to top the $300,000 mark in winnings on the NASCAR circuit.

And, despite a fifth-place finish in Monday's Southern 500 at Darlington, S.C., on Labor Day, the defending NASCAR Grand National champion maintained his lead in the title chase over six-time Grand National titleholder Richard Petty. Yarborough has 3,635 in the overall point standings to Petty's 3,507.

The victory in the 28th annual Labor Day Classic was claimed by defending Southern 500 champion, David Pearson, who hasn't won a NASCAR event since Riverside, Calif., in January.

Spokesman For Sunbelt In New York

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The good townspeople already were aflutter when the young stranger with the accent came riding in.

Many of their biggest and richest neighbors had fled to the hills of Connecticut, and they didn't look kindly on this newcomer and tales of still greener pastures.

The stranger was Alexander P. Gaines Jr., a real estate salesman from Atlanta, sent by its Chamber of Commerce to lure some of New York's commerce their way.

That was five months ago. Alex Gaines hasn't stolen any corporations yet, and he may never. But he has learned first hand why some companies decide to leave New York — the city has lost more than a half-million jobs in the past eight years — and how people who grow restless and look for a challenge, as he did in Atlanta, find it in New York.

His apartment is on a fashionable street near the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Central Park jogging path which he tours in the wee hours each morning. But it's only half as large, and costs $125 a month more, than his last apartment in Atlanta.

And at night, when he explores the cafes of Greenwich Village, he has to watch it. Soon after his arrival, he bought a beer for a friend and one for himself (an indulgence permitted by the daily jogging, he says) and the tab was $5.76.

"You can buy a case of beer in Atlanta for that. I just blasted that bartender, just blasted him.

"This is one of the major problems of New York. Corporations have a hard time getting somebody like me to come into New York. If you have a kid, you're talking about $650 a month for an apartment. It's tough to raise a child. Connecticut's been able to breed off New York because of it."

Gaines feeds his clients facts and figures on income and real estate taxes in Atlanta, availability of land, transportation routes, climate, potential markets in the Southeast, and wage costs.

"I don't talk down New York," he said. "I'll never do that. I'm not here to convince a corporation to move from New York, but I'll talk to them if they want to. We're not here to pick on New York. Its survival is important to every other city."

"New York is a beautiful city. It's got the worst and the best of everything. If you hate New York, you hate the world, because it's got everything in the world."

For another thing, his mission is not so much to steal the headquarters of a corporation as to steer to Atlanta a company already planning a southern branch. His hunting ground extends beyond New York, from Baltimore to Boston.

Part of the job is ensuring that companies already in Atlanta stay there. Gaines says that 430 of the 500 largest industrial firms have some kind of operation in Atlanta.

Decisions by big, well-known corporations to move their headquarters from New York draw much publicity, but they are not the city's biggest problem, according to Frank Corbin of the city's Economic Development Administration.

Their exodus in recent years has accounted for only about 10 per cent of the city's loss of 650,000 jobs since 1969, Corbin says. Bankruptcies and layoffs among small companies are the real problem. Of the 190,000 businesses in the city, 98 per cent have fewer than 100 employees and 90 per cent have fewer than 20.

City officials have never counted the states or regions that stalk business prey on their streets, most through share representatives or public relations firms or annual junkets to New York. None has drawn the attention Gaines has, however.

Gangs Working Lovers Lanes

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (UPI) — Police have issued a warning to local residents and tourists alike to stay away from "lovers lanes." They say there is a rob-and-rape gang at work which surprises couples, robs them of valuables and sometimes rapes the female. Prime lovers lanes are the areas around the Garrison Savannah racetrack, the national stadium and Brandons Beach.

When Bert Talks You Hear Carter

By REGINA J. HILLS
LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Mimic Bert Harris gets "a big kick out of" spoofing Nebraskans, Alabamians and New Yorkers by impersonating President Carter.

One of his "spoofs" caused motorists to stream by a Nebraska radio station to catch a glimpse of the President allegedly giving a live interview. Harris later had Candid Camera participants in New York believing they were talking to Carter on the telephone.

In each case, Carter was nowhere around. But Bert Harris was and the 26-year-old Lincoln mimic does a very convincing Carter imitation.

Harris, with a broad, toothy smile, says some people in his audiences think he looks like a younger version of Carter. Besides imitating Carter, he mimics other personalities and has an eye on a "showbiz" career.

Changing easily and quickly into his Carter voice, Harris relates the telephone conversation that landed him a role on the Candid Camera show:

Bert: "Do you take suggestions for Candid Camera bits?"
CC: "Yes, we do."

Bert: "Well, Jody (Powell) and I were just sitting around with nothing to do and thought it might be interesting to see peoples' reactions to talking to the President on the telephone."

Bert says the reactions of those he fooled "ranged from absolute fear to absolute chumminess."

To expose Bert's talent, he and his brothers formed a corporation, wrote comedy routines and produced their first record: "Hail to the Teeth."

Among items on the record is a sketch where Carter confronts his White House reorganization staff about a serious problem, a misplaced bathroom. The record also lightheartedly depicts Carter talking to First Lady Rosalyn about his "foreign affairs."

Brother Bob, 31, says southerners as well as Nebraskans find Bert's imitation of Carter believable.

The Harris brothers distributed 700 records, sold 600 in four weeks, then leased their album for national distribution to Gene Norman, president of Crescendo Records, who has an option to make three more records.

"If it sells here, it should sell everywhere," Norman says. "This is a universal subject."

"When I first received the record, I was very skeptical. Things that come in the mail are generally not very professional. The album is fine as it is, but we'll see if we can't improve it."

The six Harris brothers spend holidays and vacations in Opelika, Ala. Brother Jimmy, 22, says Opelika "is about 70 miles as the crow flies from Plains, Ga."

The family frequently convenes at their Opelika cattle ranch, which used to be a southern plantation and a peanut farm. The brainstorming for the record began in Opelika last Christmas when about 25 members of the Harris clan gathered around a table.

"Carter's the kind of man that we can laugh with and enjoy," says brother Bill, 37.

The Harris brothers, obviously proud of Bert, say they are supporting him in his quest for a career in show business. The brothers also have voice roles on the album.

"Many of the mimics are not as good as Bert," says Jimmy. "We still think Bert has the best Carter imitation."

The family's southern Heritage enables the Harris brothers to slide in and out of a southern drawl with ease. When speaking with their normal voices, they sound like Nebraskans.

Bert claims his familiarity with the drawl makes his Carter imitation believable. "I've improved" on the Carter voice, Bert says.

And what if the nationally distributed album flops?

"I'd like to write gags for the President," Bert says.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Thailand, the "Land of Smiles," also is the land of grim-faced cops when laws are violated, a lesson sometimes learned the hard way by tourists as well as Thai citizens.

Thai and foreign violators of the 1 a.m. to 4:30 a.m. curfew are given equal treatment: an overnight stay in jail and a $10 fine.

Farmville Board Enacts House-Number Ordinance

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners last night enacted an ordinance requiring that town residents, within the next 60 days, post their house numbers conspicuously near their front entrances. The Farmville Rescue Squad, the Farmville Fire and Police Departments, the U. S. Post Office and the private United Parcel Service all went on record as requesting this action.

"It's only six minutes to brain death," Rescue Squad representative Bill Oakes said, "and sometimes the time wasted hunting for a house can make the difference."

The ordinance calls for numbers "at least three inches high and colored to contrast with the background." The Board directed that the Housing Inspectors' office clearly define any lot numbers that are not already logically arrived at.

The Board heard a presentation by Management Improvement Corporation of America (MICA), which would like to have the town engage its services to find ways to "increase revenue, decrease expenditures, and improve services to the taxpayers." The firm, which is composed largely of persons trained and experienced in public administration, promises to accept only a portion of whatever savings the town realizes and certifies to be a result of MICA services. The Board promised to study the company's proposals, but took no action last night. The presentation was made by MICA representatives, Larry Amick and Gene Swearingen.

The Board agreed to hold a workshop session Wednesday, Sept. 21, at 7:30 p. m.

A policy was started to apply finance charges of eight per cent to unpaid balances on installment tap-on fees, as an incentive to those owing these fees to go ahead and pay them.

The structure at 111 W. Cotton Street was declared "unfit for human habitation" and was directed to be demolished or repaired immediately.

Some $102,000 was transferred from the capital reserve account to the general fund for Highway 264 Sewer project and $50,000 was transferred to the same fund for demolition of the old high school building.

A public hearing was set for a zoning ordinance amendment which would allow "schools of the arts" in residential areas. Public and private schools are already allowed in these areas, so it's largely a matter of wording. Town Administrator Pat Thomas said.

It was announced that a Candidate Briefing Session will be held the evening of Sept. 12 to familiarize any candidates for municipal offices who wish to attend with town policies, budget, etc.

An ordinance calling for a yield sign at the corner of Pinecrest Drive and Waverly Street was proposed, following a suggestion by Commissioner Sara Albritton.

It was announced that the town may be able to participate in a federally-funded program to signalize railroad crossing with the expenditure by the town being $56. The Board enthusiastically okayed this proposal.

The Mid-East Commission was designated as "Regional Solid Waste Management Agency," following a request for this action from the state government and the Mid-East Commission.

A request for alterations to the Davis Parking lot to allow more space for truck unloading behind J. B. Davis Furniture Company the removal of part of a planted area was denied.

The Board went on record as supporting the Clean Water Bond Issue and the State Road Bond Issue. "We can hang up 264 improvement for the next 40 years if the Road Bond isn't passed," Commissioner W. R. Duke said.

Duke was asked to serve as local chairman of the Electricities campaign to have voters approve an N. C. State Constitutional amendment to allow partial government participation in power generation, so as to keep costs to consumers as low as possible. Duke, who is chairman of the Commissioners' Utilities Committee, agreed to serve.

In completing unfinished business, the Board: —designated an interest rate of 5 per cent to be paid on sewer bonds;

—enacted an ordinance previously discussed to have clearances above sidewalks to be eight feet and to have property owners or the town keep bushes and trees cut clear of sidewalks horizontally, also;

—formalized acceptance of dedications of subdivisions that have been part of Farmville for many years;

—agreed to "wait and see" if the State's high intensity signs and other safety measures taken at the intersection of state-maintained Church and Turnage Streets would cut down on accidents experienced at this corner.

Reports were given by Administrator Thomas on the following: a "highly successful" Highway Improvements Hearing held last month; a new state population estimate of 5,150 for Farmville, which he and the Commissioners said they believe to be "accurate, if not a little high"; the Town Code Revision, which the Town Attorney Jack Lewis has nearly completed; the completed Waverly Street improvements; and a Facilities agreement with Carolina Power and Light Company for town use of some CP & L property "at no cost, but at their pleasure, of course."

A complaint from downtown merchants about yard sales being held by private individuals in the downtown area was heard. No action was taken.

'Imbalance' Report Is Weighed By Martin

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin County Board of Education is to study input from citizens of the Hamilton and Oak City areas and a report being prepared by HEW before making a decision on possible action on what has been termed "a racial imbalance" in elementary schools in these two communities.

At the recent school board meeting, a delegation of parents from these areas claim that the present district lines result in an imbalance of blacks in proportion to whites in the Hamilton and Oak City Elementary Schools and have asked the board to consider possible solutions. Representatives from HEW earlier conducted a survey and their report will be considered along with input from parents in the board's conclusions.

Ms. Belinda Pearson, formerly a Home Economics teacher at Roanoke High School, was recommended by Superintendent Eugene Rogers for the post of Occupational Education Director and was approved by the board. She succeeds Ms. Jeri Bailey, who resigned to take over a position in Washington County.

Also approved was a policy paper based on state guidelines for sick leave and maternity leave for teachers; and a new salary schedule for secretaries in the school system that represents a ten per cent increase over the salary schedule for last year.

A number of transfer into county schools from areas adjacent to Martin County were approved. These do not involve tuition fees.

Fees for school activities and the state of personnel — teachers and other staff members — were both approved, with no change of principalships from that of last year.

Superintendent Rogers announced that bids for Phase I of athletic facilities to be constructed at Roanoke High School will be opened on September 22.

FRENCH MEDAL

DEAUVILLE, France (AP) — Actor Gregory Peck was awarded the French order of Commander of Arts and Letters Tuesday from French Culture Minister Michel d'Ornano. The actor was praised for his long film career that included 50 movies in thirty years.

School Bd...

However, Nelson I. Baldree, principal of the Grifton School, spoke in favor of the merger, saying he had noticed a decline in population at Grifton School since he became principal in 1969.

Baldree also said he felt the study was adequate and the consolidated school would provide the best comprehensive program for the middle grades.

Also, Supt. Ott Alford expressed his support of the consolidation move.

In other action, Russ Cotton, principal of Farmville Central High School, told the board that the school's band had been invited to perform in the Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans the first week in February.

The board endorsed a request from Cotton that the Farmville Central High School, in conjunction with the Farmville Booster Club, be allowed to solicit funds for the trip.

Three recommendations by the superintendent regarding Policy GA, the County Planning Team, were approved. The superintendent recommended:

— John McKnight be named chairman of the team for 1977-78.

— The name "Pitt County Planning Team" be changed to "Pitt Advisory Team" and that the "Local Planning Team" be changed to read "The Local Advisory Team."

— A change to free the principal (or the school representative serving on the Pitt County Advisory Team) from any obligation to hold to the majority opinion of his staff if and when in the course of action and interaction, it appears best to go with a compromise or negotiated position.

The superintendent recommended that a number of persons be approved to serve as assistant principals during the 1977-78 school year.

Positions approved include Ayden-Grifton, Frederick Parks; D.H. Conley, Jimmy Dunn and Melvin Roundtree; Farmville Central, Leroy Redden and James McAdams; North Pitt, Farney Moore and Ernest McNair; A.G. Cox, Johnny Pinner; Bethel, Gretchen Weeks; Chicod, Bruce Gray; Farmville Middle, Beth Ward; G.R. Whitfield, Leroy Winstead; Grifton, Jean Musselwhite; and Wellcome, Tom Council. A position for Ayden Grammar School has not yet been filled.

The board also approved a request by C.W. Everett Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections, naming the following persons to serve as "Special Registration Commissioners" to register voters at the county high schools: D.H. Conley, Connie Garris; Farmville Central, Olivia M. Carman; Ayden-Grifton, Carolyn Schetz; and North Pitt, Deana Kennedy.

At the request of Thomas L. Craft, associate superintendent, the board rejected bids received on a building advertised for sale by the carpentry department at D.H. Conley School.

In other action, the board voted:

— To retain Policy IEB (definitions and quality point assignments for Levels I, II and III).

— To award certificates to those students who did not meet the 22-unit requirement for graduation.

— To authorize the superintendent to sign IEP forms assuring no discrimination against handicapped students in the county school system.

— To grant the superintendent permission to contact the State Board of Education and oppose the exclusion of maintenance and custodial personnel and secretarial personnel from the longevity payment plan.

— To employ C.W. Everett Sr., attorney, to represent the board in the Lake Ellsworth dispute.

— To distribute Governor Hunt's survey form through students in order that each home might receive a copy. The surveys would be filled out and returned to the Governor's of-

Strong Leaf Prices Seen

FARMVILLE — Grade for grade, prices were stronger on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday than at any time this season, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Demand for quality grades was better than in the past several years, he said. Several sheets of cutters sold for from $1.97 to $2.04 per pound and were company-purchased.

Better grades of leaf sold for as much as $1.48 a pound, with the top practical price being $1.47 per pound. Medium grades were steady to slightly higher. Volume consisted of more leaf grades than at any time this season. Primings and nondescript grades accounted for a smaller per cent of volume than on the last sale day.

Stabilization receipts amounted to 12,676 pounds or 2.95 per cent of gross sales.

The market sold yesterday 429,351 pounds for $571,822, an average of $133.18 per hundred pounds. To date, the market has sold 12,896,004 pounds for $14,760,290, for a season average of $114.46 per hundred pounds.

By The Associated Press

A total of 469 persons died in traffic accidents nationwide over the three-day Labor Day weekend.

Ancient Amman Stymies Old Testament Prophets

BY DAVID D. PEARCE
AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — The Old Testament prophet Jeremiah predicted that ancient Amman would become a "desolate heap." Ezekiel said it would be made a stable for camels and occupied by Bedouins.

Testament prophecy was temporarily fulfilled. Arab travelers described Amman as a "field of ruins". But like the proverbial phoenix, the city now known as Amman, with a present-day population of nearly 700,000, has risen again. It is now six times as large as it was at the height of its prosperity in days of old. Relentless modernity and the inevitable exodus from farm to city have sent the Jordanian capital sprawling from its original seven hills to cover more than 14. It is a modern city with modernistic buildings, but the richness of its past is evident everywhere.

Amman still draws 80 percent of its water from Ras el Ain, the venerable spring that earned the old town the nickname "city of waters". At the heart of the town is the Roman amphitheater, built by Trajan in the first century A.D. The nymphaeum of Philadelphia crouches in the Wadi Amman, whose rushing waters cooled the ancients as they relaxed near the road to Damascus.

On the hill called Jebel Qalaa is the citadel of Amman and Philadelphia — a splendid defensive position rising some 300 feet above the Wadi Amman. It was made more unassailable by a spring and rain cisterns that enabled defenders to withstand long sieges.

The Bible records that it was during the Israelite siege of Amman that Uriah — whose wife, Bathsheba, had been seduced by King David — was killed.

Little physical evidence remains of anything before the Roman occupation, since the legionnaires leveled the citadel and callously pushed the rubble of earlier ages over its steep sides into the narrow valleys below.

However, a fine Roman containing wall of "opus quadratum" (jointed blocks without cement) can be seen, as well as the remains of a temple of Hercules, traditional god of the Ammonites.

THE JORDANIAN CAPITAL — Amman is a modern city with modernistic buildings, but the richness of its history is everywhere. At the heart of town is the amphitheater of Philadelphia, the Roman name for Amman, which was built in the first century. (UPI Photo)

But the greatest treasures lie inside the little building on the citadel that houses the Archaeological Museum of Jordan.

Looming out of the iron age in the 9th century B.C., are great red-clay Moabite coffins from Dhiban (Biblical Dibon) the one-time capital of Moab, which lies about 15 miles east of the Dead Sea. They stand grotesquely on their feet like featureless mummies in one corner of the museum.

The Greeks and Romans are represented by pottery, jewelry, coins and statuary well-exhibited in glass cases.

Jericho's once-magnificent Hisham Palace provides 8th century Islamic art from the days of Moslem rule before the time of the crusades, such as the brown-russet-black painted partridges walking in a dignified line across the geometric lattice-work of a broken cornice. And then, of course, there are the Dead Sea scrolls.

They are inconspicuously placed, in the rear righthand corner of the museum. Among them are some of the famous "Qumran Fragments" from the 1st century B.C., discovered by a young Bedouin in 1947 as he searched for a lost goat. They are small, yellow-brown bits of manuscript clearly marked with Hebrew characters.

Opposite, cut into 23 segments, lies the equally legendary "copper scroll" discovered in 1952 on the northwest shore of the Dead Sea, not far from the site of the original discovery.

This curious greenish scroll details a fabulous treasure of 200 tons of gold and precious objects said to have been hidden in an area between modern Hebron and Nablus, on what is now the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan.

"Was it no more than a fable?" asks the card briefly explaining the history of the finds.

Emerging from the museum, one is struck by the peculiar visual thrill provided by the slender minarets of the many mosques of Amman, poking towards heaven from the tops of each hill in the city.

Mohammed, a 45-year-old taxi driver, shakes his head as he noses through the noise and traffic of the modern city.

His passenger asks if there are many Bedouins left now, remembering the words of Ezekiel.

"There are no Bedouins now," he says. "They've turned in their tents for villas, cars and color TV."

"If you call them Bedouins, they get angry."

The 30-year-old feud with Israel has left a strong imprint on modern Amman. Establishment of the modern Jewish state in 1949 generated an influx of Palestinian refugees that has greatly boosted the population of a town that as recently as the turn of the century was little more than a small colony of Circassian refugees settled by the Turks.

Ironically, the Moslem Circassian settlers also came to Amman as refugees — from religious persecution by the Christians under Czar Nicholas in Russia.

Located at the historic confluence of the three great monotheistic religions, history has marked Amman heavily with the totems of each — star, cross and crescent.

You Don't Have To Be Rich To Acquire Stock

You don't have to be rich to invest in the stock market. Some individuals might begin an investment program on a grand scale, but most people don't start that way. If you have established an emergency cash reserve, are adequately insured, and have excess funds after meeting ordinary living expenses, you can become an investor.

Where do you start? A little homework should be done first. You should learn how the markets work, how orders are executed, what it will cost, and have a thorough understanding of the risks involved. New York Stock Exchange member firms can provide you with informative brochures to get you started. Stock brokers can answer your questions and provide professional guidance on achieving your goal.

Two of the ways a beginning investor can put his money to work are dollar-cost-averaging and investment clubs. Dollar-cost-averaging involves the periodic investment of the same dollar amount in one stock or a package of stocks. Over a long period of time, the average cost per share will be lower than the average of the purchase prices. Fewer shares will be bought when prices are high and more when prices are low.

For example, excluding the effect of commissions, assume you made $150 quarterly purchases over a year's time in a stock which cost you $25, $20, $30, and $20 a share. At the end of the period you would have accumulated 26 shares with a total investment of $600. The average of the purchase prices is $23.75, but your average cost per share is $23.08: $600 divided by 26 shares.

Payments must be made on a regular basis and over a long period of time if this method is to work. There is no guarantee that the market value of the stock will be higher than your average cost when you decide to sell the stock.

Another method of investing for beginners is an investment club. A group of people with similar goals each contribute an agreed-upon amount of money, usually on a monthly basis. These pooled funds are used to buy common stocks. Membership can include 10-25 people and the monthly contribution can be as little or as much as the club desires. Active participation in an investment club can help you learn more about the stock market and the stock selection process. It can provide valuable practical experience for later investing on your own.

These are only two of the ways to begin an investment program. It can be done on any size monthly payment either individually or through an investment club. A six-figure income is not a prerequisite to investing.

Most 'Secure' About Finances

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most Americans feel secure about their financial status.

So reports the American Council of Life Insurance, which did a national study of how we feel about our economic futures. The study showed that of those with incomes of less than $7,500, some 52 percent were unworried about money. Seventy percent of those with incomes between $7,500 and $14,999 said they felt secure, while 81 percent of those with incomes of $15,000 or more weren't worried at all.

Spain's King Carlos To Begin A Western Tour

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

MADRID (AP) — King Juan Carlos will leave Thursday for Venezuela and Central America on a voyage to spread Spain's new democratic image in many of the nations it ruled nearly three centuries ago.

"The king is not a 20th century conquistador, but he is out to win friends for Spain," said a government official arranging the trip.

"He wants to underscore his monarchy's turn to democracy and try to repair ties with Hispanic America damaged over the past 40 years."

Juan Carlos became head of the state after the death 21 months ago of Spain's longtime dictator Gen. Francisco Franco.

Groomed by the rightist general for the job, the king immediately began moving Spain toward a Western-style democracy after nearly four decades of iron-fisted domestic rule by Franco that also restricted trade and relations with the nation's former colonies.

With Greek-born Queen Sofia, the 39-year-old king plans a goodwill visit to six countries in nine days. The trip will be his first major effort as Latin American diplomacy, backing up earlier visits to the United States, West Germany, France and Italy.

Apart from brief stops in the Dominican Republic en route to Washington and a visit to Colombia last year to mark Columbus Day, the king's visit will be the first time a reigning Spanish monarch has set foot in the former empire.

His largely ceremonial schedule will be the same in Venezuela, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Panama: talks with each head of state, formal dinners and the laying of wreaths.

But the king also is expected to emphasize the political changes at home and Spain's desire to improve cultural, diplomatic and trade ties, the official said.

Juan Carlos will be backstopped by Spanish Foreign Minister Marcelino Oreja.

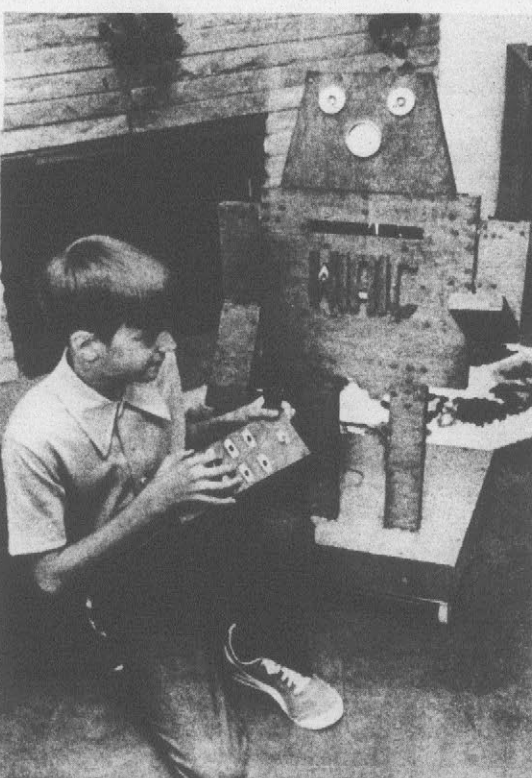

Under Franco, Spain maintained diplomatic relations with all the nations the king will visit but the relationships often were hampered by political differences with the general.

Mexico, whose revolt against Spanish rule led to the independence of Guatemala, Costa Rica, Panama and Honduras in 1821, refused to recognize the Franco government after the end of the Spanish civil war in 1939 and gave the defeated Republican government the right to set up headquarters in Mexico City.

Spain and Mexico re-established diplomatic relations this year to end the feud, and Juan Carlos' Central America trip is seen as a signal of Spain's freshened interest in Latin America before an official visit this fall to Madrid by Mexican president Jose Lopez Portillo.

The king put back his trip one day to Sept. 8 to allow Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez to return from Washington after attending the signing of the U.S.-Panama agreement on the future of the Panama Canal.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Here's another hand from "Test Your Play as Declarer," by Paul Luckacs and Jeff Rubens (Hart Publishing, paperback, 189 pages, $3.95). To solve the problem as presented in the book, cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and see how you would play six spades after West leads the jack of trumps. You have bid well to reach slam. Once your cue-bidding sequence elicited the information that North had second-round diamond control, slam had to be a good bet. When dummy comes down, you can see that there is nothing to the play if trumps are 2-2. You will be able to ruff a heart and lose only a heart. Even if trumps are 3-1, it seems that you have nothing to worry about since, after the lead of the jack, dummy's ten of trumps is high and you can ruff a heart without fear of being overruffed.

But don't let the simplicity of the hand lull you into a false sense of security. If you win the trump lead, draw a second round of trumps, and then try to cash the ace-king of hearts, you will be defeated. East will ruff the second heart and you will end up having to lose another heart.

You can protect against this quite simply. It is correct to draw a second round of trumps, for the suit might break 2-2. However, when West shows out on the second trump the hand is still virtually a laydown. Cash the ace of hearts and cross to dummy with the king of diamonds. Now lead a heart from dummy.

East is helpless. If he ruffs, he will be trumping your losing heart, and dummy will still have a trump to handle your remaining heart loser. If he discards, you can win the king of hearts and then ruff a heart with the ten of trumps. Depending on East's discards, return to your hand with the safest minor to draw the last trump and claim your contract, conceding only a heart trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Learn to find the winning attack with Charles

Actor Andy Griffith Kept On The Run

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Think of Andy Griffith and you may think of a good old boy who'd rather loaf than labor.

ACTRESS HURT — Child actress Danielle Spencer (above), 12, was seriously injured Tuesday in a Los Angeles car accident in which her father died. She plays the impish little sister in TV's "What's Happening" series. (AP Laserphoto)

But lately he's been busier than a flute player's upper lip during the William Tell Overture. Last night, the country boy who sprang to fame as a rustic sheriff on CBS for eight years popped up as President of the United States in the opening stanza of ABC's "Washington: Behind Closed Doors."

And last week, he was at MGM, finishing the second of two TV movies — playing Abel Marsh, a gunless sheriff at a California lake resort — in what he hopes will become a one-hour weekly series on NBC. Griffith, 45, a tall, surprisingly intense native of Mt. Airy, N.C., said his new venture is the third version of an idea he's been hot on for several years, a rural cop show featuring both humor and mystery. He said the first version aired on ABC about three years ago — with him in it — as a movie called "Winter Kill." He wanted to make it a series but the network didn't. Despite high ratings, he said, "they choose not to have it on the air (as a series) because it showed earth instead of asphalt."

"They were afraid — because I have a Southern accent and the show was set in a small town — that right away it was 'Green Acres' or 'Petticoat Junction.'" agent and a visiting scribe. He also discussed with Linke assorted battle plans to publicize his Sept. 20 film, including an appearance on the Dinah Shore show, a five-city tour and 33 telephone interviews in three days. Hope also was expressed a booking on NBC's "Today" show could be arranged.

Raising Of Retirement Age A 'Possible' Solution

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans at some future time may have to work beyond age 65 to qualify for full Social Security benefits, if some serious students of the system have their way.

The mere mention of this possibility recently provoked an uproar, even though there is no pending legislation and no proposal by President Carter's administration for such a change.

Congress is now working on a more pressing problem: how to keep the system's reserves from running out in about five years. There is no real prospect that Congress will permit such an outcome, which would mean cutting off or reducing benefits.

Actual drafting of legislation to refinance Social Security is scheduled to begin in a House subcommittee Sept. 12.

However, while that subcommittee and the corresponding Senate panel were conducting hearings on Carter's proposals to provide Social Security funds, they received testimony on a wide variety of future threats and present inconsistencies in the huge system that collects taxes from more than nine out of ten U.S. workers and their employers and pays benefits to 33.3 million persons.

A major concern is the aging trend of the population. By early in the next century there may be one retired person to every two active workers carrying the tax burden of the system — instead of the present ratio of one retired person to every three workers.

Other problems Congress was told it will have to face sooner or later included:

—Eliminating discrimination against women.

—The perennial demand that the retired not have their benefits reduced because of money earned from a job.

—The advisability of drawing a clearer line between needs that should be met by Social Security and by welfare systems, and financing each accordingly.

—Deciding how much of a worker's income should be replaced by Social Security and how much should be left to company and individual pension plans, and how government could encourage these.

—The possibility of merging Social Security with other public retirement programs, such as the Civil Service system for government workers.

Little public attention had been given to the possibility of raising the standard retirement age until Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps mentioned it, as a personal concern, in an interview.

Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., of the House Committee on Aging, fired off a letter saying he was shocked and urging Mrs. Kreps to "withdraw your proposal."

She replied she had made no proposal, the administration was considering none and so there was nothing to withdraw.

But, she added, she thinks the possibility may have to be examined in the future.

Some nongovernmental witnesses did make such proposals to the committees. A typical one was to add one year to the standard retirement age in 1985 and two more years at five-year intervals, bringing the age to 68.

Persons still would be able to retire at 65, but with a reduced benefit, just as they now may retire at 62, but with a 20 per cent reduction.

A long-standing complaint about the treatment of women under Social Security stems from its provisions affecting a dependent spouse — usually the wife — who nevertheless has worked and paid the payroll tax.

When she retires, she receives either the benefit earned by her contributions or half the amount of her husband's benefit, whichever is greater, but not both. Accordingly, in most cases, she is no better off than if she had never worked and never paid the payroll tax, since a nonworking wife is entitled to half the amount of a husband's benefit when they both retire.

This and other provisions relating to women reflect 1930's views that a standard family consisted of a working husband and a nonworking wife caring for children.

But the committees heard testimony that this description now fits only 16 per cent of American families, that recent statistics show 54 per cent of all working-age women are in the labor force, including 44 per cent of married women and 29 per cent of women with children under six.

Supreme Court decisions during the past year force some change. The law provided that a wife was automatically a dependent, but a husband was not entitled to corresponding benefits based on a working wife's earnings unless it were proved he actually depended on her economically. The court held this distinction unconstitutional.

The decision was estimated to affect 520,000 men at a cost to Social Security of $515 million. Among other things, it requires payment of dependent or widower benefits to some men who had actually been the main support of the family, if their employment — for example, by the federal government — were outside Social Security coverage.

In response, the administration has proposed establishing a dependency test applicable to both husbands and wives. The dependent would be the member of the couple who had less than half its total income in the three years prior to retirement, disability or death. In most cases, this would be the wife.

One result is that by a little moonlighting in private employment, a well-paid government employe with Civil Service retirement rights can qualify for a second retirement payment from Social Security.

Although the system at its inception was designed to care only for workers, it has expanded to provide benefits for wives, surviving spouses, deceased workers' children through college age, dependent parents and dependent grandchildren.

Some of those who emphasize what they call the welfare aspects of the system say this would justify some use of general funds. Regular federal welfare programs are so funded.

One drastic suggestion was to restructure the system into two layers: a basic subsistence payment paid at least in part from general funds and a supplementary payment tied directly to working life contributions.

About 9 million workers, less than 10 per cent of the total, are still not covered by Social Security. Federal government employes are the largest single uncovered group.

Civil Service and other governmental retirement systems operate on different principles, with different contribution scales and benefit computations, from those of Social Security.

There have been proposals for merging the various government-operated retirement plans into Social Security to create one compatible, better-financed system.
