New Airplane-Use Report Studied By Justice Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's criminal fraud division is studying a new report by the comptroller of the currency which reportedly shows that Bert Lance widely used bank-owned aircraft for family and political purposes. A spokesman for the Justice Department confirmed Sunday that the division had received the study. But he said its reference was routine and did not necessarily indicate there would be any prosecution. President Carter, meanwhile, was said to be considering the postponement until next week of a news conference which almost certainly would be focused on the financial affairs of his budget director, including the question of whether Lance should resign.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said today no final decision has been made on whether to put off the session, originally scheduled for Wednesday. But he indicated the President may want to wait until Lance completes his testimony scheduled to begin Thursday before the Senate Government Affairs Committee.

In Lance's native Georgia, the president-elect of the American Bankers Association said today that the Lance affair "is casting a pall over the banking industry... it may give banking a black eye if it goes unchallenged."

A. A. Mulligan, in a speech prepared for the National Bank Card Convention in Atlanta, said he doesn't know if Lance actually has done anything wrong, but some of the alleged activities "are clearly not typical of banks in this country."

"I see red whenever I hear anyone dismiss the allegations about overdrafts and improper disclosure about loans as being 'just typical business practices,'" Mulligan said.

While confirming the existence of the comptroller's report, the Justice Department spokesman refused to discuss the contents.

But the Washington Post said in today's editions that the report says Lance, who heads the Office of Management and Budget, used two planes owned by the Georgia banks he headed to take personal vacations, to fly his children to school, to commute and to take part in politics.

The report came amid new suggestions that Lance resign to avoid embarrassment to Carter and as the Senate committee prepared for its second week of hearings into the case.

The comptroller of the currency's report was shown on Saturday to members and staff employees of the Senate committee, which last week began hearings to look into questionable practices allegedly used by Lance while he headed the National Bank of Georgia and the Calhoun (Ga.) First National Bank.

Quoting sources said to have seen parts of the comptroller's report, the Post said the controls the banks used to keep track of the airplanes used by Lance were so loose that even the pilot was able to take personal trips in the aircraft.

The Post said Lance asserted in the report that the trips he took in the planes were business-related and therefore properly charged to the banks.

Arrest Eleven Demonstrators

CHICAGO (AP) — Eleven persons were arrested and four others hospitalized, three in serious condition, in a demonstration by whites opposed to a voluntary school busing plan.

Ten of those arrested in Sunday night's incident were whites and all the injured were white. The 10 whites were arrested on a variety of charges ranging from disorderly conduct to failure to obey a police officer's order to disperse, police said.

The injured were struck in two separate accidents involving cars trying to pass through a street crowded with the Southwest Side demonstrators.

Authorities said two teen-aged girls and one teen-aged boy were taken to Holy Cross Hospital where both were listed

School Merger Bid Faces County Board

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet at 6 p.m. Wednesday to consider a proposed resolution requesting the Greenville City Board of Education and the Pitt County Board of Education to plan and implement a plan of merger for the two school districts.

The meeting will be held in the Law Library at the Court House.

The proposed resolution, which lists seven reasons for the requested merger, says in part, "The Pitt County Board of Commissioners hereby petitions and requests," the two boards, "to appoint a committee from each Board to study, plan, and implement a plan of merger to merge the school districts... into a single school district and administrative unit for all Pitt County Schools."

The resolution also says, "Time is of the essence and the plan of merger should be approved by both Boards of Education and submitted to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in time for the next regular session of the Legislature to adopt enabling legislation if necessary."

The reasons for the request as listed in the proposed resolution include:

"Because of continuous disagreement as to district attendance areas, and district lines, the school children of Pitt County and their parents have become confused as to which schools in which school districts they should attend. This disagreement has resulted in competition for school funds based on the number of pupils assigned to the schools in each district.

"As a result the school children, their parents, and tax payers have been the ones to suffer from this conflict.

"The two school administrative units can not agree on the priority of capital expenditure of funds and the sharing of capital outlay funds by tax levy and bond issue. This disagreement would be eliminated if the school districts were merged and available funds could be utilized in the best interest of the school children regardless of where the child lives."

The resolution continues, "The administration and fiscal management would be much more efficient and economical and programs for the education of the school children could be better developed and administered which would accrue to the advantage of the school children, their parents and the taxpayers of Pitt County.

"The student population and school census does not justify the expense of two administrations," and "proportionate representation on the single Board of Education after the merger could be provided for in the plan of merger."

The proposed resolution also said, "The interest of each school child would be a paramount consideration of a single school board instead of being a pawn in the struggle for funds based on attendance in each school administrative unit."

The final reason listed in the resolution said, "all Pitt County School Districts have been merged into one school district outside of Greenville School District and the Pitt County citizens have voted to assume all school bond indebtedness including the Greenville School District. The effect of this Act was to make the premissive supplemental Tax Levies for the support of the schools in Pitt County equal in the Pitt County School Administrative Unit and the Greenville School Administrative Unit; therefore, any statutory procedure pertaining to continuing in force any Supplemental School Tax in the administrative units involved would present no problem; however, the County has levied taxes for current expense which provides equal funds for each school child in Pitt County regardless of the school district in which he resides."

N.C. Natural Gas Supply Outlook Like Last Year's

By DALLAS LEE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Another bitter winter for North Carolina natural gas consumers is already a certainty. All that remains to be seen is whom the consumers should blame.

"The Federal Power Commission has done one helluva lousy job in regulating the natural gas supply," said Hugh Wells, director of the public staff of the state Utilities Commission. "The producers are able to provide less and less gas and make just as much money."

William Hill, vice president-sales for N.C. Natural Gas Corp., said his firm and other suppliers already know the upcoming winter in terms of supply "will be similar to last year, when we had the coldest winter in 100 years" and gas was cut off to thousands of firms across the state.

But Hill, participating with Wells and others on an energy panel at the annual meeting of the N.C. Associated Press News Council, blamed the crisis on regulation. He said deregulation of natural gas is the only hope for stimulating sufficient gas flows from Transcontinental Pipeline Corp. (Transco), the only supplier to dealers in North Carolina.

The N.C. Nitrogen Complex at Tunis, the largest gas consumer in the state, already has planned to lay off 51 employees on Nov. 1 for the winter season rather than pay for the available but more expensive emergency supplies that Transco can arrange with producers in the Southwest. The Tunis plant has been told by N.C. Natural Gas Corp. that it will be cut off from regular supplies for five winter months.

Panelist Donald V. Borst of Long Grove, Ill., general manager of the plant foods division of CF Industries, operator of the Tunis fertilizer facility, said his firm may eventually feel forced to shut down the plant entirely.

He said the energy supply situation in North Carolina is so serious that 34 firms recently rejected potential plant sites in the state.

"Only high-priced emergency gas will be available to industries this winter in North Carolina," Borst told some 50 newspaper editors. He blamed the situation on unfair regulation by the state Utilities Commission. He said the commission placed agriculture-related firms on a low priority for gas and refused to permit Transco to distribute the cost of emergency gas purchases among all customers.

Borst said North Carolina's high percentage of gas-consuming industries makes it the hardest hit of all states. He said that since Transco is not permitted to buy emergency gas on a cost-shared basis, gas-consuming industries — largely in the South — suffer, while residential users — largely farther up the pipeline in the North — benefit from artificially low prices.

Electric energy supplies look stronger, at least on paper, said Carl Horn Jr., board chairman of Duke Power Co.

"Because of the recession of 1974 and 1975 and a relatively flat increase in usage, most of the utilities in the Southeast find themselves in a relatively healthy reserve situation," Horn said.

He said Duke Power will have a 36.2 per cent reserve generating capacity above expected usage. Threats to that, he said, are a potential strike by United Mine Workers and potential construction delays because of revenue shortages.

He said wildcat strikes in the coal mines already have cut Duke's coal supply from a planned 90 days to 59 days.

Arrest Five Men For Alleged Embezzlement

Five men, including the supervisor-manager of the Sunnyside Eggs feed mill, were arrested here Friday and charged in connection with alleged embezzlement incidents at the firm involving over $28,000 worth of grain.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that Dalton Wayne Bailey, 101 Westwood Drive, Greenville, was arrested on 19 counts of embezzlement at Sunnyside Eggs and placed under $50,000 bond.

Joyner, and $1,000 for Columbus Joyner.

All five arrests were made Friday afternoon, the sheriff reported.

Trial dates have been set for Wednesday in District Court here.

DESPERATE FOR CLOTHES

Clothes, especially men's, are desperately needed by a number of elderly patients who have just been transferred from Cherry Hospital to Greenville Nursing Villa.

"Some of these men have nothing but a pair of pants and a t-shirt to their names," Mental Health Center Geriatric Worker Sandy Stokes said. "We especially need smaller sizes for both men and women, because many of them are thin."

Good clean clothing may be left at the nursing home office. Inquiries may be directed to Ms. Stokes at 752-7151 or 752-9374. Donations should be given as soon as possible because of the extreme need of the persons involved.

ATLANTA (AP) — Allegations against federal budget director Bert Lance are "casting a pall over the banking industry" and despite charges to the contrary are not standard practice among U.S. bankers, the president-elect of the American Bankers Association said today.

"I don't know whether Bert Lance has done anything wrong, because I don't know what he has done," said A. A. Milligan.

"But I do know that this whole affair is casting a pall over the banking industry. I do know that it may give banking a black eye if it goes unchallenged."

Milligan made his remarks in a speech prepared for delivery to the opening session of the National Bank Card Convention in Atlanta.

"Quite frankly," Milligan said, "I see red whenever I hear anyone dismiss the allegations about overdrafts and improper disclosure about loans as being 'just typical business practices among bankers.'"

"The practices alleged to have occurred are clearly not typical of banks in this country," he said.

Milligan said a poll of 176 banking leaders, conducted by the ABA at a meeting in Chicago Friday, showed that two-thirds of the banks represented have more stringent overdraft policies for bank officers than for customers.

"About half the bankers — 83 of 176 — said they absolutely do not tolerate any overdrafts by their officers, even though in some cases customers might receive overdraft courtesies," he said.

Seventy one per cent of the bankers said they require their officers to report all personal borrowings to their board of directors to avoid potential conflicts of interest, he said.

Speaking to allegations that Lance failed to disclose a series of personal loans, Milligan said nearly three-fourths of the banks responding to the poll required their officers to report all loans to the board of directors.

"There are 14,000 banks and a quarter-million bank officers in this country, and I will stack up their ethical practices against those followed by any other industry in the United States any day of the week," said Milligan, president of the Bank of A. Levy in Oxnard, Calif. "I'll be happy to live with the results."

Couple Accused Of Abduction Held In N.C. Jail

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A banker's daughter kidnapped leaving a college fraternity party rested in her comfortable brick home today while a couple accused of her abduction sat in a North Carolina jail.

Annette Adams, 19, a pretty blonde Vanderbilt University sophomore from Maryville, spent 56 hours and 25 minutes in captivity. Her kidnapers picked up a $150,000 ransom in Knoxville just before midnight Saturday and released her unharmed at 4:15 a.m. EDT Sunday in front of a Morganton, N.C. motel about 120 miles away on Interstate 40.

She was forced into a stolen car Thursday at 9:50 p.m. EDT as she left Sigma Nu fraternity near the campus of the exclusive, private Nashville college about 180 miles from her home. She said her abductors blindfolded her and drove from motel to motel over the weekend while they negotiated with her parents by telephone the delivery of a satchel of unmarked bills.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Adams, flew to Morganton to bring their daughter home by car. Annette told reporters in her driveway, "I was not hurt. I was well treated. They did not bother me. They never threatened to hurt me at all. They moved me around a lot. I was blindfolded most of the time but I could usually tell where I was by leaks in the blindfold and such. I'd never seen them before but I'd know them if they walked up to me now."

Breaking into tears, she said, "I'm glad to be home."

Newsmen, many of them aware of the kidnapping since Friday, neither published nor broadcast accounts of the case until Miss Adams' release. Federal officials said the kidnappers threatened to kill their hostage if the abduction was publicized.

Arrested near Conover, N.C. at the end of a police chase were Shelby Ann Baker, 28, and Wayne Edward Garrity, 29, both of Statesville, N.C. They were charged with kidnapping and kidnapping and demanding ransom. They were arraigned Sunday night and were to have a removal hearing Monday afternoon before their return to Tennessee.

Authorities said that the couple headed east, toward Statesville, on the super-highway after freeing Miss Adams. They abandoned their car beside the road, fled afoot through a woods and found a station wagon for sale at a house.

Using $1,900 from the ransom, the FBI said, they bought the car at about 5 a.m. but made the seller suspicious and he alerted authorities.

A highway patrol trooper spotted the car and pursued. Several police cars joined him. The fleeing car hit and heavily damaged one patrol cruiser. A second cruiser crashed into the rear of the station wagon when the wagon rammaged a dumpster in a motel parking lot at Conover, 44 miles from Morganton.

No shots were fired and the only weapon found in the possession of Miss Baker and Garrity was a knife, the FBI said.

Adams is president of The Bank of Maryville, an institution with $155 million assets and the largest bank in Blount County. Away in Chicago at an American Bankers Association legislation seminar, he learned of the kidnapping when he returned Friday afternoon, a few hours after his wife Anne received the first telephoned ransom demand.

Hal Hardin, U.S. attorney in Nashville, said four students outside the fraternity saw a girl forced into a car by a man and a woman. A spokeswoman for the university said Miss Adams, a member of Chi Omega sorority, was leaving a party at the fraternity - two blocks from her high-rise dormitory - and was unescorted. One witness jotted down the license plate number. Police later learned the car was stolen from a shopping center. They recovered it Sunday in Nashville.

A Vanderbilt official said the students reported the abduction to the campus security department and it was turned over to the Metropolitan Police Department as a possible kidnapping. But not until Miss Adams' roommate reported Friday morning that Annette had not returned to her room did authorities know they had a bona fide kidnapping and the victim's identity.

Mrs. Adams spoke to her daughter at least twice during the abduction, once during the first call and again Saturday night. The house, a brick ranch in a neighborhood of $100,000 homes, received five ransom calls Friday and several more Saturday. Four payoffs were arranged. The Adamses, who went without sleep through the ordeal, made each of them. It was not until the fourth that the kidnapers picked up the satchel.

FBI agents, sometimes using an airplane with sophisticated night-vision gear, monitored each payoff. One was made at a trailer park where the parents were directed after reporting as ordered to a Knoxville bus station Friday night. Another that night and two Saturday night were in a dark area along a busy Knoxville street. Forced to maintain a safe distance, agents missed the pickup.

The Catawba County sheriff's office said $148,090 was recovered. The serial numbers of the bills were recorded at the bank. Miss Adams was given $25 when she was freed.

"We are deeply grateful to the press and news media for containing this thing until we were able to get our daughter back," Adams said. "We are all tired and very thankful." Asked to describe the weekend, he said, "Oh golly, there's no way. You're completely at their mercy and you have to follow every instruction."

Miss Adams has a brother, William Jr., 21, a University of Tennessee student who was in California. The family is active in civic affairs and sports and her father is past president of the Tennessee Bankers Association. His daughter was captain of the Maryville High girl's basketball team, an attendant in a high school basketball pageant and has won several local tennis tournaments.

Ancient Russian Tales Get Official Sanction

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — A 77-year-old storyteller whose tales were once banned in the Soviet Union came down from the mountains of Tadzhikistan recently to sing the ancient tale of Gurugli — "the son of the grave."

Hundreds of people gathered at an officially sponsored storytelling contest in the Tadzhik capital of Dushanbe to hear Khikmat Rizo tell of the hero whose feats form one of the great oral sagas of Afghanistan, Iran, Turkey and Soviet Central Asia.

Twenty years ago, the ancient legends of Central Asia were condemned as feudal holdovers and left to die as Russian influence moved in.

But in recent years — while spreading the doctrine of communism, the Russian language and Kremlin domination through the 100 nationalities in its territory — the Soviet Union has also begun to work at preserving aspects of local cultures.

Now a new law on preservation of historical monuments has been accompanied by a growing respect for the literatures, languages, music and dance of a Soviet population that ranges from the Europeans of the Baltic states to the Tatars and Kazakhs of Asian regions.

In Tadzhikistan, where the Pamir Mountains form "the roof of the world" between Afghanistan, Pakistan and China, Rizo now has the encouragement of Soviet officials as he passes on the ancient legends he learned as a boy.

On their visit to Dushanbe, Rizo and his pupil, Azizbek Ziyeyev, were sponsored by the Tadzhik government's official Ministry of Culture.

According to the Tass News Agency, a recording of some of the best poems from the Gurugli saga is being issued, and a 20-volume collection of Tadzhik folklore is also being compiled.

In modern Dushanbe, where the Kremlin has brought paved streets, running water and literacy, much of Tadzhikistan's mountain culture is being forgotten.

Now instead of gathering in nomads' tents or mountain huts to hear the storytellers, Dushanbe's half-million residents go out for an evening of ballet or opera at ornate new halls.

Or they stay at home in their Soviet apartment blocks to watch Moscow television, or read Tadzhik translations of Shakespeare, Tolstoy and Pushkin.

But throughout the years of change, and throughout the years when their legends were forbidden, the mountain storytellers have kept alive the legend of Gurugli, the wild hero who toppled feudal landlords and abducted beautiful women.

The leader of a band of common men — a stable boy, a blacksmith's son, a butcher's son — Gurugli is said to have been born after the death and burial of his mother, earning the name which means "son of the grave."

Parts of his story have now been collected into books, but parts of it still live only in the memories of storytellers like Rizo.

Although Tass described Rizo as shy on his visit to the big city, the small, turbaned man is famed throughout the Pamir Mountains as the "gafiz of gafizes," or storyteller of storytellers.

Another super day is in store for the Tar Heel state. With a large cool high pressure system firmly in control, today will be a carbon copy of Sunday. This means bright sunny skies, mild temperatures and light winds.

Conditions will begin to change when the center of the high pressure area now over northern Virginia will move out to sea. There will be increasing cloudiness in the western sections along with scattered afternoon thundershowers.

Along with the clouds will come warmer temperatures, generally in the 80s.

Early morning clouds cleared out in the southeast yesterday leaving the entire state under bright sunshine. Temperatures reached only the low 70s and upper 80s, due to the low originating in Canada.

Shortly after sunset temperatures began their fall to this morning's rather chilly readings. By midnight, the thermometer was already in the upper 50s at some locations.

The outlook for recreational weather is excellent today and good tomorrow. Readings will be in the 70s with some low 80s in the southeast. Tomorrow will see partly cloudy skies in the west and continued sun in the east. Temperatures will shoot into the 80s. Some scattered thundershowers will form in the West in the afternoon.

There are no disturbances in the tropics that pose the threat of developing into a tropical storm today or Tuesday.

Miss Barbara Ann Hudson Weds Sunday Afternoon

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Amos Earl Hudson of Greenville, and the late Mr. Hudson. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lynwood Rains of Princeton, and the late Mr. Rains.

The Rev. Bobby Bazen officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony. A program of wedding music was rendered by Randy Buck, who sang "More," "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The church was decorated with a semi-circle candelabra flanked by area palms and tiered candelabra overflowing with white mums, gladioli, pompons and snapdragons. Preceding to the altar was a seven branched candelabra centered with area palms. At the altar was a profile priedieu decorated with greenery and white satin bows. Pews were marked with nosegays of white flowers tied with white satin. A heart candelabra was lighted by the ushers as Buck sang "One Hand, One Heart." The unity candelabra was used during the ceremony by the bridal couple.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Eugene Hudson, wore a formal gown of ivory silk satta peau over peau de soie and peau d'ange lace. The gown was fashioned with a high colonial neckline adorned with lace motifs and clusters of pearls, the empire waistline was topped with a border of Nottingham lace and pearls. The sheer bishop sleeves were appliqued designs of lace and finished with cuffs of lace ruffles. The skirt featured a ruffled flounce of silk organza topped with a row of peau d'ange lace finishing in the back with a chapel train.

The bride wore a matching hat with a border of Nottingham lace and pearls with a fingertip ivory silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white miniature carnations, sonia roses and phalaenopsis orchids tied with bridal satin.

Miss Mary Lou Hudson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of shrimp crepe with an empire waistline and halter neckline with full flowing skirt enhanced with a matching floral caplet of silk organza. The bridesmaids were Miss Cathy Wilson of San Francisco, Calif., Mrs. Patsy Buck, Miss Jeanne Turcotte and Miss Carla Boseman of Greenville, and Mrs. Frankie Talton of Princeton, sister of the bridegroom.

They wore gowns identical to the maid of honor and carried bouquets of apricot fall flowers and baby's breath tied with matching bows with long streamers. The bridegroom's brother-in-law, Tom Talton, served as best man. Ushers were Lynn Pittman of Raleigh, Randy Hinton of Greenville, Andy Miller and Michael Stevenson of Princeton, Chad Talton of Princeton, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Hudson selected a formal length gown of open blue qiana knit with long sleeves, V-neckline and matching chiffon skirt. Mrs. Rains wore a formal length gown of peach chiffon over qiana. Both mothers wore corsages of phalaenopsis orchids.

Mrs. Marie Cox directed the wedding. Mrs. Scott Dixon greeted guests and presided at the bridal register.

candelabra. The four-tiered bridal cake was served from a table overlaid with lace. Mrs. Doris Jean Hudson served the cake and Mrs. Maxine Branton poured punch.

Attendants of the bridal couple were presented gifts during an after-rehearsal party held at the bride's home Saturday night.

A wedding breakfast was given for the wedding party by the bridegroom's mother at the Three Steers.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Goldsboro.

The bride is employed as a North Carolina probation-parole officer in Goldsboro and the bridegroom is employed as a N. C. probation-parole officer in Clinton. They are both graduates of ECU.

Lousy Student May Mean Lousy Roomie

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old woman living alone in an apartment and I need a roommate to share expenses. A 16-year-old boy wants to be my roommate. We work together. His parents kicked him out of the house because he did lousy in school, and he needs a place to live. What worries me is this: If the boy moves in with me, will I get in trouble because he is a minor and I am an adult? And even if I don't get in trouble with the law, do apartment owners have the right to know whether a couple is married or not? I'm having my doubts because of this kid's age. Please help.

SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: At the risk of sounding like a broken record, if you are concerned about your "rights" and "the law," consult a lawyer. (The laws differ from state to state.) You are wise to have second thoughts. A 16-year-old boy who was kicked out by his parents because he did "lousy" in school would probably make a lousy roommate.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law (I'll call her "Nancy") has just had her second miscarriage in two years. Of course we fell very sorry for her because she has no children and she wants a child very much.

The problem, however, is Nancy's mother (my mother-in-law). She has asked everyone in the family not to talk about their children or even mention "babies" in front of Nancy because it might upset her.

Two of us in the family are pregnant right now, and this request seems ridiculous to me. She has even said that out of consideration to Nancy, if there are going to be any baby showers, they should be done "quietly" so Nancy won't know about them.

I would like your opinion on this.

BABY BLUES

DEAR BLUES: Nancy's mother may mean well, but she's protective of Nancy to the point of being unrealistic. Of course you shouldn't allow the subject of babies to dominate the conversation in Nancy's presence, but you also shouldn't go to ridiculous extremes to shield her.

DEAR ABBY: How can I tell my friends that it's in poor taste to question a divorcee about her "ex"? After 24 years of what everyone (including me) thought was a good marriage, my husband ran off with another woman. That was two years ago, and people still ask me, "What do you hear from Lester?"

What do they expect me to hear from him? Just before our daughter was married last June, people nearly drove me crazy, asking, "Is her father going to give her away?" And, "Did you invite him" and his new wife to the wedding?"

Abby, I'm not the kind of person who can tell people off, but I'd sure like to know how to respond to questions I hate to answer.

LIBRA

DEAR LIBRA: You are not obligated to answer a question just because it's asked. If you feel that the question is in bad taste, simply say, "I'd rather not talk about it"—then change the subject.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: I have just written a booklet titled, "HOW TO BE POPULAR: YOU'RE NEVER TOO YOUNG OR TOO OLD." If you feel left out, lonely or wish you knew how to get people to like you, this booklet is for you. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to ABBY: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Blossom Prices Are Increasing

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

In bouquets, arrangements and bunches, Americans buy billions of flowers every year and the same inflation that has been eroding buying power in other areas has boosted the price of the blossoms.

Industry spokesmen blame higher fuel costs for much of the increase. Many flowers are grown in greenhouses and the natural gas to heat the greenhouses has risen in price. Labor, materials and shipping charges also are more expensive.

"Energy costs alone have tripled in the past three years," said Douglas Gordon of the Denver Wholesale Florist Co. which ships about 80 million carnations a year from Colorado — the nation's biggest carnation producer — to the rest of the country and overseas. Labor, fertilizer and pesticides also have gone up sharply, he said.

Flower prices vary widely from area to area and season to season, making it difficult to compile statistics on percentage increases. Price rises over the past year or two generally have ranged from 10 to 50 cents a flower, however. Long-stemmed roses start at about $1.50 each in big cities.

Gordon, who handles flowers from 85 growers, said the average cost of producing one carnation is 11 cents, but prices for individual flowers vary, according to quality. The top grade brings 22 cents a blossom; the bottom grade, "practically nothing."

At the retail level, he said, you might get a dozen carnations for $3 or less in the supermarket or at a street stand or you might pay $10 or more for an arrangement delivered from a florist.

Part of the difference in cost between the grower and retail levels is shipping charges. Getting the flowers from the market in Denver to the wholesaler or retailer in other parts of the country — usually by air, in boxes holding anywhere from 700 to 1,000 blooms — adds four cents to the cost of each carnation, Gordon said.

Spoilage also boosts prices. The wholesaler and retailer do not know exactly what the demand will be and have to have enough on hand to anticipate buyers. Sometimes, they have too much. The flower seller is "faced with a lot of spoilage," said Gordon. He said he could not estimate exactly how many of the blossoms he ships are never sold, but said it was possible that the loss was as much as one in four.

Roses are even more delicate, Gordon said. "They have to be cut at the right hour and sold immediately," he added.

"The whole thing accumulates to make the final cost involved," said Jim Krone of Roses, Inc., an association of commercial growers in 29 states. He noted that prices probably will be lower in smaller cities where the cost of doing business is less.

Once you've bought your roses, you can expect them to last five to seven days at home if you take a little care, Krone said.

Mrs. Holt Is Club Speaker Wednesday

The September meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville was held Wednesday night at the club building. Mrs. Ernest Holt, District 15 president of the NCFWC, was speaker.

She spoke on club mottos and themes. Mrs. Lou McNamee, Ways and Means chairperson, announced that the club's fall bazaar will be held Oct. 22 at Elm Street Recreation Department. The Pitt Theater has been booked for the marionette show in February and May 6 is the date set for the club's annual spring dance at the Moose Lodge.

Public Affairs Chairperson Mrs. Sue Likosar presented members with tot finder stickers, which aid firemen to identify rooms where small children sleep.

The International Affairs Department, chaired by Mrs. Kathy Keane, distributed Around the World coloring books which were prepared by department members for clubwomen's children. Mrs. Katherine Gray, membership, announced that an informational coffee will be held at the home of Nancy Gustafson

Jack Myers Is WOTM Speaker

The Women of the Moose held its chapter night program at the Moose Lodge Thursday night. The guest speaker was Jack Myers.

Speaking on the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Myers said in 1972, a group of Greenville Jaycees and interested citizens formed the Pitt County Chapter of the CF Foundation.

Myers has served as treasurer of the Pitt County Chapter since 1972 and is currently serving his third year as a member of the board of directors of the N. C. Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

The speaker was introduced by Melba Hargett, chairman of the Publicity Committee, who was in charge of the program.

Two new members were enrolled and welcomed into the chapter, Carolyn Bland, sponsored by Dot Schlenz, and Barbara Dennis, sponsored by Jo Dees.

A social hour was held following the program.

Language-Use To See Changes

Aside from being hailed as the most explicit language, English (or perhaps we should call it American) is in a constant state of flux.

New words are created and adopted from other tongues; spellings and usages change, so do styles in writing.

The news-writing profession tries to keep abreast of the tide, and on occasion shares in the change-making role.

On October 1, readers may observe some of the new guidelines in writing style as set up by a team of Associated Press and United Press International experts. Both news services have published new stylebooks for distribution among their memberships. It represents the first major revisions since the two news services agreed on uniform style rules almost 20 years ago.

Some examples: Spelling of several words — per cent, employe and goodby, for example, has been changed. After

Oct. 1 the words will be spelled percent, employee and goodbye.

Other updated rules include: hyphens after the prefixes anti and non; and a capital "p" for party in the name of a political group, such as Democratic Party; no periods in the abbreviation mph.

There will also be a change involving women's names. After consultation with many editors, the news agencies decided to retain the use of the courtesy titles Mrs., Miss and Ms. in second reference to women in news stories. Ms. will be used only for those women who prefer it.

In sports reporting, courtesy titles will be eliminated, and women will be referred to, after first reference, by last name only. Sports readers quite possibly have already seen the latter change by some writers.

These minor changes in the AP Stylebook will make no big waves, but the pattern of language-change is like the tide . . . inevitable.

Remarkable Award In View Of Traffic

Greenville has won the Pedestrian Safety Award for the second consecutive year. It is given by the Carolina Motor Club and the American Automobile Association.

The award signifies that Greenville had no pedestrian deaths during 1976 and an injury rate of 37 pedestrians per 100,000 population.

The city has received the award repeatedly over the years. Due to the unusual pedestrian traffic here, because of the student population, the safety record is particularly remarkable.

THIS AFTERNOON

Cautious View By Boards

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—There are some important changes in the works for public schools across North Carolina, but local school boards are taking a cautious view of the ultimate success of these directed programs.

A statewide testing program for all students, public and private, comes in two parts: pupil testing in grades one, two, three, six, and nine; and a minimum competency test for high schoolers prior to graduation. The Community Schools Act is now in effect and funded (although minimally) and the State Board of Education is awaiting applications from local units.

The Governor's Commission on Public School Finance has hired a full-time director and is gearing up to study ways of making educational opportunities more nearly equal across the state, from the standpoint of dollars available. And the primary reading program pushed so vigorously by Gov. James B. Hunt is now entering its first year.

Problems

But there are worrisome problems aplenty in each of these areas of activity, says Raleigh Dingman, executive director of the North Carolina School Boards Association.

Dingman, who generally speaks for the 145 local school boards and represents those agencies regularly in dealings with legislators and before General Assembly committee sessions and hearings, fears that enthusiasm for the innovative programs may be draining away.

Recalling the childhood refrain: "One for the money, Two for the show, Three to get ready, and Four to go..." Dingman ponders the possibility that, "Our enthusiasm wanes as we go through the hard process of getting ready, so that by the time we get ready to go we have lost much of our enthusiasm and anticipation."

"Often, we've even lost out notion of where it is we were going." Dingman finds that he are "most exciting when we're looking for the money and putting on the show."

Speaking of the Community Schools Act, Dingman recalls the enthusiasm of public figures in rallying legislative support "for the money" and "for the show." Now, there is less enthusiasm, and local boards realize that the dollars ($1.3 million with a maximum of $25,000 per year for any given school system) "will not go very far when divided among 145 units" Dingman notes in his monthly newsletter to school board members.

Or, will we again experience public apathy in using the results to improve our schools?"

The reading program faces a similar danger, Dingman thinks, as he wonders if early recruitment of aides, training sessions, and public support begin to falter.

The finance commission is now beginning organizational work, but Dingman is concerned that four legislators and two laymen have already been appointed, and that the other six members were appointed by the State Board of Education from a list suggested by State Superintendent of Public Schools A. Craig Phillips. That list included at least six local school board members; the State Board named none of those.

When it is four to go time, Dingman says, "we hope that they will look to local boards of education for input" because the local board people "want to shout Go to new finance ideas...safely grounded in the principle of local lay control of public education."

BILL NOBLITT

No Money

The money will "certainly not go far enough to meet the expectations of the public fostered by the promises of those who originally promoted the idea."

The testing programs also went through the one for the money, two for the show process, but now that the work is at hand Dingman worries that interest will fade. "Will it be four to go?"

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter's AWACS Crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter has scotched the most damaging opposition within his own official family to sale of AWACS radar planes to Iran, but his decision to force the issue in Congress is still one of his most courageous and most dangerous steps since taking office.

Before the August recess, unexpectedly severe opposition forced the President temporarily to pull back from Congress the proposed $1.2 billion transaction. Liberals opposed to arms sales in general and to authoritarian Iran in particular hoped Mr. Carter would not renew the transaction in September. But the President is going ahead, both to provide early warning against surprise Soviet attack and possibly to stimulate AWACS purchases by Western European states.

Even broader questions are involved. If the sale is killed by both Houses voting against it, a landmark will have been reached in the executive's steady loss of foreign policy power to the legislature. That encroachment has been in full swing since the trauma of Vietnam.

These congressional foes have been helped by allies within the Carter administration. What particularly damaged Mr. Carter in July was the stunning attack on the plan by his close adviser, Central Intelligence director Stansfield Turner.

Adm. Turner's opposition, never even discussed with the President, was based on concerns of espionage: Soviet agents might capture a super-secret encipherment gear used in the aircraft. Actually, that device was never intended to be used in the planes destined for Iran.

So, in a confidential letter to the President last week, Turner said "additional measures" taken by the U.S. and by Iran to minimize the security risk "should materially reduce the likelihood that physical compromise will in fact take place."

Similarly, muted opposition by Jessica Tuchman, a National Security Council (NSC) aide on arms control matters, has ended. Miss Tuchman gave ambiguous answers to one uncommitted Congressman who called her in July for guidance on the deal. Now she is convinced the sale is in U.S. interests.

But elsewhere in the administration, Mr. Carter's policy is being subtly undermined — particularly by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA). This is reflected in ACDA's sabotage of another proposed weapons deal. Administration officials are convinced that ACDA's opposition to the sale of F-15 fighter aircraft to Saudi Arabia was leaked to the Washington Post by Thomas Hirschfeld, ACDA's deputy director of weapons evaluation.

Sale of the sophisticated fighter to Saudi Arabia seemed to its ACDA critics to violate the President's campaign edict against introducing advanced weapons systems to an area that did not have them. That is precisely what motivates many liberals on Capitol Hill in fighting the AWACS sale to Iran.

Strength For Today

SINCERITY IS NOT EVERYTHING

Because a person is sincere does not necessarily mean that he has good judgment and an admirable character. A person can be sincere and be a bigot. Likewise a person can be sincere and be a tyrant. The characteristic of a sincere man is that he has an ideal in which he wholeheartedly believes. But if this ideal is twisted or mistaken, the sincere man can do much harm.

The world has suffered a great deal throughout the ages because of the activities of misguided zealots. In fact, they probably cause more damage than cynical and disillusioned people who simply follow their own advantage at the expense of everyone else.

Many a sincere national leader has brought his people to grief. Many a sincere teacher in school and college has taught something that led students into pathways of folly. Sincere but misguided parents can create even more havoc in the lives of their children than political tyrants and mistaken teachers.

By Elisha Douglass

After signing the historic document, Gen. Torrijos hands it to Pres. Carter.

The President signs it and passes it to the Senate for ratification.

The Senate, in turn, places it under consideration.

TV's Pressure Groups

WASHINGTON—TV Guide had an article a few weeks ago which contained an interview with five television producers on the question of TV violence. The producers were upset because pressure groups such as the Parents Teachers Assn. and the American Medical Assn. were leaning on the TV networks to cut out violence in their shows.

The networks and advertisers, the TV producers said, were caving in to the pressure. The producers considered this a form of censorship and said no one should be able to dictate how much violence there should be on television.

My friend Joanie Conway who reads TV Guide said to me:

"Do I look like a pressure group?"

I looked her over. "I don't think so."

"Well, I read this article which said that people like myself were ruining television because we were complaining to the networks about the violence they were showing in what they like to call their 'action movies.'"

"You mean they didn't want you to write in to show your displeasure?"

"I think so. They said the pressure groups were deciding what people could see or not see because the networks hate to get mail. Now my question is, if I don't like violence on television how do I get my opinion over if I don't write to protest?"

"That is a toughie," I admitted. "If you write, you're putting pressure on the networks. If you don't write, you'll keep getting violent shows. I would say you are within your rights to write."

"But the producers claim the people who write in are ruining TV for the public. Aren't I the public too?"

"I should think so," I said.

"I suppose the producers were saying the mass audience likes violence on television, but the minority of the people who write letters to the networks don't. But minority opinion prevails because the networks hate to get any mail criticizing their programming."

ART BUCHWALD

"How do they know the mass of the people like it?"

"Because of the audience ratings. The violent shows have high ratings."

"I think people will watch anything on television."

"What do you have against violence on television?"

"People keep getting killed or knifed or beaten up; cars keep crashing into each other, and the impression you get is that the country is full of psychos. The police aren't that nice, either. They're always beating up anyone who won't tell them what they want to know."

"The producers claim they aren't showing violence for the sake of violence. They have to have the violence so they'll have action. The TV viewer likes his action."

"Well, I don't like it and I think it's bad for kids to see it. They show them how to rob stores, make bombs and blow up safes. That's not my idea of show biz."

"But it does raise a problem. Killing on television is as American as apple pie. I'm not sure TV could survive without it."

"That's what the producers said in TV Guide," Joanie told me. "They said if they can't have violence in their shows there would be no conflict, and the American public would be cheated out of good television."

"They may have a point," I said. "Murder, rape, arson and dope peddling does have a lot of conflict in it."

"But how much of it do we have to take? The producers claim they make these shows because the public wants them. Well, I'm the public and I don't want them, and so when I write in they say I am a pressure group. If I liked them what would that make me?"

Plays Large Stakes

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) — In the political and diplomatic drama now opening for a season's run in Washington, President Carter is playing for the highest of stakes.

Prestige, power and the Panama Canal all are at issue as the President enters what looms as one of the major contests of his administration.

He needs a two-thirds Senate vote to win approval of the treaty to relinquish U.S. control of the waterway at the end of this century. He cannot afford to lose, and the congressional odds-makers forecast a close count.

Carter made the canal agreement, which actually involves two treaties, uniquely his own when he and Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos signed the documents, then embraced, at ceremonies televised to this nation and to Latin America.

He said the pact represents the U.S. commitment to fairness, not force, in dealing with other nations. He must deliver on that promise by gaining Senate approval, in the face of well-organized and financed conservative opposition.

For if the treaty should fail, the administration would be severely hampered, perhaps crippled, in other international dealings. Unless they can demonstrate firm support at home, American negotiators are going to be in a difficult position abroad, whatever the target of their diplomacy.

The Senate is not likely to act on the canal agreements until next year, and it may be well into the spring, which means that the issue of yielding control in the year 2000 will become part of the congressional election campaign of 1978.

That may make Carter's task more difficult unless he can, as he said, shift public opinion to support of the canal agreement by educating the nation about the treaty's terms.

Roll up your sleeve to save a life... BE A BLOOD DONOR

Institutions Declining Risks

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — Like a timid mouse that is startled in the night, the stock market again has scampered back into its hole, its heart pounding, its mind made up not to expose itself again until it is absolutely safe.

When that might be cannot be told. Everyone but institutional investors seem to know you cannot play the stock market game without taking risk. But that is what the institutions are trying to do — get rid of risk.

That is, the mutual and pension funds and bank trusts and the like have opted for conservatism rather than appreciation. They are trying to cut their losses rather than enlarge the size of their holdings.

This might be permissible

if the money were all theirs, but it isn't. It is other people's money, given to them for investment and appreciation, at which they are supposed to be expert and for which they take a fee.

The assumption is that the managers of these institutions are better equipped to make the money grow, that they are more knowledgeable than others and so can play the riskreward game with the greatest erudition.

Today, however, their judgment is to decline risk. Many fiduciaries have taken the position that nobody can outplay the market and that therefore a "winning" performance is to do merely as good as the averages.

In pursuit of this mediocre goal, some fiduciaries have abrogated their responsibilities. Instead of choosing the best few stocks in which to invest, they choose them all. In that way they can't do worse than the averages.

There is nothing wrong with refusing to take risk — and thereby foregoing the rewards — if it is fully understood by those who own the money and who give it to these third parties for investment.

For the most part though, the client's intention is to see his funds grow. If he wanted merely to conserve, then he could have chosen bonds or savings accounts and saved himself the management fee.

Nevertheless, conservatism is the goal of many portfolio managers today, and the absurdity of this becomes obvious when you realize that except for utilities and certain other issues, the stock market is hardly the place in which to conserve. It is, and always has been, the place where you take risk.

While the institutionalized market, which is to say the New York Stock Exchange on many days, is suffering sharp declines, some lesser known stocks have been progressively stronger.

These are risk stocks, stock of small but growing companies. They are too small to attract the institutions. Their clientele is made up of individuals instead of insurers, and mutual and pension funds and trusts.

It is into such stocks that the individual risk-taker, the person who prefers to make his own decisions rather than hand them over to a fiduciary for a fee, has moved. Opportunity, albeit with risk, is there.

The White House is organizing that effort, with presidential aide Hamilton Jordan managing a campaign that borrows the tactics of the one he ran for candidate Carter. Presidential speechwriters have an address ready for national television when Carter and his advisers decide it is time for that.

While conservatives prepare for a costly barrage of mass mailings in opposition to the agreement, the administration is using the persuasive powers of the White House on the influential constituents whose attitudes can sway a senator.

It all recalls another treaty fight, nearly 60 years ago. President Woodrow Wilson lost that one to isolationist Senate Republicans who insisted on attaching reservations to the League of Nations treaty.

The Senate cannot amend the Panama Canal treaties. It can only advise and consent to their ratification or refuse to do so. Approval will require two-thirds of the votes cast, or 67 if all 100 senators are on hand for the final vote.

But opponents could try to attach reservations in the Senate. If they succeeded, the effect would be to make approval conditional on Carter's acceptance of the reservations. That almost certainly would force new negotiations with Panama.

It was a reservation Wilson would not accept that blocked the League of Nations treaty.

On the canal accord, there will have to be action in the House as well as the Senate on legislation to yield authority in the Canal Zone and to provide funds for the new schedule of U.S. payments to Panama.

In the end, assuming that he wins, Carter, not the Senate, will actually ratify the treaty by signing and exchanging with Panama the documents that put it into effect.

Diplomatic custom may lead him to go to Panama to do that, since Torrijos came to Washington for the signing ceremonies.

Lion's Share Of Emmy Awards Finally For 'Roots'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Roots" gathered up nine Emmys in an awards show that made up for a four-month delay by being the longest in the 29-year history of the Television Academy.

The 12-hour miniseries seen on ABC last January won Emmys for best limited series, directing and writing, with acting awards going to Louis Gossett Jr., Edward Asner and Olivia Cole. The three remaining Emmys for "Roots" were in craft categories.

The Sunday night Emmy Awards Show on NBC, delayed four months by a squabble that split the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences into an Eastern National Academy and a Hollywood Academy, ran a record 3½ hours. It was 40 minutes longer than the previous longest show last year.

"As long as we're running over, let's do it good," said Angie Dickinson, who was co-host with Robert Blake for the ceremonies at the stately Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

The Hollywood Academy handed out Emmys in 42 prime time categories, with 27 Emmys going to ABC, 21 to NBC, 17 to CBS and eight to PBS.

"Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," won seven awards and tied with "Sybil" for outstanding dramatic special.

"Sybil" won four awards, including an award to star Sally Field, who was named best actress in a drama special for her portrayal of a woman afflicted by multiple personalities.

Dick Van Dyke's variety series, "Van Dyke and Co.," canceled by NBC last year after 11 performances, won as best variety series. "The Barry Manilow Special" was named outstanding variety special.

"I'm a little angry at NBC for pre-empting us so many times," said Van Dyke. "We even got letters asking us if we were doing a special."

Ed Flanders was named outstanding lead actor in a dramatic special for his feisty portrayal of the president in "Harry S. Truman: Plain Speaking."

Beatrice Arthur, going into her sixth year as "Maude," won her first Emmy as best lead actress in a comedy series. Carroll O'Connor, whose Archie Bunker is Maude's conservative counterpart, was named best actor in a comedy series for "All in the Family."

The retiring "Mary Tyler Moore Show" bowed out after seven years by capturing the Emmy as best comedy series. Its writers also won award for her farewell performance, and the Academy paid a special tribute to the show in excerpts dating back to its beginning.

James Garner won an Emmy as best dramatic series actor for his private eye-on-wry in "The Rockford Files," and Lindsay Wagner as best actress in a dramatic series for "The Bionic Woman."

Once again, Britain's "Upstairs, Downstairs" walked away with the award for best dramatic series.

A corrupt banker in "The Money Changers," took the Emmy for best lead actor in a limited series. Patty Duke Astin won as best lead actress for "Captains and the Kings."

Burgess Meredith, who played lawyer Joseph Welsh, was named best supporting actor in a special for "Tail Gunner Joe" about Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Diana Hyland, who died of cancer this spring, was named outstanding supporting actress in a drama special for "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble." Her award was accepted in an emotional outpouring by John Travolta, her close friend who played her son in the movie.

Backstage, Meredith said she had been blacklisted during the Communist-hunting McCarthy era. "I was very glad when Joe Welsh came along," he said. "I was very glad that I got to play Joe Welsh."

Tim Conway was selected as the best supporting actor in a variety series for "The Carol Burnett Show," and Rita Moreno was named best supporting actress in a variety show for an appearance on "The Muppet Show."

Beulah Bondi won as best actress in a single appearance for a part on "The Waltons." Louis Gossett Jr. was named best actor for an appearance in a series for part two of "Roots."

Gary Burghoff won as best supporting actor in a comedy series for "M-A-S-H," and Mary Kay Place won for "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

For dramatic series, Gary Frank won as best supporting actor for "Family," and Kristy McNichol, also seen on "Family," won an Emmy as best supporting actress on her 15th birthday.

Other "Roots" winners included Edward Asner as outstanding supporting actor in a single appearance in a series for the opening episode of "Roots." Olivia Cole won as best supporting actress in a series for the eighth and final chapter of "Roots."

New Hue To A 'Routine' Probe

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A case that began as a theft and turned quickly to a double murder has now taken on the trapp-ings of a drug conspiracy probe, complete with a shadowy "money man" and hints of official corruption.

The story has also included an interstate flight, a wild night shootout at an Abilene, Kans., hotel and a jailhouse acid throwing incident.

All these colorful escapades, and more, make up the case of William Michael Barber, 22, being held on two larceny charges and two charges of murder.

The Craven County Sheriff's Department conducted the investigations and filed the charges, but now the State Bureau of Investigation has been called in to probe the deputies' handling of the case.

Exactly why the department's conduct needed investigating is unclear, but the New Bern Sun-Journal quoted investigators last week as saying that Barber had told officers that a sheriff's deputy "furnished him with cars."

The paper also said after

Barber's face was disfigured by acid tossed into his Craven County Jail cell that "Barber was set up by someone in the sheriff's department."

The story began April 6, when Barber allegedly stole two tires, mag wheels and other equipment from Wade William White, 21. Five days later, White and Joseph Michael Taylor, 23, disappeared.

For two weeks nobody knew where they were. Then deputies found White's tires on a car which Barber had bought from Sheriff's Deputy Dick Pritchard. Pritchard says he sold Barber the car, but he denied "furnishing" him with cars.

On the strength of the tires and statements by a former girlfriend, warrants for Barber were issued April 22. Four days later he and another girlfriend were found at the Abilene hotel. There was a scuffle and some shooting, but Barber was arrested. The girlfriend was later released.

Barber led investigators to the two bodies May 10 in a wooded area 10 miles northwest of New Bern. The Sheriff's Department decided that the murders were the result of "a disagreement over a narcotics transaction."

Barber was locked in a basement cell of the Craven County jail. On June 28, somebody Barber apparently knew called him to the window of the cell and another person heaved sulphuric acid into Barber's face.

A wire mesh screen blocked much of the liquid, but enough got through to burn part of Barber's forehead, nose and cheek. Authorities believe the acid was designed to keep Barber from talking about a drug ring.

But Barber has talked anyway, according to Deputy G.M. Hudgins, who said Barber described a "small-time" organization that dealt mainly in cocaine and marijuana but was backed by "somebody with money."

That name, Hudgins said, may be revealed at Barber's trial, scheduled in Carteret County some time next month.

Barber reportedly knew who threw the acid at him. He has been moved to Central Prison in Raleigh.

The SBI entered the case late last month at the request of Craven County District Attorney Eli Bloom. District SBI supervisor said he had assigned an agent "to follow up on information about an investigation the sheriff's department conducted."

Jets Scream Over Home

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "It's like being in a war," said Elaine Chioso of the jet planes that scream low over her house several times a week. She's probably right, because that was the way the military planned it.

But Mrs. Chioso and her neighbors did not move to this secluded stretch of the Haw River to watch military pilots practice bridge bombing runs, and they're fighting the use of their air space for these noisy dress rehearsals.

Many of the jets fly up from Shaw Air Force Base near Sumter, S.C., where officers chose Chatham County for training operations because of its hills and the seclusion.

A 10-mile-wide training corridor for the planes runs across the area, but among the pilots' favorite targets is the Chicken Bridge, which the jet jockeys like to pretend is an enemy supply route that needs to be "choked."

Col. Jerry B. Holmes, deputy commander for operations at the base, said he sympathized with residents' anger over the flights, sometimes as low as 500 feet above ground level.

"But you have to train even in peacetime, you know," he said. "We've got to be ready to defend our country if called to do so." Holmes added that some area residents have called to say "do it again, we loved the show."

Mrs. Chioso and other residents have started a petition to get the show moved to another theater of operations.

"I hope these people aren't too irate," Holmes said. "If we're annoying them, we're not fulfilling our role as keepers of the peace."

Support In Soviet Union

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Russian intellectuals support the protest activities of Soviet dissidents and Voice of America radio broadcasts are popular behind the Iron Curtain, according to an N.C. State University scientist who just returned from a lecture tour of the Soviet Union.

Dr. John G. Scandalios, 42, head of the N.C. State genetics department, was invited by the Soviet Academy of Sciences. Scandalios is an internationally known scientist in a field in which Russia has lagged.

But the Soviets are beginning to catch up, Scandalios says.

Genetics, the study of how plants and animals pass inher-spring, was suppressed in the Soviet Union for political reasons under the Stalin regime.

The suppression has ended, Scandalios said, but Soviet geneticists are now either very young or very old because. "The generation gap is very obvious, very enormous," Scandalios says.

Genetics aside, Scandalios said he found Soviet scientists "bright and eager" for information and news from the West and he said he "fell in love" with the Soviet people.

He said he also learned that the Russian intelligentsia support the dissidents and have been heartened by President Carter's human rights emphasis in foreign affairs.

Mexico And Brazil Unenthused By Panama Treaty

MEXICO CITY, (AP) — Latin American governments approve of the new Panama Canal treaty, but a few countries, notably Mexico and Brazil, are less enthusiastic than others, an Associated Press survey shows.

Some express concern that eventual Panamanian control of the canal over a period of 23 years will result in increases in transit fees.

While some right-wing military leaders in the area privately express pleasure that the treaty allows the United States to continue canal defense, others express misgivings.

There is general agreement, however, that the treaty will lead to better relations between the United States and Latin America.

The AP survey indicates most Latin American governments agree with the Costa Rican foreign minister, Gonzalo Facio. He said the treaty signing in Washington last week "erased the last vestige of colonialism remaining in America, and a new era arrived in which the relations of the United States with Latin American nations will be better."

President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela said President Carter had "passed the test" in his dealings with Latin America.

Neighboring Colombia said the treaty "should put an end to a remainder of colonial rule in Latin America."

But President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico turned down an invitation to the signing ceremony and sent Foreign Minister Santiago Roel to Washington. The semi-official newspaper El Sol said Lopez Portillo was unhappy with the separate treaty which allows the United States to defend the canal if its neutrality is threatened.

Mexico accepted the Declaration of Washington, signed by other hemispheric governments shortly before the treaty ceremony, only after the elimination of a paragraph recognizing the right of the United States to defend the canal even after the year 2000, when Panama gets full control.

Brazil, governed by the military since 1964, has remained officially silent about the treaty. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the day after the signing, "We only received the official texts a couple of days ago. We are still analyzing and studying them."

In Chile, where relations with the United States are at a low point over human rights violations, the government newspaper El Cronica said in an editorial that the treaty was "particularly positive" because it permits continued U.S. military security of the canal.

This attitude is shared in Argentina, where the military government's policy has been to support a solution equitable for both countries rather than total support for Panama.

It is generally recognized that the potential for improved U.S. relations with Latin America will be shattered if the Senate fails to ratify the treaty.

Ev Bauman, the associate director of the Caracas, Venezuela, English-language Daily Journal, suggested that "far more important support for Carter may come from the U.S. business community when it becomes clear in New York corporate board rooms that Latin American investments may be endangered by the backlash expected if the Senate rejects the treaty.

Ten Professionals Are Added To Drama Dept.

ECU News Bureau
A rare chance to replace ten instructors at the same time has produced a faculty with distinguished backgrounds in the professional theatre for East Carolina University's Department of Drama and Speech.

"It's a fulfillment of a dream," said Chairman Edgar R. Loessin. "These people have, without exception, held major roles and staff positions in the theatres of Broadway, network television and elsewhere. And they have equally impressive teaching credentials as well."

Taking over the administrative responsibility for ECU's dance program is Frank Wagner, whose Broadway credits include staging dances and musical numbers for productions ranging from "Ziegfeld Follies" with Beatrice Lillie and Billie De Wolfe to "Hallelujah Baby" with Leslie Uggams.

He has also choreographed for television shows, notably Shari Lewis' Saturday morning show and the Ed Sullivan Show.

Working with him will be Marsha Wagner, whose Broadway credits as actress-singer-dancer include "Pajama Game," "Most Happy Fella," and "Wildcat" with Lucille Ball. A permanent member of the dance company on the Ed Sullivan Show for five years, she has also appeared on various TV specials in the U. S. and Europe.

As a veteran dance instructor, she has taught John Davidson, Tammy Grimes, Chita Rivera, Tom Poston, Gene Rayburn, Marlon Brando, Rita Gam, Jean Stapleton and Shirley Jones.

The third new member of the dance faculty is the versatile Mark Rose, whose performance credits include engagements with national touring companies in such musicals as "West Side Story" and "The Music Man."

In addition to having danced and choreographed from Minneapolis to Madrid and having acted professionally in a dozen major U. S. cities, Rose has two degrees in speech, and will double as a voice and diction instructor at ECU. He is finishing his PhD at the University of California at Davis with a dissertation on the acting theory of Antonin Artaud.

Rounding out the program in dance is teaching fellow Sara Berman, who has danced and choreographed for outdoor dramas in Florida, Texas and North Carolina, toured with musical comedies on the New England circuit, and danced with the Pearl Lang Company in New York and Universal Studios in Hollywood.

Joining ECU's voice and speech faculty is Dr. Richard T. Keenan, who holds degrees from the Universities of Michigan and Illinois and the City University of Los Angeles. His experience includes teaching on the high school and college levels, as well as work in industry and independent consulting.

New advanced acting instructor Ella Gerber is a director with an international reputation. In addition to a number of Broadway and off-Broadway productions, she has directed at theatres in Portugal, New Zealand, Australia, Israel, South Africa, Italy and Japan with stars such as Ann Sothern, Vivian Blaine, James Garner, Jane Russell, William Bendix, Buster Keaton, Ginger Rogers, John Raitt, Howard Keel and Pat O'Brien. Ms. Gerber will direct several productions at the Playhouse.

Another acting instructor, Del Lewis, comes to ECU after three years as artistic director of Madison, Wisconsin's Civic Repertory Theatre. Lewis' credits include Broadway roles in "The Rothschilds" and "Fiddler on the Roof," film acting in "Diary of a Mad Housewife," as well as roles in touring companies, off-Broadway shows, summer stock and regional theatres. In addition to teaching duties, he will direct for the ECU Playhouse.

Edward Haynes has been a scenic artist with the Metropolitan Opera for the past 11 seasons. His designs have graced stages on and off Broadway, as well as some of the United States' foremost opera theatres and the outstanding Minneapolis Children's Theatre. He holds a Master of Fine Arts degree in scenic design from the University of Texas, and has studied at the Yale School of Drama and the Polakov Studio and Stage Design. Haynes will teach scenic design and will design sets for Playhouse productions.

David Downing, who will work closely with Haynes as lighting designer, has designed and executed lighting for outdoor drama in Texas and North Carolina, and holds an MFA degree from UNC-Chapel Hill. He will teach courses in stage lighting and voice and diction.

Princeton University's McCarter Theatre lost the services of Preston Sisk when he left to become General Manager of the ECU Playhouse. A doctoral candidate at the University of Kansas, Sisk has extensive practical experience as a manager and is an experienced teacher in this field as well.

Loessin introduced the new faculty to ECU theatre students this week.

"This faculty is the result of 14 years of careful planning on our part and that of the university," he said. "It is composed of a truly outstanding group of experienced theatre artists and teachers, making it one of the first in the nation."

Analysts have noted that many investors, like the Fed, see rapid growth in the money supply as a cause for inflation worries.

In addition, the data gave rise to fears that the central bank would soon seek to tighten credit by fostering higher interest rates in order to restrain monetary growth.

Miss Teen USA Crown Rejected By 'Winner'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "A group of ninth graders could have handled the pageant better than they did," said new Miss Teen U.S.A., rejecting the crown after a pageant plagued by blunders and confusion.

Sharon Gregory, a 14-year-old blonde from Bridge City, Texas, said she turned down the title because she was disgusted with the way the pageant had been run.

As the week-long pageant drew toward a finale of mixed emotions, most of the parents and the 32 girls on stage in the Hilton Inn ballroom knew what was going to happen Saturday night.

Five runners-up were named first, but when the announcer named the winner, applause quickly turned to gasps, laughs and tears.

The promoters claimed they knew earlier in the week that Miss Gregory planned to turn down the title. But she won anyway.

When her name was called, the announcer quickly said: "Thank you, that's all."

And it would have been, but Miss Gregory reached for the microphone. "Hold it," she said.

Miss Gregory apparently saw no humor in the situation, but many of the 100 or so in the ballroom were holding their sides and laughing.

Her rejection speech included words like dishonesty, corruption and honor, and after she had finished, members of the audience walked on the stage to congratulate her for turning down the title — and a scholarship to a North Carolina college.

"When it finally came down to it, I felt that it was meant to be said," she said in an interview after the pageant ended. "And I feel like the congratulations I got were more of an honor than winning."

Erin Hovland, daughter of pageant promoter Dempsey Hovland, said the five runners-up agreed to move up, in order, to accept the awards.

The apparent winner was Donna Koskica, 16, Crown Point Ind., but she could not be reached for comment.

When the contestants and their parents arrived at the Hilton Inn beginning last Tuesday, most had prepaid their $100 registrations through Hovland's National Pageants firm. But hotel officials said they were told up until noon Friday by the firm's Wisconsin bank that the firm's account would not cover the $3,200 in checks.

Parents and guardians of the contestants had to pay for the rooms they already had paid for. Hovland said he and other pageant employees paid for some of those who didn't have the money.

Hovland said complaints about the pageant, including claims of dishonesty, are not unusual. He said they often stem from bickering or jealousy among parents.

"Every parent thinks his daughter should win," he said.

BE CAUTIOUS WITH DEEDS

Probably the deed to your property is filed away, all but forgotten. Probably you've never checked it since the day it served to pass title from the previous owner to you. Perhaps you didn't even check it then. There may have been no urgent reason to. Nevertheless, an apparently secure deed can turn out to be a worthless piece of paper.

For instance, suppose the deed states the name of the seller, but doesn't contain his signature? Suppose the seller died before you received the deed? Suppose there's an error in the way the deed describes the property? Any of these defects — as well as many others — could make your deed invalid. But defective deeds are the exception, not the rule, so don't be frightened. Just be cautious. And the best way to be cautious is to deal with a reputable real estate professional and a knowledgeable real estate lawyer.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO. 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Vilas Takes U.S. Open

By CHRISTY BARBEE
AP Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Guillermo Vilas is No. 1 today, a proud, self-satisfied young man.

"I'm very happy with myself," he said. "I'm a very good friend of myself."

His critics had said his scorching clay court victory streak of 45 matches was not as meaningful as it seemed because it included no matches against the giants of the game of tennis, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors.

But Sunday, the 25-year-old Argentine with the extreme topspin backhand, outplayed Connors 2-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0 in the $462,420 U.S. Open championships. He hasn't had a crack yet at Borg, who had to default during this tournament because of a strained shoulder.

"This puts me very, very happy for sure," the bright-eyed and exuberant Vilas said after being mobbed by adoring fans at the West Side Tennis Club. The crowd had decided the match was over before the umpire did, streaming onto the court as soon as the linesman called a Connors forehand long.

Saturday, the glory was Chris Evert's, as outgout surprising Wendy Turnbull of Australia 7-6, 6-2 for her third consecutive U.S. Open title. It was roses for both the finalists, but the Open victory was particularly sweet for Miss Evert after her loss in the Wimbledon semifinal to Virginia Wade.

Prize money for each of the winners was $33,000, with $16,500 apiece to Connors and Miss Turnbull.

Vilas, blocked by his admirers and hoisted atop their shoulders, never congratulated Connors, who stormed away from the stadium with his mother and entourage. "I will apologize when I see him," Vilas said. "I wanted to shake his hand."

"He is a great player," he said of Connors. "I have a lot of respect for him. I think he played fair. I had nothing to lose. I knew the pressure was on him since he had not won a major title (this year) and this was his last chance."

Winds gusting up to 20 miles per hour swept over the court, blowing great clouds of dust on them from the synthetic clay like Har-Tru surface. "The wind was very strange," Vilas said of his losing first set. "He was hitting rockets."

But in the second set, as Vilas became more certain, coming in on more balls, Connors grew slightly tentative, and the Argentine was able to break him in the eighth game for 5-3. Vilas, the No. 4 seed, drew a roaring standing ovation as he took the next game with a backhand passing shot.

The third set went to 5-5 and each broke the other's service at love, forcing a tie-breaker. It was reminiscent of the third set situation Connors faced last year in the final against Borg.

The tie-breaker went to 3-3, then Vilas moved up to the net for a forehand volley winner. Connors netted a forehand, then Vilas hit one wide, making it 5-4. Vilas hit a forehand to the baseline for 6-4 and won on a swift forehand passing shot.

That gave Vilas extreme confidence. He then broke service in the second game of the fourth set with a crosscourt backhand that touched the sideline, broke again in the fourth when Connors' forehand volley hit the net, then kept his serve, pummeling Connors at love for 5-0.

In the final game, the two were playing the second deuce, forced when Connors doublefaulted. Vilas took the advantage when the struggling Connors hit his forehand approach into the net. Their final rally had just begun when Connors hit his forehand too long.

The linesman saw it that way. Vilas thought he had. Connors stood and stared. Vilas' coach, Ion Tiriac, stood at his court-side seat and looked stern as a bull. The umpire said nothing. But the crowd had decided. The umpire made it official several moments later.

For Miss Evert, her final was the toughest match of the tournament. She had been asking for it all week, complaining politely that she wasn't getting enough competition.

Miss Turnbull provided it with the scurrying game that has given her the name "rabbit" among her World Team Tennis colleagues on the Cleveland Nets.

"She made me play my very best," Miss Evert said. "She played very well and she now can be considered one of the best players in the world."

Despite the loss, Miss Turnbull, seeded 12th, received the recognition that had long avoided her. She beat Ms. Wade and second-seeded Martina Navratilova en route to the final.

The first-set tie-breaker came after 12 games of steady rallies of ground strokes, and Miss Evert won it 7-3.

"Then I let her break me in the first game of the second set and she ran away with it," Miss Turnbull said. "It is really tough to play Chrissie on clay and I think I played very well. I'm really not disappointed."

Even as a loser, Miss Turnbull advanced further than she ever had in a major tournament.

Miss Evert seemed undisturbed by a pinched nerve in her left shoulder, saying it hurt only on the toss for her serve. She said she hadn't seen a doctor yet because she was superstitious.

"If I'm going to get it amputated, I don't want to know about it until after the tournament," Miss Evert joked.

Argentine tennis star Guillermo Vilas leaps for joy after he clinched a victory over Jimmy Connors in the men's singles finals of the U. S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, N. Y. Vilas defeated Connors 2-6, 6-3, 6-0 for his first U. S. Open title Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Clemson Nearly Upset Maryland

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Clemson, in the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar last year, has served notice it doesn't intend to repeat.

Their minds set on an upset, the Tigers led 10th ranked Maryland 14-7 in the second half when reserve quarterback Larry Dick came off the bench to throw the Terrapins to a 21-14 win.

"The difference in the game boiled down to five or six plays," Clemson rookie Coach Charlie Pell said. "Those five or six plays didn't go our way but when they do, we'll be a winner like Maryland is now."

It was the 21st consecutive win over ACC opponents for Coach Jerry Claiborne's Terps. But Pell, after the season opener at Clemson's Death Valley, wasn't discouraged.

"We'll be a good football team in the 1977 season," Pell said. "We have nothing to be ashamed of."

In other ACC action, North Carolina State picked up a conference win over Virginia 14-0; North Carolina lost to Kentucky

10-7; Wake Forest wore down Furman 24-13 and Duke fell to East Carolina 17-16 by trying to go for a win instead of a tie.

Dick, a senior who started two years ago, was sent in for all-ACC signal caller Mark Mangas with the Terps trailing by a touchdown. The reserve completed five of seven passes for 118 yards and two touchdowns of 25 and 43 yards.

"I am very proud of this team. We came back," Claiborne said.

Clemson scored its first touchdown when Rex Varn intercepted a Mangas pass and returned it 93 yards.

KENTUCKY 10, UNC 7
"Overall I was pleased," North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley said after losing the defensive battle to Kentucky. "We got the points on the board when we had to get them. Of course, I WISH THEY COULD HAVE GOT SOMETHING GOING THERE AT THE END."

The game was a rematch of the Tar Heels' last outing — a 21-0 loss to Kentucky in last December's Peach Bowl. This time UNC broke threw the tough Wildcat defenders, scoring in the fourth quarter on a short pass from Matt Kupec to Mike Finn.

But Mel Collins' fumble on a punt return gave the Wildcats the ball at the UNC 38 and set up the winning touchdown.

Though Dooley liked his team's play, he said he "was not pleased with the officiating."

Kupec elaborated: "There were late hits on the pass rush, and they even speared me when I made a handoff," he said.

ECU 17, DUKE 16
Duke quarterback Mike Dunn was stopped short as he tried to run on an optio for a two-point conversion and the ball game in the final minute. Still, Dunn thought the Blue Devils proved something.

"I thought we outplayed them," he said. "I wanted to beat them bad. I felt confident we could take them. There was not doubt in my mind. There's still no doubt in my mind. It's just the way Duke's luck seems to be running."

Duke went for the win instead of a tie after Dunn rolled in for a touchdown from four yards out with 1:05 remaining. A minute earlier ECU quarterback Jimmy Southerland broke a 10-10 deadlock by running 28 yards for a touchdown.

ECU beat N.C. State a week earlier and after the second win, Pirate Coach Pat Dye was emotional. "I hate to get sentimental, but today was proof of the American way," he said.

NC STATE 14, UVA 0
"We blocked and tackled decently, and since we won, I'll have to be happy," second-year Coach Bo Rein said after N.C. State downed Virginia 14-0. The win gave the Wolfpack a 1-1 overall mark and a 1-0 conference record.

N.C. State scored on short runs by Timmy Johnson and Ted Brown. The performance was marred by 11 Wolfpack fumbles, although Virginia recovered just two.

For Virginia, there was frustration at getting inside the Wolfpack 10 yard line twice — once to the 2 with a first down — without scoring.

"I was disappointed, but we'll be back," Coach Dick Bestwick said. "Our kids really wanted to win and overall, they played extremely hard."

WAKE FOREST 24, FURMAN 13

Despite a 24-13 win in its season opener, Wake Forest Coach Chuck Mills wasn't thrilled. "Offensively, we didn't play with much enthusiasm," Mills said.

The Demon Deacons trailed until the third quarter, when quarterback Mike McGlamry fired a pass to Steve Young, who broke away for a 55 yard touchdown play. Powerful sophomore James McDougald led all rushers with 131 yards, while McGlamry's passing covered 171 yards.

"I think it is of some merit that our kids did not play particularly well but we still won," Mills said.

Morgan Gets 1st Win

ENICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Gil Morgan made his time on the fairway pay off as he claimed his first professional golf title in winning the $200,000 B.C. Open.

The 30-year-old optometrist from Wewoka, Okla., was never seriously challenged after the second round of play as he ran up a 14-under par 270 for the 72-hole tournament. The nearest challenger, Lee Elder, finished five strokes behind the Oklahoma golfer.

"It has been a long time, a lot of hard work," Morgan said Sunday after winning his first tournament in his four years on the Professional Golfer's Association tour.

The $40,000 pay check Morgan received pushed his earnings over the $100,000 mark for the first time in his golf career.

BC Open

"It's kind of like a dream come true. I think I've reached my first plateau. Now I have to sit down and re-evaluate my goals," Morgan said.

Morgan's methodical control of the 3,902-yard En-Joie Golf Club course allowed him to run away from the competition during the last three rounds of play. Morgan never trailed after overtaking first-round leaders Arnold Palmer and Elder, putting more distance between him and the rest of the field with each round.

The optometrist finished his final 18 holes with a two-under par 69 that included three birdies and one bogie.

The early play of Arnold Palmer caused some excitement in the galleries as the old master of the game played the first two rounds in a style reminiscent of the 1950s and 1960s, when he dominated the tour. Palmer went into Saturday's third round trailing Morgan by two strokes, but then his game fell apart and he finished the tournament tied for 10th, 13 strokes back with a paycheck of $1,780.

Mac McLendon, fought a cold throughout the tournament, but finished with a three-under par 68 to come in third, six strokes behind Morgan.

Argentina's Florentino Molina finished fourth, followed by Tom Kite and Bob Payne.

Lanny Wadkins had entered the tournament on a winning streak that brought him titles in the PGA championships and the World Series of Golf, but he failed to make the cut here after two rounds.

Bonnett Wins CC 400

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala., said he was thinking he was about to win his first Grand National stock car race when he looked in the mirror and saw veteran Richard Petty, a 13-time winner at the local Fairgrounds Raceway, closing in.

"I said, 'Hell, it's gone,'" the 31-year-old Bonnett recalled Sunday. But he was calmed down by advice from the car's owner and captured that first victory by holding off Petty in a battle of Dodge drivers in the final stages of the Capital City 400.

Bonnett, in only his second full season on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Grand National circuit, also set a track record for 400 laps, averaging 80.644 miles per hour with the caution flag out seven times for 35 laps.

Four veteran drivers were in the same lap with Bonnett when he got the checkered flag over Petty, the Randleman, N. C., driver who finished second about seven seconds behind.

Chevrolet drivers took the next three spots with pole winner Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N. C., third; NASCAR point leader Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., fourth; and Lennie Pond of Petersburg, Va., in fifth place.

Parsons dominated the early part of the race, in which there were 10 lead changes among six drivers, but Bonnett took over on the 301st lap and remained in front the rest of the way. He led for a total of 248 laps, Parsons for 133.

Yankees Watch Lead Shrink

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
While the Kansas City Royals are running away with one American League divisional race, the New York Yankees have allowed the other one to tighten up.

AL Roundup

The Royals won their 12th straight game Sunday, beating the Minnesota Twins 4-1. The Royals have an 8½-game lead over Chicago and appear headed for their second straight West Division title. The Yankees, meanwhile, split a doubleheader with the expansionist Toronto Blue Jays, winning the first game 4-3 and losing the nightcap 6-4. Their lead over second-place Boston shrunk to 1½ games as the two teams get ready for a crucial three-game series in New York that begins Tuesday. The Yankees didn't play particularly good ball against the Blue Jays, whose 48-93 record is the worst in the major leagues. After being humiliated 19-3 by the Blue Jays Saturday, New York could manage only a split of the two games Sunday. Toronto has split 12 games with the Yankees this season. Tom Murphy, who had not started since 1973, hurled six innings of six-hit ball and surrendered just one run to the Yankees in the nightcap. In other AL action, Boston stopped Detroit 6-2, Baltimore defeated Cleveland 9-5, Seattle nipped Texas 6-4, Oakland beat Milwaukee 5-3 and Chicago split a doubleheader with the Angels, taking the opener 6-2 and dropping the nightcap 5-4. Red Sox 6, Tigers 2 Boston won its fifth straight game and 10th in its last 11, concluding a four-game sweep of Detroit. Jim Rice, the American League's home run leader, belted the first grand slam of his career in the seventh inning, his 37th homer of the season. "Some people wrote us off a week ago, but here we are, just one game back in the loss column," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "Now we just have to go in there (to New York) and win some ballgames." Orioles 9, Indians 5 The Orioles completed a three-game sweep of Cleveland, leaving the Indians winless in eight games in Baltimore this year. The Orioles' Ken Singleton, batting .404 since Aug. 3, drove in three runs with a double and single and teammate Doug DeCinces drove in three runs and hit his 17th homer of the season in support of Ross Grimsley's pitching. Baltimore moved within three games of the Yankees with their 13th victory in 17 games. During that streak, however, they have picked up just one game on New York. Mariners 6, Rangers 4 Jimmy Sexton had four hits and Dan Meyer hit his 20th homer as the Mariners topped Texas. Jim Sundberg and Mike Hargrove had solo homers for the Rangers. "I've had scouts tell me I could play up here," said Sexton, who was recalled from the minor leagues last week. "I don't want to go back to the minors." A's 5, Brewers 3 Tony Armas drove in three Oakland runs with a double and a homer and Vida Blue won his 14th game in 31 decisions, striking out seven and surrendering seven hits until being relieved by Doug Bair in the ninth. White Sox 6-4, Angels 2-5 Chris Knapp hurled a three-hitter and struck out 13 in the opener. Knapp, recalled from Iowa of the American Association last week, had a no-hitter until Rance Mulliniks singled with two out in the seventh. Jorge Orta had four hits and drove in four runs in the opener. Mario Guerrero doubled home Bobby Bonds with the winning run in the eighth inning of the nightcap.

Parker: Buc 'Hit Man'

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates' "Hit Man" is putting out a contract on all National League pitchers. "If the game situation allows it, I think I'll be swinging for home runs the rest of the year," says Dave Parker. His primary goal, of course, is to help the Pirates win the National League East title, but the way the Philadelphia Phillies are playing, that may be an impossible dream. More within Parker's grasp is a season of 100 runs batted in. He already has reached a cherished level—the 200-hit mark—and is on his way to the league's batting title with a .345 average. The broad-shouldered Parker continued to kill National League pitching Sunday with a home run, triple and double while leading the Pirates to a 10-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Parker became the first National Leaguer to reach the 200-hit plateau this season with his double in the first inning. Later, his home run made more news because it matched an accomplishment by the late Roberto Clemente. The homer was Parker's 20th and he became the first Pirates player to collect 20 homers and 200 hits in the same season since Clemente did it in 1967. With two RBI Sunday, Parker improved his total to 86. While Parker was having a good day, so was Greg Luzinski of the Phillies. He blasted a three-run homer, leading Philadelphia to a 6-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals that kept the Phillies in front of the Pirates by eight games. In other NL action Sunday, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-2, the New York Mets trimmed the Chicago Cubs 7-3, the Atlanta Braves whipped the San Diego Padres 7-3, and the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros Phillies 6, Cardinals 5

Tommy Hutton and Bake McBride both singled in the fourth inning before Luzinski ripped a pitch over the left field fence, sending the Phillies ahead 6-5. Warren Brusstar, 5-2, was the winner with relief help from Gene Garber, who notched his 15th save. Reds 6, Dodgers 2 Johnny Bench's two-run double triggered a four-run first inning and gave the Cincinnati catcher 100 RBI for the sixth time in his career as the Reds defeated Los Angeles. Bench's double tied him with ex-teammate Tony Perez as the only active major leaguer with six 100 RBI seasons. Rookie Tom Hume registered his first major league victory after relieving starter Jack Billingham in the third inning. Hume, 1-3, pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam and spaced five hits over the last six innings. The victory kept at eight the Dodgers' "magic number" for clinching the NL West title. Mets 7, Cubs 3 Bruce Boiesclair's two-run double keyed a four-run fifth inning, leading New York over Chicago. Before the Mets rallied, the Cubs had taken a 3-0 lead in the fourth on a double by Bill Buckner, a single by Steve Ontiveros and a two-run homer by Manny Trillo. John Milner followed Boiesclair's big fifth-inning hit with an RBI double and Joel Youngblood capped the rally with a run-scoring single. Youngblood later doubled home two Mets runs in the ninth. Rick Reuschel, 19-8, was unsuccessful in his third bid for his 20th victory. Braves 7, Padres 3 Pat Rickett's run-scoring single in the sixth inning broke a 3-3 tie and Atlanta later pulled off a triple steal to highlight a three-run eighth while beating San Diego. Garry Matthews and Biff Pocoroba were on base with walks against San Diego starter Randy Jones, 6-12, in the sixth when Rickett sent a liner to left, scoring Matthews from second with the eventual winning run. Rickett's hit chased Jones and made a winner of Eddie Solomon, 5-5. Giants 2, Astros 1 Rob Andrews' single in the eighth inning drove home the winning run as San Francisco beat Houston. Ed Halicki, 14-10, scattered seven hits over the first 72-3 innings before giving way to relief ace Gary Lavelle, who blanked the Astros the rest of the way for his 19th save of the season. The only run off Halicki was a third-inning homer by Enos Cabell, his 15th of the year.

Some Upsets In Last Round Of Pre-Season

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The National Football League has completed its last six-game preseason with a few surprises that could be making the prognosticators a little edgy before the start of the regular season next Sunday. The league has voted to drop two exhibition games and add two regular season games for a 16-4 split. In recent years, the schedule has called for 14 season contests and six exhibitions. But in the last go-round of preseason games, there were some shocking results involving preseason favorites and some rumblings of discontent. It all started Thursday night with Dallas' 30-0 lashing of American Conference powerhouse Pittsburgh and continued Saturday night with expansion Tampa Bay's 14-0 whitewashing of perennial play-off contender Baltimore. On Sunday, the New England Patriots—who some observers believe have the best chance to unseat the Oakland Raiders as Super Bowl champs—ran their preseason record to 5-1 with a 29-10 triumph over Atlanta. But the kings of their offensive line, Leon Gray and John Hannah, walked out on the team in a contract dispute before the game. The two other games Sunday that closed out the preseason schedule saw the Miami Dolphins outscore the New York

Giants 27-21 and San Diego outlast Seattle 38-20. Minnesota bombed Buffalo 30-6, New Orleans edged Houston 20-16, Cincinnati crushed Chicago 24-6, Denver blanked San Francisco 20-0 and Kansas City outscored St. Louis 37-20 on Saturday. Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, who only has three preseason and regular-season games in the Buccaneers' existence, saw top draft choice Ricky Bell score both Tampa Bay touchdowns. "They laughed before the game and now we're laughing," said McKay. Bob Griese, wearing glasses to correct a vision problem, threw two touchdown passes and Gary Davis plunged for two short TDs to pace the Dolphins over the Giants. Griese hit flanker Freddie Solomon with a 66-yard scoring pass and put Miami ahead to stay on the first play of the fourth quarter with an eight-yard toss to Du-ris Harris. Ricky Young scored on runs of two and six yards and on a two-yard pass from quarterback James Harris as the Chargers pummeled the Seahawks. With victories Saturday, New Orleans, Denver and Cincinnati preceded New England in having the best preseason marks—5-1. The Saints got completions on 13 of 17 passes from Bobby Scott before he left the game.

Andretti Eyes Switch

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Fresh from victory in a Lotus in the Italian Grand Prix, Mario Andretti is pondering whether to switch to Ferrari next season. Such a move poses a dilemma for the veteran Formula One driver. Andretti would be giving up a car which, he says, "can't miss victory when it works" for a racer whose competitiveness next season is a question mark. The 37-year-old Nazareth, Pa., driver, gaining his fourth win of the season Sunday and first ever in the Monza event, said talks are under way with Ferrari for his possible replacement of Austrian ace Niki Lauda. Lauda, who finished second in the Monza race to virtually clinch this year's driving championship, recently announced he would leave Ferrari at the end of the season. Ferrari, one of the most prestigious Formula One teams, will miss Lauda for testing purposes since Andretti would not be expected to accept a fulltime engagement with the Italian factory. Andretti emphasized he would accept a transfer to Ferrari on condition he could pursue his business and racing engagements at home. He would have little time for testing at the Ferrari headquarters at Maranello. Andretti, very popular with Italian fans, has 41 points in the world standings in 14 events. But Lauda's total of 69 points, with only three races to go, puts him virtually beyond reach for his second world driving championship. Only South Africa's Jody Scheckter, second with 42 points, has a chance of reaching Lauda. But he needs three straight wins. A victory is worth nine points. But even in that case, Lauda needs only one point in the three races to secure the title.

Pro-Alumni Game Held

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Blues won a lopsided 105-60 victory over the White's Saturday, spurred by a 27-point performance by Mitch Kupchak in the first University of North Carolina Pro-Alumni game. Bob McAdoo led the White squad with 19 points. Denver Nuggets coach Larry Brown coached the Blue squad while coach Doug Moe of the San Antonio Spurs was the White mentor. Proceeds of the sellout match went to charity.

Mike McGee and his Duke Blue Devils looked confident when they trotted onto the field in Wallace Wade Stadium Saturday afternoon. It was the opening game of the season, and they, like the N. C. State Wolfpack before them, were to meet that "little ol' school from down east a ways."

McGee, of course, was familiar with East Carolina. He'd served there for a year as head football coach. He had publically stated when he left East Carolina that he would love to see the two schools meet on the gridiron. He's said so since then, also.

Privately, however, there are reports that McGee was not all that happy about the game. He had fought it to the end. Like those folks over in Chapel Hill, he believed that playing the Pirates wasn't something you did if you valued your life, and from all we hear, that is what McGee is fighting for.

Reports coming from Durham are that McGee must win this year, the final one on his contract. He reportedly was told by Duke officials that nothing less than seven wins would see him back on the field next fall. And, we believe, one of those victories had to be against East Carolina.

For McGee, it was a bitter defeat, one which may spell the end for him at the school he longed so much to coach for the remainder of his career.

Pirates Must Beware

East Carolina, with two straight wins behind it, turns away from the Atlantic Coast Conference now, and does battle with the Rockets of Toledo. Toledo suffered a 43-3 lambasting by Ball State this past weekend, but the Pirates had better not be fooled into a false sense of security.

Toledo has a good passing game, and the Pirates have been burned in both games by the air attack. Certainly it will be sharpened up by the Rockets during this week.

Toledo may also be jacked up by playing the Pirates as the "school that didn't want to play," as a follow-up to the Bucs attempts to replace Toledo on the ECU schedule earlier this year.

So despite that lopsided score, the Pirates had better not be looking ahead to VMI or South Carolina.

Moving Up; Ticket Sales

Two Pirates moved up on the career ladder with their performances against Duke University Saturday. Willie Hawkins, with 60 yards rushing, has become the number eight career rusher for the Pirates.

Hawkins now has 1,490 yards, passing Billy Wightman (1967-69), who had 1,453. Hawk needs only nine more to catch Bill Wallace, the number seven man.

Terry Gallaher, who caught two passes for 33 yards, advanced from seventh to sixth place in reception yardage, passing Vic Wilfore (1972-74). Wilford caught passes for 721 yards, while Gallaher has 750. He needs 74 more to catch number five, Jimmy Adkins.

There was little doubt that the Pirates sold a lot of tickets to the Duke game, too. Over 9,000 were sold in the Minges Ticket Office, and many more were probably sold in the Duke Ticket Office to Pirate fans.

Duke, which for years, listed Wallace Wade Stadium as seating 44,000, said it had counted and found that the stadium now seats only 40,175. Still the crowd of 38,200 was the largest ever to see a Duke opening game.

And from our point of view about half of those fans were Pirates supporters.

Which brings us to a little article we saw recently in The Daily Tar Heel. In the article, UNC athletic director Bill Cobey was talking about the upcoming end to the UNC-ECU series, and made the statement that "East Carolina only sold 4,800 tickets last year."

That's a fact. But what Cobey didn't say is that that was all UNC would give East Carolina to sell. The ECU ticket office got 4,000 to start with and begged for more, finally getting 800 extra, and were told that's all by UNC.

With 9,000-plus sold here both to Duke and State, Cobey should know that his statement wasn't quite the whole truth.

Pentagon's Supermarkets Offer An Extra Benefit

BY DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Like most housewives, Mrs. Jane Majors buys her groceries at a large supermarket near her home. But unlike most Americans, Mrs. Majors' food bill is about 23 per cent less than what she would pay at other markets.

The reason for this is that Mrs. Majors' (not her real name) husband is an Army officer, making her eligible to shop a military commissary which sells merchandise at cost. A Senate study said the savings is 23 per cent of commercial supermarket prices — not counting the fact that no state or local sales tax is added to the grocery bill.

Helping the military to provide this cut-rate service for retired and active military employees is an annual government subsidy of more than $300 million.

While Mrs. Majors' non-military neighbors in Alexandria, Va., a Washington suburb, pay $3.99 for a carton of cigarettes she pays only $2.65 at the Cameron Station Commissary, the largest such facility in the continental United States.

A family-size loaf of Wonder bread, which costs 63 cents at commercial supermarkets, costs her 44 cents; she pays $2.29 a pound for porterhouse steak that is priced at $2.94 a pound in other stores. A box of egg noodles retailing for 57 cents costs her 38 cents. She pays 95 cents for a one pound package of all-beef franks which costs $1.45 elsewhere.

Congress has been battling over the century-old military commissaries for more than 30 years but nothing has yet been done to slow their growth or substantially alter the way they operate.

President Carter and President Ford both urged that the subsidy be phased out of existence.

Last June Carter told a retired Navy serviceman, "I don't think it's unreasonable for the taxpayers to demand that the military at least pay enough for goods they buy to cover operating expenses."

Congress disagrees. Last month the Senate voted 59-33 to kill an amendment offered by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., that would have phased out the subsidy over three years and made the commissaries self-supporting.

Military commissaries were first established back in the 19th century as support facilities at remote frontier posts. Congress passed legislation in 1866 to authorize the Army to establish the first ones. Marine and Navy commissaries followed after the turn of the century, and the Air Force got them in 1947.

As American military forces spread over the world in the post-World War II era, the need for commissaries grew with them.

Their numbers, however, grew far beyond the nation's frontier posts and into the nation's most metropolitan areas.

In 1948, when Congress began questioning their growth, a law was passed requiring the Defense Department to certify that each commissary was needed because commercial facilities were either inconvenient or charging unreasonable prices.

Yet, a Senate Appropriations subcommittee report observed last month, "Somewhere during the past century... the original purposes of commissaries gradually faded from view."

Today they are available to every American military installation in the country — with five in San Francisco, four each in San Diego and Norfolk, Va., three in Honolulu, and six in Washington.

There are 418 commissaries in operation worldwide, 279 of them in the United States, with annual sales of $3 billion.

The stores required an annual subsidy of $100 million in 1964 to pay the salaries of civilian and military personnel who run them. Today that subsidy has grown to $327 million a year and is estimated to cost taxpayers $3.8 billion more over the next decade.

A Senate study said that if the commissaries were made to pay their own way, military families would still enjoy a considerable saving over the prices paid in regular supermarkets.

Through the years the commissaries have been subjected to numerous congressional and Defense Department studies. Almost all have concluded that changes are long overdue.

In one 1975 study, the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, concluded that the location of commissaries in large metropolitan areas could not be justified.

Commissaries are stoutly defended by many members of Congress, including Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who says the cut-rate groceries help the government recruit military enlistments.

"We must honor our obligations to those who served our nation," Stevens said. "We cannot renege on commitments made in the past. To do so would jeopardize future enlistments as well as amount to a breach of faith for those who relied on this benefit as they made career decisions in the past."

But Eagleton counters that the "Commissaries were a necessity for military families in the frontier days, when military posts were isolated and going into town to buy groceries would have meant a trip of hours or days.

"Those days are gone, however," he adds. "In 1977, there is really little justification for maintaining six military commissaries in metropolitan Washington, for example. I doubt if there is a single military family in the Washington area living more than a few minutes from a commercial grocery store."

A spokeswoman for the Pentagon says military servicemen and women consider the commissaries "another form of recompense," particularly the lower level enlisted personnel "who cannot afford to buy food" at commercial market prices.

One Army sergeant who earns $6,420 a year — in addition to free housing, food and medical services — says the commissaries "are important to the enlisted personnel, many of whom are still poorly paid."

But critics note that the commissaries are open to all military personnel whatever their income despite the fact that military pay for all ranks has increased significantly in recent years.

For example, a Navy captain who earns $33,234 a year, lives in a middle class Washington suburb, owns two cars, and belongs to the local country club buys the bulk of his family's groceries at the commissary right along with lower paid enlisted personnel.

A Senate Appropriations Committee report, which also urged elimination of the commissary subsidy, noted that from 1964 to 1975 military compensation increased 127 per cent while the consumer price index rose only 74 per cent in the same period.

The report also noted that when the salaries and fringe benefits of military personnel are compared to the pay and benefits of government civilian workers (who do not receive commissary privileges), "the average military employee receives $4,257 per year more than the civilian employee."

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1♥ 2♣ ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you could be sure that partner held spade support, we would certainly venture two spades. However, there is a grave danger of a misfit, and since a new suit by you would be forcing, the auction could get out of hand. We would settle for the certain plus by doubling two clubs. If partner has the right hand, the penalty could easily compensate for any misfit.

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 1♥ Pass 3♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's jump shift in a suit higher ranking than his first-bid suggests one of two hands. Either a powerhouse with a good spade fit, or a huge minor-two suiter. In either case, partner does not rate to have much in hearts. Since a three heart rebid might suggest a more substantial hand in terms of high cards, we would settle for a quiet three spades to see how the bidding develops.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠843 ♥953 ♦87642 ♣K7
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Pass. We strain to keep the bidding open when partner bids one club, but to do so with this uninspiring collection is a court disaster. What if partner opened on a three-card club suit? Well, if the opponents are prepared to let us play one club undoubted, we wouldn't mind going down a few tricks, for surely the opponents can make some contract.

What do you bid now?
A.—You did not open one no trump because you felt your intermediate cards made the hand too strong for that action, so the temptation now is to rebid two no trump. However, that could result in your missing a spade game. We would bid a quiet one spade. If partner passes that, it's unlikely that we have missed anything.

Potential Season Hit In Betty White Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ah, but there's good news tonight. It's the new "Betty White Show" on CBS. It's funny, subtle, razor-sharp in timing, well-acted, well-directed, and it's not bad, either.

Miss W., late of the "Mary Tyler Moore" show, now plays an oft-unemployed veteran actress. She shares her home with a friend, played by gently daffy Georgia Engel, another MTM alumna.

Tonight's opener, a show within a show, has Miss White (a) happy she'll star in a series pilot "Undercover Woman," and (b) distressed to learn her ex-husband, a cold fish, will direct it.

Prior to their breakup, Miss White and the ex (played to a fine, acerbic T by John Hillerman) were wed five years. Recalls she: "We were just a couple of silly kids — I was 40, he was 42."

Now, "exactly 26 alimony checks" later, he comes to her house with word of his directing job. She greets him thusly: "I see you still have your mustache. Or did you have anchovies for lunch?"

This starts a running verbal joust, just like the old days — droll in manner, acid in content, but never genuinely malicious. There even are occasional hints that this divorce may not work out.

Hint one is a scene after their first "Undercover" rehearsal, when she gets all dolled up and invites him home for dinner — ostensibly to discuss her role in the new cop series.

"I'm a little confused," she begins. "What's my motivation for the car chase?"

"I always thought it was to avoid getting machine-gunned to death," he sighs. Later, when she starts making reconciliation noises, invites him to spend the night, he declines. The reason surprises her no end.

But it's adroitly worked out in David Lloyd's script, which also includes some nifty needling of the TV industry via a bumbling CBS vice president (Alex Henteloff) in charge of "Undercover Woman."

His last post was in the mail-room. He is a bit dim. During rehearsal, upon sighting Miss White in scanty garb, he asks: "Is she supposed to be disguised as a woman of easy virtue?"

"No, a hooker," explains the long-suffering director.

Others on hand tonight are a huge man (Charles Cyphers), Miss White's stunt double in the new cop series, and her costar

Child-Snatch Ban Liked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has taken a tentative first step toward joining states who want to make it impossible for divorced parents to steal their children from each other and flee across state lines. The law which may some day end such "child snatching" is the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. Eighteen states have written the law into their books. The law was introduced in the last General Assembly but died in committee. But now the state General Statutes Commission has taken an interest in the legislation. The 10-member commission reviews state laws each year and suggests new laws it considers necessary. Of the seven bills the commission proposed last year, six were enacted by the General Assembly. The commission voted last week to study the law. It is expected to approve it and recommend the statute for passage by the 1979 General Assembly. As matters stand now, it is possible for a parent who has been denied custody of a child to steal the child and go to another state. If a court in the second state grants custody to that parent, the only legal recourse of the first parent is to attempt to get the decision reversed in court. But the proposed new law would spell out which court has responsibility for making the child custody decision and requires other states that have adopted the law to abide by that decision. It would also authorize a judge to refuse to hear a custody case if the parent "has wrongfully taken the child from another state or has engaged in similar reprehensible conduct..."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A low point day that requires one to keep on a cheerful basis, otherwise it is possible to become too concerned with the little details of every-day living and to display pettiness.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Start on work ahead of you in the knowledge that it will bring you the right benefits. Sidestep one who is hypocritical and could do you harm.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use tact in dealing with the one you love and get excellent response. Be sure you handle business affairs wisely during the day.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Avoid any arguments at home that may crop up by remaining poised and quiet. Take time to improve your appearance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure to use extreme caution in motion today and avoid possible accident. Try to be less critical of others at this time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your financial situation carefully and you will know where to establish economy measures. Take no chances with your health.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your personal faults and figure out way to eradicate them so that you can live more successfully. Think constructively.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may think you are overloaded with work but if you get right to it, it will soon be done. Strive for increased happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It is wise to handle important affairs yourself since you can't rely on friends too much today. Plan recreation in advance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Instead of closing your eyes to work ahead of you, get right at it and it will soon be done. Take it easy tonight and rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study every detail of a new interest you have in mind and thereby save money in the long run. Show others you have poise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Good day for collecting money and paying bills. Show some objectivity when dealing with others. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't take your ire out on an associate and later you can discuss matters in a quiet and intelligent way. Sidestep an opponent.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who wants everything to be in order, so encourage this trait and a successful life will follow, since there is an orderly mind here. Be sure to give praise when due in order to satisfy the ego and add to the success.

Counterfeiting Paper Bill No Simple Task

WASHINGTON (AP)—Being a counterfeiter is tough work. According to National Geographic, a lot of work goes into making money. The design of each bill is cut into steel plates, but most of the detail work is done by hand. Several engravers work on each plate, some specializing in faces, others in lettering.

Once the plates are made, the paper, a special type impregnated with tiny red and blue threads, goes through the presses three times — once to print the back, once to print the front and a third time to print the serial numbers, letters and seals on the bills.

an hour. Each sheet must be examined by an inspector, cut into bills and checked by electric eye to see that it has been properly cut. Finally the new bills are stacked into packets of 100 each, ready for shipment to Federal Reserve Banks which distribute the new money for circulation.

Drought, low prices and aflatoxins have all combined to make 1977 a year that corn producers will long remember. However, the most recent problem-mold and aflatoxins have produced a lot of questions from corn growers about their alternatives.

A grower can determine if he has aflatoxins by inspection of fields for mold growth on kernels before harvest. Aspergillus flavus mold will show up as a greenish-yellow felt-like growth on or between kernels, especially adjacent to or in worm damage ears.

Growers should absolutely have a test made on their corn before harvesting. If a aflatoxin problem is suspected a representative sample should be taken to an elevator with a black light. If it shows positive, have a chemical assay made to determine the presence and level of contamination.

If a mold problem is present the grower may or may not have buyer for his corn. This will depend on the buyer. In most locations buyers will not buy corn testing positive under the black light. Some buyers are using a mini-column test which allows them to detect not only the presence but the level of aflatoxins.

Growers should have corn tested if they are going to put it in storage. ASCS is requiring corn that is to be placed under loan to be tested for aflatoxins before a loan is made. If you intend to store insect damaged grain for feeding livestock, it is desirable to have it tested.
