Vote Of Confidence For Lance By Speaker O'Neill

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill gave Bert Lance a vote of confidence today, but said that the budget director's future in government would be settled by the President and Lance himself.

O'Neill said the subject of Lance did not come up at a Democratic congressional leadership meeting with Carter at the White House.

The speaker, talking with reporters after the breakfast meeting, said he thought Lance could continue to "work very effectively" as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

"You're talking about sins of the past," O'Neill, D-Mass., said of Lance's bank overdrafts. "Is he doing an able job? Yes, he's doing an able job.

"As long as the President has confidence in him, that's the main thing," O'Neill said. "I don't see any lack of confidence as far as members of the House are concerned."

O'Neill acknowledged, however, that the matter was not a House issue.

A White House spokesman said that a decision about whether Lance would stay on as Carter's budget director would be a "personal" one between the two men.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday that no decision on Lance's future seems to have been made yet, adding that he thought Carter and Lance would reach a decision together.

Carter has said he will hold a news conference this week, but has not said when. The Lance question could be expected to dominate any presidential news conference.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee ended its nine days of public hearings into Lance's finances on Monday. The chairman of the panel, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said he has "grave doubts" that the committee will issue a final report.

Meanwhile, an Associated Press public opinion poll taken Monday night showed Americans sharply divided over the Lance affair.

The AP survey showed that nearly 38 per cent of those interviewed felt Lance should resign, while about 35 per cent said he should stay. Nearly 27 per cent expressed no opinion.

And the nationwide telephone survey of 1,548 adults showed about 26 per cent of those interviewed said their confidence in Carter's keeping his promise to enforce high moral standards in government had decreased. Eight per cent said their confidence had increased and 53 per cent said their opinion of Carter's commitment to that promise was not affected by the Lance controversy.

After adjourning the Senate committee's investigation of Lance on Monday, Ribicoff said he would call a closed-door meeting of the panel in two weeks or so to discuss what action, if any, should be taken.

Asked what options would be discussed at that time, he noted that "I don't know what's going to intervene between now and then."

Lance, who has insisted that he will not resign, met privately with Carter on Monday.

Powell disclosed the meeting, but did not say who requested it or what was discussed. Powell also said he and presidential aide Hamilton Jordan discussed the Lance affair with the President on Sunday night.

Powell said White House officials felt Lance did well in his testimony before the Senate committee. A White House aide said Carter praised the former Georgia banker during Monday's Cabinet meeting.

Carter reportedly spoke "very favorably" about Lance's testimony and about "the way he conducted himself and the way he answered questions."

Abducts Girl At School

DUNCAN, S.C. (AP) — A man wielding a pistol abducted a 17-year-old girl from the campus of Byrnes High School early today, authorities said.

The Spartanburg County Sheriff's Department said officers chased a late model Pontiac toward Greer, but the driver managed to elude them. The search for the girl and her abductor were being concentrated in the Lyman area, deputies said.

The girl was identified as Barbara Ramsey, 17, of Wellford. Duncan police said they also knew the identity of the man who abducted her, but withheld the name until he is charged.

A spokesman for the police department said the girl was taken from her homeroom class just before school began. Three or four other pupils and a teacher watched helplessly as the man took her from the room, he said.

Lee Announces Red Tape Cut In Applying For Land Use Permits

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Three rule changes aimed at cutting red tape for landowners seeking permits required under the Coastal Area Management Act were announced here today by Howard Lee, secretary of natural resources and community development.

At a news conference, Lee also said the changes are aimed at increasing local involvement in granting of land use permits.

"These three steps are aimed at cutting application times for agricultural maintenance dredging by up to 75 days; cutting processing for some other types of dredge and fill projects 45 days and giving local governments review of applications for state dredge and fill permits," he said.

The 1974 Coastal Area Management Act (CAMA) has been criticized by many coastal residents because it applies to only the 20 coastal counties and regulates development there while other counties have no such regulation. A suit challenging the law as unconstitutional because it does not apply statewide was recently rejected in Superior Court.

Coastal landowners have also attacked the law in the legislature, winning some concessions this year that

City School Board Maps Merger Study

By JERRY RAYNOR

A unanimous consensus to take immediate action to lay the groundwork for an orderly joint city-county school boards approach to the issue of a merger was reached by the city school board Monday night.

At its regular meeting for September, board members discussed means of conducting a thorough, factual and non-emotional study of a possible merger, with emphasis on proceedings being open to the public.

Chairman Henry Dunn opened the discussions by reading a letter from the County Commissioners, one addressed to him and to Chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education Mark Owen, in which commissioners have requested that the two boards get together to a study the merger proposed in the commissioner's recent resolution.

"The most important thing we must do," board member

Miles Frost commented, "is to get all the true facts, to lay them on the line. I'm referring to the entire school programs. The different curriculums, the facts on professional salaries in both systems, the enrichment programs."

"We need," Frost continued, "to bring everything to the highest denomination, to have the whole picture, and we need to put dollar costs on all this."

"When this is done we can examine the proposal on a sound basis and then formulate an opinion," Frost concluded.

In efforts to consider the best approach, board members agreed that the first necessity is to get professional assistance from the state level.

Superintendent Glenn Cox was instructed to contact the Division of School Planning to arrange for such assistance.

"This, I feel," member Mrs. Terry Shank said, "will be the key to intelligent proceedings to have someone knowledgeable to provide guidelines from the very beginning, someone who can say who is to call meetings and what procedures we are to follow."

"I agree on that approach," member Dr. James Bearden said. "The state people may say they would like to do some groundwork for us before we get to the stage of naming committees from each board."

Ed Carter was the first to strongly opt for consideration of an public referendum on the issue at the appropriate stage of developments.

"This is the feeling of the League of Women Voters and other concerned groups," Cox stated. "And it is also my feeling there is no objection by the County Commissioners on a public referendum, but this is something that must be

District Map Underlines Board Claim

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

It is the unanimous agreement of the Greenville Board of Education that Lake Ellsworth is properly a part of the Greenville School District.

At the regular September meeting Monday night, a 1976 Greenville School District map with a signed notation was the focal point of discussions on the Lake Ellsworth issue, which in recent months has been a subject of contention.

The notation reads: "This map has been reviewed by Ott Alford and R. E. Stewart June 24, 1976 and they agree the school district line is properly indicated. (Signed) R. E. Stewart (and) Ott Alford."

R. E. (Robert) Stewart, now Director of Buildings and Grounds for the city schools, was Director of Administrative Services at the time he signed the notation on June 24, 1976 as a representative for Superintendent Glenn Cox.

City Engineer Charlie Holiday this morning confirmed the annexation status of Lake Ellsworth. The subdivision was incorporated into the city limits December 31, 1974 in what Holiday said resulted in a "satellite city area, that is, it's not contiguous with the city limits at Westwood, but is an island separated from the rest of the city."

Board member Dr. James Bearden expressed regret that "the public has gotten an impression that nobody knows where the boundaries are."

"The whole situation has been thrown in disarray; there's a lot of misunderstanding where there should be none, when in fact the establishment of boundary lines has been an orderly, well defined process."

"It would be most unfortunate," Bearden added, "if the public believed that merger would be the solution to attendance districts. It is altogether two separate things."

Miles Frost amplified Bearden's statement by pointing out that "the very first reason given by County Commissioners in calling on the two school boards to consider a merger cites 'continuous disagreement as to district attendance areas, and district lines.'"

The current lines, board members all emphasized, are valid in that attendance figures certified by both boards to the State Board of Education have been based on figures of student populations residing within the boundary lines as delineated on the map signed on June 24, 1976.

Mickey Herrin, attorney for the city schools, commented "I believe this is a valid position that the city board is taking. I agree that on the basis of this map, the city board is correct in including Lake Ellsworth within the city school district."

Pete Fagan, a resident of Lake Ellsworth, explained that there is indeed a division of preferences on the part of residents there. "There are some who would prefer that their children go to county schools, while others, like myself, prefer to send their children to city schools."

Board Chairman Henry Dunn noted "there's nothing legally on the books since 1933, no legal documents on file to record the city-county school boundaries."

In reference to Dunn's statement, Dr. Thomas Johnson, a faculty member at East Carolina University, urged the city school board "to go the extra mile" in requesting that boundaries be officially documented and recorded."

$5.75 — WHAT FOR?

We received our August bill from Greenville Utilities and paid it. Then, about three weeks later, we got another bill for $5.75, with no explanation except that it was something they had forgotten to add to our bill and it was not a fuel adjustment. There were several families in our neighborhood who received this same amount on a bill, regardless of how much their August bill had been. Now, in our September bill, the $5.75 has been recorded as an overdue bill. E. G.

George Reel, Greenville Utilities' Customer Relations person, said this $5.75 was the basic facility charge that every customer pays each month and that it was inadvertently left off of about 100 families' bills by the computer. "We knew nothing to do, but go ahead and bill each family separately for this amount," he said, "but we made sure that none of them were cut off or in any way penalized if they paid it after the deadline, since the additional bills were sent out so late." He admitted that no public notice nor explanation went out about the charge either on the bills themselves or via the media.

PLEASED WITH RESPONSE

"We're very, very pleased with the response," said Mrs. Mabel Baker of the Hotline appeal for gifts for the Psychiatric Unit of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Baker, who is charge nurse of the unit, said items given the Unit included a number of potted plants, a guitar, a hi-fi set, an ice cream freezer, an electric frying pan, several pieces of kitchen equipment, a floor lamp, and a Boston rocker. She expressed appreciation to everyone who contributed.

Spreadeagled Giraffe Dies In Lifting Effort

By TAD BARTIMUS

Associated Press Writer

MARWELL HALL, England (AP) — Victor, the spreadeagled giraffe died today apparently of shock during an attempt to winch him to his feet in a canvas sling made by the Royal Navy.

The giraffe, which had been unable to stand since he died the splits last Thursday, could not survive the attempt to lift him with a block and tackle hung from steel scaffolding.

The plight of 15-year-old Victor was front-page news in this animal-loving nation and around the world. Telegrams and letters poured in to the Marwell Park Zoo with suggestions on how to get him to his feet.

He apparently fell while trying to mate with one of the zoo's three female giraffes.

Victor "was a bit stressed by all the activity around him last night," said his keeper, 21-year-old Ruth Giles. "But he appeared to have settled down and had something to eat this morning."

A veterinarian who examined the giraffe said he died from "shock." An autopsy was planned.

The 18-foot-tall East African giraffe had been raised in the air, clad in a harness specially made by Royal Navy sailmakers.

The one-ton animal hung swaying from the steel scaffolding as workmen lowered him near the ground in a see-saw operation designed to slowly restore circulation to his rickety legs.

He seemed to have trouble with his breathing as they lowered him, and he suddenly died.

"I think it is the shock of what has happened progressively, and in this last trauma he didn't have the will to stand it," said John Knowles, owner of the Marwell Park Zoo about 70 miles southwest of London.

"It is always a problem with giraffes. They suppress their shock but their worry and concern is going on inside them. They reach the point where they just give up," Knowles said.

Victor had appeared distressed and continually turned his head to watch workers who set up the lifting gear last night.

Had he survived, said Knowles, he would have been "the first giraffe as far as I know, to have done the splits and live." But the zoo owner had rated the giraffe's chances at only 50-50.

Seniors Club Meet Held

The Elm Street Senior Citizens' Club held its business meeting Thursday.

The Rev. Adrian Brown opened the meeting with the devotion and a report was given on those people that have been hospitalized.

Col. Harry Hagerty was welcomed into the membership. Mrs. Elizabeth Savage thanked the Recreation Department for all the kindness and for what the Recreation Department has done for the Senior Citizens' Club since it was organized in 1961.

Mrs. Savage said that she felt the club should meet at a different location. President Sarah Ashton suggested either the Saint Paul's Episcopal Church or the Boys' Club were available.

The club voted to meet at Saint Paul's Episcopal Church Oct. 6 at 10 a.m. until further plans could be made.

The Rev. William Hadden, ECU Chaplain, was the guest speaker.

Refreshments were served following the meeting.

Dog Obedience Course Planned

Forensic Medicine Prof Named For Med School

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Lawrence S. Harris, a forensic medicine specialist, will join the faculty of the Department of Pathology at the East Carolina School of Medicine, according to Dr. Seymour Bakerman, chairman of the department.

Dr. Harris will be a key person in the formation of the Forensic Medicine Division which will cooperate with the state medical examiner's office in providing regionalized services to eastern North Carolina. Currently, cases that cannot be handled by local county medical examiners are sent to Chapel Hill.

Dr. William E. Laupus, Dean of the School of Medicine here, said the appointment for Dr. Harris and Raleigh attorney Ed Hollowell will form the "backbone of the Forensic Medicine Division."

Dr. Harris, 46, is currently chief medical examiner for the State of Vermont and associate professor of pathology at the University of Vermont.

He received his medical degree from the Western Reserve University School of Medicine in Cleveland, Ohio after graduating magna cum laude with an AB degree from Alfred University, N.Y.

Dr. Harris took his residency at the Institute of Pathology, University Hospitals, Cleveland, Ohio and did postgraduate study in forensic pathology at the coroner's office there. His post-doctoral training included a fellowship in neuropathology at Cleveland Metropolitan Hospital and a teaching fellowship in the same field at his medical alma mater.

Dr. Harris is a member of the Governor's Ad Hoc Committee on the Evaluation of Medical Driving Disabilities and is a consultant for the Vermont Health Department, Division of Child Welfare, on the sudden infant death syndrome.

During his career, Dr. Harris has lead a number of seminars in his field including some specifically on sudden infant death syndrome.

stated in any plan formulated by the two boards.

"I strongly support the idea of a referendum," Carter said. "First we need to let the public know the advantages and disadvantages of a merger, to let them have all the facts, then let them decide."

A complete, non-emotional study of all the ramifications inherent in a merger was expressed as one of the essential factors in any merger plan.

Summing up the need for action in responding to the commissioner's resolution, Dunn said "time is of the essence. We are all interested in moving ahead."

"However," Dunn cautioned, "the inferred date of '79 is not ironclad. Gaskins (County Commissioner Chairman Charles Gaskins) has indicated that if we are making progress, nobody is going to jump on a bandwagon to pressure a decision before we're ready for it."

In other actions, the school board:

— Approved the resignation of a teacher whose husband has been transferred to another location, approved a leave of absence for a teacher for health reasons; and approved the election of three new teacher personnel, one a half-time teacher.

— Received a student membership report from Cox that shows enrollment at 5,316 at the end of the first full ten days of school.

Cox noted that there are some overloads at South Greenville and some overstaffing at Sadie Sautter, and that adjustments and some possible shifts will be made to balance things out. Also, in the kindergarten classes, the enrollment of 320 is 16 less than the anticipated 336 enrollment. Because of this, Cox said "it looks like we will lose one kindergarten teacher and may have to make some adjustments."

— Heard a report from architect George Shoe on the status of progress at the Middle School. "There has been some increased progress this past month," Shoe said, "but not enough to catch up completely. We're getting together with the contractor to draw up a new time schedule so that we can get a new picture on progress and dates."

When asked by Miles if he was satisfied with the state of progress, Shoe answered, "not completely. The weather has had much to do with it, but I've not gotten 100 per cent cooperation."

Dunn remarked, "We don't want to think in terms of delay under any circumstances. We want to think only in terms of the original scheduled dates." (The time schedule in the contract calls for completion prior to Christmas of this year).

— Tabled for further consideration appointment approval by the school board of a Pitt Technical Institute trustee.

— Approved two in-school fund raising projects — magazine sales by students at Aycock, and the sale of scented oil lamps by students at Agnes Fullilove. For both projects, approval is contingent on Cox's examining the magazine list and the type of lamp to be sold to insure acceptable standards.

Frost cast an opposing vote to the project sales, saying he does not feel this type of competitive selling by students is a good idea.

— A request from the Multiple Sclerosis Society died for the lack of a motion following discussion of the society's proposal to conduct a film-lecture program that would involve fund raising through a Read-A-Thon.

— Heard a report from Cox that the monthly financial statements were overdue from the computer system.

— Approved a recommendation by Cox that an orientation program for new school board members be set up by Dr. Clint Downing of East Carolina University. Cox explained that in light of forthcoming changes that may result in an elected school board, it is his feeling a an orientation-workshop program would be beneficial to new members.

— Scheduled for the next board meeting a look into the current methods of teaching in the schools on a self-contained versus a group teaching situation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Attorneys for Gov. George C. Wallace and his wife, Cornelia, met with a Family Court judge behind closed doors today to talk about the Wallace divorce proceedings.

The governor and his wife have filed separate divorce suits, Wallace claiming "incompatibility" and the first lady charging "violence and cruelty."

Neither Wallace nor his wife was present.

One of Mrs. Wallace's lawyers, John P. Kohn, said he would ask Judge John W. Davis III to move the hearing into an open courtroom. But at the outset, it was a closed meeting.

Mrs. Wallace's attorneys asked Davis first to reclude himself from the divorce proceedings because of what they called his close association with the governor.

The judge was appointed to his present office by Wallace before he was later elected, and his father, Dr. John W. Davis Jr., has been one of the chief executive's physicians.

As the lawyers and the judge talked inside Davis' office, a uniformed deputy sheriff stood guard outside.

An officer in the court said Davis called the pretrial conference to discuss the issues in the divorce proceedings and decide what will be considered at the final hearing.

The officer said it is not customary for the husband and wife to be present at such proceedings, and attorneys for the governor and his wife said they do not plan to be in court today.

Wallace, 58, cited an "incompatibility of temperament" and an "irretrievable breakdown" of the six-year marriage as grounds for divorce in his petition, which was filed Sept. 12.

Three days later Mrs. Wallace filed a counter suit, charging the governor with "actual violence and cruelty" and failure to give her funds to meet the "normal and even basic needs of a wife."

The 38-year-old attractive

Approximately 80 per cent of the U.S. population does not have easy access to mass transportation, says National Geographic.

brunette also asked for "liberal sums as alimony, support and maintenance."

One of the governor's attorneys, responding to the charges in Mrs. Wallace's suit, said Wallace "denies the allegations" and that "an appropriate denial" would be filed with the court.

Wallace's divorce petition was filed six days after his wife moved out of the executive mansion, saying she could no longer endure the partially paralyzed governor's "vulgarity, threats and abuse."

Signs of discord in the Wallaces' marriage surfaced in September, 1976, when the governor confirmed reports that his bedroom telephone at the executive mansion had been "bugged" and his conversations tape-recorded.

Mrs. Wallace admitted responsibility for the bugging, saying she wanted to stop "destructive" rumors that were threatening her marriage and to "find out who my accusers were."

One of Mrs. Wallace's attorneys has said he's been told by Mrs. Wallace that she still has some of the tapes. The attorney said, however, that they probably will never be made public.

Wallace married the former Mrs. John Snively on Jan. 4, 1971, as he prepared to begin his second term as governor.

Mrs. Wallace, the mother of two sons, was divorced from her first husband. She campaigned at her husband's side in 1974 when he won election to an unprecedented third term as the state's chief executive.

Wallace's first wife, Lurleen, died in 1968 while serving as Alabama's only woman governor. He has a son and three daughters from his first marriage.

No Need to Suffer from Period

I suffer so before and during my menstrual period that I live in dread of that time. I'm in my last year at high school. I just can't keep my mind on my work. Whenever I complain to my mother her attitude is "I've had it, my mother has had it, so stop complaining." Please don't mention my initials. — Miss X. Va.

Dear Miss X.: I thought we had long passed the idea that menstrual pains are a woman's burden, to bear without complaint. The fact that your mother and her mother suffered excruciating pains during the pre-menstrual period is no reason why you should suffer, too.

It may be that in your grandmother's time, and perhaps in your mother's time, the modern forms of treatment were not available. Yet even then, there were some methods of reducing the intensity of the distress.

The physical and psychological distress, so often associated with the pre-menstrual period, can now be alleviated. A wide variety of drugs, such as painkillers and tranquilizers, can make life bearable during this period.

The use of hormones in specially selected cases is extremely valuable. With these and other drugs there is no reason why you should continue to suffer or be incapacitated.

Our six-year-old son has a deep indentation in his chest. He is perfectly healthy, and our doctor assures us that there is nothing to worry about. Our concern is that he may be embarrassed as he gets older. Can anything be done about this? — Mrs. I.E., N.D.

Dear Mrs. E.: This "funnel chest" condition is technically known as pectus excavatum. Even in the absence of physical symptoms, physicians and surgeons are giving greater recognition to the psychological problems that can be associated with it.

A number of highly refined operations are now being performed, both for the funnel chest and the so-called pigeon breast which is the reverse of the funnel chest. The operations are designed to re-establish the shape of the chest.

The operations are safe and uncomplicated. I suggest that you give some consideration to a combined opinion of your doctor and a surgeon. I suggest, too, that you get their reaction before your son reaches a point of embarrassment.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Physical Fitness Expert Gives Exercise Warning

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

Exercise isn't all good. Even tennis can cause problems, if you aren't physically prepared to take it on.

That advice comes from pretty, blonde Maurita Robarge, who teaches kinesiology or biomechanics — a study of the mechanical principles of the human body — a three-credit course at the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse.

People are into exercise indoors and outdoors and many are doing body movements that may cause more harm than good, she points out. It is necessary to learn how to use our bodies correctly and efficiently to get the most out of sports and fitness programs.

"For example," she says, "a long line sit-up calls hip muscles into action and these muscles should not be strengthened because strengthening a muscle tends to shorten it." A lot of young people may do such an exercise as a challenge.

A hip muscle that becomes too strong can cause posture changes that put undue stress on an individual's back. A little difference can make an exercise harmful. One symptom of shortened muscles is a shortened walking gait, she said.

As for tennis, many people would be better off as spectators. One must develop strength and flexibility of feet before plunging into such an active sport, "which could prove crippling." Walking and some foot exercises that can be done even while sitting should help, she points out.

The 26 bones of a foot are held together mainly by ligaments, and there isn't much you can do to strengthen them. But curling your toes, not just the end joints, will aid in strengthening the whole foot, she says, and the feet should be developed before you try to develop body fitness.

If you press down on the bottom of your shoe with your toes, your arch will rise and that in itself is a strengthening exercise, she explained. Wear proper shoes with a small heel, a supportive arch and a loose toe area.

To flex your leg properly at the ankle joints, extend it and raise your foot up toward your leg, then point your toes downward. Even with a shoe on, it is a beneficial exercise, she says. Do it "until your foot feels archy," and then about five times more, suggests Mrs. Robarge, who has developed a series of foot fitness exercises as a consultant on exercise and fitness to Scholl, makers of foot care products.

Strengthening the front part of your lower legs and stretching the back muscles will prevent aches and pains of legs that have been subject to great stress.

To increase the flexibility of the lower legs, calf muscles and knees, straighten your legs and try to bend down to touch your toes. Even if you do not make it all the way, it is a good exercise.

Some exercises cause enormous back strain. Particularly bad is one where you lie on your back and attempt to lift both legs at the same time.

"The lower back is not capable of maintaining straight alignment. If you feel your lower back rising from the floor when you do a movement, you do not want the position, whatever it is," warns Mrs. Robarge.

"Whenever you are lying with your abdominal region facing up, the lower back should stay on the floor. To make sure it does, raise your head and shoulders slightly off the floor."

Mrs. Robarge has been teaching physical education majors at the university for eight years. She also is a gold pro at a local course.

FITNESS EXPERT Maurita Robarge demonstrates kinetic exercise to strengthen feet and legs: Lie on floor, draw up knees and let legs drop slightly apart; then, pointing toes forcefully, extend one leg diagonally, to the side. Return and repeat with other leg. Changing and alternating position while keeping pressure on toes will strengthen foot, leg and abdominal muscles.

WEAK

DEAR WEAK: You obviously have a neurotic need to punish yourself. (You either enjoy pain in a perverse sort of way, or you think you deserve it.) The fact that you've written to me shows that you're tired of leading with your chin. Get into therapy and find out why you set yourself up repeatedly for that kind of punishment. And when you do, you'll know what kind of fool you were.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law keeps bringing her friends over for a guided tour of her son's new house. I wouldn't mind so much, but she never gives me any warning, and it's embarrassing when I haven't had time to tidy up the place.

And while I'm complaining about my mother-in-law, she always refers to our children as "my son's children." And she calls this house, "my son's house." Everything is her son's . . . as though he had no wife.

Even though I'm sure this won't make your column, it's such a relief to get it off my chest.

Thanks, Abby. I had to tell somebody. I'd never complain to my husband because he's a sweet guy who's had to put up with his mother a lot longer than I have.

OFF MY CHEST IN CHELSEA

DEAR OFF: You're wise to get it off your chest without putting it on your husband's shoulders. My mail tells me that few things irritate husbands more than a wife who complains about his mother.

DEAR ABBY: May I say a word for the medical secretaries who are ready to scream? Crowded waiting rooms are no fun for anybody, especially if you're sick and can't find a place to sit.

Waiting rooms are always crowded because people who have appointments insist on bringing their children for the "ride," or their friends, cousins—you name it—for "company."

Children get restless and cranky. They cry and run all over the office. Then when Mommy sees the doctor the kids are left unattended, and I have to watch them and pick up the mess when they leave. Sometimes Daddy or Grandma comes along to keep an eye on the children, but if they can watch them here, why not at home?

Please, Abby, remind people that there is just so much space in a doctor's (or dentist's) office, and if patients must have company, to limit it to just one person.

MEDICAL SECRETARY

DEAR SECRETARY: Consider it done.

Mail Order Food Business Dominated By The Exotic

ROCKPORT, Mass. (UPI) — It's a crazy world when a hard-to-find food such as wild boar sells for less than domestic ham.

A whole, young, fresh-frozen, cleaned and dressed boar is only $2.25 per pound for a 120- to 200-pound animal from a company in Carmel, Calif., or $2.75 per pound for 80-120 pound boars. The same company sells picnic (shoulder) hams and regular ham for $3.00 and $3.50 per pound, respectively.

In general, the mail order food business is dominated by such exotica, the kind of foods, utensils and appliances seldom found in mundane retail stores and supermarkets.

Food and related items account for a growing percentage of the $6 billion a year mail order business. That figure represents sales in 1975, the most recent year for which figures are available, nearly triple the total sales of 1958 and almost double those of 1967.

Census figures show more than 6,000 mail order companies operating in the United States. More than 1,000 of them have catalogs. Hundreds more advertise in magazines and newspapers, and on television and radio.

Jose Wilson and Arthur Leaman found this out while researching "The Complete Food Catalogue" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston $10.95 hardcover, $6.95 paper).

"We wrote to hundreds of places and people listed in cookbooks," Ms. Wilson said in an interview at her summer home here.

"Few replied, and many who did said they didn't handle mail orders."

Undaunted, the authors asked friends and relations, collected catalogs and pored over regional magazines, particularly New England publications. They figured small mail order houses might advertise in small magazines where they would not in larger ones with higher rates.

The authors found it occasionally is cheaper to shop by mail than to buy the same products from specialty shops in your own community, especially if you include gas burned in driving from store to store.

Among the mail order merchants they contacted was a farmer in Dalzell, N.C., who raises and sells a species of quail Cleopatra supposedly served her suitors.

They found seedsmen offering such rarities as Alpine strawberries and edible chrysanthemums, Egyptian walking onions and elephant garlic that produces half-pound heads.

An Oakland, Calif., company house sells mushroom-growing kits, including one for the Chinese fungus called wood ears, another for oyster mushrooms and a third for Japanese enokitake.

A Wyoming, R.I., mail order company offers dried herbs with the unusual names of cinquefoil, elecampane, love-in-a-mist and snow-in-summer.

If you're Christmas shopping for the hunter who has everything, consider the sportsman's catalog company in Manchester, Vt., that offers an electric duck plucker with revolving rubber fingers for about $200 plus shipping. The dealer says it handles sizes from quail to goose and can pluck 53 ducks an hour.

The authors also located a company in Darjeeling, India, that sells four and a half pounds of that region's famous tea for only $3.85. The catch: postage is 150 per cent of the purchase price.

By contrast, the Santa Rosa, Calif., Chamber of Commerce gives away annual maps of the Sonoma County Farm trails, a thoughtful gift for anyone planning a motor trip to northern California. The maps list and locate 168 farms, ranches, wineries, restaurants and shops, with details of their merchandise and hours they are open to the public.

In addition to sources for products, the authors have included a few recipes and many useful tips for food preparation.

Fine Arts Ball Invitations Mailed

Invitations to the sixth annual Fine Arts Ball were mailed Monday. The first 300 responses to the ball will be assured a reservation, according to Mrs. Lewis W. Evans, chairman of invitations.

The ball is scheduled for Friday night, Oct. 20, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. A pre-ball added attraction will take place the night before.

On Thursday, Oct. 20 at 8 p.m., 10 couples will host an art auction wine and cheese party at the Greenville Art Center. "Every guest and contributor of the ball will be invited," according to Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr., overall chairman of the ball.

"At the ball, several pieces of art will still be given away, as has been done in previous years, but all the auctions will take place the night before," she said.

Mrs. Corbitt praised the artists all over the state who have been generous with their gifts, which will benefit the Greenville Art Center.

Some of the out-of-town donors, listed with their works, will include: Bob Timberlake of Lexington, a framed print; Heath King of Winston-Salem, a terra cotta sculpture; Philip Moose of Blowing Rock, a watercolor; Glen Eure of Manteo, a pen and ink sketch; Mrs. A. B. Snow of Mount Airy, a watercolor; Ed Voorhees of Morehead City, a sea scape; and Betsy Fuller of Hob Sound, Fla., two pieces of jewelry.

"There also is a tremendous amount of enthusiasm among the Greenville area artists," said Mrs. Corbitt. "They have been cooperative in giving of their works, which will be announced at a later date."

If any member of the East Carolina Art Society has inadvertently failed to receive an invitation and would like to attend, they should contact Mrs. Evans, 756-0488, or Mrs. Corbitt, 752-5169. Those desiring to attend the ball should respond as soon as possible to Mrs. Max R. Joyner, response chairman, 1724 Circle Dr., Greenville.

Serving on the invitations committee in addition to Mrs. Evans are Mrs. Benjamin Adams, Mrs. John P. Da Vanzo and Mrs. Rodney H. Roberson.

Pear Cake Has Streusel Topping

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I've noticed that a great many of the cut-and-serve cakes are baked as eight- or nine-inch squares. I'd like a new recipe for a cake baked in a 13 by 9 by 2 inch pan so I can cut it into 12 portions. Can you oblige? — CLUB HOSTESS.

DEAR CLUB HOSTESS: Although you wrote me some time ago, I thought of your letter this week when we tried a new recipe for a cut-in-the-pan cake of the size you specify. Fresh Bartlett pears, cored and chopped, are used in a delicate batter. You don't have to take time to peel the fruit. Moreover, the cake has a streusel topping so it is self-frosted. It's definitely a cake to serve warm from the oven or at room temperature shortly after cooling. If there are any portions leftover, you can wrap them in foil, store in the refrigerator and heat before serving; after such storage, the fruit softens the batter and the dessert is more like a pudding than a cake. If you enjoy the delicate flavor of fresh Bartlett pears in pies, you'll also appreciate the flavor of the fair in this cake. — C. B.

FRESH PEAR CAKE

2 1/4 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 to 4 ripe but very firm, medium-size Bartlett pears
3/4 cup butter
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 large eggs
1 teaspoon instant coffee dissolved in 3/4 cup hot water and cooled
Streusel Topping, see below

On wax paper stir together the flour, baking soda and salt. Core pears but do not peel; chop fairly fine — there should be 3 cups.

In a medium mixing bowl cream the butter and sugar; beat in the eggs until blended. Stir in the flour mixture, in several additions, alternately with the coffee just until smooth; fold in the pears.

Turn into a buttered 13 by 9 by 2 inch baking pan; sprinkle batter with the Streusel Topping.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out free of batter — 45 to 50 minutes.

utes. Place on a wire rack to cool. When still slightly warm, cut into squares, and remove with a wide spatula; serve at once. If you like, pass whipped cream — no need to add sugar to it because the cake and its topping are quite sweet.

Makes 12 servings.

Streusel Topping: In a medium-size wide bowl stir together 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 3 tablespoons flour and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. With a pastry blender cut in 2 tablespoons butter until particles are fine; work in 1/2 cup finely chopped pecans or walnuts.

FULL-FLAVOR STEAK

2 to 3-pound boneless round or shoulder steak about 1 1/2 inches thick
1/4 cup salad oil
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

Place steak in a snug-fitting container and pour a mixture of the remaining ingredients over it; turn steak to coat all sides. Refrigerate, covered and turning once, for 24 hours. Remove steak from marinade. Grill over charcoal for 8 to 10 minutes on each side or until as done as desired. Slice diagonally, starting from narrow end. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BAKED RICE EGGS

Good way to use leftover cooked rice.
2 cups hot medium white sauce
2 cups cooked rice
3/4 cup chopped ripe olives
3/4 cup coarsely grated cheddar cheese
6 hard-cooked eggs, halved lengthwise

Into the white sauce stir the rice, olives and 1/2 cup of the cheese; pour half the mixture into a buttered 1 1/2-quart shallow casserole; cover with the eggs; add remaining rice mixture; sprinkle with the remaining cheese. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until thoroughly hot — 20 to 30 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In my fantasy, it's always the same.

I'm sitting on the beach . . . alone.

My long, tanned legs are stretched lazily in front of me. My hair is caught up in a chiffon scarf, topped by a large brimmed hat that accentuates my classic cheekbones.

Whispers of "Who is she?" sound like leaves rustling. My large, dark glasses reveal nothing. I wear a single piece of jewelry around my neck — a suggestive gold toothbrush.

A voice whispers, "Does anyone really know her?"

Another voice answers back, "Does anyone know the wind?"

I was drowsily engaged in my fantasy at the pool last week when a woman sat down and said, "You can sure tell a lot about people by what they read."

I returned my book to its plain brown wrapper.

"Books aren't the only thing that's revealing," she said. "I can tell you things about yourself that possibly you never knew. Take your voice . . . you speak softly. You know what that means? It means you're insecure. You're trying to hide something or you're afraid of something you don't want to hear. Why are you doing that?"

"Doing what?" I asked.

"Making a square knot with your feet. That tells me something else," she observed. "It tells me you're a perfectionist in an imperfect world. You're concerned with image and are anxious to please. A bit prudish even. And your bathing suit reveals a lot. For example, if you were wearing a string bikini, I'd know you were a girl who knows what she wants and how to get it. A one-piece suit tells me you're no nonsense and strong, and a cut-out divulges you're aware of the impression you make on others."

"And what does my suit tell you?" I asked.

"I'm not sure. I've never interpreted one with sleeves and white collar before. The color yellow, though, means you're a pseudo-intellectual who would like to be successful, but you never do anything, you just talk about it."

As I got up to get away she yelled, "I can also tell you've been here 4 1/2 hours by the depth of the ridges on your legs!" She smiled and waved goodbye.

What a shame she didn't read lips!

Flexibility In Nursing Study

Pitt Technical Institute is helping provide trained nurses that Eastern North Carolina needs so badly.

And also through its Career Option Nursing Program it is giving students wide flexibility in choosing the paths of study best for them.

Ms. Judith Kuykendall, director, explained in a recent interview that the program is a new concept.

Students can choose to study for licensed practical nursing or registered nurse designation.

What makes the program different is that the student can take the one-year program to become an LPN. Upon completion of this the student has the option of continuing a second year of study — immediately or later — to obtain the A.A.S. degree and qualify for the Registered Nurse Exams.

This program gives wide flexibility to students who have limited funds and time, and it means that a student enrolled in a two-year program who might have to drop out after one year won't lose the value of that training. Finally it means that state money invested in that one year of training won't be lost since the student can still perform LPN duties.

We need all the flexibility we can get in today's educational programs. Pitt Tech nursing seems to have designed maximum flexibility in its program.

Balanced Budget Is Far Out Of Sight

Congress has approved a huge $458.3 billion budget with a $61.3 billion deficit.

Even that deficit figure might not be realistic. There is no provision for new Social Security taxes and the president could recommend an early tax cut to spur the economy.

The balanced budget is still out of sight and as long as the federal government runs deficits like this one we can expect to continue double digit inflation figures.

THIS AFTERNOON

Studying Future Policies

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The corridors are mostly quiet at the State Legislative Building, and the meeting rooms for the most part are dark and locked.

But policy is still being shaped for future happenings even though the General Assembly is not in session, and will not return for formal proceedings until next spring.

From time to time, small knots of people gather in legislative offices; research staff goes about daily duties of gathering data and mulling reports of activities in other states.

And slowly, some of the meeting rooms are beginning to come back to life after the summer doldrums. Especially on important football weekends in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area (study commission participants get travel and living expenses during meetings, so a session held on Friday in Raleigh puts a body in good shape for a Saturday outing at the stadium) lawmakers find themselves back at the planning boards.

Slow Start

The study process is getting off to a slower start than usual this year. Leadership of the General Assembly puts a lot of time and thought to the chairmen who will guide and the legislators who will participate in the study and recommendations to future sessions of the General Assembly.

Membership and leadership on the committees will to a considerable degree determine the content of the ultimate report, the reception it gets from legislators, and the disposition of it. Those produced by veteran, experienced people with clout to push the recommendations will naturally get more favorable treatment. Those forthcoming from study groups lacking powerful leadership will likely get less attention and less favorable treatment. And as usual, a few of the studies are in reality only ego-smoothers for some legislators who have pushed a special cause without success.

Slowness in getting started this late summer is due to some degree to the thought which House Speaker Carl Stewart and Lt. Gov. James C. Green (and on some groups, Gov. James B. Hunt has appointees, too) must give to their appointments in relation to political realities, and their hopes for the ultimate shape of the recommendations, and disposition of those proposals by the 1978 or 1979 General Assembly.

That delay has been further aggravated by Stewart's absence from the country; first on a study trip to Japan with State School Supt. A. Craig Phillips, then on vacation to Israel with State Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, and Martin Donsky, reporter for the Raleigh News and Observer. The lieutenant governor, meanwhile, was tied up first on the tobacco circuit where his business (and hobby) reside; then hospitalized with a back ailment resulting from his showing an employee how to move a heavy piece of timber.

Meanwhile, those privy to the legislative system are keeping a close watch on the budding study commission activity which in coming weeks will get underway in earnest.

The reports will be instrumental in shaping future decisions of the General Assembly, and future state policy. And it is well known that in some cases the study groups will carefully structure the gathering of data, recruitment of expert testimony, and production of final reports to support a particular position and influence the future decision-making process.

State agencies and organized groups across the state with full-time representatives in Raleigh will be able to keep in close touch with the proceedings; many have representation on the committees.

The average citizen, on the other hand, doesn't have the resources to keep up with what is happening, nor to have some part in the developing policy shaping and strategy for success.

To the veteran observer of state government and politics, however, the coming months are the most critical since important decisions will be made with little public involvement or concern.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Likely Lance Replacement

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The possibility that Alice Rivlin may be Bert Lance's replacement as budget director is one clue that his departure from the Washington scene, now fervently desired even by his old friends, will by no means end President Carter's deepening troubles.

Economist Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, is being pushed for the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) by Congressmen and labor leaders convinced that only dramatically increased federal spending can save the faltering economy. The end of Lance, they feel, is a golden opportunity for somebody — Mrs. Rivlin, say — less committed to a balanced budget. Lance has vigorously championed the business community's view that opening the federal spending taps invites disaster.

Not only will the coming economic-political crisis be more difficult for the President to handle without Lance, but he may have to do it in a political atmosphere polluted with suspicion and accusations. The President's mishandling of the Lance affair has whetted post-Watergate blood lust with talk of other coverups and claims that the Carter presidency is permanently tainted.

Lance feels the certainty of his departure may be a shade premature at this writing. "You won't believe this," he told a colleague early this week, "but I'm going to win this fight." However, nobody at the White House believes that, and one insider personally close to Lance puts it this way: "The President will fire him if he doesn't quit."

Assuming Lance is a goner, Mr. Carter must immediately face economic problems of a kind uncongenial to Presidents.

A mythology has originated among the administration's middle-level officials and spread into the press; the reason for the soggy, sluggish economy is Lance's successful opposition to an individual tax rebate and heavy federal spending.

With Lance partially immobilized the last six weeks, the spenders have attacked. The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is pushing a new budget whose excess over Lance's ceiling, in the words of one OMB official, is "one of the biggest people here have ever seen."

This may merely reflect the strong-willed Patricia Roberts Harris, Secretary of HUD, but the implications are wider. With Lance no longer the watchdog, HUD is coming up with spending figures that — if duplicated throughout the government — would transform Carter economic policy. Other departments will be watching closely.

Obviously, the ultimate success of Mrs. Harris and her colleagues will be significantly influenced if not determined by who succeeds Lance. Mrs. Rivlin is the choice of both the bureaucracy and Capitol Hill and has substantial support in the Treasury. White House aides report that Robert Strauss, the President's trade negotiator, strongly opposes that selection. But the political push will be toward a more permissive voice at OMB, whether Mrs. Rivlin or not.

Indeed, that push is so strong that key Democratic operatives are certain that an un-Lance administration will forsake a balanced budget and go on a spending binge before the 1978 election. But how to camouflage such a program to make it faintly palatable to the business community?

Some staffers at the White House and Treasury think a moderate "income policy" — wage and price guideposts — may be the answer. But here the camouflage may be worse than what it hides.

Strength For Today

THE CHURCH AND WAR

What should be the church's attitude toward war?

At first sight the answer seems obvious. The church should oppose war with all the energy and force at its command. True enough, but suppose a nation is attacked and invaded by an enemy. Should the church in the invaded nation now oppose war?

The scriptures give us two somewhat contradictory examples of the duty of a Christian confronted with this kind of crisis. On one hand is the calm resignation of the Beautitudes; on the other is the picture of the militant Christ whipping the money-changers from the temple. Turning the other creek contrasts markedly with the Christ who declared, "I came not to bring peace but a sword."

If war comes to us in spite of our efforts to avoid it, should we forego all opposition to the enemy in order to gain spiritual advantage for ourselves, or should we oppose the enemy to prevent him from harming others? This is a hard question which requires much soul-searching.

SOMETHING ELSE YOU'RE PAYING FOR!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Greater Scandal Looms

The Bert Lance affair, which otherwise amounts to unmitigated disaster for Mr. Carter, ironically has reproduced one beneficial consequence for the White House: In the billowing clouds of smoke arising from the shot-down budget director, the President's cargo preference bill has been wholly obscured. And cargo preference is by far the greater scandal.

Within the next few weeks, while the attention of public and press remains diverted, Mr. Carter's lieutenants will try to push their cargo bill through both houses. On the record of 1974, when Congress approved a worse bill only to have it vetoed by Gerald Ford, the Carter people should have little difficulty. The glum prospect is for a massive ripoff coupled with a blatant payoff.

The whole business smells to high heaven, and it tells us — one more time — something about the slippery smile of Jimmy Carter, and something about the double standards of the Washington press corps.

The cargo preference bill endorsed by Mr. Carter would guarantee that five years hence, at least 9.5 percent of all oil imports would be carried in American tankers. The figure is now about 3.5 percent, but this is not guaranteed. The maritime unions and the maritime industry are hungry for cargo preference. While they dream of a 30 percent minimum (the aborted 1974 bill contained this provision), their overriding goal is to see the concept of cargo preference written into law. Once that is achieved, a 9.5 minimum can be pushed up year by year.

On September 8, the White House published a defensive memorandum, intended to persuade editors of Mr. Carter's rectitude and wisdom. The memorandum, couched in question-and-answer form, poses a question: "What did candidate Carter promise the maritime interests?" The official answer is that, "He made no commitment to support cargo preference."

But it is like so many similar things in the Carter record. The maritime interests did not understand it that way. Mr. Carter's own people did not understand it that way. Robert S. Strauss, for one example, wrote the President on June 24 that "The unions certainly feel that the administration is committed to a cargo

Concern For Their Own Jobs

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Some corporation executives and bankers forgot the main issues as they watched Bert Lance duel for his honor and his job. They were worried about their own.

The same issues involved in the Lance Affair, particularly bank overdrafts and the blurred distinction between personal and corporate business, are erupting in heated business debates too.

Shareholder suits and angry annual meetings emphasize the concern over what some critics have termed the management ripoff, the conferring upon itself by management of numerous perquisites.

Not only have public attitudes changed in regard to management, but so have the rules and regulations. The Internal Revenue Service and the Securities and Exchange Commission actively seek to dispell any notion that what's good for management is necessarily good for business.

It might have worked that way for the likes of the Morgans, Hills, Harrimans, Rockefellers and Goulds, but times have changed, and many a corporate executive keeps a wary eye on "troublesome" shareholders.

It is true, as Bert Lance indicated, that overdrafts were and perhaps still are thought to be a legitimate way of doing business in small communities, where the banker occupies a patriarchal role.

His arbitrariness, it has been said, is for the good of the community. Who knows best who should get money, and on what terms? The banker, of course, or so the argument goes, is humane. He is wise. Responsible.

He also can be discriminatory. The "responsible" people in town who are thought worthy of the bank's money might also be a clique. Black farmers who tried to get crop loans after they registered to vote in the early 1960s can tell you about that.

Overdrafts to bank officers are hardly as innocent, not nearly so benign a practice, as Lance indicated. People do get hurt. In fact, unofficial overdrafts to officers are known to be a common denominator in bank failures.

It is for this reason that bankers throughout the country are disturbed by what they feel is the mistaken notion on the part of many people that overdrafts are everyday practice. Such notions, they know, soon lead to investigations.

But unofficial overdrafts — there are official overdrafts also, in which a line of credit is established for a customer, presumably after an inquiry into his credit-worthiness — apply only to banks. Even larger among the considerations that are focused by this inquiry is the personal use of shareholders' property.

Our conception of the corporation has changed in the past century, and much regulation has been aimed at reminding everyone concerned that the shareholders own the company and that management is an employee. Still, many people view corporations as private, a semantical problem that develops too easily when one wishes to distinguish between government and nongovernment enterprise. The truth is, the words public and private are still interchanged.

The large corporation which sells shares to the public is publicly owned in that it might have hundreds of thousands of owners. But it is private as distinguished from government-owned.

Pitzer Usually Wins

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Art Pitzer puts on what most folks would probably concede is the greatest show in the state, but sometimes even he gets upstaged.

Pitzer is manager of the North Carolina State Fair, and he is still smarting just a little bit over what happened last year after he and his staff and hundreds of competitors worked for months to stage their nine-day extravaganza.

"There were three college football games in the area," he recalled. "And then President Ford came to town."

But that wasn't the worst of it. It rained.

"The year before last we had 615,000 people come to the fair," Pitzer said. "Last year the attendance was 485,000. This year we're hoping to get back up over the 600,000 mark. The one thing that makes or breaks a fair is the weather."

So Art Pitzer prays for sunshine between Oct. 14 and Oct. 22, the traditional nine days of the state fair since 1853. But that's not all he's doing.

"Right now we're cleaning up after the horse show over the weekend," he said. "We're setting up the exhibit hall. Most of the fixtures — the shelves, racks and some refurbishing — are finished in the education building."

"We've made some additions to the Heritage Circle," Pitzer said. "Last year we built an old school house. This year we're adding an 1815 log cabin with an area where we'll be making molasses and also a corn crib."

In addition to the Heritage Circle items, there will be two special exhibits, Pitzer said. "First, we'll have the Leaves

Construction was started on the new fair grounds located on the Falkland Highway, a little over a mile from Five Points.

Everything was expected to be ready for the fair to be held on October 18-23.

The new fair grounds had the advantage of providing the space required for exhibits and shows, along with ample room for parking cars.

Two men believed to be navy fliers, were killed when their big amphibian plane crashed into thick woods on a Long Island, N. Y., north shore estate.

A log book found in the wreckage indicted they had left Norfolk, Va. at 7:15 a. m. and had then flown over Lakehurst, N. J. and were on their way to Hartford, Conn. and Boston, Mass. after stopping at Floyd Bennett field in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Besides, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal is adamantly opposed to guideposts.

A more realistic camouflage would be retaining Dr. Arthur Burns for another two years after his term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board expires next January. There was no chance whatever of Burns's reappointment until the Lance affair; now, the White House is at least considering keeping Burns on as a reassurance to business that will be all the more necessary if the spenders take over here.

To Bert Lance and business-oriented economists, the worst of all possible worlds beckons: heavy spending that will not cure unemployment while a compensatory tight money policy at the Fed conducted by Burns drives up interest rates and depresses the bond market. Blumenthal and Strauss, rivals who have been at odds with each other, are the only administration officials who might avert this course.

Fiddling over the Panama Canal while the economy threatens to burn, Jimmy Carter has shied away from the difficult questions of money. But what has been unpleasant up to now may

Workshops Held By State LWV Friday

The League of Women Voters of North Carolina held workshops on energy, education, finance, and membership at a statewide meeting in Raleigh Friday.

Attending from the Greenville-Pitt County LWV were Ann Frost, Ann Attmore, Edith Webber and Elaine Warshawer.

Addressing the group at lunch was Dr. Sarah Morrow, N. C. State Secretary of Human Resources. She reviewed Pres. Carter's welfare reform proposals and urged League members to familiarize themselves with its contents.

An all-day forum on "Implications of Nuclear Energy Development in North Carolina" was held Saturday. The keynote address was given by Dr. Earl McCormack, chairman of the Davidson College Philosophy Department, who summarized the risks of nuclear power, discussed alternatives, and called for an analysis of nuclear power based on humanistic Edith Webber of the Greenville-Pitt County League served on a panel of humanists discussing "The Moral Implications of Energy Policy Decisions." She is a member of the faculty of the East Carolina University Department of English and is Environmental Quality Chairperson of the local League.

Will Watch China Debris

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials are expecting an air mass contaminated with high altitude radioactive debris from a Chinese nuclear test blast to reach the United States on Wednesday.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is watching weather conditions closely to determine the possible impact of the Chinese atomic explosion last Saturday.

An EPA spokesman said Tuesday that the first air mass containing radioactive debris will likely pass over the state of Washington early Wednesday.

"Initial indications are that the mass will then move down the West Coast," the spokesman said, adding that it is possible the contaminated air eventually could turn eastward.

Officials said they cannot predict the levels of radiation that might occur in the United States because of the Chinese blast.

Similar Chinese explosions last year spread low levels of radiation throughout the United States, and significant traces turned up in milk in Pennsylvania. However, the radioactivity never reached levels considered hazardous to humans, federal authorities said.

preference policy."

Stuart Eizenstat, the President's chief adviser on domestic policy, was still more explicit. In a memorandum describing cargo preference as "a flawed policy," Eizenstat warned his boss that rejection of cargo preference would be seen "as a broken promise."

One is reminded of Mr. Carter's apparent promise to Texas petroleum interests that he favored deregulation of natural gas. The promise, it turned out, had a catch in it.

In any event, the maritime interests plainly thought Mr. Carter had given them a commitment. In June of 1976, when Mr. Carter had the Democratic nomination wrapped up, the unions raised $175,000 for the Carter campaign. By the normal standards applied to political life in Washington, the pending cargo bill—endorsed by the President—would be given the label it deserves: payoff.

Jules Witcover and Jack Germond in the Washington Star, and Albert R. Karr in the Wall Street Journal, have covered the story. Elsewhere it has received remarkably little notice. This was not the case five years ago, when the media leaped upon Richard Nixon for the great milk scandal of that spring.

There are certain parallels. Mr. Nixon had made a commitment—or at least the dairymen thought he had—to higher price supports. The proposition had many friends on Capitol Hill, where the milk producers, like the maritime unions, had made large campaign contributions across the board. Mr. Nixon's top advisers, like Mr. Carter's this time, were against his decision. But the milk producers had contributed to the Nixon campaign, and Mr. Nixon acted anyhow. The press erupted with torrents of moral indignation. In the fallout, Treasury Secretary Connally was badly burned.

Nothing of the sort seemed in prospect now. This cargo preference bill will cost the consumers hundreds of millions of dollars. It may create some jobs, but at fantastic cost per job. The measure will violate treaties with 30 nations. It will invite protectionist retaliation. It will add nothing to the nation's security.

Offer Correspondence Courses Cross-Listing

CHAPEL HILL — Four University of North Carolina (UNC) institutions have initiated an educational service for students enrolling in correspondence courses.

UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State University, UNC-Greensboro, and East Carolina University have joined in a new system of cross-listing courses.

According to Norman Loewenthal, assistant director of extension for independent study, courses originally designed for one campus could be taken for credit from two or more of the other institutions.

The participating schools select the material for a chosen course and the student selects from which institution he would like to receive credit. His final grade is filed at the school that he has chosen.

Cross-listing became a possibility with the establishment two years ago of an independent study consortium among UNC institutions. Administrative responsibility for the program is in UNC-Chapel Hill, which publishes a catalog listing all independent study courses offered by consortium members.

The first application of the cross-listing occurred in June, when a single set of English course materials was approved for use at UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State University. In September, approval was given for the cross-listing of an introductory course in American Government, designated Political Science 41 at UNC-Chapel Hill and Political Science 201 at N.C. State University.

The cross-listing of other independent study courses is under discussion, Loewenthal said.

The fair operation, Pitzer noted, is self-supporting from admissions and concessions, although the General Assembly occasionally appropriates money for a new building. It costs $2 to get onto the fairgrounds, or $1.50 for an advance ticket. The gate price includes all arena shows.

Pitzer said that the cost of producing the fair eats up the bulk of his million-dollar-plus budget and leaves little for expansion of the fair's facilities.

If he had the money, the manager said, there are four buildings he would like to see on the fairgrounds:

—An arts and crafts building for the fine arts and a small theater that could be used year-round.

—A building to house exhibits of special interest mainly to women, possibly equipped with a large kitchen.

—A youth building for Future Farmers of America activities, talent shows and other events for young people.

—An agriculture building. "If we could manage to get just one of those each year for the next four years, that would be great," Pitzer said.

NCSL Meeting

The North Carolina Student Legislature (NCSL) will start the year by meeting at East Carolina University on Sept. 25.

The NCSL has a membership including most colleges and universities in the state. The organization's main purpose is to discuss current political issues in the hope of making North Carolina a better place to live.

The State legislature has enacted 40 percent of the NCSL legislation through the years.

The Interim Council will be at the East Carolina Mendenhall Student Center, room 244, beginning at 9 a.m.

Govm't To Change The Way It Calculates Auto Gas Mileage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is planning to change the way it calculates the figures that tell buyers how much gasoline mileage to expect from their new cars because owners don't necessarily get the same results.

Douglas Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, which furnishes annual auto mileage projections, acknowledged Monday that methods for calculating the figures have left some new car buyers angry and disgruntled.

The EPA's new ratings showed that the diesel-powered Volkswagen Rabbit gets the best mileage of 1978 model cars being offered for sale in the United States. The Rabbit posted 40 miles per gallon in city driving and 53 mpg in highway driving for a combined mileage of 45 mpg. Two Chrysler Corp. cars — the Plymouth Fury and the Dodge Monaco — were at the bottom of the fuel-efficiency list.

Some motorists are discovering their fuel gauge hits the empty mark faster than the government says it should, Costle said.

The problem is with the methods used by the EPA in forecasting new car fuel efficiency, he said.

The mileage report, assessing the fuel efficiency of foreign imports as well as U.S.-manufactured cars, is based on tests conducted under laboratory-controlled conditions by professional drivers. The results are broken down into three categories: city driving, highway driving and a combined figure.

The combined figure does not represent an overall average of highway and city driving, however. The government gives more weight to the city driving figure. The combined figure represents a weighted average of 55 per cent city driving and 45 per cent highway driving to simulate average driving habits.

Costle said discrepancies often occur between government mileage forecasts and motorists' actual mileage because present methods of calculating the figures fail to take into account certain variables.

Although nearly 50 per cent of all motorists receive mileage as good or better than the agency's test, "there are a large number who do not get the advertised mileage," he said.

Costle said government figures may sometimes be misleading and overly optimistic because of "wide differences in driving habits and maintenance practices and the varying road, traffic and weather conditions which drivers experience."

Costle said the EPA will adjust 1979 figures downward with the possible goal of taking off a certain percentage to account for these variables.

But he defended the usefulness of the EPA lists, saying they were a good measure of the relative performance of the tested cars.

Although the Rabbit won the fuel economy ratings race, the EPA's new figures did not include the Honda Civic CVCC, which was ranked No. 1 last year. Honda was omitted because its 1978 model has not yet been certified by the EPA.

The autos were evaluated in five size classifications. Diesel-powered cars ranked first in three of the classifications, indicating the gasoline engine may be losing ground as the automakers battle to boost auto mileage and conserve fuel.

Devote Lives To Child Prodigy

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Sung Chu Song and his wife probably knew it wouldn't be easy when they decided nine years ago in Korea to center their lives around the special needs of their 3-year-old daughter.

It hasn't been easy. Song had to give up a prosperous used-car business and his wife had to leave a lovely home and servants. He is a truck mechanic now in a strange country. Mrs. Song hardly speaks English.

But apparently it has been worth it. Chung-A Song, now 12 years old, has fulfilled her early promise as a piano player of rare genius, and that was what her parents decided would be worth any sacrifice. The best tutors, they believed, were in this country.

"I don't say it's sacrifice or devotion," Song insists. "It's worth it. I would give up all for it. It doesn't necessarily make me proud. I love music. You can't put a price tag on beauty."

Chung-A has made some sacrifices of her own. In all other respects a normal, healthy sixth grader, she spends five hours each day practicing. Except on weekends, when she practices for nine hours.

"I like the dresses and taking bows," she says. "But I like practicing only a little bit."

The rewards and recognition are already starting to roll in. Chung-A makes her debut at New York's Carnegie Hall next spring. The prestigious Juilliard School of Music in New York would like to enroll her. In February she is also to audition for Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music.

She knows scores of works by every major composer.

"She could play for days without stopping," says Harriet Line Thompson, Charlotte Symphony concert pianist and Chung-A's teacher. "She's memorized 115 works. Chung-A has prodigious musical talent."

Although both the Songs work, the move and new circumstances have left them with money problems, particularly with a trip to New York looming in the spring and a possible full-scale move there with two other children if Chung-A enrolls at the Juilliard.

But Song says none of that matters.

"Whatever Chung-A says she needs musically," he says, "I will provide for her by the next morning. Anything."

Going To Jail For Roles In 1970 'Demonstration'

By ANN BLACKMAN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the turn of the decade, during an age of student protest, three young men participated in an anti-Vietnam war demonstration in a small college town near Washington.

This week, uprooted from otherwise typical middle class lives, they went to jail for their part in that protest of seven years ago.

Jay G. Rainey, 31, is married, the father of two children and was head of employee relations with a Virginia manufacturing firm. James G. McClung, 36, was a public information specialist at the Library of Congress in Washington. Stephen B. Rochelle, 29, of suburban Fairfax, works with computers at a Maryland engineering firm.

Last week they were ordered by Rockingham County (Va.) Circuit Court Judge Joshua Robinson to report to the county's jail on Monday to begin serving six month jail terms.

Suitcases in hand, neatly dressed, they did so.

Robinson said in court that the usual reasons for sending people to jail — punishment, retribution or rehabilitation — did not apply in this case, according to county prosecutor David Walsh.

But Robinson was quoted as saying he would not overturn a jury's decision, even one made seven years ago, and that he had to uphold the integrity of the judicial process.

Rainey found it "a hell of a reason to send three people to jail who've built up their lives in the past seven years."

In 1970, Rainey, Rochelle and McClung participated in a sit-in with about 40 students at what was then called Madison College in Harrisonburg, Va., about 100 miles from Washington. Rainey and Rochelle were students. McClung was an assistant English professor.

According to news reports and interviews, the group was protesting the Vietnam war, violations of student rights and refusal by the school, now called James Madison University, to renew contracts of some professors, including McClung.

College officials called in police to dislodge the demonstrators and many were convicted of trespassing and fined $100 each.

But Rainey, Rochelle, McClung and four others argued that their constitutional right to free speech had been violated. They asked for a trial in circuit court, without a jury, according to their lawyer, John C. Lowe. Their request for trial without a jury was denied. The jury that heard the case imposed six-month jail terms and $500 fines on Rochelle and Rainey, Lowe said. McClung got a nine-month sentence and a $1,000 fine. The four others were fined $500 each.

Rochelle, Rainey and McClung appealed. A federal district court decided their right to free speech had been violated. But the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned that decision, saying First Amendment rights of students on campus are not as broad as those of a citizen in public places, Lowe said.

McClung, asked if he would do it all again, said: "I think not. My principles have not changed. I still believe in the constitutional right of people who want to protest. But I would certainly not (do it again) knowing that the law's punishment was anything like what was meted out."

Suspect Favoritism For Ingram Friend

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A friend of state Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram apparently got special treatment when he applied for an insurance agent's license in 1975.

Howard Bloom, a contributor to Ingram's last election campaign and a frequent of Democratic party functions, got approval for his application without completing the necessary forms.

J. Wayne Evans, acting deputy commissioner for licensing agents, told the News and Observer of Raleigh he had approved one incomplete form for Bloom and a clerk had approved another.

Evans denied, however, that he had orders from superiors to expedite Bloom's application, although he was unable to explain why he did so.

Bloom, an insurance agent and restaurant owner from Roanoke Rapids, was not available for comment. Ingram could not be reached either.

The form Bloom was not made to complete includes questions about prior license revocations, previous experience in insurance and criminal record.

Insurance Department records show Bloom submitted a nearly blank application form to take a required test for his agent's license on Oct. 4, 1975.

Evans said prospective agents must fill out the form before taking the test. But the record shows Bloom actually took the test Oct. 3. Evans said the date on the application date was changed for some reason to Oct. 4.

Evans acknowledged he had approved the incomplete application but could not remember why he did so.

The News and Observer reported Sunday that five insurance companies had complained that Bloom had offered to use his influence with Ingram for a fee to help the companies get licensed in North Carolina.

The companies said they refused the alleged offer. Bloom denied he had made any such offer.

Requests OK'd

City Manager Jim Caldwell announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Caldwell said that the request by E. B. Aycock Junior High School for permission to sell magazine subscriptions here from Sept. 22 to Oct. 8 was authorized, as was a request by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity to sell tickets door-to-door and to local merchants from Sept. 19 to Oct. 5 to raise funds for the East Carolina University stadium drive.

Appreciation Day Noted

Mayor Percy Cox has proclaimed Thursday as "Law Enforcement Appreciation Day" in Greenville.

The observance was planned as part of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce program for 1977.

In issuing the proclamation, Cox urged "all citizens of Greenville to join together in carrying the message of respect for law to other citizens and by example, exercise responsible citizenship."

The mayor pointed out that "crime and its effect upon the lives and property of our citizens continue undiminished, despite efforts by government, citizens' organizations and many individuals."

Cox observed, "There is still a reluctance on the part of many citizens to involve themselves in actions to insure themselves the protection, rights and well being of their fellow citizens."

Micky Herrin is serving as chairman of the Chamber's Law Enforcement Committee.

Public Sharply Divided On Lance Keeping Job

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — The American people, the jury that Bert Lance sought to judge his case, are sharply divided over whether Lance should keep his job as budget director in the Carter administration, an Associated Press public opinion poll shows.

The nationwide survey of 1,548 adults, taken Monday evening, also found President Carter's image had been dented by the Lance affair, particularly in regard to Carter's oft-repeated campaign pledge to enforce high moral standards in government.

The AP survey showed that nearly 38 per cent of those interviewed felt Lance should resign his position as director of the Office of Management and Budget, while about 35 per cent said he should stay. Nearly 27 per cent expressed no opinion, despite wide publicity about the case.

The AP survey followed Lance's vigorous self-defense during three days of nationally televised Senate committee hearings into his personal and business dealings.

The hearings before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee were intended to focus on allegations that Lance withheld personal financial information during his Senate confirmation hearings in January.

The impact of Lance's 20-plus hours of testimony last week before the Senate panel is difficult to measure, since the television audiences for the hearings were believed to be very small. National television ratings for last week are not yet available.

The survey provided some indication that Lance's television performance helped his standing with some Americans.

The telephone survey was conducted for The AP by Chilton Research Services of Radnor, Pa.

The 3 per cent difference between those favoring Lance's resignation and those opposing it is inconclusive because of the margin of possible statistical error.

Lance has repeatedly said that he would not resign and that he is innocent of any wrongdoing in his personal financial affairs.

Carter and Lance met privately Monday. White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said he had no information on what was discussed or who requested the session.

Powell said if Carter has made a decision on whether to keep Lance as budget director "I'm certainly not aware of it."

As for Carter's promise to enforce high moral conduct in government, about 26 per cent of those interviewed said that their confidence in Carter's keeping that promise had decreased, while 8 per cent said their confidence had increased. More than half — 53 per cent — said their opinion of Carter's performance in office had decreased because of the Lance controversy. Slightly more than 9 per cent said their opinion of

Carter also was reflected in an evaluation of his over-all job performance. About 22 per cent said their opinion of Carter's performance in office had decreased because of the Lance controversy. Slightly more than 9 per cent said their opinion of Carter's performance had risen with 59 per cent saying there had been no change.

Asked to rate Carter's overall performance, more than half of those interviewed gave Carter excellent or good marks. About 38 per cent gave him only a fair rating, with 9 per cent saying he has done a poor job.

This performance rating for Carter is somewhat lower than findings by other polls taken in early August, but factors such as differences in the wording of the questions could account for this.

The almost even split on the question of whether Lance should resign may indicate an improvement in Lance's position. A special Gallup Organization survey of 501 adults commissioned by Time Magazine found late last week during the hearings that 67 per cent of those questioned thought Lance should resign. Twenty-one per cent said he should not resign.

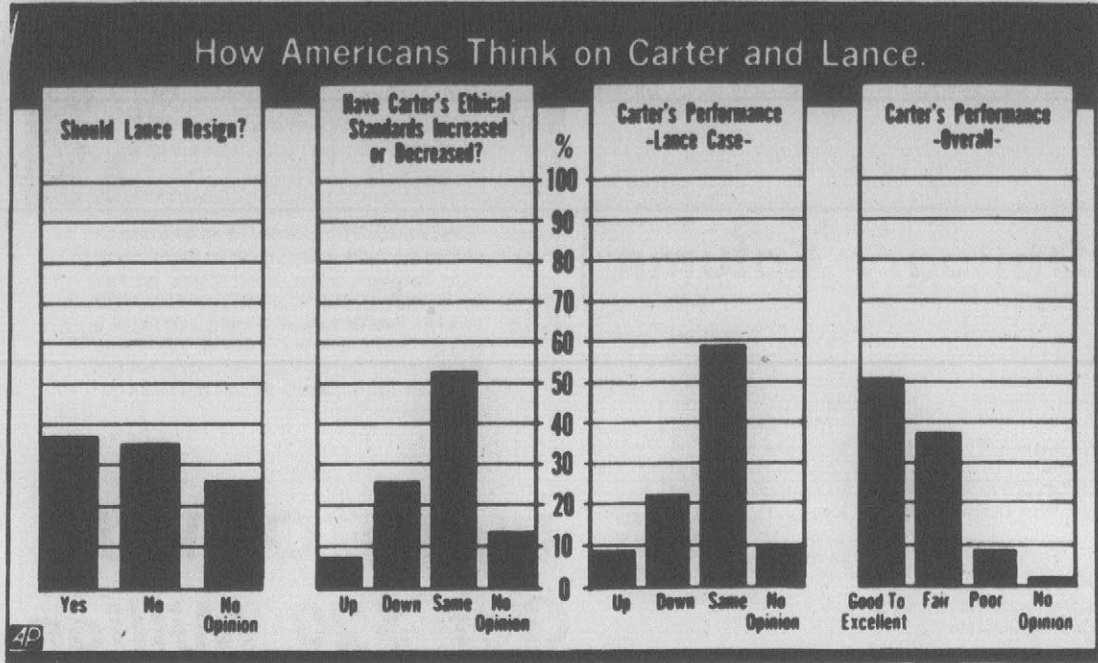

That poll and The AP survey cannot be directly compared with accuracy because of variations in the interviewing methods, sample selection and timing.

The AP poll figures represent the exact outcome of the interviews with the panel of adults across the continental United States. But conclusions about the opinions of all adult Americans, drawn from the poll results, could be affected by statistical variations.

With 1,548 persons in the sample, one can say with 95 per cent confidence that the error due solely to possible variations in the sample is about 2.5 per cent up or down for the major findings of the study.

As might be expected, both Lance and Carter drew their strongest support from their home region, the South, and from their own Democratic party.

OPINION POLL — This is the result of a nationwide survey taken Monday by the Associated Press. The survey asked if Bert Lance should keep his job as budget director in the Carter administration and whether or not the Lance affair had influenced those questioned in their evaluation of President Carter. (AP Laserphoto Chart)

Urges Funds 'Flexibility'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of southern and border states were told Monday that states should have more flexibility to use federal highway funds as they see fit.

Secretary Brock Adams said he would like to cut the red tape to allow the flexibility. He and federal highway administrator William Cox met with representatives from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

The group was in town for a day of meetings with administration officials.

Adams said he is working on reorganizing the Transportation Department and said a major goal is to lessen government regulation so that states can more easily get the funds they need for highway building and repair. That includes simplifying the paper work, he said.

The secretary said he will push to complete the 42,500-mile interstate highway system, including bringing existing roads up to interstate standards. About 4,000 miles remain to be built.

To meet highway funding needs, Adams said additional taxes, such as an increased federal gasoline tax, might be needed, "or we will have to spend the money we have with greater flexibility."

Carolina In Deep Freeze

Shivering residents of North Carolina huddled up against the coldest weather in 37 years yesterday as temperatures dropped below zero in the early morning and never got above 17° all day. The National Weather Service station at the airport reported -2° at 6 a.m. The lowest reported at Kerr Scott Dam was -8° at 4 a.m. While many points in the mountains unofficially reported temperatures as low as -16°.

Nowhere in the state, not even along the coast, did temperatures rise above freezing. As the chill deepened state wide, weather service spokesman offered no hope for relief in the near future, blaming the deep freeze on an arctic air mass moving slowly down from Canada.

Meanwhile counties across the state reported numerous school closings due to the cold weather, as pipes burst and school buses refused to start.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly again today, coming off Monday's 21-month low in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips was down 1.29 at 850.23 at 11:30 a.m.

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading picked up a bit from Monday's slow pace. First-hour volume on the Big Board came to 5.12 million shares.

Brokers said the market continued to suffer from investors' fears of an economic slowdown and rising interest rates.

Late last Friday the Federal Reserve Board reported that industrial production dropped 0.5 per cent in August, posting its first decline since January.

Analysts also noted that the market's drop Monday below its previous 1977 lows had brought in some additional selling by chart-watching investors.

Sony led the active list, up 1/4 at 8 1/2. A 107,000-share block traded at that price.

Curtis-Noll jumped 3 1/2 to 22 1/2 on word of Congoleum Corp.'s plans for a $25-a-share offer for the company's stock.

Jackie O. Will Get $20 Million

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Jacqueline Onassis has reached a $20 million settlement with her step-daughter, Christina Onassis, in return for relinquishing any further claim to her husband's estate, sources close to the Onassis family said today.

The settlement, about twice what Mrs. Onassis could have expected under terms of the late Aristotle Onassis's will, severs any connection she may have had with Onassis-owned enterprises and brings to an end her $250,000 a year allowance, the sources said.

Neither Mrs. Onassis, 47, nor her stepdaughter could be reached for comment.

The New York Times reported today that Christina agreed to the settlement because she was eager to cut all ties with her stepmother. She also was advised that Mrs. Onassis would not consider anything less than $20 million, the Times said in a story from Athens.

Sources told The Associated Press that Mrs. Onassis began seeking the settlement shortly after her husband's death in Paris at age 69 in March 1975, but Christina "simply ignored her."

"Christina relented (and agreed) to give Jackie the generous amount only if she would agree to sever all her ties with the Onassis estate," they added.

It remained unclear whether the $20 million figure was in addition to $8 million Mrs. Onassis reportedly received from Christina a year ago to relinquish her shares in the family-owned yacht, Christina, and Scorpions Island in the Ionian Sea, where Onassis is buried.

"Police said Fred Keen, 21, of Kenly, was held under $50,000 bond on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, and robbery.

Charged with conspiracy to commit robbery were Barbara Langworthy, 27, of Kenly, and Bobby Ballance, 42, of Lucama, police said.

The chief noted that the two men then left, only to return a short time later with about 20 others and charged through an open door at the fraternity house.

Another fight resulted during which Clason was struck in the head, Cannon said, adding that 20 stitches were required to close the wound.

Earl Smith, Three Gridders Are Named To ECU Hall Of Fame

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Three former East Carolina University athletes and one of the school's coaching greats will be inducted into the ECU Sports Hall of Fame during ceremonies at the Southern Illinois game on October 8 in Greenville.

John W. (Jack) Young Jr., who played on the first winning football team at East Carolina, and was also on the basketball team, will join Roger Thrift, who played in the years following World War II, and Kevin Moran, a lineman under Clarence Stasavich in going into the Hall of Fame.

With them will be Earl Smith, who was a three-sport athlete at East Carolina, then became a coach in football, basketball and baseball before retiring from the coaching ranks.

The four will join 15 others already inducted into the Hall of Fame during the first three years of its history.

Young, a native of Mountain Grove, Va., moved to western North Carolina at an early age, and was a football and basketball star in high school. After attending a prep school for one year, he dropped out of school to work, but continued his athletic career as a semi-pro player in basketball. He returned to college at Brevard in 1938, and played varsity basketball there, being named to the All-State junior college team.

He was also a tackle on the football team.

In 1940, he transferred to East Carolina as a non-scholarship student, playing tackle on the first EC football team to have a winning season. He also played on the only unbeaten and untied team in the school's history during the 1941 season. Both years, he also competed in basketball, when the Pirates fielded one of its strongest teams ever.

After service in the U.S. Navy, Young became Recreation Director in Ahoskie, and served as the high school's coach. He was named principal of Ahoskie High School in 1963, and since 1967, has served as president of Roanoke-Chowan Technical Institute.

Roger G. Thrift, a native of Carrboro, graduated from Chapel Hill High School and originally entered the University of North Carolina.

But he transferred from there to East Carolina, finishing his collegiate career at Greenville in 1949. During his years at East Carolina, he was a quarterback on the football team, setting a number of school records which stood for a number of years before falling.

Following his graduation, he began a distinguished high school coaching career which ended this past year. He coached in Murfreesboro, Williamston, Sanford, and served the last ten years at New Bern, where he is still athletic director. His 1957 team at Williamston won a state title, and two of his basketball teams have been the state consolation champs. He also spent four years as an assistant at Davidson College.

Moran, a native of Manchester, N. H., was an All-Southern Conference lineman for the Pirates under Clarence Stasavich. In 1967, he was awarded the Jacobs Blocking Trophy for the Southern Conference, and he is only one of two ECU winners of that award. He was also co-captain in 1967, his senior year.

After playing for several years with the Norfolk Neptunes, he joined the City of Norfolk, Va., as a probation officer. He is the chief of Juvenile and Adult Court Services for the city, and is currently on leave, working on his master's degree under a scholarship awarded by Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

Smith has been a figure connected with East Carolina sports for nearly 40 years.

He graduated from East Carolina in 1939, after a career which saw him letter in three sports, baseball, football and basketball. Following a professional career, he became a high school coach in LaGrange, Burlington, Gastonia and Littleton.

During World War II, he served in the U.S. Navy, and returned to East Carolina in 1945 as basketball and baseball coach.

He moved to Campbell in 1946, serving as coach of the football, basketball and baseball teams. Then, in 1953 he returned to East Carolina to become assistant coach in those three sports until 1958.

He became head basketball coach in 1959, and then switched to baseball in 1963.

Smith's teams won three Southern Conference championships and tied for another. On four occasions, he took teams to the NCAA Regionals, and prior to becoming a member of the NCAA, his 1963 team was third in the nation in the NAIA ranks.

Smith has coached a number of players who went on to the professional ranks, among them the still active Tommy Toms, ace reliever with the Phoenix club of the Triple A Pacific Coast League, an affiliate of the San Francisco Giants.

Smith's basketball teams never posted a losing season, and only once during his baseball career did his team fail to have a winning season.

Big Play Was Not Exotic One

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

When North Carolina State's speedy Ted Brown gets the ball, it's the short yardage plays that turn into long gainers.

With the Wolfpack's back against the wall at Syracuse last Saturday, the junior running back took a handoff 95 yards for one of his three touchdowns of the day.

"It wasn't anything exotic at all," Coach Bo Rein said of the play, on second-and-eight with N.C. State on its own 5. "We just wanted to punch out a first down. In fact, your big plays usually come when you're running right at them."

The play came in the fourth quarter, as N.C. State romped 38-0 over the Orangemen, and is the AP Play of the Week.

Called a counter-dive, it is straight out of the Wolfpack's regular play book. Quarterback Johnny Evans faked a handoff on his right to fullback Billy Ray Vickers, spun to his left and delivered to Brown.

Brown, who missed practice all week because of the death of his mother, found his hole between center Jim Ritcher and left guard Tim Gillespie. He fired through the Syracuse backfield and outran the secondary all the way to the goal line, never touched by a defender.

The 95-yard run from scrimmage set an N.C. State record and was the longest ever in Syracuse's 70-year old Archbold Stadium, home arena over the years for great backs such as Jim Brown, Ernie Davis, Floyd Little and Larry Csonka.

Modestly, Brown credited his blocking. "Fifty per cent of the time the linemen break open a hole big enough for me to cross the line of scrimmage untouched," the 5-foot-10, 188-pounder from High Point, N.C. said. "That certainly makes my chances better, and that's what happened on this play."

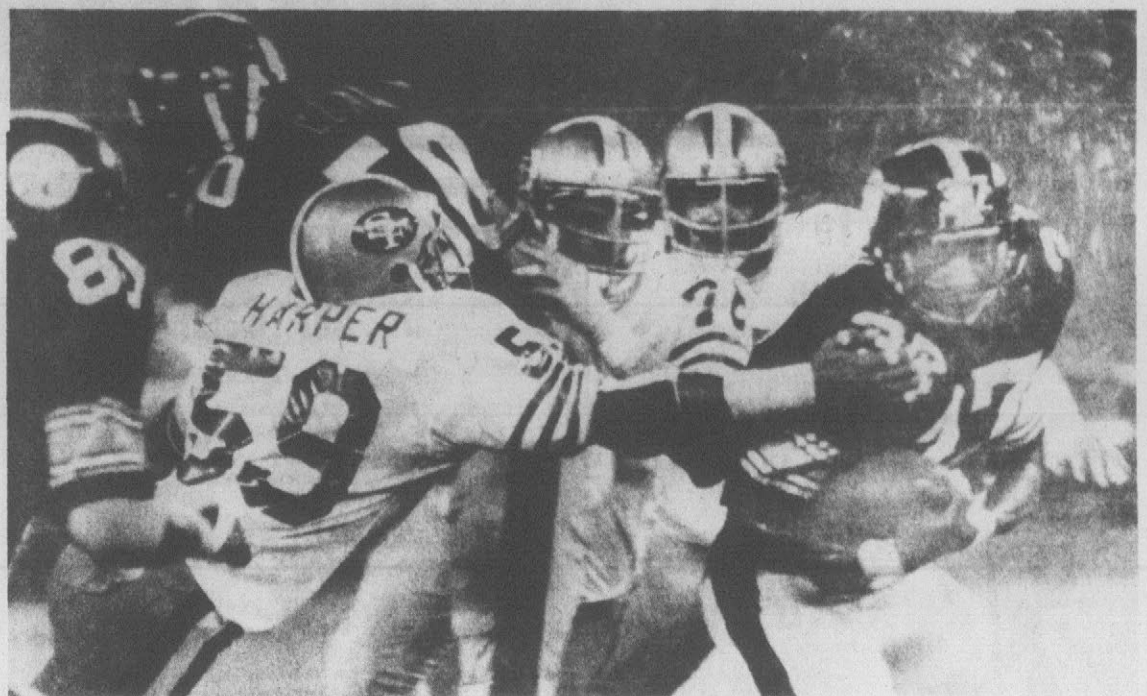

It was the same play, to the opposite side, in which Brown broke loose for 81 yards last year against Michigan State. This time Syracuse was in a pro-type defense, with a five man line stunting and two line-backers. Rein said offensive backfield coach Darrell Moody called the play from the press box.

"It was excellent execution up front that was the key to the play," Rein said. "It wasn't really a difficult run. When he hit the open field a couple guys had an angle on him and he just out ran them."

Gillespie, who took out a Syracuse tackle, said he had never seen a back look faster than Brown did. "I had just made my contact on the block and looked downfield and Ted was gone," he said.

Even though N.C. State, now 2-1, was comfortably ahead at the time, Rein said the play gave the team a lift going into Saturday's conference game with Wake Forest.

"The biggest boost is for the offensive line," he said. "We feel if we can dominate in offensive rushing, we're going to win our share, and it makes them feel good to know they can pop one open for 95 yards."

Steelers Feel They're Best As Pittsburgh Crushes 49ers, 27-0

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The television viewers who saw Franco Harris outgain the whole San Francisco 49er offense had to include some of the guys who will be here next Sunday — the Oakland Raiders.

"Oakland is heralded to be the best football team in the NFL," Harris said Monday night after he and a totally dominant Pittsburgh Steeler defense combined to crush San Francisco 27-0.

"So here we are playing the best team in the NFL," Harris added.

"And I don't think we are second to anybody, so something has to give." The Steelers did little giving at all Monday night, yielding 101 net offensive yards — 82 by the run and 19 by the pass.

Harris, who scored a pair of Steeler touchdowns, rushed for 100 yards himself and added nine more on a pass reception.

"I've always scored points in my career, always," lamented 49er quarterback Jim Plunkett who hit three of 13 passes for 30 yards, all of which were erased by Steeler sacks for minus 30 yards.

"We couldn't pass. We couldn't rush," said new 49er Coach Ken Meyer, whose team scored just three points in its last three preseason games.

"But I don't think many people are going to move the ball up and down the field on Pittsburgh."

Oakland did just that against the Steelers in the AFC title game last season and the victory helped the Raiders to the Super Bowl title that belonged to Pittsburgh the previous two years.

Harris gave Pittsburgh all the punts they needed against San Francisco in the second period when he broke two arm tackles and ran 14 yards for the touchdown.

Roy Gerela added a 49-yard field goal to give the Steelers a 10-0 half time edge, and he added a 47-yard scoring kick that made it 13-0 in the third period.

In the last quarter, Harris ran seven yards for another touchdown and quarterback Terry Bradshaw hit John Stallworth with a 15-yard scoring pass.

"Their defense was tough and physical. They gave us a beating," Harris said after the best opening game of his career.

"But they just got let down by their offense," he added.

The 49ers did not cross mid-field in the first half. They visited Steeler territory only three times in the second half, once via a Harris fumble.

While the 49er offense was getting nowhere, the Steelers rushed for 175 yards and added 133 by the pass.

Tickets sales at East Carolina University are booming this week, as the Pirates prepare for their home opener against Virginia Military Institute.

East Carolina will bring a 3-0 record into the contest, while the Keydets are 1-1, having beaten William & Mary and lost to Army.

Reports this morning said that ticket sales are brisk at the ECU athletic ticket office, and were all day long Monday.

Pirate fans wishing to attend are urged to get their tickets as soon as possible to get the best seats. While ECU officials are hopeful of a full house, Athletic Director Bill Cain said that as long as there is a demand for a ticket, it will be sold.

Michigan Holds To First Place

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Despite Coach Bo Schembechler's plea to newsmen to "do me a favor and vote us out of first place," the Michigan Wolverines are still college football's No. 1 team.

Michigan and Southern California held onto the top spots in Monday's Associated Press college football poll while Oklahoma and Ohio State, who tangle Saturday in Columbus, Ohio, moved into the 3-4 positions, replacing Notre Dame and Alabama.

Michigan had more trouble than expected in beating Duke 21-9, evoking the following comment from Schembechler: "I hope you fellows do me a favor and vote us out of first place. I'd really appreciate that."

Nevertheless, the Wolverines received 42 of 64 first-place votes and 1,094 of a possible 1,280 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Five first-place votes and 1,032 points went to Southern California, which beat Oregon State 17-10.

Oklahoma, the preseason leader, had dropped to fifth in the first regular-season poll last week by edging Vanderbilt 25-23 but jumped back to third with seven first-place votes and 955 points by crushing Utah 62-24. Meanwhile, Ohio State leaped from sixth to fourth with two first-place votes and 877 points by trouncing Minnesota 38-7.

Penn State, a 31-14 winner over Houston, jumped from 10th to fifth with five first-place ballots and 717 points while the losers slipped out of the Top Ten, from ninth to 19th.

In rising to fifth, Penn State edged past Texas A&M, which defeated Virginia Tech 27-6 and went from seventh to sixth with 708 points, and Texas Tech, up from eighth to seventh with two first-place votes and 631 points after trouncing New Mexico 49-14.

Colorado, which buried Kent State 42-0, joined the Top Ten, going from 12th to eighth with 435 points. Texas flattened Virginia 68-0 and also cracked the Top Ten, vaulting from 18th to ninth. The Longhorns earned the remaining first-place vote and 287 points.

Alabama sank from fourth to 10th by losing to Nebraska 31-24, but the triumph enabled the Cornhuskers to move back into the Top Twenty. They are in 14th place.

Notre Dame fell from third to 11th by losing to Mississippi 20-13. Completing the Second Ten behind the Irish are Mississippi State, Florida, Nebraska, Washington State, Arkansas, West Virginia, UCLA, Houston and Brigham Young.

Washington State, Arkansas and West Virginia made the Top Twenty for the first time. Washington State defeated Michigan State 23-21 after downing Nebraska the previous week while Arkansas dumped Oklahoma State, last week's No. 15 team, 28-6 and West Virginia upset No. 11 Maryland 24-16.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Maryland, Colorado, Mississippi State, UCLA, Oklahoma State, Pitt, Georgia, Texas, Florida and BYU.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

EXPLANATION—The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: A 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

BoSox Are Not Going To Give Up On Race

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
The Boston Red Sox may have gotten themselves back in the American League East pennant race with a 6-3 victory over the first-place Yankees. But few of the participants were dwelling on Monday's game.

"We've got to win tomorrow night," Boston catcher Carlton Fisk said after his three-run homer in the third inning powered the Red Sox within 3½ games of New York and into a tie for second place with Baltimore. "Pretty soon you run out of tomorrow's."

"If we win tomorrow night, it's going to be an interesting 11 days after that," added Boston manager Don Zimmer.

And Yankees manager Billy Martin chipped in by saying, "I'll be very satisfied if we win tomorrow night. A split is all we need here."

Reggie Cleveland hurled a seven-hitter and received support from Carl Yastrzemski, who smashed his 24th homer in the eighth inning after New York had moved within 4-3 on Dave Kingman's third home run in three games as a Yankee.

"I got a few breaks and there were some good plays behind me," said Cleveland, 10-8, who pitched eight shutout innings against New York last Wednesday before losing on Reggie Jackson's two-run homer. "I also made some good pitches when I needed them."

"The fifth inning was the key," added Cleveland, who got out of a jam after Graig Nettles and Lou Piniella opened the inning with singles. "In every game, there's a time when you get out of trouble in one inning and you're okay. The fifth was the inning for me."

Thurman Munson also homered for New York. Ed Figueroa, 15-10, took the loss.

Yaz's homer was Boston's 200th of the season, making the Red Sox only the fifth team to hit 200 or more home runs in a season twice.

Baltimore lost a chance to gain ground on the Yankees as they lost to Toronto 3-1. Chicago shutout Oakland 8-0. Detroit beat Cleveland 6-4 and Texas topped California 6-1.

There was no action in the National League Monday.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 1
Jerry Garvin tossed a nine-hitter, working out of jams in the eighth and ninth innings, to hurt the Orioles' pennant chances.

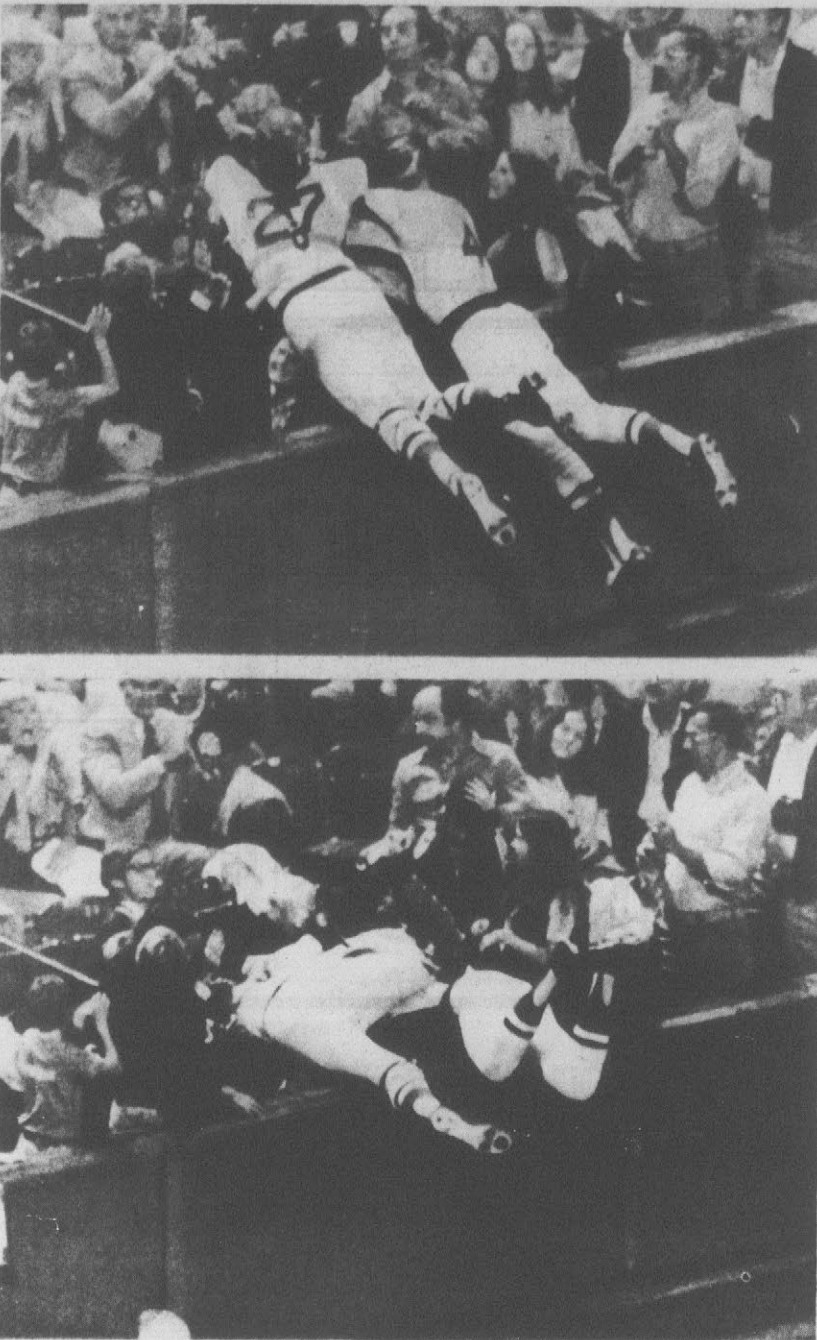

Garvin got Lee May to hit into a double play with men on first and third in the Orioles' eighth, then retired three straight batters with men on first and third again in the ninth.

White Sox 8, A's 0
Ken Kravec hurled his first shutout in the major leagues, a four-hitter, and struck out eight as Chicago topped Oakland. Lamar Johnson and Jorge Orta each knocked in two runs and Eric Soderholm slammed his 23rd home run for Chicago.

Tigers 6, Indians 4
A two-run single by Ben Ogilvie in the eighth inning was decisive for Detroit. Rusty Staub hammered his 22nd home run of the year for the Tigers and Andre Thornton had No. 28 for Cleveland.

Rangers 6, Angels 1
Doyle Alexander outpitched Nolan Ryan and Toby Harrah slammed a three-run homer for Texas. Ryan was attempting to become the first 20-game winner in the American League but had to leave in the sixth inning when his arm tightened.

Since Joe Paterno became head football coach at Penn State in 1966, the Nittany Lions have had 23 men on various All-American teams.

New Wrinkles Helped Squash UNC Opponent

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Tar Heels of North Carolina showed signs they may be coming out of their run-it-up-the-middle rut last weekend in their 31-0 rout of Richmond.

"Richmond was making it tough to run up the middle," explained coach Bill Dooley, who has always seemed to be suspicious of football gimmickry and generally inclined to do the straightforward thing. "So we put in a couple of new wrinkles."

The "new wrinkles" included a halfback pass, passing on a fake punt, running the end-around and similar tricks of the trade which most fans suspected Dooley would never use and might not even know.

"I think when we started to open it up, Richmond was surprised," said Tar Heel quarterback Matt Kupec. "I think they thought we'd come right at them. But coach Dooley knows there comes a time when you have to vary your attack."

Kupec hit Walker Lee and Delbert Powell with passes of 36 and 35 yards respectively for touchdowns. And Lee predicted the emphasis on passing would continue against more formidable opponents.

"Last year we kind of ran basic patterns," he said. "We've put in some new stuff this year which will open up the passing attack. Matt and P.J. (Gay, alternate quarterback) both have strong arms. I'm glad to see them using them."

Dooley observed that Carolina could have beaten Richmond with the plain vanilla approach, but it would all have gone like the Heels' first score, an 87-yard march that took 21 plays.

"That was about as basic a drive as you'll ever see," Kupec observed. "And the longest lasting."

Mills Praises His Next Foe

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — "State can beat anybody; they're so explosive," said Chuck Mills, who probably shouldn't be saying such things.

"N.C. State is a heck of a football team," he said Monday. "They've got a lot of offense at State, so much you forget they've gone two weeks without permitting a score."

"They have explosive people that can burn you," he added, mentioning running backs Ted Brown, Billy Ray Vickers and Ricky Adams.

Mills is coach of the Winston-Salem Deacons, who face the North Carolina State Wolfpack this week. But Mills calls them as he sees them.

Behind All Those Heads

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Catching the week-end sports headlines on the first bounce: "Courageous Sweeps Australia to Retain America's Cup."

This is the costliest, most one-sided and most futile competition in sports.

The natural question is: why carry on?

For 107 years, yachtsmen of the world have strained their brains and fortunes in an attempt to win the $500 silver pitcher which the crew of the schooner America first won by beating a whole British fleet in 1851.

First, the proud British sought revenge. Tea tycoon Sir Thomas Lipton himself spent $20 million in a personal endeavor. The aviation giant, T.O.M. Sopwith, squandered almost as much. The Canadians got into the act, then the Australians, French and Swedes. Altogether, close to $100 million has been spent building and racing the sleek, stripped down ocean craft which immediately become obsolete. The boats are half-million-dollar toys that wealthy sportsmen play with in the giant bath tub that is the Long Island Sound.

In the 80 individual races covering 23 series, the challengers have managed to win only seven. Seventy-five meetings have been shutouts. Yankee ingenuity and racing skills — plus the advantage of always racing on home waters — have turned the America's Cup into a travesty. No one else is close.

Asked if he didn't think America's continued domination would mean the death of the competition, Ted Turner, the victorious skipper, replied: "Certainly not, you've always got people who want to climb Mt. Everest."

"Forego Wins Woodward, Makes Bid for Horse of Year Honors."

Hey, whatever happened to Seattle Slew?

While the 7-year-old Forego was streaking to victory in the Woodward Handicap and pushing toward a record $2 million in prize money, the year's Triple Crown winner was munching oats in Barn 54 at Belmont Park — victim of one of the biggest tactical blunders in racing history.

After Slew had swept the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes, owners of the 3-year-old speedster spurned a possible $10 million stud syndication and decided to let him continue his racing career. Race track buffs licked their lips at thoughts of the Forego-Seattle Slew duels in the fall.

Over the protests of trainer Billy Turner, who urged a summer's rest, a jaded Slew was shipped to Hollywood Park in July for the Swaps Stakes where he was beaten by 16 lengths. It was an ego trip for the young owners — Dr. Jim Hill and the Mickey Taylors — and a shot at what looked like easy money.

The colt's campaign was wrecked, his marvelous record tarnished. Now the question is: how and when can he recoup?

"Rams Bow to Falcons in Joe Namath's Debut"

Broadway Joe under the looking glass. Every time the Los Angeles team sneezes this fall in the National Football League everybody will be looking in direction of the 34-year-old quarterback retreat from the New York Jets.

It's unfair pressure. In the Rams' 17-6 loss to Atlanta, Joe more than held up his end, completing half his passes for 141 yards, converting five of 15 third down tries, playing poised, heady football. The Rams were flat, not Joe.

As one who regretted Namath's determination to carry on, we salute his fierce pride and urge that he be given the full year to prove himself.

"Ole Miss Shocks Notre Dame, Alabama Upset by Nebraska."

Them ain't upsets, just a bunch of zealous kids doing what comes naturally. Soon as those Yanks from South Bend hit cotton country, the Rebels got out their Confederate flags and started boning up on the deeds of Stonewall Jackson. In Lincoln, the Nebraska red terrorists were itching to get even with Alabama's Bear Bryant for his Sugar Bowl "slight" of 1975.

Aw, college football. Emotion and unpredictability. That's what separates it from the stylized, choreographed professional game.

Turning Point For Wolfpack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State still has a few nagging offensive problems, but the Wolfpack has decided that its 38-0 humiliation of Syracuse over the weekend is the turning point of the season.

"It was not an easy game to get up for because it wasn't a conference game or anything," said offensive guard Tim Gillespie. "And frankly, we knew that playing at Syracuse wouldn't be our most memorable game of the season."

"But we knew we had to win this week," he added. "We talked about it and decided we wanted to be able to look back on this game and say it was when it all came together. We've still got some things to do, but we made a big step in the right direction."

The most visible problem remaining for the Wolfpack offense to solve is fumbles. There were six of them, four lost inside the 10 yard line. That makes 24 in three games.

"We've done everything humanly possible about the fumbles," said quarterback Johnny Evans, who dropped three of the flubbers himself. "Now we just have to go out and play and forget about them."

It was the second shutout in a row for the pack, which blanked Virginia a week earlier, 14-0. That's the first time that has happened since 1965.

It was also a red letter day for the Wolfpack defense, which never let the Orangemen inside the 40 yard line.

"If the defense plays every game like it did today," Gillespie said after the game, "we aren't going to lose again."

Put New Sound In Brazil '77 Vivien Leigh Tried To Survive

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Musician Sergio Mendes says he "completely reshuffled the cards" in developing his "New Brasil 77." But if you liked his old "Brasil 66," you should like the new sound, too.

Mendes draws on his Brazilian roots, American jazz and contemporary pop music to create his new sound. That's pretty much what he did to create the old sound too, which produced record hits like "Mas Que Nada" and "Fool on the Hill."

But Mendes says his group now is into "a new beginning." Of the original "Brasil 66," only Mendes and guitarist Oscar Castro Neves remain. The other eight members, all from this country, joined the group a year ago.

"When I formed 'Brasil 66' and we established a sound, a trademark, we lived with it for many, many years," Mendes says. "But after awhile it was sounding a little bit the same, so I decided to completely reshuffle the cards and start fresh."

"For me, it's just part of my own growth as a musician, as a person, changing, learning, getting exposed to new sounds, new things," says Mendes.

Now the "New Brasil 77" plays and sings songs like Chicago's "If You Leave Me Now," and "The Real Thing," a song by Stevie Wonder and Mendes' favorite on the new album by "Brasil 77."

There seem to be similarities between the old and new — like the Latin influence, the drums, the smooth blending of voices, guitars and keyboards which Mendes plays.

But the new sound has "more drive, more funk, more pulse," says Mendes. "The roots will stay there, the basic identity of yourself from the beginning will stay — but the change will come."

The old and new sounds, says Mendes, were "both new for the time. In 1966 it was a fresh, new sound. Today it's new again. That's the only way I can put it. It's fresh again."

Beyond that, Mendes makes no comparisons. You have to listen for yourself.

Mendes, 36, grew up in Rio de Janeiro, starting piano studies at age 7. In his teens he picked up keyboard styles of jazz artists like Dave Brubeck and Bud Powell. American audiences were first introduced to his music at a 1962 Carnegie Hall concert.

The American bossa nova boom followed, but while Mendes says his first group had the same "ethnic flavor," the "Brasil 66" blend of samba styles and American jazz was "more open, a little more free."

Mendes now spends about seven months of the year on the road, mostly doing concerts throughout the world.

VIVIEN LEIGH was beautiful, witty, talented and intelligent. She was also manic-depressive and afraid of going insane. (UPI Photo)

By ROBERTA G. WAX
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vivien Leigh was beautiful, witty, talented and intelligent. She was also manic-depressive and very much afraid of going insane.

She won an Academy Award for her portrayal of Blanche Du Bois in "A Streetcar Named Desire" but is probably best remembered for her Oscar-winning role as Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone with the Wind" and for her love affair with Sir Laurence Olivier, whom she later married then divorced.

To producer David O. Selznick, who ran a much ballyhooed search for a Scarlett, the actress with the cat-like green eyes personified the southern belle as Margaret Mitchell had written her — part girl, part woman; part lady, part shrew.

It was this combination of personality that was Miss Leigh's greatest asset — and part of her problem, according to Anne Edwards, author of the biography "Vivien Leigh."

The actress, who suffered bouts of hysteria followed by deep depression, died from complications of tuberculosis in 1967. She was 53.

"Vivien had the great drive that Scarlett had," Miss Edwards said, comparing the woman and the role. "But Vivien had more innate gentleness and goodness. She was never selfish as Scarlett was. She was ruthless in knowing what she wanted, in that way she was like Scarlett, but that was part her make-up and part her illness."

Vivien really suffered two diseases, Miss Edwards said. She had tuberculosis and was a manic-depressive, a combination that worked against each other.

"TB makes you more hyperactive and with the depression, that is almost like taking uppers and downers," said Miss Edwards, who is writing a sequel to "Gone With the Wind."

The author said many doctors diagnosed Miss Leigh as schizophrenic because the actress would turn from a happy, loving, generous person to a raging, hysterical woman.

Miss Edwards, who also wrote a biography of Judy Garland, said Miss Leigh's tragedy cannot be compared with Miss Garland's or Marilyn Monroe's, or any other of those she calls "the darlings who cracked up."

"Vivien and Judy were so diametrically different. Both, of course, were fascinating women in their own way. But it wasn't fame or anything self-imposed that destroyed Vivien. It wasn't enough for Vivien to survive. She had to survive and succeed."

"Vivien didn't crack up, she stood up. She fought desperately against madness. She was determined not to end up in an institution. She fought her madness, which was really her illness. When she was well, she was this genteel, charming, warm person."

She said it was sad Vivien did not live long enough to be helped by the drug lithium, which can now control manic-depressives.

Miss Edwards said the actress was so well loved that even though she railed, screamed and cursed those closest to her they still loved her and tried to protect her.

Miss Edwards said she had no trouble researching the book or using Vivien's letters and personal things.

"Everyone loved and admired Vivien. Everyone seemed to want her story told."

'Dottsy' Warm Country Singer

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A rising country music singer approached a moderately successful vocalist recently, excited about meeting someone she admired.

"I introduced myself and said I'd always wanted to meet her," the newcomer said. "All she said was, 'Hello,' and turned away. I was disappointed."

The brush-off typifies reports of jealousy and bitterness among women country music singers.

But there's a fresh face who doesn't follow form. She's Dottsy, a sweet, wholesome, friendly 24-year-old who calls the country music industry "a big happy family" and wishes everyone could have a No. 1 record.

With three Top 10 hits, including her recent "(After Sweet Memories) Play Born to Lose Again," she could be a target of jealousy. But she's detected nothing negative.

"There's no jealousy," she said in a recent interview in a Music Row office. "I don't detect it at all."

"The entertainers all work together," she said. "It's a big happy family. I like to see other people get No. 1 songs because it makes me happy to see others do well. If things were too competitive, it would be boring."

She, Crystal Gayle, Helen Cornelius, Margo Smith, Stella Parton and others represent new aspirants to the kingdoms of the Dolly Partons and the Loretta Lynns. There haven't always been so many challengers.

Country music is traditionally a man's domain. Of the 29 persons in the Country Music Hall of Fame, only five are women: Sara and Maybelle Carter, Kitty Wells, Patsy Cline and Minnie Pearl.

"Women are getting more willing to get into the business," said Dottsy, whose real name is Dottsy Brodt. "It's hard for women to go on the road and leave a family. But I think it's good that women realize they can get away."

Since signing a recording contract three years ago, "Storms Never Last" and "I'll Be Your San Antonio Rose" have been Dottsy's other hits. She has released one album, "The Sweetest Thing," which Cashbox magazine, selected best album of the year by a newcomer. It's quite an accomplishment for someone who had never been out of her native Texas until she was 21.

"I still have to pinch myself sometimes," she said. And she admits she has learned a lot.

"You learn all the time. You learn to deal with situations and how to entertain people more. You watch others, practice and apply what you see."

"It's fun to put my music and my interpretations across and see how people react. It's nice to see people reacting and clapping."

Aver 'Soap' Is Cleaner Than Its Daytime Rivals

By The Associated Press
The controversial nighttime television serial "Soap" is cleaner than its unchallenged daytime counterparts, according to program managers of four North Carolina television stations who say they will continue to air the show until its ratings show the public doesn't want it. "I think we'll be able to ride this negative reaction out," said Bill Pfeiffer of WLOS-TV in Asheville. "It's a mirror of what happened when 'All in the Family' came out."

A Baptist group known as the Christian Life Council has organized a protest drive against the show, contending its saucy allusions to various types of sexual behavior are indecent and endanger family life and other values.

Council director Dr. Charles V. Petty of Raleigh said 100,000 postcards have been distributed to churches, where members are to be encouraged to watch the show and let local station managers know how they feel about it.

"I see a whole lot worse on the soap operas in the afternoon, where Sally is sleeping with Joe who is married to her sister, etc. etc.," observed Judy Larson of WCTI-TV in New Bern. "They get pretty explicit in their bedroom scenes... My husband, who is retired from the Marine Corps, watched 'Soap' last week. He laughed all the way through and then asked me, 'What is everyone so upset about?'"

Mrs. Larsen noted that anyone who didn't like the show could switch it off.

"There is a lesson in this," agreed Eugene H. Bohi of WGHP in High Point. "Let people make their own judgments. The final judge must be the individual viewer. If the ratings are not there, the program will die."

George Allen at WWAY in Wilmington said there has been heavy adverse reaction to the show there, but he has no plans to cancel it.

Pfeiffer said complaints were heaviest in Asheville before the show came on. Since then, he said, they have slackened off.

"We're going to let the public determine whether the show stays on the air," he said. "But at this point we believe it's going to be one of the comedy sensations of the new season."

Nude Beach Up To Vote Today

By DAN TEDRICK
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Voters are deciding whether to call for a cover-up on the nation's first city-sanctioned nude beach.

More than 130,000 of San Diego's 369,000 registered voters were expected to vote today on the question that has divided religious leaders and stirred political debate. A "yes" vote means a vote to abolish nude bathing at Black's Beach.

The beach covers an isolated 900-foot reserve of sand and surf below the cliff bordering the University of California at San Diego. The rule at Black's Beach since 1974 has been that bathing suits are optional.

The Rev. Richard Matson of the La Jolla Lutheran Church near Black's Beach called publicly for rejection of the ban, terming invalid the Old Testament story that Adam ate forbidden fruit and covered himself in shame.

"What people forget is that we also have the New Testament, especially in the Book of Hebrews, where it says that in Adam all men died and that they live in Christ," said the Rev. Mr. Price.

Among clergymen speaking out against the nude beach were the Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese, and the Rev. Robert M. Wolterstorff, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of San Diego.

The congregation of the College Avenue Baptist Church received a letter from the pastor, the Rev. Robert Luther, asking it to approve the ban "to stem the tide of immorality."

Both San Diego newspapers called for return to mandatory swimsuits.

Although opponents of nude bathing said crime and promiscuity have taken place at the beach, police said it has been the scene of fewer arrests than other beaches.

The bidding:

Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

East-West defended coolly to recover ground lost through an unfortunate opening lead to defeat South's doubled five heart contract. But South had only himself to blame for letting the contract slip through his fingers.

North's decision to take out his partner's double of four spades was based on his lack of defensive values. However, since he had already announced that fact when he jumped to four hearts, he should have respected his partner's decision. Four spades would have failed by one trick.

Had West chosen to open a club, the defenders would have taken two quick tricks and the ace of trumps, and no one would have given the hand a second thought. But, West was not blessed with second sight, and he made the more normal lead of the ace of spades.

Declarer was delighted. He ruffed in dummy. un-blocked the ace-king of diamonds and reentered dummy by ruffing the jack of spades. On the queen of diamonds declarer discarded a club, and it now seemed that he would lose no more than a club trick and the ace of hearts.

East had other ideas. When declarer led the king of hearts from dummy, East pounced with the ace and shifted to a low club. West captured declarer's queen with the ace and paused to consider the situation.

It was obvious that East held the ace of clubs. Why, then, was he underleading that card? The only explanation could be that he wanted to get West on lead, and the only suit East could be interested in having returned was a diamond.

So West dutifully led the jack of diamonds, and declarer had no counter. East had to score his jack of hearts by ruffing the fourth diamond. Down one.

Declarer could have avoided this trap by employing a loser-on-loser play. Instead of leading the king of hearts after taking a discard on the queen of diamonds, he should have immediately led the fourth diamond himself, discarding his last club. Now the defenders are helpless, for there is no way East can make his jack of trumps for the setting trick.

Sen. Sebo Will Speak

Some of these bills provided for improved prison, mental health services, and standards, equal employment practices, and training school alternative funds. We hope all Leaguers and other interested persons will attend this meeting."

There will be an informal coffee period from 9 to 9:30 p. m., during which individual opportunities to speak with Sen. Sebo will be available to anyone attending.

Drugs Plagued Bluegrass Event

LINCOLN, N.C. (AP) — The Grandfather Mountain Bluegrass Festival, where 20,000 people recently enjoyed what was to be an annual weekend of country music, may be in trouble.

Avery County Sheriff J.D. Braswell says his men arrested 73 people on drug charges and uncovered a big ticket counterfeit operation this year and he plans court action to stop any future gatherings.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Get your affairs on a more solid and long-term satisfactory basis. Consult with those of real experience so that you can gain the progress and advancement that appeals to you. Your power to organize is good now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Become an A-1 citizen and thereby also improve your success in business. Building up a more enviable reputation is wise, also.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get into studies that will later help you become a more successful person. You can make valuable contacts with those who have different views from your own. Take no risks while driving.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find the most efficient methods for handling duties and derive more benefits from them. Try to please mate, loved one more since you are aware of true wishes now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep promises made to partners and you get along famously now. Become better informed where worldly matters are concerned. Know what is happening in your own community.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get work done efficiently and please higher-ups. Update wardrobe and make a better impression.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get together with congenials at pleasures mutually enjoyed. Get abilities to the attention of one who can help you to commercialize on them. Be active.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do what you can to improve appearance and comfort of home. Do some entertaining that can prove to be most charming and add to happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show allies that you enjoy their association and you come to a better understanding. Confer with an expert you know and get pointers that can be helpful to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find a better way to add to your holdings and cut down on expenses as well. Study property and see where to make repairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get health improved via right treatments. Be with good pals and enjoy yourself. Show wisdom in handling business affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan time to analyze your position in life and to find ways to better it. Establish more harmony with mate, loved one. Take no chances with a known liar.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be of help to good friends who are having rough sledding and you also get backing for your ideas. Strive for greater family unity.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have very practical and constructive ideas. Encourage early to carry through with them. Give as fine an education as you can along logical lines. There is a natural ability at organization also and there can be tremendous success here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
