Carter Starts Looking For New Man

LaBelle's Faith In Bert Unshaken

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — LaBelle Lance was wrong. She and her husband won't be around to see their azaleas bloom next spring.

They're going back to Georgia.

Just a week ago, the wife of the former budget director pointed to the azaleas she and her husband had planted in the back yard of their Georgetown house as a sign of their determination to ride out the controversy about Lance's financial affairs.

They would be in Washington to see the azaleas bloom, she said.

But Lance resigned Wednesday and said he would go home to Georgia.

"I still feel he could take a job anywhere," Mrs. Lance said shortly after President Carter announced the resignation on national television. "He's honest and good, and I'm proud of him."

Within minutes after President Carter's press conference, Mrs. Lance stepped out on the front steps of their fashionable Georgetown house to make what she called a "statement of faith."

Her husband, who had watched the televised press conference at home with his wife, would have no further comment, she said. But clearly, Mrs. Lance would.

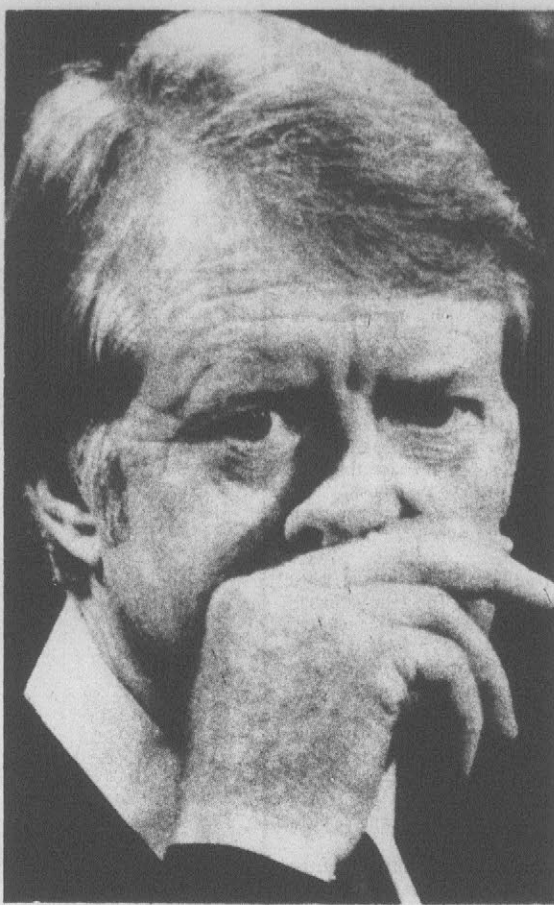

"I did not have anything to do with the resignation," Mrs. Lance said in a voice that was tentative at first, then grew strong, and finally broke several times with emotion. "As far as I'm concerned, my husband didn't have to resign."

In fact, she counseled him not to, she said: "I told him I would not resign, but again, that was not my decision."

Mrs. Lance, who earlier in the day looked tired and distraught, had changed from slacks to an expensive pale blue ultrasuede dress. She appeared, as one observer said, "at peace with the decision."

Neighbors and children on skateboards gathered with reporters to hear Mrs. Lance proclaim faith in her husband, her country and her religion. "We're still proud to be Americans," she said.

Mrs. Lance, a devout Methodist who writes religious poetry, said faith helped her through the past few weeks. "As long as I can walk in the light of Christ, I have faith that he puts me where he wants me," she said. "And my husband shares that same faith."

Fallout Is Slight

SEATTLE (AP) — Fallout from China's nuclear test caused only a slight rise in radiation in the Northwest and posed little health danger, federal officials say.

The air mass carrying the fallout was expected to move northeastward and reach the Great Lakes region today and the East Coast on Friday.

Mid-morning radiation checks Wednesday in Seattle and Juneau, Alaska, showed no increase in ground radiation, but afternoon checks at Anchorage and Portland, Ore., indicated there was some rise in radioactivity.

The Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C., had warned that if some radioactive material were caught in rainfall, it could contaminate pasture land in Washington, Oregon, most of Idaho and parts of northern California.

A regional EPA spokesman said the agency and the Food and Drug Administration would test milk samples in Seattle, Anchorage and Portland even though it appears no problem exists.

Two Die In Wreck

HAMLET, N. C. (AP) — A young man and his wife were killed today when their car, traveling at high speed, collided with a freight train at a city crossing, police said.

Sgt. Preston Corbett of the Hamlet Police Department said the car's speedometer was stuck at 100 miles per hour. The car was demolished.

The victims were identified as James Walter Freeman, 23, and Patricia Duenkel Freeman, 22, of Charlotte.

Corbett said the car struck the train between two freight cars, rupturing the train's air brake system and bringing it to a halt. The car's engine block was torn from the car and it traveled about 30 feet through the air, striking the corner of a store about six feet above the ground, the officer said.

Corbett said the accident occurred about 4:15 a.m.

Modular Units May Help Ease Prison Crowding

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — New prison construction, use of modular units and crime prevention efforts may bring North Carolina's prison capacity in line with inmate population by 1981, Gov. Jim Hunt said today.

Hunt, in a news conference at a Wake County prison unit where the mobile home-like modular units have expanded bed capacity, said room for 1,168 new prison beds will be in use by Nov. 1 — primarily through erection of the $50,000 modular units.

The prison population currently stands at 14,340 in a system designed for 10,900 — a difference of 3,360. By 1981, Hunt said, new prison construction and distribution of $3 million in modular units will raise the prison system's capacity by 3,250 — still 110 beds short of current population.

But Hunt said the use of county jails to house misdemeanants, earlier parole for nonviolent criminals and efficient management of crime prevention programs could reduce the prison population by 1981.

Thirty-two of the modular units are being installed in the prison system as a quick and relatively inexpensive way to boost capacity, the governor said.

"I think it is clear that North Carolina is making a vigorous effort to correct the inhumane overcrowded conditions in our prisons," Hunt said. "For too long, we have let them stand as schools for crime. That's wrong and that's counter-productive."

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is trying to replace a man he says is irreplaceable.

Fighting sorrow at the resignation of longtime friend Bert Lance as budget director, Carter began the search today for a successor.

One of his first visitors of the day was Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., who told reporters he found Carter calm, relaxed and even in what the senator called a happy mood.

"In a sense, he feels he's had a problem lifted from him," said Randolph, whose visit to the White House was to urge Carter to increase fund requests for economic development programs.

"There will be an orderly transition," the President told a news conference Wednesday when he announced Lance's resignation. "I will decide beginning after today on who a successor might be."

Among names that quickly surfaced were:

—James T. McIntyre Jr., director of Georgia's budget office in 1972 while Carter was governor and now deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, which Lance had headed.

—Robert Strauss, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now the U.S. ambassador for trade negotiations.

—Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

—Hale Champion, former California finance director and now an official at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Carter said the task of finding a new budget director won't be easy.

"I don't think there is any way that I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance that would be, in my judgment, as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and advisor as he has been," the President said.

"Obviously, the government will continue," Carter declared, "and I hope to do a good job as President, and I am sure a successor will be adequate."

"But there has been a special relationship between me and Bert Lance that transcended official responsibilities or duties or even governmental service of the last six or seven years."

"So he has occupied a special place in my governmental career, in my political career, and in my personal life. I don't think there is any way anyone could replace him now."

Carter hinted that he might have an additional problem because of the controversy that finally forced Lance to resign.

Asked if the Lance affair had damaged his own credibility with the American people, the President replied: "I can't say. I'd guess to some extent."

In a letter to "My Dear Mr. President," Lance quit "because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it" surrounding his personal financial affairs and his business dealings as the head of two Georgia banks.

Lance's business and banking practices have been under investigation for several weeks by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Justice Department, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Election Commission and Internal Revenue Service.

They are looking into large overdrafts at Lance's First National Bank of Calhoun, Ga., by Lance, members of his family and the committee that ran his 1974 campaign for governor of Georgia; two multimillion-dollar personal loans at banks where his National Bank of Georgia had special accounts; his use of the same collateral for two loans at separate banks and allegations that he used bank-owned aircraft for his personal and political travel.

In three days of testimony last week before the Senate committee, Lance said he might have made some mistakes but declared that his conscience was clear of any wrongdoing.

He said the same to Carter.

"It was, and is, important that my name and reputation be cleared, for me, my wife, my children, my grandchildren and those who have trust and faith in me. And I believe that this has been done," Lance wrote in resignation.

"As I said at the Senate hearings, my conscience is clear."

As Carter read Lance's letter to reporters on national radio and television, he stumbled on the word "resignation."

An aide said the President was as close to tears as he has been since his wet-eyed victory statement the morning after his election last November.

"Bert Lance is my friend," Carter said.

"I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother."

Question after question at the news conference was about Lance.

Carter cast his eyes down from time to time, tightened his lips and responded to the questions, one by one.

After 34 minutes, he ended the news conference himself, without waiting for the senior news service correspondent to say, "Thank you, Mr. President."

Peeper Law Slapped Down

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Did you look in on your little girl last night to make sure she was sleeping soundly? You're under arrest, you pervert. North Carolina law says you're a peeping tom.

District Judge B. Gordon Gentry found the law so vaguely worded Wednesday that he dismissed a charge against a 15-year-old boy and declared the law unconstitutional.

The law, written in 1929, says that "any person who shall peep secretly into any room occupied by a female person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned in the discretion of the court."

Assistant Public Defender Michael F. Joseph, representing the young boy charged under the law, said innumerable everyday acts were illegal under the law, for example:

—An employer checking an outer office to make sure his female typist is doing her job properly.

—A mother peering into a daughter's bedroom to see if the little girl is obeying instructions to stay in bed.

—A daughter looking secretly into the sick room of a mother to see if she is resting comfortably.

"These acts and other harmless, innocent acts are prohibited," Joseph said.

Judge Gentry agreed and threw the case out. The Guilford County district attorney's office said it would take the case to the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

The Democratic majority leader of the Senate, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, a key weathervane in the Lance case, said: "The nation cannot afford to have as director of the Office of Management and Budget a man whose personal problems are so great that they detract from the performance of his duties."

From the Republican side, Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, said: "I don't think President Carter will ever fully recover. ... The damage has been done."

After a last meeting with Carter, Lance returned to his home in Washington's fashionable Georgetown district. Moments after Carter's news conference ended, Lance's wife, LaBelle, stepped out of the house and said:

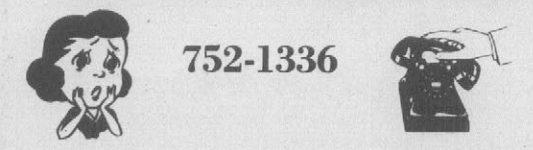

"I didn't feel my husband had to resign. I still feel he could take a job anywhere. He's honest and good and I'm proud of him."

Pen-Pal Wants To Help 'Sam'

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A penpal friendship apparently has developed between the alleged "Son of Sam" killer and a woman who has offered him a "place to stay when he gets out of the hospital."

Rosina Belpedio, 40, said late Wednesday she thinks David R. Berkowitz is handsome and "very close to me."

Miss Belpedio, nevertheless, has sold for $100 a letter Berkowitz wrote her. "I needed the money. I was broke. I hope 'Sam' forgives me," she said.

Berkowitz replied to two notes Miss Belpedio sent him at Kings County Hospital, where he is undergoing psychiatric tests. He is accused of murdering six persons in a 12-month period.

In his note, Berkowitz thanked "Rosina" for being his friend and for her "lovely letters," promised he'd pray for her, but begged off on an apparent request for a get-together.

"...there are alot (sic) of things that can never be, such as, the two of us getting together," the letter read. It was signed: "David B. (SAM)."

The existence of the latest Berkowitz letter dated Sept. 11 was confirmed by an autograph specialist, Charles Hamilton, who said he bought it from Miss Belpedio at his gallery on Wednesday.

Miss Belpedio said she offered Berkowitz a temporary home because "eventually he's going to get out of the hospital and when he does he'll need a place to stay."

She said she'd still like to go out with Berkowitz or see him at the hospital.

Rebels Cut Supply Route

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A small rebel movement in northeastern Ethiopia claims it has cut Addis Ababa's highway to the country's only oil refinery and one of its last supply routes from the coast.

The pro-Somali Afar Liberation Front (AFL), in a communique broadcast Wednesday by the Somali government radio, said its guerrillas blew up a bridge on the road from Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, to the ports of Assab, 400 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, and newly independent Djibouti, 110 miles down the coast from Assab.

Deadline To File

RALEIGH, (AP) — Farmers in 20 mostly eastern North Carolina counties have until Sept. 30 to file drought emergency loan applications with the Farmers Home Administration, Marion C. Holland, FHA state administrator announced Thursday.

The 20 counties are part of 66 North Carolina in which federal drought relief assistance has been authorized, but the deadline for filing applications has been extended into 1978 in the other counties.

Counties covered by the Sept. 30 deadline are Bladen, Burke, Chowan, Craven, Cumberland, Duplin, Edgecombe, Greene, Halifax, Hoke, Jones, Lenoir, Northampton, Onslow, Pender, Pitt, Robeson, Sampson, Scotland and Yancey.

Lance Headed Back To His Georgia Home

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Bert Lance faces a troubled financial future as he and his wife pack their bags and head home for Georgia.

The Lances have not said what they will do now that Lance has resigned his White House job, but President Carter said his former budget director "needs to go home to take care of his business."

Mrs. Lance told reporters Wednesday night: "I think we'll go back to Georgia. I hope God will send me back for a while. I want to see my children."

The Lances still have their 50-room Butterfly Manna mansion, one of the biggest and most elaborate estates in the exclusive Buckhead section of Atlanta.

The Lances put the mansion up for sale for $2 million last month, but it has not been sold. It was not clear whether they would live there. They also own a $100,000 house in Calhoun, Ga., and a vacation home on Sea Island, Ga.

Now that he is leaving Washington, Lance will no longer have to pay the $18,000-a-year rent for his house in Georgetown, and will not have to sell his stock in the National Bank of Georgia at a loss.

He owned about $2.9 million in National Bank of Georgia stock when he took office, but it has declined in value from $17 a share to about $12. He could lose $1 million if he sells it.

Although he owns 17 per cent of the bank stock, it was not clear whether he would have a job with the bank if he returned.

Robert Guyton, who replaced Lance as president of the Atlanta bank, said Wednesday night, "Obviously, we don't know Mr. Lance's plans for the future."

One of Lance's biggest problems is a $3.4 million loan from the First National Bank of Chicago. Lance has to pay $225,000 per year in interest on that loan and had been counting on stock dividends to help pay for it. However, his bank's financial troubles forced suspension of dividends on that stock in the last quarter.

The Chicago bank has demanded more collateral because of the decline in the value of the Georgia bank stock and as a result of studies of Lance's finances by banking regulators. Lance has put most of his real estate up as loan collateral.

At his confirmation hearings, Lance listed a net worth of $2.6 million, with assets of $7.9 million and liabilities of $5.3 million, but the picture may not be as good now.

For one thing, Lance has personally had to pay for a lot of the work done to defend himself at Senate hearings and for reports by the comptroller of the currency.

Lance also faces continued investigation and possibly legal costs from a variety of government agencies looking into his affairs.

Memorial Scholarship To Honor Virginia Girl

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

A scholarship fund has been established at East Carolina University in the memory of a young Virginia girl who tragically never realized her dream of coming to college here.

A traffic accident last July 13 claimed the life of Mary Ann DeSimone, 17, of Springfield, Va., barely a month before she was to enter ECU as a freshman this semester.

Now, however, because of the memorial decided upon by her family and friends, the dream of college held by Mary Ann DeSimone may be possible for other deserving and outstanding young people. Mary Ann would have liked that.

Documents establishing the memorial point out that "due to Mary Ann's concern for others, her competitive nature, her unusually talented abilities, her bountiful supply of energy, and her vast potentiality to succeed, Mary Ann will live forever in the hearts and minds of her family, friends and acquaintances."

Part of the money that would have paid Mary Ann's tuition and fees has been put into the scholarship trust. Established at $3,000, this fund will increase as additional funds are given.

"Because of Mary Ann's love of competition and intense interest in athletic participation, the scholarship (derived annually from proceeds of the fund) will be restricted to a recipient who is a member of a varsity athletic team," documents state.

Few of future beneficiaries may ever have heard of Mary Ann DeSimone, but it is unlikely that her relatives, friends, classmates, teachers and coaches in Fairfax County, Va., and Fairfax's Jefferson High School in particular, will ever forget her.

Talk Turkey To Son About Moving

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Junior has been living at home since he was graduated from college three years ago. (He's 25.) He works for me (I'm his father) and makes excellent wages. The problem is how to get rid of him.

He's practically engaged to a very nice girl who lives 300 miles from here, but we're afraid he'll never marry her as long as he has all the comforts of home. We don't charge him room or board.

It's not the money; it's the fact that he doesn't want the responsibility of taking care of himself. Several times in the last two years, he has talked about taking an apartment with another fellow, but he's always backed out at the last minute.

We've dropped subtle hints, but to no avail. His mother and I agree that if Junior moved, it would be better for him and better for us.

How can we tell him (politely) to move?

FT. WAYNE FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Talk turkey! Tell him he has until Thanksgiving to find another pad. And say, "Please."

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your enlightened attitude about homosexuals.

I am the father of two sons and a daughter. My youngest son is gay, and when I first learned of it, I spent a lot of time worrying and wondering why. His mother died when he was 7, and his older brother and sister and I might have overprotected him, but I doubt if that was the cause. I think the pattern was set much earlier.

Whatever the reason, he was my son with his first breath, and he will be my son until his last. I am as caring and proud of him as I am of my other children. With minimal effort, I soon became as comfortable with his friends as with those of my other children. We all live some distance apart, but there is warmth and affection whenever the family is together.

My second grandson is named for him—and this was done after we learned the news.

Just as his brother, sister and I take for granted his standing by one of us if the need arose, so can he be certain we will stand by him. We are a family. What a wonderful feeling.

SIGNED, BUT NAME WITHHELD

DEAR SIGNED: Your youngest son is fortunate to have a family such as yours. What a pity there aren't more people with your understanding and compassion.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 18 years and have six wonderful children.

I have never been the suspicious type, but something has really got me thinking lately. About four months ago, my husband went on a business trip and stayed five days when he was supposed to be gone only three days. He phoned me from out of town and said he would be detained, but didn't explain why.

Well, ever since that trip, he has gone to confession every week! Before the trip he went to confession only twice a year. I am going crazy wondering what he has to confess.

Do you think that something happened on that trip that is sending him to confession? How should I handle it? Should I ask him? Or should I let the matter ride?

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: Let the matter ride, and pray that he only cheated on his income tax.

Educator Sees Gains In Status Of Disabled

NEW YORK (AP) — Children gaped. Sales clerks ignored her and shoppers either fussed over her or moved on to another counter when a disabled woman in a wheelchair visited a shopping center here on a busy weekend.

The woman, however, was not truly disabled. Carrying a concealed tape recorder, she was one of Dr. Shirley Cohen's students on an assignment to simulate a handicapped person.

"At the end of the tape, you could tell how she was ready to break down after less than a day of these reactions," Dr. Cohen says. "So you can imagine what it's like for disabled persons who have been experiencing this for years."

Dr. Cohen, 40, director of the special education development center at the City University of New York, and assistant professor of education at Hunter College, is the author of the recently published "Special People."

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

and swimming teacher. At Poe Intermediate School, she was awarded a trophy as the school's most outstanding gymnast.

Donald Y. Leggett, ECU's Director of Foundations, said of the memorial fund, "This is a most touching tribute to the life and ongoing memory of a very outstanding individual whose presence would have made all of us better and richer. It is a fitting and appropriate memorial."

East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Leo W. Jenkins said Mary Ann DeSimone "made her mark on the lives of many, and that her influence for what is good and true in living for others will continue to be exerted for all time to come."

While her book views the long-term and everyday problems faced by the handicapped, as well as medical and technological advances, Dr. Cohen also explains why society fears the disabled.

In an interview here, the 5-foot-1 professor explained that although the handicapped have been making headlines because most of the provisions of "The Education of All Handicapped Children Act of 1975" are now going into effect in the nation's schools, "there's still a lot of isolation."

The new law, which Dr. Cohen speaks of as the "Bill of Rights for Handicapped Children," mandates that disabled youngsters can no longer be excluded from the public education system.

As the laws are enforced, she notes, "we're going to come into closer contact with the handicapped. As children in the schools are exposed to those with disabilities at an earlier age, they won't perceive them as strange."

Most people had no contact with disabled persons when they were young, and parents' attitudes often encouraged their children to be afraid of the handicapped because they are different, she maintains.

Dr. Cohen says her own daughter expressed a fear of "catching handicap germs" from a disabled person when she was 5. "This fear of 'handicap germs' is a common feeling, not just among children, but with adults as well — it's just not put into words."

"We still have a long way to go. We've made progress in casual relationships, but other findings show that we still reject intimacy and fear closeness with people who have a disability."

the growing militancy of the handicapped was somewhat threatening to professionals in the field at first, she said. But these groups are now accepted as civil rights interests just coming for their due and are no longer just viewed as angry people, Dr. Cohen adds.

"Many of them are old and there's a chance that if most members of the population live past 65, that they'll be handicapped later in life, so it's everybody's problem," she says.

Ten per cent of the population is handicapped, according to the educator, who has a doctorate in developmental psychology from Columbia University. She notes that 8 million are children between the ages of 1 and 21.

After spending 18 years in the special education field, Dr. Cohen points to many changes that have occurred over those years, particularly the end of a teacher shortage and more attention to the disabled.

"We probably have more bright young teachers than ever before. In the past, such schools were buried in basements and out of the way, but are coming into the mainstream now.

"In the old days, the field was functioning at a low level. There were more vacancies for teachers and even a stigma attronic operated myoelectric arms, activated by tiny electric impulses from the person's existing muscles.

All of these devices represent a kind of "breakthrough" to make life more liveable for the handicapped, Dr. Cohen says.

Women Steal Show At Tournament

By FRED T. FERGUSON
KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (UPI) — Comedian Arte Johnson, devotee of deep sea fishing, was talking about the growth in the number of women who go for the big ones.

The fish weren't biting for Arte so he improvised a shtick on the husband and wife who fish and the husband is fishless. "Hi Harvey, how goes the fishing?"

"I don't want to talk about it. Let's talk about baseball."
"Well, Jeannette, how are you doing?"
"Why I got an 800-pound blue on a 50-pound test and..."
"Jeannette, I said we weren't going to talk about it. I told you, we don't talk fishing. Shut up, Jeannette."
"But, Harvey, I was just..."
"That's it, Jeannette. You want to fight. You got a fight..."

Here, off the Kona coast of Hawaii, on a rare day when the fish didn't bite, the male anglers laughed and laughed as Arte expanded on the theme. There was time to talk about the tremendous growth in women deep sea anglers.

The occasion was the Hawaiian International Billfish Tournament. (Billfish are those with sword-like bills such as marlin and sailfish.) Fourteen nations had teams entered but women stole the show.

The amazing thing was that Mrs. Lilly Coll came at all. Lilly is 84, a great great grandmother.

In big game fishing, age does matter because endurance and stamina play a real part. They are needed to boat (catch) the magnificent fighting fish that have weighed up to 1,100 pounds.

More than age should have stopped Lilly but didn't because, as she put it, "I just love fishing."

Lilly got on and off her plane from San Diego in a wheelchair. Five weeks before, she had taken a fall, pulled a ligament in one leg, strained her hip. She had gotten around with a walker, then a cane. When the airline people made her ride that wheelchair it left Lilly, a toughy, fighting mad for the tourney.

Lilly wound up aboard a boat skippered by a woman — the only woman skipper of a commercial sport fishing boat in these islands. Myrna Holdridge, with a Lana Turner figure which Myrna herself used to display in a sarong as a cocktail waitress, was on the flying bridge.

Myrna, 37, hit the Hawaii beach four years ago seeking a lifestyle she could live with. She arrived by way of California after being raised in Taylor, Mich., and got the waitressing job — common among women who land here until they get a stake.

Her chance came when a skipper friend lost his deckhand and let her sign on "for a couple of weeks."

Myrna managed to stay signed on, take the necessary courses at the Pacific Maritime Academy, pass the Coast Guard exam and get her license. Then her boat owner let her be skipper weekdays. He took the boat out weekends. She stuck with it, she said, because "I like men and it sure beats waitressing."

Along came the billfish tournament. Myrna begged to skipper. Her boss feared resentment among the other skippers. Success in such a tourney can mean thousands of dollars in charters to these skippers. But Myrna's owner relented. The male skippers accepted.

First day out, with the Balboa, Calif., Angling Club team aboard and Myrna at the helm, the sport fisherman Pisces II recorded three marlin.

Such a catch might have been expected of Lilly or the team captain, June Stuke, 52, of Orange, Calif. June and Lilly hold a number records but they are another story.

For Myrna, that first day was almost too much. Let June tell it:

"Myrna was fantastic. She's a match for any male skipper here. But I've got to tell this little story."
"First (marine radio) roundup, we'd already caught one and it was her first tourney. So she asked, 'How do I report it?'"
"I told her. Her hands were shaking like leaves but she did it. You could hear the surprise among some of the skippers. First roundup, first day, the lady skipper had a fish."

"Next roundup, we had another marlin. This time, she

Do you know what is the biggest complaint children have against their parents?

According to a recent survey, 58 per cent of the children interviewed resented the fact that parents make them eat food they don't like.

In all fairness, I have to tell you that I gave birth to children with unusual diets. They tolerate only hot dogs that cost $1.25 in the ballpark, hamburgers 1/15 of an inch thick, asphyxiated by secret sauce, charred marshmallows speared on a bent coat hanger, and anything left under a car seat that has touched a dirty hand.

They refuse to eat anything they haven't danced to on TV. Okay, so I lied when I told them it was good for them. I lied when I told them it would make them big and strong. And I lied when I said there were one million children in Argentina waiting in line for their Brussels sprouts.

But I did not stretch the truth one bit when I told them to clean up their plates — they were killed ing their mother. The way I licked their plates clean after every meal, you'd have thought I was sired by a cocker spaniel. I drank milk out of glasses that stuck to my lips, pork chops that have been used as gavel, whipped potatoes that had served as dams for gravy, and vegetables so cold you could taste them.

And did they appreciate it? They did not. We have an entire generation of kids growing up (58 per cent to be exact) who regard Waldorf Salad as a form of punishment. My kids never shaped up until I threatened, "You keep that up and I'll put you to bed WITH SUPPER!"
Thanks to my diligence and eating all their proper foods, I was the one who grew up to be big and strong. One day I turned on the disposal and as the motor whirred around noisily, I heard one of my children's playmates shout, "Hey, Andy. I think I hear your mother calling."
From that day forward, I gave up cleaning my children's plates. The first time I initiated my new philosophy I said to my son, "If you don't eat this, I'm going to throw it out."
"That's not much of a recommendation," he said.
Now they tell me.

Mrs. Hayes Visits Garden Club Friday

The Greenville Garden Club met Friday at the First Christian Church for a luncheon meeting. Mrs. Judy Hayes of Washington, state co-director, was a special guest.

Mrs. Hayes brought greetings from the N. C. State Garden Club and talked on objectives. She told of the Blue Star Memorial, which the club voted to send a contribution to help in the project. Members were asked to attend the District 12 meeting in Elizabeth City Oct. 12. She was introduced by Mrs. John Coughlan.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. J. C. Galloway, president. Mrs. Delphia S. Corbett, secretary, told of a letter she received from Mrs. Marion Odom, chairman of Elizabethan Gardens, thanking her for the antique vase which she and her brother, Major Thomas H. Sears gave in memory of their mother, Cherrie Rose Robbins Sears, of Nash County. The vase has been placed on a desk in the Gate House entrance to the garden.

Mrs. H. C. Klingenschmitt, chairman of garden therapy, reported on the project with the EMR students in plant propagation. Members were urged to have plants and containers ready to be delivered during the week of Oct. 10.

Positive Things In 'Downtown'

Municipal downtowns are still vital, according to a Department of Housing and Urban Development study.

Downtown business districts remain "the single most important area within the city and normally within the metropolitan area," according to the study.

The study, done by Real Estate Research Corp. of Chicago and International Downtown Executives Association sees the key to revitalizing downtown areas as cooperation between public and private sectors.

Urban renewal was said to be "quite successful in halting the spread of blight, strengthening the local tax base and stimulating new employment and development."

Those points of the study about square with what we have learned here in Greenville.

Urban renewal was successful here in the revitalization of the downtown area. Without these programs the slum clearance work and redevelopment needed could never have been carried out.

We are in the midst of the second phase — that is the cooperation of public and private sectors.

All the redevelopment work could have been carried out in the downtown area and it would have gone for nothing if existing and new private business hadn't taken advantage of the reshaped area.

Here in Greenville we have seen new buildings go up, older stores modernized and new businesses go in empty buildings. The process is continuing, of course, but things are positive in the downtown area.

Many Await Agency Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There is no lack of interest in the prospects of going to work for state government.

Latest figures show the central personnel office (and those at various agencies) currently are handling some 125,000 job applications per year.

The turnover rate in state government remains fairly rapid at 7,000 vacancies per year: about 12 per cent. At any given time, there are about 600 job openings to be filled.

At this rate, the line of would be state employees extends 18 people deep for each job which might be available. In some fields the line is even longer—especially in teaching where increased salaries, declining pupil enrollment, and production by teacher colleges combine to produce up to 2,000 applicants for a single job in some specific areas.

For highly specialized work, however, state personnel officials often have to hurry to find a qualified applicant.

Want Jobs

Overall, however, the activity in seeking state jobs proves that such employment has become attractive, contrary to the arguments which used to be put forth by state officials that they must improve salary and fringe benefits in order to find enough people to fill the jobs.

Actually, says Harold H. Webb, state director of personnel, there are several reasons for the keen competition. The first says Webb, true to the man who took him from the ranks of career state employee and made him an agency chief, is the image and performance of Gov. James B. Hunt.

Hunt was elected by an overwhelming majority of the people on a platform of changing the state bureaucracy and bringing change to government. To do that, he promised, would mean developing a talent bank of the best people willing to serve their state. And that philosophy, Webb says, is drawing a lot of people into state government.

Secondly, general economic conditions across the state—high unemployment, inflation—are creating a situation in which a lot of people are looking for work, or seeking to upgrade their salaries, work conditions, and potential, Webb feels. While many are knocking on state governmental doors; many are also seeking entrance to private industry jobs, he feels.

BILL NOBLITT

Attractive

Third, state government jobs have become more attractive, Webb agrees. While he takes exception to the argument that state workers are actually being paid more than those in private industry, he concedes that state job security and fringe benefits are generally ahead of similar offerings in the private sector.

In hospital insurance, holidays, leave time, and retirement programs, state employees are getting an additional 32 cents for each dollar they are paid in salary, Webb noted. And despite recent outcries that the Hunt administration is replacing a lot of state workers, the figure don't bear that out.

A total of 863 jobs were defined as "exempt" under expanded provisions gained by the governor by adding to the list, and by stretching to five years the time required for tenure. Of those, only 150 have been filled with new people, the governor says—and that includes both firings and those who left voluntarily because they knew they should at the change of administrations, he added.

Webb agrees that in a labor-intensive organization like government, the bulk of spending goes for personnel and related costs, and that controlling numbers of people is the only real way to control outlay. Up to 80 per cent of the state budget is either directly or indirectly spent on employees.

And despite Webb's disclaimers, there is strong evidence that in North Carolina—as in the federal government—average salaries are now higher than those in the private sector by $2,000 to $4,000 per year.

Canal Treaty Fight

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative groups are concentrating on about 30 "key" members of the Senate and probably will spend upwards of a million dollars in an effort to block ratification of the Panama Canal treaty.

The campaign, involving mass media advertising and an effort to bury uncommitted lawmakers under an avalanche of anti-treaty mail, is being mounted as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee prepares to hold hearings on the treaty next week.

In a "dear friend" form letter signed by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, the Conservative Caucus is seeking contributions to defray what it calls "quite frankly ... the biggest financial risk" in its history. The letters carry a "United States Senate" letterhead but are printed and mailed at private expense.

With a goal of $300,000 by Sept. 30, the group hopes to have $475,000 by the time the treaty comes to a vote next year.

That may seem like a lot of money, the letter concedes, "but not if we are serious about defeating the President of the United States and almost the entire liberal political establishment in America."

Accompanying the letter is a detailed "fact sheet" on the Panama Canal, pre-addressed postcards to be returned to senators and other postcards to be sent to friends, all urging defeat of the treaty.

The American Conservative Union, meanwhile, is running its own mail campaign, with Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., signing the letter. It also contains an appeal for contributions, but ACU spokesmen say the emphasis is on the treaty issue rather than soliciting money.

The ACU already has invested $400,000 in its anti-treaty drive and plans to spend at least $50,000 more on radio

The 'Copeland Principle'

Barbara Copeland may not have endeared herself to her superiors at the Consumer Services Administration, but by a nice reverse twist she may yet lend her name to legal history. What might be termed the "Copeland Principle" ought to be written into Federal law. Ms. Copeland was involved last month in an historic decision by U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt here in Washington. These were the circumstances: Ms. Copeland, a black female, went to work for CSA in 1969. The court found that in the years since then, "she has consistently used grievances, threats of filing grievances, and the EEO process in general to harass her supervisors and to improperly further her career and enhance her office status."

Now the court had to consider still one more complaint that her superiors had denied her a promotion because of her race or as a reprisal for her prior course of conduct. Judge Pratt found no credible evidence to support her charge. On the contrary, "the evidence demonstrates conclusively that the employee intentionally conducted a vendetta against the supervisor and other members of management, harassing them by virtually every means available including the use of the EEO process to bring baseless charges of discrimination."

Because of these "intentionally vindictive and abusive actions," Judge Pratt found her complaint "baseless and frivolous." The court ruled that she had acted "vexatiously, maliciously, wantonly and in bad faith," and then came the cruncher: The court ordered Ms. Copeland to pay the costs of the litigation including reasonable attorneys' fees.

Accepting the court's view of the case, we may cheerfully cry hooray. It sounds as if justice has been done. But how much more gratifying it would be if the Copeland Principle could be applied in reverse! That is to say, whenever a court found that the government had acted maliciously, vexatiously, frivolously, and through an intentional abuse of the judicial process, make the government lawyers personally liable for damages, court costs, and the fees of defense lawyers.

This is all but impossible now. It is of course possible to sue the government for damages under the Federal Tort Claims Act, but that law

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Seeks Stem Tide

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Carter has confided this concern in the ear of evangelist Billy Graham: If I let them "drive" Bert Lance out, it will only whet their appetite for other victims within my official family.

That virtual appeal for help to Dr. Graham was delivered in a long telephone conversation initiated by the President this past week. It reveals the true nature of Jimmy Carter's battle against rising demands from the press, Republicans, and leading Democrats for the scalp of budget director Lance.

Graham, we have been told by informed political sources, was surprised by the vehemence of the President's self-defense in refusing to be stampeded into ousting Lance. The President made this case to Graham:

1. The press demanded Lance's head before the facts were known and before Lance had his day in court.

2. Getting rid of Lance would give the press a taste of power which, following its legitimate triumph in Watergate, would induce an irresistible avalanche of investigations against other Carter administration officials.

3. The focal point of this attack would probably be the "Georgia mafia" starting with Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, long a member of the Carter inner circle.

Mr. Carter's decision to confide in Billy Graham is understandable. Both are Southern Baptists and born-again Christians. Besides, other Presidents—most conspicuously Richard Nixon—have appealed to Graham for aid in political crises.

Nevertheless, there are risks in the implications of Jimmy Carter's drawing the wagons around himself and his beleaguered friend and beseeching America's most popular evangelist for help.

NON-RUNNING FORD

Evidence that Gerald Ford has no intention to run for President in 1980 came in his refusal of two choice invitations from prestigious Republican groups next month.

The former President turned down chances to talk to the Republican Governors Association at Bretton Woods, N.H., Oct. 9 and to the National Federation of Republican Women in Atlanta Oct. 21. Instead, John Connally will address the governors and Ronald Reagan will be main speaker in Atlanta. Gov. Meldrim Thompson of New Hampshire, chairman of the Republican governors, was asked by a prominent Republican politician why Ford regretted. He snapped: "He probably has a golf date."

The real reason is lack of interest in the political scene. Ford, says one party insider, "is cultivating a low profile in politics and a high profile as a senior statesman. He's not even thinking about 1980 as a candidate."

Harsh criticism of Ford is rife among Republicans who have doubts about the Panama Canal treaties. They were furious that the titular head of their party jumped to support President Carter so fast at the theatrically staged multi-summit treaty signing here.

Republican state chairmen will air their grievance about Ford in New Orleans Sept. 27, just before the National Committee meets there. The state chairmen may pass a resolution not only putting themselves on record against the treaties but sniping at Ford for rushing to Mr. Carter's defense on the em-

More exciting than a five-ring circus, the East Carolina "Pirates" make their home debut this Saturday when they face VMI. Pat Dye and his "army" have already proven to us here in eastern North Carolina that they deserve to be ranked among the top 20 teams in the nation. But, Pat's "army" will not be the only lions that roar on Saturday. George Naff and his "Marching Pirates" will also be on hand.

To the editor:

Arthur Shenfield, an economics professor from England, points out that public ownership of an industry in England doesn't really mean public ownership at all.

The public has nothing to say about the way the railroads and coal mines are run, for example. Once nationalized, these industries have become the private property of the bureaucrats who run them and the labor unions who work in them. All the public gets is the right . . . or more accurately, the obligation . . . to pick up the tab for the deficit.

It's a funny thing. . . people talk about nationalizing industries to give the public a share of the profits. Then, after they are nationalized, there seem to be nothing but deficits.

There must be a lesson in this somewhere if only we could figure it out.

A Perpetual Catchup System

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As the treadmill turns, members of the economic rank and file are asking where it all leads or whether, like a merry-go-round, we have merely painted up the machinery and introduced a few ups and downs.

We have introduced indexing into our wage-price negotiations, and Social Security benefits too, the better that workers and retirees can meet the rising cost of living. Thus when prices rise, so do incomes.

While admiring this, we also wonder why it is that inflation persists, when it is all but obvious that to some degree we are perpetuating the catchup sequence, in which higher incomes contribute to higher prices and . . .

An attempt is made to improve the lot of the worker lowest on the scale of skills by raising the minimum wage from $2.30 to $2.65 an hour, with further increases to come. It is bound to reduce the difficulties of some workers.

But for how long? Personnel executives already are saying they will have to raise the wages of more skilled workers in order to maintain the relationship. That leads to inflation, which is devastating for those on the bottom rung.

At the same time as we are considering increases in the minimum wage, we also are attempting to cut down on the jobless rate, which remains stuck in the area of 7 per cent of the civilian labor force.

It is almost unnecessary to point out that unemployment is worst among those who have the least skills, and who are thus in the minimum wage category. Does a higher minimum wage improve their chances for being hired?

Again, as we moralize over the unemployment problem we support a school system that is demonstrably deficient in preparing youngsters for the labor market, and which continues to turn out teachers who can never hope to find teaching jobs.

In the stock market we have indexing too, although of another sort. It's the current cult. Instead of trying to beat the popular averages and indexes, an institutional portfolio manager seeks only to keep pace with them. This is now considered success, and a fee is charged for it.

Does indexing explain why the stock market, at least as indicated by the popular market averages, has been going nowhere? It would seem so. In the past, at any rate, the stock market rose or fell on taking rather than avoiding risk.

No basic industry has been on a more persistent treadmill than steel, unless it is railroads. In fact, as steelmen tell it, they have had their feet planted on different treadmills going in opposite directions.

They are being forced to expend hundreds of millions of dollars on pollution control. They have been asked to compete with steel imports subsidized by foreign governments.

Simultaneously they have been pressured by the federal government to limit price increases they say are needed to modernize and make their plants more competitive. Unable to do so, they lay off workers. Stigmatized, they are less able to raise money in the stock market in order to update their plants.

The examples are endless, though admittedly not all are clearcut. Some critics of steel, for example, maintain the industry has management deficiencies. And it has never been declared by the highest authority that all problems could or should be met in ways that satisfy all parties.

But sometimes you can't blame Americans for wondering where it all leads and why we can't seem to do much about it. You can't help but lament that patchwork solutions must suffice instead of weaving new pieces of cloth.

. . . that the windmills of Washington only seem to blow brief breezes across the sweaty treadmill, but seldom produce a real cool wave.

Building Sees More Use Now

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A scant seven years ago, visitors to the Legislative Building between sessions encountered darkened halls patrolled by lonely security guards and, now and then, a gaggle of tourists. Times have changed.

"The day doesn't pass that we don't have a conference committee or a commission meeting here, and on the week-ends or on Fridays it gets pretty heavy," says Clyde Ball. It is Ball's office that makes it possible for legislators to spend time profitably in Raleigh when they aren't actually enacting laws. He is in charge of the Legislative Service Office, which carries out the wishes of the Legislative Service Commission.

The commission's job, in Ball's words, is "to set policies governing the mechanics of serving the legislature's needs, both between and during the sessions."

Ball's job is to execute those policies, which means doing "everything from providing research and information services they need to budget analysis, printing bills and building maintenance."

Ball's staff of 59 also includes building security personnel, cooks for the dining rooms and tour guides.

The tempo of activity slows considerably when the legislators go home, but there is still plenty to be done.

"We look for what we didn't do so well in the last session and plan for the next one," Ball said. "The professional staff starts work on studies assigned by the Legislative Research Commission."

Ball said his staff is still growing toward what he feels it should be. His assignment when he was hired and his office formed seven years ago was to develop a research arm for legislators, filling each need for information as it arises.

"So we grow," he said. "We will be growing a little bit each year until they say stop. It is my recommendation that eventually every standing committee should have the services of a staff person available to it."

This year's project, he said, is a staff that will specialize in drafting bills on instructions from legislators, a function now performed by the attorney general's office.

Ball is also plugging for another legislative building. The present one, built in the early 1960s, "did not anticipate a permanent staff. As soon as the session was over and the records wrapped up, everyone went home."

Ball's office is one reason this is no longer true.

exempts damages that result from an agency's "discretionary acts." Under the 1976 Buckley Amendment, applying solely to the Consumer Products Safety Commission, it is possible for an individual or a company injured by CPSC action to sue the Commission, but the authority is limited to grossly negligent exercises of power and even this authority expires on December 31.

For all practical purposes, government prosecutors are wholly immune from personal responsibility for their blunders, harassments, and frivolous proceedings. They can ruin a small businessman, drive him to bankruptcy or near bankruptcy, destroy his reputation, waste his time, and tie him in knots of litigation for ten years—and laugh about it. Agency lawyers have the limitless power and purse of the Federal government behind them. Against such massive power, the individual is often helpless.

Yet the record of recent years abounds with instances of palpable abuse of power. To judge from mail reaching me, the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission is the worst of the offenders. The EEOC apparently will impose its capricious oppressions upon any employer, anywhere, under any baseless circumstances that come along.

The EEOC is not alone. In times past, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has prosecuted an importer of dolls on grounds so transparently frivolous that two Federal judges instantly dismissed separate prosecutions. Inspectors of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration have put employers to heavy expense for nit-picking violations apparently recorded out of a desire on the inspector's part to look good.

It is nonsense to contend, as bureaucrats do contend, that a Copeland Principle would put such a chill on regulatory agencies that enforcement proceedings would halt. The law of false arrest has not prevented police from doing their duty. If an officer's discretion is supported by probable cause, he's immune from successful suit. The only effect of the Copeland Principle, applied to EEOC, would be to make the agency's lawyers think twice before prosecuting a baseless charge. What's wrong with that?

Officials Unimpressed By Washington Threat

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Medicaid officials have gotten another threat from Washington that their funds will be cut off, but they say they're not any more impressed by this threat than they were by the first one.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare contends that North Carolina and a number of other states had failed to make required annual reviews of nursing homes serving Medicaid recipients.

North Carolina stands to lose $2.6 million, but Gov. Jim Hunt's press secretary Gary Pearce said Wednesday he doesn't think it will come to that.

"Our position on the threat remains the same," he said. "We thought it was just absurd and ridiculous and that stands."

Pearce said the state's congressional delegation was cooperating in efforts to get Congress to act to avoid the cutoff. Failing that, Pearce said the state would seek a court injunction against HEW.

State Medicaid officials said there were 239 nursing care facilities last year in North Carolina with Medicaid residents. By the end of the year, all but four had been checked in accordance with the regulations.

The other four had been delayed by sickness on the inspection team and were seen within a month later.

But that apparently wasn't good enough for HEW, which threatened the fund cutoff in June. Congress granted a 90-day extension in July, but now HEW has renewed the threat.

Pearce said North Carolina officials are working for a new extension and changes in the regulations to allow more flexibility next year.

Starts on new housing are expected to reach 2 million units in 1977.

spots and a television documentary. Meanwhile, it has a number of other projects in the works and is coordinating a loosely-joined "Emergency Coalition to Save the Panama Canal," made up of about a dozen organizations with a total membership of at least 10 million, according to ACU legislative director Gary Jarmin.

The effect of the anti-treaty blitz, organizers hope, will be a deluge of mail and messages pouring into the offices of senators — in particular those who are uncommitted or, in the judgment of anti-treaty strategists, might ultimately decide to vote no.

Most important among these are Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., whose own decisions could have important influence on party colleagues.

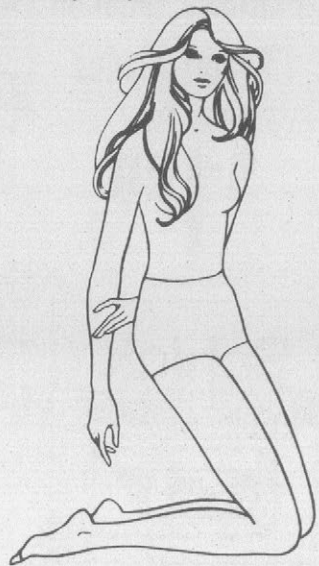

Baker has been singled out for special attention because he is up for re-election next year in a state where the canal treaty could become the major campaign issue. Already he has been confronted by large newspaper ads declaring that "Senator Baker alone can save the Panama Canal."

Says Indian Children Used As 'Guinea Pigs'

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American Indian children are being used by the U.S. government as "guinea pigs for medical research" without their parents' permission, a leader of American Indian Movement charged today.

Pat Bellanger, chairman of the movement's board of directors, said many of the children, most of them teenagers, were being used in experiments for research on eye and kidney diseases and new forms of birth control. She said the kidney experiments often caused permanent injuries that caused young Indian women to give birth to still-born babies.

She also charged that hospitalized Indians were often given "blank, ineffective pills" to test the duration of their illness.

Mrs. Bellanger is here for the first international "conference on discrimination against indigenous populations of the Americas," which ends Friday. She said in an interview that she had "government proof" that the experiments had taken place.

She referred to a letter written in November 1976 by a federal comptroller to Sen. James

G. Abourezk, D-S.D., in which the official admitted "research" involving Indian children "in three boarding schools" had been carried out with "no informed parental consent."

The Indian movement official also accused the United States, Canada and Mexico of "random child snatching." She charged that white families were being paid by U.S. authorities to act as foster parents to Indian children.

Mrs. Bellanger, 34, claimed that her 15-year-old daughter had been the victim of an adoption attempt by white authorities in St. Paul, Minn.

UP FOR AUCTION — The 1976-77 Rose High "Live Project" house shown here, at the corner of Wellcome Drive and 14th Street extended, will be auctioned on Friday, September 30. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

Live Project Gets Approval

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Approval for the purchase of a lot and for preliminary house plans for the 1977-78 Rose High School "Live Project" house were voted on by the Greenville City Board of Education at its regular session Monday night.

Gary Wooten, instructor in carpentry at Rose High, first presented a recommendation for a lot to be purchased. Located in Glenwood Estates, situated on the waterfront of Lake Glenwood, Wooten said the price tag of the 100 x 194 foot lot was $5,500.

"This price," he stated, "is the best of any suitable lot we looked at." Wooten noted that a number of possibilities had been studied before a decision was made on this as the one to recommend to the board.

Wooten added that "students in the project joined in the lot search, and that they are pleased about his particular lot."

The preliminary plans approved call for a conventional house of a Williamsburg style. "This year, we plan to let student architects work on the house plans, with a regular architect's approval prior to drawing up the final house plans."

Superintendent Glenn Cox reported that the recently completed "Live Project," a house in Tuckahoe Subdivision, will be put up for auction on Friday, September 30.

The 1976-77 "Live Project" house, brick-veneer with a single-car garage, is located in Tuckahoe at the corner of 14th Street extended and Wellcome Drive.

The house can be seen by interested persons at any time from the outside. Those who would like to make an appointment to see the house inside are to make arrangements in advance by calling Rose High, 752-3169.

Wooten said insofar as possible, appointments would be accepted, and that these would be scheduled Monday through Friday between the hours of 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. only.

Art Class Giving Aid To United Fund

The Pitt County United Fund is receiving help this year from the Commercial Art and Graphics Design class at Rose High School.

Class instructor Billy Stinson noted that the art students are designing campaign posters for the United Fund for distribution at strategic places throughout the community.

According to Stinson, the students are creating their own images and slogans and are illustrating them on large 24-inch by 40-inch poster board.

Stinson noted that the course, which was added to the Rose High School Art Department curriculum, is designed to give students experience in commercial art on the community level as well as provide them with possible commissions and small jobs from local merchants and businesses.

Nine students are involved in the United Fund poster project, he said. They are Rene Jones, Helen Lemon, Kristi Johnston, Robin Dixon, Howard Tucker, Kathryn Smith, Linda Jones, Donna McLaurin and Robert Williams.

The instructor explained that the art students have two years of art experience and are being prepared for possible careers in commercial art.

In the past, he said, various community projects have been completed such as logos and illustrations for programs.

Stinson said that any business or area merchant who is interested in having commercial art work done by the class should contact him at Rose High School.

100 Viewings Of 'Star Wars'

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Matthew Miller has sat through "Star Wars" 100 times. "I like the movie," he says.

Besides, the 19-year-old said Wednesday that he may set a world record if the Guinness Book of World Records is interested.

The film is 125 minutes long, which means Miller has total star-gazing time of 208 hours, 20 minutes.

Kenny Crockett, manager of Mall Cinema which Miller patronizes, said the theater is keeping track of his attendance and is letting Miller in free. Miller, who is unemployed, said he paid for his first 30 performances at $3 a ticket.

"I came the first day and came to all seven shows. After awhile I cut that back to five and now I'm down to only a couple at a time," said Miller, who has two Star Wars T-shirts, a couple of posters, the book and the movie sound track.

"I'm not aiming at a specific number now. At first I wanted to try for 30 to break my old record (He saw the original "Airport" 27 times,) but when I got there I thought, 'What the hell. Why not 100?'"

A Clean Safety Belt Is Safer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Keeping car safety belts clean can be an important factor in their use. Drivers and passengers alike may neglect to fasten dirty belts to avoid soiling clothes. Belts made of sturdy webbing can be scrubbed with a stiff brush dipped in detergent or soap suds to remove embedded dirt. Rinse with clean water and absorb excess moisture with a towel. Lay belts across towels to air dry completely.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are forecast Thursday from the Texas panhandle to the Dakotas and along the Great Lakes. Rain is expected in the Pacific Northwest. Most of the country will have cool weather but warm weather is expected for the Gulf coast and along the Atlantic coast to the mid-Atlantic region. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Showers and thunderstorms continued early today in the Dakotas and through Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois.

The precipitation was associated with a frontal system slowly making its way across the Plains and through the Mississippi River Valley. Showers and thunderstorms also were reported along the Atlantic coast from the Carolinas through Florida, over portions of the middle Mississippi River Valley and in western Montana and Idaho.

As the front moves slowly eastward, Oklahoma was set to get a little relief today from the high temperatures of Thursday, but no relief was seen for Texas.

Texas and Oklahoma had readings Thursday in the hundreds. Temperatures today were expected to be in the 80s and 90s.

In contrast, many sections of the northern part of the country were cool early today. Several early morning readings in the mid 30s were recorded in northern New England and the northern Rockies.

Some snow was expected in some higher elevations of northern New England and the western portions of the nation.

Suggests Deals In Peanut Hay

Due to the drought, winter feed supplies for cattle in North Carolina will short this year.

Pitt County is no exception. According to Michael E. Regans of the Agricultural Extension Agency, farmers can now help each other.

Regans said that if a farmer has peanut or any other type hay available, whether or not he bales it or if is willing for the cattlemen to come and bale it, contact Regan at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 758-1196.

He is coordinating the hay with the cattle.

Wallace Denies Wife's Charges

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace has denied his wife's charges of violence and cruelty and the claim that she is financially broke because he failed to provide adequate support.

Wallace answered his wife's divorce suit Wednesday on the same day that Family Court Judge John W. Davis II refused to disqualify himself from hearing Mrs. Wallace's complaint and the divorce suit filed earlier by the governor.

Mrs. Wallace's attorneys, who had asked Davis to step aside on grounds of bias and friendship with the chief executive, said they will petition the state Court of Civil Appeals to order the judge to recuse himself.

The governor asked for a divorce because of alleged "incompatibility of temperament" and an "irretrievable breakdown" of their six-year-old marriage.

His wife, in a countersuit filed three days later, accused him of "actual violence and cruelty" and said he had failed to provide her with enough money to meet the "normal and even basic needs of a wife." In his answer, Wallace, 58, said he has "never committed violence or any act of cruelty whatsoever" against his 38-year-old wife.

He said Mrs. Wallace "is not without funds to support herself, nor is she without funds to pay her cost and her attorney fees relative to this proceeding."

The first lady has asked for "substantial" alimony and payment of her attorneys' fees.

One of Mrs. Wallace's lawyers, John P. Kohn, said the motion seeking to disqualify the family court judge from hearing the case probably will be filed with the appellate court "sometime early next week."

Davis, who was appointed by Wallace but later elected to his judicial post, was accused by Mrs. Wallace of bias in the case.

Challenging Davis' right to hear the divorce proceedings, Mrs. Wallace's attorneys charged that a "long, close, friendly relationship" exists between the Davis family and the governor.

The judge's father, Dr. John W. Davis Jr., was one of Wallace's physicians.

But Davis said Wednesday that neither his appointment by Wallace nor his father's relationship with the governor constitutes "cause for recusal."

Davis also turned down a motion by Mrs. Wallace's attorneys to have the final divorce hearing open to the public.

The judge noted that although he was appointed to the court by Wallace, he was "subsequently elected in a contested election" and has said under oath that he is unbiased.

A one-page court order signed by Davis said the judge is unbiased and "is able to fairly and honestly try this case on its merits."

"In fact, there exists the danger of the appearance of impropriety should the judge recuse himself," the order concluded.

In another motion filed with the court Wednesday, Wallace denied his wife's allegations of "actual violence and cruelty" and failure to provide her with enough money to meet the "normal and even basic needs of a wife."

Wallace, 58, said he has "never committed violence or any act of cruelty whatsoever" against his 38-year-old wife.

Nor has he "ever threatened any such act of violence and there is no basis for any apprehension of cruelty on her part," the motion said.

He also said his wife "is not without funds to support herself, nor is she without funds to pay her cost and her attorney fees relative to this proceeding."

Wallace's motion was filed in response to Mrs. Wallace's counter divorce suit, which was submitted to the court three days after the governor filed a divorce petition.

His petition cited an "incompatibility of temperament" and an "irretrievable breakdown" of their six-year marriage as grounds for divorce. The Wallaces were married on Jan. 4, 1971. It was the second marriage for both.

Carryover Tobacco Can Be Stored For Later

Flue-cured growers throughout the flue-cured tobacco area can deliver their carryover tobacco on hand at the end of the marketing season to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation for processing and storage until the 1978 marketing season.

According to Fred G. Bond, general manager for the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation, the USDA Tobacco Loan Program was amended in 1973 to provide loans on flue-cured tobacco carried over by growers from one marketing year to another. This was done in order to avoid marketing in excess of the applicable farm quota. This will help alleviate many of the problems encountered with carryover tobacco stored on the farm such as insect damage and deterioration in quality said Bonds.

The program will operate basically in the same manner as in previous years. Growers will deliver carryover tobacco to the CO-OP at designated Receiving Points in the area at which time the tobacco will be weighed and graded into a Standard USDA Grade by an Inspector of the Grading Service. Sheets will also be exchanged at this time.

He added that a record will be prepared showing full identification of the grower, weight of each sheet, the USDA grade, and total weight of delivery. A copy of this record will be given to the grower and a copy forwarded to the State ASCS Office.

The tobacco will then be processed and stored in the same manner as regular tobacco, with the exception that all carryover tobacco will be kept separate and marked as "Carryover" tobacco.

Since carryover tobacco is not eligible for sale or loan until the next marketing season which begins on July 1, each year, no payment or settlement can be made to growers until after July 1, 1978. At that time the tobacco will be offered for sale.

Any tobacco that does not bring an acceptable price will be placed in the regular loan inventory at 1978 loan rates. Proceeds from the sales and/or loans advanced, less expenses incurred during the carryover period, will be distributed to growers after July 1, 1978.

Bond said plans for location of receiving points where growers may deliver their carryover tobacco will be determined and growers will be notified as to scheduling deliveries at such designated receiving points at the close of the marketing season in each belt.

and an unidentified man confronted him outside the studio commissary. He said Knievel hit him with a baseball bat, according to police.

Mark Erickson, an aide to Saltman, said Saltman used to be Knievel's publicity agent and wrote the book "Evel Knievel on Tour." The book told the story of the much-publicized but ill-fated Snake River Canyon stunt which Knievel failed to accomplish.

Erickson said Knievel apparently was upset with some parts of the book.

Police said Knievel knew he was being sought and it appeared he had planned to turn himself in when he was arrested by a patrol officer who spotted him on a freeway in North Hollywood.

Sheldon Saltman, 46, was treated for compound fractures of the left arm and a broken right wrist after the incident earlier Wednesday, authorities said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel, who apparently was en route to surrender to police, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon in an alleged attack on a 20th Century Fox executive, authorities said.

Knievel was released late Wednesday night after posting $1,000 bond. He was scheduled to be arraigned next Wednesday in West Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Natural Gas Showdown Due

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is ready to choose between President Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas and a rival proposal to lift them.

After days of maneuvering, those on both sides of the issue agreed to schedule a showdown vote for tonight. Advocates of deregulation were predicting victory by at least a four-vote margin. Administration allies were saying the vote is too close to call.

If the Senate votes for deregulation of new natural gas, as it did in 1975, it would be another blow to a Carter energy program that already has been decimated by Senate floor and committee action.

The House has approved the administration plan to continue price controls on gas and to raise the ceiling from $1.45 per thousand cubic feet to about $1.75. The bill also would extend the controls to the now unregulated intrastate markets in Texas, Louisiana and other gas-producing states.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee began piecing together a compromise Wednesday to allow Carter to salvage a crucial part of his energy-tax program.

The compromise crude oil tax plan would rule out the President's proposal for rebates for most Americans but would provide federal aid to energy producers and finance a wide variety of transit and energy conservation programs.

ety of transit and energy conservation programs.

The test vote on gas deregulation was set on a proposal by Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to lift immediately interstate controls on newly produced onshore gas and to phase them out over a five-year period for new offshore gas. The intrastate market would remain unregulated while interstate gas from old fields would remain under federal price controls.

The natural gas pricing issue is an old controversy, and the debate probably would have come up in Congress even if Carter hadn't included the subject in his energy program.

Deregulation legislation has been introduced in every session of Congress since 1954, when the Supreme Court required the Federal Power Commission to set wellhead prices for gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines.

Deregulation advocates say the controls have held gas prices artificially low, resulting in shortages like those that crippled parts of the industrial Northeast and Midwest last winter, while channeling most new gas into the unregulated intrastate market. Prices are much higher in such areas.

But those siding with the administration contend the controls are needed to keep gas companies from reaping windfall profits at the expense of consumers.

British See Little Hope For Selling Concorde

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP)—A House of Commons committee has driven another nail into the Concorde's coffin, reporting there's no possibility of selling the supersonic airliner at a profit.

The report issued Wednesday by the influential Public Accounts Committee said there "appears to be no practical possibility of (Concorde) production beyond the 16 aircraft being authorized" by the British and French governments.

"Concorde Doomed," said a headline in the London Evening News. The two governments announced last November they would stop production when the initial fleet was completed in mid-1978, and British cabinet ministers have indicated that decision will stand unless the needle-nosed jet can be sold at a price covering manufacturing costs. The committee said this was impossible. It was told that British Airways paid about $37.5 million for each of its five Concordes although one plane cost nearly $90 million to build, not counting the $2 billion Britain and France spent in 20 years of research and development. "Current manufacturing costs exceed the escalated sale price ... by so large an amount," the committee concluded, "that even with a substantial new order, considerable losses would result if the rundown on production were reversed." British Airways and Air France launched supersonic passenger service on the London-Bahrain and Paris-Rio de Janeiro routes in January, 1976, and four months later began trial runs from London and Paris to Washington, D.C. Despite the artificially low price they paid for the plane, the airlines lost an estimated $54 million in the first year of the service. Besides the nine Concordes in service, five more are being built and two more are authorized.

Several Members Of Nixon Party May Have Been Drugged Abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Richard Nixon's presidential party may have been drugged while traveling inside a "potentially hostile country" in the early 1970s, says the man who supervised the CIA's extensive program of drug experimentation.

Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, the CIA's former science chief, told a Senate panel Wednesday that his agency launched an investigation after some Nixon associates reported a series of bizarre and unusual symptoms, including "inappropriate tears and crying."

Gottlieb said his recollection was that the incident "... certainly did not include the President." He did say, however, that when Nixon's physician returned to the United States, he "reported some unusual feelings he and several other members of the party had had."

"Are you suggesting that the presidential party was drugged?" asked Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "I'm suggesting they wanted us to review and determine whether that might have happened," Gottlieb replied.

He said he believes the incident occurred in "approximately 1971" and, as far as memory serves, the CIA "could not unequivocally conclude that the behavior was due to some covert drug."

Kennedy is chairman of the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on health, which is looking into CIA drug experiments on witting and unwitting human subjects.

Gottlieb testified in an effort to justify the agency's experimentation with mind-altering and other drugs in the 1950s and 1960s. He said the American intelligence community felt it was essential to keep pace with foreign expertise in the use of drugs.

Testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution, Gottlieb refused to identify either the physician or the country in which the suspected drugging took place. ABC reported Wednesday night, however, that the incident occurred in May, 1972, during Nixon's trip to Moscow. The report was by special correspondent John Scall, who during 1971-1973 was a special consultant on foreign affairs to Nixon.

And The Washington Post reported in today's editions that two Nixon physicians showed signs of being under the influence of drugs after the Moscow trip. The newspaper identified the pair as Drs. W. Kenneth Riland, an osteopath, and Walter Tkach, Nixon's personal physician.

Neither Riland nor Tkach would comment Wednesday on the alleged incident.

Large Majority Of Americans Firmly Opposed To Canal Pact

By RICHARD PYLE
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Panama Canal treaty, backed strongly by President Carter but a center of controversy in the Senate, is opposed overwhelmingly by the American people, according to a nationwide Associated Press public opinion poll.

The survey found 50 per cent of adults questioned oppose the treaty, under which the United States would relinquish control of the canal to Panama by the year 2000. Twenty-nine per cent favored the pact, and 21 per cent were undecided.

While opposition cut across regional, party, educational, age and income lines, the treaty was least popular among persons over 60. Only 20 per cent of the persons in that age group backed the treaty, while 53 per cent were opposed and 27 per cent had no opinion.

One of the strongest shows of support came from persons in the 18-to-29 age group, where 35 per cent approved compared with 47 per cent against and 17 per cent undecided.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee opens hearings next week on the canal treaty, which President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos signed in Washington on Sept. 7 amid a ceremonial show of enthusiasm by hemisphere leaders.

There actually are two treaties, but they are considered indivisible. One calls for the United States to relinquish sovereignty over the Canal Zone to Panama by the year 2000. The other would always permit the United States to militarily ensure the neutrality of the canal.

The AP poll, with findings similar to those of other recent surveys, showed Carter's efforts have failed to win support for the treaty within his own party and among residents of his native South.

But with the ratification vote not scheduled until next year, Carter has several months to gain sympathy for the agreement. He has said he thinks public sentiment is turning in favor of the canal treaty, and is banking on a national "education" effort to help win the two-thirds vote needed for Senate approval.

The poll, based on telephone interviews with 1,548 adults, was conducted Monday for The AP by Chilton Research Services of Radnor, Pa.

Democrats opposed the treaty by 44 per cent to 34 per cent, but Republicans polled were against it by 61 to 26 per cent, and independents by 54 to 25.

Regionally, support was strongest in the East, where 34 per cent favored ratification.

Center Offers Practical Help To Battered Wives

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — When your romantic views of love and marriage have been shattered by your husband's fists, there aren't many places to go for the financial, psychological and practical support you need to break up your home.

The Women's Self Help Center here is trying to fill that need. It is much larger than any of the founders realized when they began the service last year, mainly as a clearinghouse for information on women's rights.

The administrative chores they thought the center would handle soon were pushed aside. They were too busy finding food, shelter, clothing and help for victims of physical and sexual abuse who flocked to the center day and night.

"We found a growing awareness that nothing was being done for battered women," said Roslyn Sherman, one of the center's three founders. "We mentioned it on the news one day as one of the problems that we deal with, and the next day we got a flood of calls."

Sandy Baker, another founder, pointed out the paradox that lies at the heart of the issue:

"If a man assaults a woman on the street, it's a criminal matter. If her husband beats her in her own home, it's a civil matter and very hard to prosecute."

An abused woman may leave her husband under such circumstances. But such a drastic change isn't easy when your self-esteem is low, and your prospects are few.

"Everyone says, 'If she wants to leave, she can leave; what's the big deal?'" Ms. Sherman said. "There's no understanding. Often she's told she must be doing something wrong in the marriage or her husband wouldn't be responding this way."

The sudden break is much harder when a woman must reshape her whole life and rethink the romantic notions she grew up with.

"The sanctity of love and marriage and the family is seen as so strong that it's going to take a long time to break through that attitude and see wife-beating as a crime," Ms. Sherman said.

"Rape is a one-time type of crime, but marriage is supposed to be an intimate, loving relationship. It's hard to deal with or talk about when all this violence intrudes on it."

A snickering attitude also prevails. It goes along with questions like, "Are you still beating your wife?"

"People still have to laugh a few times before they can talk about it seriously," Ms. Sherman said.

The center recently moved from a suburban office suite to a nine-room, three-story home in the city's West End, centrally located for emergency services and its working-class clientele.

The center relies heavily on donations for support. Five staff members were hired recently with a public grant. The bare light bulbs and mismatched and makeshift furnishings testify that money primarily goes directly to help the women who need it.

The staff is badly needed, sometimes just to provide a balance to well-meaning friends, families and counselors who think the best thing a battered wife can do is kiss and make up with her husband, although he may be bent on revenge or suddenly penitent.

"A man will get out on bail, come back to his wife and say, 'You think you had it bad before, wait until you see what you're gonna get now,'" Ms. Sherman said. "Divorce isn't the whole answer in this case, and neither is a restraining order, because it can't be enforced until he does something."

"So often after a woman leaves, her husband will call, send her flowers, the whole bit. He'll say he's sorry, he's changed. Often her own family will tell her to go back, that her children shouldn't have to come from a broken home. What could be more broken than the violence they've already had?"

The center supports battered women in whatever choices they make. But counselors admit they may think they've failed if a woman chooses reconciliation over divorce because statistics show beatings are likely to begin again.

"These women have been dependent all their lives, and they could easily transfer that dependence to us if we let them," Ms. Sherman said. "We let them know we give them all the support we can if they decide to go on their own."

"But it's ultimately their decision, because it's ultimately their lives."

$104,838 To Student-Use

ECU News Bureau

The Center for Student Opportunities of the East Carolina University School of Medicine has received a $104,838 grant from the U. S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to support recruitment and retention of disadvantaged and minority students until graduation in the Schools of Medicine, Nursing and Allied Health.

The grant is renewable for the same amount each year over a three-year period for a total of $342,514, according to Dr. Zubie W. Metcalf, Jr., Center director.

For retention, the Center is sponsoring diagnostic testing for 107 pre-health professional students to determine their strengths and weaknesses in reading, writing and learning skills, Dr. Metcalf said. The Educational Development and Evaluation Center of the School of Medicine is conducting the testing of these students.

A top priority of the Center's retention program is an academic monitoring system, designed to give early warning and assistance to any students having academic problems.

SALT Talks To Start Again

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace it.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department.

The initial SALT agreement, signed five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers.

The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months, and under one plan the two sides would adhere to the current agreement beyond its Oct. 3 expiration date.

The talks scheduled for today originally were set for Sept. 7-9 in Vienna but were postponed, ostensibly to allow Vance to attend the Panama Canal treaty signing and to permit Washington and Moscow more time for preparations.

Administration officials have insisted all along that the principal goal is to reach an arms agreement equitable to both sides without taking into account arbitrary deadlines.

Thus, although no eleventh hour breakthrough is anticipated, officials said the two sides will exchange ideas on ways to break the deadlock.

The key hangups have involved Soviet attempts to limit the U.S. cruise missile, similar to an unmanned jet plane with a nuclear warhead, and American efforts to restrict long-range use of the Soviet Backfire Bomber.

For the administration, the most worrisome aspect about an informal agreement to extend the SALT I agreement seems to be that it is bound to run into demands from Congress for a say in the process.

The administration hopes to sidestep a congressional role in order to avoid a potentially divisive public debate on U.S. arms policy while negotiations are going on for future arms limitation.

Officials also say they are hopeful of keeping congressional involvement to a minimum to maintain maximum flexibility in negotiations with the Soviets.

But the arms control law requires Congress to approve "any action" that places limits on U.S. armaments. The issue before the administration is a question of whether an extension of already agreed limits represents "an action" subject to congressional review.

Lance Still A Hero To Folks Back Home In Calhoun, Georgia

By MARK O'BRIEN
Associated Press Writer
CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — At 5 p.m. Wednesday the sign on the road to Bert Lance's home town said, "Support Bert. Call the White House."

An hour later, after President Carter had announced the budget director's resignation, the sign said, "Welcome Home, Bert Lance."

Routed from his top federal job, the former $90-a-week bank teller who became a millionaire and top adviser to the President was still a hero to the local folks.

This northeast Georgia town saw its most famous son resign a week to the day after 1,500 friends and neighbors held an emotional rally to cheer and pray and weep for him as he prepared to go before a Senate committee questioning his fiscal integrity.

But they were sad, quiet and bitter Wednesday as they waited and watched Carter's somber announcement of Lance's resignation from the Office of Management and Budget.

"He's a good ol' boy," said Luther Begley, clerk of the county court and a solid Lance supporter. "I really enjoyed it when they got the Republicans during Watergate, but I don't like this at all."

resignation as director of OMB."

Jack Mullins stood behind the counter of his pharmacy and swore softly. He claimed Washington liberals attacked Lance because they opposed his plan to cut the federal bureaucracy.

"He's the only fiscal conservative up there," said Mullins, speculating that Northern antipathy toward Southerners fueled much controversy against Lance.

"I feel real, real bad," said the Rev. Bob Maddox, a Baptist minister. "Bert has spoken in all the churches as a lay speaker. If he met you, he never forgot your name. If your name was in the paper, you always got a note from him. Bert was a real personable guy."

"It's a horrible mistake," said Harbin King, probate judge of Gordon County and one of a handful of local civic leaders who gathered in front of a television set in the Chamber of Commerce office to watch Carter's news conference.

"At one time, the inner circle wanted to keep this a small rural community," King said. "But when Bert got in charge, he said, 'We want industry.' Bert Lance has built this community."

Lance is credited with luring business by changing the lending policies of the Calhoun First National Bank and building the bank's assets from $6 million in 1958 to $56 million by 1974.

"He did it with liberal lending policies that never cost the bank a cent," King said of the folks, enthusiastic banker who seemed to be a friend of just about everyone in this town of 6,000.

The Greenville Tobacco Market averaged $125.97 per hundred pounds Wednesday as warehouses here sold 705,572 pounds for $888,825.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor for the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, reported that the top practical price paid yesterday was $1.58 per pound with "good, choice leaf" selling for $1.50 to $1.65 per pound.

Bryan noted that Stabilization receipts increased to 9.19 per cent of total sales with offerings consisting of leaf, cutters, lugs, primings and non descript. He said that the offerings reflected an increase in the volume of non descript tobacco available for sale. To date, the market has sold 29,053,131 pounds for $34,311,717, an average of $118.10 per hundred pounds.

Bloodshed In Soweto Again

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A black youth was killed and six others were wounded when police opened fire at two churches in the black township of Soweto after memorial services for black leader Steve Biko, the Rand Daily Mail newspaper reported today.

Brig. Jan Visser, the Soweto police chief, said experts were working to determine whether the youth was killed Wednesday by police bullets. He said the body was found near a wall pitted by bullets from a machine pistol, but no such weapons had been issued to riot police Wednesday.

Two girls were seriously injured by bullets when police opened fire on mourners at St. Matthews Anglican church. Four others were struck by birdshot when police fired on mourners at the Sefikong church in the meadowlands area of Soweto, eight miles southwest of Johannesburg.

The police said they opened fire because the blacks were stoning them. Biko, the 30-year-old founder of the black consciousness movement in South Africa, died in police custody Sept. 12. The government said he had been on a hunger strike but has not announced the cause of death.

yet, saying the post-mortem has not been completed. The black population suspects he was beaten to death. Biko is to be buried Monday in the black township of Ginsberg, outside King William's Town, on the south coast. More than 200,000 blacks are expected there Sunday for a memorial service for him.

Plans have been made to offer Beginning Band classes in the Greenville Elementary Schools this fall. Instruction in all wind and percussion instruments will be available to interested fifth and sixth grade students. These lessons are provided by the Greenville City Schools at no charge to students.

Each young musician will provide his own instrument through rental or purchase. Parents wishing to enroll their son or daughter in these classes are invited to attend an enrollment meeting on Monday, Sept. 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Rose High School Bandroom.

More information on the band program and instrument rental will be presented at that time. Anyone having further inquiries should contact Mrs. Dottie Jo Knight, Elementary Instructor, at his or her child's school.

Placekicker Yousef Barakat

Rampant Kicker Survived Civil War In Lebanon

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Imagine yourself in a room with two of your friends. Life around you is hell; there is a Civil War in full swing.

Suddenly, a hand grenade flashes through the window. When the explosion has finished its work, your friends are dead, and you, miraculously, have escaped with your life.

It sounds a long way from the peaceful plains of North Carolina. But for one Rose High School student, it is very, very close.

Yousef Barakat, a junior placekicker on the Rose High School football team, lived through such a moment.

A year ago, he was caught up in the Civil War in Lebanon. A Moslem, he was drawing near to his 16th birthday, the time when Lebanese are drafted into the army. He and his family did not want him to fight against his friends.

Fortunately, Yousef's uncle, Hisham Barakat is a member of the East Carolina University medical school faculty. The Barakats turned to him for aid.

After about two weeks, Yousef got the word to head for the United States. But even then, it wasn't easy.

"I couldn't get out of the airport in Beirut, so we had to travel by car to Jordan," he said. From there, he was able to catch a flight that led, eventually, to the United States.

That was last November. Since then, Yousef, pronounced U-sef, has not seen his parents, who remained behind in Beirut. They have survived the Civil War, however, but he has no immediate plans to return home.

"I still worry about them, especially when I see there is fighting in the country again. Right now, at least, the fighting is not around Beirut," he said.

Yousef likes his new home. "Things have been going fine for me," he said. "The people have been friendly and very open to me. At first, I was not very open to them, but I think being on the football team has helped me to make more friends."

While Yousef played soccer in Lebanon, he's made the transition to a placekicker for Rose this fall. "I'm beginning to get used to the difference in kicking a soccer ball and a football," he said. "It's getting easier and easier. The hardest thing is concentration, and keeping my head down. Earlier in the year, it was a real problem to me, but I'm improving on that now."

His perfect five-for-five record on extra points attests for that.

He hasn't tried a field goal yet, but looks forward to it. "I'm a little disappointed that I haven't had the chance yet. Maybe this week..."

While he hopes now to stay in this country until he completes his high school and college education, Barakat feels that school is easier in the United States than it is in Lebanon. "You have to study a lot harder and do a lot more memorizing in Lebanon," he said. Yousef eventually would like to get a degree in engineering.

As far as returning to Lebanon, he hopes to make a visit back to his parents this summer, but for now he considers Greenville his home.

"Everyone is kind and nice to me," he said. "They've really made me feel like I was at home and among friends."

Yousef will take opposing football players to hand grenades any day.

Rose Faces Toughest Test

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants, riding a two-game winning streak, go up against their toughest test since their home opener when they return to Ficklen Stadium Friday night.

The Rampants, who have yet to win at home, will be facing Jacksonville, ranked second in the state by the Greensboro Daily News. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen.

Rose lost its home opener to Goldsboro, 20-9, but has since come back to post a 9-6 win over New Bern and a 21-7 defeat over Kinston. Both of the victories were on the road.

Goldsboro, like Jacksonville, is unbeaten through three games, and is ranked tops in the east by the Raleigh News & Observer.

Thus, the Rampants could put a big feather in their hats by stopping the streak of the Cardinals, as well as gaining some momentum as the Division I wars draw closer.

"It's amazing what a couple of wins can do for the morale of both the players and the fans," Rose coach Dave Bumgarner said. "People like a winner. But the fans have got to realize that everyone is going to lose sometime, and that a pat on the back after a defeat is just as helpful as a pat on the back after a win."

Bumgarner added that he was very pleased with the play of the Rampants against Kinston last week. "It's probably the best we've played since we beat Richmond County in the state semifinals two years ago. The kids went at it well. They played hard."

Bumgarner added that the Rampants will have to hit just as hard this Friday night if they expect to come away with a win.

The Rampants used their hard-running fullback, Mac Washington, to the fullest in the last two games. So far, in three games this year, he's picked up 304 yards. He ground out 198 in 26 carries last week, one of them an 84-yard touchdown romp.

"We'll keep on using him as much as possible," the coach said. "The fullback is the key in the wishbone offense. People have to honor that. Then, if they gang-up to stop him, we can turn the outside people loose. For instance, a couple of times last week, Joey (Mattheis, Rose quarterback) was able to fake and tuck the ball for good yardage. He's (Mattheis) providing a lot of good leadership for us, and doing a fine job moving the team."

Bumgarner was also pleased with the way the offensive line fired off the ball. "The defense played well too. The only breakdown we had was during that first series Kinston had the ball (and scored). Aside from that, they didn't do much against us."

The coach also felt that the passing showed continued improvement, although he felt Rose should have gotten off a few more passes.

Jacksonville will bring into Ficklen a strong, winning team. The Cardinals downed White Oak, 13-8, in their opener, then beat Jones Senior, 28-0. They followed that up with a 22-6 win over New Hanover last week.

"They've got a lot of blue chip players," Bumgarner said. "They have good passing, and they play a strong defense. This will be a real good challenge for us. It's not a critical game, by any means, but it will tell us a

Jack Needs Win To Salvage Year

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

MASON, Ohio (AP) — It's a now-or-never predicament that often brings out the best in Jack Nicklaus.

"If I want to be the leading money winner, I've got to win," said Nicklaus, grimly determined to salvage something from what he considers an off-year as the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open got underway today.

Making his last tour appearance of the year, Nicklaus needs a victory to overtake Tom Watson as the pro tour's leading money winner.

It would salvage what Nicklaus calls "a disappointing year." The long-reigning king of golf has gone two years without winning a major championship.

"Anytime I don't win a major championship I consider it an off-year," he said. "It was a disappointing year from the standpoint that when I had the opportunity to win, I didn't. In three of the major tournaments, I was tied for the lead with two holes to play."

Nicklaus, $16,000 shy of his first $300,000 season in four years, trails Watson by $21,000 in pro tour winnings. Watson, who is not entered, will have a couple of opportunities left to finish No. 1 in earnings.

Nicklaus joins 16 others tour winners of 1977 to give the young tournament its best field ever. First prize of $30,000 would vault Nicklaus past Watson and give him the money title for the sixth time in seven years. He has reached the $300,000 total only twice in his career.

Winless since the Muirfield tournament in late May, Nicklaus said a twisted ankle in mid-June may have contributed to his troubles.

"I favored that ankle for a couple months and started shooting badly. I didn't realize it until recently," said golf's all-time money winner. Nicklaus has won more than $3 million in his 16-year career.

He was matched with South Africa's Bobby Cole and Tom Kite in today's opening round on the par-70, 6,837-yard Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course.

Nicklaus and last year's winner Ben Crenshaw are considered co-favorites among a field which includes 10 of the top 20 money winners of 1977.

Van Pelt Home Burns

CORUNNA, Mich. (AP) — A blaze at the off-season home of New York Giants' star Brad Van Pelt is believed to be the work of an arsonist, authorities say.

Van Pelt's home was heavily damaged as three house fires broke out in 2½ hours Wednesday afternoon, firemen reported. The state fire marshal's office was asked to investigate after local officials said they suspected all three fires may have been set. All three homes were in the same area outside Corunna in Shiawassee County. Firemen were able to save about two-thirds of the main portion of Van Pelt's home, but his insurance agent estimates damages at $35,000.

Van Pelt, a former Michigan State University star, plays linebacker for the National Football League team. He and his wife are spending the football season in New York and were not at their home.

KC Clinches Tie In American West

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

"I'm going fishing and hunting," Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said after his Royals clinched at least a tie for the American League West title.

The Royals exploded for six runs in the seventh inning Wednesday night to crush the Minnesota Twins 10-5 and assure themselves of at least a share of the division crown. And Kansas City did it with a remarkable streak of 31 victories in 35 games.

AL Roundup

"I would say that's about the best you could do," Herzog said. "You can't expect to do it too often."

Another Kansas City victory or a loss by the Texas Rangers would give the Royals their second straight AL West crown.

While the Royals were reducing their "magic number" to one, the AL East race was getting tighter. The Boston Red Sox edged the Yankees 3-2 and the Baltimore Orioles blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 4-0. That moved Baltimore two games behind the Yankees while the Red Sox are just 2½ games back with 11 days left in the regular season.

Does Herzog have a preference on which East Division club he would like to play?

"No, I'll just get someone mad at me if I say something," the Kansas City manager said.

In other AL games Wednesday, Oakland outlasted Chicago 8-6, Seattle bombarded Milwaukee 11-4 and Texas rolled over California 9-1.

Darrell Porter's 16th home run of the season touched off Kansas City's six-run seventh-inning explosion that buried the Twins.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 0

"I know one thing for certain," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "If we win our last 10 games, the Yanks have got to win nine out of 10. That's a large order, so there's still something going on."

The Orioles closed the gap on the Yankees when Lee May's two-run homer backed Ross Grimsley's four-hit pitching as Baltimore blanked Toronto.

Red Sox 3, Yankees 2

"We're still breathing," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer after his Red Sox edged New York. "This is what we wanted three days ago and now we'll take our chances."

The Red Sox completed a two-game series sweep of the Yankees as George Scott's 33rd homer with two out in the sixth inning snapped a 2-2 tie. Lou Piniella homered for New York.

"We're 2½ games out in the standings, but only two behind the Yankees in the loss column," Zimmer said. "We got 11 games to go and I'm hoping to win every one of them."

Rangers 9, Angels 1

Dock Ellis's four-hitter was backed by a home run barrage by Toby Harrah, Jim Sundberg, Willie Horton and Dave May as Texas crushed California.

A's 8, White Sox 6

A two-run homer by Manny Sanguillen snapped a 6-6 deadlock and lifted Oakland over Chicago. The loss eliminated the White Sox from the AL West pennant race.

Mariners 11, Brewers 4

Seattle's Ray Fosse had four hits and drove in four runs, pacing the Mariners to an 11-4 victory over the Brewers.

State's Evans Slips By Dunn

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — N.C. State quarterback Johnny Evans has slipped ahead of Duke's Mike Dunn for the lead in total offense in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Evans contributed 145 yards to last week's 38-0 embarrassment of Syracuse to bring his total to 185.7 yards per game. Evans was third in total offense at the end of last season.

Dunn, meanwhile, has 177.5 yards per game after two outings, one less than Evans. Dunn was the leader last season, and Evans' spurt ahead is the first time since three weeks before the end of the 1976 season that Dunn has not been out front.

Dunn was hurt by Michigan's defense last week, which held him to 100 yards as it claimed a 21-9 victory over the Blue Devils.

Wake Forest running back James McDougald is the leading ACC rusher with 132.5 yards per game. That makes him fifth in total offense.

State's Ted Brown, who ran 95 yards in one carry against Syracuse, is second in rushing with 96.7 yards.

Dunn is averaging 13 completions per game to lead in passing. Maryland's Larry Dick is second with 11.5. Dick's percentage is better, though, at .742 to Dunn's .684.

The leading receiver in the league is Maryland's Vince Kinney with 13 to 11 for Duke's Tom Hall, his leading challenger.

Ted Brown is top ACC scorer with 30 points.

In team statistics, State and North Carolina dominate. State has the top season marks in total offense, 457.7 yards per game, and leads in ground yardage with 272, and scoring, with 25 points per game.

North Carolina is leading on defense with the best figures in total yards allowed, yardage allowed on the ground, and points given up.

Favored Maryland, which finished last season ahead in seven of the eight team statistical categories, is the leader this year in only one so far, pass offense.

Koosman Gets 20 --Losses, That Is

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Twenty is the magic number for a pitcher but last year's magic has turned into this year's evil spell for Jerry Koosman.

A year ago, Koosman was runner-up to San Diego's Randy Jones for the 1976 National League Cy Young Award with a 21-10 record. But Wednesday night, he lost for the 20th time against only eight victories as the New York Mets were blanked by the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0, Bruce Kison and Rich Gossage combining on a five-hitter.

"I don't believe I'm a 20-game loser. If I did I would retire," said the 34-year-old left-hander. "I will win 20 games next year. I promise you."

The last time a pitcher won 20 games in a season and then turned around and lost 20 the following year in the National League was in 1973 when Philadelphia's Steve Carlton was 13-20 after winning the Cy Young in 1972 with a 27-10 record.

Koosman matched shutout innings with Kison until the sixth when Frank Taveras singled, stole second and third and scored on a single by Fernando Gonzalez. Omar Moreno scored all the way from first on a single by Kison in the seventh and Bill Robinson doubled a run home in the eighth and then scored on a single by Ken Macha.

NL Roundup

Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs downed the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, the San Francisco Giants nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4, the Cincinnati Reds edged the San Diego Padres 3-2, the Atlanta Braves downed the Houston Astros 5-3 and the St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Montreal 8-2 in the nightcap of a two-night double-header after the Expos won the opener 4-2.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hitter as the Cubs slowed the Phillies' pennant push. The Phils' lead in the NL East was sliced to seven games over the Pirates and their magic number remained at four.

Giants 5, Dodgers 4

Rookie Skip James' two-run single capped a three-run seventh-inning rally and Gary LaVelle notched a club record 20th save as the Giants snapped the Dodgers' 14-game winning streak at San Francisco's Candlestick Park where the NL West Division champions finished with an 8-1 record.

Reds 3, Padres 2

Joe Morgan tripled home the tying run and scored on Johnny Bench's two-out single in the eighth inning off San Diego relief ace Rolie Fingers, who failed to protect the lead for Randy Jones.

Braves 5, Astros 3

Rowland Office's sixth-inning sacrifice fly broke a tie and Jeff Burroughs drove in an insurance run with a double while Phil Niekro went the distance for the 20th time to pick up his 16th victory.

Expos 4-2, Cardinals 2-8

Lou Brock and Ted Simmons hit two-run homers in the nightcap for St. Louis. The Expos took the opener on run-scoring doubles by Dave Cash and Warren Cromartie.

Robersonville

Hosts Tourney

ROBERSONVILLE — Robersonville Country Club will hold its annual Tobacco Invitational Tournament this Saturday and Sunday.

A field of some 110 golfers is expected to take part in the two-day event, which was originally scheduled for Sept. 9 and 10 but postponed until this weekend due to the weather.

Don McGlohon
INSURANCE

Hines Agency, Inc.

NEXT SATURDAY'S East Carolina-South Carolina college football game probably has a good chance of being televised if both teams win their contests this Saturday.

Should both teams win this weekend, they will each have 4-0 records going into the contest. There are now only three other major colleges in the nation who stand 3-0. Besides ECU and South Carolina, they are Central Michigan, Tennessee State and future Pirate opponent Southwestern Louisiana.

This Saturday sees the Pirates in their home opener against VMI, while South Carolina hosts its fourth straight home game against Georgia. Both ECU and USC are favored. South Carolina already has victories over Appalachian State, Georgia Tech and Miami of Ohio. ECU has defeated N. C. State, Duke and Toledo.

Victories by the two teams this week should put them high on ABC-TV's list of possibilities for next weekend's college football telecasts. Oct. 1 has already been set aside as a day of regional games.

The ECU-USC game will be competing against some other key southern match-ups, however. Most notable of the other games in the South that day are Georgia at Alabama, and Mississippi at Auburn.

The ECU-USC game is currently scheduled as a night game and is also the Gamecocks' homecoming. If chosen for broadcast, the schools would have to agree to move the game to the afternoon. If telecast, it would be the third TV game in four years for the Pirates.

Wild Card In Baseball?

The Cincinnati Reds, perennial major league baseball power, are not going to the playoffs this year. They were ousted the other day by the Los Angeles Dodgers, who clinched the National League western division title.

Many people are not disappointed at all by the fact that the Big Red Machine won't make it to the World Series this year, but few will argue the team has brought excitement to the game. Now, the season is over for Cincinnati. The team has nothing to play for and, with a team that is used to winning, that can be disastrous.

A few years ago, the National Football League initiated a playoff system which gives "lame duck" teams another chance. This is the "wild card" system which takes the best second place teams in the leagues and gives them a spot in the playoffs.

Baseball is reportedly considering a similar system and it would probably be a good thing. The wild card spot keeps teams fighting right down to the last game and creates added excitement in the final weeks of the season even after the division titles are wrapped up.

Carew Still Battling

Minnesota's Rod Carew is still pursuing that magic .400 mark, but the odds are mounting against him with every at-bat.

As of yesterday, Carew was averaging .385 and, with just 10 games remaining on the schedule he will have to produce some phenomenal hitting for the rest of the year to make it to .400.

Figuring four at-bats for Carew in each of the 10 remaining Twins' contests (including last night's game at Kansas City), Carew will have to go 25 of 40 (.625) for the remainder of the season to go over .400. That will give him a season average of .401.

But, even if he doesn't make it he still will have come up with a major accomplishment if he just stays over .380. The last major league player to bat over .380 in a season was Boston's Ted Williams in 1957. In that year, Williams batted .388.

Before that, Williams' .406 season in 1941 was the last time a player went over .380.

In addition to leading the league in average, Carew also leads in runs with 119, hits with 225 and triples with 16. He is tied for third in doubles with 36.

Two Conference Games Highlight Week In ACC

By The Associated Press
Two conference matches highlight Atlantic Coast Conference football activity this weekend as Duke and Virginia battle to overcome 0-2 records and Wake Forest faces North Carolina State in what may be a shootout between tailbacks. Maryland, which faces Penn State on Saturday, and N.C. State currently share the ACC lead with 1-0 records each. N.C. State Coach Bo Rein feels the Wolfpack has as fair a shot at the ACC title as any other team, despite Maryland's dominance in recent seasons.

"I think there are six teams in this league now that could win the ACC championship," Rein said. North Carolina, which goes against scoreless Northwestern, will be the only team without a conference outing after this weekend.

Here's a capsule of weekend action:

Duke at Virginia
1:30 p.m. Scott Stadium
Charlottesville
Both clubs are looking for their first victory, and the Cavaliers will be scrapping for their first touchdown. The Blue Devils came away proud from a 21-9 loss to No. 1 Michigan last week but still hungry for a triumph. They will depend strongly on quarterback Mike Dunn, who is second in the ACC in total offense, and Tom Hall, who is second in receiving with 11 catches. The Cavaliers, clobbered 68-0 by Texas last week, will stay with freshman quarterbacks Bryan Shumock and Ted Manly.

Wake Forest at N.C. State
7:30 p.m. Carter Stadium
Raleigh
The Wolfpack offense is averaging better than 457 yards in three games while the Deacons have demonstrated a tough defense. The game could boil down to a match between exciting runningbacks — Ted Brown of State and James McDougald of Wake Forest. Brown picked up 140 yards in a win over Syracuse last week and McDougald logged 136 in a losing effort against Vanderbilt. State boasts the ACC's leading offensive player — quarterback Johnny Evans.

Clemson at Georgia Tech
1:30 p.m. Grant Field
Atlanta
Clemson, after a stubborn loss to Maryland, upset Georgia 7-6 last week and guns for the Yellow Jackets Saturday. Tailback Warren Ratchford is the top rusher with 98 yards and Jerry Butler the leading receiver with seven catches for 90 yards. Tech, which lost to South Carolina in its opener and then beat Miami 10-6, operate out of a wishbone featuring the running of quarterback Gary Lanier and halfbacks Eddie Lee Ivory and Bucky Shamburger.

Maryland at Penn State
1:50 p.m. Beaver Stadium
University Park, Pa.
In a regionally televised game, the Terrapins tangle with No.5-ranked Penn State in the wake of a loss to West Virginia that ended a 15-game regular season winning streak for Maryland. Penn State is 2-0. The game matches two of the most successful coaches in college football. Penn State's Joe Paterno has a record of 103-23-1, while Jerry Claiborne has a 103-56-4 mark at Maryland. The Terps expect to have starting quarterback Mark Mangas back in the lineup this week.

UNC at Northwestern
1:30 p.m. Dyches Stadium
Evanston, Ill.
The Tar Heels kicked up the offense last week for a 31-0 shutout of Richmond and roll on toward winless Northwestern Saturday. The Wildcats lost two quarterbacks in an opening season loss to Arizona State. Freshman Steve Breitbeil is listed as the starter against Carolina. Both starter Matt Kucpec and P.J. Gay saw extensive action at quarterback for the Heels last week and may again this week.

Damage Suit Filed

New York Met Lenny Randle takes batting practice at New York's Shea Stadium Wednesday evening prior to meeting the Pittsburgh Pirates. Former Texas Rangers manager Frank Lucchesi filed a $200,000 civil damage suit in Orlando, Fla. Circuit Court Wednesday against Randle. The action stems from a spring training incident. The suit charges Randle punched Lucchesi during a difference of opinion. (AP Laserphoto)

Blue Jays Get Yank Club

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Syracuse Chiefs, the International League farm club of the New York Yankees for the past 11 years, will become a farm club of the expansion Toronto Blue Jays next season.

General manager Tex Simons said the Chiefs' board of directors voted unanimously Wednesday to terminate a contract with the Yankees and sign on with the Blue Jays.

Simons said the American League Blue Jays and the Chiefs had signed a two-year "player development" contract. He would not disclose details of the agreement, saying only "it will help."

Over the past year, Chiefs' officials had expressed dissatisfaction with their relationship with the Yankees and what they called the major league team's "negative attitude" toward them.

Players and team officials complained that the Yankees preferred to rely on established major league players to fill team openings, rather than developing and bringing up Chiefs' players.

Syracuse finished fifth this year in the standings of the eight-team International League.

DOESN'T LIKE UMPS
ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The manager of the California Angels, Norm Sherry, has some strong opinions on the American League umpires.

"The bad ones far outnumber the good ones," Sherry said. "Most are inconsistent, to begin with. That makes it rough on both the pitchers and the batters. The strike zone actually seems to change with every pitch that's made."

Rose Beaten

KINSTON — Kinston handed Rose High School its second girls' tennis defeat of the year, taking a 6-3 victory over the Ramettes yesterday afternoon.

Rose's Margaret McGlohan won the first match for Rose, but Kinston took the remainder of the singles and one of three doubles matches. Rose's number two player, Karen Jeffreys was defeated 6-0, 6-1 by Becky Nix, only her second loss in three years on the Ramette squad.

Rose is now 2-2 and will host Kinston in a rematch next Wednesday.

Summary:
Margaret McGlohan (R) d. Jena Burroughs, 6-2, 6-1.
Becky Nix (K) d. Karen Jeffreys, 6-0, 6-1.

Green Bay Packers Cut John Brockington

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer
GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — John Brockington insisted he holds no grudges, but he couldn't disguise the hurt.

"Being waived like I was — that's kind of heavy, man. I thought I would be traded, but not waived," said Brockington, first player ever to rush for 1,000 yards in each of his first three National Football League seasons. He was unceremoniously cut by the Green Bay Packers Wednesday.

"No, I'm not bitter," he said. "But, yeah, my pride is hurt. But what can I do about it? I can kick down the refrigerator or kick down the door, but then I've got to pay for the refrigerator and get the door fixed, and I've got a sore toe. I've still got to exist, and I think I can still play — in the right situation."

Brockington's situation had deteriorated with the Packers over the last three seasons, and he admitted the biggest factor probably was his contract. He is in the option season of a three year, no-cut pact worth $150,000 to $250,000 a year.

Having failed to find a taker in the trade market for a high priced fullback whose production had slipped by almost two-thirds the past three years, the Packers placed Brockington on waivers Tuesday. He cleared waivers, meaning no other NFL club had claimed him.

Catholic Traditionalists Resist Vatican Changes

By PATRICIA KOZA
COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — They filed slowly into the welding company building that served as their church, some wearing rosary beads around their necks, others carrying old prayer books.

All of the women wore dresses several inches below their knees and their hair was hidden by scarves or kerchiefs.

They worshipped for more than two hours before a plain varnished wood altar, kneeling on concrete floors. Many brought their own folding chairs.

They are members of a religious group that has spurned the established Roman Catholic Church and has reverted to the way services were conducted for thousands of years — until major changes, decreed by Rome, came in 1966.

The group, which calls itself the Tridentine Latin Rite Catholic Church, is one of many throughout the world who believe the church took the wrong turn in prohibiting the use of Latin in its services and making other wide-ranging reforms following Vatican II.

These traditionalists, who shun the established church and its Pope, gather in motels and living rooms throughout the country where traveling priests celebrate the Mass that was used through the centuries after Christ.

Many of them follow outspoken French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, who also challenges the post-Vatican II reforms but has no connection with the 600-member community here.

The Coeur d'Alene community is more organized than most. Under their bishop, Francis K. Schuckardt, they have developed a private grade and high school, a convent and a seminary for new priests.

Brothers and priests from the community also criss-cross the country several times a year to bring their teachings to others. Schuckardt, 38, says they have established chapels in Omaha, San Diego, Los Angeles, Colorado Springs and Phoenix, and have strong groups in New York City and Detroit.

Schuckardt, who is not listed as a priest or bishop in records of the established church, had worked in the church for many years as a layman in Seattle. He also studied for the priesthood but had to leave the seminary before ordination because of illness.

For a short time, he said, he tried to live with the changes, but then he was forced into a decision.

"Either I had to keep compromising my conscience and be obedient to the Vatican II church or I had to break with the Vatican II church, follow my conscience and remain true to all the traditional Catholic teachings and liturgy that had been taught all through the centuries up to Vatican II."

Schuckardt and a small band of men and women who felt the same way moved to Coeur d'Alene to do apostolic work around 1967. Then, he said, others "who wanted to retain their traditional Catholic faith" began coming from around the country.

He began to look for a priest who could lead them, but found none. Then in 1971, an ordained bishop in Ohio, also a traditionalist, offered to ordain him. A few months later, the same bishop ordained Schuckardt as a bishop in a ceremony in Chicago.

"Since then, we've grown slowly but surely," Schuckardt said.

The bishop said the prohibition of the Latin Mass is only one of several major changes that would make reconciliation impossible with the established church.

He said now that the Mass is said in other languages, the words no longer have the same meaning and the dignity and reverence of the service is gone. Among other changes he cited was a growing ecumenism "which puts other churches on the same level" as the Roman Catholic Church, and changes in administering the church's sacraments such as baptism and matrimony.

"There's been a complete breakdown since Vatican II," he said. "If Vatican II really were of God, there would be more vocations, more conversions. Instead there are hardly any conversions and the nuns and priests are running away."

Schuckardt said his community has problems finding enough old prayer books and teaching materials. It must also deal with reaction from outsiders.

"Trying to keep the traditional Catholic life is difficult," he said. "What we preach is not a popular gospel. Everyone today likes the easy life, comfort, luxury. We preach penance, reparation, modesty. So we don't expect that it is going to attract a great number of people."

Clarine Barnes is one of those who moved with her husband to Coeur d'Alene after meeting Schuckardt in the late 1960s when they lived in Chula Vista, Calif.

"I never had any doubts" that Schuckardt's way was the right one, she said. "When you come up here and see the people, like diocese based in Boise.

A diocesan spokesman, the Rev. David Kundtz, said Bishop Sylvester Treinen "tried in the early stages to make overtures to them and to get some kind of dialogue going, but to no avail."

Kundtz said the diocese does make periodic announcements noting that the Coeur d'Alene community is not part of the diocese, but other than that "we don't do anything to them — they have the same kind of religious freedoms we do."

In any case, he said, "discipline (by the established church) would have no meaning for them."

A spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington, D.C., said other bishops know about the problem.

"Unhappily, the current reality of the Catholic Church is polarization of both ends of the theological spectrum," the spokesman said. "The bishops are aware of it, and try to deal with it as best they can. I don't think there's any one simple solution to it."

In Arlington, Va., for example, Bishop Thomas J. We warned his parishes recent that Latin masses conducted a priest who is one Archbishop Lefebvre's follower are invalid.

He did so after hearing of 2 Catholics who gathered in hotel on a recent Sunday celebrate the "forbidden" Lat Mass.

Operation R-6-P

Operation R-6-P is the name of a campaign designed to reduce six pests of tobacco.

This campaign includes three diseases, mosaic, rootknot, and brown spot; and three insect pests, budworms, flea beetles, and hornworms.

The goal of Operation R-6-P is 100 percent participation. This means that each grower needs to carry out an early and complete R-6-P program on his own farm and then encourage his neighbors to follow through with the same program, according to Gaylon Ambrose, assistant Agricultural Extension Agent.

The importance of the whole community "ganging up" on the six most destructive pests of tobacco is illustrated in the following example, Ambrose said. One field left within a com-community with stalks standing can provide a place where certain disease and insect pest can build up and prepare themselves for the winter months, ready to attack the new crop. These pests not only damage crops on the farm when stalks are left standing, but they move to other fields within the community.

Ambrose adds that tobacco is attacked by many disease and insect pests. The simple practices of early stalk and root destruction kills many of these pests, does away with home and food supply, and stops rapid multiplication.

This results in reduced damage in future crops. It is available practice that could add $200 per acre by way of pest reduction, said Ambrose.

Alcohol and Pregnancy

I take a drink or two of alcohol before dinner. It's my reward for a busy day. Now I am two months pregnant and I wonder if this small amount of alcohol can be dangerous. — Mrs. J.Y., Mich.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

Alcohol is a drug. The newer attitude is that most drugs, except those which are absolutely necessary, should be eliminated during pregnancy.

The study of alcohol during pregnancy was high on the priority list of the National Council of Alcoholism and the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse.

There seems to be some diversity of opinion on the part of these two groups. One suggests that all pregnant women forego alcohol completely. The other feels that moderate consumption of small amounts of alcohol does not hurt the unborn child.

Now, you have their reactions, and let me add mine. I feel that the joy of having a child born without any birth defect more than compensates for the temporary deprivation of alcohol.

I'm certain that your doctor will agree that an occasional drink, on special occasions, will do no harm. Check with him.

Since I've been married I've had a "trichomona" infection of the vagina. Even with treatment, this bothersome condition keeps coming back. — Mrs. M.R., Ga.

Dear Mrs. R.:

This is a very common and annoying condition. Before the recent discovery of the excellent drugs that are now available, this was a difficult condition to control and cure.

Today, the drug, "metronidazole" can be taken by mouth for about ten days, with a high percentage of cure.

Lack of success is now being traced to the fact that many men carry the organism responsible for trichomona. The fact that your problem began after your marriage may be the key to your problem.

Physicians now emphasize the fact that husband and wife should both be treated actively in order to insure a successful cure.

An Un-Soviet Aura In Estonia

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN TALLINN, Estonia (UPI) — For 25 rubles ($35.50), Estonians can buy an antenna attachment that pulls in Western television programs from Finland.

In this Soviet outpost on the Baltic, Estonians regularly watch "All in the Family" and "Kojak." They endure tough-guy "Baretta" and sink soap-deep in "Peyton Place."

So it's not surprising that any city that can accommodate V.I. Lenin and Archie Bunker runs its business in a most un-Soviet way.

Tallinn women, striking with their Scandinavian appearance and Western-style haircuts, dress-up the narrow, cobblestone streets with up-to-date Finnish fashions and platform shoes. The men, snubbing the baggy pants and button-down T-shirts common in Eastern Europe, wear snappy flared suits and jeans, hand-made Estonian sweaters and necklaces.

Williams, Alabama. However, Gardner fears she may have plowed her last row of corn. (AP Laserphoto)

They are almost right. Only 60 miles across the Baltic From Finland, Tallinn is a favorite stop for Finns eager for the Soviet Union's cheaper liquor.

They bring with them black-market clothes and reading material. In addition, most Estonians have relatives abroad — a major source for jeans, shoes and dresses from Sweden, Canada or the United States.

An estimated 20 per cent of the Estonians own cars — a much higher percentage than in the rest of the Soviet Union.

Estonsians living abroad frequently will buy a new Russian-made car for their Soviet relatives through an export company with sought-after hard currency. And Estonians can get their car almost immediately, instead of waiting several months like most ruble-paying Russians.

Domination by outsiders is nothing new to Estonians, who have learned survival tactics over 800 years under the Germans, Swedes or Russians.

They go along and they get along — but they don't sacrifice their independence or reverence.

"We listen to the Voice of America, Finnish Radio and Radio Moscow," said an Estonian resident. "We mix them up and find the truth."

He said the government tolerates the Estonian lifestyle and doesn't consider it a threat. "They are not afraid of the western clothes or ideas, because we get it over the radio."

The local broadcasting, hurt by the competition, has even upgraded its own programming — scrapping the long, boring political shows for more entertainment and foreign news.

But the Estonians, proud of their background, still seem to chafe under the Soviet rein. Estonian, a language very close to Finnish, is the native tongue — and Russian-speaking tourists frequently run into cold treatment from shopkeepers and waiters.

One American tourist told of overhearing an Estonian bus-driver feign ignorance of the Russian language when two Russians berated him for passing their stop. Several stops later, the driver smiled and spoke to the departing American in fluent Russian.

Another American, who speaks fluent Russian, asked directions from three clusters of people at a bus stop. None replied. When he switched to German and broken Russian, a fourth group immediately gave him the information he wanted.

As much as anything, the snags stem from the striking differences in background. The efficient, hard-working Estonians — drawing on their German background — find Russian culture alien.

Estonsians also remember the Stalin days, when an estimated 10,000 Estonians were dragged off to Siberia.

"That leaves a scar," said one young Estonian, touching his heart.

Still, "Russification" steadily creeps into Estonian life.

The red-and-white Communist party banners once were written only in Estonian. Soon they appeared in both languages.

Now it is common to see the banners stretched across Tallinn's narrow streets written only in Russian.

Nationalist Estonians bristle at such changes. Some locals say Estonian leaders quietly discourage the development of more industry to prevent an influx of more Russians, who already make up 20 per cent of the population.

"You can call me a Soviet," said one Estonian. "I may not like it very much, but I'll say okay. But don't call me a Russian. I'm an Estonian."

Even young Estonians, who have lived all their lives under the Soviet flag, pick up the anti-Russian feeling.

"At school, some of the kids say 'they're Russian, don't play with them,'" said one Estonian father. "I've never told my son that. I don't know where they get it."

But despite such anti-Russian feeling, there appears to be little serious nationalist fervor.

"We are a calm people," said one Estonian. "We have been dominated for over 800 years."

But every June on Estonian Freedom Day the blue, black and white flag of Estonia appears anonymously in the city center.

"Somebody puts it up," he said.

Otherwise, Estonians appear to have accepted their lot.

"Estonia can't be free from all other countries. We have to have ties, we have to make trade," one young Estonian said. "We can't be alone."

Support Library By Thrift Shop

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL, KETCHUM, Idaho (UPI) — Every Tuesday morning at 11 a.m. locals and tourists line up outside The Gold Mine to paw through the weekend's accumulation of castoff clothes, hoping to find a Pucci or a Dior original.

They often do, Ketchum being the home of Sun Valley — the thriving playground of the rich which was the nation's first ski resort.

That's why the aptly named little thrift shop does the kind of business which enables it to be the sole support of the new village library, a handsome stone, cedar and glass edifice whose architecture and contents would make it the envy of cities a hundred times larger than Ketchum's year-round population of 2,000.

The Union Pacific Railroad built Sun Valley and installed Edward Seagle as chief engineer. Twenty-two years ago Mrs. Seagle, Mrs. John Moritz and Mrs. Gatzert Spiegel (that's the Chicago catalog Spiegels) decided the town needed a library.

"We all liked to read and had to send away even to buy books," Mrs. Spiegel said. They got 17 women together, formed an association to build and maintain a free library, and each woman put in one dollar.

The women decided a thrift shop would be a good moneyraiser, so they rented an abandoned miner's cabin downtown for $5 a month and put their husbands to work, fixing it up and installing shelves.

They had $24,000 in two years from the thrift shop and from "just going around and wringing money out of people," including Ernest and Mary Hemingway, who had not yet settled here fulltime. Mrs. Hemingway remains a staunch supporter of the library and was out collecting tickets at the annual Community Library Association, Inc., tour of homes in July.

A vacationing architect gave them plans for the first library, the Union Pacific gave the land, and "I think everyone in the community in the building trades gave time to work on those who need them."

Now it is common to see the banners stretched across Tallinn's narrow streets written only in Russian.

Nationalist Estonians bristle at such changes. Some locals say Estonian leaders quietly discourage the development of more industry to prevent an influx of more Russians, who already make up 20 per cent of the population.

Replicas Of Tutankhamen Treasures Displayed

A ROYAL NECKLACE... This magnificent pectoral device is one of many treasures discovered when the tomb of King Tutankhamen was opened in 1922. Shown here is a replica now on view in an exhibit in the Joyner Library.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

While New Orleans is currently basking in the limelight as the temporary possessor of the fabulous riches of Young King Tut, Greenville is not totally lacking in momentoes of Egyptian glories of 32 centuries ago.

Because of the long interest of the Tutankhamen treasures on the part of Mrs. Antoinette Jenkins, a miniature "Tut" exhibit is now on view in the lobby at Joyner Library on the East Carolina University campus.

In three show cases, Mrs. Jenkins has arranged personal acquisitions — exact replicas of jewelry, books, charts, brochures and color slides to give the local public an opportunity to at least imagine the magnificence of the real thing.

Of particular interest are a pectoral and a bracelet topped by a scarab beetle.

"I was in London briefly on a continental tour in 1972," the retired faculty member of the ECU English Department explained. "It was one of those times when we had a free time, an entire afternoon. It was suggested we might want to see some museums."

Mrs. Jenkins said she saw a line in front of one of the museums and discovered that the Tutankhamen treasures were being displayed there. "It was a long line, but I got into it. At the time I had not heard anything about these treasures being shown outside Egypt, 'I have been intensely interested in the Tutankhamen tomb findings since they were first discovered in 1922 by Howard Carter. I was a senior in college at that time and I remember the excitement when the news broke over the telegraph lines and was picked up by the newspapers."

"It was certainly worth the wait, and it was not a long wait, really," she observed, "certainly nothing like the lines that of people that had to wait to see the exhibit in Washington."

Recalling her first impressions on seeing the horde of royal artifacts, Mrs. Jenkins said "the workmanship is incredible. You cannot imagine the pure beauty unless you see it, the gold and the jewels."

In her opinion, all the superlatives that have been heaped upon the recovered tomb treasures are justified. "Howard Carter, the archaeologist, made the statement when he first saw into the tomb that the golden throne was the most beautiful artifact he'd ever seen."

Much has been written in the years that have passed since the tomb was excavated from the sands of Egypt. It has only been in the past few years, however, as a result of the world wide exhibition tour of the treasures, that intense public interest in these ancient examples of Egyptian art and craftsmanship has been fanned into life.

Mrs. Jenkins and her husband, Edgar B. Jenkins, are both retired from the English Department at ECU. They came here in 1957, and Mrs. Jenkins retired in 1967.

A native of Houston, Texas, she has taught in Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Maryland. For 15 years before coming to ECU, she taught at Coopers High School in Nash County.

Since retirement, Mrs. Jenkins has been busy tutoring foreign students, editing manuscripts for professors and for the ECU administrative, and working on program and decorative displays Delta Kappa Gamma.

THE PERSON BEHIND THE ECU DISPLAY... Mrs. Antoinette Jenkins, the person responsible for the Tutankhamen display at ECU, stands before a case with books, posters, and charts of the exhibition. The Joyner display will be on view until about Thanksgiving.

100 Year Old Press In Museum Operation

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — A 100-year-old press, once used to print a North Carolina mountain newspaper, is in operation at the N. C. Museum of History, Department of Cultural Resources, in a new exhibit.

Intellectual Reawakening 1835-1860, an exhibition containing a fully operational 1840s era printshop, depicts one aspect of the reawakening of North Carolina from the conditions which had earned for her the label "the Rip Van Winkle State."

Exhibit co-sponsors are members of the N. C. Press Associations. The donor of the press is publisher Rachel Rivers-Coffey of The Watauga Democrat.

The cast-iron flatbed press, made by R. Hoe and Company of New York — a firm still in operation — was purchased by The Watauga Democrat in 1887 or 1888 and shipped to Lenoir where it was loaded aboard a wagon pulled by four mules which strained and struggled to get the 1800 pound burden up the rugged North Carolina mountains to Boone.

There it remained, printing every day, according to Mrs. Rivers-Coffey. However, the old press's load was lightened slightly when power presses came into use, and was used mainly for proofs. In 1966, the venerable machine was retired to the "cobwebs of the basement," she said.

The press has been faithfully restored to like-new condition by museum conservator Paul Mears. The press can accommodate page sizes to 22 inches by 36 inches and is capable of printing approximately two pages a minute.

New leather straps move the bed under the platen as the rounce handle is turned, Mears explained, with the operator standing to the left of the machine. "This was backbreaking work," he said, "and usually relegated to the printer's devil, or apprentice."

The printshop, which will show all the equipment for a full working shop including type, type cases, inking roller and inking slab, is designed to depict the printing methods used in the state during the mid-19th century, according to John Ellington, museum administrator. At that time, North Carolina saw a sizeable increase in the number of newspapers published, in the number of books printed and authors writing, and bills in the legislature providing for schools to reduce illiteracy.

In addition, a collage illustrating the variety and scope of the printing possible on the press will be on view, with such items as broadsides, newspapers and church publications. A George Moses Horton acoustic — or poetry with first letters of each line vertically forming words — will be displayed. Horton, a prominent North Carolina black poet, was active during the mid-19th century.

Flyers actually printed on the press will be given to guests watching the demonstration printing. As soon as possible, a museum volunteer will be taught to operate the press, and the working shop will be a regular feature of museum tours, Ellington said.

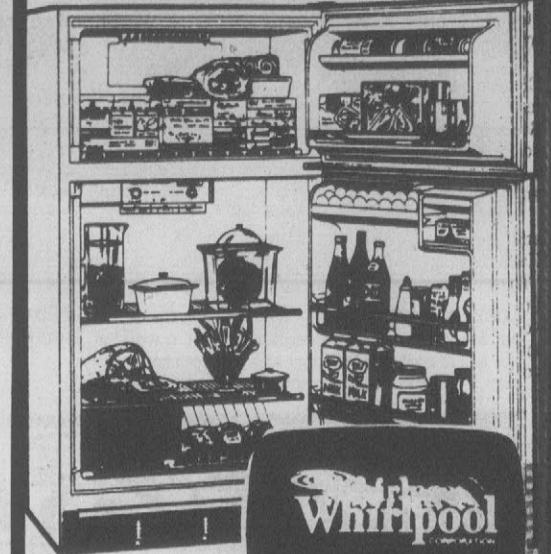

The printshop, a permanent exhibit, is part of the continuing chronological development of North Carolina history From the Stone Age to the Space Age, located in the first floor galleries.

Admission is free. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday. The museum is located at 109 East Jones Street.

Elephant In The Act Is Just Like One Of Family

By JOY STILEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The commercials featuring animals may last just 60 seconds on the television screen, but weeks of patient work go into preparing the stars for their brief roles.

For example, the polished performance of the handsome stag who does his thing for the insurance company or of the Kodiak bear in the beer ads is the result of training by Liz and Earl Hammond, who operate an animal talent service from their Pennsylvania farm.

The Hammonds, who with Elizabeth Levy have just written "Elephants in the Living Room, Bears in the Canoe," don't use the words "trained" and "tame" in connection with animals.

"I've never seen a trained animal," said the bearded Hammond in an interview. "They're routine or conditioned. Every time you think you have an animal that's going to do what you think he's going to do, he'll make you out a liar."

"And there's no such thing as a tame animal in my estimation," he adds, "because when you say tame you mean it will never hurt you, and there's always that one time."

"Animals have no voice to tell you if they're overtired, overheated, overworked, and they can strike out," explains Liz.

"Still," interjects Earl, "they have quite a vocabulary. They can say a lot with the flip of an ear, the flick of a whisker. It's a matter of reading body language."

The personality of the animal is of major importance, and selecting the right one is 90 per cent of the job, agree the Hammonds, both 40.

"I like an outgoing animal," says Liz. "The more gregarious animal will enjoy being the center of attention. One that's more introverted might do the job for you, but doesn't enjoy it."

"It's like picking a mate," says Earl. "They'll either help you along if you make mistakes or if you pick the wrong one it will play upon those mistakes."

The conditioning process is slow — "if you came out and watched you'd think we were doing nothing, but a lot of it is the waiting game." In their training the couple uses food rewards or, for some animals, just affection.

The Hammonds often turn down commercials because they believe "there are certain things an animal should not be asked to do that would impose on their dignity, patience or personality."

The Hammonds work together — "It's more fun that way" — except with the 800-pound bear, which Liz admits to being afraid of. She's afraid of other people's elephants, too, which she points out are "large and potentially dangerous," but her own Mignon has always been one of the family.

"She was two months old when we got her, and weighed about 150 pounds. She was smaller than a greyhound and her trunk was like a wet noodle," she recalls of the now 2,000-pound elephant that spent its first year and a half in the Hammonds' living room.

Mignon slept on a mattress covered with sheets that were changed daily and sat in a rocky to watch television, which she learned to turn on with her trunk.

"It was an incredible adventure," Liz says. "Things we never thought possible were done. She learned to control her elephant impulses, not breaking things, not crashing through things. We even housebroke her, training her to use a bucket and to rattle the handle when she had to go."

In addition to Mignon: Moose, the red deer stag; and Sasha, the bear with whom Earl has appeared as a rugged outdoorsman in beer commercials, the Hammonds have a number of other exotic animals on their Tioga, Pa., 550-acre farm.

The blond, soft-spoken Earl's parents were animal trainers, but dark-haired vivacious Liz grew up in New York City. She was always fascinated by animals, and started handling them in the theater.

The Hammonds, who have daughters 15, 10 and 3, and an 18-year-old son, plan to produce full-length wildlife feature films, using their own and other animals.

"But eventually," says Earl,

"we have hopes of being able to put our energies and abilities to work in the propagation and rehabilitation of endangered North American animals."

("Elephants in the Living Room, Bears in the Canoe" is published Delacorte.)

BIG BABY—This elephant was raised in the home of Liz and Earl Hammond, who operate an animal talent agency. Partial family portrait includes Mignon the elephant, Luther Owl, Liz, Buster Brown the dog, daughter Jenny, Robert Bobcat and Dandelion the lion.

Still Avoid Spiny Sea Urchin Buckling Up Supply Shrinking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An auto industry effort to promote seat-belt use through an advertising and publicity campaign has failed to get drivers and passengers to buckle up.

So says Leon Robertson, senior behavioral scientist for the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

Motorists Information, Inc., a domestic auto industry organization to promote seat-belt use, conducted a two-month media campaign in Grand Rapids, Mich., to increase belt awareness. It also interviewed a random sample of drivers by telephone. The survey sponsors said interview samples indicated that persons using belts "always" or "most of the time" increased from 29 to 41 per cent during campaign.

When Robertson, using direct observation, checked traffic in Grand Rapids later, he found 87 per cent of the drivers observed not using either lap or shoulder belts.

"Motorists Information failed to note research, well-known among professionals in the field, that found people often claim to use belts when they have in fact been observed not doing so," Robertson said.

By TONY COZIER
Associated Press Writer
BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — The Barbados government is facing a prickly problem.

Authorities on the Caribbean island nation are concerned that the area's supply of sea urchins — spiny, spherical-shell creatures abundant in tropical waters — is dwindling.

Elsewhere in the Caribbean, sea urchins are known mainly as a hazard to bathers and skin divers because of their hard, needle-like spikes — somewhat like those of a porcupine — which can grow up to several inches in length.

But Barbadians prize the spiny reef dwellers as a delicacy thought to have aphrodisiac powers. So the government is exploring ways of checking the decline in supply of "sea eggs," as the urchins are called locally.

There is a long-standing law forbidding diving for sea eggs from the ocean for four months of the year, from May through August. During that time the creatures are spawning.

Eager fishermen, however, are now openly defying the law and virtually daring the government to enforce it. So far, officials have handled the situation with kid gloves but Henry Forde, Barbados' attorney general, has warned that those who harvest the sea eggs while they are spawning are "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

"The sea egg, like so many other creatures that live in the sea, has a cycle of breeding, fertilization and growth," Forde said in an address broadcast on radio and television.

"Only through a sea egg closed season, therefore, during the spawning season, may some measure of effective control be instituted which would protect the growth and development of the species and insure a stable annual supply for the fishing industry."

Isaac Yarde, who has been diving for sea eggs for more than 25 years, said the demand had completely outstripped the supply in recent years. Whereas he once received $2 for 100 shells, now he gets $1.50 for one shell. The sizeable tourist industry and the growing affluence of the local population have helped the boom.

Sea egg roe is said to be high in protein content. The edible portion is gleaned after the brittle outer shell is broken.

Jack Gerock
Greenville Manager

Lowe's of Greenville will have its grand opening on Thursday Sept. 22, according to Manager Jack Gerock.

Lowe's is a building supplies and appliance retailer with 176 stores operating in 16 Southeastern and Mid-Atlantic states. The new facility is located at 2728 S. Memorial Dr., near main traffic arteries.

Jack Gerock comes to Lowe's of Greenville from the Lowe's of High Point store where he was the store manager.

Jack is a Mason and a Member of the Orient Lodge #395 AF & AM at Wilmington N.C. He also received a BA in Business at UNC at Wilmington.

"Ticked to death and anxious to be able to serve this area" is the way Jack describes his reaction to Lowe's newest store. I'm happy to be extending Lowe's products and services to the area, and I'd like to take this opportunity to invite everyone to come visit us.

Running the Greenville store with Jack will be several other key experienced personnel from other Lowe's stores, including the Assistant Manager, the Office Manager, and the Warehouse Manager. Jack said he anticipates hiring at least eight to twelve local people in the near future.

Lowe's products are aimed at two segments of the buying public. "We have everything for the professional builder. We've surveyed this market, and have stocked product lines that they're familiar with.

"We like consumers to think Lowe's whenever they need something for their homes," Jack says. "Lowe's has appliances, color T.V.'s, lawn mowers, light fixtures, and everything for the Lowe's-It-Yourselfer, including lumber, plywood, plumbing, paneling, carpeting, and paint supplies. We've designed the store to serve our customers and load them as quickly as possible."

The Greenville store has 10,000 square feet of sales floor and over 12,000 square feet of warehouse space. In addition there are storage sheds and a convenient store front parking area.

Lowe's had its start in 1921 as the North Wilkesboro, N.C. Hardware.

In 1952, Carl Buchan, who married the daughter of the original founder, L.S. Lowe, assumed the sole operation of the then two-store company.

Buchan, who was responsible for Lowe's initial growth and expansion, died in 1960 at the age of 43.

A four man Executive Management team now runs the company.

In June 1977, Building Supply News magazine named Lowe's as Building Supply Retailer of the Year, for the company's overall excellence in the retailing field.

Lowe's national recognition includes also having been named Brand Name Quality Remodeler of the Year for 1973 by the Brand Names Foundation.

Lowe's believes they are the first Brand Names "Triple Crown" winner, since they had previously won two other Brand Names awards. In April 1972, Lowe's was presented with a Distinguished Merchant Award, one of the first such awards ever given. The company's first award was that of Brand Name Retailer-Of-The-Year Award, popularly called "The Oscar of Retailing," in April 1971.

A recent Lowe's honor came from Financial World magazine, which cited the company's 1976 series of quarterly reports as the nation's best. Another Lowe's honor came in October 1972, also from Financial World magazine, which awarded Lowe's 1971 Annual Report the "Gold Oscar of All Industry," citing it as the best annual report produced by any corporation in 1971.

Good Merchandise...

To buy a particular product, the benefits you expect to get from it have to be worth more than the dollars you pay for it. To insure that you get your dollar's worth, Lowe's offers you nationally known name merchandise... products you can trust... products with built-in quality. Each Lowe's store combines the merchandise, service, and functions of a lumber yard, building material supplier, air conditioning, heating, plumbing, and electrical supply center, hardware store, appliance and home electronics dealer, hard goods discount, and complete home improvement center.

Lowe's Sells More Than 8,000 Items

Lowe's has everything you need for the house... in the house... around the house... even the house! All the materials for building a house — from the foundation to the roof — are at Lowe's. We also have all it takes to care for the yard around your house... and to make life a little easier inside the house.

Brand Names

The complete inventory at Lowe's contains over 8,000 items! These include lumber from Weyerhaeuser... insulation from Owens-Corning... plywood from Georgia-Pacific... Gypsum board from National Gypsum... siding from Abitibi... asphalt roofing from GAF and Celotex... paneling from Vanply and Pacific Wood Products... carpet from Dan River and Armstrong... bathroom fixtures from Artesian... lighting fixtures from Thomas and Diamond... ceilings from Gold-Bond and Owens-Corning... heating and cooling products from McGraw-Edison... tile by Magna-American... steel storage buildings by Arrow... storm doors and windows by Croft and Andersen... mowers by Dynamark and Murray... bicycles by Murray... Enterprise paint... appliances by Hotpoint and Whirlpool... power tools by Black & Decker and Skil... small appliances by Northern and General Electric... home entertainment units from Lloyds, Zenith, and RCA, just to name a few. These names stand behind their products — so do we!

National Recognition By The Brand Names Foundation

Lowe's national recognition includes having been named Building Supply Retailer of the Year for 1977 by Building Supply News magazine. We've also been honored by the Brand Names Foundation as Brand Name Quality Remodeler of the Year in 1973. We believe that Lowe's is the first "Triple Crown" winner, since we've already won the Distinguished Merchant Award in '72 and were named Brand Name Retailer of the Year, popularly called "The Oscar of Retailing" in April, '71.

Consumer Reference Library

In 1973, we began the compilation of a Consumer Reference Library. We not only include our own reference materials, researched and produced by Lowe's to give you the most pertinent information about our products, but we also stock other helpful and informative publications. We consult reference libraries, our suppliers, trade associations, and government sources to collect material. We include technical, specialized information like Span Tables and Grading Rules for Lumber. The books are obtained from commercial sources, screened for content, stocked in our stores, and constantly up-dated.

What Do We Do?

Lowe's of Greenville. Lowe's is a group of motivated people who want to earn and deserve the opportunity to serve you as customers for a long time. We want Lowe's to become your Household Word.

Good Services... Credit Policy

Fifty million people in the United States are holders of the 2 major bank cards, Master Charge and VISA. Purchases of merchandise at Lowe's may be made on both. Also, the Lowe's Charger Credit Card is available in all stores. If you don't have one, why not visit Lowe's and apply for your own card? The "Charger" vouches for your credit at every Lowe's store. Each Lowe's store also has a Layaway Service, which many customers use, and commercial accounts for professional buyers, purchasing agents, etc. Your Lowe's store manager has all the details on each of our credit options. Why not stop in and see which one suits you the best. Your satisfaction with all our services is guaranteed or your money will be refunded in cash.

Delivery Policy

Arrangements can be made for delivery of merchandise purchased from any Lowe's store. A fleet of delivery trucks is available, modern and efficient equipment can fulfill your delivery needs. Lowe's delivery charges are modest. For information concerning this service, please contact your Lowe's salesperson. Whether you need a single delivery or a series of deliveries to a construction site, Lowe's will come up with a price and a schedule to fill your particular need.

Trained Sales People

Each of the people who make up Lowe's sales force has been carefully trained not only to want to help you, but to know how to help you. They must be ready to help you choose the right item for the job at hand. This means that they must have a working knowledge of their products and your needs, whether you're building a house or buying a TV.

Computer Sales Tickets

In the mid-60's, Lowe's installed computers on each sales floor to calculate and print each sales ticket. This system has been continually up-dated, till — now — the salespeople in most stores can get an immediate readout on the inventory status of the product in question.

Express Checkout

Since it takes a while to help a builder order all the materials he needs for a home, his delivery schedule, etc., the consumer who just stopped in to buy an iron won't want to wait in line behind him! So, each Lowe's store now has a special checkout desk for small items. This way, each customer, the builder and the consumer, gets the service he deserves.

Lowe's Low Prices...

Lowe's Total Profit After Taxes Averages Less Than 4c Per Dollar — Less Than The Sales Tax In Many Areas.

Long before the federal government's price control program of the past few years, Lowe's had our own price control program, called Lowe's Low Prices. The original idea was, and our commitment to our customers still is, to hold prices to the lowest level possible, consistent with keeping Lowe's alive and well. And the idea worked! Lowe's has grown from one small store in the Carolina mountains to 176 stores in 16 states. And yet, Lowe's total profit after taxes averages less than 4c per dollar — less than the sales tax in many areas. In 1974, inflation was the number one culprit in the mind of the American Consumer. We decided to see just how bad it really was in some of our product lines. We searched our advertising files of 5, 10, 15 and more years back and actually found many items which had come down in price! This study resulted in an intensified campaign to let you know about our lower-than-ever prices in a time of terrible inflation. We called it Un-flation®. The first ads ran in Spring of 1974 and brought an immediate sales response, helping us to maintain our strong customer relationship through a difficult business period. And so, Un-flation® has become a big part of Lowe's Low Prices!

Consider The Evidence Here

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Rosetti and Ryan" is a new NBC series. It stars Tony Roberts and Squire Fridell as two wise-cracking bachelor lawyers. The barristers make a premiere plea of "watch me" tonight.

But you, the jury, should first consider all the evidence. It is found in a blunt instrument called the script. I enter it now as Exhibit "A" in a lengthy proceeding lasting an hour.

The script is about a flaky actress played by Julie Cobb. She sends our two tort-mongers a $1,000 retainer fee and tickets to a $100-a-plate bar association dinner.

Chief speaker at the event is a pro football quarterback, played by Robert Hogan. Attorney Rosetti doesn't want to attend the dinner. He says no one will be there but athletes and lawyers, a dull lot.

But Ryan says "where there are jocks there are pretty girls."

As the defendants are known to chase pretty girls, they go to the dinner. There, they meet their benefactor, who tells them she is the "Muffin" lady in a TV commercial. She then says: "Excuse me, I want to blast him before I get drunk."

Files Suit; Can't Read

SEATTLE (AP) — A 21-year-old man and his parents are suing Seattle's school district on grounds he was graduated from high school without learning to read.

Frank Fisher said his son, Richard, "can't read an application to get a job."

The Fishers claim Richard should be given remedial education at the school district's expense. The suit filed earlier this month in King County Superior Court seeks unspecified damages.

The mother, Mary, said Wednesday she did not know how it was possible for the school district to award her son a diploma "because we used to help him with his homework and we knew how he struggled."

The Fishers charge that their son, who was graduated in 1974 from Lincoln High School, is "completely unable to read with sufficient comprehension to obtain employment or to adequately cope with the demands of our society."

Fisher said his son also has been turned down by the Army, Navy and Air Force because he couldn't read.

Fisher said his son was placed in special-education classes early because teachers said he was a poor learner.

Gary M. Little, general counsel for the school district, said recently that in similar cases in New York, San Francisco and Pennsylvania, courts have held the duty to educate is a collective one and have ruled in favor of the school districts.

Whereupon she withdraws a .45 and puts several rounds across the bow of the quarterback. It is stipulated she wanted to scare him and make him publicly confess he is an "all-time rat."

It is further stipulated the alleged rat conned her into appearing in a movie that, with clever editing, he turned into a porn film called "Lust Horizons." She alleges it cost her the "Muffin" job.

At this point, entered as Exhibit "B," she is charged with assault with a deadly weapon and is defended by the defendants.

Alas, the case is assigned actor Dick O'Neill, cast as Judge "Hang-Em-High" Hardcastle. He is a fan of the quarterback and was the master of ceremonies at the dinner featuring the .45 appetizers.

In the rest of the hour, there occur twists and turns that we contend were deliberately created to willfully, unlawfully and perhaps illegally disguise the fact that this show has no plot.

During the aforesaid hereafter, which we enter as Exhibit "C," a press agent named Jim Gordon is slain at the home of his friend, the quarterback. The "Muffin" girl is accused of the deed.

Others get involved, including the widow of the deceased, whose marriage, it is alleged, was rocky on account of the deceased was fooling around with the wife of the quarterback's coach.

Blackmail and point-shaving also are alleged. The show's turning point, hereinafter referred to as "the turning point," dwells on how fast a quart of pistachio ice cream can melt.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, before you retire to consider deliberating the case of "Rosetti and Ryan," I should re-emphasize that this proceeding is what we in legal circles call "a real dog."

I submit that it is a willful, unlawful and perhaps illegal waste of time. I know you'll find it guilty of aggravated awful.

As the trombone player said when he missed his bus, I rest my case.

Be Prepared To Get Wet On Wild River

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
OHIOPILE, Pa. (AP) — With a roar and a splash, the Youghiogheny River offers quick baptism for white water enthusiasts.

The Entrance Rapids, the first of eight foaming thrills on the 12-mile excursion into the wilderness of the Appalachian Mountains, lie just below the Ohiopile Falls at the start of the seven-hour trip.

"Be prepared to get wet — and paddle," said Jon Kruper, a former professional guide with White Water Adventurers who commanded our two-man raft. "This isn't a surrey ride."

The raft crashed through the rocks with a whomp, spraying water on a pair of furiously paddling adventurers. "Welcome to white water," said Kruper, clad in a mandatory life jacket and enjoying the sunny summer afternoon.

What the Youghiogheny (pronounced YOCK-eh-gay-nee) seems like is a series of roller coaster rides, except you have control of the trip and the excitement is prolonged.

"The nicest part of the trip is that you have to participate. You just don't sit back and float down. You have to guide and steer. You become part of the river, or else," said Kruper, a 27-year-old physical education teacher.

Paddling is essential. Forward and backward strokes determine which way the raft goes in the swift, northward flowing current. Without steering, rafts will go sideways, careening into rocks or getting pinned.

The Youghiogheny, which runs through Ohiopile State Park, has become a hot tourist spot. The river is rated among the top white water stretches in the East, and nearly a million people have answered its challenge.

Water flow is controlled by a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers dam upstream, but the water level has been low this summer because of a dry spell. The trip is a little rockier, but the excitement is there.

The rapids, which have colorful names like Double Hydraulic or Cucumber Chute, demand total attention. Calmer stretches in between allow your pulse to slow and provide an opportunity to enjoy the wilderness setting.

The river winds through a pristine valley surrounded by hardwood trees, hemlocks and mountain laurel. No roads lead into the lush valley in southwestern Pennsylvania, about 90 minutes by car from Pittsburgh.

The only access is by raft or kayak, although a Chessie Systems rail line parallels the river in spots.

Much of the river bed is solid rock. The water is quite deep in spots; knee high in others.

If you don't get thrown overboard during the trip, you can beach the raft and body surf with the current. Sneakers are essential to protect your feet from the jutting rocks.

The rafting season runs from May through October. In addition to White Water Adventurers, three other groups — Mountain Trails and Streams Outfitters, Laurel Highlands River Tours and Wilderness Voyagers — offer guided tours.

Each year at the European Championship, the Bols Company, Holland's best known distillers of fine liqueurs, offers a brilliancy prize for the most spectacular play. West had the opportunity to stake his claim on this hand from the Italy-France match in the 1977 event, but let it slip by.

When Italy held the North-South cards, Benito Garozzo became declarer at four hearts. West led the king of diamonds, which declarer ruffed. There is a temptation to go after clubs immediately, cashing the queen and king and then ruffing a club with the nine of trumps.

However, this line fails against best defense. When West gets in with the king of hearts he can lead a fourth club, and East can overruff dummy.

Declarer found a superior line. He entered dummy with the queen of clubs and took the trump finesse. West won the king and continued diamonds. Declarer ruffed, diaffed a club with the nine of trumps and drew the remaining trumps. He conceded two spade tricks at the end, but fulfilled his contract.

Let's see what might have happened had West refused to win the king of trumps, which risked losing the monarch should declarer continue with the ace. If declarer tries to cater to a 4-1 trump break by entering dummy with a club ruff to repeat the finesse, West wins and gives his partner a club ruff to set the contract.

It is no better to enter dummy with the ace of spades for a second trump finesse. West wins and simply forces declarer with a second round of diamonds, and declarer loses control. He no longer has the entries to establish clubs and draw trumps, and will eventually end up down two.

Perhaps West's duck on the first round of hearts would have been to no avail, but it was surely worth the effort.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? # Drama Will Be Presented When Landowners Can Get United Methodist Women Meet Timber Planting Aid

"The Dance of Mary and Martha," a 15-minute drama, which has been presented to 25 United Methodist Women meetings across the United States, will be given here during the North Carolina Conference of United Methodist Women Sept. 30-Oct. 1.

Based on scriptural reading and written by the Rev. Heather Murray Elkins of Duke University, the drama will be presented at the Moose Lodge Friday night following a dinner at 6:30 p.m., which will be attended by 500 women and their guests.

be Nancy Rosebaugh, associate director of the National Institute of Duke University's Campus Ministry. Mrs. Sylvia Gregory Easterling, a third year Duke University divinity student, will have the lead as Mary.

Nancy Rosebaugh

The drama is one of several highlights during the two-day conference, which is being hosted by Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. Other meetings will include a program on World Federation by the Rev. Robert Young and the Rev. Elkins Friday night prior to the drama.

A keynote address by Bishop Robert M. Blackburn of Raleigh at Jarvis Memorial Church Friday at 2 p.m.; an annual business session Saturday at 10:15 a.m.; a presentation of special memberships and "candle burning"; and a panel discussion on "Getting In Touch With Human Rights."

Mrs. C. H. Cade of Fayetteville, conference president of United Methodist Women, will bring the president's message Saturday at 1:45 p.m. followed Eligible landowners may receive 60 per cent of the total costs incurred for site preparation and tree planting through a Federal program to help landowners to plant abandoned fields and to convert low quality stands of timber to high quality, high value forests, according to Pitt County Forest Service Ranger Mark Webb.

Webb emphasized the Federal Incentive Program is not "a give-away program to make anyone rich." He noted, "There are many conditions which must be met before a landowner can qualify for this assistance."

The first condition, he said, is that a woodland owner must have a forest management plan recommended and written to fit the needs of his land and desires. The plan, he explained, must be devised by the North Carolina Forest Service or a competent industrial or consultant forester.

Webb noted that other requirements for the cost sharing program will be explained to landowners when they meet with the forester.

Loch Ness covers 24 miles of a geologic rift cutting across Scotland called the Great Glen.

The Pitt ranger said the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) will accept applications for this assistance immediately, but before approval is given, the land must be ready to start work.

Webb noted that there is a $10,000 per year limit per year per landowner.

The forester noted that having land ready to start work, "means if an area is to be converted from hardwood species to a pine species, all the wood must be cut off the land first. This is where it is very important to have a Forest Management Plan, to insure this is the best and right thing to do for your land."

Further information may be obtained by calling Webb at 756-0414 or by writing Webb as P. O. Box 515, Bell Arthur, N.C. 27811.

Against Middle School

GRIFTON — The Grifton Lions Club in regular session Monday voted to request the Pitt County Board of Education to rescind their recent action providing for the removal of grades six, seven, and eight from Grifton to a consolidated middle school between Ayden and Grifton.

Maxwell T. Waters, vice president of the club, sent a letter Tuesday urging the Board to comply with the club's request.

"It is the strong conviction of the members of this club and a large majority of Grifton citizens that a continued strong educational program can be pursued in the present location at much less cost than consolidation.

"In the opinion of most Grifton people the interests of education, safety and well being of children can best be served in the school at Grifton. In addition to this, it is believed that the community involvement and its support of both local and county educational programs will best be achieved in continuing a good school for grades K through eight in Grifton," the letter continued.

Waters then thanked the Board for its cooperation.

Palestinians Fire On Boats

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestinian guerrillas claimed today that their coastal guns fired during the night on Israeli gunboats that for six days have been trying to blockade the Palestinian-held port of Tyre, on the south Lebanese coast.

"Long-range coastal guns opened up on enemy gunboats for the first time after midnight," a Palestinian spokesman said. "The Israeli navy has been trying to blockade Tyre for the last six days."

Palestinian officials said the gunboats were not hit and did not return the fire. But they said the firing apparently forced them out beyond the range of the shore guns.

Tyre, 12 miles north of the Israeli border, is Lebanon's fourth largest city. It was left under the control of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine last year after Syria's military intervention halted the civil war between right-wing Christians and an alliance of Palestinians and leftist Lebanese Moslems.

A spokesman for the Popular Front claimed at least four Israeli gunboats called "dangerously close" to the Tyre coast, prompting the Palestinian firing.

Palestinian guns drove off another gunboat formation that approached the coastal town of Nakoura, several hundred yards north of the frontier, the spokesman said.

Lebanese provincial authorities and the Palestinians both reported that Israel moved more troops and tanks across the border deeper into south-east Lebanon.

Spokesmen for both factions said at least 24 Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers crossed the frontier and moved into the Christian villages of Khoura and Deir Mimas.

Deir Mimas is about a mile from the border and north of Kfar Kila, where Israeli forces

Rhodesia Expells Nun

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Sister Janice McLaughlin, an American Roman Catholic nun arrested for violating security laws, was ordered expelled from Rhodesia today.

Two detectives escorted Sister Janice from her cell at Chikarubi Detention Center shortly after dawn, allowed her to collect belongings from her Salisbury apartment and drove her to the airport for a flight to the United States via Johannesburg and Rio de Janeiro.

Wearing a light cotton skirt and blouse, she packed a crucifix, a large map of Rhodesia, a bag of books, clothing and a tube of toothpaste. She told detectives she was leaving behind "for others to read" — a dictionary of the local African Shona language, James Joyce's "Ulysses" and novels by the liberal writer Doris Lessing, who used to live in Rhodesia.

The 35-year-old Maryknoll nun from Pittsburgh, Pa., was arrested Aug. 31 along with three other members of a Roman Catholic Commission for Peace and Justice. The quartet had prepared a report accusing Rhodesian authorities of inflicting hardship on 580,000 blacks by moving them to "protected villages" away from black guerrillas fighting the white government.

A regional magistrate, calling Sister Janice a supporter of the "terrorist cause," ordered her held without bail at a hearing last Friday. In court she admitted her sympathy for the insurgents.

She was to stand trial next Tuesday under a security law that prohibited the spreading of alarm, fear or despondency, and could have been sentenced to as much as seven years in prison if convicted.
