Sen. Sebo: Progress, But Not Enough Yet

Women in the United States may still have a long way to go in order to gain equality, but they have definitely made progress, according to State Sen. Katherine Sebo (D-Guilford County).

but that in some cases legislation that could improve the situation is defeated.
The 1975 Legislative Study Committee to eliminate Sex Discrimination was defeated by the federal courts, Sen. Sebo added that one can look at the way the courts are ruling on other issues such as busing and almost predict how they will rule on sex discrimination.

think of this process as giving rights only to women.
"Women, of course, in most studies have been shown to be sturdier, while men are expected to stand more stress, both emotionally and physically."
She said that she believes equality for women should in some way also involve releasing men from the standard role as the stronger sex, thereby allowing them to express their feelings, to release their frustrations, and perhaps increase their life expectancy.

Two-Term Foes Hope To Gain

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Opposition to gubernatorial succession has suddenly surfaced and two men described as prominent Democrats are said to be thinking about campaigning against it.

"I hope they decide to make the campaign because I think it's winnable," said Gene Anderson, top aide to former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser. Anderson said he had been hired by the two Democrats to gauge Republican attitudes toward the succession issue.

"If they're getting what I'm getting, then they're going to go," he said.

"I've just really, really been surprised as just how vehement the opposition is out there," he said. Of nearly 100 persons surveyed earlier this week, "about 80 or 90 per cent of them are against it," he said in an interview Thursday. A few of those surveyed were Democrats.

He refused to say who hired him.
Voters will decide Nov. 8 whether governors and lieutenant governors can run for reelection.

Different Lance Is Back In Calhoun, Ga.

By MARK O'BRIEN
Associated Press Writer
CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — Bert Lance is home again, but he's a pale ghost of the joke-telling, back-slapping Georgia banker who went to Washington last January to be President Carter's top budget officer.

Washington in a twin-engine, turbo-prop airplane they had chartered. Holding hands, they eagerly waded into a small crowd of friends who met them at the airport and later spoke briefly to a cheering downtown throng which welcomed them home.

But Thursday, the signs castigated the news media and politicians who opposed Lance. Said one sign, "Welcome Home Bert. You Don't Need Washington."

The wear and tear of investigations into Lance's fiscal integrity were evident when he and his wife LaBelle returned home Thursday afternoon for a few days of rest and relaxation. Lance's booming voice seldom boomed, his usually quick smile came slowly, his eyes were cold, his face was drawn, and he refused to answer questions. The Lances flew home from

But Lance's folksy personality was subdued.
He shook hands mechanically, kept conversations to a minimum and repeated over and over to well-wishers, "Good to see you, good to see you."
"We're glad to be home," Lance told reporters, adding that he would rest and visit with friends until next week, when he will return to Washington to clean out his desk at the Office of Management and Budget, whose directorship he resigned Wednesday. He said he also will move the family belongings back to Georgia.

Those at the welcome rally on the steps of the Gordon County Courthouse showered prayers, cheers and roses on the Lances, but they did not have last week's defiant spirit.

The Rev. Bob Maddox, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Calhoun, prayed for "a time of healing... a time of understanding."

Mayor Billy Burdette said he had been "very depressed" by the Lance affair, which he termed "an act of God." But he urged the crowd, "Let's make this a celebration."

Both Lance and Mrs. Lance, who was given a bouquet of red roses, told their friends and neighbors they were "very grateful" for their support during what Mrs. Lance called "our trials and tribulations."

Lance, who seemed embarrassed by the crowd's lavish applause, said his time in Washington had been "very fine" and he had "tried to do what was right."

He said he and his wife had bolstered each other during "weak-kneed" moments, and said last week's rally at the Calhoun Municipal Gymnasium had helped him through the grueling examination by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

"You'll never know what that rally last Wednesday night meant to us," he said. "There is no way to adequately explain what the love and support of individuals like you has meant to us."

The Lances rode in the family Cadillac, a National Rifle Association membership decal in its back window, to the center of town, where a crowd of more than 1,500 waited patiently in the broiling sun for Calhoun's most famous son.

The signs in the crowd showed how the town's mood had changed since it held an emotional rally last week on the eve of Lance's three days of televised hearings before a Senate committee probing his finances.

Last week, the placards said, "We Love Bert" and "Bert Lance Was Fair to Me, We Need Him in D.C."

"You are the last line of an ordered society," Nisbet told the officers.

J. Phil Carlton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety was the guest speaker for the evening. Carlton heads the department which includes the Highway Patrol, the Alcohol Law Enforcement Agency, and the Governor's Crime Commission as well as the National Guard and Civil Preparedness.

Mickey Herrin, chairman of the chamber's Law Enforcement Committee, said the purpose of the banquet was to let the law enforcement agencies in the Greenville area know that, "we deeply appreciate their dedication to the protection of life and property in our area."

Carlton told the officers and chamber members, "We're in the business of enforcing the law together," and said the agency he heads was established by the 1977 General Assembly in an effort to make the "State's ability to respond" to emergency situations more "efficient."

Herrin told the gathering, "We tend to think of law enforcement — the police department, the Sheriff's Department, the Highway Patrol — in the abstract... not as individuals." He said it is "important to get to know them as individuals. That's a little bit about what this Saying "law enforcement is a local responsibility," Carlton noted the "number one" law enforcement man in North Carolina are the State's 100 Sheriffs and the police chiefs of the municipalities in the state.

In a recent trip to the Soviet Union, she observed the difference in the status of women there.
"In the Soviet Union, the status of women is not as it appears."
"Most women in the Soviet Union do work and on the whole they have equal laws."
Sen. Sebo added that many American women misinterpret the fact that so many Russian women work as being a plus for women's rights. However, she said that the jobs they hold are not always as respected in Russia as they are in the United States.

"This kind of thing is very slow to work out. However, the ideas have been set in motion."
She added that rulings should take into account, not only women's rights, but also men's rights.

NEEDS APPROVAL

In the past year I have written five letters to the Greenville City Schools and have had one interview concerning information about obtaining my high school diploma from Rose High School. During my interview I was advised that I needed one English credit and the rest electives. It was ascertained that my military education and my courses at Pitt Technical Institute would satisfy the elective requirement — that all I lacked was one English credit. I am overseas as a member of the U. S. Army now and have written two letters within the past six months to the Greenville City Schools asking for approval of English Course 101 from the University of Maryland. I get no answer and it's holding up my even enrolling in this course. I want to know where I can write in North Carolina to get someone to deal with my request. It's obvious the hometown school people are not interested in helping me. SP/5 H. H.

Hotline called Mrs. Rosalind Britt, Rose High School guidance counselor. She was not the person you had written to previously, but she pulled your file, saw that everything was as you had said and that there were even copies of some of the five letters you had mentioned. She then found out who had your latest request and obtained assurance that a letter granting approval of the University of Maryland course would be sent immediately to your APO address.

Justice Dept. Going Ahead

Two persons were injured last night in two accidents in Pitt County.

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is pledging "full steam ahead" in the criminal investigation of Bert Lance's financial affairs, despite President Carter's assertion that Lance committed no crimes.

Office of Management and Budget, the President said: "There has always been a possibility that in the last week's Senate hearings that Bert could not answer the allegations adequately, that he would prove to have violated a law. That was not the case."

The first accident occurred at 9 p.m. on rural paved road 1728 with one car involved in the mishap.

"This is an independent investigation and it's going to continue," Deputy Atty. Gen. Peter Flaherty said in an interview Thursday.

At another point, Carter referred to allegations of impropriety and illegality in Lance's business dealings and said all of them "have been proven false and without foundation."

According to Trooper W. E. Brinson, a car driven by Mary Ann Bunting was headed south in 1728 when it rounded a curve and ran off on the left side in a ditch.

He said Carter's assertions of Lance's innocence would have no effect on the department investigation and the ultimate decision about prosecution.

But Carter's statements aroused at least mild concern among some veteran prosecutors who called it improper for the President to make such a public declaration while the investigation is pending.

A passenger in the car, Vicky Manning of Greenville was reportedly injured.

As one former department official put it: "Yes, any prosecutor would be somewhat chagrined by prejudgment on the part of a chief executive. But it doesn't really do anything to the substance of the investigation."

Newly appointed board members will be sworn in — three have been named since the last trustees meeting in the summer — and the board will elect 1977-78 officers.

The trooper said no charges were made.

Members of the Greenville Rescue and Eastern Pines Fire Department responded to both accidents.

Trooper Brinson also reported that one person was injured in another one car accident on highway 43 about four miles south of Greenville at 10:40 p.m.

The officer said a car driven by James Otis Shackelford of Farmville was traveling south on highway 43, when it ran off the right shoulder into a ditch trapping Shackelford in the auto for about 30 minutes.

Investigation into the accident is continuing.

As a result of the collision, the Stallings vehicle ran off the road and into a line of parked vehicles, resulting in five of the parked vehicles being damaged.

Officers estimated damage to the car driven by Russell at $1,000 and set damage to the Stallings truck at $900.

failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Davis Streets.

Police reported the Wooten car collided with an auto operated by Cheryl Denise Speight of 309 Roundtree Dr., causing an estimated $1,800 damage to the Speight car and $300 damage to the Wooten vehicle.

Investigation of a 4 p.m. mishap on Cotanche Street, 75 feet North of the Fifth Street intersection resulted in charges of reckless driving being brought against Ruth Howard Smith of Route 1, Grimesland.

Officers reported the Smith car collided with the side of the building housing The Gazebo, resulting in an estimated $500 damage to the car and $200 damage to the building.

Cars operated by William Marion Green of Robersonville, and Margaret Haas Ankudowicz of Shady Knoll Trailer Pk., collided about 10:40 p.m. on Farmville Boulevard, 85 feet East of the Memorial Drive intersection.

Investigators' who reported no charges, estimated damage at $575 to the Green car and $75 to the Ankudowicz vehicle.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer responds to a bank's advertisement of the convenience of having bills paid automatically from his account. But a computer goof and $120 is paid to the phone company instead of $12.

Only then does the consumer learn that electronic payments systems do not give him the legal safeguards on his money that he has under traditional methods of payments.

Esther Peterson, consumer adviser to President Carter, described this scenario Thursday in urging Congress to write a law giving consumers the same protection afforded now in transactions by check or credit card.

The first electronic payment systems now are being marketed by banks. Eventually a consumer is expected under such systems to be able to pay for store merchandise by having the amount of his purchase deducted from his bank account instantaneously.

The computer technology now exists for such a method of payment, and the first electronic systems now are being offered.

"Banks, in the absence of a federal law, have little incentive to discuss the rights which consumers will lose if they switch to electronic funds transfer," Mrs. Peterson said.

"Consumers don't realize that if someone steals money from the bank's electronic accounts, no federal law says that the bank, rather than the consumer, is liable for the loss. Nor do most consumers know how real a threat computer theft is," she said.

Mrs. Peterson quoted an expert's estimate that more than 300 incidents of computer fraud have occurred, with the average loss $150 million.

She testified in favor of a bill introduced by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., that would put consumer safeguards on electronic transfers similar to the legal protections now applying to checks and credit cards.

The bill would:

- Allow a consumer to stop payment within three days on an electronic transfer, as he now can do with a check.
- Require a clear disclosure to the consumer of all his rights and liabilities.
- Require a receipt to the consumer for each transaction plus a monthly statement of all electronic payments.

Mrs. Peterson said her statement "may not represent the final position of the administration" on electronic funds transfers. The implications of the electronic systems are being considered by a federal study commission and the consumer adviser said the administration does not want to take a final position until the commission makes its recommendations.

DOUBLE DUTY — New pieces by designer Vladimir Kagan, who advocates multifunction furniture, have chaise lounge and sleeping extensions.

Designer Urges New Furniture Arrangement

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In decorating "you can do things on a shoestring by taking a less-is-more attitude," advises Vladimir Kagan of New York, a designer and manufacturer of furniture.

If you don't do anything else in decorating, get your furniture away from walls. It requires less space when furniture is placed in the interior rather than on the perimeter of the room, he points out.

Then, too, conventional furniture arrangements may pin you to old ideas in furnishings. Modern furniture has so changed that "we should landscape our floor space," he believes.

A well known designer of custom furnishings, Kagan discusses the current furniture market.

"We are in a romantic, nostalgic mood. We are not looking for revolutionary design or heavy experimentation like corrugated paper furniture," he says. "A few years ago we thought 18th-century furnishings were the only kinds of antiques. Now we have discovered the 19th century, such as the avant-garde furnishings of Brighton (England), which break away from what we know as polite 18th-century.

"In the early 20th century, Art Nouveau was far removed from contemporary concepts of being polite and acceptable. In our nostalgic mood for prewar romance, we are taking a closer look at the deco of the '30s and finding beauty in it as home fashion designers become less imitative and more interpretive.

"They are not making reproductions of the 1930s, they are making 1977 versions of it," he adds. "In the same sense, you could not wear your mother's old clothing and look fashionable in it, but fashion designers are picking what is alluring of that period and are turning the fashions into beautiful, natural, feminine styles. The same thing is happening with home furnishings. It is more natural, less garish and at a better taste level as sifted to a common denominator."

Although there is a bit of furniture that the trade calls "bo-rax" still around there is a lot of liveable furniture at moderate prices. Kagan likes the new rattan lines of certain manufacturers in chairs using metal and wood and fabrics that are unrestrained.

Kagan's seven-year-old multilevel furniture designs have been widely copied, although he still doesn't think of it as mass market design, he said.

"I create islands of multilevels where you can sit, sleep, lounge and play. People don't want to sit at one level," he said in describing his furniture, which is used in many ways.

One bed, "an island within a room," has "liberated the bedroom." Cabinets and all sorts of things are part of the bed, which is built to be used anywhere in a room. A foam rubber perimeter can serve as a chair and chaise. He designs for people with unique ideas, he commented.

In 1943 Kagan began working with his father, a manufacturer and cabinet maker, who had been apprenticed in Russia at the turn of the century. He had emigrated to the United States in 1938 with his old tools and opened a little cabinet shop in New York.

As a result of his work with his father, Kagan studied architecture and began his own innovative career. He trains his own craftsmen and artisans, but says he always needs more — one problem in the furniture business today.

Law Says Divorce Must Be Published

DEAR ABBY: You've often heard the line, "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby," but this time, you were so off base, I had to write.

You told MINNESOTAN if she requested that the news of her divorce be withheld from publication, the editor would probably respect her wishes.

Baloney! I don't know about Minnesota, but in Iowa divorces are published by law.

We sometimes publish divorces as news—not on our front page, but usually listed with other court house records—whether or not we're requested to keep it confidential.

Some newspapers in this area publish entire court proceedings on the front page—"blow by blow," so to speak.

Please don't go telling your readers they may edit their local newspapers. With your background, you should know better.

RUSSELL S. OECHSLIN, EDITOR-PUBLISHER, INDEPENDENCE, IA.

DEAR ED-PUB: I should have, but I didn't. An editor who shall remain nameless, lest he become jobless, gave me a bum steer. Thanks for setting the record straight. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: I play softball, and not to brag, but I'm considered a pretty good player.

There's this girl I sort of hang around with. I'm not really all that involved with her, but she's been coming around to watch me play quite a lot lately, and that's my problem.

Last season I didn't mind her watching me play, and I played okay, but this season, for some dumb reason, every time I see her I get nervous and I play lousy. Maybe I'd play lousy, anyway, but when I see her there, I play extra lousy.

How can I get her not to come around when I'm playing without getting her mad at me? She's a neat kid and I don't want to hurt her feelings.

SOFTBALL SOFTY

DEAR SOFTY: Level with her. Tell her you want to find out for sure if you're playing lousy because she's there. She might be flattered to learn that you think her presence is affecting your game.

DEAR ABBY: I am 25 and female. Last year I bought a watch, which I treasured. It cost $145—a lot of money for me. I had to save a long time to buy it.

I wore it one day with a fellow I was sort of going with. He makes good money and has a government job. We went for a drive and decided to wade out into a stream so I took my watch off and he locked it in the glove compartment of his car.

After he took me home and drove off (he lives 200 miles away) I realized my watch was in his car. I called him that very night and asked him to please put my watch in a safe place until we met again.

Well, every time we met after that he said he "forgot" my watch. It's been a year now and he says he doesn't know where it is, and he's given up the search, so I had better get another one. It wasn't insured and he never offered to replace it. My feelings toward him are ambivalent. I don't especially want to see him, but this watch business has upset me. If you were in my place, what would you do?

"E"

DEAR "E": I'd buy myself another watch, but I wouldn't give the fellow who "lost" it the time of day.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Peanut Charisma Is Growing

By TOM HOGE

AP Newsfeatures Writer

With a peanut farmer dwelling in the White House, the lowly goober has taken on a charisma it never had before.

In Washington, some government officials have set out bowls of unshelled peanuts for visitors, and at cocktail parties in the nation's capital salted peanuts are much in evidence these days.

Peanuts have long received high marks from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which includes peanut butter on school lunch programs. Nutritionists say the sticky spread is 26 per cent protein. It is also rich in Vitamin B, phosphorus, thiamine and niacin.

For a long time it was believed that peanuts originated in Africa, but discovery of the nuts in Inca tombs indicates that they were native to the Americas. In fact, the Peruvian tribes are said to have mixed minced up peanuts with honey. In Mexico there was an Indian tribe which used cocoa in a peanut butter recipe and called it earth chocolate, since peanuts grow underground.

Peanuts are not nuts at all but a member of the pea family. Thomas Jefferson, who liked the little nuts, called them "ground peas."

The evolution of the peanut is interesting in light of recent discoveries. We are told they caught the fancy of Spanish explorers who encountered the nuts in Peru and took samples back home with them and began their own fields. In the 16th century, Spanish and Portuguese ships brought peanuts to Africa and traded them for spices and ivory. They have flourished in the dark continent ever since.

Peanuts recrossed the Atlantic in the 18th century in the holds of slave ships, which stocked them as a source of cheap food for their human cargo. Soon Southerners were growing nuts on plantations and calling them goobers, a derivative from the Congolese name "nguba."

Today more than a half billion pounds of peanuts, a good part grown in Georgia and Alabama, is eaten in many other forms, from cream of peanut soup to peanut butter pancakes. Here a recipe for the soup.

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1 cup thinly sliced celery
- 1 medium onion, chopped fine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 quarts chicken stock or broth
- 1 cup creamy peanut butter
- 1 cup light cream
- Melt butter in large saucepan over low heat and add celery and onion. Cook till tender but not browned. Add flour and stir till mixture is smooth. Gradually add chicken broth and bring to a boil. Blend in peanut butter and simmer 15 minutes. Stir in cream just before serving. Serves 8. Good with a chilled rose wine.

Resignation The Best Thing

Bert Lance has resigned as President Carter's budget director.

The announcement was made by the president in a dramatic afternoon press conference at which he defended Lance and called him a friend who he knew "personally as well as if he was my own brother."

The president called Lance a "good and honorable man." He continued "... nothing that I have heard or read has shaken my belief in Bert's ability and integrity."

The president did concede that he felt that Lance had made the right decision, and on this point we agree.

No doubt the president is right in defending Lance's character, but the reports of large overdrafts on the Calhoun First National Bank, which Lance headed, and questionable use of aircraft leased or owned by the National Bank of Georgia are simply too important to ignore.

Banks are chartered by state or the federal governments and their deposits are insured by the federal government. The entire banking industry has the fate of our national economy resting on it. Therefore the public has an interest in how any bank is run. It is doubtful that the practices cited are good banking, or they shouldn't be.

These questions would have forever been hanging over Bert Lance as budget director.

Perhaps Sen. Charles Percy (R-Ill.) put it in perspective when he said, "We are in this fix because we find (we have) to do what we should have done in January: thoroughly review Mr. Lance's qualifications to direct the Office of Management and Budget."

Bert Lance has done what is best for the administration and the nation in resigning. From this point, he is once again a private citizen.

Tomorrow East Carolina University plays its first home game at Ficklen Stadium this year against VMI.

With the excitement over ECU football this year a large crowd can be expected.

Chief of Police Glenn Cannon has urged motorists approaching the stadium to obey directions of officers, park in designated areas and to drive carefully.

That is good advice. Following it could mean the difference between having a pleasant evening at the game, or going through the unpleasant experience caused by an accident.

THIS AFTERNOON

Feuding Over Local Jails

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The issue of keeping state prisoners in local jails is putting Gov. James B. Hunt and his administration at odds with local government officials.

The new law took effect only three months ago: no male misdemeanant may be sentenced to the state prison system unless his total term exceeds 180 days. Till now, the limit was more than 30 days.

Local jailers, sheriff departments, and county commissioners fought the measure in the past session of the General Assembly, but yielded when what they thought was a compromise favorable to them was agreed upon.

Jail Cost

One of the big contentions was cost, so legislators wrote into the new law that state and local officials would "negotiate" on the money to be paid by the state for keeping the convict in the local lockup.

But the General Assembly did not set aside money to cover the operation, and while state officials will "negotiate" with the local officials, the bargaining stops at $8 per day—that's all the state will pay.

But the law remains in effect stating that the prisoners will be kept in the jail, not sent to prison, and that situation prompted a strong resolution to be adopted at the recent meeting of the statewide Association of County Commissioners.

That organization opposed passage of the law, and referring to the payment by negotiations now says, "The Department of Corrections appears to have misled the General Assembly... by indicating... that the current appropriation to (it) was adequate to compensate counties on a negotiated cost basis..."

Corrections has "failed to recognize the statutory provisions... or legislative intent..." and now the counties, in effect, can't refuse the prisoners... and can't get the amount of money they want.

The association calls on Gov. Hunt and Corrections Secretary Amos Reed to "reverse their actions to date and permit objective negotiations in setting compensation to counties..."

But Gov. Hunt says flatly there isn't much chance of that.

BILL NOBLITT

Fair Figure

"We found that $8 per day is a fair figure, and one that we can accommodate within the funds that we now have available... that is not perfect, but it is the best we can do," says Hunt. The money must be gotten from several different sources, he noted, and is supposed to cover only the increased "fixed" costs of operating the local jail within additional prisoners.

Actually, says the governor, the increase for food, additional guards, and prisoner maintenance would only be $2.50 to $3.00 per day.

Some local governments have tried to include building costs and other expanded operating expenses—one county even tried to get $200 per day, Gov. Hunt says.

Some say it costs more than $8 per day. "But they now have to transfer the prisoners to a state prison... we save them that deputy's time and car expense. And the prisoners are available to do work in the county," says the governor.

It works two ways, he argues, and "all we can say to the local units is that we are trying to work it out with you."

What of those local governments which say they absolutely can't handle the system? They have to take the prisoners anyway... the law requires it, Hunt said. And there is not only a moral question of relieving overcrowded conditions, but the real threat of a federal court order, he added.

In July there were 14,400 inmates in space for 10,900. The Legislature set up $17 million for adding 450 spaces at Central; $11.5 million for other construction; and existing building funds are being used to add units for another 1,000 inmates. Two juvenile training centers are being converted to prison use, also.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Stage Set For A Tragedy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's once-forceful Mideast peace plan has deteriorated so rapidly that Israel's more thoughtful American backers fear what they call Prime Minister Menachem Begin's "creeping annexation" of the West Bank will go forward, without effective interference from Washington, to a climax of blood and tragedy. This view may be premature and unfair to Mr. Carter. But it is held by the shrewdest American Jewish leaders, many of whom have deep, unpublicized reservations about Begin's zealous commitment to a "greater Israel."

One prominent Jewish leader told us that Begin's force of personality and blunt refusal to accept the Carter peace plan of last spring "has caused Carter to retreat to a point zero." It is a view widely held in Washington.

The latest ingredient giving substance to this unflattering view was the President's own inexplicable phraseology in an exclusive interview he gave to Trude B. Feldman, widely-known writer on American-Jewish affairs, published in the Jerusalem Post Sept. 9.

After detailing the "enormous" time he said he had spent on the Middle East, Mr. Carter dropped a bombshell: "If I see no further interest among the parties in a settlement, and if I become convinced they're not acting in good faith, I will be reluctant to continue my efforts to bring them together."

That dark hint of a U.S. pullback from active participation in Mideast negotiations sets the stage for "creeping annexation" of the West Bank by hard-line Israeli expansionists who now hold power. Even Israel's friends here acknowledge its overwhelming military superiority over any conceivable combination of Arab states today. Thus, if U.S. pressure on Israel — boldly exerted by Mr. Carter during the first months of his presidency — were suddenly removed, there would be no visible resistance to Begin's expansionist plan.

Begin's hand is strengthened, therefore, by the President's hint that if Israel refuses to make U.S.-desired concessions he will pick up his marbles and move out of the Mideast. Ignoring Mr. Carter's fervent appeal, Begin has legalized three settlements and authorized three more since his triumphant visit here last July. The Carter administration, except for repeating old formulations stressing its opposition, has done nothing to inhibit Begin — not even hinting at reducing multi-billion dollar U.S. aid for Israel.

Those thoughtful leaders of the American-Jewish community we have been quoting fear this inaction from Washington. While admiring Begin's toughness, they know his politics too well to accept the thesis that planting settlements on the West Bank is simply a lever to push the Arabs into overall peace concessions.

To the contrary, Begin's policy is correctly perceived by these Jewish leaders as creeping annexation under the law of adverse possession: the longer the Israelis stay in the settlements and the more Israelis settle there, the stronger their claim to perpetual ownership. Down that road lies the certainty of war.

Fearful of what a new war might mean for U.S.-Israeli relations and for Israel itself, these American Jews are starting to blame the President.

Strength For Today

A CHANGE OF FRONT

In his novel "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo, referring to Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo, says: "The hour had come for the supreme Justice to take notice. Napoleon had been denounced by the Infinite, and his downfall had been determined. He was obstructing God. Waterloo was no mere battle; it was a change of front on the part of the universe."

Victor Hugo here recognized the fact that God at one and the same time is in every human act and in the whole of history. But it is only at the great turning points that he becomes plainly visible to us.

The acts of our lives are not really acts at all — they are God manifesting Himself in the world of things. History is the story of God's dealings with a multitude of things, and His story of God's dealings with a multitude of people. Of this we can be sure, that when God decides against Napoleon or against any humble person who is determined to disobey him and flout his will, there will be "a change of front on the part of the universe."

Lance And Overdrafts

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The worst part of the Bert Lance hearings as far as I was concerned had to do with the overdrafts of his wife, himself and their relatives at the Calhoun National Bank.

Whether Mr. Lance is innocent or guilty of any of the allegations made against him, he has admitted that he and his family dealt heavily in overdrafts and wrote checks for which there were no funds at the moment to cover them.

President Carter, in defending his good friend, said he didn't see anything wrong in overdrafts and many people do it. The point then is, if the President of the United States doesn't see anything wrong in them and the head of the Office of Management and Budget obviously doesn't, how can the average husband (this is a male chauvinist column, if anyone is interested) expect his wife not to engage in the same practice?

Just the other day we got a notice from the bank informing my wife that she had written $450 in checks for which there was no money in the account to cover them.

I asked her about it. "Oh," she said sweetly, having watched the hearings for three days, "that was just an overdraft."

"You may call it an overdraft, but some people might say you've been writing bum checks."

"I don't see why the bank is so excited. LaBelle Lance had overdrafts of over $140,000 and no one bothered her."

"LaBelle's husband was president of the bank. She was entitled to write checks stamped 'insufficient funds,' but our bank gets very angry when we do it."

"I don't see why our bank should get angry about a $450 overdraft when Bert Lance's bank found them perfectly respectable."

"Because," I said, "if you paid close attention during the hearings, Mr. Lance said every bank treats overdrafts in a different manner. Some banks hate them and other banks encourage them. Our bank likes to keep its books straight."

"Well then, I think we ought to move our account to the Calhoun National Bank. If they like overdrafts, then I'm a perfect customer."

"It won't do any good because the Calhoun National Bank has agreed with the comptroller's office that they won't permit overdrafts any more."

"Why not?" my wife wanted to know.

"Because it's a bad banking practice. If you permit people to write out checks for money they don't have, it screws up the computers. They don't know where they're at."

"I think that's terribly unfair. It seems to me a bank should pay on the checks you write whether there is money in your account or not. After all, we'll cover them one way or another. Won't we?"

"Possibly. But the point is that if all Americans started writing checks with insufficient funds, it would make people very sloppy about their finances and could turn us into a nation of check kites."

"Bert Lance doesn't feel that way, and he was a banker. I'll bet he never yelled at his wife when he got her statement from the Calhoun National Bank."

Mouse Kill Okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may not know it but he has a go-ahead from the Humane Society of the United States to kill as quickly as possible the mice that inhabit the presidential offices.

Three White House sources reported that special devices that trap rather than kill mice have been installed near Carter's private office because, they claimed, conventional mousetraps are frowned upon by humane societies.

Nothing could be further from the truth, it seems. Said Charles Herman, spokesman for the national society:

"We stay away from rodents. Essentially, we're for the quickest possible kill for these pests. We're against cruelty."

When the local society was asked if it had advised Carter or his people against using everyday mousetraps, a spokesman

Floyd Griffin, state secretary of the school commission released an audit which showed it cost $21,343,361.02 to support the state's eight-months school term in 1936-37.

This was a 5.89 percent increase over the previous year.

The Budget Bureau approved expenditure by the Agriculture Department today of up to $20,000 for the purchase of land for use in peanut research.

Kerr Scott, agriculture commissioner, said the Board of Agriculture held options on the 250-acre Edwards farm adjoining the Upper Coastal Plain test farm in Edgecombe County and the land would be purchased.

The Anatomy Of A Resignation

By FRANK CORMIER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter decided sometime Tuesday that it was time to stop playing cat and mouse with the future of Bert Lance.

So Carter scheduled a longdelayed news conference, a decision that touched off a rapid series of developments that reached a climax Wednesday with his announcement that Lance, his friend, confidant and sometime banker, was resigning as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Although many predecessors were name-without-faces so far as most Americans were concerned, Lance was much more. He was close to Carter. A lot of folks thought about him as "deputy president."

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, in announcing the news conference, quoted his boss as saying, "Why don't we just go ahead and have one? I'm tired of moving the thing around."

When Powell was asked if these were Carter's exact words, he reported the President was "more vivid than that."

It was one sign of the emotional atmosphere around the White House when Carter decided to meet the press after holding off for a week because he wasn't ready with any firm answers about Lance's fate.

The decision to hold the news conference was closely followed by hurry-up meetings climaxed by the Lance resignation. Powell was asked afterwards if Carter had set out, in this fashion, to send Lance the message that it was time to make some basic decisions.

"Obviously, that was a possibility," Powell replied. A few days earlier, Powell had said of a forced Lance resignation, "Certainly that would not be an easy thing for the President to do."

So there was at least an outward impression that Carter, unwilling to fire his friend to rid himself of a potential political liability, forced the issue in a way that prodded Lance into taking the initiative.

Once the news conference was scheduled, the next step involved a supposedly casual tennis match on the White House courts. It was the kind of match that only the President could engineer.

Powell announced the decision to hold the news conference at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. At 5 p.m., the President, Lance, top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan and speechwriter Jim Fallows began a round of tennis on the White House courts. The game ended at 6:30 p.m.

Jordan and Fallows departed. Carter and Lance sat, alone, on chairs near the secluded tennis court.

There, with the sun beginning to set, Lance told his longtime friend, the President, that it would be best if he left the Office of Management and Budget and returned to Georgia. However, he said he wanted to talk with his wife and his attorney.

Lance was back at the White House by 6:30 a.m.

Wednesday for another talk with Carter.

During the day, Carter went about his scheduled appointments — the daily national security briefing, a talk about a range of government issues — but not Bert Lance — with a group of Republican senators, and a meeting with Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy.

Lance went to his Georgetown home for lunch with his wife, LaBelle. After lunch, the Lances came out to drive to the White House for one more talk with Carter. There was a parking ticket on Lance's windshield.

Carter had planned to begin his nationally broadcast news conference at 3 p.m. But at 2:10 p.m., after the talk with the Lances, the President and Powell decided to delay the news conference until 5 p.m.

Lance wanted time to consult with his attorney, Clark Clifford, about the resignation letter being prepared.

Carter Allies Try Blocking Gas Vote

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — President Carter's allies in the Senate, whipped in a test vote on natural gas price controls, are falling back on delay tactics and the threat of a filibuster to postpone a final decision.

With continued debate scheduled today, two Democratic foes of deregulation, Sens. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and James Abourezk of South Dakota, said they were ready to offer more than 100 amendments in an attempt to block a final vote.

Metzenbaum said he was prepared for a "full discussion on the issue," a Senate euphemism for filibuster.

There was no sign that White House advisers were supporting a filibuster, and the President, who lobbied personally Thursday in a losing cause, was described as still hopeful deregulation would be rejected.

The President's energy plan, already approved by the House, calls for a 30-cent increase in the price of natural gas, now set at $1.45 per thousand cubic feet. Controls also would be extended to currently unregulated gas sold within producing states, mainly Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

An alternate industry-backed plan calls for an immediate end of controls on newly produced onshore gas. Price controls would be removed from offshore gas over five years.

Under either plan, consumers will be paying larger heating bills in the future, although estimates vary of the effect of the two plans.

A Congressional Budget Office study says Carter's plan would mean an average consumer would be paying $42.80 a month for heating by 1978, but $55.80 under the industry plan.

Deregulation backers dispute the estimate and say consumers won't be hit that hard.

The defeat for the administration came on a motion to scrap the industry plan, backed by Sen. James Pearson, R-Kans., and Lloyd Benson, D-

Tex.. The vote to keep the plan alive was 52-46, a result that the President's floor managers said means almost certain death for the administration's natural gas plan when it comes up for a final vote.

The setback is not the first for the administration's energy plan.

Senate committees have discarded proposals to tax cars that use gasoline inefficiently and to overhaul electric utility rate structures.

The proposed crude oil tax appears doomed unless it is coupled with a plan to pump its revenues into energy exploration. In addition, the full Senate has watered down the administration's plan to force utilities to use more coal.

Americans Held In Mexico Are Warned: No Soft Life Ahead

By KEVIN M. KELLEGHAN
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has warned Americans clamoring to get out of Mexican jails not to expect a soft life if they are transferred home to serve out their terms.

A 92-page pamphlet explaining the transfer program to American prisoners cautions them not to expect stereotypes in their cells, conjugal visits or maid service, which some enjoy through bribery in Mexico.

A U. S. official said Thursday that as many as 20 per cent of the Americans who will be eligible for transfers may choose to serve out their terms in Mexico because they can buy comforts not available in American prisons.

Michael Abbell, special assistant in the Justice Department's criminal division, said the booklet's question-and-answer section spelling out U.S. prison restrictions on family visits, personal property, money limitations, cigarettes, musical instruments and gifts has already led some prisoners to decide against transferring.

"They like the conjugal visits in Mexican jails. They know that they won't have stereotypes in their cells in jails in the United States," said Abbell, who is in charge of interviewing prisoners to see if they want to return to the United States.

However, a majority of the 569 known American prisoners in Mexico are frustrated with delays in the transfer program and anxious for repatriation, which would include immediate parole hearings.

In June, a group of Americans complained bitterly to a U.S. Senate committee of brutal beatings and torture with electric cattle prods by Mexican police. They said they had to bribe Mexican officials to secure their legal rights, to obtain food and medical care and even to get space in prison cells.

A month later President Carter was sent a sheet stained with the blood of American prisoners in Mexico and a letter pleading for speedy action on the prisoner exchange program, which was agreed upon in a U.S.-Mexican treaty signed last November.

The Senate ratified the treaty July 21, but enabling legislation still must be approved before the exchange program can begin.

Not eligible for transfer are the 30 Americans jailed in Mexico for smuggling illegal aliens. Also excluded are prisoners who committed offenses punishable in Mexico but not in the United States.

Under the treaty, hundreds of Mexicans being held in U.S. prisons would be eligible for transfer to Mexico to complete their terms.

Please accept our humble and sincere thanks for the many, many nice things you did for us during our bereavement. Whatever you did for us, please know that we shall be forever grateful to you for it. Thank you.

Pirates Face Keydets In Home Opener

Linebacker Harold Randolph

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

During the Pat Dye era, games between East Carolina and VMI have tended to be tight ones.

Saturday's home opener between the Pirates and the Keydets in Ficklen Stadium probably won't be any different. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Dye and his Pirates will be glad to get back into the friendly confines of Ficklen Stadium, after three road contests which opened the season. An overflow crowd is expected of some 20,000.

It will be the first overflow crowd for a home opener for the Pirates, and only the second non-homecoming sellout since the last addition to the stadium.

VMI's pesky Keydets, who have upset William & Mary and carried Army to the wire, are expected to do all they can to throw a stumbling block into the path of the Pirates, winners of three straight games.

While the Pirates hold a 4-1 advantage over the Keydets in previous contests, the last three have been closely fought affairs.

The first Dye-led Pirate team went down to a 13-3 defeat in Lexington, Va., as VMI won the Southern Conference title in 1974.

The second of the Dye teams pulled out a 28-12 win in Greenville, while last year's game, a 17-3 win for East Carolina at Lexington, wasn't decided until late in the game.

It may be just as tough this year for the Pirates to win, if not tougher.

"We'll be playing the best VMI team that I've ever seen," Dye said. "They have the best people ever in their skilled position; they have two good quarterbacks, and they are strong up front, both offensively and defensively. They give you a lot of looks both on offense and defense, and that makes them awfully tough to prepare for."

To top that off, Dye avers, the Keydets have one of the best field goal kickers in the country in Craig Jones, ranked second among NCAA kickers this fall. He booted five through the uprights against William & Mary, the furthest from a 50-yard distance.

"If the kicking game plays as much a role as I expect it to," think that the Pirates played an outstanding game on defense, but he can't quite agree. "We played well, but we can play a whole lot better. They (Toledo) were not a polished offensive team."

A number of players were "star" winners for their performance against Toledo. They include Noah Clark (3), Wayne Poole (2), Oliver Felton (3), Woodrow Stevenson (2), Clifford Williams, Harold Randolph, Mike Brewington, Tommy Summer, Fred Chavis, Harold Fort, Charlie Carter, Steve Hale, Thomas McLaurin, Willie Holley, Terry Gallaher, Wayne and Southerland has 104.

Southerland has hit on 11 of 18 passes for 230 yards and is the total offense leader with 334 yards. Green had hit on just four of 14 passes for 67 yards.

VMI, which downed William & Mary, 23-13, bowed late to Army, 27-14, after struggling back from a 14-0 deficit to knot it at 14-14.

Andre Gibson leads the team in rushing with 219 yards. Quarterback Robbie Clark guides the Power-I offense, and has hit on nine of 16 passes for 106 yards. His backup is Larry Hupertz, who saw much of the action against Army, and who has hit four of 11 passes for 59 yards.

Jones, with 17 points, is the leading scorer for the Keydets, having hit five of seven field goal attempts and two of two PATs.

"VMI doesn't do anything fancy," Dye said. "They are physical and they just try to run over you. When they try it, you better be grabbing grass and holding on, or you are in trouble."

John Morris

Dye said, "he could be a great factor in the game."

Dye feels the contest is a big game for the Pirates. "It's our first home game, and we are looking for a capacity crowd. I'm glad to get back home, and I'm sure that our players are, too."

One of the big aims for Dye this week is to get the football running back Eddie Hicks more. "We just haven't run him enough this fall, and I've brought him into my office to apologize to him for this." Hicks has only 17 carries for 49 yards, far below his average both in yards and per carry average.

"Eddie is an unselfish player and hasn't complained to me about not getting as much time with the ball. He's done a good job blocking, but we want him to carry the ball more. This is going to be one of our goals this weekend."

Dye also reflected on his team's play last week in its 22-9 win over Toledo. "I said it was going to be a difficult game, and it was. Toledo was a better team than they were a week before. They are not a great team, but they played hard."

Dye was somewhat pleased by the improvement in the kicking game against Toledo. "A kickoff return helped us set up one touchdown, and a punt return helped us too. Our kickoff coverage was better, but there is still room for improvement."

Dye commented that if you look at the statistics, you would

Joe Godette

Bolt, Barry Johnson, Mike Heywood, Willie Hawkins (2), Hicks, Jimmy Southerland, Zack Valentine and John Morris.

"We are still far from where I think we can be," Dye said. "We have a long way to go before we are as good a team as we can be."

Dye said he expects to start Leander Green for the first time this week at quarterback. One reason has been that Southerland has been handicapped with the flu, and missed several days of practice.

Fullback Theodore Sutton is still the leading rusher on the team with 208 yards, while Green had 183, Hawkins had 142,

Harold Randolph: Saga Of 'Too Small'

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It might be a good idea if the East Carolina University Marching Pirates would learn a version of "Shall We Dance?" for football games.

Then, when Harold Randolph makes another sack, he'd be able to do his dance to music.

Randolph, who wears a towel at his waist with "Too Small" on it, likes to let the opposition know that he got 'em, and got 'em good, so he does a little dance, hands held high, after each tackle in the backfield.

So far this year, he's been dancing a lot. It's been infectious, too, with other members of the Pirate defense joining in when they make good tackles.

Randolph, a Greenville senior, is out for a personal record in minus yardage, and is already close to his goal. As a sophomore, he had 16 tackles for a loss of 58 yards. So far this year, he's made ten tackles for minus 55 yards.

Just about anything this Saturday against VMI will set his new mark — and most of the season is still ahead.

Saturday night, when he was busy making several more losing-ground tackles, he was met with boos from the Toledo fans.

"That doesn't bother me a bit," he said with a grin. "I'm just up; I enjoy playing the game. And it doesn't make any difference whether we're playing Duke or whoever."

The man who was nearly overlooked as a high school senior, wants to get between 110 and 115 tackles during the year.

He's well on his way to it with 32 solo and a total of 40 tackles already. "I think I can average ten or eleven a game. I think that's pretty good. . . . But I really had a bad night at Toledo. I'm still not playing like I want to. I can play a whole lot better. The best is still to come," he said.

Randolph had to walk on his freshman year at East Carolina, because of his size, and a writer tagged him with the "Too Small" nickname, one which Randolph likes, after he became a starter as a sophomore and began drawing "ohs, and ahs" from the Pirate fans.

He was asked whether he thought he was an inspiration to other walkons. "I don't know. I know there were a couple of others from Rose High School when I was a freshman who didn't stick around. I really don't know if I am an inspiration to others in a similar situation."

But he does think he is an inspiration to the rest of the team. "I'm contagious. When I get up, the rest of them get up too."

But why the dance? "It just makes me feel good. It helps me get up. Since I'm really too small to be playing my position, I have to be mentally up for ever game. I can't be physical like someone like Mike Brewington. I've got to get it done mentally. The dance helps me do that."

Whether Randolph will be doing his dance after this year remains to be seen. "He's already been called by one pro scout as the "best linebacker for his size in the country."

But that size may be his downfall in the pro ranks. "I'm not going to get my hopes up about the pros. Time will tell about that. I'm just going to concentrate on this year. After all, the fun is just beginning."

Randolph was overheard talking to a Pirate fan after the Duke game, where he said he wanted to be remembered at East Carolina. "I meant that when I leave I want to leave an impression on the minds of the fans for years to come," he said.

At the rate he's going, the impression won't only be on the fans, but on the opponents as well.

Williamston Forfeits Game

Williamston High School's football game with Bertie two weeks ago, which was won by the Tigers 12-6, has been forfeited, according to E. N. Farnell, principal of the school.

The forfeiture is a result of Tiger coach Dink Mills admittedly reinserting a Williamston player into the game after he had been ejected by the referees. In a letter to Bertie principal C. S. Credle on Tuesday following the Friday night contest, Farnell said, as far as he was concerned, the game was a forfeit.

There has been some doubt as to who has the authority to forfeit a game, according to Farnell, but he said discussions with North Carolina High School Athletic Association (NCHSAA) officials had suggested the matter be resolved between the principals of the two schools.

Farnell stated he first learned of the incident on Monday, Sept. 13, three days after the game, when Mills told him of it. He said Mills had written a public letter of apology the day after the game.

Farnell said Mills was reprimanded by him verbally and in a letter, of which copies were sent to all officials involved. In addition, Farnell stated in writing, in a letter to Credle, that Williamston considered the game a forfeit and

Bell To Start Against Vikings

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Despite a bone chip in his ankle, top draft pick Ricky Bell is scheduled to start at running back Saturday when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers take on Fran Tarkenton and his National Football Conference champion Minnesota Vikings.

The heavily-favored Vikings are looking for their first victory of the new National Football League season.

The Bucs, also 0-1, are looking for their first regular-season victory ever.

Last year, the Bucs went 0-14 while the Vikings made their fourth losing trip to the Super Bowl.

Although Coach John McKay isn't expected to announce the starting lineup until this afternoon, Bucs officials say Bell has been working out in pads and is ready.

The 22-year-old University of Southern California standout has had trouble with his right ankle for about three weeks. He complained that he had lost speed in last week's 13-3 loss to Philadelphia and asked to be taken out of the game.

Bell said afterwards that it didn't hurt while he was on the field, but tightened up while he was on the bench.

Team physicians hope the chip will dissolve.

The Bucs added a sixth running back this week — Stan Winfrey, late of the Miami Dolphins — as insurance. This could allow them to rest Bell more during the games.

In grid-iron action on Sunday the New York Giants are at Dallas, Atlanta at Washington, Oakland at Pittsburgh, Seattle at Cincinnati, Baltimore at New York Jets, Chicago at St. Louis, Houston at Green Bay, New Orleans at Detroit, San Diego at Kansas City, Buffalo at Denver, Miami at San Francisco, Philadelphia at Los Angeles.

On Monday, New England visits Cleveland.

Quarterbacking the Bucs will be rookie Randy Hedberg, out of Minot State, N.D. He led Tampa Bay to a 14-0 shutout over Baltimore in the pre-season but managed only 10 completions in 25 attempts for 26 net yards against the Eagles.

"The rookie in me came out," Hedberg said. "It will again. I just must learn to avoid making the same mistakes a second time."

After Minnesota's 16-10 opening loss to Dallas, Coach Bud Grant said "I was pleased with everything but the score...It was a game between a couple of somewhat similar teams.

"I guess the difference could have been that we lost two fumbles and three interceptions."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24 ABSOLUTELY LAST DAY!

Tom Baines glanced over the outcome of last week's picks and shook his head.

"That Vickie is studying this too much," he said. "She's taking this much too seriously."

Vickie Spivey, the young lady in question, was indeed taking it too seriously in the eyes of her five fellow — and male — panel members.

Here we are three weeks into the season, and she's still atop the standings. Talk about ERA!

There are differences all the way through, so there may be some shaking up this week.

Last week, except for Vickie, who went 8-4, the rest of us all had 7-5 weeks.

That left Vickie in the lead with a 24-6 record, while Steve Hemric, Jim Kyle and myself are tied at 22-8. Tom Baines is next at 20-10, while Joe Jenkins brings up the rear at 19-11.

Last week's high school picks went only 3-3, and we will try to improve that this time out.

Roanoke turns from non-conference to league play, and visits South Edgecombe. The host team has won once, while the "Skins are winless. But that will change: Roanoke to win.

Southern Nash will be at Ayden-Grifton. I've been going with the Chargers all along, and I've missed them twice. This time, I should change? Nope, not against Southern Nash at least. A-G

WILL win this time.

Bath is at Jamesville. The Pirates are leading their league, and Jamesville has yet to win. No changes here, as Bath keeps rolling.

C. B. Aycock visits North Pitt, in the first league game for the Panthers. Aycock stumbled last week against James Kenan, but they should have enough for the Panthers this week.

Conley travels to North Lenoir. If the Vikings can ever get their offense on track enough to score, they might pull something out. They've been doing everything but scoring. North Lenoir hasn't been beaten yet—and they should win here.

Finally, Greene Central visits Farmville Central is the most KEY of the Eastern Carolina games. Farmville Central shocked Havelock last week, but Greene Central is unbeaten.

We can't go against Farmville after last week. The Jaguars will win it.

Turning to our panel's picks, we find Rose hosting Jacksonville. The Cardinals are ranked second in the state by one paper and sixth in the East by another. Rose has won two in a row, and the Cards are unbeaten.

Vickie puts it on the line in this one, as she's the lone Rampant supporter in a 5-1 ballot for Jacksonville.

Then, the Pirates of East Carolina finally come home, meeting VMI Saturday evening.

The Keydets will be strong, and the Pirates will be trying to protect their winning streak.

The panel has no qualms, however, and goes 6-0 for the Pirates.

Our other concensus picks have: Duke over Virginia; State over Wake; South Carolina over Georgia; Clemson, Georgia Tech, a toss-up; Appalachian State over Richmond; Penn State over Maryland; Carolina over Northwestern; West Virginia over Kentucky; Mississippi State over Florida; and Nebraska over Baylor.

The full poll:

Blyleven No-Hits Angels

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
There was that awful moment when the Texas Rangers trainer walked to the mound in the eighth inning to talk to Bert Blyleven.

AL Roundup

"I didn't know if I could throw, but even if I was going to throw underhand I wasn't going to leave," Blyleven said afterwards.

The curve-balling right-hander stayed in the game and hurled the third no-hitter of the major league season as the Rangers blanked the California Angels 6-0.

The no-hitter sparked a light American League schedule that saw the Baltimore Orioles tighten up the East Division title race while the Boston Red Sox slipped a little off the pace.

"It was like the world stopped when (Thad) Bosley swung at that last pitch," ending the game, Blyleven said.

Bosley, who entered the game batting .308 struck out in the first, seventh and ninth innings. Before his final-out whiff, Blyleven issued his only walk of the night to pinch-hitter Carlos May.

Only one other Angel batter reached base. Ron Jackson was safe on Bert Campaneris' error to lead off the third, but was wiped out in an inning-ending double play.

"I used the curve ball exclusively in the ninth inning," Blyleven said. "I threw about 60 per cent curve balls tonight. My leg doesn't bother me that much when I throw curves."

It was the first start in 16 days for the native of Zeist, Holland, who went to high school just five miles from the Angels' stadium in Anaheim, Calif. Blyleven has been bothered by a groin pull on his right side.

He reinjured the muscle pull while pitching to Mario Guerrero in the eighth, bringing out the Ranger trainer.

"I first realized about the no-hitter in the second inning when I looked at the scoreboard and saw that (loser Paul) Hartzell and I both had one going and I thought it sure would be nice ... In the third and fourth, I concentrated more and the next thing I knew it was the eighth inning."

In other AL games, Detroit edged Boston 5-4, Baltimore trounced Toronto 7-1 and Chicago ripped Seattle 5-4.

Blyleven lives in nearby Mission Viejo, Calif., and his parents, in-laws, wife, son and daughter were among the 8,031 fans cheering him on.

"I love Southern California," he said. "That's my home. I'm glad I could pitch the no-hitter in front of everyone I love."

Texas scored all the runs Blyleven needed in the third inning with the aid of an error by Hartzell, 8-11. Jim Sundberg doubled and scored on Mike Hargrove's single. Hartzell then muffed Campaneris' sacrifice bunt and Toby Harrah later singled home two runs.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 1
A three-run homer by Lee May backed Mike Flanagan's six-hitter as Baltimore crushed Toronto to keep alive their AL East title hopes and move to just 1 1/2 games behind the New York Yankees.

"The half game doesn't mean anything," Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said, "because the Yanks can still play and win it. But if they lose, it'll be down to one."

"The magic number will suit me fine when the Yankees have to win five out of four."

Tigers 5, Red Sox 4
A two-run double by rookie Steve Kemp was the key blow in Detroit's four-run seventh inning as the Tigers edged Boston. The loss dropped third-place Boston three games behind the Yankees.

Kemp's double sailed over the head of Red Sox center fielder Fred Lynn, who later complained about the soggy outfield.

"It's not just wet, but the sod is loose," said Lynn, who couldn't get enough traction to catch up to Kemp's two-out fly ball. "You can't get any jump. You can't run at all. You push off and the ground slides away."

White Sox 5, Mariners 4
Ralph Garr drove in a tie-breaking run with a ninth-inning triple, then scored the eventual winning run on Chet Lemon's sacrifice fly as Chicago downed Seattle.

Sutter: Phils Have It

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "In my mind the Phillies have it clinched," said Bruce Sutter.

Sutter may believe the Phillies have the National League East division clinched with a 6 1/2-game lead over second place Pittsburgh with 10 games to play. But he isn't about to help them clinch it.

Sutter came on in the eighth and gave up just one hit in chalking up his 30th save of the season in Chicago's 5-3 victory over the Phillies Thursday night. The victory went to reliever Paul Reuschel, who worked one inning in support of starter Dennis Lamp.

The Phillies appeared to agree with Sutter. They weren't concerned with losing two straight at home to the Cubs and walking a treadmill with that magic number of four — any combination of four Phillies' wins or Pirates' losses.

Phillies' manager Danny Ozark said his club is playing good ball and needs to get a few more runs on the scoreboard. He looked like a guy counting his winnings.

Just a word of caution, however, not panic. The Phillies of 1964 were 6 1/2 games ahead with 10 games to play. And do you remember what happened?

To refresh your memory they lost 10 straight and finished second.

In other National League action San Diego edged Cincinnati 3-1, Atlanta whipped Houston 8-4 and Montreal blanked St. Louis 2-1.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the fourth off Lamp on consecutive singles by Greg Luzinski, Jay Johnstone and Gary Maddox.

But Chicago went ahead 2-1 in the fifth. Bobby Murcer singled and Steve Ontiveros walked. Phils starter Jim Lonborg got the next two batters, intentionally walked Mick Kelleher to load the bases, then gave up that two-run single to Lamp.

In the bottom of the fifth, Larry Bowa singled with two out and Mike Schmidt tripled. The Cubs took a 3-2 lead on Ontiveros single in the sixth. However, the Phillies tied it on singles by Luzinski and Johnstone and Bob Boone's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the inning.

Lonborg gave up the winning run in the seventh, walking Kelleher to start the inning.

Reuschel sacrificed Kelleher to second and Biittner singled in the winning run.

Padres 3, Reds 1
Gene Tenace capped a two-run rally in the fifth inning with an RBI single that snapped a 1-1 deadlock as San Diego beat Cincinnati.

Rookie left-hander Bob Shirley worked the first six innings to pick up the win while Rollie Fingers finished up to record his 34th save. Reds starter Doug Capilla, 7-8, took the loss.

Expos 2, Cardinals 0
Rookie left-hander Dan Schatzeder limited St. Louis to six hits and drove in the winning run with a two-out single in the seventh inning as Montreal blanked St. Louis.

Aycock Romps By Rocky Mt.

Alonzo Taylor scored two touchdowns and E. B. Aycock's offense piled up 472 yards as the Jaguars rolled over Rocky Mount yesterday afternoon, 27-12.

Rocky Mount scored touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters, but details of the scores were not available.

Taylor opened Aycock's scoring in the first period on a 15-yard run. Mark Douglas ran the conversion to give the locals an 8-6 lead.

In the second period, Jerome Cox took an 18-yard pass from Kenny Barnes for another touchdown. A PAT kicked failed.

Taylor was hit with a 10-yard scoring loss by Douglas in the third quarter and, in the fourth, Jeffrey Porter went across from eight yards out and Roger Williams kicked the PAT to round out the Aycock scoring.

Braves 8, Astros 4

Brian Asselstine drove in three runs with a double and a single as Atlanta whipped Houston and snapped Cesar Cedeño's 22-game hitting streak.

Eddie Solomon, 6-6, hurled the first 6-13 innings for the Braves to pick up the victory. J.R. Richard, 16-12, was the loser.

Rose JVs Nip Jax

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's junior varsity football team allowed Jacksonville to build up a 14-3 lead before it came roaring back with two third-quarter touchdowns to defeat the Baby Cardinals, 17-14.

Jacksonville opened the scoring with a six-yard run by Arthur Colson in the first period. Howard Williams ran in the conversion to give the Baby Cards an 8-0 lead.

Rose's Ted King booted a 20-yard field goal in the second period to cut into the Jacksonville lead, but the Baby Cardinals scored again in the third period when Terrence Davis took it in from 20 yards out. The PAT attempt failed, giving the Cards a 14-3 lead.

Later in the third quarter, however, Rose's Tod Tyson scored on a six-yard run and then Calvin Page took it in on a 45-yard scoring jaunt. King added both PAT kicks to give the Baby Rampancs the win.

Rose's jayvees are now 2-1.

A-G Defeats North Pitt

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton's volleyball team defeated North Pitt in two straight games yesterday with identical scores of 15-12 in each contest.

Both of the games were hard-fought with the teams seldom scoring over one or two points at a time.

Sandy Fulford served 12 points to lead the Chargerettes and Shonda Brock added seven. Cynthia Barnes had nine points for the Pant-HERS.

The game leaves Ayden-Grifton with a 4-1 record and North Pitt with a 3-1 mark.

Methodist Downs ECU

East Carolina's Lady Pirate tennis team opened the season yesterday with a disappointing loss to Methodist College by a 6-3 score.

The Lady Pirates took the number one and number two singles with Debbie Spinazzola defeating Jeanne Edwards 6-3, 6-0 and Louis Snyder taking Elaine Lewis 6-3, 6-1.

Spinazzola, a freshman, teamed with Dorcus Sunkel to gain the only other Pirate win in the first doubles event. The two beat Edwards and Lewis 6-2, 6-2.

Coach Cynthia Averett was not happy with the outcome of the match, noting, "Coming into this match, I thought we could win it. The girls had the right attitude coming in and tried hard, but they were mighty nervous."

"I thing we'll improve a lot in the next few matches."

The Lady Pirates are at home again next Tuesday for a match with N. C. State. The Wolfpack is also 0-1 with a 9-0 loss to Duke.

Summary:
Debbie Spinazzola (ECU) d. Jeanne Edwards, 6-3, 6-0.

Oakland Picked Over Steelers

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Call it a preview of the American Conference championship game and a bunch of guys from New England, Cincinnati, Baltimore and maybe a few other towns will come over and tap dance on your face—with cleats.

But there's no getting away from the fact that Sunday's game between the Steelers and the Oakland Raiders will generate enough heat to keep Pittsburgh's steel mills going until Christmas.

Oakland won both meetings last year—the come-from-behind 31-28 beating that featured George Atkinson's come-from-behind greeting of Lynn Swann and the 24-7 trouncing in the AFC title game when the Steelers were missing a little thing called a running game.

The Steelers are as healthy and hungry as ever—but no matter, The Raiders will come out on top once again.

Last week's mediocre mark: 8-6, .571. This week's picks:

Raiders 20, Steelers 17

On a head-to-head matchup, we like Ken Stabler's ability and play selection over Terry Bradshaw's. We also wonder just how much of Pittsburgh's success last Monday night was due to San Francisco's ineptitude.

All else aside, we stick with a champion until it's been knocked off, and when it comes to the Raiders, it may not happen this year—Super Bowl XII included.

Patriots 24, Browns 13

We're not ready to believe in the Browns just yet. If they can get past the Pats (and Pittsburgh or Oakland the next two weeks), then we'll believe. Right now, though, this Monday night game looks like a push-over for Grogan's Heroes.

Vikings 35, Bucs 6

We may not believe in Tampa Bay until the next decade—or century. Certainly not this Saturday night. Minnesota's troops may be getting old, but you're never too old when it comes to beating the Buccaneers.

Redskins 20, Falcons 10

Washington shouldn't have lost and Atlanta shouldn't have won last weekend. They'll both return to normal this time. By the way, with a bit of luck (bad for the Redskins and good for the Falcons), they each might end up close to 7-7 for the year.

Rams 27, Eagles 10

Los Angeles will go ga-over Joe Namath—if his line gives him some protection and his runners give him some yards. Ron Jaworski of the Eagles will get a welcome home that makes him feel like he's napping on a freeway.

Bengals 38, Seahawks 17

Cincinnati has had its bad game for the season. Oh, the Bengals may lose a few more, but they won't be embarrassed the way they were by the Browns. Pity Seattle. Bears 21, Cardinals 17

The Upset Special. It could be that the Cardiac Cards are going into coronary arrest. If Chicago thinks it's a contender, this is one of the games to show why.

Cowboys 34, Giants 14

The Jets play this one in Giants Stadium. Good thing, too. Otherwise they'd be lowering their own real estate values instead of someone else's.

Cowboys 34, Giants 14

This one could be over by halftime. New York quarterback Jerry Golsteyn will find out this week what a pass rush is.

Chiefs 23, Chargers 17

Watch lightning strike... and sputter and fizzle. San Diego is about as electrifying as a dead battery.

Packers 20, Oilers 14

A mini-upset. Green Bay's Lynn Dickey would like to do well against his former team. He'll do just well enough.

Lions 20, Saints 10

It took New Orleans just 30 minutes to show that this season, like all their other ones, is a wasted one.

Dolphins 20, 49ers 13

Even San Francisco's fog won't keep bespectacled Bob Griese from seeing the holes in the 49ers' defense.

Broncos 23, Bills 14

Once again Buffalo proves that one star and 21 mannequins don't make a team.

Pat Dye, Bear Bryant Still Keep In Touch

The picture is a visible reminder of a close personal relationship that goes back a dozen years. Dye was a Bryant protégé and still goes to the feet of the master for advice from time to time.

GC Rolls By FC JVs

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's junior varsity football team blanked Farmville Central last night with an 18-0 victory over the Baby Jaguars.

Darrell Shackelford scored two touchdowns for the Kids, getting the first on a 62-yard run in the first period and the second on a 31-yard punt return in the fourth.

The final Greene Central TD came later in the fourth period when Bobby Williams scored on a run from 34 yards away.

Greene Cent. 6 0 0 12-18

"The old son-of-a-gun is smart when you talk football with him," Dye grinned. "He wants you to talk about your team and what you are doing. He knows all us youngsters are so proud of our success that we'll talk about it. But all he's doing is finding out about our people and our strategy because he knows he may have to line up and play us some day."

Dye was a Georgia graduate and never really expected a job offer from Bryant when he asked for it back in 1965. But he got one as linebacker coach and recruiter for the state of Georgia.

"I think our backgrounds had something to do with us being a little closer than most folks," Dye said. "He grew up in the cotton fields and I did too. Sometimes we talked about chopping cotton, picking cotton or peddling watermelons."

The relationship lasted for nine years, until Dye left for East Carolina in 1974. Since then they've kept in close touch, mainly by phone. Dye said he usually gets football advice when he needs it from a Bryant assistant, but he did call Bryant for help once.

"I had a situation come up about an assistant coach, so I called to find out what to do," Dye recalled. "I never did get him, so I went ahead and made a decision. Later on, I talked with him about it and all he said was, 'I guess I'd done it 'bout the same way.'"

Valkyries Take Win

SPRING HOPE — D. H. Conley took three games to defeat Southern Nash in a volleyball match yesterday afternoon.

The Valkyries took the first game by a 15-12 margin, but the Lady Firebirds came back to win the second, 15-11.

In the third contest, Annie Hardy served five straight points and Glenda Green scored the final tally to give Conley a 16-14 victory. Green served eight straight points in the match.

Conley also won a junior varsity volleyball game with Southern Nash in three games. The win leaves the Valkyrie varsity with a 3-1 record, while Southern Nash, in its first year of volleyball competition, drops to 0-4.

Motors Back Home

Pittsburgh Steeler wide receiver Lynn Swann motored around Europe a bit, then decided his home led back to professional football. He returned to the Pittsburgh Steelers and is shown here in a practice break preparing for Sunday's game with arch-rival Oakland. (AP Laserphoto)

 Parts of Wyoming and Colorado got a dusting of snow early today on the first full day of fall, while portions of Texas basked in 80-degree temperatures. Rain, drizzle and fog were scattered across the nation.

A tornado was reported late Thursday night near Lusk in east-central Wyoming, but there were no reports of injuries or damage.

Snow fell in the Rock Springs and Evanston areas of Wyoming as well on portions of extreme northeastern Colorado.

A front moved onshore in the Pacific Northwest bringing showers and rains, and some fog along the coast. Showers and thunderstorms also were reported from Wyoming and western South Dakota through New Mexico and western Texas, in the Great Lakes region, over portions of the middle Mississippi Valley and along the south Atlantic Coast.

Fog was widespread over portions of the eastern part of the upper and middle Mississippi Valley and through the Great Lakes. Visibilities of less than one mile were reported in northern Illinois.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 30 degrees in Winnemucca, Nev., to 81 in Galveston and Waco, Tex.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms to be scattered over the upper Mississippi and northern middle Mississippi valleys, the upper Great Lakes and Florida. Rain and showers were predicted from the Pacific Northwest across the northern Rockies through the Plains.

Temperatures were expected

HOMESTEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — The last time Armando Rodriguez tried to come to America was by wooden dinghy, in 1968. He was caught and spent 4½ years in a Cuban prison.

This time a grinning and exuberant Rodriguez strode off a plush jet cradling a teen-aged daughter in his arms.

He was one of the 24 Cuban nationals and 31 U.S. citizens allowed to leave Cuba in the latest moderation of the backfence tension between Fidel Castro's government and the United States.

After discussions last month with Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, Castro sent word through Church that the Cuban relatives also could leave, setting up the flight Thursday aboard an Eastern Airlines 727 chartered by the State Department.

It was the largest group arrival since the conclusion of the Freedom Flights in 1973 that brought nearly 261,000 Cubans to the United States.

The American citizens had always been free to leave. But many remained because their families could not go with them.

"All I ask is that they let me die and be buried in America," said Luis Rivera, the first refugee to leave the plane. He later spotted an American flag and saluted crisply. Rivera said he had served with U.S. Armed Forces in the World War II invasion of Normandy.

"We're here," cried Eva Cejas, embracing her niece, Lucy Villa, at a nearby Miami hotel. They had not seen each other for 17 years.

The Rodriguez family was typical of Cubans who benefited from Castro's announcement Aug. 11. Rodriguez, his wife, Mayda, and three of their teen-aged daughters are Cuban citizens. They were allowed on the flight because one daughter, 18-year-old Irene, is a U.S. citizen. She was born in Tampa, Fla., when the family lived there before returning to Cuba in 1961.

Rodriguez, 38, caught the eyes of many as he carried his daughter, Deborah, 13, from the plane to a wheelchair. Her feet were swathed in bandages from surgery last month.

"When the plane touched down, we wept," Rodriguez said, aided by an interpreter. "I'll never go back."

The family has no money, Rodriguez said.

"We'll completely resettle them," said Isabelle Davis, chief of the U.S. Repatriate Program. "Those who are destitute are eligible for government loans to start a new life." Wayne S. Smith, deputy coordinator of Cuban affairs for the State Department, estimated that 250 persons in Cuba remain eligible to leave. But he said it appeared only about 100 would choose to do so.

Vietnamese May Flock To U.S.

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Food shortages and economic malaise may bring 60,000 or more Indochinese refugees to the United States during the next three or four years, according to testimony before a Senate committee.

Food shortages in the area are growing, witnesses said, with rice already in short supply in the central marketplace of the Laotian capital of Vientiane.

The Laotian food shortages are the result of drought there, witnesses said, plus a "lack of incentive" among farmers under the socialist economic system.

The testimony came during Senate hearings on legislation to extend refugee resettlement programs in the United States. The two-year emergency aid program for Indochinese refugees expires next Friday.

Representatives of a coalition of volunteer agencies who just returned from Southeast Asia said signs of food shortages in Laos already are showing as the result of recent drought. State Department officials indicated food aid to that country was under consideration.

Wells Klein, an official of the Coalition for Effective Resettlement of Indochinese Refugees, told of visiting Vientiane's central market and finding it virtually empty of rice, the region's staple food.

"We saw one two-quart basket of rice, and when we inquired about the price, the woman invited us to 'come in back' to discuss it," Klein said.

He said Laotians are not facing famine now, but may in a few years if the situation doesn't improve.

Philip C. Habib, the assistant secretary of state who heads the department's refugee task force, told the committee the estimate of 60,000 refugees is based on experiences thus far with the "second wave" of refugees, those who have fled their countries since the communists seized control of the region in 1975. Habib said most came here for economic rather than political reasons.

Habib said the number of refugees would not in itself cause serious problems. The United States now accepts about 385,000 legal immigrants a year.

But witnesses and senators questioned what the "third wave" will mean to state and local governments now relying on the federal aid program to finance resettlement of the refugees.

The administration has proposed to extend the refugee aid program at sharply reduced levels.

Health Careers Day Scheduled

ECU News Bureau
Representatives from hospitals, clinics and other health care agencies will be at East Carolina University Nov. 16 for ECU's annual Health Careers Day.

The event is sponsored by the ECU Career Planning and Placement Service and is designed to provide ECU students interested in careers in the health and medical fields opportunities to meet with potential employers.

While many junior and senior students wish to discuss details of employment possibilities, freshman and sophomore students considering careers in health care are invited to meet the representatives to learn more about careers in the health fields.

ECU graduates interested in any of the various health care categories should also plan to be on campus for Health Careers Day, said Furney James, director of Career Planning and Placement at ECU.

Among the health and paramedical fields to be represented at Health Careers Day are nursing, physical and occupational therapy, medical technology, social and correctional services, medical record science, dietetics, music therapy, speech, language and auditory pathology, community health, child development and family relations, rehabilitation counseling, environmental health, psychology, sociology and special education.

Agencies to be represented include hospitals and clinics, nursing homes, social service agencies, mental health centers, rehabilitation institutions and food service departments, James said.

Meetings between students and agency representatives will be held in ECU's Mendenhall Student Center.

T-Shirts Are Walking Billboards

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

One customer in Providence, R.I. had his $250,000 bail form reproduced on a T-shirt.

The Dyer Woods Nudist Campgrounds ordered shirts emblazoned with its name and, "Try it, you'll like it."

Thousands of people turn themselves into walking billboards for popular movies, television shows, manufacturers, retailers, amusement parks, organizations of various kinds, among other things.

John Bridgeman, chief engineer for radio station WETT-AM in Baltimore said he wears T-shirts almost daily.

"How do I feel about being a walking billboard? That's cool, because I trade 'WETT Radio' T-shirts with other merchants."

He was wearing a T-shirt from the Green Turtle Bar at the time.

In Oakland, Calif., wholesaler Steve Cornell described choosing designs as "a calculated gamble."

"Trends are what's on people's minds," Cornell said beer can slogans were hot a year ago. This summer began with "King Kong" and Farrah Fawcett-Majors designs, and now the big number is "Star Wars."

"By far the most requests are for imprinting names," said clerk Rachel England in a shop the St. Louis suburb of Creve Coeur, but slogans are also big sellers.

UPI correspondent Laszlo Domjan of St. Louis reported a general lack of original wit among the slogans displayed. Most were along the lines of "Love a nurse today" and "Fat people have more fun."

The size of the industry is small in terms of companies printing garments only, said John M. Crawford, executive director of Screen Printing Association International. In a phone call from association headquarters in Vienna, Va., he estimated them at 200-300 out of about 3,000. The remainder branch out into such things as household items, decals and posters.

Mrs. Jan Robinson, a T-shirt company executive in New York City, estimates her division's production at five million dozen a year. Nationwide production runs into billions of dozens. Mrs. Robinson is screen print division manager for Union Underwear, Inc. that she said is the nation's largest manufacturer of blank T-shirts for printing.

The parent company began more than 50 years ago, when it was mainly a contractor for the armed services. The screen print division split off about 10 years ago when the T-shirt fad began.

Crawford said a sales record was set last year, but he could only estimate the total figure at "in the millions. Much of the production is hidden: company giveaways, imports from such places as India, Pakistan, Hong Kong."

We just don't know how many are made, he said, or whether the record will be broken in 1977.

"A lot of people say the fad is going to die out," Crawford added. "But we expected about 150 people for a screen-printing seminar we ran in May; 450 showed up."

"There's no indication it's easing up. A lot of shirt manufacturers (of blanks for printing) are back-ordered."

Crawford said extensive screen printing of garments began in the early 1950s, primarily serving schools that wanted sports uniforms and T-shirts with school names printed on them.

Pete LaCorte, who operated a country club for 20 years, opened his T-shirt shop in Manhattan's fashionable East Fifties about five years ago. It was crowded with customers when he dropped in one hot, muggy afternoon recently.

Arlene Weisner was having a shirt printed with "Hunter" for her 18-year-old brother, who will enter Hunter College this fall.

"I'm going to get matching T-shirts for my boy friend and me," she said, but she hasn't made up her mind yet what they'll say.

Isabel Garrett, a toy designer, artist and painter, said she wants to meet people, so she lettered her own design. It reads:

"Creative, Resourceful (sic), Brainy, Artistic, NERVY!, Poetic, Witty, Sensitive, Ambitious!, Hero-Worshiper, SEEKING HERO."

"I'm looking to meet people," she said. "People put ads in papers. Why not on a T-shirt?"

Miss Garrett said she plans to wear the shirt while sketching on the streets of the city and dancing at discotheques. She also plans to keep a diary. "I guess I'll get a lot of smart aleck replies."

"Trends are what's on people's minds," said Steve Cornell, a wholesaler in Oakland, Calif.

"What's popular at the moment is what they want. The hottest thing on the market right now is 'Star Wars.'"

A year ago, he said, beer can slogans were favorites. This summer in his area began with "King Kong" and Farrah Fawcett-Majors designs.

To John Hoover, a merchant in a large Des Moines shopping center, the custom T-shirt business is "unreal."

He sells not just to individuals but to clubs, bars, athletic teams and other groups. He recently printed 500 shirts for the Soil Conservation Society of America. Hoover said most of his customers were 25 to 50 years old. Older customers usually say they're buying for their children or want a shirt as a gag. He said car designs are also big in the Midwest.

You know we've relaxed our definition of risque when shopkeepers from Des Moines to Texas and Boston report one popular T-shirt slogan is: "I'm a virgin (but this is a very old T-shirt)." Among the wearers of that one is a suburban mother in Carrollton, Tex., near Dallas.

Risque slogans are commonplace in many parts of the country. "Adult" slogans (including some pornographic ones) are sold openly in some communities, under the counter in others.

Miss England recalled no terribly risqué slogans asked by customers, but said the store stores two bound volumes of "adult" transfers under the counter to keep them out of sight of younger customers.

From Providence, R.I., UPI correspondent Michael Blumstein reported drug T-shirts were big: "Acapulco gold" and "let's get stoned," for example. Blumstein said shopkeeper June Reardon of Decalomania also told him she had a folder of "adult" sayings inappropriate even for UPI's message wire, which is for bureau use only.

Three years ago, Mayor Harry Kelley urged merchants in his resort town of Ocean

City, Md. to stop selling "obscene T-shirts."

Seek To Cut Suicide Rate

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — During the course of an average day, about a dozen Hungarians commit suicide and at least five times that number attempt to take their own lives, according to the government newspaper Magyar Hirnap.

In Budapest alone, said the newspaper, that meant 853 suicides in a single year, making the suicide rate in Hungary's capital city higher than in any other part of the country.

Of the 50 "registered causes of death," the newspaper added, suicide ranks sixth. But among persons between the ages of 15 and 24, it is the primary cause.

While conceding that Hungary has a suicide problem, the article indicated that it was magnified in international statistics because the country is legally bound to report all cases.

Attention: Farmers who depend on fungicides to produce disease-free crops EPA should hear from you!

The EPA is investigating alleged health hazards of DITHANE® fungicide, manufactured by Rohm and Haas Company, along with the whole spectrum of EBDC fungicides such as Zineb, Maneb, Mancozeb and others.

Scientists in America and throughout the world believe there is no health hazard created by the use of these EBDC fungicides on your crops. The EPA, however, may accept data from laboratory tests on mice and rats as indicating a hazard.

EPA will balance benefit evidence against hazard evidence. Evidence of benefit can keep these products in use. That's why EPA should hear from you within the next few weeks.

Specifically—EPA welcomes certain information about your use of fungicides and your thoughts about the consequences of these fungicides being taken off the market.

Here's a summary of what EPA wants to know:

- Major uses you make of EBDC fungicides and the estimated quantities used on each of your crops.
- Are there any available substitutes for EBDC fungicides and, if there are any, what would their use do to your costs.
- An estimate on the change in your productivity (yield per acre and/or total output) if EBDC fungicides were no longer available.
- Your guess as to the impact on production of major agricultural commodities and retail food prices of these commodities should EBDC fungicides be removed from the market.

Old Feud Forgotten In New Fight

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
UPI Senior Editor

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — An overgrown path behind the Darise Dairy Bar takes you up a steep hill to a graveyard almost forgotten, until the ghost of Randall McCoy got folks riled up again.

For 63 years the patriarch of the McCoy clan has been resting in his grave, up here on a knoll overlooking the Pike County jail and hanging site where the hated Hatfields got their comeuppance.

But ole Randall must be turning over in his coffin, seeing as how some of his kinfolks today have teamed up with the Hatfields in a fight over a family matter.

It came about when the mayor and some others in Pikeville got a high-flown notion to build a civic center and bring some culture to this coal town in southeastern Kentucky.

That's okay with most folks, along with the idea to reroute the Big Sandy River and U.S. 23, but the mayor wants to put it up on the hill where Chloe Creek Road comes into the highway and that's where Randall and four other McCoys are buried.

When the word got out that the graveyard, known as the Dils Cemetery, was going to be moved about 150 feet to make room for the civic center, a group of citizens filed a lawsuit against the city and the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The protesters claim to be descendants of both the Hatfields and the McCoys.

It's not what you would call a fancy cemetery. The weeds are grown up and beer cans are strewn about among the headstones. But it's historical, in a way.

"The cemetery is a tourist bomb of undetermined immensity," says Harold Stratton Moore, director of the Pikeville Historical Society.

Randall McCoy's grave marks the eastern boundary of an "historic district," according to the National Register of Historic Places.

Across Tug Fork in Sarah Ann, W. Va., through 40 miles of the rugged Cumberland Mountains, stands the western boundary marker, the tombstone of Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield.

This was the battleground in the legendary feuding between the Hatfields and the McCoys, the two clans that took to killing each other with startling brutality late in the 19th century.

Interestingly enough, many lifelong residents didn't even know the cemetery was up there, until the ruckus started.

"I've lived here all my life and I never knew there was a cemetery there," said Susan Tavis, a writer for a local weekly, the Appalachian Express.

Moore points out that from the high point in the cemetery you can see the Pike County Courthouse, where members of the Hatfield clan went on trial in 1888. They were accused of raiding Randall McCoy's home on New Year's Day, killing his daughter, Allifair, his son, Calvin, beating his wife, Sarah, into unconsciousness, and then burning the house and outbuildings to the ground.

You can also see the spot where "Cotton Top" Mounts was hanged, as well as his grave. Cotton Top was "weak-minded," the story goes, and confessed to his part in the raid. Four others in the Hatfield band were sentenced to life in prison.

The Dils Cemetery, which dates back to 1814, gets its name from Col. John Dills who is buried there. Here are the tombstones of Kentuckians who fought in most of America's wars, including that of Gen. William Ratliff, a veteran of the War of 1812.

Before the Civil War a black family acquired a burial plot there. Eventually it became known as Kentucky's first black cemetery. "I've lived all my life and I just do not understand this issue," said Mrs. Maggie Allen, a Pikeville housewife.

Regardless of the politics involved, a lot of folks around here just don't believe you ought to tamper with a graveyard.

"I don't believe in removing the dead unless it is absolutely necessary," said Willie Parsons, an electrician.

Mayor William C. Hambley, a physician, and other civic center proponents say that when the cemetery is moved they will build an access road, a small parking lot for visitors, and maybe even a monument to Randall McCoy and other dignitaries buried there.

"We even suggested that an information room within the center be dedicated to the McCoys," said Mary Lou Draughan of Pikeville's Model City Agency. "But they wouldn't hear of it."

Pikeville, a town of about 6,000, is the county seat of Pike County, once said to be the largest county east of the Mississippi, covering 70,000 square miles of mostly mountains. If the county was flattened out, some say, it would cover half the state of Kentucky.

And here in a remote region of a border state, folks are independent in their beliefs.

Loyalties were divided during the Civil War. A plaque in a small park in downtown Pikeville marks the place where in 1862 James A. Garfield, who was later to become President, was sworn in as a brigadier general in the Union Army.

Some say the feud between the Hatfields and the McCoys probably started during that war, but others contend the two patriarchs, Randall McCoy and Devil Anse Hatfield, fought for the same side, the Confederacy.

No one is sure how it all started. The McCoys lived mostly in Pike County, Ky., while the Hatfields lived across the Tug River in West Virginia.

But in 1864 Randall's brother, Asa Harmon, was found dead in a cave. Jim Vance, an uncle of Devil Anse's, was said to be the killer.

Later there was a dispute between Randall and Floyd Hatfield, a cousin of Devil Anse's, over the ownership of a hog. Randall took it to court and lost. Then in 1880 Randall's daughter, Roseanna, took a liking to Anse's eldest son, Johnse, a dandy with a reputation as a ladies' man.

Roseanna ran off to live with Johnse, but Anse would not allow his son to marry a McCoy. She got pregnant anyway and later gave birth to a baby girl who lived only about eight months.

That courtship touched off more skirmishing between the two families, and on election day in 1882 Anse's brother, Ellison Hatfield, was stabbed to death in a fight.

Two McCoy boys were arrested, but before they could be brought to trial they were kidnapped by the Hatfield clan, tied to pawpaw bushes and shot to death.

Warrants were issued for 23 Hatfields and rewards were placed on their heads, but West Virginia authorities made no arrests.

For the next five years both clans roamed back and forth across the river, always in large groups and heavily armed. Detectives swarmed the area in hopes of collecting the reward money.

On New Year's Day, 1888, the Hatfields raided and burned Randall's home. While his son and daughter were killed and his wife was beaten, Randall managed to escape to Pikeville.

The brutality of that raid outraged the public. The Hatfield-McCoy feud became a national news item.

A posse led by a Frank Phillips crossed the Tug and rounded up 24 members of the Hatfield clan. Trials for eleven of them began in August at the Pike County courthouse, with Randall and Sarah McCoy as the main witnesses.

On Feb. 16, 1889, Cotton Top Mounts was hanged for the murder of Allifair McCoy.

Randall McCoy died in March, 1914, and was buried in the Dils Cemetery.

It was also the burial place for his wife, Sarah, his daughter, Roseanne, his son, Sam, and Sam's wife, Martha.

Their graves were all but forgotten until they started getting in the way of progress.

Linda Scott, a department store employee, expressed that view of many townspeople.

"This town needs a civic center," she said. "That's why young people are leaving here."

"We have to make the place interesting."

Film Aims At Slimmer Cops

By ANDREW M. NIBLEY
HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The radicals of the 60s disparagingly referred to policemen as "pigs." Now, some of the nation's police departments admit there may be a little too much pork in their precincts.

Law enforcement officials became concerned over obesity within their ranks when a recent survey revealed the average policeman over 30 is in worse physical shape than the average American he is protecting.

The International Association of Chiefs of Police — in conjunction with a federal agency and an insurance company — has launched a campaign to slim down the nation's blue knights.

The first phase of the new program got under way when a movie crew, hired by the Traveler's Insurance Co., set up shop in Hartford to make a promotional film to encourage policemen to exercise.

Using Hartford policemen and a handful of professional actors, the crew produced a "Starsky and Hutch-type" movie which shows policemen "in a typical state of decondition," responding to situations which are both mentally and physically trying.

The audio portion of the movie provides a simulated heartbeat which increases and decreases dramatically, depending on how strenuously the policemen are working.

Essentially, the movie tells a policeman he cannot do his job properly if he is overweight.

But the film also tries to instill a sense of guilt. If you are out of shape, you are letting your partner down. And it may be in a life or death situation.

Traveler's plans to distribute the film to any police department in the nation that wants it. After viewing the movie, the department can write to the firm for free brochures which detail with photographs the kinds of exercises policemen should do to reduce weight and prevent heart and back ailments.

The voluntary approach works.

A similar program for firemen was introduced by the insurance company a few years back and, according to Claire Allen, a Traveler's spokeswoman, "demand was phenomenal."

In fact, it was the overwhelming response to the firemen's program that prompted the International Association of Chiefs of Police to ask Traveler's to design a program for policemen.

"We know we have a problem," said Lt. Ted L'O'ranger of the Hartford Police Department. "We have four sergeants out right now with cardiovascular trouble."

Hartford's experience seems to be typical.

Dr. Richard Keeler — director of programs for the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, which is helping to develop the new program — says policemen, along with firemen, experience more low back ailments and heart attacks than any other occupations.

"For the most part, they're behind the wheel or behind a desk all the time," Keeler said. "When they're put into a short-term physical stress situation, it's very hard on their bodies."

Keeler is convinced that many members of the more than 43,000 police departments across the country will respond to the exercise challenge.

What are policemen's gut feelings when they think of knocking off a few inches around the waist.

"The way we eat, sitting in a cruiser munching on fried chicken or a doughnut can't be helping our health at all," one said.

"We know we should exercise," he continued, "but it's hard to do on your own."

Another policeman said he'd be willing to work out, if it was a group venture.

"I'm not going to get off work and run around the block by myself every night," he said. "But if the department sets up an exercise program in the gym with a bunch of guys, I think it would be a lot of fun."

Other policemen at the Hartford precinct weren't as enthusiastic.

"Look at me," said one portbellied patrolman. "I'm 205 (pounds) and fleet as a deer. Do I look like I need exercise?"

When a few of his buddies snickered, he grimaced.

"Well, I could stand to lose a few pounds."

'Yes' Takes It Seriously

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International
Just about one year ago, in a recording studio in Montreux, Switzerland, a lost band found itself again.

The band was Yes — likely the world's most popular group of, shall we say, "serious" rockers, serious in the sense that they see their music as art and take it seriously.

At that Swiss studio, after more than two years of pursuing divergent solo careers, the five musicians who once brought the band to a pinnacle of success discovered abruptly that the old magic was back.

There was only one formal change in the Yes lineup to be made at that point — keyboard whiz Rick Wakeman returned to the fold, replacing the less flamboyant Patrick Moraz.

Technically, of course, Yes had never ceased to exist — the band kept on touring, even during the lengthy hiatus from recording together. Yes existed on stage, as well — and did record a live album, consisting of previously released material.

But for true fans, the group fragmented shortly after the popular Wakeman departed and — as Moraz replacing him on keyboards for one LP, "Relayer," and on tour — other members of the band concentrated on solo recording efforts. Each of those solo records, however, seemed to prove less successful in the marketplace than its predecessor; and for a time it was strongly rumored that Yes was near a formal dissolution.

Vocalist Jon Anderson says it never came to that point at all. "Over the last couple of years," he says, "we've been finding out a lot about what we can see as our future. In no way did we mean to put our audience under the impression that we weren't together."

"But over the past couple of years we just decided to do our solo work and see what areas would open up for Yes. And when we came together to do the album, we had quite a lot of experience at finding out what each guy in the band can achieve on his own."

It was almost as if the Yesmen were trying to build a new band with the same people — an impression strengthened by Wakeman's return — and indeed, there's a whole new approach to be found in Yes' new studio LP, "Going For The One" (Atlantic SD-19106).

The album is — by contrast with the last couple of Yes collections — a far more basic kind of record, short on concept and long on some relatively straight-ahead rock. A lot of critics have seen "Going For The One" as a strong step away from Yes' experimental history and toward the mainstream of pop music.

Anderson doesn't entirely agree, though his comments do suggest that the band does see the record as both a climax and a new beginning.

"In some ways," he says, "there's a lot of experimentation in the album. We spent a lot of time making two pieces of music — 'Turn of the Century' and 'Awaken' are something new for us."

"With 'Awaken' we have a very interesting piece of music — it has a very high momentum and it's complicated but it doesn't sound like it. It's really fashioned out of all the music we've ever done over the years, a sort of combination of all the years we've been together."

Landscapes For Irish Stamps

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — New Irish postage stamps feature scenic landscapes. Scenes from two of Ireland's best known tourist areas, Counties Wicklow and Galway, are featured on two new postage stamps issued by the Irish post office in its annual "Europa series."

Europa stamps are released by the member countries of the conference of European Postal and Telecommunications Administration which was established at Montreux, Switzerland, in 1959. The theme chosen for 1977 CEPT design is scenic landscape.

The first of the Irish stamps shows Ballynahinch, Connemara, Co. Galway — a beautiful region guarded by the Twelve Bens mountain range and offering some of the finest salmon and trout fishing in Ireland.

The other stamp features Lough Tay, sometimes known as Luggala Lake, in County Wicklow just south of Dublin and regarded as the "Garden of Ireland."

Outhouse, Barn Help Cable TV Signal

By MICHAEL R. FRANCO
RISINGVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Thanks to Delmar Plank and an abandoned outhouse, folks in Risingville can sit back and watch television each night — even if it's only one station.

Tucked away in a valley about 11 miles south of Bath, N.Y., this tiny upstate hamlet generally cannot pick up distant television signals from Elmira and other larger communities.

That's where Plank comes in. Operating with inexpensive equipment located in an old outhouse high atop a nearby hill, Plank's one-man private cable television system provides Risingville's 15 families with one channel from Elmira. "We do get really good reception from the one station we receive," said Plank. "It's sure better than nothing."

Plank, 25, picks up signals from an Elmira UHF television channel with a large antenna attached to the outhouse. He converts the signal to VHF frequency, amplifies it and runs the signal down the hill through a cable to his mother-in-law's barn in the hamlet.

The townfolk have cables running from the barn to their own homes.

"It's really a pretty simple operation," Plank said.

Plank inherited the cable system from his father-in-law about 18 months ago and improved it a bit. It's been in operation for about 10 years.

Plank charges $2 a month for the service. But only three of Risingville's 15 families have paid the fee regularly since he took over the operation.

"It costs me about $5 a month in electricity to run the system, and I usually take in $6 a month in fees," said Plank, who works full-time as a muffler installer in Bath. "So I make a big $1 a month on the deal."

So why does he take all the time to keep the operation going?

"I enjoy working with electronics and I guess I enjoy television and want to make sure I can see at least one channel," replied Plank. "Most of the people in the hamlet seem to appreciate what I do, even though they seldom say anything about it."

And besides, it doesn't really take up much time. He's only had to trudge up the steep, roadless, one-mile high hill to the outhouse twice in the past year or so.

"One of those times, my TV went blank and I assumed my equipment was bad," Plank said. "Come to find out, it was the television station in Elmira that had gone off the air for awhile."

Plank's electronic outhouse can pick up signals from two Elmira television stations. But his equipment prevents him from sending two signals at the same time.

"It would cost about $400 for the necessary equipment to get both stations, but I don't know if the folks here want to spend that much," he said.

So in the meantime, he's saving up his monthly "profits" for the new equipment.

But why not force his delinquent customers to come up with their $2 monthly fee?

regulations don't apply unless a system has at least 500 subscribers.

But Bill Johnson, an FCC spokesman, says Plank "probably should be registering" under a new copyright rule.

Plank's not worried. "I don't think the government would look too good if they tried to pick on a little guy like me," he said.

Disco Lights Aid Handicapped

BRainerd, Minn. (AP) — It had been another frustrating day for the two teachers unwinding at the town's newest disco bar. They had difficult jobs, getting through to retarded and physically handicapped children.

But as they talked, it hit them. What about this place? The lights, the beat — could disco turn on the kids? It was worth a try, decided Anne Buchberger and J.G. Houseke.

With the help of record spinner "Disco Dick" Olmsted, 24, profoundly retarded children from Brainerd State Hospital were taken to The Pocket discotheque on a recent afternoon. Only one could speak and only six could walk without help.

When the first group was rolled into the dark and silent lounge, aides unstrapped the restraints that held the children in their wheelchairs, carried them onto the raised dance floor and laid them down.

Two of the children remained flat on their backs on the floor, unmoving. A few of the others sat tightly huddled, making occasional groaning noises. They moved very little and were quite tense. Each child had a hospital worker beside him, trying unsuccessfully to get any small response or movement from them.

Suddenly red, blue, yellow and green lights began flashing on and off in a pattern under the plexiglass squares that made up the dance floor.

The children reacted immediately. They became quiet and attentive, shifting their positions on the floor, some pressing their heads down against its surface, attempting to get closer to the source of the lights.

Next, an array of multicolored lights began flashing from their tracks in the ceiling. Children who had rarely turned their heads before tilted back at the neck to gaze at this new set of fascinating objects. Smiles of delight came to their faces — another extremely rare occurrence.

Then music was added, a light disco beat with an orchestral background. The children sat up more and turned their heads toward the speakers. One began rocking back and forth to the beat. Another waved her arms around as if to grab the sound. Her eyes sparkled and she couldn't stop grinning for a minute.

A film loop was flashed on a nearby wall. It had the shape of a circle and showed colored protoplasm-like bubbles moving and oozing slowly in no particular pattern. The children turned and watched.

One 5-year-old boy, blind and hard of hearing, lay spreadeagled on the floor, feeling the vibrations and grinning.

An 8-year-old from Brainerd stole the hearts of everyone as she danced, smiling until she looked as if her face would crack, and wrapped up her performance by rolling over and over across the floor.

The atmosphere had changed considerably since the music and lights had come on. You could feel the children begin to relax and share their wonder. Warmth and love filled the room.

Social workers and teachers who had worked endless hours just for a small change in facial expression — any self-initiated movement at all — were ecstatic: clapping and cheering and encouraging the kids to explore and move.

For occupational therapist Anne Buchberger and teacher J.G. Houseke, who thought of the program while relaxing one evening at the disco, it was a successful experiment. They returned to the hospital, hoping to get some disco equipment and make it part of their therapy program.

Ancient Romans who saved the life of a citizen in battle while at the same time killing the opponent and holding the ground on which the fight took place, were awarded the "civic crown," a wreath of oak leaves and acorns. Recipients were excused from all laborious duties and services.

Hit Record Has Gotten Dale Off Welfare And Into Success

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kenny Dale has gotten off welfare to become one of the brightest new country music singers in years.

Some two years ago, Dale couldn't find work and his wife collected food stamps.

"It was really a bad scene," said Dale, 25, of Houston, Tex.

Then he recorded "Bluest Heartache of the Year" for a small record company in Texas. It became so popular that a major label bought the master and released it nationally.

It became one of the year's big country hits and turned

Dale's life around. His second national release, "Shame, Shame On Me (I Had Planned to Be Your Man)" is now high on the charts also. And he's released his first album, "Bluest Heartache."

"Just when you think things are hopeless, something great happens," Dale said in an interview in the office of his booking agent during a stop here between engagements.

"It was like I was in a well and someone pulled me out of it."

In late 1975 and early 1976, he simply couldn't find a job, either in music or otherwise.

"I couldn't get a job anywhere for six months. The bills were piling up and I was on the verge of starving and in a deep state of depression. My wife collected food stamps."

He finally was able to get some engagements to tide him over until "Bluest Heartache of the Year" was recorded and drew raves from critics as one of the prettiest songs in years.

"I did every benefit I could," said Dale, a former house painter. "The most important thing is keeping your name in front of people."

"I used to dream and I still do. I've had dreams all my life, and now that they've come true I don't believe it. I'm very proud and excited. I'm in a numb state of mind."

He tends to attribute his success to luck as much as talent.

"I've been very lucky. I'm in the C section — very average. I'm just a country boy who's never had anything. When you're poor, you appreciate it more when you get something. I don't care for a lot of money; it would probably ruin me."

"I'm very thankful to the fans. I feel like they've taken somebody new and helped him out."

"People tell me not to change. I am rather happy-go-lucky and I work hard. I don't want anything to do with a 'big-head' attitude. I just want to be recognized as an artist and a nice guy."

"All of my life I have wanted to sing to people whenever and wherever I had the opportunity. I'll probably drive somebody crazy singing to them when I'm 80 and in a wheel chair, but I have to sing.

"I live for today. It never helps to worry about tomorrow, so I try to take care of now, and tomorrow just naturally gets itself solved."

New Complex Benefits Church

DETROIT (UPI) — Renaissance Center was supposed to be a catalyst to revitalize downtown Detroit's business area, but it's working equally well for a nearby church.

Like pennies from heaven, Christ Church down the street from the $337 million complex is enjoying a boom in new parishioners — and heavier collections.

"We're also having a renaissance," says the Rev. Samuel Johnston, pastor of the 131-year-old church. "Our church is not only alive and kicking, but growing. Attendance for the first half of this year included over 1,000 persons more than the same period last year."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: New beginnings can be yours after you first get rid of the various duties you have agreed to do. To gain the greatest possible potential benefits, think in terms of extending activities in new directions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go after some new goal of a personal nature and gain it. Later be with good friends and go to a new place. Find the right new outlet for better self-expression.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get work done early and then get into activities that bring you a better public image. You can advance quickly. Be sure to dress in very fine style.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listen to those with ideas different from your own and learn much from them. Your work keeps you busy, but when you finish, go out for some relaxation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You feel piqued but all changes and you can have a fine time with those you like. Show that you are a person who has know-how.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Know what is expected of you by associates and then try to please them. A civic matter is better straightened out later. Be diplomatic.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use more modern methods and finish work ahead of you and gain the right benefits from it. Have conversations with co-workers and get good results. Avoid one who is a troublemaker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan amusements for later on, but first finish regular tasks. Spend more time with mate, loved one and be happier. Avoid a tendency to seek out persons radically different from you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to spend much time at home and improve matters there. Wait until later in the day to look into some new interest. Entertain at home in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Update your thinking and get routines improved and derive greater benefits from them. Plan time for visiting friends and relatives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get into practical affairs and improve your position in life considerably. Go to some business expert for advice you need when you are in doubt. Be wary of strangers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Remove stumbling blocks in the path of your progress and then sail along smoothly, gain aims easily.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care of chores early and then you free time for friends after lunch. Listen to what an advisor has to say confidentially for gaining some aim important to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have much charm and ability at whatever is of a unique nature, so encourage this free thinking early and there could be much success during lifetime. Be careful of diet here and don't force to eat whatever is not palatable to him or her.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

A Prime-Time Example Of Just How Awful Some Of Ideas Are

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a recent debate on TV quality, ABC programs chief Fred Silverman said a lot of ideas submitted for programs are awful. On Saturday, ABC will premiere a prime-time example. It's "Love Boat," a new one-hour series trying for romance and comedy aboard a cruise ship, the Pacific Princess. It's sort of a bad "Love, American Style" with life preservers. Gavin MacLeod, a good actor last regularly seen on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show," plays the captain of ABC's ship of foolish. Other regulars are Lauren Tewes as a pretty cruise director, Fred Grandy as a mildly dense assistant purser, Bernie Kopell as the ship's doctor and Ted Lange as the ship's bark-keep.

As is the custom with most new ABC ventures, Saturday's yarn features guest stars of established series on the theory they'll bring their fans with them and thus boost opening-night ratings.

On hand from CBS is Bonnie Franklin of "One Day at a Time" and Jimmie Walker of "Good Times." ABC's delegates are Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company" and Meredith Baxter-Birney of "Family."

NBC is a no-show, but so is "Love Boat," which spins three tales by as many writers during its maiden voyage to various Mexican ports.

Miss Franklin plays a nasty, domineering woman wed to a director of the company owning the ship. As she boards, Grandy makes a big fuss over her. Sneers she: "Lord, I love an obsequious runt."

She also is harsh with MacLeod, but for reasons that are too personal and predictable to go into now — or ever.

Miss Baxter-Birney is on the cruise with her fiance, a handsome young congressman. She is worried he'll find out she is the centerfold lady in a Playboy-like magazine called "Kitten."

You guessed it, the last is "a beach boy at the hotel." On the bright side, "Love Boat" offers at least as much mental sustenance as ABC's distinguished Monday drama, "The San Pedro Beach Bums," another Aaron Spelling production of low note.

Oh, for the days Darren McGavin and "Kolchak, the Night Stalker" which lent some smidgen of class to ABC.

Walker, meanwhile, plays a free spirit who has lived with a pretty passenger (Brenda Sykes) for two years. She wants to get married. He doesn't. So she takes a cruise. He doesn't.

The cruise lets her get advice on fun and meeting men from a blonde divorcee (Miss Somers). It also lets Walker pursue her from port to port with cries of undying love, buttressed by dying jokes.

The ship's high-water mark in dialogue comes when Miss Somers returns exhausted from one port and tells Miss Sykes: "I had four Tom Collins, three Jack Daniels and a Paco Martine."

Seems that while an impoverished law student, she put on a black wig and posed in her birthday suit to raise funds. Now the picture has turned up in an edition of "Kitten" sold on the ship.

She's embarrassed and ashamed and spends most of her time on a belated cover-up.

Unexpected Benefits In Demagnifying

WASHINGTON (AP) — A million books stored on a single sheet of paper? A movie of uranium atoms in motion? Both are possible with the new electron microscope which can magnify an object (or reduce it) 20 million times.

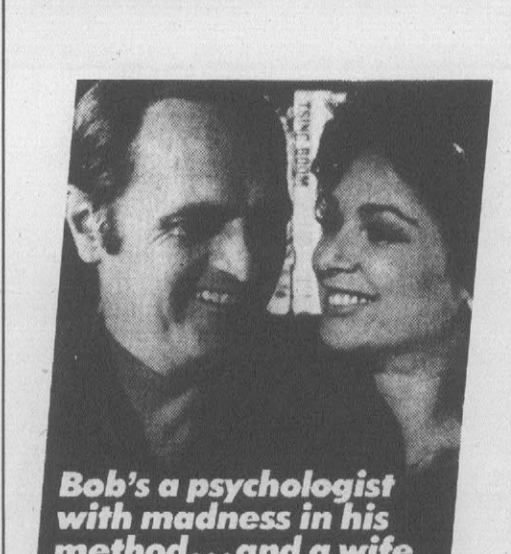

The best optical microscopes, limited by the wavelengths of light, magnify no more than 2,000 times and the implications of the new microscope are enormous, says National Geographic.

The microscope will enable biologists to spot normal cells changing into cancerous cells and to identify genes that cause hereditary diseases.

Perhaps the most unexpected benefit of the electron microscope is demagnifying, says Geographic. The tiny silicon wafers which contain intricate circuits for high-speed computers can be produced on a large scale, then ultra-miniaturized by photography through the microscope in reverse, the magazine says.

The remains of a giant African forerunner of the pig, now extinct, show that the animal had tusks more than three feet long and was the size of the present-day rhinoceros.

West's jump overall was of the weak variety that is gaining ever more popularity. East-West competed as high as they dared—indeed, they pushed North-South to a point where a diamond opening lead would have allowed the defenders to defeat the contract. Perhaps East should have mentioned the suit somewhere along the line to direct the killing lead.

On the actual auction we attach no blame to West for leading the king of hearts rather than the jack of diamonds. It proved to be an unfortunate choice, for the play was soon over. Declarer ruffed in his hand, ran the queen of spades, then continued with a spade to the ace. He

Weaver Enjoys Song Writing

By PAULA SCHWED
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Dennis Weaver doesn't think much of his voice, but he enjoys writing country songs with titles like "I Got a Feeling Like a Prairie Dog Sitting by the Freeway Blues."

Weaver gimped through Guns N' Roses as Matt Dillon's cheerful, crippled sidekick Chester, then starred for seven years as a chivalrous rube of a television cop called "McCloud."

The character drew an avalanche of fan mail from women attracted by Weaver's clear, blue eyes and his bumbling way of getting the case solved.

"The ladies like to fantasize about McCloud because he's so chivalrous and tender," Weaver said. "Men who act macho are missing a bet. It's the funny, kind of backward guy who gets the women."

The series was cancelled recently by the network for reasons Weaver cannot quite understand.

"They programmed the show so atrociously," he said without a trace of anger. "We competed against shows like 'Gone With the Wind' and 'Roots.' There's still plenty of nostalgia for the McCloud character if they would pay attention."

There have been other television offers and talk of a movie, but for now Weaver is concentrating on his country music. He has completed his third album and it is filled with songs he has written.

"I wouldn't sit and listen to the sound of my own voice," he said. "But I think my songs are saying something."

The "Prairie Dog" song was born while Weaver was driving to work one morning on a congested Los Angeles highway. "Where the hell have all the prairie dogs gone now that we have highways?" Weaver said he mused at the time. "That's how songs come to you. There's nothing special or weird about it."

He says he has no desire to be a great writer, "like Shakespeare or Kris Kristofferson," but plans to stick to simple songs.

"I began writing songs in college about the moon, June and a spoon and haven't gone much farther," Weaver said. "These songs are clean and simple. It's my honesty that the ladies like. If I dress it up, they wouldn't go for it."

The tall, tan actor's love of simplicity complicates his life in some ways. He became a vegetarian in 1968 and has since learned how hard it is to "eat right" and lead the life of a traveling entertainer.

"I just like fresh, simple food that's good for you," he said. "You would be surprised how many hotel managers, airline stewardesses and talk show hosts across the country think I am a freak because I travel with my own fruit and cheese."

Weaver acquired his distaste for meat during one particularly gory butchering season on the farm where he grew up. His soft-spoken manner would never permit "going on a crusade to convert people to vegetarianism," he says.

"I never try to sway people to my way of thinking," he said. "I'm not on a crusade and everyone is different."

He cast an eye around the coffee shop and stopped at one rather pudgy man licking the remains of a lengthy meal from his lips.

"But I can tell these Nashville people are meat eaters. I've never seen so many pot bellies."

Winter Care Helps Cacti

By TOM UHLENBROCK
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Wondering why your cactus didn't bloom this summer? Blame it on what you did last winter.

"The dormancy during the winter, that's the trick to making a cactus form buds and flower," says Betty Demzik, an officer of the Henry Shaw Cactus Society. The society was founded in 1942 and named for the father of the Missouri Botanical Garden.

"Usually from October through March you should keep them cool, give them good light and little if any water. A southern or western exposure to light is best, and keep them between 45 and 50 degrees and withhold the water. It should bloom if you treat it right in the winter."

"The best rule for watering is: When in doubt, don't."

Cacti at one time were considered by many persons as spiny, ugly plants found only in the barren areas of the southwest United States and Mexico. In recent years their popularity has grown markedly with clubs forming throughout the nation, and many household gardeners turning from foliage plants to cacti and succulents.

"They've come into their own because people realize the beauty of the spine formation and the flowering," Mrs. Demzik said. "Our club has over 200 members, and there's probably 30 to 35 such clubs around the nation."

"The National Association of Cactus Growers had its annual convention last May in Tucson and attracted people from all over the world."

Mrs. Demzik said she was "great with plastic plants until I came onto cacti." She said one advantage to growing cactus is the hardness of the plant.

She said the best soil mixture for cacti is about equal parts of ordinary potting soil and coarse sand and gravel to allow for a gritty texture that drains well. Don't try to grow plants in pure sand, she added. They need nourishment from the soil.

"The cactus can tolerate water as long as it's drained well," she said.

"I keep mine outside during the summer, and they get heavy soakings from the rain."

The trick is to let them completely dry out between soakings.

"If the soil drains well, they can stand a lot more water than most people think," she said. "They store the water for the winter dormancy."

Increased popularity of cacti and succulents is due also their many varieties, from tiny, nub-shaped lithops to golden barrels, white-haired old man and the hanging burro's tail with its delicate stems.

Because most cacti grow slowly, greedy entrepreneurs have invaded portions of the Southwest and stripped larger plants illegally from the deserts.

"At our shows we don't sell any collected plants, where someone goes out and digs up a whole hillside," said Mrs. Demzik. "The various clubs are trying to band together and do something about it."

Probably the most spectacular display of flowering cacti occurs in the spring in the Big Bend National Park area near the Texas-Mexico border.

"It's very barren, then all of a sudden you'll see the wild color and that's the cacti in bloom," Mrs. Demzik said. "It's gorgeous."
