

Official Canvass Reveals No Change In Voting Totals

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The official canvass of Tuesday's municipal elections in Greenville and Farmville revealed no changes in the totals published by The Daily Reflector in Wednesday's edition.

The canvass, conducted by the Pitt County Board of Elections, verified the election of Percy Cox as mayor here as well as Charles Vincent and Joe Taft as members of the City Council.

In Farmville, according to the canvass, Mrs. Sara Albritton was confirmed as mayor by virtue of her majority vote total.

Incumbent Greenville Council members Mildred McGrath, Clarence Gray and William Hadden, as well as newcomer Judy W. Greene, will be declared elected unless they are challenged to a Nov. 8 runoff by incumbent John Howard and candidates Harry Hagerty, John Bizzell and Della Dayson.

Howard, Hagerty, Bizzell and Mrs. Dayson finished in the seventh through tenth places in the balloting and must file a written request for a runoff with the Pitt Board of Elections by 12 noon on Monday, Oct. 17 if they wish to challenge Mrs. McGrath, Gray, Hadden and Mrs. Greene.

Vincent and Taft were certified as receiving the necessary majority vote totals while Mrs. McGrath, Gray, Hadden and Mrs. Greene fell below the majority figure but made the top six.

In the town commissioner's race in Farmville, based on canvass results, David H. Stowe and Leroy Redden ran first and second in the voting, followed by Durwood T. Little and Linwood Mercer. Little has already filed a request with the elections office for a runoff with Stowe and Redden, according to elections official Margaret Register, and Mercer also has the privilege of requesting a runoff opportunity.

The failure of Stowe and Redden to receive a majority in the seven-candidate field created the runoff possibilities.

Miss Register reported that the canvass revealed that a total of 137 write-in votes were cast for mayor in Greenville with former mayor S. Eugene West receiving 65 votes. She said that five write-in votes were cast for the City Council for an overall total of 142 write-ins.

Greenville, with a total registration of 10,910, voted 4,188 on Tuesday or 38.4 per cent of the potential voters.

Farmville once again had a fine turnout as 1,252 of the total registration of 1,882, or 66.5 per cent, participated in the town's municipal balloting.

Indicted In Korea Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna was indicted today on federal charges of bribery, fraud and conspiracy stemming from alleged South Korean efforts to buy influence among members of Congress.

Hanna, a California Democrat who served in the House from 1963 through 1974, was the first ex-congressman to be indicted in the Justice Department probe of alleged attempts by South Koreans to ply members of Congress with cash and other favors in exchange for actions favorable to the South Korean government.

A federal grand jury in U.S. District Court in Washington returned the indictment charging Hanna with one count of conspiracy, three counts of bribery, one count of failing to register as a foreign agent, and 35 counts of mail fraud.

Carter, Torrijos Seek Cool Treaty Controversy

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, met for more than 90 minutes today in an effort to put to rest some of the controversy swirling around the proposed Panama Canal treaty.

The two leaders adjourned their White House working session, originally scheduled to last about an hour, without immediately issuing a joint statement. One was expected later, however.

Carter had told a news conference Thursday that a "clarifying statement" might be needed on the major point in dispute — conflicting interpretations of the provision for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense of the canal's neutrality after the year 2000.

Torrijos wore a tan tropical suit on a cool and drizzly morning here and Carter was in dark blue for the conference, which was devoid of ceremony.

Meeting first in the Oval

Office and then joining advisers in the Cabinet Room, Carter and Torrijos concentrated on trying to clarify the meaning of the disputed language.

The hastily arranged session was requested by Carter. Torrijos is stopping off as he heads home from a trip to Israel and Western Europe, where he promoted the treaty with several heads of state.

Before Torrijos arrived, Carter held a breakfast meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser.

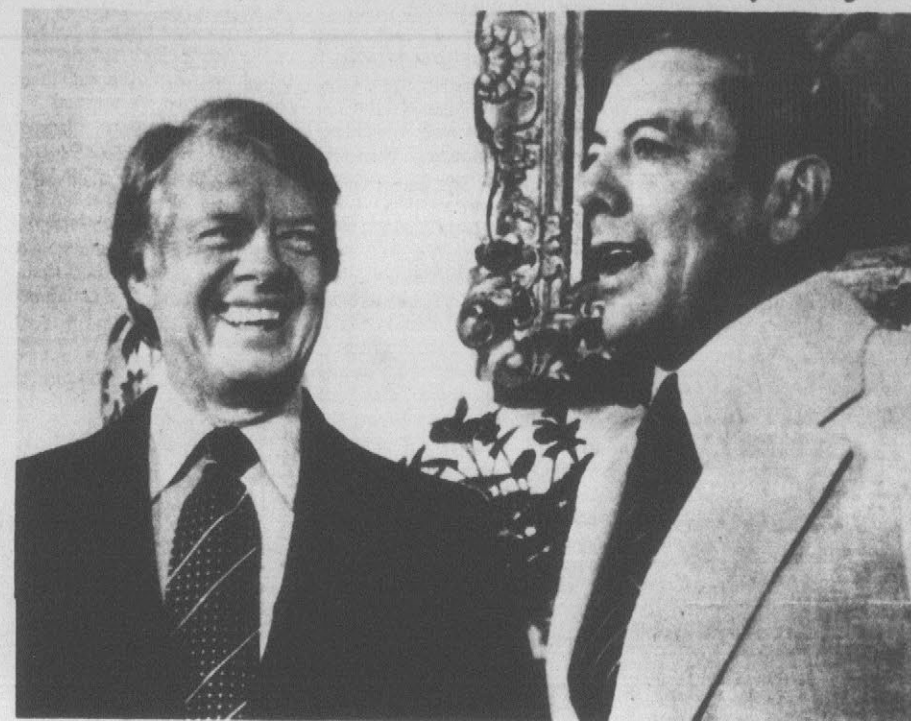

Meanwhile, former secretaries of state Dean Rusk and Henry A. Kissinger agreed in Senate testimony today that the language of the treaty protects the canal's security and a U.S. right to defend and use it after the year 2000.

Appearing as witnesses as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee closed out a second full week of treaty hearings, they said it was unfortunate that the word "intervention" — with its special connotations for Latin America — had been injected into the debate. In any event, he said, the Senate should not adopt any reservation implying that it and the White House disagree on the treaty's meaning.

'Ultimatum' By Terrorists To West Germany

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Arab-speaking terrorists holding a hijacked West German jetliner threatened today to kill their hostages, including 11 West German beauty queens, unless "comrades" imprisoned in West Germany and Turkey are released and a $15 million ransom is paid, officials said.

Ninety-two persons, including crew members and the hijackers, were reported aboard the plane. The beauty queens were returning to Frankfurt from a gift trip to the Spanish island of Mallorca when the plane was hijacked Thursday.

The hijackers also threatened that kidnaped West German industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer, abducted by terrorists in West Germany nearly six weeks ago, would be killed if the demands are not met by 4 a.m. EDT Sunday.

A text of the ultimatum was delivered to the French press agency AFP in Paris after the plane with landed in this Persian Gulf emirate.

The ultimatum named 11

West German terrorists and two Palestinians held in Turkey who are demanding to be released and flown to Vietnam, Somalia or Marxist South Yemen. Each of the released prisoners was to be supplied with $43,860 in German marks.

The ultimatum, addressed to the West German government, declared, "We shall not contact you again. ... Any trial on your part to delay or deceive us will mean immediate ending of the ultimatum and execution of Mr. Hanns Martin Schleyer and all the passengers and the crew of the plane."

The ultimatum was signed "Struggle Against World Imperialism Organization," and ended with an attack on alleged neo-Nazism in West Germany and Zionism.

With the ultimatum was a communique addressed "To All Revolutionaries in the World, To All Free Arabs, To Our Palestinian Masses."

The 400-word declaration reported the hijacking and its connection with the Schleyer operation.

Senators Ignoring Cooperation Plea

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee, ignoring President Carter's plea for cooperation, is finishing work on an energy tax bill that kills most of Carter's proposals.

The bill, due for a final vote today, includes billions of dollars worth of tax breaks, but none of the energy tax increases Carter says are needed to encourage conservation.

In a major vote Thursday, the panel approved a big tax credit to help factories and power plants convert to coal. Carter wanted instead to tax industries that continue to rely on oil or natural gas.

The panel's vote came a few hours after Carter reminded a nationally broadcast news conference that he has veto power, as well as the authority to order gasoline rationing, if Congress does not approve an energy program acceptable to him. Carter attacked the oil industry on Thursday, comparing it to those who reap enormous profits from the misery of war. He said removal of federal controls from the price of oil and natural gas could result in "the biggest ripoff in history."

Carter's remarks drew a predictable response from the oil companies — a Shell Oil spokesman called it "a damned severe attack."

Britisher, Swede Share Big Economics Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1977 Nobel Economics Prize was awarded today to James Meade of England and Bertil Ohlin of Sweden "for their pathbreaking contributions to the theory of international trade and international capital movements."

Meade, 70, a professor at Cambridge University, is a pioneer in the study of trade development, welfare and other areas. He laid the theoretical basis for customs unions and wrote such fundamental works as "The Theory of International Economic Policy."

Ohlin was a Swedish commerce minister in the 1940s and is a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences, which selected the joint Nobel winners.

The relatively new economics prize has been dominated by Americans since it was established in 1969. Six Americans have won the award, the most recent Chicago economist Milton Friedman.

Meade and Ohlin will share a cash prize of $145,000.

Meade is the third Englishman to be awarded the prize after Dennis Gabor in 1971 and John Hicks in 1973. Ohlin, 78, a leader of the Liberal party from 1944 to 1967, is the second Swede to receive the honor. Gunnar Myrdal won it in 1974.

Both men were cited for early work — as early as the 1930s for Ohlin and 1950s for Meade — but the academy said, "The breadth and importance of Ohlin's and Meade's contributions have, however, not become obvious until the 1960s and 1970s in conjunction with the growing internationalization of the economic system."

"It has become increasingly clear that problems related to the allocation of resources, business cycles and the distribution of income are very much international problems. This means that foreign trade, international price fluctuations, the international allocation of economic activities and the transfer of resources, as well as the international payments system, have become dominant factors in economic analysis and economic policy," the awarding body said.

Parking Problem

ECU News Bureau

Rain for the past two days will inconvenience many football fans in Greenville Saturday night.

Both the North and South parking lots in Ficklen Stadium will be closed because of the rain-soaked ground.

Fans are urged to find parking on nearby streets and on hard surfaced areas, both on main campus and near the Belk Allied Health Building.

ECU officials said the unpaved parking lots normally used are "entirely too soft" to permit parking for the Saturday night game.

Kickoff time for the ECU-Richmond game is at 7 p.m. A crowd in excess of 20,000 is expected.

Debra Is Living At Faster Pace

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Debra Wyatt Chason, 18, is preparing to become the youngest graduate ever of Pembroke State University.

Mrs. Chason, who has a 3.95 grade point average and majors in special education, will graduate this December.

It won't be the first thing she has done younger than most. At 11, she did well enough in school to skip the sixth grade. At 15 she graduated from high school. At 16 she married Michael Chason, a local farmer who is 10 years older than she.

FOUND OBITUARY, STEPSISTER

I left Greenville in 1948 leaving everything that had belonged to my mother, who died in 1943 with my stepfather. I have recently established very pleasant contacts with some of my mother's relatives and have begun to wonder if any pictures of my mother or any of her belongings might exist. I understand my stepfather died five or six years ago. I know I'm asking a lot, but could you possibly find his obituary and send me a copy? I was very fond of the man, but just failed to maintain contact after he remarried. W. T.

We gave the Pitt County Register of Deeds your stepfather's full name and they found his death certificate. Using the date, we were able to find his obituary on microfilmed copies of The Daily Reflector and we are sending you a copy. We also found in the obit the name of a daughter of Mr. T's second wife and we called her. She said her mother is now dead, also, and that she knows of no pictures or other belongings of your mother. She was very cordial and asked that we give you her address and phone number so you may contact her for further information about Mr. T, if you wish.

Award Contracts

The Pitt Technical Institute Board of Trustees has awarded construction contracts to low bidders for its new shop/classroom building.

The Building Committee of the Board of Trustees, acting under the authority of the Board to award low bids, met this week and awarded contracts to the following low bidders: General contract to Hardy-Harvey, Inc., Kinston — $435,000; electrical contract to Darden Electric Co., Goldsboro — $82,885; plumbing contract to Kipco Piping Co., Inc., Kinston — $51,235; and heating and air conditioning contract to Kinston Plumbing and Heating Co., Inc., Kinston — $127,500; a total construction cost of $896,641.

The new shop/classroom building will have 26,570 gross square feet. The two-story, Georgian-style building will be located back of the present Administration Building and facing the Reedy Branch Road.

Daughter's Tales: A Hairband Gift And Bicycle Status

By SHELLEY METZENBAUM
Written for UPI

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You can learn quite a bit about China in just 17 days. You can learn even more, or at least enjoy a slightly different perspective, if you have some background in Chinese language, history or philosophy.

I do not claim to be a China scholar, but do feel that my college studies and the half year I lived in Taiwan gave me opportunities and insights that my parents did not have.

In many societies, language reveals cultural patterns and characteristics. Nowhere is this more true than in China. My knowledge of and discussions about the Chinese language helped illuminate otherwise confusing occurrences.

For example, my parents and I began getting the impression that the direct questions we asked during the formal introductory sessions seldom received succinct, simple responses. Instead, lengthy explanations, often on a tangential topic, were provided.

One day, during the introductory session, Dad slipped me a note: "I wonder whether or not I can get just a simple yes or no answer to this next question."

It then dawned on me. Dad could never get a simple yes or no because in Chinese the words "yes" and "no" do not exist. Instead, the Chinese use phrases such as "it is" or "it is not," "it has" or "it has not," "good" or "not good."

One evening in Kuelin, the second city we visited, Mom, Dad and I decided to go shopping on a street near the hotel. I wanted to buy a hairband that I had seen several Chinese girls wearing. I saw several plastic hairbands in the display case, but did not see the metal one I wanted. Another customer, however, was wearing one. So I pointed to the customer's hairband and using my broken Chinese asked the salesgirl if she sold that kind. She said she did not.

We left the store and strolled down the street. Behind me, I heard someone call in Chinese, "Friend, friend." I turned around and there was the customer who was wearing the kind of hairband I wanted. Suddenly, this girl began to remove the band from her hair and say to me, "I'll give this to you as a present and we'll be good friends."

At first I refused the gift, but she insisted so I took it. I had made my first Chinese friend and had learned that when the Chinese talk about people-to-people diplomacy, it is not only the Chinese government talking. It is also the Chinese people.

In another incident, we again were able to view how successfully the Chinese have instilled a sense of national morality. One day at lunch, my father turned to me and said, "I wonder what would happen if we left a tip. I think I'll leave one."

Before coming to China we had been told, "No tipping in China." But as time passed and we learned that more and more of previous travelers' admonitions no longer applied, if they ever had, we began to prefer developing our own rules through trial and error.

Even if no tipping was the government policy, we thought it would be interesting to know if the individual waiter or waitress could avoid the temptation of acquiring a small additional bit of money that none of their comrades need know about. So Dad left one yuan, about 55 cents. Then we set off for an afternoon of sightseeing.

When we returned to the hotel, the money Dad had left on the lunch table was returned to him.

The honesty of the person who returned the money may be the result of brainwashing, but in my opinion it is a healthy sort of brainwashing called morality that is too scarce in our own country. There are few lessons we can learn from the Chinese because our culture and standard of living is so different from theirs. When it comes to promoting morality, however, they have much to teach us.

The Chinese have made great progress in eliminating the hierarchical relationships stressed under Confucianism. They are equalizing the societal relationships of all individuals, regardless of sex, nationality or occupation. Admittedly they still have far to go. Women receive the same pay as men for doing the same job, but proportionately hold more lower paying jobs.

But the break with the past has not eliminated material desires. Many families are able to place a portion of their monthly salaries into savings. With the money saved, they buy items such as sewing machines, bicycles and musical instruments. I was amused to hear one of our guides proudly report, in an effort to exemplify recent improvements in living standards, that hers was a three-bicycle family!

Seventeen days of sightseeing and discussion taught me a lot about Chinese policy and progress. But it is not enough time to appreciate the more subtle and personal aspects of the Chinese society and people. So if you'll excuse me, I'm going to study my Chinese, so that next time I will be able to understand even more.

Yam Biscuits: America's Forgotten Hot Bread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Although American cooks excel in baking hot breads, Yam Biscuits have never come into their own. A number of present-day comprehensive cookbooks I have searched have neglected this beguiling bread.

Yet Yam Biscuits have been with us since at least 1871. In a cookbook copyrighted that year, by an author who lived in Raleigh, N.C., there's a recipe for them.

However, my favorite Yam Biscuit recipe comes from the "Ocracoke Cook Book," a slender modern compilation published by the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church, Ocracoke, N. C. A friend of mine visited Ocracoke four or five years ago and brought me a copy. Perhaps this booklet (undated) is still in print.

Curious about Ocracoke, I looked it up in a travel guide and found it is one of the chain of narrow sandy islands stretching from Cape Lookout to Back Bay, Va., called the Outer Banks. The guide notes Ocracoke was settled in the 17th century, so perhaps Yam Biscuits go back further than 1871.

My adaptation of the Ocracoke recipe:

YAM BISCUITS A LA HILDA SCARBOROUGH

1 3/4 pounds (scant) yams
1/2 cup solid white shortening
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder

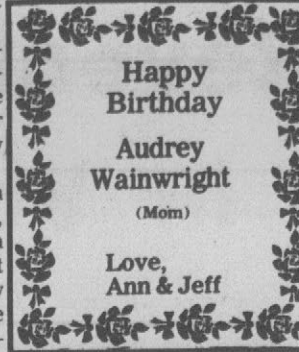

1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup sugar

Scrub the yams in cold water, do not pare; cover them with boiling water and boil in a covered saucepan just until tender when pierced with a fork. Drain; remove skins and mash; measure enough to make 2 cups; reserve any remaining for some other use. With a spoon, beat the shortening into the 2 cups mashed yams until blended; cool.

In a medium-size bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add the yam mixture and work together until blended. If dough is very sticky, add flour sparingly.

On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out 1/2-inch thick. With a floured round 2-inch cutter, cut out biscuits. Place slightly apart on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven until browned — to 18 minutes. (Bottoms of the biscuits will be very dark, but they will not taste scorched. Rush to the table while they are still puffy and hot; they will sink slightly as they cool. As Mrs. Scarborough says, "They are crusty outside and soft inside. Serve them with plenty of butter."

Makes almost 2 dozen.

Don't Marry Just To Please Friends

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for eight years and have no desire to marry again. I've been keeping company with a fine gentleman for three years. He's also divorced. We have marvelous times together, going to the theater, dinner, playing backgammon and boating.

He would marry me if I wanted him to, but I believe that when two people live together, they grow tired of each other. We care for each other, but there are times when we like to go our separate ways.

I don't recommend this lifestyle for the young or for those with young children, but our children are grown, and we are both in our middle 50s and quite set in our ways.

Now the problem: Many of our friends and especially our children keep urging us to get married. Why should we marry just to please other people? I enjoy privacy and so does he, and there are times when you don't want anyone around. Not even the one you love. I would appreciate your opinion on this. Also anyone else's.

NO COMPLAINTS

DEAR NO. If you're satisfied, and he's satisfied, maintain the status quo. Of all the reasons to marry, because other people think you "ought to" is the poorest.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law is a kind, sweet lady and I love her dearly, but she is so superstitious she sometimes gets on my nerves. She is always telling me not to do this or that because it's "bad luck." She's constantly knocking on wood, biting her tongue, spitting three times and throwing salt over her shoulder.

I have never been superstitious, and I don't enjoy listening to that kind of junk. In my opinion, it's ridiculous and ignorant. I don't want my children taught superstitions, but if I tell them not to pay any attention to Grandma they might lose respect for her. They're still too young to know the difference between superstition and fact.

How can I tactfully handle this situation?

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Tell Grandma (nicely) that you don't want your children to believe in superstitions and you'd appreciate her cooperation. Then YOU explain to your children that superstitions are stories based on fairy tales—not facts.

DEAR ABBY: A good friend of ours lost her husband suddenly three years ago at which time she moved into the home of her married daughter. She's been there ever since.

This friend is now over her mourning, is working part-time and is in good health. Several of us friends have observed that her presence in her daughter's home is detrimental to her marriage. The mother has convinced herself that she is "needed," but it's obvious to everyone (but her) that she's not.

How do you tell someone whom you don't want to offend that she should be moving on? Or should we just butt out? TICKLISH SITUATION

DEAR TICKLISH: The word from here is to butt out.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DAILY READER OF DEXTER, MO., STATESMAN": When a man starts to tell you how much humility he has, count on it that he has none.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Underwriters Told Public Is More Aware

The president of Philadelphia Life Insurance Co. told area life underwriters here Thursday that he feels there is a "greater consciousness" among the buying public "of the need for life insurance."

Roderic H. Ross, CLU, speaking at the breakfast gathering of the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters, said the consciousness "stems basically from the fact that people are more than ever interested in education."

Ross added, "And with education comes a knowledge and a greater consciousness of the need — a greater consciousness of the impact of taxes, and so forth."

Addressing inflation, the official suggested that if an agent sold a $50,000 policy in 1972, the present purchasing power, only five years later, is only worth $36,000.

"Just to restore that family to the adequate coverage, they should have another $68,000 policy," he said. "So, I don't think that moderate inflation — and I don't think that historically we could look at what's happening now as moderate — has done anything but enlarge your market. So if you aren't going back again and again to your clients, you are making an error."

Ross told the group that "life insurance is a tax-favored investment." He explained that, "From the standpoint of income tax, obviously inside build up of cash value and tax free gains make life insurance a very favored investment."

He noted, "I don't know if you realize that President Carter and Congress are tinkering with the possibility of taxing the inside cash value build up. This would be disastrous to our business," Ross asserted.

"I know from my own experience and my own convictions and what I've read that the public buys from the agent, not because he has the lowest interest adjusted cost — whatever that is — but because of his general reputation, his interest in the client's welfare, and his knowledge of life insurance," Ross continued.

He pointed out, "I have not met Booger Scales, but he is already a legend with me, and I would publicly pay him a tribute because I think the greatest service you can give a client is to put in force adequate life insurance."

According to Ross, the life insurance market has not been penetrated "because here we are, with all the inflation that we have, and the average life insurance in force at the end of 1976 per insured family was only $36,300 — about double a family's income."

The president said that his conclusions about the life insurance business are that "we are in trouble if we don't all work harder and take the business as seriously as you fellows take it."

He contended, "Right now Ralph Nader and his Nader Raiders are causing people in Detroit to say that the automobile is no longer being designed in Detroit — it's being designed in Washington. We have the same possibility in the life insurance industry, where the FTC for the first time is now getting in the life insurance business."

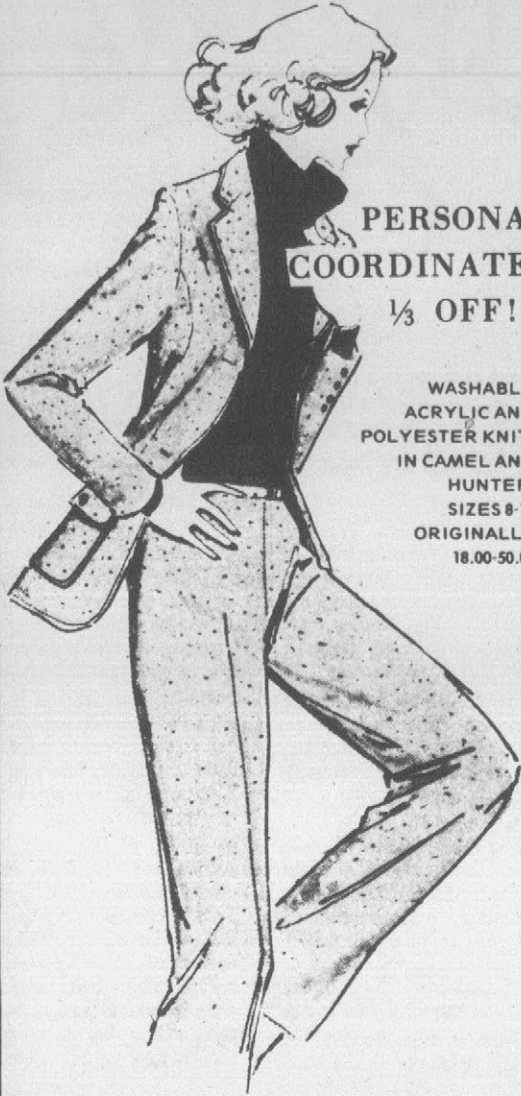

Ross concluded, "God help us if the life insurance policies are no longer designed in the 1,800 home offices of your companies but the... policies are designed in Washington, D.C. We will be in big trouble. I say use it or lose it; have a lot of fun in this business — and that's the secret of doing well, I think — enjoying what you're doing."

Told Of Progress In Mental Health

WINTERVILLE — Dan Kelly, Consultation Education Coordinator with the Pitt County Mental Health Center, told the Winterville Ruritan about the progress that has been made in mental health work, Tuesday night.

Kelly spoke highly of Dorothea Dix, an early mental health leader, for whom North Carolina's Dorothea Dix Hospital was named.

According to Kelly, epilepsy was formerly a dreaded disease, but it is now pretty well controlled by modern drugs.

The speaker added that stress might cause many mental disorders.

He also noted that alcoholism is a disease that can be handled best by the mental health services, but only with the cooperation of the patient himself.

Harroll D. Weaver, governor of the Greenville-Goldsboro district, announced that the district convention would be held Nov. 21 at D.H. Conley High School.

Image Of Congress Worsens

You are a taxpayer. You, as an American, rank among the most conscientious taxpayers in a world full of taxpayers. Sometimes you have to do without, or even borrow, to pay those taxes; but you do it.

Taxes, you are aware, pay for necessary things... things just as necessary as the grocery bill, the dentist's bill, the utilities bill, etc. You even pay a very large salary to lawmakers in Washington. They, incidentally, get a larger paycheck than do most of your friends and associates; and probably a much larger paycheck than you.

That's understandable. They have bigger responsibilities; and the cost of living in Washington is something more than in your hometown.

And then, a public accounting of a $2,000 expense account given members of the House makes you see red. It reads a lot like a swindle sheet.

The fact is, Mr. Taxpayer, in addition to paying Congress a large salary to do its lawmaking, you have also been footing the bill for such personal things as concert tickets, bar association dues, car insurance, country club assessments, a staff

Christmas party, and even for the renting of a tuxedo.

Back home, among the people, such personal expenses are born by the individual's checkbook, credit card or weekly budget. The House expense account, by contrast, resembles just one more opportunity for a rip-off.

True, those petty swindles are attributable to the actions of something less than a majority of the House; but the entire membership is tarred by the conduct of that minority. It is especially true since the House this week voted against a reform plan after abuses had been disclosed.

We are more than ever convinced that "going to Washington" is somehow equivalent to leaving the real world of hard-working employees, straining businessmen, worried farmers, and professional people who feel a host of uncertainties in their everyday lives. Congress simply does not see the world as do the people it is supposed to represent.

The image our Congress bears today is not good; and it grows worse as disillusion spreads over its record as a responsible governing body.

Much-Changed Document

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While considerable public attention is focused on the question of whether the governor of North Carolina should be able to run for a second term, voters on November 8 will find a number of other items on the ballot as well.

There are in all five amendments to the State Constitution proposed, and two bond issues to be decided.

The subject of gubernatorial succession will appear in third place on the state ballot, and is the briefest of the amendments to be decided.

from her husband's creditors. The amendment would give a husband the same protection. The provision requires that the survivor not own a separate homestead; that there be creditors; and that no children survive.

To allow a wife to insure her own life for the benefit of her husband, with the money free from creditors. Another sex-neutering amendment, the husband can already do the same for the wife.

To allow municipal governments owning power distribution systems to issue revenue bonds to finance power generating and transmitting systems. This amendment is designed to avoid a court test to determine the "public purpose" qualification for funds used by municipalities to buy into a power generating system jointly owned and operated by private companies. A group of cities is considering such a move.

To require a balanced budget for the State government. Most Tar Heels think the Constitution already requires that. There are restrictions on deficit financing, and the Executive Budget Act—but not the Constitution—mandates a balanced budget. The amendment would require that total state spending for a period must not be more than the total surplus in the Treasury and actual income during the period. If it seems likely that an imbalance will occur, the governor must cut spending to keep things in balance.

In 1974, voters approved changing the title of solicitor to district attorney, but rejected revenue bonds for industrial development and pollution control. In 1976, a rewritten amendment on the revenue bonds won approval, along with another allowing such bonds for health-care facilities as well.

The bond issues on the November 8 ballot are for $300 million in highway bonds; split $175 million for primary roads, $75 million for secondary roads, and $50 million for the urban system, and $230 million in clean water bonds; split $112.5 million for sewage facilities; $110 million for water supply facilities; and $7.5 million for contingency and administrative purposes.

From 1868 through 1977, North Carolinians have faced 88 proposed amendments to the State Constitution. So far, all but 30 have been ratified... not counting the five on November's ballot.

The Record

The original Constitution of North Carolina (1868) was amended 49 times until it was rewritten and ratified in 1970 to become the Constitution of 1971. At the ratification vote, six amendments were submitted, with five adopted. In 1972, five more amendments were approved.

Real Canal Claimants

WASHINGTON — The hottest issue for the conservatives in this country is the Panama Canal. The big question is who owns the American political rights to the canal?

There are some people who feel the canal belongs to Ronald Reagan. One of his people told me, "Ronnie discovered the Panama Canal before anybody else. No one even knew it was there until he raised the issue in his try for the Presidency. It's Ronnie's canal and we're not going to let anyone take it away from him."

Friends of Sen. Jesse Helms insist the canal belongs to him. A supporter said, "A senator should have precedent over a defeated Republican candidate for the Presidency. Jesse is willing to go to war before he will allow the United States to sign a treaty with Panama. It's a personal thing with Jesse and has nothing to do with politics. He loves that canal. When he was a kid he used to sail toy boats on it. Some of his best friends live in the Canal Zone. The thought of anyone but Americans running that canal makes him sick. Ronald Reagan doesn't have the emotional investment in that Jesse does; and we're serving notice that if anyone tries to take this issue away from Helms they're going to have to fight for it."

Sen. Strom Thurmond's man ridiculed the idea that the Panama Canal belonged to Ronald Reagan or Jesse Helms. "Strom's been worried about the Panama Canal from the moment he came into the Senate. He's been expecting something like this to happen ever since he fought with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish-American War."

"That long ago?" I said. "Longer than that. The Panama Canal is Strom's baby, and Reagan and Helms better keep their cotton-pickin' hands off it."

A newcomer who has suddenly laid claim to the Panama Canal issue is Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas. Dole sees it as a chance for a shot at the Republican nomination for President in 1980. He even went so far as to release a State Department classified cable to stake his rights to the canal.

"Bob," said a friend, "was heartbroken when former President Ford came out for the treaty. It hurt him deeply and had he known at the time where Ford stood, he would never have accepted the vice-presidential nomination in 1976."

"Do you think he'll speak for Ford any more?"

"Would you speak to someone who wants to give up an American-built canal?"

There are, of course, others who are maintaining that the Panama Canal belongs to them. Former Secretary of the Treasury Bill Simon, who also has presidential ambitions, has been organizing the financial fight to defeat the treaty, but so far he can't get any television time.

John Connally wants a piece of the Canal issue just in case he decides to run, but as his man told me, "John's not greedy. He's willing to share it with the Daughters of the American Revolution."

One of the big surprises is that William Buckley, the conservative's writer-in-residence has endorsed

Leonard Ayres, internationally known economist, said to the American Bankers Association no credit collapse like that of the great depression "is now possible."

Ayres declared that prospects for profits in the banking business were "fairly bright."

Greenville policemen and firemen were measured for their new winter uniforms.

The Board of Aldermen authorized the purchase at its October meeting.

France lessened European tension to some extent by agreeing that the Spanish civil war volunteer question be submitted to the non-intervention committee as demanded by Italy, but on the other side of the world the Sino-Japanese conflict remained as menacing as ever.

While the French council of ministers were approving a plan of isolating the Spanish war so it would not cause a general European disaster, giant projectiles were exploding in the Shanghai international settlement killing and injuring more than 100 civilians.

Other Editors Say: After Nine Months

(Henderson Dispatch)

Eight to nine months have passed since the bitterest of the bitter weather last winter. In Washington they have been debating the measure all year. The House has passed a bill, which is now being considered by the Senate.

We haven't read the measure; have not even seen a copy. But no law at all would be about as good as one full of additional taxes. There won't be much improvement if the method of achieving it is by imposing added excises upon consumers. You can't tax your way into solution of problems.

Moreover, we cannot see the benefit claimed by reducing oil imports. If more can be brought in than is being consumed, it ought to be taken and stored for the winter months.

Little is being said about relief that has been or is anticipated from the Alaskan pipeline. The west coast is getting more oil, presumably, but what is happening to the amount over and above requirements in that part of the country? Is there any way eastern States can share in the abundance?

Neither a five cents per gallon tax nor a $5 per barrel levy on imports will solve the problem. If the Arabs cannot sell normal amounts here, they will market it elsewhere. It will be consumed as long as it lasts.

We have no idea as to the storage capacity available in the United States. But every tank in the sight should be filled for reserves against the time of need. Whether this reasoning is logical, it is at least an idea.

The energy bill passed by the House, and whatever may eventually be approved by the Senate will contain imposition of hardships on consumers.

A measure ought not to be enacted merely for the sake of doing just something. It needs to be practicable and effective without higher taxes to increase inflation that makes life more miserable for the people.

the President.

Bill Young of Florida delivered a long rebuttal. He was followed by blunt-spoken Democratic Rep. Charles Carney of Ohio, who said he never liked foreign aid anyway and opposed it all the more with steelworkers being laid off in his home town of Youngstown. "I'm worried about human rights back in Youngstown," Carney rapped.

Rep. Silvio Conte, a liberal Republican from Massachusetts who opposes Young's amendment, rose to defend the President. "I don't know what's the matter with these Democrats who don't support you," Conte told Mr. Carter. That poisoned matters with Democrats still bristling over the President's praise of Republican Congressmen a day earlier.

At that point, Rep. Wright got up — "in his best prayer-meeting style," said one Democrat — and asked for a show of hands supporting the President. Almost no hands went up. Wright then asked his colleagues to "quit fooling" and show their support. Less than half obeyed, and there were no converts for

Baker To Byrd

The hand behind Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd's decision to put Vice President Walter Mondale in the Senate's presiding officer's chair during the Democratic civil war over ending the energy filibuster was none other than that of the Republican leader, Sen. Howard Baker.

Strength For Today

WORSHIP IS AN ATTITUDE Burne-Jones was one of the world's greatest designers of stained-glass windows. He was a man who believed that life should be beautiful and who insisted that beauty should be carried into all the details of life.

Rather surprisingly, in the view of his friends, he put one of his very beautiful windows depicting the search for the Holy Grail over the kitchen sink where his kitchen maid worked. Although he did not say so, he seemed to feel that holy as the ceremonies in cathedrals.

We have often heard the statement, "to labor is to pray." We might go further and say that to do one's job well is to worship. This is by no means a full definition of the word "worship," but basic to all religious thinking is the conviction that the whole life is sacred.

The office and the altar both accord us opportunities for worship. We heard God in the cathedral only if we have experienced His presence in

THE INSIDE REPORT

Mislobbying By President

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Proof that President Carter has not quite mastered the art of Congress-taming came when his lobbying efforts for unobstructed foreign aid resulted in embarrassing failure, ending in a presidential exit from a meeting with more than 60 Congressmen.

Whether Mr. Carter was wise to summon House members to the White House to be lobbied on a less than transcendent issue is doubted even by his own congressional supporters. That can be excused on grounds of inexperience. But his error was compounded by a blunder on the part of a vastly experienced Congressman: House majority leader Jim Wright. During the meeting, Wright asked for a show of congressional hands supporting the President and got an embarrassing response.

At issue are amendments blocking U.S. funds to international financial institutions (such as the World Bank) for loans to Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, Uganda, Cuba, Angola and Mozambique. The odds are heavily against the President for the forthcoming House vote.

Some 60 House members — on each side of the question — were surprised with invitations to meet the President Sept. 30. The obvious tactic: presidential magic to turn the situation around.

But that magic is none too potent these days. After Mr. Carter finished his speech, a sponsor of the key amendments — Republican Rep.

cause it's closing," said Jeanette Brownlee of Washington, D.C. "But tonight, it's elegance. Look around, where can you see elegance like this?"

The hotel, which has graced the Boardwalk for 76 years, will close Oct. 25, a victim of the coming casino gambling here. Bally Manufacturing Corp., the slot machine maker, will soon begin major renovations to turn the hotel into a giant gambling palace.

But Thursday night, as part of a nostalgic "Au Revoir" weekend, the "home of the newlywed and nearly dead" called back more than 300 of its old friends for one last drink, dinner and dance.

Mrs. Brownlee has been coming for 65 of her 82 years. Her husband, Herbert, proposed to her on the sun porch Sept. 1, 1919. "Where else?" she said.

They returned for their honeymoon that winter and have been coming back since, always asking for a room ending with "65." Only those rooms have five windows overlooking the ocean, she explained.

"The Marlborough-Blenheim is like an oasis in a desert," said Joseph Morris of Rising Sun, Md. "One time I came here for six weeks and never went outside. It's like being on a cruise ship without moving."

His wife, Emily, shook her head. "I just call it home," she said. "But, oh, there'll be slot machines everywhere and it won't be like it used to be."

Members of the founding White family — Josiah IV, Fisher and Kirby — mingled with their guests, calling most by their first names, and caught up on family news.

Josiah's grandfather, Josiah White III, opened his first hotel here in 1887. He built the wooden Marlborough at Boardwalk and Park Place in 1901.

In 1906, he hired inventor Thomas Edison to use a new building method, reinforced concrete, to build the Blenheim across the street. He joined the hotels with an enclosed pedestrian bridge the next season.

From passing ships, the buildings looked like giant sand castles.

Bally says it will pour more than $75 million into the new complex. However, its final plans for the Marlborough-Blenheim and the adjacent Dennis hotel are still incomplete, and some experts say the hotels cannot be saved.

At Thursday night's farewell, the guests knew they would never feel the wooden floors under their feet or hear violins and cellos in the lobby again.

"Everything comes to an end and, at our age, maybe we should come to an end," Mrs. Brownlee said. "I'm going to go home to Washington on Monday and I'm going to weep."

Mark 150th Anniversary

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 150th anniversary of Greenville's Memorial Baptist Church will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday morning, October 16, with a number of special events planned for the occasion.

Memorial Baptist Church, located at 1510 Greenville Boulevard (Southeast), was dedicated nearly four years ago, on October 28, 1973.

Before the move to the new, larger facility, Memorial Baptist was located in a Victorian Gothic style building on Greene Street between Third and Fourth Streets for a period of 83 years (1890-1973). In the late 1940's, a three story, brick educational building was added to the original building. This addition still stands, but the church structure there has been demolished.

In observing the 150th anniversary of Memorial Baptist, current members of the church will pay homage to a long history of Baptist work that began in Pitt County more than two centuries ago — in the 1750's with the founding of Red Bank Baptist Church.

It was in the summer of 1827 that 23 persons gathered in Greenville under the guidance of Rev. Thomas Mason to organize the Greenville Baptist Church (Memorial's original name).

For the next few years, the congregation worshipped in a building at the corner of Greene and Second Streets. It was at this site on May 31, 1828 that a Church Covenant and Rules of Decorum were adopted.

At the time of Memorial's founding and early days, considerable emphasis was being placed on missionary work. Local interest in this field led to the organization of the Baptist Benevolent Society in 1829 for the purpose of supporting a traveling ministry within the state.

Cheney told Taylor that, much as he respected Ford, he was now a private citizen and wanted to register strong opposition to the treaties. He asked Taylor to vote for the moderately worded anti-treaty resolution and also protect Ford from harsher drafts rebuking the former President.

On Sept. 29, Byrd and Baker began planning the coup to end the filibuster against natural gas deregulation. They devised the parliamentary points of order that would kill the procedural filibuster.

On Sunday, Oct. 2, after they finished their work, Baker advised Byrd that Mondale as presiding officer should rule on the points of order the next day. "If I were you," Baker said, "I would want the Vice President here." Byrd agreed and telephoned Mondale.

The upshot: Mondale, constitutional president of the Senate, took the chair to become target for a broadside from liberals conducting the filibuster. The wounds he sustained will not heal overnight.

CHENEY AND PANAMA
With one eye toward saving his old boss from humiliation, President Ford's White House chief of staff, Richard Cheney, lobbied members of the Republican National Committee to back a moderately worded resolution opposing the Panama Canal treaties which was adopted in New Orleans Sept. 30.

Cheney's purpose went beyond saving the pride of Jerry Ford, whose own support for the treaties has infuriated conservative Republicans. Besides helping Ford, Cheney wanted to put himself on record against the treaties.

The apparent reason: a possible political future in conservative Wyoming, where Cheney now lives between trips back East as a financial adviser.

Among those lobbied was national committeeman William Taylor of Florida, who was amazed to be called by Cheney. Cheney told Taylor that, much as he respected Ford, he was now a private citizen and wanted to register strong opposition to the treaties. He asked Taylor to vote for the moderately worded anti-treaty resolution and also protect Ford from harsher drafts rebuking the former President.

This was the convention that is the subject of a state historic marker that stands at the site of the former Memorial Church building on Greene Street.

Another historic date in the history of Memorial is June 8, 1867. On that date, Negro members of the congregation requested and were granted letters of dismissal in order to organize their own church in the Baptist faith. This move led to the founding of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

Currently, Rev. C. Norman Bennett, Jr. is pastor of Memorial Baptist Church. Bennett is the 34th minister to occupy the church's pulpit since the tenure of the first minister, Rev. Thomas Mason.

Dr. Herbert R. Paschal, chairman of the Department of History, East Carolina University, and Chairman of the History Committee of Memorial Baptist Church, has coordinated observances to be held at the Sunday morning service anniversary service — with the assistance of Charles Forbes, Mrs. Annie Moore and Wilkins Wynn, the other committee members.

Commenting on plans for the event, Paschal said "one of the things we have planned is an exhibit of pictures, documents and other memorabilia in the church vestibule."

"We will also distribute a pamphlet setting forth the Covenant and Rules of Decorum of 1828."

Dr. Paschal noted that the 1828 guideline contained some rules that "today seem a little on the archaic side."

Among the 24 rules of conduct are:

— Rule 19th — "No member shall speak more than 'three times' on one subject without leave."

— Rule 22nd — "Females are permitted to speak in the church of case of grievances or when called upon by the moderator."

Another anniversary event for Sunday will be the premiere performance of Shofar for A Memorial Jubilee composed by Joseph Goodwin, organist for Memorial.

According to Goodwin, the music of celebration "is centered on the early American hymn, On Jordan's Stormy Banks, a tune most probably sung by the early Greenville Baptists."

"The shofar," Goodwin notes, "is the ancient ram's horn used by Israel to call the people to worship. The bidding of John the Baptist is heard with the cry of 'Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord,' from the contemporary musical Godspell. Following short variations and contrapuntal treatments, the piece

"Every few years, the United States goes through the ritual of adjusting minimum wage laws. And just as regularly, the business and labor communities engage in exaggerated discussions about either the dire consequences or marvelous benefits that can be expected."

"In fact, increases in the minimum wage have typically been quite modest, compared with increases in other wages or prices, and the results have been fairly innocuous."

Soviets Tested Alert System

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet reconnaissance bombers operating off the East Coast have tried for the first time to confuse the U.S. air defense radar watching their movements, Pentagon sources report.

The Russian effort to interfere with the radar apparently failed, the sources said.

In the incident four days ago, two Russian Tu-95D bombers flying out of Cuba inspected and apparently photographed one of the latest U.S. destroyers as it was sailing in international waters off Boston.

The Soviet planes reportedly dropped chaff — metallic strips that can interfere with radar beams and thus foil detection.

Alerted, American air defense officials sent up four F106 fighter-interceptors from Atlantic City, N.J., and Otis Air Force Base, Mass., as a precaution.

The Tu-95D Bears were intercepted and kept under surveillance by a Navy P3 antisubmarine patrol plane out of Bermuda.

"The Bears returned to Havana after making three passes within about 1,000 feet of the destroyer Spruance," the sources said.

The Russians obviously are interested in getting as much information as possible on the new Spruance class of destroyers, which could pose a major problem for Soviet submarines in the future.

The United States is building a fleet of 30 of the fast 7,600-ton destroyers, also designed to escort convoys, support amphibious landings and bombard shore targets.

U.S. reconnaissance planes take photographs and gather other forms of intelligence on Soviet fleet units in the Mediterranean and other waters.

Pentagon officials are uncertain whether the Tu-95s flew from Havana specifically to look at the Spruance or whether the Russian planes were out to photograph "targets of opportunity."

Some senior American officers are known to be concerned about the boldness of Soviet aircraft in maneuvering within the U.S. air defense zone.

Pentagon sources said there has been a flurry of Soviet air reconnaissance activity in the Atlantic recently. They reported that Tu-95s flew near a Navy task force headed by the carrier America east of Bermuda early this month.

Last April, a Tu-95 evaded air defense radar and penetrated closer than ever before to the East Coast, reaching the vicinity of four U.S. warships engaged in training exercises from 60 to 75 miles off North Carolina.

In that incident, the Bears retreated after two American F4 Phantom jet fighters were scrambled after them.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

Don't despair—no matter how bad things look, there might be a silver lining in one of your holdings. The Dutch defenders did not appreciate this one from their European Championship encounter with Iceland.

In effect, the Icelandic North bid six hearts over his partner's one heart opening bid. To our mind that is rather aggressive, especially since his partner had done nothing but show a minimum hand after opening the bidding.

North would have rued his optimism had West chosen to lead a club, for the defenders would then have had to collect a trick in each minor suit. But that was not an easy lead to find, and no blame attaches to the Netherlands who chose to lead a spade. Although this lead gave declarer a third trick in spades, it did not materially help the North-South cause.

Declarer needed to find three discards for dummy clubs. A glance at lummy showed that this might be achieved if West held the ace of diamonds—on a diamond lead toward dummy, West would either have to rise with the ace or lose his diamond trick altogether. However, declarer saw that there was one other possibility.

In order to give himself the maximum chance to judge the play, declarer won the first spade in dummy, crossed to the king of spades and immediately led the nine of diamonds. When West played low without any problems, declarer decided that he was unlikely to have the ace. So instead of putting up a diamond honor, declarer played low from dummy, finessing for the ten!

East won this trick with the ace, and the rest of the hand was simple. No matter what East returned, declarer would be able to draw trumps in three rounds, ending up in dummy, then take three club discards on the established diamonds to make his slam.

Poor Script For Robbins' Novel

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — At great expense, NBC inflicts on you a TV version of Harold Robbins' distinguished novel, "79 Park Avenue," next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the rate of two hours per night.

NBC calls it "the saga of a girl's slide from innocent teenager to infamous madam." Lesley Ann Warren plays the slidee, one Marja Fludjicki of New York's Lower East Side.

Now, my brother Bill, of New York's Upper West Side, is a fan of truly awful shows. He likes to memorize the terrible dialogue and recite it later at places where people drink.

But I won't tout Sunday's saga even to Bill. The dialogue is so bush he'd get the bum's rush from even his headquarters, the Tap-A-Keg Bar & Grill, and that's a place where anything goes.

The show begins on New York's East Side, circa 1935, with a wedding reception for Marja's widowed mother (Barbara Barrie). Mom has just married a drunken lout named Peter (Albert Salmi).

At the party, Marja reveals that "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" is her favorite song. Peter drunkenly tries to fondle her. He also breaks her recording of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

This should alert you she's in for two bad hours. She is. She meets a rich kid, Ross (Marc Singer). He whisks her and two friends off to his parents' summer beach house and makes woo noises.

"You don't have to bull me," she says. "I hate it when guys bull me." But love sort of blossoms, even after she kneels him in the groin during an overture and he is moved to say, "Arghhhhh."

She meets the seamy side of life when Ross goes to his Pop's office late at night to borrow money and spies a blonde "model." Keep this in mind, as it may prove a turning point in Marja's tattered life.

We also learn that Pop is, as Ross tells her, "sort of involved in what some people call the rackets." Pop is from the "old neighborhood." He doesn't want Ross fiddling with anyone from there, particularly Marja. But Ross fiddles while Pop burns.

In time, Marja angrily tells Pop (Michael Constantine): "You're no better than my stepfather, and he's a pig!" If you've endurance, stick around to hear Pop loudly complain later:

"She's the reason my wife started drinking right after breakfast."

Prize Film Shown Historical Society

A state and national award winning film was the chief attraction on the program of the recent meeting of the Pitt County Historical Society.

The Other Side of the River, about the Tuscarora Indians and the Ralph Lane colonization attempt in 1586 was the film featured at the society's first meeting of the 1977-78 season.

The film is written, acted, edited and directed by students of the Bear Grass School, under the auspices of Ms. Elizabeth Roberson, a language-arts and social teacher in the Martin County School.

The Other Side of the River won a North Carolina school award, and was subsequently shown in New York where it also won an award. The setting of the film is the Roanoke River basin.

In action taken at the meeting, the society's president, Joe Congleton, appointed a committee of three to locate, identify and photograph old and historic buildings extant in Pitt County. Connor Eagles chairs the committee, which has also as members Ms. Tabitha M. DiVisconti and Judge Dink James.

The speaker for the evening, Ms. Roberson, was introduced by Dr. Donald Lennon, program chairman.

On Porn Law

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. has taken under advisement a request to declare the state's anti-pornography law unconstitutional.

The complaint was brought by operators of several adult book stores, movie theaters and health clubs in the Fayetteville area and one in Raleigh.

The law, passed by the 1977 legislature, allows the attorney general or a district attorney to file a civil suit against a business that peddles pornography, seeking to have it padlocked as a public nuisance.

Attorneys for the state asked Dupree not to intervene.

Gainers held a very slight lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

At the close on Thursday the Federal Reserve reported a big jump in the basic measure of the money supply.

The news was taken as a strong signal that the Fed was likely to tighten credit further in its effort to combat inflation by restraining monetary growth.

But analysts said traders seemed to be buying stocks today on the theory that the market had taken that negative news into account in advance with its recent slide.

The NYSE's composite index rose .05 to 51.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was unchanged at 115.61.

Volume on the Big Board came to 9.25 million shares by noon.

No Drainage Problem Seen

Moderate rain during the past several days has not caused any drainage problems in Greenville streets.

According to Mayo Allen, director of the Greenville Department of Public Works, drainage lines remain open and no backup is expected.

"We sent several crews out to see if there was any blockage," he said.

Allen added that the crews specifically checked on areas that had had problems with flooding previously.

"To the best of my knowledge, the water is flowing and there is no water in the streets anywhere."

The Tar River level at 8 a.m. was 4.6 feet on the National Weather Gauge.

In the 24-hour span leading up to midnight, 1.16 inches of rain fell in the area. Since midnight, 1.07 inches have fallen.

The 8 a.m. temperature reading was 48 degrees.

We make loans to farmers. That's it.

When agriculture is in a slump, many lending institutions cut back or completely discontinue agricultural loans. But since we began lending money more than 50 years ago, farmers have depended on Farm Credit for needed capital. Through good times as well as bad, we've been there to work with the farmer. We know financing and we know agriculture. We've done it longer and do it better than anyone else.

After a start that was frustrated by an ankle injury, East Carolina strong safety Gerald Hall finally came back to life Saturday afternoon against Southern Illinois.

He returned four punts for 102 yards and set up two touchdowns with those runs. One of them covered over 60 yards.

He also came within a hair of intercepting a pass, and generally played one of his better games.

If there was a disappointment in the game, it was that the speedy back from Edenton was not able to take the ball all the way in himself on his two long returns. "Not scoring was a disappointment," he said. "It was the best runs I've had this year."

However, Hall didn't think that his game was the best of his career at East Carolina. "Probably The Citadel game last year was my best," Hall recalled. In that one, he intercepted two passes, both setting up touchdowns. He returned one of those 51 yards.

"The ankle injury slowed by down for most of the early games," Hall said. "But that's about well now. It still bothers me some, but right now my thighs are bothering me some. But I'll be ready to go by Saturday."

Hall was unhappy about missing the pass interception. At the time, he jumped up and down in frustration. "I should have had it. Anytime I get my hands on the ball, I should be able to pick it off," he said.

Last year, Hall was the rookie in the defensive secondary, and this year, he's the veteran with three rookies. "I don't see myself in a different role. The guys are coming along, and doing a good job. In the last three weeks, we've played pretty good. We're getting more and more confident and playing better." While there was a lot of criticism about the secondary earlier in the year, Hall now feels that the four which also include Willie Holley, Steve Hale and Charlie Carter, are a solid group now.

Hall came to East Carolina on a different route than most football players. "I had been approached by some of the black schools, and State had talked to me, but hadn't offered me anything. I had decided to come to East Carolina and walk on, however."

It turned out that he didn't have to go the walk-on route. Coach Pat Dye, in Edenton to check on another player, saw Hall playing in a high school basketball game, and was impressed by his quickness. It wasn't long after that that Hall became a grant player prior to entering ECU.

"It was a lot better that way," he said.

Hall said that he has set no personal goals for himself this season. "I wanted us to go Down through the years since East Carolina University moved out of the college division, one team has been a thorn in the side of the Pirates.

Saturday night, that team, the Richmond Spiders, comes to town, hoping to repeat the success it had the last time it played in Ficklen Stadium.

The two teams square off starting at 7 p.m. on Youth Night.

Going back to 1972, East Carolina's Pirates hold a Ficklen Stadium record of 26-1. That lone loss came back in 1975, when the University of Richmond snapped a long home winning streak. Since then, the Pirates have run off ten straight on the Ficklen turf, and they'd like to make it one more at least.

Richmond, which has played three Pat Dye-coached teams so far, holds sway over the Bucs, 11-7, in the overall series, and 2-1 against Dye.

"They are giants," Dye said after glancing over the Spider lineup, which includes an offensive line that averages 231.4, lead by 270-pound tackle Jesse Moore.

"I don't look at their record," he added, "but what they put on the field."

"We've played them three times, and we should have won all three. But we lost two of them. They beat us the only game we've lost here since 1972."

"Richmond is a very, very capable football team, and I don't see why their record is like it is," Dye added. "They've played very strong competition."

Coody Grabs Early Lead

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A rested and relaxed Charles Coody took a one-stroke lead into today's second round of the $150,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament after leisurely fashioning a near course-record 63 over the opening 18 holes.

"I didn't expect to play very well at all," said the lanky Coody, a former Masters champion. "I haven't played in a tournament in about three weeks and I tend to be erratic after a layoff."

Coody, playing on the same course where he won the Texas Amateur Championship 18 years ago, sank two 40-foot putts for birdies en route to his sparkling seven-under-par round Thursday.

"Naturally I putted pretty well, but other than the two long putts, I had the ball pretty close to the hole all day," said the Stamford, Tex., native.

Coody's 63 was one shot shy of the course-record 62 set a year ago by San Antonian Jim Barker, now a rookie on the pro tour.

George Archer, another former Masters winner, also dominated the slick, undulating Oak Hills Country Club course greens, finishing with a 64.

Steady Mark Hayes led a group of six players deadlocked with 67s on the par-70, 6,525-yard layout. Hale Irwin, Tom record to the contest, while the Pirates hold down a 5-1 mark.

The Spiders bowed in their opener, 36-0, to West Virginia, and then were shut out, 31-0 by North Carolina.

Appalachian State provided them with their lone win so far, falling 21-13, but North Texas State put them back in the losers' bracket, 47-14. VMI handed Richmond its third shutout of

Rose Is Delayed

Rose High School's Homecoming football game with Bertie High School, scheduled for tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, has been postponed.

The contest will be played Monday night at 7 p.m. Rose officials asked that Rose not play tonight because of the wet condition of the field, coupled with East Carolina having a home game Saturday.

As of 10 a.m. this morning, all other area football games were still on schedule for tonight. Most schools said decisions would be made later in the day on playing or not.

the year, 25-0, last weekend.

The Spider offense has sputtered most of the season, averaging only 122.6 yards per game on the ground and just 79.6 per game through the air, barely 200 yards a game.

Fullback Tim Thacker is the leading rusher with 233 yards, 46.6 per game. Tailback Buster Jackson is next with 222 yards, 44.4 per game. No other runner has more than 100 yards.

Greg Gregory, listed as the number two man at quarterback for this week's game, is the leading passer, hitting 21 of 57 for 235 yards. Jeff Smith, slated to start, has hit 7 of 18 for 53 yards.

The Spiders have been giving up 204 yards a game rushing and 138.8 yards a game passing—not a great deal.

Perhaps one of the most significant statistics Richmond has is that it has yet to score a point in the second half. Of their 35 points, 21 have come in the first period and 14 in the second.

Meanwhile, East Carolina is led by Theodore Sutton, the fullback, with 356 yards. Leander Green has rushed for 294, Willie Hawkins for 226, Jimmy Southerland for 210, Eddie Hicks for 127 and Vince Kolanko for 117, giving the Bucs six with over 100 yards.

Southerland leads the passing with 24 of 42 for 409 yards, while Green has connected on 8 of 24 for 95 yards.

The Pirates are averaging 253.3 yards a game on the ground, while giving up 130.7. They've passed for 85.5 yards a game, and allowed 154.3 per game.

Dye is tossing out Richmond's record, and probably is right to do so. "They always play us tough, and I don't see any reason for them not to be up for us this week," he said.

If past games have been any guideline, it will probably be a struggle.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's volleyball team wrapped up the Eastern Carolina Conference regular season title yesterday with a 15-4, 15-2 victory over North Pitt.

The Pant-HERS finished the regular season in a tie for second place with a 6-4 record, one game behind the Ewes' 7-3 mark.

The two teams now enter the league tournament with Greene Central seeded first and North Pitt seeded second. They will both receive first-round byes, playing again next Tuesday in the tourney at Ayden-Grifton.

Lynn Shackelford paced the Ewe victory over the Pant-HERS with 14 points yesterday.

Gillman Opening First Cage Drills

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Saturday, East Carolina University's new basketball coach, Larry Gillman, will do what he's been waiting for "what seems like eight years," as he says.

He'll start his first practice session as the new coach and get his first official look at his initial team.

"The main thing we want to accomplish is to teach this group how to play hard," Gillman said. He was asked what "playing hard" meant to him.

"It's difficult to define," he said. "You have to have complete awareness of what you are doing offensively and defensively, and you have to push your body to the fullest. You can't go full speed if you don't know what you're doing. Everyone has to know their roles and they have to be in shape."

Gillman feels that the Pirates will be in the best shape they've ever been in when they report to the start of drills. "But that's not going to be good enough," the coach said. "They'll learn what being in shape really is."

Gillman said he didn't feel that this year's pre-season practice would be a blending-in period for the old and new players. "There are no returning players in my book. I have ideas about the roles that players will have, and I'm pretty sure that (Oliver) Mack will be a starter. But everyone else starts from scratch. I want to see what each guy can do with my direction." During the first week, Gillman will drill the team in conditioning, ball-handling, lane-filling, rebounding, and some defensive work.

The coach noted that in this area, officials call the game tighter than in others, and that East Carolina had been foul-prone in the past. "This goes with conditioning. If you are in better shape, you make less physical mistakes. It goes back to playing hard and having your head on right. The little things pay off."

Gillman said that the Pirate running game would be as disciplined as he wanted it to be. "You have to know when to take the break and when not to. Everyone is going to run the break when it can. Naturally, we won't play anything like Las Vegas, because we don't have that type personnel. But we're going to run and get the easy baskets when we can."

He added that he hopes to average between 75 and 85 points a game on offense, while holding opponents to an average of 65-70 points a game.

There are 12 players on grant who will report. One incoming freshman, Dan Roberts of Indiana, returned home shortly after the start of school. The 12 include one junior college transfer, Mack, and three freshmen, Bernard Hill, Roger Carr and Walter Moseley.

"All of our freshmen have talent, and as I've said, I expect one of them to mature sooner than the others. It could be any one of them."

Mack, of course, has already made pre-season All-American honors in Playboy and Game-Plan magazines. "Some people say there is a lot of pressure on him, but I disagree," Gillman said. "He's won honors in the past and will win more. He will cope with anything I or the opposition give him. He'll be 100 per cent ready every time we throw it up."

Of the returnees, Gillman has been impressed by a number of them, probably foremost by Greg Cornelius. "Greg played out of position last year. He's a natural center and I think his abilities there will show this year. And at 6-9, he's a good size for a college center."

Herb Gray, according to Gillman, can play anywhere on the court. "Right now, he has a stress fracture in his foot and will probably miss some of the early practices. But he has a lot of talent."

Herb Krusen, Kyle Powers and Jim Ramsey have also impressed Gillman. "They all have talents we need, and I think all three will have good years. Krusen is one of the finest shooters around, but he has to do more than shoot and he's working hard to become a better all-around player. Everyone knows what Ramsey can do."

If there is a question mark, it may be Wade Henkel. He missed last year after injuring a hand. "He can be a very good player. But he has to realize how good he can be, and how good a player he can be first," Gillman said.

Dean Hartley and Don Whitaker round out the team, and bring experience to the game.

Gillman noted that time was a factor. "But it won't be any excuse. I have confidence in myself and the players have confidence in themselves. I'm ambitious and so are the players. Between us we can make the program a success."

The opening game will be a big challenge, Indiana. "Everyone has to respect Indiana, but I'm not in awe of them, and I'll be satisfied with victory. As I've said before, our goal is to just as many games as it takes to gain a place in a post-season tournament."

"We are young, and we are ambitious. I feel that the fans will have a new experience as will I and the players. I look forward to it."

Rain Delays

Rain yesterday forced the postponement of several outdoor events, but one activity saw a forfeit.

Rose High School's cross-country team gained a forfeit victory over Rocky Mount in a scheduled meet.

Rose's girls' tennis match with Northeastern High School has been switched to Wednesday, and will be played at Elizabeth City. The match scheduled for Tuesday, October 25, in Elizabeth City, will now be played in Greenville.

Rose's junior varsity football game with Bertie has been tentatively rescheduled for Monday.

A tennis match between Farmville Central and Aycock was washed out, with new date set at this time.

E. B. Aycock's junior school football game with Goldsboro was delayed, and tentatively reset for this afternoon.

Simpson May Make Switch

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO (AP) — Like other famous athletes before him, O.J. Simpson answered when Hollywood beckoned. But Simpson is not planning to be just another jock cashing in on his big name.

Favorable reviews of his recent television movie, "A Killing Affair," in which he co-starred with Elizabeth Montgomery, left him ecstatic, he says.

After playing several minor roles "as a learning experience" and working with such actors as Paul Newman, Richard Burton and Lee Marvin, Simpson tackled his first major role in "A Killing Affair."

"I said don't make me 'Superfly' or 'The Six Million Dollar Man,' give me a role where I can play a character and have some believability. Then we'll find out if I can act."

"Fortunately, the critics said I can act," he said. The man who attained so many lofty goals in football has a very simple one in acting.

"I don't want to be another football player who became an actor. I want people to come up to me after seeing my movie and say, 'I couldn't believe that was you.'"

Simpson's sex appeal, deep, resonant voice and magnetism give him some natural acting talent, but he admits he has a long way to go.

"I'm still learning. I'm always learning new things when I work with different actors. Richard Burton, for example. It's amazing what he can do just with the right voice inflections," he said.

Simpson said he has also been told he could parlay his fame and image into political clout.

"Some people have approached me and told me that people listen to me, and that for my career I should look into politics. I've been reading up on a lot of things, but there's still a lot of things worldwide that I'm ignorant about."

"I read 'Animal Farm' (by George Orwell) and it says communism will make you crazy with power. Then I read Mao Tse-tung's book, and I respect the man for what he did."

"I'm not a Communist, though," he added, laughing. Turning serious, Simpson said, "From everything I know about politics, somewhere along the way you have to compromise yourself. I don't think I could handle that."

Simpson's popularity, demand and sexiness (named the nation's "Most Watchable Man" by one women's group) does have a drawback.

"It puts a strain on my family life. There's always gossip, and it can hurt your wife. You can't let it affect your life. My wife and I don't want to let a rumor change our lives," he said.

Simpson and wife Marquise were believed to have had marital problems last year, when Simpson asked the Buffalo Bills to trade him to the West Coast to be near his family. He said things are fine now, and the couple recently had its third child, a second girl.

Things haven't quite been the same around the office this week. Tom Baines pulled off another banner week and vaulted into a tie for the lead with Vickie Spivey as the log jam broke up.

This week, things could change again, however, as there are a number of differences on our panel's picks. Whether we'll be closer together or further apart will be seen at week's end.

For now, Baines and Spivey lead the pack with a 48-18 record, while Joe Jenkins has pulled into third at 47-19. Jim Kyle and Steve Hemric are 46-20, while we have slipped to 45-21.

Well, it all keeps life interesting.

Our high school picks came back into form last week, and we'd like to see more of the same.

Perhaps the toughest game to pick is that between Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central. Ayden-Grifton wants to win to set up a showdown with Farmville Central. The Rams want to win to keep their chances of a playoff berth alive. Two losses will just about kill them.

It promises to be quite a battle, but I'm going to go with the Chargers in this one.

Ahoskie visits Williamston in a Northeastern Conference game. The Tigers will be hosting the team that is generally regarded as the best of the league. Ahoskie is unbeaten, and should stay that way.

Jameville travels all the way to Manteo for a Tobacco Belt game. If the trip isn't enough to wear down the Bullets, the Manteo team will be.

North Pitt goes to North Lenoir. The Hawks are fighting for a chance at a playoff berth too and can't afford another loss. North Pitt would like to improve its standing in the league, but we like the Hawks.

Southern Nash visits Conley. This isn't the year of the Firebird, and Conley should be able to pull out a win here.

Farmville Central visits C.B. Aycock. The Falcons were thought to be a possible contender earlier in the year. But the Jaguars are riding high now and should stay that way. FC to win it.

Turning to our panel, we find the two area games at the top.

Rose entertains Bertie and it's Homecoming for the Rampants. Perhaps that, and the fact that the Rampants are bound to snap their league loss streak brought it on. Nevertheless, our panel picks the Rampants to win, 4-2.

East Carolina faces Richmond, and the Spiders were the last team to stop the Pirates in Ficklen Stadium. Unless something surprising happens, however, it shouldn't happen this year.

The panel goes down the line with the Pirates, 6-0.

Other consensus picks are: Clemson over Duke; State over Carolina; Georgia Tech over Auburn; South Carolina and Ole Miss a tossup; Texas A&M over Baylor; Maryland over Wake Forest; Virginia Tech over Virginia; LSU over Kentucky; Texas over Arkansas; and West Virginia over Boston College.

Three Top Rivalries Highlight Weekend's Pro Football Schedule

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It doesn't take much to arouse some football players. Tell a Dallas Cowboy, for example, that the Washington Redskins are in town, then stand back.

Or tell a Minnesota Viking that the Chicago Bears are trying to grab first place, then duck.

Or suggest to an Oakland Raider that the Denver Broncos would like a division title for a change, then run and hide.

The Redskins-Cowboys, Bears-Vikings and Raiders-Broncos matchups, three heated rivalries, highlight Sunday's National Football League action.

The other games are New Orleans at Los Angeles, Atlanta at Buffalo, Baltimore at Kansas City, St. Louis at Philadelphia, San Francisco at the New York Giants, Cleveland at Houston, Green Bay at Detroit, New England at San Diego, the New York Jets at Miami and Tampa Bay at Seattle. On Monday night, it's Cincinnati at Pittsburgh.

"If they beat us," Washington Coach George Allen said of the unbeaten Cowboys, "I imagine they will have a lock on the division." A loss would drop the Redskins two games back of the Cowboys in the National Football Conference East Division. "Dallas has played tough teams and beat them on the road. They're playing better football than we are right now, but that doesn't mean we can't beat them."

Cowboys Coach Tom Landry also sees it as a "must game," and not only because a loss would tie the teams at 4-1. "This is a very critical game for us because the next time we play them it's in Washington and nobody plays at home any better than they do," Landry said.

The biggest task for the Vikings, 3-1 and one game ahead of Chicago in the NFC Central, is cooling off quarterback Bob Avellini and running back Walter Payton. Avellini threw three touchdown passes, including bombs of 70 and 72 yards to James Scott, and Payton rushed for 126 yards (he has 462 for the season) in last Monday night's victory over Joe Namath and the Los Angeles Rams.

Denver and Oakland have won four in a row this year and share first place in the American Football Conference West. But the Raiders' complete winning streak — going back to the fourth regular-season game of 1976 — covers 17 games.

Yankees, Just One Big Unhappy Family, Continue Their Fussing

By FRED ROTHENBERG

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The New York Yankees, one big, unhappy family, arrived in the land of the gossip hound and continued to tell tales out of school.

Baby Jags Defeated

HAVERLOCK — Haverlock's junior varsity football team had no trouble defeating the Farmville Central Jayvees in a game yesterday afternoon. The Kids took a 38-0 victory.

William Godette scored twice for Haverlock, getting the team's first TD on a six-yard run and its third touchdown on a 27-yard run.

Richard Meyers returned a fumble 21 yards for another score and Albert Toon blocked a punt out of the end zone for a safety. Allen Gossett scored on a 19-yard run and Warren Norris, who ran two PATs, got a touchdown on a 24-yard interception return. The final Haverlock points came on a conversion run by Andy Hudjich.

The Baby Jaguars are now 1-5 for the season and will travel to Ayden-Grifton next Thursday.

"We have a chance to win the World Series and there's one guy out there second-guessing the manager," said Yankee captain Thurman Munson. Munson was talking about teammate Reggie Jackson, who criticized Billy Martin for using a rusty Catfish Hunter as his second-game pitcher.

"I wouldn't be second-guessing the manager," added Munson, who has been hinting broadly that he wants to be traded to Cleveland, the closest major league city to his native Canton, Ohio.

Martin, not on the trading block but close to losing his job all season long, also felt Jackson's loose lip could sink the Yankee ship.

"Reggie's having enough trouble in right field to keep him from second-guessing the manager," said Martin, who clashed with Jackson and Yankee owner George Steinbrenner throughout the season. "We're in this World Series as a team. None of our players should be talking against their teammate or the manager."

Fifty years after the Yankees' Murderer's Row team spoke softly and carried big sticks, the 1977 Yankees, "Murderer's Row," was speaking loudly and carrying small sticks.

Meanwhile, over on the other side of the field, the docile Dodgers were providing an interesting contrast, performing their version of "Love Story," an ongoing story of how 25 players and a rookie manager can actually win games without controversy.

The only thing similar about the Yankees and Dodgers is that they each have one victory going into Game 3 in the 1977 World Series tonight.

The Yankees will go with right-hander Mike Torrez, a 17-game winner during the regular season, while the Dodgers trot out medical exhibit No. 1, Tommy John, whose rebuilt left arm brought Los Angeles 20 victories this year.

"If I've got a good sinker, everything will be all right," said Torrez, who is playing out his option and could be making his final appearance as a Yankee.

John is also a sinkerball specialist, but he says the big factor in his game will be his curveball.

"The key will be my ability to get my breaking ball over," said John, whose career was saved by a remarkable tendon transplant three years ago. "I've also got to have my good control and be able to change speeds."

The Dodgers won Wednesday night's second game at cavernous Yankee Stadium 6-1 with an awesome power display of four home runs. Dodger Stadium, a very friendly home for the National League champions, is a cozy ballpark.

"I know I'm going to have to keep the ball low on these guys," said the unsigned Torrez, who has listed Boston and Montreal high on his shopping list. "If you get one up to them, they're going to hit it out."

The Dodgers are not only happy to be home, they're happy to be Dodgers.

"I've been trying to tell everybody how lucky I am," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "This club is built on love, spirit and togetherness."

"Winning the second game did a lot for our club. What brought tears to my eyes was the statement of a security man in Yankee Stadium who said he has yet to see a team with the class we had."

The security man wasn't talking about the Yankees or their fans, who bombarded the Dodgers with an assortment of fruits, bottles and other objects Wednesday night. One missile, a rubber ball, hit Dodger right fielder Reggie Smith on the top of the head. Smith, in obvious pain after Game 2, said Thursday he was a little sore but would be ready to play tonight.

Holtz' Total Mind Won't All Be On Texas-Arkansas Saturday

By The Associated Press

Everybody gets up for the North Carolina-North Carolina State game — fans, players, school officials and even former coaches.

"You bet I'm concerned and I'm picking State to win it," says Lou Holtz, the former Wolfpack coach now at Arkansas. "There's not a day that's gone by this week when the State-Carolina game didn't take top priority in our household. Once you've been at State, you're a State man for life."

But it'll be a Tar Heel defensive victory, says UNC Chancellor Ferebee Taylor, who likewise can't resist the annual lure of the game that has become the most emotional rivalry for either school. "We've probably got the best defensive unit since I've been chancellor here," said Taylor, in his sixth year.

There will be more than emotion riding on the game, however. Both schools are undefeated in Atlantic Coast Conference play. N.C. State is 3-0 in the conference and 5-1 overall.

UNC is 1-0 and 3-2.

But there are some other big conference games this weekend too. Clemson, 1-1 in the conference and on a four-game tear, is at Duke, 1-0 in the conference and 3-2 overall.

Maryland, back on the winning track after losing to N.C. State two weeks ago, is at Wake Forest, which has posted disappointing, 0-2 and 1-4 marks thus far. Winless Virginia will try to avoid its fifth shutout in six games at Virginia Tech.

An N.C. State victory would clearly give the Wolfpack the conference edge. Coupled with a Clemson victory, N.C. State would need only to whip Clemson or Duke in its remaining two games to be assured of a tie for the championship.

The State-North Carolina battle has long been a sellout, with a crowd of 50,000 expected for the 1:30 game in Raleigh.

It will feature the Wolfpack's explosive offense, which has the conference's total offensive leader in quarterback Johnny Evans, who has accounted for 157 yards a game. Facing it will be the Tar Heel's defense, which leads the conference and has yielded just 30 points and three touchdowns this year.

At Durham, Clemson will be led by quarterback Steve Fuller, who has passed for touchdowns and run for four more, while Duke's Mike Dunn has thrown for two and run for two. Fuller ranks second in total offense in the ACC.

At Winston-Salem, it should be a passing game. Maryland will play without starting quarterback Mark Manges, who has a broken hand, and he'll be replaced by Larry Dick, who ranks second in the conference in passing. Wake Forest has the ACC's leading passer in Mike McGlamry, and the leading rusher, James McDougald.

Conley In Victory

H. Conley's Valkyries gained a 2-1 victory over Ayden-Grifton yesterday in the final regular season match of the year for the two schools.

Conley won the first game, 15-10, behind the eight point serving of Pam Manning. Manning served up the final seven points in a row.

Ayden-Grifton came back with a 15-2 win in the second game, with Vivian Ellis getting the Chargerettes off to a good start with six in a row.

Conley came back to win the last game, 15-4. Annie Wooten served eight in a row to run Conley out to an 11-4 lead that they finally added four more points to win.

Conley finished the regular season at 6-4, tying for second place, while Ayden-Grifton ended up 5-5, and in third.

Southern Nash is at Conley, and Farmville Central at Ayden-Grifton, in the first round of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament today. The winners return to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday for the semifinals and finals.

His 'Gross' Films Made For Laughs

By PETER VANDEVANTER
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Film-maker John Waters is a master of the sex comedy, a satirist of human perversity and the hero of thousands of avant-garde movie goers.

But Waters, whose fans stand in line for his deliberately gross films, said neither he nor his audience takes them seriously.

"People come to laugh at what I make," he said. "It's comedy in the slapstick tradition but it's also complex human sexuality. People feel safe because nobody believes that what I depict could happen — even in X-rated films."

Waters, a thin and nervous 29-year-old with dark features and a quick smile, is a Baltimore native who decided against college in the '60s and instead went to New York to make movies.

His films depict scenes that would make even the most sensational yellow journalist of the old school shudder. In one, a woman kills her baby sitter — but the killing occurs after the sitter strangled the woman's child in a bowl of dogfood and left the body in a refrigerator.

Waters, who uses Baltimore as a base for his film productions, expects to premier his newest film, "Desperate Living," in New York this fall.

For previous films, the Village Voice in New York called him a "master filmmaker" and Pop artist Andy Warhol labeled him a "genius."

"Pink Flamingos," released in 1972, was screened at the Museum of Modern Art's Bicentennial Salute to American Humor. And when his "Female Trouble" opened in 1974 in New York, Variety hailed it as a "true original."

Lenny Poryles, one of the owners of Washington's Biograph Theater, which played "Pink Flamingos" to packed houses for 40 weeks in 1972, said Waters "appeals to the rebel against decency in all of us."

Waters said his largest following is among persons in their mid-20s to early 30s. He said they regard his references to sexual perversions as having just the right twist of ridiculousness.

But that clearly is open to debate.

In one movie, there is a scene in which a fat black housemaid sits on her employer and squashes him to death. In another, a group of people sit down to an elegantly served dinner and proceed to eat fried rat.

Waters concedes it's not exactly family entertainment. In fact, he once handed out vomit bags for his movies as a promotional gimmick.

But he said a fair number of his fans are middle-aged parents who bring their children to the movies.

"What happens in my films is so ridiculous that no matter what the topic — sex, hatred, love, ambition — anybody can watch."

The characters in Waters' movies always seem to have dripping skin, pastel coloring, inflated eyes and incredibly nervous motions.

"People always ask me if my actors and actresses are really as gross as the characters they play. I say no, of course, not. My actors and actresses are usually very nice people that no one would look twice at on the street."

"For instance, my lead actress in 'Desperate Living' who plays a black, lesbian maid weighing 250 pounds with orange-dyed hair is a very competent Baltimore city school teacher in real life."

Waters, a bachelor, said audiences sometimes tell him they are appalled at his gum-chewing female prostitutes with bony bodies, housewives with runny noses and businessmen with bulbous noses.

"And then I walk around the streets and see those people and say 'C'mon — why are my characters so weird?' I can't believe my eyes," said Waters, his dark, pencil-thin mustache seeming to coil as he laughs.

His biggest successes so far have been "Pink Flamingos" and "Female Trouble," both of which used strange females or transvestite men as leads.

Waters said he writes all of his movies slowly and gets inspiration from bits and pieces — especially police reports — in newspaper and magazines articles about strange murders and bizarre occurrences.

"The writers and critics try to attribute all sorts of meaning — like the violence and materialism of America — to my movies, but I am just having fun. Part of the whole thing is that we all take ourselves too seriously."

Waters said he got his start in films by personally marketing his earlier movies such as "Hag in a Black Leather Jacket" in 1964, "Roman Candles" in 1966, "Eat Your Makeup" in 1967 and "Mondo Trasho" in 1969.

"I would just drive into a town, find the avant-garde theater and tell the manager I would promote my own movie by giving handouts on the streets. I got to see the country and make contacts."

"But never, never did I play at porn houses. That was instant death."

Waters, who has made eight films in 13 years, chose Baltimore for his casting and production work because "it is the trashiest city." He advertises his latest film, which uses a set that was put together in parts of Baltimore, with the sentence, "It isn't very pretty."

He said he enjoys his new popularity at the drive-ins.

"The idea that my films actually play to people at drive-ins is the most exciting thing that's happened to my career."

THE REYNOLDS COMPETITION ... now underway to form a collection of North Carolina art for the industries' new building in Winston-Salem had an enthusiastic response from artists in Green-vile and eastern North Carolina. Shown above are a few of 433 works entered in the competition at the Greenville collection point. (Reflector photo by Jerry Raynor)

Reynolds Competition Sees Big Eastern Carolina Participation

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For North Carolina artists, the current purchase and award competition sponsored by R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. of Winston-Salem has been one of the most exciting challenges to come their way in a long time.

In Greenville, one of eight cities in the state designated as collection points for entries in the competition, the response has been, in the words of Greenville Art Center director Edith Walker, "completely enthusiastic."

Ms. Beverly Reid and Ms. Carolyn Hibbard, in charge of registering and accepting entries at the building that formerly housed the Wilkerson Funeral Home on Evans Street, were almost overwhelmed with a constant flow of deliveries on Tuesday and Wednesday, the final two entry dates.

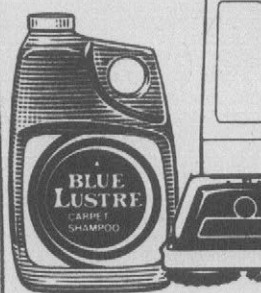

"There's no room left," Ms. Reid said late Wednesday just before the deadline hour. "Every room and hallway is filled."

A tabulation at the time revealed that a total of 433 entries had been received.

Sculpture, paintings, graphics, ceramics, weavings and tapestries, in all media and sizes are represented in the entries.

"All of us are excited about the diversity and the quality of what has been entered," Ms. Hibbard, herself an artist, said.

The competition, open to amateur, student and professional artists, is a no-entry fee competition with each artist limited to three pieces.

On Sunday, a committee will be in Greenville to view the collection and to make selections for purchase. The works purchased from the eight collection points statewide will be housed in the new Reynolds Industries headquarters building in Winston-Salem.

Reynolds has announced plans to purchase from 100 to about 125 works statewide from the eight collection points.

The works chosen for purchase from the 433 here in Greenville will go on view in an exhibit to open at the Greenville Art Center on Monday, October 24.

After all the statewide purchases have been assembled in Winston-Salem, a jury will award first, second and third place cash prizes — at $1,500,

$1,000 and $500 — to the trio of works they consider the best of the collection.

Homecoming On Sunday

Bethel United Methodist Church will hold its annual Homecoming on Sunday, October 16 at 11:00. The Rev. Richard T. Commander, superintendent of the Greenville district of the N. C. Conference of the United Methodist Church, will be the guest speaker.

The Rev. Commander is a graduate of Auburn University and Duke Divinity School. Before coming to Greenville, he served churches in Elizabeth City, Hamlet, Burlington, Fayetteville, Goldsboro and Raleigh. He has served as chairperson of the Conference Commission on Worship and Committee on Family Life.

Church school will be at 9:45, with morning worship at 11:00. Dinner will follow on the grounds. In case of rain, the dinner will be held in the fellowship hall.

All members, former members, and friends of the church are invited to join in the homecoming.

District Meet At Farmville

FARMVILLE — The Greenville District United Methodist Women will hold their annual district meeting Tuesday at the Farmville United Methodist Church.

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. and end with a luncheon, which will be served by the host church.

The program will be given by Jack and Ted Miles and will be an interpretation of "Women of the Bible."

A nursery will be provided. Interested women are invited to attend.

Dog Ordinance

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board adopted a new dog ordinance at a special meeting on Oct. 6.

Police commissioner, Alderman Danny Martin, proposed the ruling adding a penalty for failure to adhere to it.

The original dog ordinance did not contain a penalty and was recently thrown out of district court, according to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles.

The ordinance reads in part, "It shall be unlawful for any dog(s) to be running at large on the streets or sidewalks of the Town of Winterville, unless under the control of the owner..."

"The owner or keeper of any dog(s) who shall knowingly suffer or permit his dog(s) to run at large on the streets and sidewalks, or upon the property of others...shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable upon conviction by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars ($50) or imprisonment not exceeding thirty (30) days..."

Nobles said that anyone wanting a copy of the ordinance in full may pick one up at his office in the town hall.

Switched Off Life-Supports; Was Assailant A Murderer?

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Doctors switched off the life-support machine for a young woman "clinically dead" after a brutal sexual attack, and the action has raised a complicated legal issue of whether her assailant can be tried for murder.

In a decision reminiscent of the Karen Ann Quinlan case, the victim's anguished parents and fiancé gave their permission for doctors to turn off a respirator and allow her to die, the local coroner in the northern English city of Bradford reported Thursday.

Some legal authorities said that, if and when apprehended, her assailant could charge that the physicians who disconnected her life support were responsible for her death.

Carol Wilkinson, 20, was attacked Monday while on her way to her job as a bakery sales clerk in Bradford. Her assailant flung her over a wall, sexually assaulted her and battered her about the head. Her facial features were obliterated beyond recognition. She was robbed of one pound — $1.75.

Doctors said Miss Wilkinson was "clinically dead" when she was admitted to the hospital emergency room, but the hospital staff attached her to a respirator that breathed for her and drugs were administered to aid her heart, kidney and circulatory functions.

Detective Chief Superintendent Denis Hoban, in charge of the hunt for her attacker, said Thursday she could not have survived her injuries.

"There were discussions between the surgeon, the coroner and myself. Carol's parents and the boy she was to marry were fully involved and told everything," he said.

"They realized and accepted that the injuries she had received were such that there was no way she could have lived."

"There is no doubt in my mind at all that her assailant meant to kill her, and did so. I am satisfied the man left her for dead quite deliberately," he said.

Doctors administered a variety of tests to determine brain stem activity because guidelines issued by the British Conference of Royal Medical Colleges and Faculties provide that life-support systems may be withdrawn if tests confirm brain death.

All of the tests showed irreversible brain death.

"When they told us the final test had proved there were no signs of life at all, we had to let them switch off the machine," said the victim's mother, Audrey Wilkinson.

A spokesman for the Law Society, a professional organization for attorneys, said that if her assailant is apprehended and tried, he could argue that Miss Wilkinson "could have been kept alive for more than a year and a day." Murder charges cannot be brought in Britain if more than a year and a day elapse between the time of the attack and the death of the victim.

Karen Ann Quinlan has been in a coma described as a "hopeless vegetative state" since April 1975. Life-support systems were removed in March 1976 after her parents brought suit to force a New Jersey hospital to disconnect her respirator.
