School Boards To Ask 2-Systems Study

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
In the first of what will likely be many joint sessions, on the question of merger, members of the Pitt County and Greenville Boards of Education on Tuesday night reached a general agreement to request the State Division of School Planning to initiate an in-depth comprehensive survey of the two school systems.

Dr. Lacy Presnell and Dr. Darrell Spencer, Director and Assistant Director of the State Division of School Planning respectively, were on hand to offer their services in a guidance role to assist members of the two boards to reach a mutually agreed on outline of merger procedures. At the time the meeting with the two officials ended, the county board expressed a desire to proceed with a request for a state conducted comprehensive survey. The city school board decision to take this first step came later, after a workshop meeting that followed the general meeting. Two city board members, Ed Carter and Ed Stallings, had expressed reservations about the fact that merger reports mentioned by the two state men had contained only the advantages of merger, without delineating the disadvantages. Superintendent Glenn Cox this morning said the decision to seek the state conducted initial comprehensive report survey had been reached by the city board at the workshop meeting. He added that Mark Owens, chairman of the county board, was being officially informed of this decision in a letter being prepared by city board chairman Henry Dunn. The fact that both boards have not taken a firm stand for or against a merger was another point of general agreement and was expressed by Owens near the end of the meeting when he told Dr. Presnell, "I don't think either board is in a position to say we want or do not want a merger at this time. What we would like your department to do is to take an in-depth look into the programs of both the two school systems." Dr. Presnell emphasized the role of the State Division of Planning people "is to provide any services desired from our division at your request." He added that such services are provided only where both boards involved in a merger ask for such assistance, and if only one board sought their services, "we will not deal with it."

Another point made by Dr. Presnell is "we have never taken any position, whether to merge or not to merge." City board member Carter challenged this statement by noting "from what I have heard and observed, there has never been a study of merger that didn't advocate merger." In response to questions from Dr. James Bearden about the number of systems that had considered merger since 1960, as opposed to the 21 systems that have merged, Dr. Presnell said "I don't know the answer to that, but there have been several." Dr. Presnell cautioned board members on some basic expectations and experiences he has observed in merged systems. "A reduction in expenditures should not be ex- (Continued on page 16)

Carter Warns Big Disappointment If No Energy Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today told House members of the energy conference committee that the nation will be "deeply disappointed" if Congress fails to produce a national energy program. The House-Senate committee is one of the largest and most potent such panels in congressional history. It is there, with no fewer than six committee chairmen involved, that the final decisions on the President's program will be made. Calling the House members to the White House for an early morning pep talk, Carter said that if the program is not enacted, "it will take an almost impossible effort to revive the spirit of hope and confidence and commitment that presently exists." With Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger attending the meeting, Carter said that international interest in the energy deliberations on Capitol Hill was perhaps even more acute than it is in the United States. He repeated a statement he made Tuesday that the success or failure of his first year in office and the year's work in Congress would be determined by the shape of the energy program. Showing none of the anger he displayed at a news conference last week when he criticized oil companies and called for Senate action, Carter said the House had improved his energy plan and predicted that the Senate would act "in a courageous and forceful fashion."

"If we should fail, and I don't think we will, the country will be deeply disappointed," the President told the House members. The panel's first session Tuesday began with conference committee chairman Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., warning the members that, "We are not dealing in personalities."

But it's likely personalities will play a significant role in the panel's deliberations, for seldom before have so many congressional heavyweights gathered over a conference table to determine the fate of a piece of legislation. The panel's first session Tuesday began with conference committee chairman Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., warning the members that, "We are not dealing in personalities."

Extremists In Angry Display

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Extremists bombed West German targets in Italy and marched in cities across Europe today to protest the deaths of three imprisoned German anarchists whose freedom was demanding by kidnapers and airline hijackers. Meanwhile, West Germany's interior minister said the German commandos who stormed the hijacked Lufthansa airliner in Somalia early Tuesday were met with a hail of gunfire and exploding grenades in a "brutal" battle in the midst of 86 hostages. Bombs exploded today at German car showrooms in Bo-

Preventive Crime Role Assigned Two Officers

in in District Court. Their job will involve stopping crime at the juvenile level.

Bonnie Evans and Douglas Tripp were sworn in yesterday as school liaison officers under the Law Enforcement Administration Act (LEAA).

The ceremony was performed by Judge Burt E. Aycock before district court began, with Sheriff Ralph Tyson and Pitt County School Superintendent Ott Alford present.

The duties of Evans and Tripp will be to act as liaisons between the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and the Pitt County Schools.

Evans called the job "preventive crime."

The two will work with individual delinquents and pre-delinquent children. They will offer educational services in learning about law enforcement. According to Tripp, the LEAA grant is 90 percent federal, five percent state, and five percent county monies. It was received on Sept. 29.

The liaison program is set up on a one-year renewable terms. If found successful, it will be continued in July.

"I hope we can make a success out of it," said Evans.

Evans, a 27-year old Durham native, was the first female inspector in the N.C. License and Theft Bureau in Raleigh. She is married to James A. Evans and holds a Bachelor of Science in Corrections from East Carolina University.

Tripp, 26, worked with the Raleigh Police Department in 1972-73. He holds an associate degree in Police Science from Pitt Technical Institute and a Bachelor of Science in Corrections from ECU.

The two were selected for their position from approximately 35 candidates.

Hospital Is Finally Out Of Red Ink

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Memorial Hospital's finances are "back in the black," according to Trustee Board treasurer J. H. Moye.

He said $200,000 of a $250,000 operating loan has been repaid and noted that while accounts receivable are high — $104,000 — they are not out of line because hospital revenue per month is up about a half million dollars over what it ran in the old hospital.

The Greenville Ministerial Association will report to the Board next month on its suggestions for a hospital chaplain, it was reported.

Parking Committee Chairman Mack Edwards reported that the Committee has talked with the owner of McLaurin Parking Company about a lease arrangement that would designate this or a similar company as being responsible for the controlled parking system to be installed in the hospital's parking lots. No action was taken.

Board member James Cheatham reported on a new state law that would allow a person to fill out a simple legal document stating his or her "desire that my life not be prolonged by extraordinary means if my condition is determined to be terminal and incurable." He left some of the forms for the other trustees to pick up and study. A Brain Death Policy for the hospital and medical staff is being considered, but no action was taken.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson reported that he will be attending a workshop about the new Blue Cross contract.

Richardson and Dr. William Laupus reported on the new Health Service Agency Regional Plan drawn up by an HSA planning committee chaired by Dr. Laupus. Dr. Laupus said the committee is aware that major changes and corrections will be needed. According to federal guidelines, four primary care beds are needed for each 1,000 population in an area, they said.

Richardson said the Hospital is sorry to be losing Mrs. Mary McPherson, director of the Volunteer Service Program. She is leaving Greenville because her husband is being transferred by his company. He noted that the 74 volunteers, under Mrs. McPherson's direction, worked 850 and a half hours last month helping patients by doing such jobs as manning the information desk, delivering mail and flowers to patients, being pre-admission escorts, helping out in recreation therapy, and taking the library cart throughout the building.

The Trustees were urged to attend a Governing Board Education Session in Kinston Oct. 26 and were invited to the Employee Service Awards Banquet to be held Oct. 27.

It was decided that the November Trustee Board meeting will be held at the American Legion Building here Wednesday, Nov. 16 at 6 p. m., with husbands and wives invited.

Personnel Manager Craig Quick reported on the Personnel Department. Some 850 persons are employed by the Hospital now, about twice as many as there were in June, 1974 when the Department was formed. He said the department handles hiring, benefits, complaints, and termination. He said the department handles about 300 applications a month. He noted that well-qualified handicapped employees are being welcomed. "We feel we have never discriminated against the handicapped," he said, "but now we have to do some proving it to be in compliance with the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Records must also be kept and submitted to show the hospital is in compliance with the guidelines of the (Continued on page 16)

"Somebody took Scary Harry. We look for him every day. We feel sad. We want to see Scary Harry again. We love Scary Harry. Will you help us find him?"

The first graders of Falkland Elementary School have appealed to Hotline to help make the public aware of the theft of Scary Harry, the scarecrow they had stuffed and dressed and flanked with pumpkins on the front lawn of their school. When they arrived at school last Wednesday morning he had disappeared. Any information leading to his recovery in time for Halloween will be appreciated. The school phone number is 752-7820.

Big Bird...

NEW YORK (AP) — The Concorde SST swooped down through an overcast sky today and landed at Kennedy International Airport, marking the end of a 1 1/2-year struggle to keep the noisy, faster-than-sound passenger jet out of New York.

The plane, carrying the colors of both its British and French developers, touched down at 11:09 a.m. EDT. It had taken off from Toulouse in southwest France, where it was built, at 7:25 a.m.

Pitt Rep. Horton Rountree, Speaker Pro Tempore of the North Carolina House of Representatives is a member of the newlyformed group, Carolinians Opposed to Succession.

Rep. John Ed Davenport of Nashville announced the formation of the group which will oppose the proposed amendment to the State's Constitution that would allow the governor and lieutenant Governor to run for two consecutive terms of office, yesterday. In his announcement, Davenport named Rountree as a member of the committee, along with a number of other prominent individuals, including former State Treasurer Edwin Gill of Raleigh and Dave Flaherty, former Secretary of Human Resources and former Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Davenport said, "the Constitution...is the foundation of our government. It should not be changed except in those instances where an urgent need appears.

"In other words," he said, "as the old adage says, 'if it ain't broke, don't fix it,' and our constitution is not 'broke'.

According to Davenport, the people of the state, "have long held an inherent fear of power vested in one office — that of the governor. This is the basis of the present provision and the reason we should hesitate to make a change," Davenport said.

The governor, through his appointive power and the amount of money he is able to disburse, should be able to implement his programs within a four year period, Davenport suggested.

"Any governor with an additional four-year term having the inherent power of his office would create the power center in government that the people of North Carolina have so long feared. A two-term governor could completely dominate the legislature and make it a rubber stamp to his policies and programs without the ability to change a comma in legislation," Davenport suggested.

Davenport, who said the succession of both the governor and lieutenant governor, "will tend to stifle competition among candidates," noted that "for over 100 years, North Carolina has had a sound financial government without scandal.

"The states that have succession are usually the states that have scandal in government. Increased power in the governor will follow succession, and scandal usually follows increases in power and machine politics. I do not believe this is what the people of North Carolina wish."

Davenport emphasized, "It is my opinion that the people of North Carolina should vote 'No' on the proposed Succession Amendment."

South Evans Redevelopment Hearing On Thursday

The Redevelopment Commission will conduct a public hearing Thursday evening, Oct. 20, on the South Evans Redevelopment Plan, according to Joe Laney, commission executive director.

Laney said that the session will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the City Council chambers at city hall with the public urged to attend.

The hearing is the first of two that will be held during the development phase of the South Evans program, he explained. Following tomorrow night's session, the plan will be presented to the Planning and Zoning Commission at the Oct. 26 meeting and the planning board will forward the plan to the City Council with comments and recommendation.

The Council will receive the plan at the regular November meeting, it was pointed out, and then schedule a public hearing, probably for the December meeting.

The area designated for the redevelopment plan is bounded on the south by Norfolk & Southern Railway, on the west by Seaboard Coast Line Railroad, generally by 10th and 11th Streets on the north, and by Charles Street on the east.

The plan calls for the western end of the project area to be the only section designated for clearance. The cleared area is projected as the future site for the city's Public Works Department facilities.

The eastern portion of the project area is mostly residential and the South Evans plan retains the neighborhood as residential. The plan, in addition to maintaining the residential character of the eastern segment, also calls for 14th Street to be widened on the north side from Charles Street to the railroad.

Makeup Follows Egyptian Lead

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Egyptian fashions will be the inspiration for a new kind of face makeup that will be darker, perhaps, and emphasize the lips, eyes and cheekbones.

"It is not a street makeup or one you would wear to business, however," emphasizes makeup expert Taylor Reynolds, a former portrait artist. "It is strictly for evening."

To achieve a dazzling look, Reynolds uses a makeup foundation "that is darker than most women would want to wear unless they have a deep tan," but lighter makeup may also provide a pretty effect "if emphasis is put on the lips, eyes and cheekbones," the areas the Egyptians emphasized. As an artist he is always interested in the use of makeup to enhance natural bone structure.

"Even small eyes can look larger by widening the space between the base of the eyelashes and the brow. Eyebrows may be too heavy and should be thinned out underneath, never above where you would disturb the natural arch. But don't tweeze the brows to a thin line — it isn't stylish," Reynolds advises.

Circles under eyes can be helped by a concealer, a tone lighter than the foundation, but avoid brown or earth tones about the eyes if there are dark circles or brown eyelids.

"For evening, the eyes should be surrounded by color. A liner can be extended at the corner of the eye and a cream shadow applied under the lashes with a brush, blending it into the lashes with your fingertips." If lashes are needed, they should be worn, "no amount of mascara can alter the no-lash look."

One of his typical eye makeups goes like this: apply a dark wood smoke-grey color on the lid, extending it at the corner, use wild plum shadow at the contour of the lid (where the eyeball fits into the socket and makes a crease when the eye is opened). He blends both, extending them to the outer corner of the eye, about one-eighth of an inch. On the inner corner of the lid he uses a meadow green and on the brow a shimmering "no color" fawn highlighter. He is "inclined to coordinate shadow with clothes," and he has only one rule about shadow: blue-eyed girls should not wear blue eye-shadow. It distracts.

Lips should have a lacquered, almost moist look with the lower lip emphasized with a lip balm after it is sculpted in color. He uses a dark plum color to outline the lips with a brush. Then he fills it in with a blackberry color, a dramatic effect that befits the image of Nefertiti admirers.

"Makeup should be set with loose powder. Encapsulated moisturizers in some powders give a soft glow to the skin. I apply it with its paddle puff using one side for application, the other for buffing," he said.

Reynolds, national director of beauty and fashion for Charles-of-the-Ritz-Lanvin, studied "a lot of anatomy" in his art work before he became a theatrical makeup expert 12 years ago.

"For sculptural effects on the face, I use two tones of blusher. I put a rose glow blush just below the temple, bringing it downward to the cheek bone, stopping two and a half fingers' width from the nose. Most of the color (ginger glow) is concentrated in the natural hollow, and a real highlighter is used on top of the cheekbone to further enhance the sculptured appearance. Used down the center of the nose, the same highlighter gives a classic chiseled look.

Choose foundation that is close to the skin tone so there will be no color line at the neck. Makeup should not be used on the neck unless there is scarring or pigmentation, he advises.

But there is less need for that advice in these times, he commented. In his tours about the United States he has observed that women are becoming clever in the use of makeup.

At seminars he conducts, the number one question from his audience is: How can I get rid of bags under my eyes? In his opinion seven out of 10 women have water retention in that area and a frequent suggestion is to see a doctor.

Reader Request: Hot Chili Sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I know it's late in the season, but would you print a recipe for a hot chili sauce? — RELISH FAN.

DEAR RELISH FAN: When made with ripe, red tomatoes that have lots of flavor — we used the beefsteak variety — the following recipe turns out a superb relish. If the fresh hot peppers called for are not on hand, you may use a teaspoon of the dried red pepper flakes widely available in supermarkets. The recipe was adapted from one contributed by Mrs. Grace Clark of Carbon-dale, Pa. She serves the chili sauce to her family all year round with hamburgers and ham as well as with cottage cheese. — C.B.

HOT CHILI SAUCE

6 pounds red-ripe tomatoes (skinned, cored and cut in wedges)

1 large onion (peeled and cut in wedges)

2 ribs celery (cut in short

1 large sweet green pepper (seeded and cut in wide strips)

1 large sweet red pepper (seeded and cut in wide strips)

2 fresh hot green or red peppers, each about 4 inches long (seeds included)

1 cup sugar

1 cup cider vinegar

2 teaspoons salt

¾ teaspoon ground cinnamon

In an electric food processor or hand-operated food grinder, finely chop the tomatoes, onion, celery and sweet and hot peppers. (If you use a food processor, follow the manufacturer's directions for chopping.) Turn into a 5-quart saucepot with the remaining ingredients; stir well. Over medium heat bring to a boil; boil gently, uncovered and stirring occasionally, until thickened — about 1½ hours; continue boiling gently, uncovered and stirring often, until very thick — about

Abandoned Kids Regrets Passing Learn Survival Up Boy Who At Early Age Was Shorter

By MARY LENZ

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — They are the children of everyone and the children of no one. Tiny businessmen tug at your sleeves trying to sell you candy. Small actresses look at you with expressions of unutterable woe as they beg you for money or the food left on your plate.

Their swift hands dart into the tomato bin at the outdoor market. Their fingers wind around loose items in the grocery store.

These skinny, ragged, invariably hungry kids are among 14 million children the Brazilian government estimates live in a state of "moral or economic abandonment." Of these, the government says 1.4 million have been completely abandoned by their relatives.

The rest have relatives who simply cannot afford to feed them. They may have an aunt or grandmother with a shack in a hillside slum or a drunken father who makes things so bad at home they'd rather stay somewhere else.

In any case, they make their living in the streets. "They ask for food in bars and restaurants, or open the door of your taxi for a tip," said Ana Maria De Araujo, a young social worker. Their dirty faces are a familiar sight in elegant outdoor cafes in Ipanema or Copacabana where they sell roses, candy and roasted peanuts.

"A child can make a good income," said former Juvenile Court Judge Alyrio Cavallieri. "Sometimes they make about $50 a month. Sometimes they 'sell' the same merchandise two or three times to people who feel sorry for them and just give them the money."

An official with the National Juvenile Foundation said enterprising street kids could make up to $100 a month. Brazil's minimum wage is $80 a month in urban areas. Government officials said it cost $200 a month to keep a child in a state-run orphanage.

These figures hold the secret of the "morally or economically abandoned" child. If both parents make the minimum salary it doesn't take much arithmetic to see how far the money goes to feed six or seven children.

Pedro Menezes of the National Juvenile Foundation said many couples simply "don't have the money to support a family of half a dozen kids. If the couple stays together, the wife works as a maid and the older children go out to earn a living. Sometimes they just don't come back."

"The climate favors them," said Cavallieri, "it's not like in the United States where you have freezing cold. A kid can sleep on the beach or in a park. If it rains, he hides under something and waits for it to dry out."

The kids also learn to hide out during occasional raids by police from the Juvenile Court, who round them up and turn them over to social workers who try to find their relatives or place them in state-run institutions.

Brazil's 13-year-old, military-dominated regime has set up an impressive group of showcase orphanages run by the National Juvenile Foundation in Rio de Janeiro. The centers, which serve 10,000 children, are designed as an example of child care the federal government hopes states throughout Brazil will imitate.

But just when states will have the funds to replace the admittedly inadequate facilities which exist, and to extend Rio's model program to millions of Brazil's needy juveniles, remains to be seen.

The population boom and migration of impoverished rural workers to the cities have put enormous strains on all urban resources. One-fifth of Rio's five million population lives in slums sometimes without water, sewers or roads.

Brazilian children attend public primary school for only three hours a day. Cavallieri, who is also vice president of the International Association of Juvenile Court Judges, suggested one way to keep children off the streets and economically give hard-pressed adult relatives the kind of help that might allow them to keep the family together. That would be to keep children in school far past the required three hours for recreational programs. Attendants who supervised them could also feed them several meals — much more food than their parents could provide or they could beg or steal.

Cavallieri said children who had worked for a while "cannot be brusquely deprived of this income because they won't accept it." Instead, he proposes a state-run institution which would place children in jobs such as office boy or supermarket package wrapper. This would allow the child to stay in school and to make money under adult supervision — not on his own in the street.

"The minor in the street is in a phase of pre-delinquency," Cavallieri said. "And many times he is already delinquent." But experts also say there is a major difference between youthful delinquents in Brazil and in developed countries like

DEAR ABBY: With the school social season just commencing, you'd be doing a real service to urge girls not to pass up a boy just because he's short.

During my college years, a wonderful fellow tried many times to date me. He was bright, popular, kind and had a great sense of humor, but he had one fault. He was shorter than I was. So I never dated him.

Finally I married a tall, handsome college athlete. He's conceited, lazy and dumb. We live from hand to mouth. The short fellow I wouldn't even date is now a very successful professional man. He married a beautiful girl who adores him. She's half-a-head taller than he is, but nobody seems to notice. She has a beautiful home, status and security. Every time I see her, I think, "there but for the cockeyed values of my youth go I."

Print this, Abby. Many girls can learn from it.

MISSED THE BOAT

DEAR MISSED: And speaking of boats that have been missed, let's look at the guys who've left themselves on the dock.

I refer to fellows who wouldn't date a girl because she was a little too short, or tall, or skinny, or plump. She may have been intelligent, kind, lots of fun and eager to please, but because she had less-than-lovely limbs or an unfortunate complexion, she was bypassed.

So now that the school social season is commencing, boys, look around. Give the plain girls a chance. You may do yourself a favor that will last about 50 years.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 13-year-old boy who impregnated a 15-year-old girl seemed to contain overtones of "macho bragging." He said, "The parents made a terrible fuss." What did he expect—a new bicycle? Abby, I wish you had said that although puberty may occur quite early in some boys, it is not the only sign of manhood. A real man of any age handles his sexuality in a responsible manner.

N.Y. READER

DEAR READER: Well said. And so does a real woman.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was recently honored at a banquet by the company he works for.

At the end of the program, he was called upon to say a few words. When he reached the microphone, everyone stood up and applauded.

As his wife, I felt it would be out of place for me to stand up and applaud my husband, but my heart was applauding. Did I do the right thing by remaining seated?

SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: I think you should have applauded with your HANDS as well as with your heart.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope please.

Unshaken By Fame And Wealth

Once in awhile an individual comes along who reaches the top in the dizzying world of entertainment and still manages to keep his head on straight.

Stories abound about stars who simply break under the frantic pace of maintaining a career in entertainment. There are others who earn millions, throw it all away and die broke.

Bing Crosby was an entertainer who kept his feet on the ground. His tremendous success didn't go to his head and he was careful to conserve the millions of dollars he earned, so that undoubtedly he was a rich man at his death.

Crosby was loved by millions through a career in entertainment that stretched over 50 years. There was a reason for his long term success. He performed as if he genuinely loved all those fans who were so attentive to him through the years.

Bing Crosby could have burned himself out years ago; or he could have become arrogant and self-centered to the point where his fans would have abandoned him. He didn't of course, and at his death he was one of the few real giants of the entertainment world.

Rescue Success Deserves Admiration

A crack West German team, carefully trained for the mission, rescued 86 hostages from a hijacked Lufthansa airliner at Mogadishu in Somalia Monday.

The action was taken after the hijackers murdered the pilot. Three hijackers were killed and a fourth seriously wounded.

Obviously use of force is highly dangerous in such situations and should be used only as a last resort, but the West German team deserves the admiration it is getting for this successful rescue of innocent people.

Fishing Law's Big Impact

By BILL NOBLITT
(Second of Two Articles)
RALEIGH — "I don't think many people realize that this fishery management plan really affects United States citizens in so many ways," the director of North Carolina's Marine Fishery Division feels.

Ed McCoy is a member of the regional council for the South Atlantic states which is currently at work drawing up plans for management of the "fishery habitat" within the three-mile jurisdiction of states along the coast.

This is all part of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976—usually called the extended jurisdiction and 200-mile limit. The law took effect March 1.

On the face of it, that law protects American fisheries by either prohibiting or strictly limiting activities within the 200-mile jurisdiction by foreign fleets.

U. S. Too

The same law also established both the mechanism and the system for management of all marine fishery resources—whether they are to be protected from foreign or domestic fishing fleets.

The procedure calls for states and the federal government to work together through regional councils to devise the management plans.

Congress having passed the law, the bureaucrats are now at work implementing it—devising the councils, ramrodding the management plans, drafting regulations, and producing the plan which will so sharply affect any person having an interest in fish, whether catching them, protecting them, or buying and eating them.

The management plan is many months—possibly years—from completion. But there are some clear signals available as to the shape it will take.

McCoy concedes that elements of the management plan will cover both commercial and recreational fisheries.

Given present directions, it is likely that regulations will eventually be in effect on the coast of North Carolina requiring a license to fish—whether commercially (a license is already required) or for sport (no license in coastal waters).

There will likely be designated locations for taking seafood, and designated times of the year when certain species can be caught, and when they can't.

There will be quotas established for the various species, and enforcement provisions to make certain that fishermen abide by the rules.

Limited Use

And study is being given to "limited entry" permits which in effect say that if only a limited catch is to be allowed, then only a limited number of vessels will be given permission to fish for that particular species.

NOBLITT

The council management plans are supposed to mesh with the federal regulations for the 200-mile jurisdiction so that within the state's three-mile limit, and in coastal sounds and bays, management practices will work cooperatively with federal activities. That failing, federal officials say a management plan would likely be imposed from Washington. After all, say the federal officials, many important breeding grounds for fin and shell fish are in coastal waters—even in the rivers and marshes somewhat inland. And, migratory patterns give federal concern both to the regional approach along the coast, and to meshing of regulations further out at sea.

McCoy thinks the rather drastic regulation of fisheries is essential to building a stronger seafood industry in North Carolina. There are "danger flags" of over-fishing and stock depletion, he says, and unless management plans are put into effect "it will continue to deplete... it would be foolish to wait until we had to completely stop fishing in order to allow stocks to replenish."

There are those involved in the planning process, however, who are concerned over the clear signs of there being created a new federal bureaucracy of data gathering, planning, studies, regional approaches, and rules writing for all fishermen.

GREAT FOR THOSE ALREADY INSIDE!

A $22 Billion Shortfall

WASHINGTON—It never got too much attention but the federal government has been unable to spend $22 billion over the past 27 months that Congress had authorized in the budget. Furthermore, experts predict that a big chunk of the $458.3 billion Congress will vote in fiscal 1978, which started October 1, will also not be spent by next October 1.

You are probably wondering, as I did, why, when the government has the authorization to spend the money, it isn't just shelled out?

I went over to a friend of mine at the Office of Management and Budget to find out what was going on.

He was tied up writing checks, but he agreed to see me for a few moments.

"I hear you're having trouble spending $22 billion."

"It isn't as easy as everyone thinks," he said, looking haggard. "Have you ever tried to spend $22 billion?"

"I haven't, but my wife has," I said.

"This is no laughing matter," he said. "I have to get rid of it or my job is on the block."

"Why don't you call the Defense Department? They could use it up in a jiffy."

"They're lousy with money over there. They're having a helluva time spending what we gave them last year. I sent over a couple of billion last week and they sent it back. Said they didn't have any place to put it."

"What about HEW?" I asked.

"When it comes to asking for money they're always there. But throw it at them and they can't figure out who to give it to. The trouble is that all the governmental departments ask for more than they need on the assumption Congress will cut them down. Then when they get the full amount they're in a pickle."

"How about the CIA? Couldn't they use the $22 billion to overthrow an unfriendly government?"

"I can't talk about the CIA, but they still have billions in numbered Swiss bank accounts. After Chile they're keeping a low profile as far as spending large sums of money goes. They won't take more than a few hundred million, and then they do it under protest."

ART BUCHWALD

"Hey, maybe you could give the money in foreign military aid?"

"We thought of that, but no one seems to be able to manufacture the stuff fast enough. We have a couple of billion dollars of hardware in the pipeline, but we can't pay for the equipment until it's delivered."

"You're really up against the wall," I said. "I thought it was easy to give away money in the government."

"Don't let anybody kid you. By the time a bureaucrat does all the paperwork, it takes a year to get rid of a measly $25 million."

"Everyone thinks government people are such big spenders."

"The bureaucrats cry like mad when you don't give it to them. But when you do they scream bloody murder that they don't have enough people to give it away."

My friend's secretary came in. "The Treasury just sent back $1.5 billion. They say they overestimated the interest they had to pay on government bonds."

"Well, we're not taking it!" my friend shouted. "They know damn well once they accept the money they can't give it back."

"But they dumped it all over my office," she cried."

"I have an idea," I said.

"Why don't you just forget about spending the $22 billion and give the taxpayers a break?"

"Sure, that would look just great on Capitol Hill," he said. "How would you feel if

Claims Other Lives

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — "I've been here before," says Kent Gardner, who believes this isn't his first life on earth.

"I've fought with the Romans and the English in the Middle Ages, and I'm damned sure I fought with the Confederacy," he says.

Gardner, in his present incarnation, has been a sailor, soldier, airman, newspaper reporter, columnist, artist, musician, Rolls-Royce dealer, public relations man, author and middle-aged college student, not necessarily in that order.

He can, and will, talk or write with authority about hundreds of subjects ranging from Civil War battles to art, the law and race relations.

"I've done everything there is to do in the world except make a lot of money," he says with a laugh.

He lives in a huge, 160-year-old house with his second wife, "Miss Tiny Gwen," several dogs, enough musical instruments to stock a small orchestra, a telephone answering service and a ghost.

"This is a real haunted house. People don't believe us, but we've seen him. He shows up every now and then," he says.

Gardner is the brother of comedian "Brother Dave" Gardner, whose night club act and hit recordings made him famous 20 years ago. Kent doesn't trade on Dave's fame.

"I do what I want and I make up my own mind about things," he says. And as devotees of his column in the Jackson Sun can attest, Gardner can never be accused of fence-straddling on an issue.

Gardner grew up in Jackson, the son of a road contractor and a schoolteacher. He left town in 1941 to join the Navy after an altercation with another youth.

He puts it more bluntly: "I beat a guy almost to death and had to leave town."

His Navy service was followed by a hitch in the Army, then the Air Force. He returned to Jackson as a correspondent for the Memphis Commercial Appeal, and later went to work for the Jackson Sun.

He and Tiny Gwen bought the old house in 1967 and began restoring it at about the same time he decided to get a college degree. The house, built by

THE INSIDE REPORT

Hardball Energy Game

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The increasingly bitter conflict between the oil industry and the Carter administration reached a dramatic climax behind closed doors when Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger delivered what the oilmen consider an ultimatum.

With President Carter's energy program being shredded in the Senate, Schlesinger summoned the oil industry's top Washington representatives to tell them this: support us on the crude oil wellhead—or equalization—tax, or suffer severe consequences. The nation's oil barons have spent two weeks since then trying to figure out what to do.

While the administration contends that no ultimatum was issued, nobody denies pressure was applied. "It's hardball time in the energy program," one Schlesinger lieutenant told us. Thus, while Mr. Carter launches his "blitz" to mobilize public support, featuring his attack on "the biggest rip-off" during Thursday's press conference, his men are putting a strong arm directly on big oil.

That became clear when two top officials of the American Petroleum Institute — Frank Ikard, a former Democratic Congressman from Texas, and Charles DiBona, a top energy official in the Nixon administration — were called to Schlesinger's office in the White House.

An exceedingly tense session followed. Schlesinger made clear that if the crude oil equalization tax does not pass, the industry can count on lots more regulation and much lower prices — permanently.

Shaken, Ikard and DiBona returned to API headquarters and translated Schlesinger's comments into a threat to back the tax — or else. Chief executive officers of the nation's big oil corporations immediately flew into Washington to debate new strategy.

Their inclination has been to seek a compromise on the oil tax rather than fight it out with the administration. But the industry's friends in Congress want big oil to stand firm, feeling the President and his energy program are on the run.

Connally's Booboo

Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, the Democrat-turned-Republican now eyeing a possible 1980 presidential race, inadvertently infuriated host Gov. Meldrim Thompson and publisher William Loeb, the state's most powerful political influence, as a result of his inspirational talk to the Republican governors' conference in Bretton Woods, N.H.

Speaking to the governors Oct. 11, Connally marred an otherwise flawless performance by saying two things unacceptable to Thompson and Loeb: that he was a "free-trader" and that governors and gubernatorial candidates need not take a position on the Panama Canal treaties.

Thompson, a right-wing conservative who is a committed protectionist and implacable opponent of the canal treaties, was both angry and hurt. Both he and Loeb, though all-out Ronald Reagan backers in the 1976 New Hampshire primary, have been touting Connally as their possible 1980 presidential choice if Reagan does not run.

The evening before he spoke, Connally was specifically warned to watch his words. But perhaps overly enthused by repeated ovations he won from his Republican audience, he ignored the advice. The error will hurt him among conservative Republicans here if he enters the 1980 presidential primary.

Jordan's Cabinet Friends

Relations between the White House staff and the cabinet took another downward step when top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan let it be known that — with two exceptions — he does not think much of President Carter's cabinet.

Jordan's remarks came in a private White House session with top assistants of Senators. Only two cabinet members, he said, are worth much — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

Other Editors Say The Mobile Cats

(Raleigh Times)

Cats have come up in the course of time. They used to run a poor second to dogs as pets. They had to be championed even to be allowed to live, the stock argument being that a cat keeps down mice. Nobody ever believed that a cat would actually eliminate this household nuisance but having one around would keep the mice nervous and in hiding and hopefully some would be caught.

And cat lovers would say cats are such a comfort, purring and rubbing themselves against your legs. Cat haters would hide their dislike by asserting, "You can't have birds around and cats too, so if you like birds—no cats." But the cat haters used to come out ahead, disposing the unwanted litters in ways that make us shudder now, like tying kittens into a tow sack and dropping it weighted with a brick into a deep pool in the creek.

Other ways weren't so openly brutal—dropping kittens over a tall wall into the yard of some old lady known to harbor stray cats. Such an old lady who once lived in a trailer out from town was known to have taken in as many as 50 unwanted cats that were let out of cars and told to scat in her direction. Every family had a tale of some remarkable cat that "came back" and earned a place from then on with its once-rejecting family.

It wasn't the way then to spay or alter cats. There weren't as many vets and human birth control was not openly discussed. The feeling was that the yowling and screeching that went on in the neighborhood was perfectly natural and that it would be cruel to deprive cats of these passionate and bloodcurdlingly noisy encounters.

But now cats have pedigrees and special cat food instead of leftover milk. They queen it over the house with never a pounce on a mouse. Tom cats are no longer rangy and vicious. They don't come home after three days and nights all scratched up with an expression that says "You oughta see the one I beat up."

Yes, cats are fatter and sleeker these days. But their dispositions haven't changed.

A Potential Mediocrity Quest

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In its noble quest for perfection in medical care, environment, technology and even equality — is America insuring its future mediocrity?

The vote to date, of course, is that, no, it isn't. But the possibility is often suggested, and sometimes angrily, especially by business executives. At issue aren't the goals, they say, but the way in which we seek them.

Edgar B. Speer, U.S. Steel Corp. chairman, maintains the company is in 100 per cent agreement with environmental goals. In the same breath he says the administration of environmental laws is costing many thousands of jobs.

Alan Miller, president of American Mediacorp, Inc., which operates 54 private hospitals, argues that the Carter administration effort to limit hospitals to a 9 per cent increase in insurance reimbursements will hurt the most efficient institutions.

The efficient ones, he points out, already have striven to hold down costs. The inefficient ones, in contrast, have lots of fat to cut away before reaching the bone.

Executives of automotive and other companies maintain that our apparent desire to produce the safest products in the shortest time is adding inexorably to inflation.

Officials of savings and loan associations and other lenders argue that the insistence of government officials and civic groups that they invest in blighted inner city areas is endangering their depositors' money.

The general theme of the complaints is that perfection carries a big price tag, channeling money into nonproductive areas, raising prices, cutting into job-producing investments in new facilities.

Speer argues that it is economic suicide for steel companies to spend on older plants to meet clean air and water requirements. Not, he says, when those plants are rapidly becoming obsolete technologically.

If the same money were invested in new facilities, he said, the company would be able to triple the environmental effectiveness of its dollars. And the country, not just incidentally, would have more jobs and a more competitive industry.

"There is no way we can justify making expenditures on these facilities in order to bring them under compliance," he said. Wouldn't it be better, he asked, if such plants, whose life span is limited, be relieved of some requirements?

"What would be the consequence if we required all automobile owners to bring their existing vehicles up to current environmental standards?" asked an associate. The implication was that millions would howl in one chorus.

Strength For Today

TRIUMPH IN FAILURE

A great American inventor of a previous generation was asked to address a scientific group on the topic, "Can we produce inventors?" His position was that we can produce inventors as long as these men are willing to face perhaps a whole life of failure. He made it plain that many of the greatest inventions were the end result of a host of inconclusive experiments carried on by men who apparently failed, over a period of a lifetime, to bring forth the thing for which they had hoped.

What these men never knew was that they had triumphed in failure. The same thing often happens in religious life. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews speaks of those who "having had witness borne them through their faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should be made perfect."

The crucifixion is the crowning example of triumph through failure. The tragic and apparently meaningless end of Jesus's life meant the reconciliation of God and men.

Angrily Resign Over Ruling

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Johnston County's three jury commissioners quit Tuesday, angered by a judge's ruling that the county's grand jury was improperly impaneled. Superior Court Judge E. Maurice Braswell last week dismissed indictments against two black men charged in the deaths of a Four Oaks policeman and a Benson truck driver. Attorneys for the pair argued that blacks were not properly represented on the grand jury that returned the indictments. The jury commissioners said they were bitter about Braswell's ruling.

Two Sentenced To 260 Years

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Two men were each sentenced to 260 years in prison after pleading guilty this week to second-degree murder in the death of a man during a store robbery last June.

Willie C. Granford, 24, and Larry Ernest Franklin, 22, will be eligible for parole in 65 years. They chose to plead guilty rather than face a jury trial on charges of first-degree murder which could have brought the death penalty.

They were charged in the death of Wade Overcash. The two men were also charged with assault with intent to kill a second man in the store, Myron Goodman. Goodman was shot in the eye but survived and identified his assailants.

If Andrus and Bergland are the best, one Senate aide asked, who are the worst? A smiling Jordan quickly replied — he could not single anybody out because one is about as bad as another. The Senate aides were surprised that the President's right hand man had praised two relatively minor cabinet members while implicitly undermining top policymakers in national security and economic affairs. The praise for Bergland, under heavy fire from farmers, was astonishing. Word of Jordan's indiscretion quickly spread to the cabinet departments, where there was instant outrage. "This is the kind of amateurish staff that has gotten the President in the trouble he is today," one distraught assistant secretary told us. Jordan's comments pinpointed the two cabinet members closest to the White House staff — particularly Andrus. The former governor of Idaho coordinates everything with Jordan, which may explain his unexpected victories on tough environmental enforcement opposed by Secretary of Energy Schlesinger.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today for much of New England. Showers are anticipated for part of the Southwest as well as part of Montana. Warm temperatures are expected

By The Associated Press
Pleasant fall weather is expected to continue in North Carolina the remainder of the week.

Overnight a low front moved through the state producing partly cloudy skies. Temperatures were warmer than the previous night when some record lows were set. The lows Tuesday night were mostly in the 40s and 50s and ranged from 36 at Asheville to 63 at Cape Hatteras. Highs Tuesday were in the high 60s to low 70s mostly.

Fine weather for outdoor activities such as hunting and fishing and even going to the fair or attending football games is the outlook for the remainder of the week through Saturday. Winds are brisk along the coast and small craft warnings are in effect.

Carter Extends 5-State Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will spend Friday night on a farm in Indianola, Iowa, and has decided to extend his five-state western trip by spending Saturday night in Los Angeles.

Rex Granum, the President's deputy press secretary, left open on Tuesday the possibility that Carter might schedule an additional appearance Sunday, presumably in the Los Angeles area, before returning to Washington.

Carter originally had planned a late flight back to Washington Saturday night after addressing a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Los Angeles.

Carter will leave Washington Friday morning and fly to Detroit to take part in a 90-minute "public forum" on urban policy. He then plans to fly to Des Moines, Iowa, to address a Democratic fund-raising dinner there before going to Indianola.

Bulb-Planting Time At Hand

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Bulbs of such hardy, spring flowering types as tulips, daffodils, crocuses and hyacinths need to be planted in the fall so root growth can start.

Otherwise, says Gerald Courts, a flower gardening specialist at Southern Illinois University, the bulbs may not flower.

Courts says October is a good time to plant, or maybe even as late as November. He said the bulbs should be planted two or three weeks before soil temperatures drop to about 40 to 45 degrees.

The President, who often seeks out private homes to visit during his trips around the country, will spend Friday night at the Indianola farm of Woodrow Wilson Diehl. Saturday morning, he plans to meet with other local farmers in Diehl's home.

Following that meeting, the President will fly to Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., to inspect the underground nerve center of the Strategic Air Command.

His next stop will be Denver, where he will take part in a roundtable discussion of western water policy and a briefing for area leaders on the Panama Canal treaty. Carter will fly to Los Angeles from Denver.

Leaf Sales Are Slowing

Sales activity slowed Tuesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market as the 1977 auction season neared Thursday's scheduled closing date.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, said that the market sold 376,613 pounds of tobacco for $355,694, an average of $94.45 per hundred pounds.

Bryan reported that 27.65 per cent of the total sales volume went to the government loan program yesterday.

Good quality leaf sold for up to $1.85 per pound, he said, as offering consisted mainly of leaf and non descript tobacco.

For the season, the market has sold 40,815,028 pounds for $47,827,048, an average of $117.19 per hundred pounds.

Red Cross Board Meeting Set

The quarterly board meeting of the Pitt Chapter of the American Red Cross will be held Thursday evening, Oct. 20 at 8 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Chapter chairman Andy Warren, who will preside during the meeting, urged all board members to attend.

Commando Rescue Was Swift

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — The seven-minute commando strike that freed the 86 hostages aboard the hijacked West German airliner was over before she knew what was happening, one of the women aboard the plane reported on her return home.

"I was sitting at the emergency exit. I didn't hear a thing, not even a scratching or anything," said the rescued hostage, who asked not to be identified. "Then somebody fell on top of us. All I heard was 'Heads down.' Somebody was covering us with his body and all we heard was 'Heads down, don't be scared.'"

Two dozen German commandos had blasted through the emergency doors on the hijacked Lufthansa Boeing 737 at Somalia's Mogadishu airport early Tuesday.

The U.S. ambassador to the East African country, John L. Loughran, gave this account of the operation:

Masked by the darkness, commandos crept within 200 yards of the nose of the plane and set off several "flash" grenades that emit a blinding light and loud noise to draw the hijackers to the front of the plane, away from the emergency doors.

As the terrorists rushed for the cockpit, other commandos burst into the plane through rear and side emergency exits.

Rushing forward, the troops shot the terrorists, killing two instantly and wounding the other two, one fatally.

Another woman said she heard explosions and almost immediately one of the commandos called, "Come out, come out."

"But nobody dared to move," she said.

The hostages, many of them covering on the floor, finally arose and began sliding down the emergency exits.

A medical team, including Italian teachers from the Mogadishu medical school, examined each hostage at a field hospital set up in the terminal building.

"There was a spirit of total elation at the airport," Loughran said. "The spirit on the Somali side was to do everything possible to make the passengers happy."

The hijackers, described by passengers as Middle Eastern types at least one of whom was a woman, had threatened to blow up the plane unless 13 terrorists held in West Germany and Turkey were set free and Bonn paid $15 million ransom.

After the commando raid was announced in West Germany, authorities said, three of the terrorists on the list — Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe — committed suicide in their cells, and a fourth, Irmgard Moeller, stabbed herself. Officials said Miss Moeller would recover.

News of the prison deaths touched-off violent protests in several European cities, and radical German lawyers suggested that the government had murdered the prisoners. Bombs wrecked German automobile showrooms in two northern Italian cities.

West German officials braced for a new upsurge of terrorist attacks.

In Hong Kong, meanwhile, the president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots said he had received a positive response from many members to his call for a 48-hour strike next week unless the United Nations schedules a meeting to discuss anti-hijacking measures.

Large Fireball Said Meteor

DALLAS (AP) — An enormous fireball that seared the evening skies over Texas and Arkansas and provoked hundreds of phone calls in five states apparently disintegrated without hitting earth.

The light from the fireball, believed to be a meteor, was so intense that residents in three Texas cities hundreds of miles apart swore it hit near them.

"It lit up my cockpit and I saw it split up into bits and pieces," said Air Force Capt. William Latham, who spotted the fireball while flying a jet at 16,000 feet. He estimated its altitude at 50,000-60,000 feet.

But astronomers gave conflicting opinions on whether the fireball struck the ground or burned up in the air.

The fireball was sighted at about 8:15 p.m. CDT in portions of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. One witness in Texarkana, Tex., described the object "as big as a house." Other pilots in Louisiana and Texas also spotted it.

"It was definitely a meteor," said Joe Patterson, an astronomer at the McDonald Observatory in Fort Davis, Tex. "When one is that large and that bright, it's likely to have reached the ground intact."

But Col. Gary Gosdin, spokesman for Shepard Air Force Base officials, said the object burned up and exploded in a bright flash in the air.

Federal Aviation Administration officials in Fort Worth said their radar tracked the object across the sky, but said it "fell apart" in the air.

Law enforcement officials, newspapers and radio stations were swamped with calls from witnesses.

For First Time: Art Auction A Separate Entity

A SEXTET OF ART WORKS. . . Shown here are half-a-dozen of about 48 works of art and craft to be auctioned Thursday night at the Greenville Art Center as a part of the Annual Fine Arts Ball of the East Carolina Art Society. Money raised at the auction goes to the operation of the Greenville Art Center.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For the first time, the auction of art part of the Annual Fine Arts Ball of the East Carolina Art Society will be held as a separate entity from the dinner-dance event.

The auction, a benefit one to raise funds for the Greenville Art Center, which is administered by the East Carolina Art Society, will feature art in most instances donated by the artist. In a few cases, the items being auctioned are ones purchased by a contributor and given to the effort.

Ms. Peggy Corbitt heads the committee that has acquired these works from artists. In this she has been assisted by Ms. Sarah Cavanaugh.

Artists from Greenville, all across the state and some out of state artists and craftsmen have donated work for the benefit auction to be held Thursday evening at the Greenville Art Center.

The auction will be open to patrons of the annual benefit dinner-dance who purchased tickets at $45 per couple, and persons who have contributed to the benefit fund.

Artists represented in the auction collection are: Ed Reep, Donald Sexauer, Art Haney, Bob Timberlake, Glenn Eure, Ed Weintraub, Chuck Chamberlain, Warren Chamberlain, Bob Pittman, Elizabeth Butler, Phillip Moose, Carolyn Hibbard and Heath King.

Also, Chris Newcomb, Annie Cobb Rice, M. Couch, Nancy Menec, Linda Warner, David Gradis, Becky Fuller, Bonnie Richardson, Susan Turner, K. P. Lee, Kathy Geller, Doretta Romana Van Nortwick, Billy Johnson, Dr. Charles Moore, and Mrs. Bancroft F. Moseley.

The four dozen plus pieces include paintings, watercolors, drawings, ceramics, jewelry, sculpture and mixed media.

"We are really delighted with the fine response we have had from artists and craftsmen," Ms. Corbitt commented. "With this fine collection to offer, we feel certain a sizeable amount will be raised for the art center." The dinner-dance portion of the annual Fine Arts Ball will be held Friday night at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Literati Of Hotel Algonquin In Flux; But Conversation Is Good

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost since the century started, much of New York's literary community has been showering its affections on a well-mannered old hotel on 44th Street.

The affection is mutual, and they celebrated together Tuesday night — the clubby, comfortable, outwardly sedate Hotel Algonquin on the 75th anniversary of its opening in 1902, feted by the New Yorker magazine and some 200 of the literary figures, critics and performers who have chosen to stay or dine there over the years.

Its fame among literati and theatrical types — who still come — dates to its early days, when such figures as Douglas Fairbanks and critic H.L. Mencken were guests. It became more famous in the 1920s when a group of literary-minded wits — Dorothy Parker, Alexander Woolcott, Robert Benchley among them — would gather regularly for lunch around a celebrated Round Table in the Rose Room and trade quick-witted barbs.

On Tuesday, the brief presentations over, the illustrious and their admirers spilled, with drinks in hand, from the paneled Oak Room where Mencken probably drank, to the carpeted lobby where author E.B. White would relax in an upholstered chair, to the fabled Rose Room.

Charles Addams, whose ghoulishly amusing cartoons decorate New Yorker pages, drew one for the occasion — the magazine's trademark dandy, a scar added to his chest, blowing a horn to salute the hotel.

Novelist Ralph Ellison and his wife were there, as were former Mayor John Lindsay, author S.J. Perelman, Mrs.

James Thurber, widow of the late humorist, jazz singer Mabel Mercer, writer Janet Flanner.

Mayor Abraham Beame made a presentation, read a poem written by an aide, and left for the World Series. William Shawn, editor of the New Yorker, arrived, saw the crush building, and left early.

Norman Mailer struck a pose for photographers at the bar. Only one member of the Round Table crew was around Tuesday night, playwright Marc Connelly.

A reporter asked if the conversation was as good today as then.

His answer, shot back with a smile but no pause: "Mine is."

Drug Abuse Specialist On The Run

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MIDLOTHIAN, Va. (AP) — One day Charles O'Keeffe needed to see a man in Afghanistan.

He got aboard a jet airplane and rode it as far as it could go. Then he got in a little, single-engine plane and rode it as far as it could go. Then he rode a jeep for eight days, for as far as the jeep could go. Then he took a camel, then a yak. He found his man.

If it's important, Charles O'Keeffe is willing to take a little trouble getting there.

That is why every morning, six days a week, sometimes seven, he gets in his car and drives 110 miles to work. At the end of a long day he drives 110 miles back home. He has to be the world champion commuter.

Charles O'Keeffe is a drug abuse specialist. He works in the White House, for President Carter, clearly an important job.

"The drive isn't really as bad as it seems. It's private time, a chance to think things out, things I'm going to have to decide the next day," O'Keeffe said. "I also get all of my dictating done. It takes about two hours, but it isn't wasted time."

No, but it's still quite a grind. He lives in this quiet little town outside Richmond and usually leaves about six or seven in the morning after a good breakfast and a visit with the four kids.

He takes a cup of coffee along with him, stops at the 7-Eleven for another cup and goes across the street for gas.

Gassed up, he pulls onto I-95, flips on his CB radio and heads north. At Thornburg, and again at Dumfries, two Virginia towns on the interstate, he stops for more coffee.

What Charles O'Keeffe contributes to the Carter administration is significant. He is on the staff of Peter Bourne, the President's assistant for health issues, and his specialty is south Asia.

Charles O'Keeffe is 37. He was in the pharmaceutical business in Richmond when he became interested in drug abuse problems. That led him to Peter Bourne, who was running a narcotics treatment program in Georgia and was a close friend and adviser of Jimmy Carter.

Bourne and O'Keeffe went into business together in Washington, working as consultants on international aspects of drug detection and treatment.

Both men left that business to work fulltime in the Carter election campaign. When O'Keeffe was asked to join the administration he did not refuse, but he wasn't inclined to move to Washington.

"My wife, Ann, has a half dozen horses and is involved in horse shows and that sort of thing. The kids like their schools. We just like the area. We both grew up here. It would be hard to match what we have in the Washington area."

"Besides, when I worked in Washington before I tried living in an apartment and coming home on weekends. That's no way to live. I was a stranger to my family."

So the solution has been to hit the road, 220 miles a day. At that, it beats riding a yak.

Edison Favored Phonograph Toy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thomas Alva Edison may be remembered best for his work on the lightbulb, but it was another device — inspired by a toy — that captured the inventor's fancy the most.

The phonograph, celebrating its 100th anniversary of discovery this year, began life as a toy that Edison had constructed: a funnel and vibrating diaphragm to which a little figure of a man with a saw was attached.

When the inventor shouted "Mary had a little lamb" into the funnel, the toy man began sawing.

According to the World Book Encyclopedia, Edison reasoned that if he could record the vibrations that made the toy move his words could be reproduced.

He replaced the little man with a cylinder wrapped in tin foil. Now when he spoke into the funnel, a needle made impressions on the foil. By rotating the cylinder against a second needle, the diaphragm reproduced sound.

The first words immortalized on his marvelous new device? "Mary had a little lamb," of course.

Convinced Of Links To Asian India

By GIL BROYLES
 Associated Press Writer
 OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — When Christopher Columbus pronounced the inhabitants of the New World "Indians," a researcher says he may not have been mistaken after all.

Dr. Joseph B. Mahan researched the matter here and abroad, and he concludes that members of certain tribes now living in Oklahoma are direct descendants of people who established a flourishing civilization in India more than 50 centuries ago.

Mahan, 56, is executive director of a historic reconstruction project near Lumpkin, Ga., called Westville Village.

He and his wife, Kathryn, a musicologist, received a grant for a five-month study in Pakistan and India, tracing similarities among American Indians and ancient civilizations of the Indus Valley.

Writing in the autumn issue of Oklahoma Today, the official state magazine, Mahan claims to have found "positive" evidence linking the cultures and supporting migrations to America.

Mahan says he has discovered that the names of peoples who inhabited the Bronze Age cities now called Harappa and Mohenjo-daro coincide in at least a dozen cases with names of American Indian tribes or 16th century Indian settlements found by European explorers.

Besides the linguistic ties, Mahan says there are also significant parallels between American Indians and the Indus Valley civilization in physical characteristics, pottery and craft work, style of dress and religious philosophy. But he says the most convincing similarity is among the names the peoples called themselves.

American Indian tribes including the Yuchi, Shawnee, Sac and Fox, Creeks and Cherokees were almost certainly descended from the wandering remnants of the Indus Valley civilization, Mahan says.

Writing a doctoral dissertation at the University of North Carolina, Mahan says he became convinced that the Yuchi brought a "fully developed and highly sophisticated" culture into the southeastern United States from somewhere outside the area.

After his research in India and Pakistan, Mahan says he is now sure that culture was developed in the Indus Valley.

"I have long been convinced that some American Indians were part of a worldwide bronze age culture," Mahan says.

He suggests that representatives of the Indus Valley culture, who he describes as "people of the sea," could have sailed by established routes to the southeastern United States 5,000 years ago.

It was during past studies of the Yuchi now in northeast Oklahoma, and his research in Pakistan and India from January to May this year, that Mahan says he came across the "good, valid, historical information" he needed to link the peoples now a hemisphere apart.

Horsepower Is Not Possible

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — A Wilmington College agriculture professor says a return to real horsepower to deal with oil shortages on the farm just isn't possible.

Donald Chafin says Old Dobbin has no future because he's not as efficient as tractors and he eats too much. He says a return to using animal horsepower on the farm in order to save fuel energy is a dream that simply isn't in the cards.

Chafin, agricultural economist, says figures show that a return to the time when horses and mules were in heavy use would require about $61 million in animals to produce today's crops.

And that, he adds, would require a lot of feed to keep the outburners going.

Although Chafin has two riding horses of his own, he says the steed just isn't worth its oats in farming.

DEATH RATE
 VIENNA (AP) — Four-year-olds had the highest death rate in automobile accidents in Austria last year, with 14 fatalities. Of the 6,419 children injured in traffic accidents in 1976, 131 died. Those children between 13 and 14 were statistically the most accident prone.

Villagers Pay Highest Price In Thailand's War

(Editors: Correspondent Paul Wedel, who spent five years in Thailand as a Peace Corps volunteer, writer and freelancer, speaks and writes fluent Thai. He tells in the following dispatch of the burgeoning Communist insurgent movement in southern Thailand.)

By PAUL WEDEL

BAN SONG, Thailand (UPI) — A light rain soaked the bodies of the six Thai villagers killed by Communist insurgents.

Wrapped in bloody blankets, they were lifted from the back of a mud-spattered truck. Out of one bundle stuck a hand, bluish and constricted — a child's hand.

Relatives broke into uncontrolled sobs as they identified the bodies, but for Ban Song and villages like it all over rural southern Thailand the killings were nothing out of the ordinary.

Throughout this rich and beautiful region the Thai government is locked in a grim and little-publicized struggle with Communist insurgents. Ordinary villagers are caught in the middle.

"As recently as six months ago the Communists controlled 'almost all' of the 42,000 people in the district, said the district officer of Wieng Sa, where Ban Song is located.

There were, he said, functioning schools teaching Communist doctrine and regular collections of a sack of rice and a few baht (cents) from each household were taken up for the support of Communist cadres. In most rural districts throughout the south, the situation was nearly as bad.

The military coup of October,

1976, which ousted Thailand's elected government, drove many previously non-violent leftists into the dens of the insurgents. Lt. Gen. Pin Thammasri, army commander for the southern region, estimates that 200 former students are still working with the insurgents in the south.

The district officer of another heavily Communist-controlled area said the insurgents there were tightly organized. They absorbed the influx of educated volunteers smoothly, he said, by holding them in secondary camps until they had proved themselves willing to kill for the Communist cause.

The Communist insurgency in the south has always been puzzling to government officials who claimed that communism could never be attractive to Buddhist ethnic Thais. The government has been unable to show much evidence of outside support for the southern Thai insurgents.

A further puzzle is that the south is a booming area. With tin, tungsten, and barite, the south enjoys rich mineral resources to go along with valuable export crops such as rubber, timber and fruit.

For some government officials the only answer is effective military repression of the Communists.

One mustachioed district officer claimed his tough suppression campaign had shattered the well-established Communist apparatus in his area.

The campaign includes organization of village self-defense forces, the arrest of anyone without proper identification, declaration of Vietnam-style free-fire zones and both aerial and artillery bombardment of suspected Communist positions.

But in nearby Ron Pibul district a high police official was not so confident of the long-term success of such methods.

"Sometimes by killing or unjustly arresting one Communist sympathizer," the official said, "you turn his whole family against the government. It is very difficult to separate the fish from the water."

Speaking in the heavily fortified police station, the official explained that the Communists sometimes fulfilled the needs of the villagers.

"The growing economy of the south is attracting people from all over the country," he said.

"But there just isn't enough land for everyone. Disputes arise and because of the bad character of some civil servants the government cannot solve the disputes justly."

"So the people go to the Communists who are the only organized power in some places. Gradually they indoctrinate the villagers to hate the government."

Interviews with villagers show there has been a breakdown of traditional forms of power in remote areas.

Once, a local strongman kept order in each of the villages with a personal armed force. The government often officially recognized the strongman's influence and paid him a nominal salary.

Now, according to villagers, the strongmen have lost their influence.

A villager from Ban Prome Loke told UPI:

"In the old days if there was a murder, the victim's relatives could go to the strongman and demand payment, maybe even the life of the murderer. To preserve his reputation the strongman would hunt down the killer. Now the killer can just hop a truck or a bus to Bangkok and disappear."

In the last two years, southern Thailand has been opened up by a vigorous expansion of the road system. Places that were once only reachable by elephant or on foot now have decent dirt roads.

Usually, road building has favored the government and has been a prime target of terrorist attacks. But the police official said many feeder roads to villages also have become death traps for policemen.

"The roads," he said, "are dead-ends at the villages, so police have to come out the same way they went in. The terrorists can set up ambushes very easily."

The fear of ambush has kept police and the military from responding to many Communist attacks.

In Ron Pibul, highway construction workers only 15 minutes down the road from the police station were under Communist attack recently for 40 minutes with automatic weapons and hand grenades.

Police did not act despite radioed requests from police at the construction camp.

Earlier this year Communist insurgents burned the police station at Ban Prome Loke after a 20-minute firefight with police. They then called out the villagers for a two-hour lecture on the alleged evils of the government and distributed handbills before leaving. Ban Prome Loke is 20 minutes by well-paved road from the military headquarters of Gen. Pin Thammasri and 5,000 troops.

This kind of government failure in the clutch keeps many people from supporting the government.

A teacher in Ban Prome Loke once interested and involved in local politics said: "Some of the people here respect the Communists and believe what they tell them. Most just want to get along. I can't be on one side or the other. I don't talk about anything political. I'm a teacher, nothing more than that."

When the Communists enter a new area they seem to treat the inhabitants, even the police, well while demanding cooperation.

Now, according to villagers, whenever the Communists come down into Ban Prome Loke, they go first to the home of each government official who possesses a gun and take it away until they return to the hills.

If their former supporters begin to cooperate actively with the government, they are not so gentle. The Ban Song people who were killed recently accepted arms and training from the government and refused to pay the Communist tax.

According to the father of the two dead children: "The (the communists) came to my house and told me to come out. I did nothing. They shot into the house. Then they rolled a grenade under the house (which was on stilts). That's what killed my children."

Every night an artillery firebase near Ban Song bombards the mountain where the Communist camp is located. But, to one of the villagers, the bombardment seems futile.

"They never kill anyone," the villager said. "All they do is keep everyone awake."

Mobley Is Named Recreation Chief

WASHINGTON N. C. — Philip Mobley has been named Recreation Services Director for Washington—according to City Manager Jack Webb.

Mobley had been acting director of the recreation department since April.

"We are indeed fortunate to have on our staff a qualified and capable man to fill this important position. In the three years Mobley has been with the Washington Recreation Department, he has shown that he knows athletics, recreation and administration, but more importantly, he knows the people of our community and how to work with them," Webb said.

Mobley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack D. Mobley of Rt. 1, Robertsonville, is a graduate of Stokes-Pactolus High School and attended Pitt Technical Institute. He served four years in the U. S. Air Force and received his B.S. degree in recreation and parks administration from N. C. State University.

He is married to the former Lisa Tevepaugh of Cary. He joined the Washington Recreation Department in 1975 as a recreation supervisor.

Pool Shark, Cotton Picker And Marshal

By BRUCE NICHOLS
HOUSTON (UPI) — Theddis Roosevelt Coney, the new U.S. marshal for the southern district of Texas, may be the only federal law enforcement officer who ever made a part of his living shooting pool.

He doubtless is one of few who ever picked cotton.

But even as a poor black boy picking cotton in Many, La., for 65 cents per 100 pounds to help support his family, he was long on savvy, dreams and faith.

When he graduated from high school in 1958, he hopped a bus to Houston, arriving with 35 cents in his pocket. His first job was driving a truck for a paint company.

"I didn't even know how to read a map," he said. "I got lost. I didn't get back until 7:30 that evening."

He got another job waiting tables parttime.

Hobby Adds Friendships

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
JANESVILLE, Wis. (AP) — They call him "the Chipper Clipper," and the nickname suits Kenneth Bick just fine.

Bick, 73, a retired high school principal, has endeared himself to thousands of Janesville area residents by the cheerful notes and newspaper clippings he sends them.

"I try to send one to anyone who has done something good for someone or contributed something," he says. "It encourages them to contribute something to the community. It makes people feel someone is interested in them."

Bick said he sent clippings to his high school students many years ago and started doing it for the entire community about 15 years ago.

He attaches the clippings — for a birth, anniversary, business promotion, service award or whatever — to printed congratulatory cards and mails them to the newsmaker.

"I get up about six o'clock and get started right away. Before breakfast. I try to get to the post office between 7:30 and 8 o'clock so they will be delivered the same day," he said. He estimated he has mailed out more than 10,000 clippings and cards.

"Sometimes it's less than 20 a day, but it's usually more in the summertime when there are a lot of marriages," Bick said.

"The only real trouble I have," he added, "is that every now and then the government raises the postal rate. It was three cents for a stamp when I started."

The best part of his hobby, he says, is the warm thank-you notes and phone calls he receives and the new friends he makes.

Bick says he still keeps track of three generations of area students and gets invited to all the class reunions.

He often gets two or three reunion invitations per weekend during the summer, he says.

"I usually eat with the oldest graduating class first," he says, "and then go party with the younger ones later."

He is big, 5-10, 210 pounds, and has an infectious smile and a jovial nature. Coney set out making friends who could help him.

He was a waiter when he met former Harris County Sheriff Buster Kern.

"He was telling me he liked the way I worked and asked me did I ever think about getting into law enforcement. I said, 'Yes, I did.' I'd been wanting to be a policeman all my life."

Kern added Coney to the force as a reserve deputy in 1965 and made him a regular deputy in July, 1968. He advanced and went to school when he could. He graduated from the FBI Academy in September, 1976.

He was a sergeant of detectives when Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., recommended him for marshal. President Carter and the U.S. Senate agreed and he took office July 31.

Today, Coney, 38, is a U.S. marshal in charge of 30 deputies and responsible for 45 counties extending from Houston to the Rio Grande.

"This is history for Texas," Coney said. "I am the first black in Texas and the South to become a U.S. marshal. I'm not sure about the U.S."

Coney shot pool so his wife, June, whom he married in 1961, could finish college. They now have five children, aged 4 through 14. Coney, of course, gave up shooting pool for money when he went into law enforcement.

"I was considered as one of the sharks here in Houston in the 1950s," he laughed. "I made enough money shooting pool to send her through school."

He's proud that his career record is free of violent incidents.

"I am probably one of the only policemen that has policed from 1965 until 1977 in a county like Harris County with a population of 3 million ... who can actually say I've never shot a man and never even been hit."

"I give the credit for that to two things, speaking with authority and maintaining control."

He attributes his success in part to a strong religious faith.

"I give credit to God. It is not a day that me and my family don't put the Lord Jesus Christ first. We were raised that, if you put Lord Jesus Christ first, nothing was impossible."

"I have been straight and fair to every person, even my enemies. Treat every person the way that you want to be treated and you will succeed."

"Color doesn't mean anything to me. I evaluate a person on merit. I didn't see (the worst) racial problems back in Louisiana. We played together, worked together, ate together. Everybody knew everybody else."

He is candid in saying politics had something to do with his appointment.

"I give credit to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and President Carter. I'm a politician, too. I've been involved in politics since 1971. I have helped state, local and county people be elected to office."

And that's where his ambition lies.

"My next ambition is to receive a law degree. I'm 38 now. I'd say that before I'm 45 I'll have that degree. I'm quite sure I'll run for office after my term as marshal."

'Command Performance' For Negotiators Of Canal Treaty

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's Panama Canal treaty negotiators are making a command performance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to defend the crucial clarification that Carter hopes will secure the document's approval.

Ellsworth Bunker and Sol M. Linowitz today were expected to argue before the committee, which is chaired by Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., against re-negotiating the treaty. Some senators have suggested renegotiation to make the clarifying language part of the treaty itself.

The clarification, issued jointly by Carter and Panamanian head of state Gen. Omar Torrijos, deals with U.S. rights to defend and use the canal.

The statement was prompted by Senate concerns that the treaty might deny U.S. rights to defend and have priority use of the canal after the year 2000, when it is turned over to Panama.

According to the White House, the two leaders agreed that the treaty gives both countries the right to defend the canal and would not preclude the United States from using whatever means are necessary, including military action, to keep it open and neutral.

They also agreed, the White House said, that U.S. ships would have expeditious passage at all times and would "go to the head of the line" during an emergency.

Several senators say the clarification helped, but believe its assurances should be written into the treaty itself.

The White House hoped Bunker and Linowitz could convince the senators that the understanding reached by Carter and Torrijos would eliminate any uncertainty about the canal security provisions.

But Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., one of those pressing to have the terms spelled out in the treaty, noted that Torrijos was quoted as saying he hadn't signed any new agreement.

"No sooner had we been told by Ambassador Linowitz that the clarifying language had been worked out ... than we received reports from Panama City that the general had not agreed to any right to this military action in the canal, stating: 'I haven't even signed an autograph,'" Hollings said.

Such uncertainty about an agreement that won't go into full effect for 23 more years makes it vital that the treaty be specific, he said.

Romania adopted a Communist constitution in 1952.

Legionnaire Case In Ga.

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials say the death last month of a southwest Georgia man is the first confirmed case of Legionnaires' Disease in the state.

"There's no evidence it goes beyond that one isolated case," Don Berreth, a spokesman for the national Center for Disease Control, said Tuesday.

Berreth said the Georgia case brings to "22 or 23" the number of states reporting isolated cases of the disease, which has been blamed for the deaths of 29 persons connected with an American Legion convention in July 1976 in Philadelphia.

Clusters of cases have been reported since the 1976 outbreak in Vermont, Ohio and Tennessee.

The CDC identified the victim as George Kendrick, 63, of Dawson, a little town about 20 miles southwest of President Carter's hometown of Plains.

Kendrick was admitted to Terrell County Hospital Sept. 5, suffering from fever, a cough and congestion in his chest, said a doctor at the hospital.

"I hit him with every antibiotic that I could think of," said Dr. Charles M. Ward, a general practitioner in Dawson. "He got no better. He got worse. When he failed to respond, I got to thinking it might be Legionnaires' Disease."

Blood samples sent to the CDC showed that Kendrick's body had developed antibodies to fight Legionnaires' Disease, confirming that he had suffered from the organism first isolated earlier this year.

KINSTON — Employees of Du Pont here made another generous contribution this year to the Pitt County United Fund following completion of the plant solicitation effort.

Du Pont United Fund workers presented Pitt officials a check Tuesday for $47,682 representing the employees' contributions and pledges to the annual program.

This year's Pitt County share of the plant's total United Fund drive results reflected an increase from the 1976-77 donation of $46,194.60.

The Du Pont contribution, according to Jerry Powell, Pitt campaign chairman, brings the local fund total to $67,528.90 or roughly 25 per cent of the overall county goal of $272,465.27.

Making the check presentation yesterday at Du Pont were members of the plant's United Fund team, including co-chairmen Randall Greene and Tom Mallison. Also participating in the presentation to Powell were Frank Griffin, chairman of the plant's Pitt UF committee, and committee members Earl Daniels, Gladdis Beddard, Ardath Spikes and Ed Reeves.

The Pitt employee contribution included 26 persons who gave $200 or more and became members of Du Pont's "200 Plus" Club.

Plant campaign officials, who reported that the Pitt share was part of the total plant employee amount of $151,000 at Du Pont, said that this year's fund total was achieved with 96 fewer employees than last year.

Joe Tripp, executive director of the Pitt United Fund, accompanied Powell to Kinston for the check presentation.

Report 3 Traffic Accidents Tuesday

An estimated $2,890 property damage resulted from three collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Investigators reported heaviest damage resulted from a collision on Tenth Street, 240 feet East of the Anderson Street intersection about 8 a.m. involving cars driven by Karen Smith Albertson of 300 Verdant St., and Rita Louise McCain of Elizabeth City.

Police, who charged Mrs. Albertson with exceeding a safe speed, estimated damage to the Albertson car at $1,000 and set damage to the McCain auto at $800.

Mary Jones Rhodes of 2518 Sunset Ave., was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Red Banks Road and Charles Street.

Police said the Rhodes car collided with an auto operated by Henry Marvin Gardner of 104 Fairlane Rd., causing an estimated $300 damage to the Rhodes car and $400 damage to the Gardner vehicle.

A 5:10 p.m. collision at the intersection of Chestnut and Skinner Streets involved cars driven by Earnest Lee Jones of 506A Darden Dr., and Meredith Louise Ellis of Route 8, Goldsboro.

Damage from the collision was set at $90 to the Jones car and $300 to the Ellis car.

Ten Drugs In Elvis' Blood

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Ten drugs were present in Elvis Presley's bloodstream when he died in August and they probably contributed to his death, a published report said today.

The Commercial Appeal quoted sources as saying Dr. Jerry Francisco, Shelby County medical examiner, may rule multiple drugs as the cause of the singer's death.

Francisco, reached at his office late Tuesday, would not confirm the reports but said he would probably hold a news conference on the autopsy Friday.

Francisco originally ruled Presley died of cardiac arrhythmia from unknown causes. He said at a press conference held nearly six hours after the death that there was no evidence of drug abuse.

Among the drugs the sources said were found in Presley's bloodstream were an antihistamine often used to control hay fever or allergies; codeine, a derivative of opium often used to relieve pain and found in some cough medicines; Demerol, a narcotic used as a sedative and analgesic, and several tranquilizers including Valium.

The sources said the drugs were all within prescribed levels but the interactions of all of them had an effect on the singer's diseased heart, which was at least 50 per cent larger than normal.

Francisco and Dr. Eric Muirhead, chief of pathology at Baptist Hospital, met with Vernon Presley, the singer's father and executor of his estate, Tuesday afternoon. Francisco met with his staff that evening to review autopsy information prior to deciding what cause of death to place on the singer's death certificate.

Sources said the death certificate was to be signed today and flown to Nashville for filing at the state health department.

USDA Yearbook Has A Home Gardening Theme

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's yearbook time at the Agriculture Department and this year's edition is about home gardening, including tips on how to grow grapes and turn them into wine.

But no fantasies of tromping the grapes into pulp and juice by joyous barefoot maidens are included. Instead, the yearbook advises that if crushing is done by foot "a clean rubber boot" should be worn.

The 1977 yearbook, published today, is titled "Gardening For Food and Fun." The article on winemaking is one of 56 chapters ranging from an "Introduction to Gardening" to "Home Garden Vegetables" and "Home Food Preservation."

Jack Hayes, the editor, said in response to a reporter's question that "there were a few" eyebrows raised about including the chapter on wine-making.

"But we decided that a lot of people are interested in this, and there has been a big increase in wine drinking," Hayes said.

The wine chapter was written by Philip Wagner, identified as proprietor of Boordy Vineyards, Riderwood, Md., and J.R. McGrew of the department's Agricultural Research Service, Beltsville, Md.

Included in the chapter was an explanation about the legality of making wine at home.

"Under federal law the head of a household may make up to 200 gallons of wine a year for family use, but is first required to notify the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Form 1541."

This year's edition on gardening can be ordered for $6.50 a copy from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or purchased at government bookstores.

Says Horror Is Forgotten

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The recent wave of interest in World War II Nazis and the reported resurgence in this country of white supremacy groups who claim the Nazi label ignore the horror of the extermination of Jews during World War II, says a survivor of a concentration camp.

"The things they're seeing is the glamor of war — not the horror," says Dr. Susan Cernyak. "They need to know the horror."

Ms. Cernyak, now a professor of German at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, was sent to the infamous Auschwitz camp in southern Poland at the age of 14. She was imprisoned there for 2½ years and her mother died there.

Ms. Cernyak remembers the building that housed the gas chambers at Auschwitz, which had been "fiendishly masked" to look like a "little house with

Warn Klan Of Violation

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police are warning Ku Klux Klan members not to patrol the Mexican border to help spot illegal aliens entering the United States.

David Duke, head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, toured the border area Sunday, and said 500 to 1,000 Klan members would help to the U.S. Border Patrol find people illegally entering the country. Duke said the Border Patrol cannot cope with the volume of illegal aliens.

"We are going to be watching them," said Kolender. "Any violation of the law will be met with swift and sure action on our part."

Educator Seeks More Indians

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — In her job as coordinator of a federally funded Indian education program here, Rosa Winfree tries to find out how many Indian students are in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg system.

"We have about 375 students identified, but I have reason to believe there are over 500," says Mrs. Winfree, herself a Lumbee Indian from Pembroke.

from the federal Indian Education Act of 1972, seek to end the stereotypes and offer assistance to Indian students who may not finish high school.

"Indians have the highest dropout rate of any minority nationally — over 50 per cent," Mrs. Winfree says. "Unfortunately, our situation here in Charlotte is identical to the national."

Mrs. Winfree sees one possible explanation in a tendency to overlook Indian students as an ethnic minority.

"They argue about all-white schools and all-black schools, but there is very little concern about kids from other ethnic groups but those kids have the same kinds of feelings when they are the only different ones in a classroom," she says.

Mrs. Winfree, a former elementary school teacher and mother of two teen-agers, tries to end the stereotypes by going into classrooms and talking about Indians. But even in the schools, she runs into a lack of knowledge about Indians.

"I try to talk with the teacher before I go in. Otherwise, they're usually disappointed. They say, 'Do you wear feathers?'"

There are no textbooks to help; a survey by a national Indian association did not find a single textbook that the association felt adequately portrayed Indian history.

"There are some still in use that refer to Indians as savage and unfriendly," Mrs. Winfree says.

The classroom sessions offer a chance to lay the foundation for another picture of Indians.

"I'm usually in great demand this time of year, because of Thanksgiving," she says with a laugh.

NO FEATHERS — Rosa Winfree, who runs a program for Indian students, says she encounters enormous ignorance in her visits to schools for lectures about American Indians. (AP Laserphoto)

Heavy Damage In Wreck

An estimated $2,700 property damage resulted from a 3:10 p.m. mishap Monday on Memorial Drive, 250 feet North of the Millbrook Street intersection, Police Department investigators reported.

Officers said a car driven by Troy Ray Anderson of Route 5, Greenville, was towing a vehicle operated by Frederick Gregory Davidson of 2715 Memorial Dr. when a third vehicle, driven by Howard Dean Wooten of Route 1, Greenville, collided with the Davidson vehicle.

Damage was estimated at $1,800 to the Wooten car and $900 to the Davidson auto. No damage resulted to the Anderson vehicle, according to investigators, who noted Wooten and Davidson received minor injuries in the collision.

Nazi organizations at first claimed the youth, Kenneth Neal Wilson of Charlotte, was a party member but the organizations later denied that.

The News quoted self-proclaimed Nazi organizer Frank Braswell of Spruce Pine and other sources as saying Wilson met with Braswell at a Charlotte restaurant about two years ago. The youth later mailed in an official support application form and ordered Nazi literature, the paper said.

Braswell told the News he did not recruit Wilson but he said he met with some students at a restaurant and "I do remember the boy but it's only because he ordered some literature from the national organization."

In its reports, the News said Nazis in the state and other sources describe the movement as small but with big plans.

—Charlotte has a small core of dues-paying Nazis — "less than a dozen," according to one official — but no organized party unit.

—Organizer Braswell talks of organizing para-military stormtrooper units and has access to a fighter-trainer plant and an air strip near his home.

—Nazis reportedly mounted a recruiting effort in Charlotte in 1975 by working with contacts inside high schools. Overt activity now is concentrated near Raleigh and in western North Carolina, the News said.

Commerce Dept. Hopes Find Guidelines For Social Impact

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps said today her department plans to develop guidelines for business leaders to use in judging the effects their corporations have on society.

Mrs. Kreps, in remarks prepared for delivery to a gathering of leading U.S. businessmen at Duke University, said the Commerce Department will compile and make public a Social Performance Index. She said it would be one of six initiatives taken by the department "to enhance business leadership in corporate social performance."

Mrs. Kreps, who was a Duke economics professor before taking her position with the Carter administration, said the index would be used by businesses to measure their success in areas of environment, affirmative action, minorities, consumer complaints and product testing. Results would be compiled by the Commerce Department and made public.

"By assisting businesses in evaluating their own performance, we can help insure that corporations get credit for the constructive things they are doing," she said. "This index would also allow those companies who are leaders in promoting the public interest to bring about an improvement in the behavior of less progressive firms."

Corporations that are concerned with "social performance," Mrs. Kreps said, take into account the impact their decisions have on employees, customers, shareholders and neighbors.

For companies not to act in the public interest, she said, is an invitation to more government regulation. And, she said, disregard for social issues "translates sooner or later into significant dollar costs."

In addition to the index, commerce department officials will continue to speak out on the corporate morality, she said.

Other department plans include a series of conferences early next year on corporate decision making, regional seminars on pollution prevention, establishment of a task force on corporate social performance and establishment of a commission on problems causing unemployment. The commission will be headed by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young.

Mrs. Kreps said there will be more department actions on corporate morality developed jointly with corporations, consumer groups, environmental groups and others.

No Special Steps To Find Fugitive

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prison officials are counting on police in whatever city Joan Little has chosen to hide in to spot her and send her back to North Carolina.

Aside from the routine notice sent in all escapes to the Police Information Network, officials are taking no special steps to get her back.

Miss Little, 23, whose 1975 murder trial for the stabbing of a jailer who she said tried to molest her drew national attention, disappeared Saturday from the North Carolina Correction Center for Women in Raleigh.

She was in the second year of a seven-year prison term for the burglary charge that had put her in the Beaufort County Jail, where the stabbing occurred.

"People escape from prison every day," said women's prison supervisor Ethel Fincher. "Some of them come back in a day, some in a week, some in a month. We are taking no extraordinary measures to find Joan Little. As far as we're concerned, she is just another inmate."

Miss Little's former attorney, Jerry Paul of Durham, said earlier that he had been told she was in the Norfolk, Va., area with a friend who was keeping her confined for her own safety.

Norfolk police said they had received anonymous tips that she was about to turn herself in, but Miss Little herself had not shown up.

Mrs. Fincher said police along the eastern seaboard had been notified of the escape.

"All we can do now is wait until she is spotted," she said.

Arrest Man On Morals Count

Jerry Dale Law, 31 of 914 East 14th St. was arrested yesterday by Greenville Police on indecent exposure charges following investigation of an incident at the East Carolina University Station post office on Tenth Street, October 12.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Law allegedly exposed himself to a woman as she walked past the parked car in which Law was sitting.

It'd be right smart to give the local Doxol guy a call.

How-dee! This is Minnie Pearl. You know, school days are long past for most of us. But, not the Doxol guy. He still goes to special training sessions sponsored by his company.

He's the only one in the whole L.P. gas industry with a program like this. That's where he learns the fine points of home heating, safety, and all those motor fuel, agricultural and commercial applications.

If you're looking for someone you can count on, it'd be right smart to give your local Doxol guy a call.

House Committee Acts To Keep Saturday Mail Delivery

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Saturday mail deliveries and small post offices stand a better chance of survival following action by a House committee to prevent their elimination.

The House Post Office Committee, voting Tuesday to reorganize the Postal Service, included guarantees that Saturday mail deliveries and rural post offices won't be done away with to save money.

The legislation says these services must be continued and authorizes approximately $2 billion for them and other postal operations. The Postal Service received about $1.5 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The 19-4 vote sent the legislation to the full House, which may not get to the bill in this session.

The Postal Service has said eliminating Saturday deliveries would save $412 million a year.

And the service, following a year's moratorium, is once more gradually closing small, uneconomical facilities.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., says Saturday deliveries are important to many Americans. Country post offices, he says, are a part of small town life.

Wilson is a cosponsor of the Postal Service reorganization bill.

"The post office in a lot of communities — even though it may not be profitable — serves as a meeting place," Wilson said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Go To Clinic For Warmth

NEWTON GROVE, N.C. (AP) — The operator of a migrant worker health clinic in Sampson County says migrant workers are coming in for something that has nothing to do with medicine — warmth.

Juanita Morrison, director of the Sampson-Johnston Migrant Health Clinic in Newton Grove, said thousands of migrants are still in the area harvesting sweet potatoes, and many aren't equipped for cold weather.

"A lot of them are coming to the clinic purely to get warm," she says.

But others are coming because working in cold, sometimes rainy weather, with no coats and nothing but tennis shoes on their feet is making them sick.

Ms. Morrison said one man showed up last week barefooted with a case of "galloping pneumonia." The next day he died at Sampson Memorial Hospital.

Ms. Morrison has issued an urgent appeal for money to buy blankets, coats and decent shoes for the workers, some of whom will be in the state until late November.

A state official said this week that the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act requires that migrant quarters be heated.

"That definitely can be construed and can be interpreted to provide a comfortable environment in which to live," said Al Weaver, acting director of the state Department of Labor.

He added that any specific complaints that reach his office will be investigated and citations issued.

Portrait Of Dr. Prewett

Bill McDonald, chairman of the Pitt County Area Mental Health Board, has announced that the Oakwood Fund of Perth Amboy, N. J. has commissioned a painting of Dr. Clinton R. Prewett.

The portrait of the Pitt County mental health pioneer will be unveiled during a banquet at the Greenville Golf and Country Club Nov. 18, McDonald said.

The Oakwood Fund is a private non-profit foundation dedicated to health, especially mental health. It encourages and recognizes local government, with emphasis on county governments in health projects. Until now, the Fund has confined its interests to the metropolitan New Jersey-New York area.

George J. Otowski, Mayor of Perth Amboy and a member of the New Jersey General Assembly, will represent the sponsorship of health and mental health projects in New Jersey. He frequently testifies in the U. S. Congress on behalf of mental health issues.

pected," he said. "Increased efficiency, yes, but if you think you will save expenditures, go home, forget it. It is possible," he added, "to acquire more for each dollar. But I have seen no situation where the net dollars spent have declined."

He also warned that time and patience are necessary in laying the groundwork for a merger. "A merger merely provides the setting for making possible looking toward the desired results a merger can bring. Under any circumstances, a period of planning, of transition, is not just desirable, but necessary."

At the beginning of the discussion period, Drs. Presnell and Spencer oriented the two boards on requirements for merger contained in state law 115-74.1. The law enumerates nine provisions to be followed. (These are listed here in abbreviated form):

- (1) The name of the merged administration;
- (2) The effective date of merger;
- (3) The establishment and maintenance of a board of education which shall administer to all the public schools of the newly created unit...
- (4) The authority, powers, and duties of the board of education... applicable to the merged unit not inconsistent with the General Statutes;
- (5) The transfer of all facilities, properties... to the board of education of the merged unit;
- (6) Whether or not there shall be continued in force any supplemental school tax...
- (7) A public hearing... on the proposed plan of merger;
- (8) A statement as to whether merger... is to be contingent upon approval of the voters in the affected area; and
- (9) Any other condition or prerequisite to merger... of the school administrative units involved.

The two state representatives also provided information on the 21 mergers that have taken place since July 1, 1960 in North Carolina. Of this number, 10 were by public vote, six by board action, and five by legislative enactment.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, continuing Tuesday's sluggish pattern.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .51 to 820.00 in the first half hour.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said many traders were waiting uneasily for the Federal Reserve's weekly report Thursday afternoon on the money supply.

They noted fears of another sharp increase in the basic measure of the money supply that might lead to further credit-tightening by the central bank.

Dow Chemical slipped 1/4 to 28 1/2 in active trading. The company reported lower third quarter earnings.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average edged up .17 to 820.51.

Advances nosed out declines by about an 8-7 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 20.13 million shares against 17.34 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index was unchanged at 51.19.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .33 to 114.59.

Construction Manager Ralph Hall reported that several of the ECU segments of the building are being occupied now. He said square footage of the building is now about 430,000 square feet.

Dr. William Laupus, ECU Medical School Dean reported that some $5,972,000 has now been spent of state-allocated funds for the ECU Medical School at the Eastern Medical Center site.

entries at Greenville was the largest on the east coast swing of the statewide competition, which also included judgments on Friday in Wilmington and on Saturday in Beaufort.

"We were extremely pleased with the large number of entries in the Greenville area," Charles B. Wade, Chairman of the Building Committee for R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. and Secretary of the International Advisory Board, said.

"We hope that the large number of works selected in Greenville will help the entire state to recognize, just as R. J. Reynolds does, how important Greenville and East Carolina University are as centers of art."

The jurors were especially impressed with the quality of work exhibited in Greenville and credited that to the influence of East Carolina University's School of Art.

"There was exciting and innovative work shown in Greenville which stems from the dramatic interchange of artistic ideas found in a university community," Ted Potter, one of the jurors and director of the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

"One of the best things about the competition was the response of the artists at each of the three points," he added. "We've seen a diversity of works, ranging from contemporary ideas similar to those being used in New York City to more traditional crafts, weavings, and paintings."

The selected works at the three eastern North Carolina sites included paintings by well-known Greenville artist Francis Speight and Wilmington artist Claude Howell, as well as metal sculpture, pottery and wood pieces.

Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, served as the local chairman of the Greenville competition. She was assisted in plans and arrangements by a Reynolds competition committee in Greenville headed by Mrs. David Reid and Mrs. Jerry Powell.

Works chosen in Greenville will be exhibited at the Greenville Art Center beginning Monday, October 24, Mrs. Walker

Reggie, Reggie, Reggie

Yankee Hero

Yankee Reggie Jackson watches the path of the ball as he knocks the second of three home runs in the sixth game of the World Series last night. The middle blast came in the fifth inning as the Yankees gained an 8-4 triumph, clinching the world championship. (AP Laserphoto)

Jackson HRs Win Series For Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the man who stirred the drink, made it a champagne cocktail. With three magnificently dramatic home runs, he gift-wrapped the New York Yankees' 21st World Series championship.

"I am the straw that stirs the drink," Jackson said before he had ever batted for the Yankees in a major league game. "Catcher and captain Thurman Munson can only stir it bad."

Though that comment alienated Munson and touched off the Yankees' soap opera season of conflict and controversy, all was forgotten Tuesday night. Jackson powered New York to an 8-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and gave the Yankees the World Series, four games to two.

"Ah, the taste of victory," Jackson said, swigging a bottle of champagne in the jubilant Yankees locker room. "This symbolizes victory and being champions."

One year after the Yankees suffered World Series disgrace, a four-game sweep by Cincinnati last October, the Yankees were No. 1 — the only number acceptable to owner George Steinbrenner.

Steinbrenner, who bought the Yankees in 1973, is the architect of the Yankees' supremely successful season. It was Steinbrenner who spent $2.9 million to bring the free-agent Jackson to New York.

"The next morning, after we were beaten in four straight by Cincinnati, we began working on this year," Steinbrenner said. "I swore it was not gonna happen again."

"Now, we're on top and we're gonna stay there."

More than any other player, Jackson drove the Yankees to the top. The Series' Most Valuable Player with a record-breaking five homers and a Series-leading .450 batting average, Jackson stoked a hot bat in September to fire the Yankees to the American League East Division crown.

All his hitting heroics helped him overcome a season of mental pressure that would crumble a lesser man. First, there was the spring training remark that degraded Munson, the Most Valuable Player in the AL last year.

Soon after the remark appeared in a national magazine, Jackson had his celebrated run-in with Manager Billy Martin on national television. The two proud men argued and nearly came to blows in their dugout in Boston, and the TV cameras recorded every moment.

But Tuesday night was a time for the Yankees to bask in the thrill of their victory and the awe of witnessing Jackson's home runs — one of the most powerful and theatrical feats in World Series annals.

"He beat us single-handedly," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey. "I've never seen a performance like that in the World Series."

It was the sun and the moon of superstar performances.

"Guys throw around the word superstar a lot," said Jackson. "Guys like Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente. But I can say I had one day like those guys."

What Jackson did was tie Babe Ruth's record of three homers in one Series game. It started as if Chris Chambliss would be the hitting hero as he had been last year in New York's playoff conquest of the Kansas City Royals. Burt Hooton walked Jackson on four straight pitches in the second inning, and saw him score on Chambliss' home run.

Then Jackson took matters into his own hands. He smashed a screaming line drive into the right field stands on Hooton's first pitch to him in the fourth. Then, in the fifth, he sent one from Elias Sosa on a similar fast trip into the right field seats.

"The balls were in. That's how they tried to pitch me all Series," said Jackson. "You can pitch me in, but don't knock on the door and announce it. Even a dummy will adjust and I adjusted."

Charlie Hough, a knuckleball pitcher, was hurling the eighth inning. He threw his first pitch down and over the plate, but the result was the same: a mammoth homer — this time to center field, an estimated 450 feet away.

"Nothing can top this," said Jackson. "Who the hell is going to hit three homers to decide a World Series? Hell, I'm not."

But he did.

In Game 5, Jackson homered on his last at-bat. So he ended up smashing home runs on each of his last four swings. Overall in the Series, Jackson broke records for most homers (5), most runs scored (10), most consecutive homers in two games (4) and most total bases (25).

The total base record for a six-game Series previously belonged to Martin, the former Yankee second baseman.

"That's fantastic that he broke my record," said Martin. "Reggie's a super guy. Next year will be a lot easier for him."

It should also be easier for Martin, given a big bonus earlier Tuesday by Steinbrenner, who was on the verge of firing his fiery manager several times this season.

"Even the guy who won a million dollars in the lottery can't be as happy as I am," Martin said. "Everything is worthwhile now."

The opposite emotion filled the Los Angeles locker room.

"Great game. You put on quite an exhibition," a somber Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda told Jackson, extending his hand.

So the Dodgers traveled to New York in vain. Their outfielders and relief pitchers in the bullpen were showered with garbage by hostile Yankee fans; Garvey and Dave Lopes received death threats Monday night.

But it still was a wonderful season for the happiness boys from Los Angeles. Their April boom crushed Cincinnati and kept the Reds from a shot at a third straight World Series crown.

"We lived by the long ball all season long and we died by the long ball in the Series," said Lasorda, whose club led the National League in homers and smacked a record-tying nine in the Series, including Reggie Smith's homer Tuesday night.

Smith's third-inning solo homer, his third of the Series, had coupled with Steve Garvey's two-run, first-inning triple to give Los Angeles a brief 3-2 lead. But that was buried under the explosion of Jackson's power; a ninth-inning Dodgers run served only to delay the Yankees' celebration.

"I'm proud of the way the guys battled all year long," said Lasorda, the rookie Dodgers manager.

Mike Torrez, the winning pitcher in the pivotal third game and again in the climactic sixth game, yielded nine hits Tuesday night.

"It was a struggling-type game," said the big right-hander, who will be eligible for the Nov. 4 re-entry draft. "Reggie was just beautiful. Out of sight."

No Feud Now In Yankee Camp

NEW YORK (AP) — Four months earlier to the day they almost came to blows in a Boston dugout on national television. Now they sat harmoniously side by side as world champions, the fiery, skinny manager and the muscular, outspoken slugger, filming a segment for the "Good Morning, America" TV show.

Reggie Jackson put his arm around Billy Martin. "Have we had a year, Skip?" he asked.

Billy Martin put his arm around Reggie Jackson. "It's been pleasant," he said offhandedly.

At long last, Reggie Jackson and Billy Martin had formed a mutual admiration society that made the Los Angeles Dodgers' season-long love-in look like the Hatfields and McCoys.

Oh, how the platitudes flowed back and forth.

"I wouldn't advise anyone to catch us in a bar together and give us any crap," Jackson said menacingly.

Controversy? What controversy?

Feud? What feud?

Jackson had just pounded three home runs, driving in five runs as the New York Yankees whipped the Dodgers 8-4 and made Martin a world championship manager for the first time. And the Yankees' odd couple was feeling its oats.

"Both of us have been through a lot," Jackson said. "But now we know each other and respect each other. I respect Billy Martin. I like Billy Martin. And it's important to respect somebody.

"When I get in a jam, I know that he'll be the first one there and when he gets in a jam, he knows I'll be the first one there. He's got two more years on his contract and I've got four more years on mine and we're gonna be tough to beat."

"We're gonna unite. Call us renegades, if you like, but we're gonna give 'em hell."

For most of the season, people were giving Martin and Jackson hell...when they weren't giving each other hell.

It all started when Jackson, still a neophyte Yankee, told a national magazine such things as:

"It all flows from me...I'm the straw that stirs the drink...I'm a leader and I can't lie down...It's a matter of presence...No team I'm on will ever be humiliated the way the Yankees were by the Reds in the World Series...You take me one-on-one in the pit and I'll whip you...There is just nobody who can do for a club what I can do."

Jackson finally proved his point by setting all sorts of World Series slugging records.

"I broke Babe Ruth's record with 23 total bases in a six-game Series and you broke mine with 25," Martin said to Jackson, who delivered five home runs, a double and three singles.

"Records are made to be broken and it's only right that a Yankee should break my record."

"Aw, what's the difference?" Jackson replied. "We won."

Dodgers Lived, Died By The Long Ball

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Big Dodger in the Sky" finally threw Tom Lasorda a curveball.

"Our pitchers just didn't put the ball where they were supposed to," said the Los Angeles manager, "and our hitters didn't hit the ball the way they were capable of."

Lasorda, who claims to bleed Dodger Blue because of his long emotional attachment to the Los Angeles Dodgers organization, was bleeding more than usual Tuesday night after watching the New York Yankees tear apart his reputable pitching staff.

"We lived by the long ball all season and we died by it in the World Series," said Lasorda after the Yankees hit four home runs, three by Reggie Jackson, to bury the Dodgers 8-4 and win the 1977 World Series four games to two.

"I kept hoping and praying that we could get something started...but it just wasn't to be," said Lasorda, who in the past had whimsically invoked "the Big Dodger in the Sky" for supposedly supernatural help.

Actually, the only thing supernatural that happened Tuesday night appeared to be Jackson's performance. It was the talk of the stunned Dodger locker room.

"I think it was a night when he released a lot of his emotional tension," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey, referring to Jackson's season of controversy in New York. "It sure was some performance. I have never seen one like it in my life in a championship game situation."

Lasorda agreed. "Let's put it this way," said Lasorda. "No one has hit three homers in one World Series game since 1928, so it has to be a hell of a performance. I have never seen any better in a World Series."

While impressed with Jackson and the Yankees as a whole, the Dodgers would not let the loss of a World Series overshadow their brilliant season.

"Nobody on the Dodgers should feel ashamed," said third baseman Ron Cey. "Nobody believed in us at the start of the year, but we proved we were a great ballclub. You have to give credit where credit is due, the Yankees were able to make all the right plays. Their pitchers made the good pitches.

Jaguars Visit Chargers In THE Game

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

For the intensity of rivalry, sheer importance and just plain bigness (in relative terms, of course), the game matches the Oakland Raiders vs. the Pittsburgh Steelers or Muhammad Ali vs. Joe Frazier.

Friday night, Farmville Central, the number one team in the eastern 3-A and the Eastern Carolina Conference defending champion, will host the only team with any real chance of dethroning the Jaguars, Ayden-Grifton.

The game is not just another important encounter, it's got to be THE most important game this year as far as the ECC race is concerned. Both teams enter the contest undefeated in league play with four victories. The Jaguars are 6-1 overall and the Chargers are 5-2. Last week, Ayden-Grifton put added importance on the game by defeating the only other ECC team even close to the top two, Greene Central, 10-0.

Riding a five-game winning streak and defending the conference title, the Jaguars would have to be considered slight favorites in the game, but Ayden-Grifton has come back with four straight victories after dropping two of its first three games and has shown a lot of improvement under first-year coach Dixon Sauls.

The contest is reminiscent of last year's meeting between the two teams. Both came into that game undefeated in the league and the Jaguars rolled to a 49-6 win, handing the Charger's their only ECC loss of the year. That game decided the championship. This season it's two entirely different teams — the Jags with almost all new faces and the Chargers with a new coach — but the importance is still there. "I don't see how either of us can recover from a loss" Friday night, Farmville Central coach Gene Brewer said. "Both will still have a good season, win or lose. But it's going to be hard to represent the conference if you lose this one."

The Jaguars come into the game from a 21-7 victory over C. B. Aycock. Other games last week saw D. H. Conley downing Southern Nash, 20-12 and North Lenoir beating North Pitt, 20-6.

This week, besides the Farmville Central at Ayden-Grifton headliner, Aycock travels to Conley, Greene Central is at North Pitt and North Lenoir hosts Southern Nash.

Brewer said, "Up until this time all the conference games have been important, but this is the one that counts the most."

Brewer said the Chargers have made very few mistakes in the last few ballgames; they don't hurt themselves with penalties. The team usually tries to control the game by controlling the football.

Defensively, Ayden-Grifton is big and aggressive and has good personnel in the offensive backfield with quarterback David Smith and running back Terry Morris.

In addition, the team has outstanding kicking game with Smith doing the punting and Paul Settiff handling the placements.

Brewer would make no predictions on the tempo of the contest, but both teams have outstanding defenses as well as offenses.

Reflecting on last week's win over C. B. Aycock, Brewer said the Falcons played well, but didn't hurt Farmville after their early scoring drive. Donald Reid had a good ballgame on offense for the Jags while twin brother Ronald looked good on defense, Brewer said. In addition, quarterback Donald Freeman had a good game, as well as the entire defense and the offensive line.

Ayden-Grifton

Charger coach Sauls said the Farmville Central game will be a "great challenge" for his team. "They're the defending champions, number one in the eastern 3-A and have gained a lot of momentum."

In addition, Farmville has an outstanding program with a winning tradition, Sauls said.

"They'll be the most aggressive team we've played on offense and defense." The Reids as linebackers, end Walter Blow and tackle Woody Edwards are the Jaguars' defensive strengths, Sauls said.

On offense, Farmville can move the ball on the ground and has a much-improved passing attack with quarterback Donald Freeman. Sauls said Freeman is the "most outstanding quarterback we've faced" and is hard to contain.

Despite this, however, "we feel like we can compete with them," Sauls said. "Everyone knows the outcome of this game may determine the championship. The keys are if we can control the football and move the football to give the defense a rest. Passing is also a real key, along with our defense against the pass."

The Charger defense performed well last week against the Rams, Sauls said, controlling running back James Best.

Tackle Mike Teachey played "a very strong game, as usual" and Morris had his best game of the year.

Sauls also credited his assistants, Bob Murphrey, Joe Colenda and Allan Wilson with much of the Charger success this season.

North Pitt

The Panthers didn't play that badly against North Lenoir, they just ran up against the same old problem: "We got beat by a bigger, stronger football team."

Coach Pat Smith said the Hawks "ran right at us and we couldn't stop them."

Highlights for the Panthers were William Knight's 40-yard punt return and Tim Corey's play at defensive tackle.

This week, the Panthers host Greene Central and Smith probably understates the case when he says, "We're going to have our hands full."

The Panthers will have to contend with the running of Best and the overall size and strength of the Rams. One thing in their favor, however: it's North Pitt's homecoming.

D. H. Conley

The Vikings threw the ball a little better and showed some improvement in other areas in their victory last Friday, coach Chuck Dunn said.

"Their new offensive wrinkles took us by surprise and they scored two touchdowns, but we were able to come back and win," Dunn said.

Outstanding Viking efforts included Nuggie Worthington's 104 yards rushing, 50 yards receiving, interception and fumble recovery. Tim McLanahan had five pass receptions for two TD's and an interception, while Steve McLawhorn, a defensive tackle had two quarterback sacks and one fumble recovery.

This week's foe, C. B. Aycock "played Farmville Central a real good ballgame," Dunn said. The Falcons are quick and do a lot of different things on both offense and defense. The game will take a whole lot of preparation.

Summer Work On Farm Keeps Dail In Shape

By JIM KYLE

Reflector Sports Writer

Lineman Jolly Dail is one of the strongest players on the Ayden-Grifton football team and one of the keys to his strength has to do with his father's business. Jack Dail is a farmer near Ayden and Jolly helps out around the place during the summer.

"I work real hard and it really helps out; it keeps me in shape and it's fun work," according to Dail. "I wish all the guys on the team worked."

The farm work has paid big dividends for the Chargers, making Dail a stronger performer at his offensive guard and defensive tackle positions. The 6-3, 190-pound junior is "playing the best football of his career," said coach Dixon Sauls. "He's a versatile offensive lineman. He plays guard, but his natural position is tackle."

In addition to being a tackle on defense, Dail is also the team's snapper on kick plays. "He's strong for an offensive guard and his size certainly helps out," Sauls said. "He also has excellent technique. He and Mike Teachey give us strong blocking on the right side."

Although he enjoys playing defense, Dail thinks he likes offense a little better. "I like being a part of the scoring because that's what wins ballgames," he said.

When he goes out to play offense, Dail is concentrating on getting the team a first down and not making penalties. Just the opposite is true on defense. He wants to force a third-and-long yardage situation and force the other team to punt.

Although linemen don't get as much recognition as some of the other positions, Dail said, "Coaches recognize us. If it wasn't for the line, the backs wouldn't be able to do what they do."

The Chargers have their biggest game of the season coming up Friday night, a tilt with defending Eastern Carolina Conference champion Farmville Central. Both teams are undefeated in the ECC and the game will probably decide this year's champion.

"We really have to win this game. We have to get up for it and get fired up and work real hard in practice; I think we can do it."

The team will not go into the game counting on a sure win, Dail said. "We can't go in cocky. We're taking it just like any other important game. We'll just try to do our best and hold our mistakes."

Dail said he would like to go on to college next year after graduation. He'll probably major in business and would like to try to play a little football.

After that, it's back to a career on the farm and some more of that hard work.

Jabbar Unloads On Benson

By ALEX SACHARE

AP Sports Writer

It took just a little more than two minutes for the National Basketball Association season to get into full swing.

That's when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers decided his elbowing joust with Kent Benson, Milwaukee's prize rookie, had gone on long enough.

So Abdul-Jabbar uncorked a right-hand punch that would have made Muhammad Ali proud, catching Benson flush on the right side of his face and knocking the 6-foot-11, 245-pounder to the hardwood of Milwaukee Arena.

Benson had to leave the game, suffering from a mild concussion and cuts around his right eye. Abdul-Jabbar was assessed a punching foul and ejected from the contest, won by Milwaukee 117-112 behind Brian Winters' 26 points.

In other NBA season openers, the New York Knicks beat the Kansas City Kings 120-113, the Chicago Bulls edged the Cleveland Cavaliers 91-88, the Detroit Pistons defeated the New Jersey Nets 110-93 and the Phoenix Suns stopped the Golden State Warriors 100-83.

Benson and Abdul-Jabbar each blamed the other for starting the contact that led to the one-punch kayo 2:09 into the first quarter of the Lakers-Bucks battle.

"Coming up the floor, Kareem was elbowing me," said Benson, the two-time All-American from Indiana and first player chosen in the NBA's college draft. We got down the floor and I elbowing him back. I tried to play defense, and the next thing I got was a hit in the face."

"He just hauled off and threw an elbow into my gut, right around the solar plexus," was the version offered by Abdul-Jabbar, winner of Most Valuable Player honors last year for the fifth time in his eight NBA seasons.

Lady Bucs Split Two

HIGH POINT — East Carolina University's volleyball team split a pair of matches last night at High Point College.

The Pirates defeated Lenoir Rhyne, 2-0, then lost to hosting High Point, 2-0.

High Point took wins of 15-1 and 15-5 over the Lady Pirates, while East Carolina beat Lenoir Rhyne, 15-6, and 15-13.

Coach Alita Dillon said the Lady Pirates had difficulties in the High Point game. "They (High Point) played terrific and we played poorly," she said.

East Carolina, now 13-7, travels to Elon on Thursday, to meet the Fighting Christians and N. C. Central.

Ewes Nip Conley For ECC Title

LITTLEFIELD — Regular season champion Greene Central captured a 2-1 victory in a hotly contested finale to win the Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball tournament at Ayden-Grifton High School last night.

The Ewes beat Conley in two tight matches after bowing in the first game of the championship series. Greene Central beat Farmville Central 2-1, in the semifinals, while Conley upset North Pitt, the second-seeded team, 2-0.

Farmville Central took the first game from Greene Central in the semis, 15-12. Iris Pridden scored seven points during the game for the Ewes, while Lisa Satterthwait had six for Farmville Central.

Greene Central came back with a 15-7 win in the second game, then beat Farmville, 15-6, in the rubber game. Pridden again had seven scoring serves in the contest.

Conley then took North Pitt in straight games, 15-5 and 15-8. In the first game, Annie Wooten served nine straight points up for Conley, sparking the Valkyries to a 13-5 lead in that game.

In the championship series, Conley took a 15-11 win in the first game. After Greene Central took a 4-1 lead, Lexann Keeter hit five in a row for Conley, but Sara Taylor had seven straight for Greene Central, for an 11-6 lead. Pam Manning added six straight for Conley, giving the Valkyries a 12-11 lead, and they held the lead the rest of the way.

In the second game, Greene Central squeezed out a 15-12 win. Annie Hardy staked the Valkyries to a 6-0 lead, but Greene Central gradually chopped away at the lead in small bursts to finally gain the win.

Then, in the rubber game, Greene Central took a 16-14 win. The match was close all the way, although Manning served up five in a row for Conley for a 13-10 lead at one time. But Greene Central fought back, and the Ewes, down 14-13, came back with three straight points from Lynn Shackelford to capture the title.

Greene Central will now advance into the state playoffs, against an opponent yet to be named.

Packer: ACC Should Ignore ECU; UNC Will Be In Top 5 This Year

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

Watch for the University of North Carolina to be one of the top basketball powers of the country during the coming year. And watch for Atlantic Coast Conference football teams to turn their backs on East Carolina University in the future.

Those were the predictions of former Wake Forest basketball star and current NBC television personality Billy Packer at the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

Packer listed North Carolina as being one of five "Super Teams" in the NCAA basketball season upcoming. The other four are San Francisco, Marquette, Kentucky and Notre Dame.

On East Carolina facing ACC competition, Packer stated, "If someone in the ACC plays East Carolina, they are not using their best judgement. It's a matter of economics and tradition." Packer pointed out that Kentucky "ignores" Louisville. "They pretend that Louisville doesn't even exist. The Atlantic Coast Conference must ignore East Carolina and hope it goes away. It may not be a very popular thing to say here, but it's the truth."

Packer, who went with the NBC network as a color man for their college basketball programs, came to prominence through his work with the ACC basketball network over the past few years. "It started as a hobby, and it's turned out to be a lucrative one," he said. "I simply say what I see. Sometimes I rub people the wrong way, but if I have to think about it, it becomes a job."

Packer said that last year, there was no one power in the country, due largely to the grant restrictions of the NCAA and previous raids of the college ranks by the pro leagues.

"This year, there will be a return of super teams," he declared.

"San Francisco," he said, "is not a very intelligent team. They don't play the very good teams all the time, and this hurts them. But they have four players who could play anywhere, and they will be eager and hungry."

Of Marquette, Packer said that if the new coach is able to adjust with the players, the Warriors may be the champions once more. Kentucky lost just one senior, Packer related, and picked up two fine transfers from junior colleges. "They were the best in the nation last year when they played well. But the thinking teams beat them last year."

Notre Dame plays a difficult schedule, and will probably lose more than the other four combined, Packer said. "But they will be a great team and will adjust to any kind of offense or defense thrown at them."

Of the Tar Heels, Packer said it was obvious that they have outstanding people back. "They are a smart team with good balance. They have great court intelligence, maybe more than any team except maybe Princeton. By court intelligence, I mean the ability to adjust and to not make mistakes with their heads."

Plotting the ACC, Packer picked Carolina to win, followed in order by Clemson, Maryland, Duke, Virginia, Wake Forest and N. C. State. "Really, Carolina could finish from first to third, Clemson, first to fifth; Maryland, the same; Duke, first to sixth; while I don't think any other team can win."

He added that there were no more weak sisters in the league. He listed keys to ACC performances this year as: UNC, good play from Jeff Crompton and Tom Zallagiris; Clemson, the quick development of a center; Maryland and Duke, the quick maturity of Albert King (Maryland) or Gene Banks (Duke); Virginia, early wins over people the Cavs traditionally lose to; Wake, replacements for Jerry Shellenberg and a strong center; State, quick jelling of its freshmen into helpful roles, plus the learning of who is going to start.

Packer was asked if there was a quick way for a school like East Carolina to overcome the success of schools like the ACC. "You have to do several things," he said.

Among those, but not necessarily including all, would be outspending the opponents in recruiting; very, very hard work; being able to get kids in school who can't go to the other schools; cheating; and luck.

Irish Picked Over USC; Bucs Given Big Edge

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "You can say we really were looking ahead to Notre Dame," Southern Cal quarterback Rob Hertel said after the Trojans breezed past Oregon 33-15 last weekend when some observers wouldn't have been surprised to see the score approach the century mark.

That's an excellent line. We'll use it as the reason last week's forecasting score was a paltry 42 right and 22 wrong with three ties for a .656 percentage, dropping the season count to 298-122-10 — .710.

Fans and alumni, we were looking ahead to both Notre Dame and Southern Cal this weekend.

Despite a 4-1 record, Notre Dame has been somewhat disappointing. The Irish needed an injury to Pitt's quarterback to beat the Panthers, lost to Mississippi, used a frantic fourth-quarter rally to defeat Purdue and struggled past Michigan State before blanking Army 24-0.

ND quarterback Joe Montana could have said the Irish were looking ahead to Southern Cal, but he didn't. So we'll say it ... Notre Dame 24-21.

Michigan at Minnesota: This one's for the Little Brown Jug and the Wolverines can be expected to go for Minnesota's jugular ... Michigan 38-7.

Texas at Southern Methodist: We keep picking against Texas but the Longhorns have come through the last two weeks with flying colors against Oklahoma and Arkansas. What better time could there be for a letdown than against the pesky Mustangs? Upset Special of the Week ... SMU 27-23.

Ohio State at Northwestern: The Buckeyes will be out to roll up a point total that Michigan will be hard-pressed to match two weeks hence ... Ohio State 63-0.

Iowa State at Oklahoma: Obviously, Iowa State was keeping something in reserve when it lost to Iowa and was anything but imposing against the likes of Bowling Green and Dayton. In Big Eight play, though, the Cyclones have blanked Missouri and upset Nebraska. The Sooners also have been rather unimpressive since that thrilling triumph over Ohio State ... Oklahoma 27-17.

Colorado at Nebraska: Neither one of these teams can afford a loss in the Big Eight race but, barring a tie, someone's gonna get one ... Colorado 24-21.

Kentucky at Georgia: Can't understand why this game's virtually a pick-'em affair. Could it be that Kentucky is coming off three tough contests against Penn State, Mississippi State and Louisiana State? The Wildcats have made us believers ... Kentucky 27-17.

Houston at Arkansas: The Razorbacks seem to be for real despite that bitter loss to Texas. The Cougars were for real until they lost quarterback Danny Davis ... Arkansas 20-15.

West Virginia at Penn State: If you're not old enough to vote, you're not old enough to remember the last time West Virginia failed to lose to Penn State. The year was 1958 and the score was 14-14. The last time the Mountaineers won? Ah, that was in 1955 by a 21-7 score ... Penn State 28-17.

California at UCLA: Coach Terry Donahue says the Bruins aren't out of the Pac-8 race yet, but they will be if they lose this one ... UCLA 20-17.

Brigham Young at Wyoming: Early in the season, they were asking what BYU quarterback Gifford Nielsen could do for an encore. Now, with Nielsen out with a knee injury, they're asking what soph sensation Marc Wilson, who fired seven touchdown passes against Colorado State last week, can do for an encore. As last year's WAC co-champs slug it out ... Brigham Young 37-21.

North Carolina State at Clemson: Clemson likes to call its stadium Death Valley, but the Tigers have been death on most opponents almost everywhere this season ... Clemson 29-22.

Claiborne Lauds Dunn

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland Coach Jerry Claiborne has been evaluating Duke quarterback Mike Dunn for a long time, and on Saturday he gets a much closer look than he really desires.

That's when Dunn leads the Blue Devils into Maryland's Byrd Stadium for an Atlantic Coast Conference game which probably will eliminate the loser from league championship consideration.

Maryland has won the title three years in a row, tying Duke's 1960 62 mark for consecutive championships. But each team has suffered one loss in league play this season, and neither can afford another setback.

"I remember Mike in high school," Claiborne said of the junior from Hampton, Va. "Somewhere in the game, he always seemed to come up with a big play to win."

Dunn continues to impress Claiborne even though Duke, like Maryland, has a 3-3 record for the season.

"He was a dominating factor against Clemson last week," Claiborne said of Dunn's 122 yards rushing in a 17-11 loss. "He's one of the finest athletes in our conference. He's a clutch player."

Claiborne said he didn't know if Dunn were a better passer than Johnny Evans of North Carolina State, the ACC's total offense leader, "but Mike's a more dangerous runner, and quicker. He's possibly the best all-around quarterback we've faced this year."

Dunn ranks third in total offense, 17 yards a game behind Evans, and three yards ahead of Maryland's Larry Dick. Dunn is the No. 4 passer in the ACC and the eighth leading rusher.

The Blue Devils also have the next three ranking rushers in Stanley Broadie, Ned Gonet and Mike Barney. All four average better than 43 yards a game for Duke, which averages more than 200 yards a game on the ground.

"Duke rushed for 141 yards against Michigan," Claiborne said. "They ran the ball down their throats."

The Blue Devils, a six-touchdown underdog, lost 21-9 to the nation's top-ranked team in the second game of the season, trailing 14-9 until midway through the final quarter.

"Duke should have beaten Clemson last week, too," Claiborne said. "But Clemson is a lot like we were last year—everything that happens to them turns out good."

Maryland has won three straight over Duke, but the Blue Devils hold a commanding 14-6 edge in the lifetime series. Duke has not played at Maryland since 1969.

Namath's Starting Days At End

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Namath's starting days as a quarterback appear to be at an end.

He will be on the bench again when the Los Angeles Rams face the Minnesota Vikings in a nationally televised National Football League game Monday night, just as he was last Sunday.

Young Fat Haden, the starter for the Rams in the latter part of the 1976 season, was the starter last Sunday against New Orleans, reportedly because of Namath's swollen knee that kept him out of a couple of practice sessions. This week, Namath can practice, but Haden, the 24-year-old Rhodes scholar, still will do the play-calling. Namath is his backup.

Asked about switching to Haden after the 34-year-old Namath had started the first four regular games, Coach Chuck Knox said Tuesday that last week Namath had a sore knee and "we felt we needed a little change."

As for this week, Knox said, "Haden is starting because he played well Sunday" when Los Angeles beat New Orleans 14-7.

The Rams, winners of the NFC West Division title the past four seasons, currently are 3-2. In the last start by Namath, who became a free agent for this season after 12 years with the New York Jets, the Rams were upset by the Chicago Bears 24-23. Haden came into that game in the final minute and directed a touchdown drive.

Namath said he was all right physically to start against New Orleans and personally felt the coaching staff just wanted to make a change. He had shared the quarterback job with Haden in the preseason and was the choice to start the regular campaign.

With Namath, the Rams were 2-2, losing to Atlanta and the Bears while beating San Francisco and Philadelphia.

In those four games, Namath hit 50 of 107 passes for 606 yards and had five interceptions — four by Chicago. Haden is 12 of 22 for 235 yards with one interception.

Haden also gives more mobility to the quarterback position since he can run without difficulty, while Namath cannot because of gimpy knees that have undergone five operations.

Vows Oppose Unjust Favoring Of Northern States

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Georgia Gov. George Busbee said today he will work against "all forms of domestic colonialism" that unjustly favor Northern states at the expense of the South.

Legislation is needed that is "balanced nationally, not Northernly ... to reflect need, not greed," Busbee said.

He made his remarks in a prepared speech to the Southern Growth Policies Board, which represents Southern states. Busbee was to assume chairmanship of the 13-member board today.

The Georgia governor said the board should work to change legislation recently approved by a Senate-House conference committee that would give the North a bigger chunk of $4 billion worth of community development block grants. "We must convince the House of Representatives, the Senate, and yes, the administration, that things aren't really what a lot of Northern researchers and politicians claim," he said.

Busbee promised to lead the board "into battle" to dispel "infuriating myths, false testimony and poor thinking" about the South. Busbee said the South deserves federal aid as much as the North, because "the South has more people in poverty than any other part of the nation and...our family income is less than any other part of the nation."

Busbee said he will take his message to the White House Conference on Balanced National Growth early next year.

The 13 states belonging to the Southern Growth Policies Board are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

The approximately 200 persons attending the second day of the board's two-day meeting also were scheduled to hear speeches today by former presidential adviser Walt W. Rostow and by banking executive James Howell.

Rostow, an adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson and now a University of Texas professor, was to speak on his proposal for an energy development bank.

The bank, supported with public and private funds, would provide technical and financial assistance to projects that increase the energy supply or lead to more efficient energy use, according to Rostow.

Howell, senior vice president of the First National Bank of Boston, was to speak about economic conditions in the Northeast.

During the first day of the board meeting Monday, Busbee and Oklahoma Gov. David Boren, outgoing chairman of the board, said Southern states and cities are being discriminated against by federal government policies.

Boren said a "certain mentality is at work" in Washington aimed at "holding jobs and industry captive in the Northeast and preventing growth of other sections of the country."

According to a report presented to the conference, employment in the 15 states of the Sun Belt is growing at double the national rate.

The report said the growth is coming primarily from the creation of new industry, rather than as a result of Northern industries leaving that region.

Tehran's Trouble: A Million Unwanted Squatters In City

By SAJID RIZVI
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The oil boom and its promise of riches has brought the city of Tehran a million squatters and almost as many problems.

The squatters spilled into Tehran from village farms at the rate of almost 200,000 a year to seek work in construction and factories. They filled the city's available inexpensive housing in no time.

Wages soared 400 per cent and the squatters began to settle in. Thousands threw up illegal townships of ramshackle homes on the desert wasteland surrounding the capital.

More jobs became available and the squatters invited their relatives to join them in the big city.

The city, furious at the illegal settlements, started bulldozing the shacks but the squatters answered with violence. They rioted, attacking municipal buildings and burning vehicles to press their demands for legal status.

Authorities gave in and recently granted legal status, but now city planners warn the problems have only begun.

In five years, the rural influx has pushed Tehran's population from 3.5 million to 4.5 million — 13 per cent of Iran's 34 million people.

City planners fear that legalization will encourage still more people to come to Tehran.

"Before we know it, there will be two million of them," one architect said.

A concentration of expanding industry, commerce and government already has overtaken Tehran's fledgling civil services system.

Unusually low snowfall in the mountains north of Tehran during the last two winters depleted the city's water reserves at the same time consumption jumped.

The city scraped through the past summer but authorities warn that a water famine next summer may be unavoidable — partly because the legalization of the townships puts an obligation on the government to pipe them water, too.

They also will need electricity — another commodity in short supply. A delay in power generation plans caused a nationwide electricity shortage during the summer. The blackouts persist though consumption is down.

The squatters will need electricity. Few are without the television sets, refrigerators and washing machines their $70 a day jobs afford them.

They also need hospitals, schools, buses, taxis, telephones, post offices, mosques,

Although city officials fret over the ugly, crooked streets and shanty-like homes, politicians seem resigned to it.

"I knew for years this would happen," said Faramarz Naseri, 63. He is a retired civil servant living in Tehran's middle class north central district.

"Tehran flaunted its wealth in front of those provincials for years," he said. "And now it must pay for the blunder."

"Call it an evil, call it whatever you like," another politician said. "It (the influx from rural areas) always comes with the riches."

"It's another matter, though. The people remain when the riches are gone," he said.

Indications are that Tehran will prove no exception. The building boom that attracted the farmers to the unskilled labor force is slowing down as the government enacts harsh measures to curb land speculation.

And there's no indication the farmers will move back home.

Geological 'Field Trip' In Greenville

ECU News Bureau

Did you know that the land occupied by the city of Greenville was at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean during much of the last 100 million years, and that remains of sea creatures more than five million years old can still be found within the city limits?

Did you know that some Greenville residents have a serious problem, with their houses slowly sliding downhill?

These and other topics will be discussed during a field trip through Greenville, designed to help participants observe land use patterns and types of development.

The trip, planned for Saturday, Oct. 22, will be conducted by Stephen Benton, Director of the East Carolina University Title I Environmental Education Program. There is no charge for participation.

Topics to be covered during the trip are the geological history of this region and its relation to present conditions and land use problems, soils and how to use soil maps, development trends, flooding problems and how to recognize flood-prone areas, and avoidance of escalation of property taxes on undeveloped land.

Benton said the trip would be of value to realtors, land developers, and any interested citizens, particularly those who intend to purchase property here.

The trip will assemble at noon at Green Springs Park, and will begin with a picnic lunch and an introduction to the trip.

Since only 20 persons will be accepted, early registration is advised. Further information and registration is available by telephoning the ECU Environmental Education Office at 757-6138.

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Faced with the realization that their economic program isn't working, President Carter and his advisers are back at the drawing boards trying to salvage what they can.

All indications point to yet another attempt to win business support and to stimulate investment in new industry, which the country badly needs.

The failure of businessmen to step up investment activity has been the largest single factor undermining progress toward Carter's original targets of a balanced budget, lowered employment and sharply reduced inflation by 1981.

Some private mutterings are being heard from the administration that Carter already has done too much for business without any results to show. For example, Carter never put forth the tough anti-inflation program he wanted because business opposed it and he withdrew plans for the $50 per person tax rebate, also opposed by business.

But Carter appears willing to make one more try this time through tax incentives to increase business profits and encourage investment.

He also disclosed last week that he is considering tax cuts for both businesses and individuals in 1978, one year ahead of his original scheme, if the economy shows signs of floundering again, as some experts now fear.

Very little in the economic program Carter unveiled in January has worked out according to plan.

Inflation and unemployment both have remained stubbornly high, the nation's huge trade deficit has started another attack on the dollar and interest rates have reached the danger level again.

In the first major retreat from its economic program, the administration has abandoned hopes of achieving a balanced budget by 1981, barring an economic miracle. There is no more talk, as there was during the campaign, of the $60 billion budget "dividend" in 1981 to help pay for new government programs.

Carter's advisers are now telling him that if he wants to meet his goals for an unemployment rate of 5 per cent or below by 1981, the best he can hope for is a budget deficit of $20 billion to $25 billion.

Besides the failure of businesses to step up investments, another fly in the economic ointment has been the nation's trade deficit, estimated at $30 billion this year, which has cut into employment and production in this country.

The administration appears to be seeking to reduce the deficit by encouraging an increase in the value of the Japanese yen and the German mark in relation to the value of the dollar, which would make U.S. goods cheaper in those countries while raising the price to American consumers of German and Japanese products.

The Carter administration is the third to try to tackle the problem of lagging business investment, but so far Carter has been no more successful than Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Charles L. Schultze, the chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said last week administration surveys show business is increasing its inflation-discounted investments by only 6 per cent annually while an investment rate of 8 per cent to 9 per cent is needed to achieve the administration's economic targets.

Businessmen basically say their profits are too low to justify substantial increases in investments.

The administration takes this lament at face value and plans to include several measures in its proposed tax reform program to increase business profitability.

The measures likely will include a reduction in corporate taxes or a scaling down of the current double taxation of corporate dividends.

In fact, there has been a pronounced shift in emphasis in recent weeks from tax reform to tax reduction, especially in tax cuts for businesses, although there will be significant reductions for individuals too.

When Carter first began proposing tax reform, his emphasis was on closing tax shelters and loopholes with little said about helping business, but all that has changed now.

Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps also indicated over the weekend the administration may be preparing a new statement of its economic policies, in part to meet complaints by businessmen that they don't know what the administration is doing now.

Plan Special Olympics Event

The Greenville Special Olympics Local Basketball Tournament will be held Thursday, October 20 at the Elm Street Gym.

Clinics to be conducted will include ones in football, pillo polo, trampoline parachute, and small games following the period of competition.

The event is sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. The public is invited to attend.

Crisis Duty Is Real For New Orleans Fire-Police Chaplain

By THOMAS BROOKS JR.
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Rev. Peter Rogers is pastor at a church where the Shrine of St. Jude, the saint of the impossible cause, is located. That's fitting for Rogers, a man with movie star features and a down-to-earth job.

Rogers is police and fire chaplain, a task which regularly puts him in danger in a city known for brutal crimes and bizarre accidents.

Wearing his black fire hat with a yellow cross on the front, the light from the flames flickering in his face, the big priest looks like a movie or television series star playing the part of the gutsy and devoted priest in the line of fire.

But the fires and shootings are real, and Rogers has no stunt men to play the tough scenes for him.

"When I was sent here I had that desire to work on the crisis line," said Rogers, a member of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate order of Roman Catholic missionaries.

Photos and articles on Rogers and citations for his work hang on the walls of his wood-paneled office. A brick sits on a shelf in the corner, a souvenir from a crumbling wall which nearly killed him at the scene of a fire.

Police and fire radios squawk their commands and responses in the office. Those radios or another by his bed stay on 24 hours.

Soon after he arrived in the city in 1965, the first call of "headquarters to car 30" came over the radio. He was "car 30."

The first call involved no danger, but since then Rogers has been called many times when there was trouble. He is there to administer last rites, comfort widows and often to inform persons of the death of a relative.

Rogers, 51, is particularly adept at talking persons out of suicide. By his reckoning, he is 22 for 22 in that department.

"Someone has to try to get through that haze and hold out a real hope that there can be a better tomorrow," Rogers said.

And once a potential suicide victim is talked out of the deed, the priest said it is important that help be provided in the future.

"You don't just get them down and walk away. You have to stay with them and work with them."

Much of Rogers' job is difficult, but there is one duty that exceeds the others in difficulty — breaking the news of a policeman or a fireman's death to his wife or children.

One steamy summer night he was called to a French Quarter bar where a young man was holding police at bay with a pistol. Police had been unsuccessful in talking the man into giving up the gun.

Rogers tried. The man's face was wounded, his shirt stained with blood.

The pistol swung toward Rogers, but when the man noticed his aim was on a priest he repeated in Latin, "Introibo ad altare Dei." The words were from a mass he learned as a child and mean, "I will go to the altar of God."

The priest responded with the next sentence in the mass: "Ad Deum qui laetificat juventutem meam." It translates, "To God who gives joy to my youth."

The young man, relieved, smiled and gave up his pistol.

"When you face the gun, at that point you're beyond the point of no return," Rogers said. "There's no point in getting scared. If it's going to happen to you it's going to happen."

On Jan. 7, 1973, a sniper began shooting people from the rooftop of a downtown motel. As usual when there is trouble, Rogers was called.

The shootings occupied the front pages of newspapers for several days, and the final toll was eight dead, including the sniper, and 19 wounded.

"I guess all told I saw 20 people who were wounded or killed during that," said Rogers, who divided his time between hospitals and the sniper area, many times putting himself in danger.

A week earlier, on New Year's Eve, the priest had to inform the family of a young police cadet that he had been shot and killed at a police substation. It was learned later the cadet was the motel sniper's first victim.

The cadet was from a poor family, and when Rogers entered to bring the sad news the floor gave slightly under his weight. Christmas decorations were still up, and the priest remembers what happened next.

"All the lights, the Christmas lights, went out," Rogers said. Although many of his duties are far from the norm for most priests, Rogers still has his share of regularly priestly duties including teaching in the parish school, making hospital calls and running bingo games.

He also devotes time to lectures at the police academy and counseling police officers and their wives.

"A great deal of my time is spent in marriage counseling," he said. "It's a very arduous task."

"It takes a very extraordinary type of woman to be married to a policeman. She almost has to have a cop's heart. Almost."

The cigar-smoking Rogers has been accepted into the police fraternity. He chats with them in the bar they frequent across from headquarters, and he has a reputation for mixing a good martini of his own.

"They listen to me. They respect me."

Be Choosy In Fireplace Logs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Choosing wood for your fireplace is not just a matter of getting the right length logs.

Woods differ in scent and heat value. Softwoods such as pine, spruce and fir catch fire easily and burn rapidly with a hot flame. But they burn out quickly, which means you must watch the fire closely to replenish it before it dies.

Hardwoods such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak are better for long-lasting fires. They burn less vigorously and with a shorter flame. Oak provides the most uniform and shortest flames and is preferred for steady, glowing coals.

For wood with distinctive aromas, choose fruit and nut trees, including apple, cherry, beech, hickory and pecan.

For an easily lit, long-lasting and fragrant fire, start with a mixture of hard and soft woods, then add fruit or nut wood later.

The eel is one of the most nutritious forms of seafood. It is rich in Vitamin A, and it has a delicate flavor.

Biting Dog Frequently Friendly Pet

By CRAIG A. PALMER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government study says dogs bite a million Americans a year and, in fatal attacks studied, the killer was usually the family pet or a friendly neighborhood pooch.

Small children were the victims in most of the really savage attacks reported.

The 11 killers studied included St. Bernards, a Dachshund and a little curly-tailed African Basenji as well as the German Shepherd.

The study, prepared by veterinarian William Winkler of the federal Center for Disease Control, suggests few Americans realize the scope of the dog attack problem and too little factual data is gathered to generalize about causes and remedies.

For example, Winkler says, his survey turned up 11 cases of death from dog bites, scattered through eight states, in 1974 and 1975.

Nonetheless, he concludes, those cases "undoubtedly represent only a portion of the actual number" of such fatalities in those two years.

Winkler recommends establishment of a national reporting system on dog bites.

"Since no specific surveillance of dog bites is maintained at the national level, probably neither health officials nor practicing physicians are aware of the frequency with which bites are fatal for the victim," he wrote.

Winkler said his survey suggests that fatal attacks are seldom the work of rabid dogs or wild, marauding packs.

"None of the dogs involved in the 11 attacks was unowned," he wrote. "Even the dogs in the packs responsible for two of the fatalities had owners, and the dogs in five cases belonged to the victim's family."

Many of the case studies described dogs regarded as friendly, gentle pets and even playful companions to the victims, who, in nine of the 11 fatality cases, were children under the age of seven.

The other two were a 75-year-old woman and a 17-year-old girl attacked by a Great Dane while she sat in a chair.

Only two of the 11 killer dogs proved to be rabid.

Winkler said threatening behavior by the victim appeared to be the most important single factor in most of the fatal attacks.

One dog broke a chain to attack a five-year-old boy who threw rocks at it. Several situations involved bitches in heat, and one killer dog had the peculiarity of becoming agitated when stared at.

Some of the dogs apparently feared their "family's" territory was being invaded.

But for some of the attacks, he said, there was "no plausible explanation."

"Avoidance of unsupervised contact between dogs and physically limited persons appears to be the most basic means of preventing such tragedies," Winkler wrote.

Although German Shepherds were identified as the killers in three of the 11 cases — more than any other type — Winkler noted that is a very common breed, and many dogs called Shepherds are in fact mongrels of undetermined lineage.

He said he found the figures on the St. Bernard more disturbing.

Though a relatively uncommon breed, St. Bernards were involved in two of the 11 fatalities and three of the four other serious attacks he uncovered.

Winkler's study appears in the current issue of Public Health Reports, the official journal of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Doghouse Now A Playhouse

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — It was built as a doghouse. Now it is serving as a playhouse for humans.

The house, large enough to hold a few small children, was once the residence of Mr. Red, the Irish setter pet of Mr. and Mrs. David Pape.

It sits on stilts. Why does it sit on stilts? Mrs. Pape doesn't really know except that maybe Mr. Red was an "uppity" dog.

Anyway, her husband traded Mr. Red to his parents for another dog, Snookie. Snookie spends most of his time inside the Pape residence, so the Pape children, Ben, 3, and Paul, 1, have converted the doghouse into their own "fort." Snookie has visiting privileges.

Air Force Is Rented Out By Sri Lanka

By ALAN DAWSON
COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — For a fee, the Sri Lanka Air Force will rent you any of its transport helicopters or planes. So far as is known here in former Ceylon, it is the only national defense force of any country in the world which is for rent.

"We heard one time that some other country had a similar program," said Squadron Leader Mark Seneviratne, who with one airman runs the profitable helitours for the air force.

"We asked around all the embassies here and so far as we could find out we are the only country in the world with this kind of program."

It was a tough decision when officers and the government finally agreed in 1971 to let tourists decide where air force planes and helicopters would fly. But, said Seneviratne, it solved these problems:

— "The aircraft on training missions were droning round and round and round. This keeps the pilots flying and to more places."

— "We rent the airplanes only for foreign exchange, and we use the money to buy spare parts for the air force." This year, the tourists will pay for all the air force's spare parts and there will be money left over.

— It helps the tourist industry, which also generates foreign exchange."

Seneviratne has 10 airplanes and seven helicopters at his disposal, from a 44-passenger Conquest to a single-engine, one-passenger Cessna.

Prices per flying hour range up to $200, with the four-passenger jet helicopters manufactured in the United States costing the most per passenger.

Passengers pay only for time in the air, and pilots will wait a day and even overnight to allow tourists some sightseeing, so long as the planes are not booked elsewhere.

In a time of war or insurgency, Seneviratne said, the planes and choppers would be used only for transport and thus are not technically warplanes.

The Sri Lankan Army has neither paratroopers nor special forces which would require armed support craft.

The aging Soviet-built MIG-17 jet fighters of the air force are of course not for hire, since they are unable to carry passengers.

Most popular tourist trips, Seneviratne said, are to the wildlife sanctuary at Yala, a two-day drive to the southeast tip of the island, and to the ancient cities north of Colombo.

Virtually all tourist attractions in Sri Lanka are outside the capital, and Seneviratne said tourists don't mind spending the extra money on helicopters because they end up seeing more of his country.

The 17 aircraft last year flew 1,900 hours and carried more than 6,700 passengers. "And that will improve this year, because tourism was restricted for several months last year" because of the nonaligned conference in August.

Most passengers are tourists, he said. Businessmen occasionally hire the choppers, and shipping companies have several times asked Seneviratne to pick up injured sailors who require hospital treatment.

So far, he said, Germans hire the planes and helicopters more than any other nationality.

"But the Japanese are starting to catch on to us now, and we expect more Japanese tourists to use us," he said.

At the height of the tourist season, Seneviratne said, "all the helicopters are busy all the time."

"In fact, we often have to turn down business."

After six years, everyone from the tourism ministry to the pilots are happy with the program of renting out the air force, Seneviratne said.

Even Air Ceylon, the domestic carrier, has no complaints "because they can't even handle the traffic they have."

Ancient Burial Ground Found

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A burial ground some 3,600 years old was discovered recently near Znojmo on the Czechoslovakia-Austria border, according to the news agency CTK.

Among the objects dug up in the area were earrings, awls and other bronze-age relics, the agency said.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Any attempt to force others to your way of thinking can cause you some definite difficulties. At the same time you can accomplish a great deal by systematically working towards the aims and ambitions that impel you forward, by the use of a smile and a tactful, diplomatic stance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact good friends whose loyalty is proven and come to an even better understanding with them. Get into social affairs also that can help you get ahead. Avoid one who is a perfect bore to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to make radical changes in credit and career matters, but this would be wrong for you. Follow all rules and regulations that apply to you instead and get ahead faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put those ideas to work that will help you to advance more quickly but don't act impulsively. Plan a trip for the immediate future and get excellent results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study promises to others and carry through with them faithfully. Do not do anything that could embarrass loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to please your allies more and coordinate your efforts with theirs. An annoying situation could arise that should be ignored. Don't let it influence your thinking.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get your work planned in such a way that it is easy to handle and don't permit a disgruntled co-worker who is out of sorts to get under your skin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It's all right to seek out new interests, but do so in a thoughtful manner. Steer clear of one who acts too dramatically or you could be led into trouble. Seek out more substantial persons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Pay pressing bills and relieve anxieties. Show consistency where mate is concerned and maintain harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study reports and contracts so that you feel more secure, eliminate errors. Be active but be careful in motion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Organize assets so that you have more security in the future. Listen to advice of a successful person regarding investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate on how to have a more ideal personal life in the future. Any social life should be with congenial people.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study how far you are from cherished goals and make necessary changes to reach them faster. Be careful of strangers.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be changing his or her mind all the time and should be taught consistency of purpose and thought, particularly where the important is concerned. This can become a successful life and the education slanted along lines of investigating, modern ideas that can perk up old-time businesses.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

The bidding:

Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The Boy Scouts should be good bridge players. Their motto, "Be prepared," ought to be the watchword of everyone who plays the game.

Since North's two diamond response covered the major weakness in South's hand, South chose to show his trick-taking ability with a jump rebid. North's two aces and a potential ruffing value in clubs easily warranted a raise to game. West led the king of hearts, won by the ace. Declarer's plan was to ruff a club in dummy, so he continued with a low club. East's nine was allowed to win, and the inevitable trump shift was won by the queen. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. He returned to his hand with a heart ruff and cashed a high trump. Not only was he disappointed when East failed to follow, he was down—there was no way to avoid losing two diamonds and a trump in addition to the club already conceded.

Had trumps broken 3-2, as was most likely, declarer would have romped home in style. But a good Boy Scout would have made the contract by anticipating the bad break and being prepared for it.

Observe the difference if, after winning the king of hearts, declarer immediately ruffs a heart, then ducks a club. After ruffing a club in dummy, he ruffs another heart in his hand.

REMEMBERING — Onlookers stand near the grave of singer Bing Crosby Tuesday in Los Angeles following an early morning funeral and burial. The 74-year-old Crosby suffered a fatal heart attack while golfing in Spain last Friday. Crosby's plot is next to that of his parents and first wife, actress Dixie Lee. (AP Laserphoto)

Stock Prices Believed Driven Below Values

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

The year 1977 is likely to be remembered as one of intense tender offer and merger activity. Some of the notable examples are Fluor's acquisition of Daniel International, American Brands' merger with Franklin Life, and the tender offer by J. Ray McDermott for Babcock & Wilcox. Not only are companies acquiring other companies, they are acquiring their own stock through tender offers, in the belief that market prices do not reflect underlying values.

Book values of American corporations are at record levels. Poor stock market conditions for most of the year have driven stock prices below value for fully half the shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The Standard and Poor's 400 is selling at 1.3X book value a level reached only since 1953—at the end of the 1974 decline. It has sold below book value only times since 1910: 1920, 1932, 1942, and 1974.

Assets are carried on balance sheets at historical costs rather than replacement values so book values are understated. Larger companies are required by the SEC to report replacement costs in footnotes to the annual statements. This provides at least a clue to the degree of understatement of book values.

The fact that assets can be acquired more cheaply than they can be built from scratch has been the major stimulus for increased merger and tender offer activity. Productive capacity has increased sharply in the last 10 years, and inflation has made this capacity worth more now than is shown on balance sheets. Replacement values of the country's business assets have more than doubled in the last ten years, yet the stock market has gone nowhere.

Stock ownership represents a share of American business, a claim on the underlying assets of that business. In the last decade, stocks sold at levels higher than replacement values; today they sell at a 25% discount to replacement costs that will surely continue to increase. Investors are ignoring the fact that a share of American business can, in some cases, be acquired for less than it is worth on the books, and substantially less than replacement value.

Companies which sell at substantial discounts to book value are often the targets of mergers or tender offers at prices approaching book value. If an offer to acquire a company like this is made, substantial market appreciation can occur. Stocks do not have to be acquired on this basis alone, however. We have already noted that replacement values exceed book values. If companies are to grow and expand, current product prices will have to rise to reflect the replacement value of assets in order to justify expenditures for plant and equipment. If this occurs, replacement value will become an important determinant of stock prices.

Conservation Is Meeting Topic

"Conservation Methods in Construction" will be discussed at the meeting of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of Professional Engineers of North Carolina Thursday at 6:30 p. m. at the Beef Barn.

Mike Everette, area representative for the Southern Forest Products Association, will be the guest speaker. Members and guests are invited.

Writer Rejoins Radio Comedy

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

When last seen, Pat McCormick sat gloomily in a Hollywood bistro. He was bemoaning a great fiscal loss incurred by his investment in a diaper service in Sun City. He recently was asked how he plans to recoup his loss.

"Well," he said, "I bought into a cyclamate factory..."

But the six-foot-six, 250-pound Irishman needn't depend on that for a living. He's a top comedy writer here, with 5½ years on "Tonight," plus credit on a string of comedy specials and movies.

In the last three years, he's also acted in four movies — "The Shaggy D.A.," Robert Altman's "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," "Burt Reynolds' 'Smoky and the Bandit'" and Altman's new "A Wedding."

It now turns out that this mustachioed citizen, once honored as "The World's Tallest Leprechaun," has yet another career going — in radio comedy, a species of entertainment heretofore believed extinct.

He and a partner, Al Barzman, produce and star in a show called "Studio B." It's a series of weird 90-second interviews they've syndicated to radio stations nationally since June 1976.

McCormick, who says 190 stations air the chats, always is the interviewee. It's doubtful any of them ever will make Barbara Walters' list of people in need of interviewing.

For example, one is a hump-dryer in a camel wash. Another is the tiniest man in the world. Another is a worthy Pat calls "the guy who predicts the past."

McCormick, born in Lakewood, Ohio and educated at Harvard, says he and Barzman also will have a sequel soon, "Studio B-2." It features other players in addition to the original cast of two.

It's strange McCormick is loose in radio humor, as he's been a full-time TV writer ever since a pal, comedian Jonathan Winters, wangled him to work on "Tonight" when Jack Parr was the main event.

Asked for an explanation, he said his far-ears career began six years ago when he and Barzman, who makes commercials, teamed up to do off-the-wall comedy ads touting various products. All were for radio.

"We'd go in the back studio and wing 'em," he said, meaning they made it up sans script. "Then it occurred to us, maybe we could do that with a syndicated radio show, just go in and wing it."

A non-radio matter: What will McCormick do if that cyclamate factory he invested in fails? He pondered the prospect a minute.

"Well," he confidently declared, "I'll probably open a suit shop for tall and portly men in Tokyo..."

Best Known North Carolina Poet Died 70 Years Ago, 35 Years Old

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator
North Carolina Collection
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — Monday, Oct. 17, marked the 70th anniversary of the death of John Charles McNeill, once North Carolina's best known poet.

He was only 33 when he died, but already he had taught school, practiced law, served in the legislature, written a book, and accepted from the hands of President Theodore Roosevelt the first Patterson Memorial Cup for outstanding literary achievement.

The son of Duncan and Euphemia Livingston McNeill, the poet was born near Riverton in what is now Scotland County on July 26, 1874. This was a community of Scots, and no one was more Scotch than the McNeills.

Charles grew up on the farm and after attending Spring Hill School and Whiteville Academy he taught school for a while in Georgia.

In 1894, he entered Wake Forest College where he came under the tutelage of the noted English teacher, Benjamin Sladd.

Many years later, Sladd wrote, "I recall how I opened my eyes in wonder over his first composition. There was that indescribable something which we call style — real, genuine style; the writing of one who handles his pen as to the manner born."

At Wake Forest, McNeill took enough law courses to enable him to obtain a license to practice. He chose, though, to teach, and he spent a year in the English department at Mercer University.

Returning to North Carolina, he opened law practice, first in Lumberton and then in Laurinburg. Even as a lawyer, however, his heart was in writing, and Josiah W. Bailey remembered visiting him in his office where they talked about poetry, not law.

In 1903, McNeill represented Scotland County in the legislature. But lawmaking had little appeal to the young man, so when editor J. P. Caldwell of the Charlotte Observer in 1904 offered him a position on that paper with freedom to write whatever he chose, McNeill accepted.

Then began the most productive years of his short life. His verse as well as his prose became familiar in the Observer. Some of his poems were published also in national journals such as Century magazine.

It was in 1905 that the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association honored McNeill with the first Patterson Memorial Cup. The presentation in Raleigh by Teddy Roosevelt was undoubtedly a high point in the life of the recipient.

Bethel Revival Begins Sunday

BETHEL — Bethel Pentecostal Holiness Church will be in revival beginning Sunday and continuing through Friday.

The Rev. H. C. Potter, a former pastor of the church, will be guest evangelist. Services will begin each night at 7:30. The public is invited.

The following year, McNeill's collection of poems was published in a book titled "Songs Merry and Sad."

He died at the home of his father in 1907, and there soon appeared a second collection of verses in an illustrated volume titled "Lyrics from the Cotton Land."

Most of McNeill's poems were in dialect, either Scot or Negro, and they are no longer fashionable. However, early in the century, they were recited across the South, and the author was considered North Carolina's poet laureate.

Many of the poems reflected the author's childhood experiences. Titles include "Croatian Philosophy," "In Robeson County," "On the Cape Fear," "Virginia Dare," and "Patched Breeches."

Occasionally McNeill wrote verse out of character. One poem, published in the Charlotte Observer, began:

"Sex, they say, is an accident. Not fixed in nature's plan. Woe's me, how should my days be spent"

Had Bess been born a man! Richard Walser, professor emeritus of English at North Carolina State University, recently collected into a volume titled "Possums and Permissims" several dozen poems not included in McNeill's earlier books.

John Charles McNeill's birthplace, Ellerslie, has been moved to and restored on the grounds of the Richmond Temperance and Literary Society near Wagram. His grave is located in the adjoining cemetery.

Say No Loss Due Actions

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — Attorneys for former Northwestern Bank board chairman Edwin Duncan Jr. tried Tuesday to show that Duncan's handling of his personal finances caused no loss to bank stockholders.

Duncan is on trial in federal court on charges of misapplying bank funds by having his personal checks held in the bank's bookkeeping department until he arranged to have them taken care of.

Earlier testimony showed the checks were sometimes held up to six months and if they had been charged against Duncan's account when they came in, overdrafts of up to $26,000 would have resulted.

An accountant testified Tuesday that in other areas of Duncan's personal finances, the bank benefited.

Charlotte accountant Bill Glenn testified that if Duncan had earned interest on various checks from Northwestern that he held without cashing, the bank would owe him money, even if it had charged him interest on the checks the bookkeepers held for Duncan.

Government attorneys suggested under cross examination that the bases of Glenn's analysis was fantasy and he had talked of interest rates on checking accounts simply to confuse the jury. Glenn said that wasn't his intention.

Richard Nixon Didn't Turn To Clergyman Friend

DR. NORMAN VINCENT PEALE, 79, marked this month the 25th anniversary of publishing his best-seller "Power of Positive Thinking". (UPI Photo)

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — During his most troubled times as president, Richard Milhous Nixon never turned to his one minister of many years — Dr. Norman Vincent Peale.

It was as if the Watergate scandal and Nixon's ultimate resignation as president were one man's business, and not one for seeking religious counsel or comfort.

Dr. Peale recalled in an interview that, "Not once during Watergate did Mr. Nixon consult me. None of the family did. Nixon isn't the type who consults with anybody ... he keeps his own counsel."

"He has enormous strength ... when he faces adversity," said the minister who has been a friend of the Nixon family for many years.

To my knowledge, this is the first time Peale has commented at length on the Nixon-Watergate affair. We talked in his offices in an apartment building on Fifth Avenue across from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"I knew his mother ... most of the whole family," said the minister. It was Peale who performed the ceremony when Nixon's younger daughter, Julie, married David Eisenhower at Marble Collegiate Church in 1968.

Dr. Peale recalled that it was in Nixon's days in the Navy in World War II and he was based at 90 Church Street (New York Navy headquarters), when "he and Pat started coming to our church. He'd come up after the sermon and shake hands ..."

"He became a real church goer when he was in New York practicing law."

This was during Nixon's period out of politics after he lost the California governor's race in 1962.

The clergyman said he had had one "friendly" note from Nixon since he moved to San Clemente, Calif. "And about a year ago I had lunch out there. I hear from Julie occasionally."

He added that the Nixons still contribute to Marble Collegiate.

I asked the clergyman what went wrong, how could Watergate have happened? He answered:

"I don't believe it would be fitting for me to comment on what any member of my church does ..."

"I feel a sense of compassion, of regret ... it's too bad. But I'm not one to throw stones and I never criticize from the pulpit."

"A church is a collection of sinners, all of whom are there because they don't want to be sinners. It is not a minister's role to exhortate. Oh yes, you take stands, certainly. But on principles and on your convictions, not on the individual."

"You hate sin but you love the sinner."

We switched to talking about President Carter. "I believe he is a sincere man," said Peale. "I remember when Mr. Carter was governor of Georgia and I was a speaker in Macon at the Church of the Exceptional (for handicapped)."

"We were on the platform and part of the program called for the handicapped youth to light the candles. The child struggled forward ... so painfully toward the tapers ..."

"I heard the governor saying quietly to himself, 'Dear God, help that boy light that candle ...!'"

"I thought then, this is a man of heart and faith."

October is a special month for Dr. Peale, now 79, but as busy as in younger days with a schedule of ministering, lecturing, writing and consulting. The schedule involving both domestic and overseas travel would wear most of us to a frazzle.

On Oct. 2, he marked his 45th year as senior minister at Marble Collegiate, which is part of the Collegiate Church Corp. of New York, the oldest religious organization in the United States.

Most of the Peale clan, headed by his wife of 47 years (she's the former Ruth Stafford), plus his son, two daughters and eight grandchildren gathered for that anniversary sermon titled, "Formula for Health and Happiness."

Oct. 13 marked the publication 25 years ago of his "Power of Positive Thinking," an all-time best seller at around eight million copies in hardcover and paperback.

Peale is at work on his 27th book — "It will have to do with how to use the mind to maintain good physical, mental and spiritual health," he said.

The Peales would disapprove of the term, but they do preside over a religious empire.

Through books (Mrs. Peale writes too), radio and television programs, his sermons which are taped for broadcast, speeches, published sermons, booklets, and a newspaper column, the Peales reach millions in churches, homes, hospitals, prisons, even aboard naval vessels including a nuclear submarine.

Marble Collegiate runs an outreach program for the deprived and underprivileged, a telephone center in an office building adjoining the church provides crisis intervention through its help line service, practical assistance to the deaf through another center, companionship for the housebound and lonely through the Cheer-Ring volunteers, and spiritual solace through Prayer Line, a 24-hour partnership provided by trained volunteers.

In Pawling, N.Y., 70 miles north of Marble Church, is the Foundation for Christian Living, established by Mrs. Peale in 1940 to distribute her husband's sermons and writings around the globe. It has a mailing list of 600,000 in 120 countries.

Nearby in Carmel, N.Y., is world headquarters of Guideposts Associates, which publishes "Guideposts" with a circulation of nearly 3.5 million.

"The Peales' various organizations are established as non-profit, and a spokesman said the two voluntarily pay the equivalent of taxes they would owe the towns in which they operate, were they not tax-exempt. They occupy a manse in a church-owned cooperative apartment in New York and their farm home is on Quaker Hill in Pawling.

Income is from his salary at the church, royalties from his books, and speaking engagements, the spokesman said.

"I've never even considered retirement," said the minister.

"I enjoy working ... when I get in the groove I handle six or seven jobs. I'm a vigorous speaker ... I tear into 'em ..."

"I walk two miles a day no matter where I am and when I finish a lecture, I don't sit around and gab. I go right on up to my room and to bed."

"I credit God with my good health. The Bible says they that wait upon the Lord shall have strength ..."

I asked Dr. Peale, a native of Bowersville, Ohio, and the son of a clergyman, what message he would give to the American public today if he had all 216 million of us for an audience.

"I would tell you to re-examine the great spiritual heritage out of which this nation came and to preserve morality, decency and courtesy," said Peale.

"When manners decline, morals decline and the other way around."

Suzuki Performers In Concert Here Oct. 24

ECU News Bureau
Japan works the miracle of miniaturization with frequency and ease, and Greenville area audiences will have an opportunity to see one of Japan's most amazing miniature miracles Oct. 24.

The Shinichi Suzuki Talent Education Tour, featuring ten child violinists taught by his revolutionary music teaching methods, will stop in Greenville for a concert in ECU's Mendenhall Student Center at 8 p.m.

Suzuki's small proteges are not child prodigies, he says, but ordinary children who have been trained by his Talent Education Method, patterned after the way children learn language and other everyday skills.

Some of Suzuki's pupils are as young as two years old, and are able to play adult pieces at the age of four. The oldest child in the Talent Education Tour is a mature 12!

There are now more than 200,000 Suzuki pupils in Japan, Great Britain and the U. S., including the children enrolled in Greenville's Suzuki class.)

During their visit here, the Suzuki performers will be featured at a workshop program open to children and adults, at 3 p.m. Oct. 24 in the Mendenhall Student Center Theatre.

Tickets for the concert, the workshop or both are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office. Special group rates are available for persons in groups of 20 or more who attend both the workshop and the concert.

California Has Two Extremes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California is a state of extremes.

Within it, according to Rand McNally's "Mobil Travel Guide Series," are the lowest and highest points in the contiguous United States — Death Valley (282 feet below sea level) and Mount Whitney (14,495 feet high).

Refugee Cambodians Undergoing Great Hardships

EDITOR'S NOTE — Horst Faas, the Associated Press photographer and writer who won a Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the Vietnam War, recently returned to the country with a German tourist group.

An AP News Special
By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer
HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Some 60,000 Cambodians have been granted asylum in Vietnam in the past year and are living in desperate conditions on the outskirts of Saigon and in the provinces west of the former South Vietnamese capital, diplomatic sources in Hanoi say.

At least 16,000 of these refugees are trying to leave Vietnam and have asked the Hanoi office of the U.N. High Commissioner For Refugees for help.

turers or employees in shops, business houses and manufacturing concerns.

Most are said to be from towns from which the entire population was moved forcibly to the countryside after the Communist takeover in 1975.

"The Vietnamese government has been looking after the Cambodian refugees despite its own food shortages and economic difficulties," one diplomat said. "The Cambodians are receiving rice rations that just keep them alive and are under the ration of 14 kilos (30.8 pounds) every Vietnamese gets per month."

The source also said the Cambodians are allowed to work as small businessmen and vendors.

"That means they can peddle their last belongings to stay alive," he said.

A diplomat from a nonaligned country who is stationed in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, reported during a visit to Hanoi that he and his colleagues know almost nothing about what is going on in the country.

"We have to live in a hotel in downtown Phnom Penh which we can never leave," he said. "The food is delivered to us

Singing Group In Concert Here

"The Bridge," a contemporary Christian singing group from Greensboro, will perform at Wright Auditorium Friday at 8 p.m.

The group has recorded several Christian albums and has toured much of the United States. Admission to the concert is free, but a love offering will be taken. Sponsor of the concert is the East Carolina University Chapter of the Full Gospel Student Fellowship.

from the outside. We cannot even go out on the pavement outside the hotel."

Western observers in Hanoi say they have practically no information about the situation along the Cambodian-Vietnamese frontier. Last August, some Vietnamese newspapers reported clashes along the border. But in a visit with a German tourist group to a province about 20 miles from the Cambodian frontier, this reporter could see no sign of military activity or preparedness.

Cambodia and Vietnam have full diplomatic relations. But diplomats in Vietnam say they believe the Vietnamese government has not returned any refugees to Cambodia.

"In this respect the Vietnamese have acted with more respect for basic human rights than some of the other Southeast Asian nations," one Western diplomat said.

He was referring to governments that have refused to admit refugees from the Indochinese countries.

Of the 16,000 Cambodian refugees who have asked the U.N. commissioner for help, 3,000 have received entry visas for France. Seventy have received West German visas, and U.N. officials believe West Germany may take 150 more. Belgium also will take 150.

"We have stacks of requests in our desks," said an official of the West German embassy in Hanoi.

Skiers Offered A Guarantee

DENVER (AP) — Skiers: If Nature forsakes you, United Airlines says it won't.

United president Bob McBride has said if skiers arrive in the Denver area and find less than half of the ski lifts operating because of poor skiing conditions, the airline will fly them home — free.

Area Men Are Named To Bonds Committee

Two area men have been named to a 120-member North Carolina "Bonds for Progress" Committee by Gov. Jim Hunt. They are Thomas Taft of Greenville and J. E. Leathers of Williamston.

The Governor told the Committee in a recent meeting that "These two bond issues (the $300 million Highway Improvements and the $230 million Clean Water) will really mean more and better jobs for the people of our State." He noted that continued economic development depends heavily on improving the State's transportation system and the ability of city and county water purifications and waste water treatment systems to keep pace with the demands for clean water. He said neither bond issue will increase state taxes or the present gas tax.

The groups, contact local leaders and help raise funds for mass media information efforts.

Co-chairmen of the committee are Beth Finch, Mayor of Fayetteville, and Dr. Glen Deal, president of the N. C. Association of County Commissioners, from Taylorsville.

MINERAL MAN

NEW YORK (AP) — A showing of mineral sculptures by George Stangl will be on display at the Antiques & Treasures Gallery in New York through Nov. 5.

Stangl uses minerals such as jasper, jade, malachite, coral and agate for his sculptures.

An estimated four and a half million cubic miles of salt are contained in the world's oceans.

Economist Says Coffee-Producers Control Prices

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

Have you, the price-conscious consumer, boycotted coffee at the supermarket to help bring prices down?

If so, your sacrifice may have been made in vain, says an East Carolina University economist; the coffee supply is carefully controlled by producing countries.

Dr. Oscar K. Moore, professor of economics at ECU and noted expert on world trends in coffee production and pricing, has completed a detailed study of the coffee market, and contends that prices don't depend upon consumption, production, government control or any other single factor.

"World exportable coffee production is highly variable from year to year, mostly because the coffee production rate of Brazil, the largest supplier, fluctuates sharply," he said.

"Brazil's variable production rates are due to heavy crops followed by light and to periodic droughts and frosts which harm the coffee trees and make predicting the Brazilian crop difficult."

Brazil leads the world as a producer of coffee, though other Central and South American and African nations—Colombia, Mexico, El Salvador, Ecuador, Uganda, Kenya, Rwanda and the Malagasy Republic—are increasing their production. A short year for Brazilian coffee still means a short year for the world supply.

"The recent record-high coffee prices have followed the most severe Brazilian freeze of modern times, that of July, 1975," said Moore. "As a consequence of that freeze, 230 million coffee trees were uprooted and removed."

The Brazilian government's policy of protectiveness toward its coffee crop resulted in a significant recovery program for coffee growers, who received government subsidies for each new coffee seedling they planted.

"During the 1976-77 crop year, the Brazilian Coffee Institute financed the planting of 375 million new trees," said Dr. Moore. "This program should bring about an increase in numbers of Brazilian coffee trees until they total 3.1 billion by the end of the 1977-78 crop year."

"If this goal is reached, Brazil would have a net gain of some 300 million trees since the frost-damage of 1975, and many of the new trees are of the higher-yielding Caterra and Mundo Nova types."

Brazil does not limit its intervention to fostering increased crop yields, however.

"For more than 70 years the Brazilian government has controlled the flow of coffee to ports, a policy now followed by other coffee-producing nations.

"What this means is that if the world coffee price is too low, the coffee nations set quotas to limit the supply to reach port. Supplies of coffee can be held for years in warehouses at cool, dry, high-altitude locations."

"So there is no such thing as 'free market' coffee pricing."

Moore explained that the government of Brazil has gone so far in its regulation of coffee prices as to purchase vast quantities of coffee wholesale from several consuming countries, hold this supply of coffee until a suitable price increase occurs and then sell "at a substantial profit."

The United States is the world's largest consumer of coffee; about half the world's exportable coffee is consumed in this country. The brew in its various forms—perked and dripped, freeze-dried and instant—has become our national beverage.

But coffee consumption here has gradually decreased in recent years, with a sharp decline during the past several months. In 1960, the average American consumed almost 23 pounds of coffee. This year, that per capita figure has dropped to nearly half, 11.80 pounds, according to a U. S. Dept. of Agriculture estimate. However, coffee prices continued to trend upward, despite a lessening of demand, until they turned downward at wholesale some six months ago. Moore believes that any further drop in consumption would have little effect upon wholesale or retail market prices, so regulated is the supply.

Moore seems optimistic that they will ease downward, unless Brazil suffers another frost-induced catastrophic production year.

"However, there seems to be little relation between production and prices because of the tight regulation exercised over coffee supplies by the major producing countries," he said.

"Prices are not free to adjust appropriately to supply—or to demand."

Therefore anyone who enjoys a good cup of coffee might as well pay the price and make adjustments elsewhere in the grocery budget, or follow the example of Dr. Moore, who dislikes the taste of coffee—and switch to tea!

(Oscar Moore reported on his coffee market research at the Oct. 15 meeting of the Atlantic Economic Society in Washington, D.C.)

Argentina Is Squeezed By Housing Shortage

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI)—One paragraph squeezed into the want ads of the morning newspaper caught my eye like a speck of gold in a miner's pan.

Eureka! An unfurnished two-bedroom apartment with a telephone for only 100,000 pesos, roughly $230, a month, to be seen from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

At precisely 10 o'clock I stepped out of the elevator in front of the seventh floor apartment.

"Buenos dias," hissed the six women standing in line by the door. We glared at each other until the agent from the rental company opened the door.

The crowd surged in. After a second glance at the bare rooms, one woman said, "I'll take it."

"Badly in need of painting," one commented as the losers filed out. "Did you see the humidity marks in the closet?" asked another.
