Possibility Of Early Strategic Arms Agreement

TRIUMPH OF GOOD OVER EVIL — Effigies of demons, 110-feet tall and filled with fireworks, tower over crowds at New Delhi, India, celebrating the Hindu religious holiday of Dussehra recently.

The effigies were later burned, their destruction symbolizing the triumph of good over evil. (AP Laserphoto)

By LAWRENCE McQUILLAN DENVER (UPI) — President Carter, hours after a surprise announcement that a U.S.-Soviet strategic arms agreement may be imminent, toured Strategic Air Command headquarters Saturday and said he believes America has the strength on hand to defend itself.

Carter's schedule on a three-day tour of western states emphasized domestic issues, but he overshadowed those issues Friday night in Des Moines by announcing that a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviets may be concluded "within a few weeks."

He flew from Iowa to Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., for a tour of SAC's underground headquarters, then flew to Denver to discuss agricultural water policy and to drum up support for the Panama Canal treaties.

Later Saturday he was attending a $1,000-a-plate Democratic fund raising dinner in Los Angeles.

During his three hours in the giant concrete bomb shelter that is SAC headquarters, Carter talked on the "red telephone" with Air Force personnel around the world.

Asked afterwards whether he was reconsidering his decision to scrap the B1 bomber and rely instead on SAC's aging B52 force and new cruise missiles, Carter said:

"I think we have an adequate force capability and that we'll have a good improvement with the cruise missile.

"I've really been reassured about our capabilities and training programs around the world. I was able to talk with all our training forces throughout the world and I was favorably impressed."

During his Des Moines speech, which primarily addressed farm issues; Carter said, "I predict that within a few weeks we will have a strategic arms limitation agreement (with the Soviets) that will be the pride of the country. And from that we will proceed to the goal of reducing the number of nuclear weapons in the world to zero."

His surprise announcement was matched in Moscow by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, who said in a speech that SALT II negotiations have suddenly undergone "a definite change for the better."

Congressional sources and State Department officials have said they expect any new agreement with the Soviets to draw some stiff opposition from U.S. military leaders, who fear U.S. negotiators may have offered too much by way of compromise.

Before flying to Denver, Carter entered the cockpit of a giant B52 bomber — the backbone of America's flying defense.

He toured the base with the new SAC commander, Gen. Richard Ellis, a strong advocate of the B1 bomber the Air Force had wanted as a replacement for the B52s.

Carter killed the B1 production program in June, saying the pilotless jet cruise missiles and modernized B52s would do the necessary defense job.

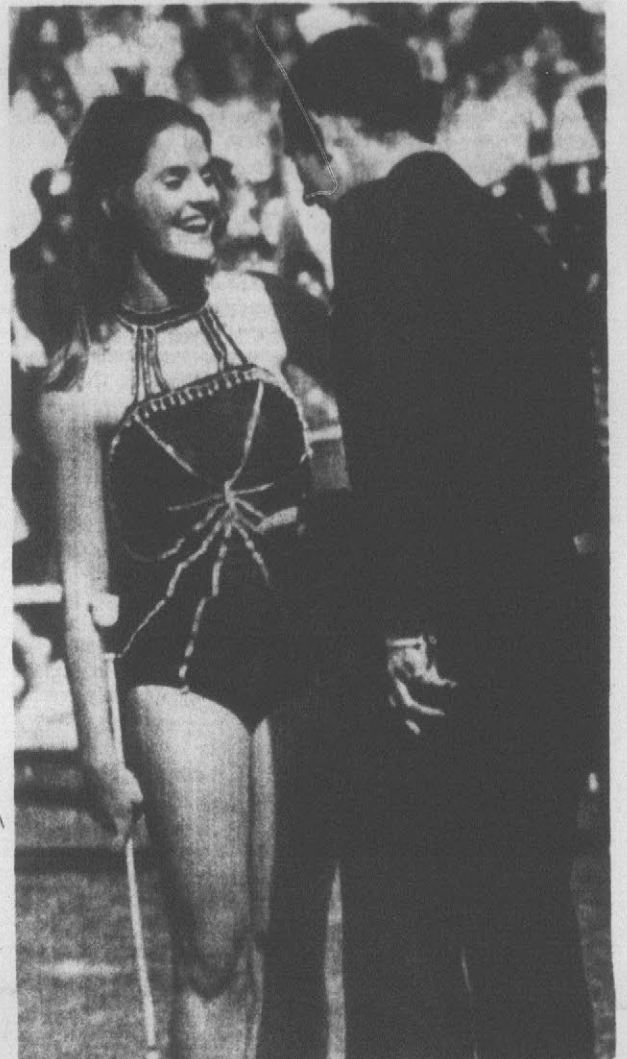

Ellis said Carter's B1 decision was "a great shock to me personally," but he said he accepted the decision.

In the telephone hookup to the personnel who are the country's first line of defense, Carter said, "A closeness with which we communicate in preparing for an emergency will prevent, as nothing else possibly can, the possible destruction of our nation.

"I have a great feeling of assurance that you will perform your jobs well ... to prevent any possible successful attack on our country that is not met instantly and competently and adequately from our own forces.

"The freedom of human beings throughout the world depends on the qualities that you exhibit."

Gas Chamber Readied

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina gas chamber in Raleigh's Central Prison will be readied for a Jan. 20 execution, after a 35-year-old Pembroke man was sentenced to die Friday.

James Calvin Jones became the first person convicted under the state's new capital punishment law, which was passed by the 1977 General Assembly, after the old law was declared unconstitutional.

The last execution in the state occurred Oct. 27, 1961, when Theodore Boykin, a 31-year-old drifter, was executed for the rape and murder of a Duplin County woman.

Jones, a Lumbee Indian, was charged with first degree murder in the shooting death of Jimmy Locklear, 68, who was found July 3 lying beside a road in front of his house. The defendant was out of the Robeson County prison unit on a six-hour pass when the death occurred.

Blue Lorries Fate Undecided

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One federal agency wants to save 10 rare birds allegedly smuggled into the United States, but another wants the evidence killed and frozen. While the agencies haggle, the Tahiti blue lorries chirp merrily in a guarded cage. The rare birds are valued by collectors at $5,000 each. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says they were smuggled into the country and by law must be killed or returned to their South Pacific home to prevent any chances of spreading disease.

Took Out-of-Town Trips

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A man who was shot in a house Joan Little reportedly plans to buy, has said he and Miss Little took an out-of-town trip on two days she was not at her work release job.

Stephen Pickins said Friday he took Miss Little to his aunt's house in Southern Pines on Sept. 13 and 14. Miss Little, who escaped last week from the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women, had been suspended from her work release job as a dentist's assistant after failing to show up for work those two days.

In a further complication, the man charged with shooting Pickins reportedly is engaged to Miss Little.

Raleigh police have charged Vernell Nelson Muhammad, 23, with assault with intent to kill in the shooting. Police said Friday they have a house under surveillance in an effort to find Muhammad, who is free on $1,000 bond.

Says Treaty Will Limit U.S.

ATLANTA (AP) — House minority leader John Rhodes called the Panama Canal treaty a "great step backward" today and said the real danger is "not that we will lose control of the canal, but that we will be stuck with it."

Rhodes said Section 12 of the treaty gives Panama veto power over U.S. negotiations with any other western hemisphere nation for construction of another canal.

He said that clause would "limit us to use of an aging canal for the foreseeable future, even if we found a pressing need for a bigger, wider canal. And I think we might."

Concerned Over Reactions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Justice Minister James T. Kruger said in an interview with ABC television he is concerned about foreign reaction to South Africa's new suppression of black organizations, but that "I have no doubt I have done the right thing." The crackdown has touched off a wave of protest here and abroad. Police arrested 150 blacks and Indians on Friday, and a black school was burned. The American ambassador to South Africa, William Bowdler, has been recalled to Washington for consultations on the situation here.

Ratifies Contract

TARBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Workers voted on ballots that were mailed out a week ago, but the results were not overwhelmingly ratified a new two-year contract with Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co., the firm announced Saturday.

The new contract, which passed by a 7-1 margin, includes an 8.75 per cent wage hike retroactive to Oct. 1 and another 7 per cent hike to take effect next Oct. 1. The contract also provides increased hospitalization, pension and vacation benefits for employees.

About 3,050 of Carolina Telephone & Telegraph employees, including installers and repairmen, are represented by the union. The new contract was approved 1,438 to 204.

Successful Launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Two international Explorer satellites designed to improve long-range weather forecasting were successfully launched into orbit Saturday by a Delta rocket, a variation of the same model rocket which exploded during another satellite launch Sept. 13.

The launch came exactly on time at 9:53 a.m. EDT, and the two satellites went into identical elliptical orbits around the earth 57 1/2 minutes after lift-off.

"There were absolutely no problems, and we launched within seven-hundredths of a second," said George Page, director of Expendable Launch Vehicles for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Everyone agreed it's much easier to do it this way. It was euphoric and it was a great feeling," he said. "For a good launch, a helluva lot of parts have to go right, and it's a small miracle each time."

The two International Sun Earth Explorer satellites, one made for NASA and the other for the European Space Agency, will conduct simultaneous tests in and out of the Earth's magnetosphere, providing detailed information on how solar wind affects the boundaries between earth and space.

Scientists hope the $57 million program will help in long-range weather forecasting and in predicting climate changes.

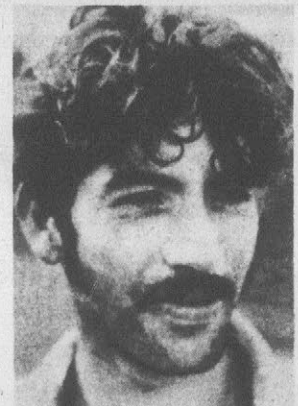

David Grimes, Delta project manager, said the launch was so successful that a planned Nov. 15 Delta launch of a European meteorological satellite, Meteosat, will proceed on schedule.

The Delta launched Saturday carried solid fuel Castor 2 motors which were jettisoned when they burned out shortly after the launch.

"The Delta performed flawlessly and the Castor 2 solid propellant rockets were properly exonerated," Grimes said.

The motors were smaller and less powerful than the Castor 4 motors which caused the Sept. 13 explosion of a Delta rocket carrying an ESA Orbital Test Satellite. The explosion set back the European communications program more than a year and cost $42 million.

Investigators in the ongoing probe of the abortive launch said the explosion was caused by either a structural defect in the rocket casing or by abnormal burning of the propellant.

Fights IRS

MADISON, N.C. (UPI) — Floyd Robertson's studies of tax law and the Constitution at the Wake Forest University library could cost him up to $40,000, but the money has nothing to do with tuition.

The $40,000, coupled with a maximum of four years in jail, is the penalty Robertson might have to pay if his studies fail to provide the ammunition he needs to successfully fight the Internal Revenue Service.

Robertson, a 25-year-old home contractor, contends the income tax violates the Fourth Amendment's right-to-privacy provision and the Fifth Amendment's guarantee against a person incriminating himself.

Because of that, he has refused to supply information on his 1976 finances. Last year, he sent the IRS a 1040 form which noted the government had taken $4,109 of his money.

He is also filing amendments to his tax returns for 1973, 1974 and 1975 asking that the money he paid be returned.

"I don't feel like I have broken any law," said Robertson, who has been studying tax law and the Constitution for nine months.

"The American people were never given their rights. They had to fight for 'em. They'll be taken away again if we don't fight for 'em," he said.

Robertson said he was inspired to study tax law by Martin A. Larson's "Tax Rebellion USA," which he read in February. He said he was also moved by Marvin L. Cooley's "Patriot's Fighting Packet."

Cooley, an Arizona resident who has 11 dependents, spent two years in jail for failure to file taxes for 1968-70 on grounds that the information might incriminate him.

While Robertson is battling the income tax on constitutional grounds, he also claims the tax has caused the national debt to rise, which in turn has ruined the nation's fiscal system. Not only should the income tax be abolished, he said, but welfare should go out with it.

However, Robertson will allow the government to take care of things if his fight against the IRS is unsuccessful.

"I have two children and another on the way," he said. "If I end up in jail, the government will have to keep 'em up."

Prince Touring South

By GLENN R. CARPENTER, JR. And FRED McNEESE

ATHENS, GA. (UPI) — Prince Charles visited historic Charleston, S.C. Saturday, then shuttled to Athens, Ga. to see the second half of the Georgia-Kentucky football game.

The prince received a rousing welcome from the more than 60,000 persons on hand for the game, chatted with the majorettes and was introduced to the captains of both teams. He was also warmly received in Charleston, a city named for Great Britain's last King Charles.

The Prince of Wales walked about two blocks down a narrow street in Charleston, with about 2,000 persons lining his route. Many broke through police lines to get a better look at him.

"What you say, Charlie, what you say Charlie baby," yelled one man to get the prince's attention.

He succeeded and Prince Charles chatted with the man for a few seconds before again strolling down the street.

"Momma, he shook it, he shook my hand," one teen-ager screamed as the prince walked away from her.

Prince Charles stopped in front of another girl and asked her age. She replied she was ten years old.

"How are you doing on exams?" Prince Charles said.

"Pretty good," the girl replied.

"Well, study hard, it is very important," the prince said.

About 7,000 persons gathered at The Citadel parade grounds under clear skies and temperatures in the high 70s to watch Prince Charles review the gray-and-white dressed cadets.

Standing on the reviewing stand with Gov. James B. Edwards and Citadel president

Gen. George Seignous, Prince Charles received a 21-cannon salute, the roar of the cannons echoing off the fortress-like buildings of The Citadel and smoke billowing over the parade ground. The three men then reviewed the 2,000-member cadet corps from an open vehicle while The Citadel Bagpipers played.

Prince Charles received an honorary doctor of laws degree and a Citadel saber inscribed "HRH The Prince of Wales, The Citadel 22 October 1977."

Prince Charles, who arrived in Charleston wearing a charcoal gray business suit, but changed to his Navy uniform to review the troops, noted that he had also received an honorary doctor of laws degree in Cleveland earlier this week.

"I'm beginning to wonder if this isn't a subtle way of indicating there is a severe shortage of lawyers in the U.S.," the prince said.

TEAR GASSED — Kent State University Police move against a crowd of anti-gym protesters on the Kent State Campus Saturday. The gym protest, led by the Revolutionary Student Brigade, a student organization that was banned from the campus by KSU president Brage Golding. After being moved to several sites on the campus by police, the police then used tear gas to break up the rally. About 300 protesters were involved. (AP Laserphoto)

Willing To Discuss Offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for the Wampanoag Indians says they are willing to discuss a federal government offer of $4 million to settle a claim on residential land in Mashpee, Mass., but he says the amount is low.

Attorney Tom Tureen told the Senate Indian Affairs Committee on Friday that he would consider any conditions at all to settle the dispute, but the idea of accepting $4 million for claims on land valued at more than $100 million was "strange."

Wants Korea's Cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three days of public hearings, investigators looking into the South Korean influence buying scandal say they want the House to demand Korea's cooperation in finding out who got the money. Deputy counsel Peter White closed the House ethics committee hearings Friday saying there has been adequate testimony to show that South Korea was trying to buy off members of Congress. He suggested that the committee draft a House resolution condemning South Korea for its refusal to cooperate with U.S. investigators. Several committee members said they would support such a resolution.

Sketchy Information On Crash

McCOMB, Miss. (AP) — Investigators say they have "sketchy information" on what happened before the crash of a chartered plane in which six persons, including three members of the Lynyrd Skynyrd rock band, were killed.

Twenty persons were injured when the propeller-driven Convair 440 aircraft crashed Thursday about 50 miles before the end of its trip from Greenville, S.C., to Baton Rouge, La.

Rudolf Kapustin, head of the National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the crash, said recordings of the last words between pilot Walter McCreary and an airplane tracking station in Houston show "there was talk about fuel."

To Consider Eskimo Exception

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is considering whether to appeal an order by a federal judge that clears the way for Alaskan Eskimos to continue hunting bowhead whales despite an international agreement against such hunting.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica on Friday ordered Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to register a formal objection which would keep the United States out of an international whaling agreement that bans the hunting of the bowhead species.

Last June, the International Whaling Commission voted 16-0 to stop the killing of bowhead whales, of which there are an estimated 600 to 2,000 in the world. But the United States abstained from the vote and has until Oct. 24 to file an objection.

Four Suspects Identified

MULHOUSE, France (AP) — Four West Germans wanted in the killing of Hanns-Martin Schleyer have been identified by witnesses who saw them in the Mulhouse area before the murder, police reported Saturday.

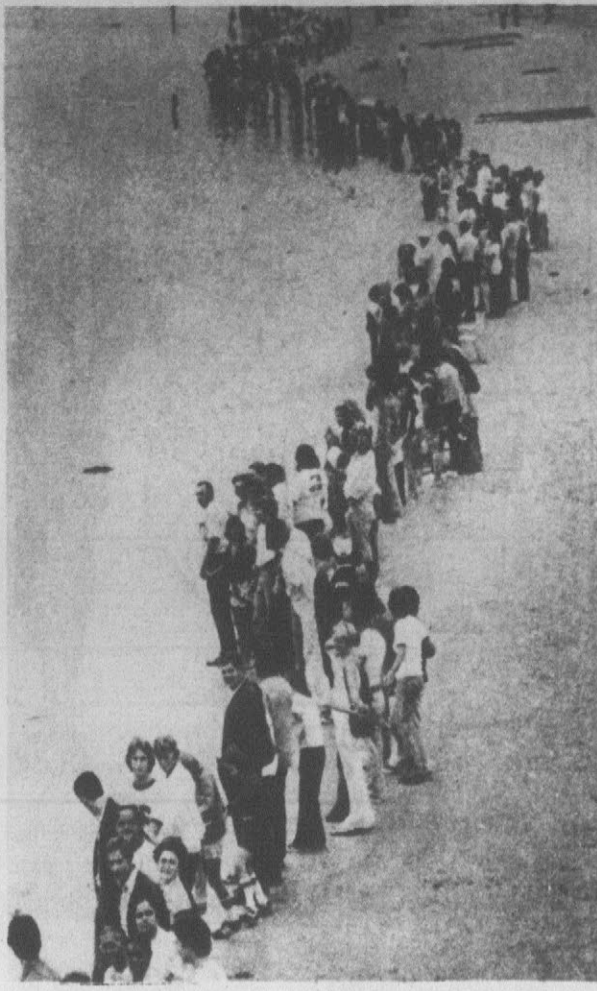

Two — Willy Peter Stoll and Christian Klar — were identified by a service station attendant who said he saw them in a green Audi on Tuesday morning in this eastern French city about 10 miles from the West German border, officers said.

Wants Equal Time

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Citing the Federal Communications Commission's Fairness Doctrine, John Ed Davenport Friday called on North Carolina television and radio stations to give succession opponents air time.

Davenport, chairman of Carolinians Opposed to Succession, said his side in the controversy needs time to answer pro-succession forces.

North Carolinians will vote Nov. 8 on whether to allow the governor and lieutenant governor to seek a second, consecutive term in office.

LONG, LONG, TRAIL — A human chain sponsors said numbered 75,000 people stretched unbroken for 30 miles in light rain for Brevard County, Florida's "Reach on the Beach." The sponsoring group, calling themselves "M-3" and led by author George Plimpton said they believed it was the first attempt to form a human chain that long and hope it will make the Guinness Book of Records. ## 24 Servicemen Die In Copter Crash

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — Search crews Saturday recovered the bodies of six more U.S. servicemen killed in the crash of a Marine corps helicopter in rugged jungled mountains in the central Philippines, bringing the death toll to 24.

Another 13 men were injured when the CH53 Sikorsky "Sea Stallion" crashed and burned in a ravine Friday during a U.S. 7th Fleet amphibious landing exercise Friday.

A U.S. Navy spokesman said one soldier suffered injuries during the rescue operations on Mindoro island, about 100 miles south of Manila.

(A U.S. Navy HMH-362 helicopter crashed in the Mediterranean sea off Sicily Saturday because of rotor trouble but all eight crewmen were rescued by the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal.)

The spokesman at the Subic Bay naval base north of Manila said all 37 men aboard the Marine helicopter were accounted for following an all-night search of the area described as "mostly jungle and very mountainous."

Earlier reports had listed 39 servicemen, including four crew members, aboard the helicopter.

Most of the victims were Marines but the spokesman said U.S. Navy and Air Force personnel also may have been aboard the chopper. The names of the dead and injured were being withheld pending notification of their families.

Guerrilla Violence Continues

By RAFAELA SEPPALA PARIS (UPI) — Supporters of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrillas Saturday attacked West German companies, legations and tourist buses across Europe in the fifth consecutive day of violence protesting the Bonn government's tough anti-terrorist policies.

Arsonists set fire to eight tourist buses in central Paris Friday night and early Saturday and attempted to burn the offices of the West German tourism offices on the French capital.

A violent explosion severely damaged a Paris apartment where police found explosives and pamphlets favorable to the West German Red Army group.

In the southwestern French city of Toulouse, butane gas bottles were set on fire at the West German Consulate, a private German telephone company and a computer manufacturing firm, police said.

The self-proclaimed "Andreas Baader Commando" group claimed responsibility for the Toulouse attacks in a telephone call. The group is named after the leader of the West German Red Army Faction, who died in his cell at Stamheim prison Tuesday with two other urban guerrillas after collapse of a plane hijack attempt to win their release.

In Italy, police reported minor damage from bomb attacks on a parked German bus in Bolzano and a BMW auto showroom in Sassari.

In Paris and the Normandy port of Rouen, graffiti favorable to the West German terrorist groups mushroomed. One sign in front of Notre-Dame Cathedral in Paris read, "The Red Army Faction Lives On," while another in Rouen proclaimed, (West German Chancellor Helmut) "Schmidt Kills what his Policy Generates."

West German authorities have requested extra security and protection for 23 institutions and companies in Athens where extremists threw fire-bombs at the West German cemetery and earlier damaged the offices of the West German airline Lufthansa.

Finishes Walk

MURPHY, N.C. (UPI) — U.S. Senate candidate David McKnight arrived in Murphy at the far western end of North Carolina Saturday, finishing his coast-to-mountain campaign walk in just over six months.

In addition to wearing out six pairs of shoes and losing 15 pounds since starting out April 2, the 29-year-old candidate had other, more valuable things to show for his trek across the state.

"I met people on their terms for a change in the smaller towns and crossroad communities, and I met them in smaller groups," said

McKnight, a former newspaperman. "I feel I got a better chance to hear from people as I went across than I could have had I not conducted this walking campaign."

McKnight, who will turn 30 in December, said the North Carolinians he talked to in 59 of the state's 100 counties ("I campaigned in 59 counties but stepped into one more county just to make it 60") were mostly concerned about their lack of input into the federal policy-making process.

"The feeling is that now, the powerful lobbying groups have a disproportionate influence

Fell Short Of An Endorsement

The results of the Oct. 11 City Council election didn't exactly sweep out the present council; on the other hand they lacked a lot of being an endorsement of current council policies.

Only one member of the present council received enough votes to clearly retain his seat on the body. Joe Taft, an incumbent was second high among the field of 18 candidates.

The top position went to a newcomer to city politics Charles Vincent, a local attorney. Both Taft and Vincent are formally elected to seats on the council which will take office in December.

Three other members of the council ran among the top six candidates, but failed to obtain clear majorities. Thus Millie McGrath, William Hadden and Clarence Gray will have to fight again for their seats with the next four candidates in a runoff election on Nov. 8.

The sixth member of the council as it is presently composed, Frank Fuller, failed to obtain enough votes to qualify for the runoff election.

Given those results, if we were one of the surviving candidates we would have to begin questioning some of the controversial moves made by the present council during the past two years.

For instance, we would be thinking about the power grabbing move by the council to abolish the Redevelopment Commission and absorb it in the city government organization, before the commission has completed the job which the council assigned it.

We would be wondering if it were wise to sell the land on Fifth Street at the old Five Points, rather than acquire it and develop it as public parking.

Whether we were potentially a new member of the council or a present member attempting to return we would be looking long and hard at some decisions made during the past two years. The voters have delivered a fairly gentle but firm, message, and if we were trying for a City Council seat we would heed it.

Hospital Money Outlook Is Improved

The encouraging news at this month's Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees meeting was that the hospital is now operating in the black.

Board treasurer J. H. Moye reported that $200,000 of a $250,000 operating loan has been repaid.

A combination of higher operating costs and some empty beds put hospital finances in a bind for a few months after the move was made into the new facility. As was expected, however, the problems were worked out, and things now look considerably better.

THIS AFTERNOON Back To Farms In Iredell

By BILL NOBLITT
STATESVILLE—While many counties all over North Carolina are jumping on the industrial growth bandwagon, at least one Piedmont County is not so ready to make such a move.

Iredell County people turned out strong for their part of the statewide Governor's Conference on Balanced Growth Economic Development; and they spoke out strongly for what they want.

"We are taking a second look at Agribusiness... our shift is to agriculture in specialized fields," says Chester P. Middlesworth, president elect of the local chamber of commerce, and for the past seven years chairman of the industrial development phase of chamber activities.

Does that mean no new industries? No economic growth? There are some sections of the nation in which people are saying, in effect, visit but don't settle down.

Some Jobs
Middlesworth feels industrial growth will be needed to provide jobs for a growing population or to replace jobs inevitably lost when an existing firm either moves or goes out of business.

"But we will select the industries which fit our needs in Iredell County," Middlesworth said.

So the policy will not be "no growth," but will be "Steady selective, controlled growth," Middlesworth explains—and it is clear that he and other community leaders put the emphasis on controlled.

Back to the farm is a movement which makes sense in Iredell County, and Middlesworth's observation was echoed by Bruno Santorum, vocational education director of Iredell schools and a long-time agriculture teacher in the community.

"I've been preaching this for 20 years... that's where the future is," Santorum says.

What kind of "specialized" agriculture? Already Iredell leads the state in milk production, is second in cattle and feeder calf production, fifth in egg production.

"And we are the world leader—get this—the world leader in producing hatching eggs. Out of this county, hatching eggs are shipped to all parts of this nation and to more than 50 different foreign countries," says Middlesworth.

Santorum the agriculture expert explains it is a combination of temperature and humidity which make Iredell one of the world's best places for producing hatching eggs.

Nice Place
Iredell could easily enter the race for growth and win some major plums. East-west Interstate 40 crosses north-south Interstate 77 at Statesville; Lake Norman is nearby and the community actually has a surplus of water and sewerage capacity. The county is close to the state's two major urban centers—Charlotte and the Winston-Salem-High Point-Greensboro triad; and halfway between the furniture centers in Lenoir and High Point. Terrain is typically rolling and green. Piedmont and mountain foothills.

Given the situation in Iredell County, state pleas for renewed vigor in industrial growth in order to pull per capita income upward fall on reluctant, if not deaf, ears.

Dominated economically by the paying textile, apparel, furniture industries, several people at the growth seminar expressed their displeasure at state efforts to bring in higher-paying firms to compete.

"We want to pay higher wages... we would like nothing better. But we simply can't afford to when we must produce at a cost which will make our prices competitive," a textileist complained. It struck a number of people as wrong that state tax dollars would be spent to drum up support for change which would ultimately damage existing industries.

"State efforts would be better spent in pressuring Washington to put on some import restrictions so we could make more money—and pay better wages," says the textileist.

Sunday Morning Notes

The Area Chamber of Commerce one-day blitz campaign to sign up new members was completed Wednesday, and a prize was awarded.

In this case, however, the prize went to the solicitor who signed up the least number of new members. The prize was a goat.

The winner, according to Pat Burnette, manager of membership and communications for the Chamber, was Donovan Phillips of Phillips Bros. Mortuary.

Pat said that Phillips took the goat, but protested that he was at a disadvantage on the blitz day since he had to conduct a funeral.

Thursday Phillips reported to the Chamber that the goat was safely settled, but he was eating everything in sight—including tin cans.

Chamber personnel were glad to see the goat go, and they are well aware of the goat's eating habits.

Wednesday the goat was tied to a fence outside the Chamber office on 14th Street. He was eating everything in sight there, too, including the rope by which he was tied.

That led to Chamber manager Ed Walker, Blitz Chairman Doug Starr and various office personnel chasing the goat down the street in an effort to save the prize for the lucky winner. The entire scene was recorded by a television news crew that had come by at the time.

A chase crew of six finally got the goat cornered by a fence. The goat was captured—"literally tackled"—Pat says, and secured at the Phillips.

Other than the jaunt through that part of town, it was a relatively pleasant day for the goat. For the campaign solicitors it was a frantic day of attempting to sell enough new memberships to avoid ownership of the goat.

At any rate Pat said this was the first one day blitz campaign for the Chamber and it was quite successful.

A total of 53 new memberships were sold for the day and Don Collier of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph was the top solicitor.

Church Treats Stress

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP)—Bankers, businessmen, brokers and secretaries are lying on a church floor once a week in the City of London financial district, learning how to cope with stress.

Leaving their coats in the pews and with pillows under their heads, the city gents and ladies sprawl for half an hour on their backs in St. Mary Woolnoth, responding to orders from physiotherapist Laura Mitchell to pull back their shoulders, spread their elbows, move their hands, turn their knees, point their feet and drop their jaws.

Prostrate bodies cover the green carpet in the central aisle and the red carpeted foot of the high altar.

Other Editors Say No Way To Balance

(Jacksonville Daily News)

A federal pay hike for government workers amounting to 7.05 per cent now goes into effect for some 3.4 million workers. Just the increase will cost taxpayers over $3 billion per year.

State and local increases for government workers have been moving ahead faster than ever before. But this huge federal hike will surely accelerate the momentum all down the line.

For many years the prime excuse for increases in the various agencies of government was, "the gap needed to be closed between pay rates in public vs. private business." It was often said, "We need to be competitive in order to get a better class of workers."

For the most part, there is no longer much discernible competition in that direction. Survey after survey has revealed that government workers have all the best of most everything. It is highly debatable whether or not the better "class" has been achieved.

Most workers in the private sector are hard-pressed to meet the mounting costs of maintaining an increasing number of government workers at an ever-growing pay scale.

Workers in both sectors, private and public, are hit by increased tax bills and undermined by the continuing inflation factor. But to the extent that the gap in pay widens in favor of the public sector, private sector workers will get the brunt in lost living standards.

The percentage of public workers to those engaged in private business and industry has been steadily increasing and as this trend continues, the private sector worker will be in a declining living-standard position.

His tax-to-income ratio will increase and that insidious hidden tax of inflation places him at a greater disadvantage. For as the dollar declines in value, what he has left will buy less.

Inflation bodes no good for the worker in the public sector, for he too will eventually feel its depth of hurt. So the very advantage that now seems to help him will in time take toll of him too.

There was no fiscally responsible means set up to take care of the enormous addition to the federal payroll. The added pay-out will end up in added debt. And, as the national debt rises, so will inflation rate rise.

It is only one more action of fiscal deceit perpetrated by the federal government. The administration, Congress and high officials in the bureaucracy all are party to the deception.

The president's adherence to the stated goal of a balanced budget only adds to the trickery imposed on the people of this nation.

THE INSIDE REPORT Disillusionment In Texas

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
MESQUITE, Tex. — Lower-middle income voters of Dallas County Precinct No. 267, beleaguered by rising food and fuel costs, would still vote for Jimmy Carter today but are losing hope he really will help them or, indeed, is much different from other politicians.

"It seems to me like everything's just the same as it was before he was elected," the 26-year-old wife of a home insulation installer told us. Would she vote for President Carter or for former President Ford if the election were held again today? After an embarrassingly long pause, she replied: "Carter — I guess."

That typifies interviews with 57 registered voters in Mesquite's Precinct 267, conducted with the help of Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research. A blue-collar neighborhood of young married couples (median voters' age, 34; median income, $13,287), this precinct was carried narrowly by Mr. Carter last year after supporting Republicans in recent presidential elections.

While 40 of our 57 voters said they voted for Mr. Carter last year, only 36 would today. Since this includes two 1976 Ford voters switching to the President, six Carter voters have defected. That is no dramatic reversal but hints of trouble among Southern white workers essential to Jimmy Carter's election.

The Carter disillusionment of 1977, just as the Carter support of 1976, is tied to a deep public longing for a leader who can help them. "I thought he would be a more forceful leader," said the 51-year-old wife of a retired factory foreman who adds she would vote for Ford today. "I don't know of anything he's done that he said he would," a 33-year-old machinist told us. This Carter voter does not know whom he would vote for today.

These few switches are the tip of the iceberg. Many loyalist Carterites are less than happy. A young salesman, a self-described conservative Democrat like many voters here, opposes the Panama Canal treaties "because the Communists could take over," resents "amnesty for draft dodgers" and complains "Carter hasn't done that much." Nevertheless, he would vote for the President again.

This loyalty can be explained partly by Mr. Carter's continued personal popularity. These voters give him a 67 per cent favorable rating. In contrast these voters rated Mr. Carter's performance as President at only 52 per cent favorable.

Amenic though this overall rating is, it is healthier than these voters' view of the President's approach to specific problems. While approving the way he handles unemployment, they are evenly split over the Carter approach to the Middle East and the Soviet Union. But they disapprove of his efforts on inflation (by 2 to 1) and energy.

Significantly, these interconnected issues, inflation and energy, most disturb the young wage-earners of Precinct 267. The plush skyscrapers of Dallas to the west, 15 minutes away on the freeway, are a world removed from these modest homes where not even combined salaries of husbands and wives can cover rising food prices and utility costs. Thus, when only 16 voters favored the Carter energy plan, they were giving the President "no confidence" on the issue that bothers them most.

Unlike the Dallas corporate executives, these Mesquite voters are opposed to natural gas price deregulation by 3 to 2. But despite Mr. Carter's prolonged attack against deregulation, 25 voters were unsure of his position, 17

The Possibility Questionable

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Four per cent unemployment. That is what the Humphrey-Hawkins bill would commit the federal government to seek as an objective. And that is what the President now must consider endorsing or rejecting.

Few people quarrel with the objective of the bill, but there is much questioning about whether it is possible and how it is to be achieved—private or public enterprise—and just what the costs might be.

But in terms of potential future controversies, there is another question that should rank right up there. It is this: How do you precisely measure unemployment? And the answer at the moment is that we do not know.

Those decimalized statistics we receive each month are hardly the accurate measures we tend to believe they are. Good as they are, relative to other countries, they are little more than estimates, and are based more on formulas than on actual counts.

The man responsible for the monthly reports, Julius Shiskin, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has expressed doubts about their accuracy. He maintains at least a halfdozen other measures, in case.

President Jimmy Carter has questioned the accuracy of the figures. So did President Gerald Ford. So have scholars from the Urban Institute and the Brookings Institution.

So have bankers, union leaders, academics, private economists.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston has long contested the accuracy of the figures in its New England area. Last Monday, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said flatly the rate has become an unreliable measure.

Some say the official unemployment rate is too high. Others say too low. Municipalities have threatened suits over it because, they say, it gives them a black eye if high and deprive them of revenue sharing funds if too low.

Critics maintain that many tens of thousands of discouraged job seekers are arbitrarily erased because they don't fit the formula of having actively sought work during the measurement period.

But critics also say that many tens of thousands of people are termed jobless when a little initiative and personal inconvenience would take them from welfare rolls and put them in jobs, however menial.

Should teenagers seeking part-time work be included? Should women seeking to supplement the family income be counted?

The criticisms cannot adequately be related in less than a book.

George Meany, AFL-CIO chairman, maintains the jobless rate has been about two points higher than announced, and that it was over 10 per cent for months.

Albert Sindlinger, chairman of Sindlinger & Co., which conducts its own employment surveys, contends the figures are badly distorted between the sample count and the rate announced to the public.

THE PATHWAY OF FAITH

The famous criminal lawyer, Clarence Darrow, once wrote, "To say that back of all is a Supreme Power which fashioned the world for some purpose, is idle, without evidence. There is neither logic or reason to support it. The poet may say that God is in heaven and all is well with the world, but the poet is the victim of illusion. There is no God in his heaven, so far as man can see."

Darrow was right in one respect. There is no God in heaven "so far as man can see." But Darrow overlooked the fact that man cannot see very far. Religion has its origin in faith. For those who have faith, the testimony it bears is convincing beyond human power to describe. As a mountain climber, having attained the summit, looks down the side of the mountain and sees the path by which he ascended, so does the man of faith—after he has accepted religious truth—look back over the course of his spiritual pilgrimage and see in it all a logic completely satisfying.

'Difference' If Informed

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The more Americans know about the Panama Canal treaties, the more likely they are to favor Senate ratification of the pact, lending support to President Jimmy Carter's thesis.

When those surveyed who have not heard or read about the debate over the treaties (26 per cent) are given a brief description of the pact and are asked to vote on it, they vote it down by nearly a 2-to-1 margin (39 to 23 per cent with 38 per cent undecided).

However, when the results are limited to just those who have heard or read about the debate (74 per cent), opinion is more closely divided, with 48 per cent opposed, 40 per cent in favor, with 12 per cent undecided.

Finally, the views of the "better informed" were measured. The informed are defined as those who can correctly answer three questions dealing with key facts about the pact: the year the canal is to be turned over to the Republic of Panama, whether or not the U.S. has the right to defend the canal against third-nation attacks, and whether or not the biggest U.S. aircraft carriers and supertankers are able to use the canal.

The vote among this "better informed" group (i.e. the one person in 14 who can answer all three questions correctly) is 5-to-4 in favor of the treaties.

To determine current attitudes on the Panama pact, as well as the relationship between knowledge and attitudes, a series of questions were asked in the latest nationwide Gallup Poll. Following is the key question asked of everyone in the sample: "The treaties would give Panama full control over the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone by the year 2000, but the United States would retain the right to defend the canal against a third nation. Do you favor or oppose these treaties between the U.S. and Panama?"

Here are the results based on varying levels of awareness and knowledge:

Those Not Aware Of Treaties

Favor 23%
Oppose 39%
No opinion 38%

Those Aware Of Treaties

Favor 40%
Oppose 48%
No opinion 12%

The 'Better Informed' *

Favor 51%
Oppose 46%
No opinion 3%

* Results subject to wide sampling fluctuation due to small number of cases.

Lack Of Information Is Widespread

The current survey reveals a serious lack of knowledge about the key facts of the Panama treaties, with about four in 10 Americans aware that the U.S. has the right to defend the canal, only about one in four aware that the canal is to be turned over in the year 2000 and only about one in seven aware that aircraft carriers and supertankers cannot use the canal.

Here are the responses (based on total sample) to the three questions dealing with facts about the treaties:

"As far as you know, in what year is the Panama Canal to be turned over completely to the Republic of Panama, by terms of the treaties?" (Correct answers: 1999 and 2000.)

Correct 26%
Incorrect/Don't Know 74%

"As far as you know, will the United States have the right to defend the Panama Canal against third-nation attacks after Panama takes full control?" (Correct answer: yes.)

Correct 43%
Incorrect/Don't Know 57%

"To the best of your knowledge, how much do the biggest U.S. aircraft carriers and supertankers now use the Panama Canal — a great deal, quite a lot, not very much, or not at all?" (Correct answer: not at all.)

Correct 14%
Incorrect/Don't Know 86%

gilded cherubs gaze impassively down on the strange noonday scene.

"Nobody thinks it strange — all life is challenge and response," said the vicar, the Rev. Geoffrey C. Harding, an Anglican clergyman who introduced the cope-with-stress sessions as an addition to his weekly lectures on "Relax and Meditate."

"We get all kinds coming in, from assistant general managers to tea ladies," Harding, 67, said in an interview. "We don't charge anything. There is an offering plate at the door."

After one half-hour session, Jerry Palmer, 42, who works in the clearing department of a bank, said he took part "because I'm just at the beginning of the stress age. I used to feel tired at the end of every day after rushing about. My wife seemed to be in charge of me. After coming here I find I have no fear of anybody and I'm in complete control at work and at home."

As one of the recumbent 15 men and eight women on the church floor, Palmer heard Miss Mitchell intone: "Only three of you have open eyes. I have not told you to close them — your bodies are receiving so much relaxation that they have gone ahead of me."

Miss Mitchell, a gray-haired Scotswoman, said that she worked out her method of light physical exercises, most of which can be done at any time, after standard treatments failed for her when she collapsed in 1957 with neck and limb pains.

"I started by doing the opposite movement in each joint to counteract muscle tension and the relief was enormous," she said. "I taught my technique first to antenatal mothers, who said it greatly helped them in labor pains."

The vicar, whose 250-year-old church is on Lombard Street in the heart of London's banking and financial district, said his father was a doctor and his mother a nurse. "I have always been interested in the sick and in healing," he explained. "We lose 330 million working days every year in Britain through ill health, and two million adults need tranquilizers or other pills to keep going."

I think that your article "America Goes Full Circle With Al'an Bakke," was a bit too conservative and controversial to not be printed parallel with a liberal viewpoint. Kilpatrick's article should at least have a statement clearly explaining this was only his opinion. The article was in the Oct. 9 issue.

A great amount of time and thought have gone into the decision to have special quotas for minorities. Other attempts have been tried, but this system is the only present solution that works well. To alleviate this problem of the quota system for minorities, then all students must be assured the opportunities early in life so they can develop their talents to be just as competitive as the majority.

A Conservative View

Judiciary Seen As 'Most Dangerous Branch'

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Now and then a book comes along, so stunning in its impact upon society that it finds its own place in the political and social history of a period. Such a book has just come to hand. It is Raoul Berger's "Government by Judiciary."

In bell-like tones that ring with a scholar's authority, Berger exposes and denounces the trend toward judicial usurpation of political power. He charges the Warren Court with effectively amending the Constitution in the school segregation and reapportionment cases. He concludes with a fervent plea for a turning back to old principles of judicial restraint.

In one sense, there is nothing much here that is new. Twenty years ago, at the peak of controversy over Brown v. Board of Education, hundreds of Southern lawyers, scores of Southern editors, and even one Southern justice, James Byrnes of South Carolina, said very much the same things. Dozens of pamphlets appeared, expounding the intention of the framers of the Fourteenth Amendment. In 1957, I myself wrote a book, "The Sovereign States," arguing the very case that Berger argues now.

Our Dixie fulminations fell upon deaf ears. In those days it was automatically assumed that any Southerner who attacked the Court was not truly opposed to usurpation of power; he was opposed only to integration of schools.

No such taint attaches to Berger. Born in Russia in 1901, he came to the United States and was naturalized as a child. He took up the study of the violin with such skill that in his twenties he soloed with the Cleveland Orchestra and became assistant concertmaster in Cincinnati. Then he turned to the law and fashioned a brilliant second career in both federal service and private practice. In 1970, he went to Harvard as a Senior Fellow in American legal history. He gained national attention in 1974 as a leading authority on presidential impeachment.

"Government by Judiciary" crowns Professor Berger's distinguished career. It is not the easiest reading of the autumn. Freighted with 1,600 footnotes, the text does not race, but rather chugs to its inevitable conclusion. The railroad metaphor is not bad. Berger's thesis cannot be sidetracked; he gathers momentum as he goes along; and his scholarship packs the massive authority of a locomotive.

Berger is not the first legal historian to sift the debates of the 39th Congress, searching for the meaning of the Reconstruction Amendments. But his meticulous examination of the evidence stands in a class by itself. Neither is he the first law professor to emphasize the importance of determining the "intention of the framers." A century ago, Thomas McIntyre Cooley of Michigan termed intention "the very polestar" of constitutional construction.

Berger's gift is to bring it all together. He finds "no trace of an intention" in the records of the 39th Congress to indicate that the Fourteenth Amendment was intended to encroach upon state control of schools and suffrage. Members of the Warren majority, in his view, simply imposed their own notions of decency and fairness upon the Constitution. Earl Warren himself did not merely "shape" the law: "He upended it; he revised the Fourteenth Amendment to mean exactly the opposite of what its framers designed it to mean."

"When the judiciary substitutes its own value choices for those of the people," says Berger, "it subverts the Constitution by usurpation of power." He poses a sobering question: "How long can public respect for the Court, on which its power ultimately depends, survive if the people become aware that the tribunal which condemns the acts of others as unconstitutional is itself acting unconstitutionally?"

It is too late, Berger concedes, to roll back the segregation decisions. "That is more than the courts should undertake and more, I believe, than the American people would desire." But he pleads for a fresh start: "The judges might begin by curbing their reach for still more policymaking power."

"I assert the right," says Berger, "to look at the Constitution itself, stripped of judicial incrustations, as the index of constitutional law and to affirm that the Supreme Court has no authority to substitute an 'unwritten Constitution' for the written Constitution the Founders gave us and the people ratified."

Potter Doris Blue Can Look Back A Long Way

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Her hands, like the hands of a musician, know where they are going. As the pale lump of clay rotates between them, a bowl is hollowed out in its soft center. She lifts this to the light to judge balance and proportion, then lays it aside. She scoops fresh clay from the large chunk in the plastic bag and begins to roll the first "coil" to build the sides.

"Catawba Indian girls usually start working with clay when they're four or five years old," Doris Blue says. "I learned from my mother; the first piece of pottery I made that I kept, I must have been about 15 years old."

She is 71 now. Generations ago the ancestors of the Catawbans, living near what is now Rock Hill, South Carolina, made pottery using these same methods of hand-building and open-pit firing. The clay was dug usually by the men, from the same sites along the bank of the Catawba River that are the source today; their location is still considered a tribal secret.

"We have two kinds of clay," Mrs. Blue explains. "We have what we call 'pipe clay,' a real stiff clay; by itself you can make pipes and smaller pieces. But to make larger pieces, eight or 10 inches tall, it has to be mixed with another kind of clay called 'pan clay.'"

Mrs. Blue prefers making smaller pieces: wedding jugs, three-legged gypsy pots, peace pipes and delicate Rebekkah pitchers. One of her loveliest designs is seen in the pots decorated with the coiling snake. Its markings are made with a buttonhook. Another typical Catawba decoration is the Indian head with feathered bonnet. Clay molds for pipes and decorations are often passed down through the generations. Mrs. Blue has a shoebox of molds — Indian head, tomahawk, chicken comb, arrowhead — inherited from her great-great-grandmother.

After she melds the coils of clay together and lets them dry a little, Mrs. Blue adds separate sections like handles and decorations.

"We put all the pottery in a pan and put it in a stove where we can regulate the heat. I increase mine 'til my oven is 500 degrees. Then I'll go and make a fire just out on the ground. That's the way the first Indians made it. When the wood is burned down to coals, I take my pottery out there and lay it on the coals and then pile wood on it. And I'll burn it that way, I'll pile one pile of wood on it after another, for about two hours. The pottery is red when you get through, just like a piece of metal is when you have it in the fire."

"If you want it spotted or dark, throw a bucket of chips or pine bark on it. If you want it just left maybe gray or light-colored or orange, just let the fire go out. There's no clay like ours, so Catawba pottery is mostly recognized by the clay, the coloring."

Doris Blue believes in her art and its commercial survival. In 1975-76 she participated in a state-wide touring exhibition of Catawba pottery sponsored by the South Carolina Arts Commission.

The Arts Commission's Crafts Development Program is now working with Mrs. Blue and other Catawba potters to aid them in publicity and marketing. Presently she fills orders for her pottery directly from her home.

Looking out from the porch of her small, pink-shingled house at the colorful clay and pine forests of the Catawba Reservation, Doris Blue muses on the experiences of the tribe during her lifetime. "We had a pottery demonstration show here at Winthrop College back in May, and I went up to demonstrate pottery making, and I remarked to one of the ladies there, I said, 'Well, we've come a long way, like that (TV) commercial. When I was small, we weren't allowed to come but a certain distance into the campus, just inside of the gate, and sell pottery. Now we are inside the building, so we had come a long way in about 50 years.'" thought he favored deregulation and only 16 believed he opposed it. This astonishingly fuzzy perception can perhaps be explained partly by candidate Carter's support for deregulation.

The President's reduced status here has no apparent connection with Bert Lance. Of 32 voters who had followed the case, an overwhelming majority applauded the President for letting Lance quit gracefully.

Mr. Carter's mistake in Mesquite is not Lance but Panama, with voters opposing the treaties nearly 2-to-1. The canal question was volunteered by seven voters as Mr. Carter's worst act as President; no other issue was mentioned negatively by more than two voters.

Jimmy Carter's status in Precinct 267 emerges clearly in the attitude of one 1976 Ford voter who supports Mr. Carter today. "I guess I've been satisfied with Carter so far at least trying," the young wife of a customer service operator told us. But she could think of no action by Carter she liked, opposes his energy plan and denounces the Panama Canal treaties in Reaganesque language: "I feel we built it; it's ours after all these years we took care of it." How long such voters will continue to support the President seems highly doubtful.

Prof. Charles Killingsworth, Michigan State University Tassity authority and chairman of the National Manpower Policy Task Force, argues that a change in concept omits many who once were counted as jobless.

Shiskin himself recently called the sudden rise in black unemployment during August of "dubious" authenticity, weeks after many a learned and concerned comment was based on the numbers.

Shiskin also concedes there have been problems with seasonal adjusting, in which the raw figures are changed to eliminate purely temporary factors. Many other critics harshly denounce the seasonal formula as a contrivance.

What is the jobless rate? It depends on what you mean. It depends on how you measure it. It depends on how you use it. It depends on the interpretation.

It depends...but the law being considered by President Carter has no dependency clause.

Autumn Is The Habitable Season On Potomac

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Autumn is the habitable season in Washington.

The summer humidity, thick as nine-day-old noodle soup, lifts. The cool high pressure systems sweep in from the west, ending the swampy weather in which bureaucrats' suits wilt into damp wrinkles and the crispest frock clings like wet tissue paper.

Washington seldom gets an autumn display of turning leaves. To see that, nostalgic northerners have to drive west to the Blue Ridge, where they also can stop at rickety roadside stands to pick up bushels of the tangy apples coming in from the mountainside orchards.

Southerners appear puzzled by this love affair with the fall and complain about the cool nights, which leave rivulets of dew on their windshields in the morning, and in the suburbs, a rind of frost on the patio bricks. The folks who came north with Jimmy Carter huddle at home and scare each other with stories about driving in snow.

The summertime weekend migration of the middle class across Chesapeake Bay to the ocean beaches of Delaware and Maryland just about ends with the start of school. Those who relish the crash of surf and the sight of clean sand occupied only by sea birds now make their move to the solitude of the shore.

Deep in the city, poor folk no longer perch on doorsteps every evening hoping for a cool breeze. The streets, tree lined in the meaneast of Washington neighborhoods, are quieter now and the flicker of the fall television programs lights the windows. Along 14th Street, the hookers change from hotpants and halters to plastic boots and rabbitskin jackets.

In the afternoons, small black kids decked out in large football helmets and shoulder pads, strut the sidewalks and the asphalt playgrounds are crowded with wild jumping, arm flailing pickup basketball games.

Restaurateurs start retreating from the sidewalks, where dozens set up tables and umbrellas last spring. Some, knowing there still are some fine warm afternoons ahead, leave the paraphernalia in place until winter can no longer be denied. The formal downtown parks — LaFayette, Farragut and McPherson squares — remain popular for brown bag lunching, but the benches rather than the grass become more popular for the noontime picnics.

This year, city and suburb found a common bond: water. Virginia householders were placed under tough water conservation restrictions when the big Occoquan Reservoir began drying up. City folk had all the water they wanted, but were shocked when the municipal bureaucrats in charge of supplying it announced they had been undercharging homeowners and presented a number of them with back bills in the hundreds of dollars.

Still, there is a happier link for city dwellers and suburbanites. A city deprived — robbed — of two major league baseball teams in 15 years focuses on its professional football team, which continues to

LIKE MARY'S LITTLE LAMB!

By GAIL MICHAELS

Back To Cinder Blocks And Unsanded Boards

My husband is many things; he's a hard worker, a wonderful father, and a regular nice guy. But he is not a carpenter.

Unfortunately, he thinks he is. Not long after we were married, he bought $200 worth of lumber and bragged, "Just wait till you see the desks I'm going to build us. They are going to fit our needs perfectly — plenty of shelf space, plenty of work space, plenty of everything."

"Are you sure you know what you're doing?" I asked. "With $200 we could buy some nice furniture from a store." (That goes to show how long ago this was.)

"Sure I know what I'm doing," he scoffed. "I had a woodworking course in high school, didn't I? You won't be able to find anything like the beauties I'm going to build in a store! These will be like nothing you've ever seen before."

And they weren't. They were incredible. They looked like something George Montgomery might have made — blindfolded. My desk was six feet tall — or 5 and 12 feet tall, depending on whether you were looking at the ends or the middle — with 2X4s nailed from leg to leg at 75 degree angles. On his desk he ran out of 2X4s, so he finished it up with 1X3s. But the desks were functional, so as long as they were hidden away in the extra bedrooms — studies of the places we rented, I didn't say anything.

However, after two years of living with them in "public" view on the lower floor of our condominium, I could hold my peace no longer.

"Sweetheart," I said. "Don't you think it's time we started thinking about buying some REAL furniture to replace those desks?"

"What do you mean by real furniture?" he growled.

"Something that fits a little better with our decor."

"What could fit better? These desks are 'me.'"

"Granted you're not perfect, but you are NOT scrap lumber."

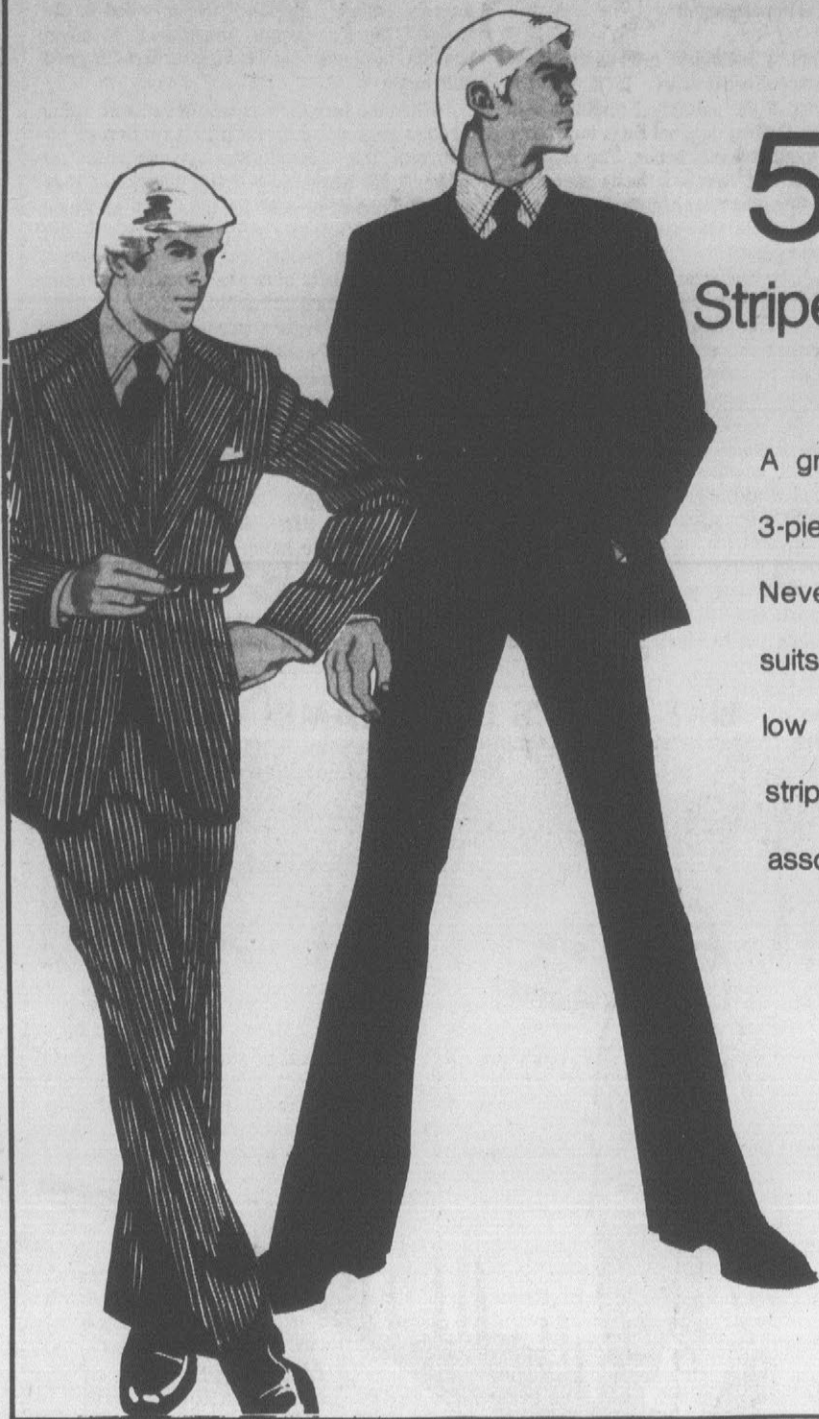

He stroked his desk protectively. "Isn't that a little harsh? I mean, what happened to the girl I married — who was satisfied with cinder blocks and unsanded boards?"

"The same thing that happened to the boy I married — who said he believed that men and women should share the housework 50-50."

He choked, then said. "Well, just assuming I'm willing to negotiate — and remember that we are scraping along on one income — what kind of furniture could we possibly buy to fit our decor AND our budget that would be better than these magnificent creations?"

I thought for a minute. "How about cinder blocks and unsanded boards?"

Art Patrons Attend 'Autumn Garden Party'

With fresh flowers creating an air of fragrant elegance, this year's Fine Arts Ball was turned into an "Autumn Garden Party" Friday night for patrons from Eastern North Carolina to dine and dance to the music of Bill Bolin's Orchestra of Chapel Hill.

Held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, the East Carolina Art Society, sponsor of the annual ball, re-created a live garden of fall geraniums and yellow and white chrysanthemums for the sixth annual ball which benefits the Greenville Art Center.

The drive to the country club and the exterior of the building were outlined with 200 glowing Luminaries, an old Spanish custom which means "lighting the way." And the Luminaries beckoned to the ball patrons as they arrived at the country club and were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton W. Everett Jr.

Mrs. Corbitt is the Fine Arts Ball chairman and Mrs. Everett is president of the East Carolina Art Society.

Inside the foyer, was an arrangement of autumn mums flanked by yellow burning candles. Two tall urns featured sprays of fresh Louquat which also enhanced the foyer.

In the ballroom, the bandstand was outlined with a low white fence and surrounding this and marking the corners of the bandstand were potted yellow and white mums. A focal point here was the arbor gateway enhanced by fresh geraniums and foliage in hanging baskets.

The buffet table was decorated with clusters of silver candelabra and a four-foot tall white wicker basket filled with chrysanthemums in shades of yellow and white with purple ageratum. Twenty individual tables seated 310 art enthusiasts who support the Greenville Art Center.

Host couples for the dinner tables were: Mr. and Mrs. William G. Blount, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Clark Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Dixie Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Goodson, Miss Jane Joyner and Richard Daves of Kannapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, Mr. and Mrs. John Melvin, Dr. and Mrs. Ed Monroe, Dr. and Mrs. R. William McConnell, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Moore, Dr. and Mrs. Ray Minges, Mr. and Mrs. N.C. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hoover Taft Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Taylor Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Andy Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Waddell, Dr. and Mrs. John Winstead, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Woronoff.

The dinner menu consisted of sliced roast beef, rice casserole with chives, broccoli souffle, beet salad, pear and cream cheese salad, and individual cheese cakes.

During the ball, six works of art, gifts of donor artists, were given to ball patrons.

On Thursday night, for the first time in Greenville, in conjunction with the Fine Arts Ball, ten couples hosted a preball art auction wine and cheese party at the Greenville Art Center. At this time, ball guests were given an opportunity to view and buy at silent auction the works of some 50 contributing artists across the state and Florida.

Host couples for the art auction wine and cheese party were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Howard Jr., chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. James Cheatham, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Clark Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Ed Clement, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lewis W. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Ficklen Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taft Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Webb.

Assisting Mrs. Corbitt with the ball arrangements were: Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst, chairperson of decorations, assisted by Mrs. Dan Morgan, individual tables; Mrs. Hal Waddell, buffet table. Mrs. Ed Tipton II, driveway; and Mrs. Frank Layne, bandstand; Mrs. Lewis W. Evans, invitations; Mrs. Max R. Joyner, invitation responses; Mrs. Louis W. Gaylord Jr., treasurer; Mrs. Steven M. White, reservations; Mrs. William H. Taft Jr., entertainer; Mrs. Fred Webb and Mrs. John T. Clark Jr., buffet; Mrs. William G. Blount, dessert; Mrs. Lawrence Perkins, special project; Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, publicity; and Mrs. Eddie Smith, secretary.

Among the out-of-town guest patrons attending were: Mr. and Mrs. F. Leighton Blount Jr. of Bethel, Mrs. and Mrs. Curtis Martin, and Mrs. and Mrs. R.H. Staton, also of Bethel; Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Allen, Dr. and Mrs. Tom Hardy, Dr. and Mrs. W.C. (Continued from page A-5) exasperate by losing the easy games, winning the tough ones and never quite making it to the top.

In the downtown singles bars and the neighborhood taverns there is incessant argument about Redskins Coach George Allen's selection of quarterbacks and trafficking in draft choices.

(Washington also has major league hockey and basketball, but the teams live in a concrete and steel tent on the edge of a suburban shopping center. Both have their fans, but the Redskins are to Washington, D.C. what the Buckeyes are to Columbus, Ohio.)

In some ways, Washington's tempo is as seasonal as Detroit's. Here, the "new models" are the next fiscal year's budget requests that are being prepared now for the President's scrutiny.

In the fall, there is an unrecurrent rumor about what is happening at the Office of Management and Budget, which continues to grind the fondest spending hopes of department chiefs and agency officials into a fiscal puree to be served up to Congress in January.

Congress, meanwhile, "rushes" to adjourn. The leadership said the members would be home by mid-October, but no one here took that seriously. Only dimly aware most of the time that Congress is working, the city will be surprised to see it close down before Thanksgiving.

The footsoldiers in the army of government employes worry about other things. A proposal to shift the hitherto independent civil service retirement system to social security frightens many of them. Many still expect the worst from Carter's reorganization plans — shoes that are yet to drop on the biggest agencies and departments.

The city looks fairly prosperous. There are signs that the decrepit F St. commercial strip may be stabilizing, with several new pedestrian malls dressing up an area that once appeared to be dying as major stores closed down. A spurt of renovation of townhouses on Capitol Hill and around DuPont Circle is said to be bringing a trickle of young families back into the city.

But the scars of the recent past remain. The riot corridors of 1968 have some new buildings, but vacant lots still gape like missing teeth along 14th and 7th streets. Crime is down, but still there: half a dozen cab drivers were robbed at gunpoint and one murdered in one period of several days and downtown stores start gearing up their annual fall and winter campaign advertising sure punishment in an effort to scare off shoplifters.

Still, fall is the quiet time in Washington. The tourists who bloom in the spring are gone and the locals have the parks and museums much to themselves.

Washington people take the position that there are no legal parking places within walking distance of wherever they are going. So you can spot them on weekends parking their cars in the backstreets and government building driveways near the Smithsonian complex where experience has shown the police seldom write tickets.

Duke To Get Festival

HARTFORD (AP) — The American Dance Festival will make its new home at Duke University in Durham, N.C., say officials from two of the festival's three possible future locations.

Connecticut College in New London has been the festival's home for the last 30 years. But it was among eight possible festival locations eliminated two weeks ago by a seven-member panel.

The festival at the time said its three preferences were Duke, the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., and the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Mass.

Officials at the universities in Massachusetts and Wisconsin said Friday that earlier in the week festival director Charles Reinhart told them Duke had been chosen.

Festival officials in New York refused to comment on the festival's location, saying only, "The official answer is that no decision has been made." A spokeswoman said an official statement will be released Tuesday.

Duke officials said, "We have not received any official word on this, but we expect to hear on Monday."

Connecticut College was rejected because of insufficient space for expansion, insufficient funds and the college's plans to diversify its summer arts program.

Reunion Of Former POWs

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A reunion that serves as "a form of therapy" for former prisoners of war has drawn about 100 POWs from throughout North Carolina to Charlotte.

"Some (POWs) are only now suffering mental and emotional problems (from captivity)," said Curtis Stevens of Fayetteville. He was a captive of the Japanese for "three years, three months and nine days" in World War II and now heads the Tarheel Chapter of American Prisoners of War.

"Many times when we're not with other POWs we don't talk about our experiences because we're not sure they'll understand," Stevens said Friday.

Many of the ex-POWs in Charlotte for the weekend meeting are veterans of World War II but some were captured during the Korean conflict or in Vietnam.

Mental Health Board Met Wednesday

The Pitt County Area Mental Health Board met at the Mental Health Center Wednesday, October 19.

Mary Quiggins and Dr. William Martin, representing the Association for Retarded Citizens, informed the Board that the association had purchased a van for the Adult Development Activity Program (ADAP), which serves mentally retarded persons from the county. Funds for the van came from donations to the Rice Memorial Fund Totalling $4,129 and from a Federal Grant of $3,339. The van will be used to provide necessary transportation for clients to the ADAP Center and for field trips and recreational activities.

Bob Martin, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reported that the mental health center had received $23,354 in federal funds to support a pilot project for a forensic specialist program in Pitt County. The program will provide mental health services to residents of the county involved in the criminal and civil justice system, including court evaluations, follow-up of persons who return to the county for correctional institutions, county jail, and consultation to judges, magistrates, attorneys, correctional staff, and law enforcement officials.

The Board also heard a report concerning a recent evaluation of REAL Crisis Intervention Center by the North Carolina Drug Commission. The evaluation was favorable and REAL was commended for making substantial progress in recent months. Dr. Stephen Creech, area director for the center, informed the Board of the criteria for admission to the mental health center.

Halloween Music Festival Set

A STAR PERFORMER . . . Fiddler Vassar Clemments is one of the star performers scheduled to appear in the Second Annual Outdoor Halloween Music Festival and Carnival to be held October 29 at the Pitt County Progressive country and country rock sounds will be featured at an all-day concert to be held Oct. 29 at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

The Second Annual Outdoor Halloween Music Festival and Carnival, presented by East-West Productions, will begin at 11 a.m. and continue into the evening. There will be a two-hour intermission for those who wish to attend the East Carolina University versus Southwestern Louisiana game.

The concert features Zorro and the Blue Footballs, Tenth Avenue, Supergrit, the Tennessee Hat Band. Special Attractions are Grinderswitch and Vassar Clemments accompanied by his band.

Buzzy Ledford of East-West Productions called Grinderswitch "the number one country rock band that works the North Carolina circuit." The group is presently recording with Sound Hut Records.

Ledford said that he believes Grinderswitch will be the next group to follow in the footsteps of such Southern rock groups as the Allman Brothers Band, Marshall Tucker, Lynard Skynyrd, and the Charlie Daniels Band.

"This is going to be the best music day that eastern North Carolina has ever seen as far as outdoor entertainment is concerned," he added.

Ledford called fiddler Vassar Clemments "incredible."

Clemments who has played with Richard Betts, Jimmy Buffett, Kris Kristofferson, Paul McCartney, The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, and Linda Ronstadt, just to name a few, now leads his own band.

Ledford, who organized the Stokes Halloween Concert last year, said that he expects a much larger attendance at this year's event. One reason for his optimism is the closer location this Halloween.

"We moved the concert this year to provide an easier location and better facilities."

Admission is $5 in advance and $6 at the gate. Tickets can be purchased at the East Carolina University Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, Apple Records, Chanelo's Pizza and Spaghetti House, and the Stop Shop on Fifth Street.

Ledford said that in addition to the music, there will also be judging for the best Halloween costumes with prizes of $100, $50, and $25 going to the winners.

Rain date for the event is Oct. 30.

Ledford added that he is very excited about the concert.

"We're trying to give the people a variety of groups to choose from. Anybody should like it."

Amateurs Hit Big Time

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An unemployed Florida hotel manager and an Indiana mother of four have unexpectedly become big-time country music songwriters. In fact, their songs are being recorded by Mel Tillis, the 1976 "entertainer of the year" in country music. Bob Pauley of West Palm Beach, Fla., and Dee Gaskin of Battle Ground, Ind., won a nationwide country music songwriting contest for amateurs. They got expense-paid trips to Nashville besides the recording commitment from Tillis.

Pauley, 41, has been drawing unemployment but hopes to become a partner in a restaurant being restored in West Palm Beach. He's been writing songs for eight years.

"I threw away my first 100 songs," he said.

His winning entry was "A Brandy Alexander," a novelty song about a country boy who dines at a French restaurant. It was based on his experience of taking a friend from West Virginia to a French restaurant in West Palm Beach.

"I was thrilled," he said about winning. "I had no idea I'd even come close. I feel my music is good, but against national competition, I just didn't know.

"I'm hoping this will open doors. I want to show my material to others. I feel I have pretty darn good material."

Until recently, he lived in Nashville as a hotel manager.

"But I was tied down at the hotel 10 or 12 hours a day and never really got to meet anyone in the music business. If I did get to meet someone, they were renting a room."

Just as Pauley's winning entry came at a good time, Mrs. Gaskin's selection was poetic justice, too. She has been sending songs to Conway Twitty and others in Nashville with hopes of getting them published.

"They all came back," she said. "They always put a little note in them saying they couldn't use them right now."

Like Pauley, she didn't expect to win.

"I still think I might wake up in a dream," she said.

Baker Article Featured

An article written by Ira L. Baker, Coordinator of Journalism at East Carolina University, on the life of Elizabeth Timothy, the first woman editor of a newspaper in America, has been published in Journalism Quarterly.

In his article, entitled Elizabeth Timothy: America's First Woman Editor, Baker traces the arrival of the lady editor from Holland, along with her husband, Louis, and their four children. Louis Timothy became a friend and business associate of Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia. Later Franklin made a contract with Timothy to be editor of The South Carolina Gazette as well as to operate a printing establishment in Charleston.

On the death of her husband Elizabeth Timothy assumed editorship of the paper, thus becoming the first known woman in America to head a newspaper.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

The expertise of authors Rosalind Loring and Herbert A. Otto, along with that of a team representing fields as diverse as family planning communications, sports, and politics, has been combined in the compiling of a major source of information. Published as both a textbook and a book for the general public, NEW LIFE OPTIONS is as useful for the woman who wants to make intelligent choices about her life as for the serious student of the woman's movement. This book focuses on the five most critical aspects of the working woman's life: New perspectives — approaches for successfully balancing home and career, getting the best from your career, taking good care of yourself, the potential of your relationships, managing your options. The scope of NEW LIFE OPTIONS is as far-reaching as the problems, opportunities, and challenges faced by working women today. Not just another book on the subject, this invaluable resource book skillfully combines a down-to-earth point of view with scholarly research and new perspectives and concepts. Filled with practical suggestions, exercises, and action plans, it examines all aspects of the working woman's life and highlights the many choices available to her.

Eleanor Berman offers in THE COOPERATING FAMILY a creative and viable solution to the perennial problem of how to make the family work and how to make the home a better place to be, for both parents and children. Based on extensive research and Mrs. Berman's personal experience, THE COOPERATING FAMILY concerns a unique arrangement hit upon by Mrs. Berman when, as a divorced mother of three, she decided to go back to work but could not figure out how to run her house at the same time. Her solution: Let the kids do it! Now after several years, the Berman Experiment is a resounding success. Besides learning to be great cooks, economical shoppers, and efficient housekeepers, the children matured by working together and sharing responsibilities. They still found time to do homework, visit friends and get involved with after-school activities.

To those who are facing the painful changes of divorce, to all mothers who want or need to work but fear that their children will suffer—and to any parents who are underestimating the capabilities of their children—Mrs. Berman offers their experience and those of others like them who have made adjustments by forming a different kind of household: a "cooperating family" where everyone shares responsibility for the running of the household—and more importantly, where members of the family, children and parents alike, share concern for each other's happiness and well-being.

On each of the two days, activities begin at 9 a.m. and continue until retreat at 5 p.m.

A 'Star Wars' Disco

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Force, it seems, is with Meco Monardo.

Meco, a New York session musician and sometime arranger of disco tunes, has come up with a disco version of "Star Wars" — a hybrid concoction of the various themes of that huge movie — that has shot right past at least a dozen "Star Wars" records, including the original sound track.

Meco's little bit of galactic jive is in the No. 1 spot on the pop charts of all three major trade magazines, Billboard, Record World and Cashbox, and the airplay it's been getting on AM radio suggests it might stay atop the heap for quite a while.

Why Meco's above the rest? "It was like I was guided by something," he says, "like — maybe The Force (the mystical power in the movie?)"

Meco, a sci-fi nut, says he saw "Star Wars" in New York — "First day, 10 o'clock showing. I went crazy over it and I went back the next day for the 10 o'clock showing and sat through it three times."

"By the second showing, I started listening to it real carefully and I heard the various themes ... if you listen to it at least three times, you can tell there are at least three distinct themes. You don't have to be a great appreciator of music to realize that John Williams wrote a great score. I ran out that day and bought the sound track album."

But the sound track by the London Symphony Orchestra left Meco a cold. "I felt it (the sound track) was not a commercial entity," he says. "I felt I could do something with it along the lines of disco, contemporary pop music. Something you could dance to."

Meco at first thought he'd capitalize the movie on an album — "You, know, you've seen the movie, now hear it." He wanted to use some of the dialogue from the movie, but legal complications prevented that.

So, he decided to settle on some spaced-out sound effects, a perceivable beat and a meshing of the three themes for his first effort as an artist. All he needed was a record company.

"I didn't have a deal, so I called Neil Bogart (president of Casablanca Records in Los Angeles). Of course, Neil is a great record man. He didn't hear one note of the music, but based on the success of the film, said OK."

Casablanca's East Coast label, Millennium, contacted Meco at once. "We made a deal over the phone, and that was it," he says.

Meco's "Star Wars" was the first No. 1 hit for Millennium.

Adopt-A-Pet

He's about 12 pounds of loving doggie. Obviously mistreated in the past, this predominantly black (with touches of brown) dog found a temporary home with a Greenville family about a month ago.

But the family already has a large dog and they are expecting a baby any day, so a home for this dog must be found. The finders believe he's full-grown and they're anxious to find someone to adopt him who will continue to give him good treatment.

Anyone willing to adopt him may call Humane Society President Jeanette Fiore at 758-0468.

An adoptive owner is also needed for a terrier whose master died recently.

Largest Windmill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's largest windmill, its blade spanning 200 feet, will be built on North Carolina mountain as the government tries to find out if wind can generate electricity on a large scale.

The Energy Department announced Friday it is building the windmill atop Howard's Knob near Boone, N.C. The blades are to begin spinning in 1978 and generate enough power to provide more than 500 homes with electricity.

The windmill, which will turn an electrical generator belonging to the Blue Ridge Electrical Membership Corp., is part of a $20 million Energy Department program to study the feasibility of harnessing wind power for electricity.

The windmill, including generator, will cost $3.5 million, the department says.

Windmills have been used for centuries to drive water pumps, but they have never been used on a wide-scale for electrical power.

Drugs Not Death Cause

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Four drugs including codeine and barbiturates were found in significant quantities in the blood of Elvis Presley, but they played no role in his death, a medical examiner has ruled.

"The cause of death has been ascribed to hypertensive heart disease with coronary artery heart disease as a contributing factor," said Dr. Jerry T. Francisco at a news conference Friday.

"Had these drugs not been there, he still would have died," Francisco said under questioning by reporters.

Elementary Students Competed In Art Show

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor
From 4,000 entries of children's art, about 70 were chosen as semi-finalists for a McDonald's competition held at the hamburger establishment on Greenville Boulevard.

Students in grades one through six in both the Pitt County and Greenville City schools entered the competition depicting a new potato product being offered by the food chain.

From the semi-finalists displayed at McDonald's Saturday, a jury of three selected three top winners.

Fourth grader Renee Rice, a student at G. R. Whitfield School received first place. She will receive a $75 bond for herself and $100 for her school. Renee is the daughter of Gaylene Rice of Greenville and Jim Rice of Los Angeles, Calif.

Second place winner was third grader Greg Walston of the Sam Bundy School. Greg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald N. Walston of Farmville, received a $50 savings bond.

A sixth grade student at St. Peter's Catholic School, Carol Ann Ingenito, had her entry judged third best for a $25 savings bond. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ingenito of Greenville.

The art competition for school children is a first for McDonald Debbie Lundy, a public relations specialist, said "there's a possibility the idea may be used in other McDonalds in eastern North Carolina."

Renee Rice's top place winner, a drawing of a happy looking potato with green shoes and acquamarine eyes, will be entered in the national competition to be held at McDonald's headquarters in Chicago.

The three judging the semifinal entries were Rae Bartlett, an art teacher at D. H. Conley High School; Leslie Sampson, manager of the Greenville

Pirates Rally To Win

Southerland Leaves Bench To Lead Fourth-Quarter Onslaught

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor
 CHARLESTON, S.C. — Hollywood's finest writers couldn't have scripted it better. It would have been a top show for Medical Center, Marcus Welby, M.D. or Rafferty.

The plot is simple: football hero comes down with mysterious malady; his team, the favorites, are trailing in the fourth quarter, 16-15; hero comes off bench, wards off pain and guides team to victory.

Sounds too corny to be real, doesn't it?

But Saturday night in The Citadel's Johnson Hagood Stadium, Jimmy Southernland of East Carolina played that hero's role as he came off the bench to guide the Bucs to a 34-16 comeback win over the Bulldogs.

Southerland, who had complained of pain in his side for the last three days, wasn't supposed to play against The Citadel. While doctors could come up with no reason for the pains, they decided to give Jimmy a checkup and find out all about it, come the return to Greenville.

Then, just minutes before the game, ECU officials announced that Southernland would play—if needed.

And needed he was.

He threw a 34-yard pass to Terry Gallaher to return the Bucs to the lead, 21-16, then sealed the win by guiding the Pirates in with Willie Hawkins scoring on a two-yard plunge.

Leander Green, who had put the Bucs up earlier with a 39-yard touchdown run to open the game, returned after that to lead the team in one more time, with Sam Harrell scoring on a one-yard plunge.

Woodrow Stevenson got the other Pirate touchdown, picking up a blocked punt and returning it eight yards.

Sam Scadlock scored one Citadel touchdown on a six-yard run, with Lyvonia Mitchell getting the other one from one yard away. Paul Tanguay added a 24-yard field goal.

East Carolina opened it up as if it was going to make a romp out of it, scoring on its first possession on Green's 39-yarder, then getting the blocked punt score just minutes later. After that, The Citadel took over and was virtually in control until Southernland came to form in the fourth period.

Rod Compton, Director of Sports Medicine at ECU, said Southernland was checked in the locker room just prior to the game and given an okay to play, despite the fact that he was unsure what the problem was.

"Other than that area of pain," Southernland said, "I felt good, and I think that was a factor in the doctor's decision. My stomach always hurts before a game, but it had been hurting for a couple of days and that was unusual. I worried about getting hit while I was on the sidelines, but once I got into the game, it didn't bother me at all. It had no effect on my play."

Southerland will be checked out after returning to Greenville.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 7-1, while The Citadel fell off to 3-4. The win, while not by the margin the Bucs had hoped for, nonetheless kept the ECU bowl hopes alive.

While the Pirates got off to a blazing start, the momentum quickly swung to The Citadel. The Pirates scored with ease on their first possession, then boosted that to 15-0 when freshman Chuck Jackson blocked a punt.

But for the following two quarters, it was all Citadel.

East Carolina first got the ball at its own 23 following a Bulldog punt. It took just six plays before Eddie Hicks picked up 12 yards on first down to the 35. Three more rushes moved it to the 48, and Theodore Sutton broke away for 14 to the 39. From there, Green went around the left side for the final 39, with 11:04 left.

Green, holding for Junior Creech, bobbled the PAT snap and had to get away from the charging Bulldogs. He spotted Barry Johnson, however, for a two-point conversion pass and the Pirates led, 8-0.

Minutes later, Caldwell went back to punt from his own 23, and Jackson broke through on the kick to block it. Stevenson finally picked up the football and took it in for the score, and after Creech kicked, the Pirates were out to a 15-0 lead.

After that, the Pirates got only one first down the rest of the half.

The Citadel drove down to the Buc 28 before a bad snap ruined a field goal attempt by Tanguay.

But they got a big break when Vince Kolanko fumbled at the Pirate 20 and Tony Turckett recovered on the 23.

Crosby hit Riley for 18 yards to the five, and after a penalty pushed it back, Scadlock finally scored from the six with 14:56 left in the first half. Tanguay's kick made it 15-7.

Tanguay later missed on a 50-yard attempt that was just wide, but came back later in the half with seven seconds left to kick a 24-yarder. That closed the gap to 15-10.

The score had been set up when Caldwell booted the ball out of bounds on the one foot line and the backed-up Bucs returned with punt which gave The Citadel a first down at the ECU 37.

Late in the drive, the Pirates seemingly recovered a fumble, but a face-masking penalty against ECU returned the ball to the 'Dogs. From the two, however, Zack Valentine broke through to pin Crosby at the seven and The Citadel elected to go for the three-pointer.

Fumbles continued to cause troubles for the Pirates in the second half. The Bucs drove from their own 29 down to the Citadel 20 before Green fumbled it away. Then, after the Pirates held The Citadel, Willie Holley fumbled the punt and Martin Athern recovered at the ECU 27.

With Crosby hitting Riley on three passes, the 'Dogs got a first down at the two. Mitchell then went in from the one on third down, and after a two-point pass try failed, The Citadel led, 16-15 with 4:36 left in the third period.

East Carolina came back down the field behind Southernland, but the drive stalled at the 29, and a 45-yard field goal by Creech was short.

But after again holding the Bulldogs, the Pirates finally got good field position at the Citadel's 45. Sutton got a first down on fourth-and-one at the 36, and Gallaher pulled in the 34-yard Southernland aerial for the score on the next play. A two-point pass try failed and the Bucs led, 21-16 with 12:01 left.

Gallaher's catch tied him for the school career touchdown pass reception record with 11.

Charlie Carter came up with his first interception of the year three plays later, setting up the next ECU score. He picked it off at the 44 and returned it to the 39. Southernland hit Gallaher for 29 to the nine, and Sutton broke through to the two. Hawkins leaped into the end zone on the next play, and the Pirates were out to a 27-16 lead with 9:52 left. A run for the PAT again was stopped.

The Citadel, behind Crosby's passing, drove back down the field, but the Pirate defense finally dug in and stopped them on downs at the ECU eight.

The clincher was then set up after the Bucs punted. Harold Randolph intercepted Crosby and returned it to the Citadel 37. Green raced 33 yards around the left side to the four, and Sam Harrell hit to the one. He dove over on the next play and Creech kicked to make it 34-16 with 13 seconds left to play.

The Pirates rushed to 233 yards, less than coach Pat Dye likes, with Sutton leading the way with 82. Green was next with 70.

Southerland hit three of six passes, while Green made three of four for 89 and 20 yards, respectively.

Crosby paced The Citadel's attack, hitting 20 of 35 passes for 185 yards. The Bulldogs got only 73 yards rushing.

Terps Crush Duke

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Steve Atkins rushed for 116 yards and scored on three short touchdown runs at the end of drives set in motion by Larry Dick's passing as Maryland trounced Duke 31-13 in an Atlantic Coast Conference homecoming game Saturday.

The surprisingly easy victory gave the Terps a 3-1 ACC record and left them in contention for a possible fourth consecutive league championship. First-place North Carolina, 2-0, plays at Maryland next Saturday.

Atkins, hampered by a knee injury most of the season, has rushed for 350 yards while leading Maryland through three consecutive triumphs for a 4-3 over-all mark.

The 225-pound junior tailback scored on runs of one and two yards in the 24-7 first half, and added another two-yard TD in the third period.

Dick completed 12 of 15 passes for 249 yards, including a 61-yarder to Eric Sievers who set up a one-yard TD run by Alvin Maddox and a 17-0 lead at the start of the second quarter.

The junior quarterback also set up the first two scores by Atkins with third-down completions to Chuck White at the Duke six and two, and passed for 41 yards prior to a 25-yard field goal by Ed Loncar midway through the first quarter.

Duke, 1-2 in the ACC and 3-4 over-all, scored on a two-yard pass from Mike Dunn to Glenn Sandefur with 2:03 left in the half and on Dunn's six-yard run in the final quarter.

Duke's bid for a second fourth-quarter touchdown ended when John Balbante recovered a fumble on the Blue Devils' 19.

A first quarter fumble recovery by Charlie Johnson at the Duke 31 set up Maryland's first touchdown, and the Terps drove for another score to make it 17-0 following a bad center snap on an attempted 40 yard field goal by Duke.

The Blue Devils played without linebacker Carl McGee, who had started 27 consecutive games and was the team's leading tackler this season. He was sidelined with a shoulder injury.

Maryland has defeated Duke four consecutive times. This was the first visit to Byrd Stadium by the Blue Devils since 1969.

Cavaliers Kick Past Wake

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Punter Russ Henderson added placekicking to his list of specialties Saturday, booting a school-record four field goals that lifted Virginia's Cavaliers to a 12-10 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over Wake Forest's Deacons.

Henderson, who had never previously attempted a college field goal, rallied the Cavaliers to their first victory of the season and first in their last nine starts, with a 34-yard shot with five seconds left in the game.

Earlier, the junior from Amherst, Va., had connected from 31, 19 and 27 yards to give Virginia, now 1-3 in the ACC and 1-5-1 overall, a 9-0 lead with 10:50 left.

But the Deacons, now 0-4 in the conference and 1-6 overall, very nearly made Wake Virginia a late-game victim with a 37-yard field goal by Frank Harnisch and a 69-yard touchdown drive that ended with Jimmy Hargrove plunging a yard with 2:14 remaining.

Harnisch's extra point put the Deacons ahead 10-9, but Tommy Vigorito returned the ensuing kickoff 46 yards to the Virginia 46 to pave the way for Henderson's game-winning kick.

Quarterback Chip Mark completed three passes for 31 yards and Vigorito added four more yards on two bursts up the middle to set the stage for Henderson.

Until Harnisch's field goal midway the fourth quarter, the Deacons were unable to crack a surprisingly tough Virginia defense led by comberback Derrick Glasper and nose guard Sam Pfabe.

Glasper had a pair of pass interceptions, including one to set up Henderson's first field goal, and Pfabe broke through to drop Wake Forest runners for losses in several key situations.

Wake Forest crossed midfield only once in the first half, driving to the Virginia 17 only to have McDougald dropped for no gain on a fourth-and-one try.

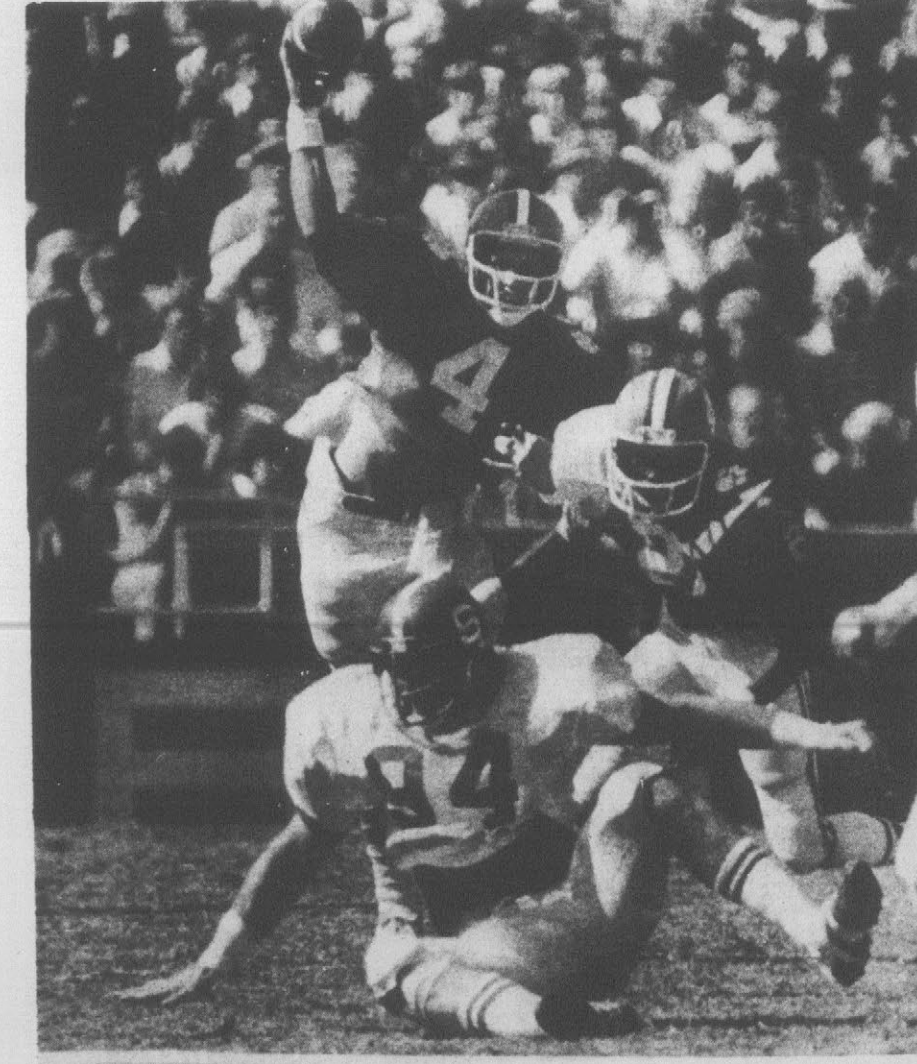

Henderson, who had kicked a three-pointer in the opening quarter, booted his second in the second period after Virginia drove 52 yards only to stall at the Wake Forest two.

He booted No. 3 with 4:10 gone in the fourth quarter.

The Deacons began to dent the Virginia defense when they drove 49 yards to the Cavaliers'

Tiger Rally Nips Wolfpack

Clemson's Steve Fuller (4) launches a pass while Warren Ratchford (2) block State's Tom Prongay.

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — With scouts from the Liberty, Peach and Tangerine Bowls and a crowd of more than 50,000 looking on, the 20th-ranked Clemson Tigers held off the North Carolina State offense and got a 19-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Steve Fuller to Jerry Butler to beat the Wolfpack, 7-3, Saturday.

The victory was Clemson's sixth straight after losing to Maryland in its opener and kept its hopes alive for the Atlantic Coast Conference title. The Tigers' 3-1 record is slightly under North Carolina, 2-0. The defeat, second in three league outings and third in seven games, dimmed the Wolfpack's hopes for the title.

Tiger Coach Charley Pell couldn't say enough about the defensive unit. "It's unbelievable how they throttled that long list of all-stars that the N.C. State team has," he told reporters, pointing out State got no closer than the 29, the drive on which they scored.

State was first in total, rushing and scoring offense and second in pass offense in the ACC going into the game. The Tigers were second in all defensive categories.

Willie Jordan fielded a State punt at his goal line and streaked 75 yards to the Wolfpack 25 to set up the touchdown.

Fuller threw one incomplete pass, then ran six yards to the 19 before tossing the winning touchdown to Butler at the 10-yard line and the speedster twisted and made it into the end zone standing up. Obed Ariri kicked the extra point, his 14th in a row on the season to close out the scoring.

State had taken a 3-0 lead in the third quarter on Jay Sherrill's 39-yard field goal after the Wolfpack had been stopped at the Clemson 22 following the second-half kickoff.

State had plenty of time to catch up with the Tigers after Butler's touchdown, but interceptions by Clemson's Steve Ryan with 5:58 left in the game and another by Rick Varn with 1:13 left in the game sealed the victory for the Tigers.

Fuller completed 8 of 21 passes for 97 yards. The total pushed him to 2,073 yards in his career, sixth best in Clemson records. He performed despite a hand injury that had kept him out of practice all week.

Butler's four receptions for 61 yards gave him a career total of 1,002, also the sixth best mark in that category. His career catch total of 61 is sixth best at Clemson, too.

State's best performer was runningback Ted Brown, who gained 122 yards in 21 carries. But the most spectacular Wolfpack effort was the punting of quarterback Johnny Evans, who had a 47-yard-average in seven kicks. His longest was 59 yards.

Heels Blank USC

By BILL WELCH
 Associated Press Writer
 CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina quarterback Matt Kupec threw a 19-yard pass to Delbert Powell for a touchdown Saturday and freshman Amos Lawrence scampered for another as the Tar Heels shut out South Carolina, 17-0.

North Carolina turned two Gamecock fumbles into scores, including a 43-yard field goal by Tom Biddle, in what was a duel of defenses and punters.

Playing before a crowd of 48,250, UNC ran its record to 5-2, while the loss left South Carolina at 4-4.

The Tar Heels got their first touchdown when after South Carolina freshman runningback George Rogers fumbled at his own 42 early in the third quarter.

Lawrence then broke up the middle for 20 yards and two plays later Kupec hit Powell inside the 5 and he fell in for the score. Biddle's extra-point attempt failed, leaving UNC's lead at 9-0.

Lawrence added the final touchdown on a 2-yard run with 1:22 remaining in the game, then scored a two-point conversion on a pitch.

South Carolina made its deepest penetration in the fourth quarter, to the UNC 23, on the running of Rogers and another freshman, Johnnie Wright. But Gamecock kicker Britt Parrish was wide on a 41-yard field-goal attempt.

The Gamecocks had another chance to score when they reached the North Carolina 36 late in the third quarter, but Eddie Leopard was short on a 53-yard field-goal try.

Biddle's field goal, the longest of his career, came with just over one minute remaining in the first half and capped a drive that began when UNC's Bunn Rhames recovered a fumble at his own 40 by South Carolina's Spencer Clark.

South Carolina quarterback Ron Bass desperately turned to the air late in the game and the Tar Heels' Ricky Barden intercepted a Bass pass with less than one minute remaining, returning it 43 yards to the Gamecock 5. The game ended with UNC at the South Carolina 2.

Gamecock punter Max Runger kept the Tar Heels deep in their own territory much of the game, kicking twice to inside the UNC 5-yard line and punting one time for 60 yards. But South Carolina was never able to capitalize. Clark's fumble at the UNC 40 stopped the Gamecocks' deepest drive of the first half.

On its first possession of the game, UNC moved to the South Carolina 32, where the Gamecocks nailed Kupec on second and third downs, forcing a 49-yard field goal attempt by Biddle that fell short.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Hoider Ted Burgmeier turned a bad center snap into a two-point conversion pass and scampered 20 yards on a fake field goal as 11th-ranked Notre Dame scored two quick touchdowns late in the second period and crushed fifth-ranked Southern California 49-19 Saturday.

A capacity crowd of 59,075 in Notre Dame Stadium, plus a national television audience, saw the underdog Irish overcome a pair of heart-breaking fumbles and hand Southern Cal its worst defeat since a 51-0 drubbing by Notre Dame in 1966.

Notre Dame scored on Joe Montana's one-yard sneak with 2:37 left in the half to snap a 7-7 tie and boosted its lead to 22-7 with 20 seconds left when Montana passed 13 yards to Ken MacAfee.

The Irish put the game away at 35-7 with two more touchdowns.

The tie-breaking touchdown followed Leroy Leopold's recovery of a fumble by Charle White, USC's star tailback, at the losers' 14 with 4½ minutes left in the first half and the score knotted at 7-7. White's bobble came on the first play after Notre Dame's David Mitchell fumbled at the five and Southern Cal's Ed Gutierrez recovered at the eight.

Buckeyes Win On Long Plays

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Ohio State's fourth-ranked Buckeyes needed big plays from Ron Springs, Rod Gerald and Jeff Logan to overcome six turnovers Saturday and defeat winless Northwestern 35-15 to take sole possession of first place in the Big Ten.

While the Buckeyes were fumbling their way past Northwestern, Minnesota upset top-ranked Michigan 16-0 to drop the number one Wolverines out of a first place tie in the Big Ten.

Springs ripped off a 72-yard run from scrimmage to set up Ohio State's first touchdown after Northwestern had taken a surprising 3-0 lead. Gerald went 24 yards for a touchdown on a keeper and Logan's 63-yard run from scrimmage set up Ohio State's final touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Ohio State is now 4-0 in the Big Ten and 6-1 for the season while Northwestern suffered its eighth straight loss, seventh this season and 23rd in the last 24 games.

Northwestern turned an Ohio State fumble by Logan on the second play from scrimmage into a 44-yard field goal by Sam Poulos for its 3-0 lead.

Ohio State struck for two quick touchdowns late in the period for a 14-3 lead. Springs went 72 yards to the Northwestern eight-yard line and Joel Payton needed two rushes to take it over from the four-yard line. Tom Cousineau then recovered a Northwestern fumble and the Buckeyes drove 45 yards in eight plays with Logan scoring from the five-yard line.

Ohio State controlled play in the second half and boosted its lead to 35-9 before Northwestern scored on a 14-yard run by Harold Gilmore late in the game.

Furman Tops Apps

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Tailback Jimmy Kiser gained 153 yards on 31 carries to lead Furman to a 28-20 Southern Conference victory over Appalachian State Saturday.

Kiser helped the Paladins gain 306 yards total rushing and hold off a strong secondhalf Appalachian State surge. Kiser was Furman's starting quarterback until last week when he replaced injured tailback Mark Stowers.

Furman improved its record to 4-2-1 overall and 3-0-1 in the conference. Appalachian State fell to 2-5 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

Furman held the ball for all but 10 plays in the second quarter as they executed two long drives to run up a 14-0 halftime lead.

Furman's first scoring drive in the second period consumed six minutes as the Paladins went 75 yards in 15 plays. Quarterback David Henderson capped the drive with a 2-yard touchdown run.

On their next possession, the Paladins marched 77 yards in 22 plays. The drive ended when fullback Kent Woerner scored from a yard out with 1:15 left in the first half.

Early in the third quarter, Paladin Bobby Church recovered a fumble on the Appalachian 18 and five plays later, Henderson hit tight end Brette Simmons with a 4-yard touchdown pass.

Appalachian came back late in the third quarter with two quick scores. Fullback Arnold Floyd scored on a 3-yard run, capping a 76-yard drive.

Just over a minute later, cornerback Pat Showalter picked off a Henderson pass and returned it 28 yards for a touchdown.

Navy Shells W&M

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Tailback Joe Gattuso ran for 251 yards and two touchdowns and hit split end Phil McConkey with a 20-yard scoring pass in Navy's 42-17 homecoming victory over William & Mary Saturday.

Navy quarterback Bob Leszczynski also ran for a touchdown and passed for two others as the Midshipmen put together their best offensive performance in winning four games and losing three this season.

Gattuso easily broke his previous best single-game rushing record, a 159-yard performance against Syracuse last year. In addition to carrying the ball 29 times against William & Mary, he also threw one pass for a touchdown and caught three passes for 25 yards.

William & Mary, dropping its fourth game in seven outings, scored on a 65-yard pass from quarterback Tom Rozantz to Joe Manderfield, a 40-yard field goal by Steven Libassi and a 27-yard burst through the middle by fullback Craig Cook in the final period.

The Midshipmen moved ahead 14-0 early in the second period and the game was never in doubt after that. Navy dominated the game both offensively and defensively, and William & Mary never seriously threatened except for its three scoring drives.

Spiders End Slump

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Demetri Kornegay's one-yard touchdown drive in the fourth period, Richmond's first second-half score this season, proved to be the margin of victory Saturday as the Spiders defeated Virginia Tech, 17-14, in college football.

The triumph broke the Spiders' three-game losing streak and improved their record to 25 while the Gobblers dropped to 1-4-1.

Kornegay's winning touchdown, with 11 minutes left, culminated a 44-yard drive highlighted by Dave Taylor's 23-yard pass to Buster Jackson to give the Spiders a first down on Virginia Tech's 16.

Richmond's other scores came on Taylor's 13-yard touchdown run and an 18-yard field goal by Steve Adams.

Quarterback David Lamie accounted for all of the Gobblers' scoring, twice running seven yards for touchdowns.

USM Slips By MSU

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Defensive back Mike Crenshaw sprinted 36 yards with an interception to give Southern Mississippi's Golden Eagles a 14-7 victory over Mississippi State in college football Saturday.

It was Southern Mississippi's third victory of the season over a Southeastern Conference team. Earlier the Eagles beat Auburn and Mississippi.

Southern, which had capitalized on a third quarter break for its first score against State, had muffed two other scoring chances and seemed destined for a tie until Crenshaw speared the pass from reserve

The Mountaineers missed a scoring opportunity early in the fourth period when Gary Davis' 23-yard field goal attempt failed.

Mid-way through the fourth period, Stowers, who came in briefly for Kiser, gave the Paladins some breathing room with a 2-yard touchdown run.

Appalachian's final score came on a 12-yard pass by Robby Price to fullback Scott McConnell with 2:24 left in the game.

Furman's defense was successful in holding Mountaineer Emmett Hamilton to only 68 yards rushing. Coming into the contest, he was averaging 109 yards per game.

Cats Dump Maine

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Western Carolina quarterback Mike Pusey completed 18 of 21 passes for 239 yards and four touchdowns Saturday as the Catamounts smothered the visiting University of Maine, 41-20.

Three of Pusey's scoring passes were gathered in by split end Wayne Tolleson, who also kicked three extra-points for the Cats.

Western got off to a 12-0 lead on two Pusey-to-Tolleson touchdown passes covering 30 and 15 yards. But Maine came back on a 67-yard run by tailback Rudy DiPietro and a 2-yard run by fullback Jim Hood to take a 13-12 lead.

With less than two minutes remaining in the first half, Pusey again connected with Tolleson, this time on a 7-yard touchdown pass. A two-point conversion pass from Pusey to Jeff Ciccone gave the Catamounts a 20-13 lead.

The teams traded touchdowns in the third quarter, the Cats scoring on a 3-yard run by tailback Darrell Lipford and Maine answering with a 28-yard scoring pass from Jack Cosgrove to Rich McCormick.

But WCU broke the game open at the end, with Lipford scoring again on a 5-yard run and Pusey throwing his fourth scoring pass, this one to Ciccone.

Lehigh Bombs VMI

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Mike Rieker connected on 14 of 24 passes for 229 yards and two touchdowns to lead Lehigh over VMI 30-20 in college football Saturday.

Carl Reese intercepted a VMI pass and raced 47 yards for a score with 2:13 left to sew up the upset.

The Engineers went ahead for good in the third period on Ken Wood's 45-yard field goal against the wind. The drive, which began on Lehigh's own 20, was sparked by a 31-yard pass from Rieker to split end Steve Kreider.

VMI took the opening kickoff 80 yards, scoring on Robby Clark's 13-yard pass to Steve Oddi. Lehigh came back with TDs by Dave Aprill and Don Van Orden before the first quarter ended.

Rieker hit Kreider with a three-yard scoring pass in the second period before VMI stormed back on a one-yard plunge by Andre Gibson.

Clark, who completed 5 of 14 attempts for 65 yards, sneaked over from the one in the third quarter to tie the score at 20-20. The Engineers took the ensuing kickoff and were again driving for the goal line when a penalty set the ball back to the 35 and Wood was called in for his crucial three-pointer.

Gibson led all rushers with 141 yards in 28 attempts and one TD for the Keydets. Kreider caught six passes for 134 yards and one touchdown for Lehigh.

It was the Engineers' fifth victory in seven games, while the Keydets' record fell to 3-3.

SW La. In Loss

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Halfback Anthony Anderson scored twice as Temple built a 20-point lead in three quarters, then held off a fourth quarter Ragin' Cajun rally to beat Southwestern Louisiana 27-20 in college football Saturday.

SWL quarterback Roy Henry, 11th in the nation in passing, led the late Cajun surge. With the Owls ahead 27-7 after three, SWL scored 43 seconds into the final period when Barry Herbert went over from the three, capping an 18-play, 67-yard drive.

The visitors closed to 27-20 at the 7:56 mark when Henry

Pate Holds Off Miller To Lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Jerry Pate, the sensational tour sophomore who has captured three tournaments including the 1976 U.S. Open, fired a one-under par 69 Saturday to hold off Johnny Miller's challenge and taken a three-stroke lead after the third round of the $125,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament.

Pate, 24, has a 54-hole total of 200, 10-under-par over the hilly, 6,791-yard, par 70 Green Island Country Club course.

Miller, who has won 17 tournaments but is winless since the 1976 Bob Hope Desert Classic 20 months ago, shot a 68 for a 203 total.

Miller, suffering through the worst year of his career, got within two shots of the lead with a birdie on the 17th hole.

However, Pate, in the next and last threesome, followed with a birdie of his own to regain the three-stroke margin.

Miller finished with four birdies and two bogeys. Pate, who won the Canadian Open a year ago and took the Phoenix Open last January before suffering a shoulder injury, had two bogeys and an eagle-two on the 335-yard par 4 sixth hole.

Defending champion Mac McLendon led a group at 205, five strokes back. The others were former University of Florida golfers Andy Bean and Wally Armstrong and veteran George Archer.

McLendon had a 70, Bean a 64, Armstrong a 69 and Archer a 68.

Four other golfers were at 206, including Phil Hancock, who had a 68, Larry Ziegler with a 66, Steve Taylor, with a 65, and Miller Barber with a 68.

U.S. Open champion Hubert Green had a 70 for 210 while Lee Trevino shot his second consecutive 74 for 216.

Unknown Jeff Mitchell of Fair Oaks, Calif., using an eight-iron, knocked in a hole-in-one on the par-three, 165-yard 17th hole. It wasn't nearly enough, however, as he fired his third straight 72 for a 216 total.

Rampants Overcome Fumbles To Squeeze Out 24-21 Victory

By The Ankles
Rose High School running back Mack Washington (42) is caught by the ankles by an unidentified Northern

Nash player Friday night. Washington scored two touchdowns and rushed for 102 yards in Rose's 24-21 victory. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

Reflector Sports Editor
RED OAK — Despite giving away two, and maybe three touchdowns, Rose High School's offense was able to come up with the big play and capture a 24-21 victory over Northern Nash Friday night.

The Rampants had to struggle back from behind three times in the game before finally salting it away after a Bill Collier interception in the closing seconds setting things.

Hard-running Mack Washington scored two touchdowns for the Rampants, on runs of two and five yards, while quarterback Joey Mattheis scored on a one-yard plunge.

Yusef Barakat provided three PAT kicks and a 30-yard field goal that meant the difference in the contest.

Randy Smith got Northern's first touchdown on an 11-yard fumble return, while Kelvin Sessoms scored on a two-yard dive. Mike Marshmon got away on a 71-yard scamper for the other score late in the game, while Dwayne Pridgen accounted for all three PAT kicks.

The Rampants completely dominated the statistics of the game, and if you didn't look at the scoreboard, you might think it was a very lopsided game.

The Rose offense ground out 265 yards on the ground and added 41 on the aerial route for a second straight game over 300 yards. The defense, meanwhile, held the Knights to just 82 yards on the ground (71 on that one play) and 41 through the air.

The cold night air, however, turned fingers into icicles as the ball bounced off the field a number of times. Northern lost three of four fumbles, while Rose lost it three times and bobbed it four more times.

Those miscues were almost the key to the Rampant misfortunes but for a late drive of 55 yards that resulted in the winning touchdown.

Rose appeared headed for the end zone early, as it moved from midfield after a punt on its first series. But after reaching the 13 of the Knights, a Mattheis pitch caromed off the shoulder of Reggie Selby and was recovered by James Jones of the Knights and returned all the way to the Knight 48.

Rose again held, but when Collier went back to field the punt, he fumbled it at the 11, and Smith scooped it up and raced into the end zone with it. Pridgen's kick gave the Knights a 7-0 lead with 5:15 left.

The Rampants came right back to get onto the scoreboard on Barakat's field goal. The drive began on the Rose 30 and was helped along by a 36-yard scamper on the second play by Mike Joyner. The Rampants had a first and five at the Knight nine, but two plays resulted in no gain, and on third down, Mattheis was sacked back on the 14. Barakat then kicked the 30-yarder to cut it to 7-3 with 1:36 left in the quarter.

Rose got the ball in good field position after Mike Shank recovered a fumble at the Knight 29 early in the second quarter. Five plays accounted for 27 of the needed yards, and Washington went over right tackle on the sixth for the score. Barakat provided Rose with a 10-7 lead with 6:31 left.

Northern nearly got away on the kickoff as Smith received and after running 10 yards, handed off to Sessoms. That fooled the Rampants just long enough for Sessoms to sneak down the sidelines and make it all the way to the Rose 20.

Northern fumbled it away on third down, but Rose coughed it right back up on the 29. Sessoms picked up 18 yards on first down, and Smith got eight more to the three. Rose was penalized a yard to the two, and Sessoms cracked over from there, diving into the end zone on a sweep. Pridgen put the Knights ahead, 14-10 with his kick with 2:39 left in the half.

Northern got off an early threat in the second half, moving from its own 48 to the Rose 19 before a clipping penalty killed the drive.

Rose then took over on the 39 and drove for the go-ahead score. On third and seven from the 42, Mattheis hit Billy Roberson for a first down at the Knight 49. Joyner picked up 14 yards in two lugs, and after four by Washington, Mattheis added nine to the 22. Rose pushed on to the 13, and Mattheis again got away, this time going to the one. He sneaked over on the next play, and after the kick, Rose led, 17-14.

But the lead was short-lived. Northern got the ball at the 45 after an on-side kick by Rose failed. A penalty against the Knights moved it back to the 31, and a sack dumped it two yards further back. But on the next play, with the Knights facing a second and 24, the Rampants defense apparently went to sleep.

Marshmon took the ball down the line and cut around the right end and found no one in front of him, as he raced 71 yards to return the Knights to the lead, 21-17 with 8:34 remaining.

But Rose rose to the task. Starting on its own 45 after a 36-yard return by Robert Morehead on the kickoff, the Rampants drove. A fumble on second down nearly proved costly, setting up a third and 20. But Mattheis found Roberson for a 22-yard aerial and a first down, and on fourth and two from the 35, Washington burst through for 13 yards, failing to go all the way only when he lost his balance.

Mattheis pushed it to the 16 on first down, and Morehead made a gutsy 11 yard carry on the next play, shaking off several Northern tacklers. That put the ball on the five, and Washington cracked over from there, with Barakat adding the PAT for a 24-21 lead with 3:16 to go.

Northern managed one first down before Collier came up with his game-clinching interception.

Washington finished with 102 yards rushing, while Joyner had 82 for the Rampants.

The win boosted the Rampant record to 5-3 overall and 2-1 in the league. Northern fell off to 2-6 overall and 0-3 in Division I play.

The Rampants travel to Wilson on Friday for their last road contest of the year.

Minnesota Shocks Mich.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sophomore placekicker Paul Rogind booted three field goals and a swarming Minnesota defense stymied Michigan as the Gophers shut out the No. 1 ranked Wolverines 16-0 Saturday in a Big Ten football game.

Sophomore quarterback Mark Carlson started his first game for Minnesota, completing 6 of 10 passes for 60 yards.

Rogind kicked field goals of 41 and 37 yards in the first half, and Marion Barber scored on a three-yard run to give Minnesota a 13-0 halftime lead.

Rogind added a 31-yard field goal just over four minutes remaining in the game to complete the scoring.

Michigan lost possession three times on fumbles, while the unranked Gophers played virtually mistake-free football and harassed Wolverine quarterback Rick Leach all afternoon, intercepting two passes in the final quarter.

Leach did set an all-time Michigan total offense record while gaining 122 yards. It gave him 3,727 career yards to break Don Moorhead's 1968-1970 record by 86 yards.

Longhorns Undefeated

DALLAS (AP) — Texas tailback Earl Campbell rambled for a career-high 213 yards in the rain Saturday, splattering tackles and using six tear-away jerseys and the No. 2 ranked Longhorns crushed spirited Southern Methodist 30-14 in a Southwestern Conference game of national impact.

Texas' victory, coupled with No. 1 ranked Michigan's 16-0 loss to Minnesota sent Longhorns partisans dancing on the bleachers of the rain-soaked Cotton Bowl.

Texas, now 6-0 and 3-0 in SWC play, was stunned early in the first period on an 11-yard touchdown pass from freshman quarterback Mike Ford to Emanuel Tolbert then unleashed a 20-point avalanche in the last six minutes of the half.

Russell Erxleben kicked field goals of 35, 44 and 24 yards and Campbell thundered 58 yards for a touchdown running over two tacklers

Wildcats Romp Past Bulldogs

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Derrick Ramsey fired three touchdown passes, Joe Bryant boomed two 51-yard field goals and Art Still led a vicious defense that carried 8th-ranked Kentucky to a 33-0 Southeastern Conference football victory over Georgia Saturday.

Still, who was in on five tackles for losses, spearheaded an awesome Wildcat defense that held Georgia to only 64 yards through three periods before the Bulldogs reached the Kentucky 26 against reverses in the final quarter.

It marked the first time in 58 games that Georgia had been blanked, dating back to a 14-0 Tennessee victory in 1972. It also was only the third time Georgia was shut out in its 14 seasons under Coach Vince Dooley.

The game was played before a sell-out crowd of 59,000 including Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, who arrived at halftime and received a rousing ovation from the crowd.

Ramsey hurried touchdown passes of one yard to Freddie Williams, 17 yards to Dave Trospier and 12 yards to Felix Wilson.

Penn Blows Out W. Va.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Tenth-ranked Penn State scored three touchdowns in the first four minutes and 46 seconds with the help of a blocked punt and fumble recovery and went on to blow out West Virginia 49-28 Saturday for its sixth win in seven games.

The Mountaineers, however, turned in the game's most spectacular play, a third period 100-yard return of an intercepted pass by senior defensive halfback Tom Pridemore.

But seven turnovers betrayed West Virginia in a futile effort to beat the Nittany Lions for the first time in 22 years, and sent the Mountaineers down to a third loss against four victories.

Almost before a crowd of 62,108 had settled in its seats, Penn State middle guard Randy Sidler blocked a punt and teammate Matt Millen ran the loose ball three yards into the end zone.

On the next series, West Virginia punted, and on first down, quarterback Chuck Fusina threw the first of two touchdown passes, a 41-yarder to Mickey Shuler.

Pitt Rallies Past Syracuse

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Matt Cavanaugh's one yard touchdown run with 1:04 to play, set up by a last ditch 45-yard pass from Cavanaugh to Gordon Jones, rallied the 14th-ranked University of Pittsburgh to a 28-21 football victory over Syracuse Saturday.

Unranked Syracuse which fell to 2-6, held a 21-14 lead into the final quarter.

However, Pitt halfback Fred "Fast Freddie" Jacobs took a short pass from Cavanaugh and turned it into a 58-yard touchdown play with 9:52

Each side had a 50-yard plus field goal try blocked in the ensuing minutes.

There were just over two minutes to play when Cavanaugh lofted his 45-yard pass to Jones, who carried to the Syracuse one-yard line, and three plays later Cavanaugh sneaked off the right side for the touchdown that raised Pitt's record to 5-1-1 and kept alive the Panthers' hopes for a major bowl bid.

First-Half Flurry Downs Ayden-Grifton

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — Like a heavyweight champion, Farmville Central delivered an early knockdown punch of 19 second-quarter points and then kept its opponent on the ropes for the rest of the way to knock off a leading title-contender Ayden-Grifton, 32-15, Friday night.

The victory was a key blow in the Jaguars' Eastern Carolina Conference title defense as it leaves them the only undefeated team in the league with a 5-0 mark. Ayden-Grifton, the ECC's only other unbeaten going into the game, drops to 4-1.

Farmville Central's Donald Reid who rushed for 179 yards, did most of the punching for the Jaguars, scoring three touchdowns on runs of one, 43 and seven yards. Quarterback Donald Freeman threw scoring tosses for the other two Jaguar TD's, a 27-yarder to Rufus Mayo and a 19-yarder to Billy McLawhorn. Ronald Reid added two PAT kicks.

Ayden-Grifton's Terry Morris scored a touchdown and a two-point conversion for the Chargers, while quarterback David Smith teamed up with Sheldon McCarter on a 19-yard pass for the other touchdown; Paul Setliff kicked a PAT.

The Chargers got in the first blow of the game, taking advantage of a Jaguar turnover to grab take a 7-0 lead in the contest. The Jags, taking the opening kickoff, appeared to be driving, moving from their own 35 to the Ayden-Grifton 29, but a flat pass from Freeman was intercepted by Charger Ricky Harris and returned to the Jaguar 12, a total of 74 yards. James Tyson made a touchdown-saving tackle at that point.

It took only two plays for the Chargers to score, however, with Morris getting behind Mike Teachey's block with 6:31 on the clock. Setliff kicked the conversion.

The Jaguars came roaring back as James Tyson's kickoff return of 35 yards gave them a first down on the Ayden-Grifton 47. Five plays later, they had a first-and-goal at the nine after a 19-yard run by Donald Reid.

Reid carried down to the one and then took it over the middle on the next play. The Jags' PAT kick was wide to the left and the score was 7-6 with 3:46 in the first.

An exchange of punts, a 36-yarder by Farmville's Scott Evans and a 22-yarder by Smith, put the Jaguars in good field position at the Charger 27. Two running plays gained nothing, but on third down Freeman hit Mayo on a slant pass and he took the ball in untouched to give Farmville the lead.

Just four plays later, Mayo hit McCarter after a pass reception and forced a fumble which was recovered by Evans at the Charger 43.

On first down, Freeman handed the ball to Reid on a quick opener over the left side and he went all the way, making it 18-7 with 5:26 remaining in the half.

It took only three plays for the Jaguars to get the ball again as Morris, taking a pitch around the left side after a long pass had moved the ball deep into Farmville territory, was hit by Woody Edwards, jarring loose the ball, which was recovered by Ronald Reid and returned 11 yards to the Jaguar 29.

An unsportsmanlike conduct call against Ayden-Grifton helped move the ball out to the 47 where Freeman found McLawhorn with a 53-yard touchdown pass at the 3:23 mark. Ronald Reid finally connected on a kick to make it 25-7 at the half.

Ayden-Grifton made a bit of a game out of it early in the third quarter, staggering the Jaguars with a quick touchdown drive.

Clayton McLawhorn took a square-out pass from Smith and made a good run to the Farmville 44, a 20-yard pickup. Three carries by Morris and an offside penalty produced another first down at the Jaguar 30.

A loss on first down helped bring up a fourth-and-one at the 21, but Morris picked up two yards on a pitchout to keep the drive alive.

On the next play, McCarter came out of the end zone to take a pass from Smith and then made a good fake to score. Morris ran the conversion to make it 25-15 with 6:24 in the third.

The remainder of the contest was a series on goal line stands by the Chargers, who were kept inside their own ten for most of the rest of the way.

Farmville Central had three first-and-goal situations in the final period, but was stopped by the Charger defense at the six inch line, the six yard line and the 17 yard line.

The Jags' final possession of the game produced one last touchdown not a knockout blow, good enough to let them win going away.

They took over at the 19 after a 10-yard Charger punt and Mayo carried down to the seven on first down. Donald Reid then took it in over the middle and Ronald Reid booted the PAT to make it 32-15. The final score came with just 56 seconds left in the game.

The win gives the Jaguars what would appear to be an insurmountable lead in the ECC race.

Farmville Central plays again next week when it hosts North Pitt and the Chargers will also

Patience Helps Chicago Bulls Win

By The Associated Press
In a league that plays "Beat The Clock," patience can sometimes be a virtue.

Chicago's basketball team had it and Indiana's didn't. The result was a 122-119 National Basketball Association victory for the Bulls Friday night.

"We had the game won, but we lost it because we weren't patient," said Indiana Coach Bobby Leonard.

The Pacers had a 113-103 lead with 6:42 remaining, but were unable to play their game at the end. The Bulls were able to play theirs, and that was the obvious difference.

Norm Van Lier provided the killing points for Chicago with 1:43 left, stealing a pass and racing the length of the floor for a dramatic three-point play.

In other NBA action, the Denver Nuggets beat the Los Angeles Lakers 106-101, the Washington Bullets stopped the Detroit Pistons 117-109, the New Orleans Jazz defeated the New Jersey Nets 111-103, the Kansas City Kings edged the Houston Rockets 95-94, the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Seattle SuperSonics 106-99 and the Golden State Warriors tripped the San Antonio Spurs 122-117.

Van Lier's three-point play gave the Bulls a 120-117 edge and Scott May, who contributed nine of his 17 points in the fourth quarter, added two insurance free throws to put the game away for Chicago.

Nuggets 106, Lakers 101
Dan Issel scored nine of his game-high 23 points in the final quarter to rally Denver in the final two minutes for a victory over Los Angeles. The Nuggets, playing without scoring leader David Thompson because of a groin injury, trailed by nine points going into the final period before staging a comeback.

Bullets 117, Pistons 109
Washington built a big lead on the third-quarter shooting of Larry Wright and Mitch Kupchak, then held off a rally to defeat Detroit. Kupchak, who came off the bench late in the first quarter, finished with 29 points and Wright had 19 before fouling out.

Jazz 111, Nets 103
Pete Maravich scored 41 points, including 16 in a decisive third period, to lead New Orleans over New Jersey. The loss spoiled the Nets' home debut before a crowd of 4,960 at the Rutgers University Athletic Century.

Kings 95, Rockets 94
Lucius Allen scored 30 points and Kansas City held off a late surge to beat Houston. Rudy Tomjanovich and Moses Malone each had 19 points to pace Houston.

Trail Blazers 106
SuperSonics 99
Maurice Lucas scored 24 points and Bill Walton added 18 as Portland downed Seattle in the world champion's NBA season opener. The game was close until Portland scored seven straight points five minutes into the fourth quarter to take a 89-78 lead.

Warriors 122, Spurs 117
Rick Barry and Charles Johnson scored 10 points apiece in the final period to help Golden State come from behind to beat San Antonio.

Redskins Slip By N. Johnston

MICRO — Quarterback Glen Cargile teamed up with Larry Williams on a 54-yard scoring toss with just over a minute left to play to give Roanoke a 28-25 victory over North Johnston in high school football Friday night.

The game was a see-saw battle with Roanoke holding the lead at halftime, but giving it up in the third quarter. The Redskins got it back in the fourth, but North Johnston again went ahead before Roanoke's final TD.

Tony Whitfield scored for the Redskins on a 16-yard run in the first period, but North Johnston came back with two straight TD's from Rupert Langston. He recovered a fumble in the end zone and then took a 42-yard pass from Marion Frazier. Frazier kicked the conversion after the first touchdown.

Cargile broke into the end zone on a one-yard run in the second quarter and Charles Hines ran the PAT to give Roanoke a 14-13 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, however, Langston scored his third touchdown, this one on a 35-yard pass from Frazier.

Sutton Edmondson hauled in a one-yard pass from Cargile to put the Redskins back in the lead, but Frazier scored on a one-yard run to make it 25-22 North Johnston before Cargile hit Williams on the late scoring play.

The victory leaves the Redskins with a 4-4 overall record and 4-0 Eastern Plains Conference mark. North Johnston is now 5-3 and 2-2. The Redskins host West Edgemont next week.

Best: 240 Yards, Two TD's In Victory

BETHEL — Running back James Best scored two touchdowns and rushed for 240 yards as Greene Central spoiled North Pitt's homecoming Friday night with a 26-6 victory.

The Rams scored a touchdown in each quarter to gain the win, while North Pitt's only score came late in the final period.

Marc Tripp got things rolling for Greene Central with a 25-yard pass from Russell Brann and Best gave the Rams a 13-0 halftime lead when he scored on a 23-yard run and Donald Shaw kicked the PAT. Curt Everett blocked a punt in the end zone and then fell on the ball in the third quarter for the Rams, while Best added the team's final TD, a 25-yard run. Shaw kicked his second extra point after Best's final score.

The Panthers finally got on the scoreboard late in the game when Terry Moore hauled in a 75-yard pass from John Hunt.

The victory raises the Rams to 3-2 in the Eastern Carolina Conference and 6-2 overall. North Pitt is now 2-6 and 1-4. The Rams will host North Lenoir next week, while the Panthers will be on the road at Farmville Central.

Three Winless Left In NFL

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

When most National Football League teams get ready for action, the first things they look for are helmets and pads. But the San Francisco 49ers, Kansas City Chiefs and Tampa Bay Buccaneers are beginning to look for blindfolds and cigarettes.

After five weekends of action, the three teams can be excused if they equate kickoffs with executions. After all, they've been beaten every time they have taken the field.

They will try again Sunday to get their first victories of the year—the 49ers at home against the Detroit Lions, the Chiefs at San Diego against the Chargers and the Bucs at home against the Green Bay Packers.

Among the NFL's more fortunate teams Sunday, Denver will be at Cincinnati, Dallas at Philadelphia, Baltimore at New England, Houston at Pittsburgh, Cleveland at Buffalo, the New York Giants at Washington, Oakland at the New York Jets, Seattle at Miami, Atlanta at Chicago and New Orleans at St. Louis. Monday night's game is Minnesota at Los Angeles.

NFL

"When our team steps on the field, we've got to believe we're better than who we're facing," San Francisco quarterback Jim Plunkett says. The problem is, they haven't felt that way.

Having the Lions show up at this time won't help that feeling, even though Detroit has won only one of its last nine road games. Detroit hasn't yielded a touchdown in seven periods of play, since the opening quarter of a 14-7 loss to Minnesota Oct. 9.

Kansas City's problem, says Coach Paul Wiggin, is "too many turnovers. You just can't win in this league with so many turnovers."

So what does Kansas City have to face at San Diego? Only the American Football Conferences' No. 1 team in pass defense.

Speaking of defense... "I haven't seen very much of it out there lately," says Tampa Bay Coach John McKay. He's right. The Bucs are 11th in total defense in the AFC. Add to that the fact that they're last in conference offense and you can see why the Bucs are not only winless this year but since the team was formed 19 regular-season games ago.

While the 49ers, Chiefs and Bucs try and avoid 0-4, Denver, Dallas and Baltimore try to make their records 6-0. In another key matchup, Houston and Pittsburgh, which belted each other's quarterbacks out of action two weeks ago, meet again in Pittsburgh with at least a share of the AFC Central lead at stake. The Steelers and Oilers, along with Cleveland, are 3-2 at the top, one game ahead of Cincinnati.

Royals Rehire Herzog

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Whitey Herzog has dealt a blow to the rumor mill by agreeing to a one-year contract as manager of the two-time American League West champions, the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals' announcement Friday that Herzog had been rehired and his entire coaching staff offered new contracts came after speculation that Herzog might become manager of the California Angels or New York Mets.

The perfunctory rehiring ceremony might be thought to signal few changes in the club for next year. But not so, says Joe Burke, executive vice president and general manager of the Royals.

"They'll be some changes made," Burke said.

But when the trading season opens Monday and the re-entry draft begins Nov. 4, the Royals don't expect to be looking for an entire new team.

Ayden Middle

Roars To Win

FARMVILLE — Robert Carmon and Chris Strickland scored two touchdowns each to lead Ayden Middle School to a 26-8 victory over Farmville Middle School Friday.

Carmon scored on a 31-yard run and an eight-yard pass from Strickland, while Strickland also took the ball over on runs of 27 and four yards.

Braves Hire Clete Boyer

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Golden Glove-winning third baseman Clete Boyer has been hired by the Atlanta Braves to instruct the National League club's minor league infielders next season.

The Braves said Friday they had hired Boyer, 40, who played in five World Series with the New York Yankees. He was on Atlanta's Western Division championship team in 1969 and also played in Japan.

Boyer has the third best all-time fielding percentage among major league third basemen.

NORTH CAROLINA WATERFOWL biologists have been working for several years to get the more liberal wood duck limits which will be in effect for a portion of the season this year.

North Carolina duck hunters will be able to take up to five wood ducks in their daily harvest during the early duck season this year. The wood duck has been the number one duck in this state for many years, despite a two-bird daily limit.

According to Grady Barnes, assistant chief of the Wildlife Resources Commission's game division, N. C. waterfowl biologists have contended for a number of years that the wood duck is being underutilized in the southeastern states and that the limit should be greater than two birds per day.

The problem was convincing the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which sets the framework for migratory bird seasons, that a bigger limit would not diminish the wood duck population of this or other Atlantic Coast states. Representatives of northeastern states, where wood duck populations are relatively low, have argued that a more liberal wood duck bag limit in North Carolina and other southeastern states would further deplete their wood duck populations.

TO COMBAT THIS THEORY, this state and several other southeastern states began in 1975 to band wood ducks to obtain data on the movement and harvest of wood ducks reared in this section of the country. It was theorized that the southeastern wood duck population was largely separate from the northeastern population and that a liberal bag limit in the South would not decrease the number of birds returning to the North. The information obtained from the band returns substantiated the beliefs of the North Carolina biologists and the USFWS agreed to the five-bird limit for the early season.

The more-liberal bag limit does not apply to the second portion of the split duck season because most of the North Carolina-reared ducks migrate south during October and early November and are replaced by woodies from the North. To allow the five-bird limit during the late season could adversely affect the breeding populations of wood ducks returning to the northeastern states.

"We will continue banding wood ducks and evaluating band returns to determine what effect the five-bird limit has on the resident North Carolina wood duck population," said Barnes. "We don't believe that the five-bird limit during the early season will have an adverse effect on our wood duck population; but, if banding and band return data should indicate a decline, the bag limit would be cut back."

Danger In Small Boat Hunting

Numerous reports indicate that small boats of 16 feet or less can be extremely dangerous when used for hunting, according to Dick Stephenson of the U. S. Coast Guard's Greenville Flotilla.

Small boats pose a danger of capsizing if proper boating safety is not followed. Overloading a small boat with people and hunting gear is a common poor practice Stephenson said.

He advises hunters to not only carry out proper firearms safety, but also to adhere to boating safety when hunting from small craft.

Cale Win Will Clinch

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP)—Cale Yarborough can clinch his second consecutive Grand National stock car championship by winning the American 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway Sunday.

Yarborough, who has not won at the 1.017-mile speedway since capturing two 1975 events, leads fast-closing Benny Parsons by 378 points and six-time titlist Richard Petty by 396 points going into the race.

With only the Dixie 500 Nov. 6 and the Los Angeles Times 500 Nov. 20 left on the 1977 schedule after Sunday, Yarborough needs to capture Sunday's race to assure himself of an unbeatable 371-plus point advantage for the final two events.

The winner of a Grand National race earns 175 points and the leader of at least one lap receives a five-point bonus. The driver who leads the most laps earns another five-point bonus.

Yarborough is 177 points short of clinching the championship. So he actually could earn enough points by finishing second, for 170 points, and leading the most laps for a 10-point bonus.

Parsons, who has won the last two superspeedway events, moved ahead of Petty in the point race with an impressive victory in the National 500 two weeks ago.

Petty is the favorite for the Rockingham race, going after his fourth consecutive victory at this track and the 10th of his career. No other driver has won more than four events here.

BAY WINDOW SETS OFF EARLY AMERICAN

By Jerry Bishop

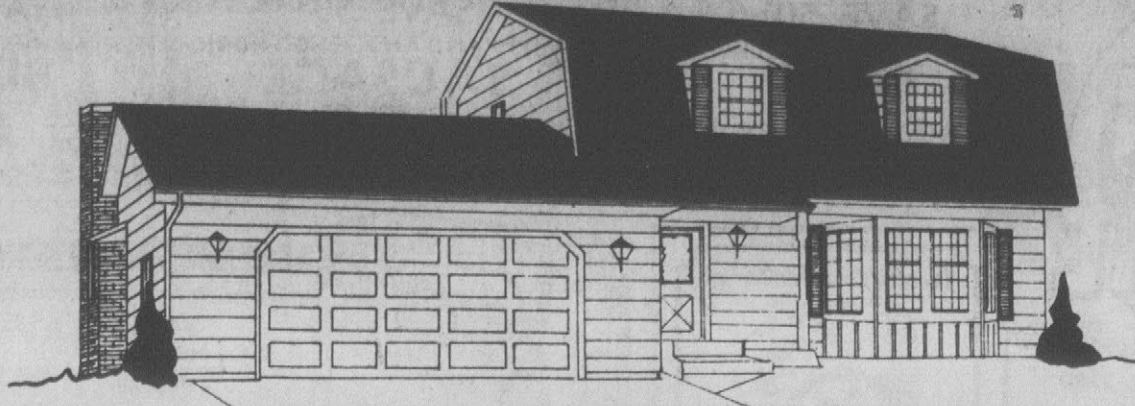

Encompassing two stories of well-zoned living space, the Worminster, a charming three bedroom plan, uses a gambrel roof, dormers, and a dominant bay window to recreate the mood of early America.

Authentic detailing adds to the exterior impact and extends to such minute matters as the double outdoor carriage lights that frame the garage. Inside, the plan strives for the modern standards of livability and calls for plentiful closet space, generous living space, and well-arranged work areas.

In true traditional style, the foyer offers access upwards to the sleeping level, back the hallway to the living areas, or directly into the formal living room at right.

The living room, bathed in light from the bay window, promises an ideal spot for entertaining friends and is wisely far removed from the informality of the family room. The logical connection at rear, is to the dining room, a large and versatile room. Sliding glass doors merge dining room with terrace, while inside, a breakfast bar connects the room to the kitchen, offering a place for quick meals as well as a bar parties.

Convenience is the aim of the kitchen and connecting utility room. In the kitchen, a planning desk, broom closet, and abundant cabinet space blend to make food preparation easier, while the utility room promises first floor laundry space that rules out the countless trips to the basement for laundry.

Completing the first level is the 23-ft. family room, destined to be the room used and perhaps enjoyed most. In cool weather, the room will be brightened by a crackling fire in the wood-burning fireplace, while in summer, it can be opened to include the terrace or enjoy the scenery via sliding glass doors.

Upstairs, the design shows three bedrooms, each substantial and each favored with a dormer window for charm. Two full baths and ample closet space are provided.

In just over 2000 sq. ft. of living space, the Worminster manages to include unrestricted areas for family living and a touch of the American past.

House Rental Mart Selective

By VIVIAN BROWN
 AP Newsfeatures

House rentals have reached the saturation point in some communities, and some people are concerned that their plans to retire to a house they enjoyed before a job transfer may need to be modified. One benefit of renting a house instead of selling it has been the ease of paying off a mortgage as one lives and conducts one's business in another community.

When many houses are available, competition is keen, and it is important to keep a house in marketable condition. To attract a tenant, it should look homelike and easily maintained — economy is a big factor — and the first impression is important. It should give an easy-care impression before the would-be tenant enters the building. In talking with some prospective tenants and a real estate broker about first impressions, certain factors persisted in their criticism of some homes.

—The color of the house can be a big drawback, two house seekers said. Their views indicate it is difficult to rent a house painted in a far-out color. One family refused even to enter a house that was painted a deep yellow. Primary colors should be carefully chosen so they are not overwhelming, one real-estate person commented. Pastels and pale colors are safe, and time-tested, early American deep colors are acceptable in some communities. White and pale grey may be the safest colors, if one is in doubt. It is a good idea not to try to mix an unusual color paint or to let a painter interpret the color for you.

—Attention-getters on lawns such as fake wishing wells or little plastic animals and unusual name signs that might have been left by previous tenants may put off a potential tenant even though such eye-sores can be removed. These things may be seen as representative of an owner's poor taste that might not be obvious at first glance.

—The grounds about the house should be neat. One family visited their empty house to see why it had not been rented and they were astonished to find a mass of junk in their backyard. An old cabinet and stove that had been replaced for a previous tenant was still cluttering the yard, and it had been the former tenant's responsibility for removal, something the management firm should have insisted upon.

—A neat driveway and the house path are essential to the trim look. Little things turn people off: Paint peeling on shutters; cracked glass in a door to the house; a patio in disrepair. House hunters see all disrepair as a burden, even though the real estate people might promise that everything would be in top condition by the time the family moves in.

person who wants a long drive-way.

It's a good idea for an owner to visit a house after a tenant moves out if it is possible. Real estate persons may be too busy to notice that the garage looks messy, or that the house needs some work, or that certain bushes or whatever should be pruned to make the house look prettier outside and brighter inside.

When it becomes a renter's market and there are many houses to see, many people may not go farther than a look at the house from a car. If they don't like what they see in that first glance, they'll keep going.

MAPPING RESOURCES
 SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The state's Geological Survey will continue to concentrate in the next fiscal year on mapping and discovering Illinois' major energy resources — coal, oil and gas.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
 AP Newsfeatures

Q — The house we recently moved in to has embossed vinyl flooring on the kitchen floor. We do not like the color or design and intend to install new sheet vinyl flooring. Can it be put on right over the old flooring?

A — No. While sheet vinyl can be installed over nearly all surfaces, there are two exceptions. One is when the old vinyl is cushioned. The other is when it is embossed.

Q — I have been following written instructions, taken from an old magazine, about refinishing some furniture. The instructions say to use non-rubbing varnish. My hardware dealer says a so-called stain sheen varnish he sells is the same thing. Is it?

A — Yes. Remember, however, that any non-rubbing varnish should not be sanded, so be sure the final coat is applied in a dust-free atmosphere. What is usually done is to use regular varnish for the first one or two coats, sanding lightly to remove irregularities, then use the non-rubbing varnish for the top coat.

Q — I recently saw an oak table in a friend's house which appeared to have white paint in the large pores of the wood. My friend called this a pickled effect but had no idea how it was done. Do you know?

A — There are several ways to obtain this kind of appearance. Here's one that worked well some years ago. After the wood was thoroughly sanded, it was coated with an application of the white finishing material used to cover the wild grain of fir, especially fir plywood. Your hardware dealer will know what you want if you ask for it that way. Be sure you get the white, since there is also a clear type. Before you apply it, thin it out about 20 percent with turpentine or mineral spirits. Once it is put on, wait a few minutes, then rub it well into the pores and wipe off thoroughly. After it has dried for about 24 hours, apply the desired top coat. This method works only on raw wood from which the old finishing material has been removed, otherwise the white pigment will not sink into the pores.

Q — I have replaced a washer in a kitchen faucet three times, but the leak continues. What is wrong?

A — It may be that the valve seat, on which the washer presses, is pitted. When this occurs, the seat can be cleaned with the use of a valve seating tool sold in hardware stores. Once in a while, even this doesn't work because a tiny piece of the faucet seat may have corroded off. Unless you have a very old faucet, the seat can be removed with an allen wrench, inserting it into the seat and turning it counter-clockwise. The seat then can be screwed out. Take it to the store and get one the same size. If the seating tool doesn't work and you are unable to remove the seat to replace it, you probably need a new faucet.

Why, that man's more reliable than company on Sunday afternoon. And, that's important when you're cookin' for folks like ol' Junior Samples. He can pack away more groceries than a sacker at a supermarket.

When we need service, the Duxoil guy takes good care of us. He even goes to special training sessions sponsored by his company. That's where he learns the fine points of home heatin', safety and all those agricultural and commercial applications.

When it comes to good gas service, the local Duxoil guy is a step ahead. Give him a call and see what you can 'cook up'.

Navigation Taught In One Day

By PATRICIA KOZA
ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — For centuries, the complexities of celestial navigation — the mathematical system of navigating by the stars — has kept a lot of would-be deep water sailors from venturing very far off shore.

But two Washington area sailors have come up with a system of simplifying navigation through use of the pocket calculator.

Jack Buchanek, 43, and Edward J. Bergin, 35, offer "Celestial-In-A-Day" courses in which they say even novices can learn celestial navigation in a matter of hours. Other methods can take months.

"Celestial navigation is the pinnacle of navigation knowledge — it's a Ph.D. as far as sailors are concerned," said Bergin.

"In our view it has been unnecessarily complicated by very tedious knowledge, by abstruse concepts, and by the insistence of navigational writers that an individual has to know far, far more about what is going on than he actually needs to find his position."

In short, he says, "It's a tremendous amount of excess baggage."

Bergin and Buchanek, who both work for the U.S. Labor Department, developed the system out of sheer necessity after spending a winter four years ago trying to master navigation by traditional methods. Bergin wanted to take his 35-foot motorsailer to the Virgin Islands, and Buchanek wanted to sail his 27-foot sloop to the Azores.

"We were just flagellating ourselves with these books," said Bergin, a former newspaper reporter. "As a writer, I was appalled at this particularly dismal engineering jargon."

Inexpensive slide rule calculators were on the market by that time, and the pair began to adapt slide rule formulas for navigational problems to the calculator.

That led to publication of a series of articles in boating magazines and a stint as consultants to Texas Instruments, Inc., to develop celestial navigation programs for a TI calculator.

Those experiences in turn led to the outlines of a book, "Piloting-Navigation with the Pocket Calculator," which teaches how to quickly calculate time, speed and distance; cope with currents and navigate by the stars.

"Then we hit on the idea of courses," Bergin said. "We did the prototype a year ago in Washington and have refined them since then, using overhead projectors, visual aids, sextants and calculators."

They also have a nine-lesson home study version.

The one-day course begins with buoy-to-buoy navigating with accompanying chartwork.

CELESTIAL NAVIGATION is taught in a day to novice sailors by Jack Buchanek who, with another Washington area sailor, have come up with a system

From there, students are taught how to use the calculator to convert the observation of the sun or a star to a line of position on a chart. By the end of the day, they are working celestial problems on their own.

The pair, who have also set up a company, the Calculator Navigation Institute, Inc., in Alexandria to promote their system, offers a money-back guarantee on their one-day course, which costs $169.

And they say of the 350 persons taught so far, none has demanded a refund.

Robin Hill, 45, an Australian who lives in Washington, took the course in May and successfully navigated to Bermuda the following month.

"I've been a sailor all my life but I was no navigator," he said. "I tried the traditional courses, but never got anywhere — it was too discouraging. That's what's so marvelous about this course."

The push button navigation idea has generated its share of controversy.

The prestigious Institute of Navigation, in a policy statement last year, said the calculators "should not replace more traditional methods."

And a spokesman at the U.S. Coast Guard's Office of Boating Safety in Washington says although there's "nothing wrong" with their use, but because of the possibility of damage through corrosion or mishandling or of battery failure, "they are not the safest method of navigation." But Buchanek and Bergin have an answer for that — they also provide a backup system on how to solve navigational problems through the traditional system in the reference materials provided with the course.

"We're telling people they have to learn both ways," Bergin said.

"Piloting-Navigation with the Pocket Calculator," published by Tab Books, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. 17214, hard and soft cover. Soft cover: $8.95.

Unusual Courses In Student-Run College

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — The Experimental College says it has no teachers and no courses but teaches its students how to grow marijuana, build an atomic bomb and play a banjo.

"No Teachers Allowed!" reads its catalogue. They've been replaced by "resources persons." Instead of courses, the college has "learning collectives."

The college is run by students at the University of Connecticut.

In addition to its controversial marijuana and atomic bomb course, the school teaches: massage, welding, yoga, automobile electrical systems, belly dancing, Marxism and social change, hair cutting, solar casting, Chinese cooking, guitar playing, bread baking, batik, basketmaking, vegetarian cooking, sewing and star gazing.

"Traditional schoolrooms on all levels are impersonal and authoritarian," the college's catalogue says. It compares obtaining a traditional education to "buying a Big Mac."

Edmons Welch, a mechanic who works with the college, says: "The bad thing about teachers isn't that they know a lot, it's that they bring an arbitrary kind of authority that tends to alienate people."

"We do recognize that we need experts, or at least persons with more experience," he said. But he pointed out that teachers don't chart the course of learning experience at the college — collective participants do.

The yoga collective has a different leader at each meeting.

Carolina In Deep Freeze

Shivering residents of North Carolina bundled up against the coldest weather as in 37 years yesterday as temperatures dropped below zero in the early morning and never got above 17° all day. The National Weather Service station at the airport reported -2° at 6 a.m. The lowest reported at Kerr Scott Dam was -8° at 4 a.m., while many points in the mountains unofficially reported temperatures as low as -16°.

Nowhere in the state, not even along the coast, did temperatures rise above freezing. As the chill deepened state wide, weather service spokesman offered no relief for the deep freeze future, blaming the deep freeze on an arctic air mass moving slowly down from Canada.

Meanwhile numerous the state reported numerous school closings due to the cold weather, as pipes burst and school buses refused to start.

Enclosed Courtyard For Holiday Inn

A major work project estimated to cost from $400,000 to $500,000 is underway at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive here, according to innkeeper Carl Peoples.

He said that the project centers around the construction of a Holiday enclosure of the motel's center court or courtyard area as well as major renovations and additions in various areas of the facility.

Peoples explained that the center court, involving an area that is roughly 120 feet by 100 feet, will undergo a complete facelift with the end result an enclosed, temperature controlled leisure area where motel guests will enjoy a variety of recreational activities and services.

The innkeeper pointed out that the Holiday, the first of its kind in North Carolina, will feature a completely redone pool for year round swimming, a gazebo structure with 11-person whirlpool bath or Hydro-Spa, nine hole putting green, game rooms and areas for ping pong, shuffleboard and pool.

A serpentine rock wall will meander through the area to separate the various sections of the facility, Peoples said, and a water fall will be added for an aesthetic effect. In addition, shrubbery will be planted and special lighting provided.

Peoples noted that a poolside dining area is planned and a bay window will be installed in the restaurant to give the effect of outside dining.

The court area will be covered by a conventional roof containing skylights and standing independent of the existing structures. The roof will be raised some four feet from the level of the present facilities and the raised section will be glassed in.

Peoples said that a new feature of the facility will be the use of solar energy to provide from 60 to 80 per cent of the heating and air conditioning needs of the enclosure.

Pre-fabricated solar panels will be installed on the roof and water heated through the solar equipment will be used not only to heat the swimming pool but to provide hot water for room showers throughout the motel.

According to the spokesman, the system will have the capacity to store a substantial amount of hot water under ideal solar heating days and utilize the heat pump on cloudy days. Insulation will be emphasized, he said, as the system is designed to take full advantage of all existing conditions.

Some 30 tons of air conditioning will be required for the enclosed area and air will be changed every 20 minutes.

Motel rooms opening into the inner court will be considered premium accommodations, it was mentioned, although all guests will have access to the recreational area. A room renovation program is also underway at the motel with all of the existing 114 units scheduled for improvements.

Peoples said that the motel's administrative facilities will be redone during the ambitious project, which is scheduled for a February completion date. The front desk area, he noted, will be completely renovated and rearranged in a new front setting.

John Haughn, manager of the firm's restaurant operations, reported that the main dining area will be expanded and a banquet hall will be added, giving the motel a main dining section and a total of three banquet halls.

All of the dining areas will be redecorated, Haughn said, and a totally new section will be built to house the lounge, currently located on the front section of the building. The new lounge will be located on the north end of the facility and will be integrated into the courtyard scheme.

In addition, the kitchen facilities will be expanded and updated and the present lounge area will be redone to accommodate the administrative offices, he said.

According to Peoples, some parking will be added on the front and rear sections of the motel property and changes are projected for the island area and roadside sign at the front.

He noted also that some new rooms will be built in the near future in a separate addition but the rooms are not a part of the present center court and renovation program.

The motel official said that Holiday Inn, in undertaking the new work, hopes to provide a facility where people will "stay rather than just stop for a night." He added that the motel plans to provide a place where families can spend the weekend and have the advantages of a trip to the beach or other recreational location.

He noted that the car measures and records track conditions at it goes.

Asks To Have Town Moved

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 325 residents of flood-prone Clinchport, Va., want to keep their community together and are asking the Tennessee Valley Authority to move the entire town five miles.
"TVA is basically buying the town to get the people out of the flood plain," Lee Boggs, executive director of the Scott County, Va., Redevelopment Authority, said Friday.
The request to relocate the town on a county-owned 90-acre tract near Duffield, Va., is scheduled to come up at the TVA's board of directors meeting next Thursday.
Some TVA officials have said the project would cost about $2 million.

Payroll Taxes Likely To Go Up Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payroll taxes for most workers and all employers are likely to go up next year in an effort by Congress to rescue the financially troubled Social Security system.
The Senate Finance Committee is on the verge of approving a bill that by 1987 would mean taxes of $120 a year above current levels for a worker earning $10,000. For a person earning $20,000, the payroll tax would rise by $445 a year.

Under the bill approved by the committee Friday, the maximum tax an employer pays for each worker could rise by as much as $4,323.
Meanwhile, the House plans to begin debate next week on a plan that would mean $105 more in taxes per year for the $10,000 worker by 1987 and $415 more for the $20,000 employee.

Unlike the Senate version, the House keeps the employer's tax at the same level as the worker's.
Under either bill, taxes on middle- and upper-income Americans would increase at a greater rate than those paid by low-wage earners.
Democratic leaders in both houses have made passage of Social Security legislation a priority before Congress adjourns for the year.

Present law requires that a worker covered by Social Security contribute 5.85 per cent of his first $16,500 of annual wages to the system.
That results in a maximum tax of $965, a figure that is matched by the employer. The maximum will rise to $1,071 next year.
Under the Senate bill, the maximum employee tax would climb to $1,196 in 1979, $1,288 in 1980 and to $2,390 by 1987. The last figure is for a worker earning $33,900 or more annually.

Cautious Attitude Continues

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A recent survey of investing institutions finds little evidence of any improvement in their recent cautious attitude toward the stock market.

The quarterly survey by Robert J. Farrell, vice president and manager of the market analysis department at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, in fact found a rise in the number of institutions planning to reduce their percentage commitment to stocks.

Farrell also reported no evidence of any big buildup of cash reserves—regarded as a traditional measure of the "fuel" available for future market strength—among institutions.

The analyst said the data collected in his survey "suggest that institutions are becoming less optimistic about returns from equity investments for the long term."
First of all, Farrell noted, the figures showed a small increase from three months before in the percentage of assets invested by institutions in debt securities such as bonds, while the percentage for equities, or stocks, declined slightly.

"More significant," he reported, "in answer to the question concerning future intentions to increase or decrease equities, those intending to decrease equities rose to 17 per cent of those polled in this survey from 12 per cent in the second quarter."
"That represented a reversal of attitude in future intentions toward equities from that prevailing in the second quarter."

AN "ENERGY STOCK" WITH 5% CURRENT YIELD AND 15% TOTAL ANNUAL RETURN?

Most investors would be attracted by any stock with a potential 15% total annual return and a current yield of 5%. Interstate's research department is recommending such a NYSE-listed stock, selling for under $20 per share. With a PE of six times our 1978 earnings estimate, the stock has, in our opinion, unusually attractive investment potential. About 55% of the company's earnings this year should come from its Energy Division, which services the oil and gas industry. Earnings growth over the next few years is estimated at 10%-12% compounded annually. For your free copy of our latest research report, mail the coupon or call your Interstate account executive.

Trend To Lean Beef Could Benefit Southeast U.S.

Dragon Land Human Muscle

PEOPLE POWER — A Vietnamese hauls a cartload of goods past a bulldozer and turbines on the docks of Haiphong, Vietnam, where the harbor is crowded with ships, mostly from Eastern Europe. The harbor, where much work is still done by human muscle, has become a bottleneck and docks are piled high with crates, steel girders, and building materials. (AP Laserphoto)

ATLANTA (AP) — Hamburger is never going to be as cheap as it is today, say officials in the cattle industry who predict that the Southeast could reap a bonanza by carving out its own chunk of beef cattle production.

Despite the severe depression of the cattle industry, officials said the Southeast could experience the largest growth in beef cattle production in the nation because of a trend toward leaner beef.

"The trend is to go from grain-fed beef to forage-fed and this leaner beef demand is a perfect setup for the Southeast," said Walter Mitchell, executive vice-president of the Georgia Cattlemen's Assn.

"Heavy western grain-fed beef is much higher in fat," he said, "while southern cattle, raised primarily on grass, are leaner."

Beef speculators, noting the trend toward consumers buying leaner beef have begun buying beef producing property in the Southeast, he said.

"The Great Plains Western Corporation of California, one of the biggest beef speculators in the country, has been buying land in Texas, Mississippi and Alabama," Mitchell said.

"The Southeast has the climate, the rainfall, the pasture and the additional forage such as corn fodder and peanuts," he said. "We're going to see the Southeast expand the cattle industry in the years to come."

"The tradition has been to raise cattle in the South and fatten them in the west. Then they go through markets in Chicago and come back as heavy western grain beef," he said.

Mitchell said that because of the cost of transportation and energy, "we no longer can afford to ship truckloads of cows out west. Truckers are making more money than cattle producers and with the cost of fuel going up, there's no way we can justify hauling in those millions of cows from Texas to Arizona."

In the past few years, he said market prices have been so low that Georgia cattlemen lose $100 to $150 on every cow they sell.

E. H. Wilson, head of the Alabama Cattlemen's Assn. says, "Right now, the cattle business in Alabama is in the worst depression in its history."

Both Mitchell and Wilson said cattlemen are liquidating their cattle.

"Instead of keeping mama cows, they've been going to the market by the millions," said Mitchell. He said the decreasing demand will cause cattlemen "to hold back their heifers as replacement for mama cows."

"A dramatic turnabout will come," he said. "I don't think hamburger is ever going to be as cheap as it is today. The cost of beef will have to go up because our producers have been losing money."

Wilson said the consumer is enjoying the best time ever for beef.

"It's in plentiful supply and selling way below the cost of production, and unless the cattlemen can start making a profit on his goods, you're going to have a lot less cattlemen in this country, he said.

"The people who're bellyaching about food prices better be worried about the supply and let farmers make a profit or have empty bellies," Wilson added.

"We're going to sell more cattle than we've ever sold in our history numberwise," he said. "This year we've had about an average of 10 to 15 percent of cattlemen gone out of business because of drought, low prices and bad economic conditions."

'Fed Watching,' An Investor's Sport

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fed watching" has long been a favorite sport among investors and economists who try to discern directions of interest rates and inflation by second-guessing Federal Reserve Board actions to implement monetary policies.

But the pastime has become particularly popular in recent months as the pace of growth in the nation's money supply continues to far exceed the announced goals of the Federal Reserve's policy committee.

While a rapid growth in supplies of money may seem like a good thing, too large an increase is considered worrisome because it may ultimately cheapen the value of the dollar, leading to a burst of inflation.

But the process of keeping growth of money supply in check also leads to pressure on interest rates and raises fears that if the two get too far out of balance, that could hurt the general pace of economic activity.

The White House, in an unusual move this past week, took the Fed to task for what it considered too conservative a view on money supply goals and warned against dangers of letting short-term interest rates rise.

The statement noted that the stock market already has been "unsettled" by rapid increases in short-term interest rates, but that, so far, the economic recovery has not been seriously damaged.

But it went on to warn: "If short-term interest rates were to increase substantially further ... a diversion of flows from mortgage lending institutions could begin to occur, and this would reduce the supply of funds for housing. Long-term interest rates might also be driven up."

Although the statement did not mention the Fed by name, it added that "rapid growth of the money supply is a matter of concern when it occurs in the context of a very rapid economic expansion, high employment and a worsening outlook for inflation. Those are not the circumstances we face presently."

The White House statement was issued shortly before the Federal Reserve issued its weekly statement on money supplies for the previous week. The measurement used for the nation's basic money supply, known as M1, showed no change from the prior week.

But because Fed watchers had expected a decline of more than $1 billion from the previous week, the results were still seen as indications that the Fed's efforts have not been successful at bringing growth under control and that it would soon move to further tighten its credit stance.

The measurement M1 represents the total of checking account deposits plus currency in circulation. In each of the past two reporting weeks it has averaged $334.1 billion on a seasonally adjusted basis.

In other business developments this past week:

—The steel industry, which has announced thousands of layoffs amid serious profit problems recently, increased complaints that foreign competitors are "dumping" steel products on the U.S. market. A number of companies filed formal complaints with the government charging Japanese companies with violating fair trade standards by selling their products at less than fair value to get a bigger share of the U.S. market.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Treasury announced it has started an investigation in response to a complaint filed several weeks ago by U.S. Steel Corp. That investigation covers carbon steel imports from Japan, which last year totaled $1.2 billion.

Voices From The South

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

Once again those voices from Deep South movement days—voices from the troubled heart of the region in the 1950s and 1960s—are speaking for all to hear.

This time, for the most part, they've put aside the slogans, stepped a distance from the ramparts and quietly chronicled the period, which remains, from its many viewpoints, a jarring American epic.

It is chronicled in "My Soul is Rested: Movement Days in the Deep South Remembered," a unique book of detailed interviews with many of the central figures as well as lesser-known forces behind the civil rights struggles which heralded racial change in the South.

Authored by Howell Raines, political editor of the St. Petersburg Times and a former reporter in Alabama and Georgia, its publication by G.P. Putnam's Sons this month ironically coincides with a new wave of news stories about Ku Klux Klan rallies and church bombing investigations.

It provides its own hard and harrowing reports as well. Everett Little, a commonly tight-lipped police detective in Atlanta, discloses that a fanatical group of racial extremists came close to planting cases of dynamite in the sewer lines beneath the Atlanta University system in the early 1960s.

Little said the group was called "Nacerima"—which is "American" spelled backwards—and that "they had stolen a vanload of dynamite out of Virginia, and the plans were to blow up that whole Atlanta University housing thing ..."

The Nacerima group, he said, had obtained maps of the sewer system and came "pretty close" to accomplishing its project, which could have killed hundreds in predominantly black dormitories.

He said it was headed off by city and federal agents with the help of "psychological" harassment of Nacerima.

Such revealing accounts punctuate the book as it covers the period from 1955 to 1968, years which parallel the journey of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. from Montgomery to Memphis. The accounts are given by black ministers and movement leaders, sharecroppers and students, white officialdom, police, writers, rebels and also-rans.

Its scope ranges from the bus boycott in Montgomery to early sit-ins at Greensboro, N.C., and Atlanta, to Freedom Rides across Alabama, the Birmingham demonstrations, "Freedom Summer" in Mississippi, the Selma march and death in Memphis.

For the purposes of the ac-demian, it is not comprehensive as history—it is more a richly impressionistic and accurate rendering of an era—but provides a wealth of details, many of them critical but little-known even among the participants and many to be savored for years by historians.

Through dozens of interviews from a variety of angles it also offers a rare up-close view of the deep frictions and friendships that surrounded King and competing black leaders and civil rights organizations.

It includes interviews with whites in the "down-home resistance," among them a segregationist Jew and a self-described victimized Klansman, but the story belongs mostly to the civil rights crusaders.

Their story is familiar to most, but Raines, through good editing and an ability to weave the interviews together in an almost narrative fashion, makes it fresh and compelling. Often frank and brutal—the story of the late Fannie Lou Hamer's beating is related by her with simple and yet uncommon force—at times it finds a relieving comic edge.

Couple Exchanges Vows In High Noon Ceremony

The marriage of Nancy Jane Carroll and John Charles Brooks was solemnized Saturday in a high noon ceremony performed in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by Wallace H. Kirby of Edenton Street Methodist Church, Raleigh, and Lawrence P. Houston of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Spurgeon Cashwell Carroll of Farmville, and the late Mr. Carroll. The bridegroom is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Phillips Brooks of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by Nancy Greenwood Brooks, organist; Antonia Dalapas, soprano, and Roger Brooks, violinist.

J. Vann Carroll gave his sister in marriage. The bride wore a gown of candlelight silk chiffon styled with a fitted bodice featuring re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown had a Victorian neckline, long tapered sleeves with a deep lace border at the wrist and an undecorated skirt with a chapel length train.

The bride's veil was of silk illusion with a deep border of matching alencon lace and was attached to a Camelot cap of Bible decorated with a spray of pale yellow roses and baby's breath.

The matron of honor, Anne T. Carroll of Houston, Tex., sister-in-law of the bride, wore a gown of rose qiana that had a matching rose chiffon cape. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses and baby's breath. Bridesmaids were Sandra B. Brooks of Kinston, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Sarah E. Carroll of Houston, Tex., niece of the bride, Jean Crawford Cross of Norwalk, Conn., Caroline Lewis Long of Wilson, Ellen NanEt Lewis of Charleston, S.C., and Pattie Frances Lewis of Raleigh, all cousins of the bride. They wore gowns of rose qiana with matching chiffon capes and carried bouquets of pink and American beauty roses and baby's breath.

Anna Caroline Long of Wilson, cousin of the bride, and Ann Duggan Thornton of Greenville, goddaughter of the bride, were flower girls. They were dressed in pink dresses trimmed in white lace and carried white baskets containing pink sweetheart roses.

Dr. Frederick P. Brooks Jr. of Chapel Hill, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ring bearer was Richard Brooks of Kinston, nephew of the bridegroom.

Groomsmen included H. Franklin Brooks of Kinston, brother of the bridegroom, A. Larkin Kirkman of Raleigh, Thomas V. Long III of Chicago, Ill., J. Taylor McMillan of Raleigh, W. Ray Long of Wilson, and Norman B. Smith of Greensboro.

The couple will live in Raleigh. The bride is a graduate of Salem College and until recently was employed by the Wilson County Schools. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the University of Chicago School of Law. He is currently serving as North Carolina's Commissioner of Labor.

The bride's family entertained at the reception at the Candlewick Inn, Greenville, immediately following the ceremony.

The inn was decorated with mixed arrangements of pink snapdragons, American beauty roses and daisies. The bride's table was centered with a tiered cake decorated in colors that matched those of the wedding party.

Throughout the reception, chamber music was provided by Mrs. Frederick P. Brooks Jr., violinist and pianist, Kenneth Brooks, cellist, Roger Brooks and Barbara Brooks, violinists.

Following the rehearsal Friday evening, Mrs. Samuel Allen Bowden, Mr. and Mrs. Craven B. Brooks Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Franklin Brooks, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Phillips Brooks Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Franklin Brooks, Mrs. Rodney Guy Latham and Mr. and Mrs. Reid Mitchell entertained the wedding party, choir and out-of-town guests at a dinner at the Candlewick Inn.

The inn was decorated with arrangements of mixed flowers. After dinner, which was served in the Blue Room, the bridal couple was toasted by Dr. Brooks

Over-Age Cheerleaders Like Being On Pep Squad

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — At ages 28 and 36, Marlene Keran and Inman Perkins are practically senior citizens as members of the Fresno State University pep squad.

Although other pep squad members range in age from their late teens to early 20s, Perkins and Ms. Keran don't consider their ages a handicap. In many cases they have used their advanced years to their advantage.

"We don't pull any punches about our age," said Ms. Keran, co-head pep girl. "In fact, we try to emphasize it with administrators. They listen more intently because we're not 18-year-olds they can shove in some corner."

Another use for that leverage of age is in recruiting fans to attend games.

"Our age is an advantage when we're talking to older students. At least we arouse their curiosity," she said. "And the younger kids on the squad look up to us... they listen to us, and they keep us young."

The only disadvantage the two feel is in physical limitations their age brings.

"I have never worked that hard in my entire life," Perkins said of the ordeal of trying out for the squad.

"I had trouble sitting down and getting back up again," Ms. Keran added.

Perkins has returned to school, after a 10-year absence, to study radio and television, and Ms. Keran is pursuing a degree in fine arts after a six-year absence.

They found it natural to get involved in cheerleading because that was an important part of their school days one and two decades ago.

Perkins was mascot at a high school here in 1959, served as head cheerleader at the local community college from 1961 to 1964 and at Fresno State in 1967. He was an adviser to the Fresno State squad last year but joined the squad after doing a game warm-up that pleased the crowd. Now he's co-head cheerleader.

Ms. Keran was a high school and community college pep girl in Stockton.

But why in their late 20s and mid-30s do they go through the rigors of Saturday night acrobatics and antics on the football field?

"I like being involved in things when I'm in school," Ms. Keran said. "It's something to take pride in. Students need to be involved in something more than putting their noses in books."

Perkins said people were wasting their talent if they were just going to class.

But, basically, both admit they just couldn't get cheerleading out of their systems.

"On Saturday afternoons, I'm sky-high," Perkins said with a grin. "When the game starts, I'm floating out of the stadium."

"It's really exciting when you get 3,000 people responding to what you're doing. There are vibrations and you can feel it."

Princess Grace Has A Recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Shortly after she had married Prince Rainier and was living in the Palais de Monaco, Her Serene Highness Princess Grace Kelly of Philadelphia and Hollywood contributed a recipe to a charity cookbook published in California.

It is for a Tourte de Blettes, a two-crust pie made with soft-ripe fruit, onion, rice, cheese and eggs. For the fruit, Princess Grace chose fresh pears. Delicious and unusual, a savory pie of this sort is popular with Monegasque cooks. Another of their favorites calls for a filling of zucchini, leek, rice, cheese and eggs.

When the savory pear pie was baked at our house, it was much enjoyed. Our adaptation of the recipe:

SAVORY PEAR PIE
A LA MONACO

Pastry for a 2-crust 10-inch pie (see Note below)

- 6 large ripe Bartlett pears, about 2 1/4 pounds
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 large onion, finely chopped (1 cup)
- 1/2 cup long-grain rice, cooked according to package directions (1 1/4 cups loosely packed)
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 3 large eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Prepare pastry. Peel, halve and core the pears. In a steamer with a solid-bottom insert pan, without adding any liquid to the insert pan, steam the pears until they are very soft and juicy; mash fine with the juice. There should be about 4 cups. Set aside to cool.

In a large skillet gently cook the onion in the oil until golden; stir in the pear, rice, Parmesan, eggs, salt and pepper.

Line a 10-inch pie plate with half the pastry; add the pear filling; add top pastry, turning edge under and sealing well. Cut vents in the top pastry. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 1 hour. Cool partially on a wire rack and serve warm.

Makes 10 servings.

Note: The Monegasque pastry for this pie is made with flour, salt, olive oil, butter and water. We used a pastry made in our food processor with flour, salt, egg yolks, butter and ice-water.

Eye Protection Is Tennis Court Need

HOUSTON (UPI) — Tennis players should wear eye protectors to guard against injury.

Writing in the "Journal of the American Medical Association," Drs. Morton H. Seelenfreund and Dennis B. Freilich said a study of 10 patients who suffered eye injuries from tennis balls showed most injuries occurred when the player was rushing the net.

The doctors recommend eye-wear similar to that worn by handball players.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have just read that an American football game is an "emotional high."

I wouldn't have put it in quite that way. In fact, I have experienced greater "emotional highs" getting a piece of dental floss caught in my teeth.

Psychologically speaking, men have a lot of reasons for enjoying a football game. They act out their repressions, live vicariously through their heroes, experience renewal and feel like "one of the gang."

To me, it's a two-and-a-half hour sedative. The way I see it, a football stadium is the one spot left in the world where a fan can enjoy diplomatic immunity from (a) being arrested for being drunk and disorderly (b) charged for making obscene calls to the player and coaches and (c) committed to a home for standing on a seat in the driving rain, waving a thermos in the air and shouting. "You're getting on my nerves, Ricky!"

Happily, I have learned to busy myself at games and try to have a good time in spite of all the noise and those little knee-grabbers running up and down the field. Among some of my more provocative games are:

The Fashion Alphabet: Two women alternate with naming a style worn by another woman in the stands from Accordion pleats and Blouses to Yokes and Zippers. The first woman who can't come up with a style for the letter has to be penalized by watching the game until a first down is made.

The Hot Dog, Cola Capers; Disguising your voice, you yell down an order of a hot dog and cola to the vendor at the end of the row. Without an eye leaving the game, people will pass it down an entire row of 138 people. When it gets to the end, pass it back to the next row and see how many rows that hot dog and cola will cover.

Restroom Touchdown: Using strategy, experience, and perseverance, see if you can effectively get a play to work that actually gets you into the restroom before the game is over.

Stump The Fans In The Stands: Establish a pool of what it is the band is trying to spell out on the playing field. (I once correctly identified a tuba player as an anchovy on a field of pizza and won $8.)

Woman's intolerance to football is not going to kill the game. Football... like bead colds and Doris Day will be with us forever.

But an emotional high? As I told my husband when he announced the game was going into overtime and I began to cry, "This is as emotional as I get!"

Halloween Helps Kids Act Out Fears

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Halloween in some ways may be more important to children than Christmas, says Arnold Dobrin, a children's author and illustrator who has raised two sons of his own.

"Christmas deals with joy, happiness, a religious feeling. Halloween deals with their emotions, teaches them to deal with their fears constructively," Dobrin said in an interview.

Celebrating Halloween, a child can dress in costume. He or she can be ugly, can be fearful. "Halloween allows a child to grapple with these (problems) in an acceptable way," Dobrin said.

"Very few holidays deal with the seamy side of life. A child is as concerned with this as adults are."

Dobrin is a native of Omaha who now lives in Westport, Conn. He said experimenting with his own two sons as they grew up taught him the importance children attach to Halloween, the impatience and fascination it generates.

His latest book, "Make a Witch, Make a Goblin" (Four Winds Press $6.95) grew from those memories. It is a Halloween crafts book for children in the elementary grades.

"Almost all the projects can be done next-to-nothing," he said. "They require mostly imagination and time."

Some recycle materials such as empty cans, disposable aluminum pie tins and paper grocery bags.

A scarecrow costume uses old clothing and old brooms.

A witch centerpiece has a plastic detergent bottle for its body.

Dobrin said he would like to see children use their imagination to carry his projects further, decorating and developing designs in their own ways.

He said he was helped with the book by Sue Noad of Torrington, Conn., who has young children of her own. Dobrin said Mrs. Noad made some projects when he was too busy, did research and contributed ideas.

The book contains 16 recipes. Some could be made even by young children.

The punches contain fruit reflect a distaste for "junk foods" that began in childhood, when he often visited Hollywood relatives who were vegetarians.

New Packing Helps Keep Fruit, Nuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New methods of vacuum packing may prolong the shelf life of fruits and nuts, keeping them fresher and brighter than is possible with other processing methods.

In one project, the USDA Agricultural Research Service found raw peanuts packaged in plastic bags with carbon dioxide absorbed the gas and remained fresh and flavorful for at least eight months. Roasted peanuts packed the same way remained fresh up to four months.

Testing dried peaches with a variety of packaging materials, the ARS found they stayed brighter and stored up to 18 months at about 69 degrees Fahrenheit. The researchers think similar results can be achieved with other cut, dried fruits that tend to darken during long storage.

Engagement Announced

MISS PATRICIA ANN STOCKS . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Stocks of Ayden, who announce her engagement to Jesse Amos Branch III, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Branch Jr. of Rt. 1, Winterville. The wedding will take place Jan. 1.

revolting, but if he refuses to do it, then I have to, which is the way it's been lately. I agreed to wash out the tub after him until we hear from you.

He said he would go by your decision. He says if I loved him, I'd do it. I say if he loved ME, he wouldn't ask me to. Who is right?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The word from here is that every man, woman and child able to bathe without assistance should clean the tub after himself.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent answer to the 17-year-old girl who wanted to know what was wrong with premarital sex was good, but incomplete. Here is how I would have answered:

Dear Speaking For Teens:

There are several reasons other than fear of V.D. and pregnancy for saying no, even if your moral code or religious beliefs provide you with insufficient guidance. Among them:

1. If you ever marry, and most people still do, remaining "pure" beforehand will give your spouse less reason to be distrustful of you. This is bound to lead to a healthier and happier relationship.

2. Sex between unmarried people usually results in guilt feelings and loss of self-esteem.

3. If you're really in love, sex isn't needed to have a fulfilling relationship. And if you should discover that you aren't really in love, having had sex will make breaking up all the more painful.

4. Most people who seek premarital sex are concerned more with their own gratification than with the needs of the other person. (If that's the case, it's not love.) Why let someone use you?

Like many other good things in life, sex is too often misused.

SINGLE SEATTLE FELLOW

DEAR FELLOW: If you practice what you preach, you'll make a wonderful catch for a girl who's saving herself for marriage and expects the same of her husband.

DEAR ABBY: Someone told me that girls who wear glasses look more intelligent than girls who don't wear glasses. Do you think this is true?

QUESTIONING

DEAR QUESTIONING: Possibly. But it's only an optical illusion.

On The Young Side

By Sharon Connolly

Homecoming festivities came to an end Monday night as the Rose Rampants won their football game against Bertie. Introductions of the sponsors, their escorts, the queens, the court, and princesses were made during the special halftime show while the band performed various selections.

Afterwards much hard work and time was recognized as a winner of the float competition was announced. All floats were judged in five categories. These were originality, creativity, relevance to theme, parade time organization and construction. First place winner was the sophomore class with the French and Spanish Club second, and the junior class taking third.

Many members of the Wildlife Club are spending the weekend at Atlantic Beach and will be fishing, crabbing, netting shrimp and participating in other activities.

Monday was a holiday for students, but for teachers it was a work day. To help make the day a little more bearable, members of the Anchor Club supplied baked goods for the teachers and placed these in the teacher lounges.

Many students played an active role in the Hike-Bike for Retarded Citizens held Saturday. Each participant first obtained a list of sponsors and their pledges for each mile to be hiked or biked. Later the money will be collected and turned in.

2,453 Phones Serve ECU Dorm Rooms

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer
"Those students on campus have responded very responsibly. They pay their phone bills as good, if not better, than the average citizen in Greenville." That is the opinion of Don Collier, district commercial manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph in Greenville. According to Collier, out of 2,782 dorm rooms in the 15 dorms on the East Carolina University campus, 2,453 have a connected telephone. This is a percentage of approximately 85 per cent.

Until the fall of 1972, phones were located on each floor of the dorms, which was not only inconvenient for the students, but costly in terms of vandalism.

"In 1971, there was about $10,000 worth of damage done to the telephone equipment in the boys dorms alone," Collier said. "And this cost was paid for by the university.

"So when the phone company was approached by a delegation of students early in the 1972 school year asking why can't there be individual phone service in the rooms, we were very attentive to what they had to say.

"At that time there was a scattering of phones in the old dorms, about 75-80 of them. So after talking with the proper university officials, we decided to have a trial run and completely wire one of the dorms with individual phones in the rooms," Collier explained.

Tyler dorm was chosen as the test run and after talking with students the phone company decided to install plain black dial phones, the least expensive model, in each of the rooms.

"It went over great. By the fall of 1972 there was an 80 per cent fill in Tyler dorm," Collier said.

Carolina Telephone then proceeded to wire all the dorms which sometimes required drilling through 12 inches of concrete in the high rise dorms, at no expense to the students.

"We did a little bit every year and in the period of four years spent approximately a quarter of a million dollars," Collier said.

And according to students and university administration officials alike the investment was not a waste.

Dan Wooten, university housing director, feels the system has gone over wonderfully well.

"It is such an improvement over the pay phones. The only trouble we run into is when roommates disagree over paying bills which is usually due to a misunderstanding of how it all works," Wooten said.

One female alumni remembers how it was in the days before such a service was available.

According to the former co-ed, the situation was terrible. There were 70 girls on the hall and it was an impossibility to use the phone, especially from 7 to 12 at night. And those females were very successful in imposing time limits. Who wants to carry on a conversation when someone keeps coming back every few minutes and gives you a dirty look if you are still on the phone.

According to the co-ed there was one advantage to having a communal phone. It was cheaper. But she still feels it was worth the extra outlay of cash to have a private phone.

"It was so nice when they installed the room phones," she states. "At least I knew I was going to get my messages.

"It was so difficult before. A girl would answer the phone and on her way to get you she would stop and talk with someone and you would be missing out on a long distance call."

But there is a way to overcome the expense, at least partially, which was tried by six girls last year in Greene dorm.

"We had six girls in three rooms who shared one phone," said Rosanne Donahoe, a junior from Norfolk, Va. "And that one phone just happened to be in my room."

"Everything worked out pretty well except we would get calls at all hours of the night and then have to go to one of the other rooms and get the person. And trying to carry on a private conversation with people coming in and out was sometimes trying, but all in all it worked out well as far as the money was concerned. Everyone paid their part of the bills."

This year Rosanne and her roommate, Marty Crawford, have their own phone — just the two of them.

Problems can occur when a roommate moves out and the other person is left with the entire responsibility of the bill.

Carol Caverly, a sophomore from Tarboro, agreed to have a phone connected, so her roommate went ahead and got the phone cut on and the bill service put in her name.

"When you get a phone put in your room," Miss Caverly said, "you have to sign a contract and one of the persons is responsible. But when my roommate moved out she didn't tell me she was going to have the phone disconnected and when I went to use the phone one day, it was dead. So I had to pay all over again to have the phone re-connected."

According to Don Collier, the installation cost is less than the average off-campus installation rate due to the different technology involved. But the monthly bill and long distance charges are the same for dorm students as it is for all subscribers with the same style phone.

University business manager Julian Vainwright feels the system is working out well also.

"Because of the standardized phone and standardized location in the rooms the students receive better service," Vainwright said. "We don't have any problems with moving the phones because we feel this is the most economical situation for the students."

"We do provide a change in the location of the phones for handicapped students who must have the phone in the easiest location possible."

Extra help in signing up the new subscribers in the fall and disconnecting the service at the end of the school year calls for a little help from some friends.

George Clack, business office manager for Carolina Telephone in Greenville, said the phone company borrows employees from nearby phone companies to handle the influx.

"We provide three on campus locations to contract phone service, Clement dorm, Tyler dorm, and the bookstore," Clack explained.

"The dorms require about two persons each and the bookstore four. These employees work for about a week or two, but don't put in any overtime.

"However we need to work a night shift on the computers for about two weeks during this time."

The situation has shocked some higher management officials of the phone company who were hesitant to start on the large project five years ago, Collier said.

"But once they saw how well it worked out in Tyler on a test basis they were more than eager to go ahead," Collier said. "We even print a separate telephone directory for the students, administration, and faculty on campus, complete with yellow pages."

"So thanks to the college responding to the needs of the students, and the phone company responding to the needs of both, we are looking forward to and planning improvements to the system in the future."

Russell — 'Knight Of Lordly Strut'

By BOB WILSON
Duke University News Service
DURHAM, N.C. — His Tar Heel opponents mischievously dubbed him the "Knight of the Lordly Strut."

That was one of the nicer things said about 300-pound Gov. Daniel Lindsay Russell by North Carolina's reactionary Bourbon Democrats. He usually was dismissed as a scalawag Republican, a traitor to his native state and quite possibly the devil incarnate.

Russell was not a man to live in the shadows. North Carolinians either admired and respected him or feared and hated him during his ill-starred governorship from 1897 to 1901.

Raised as an aristocratic Whig to despise Democrats and later a pioneer Republican, Russell cut a wide and frequently raucous swath through Tar Heel politics in the decades following the Civil War, two historians say in a new book.

Russell was remembered today primarily as the fusion governor, elected by a quarrelsome and short-lived marriage of convenience between the Populists and the Republicans. His GOP administration was the last in this state for 72 years.

But history has a way of changing the way people look at men and events. Historians Robert F. Durden and Jeffrey J. Crow give Russell higher marks as a leader than many, especially Democrats, ever accorded him in his lifetime.

Russell is emerging from obscurity as one of those rare southerners who tried to steer a middle course through his region's racial nightmare as the Gilded Age drew to a close, Durden and Crow maintain.

As such, they say, Russell offered an alternative to the racial and economic politics of the Bourbon Democrats, a position that marks him as a "great dissenter" in North Carolina politics.

Durden, chairman of the history department at Duke University, and Crow, head of the general publications branch of the N.C. Division of Archives and History, are the authors of "Maverick Republican in the Old North State," the first full-length examination of Daniel Russell's political career.

The book has just been published by Louisiana State University Press as part of its Southern Biography Series.

Durden and Crow characterize Russell as a proud, unusual man "who cannot be easily categorized or labeled."

Already rotund at 30, the Wilmington-born Russell was sometimes arrogant, short-tempered and possessed of a brilliant mind trained in the law.

He was known to curse out his clients on occasion and order them from his office. His partner in later years attributed such episodes to a distaste for "the unsound reasoning of little minds."

Yet, according to Durden and Crow, Russell was happy in the presence of children and he surprised visitors by such old-fashioned manners as addressing his wife as "madam."

Russell was a contentious man in his public life, a trait that showed itself early when he criticized the Confederate government and President Jefferson Davis during the Civil War.

Involved in a serious army court-martial, only timely election to the N.C. General Assembly and the intervention of Gov. Zebulon B. Vance saved Russell's hide, the historians note.

Russell turned Republican in 1867 and began a political career that included terms as a superior court judge, legislator and congressman before capping his public service as governor.

Durden and Crow picture Russell's greatest triumph as the prelude to his greatest disappointment. A rider astride two horses, the Populists and the Republicans, the new governor in 1897 had to contend as well with the "white man's party," the Democrats bent on disfranchising and oppressing blacks.

The election of 1896 would be the last for many years in North Carolina in which blacks participated in significant numbers. With fusion politics collapsing even as Russell took his oath, Democrats were laying the ground-work for the notorious white supremacy campaigns of 1898 and 1900.

Though Russell was a progressive in the vein of James K. Vardaman of Mississippi and Hoke Smith of Georgia, he was a progressive with a difference, Durden and Crow write.

He was the scion of a slaveholding family who came to believe in the political and legal equality of blacks, and wasn't afraid to say so.

The Democrats harried Russell constantly on the race issue, Durden and Crow say, never letting North Carolinians forget that it was the former judge who wrote the once-famous "Wilmington opera house" decision in 1873 that opened up various public places to blacks.

His stand on race caused Russell enough woe, the historians note, but there were other issues as well. He waged virtual war against the Southern Railway Co., quickly alienating his conservative, probusiness supporters.

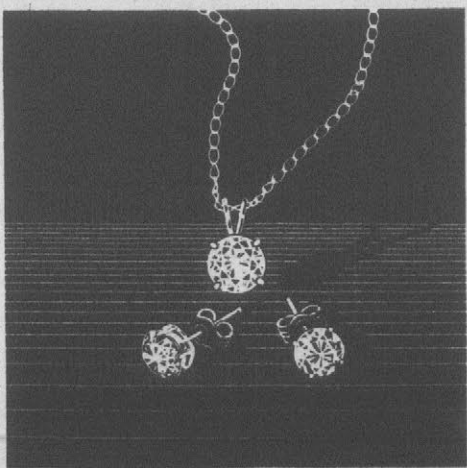

Russell left the governor's office in 1901 a defeated chief executive, prompting a friend to observe that "no man ever lived in this state who is least understood and worse represented."

It was not Russell's style to leave without a parting shot. The powder he loaded into his legal cannon was to make history.

A life-long critic of the Democratic program of repudiation and readjustment of state bonds enacted in 1879, Russell hit on a way to strike back at those he called "the enemy"—and, he hoped, also make some money.

As Durden and Crow relate the complex series of events, Russell knew that the U.S. Constitution's 11th Amendment prohibited private bondholders from suing a sovereign state.

Challenges Conception Of Grecian Democracy

By PAUL ANASTASSIADES
ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A French Marxist philosopher has touched off a controversy by attacking the classic conception of ancient Greece as the cradle of democracy.

Roger Garaudy, who contends the historical accounts of ancient Greece's triumphs were a "European imperialist invention," first made his comments while in Greece to attend a socialist symposium. His views were then serialized in an Athens newspaper and critically taken up in a new interview by another paper.

"The democracy of Pericles, which was based on the raw exploitation of 400,000 slaves, to me does not differ greatly from today's South Africa," Garaudy said in the interview with Apogematini.

The newspaper angrily concluded: "So the history of ancient Greece is being turned into a myth. We are lucky they still allow us Sophocles and Euripides. Our progressive friends ... seem to prefer Greece without any history. Just sunshine, sea, wine and bouzouki music."

Garaudy described Herodotus, the ancient Greek historian, as a bought-off writer. "Herodotus is someone whose testimony I don't pay too much attention to. He loved money and wrote much when paid well," Garaudy said.

Garaudy, a former member of the French Communist party, did accept, however, that apart from the alleged slaves there was genuine democracy among the rest of the population in the 5th-century B.C. "Golden Age of Pericles."

Greek historians, however, refuse to describe as slaves those who, for example, pulled the enormous marble pillars that built the Acropolis monuments and which stand today as a symbol of the roots of Western civilization. They are described as workers who ate and lived with their superiors.

al trends, peaceably reflected in its art.
Tsatsos has written the prologue to French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's book on democracy.
Garaudy also doubted historic accounts of the 490 B.C. Battle of Marathon and 480 B.C. naval battle of Salamis. In both cases history has it that the far-out-numbered Greeks managed to heavily defeat the invading Persians.

Earning Cycling's Achievement Award Ages Man

100 MILES IN 12 HOURS — Adolphe Bernotas pauses for a rest during his recent "Century" bicycle ride, earning the League of American Wheelmen's National Century patch for riding 100 miles in 12 hours. (AP Laserphoto)

By ADOLPHE V. BERNOTAS
Associated Press Writer
HAMPTON, N.H. (AP) —
The next morning my ankle was swollen. My knees and thighs hurt so much I could hardly climb stairs. My knuckles were so numb I could barely make a fist.
For two days I felt like an old man.
But I also swelled with pride because I earned what I consider an Olympic Gold Medal — the "LAW National Century" patch. It certifies I rode a bicycle 100 miles within 12 hours.
It's child's play for some cyclists. The Los Angeles Wheelmen, for instance, ride "quads" — 400 miles in 24 hours. But my century is a personal achievement.
Cycling clubs across America ride their centuries in autumn. My club, the 250-member Granite State Wheelmen, planned its century along the Atlantic Coast, touching parts of Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.
The League of American Wheelmen requires completion of a century in 12 hours. My club's self-imposed limit is 10 hours.

I rode my first century in the best and worst 9½ hours of my life.
I am 36, and six months ago I was 60 pounds overweight. I decided to make a physical comeback, resumed active cycling, joined Weight Watchers and did aerobics exercises at the YMCA.
Four months later and 60 pounds lighter, I was cycling even more. I began anticipating autumn — and the century.
As excited as a youngster on Christmas Eve, I hardly slept the night before the long-awaited Sunday.
In finest cycling clothes — even socks endorsed by Eddy Merckx, the Belgian millionaire professional, cycling's Joe Namath — and on the best stock machine money could buy, I was the first rider out from Hampton.
The route went north about 30 miles to Ogunquit, Maine; then south, 50 miles to Newburyport and Plum Island, Mass., where it turned back the final 17 miles to Hampton.

The temperature, according to the tiny thermometer on my bike, was 59 degrees and, mercifully, it didn't rise above 71. The early morning fog condensed in my beard and on my eyeglasses.
I cycled the first 12 miles along U.S. 1A in 45 minutes — too fast a pace, as I later regretted. I was king of the road as I rolled along the fog-hidden beach and surf, past the seagulls, fishermen, lobster boats and beachcombers.
I cycled into the island community of New Castle, which looks much the way it did in the early 1700s. From New Castle, I pedaled into Portsmouth's Strawberry Banke, also a museum of colonial America, across Memorial Bridge over the Piscataqua River into Kittery, Maine, enjoying the sun as it burned away the fog.
How much more you see from atop a bike than from an enclosed automobile!
The beachplums in York were past their prime. The leaves ever so subtly had begun to turn to their autumn hues. On one downhill, I easily outcoasted an acorn that fell from a roadside oak and rolled down the pavement.

From Ogunquit I pedaled back south on U.S. 1, a treacherous road with too much traffic and rough shoulders. By mile 38, other cyclists started catching up — and passing me.
Back in Kittery, the century's half-way point, a 17-year-old who started 90 minutes behind me zoomed by as if he were on a motorcycle.
Back at Strawberry Banke's formal flower garden, I treated myself to a 20-minute rest, yogurt, walnuts and raisins, and a bottle of salt-replenishing drink.
With less than half the century left, my arms and legs began to feel the strain. A half-hour rest beckoned 17 miles away at Hampton.
My bad ankle, crushed in a car wreck in college days, became uncomfortable. The saddle grew harder. I shifted to lower gears. Stronger cyclists — old, young, male and female — passed me steadily.

I made it back to headquarters, 65.7 miles finished. The autumn day had lost its hue. I did not want to continue.
Roy Marshall, 51 and still a racer, urged me on. "Thirty miles? You can do that standing on your head." Maybe on my head, but hardly on my sore seat. Should I settle for a half-century? No, I pushed on.
By Massachusetts, my left knee was aching, neck and shoulders hurting, left arm numb.
At 77 miles, I considered cheating, taking a shortcut to save a few miles. But conscience, pride and the other cyclists kept me honest.
At mile 78, the rear tire blew, a welcome catastrophe. Destruction of a $38 Italian silk sew-up is infuriating, but this time the forced stop provided blessed rest.
I pushed lower and lower gears. More cyclists passed. On Plum Island, I passed a closed comfort station — and stopped anyway.
Seventeen miles left, all pure pain. Stronger cyclists rode in front of the file to cut into the wind for the stragglers.

At Salisbury Beach, like horses running back to the barn, the pack broke away in a sprint for the final seven miles.
I could not keep up. In Seabrook, I propped myself against a traffic light for a minute's rest. It seemed I was there hours. I never would have believed it possible to be numb and in pain simultaneously.
In a very low gear, slowly, deliberately, revolution by revolution, I cranked through Hampton Beach, past the seawall and to the intersection where I remembered leaving headquarters.
I was wrong. The end was at the next intersection, another quarter-mile.
Yard by yard, I wobbled in — 100.1 miles, farther than I had ever imagined.
The memory of my adventure recalls the pride — and the pain. Nevertheless, there's a double century next year ... perhaps a climb to 6,288-foot Mount Washington.

Renowned Figures And Sharecroppers Among Elvis' Ancestors

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — family of Mississippi sharecroppers. Every rock fan knows that Elvis Presley came from a Society, as part of a Bicentennial project, discovered that before the Civil War the family lived in Tennessee and produced "renowned professors, doctors, judges and ministers."

According to Richard Fulcher, Presley's father, grandfather and great-grandfather all struggled in the Mississippi bottom land. He said prior to the Civil War almost each generation of the family produced "at least one brilliant accomplishment."

Fulcher said that the history of the Presley family was completed last year, but it has been since the singer's death that a great deal of interest was generated in the work. The king of rock 'n' roll died of heart failure at his mansion in Memphis Aug 16 at the age of 42.

Fulcher said the family has been reluctant to cooperate with the project. "We have talked with various family members and had some help from them, but on the whole they seem to be a bit close-mouthed about things," Fulcher said.

He said the society had questioned the wisdom of bringing the history to light in view of all the Presley memorabilia now sweeping the nation. "There is so much Presley memorabilia being ridiculously pandered about that we worried about doing this, but have decided to make the history available at cost to libraries," he said. "Of course, how the libraries will contend with holding on to their copies may be a problem."

ROYAL EXPRESSION — Great Britain's Prince Charles spreads his hands in an answering gesture to beckoning young women as he departs from Cleveland Clinic Thursday afternoon following a tour.

The young prince made a 22-hour visit to Cleveland on his tour of the United States. He will visit St. Louis Friday before continuing on for a weekend in Atlanta. (AP Laserphoto)

Fulcher and the society traced the family through 11 generations from its emigration from Ireland in the early 18th century.

"The history of this family is really incredibly interesting," Fulcher said.

"Beginning with the first generation to emigrate, the family has been noted for its accomplishments. The first generation fought in the Revolutionary War, for example. The second generation was an early pioneer family in East Tennessee, and from them came generations of renowned professors, judges, doctors and ministers," he said.

"It wasn't until the reconstruction era that the family's fortunes were reversed, after the great-great-grandfather had moved to Mississippi."

Held Nude Press Conference

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Emily Coleman and Betty Edwards held a patio party to promote their new book "Body Liberation," Friday. Emily wore body paint and a sash. Betty was modestly covered from the waist down. "We said when this book's out that we were going to have a nude press conference, and we are," Emily Coleman said.

She autographed books and chatted with guests and newspaper while artist Preston Hibbard decorated the nude body of Lisa Edwards, 20, Betty Edwards' daughter, with swirls and designs.

Some other women waited, drinking punch and chatting, for their turn to become Hibbard originals.

A few men lounged nude in patio chairs. Television newsman Fred Anderson stripped to bathing trunks and Hibbard painted an eagle on his chest.

"How do you fell about painting all these nude women," Anderson asked. "I love it, love it," Hibbard said.

"The first rule of etiquette at a nude press conference," Emily Coleman said into a microphone as she warmed up the crowd for a nude fashion show, "is to look. Look everywhere."

"If you don't want to be looked at, you should have covered it over," she said. "No matter what it is."

The subtitle of their book is "Freeing your body for greater self-acceptance, health and sexual satisfaction."

"I want you to touch someone near you," Miss Coleman said. "Touch — don't grab."

The fashion show featured psychologist Keith Tombrink resplendent in a cabarillo vest, hat and sash. Black paint covered everything else from the waist down.

A couple sauntered along the pool side demonstrating their choice of evening wear. He wore a black tie and cummerbund. She wore jewelry.

One man mimed Adam in the garden of Eden, entering nude and finding a palm leaf which, after some deliberation, he firmly attached to his chest.

Despite the apparent frivolity of its introduction, "Body Liberation," is a serious book of advice about nudity and interpersonal relationships. Miss Coleman for nine years has conducted workshops dealing with human potentials, relationships and body awareness.

Miss Edwards is a writer, educator and author of several articles on contemporary social problems.

Memento For Queen

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II is about to receive a memento of her Silver Jubilee from one of Lexington's most colorful characters.

Mitchell Harb, a tire-recapping jack-of-all trades, has designed a pewter medal that Harb has arranged to have hand-delivered to Buckingham Palace upon its arrival in London.

Harb, who has made his living in the tire business, has been creating works of metal art in a foundry at the back of his tire shop for more than a decade. He describes himself as a "master craftsman" and an inventor with four patents to his credit.

His creations have ranged from miniature cannons for Bicentennial celebrations to miniature versions of the Civil War Ironclads, the Monitor and the Merrimack.

The medal he has created for Queen Elizabeth was made from four pounds of specially concocted pewter. Harb said he followed a formula used for making pewter in the 18th and 19th centuries.

The formula called for 80 per cent tin, 15 per cent antimony and 5 per cent lead — a "very toxic" combination, Harb said. "A lot of people got lead poisoning" from the formula when it was widely used, he added.

However, Britain's sovereign is in no danger. The medal cast by Harb is shaped like a book-end and could not possibly be used for either food or drink.

The project is an indirect result of a chance meeting 12 years ago between Mrs. Ottis M. Hedrick, Harb's high-school English teacher back in 1937, and a young British actress named Muriel Zillah.

The two women met in London when Mrs. Hedrick stopped to ask for directions to her hotel. They became friends and Miss Zillah has since made two visits to Lexington to see Mrs. Hedrick.

During the actress' most recent visit this summer, Harb showed her some of his work. Miss Zillah, in turn, showed him a British coin bearing the likeness of Queen Elizabeth on horseback and suggested Harb use it as a guide for making a Silver Jubilee medal.

Harb said he invested "a couple of thousand dollars" worth of time and materials in the medals, but emphasized he didn't expect to be paid. He said he made the medal "strictly for the honor of doing it."

DIVORCE RATE
NEW YORK (AP) — The divorce rate in the United States, which has been steadily rising for 10 years, reached a new peak in 1976, hitting 5.0 per 1,000 persons, says the American Council of Life Insurance. The council said the rate in 1975 was 4.8 per 1,000.

Hanoi Remains A Shabby City

EDITOR'S NOTE — AP writer-photographer Horst Faas, who won the Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the Vietnam War, went to Hanoi four times in 1974 to witness the release of American prisoners of war. He recently returned to Vietnam with a German tour group and saw what Hanoi and other parts of North Vietnam are like today.

By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer
HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — The lights have been on again in Hanoi for more than two years, but the brightest lights don't shine for the living.

They illuminate the mausoleum of the founder of modern Vietnam, President Ho Chi Minh, and the huge square around it in the center of Hanoi, capital of all Vietnam since the Communist victory in 1975. The mausoleum is closed at night, the square empty.

The rest of the city is gloomily lit, and electrification has not reached the surrounding countryside yet.

Ho Chi Minh is the nation's spiritual leader seven years after his death. His image is seen everywhere. During the day, thousands of rubber-sandaled feet shuffle past goose-stepping guards to view the remains of "Uncle Ho," dressed in a gray-blue, high-collared suit, in a glass coffin. With carefully combed goatee, the face looks peaceful and serene in the pinkish, yellow illumination.

In the courtyard of the National Army Museum are the wrecks of U.S. warplanes, among them an F111 fighter and a B52 bomber. On display nearby are anti-aircraft guns and a Soviet-made MIG which a placard says shot American planes down.

The potholed markets and streets of Hanoi teem with more people than during the war years. Since all those evacuated during the American bombing raids have returned home, the population has swollen to 1.3 million, and government representatives said a strong effort will be made to send several hundred thousand to the "new economic zones" being developed in the Central Highlands of what once was South Vietnam.

War damage is hardly noticeable at the airport and around the city. The anti-aircraft guns are gone, revetments filled in. The runways are crowded with military and civilian aircraft, both American and Soviet made. But few seem in use, possibly due to lack of fuel.

On several hundred-mile drives through North Vietnam, I saw no signs of military preparedness. Hanoi's soldiers are seen building roads, working on the docks and in factories, driving civilian trucks and even handling baggage at Hanoi airport.

Hanoi, as well as Haiphong and other cities I visited with a German tour group, are drab and shabby to Western eyes, neglected in 30 years of war. Nobody seems to live comfortably. The window displays of department stores and shops are sparse, even compared with what I saw in Saigon, now called Ho Chi Minh City.

Government officials readily acknowledge they have many problems with the economy, housing, food supply and city management.

The people living in rural village cooperatives seem to be best off in North Vietnam today. They grow their own food, live under less crowded conditions and seem to suffer less from the effects of war and neglect than those in the cities.

The only reminder of the war in many villages is a neat military cemetery.

Sales Drop In Spirits Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Led by the continued slide in the sales of Scotches, Canadians, bourbons and blends, the distilled spirits market dropped 2.1 percent in sales in 1976, according to the second annual American Distilled Spirits Market Review and Forecast, 1977 Edition.

Published by IMPACT, semi-monthly newsletter of the wine and distilled spirits field, the 56-page Review describes the overall performance of the industry — with special attention to such areas as share of market held by various categories and brands; a projection of 1980s Top Ten Brands; and distillers' growing involvement in the wine market.

STREET SELLER — Teenage Vietnamese youth jokes with a toy gun, made of cheap painted tin, on a street in Hanoi. He was among the street vendors at

Hanoi's downtown market who were selling toys and decorations for the mid-year children's festival — a colorful touch in an otherwise drab capital city. (AP Laserphoto)

Says Unethical Conduct Threat To Business

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Unethical conduct by multinational corporations threatens the continued existence of free enterprise, says Fred T. Allen, chairman of Pitney Bowes. Speaking at the recent World Trade Week Dinner here, Allen conceded the difficulties of defining ethical behavior on a global scale. Instead, he proposed a simple test: If an executive's actions can be defended publicly, they are probably above reproach. "We cannot depend solely on codes of ethics that, when applied in an international context, may sometimes seem too general or specific to be practical," he said. "Drawing the fine line between right and wrong can often be reduced to quibbling. And codes can guide us, but they cannot make decisions for us."

'NBC: The First Fifty Years - A Closer Look' Celebrates Past

LOOKING BACK IN JOY — Burt Reynolds, George Burns, Orson Welles (top, l-r) Dan Haggerty, Chevy Chase and Don Rickles (bottom, l-r) are the hosts of an entertaining and nostalgic look at top variety programs going back to TV's early days, on "The Big Event" presentation, "NBC: The First Fifty Years — A Closer Look," Sunday, Oct. 23 (8:30-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

NBC's 50 years of variety and dramatic programming — presented only in highlights on last November's widely viewed anniversary special — will be showcased in separate sequels, the first being a two-and-a-half hour nostalgia-filled program titled "NBC: The First Fifty Years — A Closer Look."

The first sequel will be broadcast on "The Big Event" Sunday, Oct. 23, at 8:30 p.m. on NBC-TV. Burt Reynolds, Orson Welles, Don Rickles, Chevy Chase, George Burns and Dan Haggerty share the hosting duties.

Robert E. Mulholland, President, NBC-TV, said: "Since NBC began in 1926, it has been the industry leader in the presentation of variety and dramatic programming.

"Public reaction to 'The First Fifty Years,' in the form of mail, telephone and the estimated 50 million people who watched last year's program, was amazing. Viewers requested to see a wide range of stars, scenes from dramatic programs and skits and acts from variety shows. These two specials are being presented in response to viewer requests."

Welles opens the special with a few remarks, and Chevy Chase then leads into a parade of comedians and a section on sight gags. Welles then introduces a portion on Family Album, showing how certain stars have grown up on television.

Rickles comes before the cameras to introduce an "Ac-countant's Holiday" sketch featuring Marty Feldman, and this is followed by a "Look Who's Singing" segment showing stars not necessarily known as variety performers. Rickles also talks about the shows a sketch from "The Colgate Comedy Hour" starring Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

Haggerty, star of "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," presides over a section devoted to animals, then Welles returns with a section on Dance.

Reynolds presents a tribute to Groucho Marx, and a segment on comic characters familiar to television viewers is acknowledged by Welles, who follows with the "I Enjoy Being a Girl" portion.

Burns recalls his good friend, the late Jack Benny, and introduces a sketch featuring Benny and Gregory Peck, and Welles narrates a tribute to Elvis Presley.

Rickles introduces "The Divorce Sketch" with Bob Newhart, Dean Martin and Petula Clark; there's a salute to Jimmy Durante, and the final production number is Frank Sinatra singing "Send In the Clowns."

Marie Reveals New Appearance

Becoming 18 years old is an important event for anyone. But if you're Marie Osmond, co-star of ABC-TV's "Donny and Marie," it becomes an event of national importance.

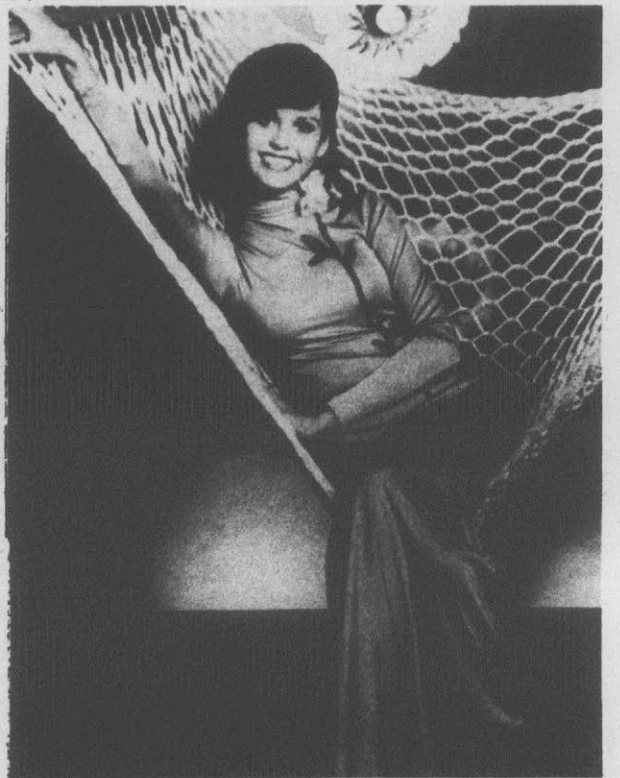

Marie, who has been entertaining millions of people since her early teens, will celebrate her birthday on a special edition of "Donny and Marie" Sunday, Oct. 23, 7 to 8 p.m. on ABC-TV.

All the fuss surrounding the event makes Marie a little embarrassed, but whenever she says, "It's just another birthday," someone reminds her that she is a top singer-entertainer and is far from being just another 18 year old.

So, she's been putting up with all the special preparations and, in fact, has found some of them to be quite pleasant. "I like my new hairstyle, it's so natural and easy to take care of. Also, I've got a new designer, Bob Mackie, and he's created some super new clothes for me."

Because Mackie is usually associated with chic, avant-garde women, the conservative Osmond family and their friends were a bit concerned about what he would design for Marie. Happily, their concerns proved unfounded. The outfits for Marie reflected just the right amount of sophistication for a girl becoming a young woman. "The clothes are casual, but dressy," says Betty McGillivray, a teacher, who has been with the family for many years, tutoring Donny, Marie and now younger brother, Jimmy, also. "Mackie designs for the person, rather than super imposing his own visions, and what he has done for Marie reflects her personality as a young woman of 18. It's all in perfect taste."

Bill Cosby Animates Playground Buddies

For many years Bill Cosby has carried pictures in his head of youngsters who grew up with him in the tenement district of his native North Philadelphia. He has successfully translated those pictures into works for nightclub audiences and television viewers in his monologues about his boyhood experiences.

Then, when The Cosby Kids became animated characters, Cosby had another translation of them to make: first from his head to his words, and then from his words to drawings that would personify each of the characters, such as Fat Albert, Dumb Donald, Weird Harold and Mudfoot. The Kids, who are now familiar in their animated antics to television audiences everywhere, star in "The Fat Albert Halloween Special," a primetime animated half-hour special starring Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids, Monday, Oct. 24, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Cosby explains that only three of the animated characters are based on actual people: himself, his mother, and his younger brother, Russell. "A few are total inventions," Cosby adds, "created to fill a specific comedic need. Most, like Fat Albert and Weird Harold, are composite caricatures of people I knew in my early years."

Cosby worked closely with the artists who were to draw the characters for the first time. "I had to," he says, "because I was the only one who really knew what they looked like. They were up there in my head, filed way back in my memory."

Certain characters came easily to the drawing board because Cosby had described them often and in dramatic detail in his comedy acts. Others had to be visualized from scratch and were "designed by committee" in conferences between Cosby and the artists.

Southerner Stars

"The Best of Families," a major new television dramatic series which colorfully blends American history and fiction, debuts Thursday, Oct. 27, at 9 p.m. on PBS. One of the stars of the series is Clarence Felder, a native of St. Matthews, S.C.

Using fictional characters, the eight-part series dramatizes real events taking place in New York City between the turbulent years of 1880 and 1900 when urban technology and environment were becoming the focus of national attention.

Through the experiences of three families and more than 40 family members, friends, and such historical personages as Teddy Roosevelt and social worker Jacob Riis, "The Best of Families" shows society and culture and propelled it in directions which are still evident today.

Novel Airs On ABC

One Summer three homeless youngsters met in a foster home. There they discovered that feelings about love, caring and togetherness are meant to be expressed freely. This essential principle is an important part of the Betsy Byars' novel "The Pinballs," brought to the television screen as an "ABC Afterschool Special" and airing Wednesday, Oct. 26, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Kristy McNichol, who stars as Buddy Lawrence in the popular prime time series, "Family," plays Carlie, a 15-year-old bundle of wisecracks that fail to hide the hurt and insecurity of years of not getting along with a succession of stepfathers. Placed in the foster home of Mr. and Mrs. Mason (Walter Brooke and Priscilla Morrill), she immediately begins to browbeat Harvey (Doran), a withdrawn 13-year-old boy with two broken legs and a sorry-to-be-alive attitude. Deserted by his mother and wheelchair-bound after his father (Barry Coe) accidentally drove over his legs, he becomes a challenge to Carlie who tries to bring him out of the depths with his particular brand of off-the-wall philosophy. The third child in the Mason's household is Thomas J. (Marcus), at eight the youngest of the three. Left like an unwanted puppy in front of a house belonging to two old ladies when he was only two, he is now homeless again following the hospitalization of his octogenarian guardians.

Step-by-step the Jim Inman screenplay reveals how these three lonely children come to cling to one another — each giving the other the strength to cope within their environment.

Producer Martin Tahse's camera filmed "The Pinballs" entirely on location throughout Southern California.

Donahue Is That Man

The housewives of America are seeing "another man." Many refuse to do their shopping in the morning, while others greet their husbands at the door with an alert challenge on the latest Supreme Court ruling. These women even insist that their mates get to know and appreciate this "other man." His name is Phil Donahue and he's the Emmy-winning host of "Donahue" (on Channel 11, at 9:00 a.m.) the talk show that's been taking the drudgery out of daytime television for ten years.

The loyalty of Donahue's fans reflects his high regard for a largely female audience. Providing an alternative to soaps and game shows, Donahue discovered that today's housewife is not a "mental midget" and doesn't want to be treated like one. He believes that women appear to be more adept at dealing with controversial issues than men, and says, "Men give you answers — women ask questions."

This philosophy, Phil's own, gave birth to a unique format, and "Donahue" brings the TV cameras to the back of the studio and allows the audience and phone callers to become the interviewer. Nowhere else in national television does a housewife from suburban Chicago get the chance to sit three feet from the President of the Rockefeller Foundation and spend an hour cross-examining him. The host says, "That's when our show works; when the lady in the front row stands up and takes on the guest...then someone phones in and everybody feels a part of things."

While "Donahue" has had its share of celebrities, including Bob Hope, Paul Anka, Totie Fields and Burt Reynolds — there is no couch, no band, just an hour of conversation with one guest or on one topic. From discussions on sexuality an award-winning program on the causes of heart attack, Phil Donahue has attempted to plan programs around the ranging interests of the modern woman. The host and his staff also have a genius for zeroing in on emerging trends, booking a militant Anita Bryant long before she hit the cover of "Newsweek."

Since the one guest-one topic rule can be limiting, Phil strives for day-to-day diversity. "You can't spend five days a week saying 'Ain't it awful,'" and he's not above resorting to "Shtick" and has been known to trade punches with Muhammad Ali or sit with edgy patience while one guest gave his graying locks a perm.

JOURDAN TO GUEST-STAR ON "COLUMBO"

International film star Louis Jourdan will guest-star as a debonair gourmet food critic who matches wits with Lieutenant Columbo in "Murder in Aspic," an NBC-TV "Columbo" drama which is currently in production.

Jourdan, often cast as the debonair Frenchman, will star as Paul Gerard, who cleverly poisons a restaurateur when the man threatens to expose his unscrupulous payoff scheme against restaurant managers. Peter Falk stars as Columbo.

Kaplan's 'Small Event' Spoofs Video Specials

Gabriel Kaplan, star of "Welcome Back, Kotter," hosts his first prime time special, "Gabriel Kaplan Presents the Small Event," in which the popular comedian will spoof television specials. The program will air Sunday, Oct. 23, 10 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Guest starring on the special are Sid Caesar, Cindy Williams of "Laverne and Shirley," and Fred Willard co-host of television's "Fernwood 2-Nite," with cameo appearances by Henry Youngman, Pat Morita and the "sweathog" gang — Robert Hegyes, Lawrence-Hilton Jacobs, Ron Palillo, John Travolta — and John Sylvester White who plays Mr. Woodman in "Welcome Back, Kotter."

Comedy highlights include "Battle of the Celebrity Relatives," and Kaplan, as Howard Cosell's father, reports on contests of celebrities' kin at the Autumn Leaves Retirement Village.

Another 'spoof' is the "National Chauvinist Dating Contest" featuring Kaplan, Sid Caesar and Cindy Williams. The three will show how to behave on (a) a dinner date; and (b) a blind date. In case you're (a) a cad, and (b) a bounder.

Kaplan then offers glimpses of the intimate life of our 13th President, who has been overlooked — with good reason — by historians in "An Evening With Millard Fillmore."

The "Afternoon Special" finds Cindy as Peter Poo, and she dramatizes what would happen if Sir James Barrie's character tried to get his act together with contemporary kids.

The documentary is not to be overlooked, and another highlight is "Hormones: Are We Paying Too Much for a Bigger America?" Kaplan, Caesar, Cindy and Willard portray folks working at a hormone factory who are experiencing strange happenings.

The "Christmas Special" stars Kaplan, Caesar, Willard and Cindy — without the Osmonds, Bing and Kathy, and the King Family.

Vegas Daughters Celebrate 75th

Even the most blasé of Las Vegas cabdrivers were talking about it...their daughters were going to be "on TV."

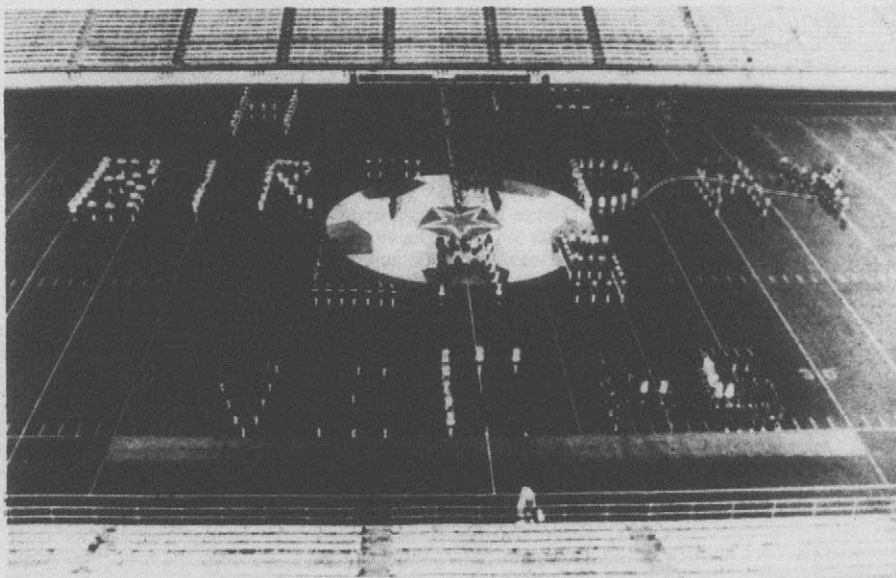

Nearly five hundred Las Vegas high school girls had been invited by television producer Pierre Cossette to appear in "Happy Birthday Las Vegas," a spectacular tribute to the 75th anniversary of the glitter capitol of the world, on Sunday, Oct. 23, 8 to 10 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Most people think of Las Vegas as "the strip," but these girls represent the community of 370,000 who live, work, and raise their kids in the world famous desert oasis...and like all parents, Las Vegas is proud of their little girls, and very excited by their show business debut.

All 12 Las Vegas high schools participated in the videotaping session at the Las Vegas Stadium, and that was no small feat. With just two weeks notice from Cossette, the girls were summoned, rehearsed, delivered, made-up, coifed, and costumed for their part in what will probably be the biggest television special in the history of the medium.

It took nine buses, two hot dog and "coke" wagons, a 120 foot crane (for the cameramen and crew) at least two dozen technical and support staff, and more costumes than Heinz has pickles. And the girls were trouper.

Nearly 500 Las Vegas High School girls spell out "Happy Birthday Las Vegas" in the Las Vegas Stadium to commemorate the Nevada city's 75th Anniversary. The celebration will air on Sunday, Oct. 23 (8-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

CARPET TIPS

WHEN THE "SPIRIT" MOVES YA'

Ideals are ideals. And the carpet people, whose pride is at stake, say it's "ideal" to vacuum carpets and rugs once-per-week.

I won't disagree. But, I must admit that I know a lot of people who do an adequate job of maintaining their carpets and rugs with a lot less than once-per-week vacuuming.

What's the answer? I say if the traffic is sparse, don't worry about a weekly cleaning. Just do it when the "spirit" moves ya'!

'Heather' Makes Her Entrance

Well, the little red-haired girl who has been eluding a love-struck Charlie Brown for 20 years, has finally gotten to Charlie's alter ego, Charles M. Schulz.

Artist-writer Schulz, creator of the "Peanuts" cartoon strip and of the characters that populate it, has stated on numerous occasions that he would not draw the little red-haired girl, that he would not portray her, either in the daily strip or in the television specials that animated the "Peanuts" adventures.

"Every man has his own idea of the perfect girl, and that ideal must remain his own. It can't be some artist's translation," Schulz has stated.

But never underestimate the power of a woman — to make word-eating a gourmet feast.

The little red-haired girl — whose name, Schulz reveals, is Heather — will co-star with Charlie and his pals in the latest "Peanuts" drama, "It's Your First Kiss, Charlie Brown," newest in the popular series of animated specials based on the comic-strip youngsters, to be broadcast Monday, Oct. 24, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Heather is the homecoming queen in this latest fantasy from Peanuts-land, and she is Charlie Brown's date for the annual dance, which is pretty heavy for a kid with two left feet. Not only that, there's this school tradition that the boy who escorts the queen to the dance gives her a kiss to start the ball rolling. Good grief, what a setup for a Charlie Brown-type brouhaha.

Meanwhile, there's the little red-haired girl, on camera for all the world to see.

Did somebody cop out? Not Charlie Brown, certainly — he's always seen the little red-haired girl, if only from a distance.

So that leaves Charles Schulz, who claims the artist's prerogative to change his mind.

"We gave a lot of thought to bringing the little red-haired girl to the screen," he says. "When you have a running gag like this, especially for so many years and especially in the comic-strip form, it's perhaps better not to kill off the fantasy.

"But in this one case, we thought it would be sort of fun if we broke with tradition and actually showed the little red-haired girl and had Charlie Brown meet her.

"From here on in, it's up to Charlie."

Spooky Special To Air

Things are not always what they seem, especially on Halloween.

Fat Albert and his pals learn that lesson, among others, as they plot their "creepiest, baddest, scariest" spook night ever, on "The Fat Albert Halloween Special," starring Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids, in an animated half-hour program celebrating the holiday of ghosts and goblins on Monday, Oct. 24, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Devery and Rudy are the ringleaders of the Cosby Kids, including Mushmouth, Dumb Donald, Weird Harold and Fat Albert, and they try to lure the group on a grand adventure to scare all of the "weird" elderly people in their neighborhood.

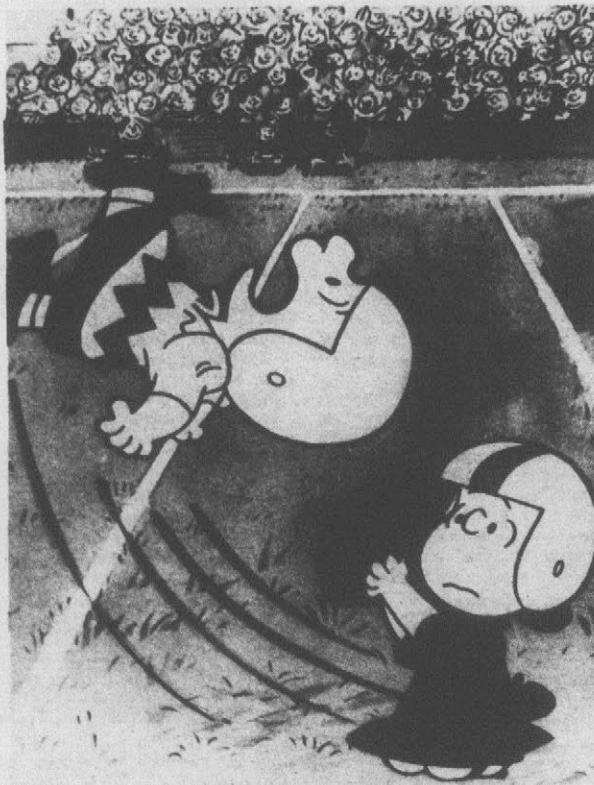

First they try their tricks on cranky Searchlight Johnson, who works in the movie house, and then they turn their talents on Mudfoot, an old man who turns their tricks back on them. But their piece de resistance is held in reserve for old Mrs. Bakewell, who lives alone in the big house near the local cemetery.

'Wings' Portrait Offered

A unique portrait of Paul McCartney's international super-band, Wings, will be offered to their millions of fans in a special hour-long program on ABC-TV in January, 1978.

The songs, the singing and the personality of Paul McCartney have been reference points in contemporary life ever since the first international shock waves set off by the Beatles. His music has bridged generations and set new standards for the songwriters of today and tomorrow. The special will present the television audience with a rare opportunity to see one of the world's most celebrated musical artists both man and performer.

Paul McCartney and Wings will be shown in concert and on-the-road during their full worldwide year's length tour which covered Australia, England and the United States. The group played before millions, including an audience of 70,000 in Seattle, Washington, which was the largest audience in history to see an indoor performance.

Charlie Brown, once again, suffers at the hands of Lucy, who holds the ball as he attempts to kick-off the football season, in the new half-hour animated special, "It's Your First Kiss, Charlie Brown," Monday, Oct. 24 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Bo Svenson Stars In Late Movie

"Target Risk," to be rebroadcast Wednesday, Oct. 26, as "The CBS Late Movie" at 12:30 a.m., on CBS-TV, deals with a bonded courier who is responsible for the safe delivery of anything — from top-secret documents to human beings.

Bo Svenson stars as a powerful, 6'5" karate expert and accomplished linguist — whose special skills make him the most unique courier in the world.

Joining Svenson in "Target

Risk" are Meredith Baxter Birney, Robert Coote, John R. Ryan and Keenan Wynn.

The film's executive producer, Roy Huggins introduced to television viewers its first anti-hero "Maverick," the lovable con-man, played by James Garner, and followed this success with other innovative ideas, including "77 Sunset Strip," "Run For Your Life" and "Alias Smith and Jones."

What's different about "Target Risk?" "I was beginning to think there were only four jobs held by television heroes — doctor, lawyer, cop and cowboy," says Huggins. "Then one day I received a novel by Giles Tippet based on the adventures of a bonded courier. Now here was a fascinating character. The courier is a man of mystery, who delivers anything," he explained. "He is a one-of-a-kind man in a new and different line of work which had never been mined by television or films. I felt it was a fresh, new idea with great potential."

Svenson, the only actor in Hollywood who holds a 3rd Degree Black Belt in Judo, is a "natural" for the role of the mysterious courier. The blond, Swedish actor also speaks six languages; is a former race car driver and ice hockey player. Larger than life, Bo is as unique a real-life personality as "Lee Driscoll" is a fictional one.

Ms. Birney plays a glamorous model who is the courier's understanding girl friend. Following her co-starring role in the comedy series, "Bridget Loves Birney," Meredith appeared in dramatic change-of-pace roles in "Barnaby Jones," "The Stranger Who Looks Like Me," and is now seen weekly in the series, "Family."

Veteran performer Keenan Wynn was tapped for the part of the boss who hands Lee Driscoll the exciting assignments which take him all over the world. Wynn, who's been active in show business for 40 years, has to his credit appearances in over 180 films and 100 TV shows.

Cody, a popular Cherokee Indian who is highly recognized for his tearful soliloquy in the anti-pollution TV commercials, will portray a medicine man in the series.

'Mulligan's Stew' To Premiere As Contemporary Family Series

"Mulligan's Stew," a contemporary family series, starring Elinor Donahue and Lawrence Pressman as the parents of seven children — three of their own and four inherited from deceased relatives — premieres Tuesday, Oct. 25, 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.
Created and produced by Joanna Lee, the episodes of "Mulligan's Stew" will range from lighthearted treatment of sibling rivalry to painfully serious encounters in an overcrowded home and the difficulty of stretching a high school teacher-football coach's salary to provide for nine people.

The roles of the Mulligan's children are played by Johnny Doran, K.C. Martel and Julie Haddock. The four Friedman children will be Lory Kochheim, Suzanne Crough, Christopher Ciampa and Sunshine Lee. Jaime Alba will be featured as Polo, the auto mechanic.

A central element in the series is the marital relationship of Michael and Jane Mulligan, a provident, loving couple whose careful plans for their own family's future are shattered in the plane crash that claims the lives of Michael's sister and her husband. The Friedman's own three children and their newly adopted Vietnamese orphan sister are taken into the Mulligan's small California home. The resulting mixture of emotions ranges from resentment and jealousy on the part of the children to sympathy mixed with apprehension on the part of the adults.

In the premiere episode, "The Biggest Mansion You've Ever Seen," The Mulligan kids' hero-worship of a boastful grade school classmate is tempered for their parents when Jane suspects the youngster to be a victim of child abuse.

Little Jimmy Mulligan and his first cousin, Adam Friedman, are mesmerized by the exploits (real and imagined) of a new schoolmate, Duane McCullough. After Jane Mulligan confides to Michael her suspicions about Duane's real background, they are frustrated by the boy's refusal to accept assistance. While shooting a film documentary for his photography class, Mark Mulligan obtains concrete proof of Jane's suspicions, but a solution beneficial to the boy is difficult to devise.

Meanwhile, the unsuspecting Adam dreams of Duane's defeat in a 1930's gangster shootout (the machine gun loaded with spaghetti sauce) as he himself becomes a hero to the school belle, little Katie.

Betty Ford Hosts

A performance of "The Nutcracker" by the Soviet Union's famed Bolshoi Ballet — with Mrs. Betty Ford as on-camera host at the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow — will be telecast Sunday, Dec. 18, on NBC-TV.

Mrs. Ford will tell the story of "The Nutcracker" and describe the sequences as the Bolshoi dancers perform to the music of Tchaikovsky. (Mrs. Ford, long devoted to the dance, was a member of the Martha Graham dance company in New York City and performed with the group at Carnegie Hall.)

In addition to describing "The Nutcracker," Mrs. Ford will be seen backstage at the Bolshoi and will also take a tour of Moscow, where the program was taped in September.

Patrick Trese, veteran NBC News producer and writer, is the producer for the special, and the script for Mrs. Ford was written by Catherine Faulconer.

Trese has had wide experience in a variety of assignments during his 21 years with NBC News. He was producer of "The Glorious Fourth," the live, 10-hour NBC News telecast in honor of America's Bicentennial last year, and he produced segments of "First Tuesday" and "Weekend."

A Deadly Triangle Sets Plot

Barbara Anderson, Emmy-winning actress for her role in the "Ironside" series, and her police officer partner, Don Galloway, are together again in "You Lie So Deep, My Love," the "CBS Late Movie" Monday, Oct. 24, 11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

For Galloway, the ingenuous boy-next-door cop of "Ironside," his role in the film is a convertible car-coat kind of part with the velvet lining worn on the outside. Galloway is a smoothie married into the Blue Book environment, with an eye on his wife's wealth, and a blonde mistress — not necessarily in that order.

For Barbara Anderson, who plays the wealthy wife and lovely lady in jeopardy, it is a dressy part that displays a wide range of one-of-a-kind creations which fill a rich woman's wardrobe. And the emotional range of the role is just as varied — from wide-eyed innocence to disbelief, then doubt, fear and rage as her husband's schemes are revealed.

David Lowell Rich, producer-director of the film, says, "Don's charming and handsome as the husband. A rugged breed of animal on the outside, with the instincts of a shark inside. You know the kind — the lovable guy with murder on his mind.

"Barbara is warm and appealing as the wife. In the scenes where Don is setting her up for the payoff, they have a beautiful romantic rapport in the genre of a young Joan Fontaine and Carry Grant. They worked well together as a romantic team. I think the word is sexy," he smiled.

Appearing with Barbara and Don are Walter Pidgeon and Angel Tompkins. Pidgeon, a leading romantic actor of his day, is perfectly cast as Miss Anderson's faithful uncle and protector who warns her against the adventurer and adulterer, Galloway.

"You Lie So Deep, My Love" has all the elements of the classic gothic novel — a beautiful woman in jeopardy. She is a woman with brains and ability. She is in no way a detective. Yet, when she finds herself periled, she uses her inquiring mind to uncover clues in order to prevent her own murder.

Barbara Anderson and Don Galloway star as a heiress and her murderous husband in "You Lie So Deep, My Love," a suspense drama on the "CBS Late Movie, Monday, Oct. 24 at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

'Pepper' Starts Season

Pepper (Angie Dickinson) and Crowley (Earl Holliman) rush to the aid of a young mother who has been severely pummeled by her short-tempered husband but refuses to press charges against him, in "Do You Still Beat Your Wife?," the season premiere of "Police Woman," Tuesday, Oct. 25, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

The series returns for its' fourth season starring Dickinson and Holliman as metropolitan plainclothes officers. Dr. Joyce Brothers guest-stars as a hospital physician who counsels the officers on the complexities of wife and child-abuse.

Concern for young Shana Fayette's safety intensifies after a police investigation identifies an abandoned but broken body to be that of her musician-husband's ex-wife.

Plane Caring Beauties Hijacked By Terrorists

Phil Silvers, Chuck Connors, Sheree North, Stella Stevens and Gary Collins star in "The Night They Took Miss Beautiful," a World Premiere drama about the hijacking of an airliner carrying five beauty finalists, on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Oct. 24, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The suspense drama combines glamour with danger when a terrorist group, led by Layla (North), hijacks the plane with the pageant emcee (Silvers), the chaperon (Stevens) and the finalists on board. The flight is en route to Nassau where an international beauty pageant is to take place. The hijackers demand $1,000,000 ransom from the nation each finalist represents.

Unknown to either the hijackers or the finalists, another passenger is a Defense Agency courier carrying a small cylinder which contains a deadly mutant germ from which there is no antidote. The laboratory mutation is to be delivered to a friendly nation that has been developing anti-toxins for bacterial warfare. If released, the germ could wipeout the population of the United States.

Working around a bevy of beautiful girls is nothing new to actor Gary Collins, who co-stars as one of the passengers on the hijacked plane. You see, Gary's married to one: his wife, actress Mary Ann Mobley, is a former Miss America. Their relationship reaches beyond their home life, because the couple frequently appear together in repertory productions across the country.

Despite never having had formal acting lessons, Gary has built an impressive career track record and has appeared regularly or co-starred in four TV series. He also makes numerous guest appearances in other TV series.

The 'acting bug' bit Gary when he was serving in the U.S. Army.

Comic Jimmie Walker Turns Towards Drama

Jimmie Walker, who portrays the lanky eldest son, J.J., in the popular comedy series "Good Times," stars in his first dramatic role as a high school student whose winning spirit is tested by the illness closing in on him, in "The Greatest Thing That Almost Happened," a two-hour drama to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," Oct. 26, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

For Walker, who has worked as a stand-up comic for more than 10 years, his sensitive title role in "The Greatest Thing That Almost Happened" is a radical departure from his past work.

"Most people are familiar with only one side of me," he explains. "Even though my main goal is to be a great stand-up comedian, playing a drama will show people that I can do a lot more than just say, 'Dy-o-mite,' and make them laugh.

"I don't think that my acting is going to make Sir Laurence Olivier nervous," Walker quips. "I'm very straightforward about it. If the director says 'Be happy,' I'm happy. And if he says, 'Be sad,' then I'm sad. I didn't find it as difficult, though, as working on new comedy material in a nightclub.

In fact, Walker has little in common with the dramatic character of Morris Bird III, whose loving relationship with a classmate played by Deborah Allen, becomes a refuge for the young athlete stricken with leukemia.

"What we do have in common, I guess," Walker muses, "is that he is a guy who can make people laugh, but has a serious and sensitive side, too.

"The hardest part of playing the role wasn't the acting. It was playing basketball like I knew how. I'm a sports fan, but I'm not very athletic myself. So playing a competent basketball player was hard. In fact, I was breaking up the other basketball players. Maybe I should try to work that into my nightclub act."

Presitigious stage and film star James Earl stars as his widowed father, whose intense struggle to maintain his own self-respect often blinds him to his son's emotional needs.

Deborah Allen won acclaim for her role in the series "3 Girls 3" and has appeared as J.J.'s girlfriend in "Good Times," and Tamu appears as Morris's younger sister, who carries on her mother's nurturing role in the family.

Jimmie Walker portrays a high school basketball player stricken by leukemia and Deborah Allen plays his girlfriend, in "The Greatest Thing That Almost Happened," to air on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," Oct. 26 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Bugs' Roots Show He's Peruvian

Roots are something that everyone seems to be searching for nowadays, and David Stits, an assistant professor of zoology at Los Padres College in California, has done it for Bugs Bunny.

Bugs, the longtime star of animated films, will deliver his newest performance in "Bugs Bunny's Howl-oween Special," an animated half-hour to be presented Wednesday, Oct. 26, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

"Bugs Bunny is not your traditional breed of timid rabbit," says Stits, emphasizing the obvious. "He's bold and aggressive. Whoever it was who invented the phrase that likens cowardice to running like a rabbit certainly wasn't thinking of Bugs."

In Stits' opinion, Bugs can have sprung only from one bloodline. "Logic dictates that Bugs is a member of the only bold and aggressive rabbit breed on earth," says Stits. "He is a purebred Peruvian stone rabbit."

The Peruvian stone rabbit inhabits the barren Andean foothills of Peru.

Teacher-Student Relationship Explored

The relationship between teacher and student, performer and protege, is explored in "Relations," a lyrical documentary airing Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 10:30 p.m. on PBS.

In this 30-minute special, the camera becomes an integral part of the art form, evoking the mood and flow of the activity which it is filming.

Silhouetted against a window, the instructor and his student practice a routine at the Ned Williams Studio at Gateway National Recreation Area. The sensuality of their movements sets the stage for the mixture of traditional and modern black dance that is performed at the studio. The development of the piece is followed from exercise class to rehearsal to a fully costumed performance in the fields surrounding the studio.

The film travels from Brooklyn, New York to Washington state, from Gateway to the Pacific Northwest Music Camp at Fort Flagler State Park.

'Closeup' Probes Teenage Turn-Ons

ABC News investigates the widespread problem of drinking and drug abuse among today's teenagers on "ABC News Closeup — Teenage Turn-On: Drinking and Drugs," airing Thursday, Oct. 27, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

ABC News Correspondent Tom Jarriel will host the special.

"Alcohol is a drug, but we as a society have a hard time accepting this. We use alcohol to relax, to celebrate special occasions, to cheer our favorite teams. Alcohol is part of our life style," explains Tom Bywaters, producer of the special. "Our teenagers are using alcohol earlier, more often and, most alarmingly, they are mixing it with all the headline-grabbing drugs of the '60s — pot, cocaine, uppers and downers."

"In this 'Closeup,' teenagers tell their own stories openly and honestly. We live with young people as they try to overcome their addiction to alcohol and all of them look like the kid next door. Through their own experiences we see the agony, the horror and the consequences of alcohol and drug abuse," Bywaters states.

The "Closeup" crew filmed at the adolescent drug treatment center at St. Mary's Hospital in Minneapolis, where young people suffering from severe alcohol addiction have been sent by their parents or authorities. Patients undergo a painful detoxification treatment and follow this with six weeks of counseling and therapy.

Christine Yapuncich, St. Mary's drug unit coordinator, explains that "The patient develops a very sophisticated system of defenses so that he doesn't realize he is really developing a relationship with chemicals that becomes more important to him than anything else in his life."

The special also visits the New Connections Halfway House in St. Paul, Minn., where teenagers who have left St. Mary's slowly prepare to rejoin their families. The young people describe how and why they began using drugs and alcohol, and discuss their private fears for the future.

"Closeup" visits the inner-city John Muir Junior High School in Los Angeles and a typical small American town, Bethel, Conn., to illustrate that alcohol and drug addiction cuts across all social and economic lines.

The program concludes with a test which will help parents determine if their child has a drinking and drug problem.

'LAS VEGAS AWARDS' ON NBC-TV

"The Seventh Annual Las Vegas Entertainment Awards," honoring performing artists from the live entertainment capital of the world, will be presented as a two-hour "Big Event" in December on NBC-TV.

The entertainment will include a special tribute to the late Elvis Presley. The awards will be determined by nationwide balloting by members of the Academy of Variety and Cabaret Artists.

Progress Was Natural

Tony Roberts, who co-stars as Joseph Rosetti in NBC-TV's new series "Rosetti and Ryan" (Thursday, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV), came to the acting profession quite naturally.

His father, Ken Roberts, is a veteran radio and TV announcer.

"And my cousin in Everett Sloan, the actor. While neither pushed me into acting, I was around that environment and the bug bit early," says Roberts. He was accepted at the New York School of Music and Art, a public school, but limited to talented youngsters. He rounded out his education at Northwestern University in 1961, earning a bachelor of science degree in drama.

Roberts, who has been nominated twice for Tony Awards, has 11 Broadway plays to his credit, including "Play It Again, Sam" and "How Now, Dow Jones" for which he received Tony nominations. He won the London Critics' Poll Award as Best Actor in a Musical for his performance in "Promises, Promises" in England.

He succeeded Robert Redford in "Barefoot in the Park" on Broadway and continued in the role for 17 months. Other Broadway successes were "The Last Analysis," "Absurd Person Singular" and "Sugar."

He made his movie debut in Disney's "Million Dollar Duck," followed by "Star Spangled Girl" and the film version of "Play It Again, Sam." He was Al Pacino's only 'friend on the force' in "Serpico" and recently completed "Lovers Like Us," with Catherine Deneuve and Yves Montand, in Venezuela. He also starred in "The Taking of Pelham, One, Two, Three," and is appearing on movie screens this fall in Woody Allen's film "Annie Hall."

While this is Tony's first starring role in a TV series, he is not a stranger to the medium. In 1971 he guest-starred with Edward G. Robinson in a "Night Gallery" segment, had a guest role on "Phyllis" and played a cop in "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," a TV movie.

'Bob Hope's Road To Hollywood' Features Classic Comedy Scenes

Classic comedy scenes from Bob Hope's unparalleled motion picture career — 54 films in 40 years — and a spectacular roster of stars will be featured on Hope's first 1977-78 special, "Texaco Presents Bob Hope's Road to Hollywood," to be telecast Friday, Oct. 28, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The special marked the beginning of Hope's 28th year as an NBC-TV star. Bing Crosby, Hope's co-star in the famous "road" series, heads the roster of stars that includes leading ladies Dorothy Lamour, Lucille Ball, Katharine Hepburn, Phyllis Diller, Martha Raye, Paulette Goddard and Shirley Ross; and actors William Demarest, Basil Rathbone, William Bendix, Roy Rogers, Peter Lorre and Lon Chaney.

Hope's motion picture career was launched Feb. 18, 1938, with the release of "The Big Broadcast of 1938," which also starred W.C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour and Shirley Ross.

Seven 'road' films were released, all with Hope, Crosby and Lamour: "The Road to Singapore" (1940), "The Road to Zanzibar" (1941), "The Road to Morocco" (1942), "The Road to Utopia" (1945), "The Road to Rio" (1947), "The Road to Bali"

"Scalpack" Dale Robertson and Diana Hyland star. Western movie about a gambler who wins a railroad in a poker game and his efforts to make it a winning proposition.

1:00 (6,7) Midnight Special: Story line to be announced.
1:30 (3N) Pop Goes the Country

(1952) and "The Road to Hong Kong" (1962).

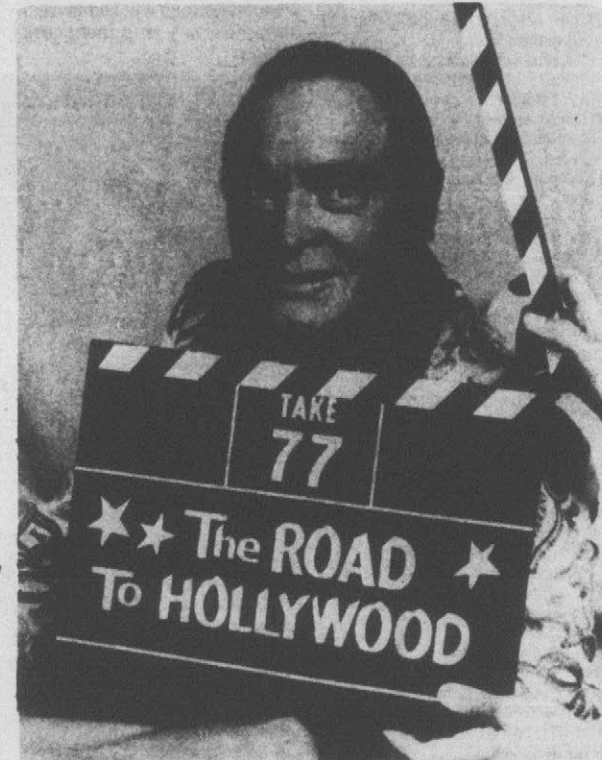

Bob Hope once told an aspiring young performer that he thought success in show business might be just around the corner since the newcomer had one big asset in common with Hope, himself, "people remember your face."

Since 1924 that easily and happily identifiable face (with the accent on his ski-jump profile) has turned its facile expressions of mirth, mischief and merriment to audiences of vaudeville, movies and television. Since his equipment for being a comedian included such assets as fine-honed timing and the grace of an athlete, Hope was able to succeed equally in all fields.

Today Hope is noted equally for his extensive philanthropies and the expenditure of his time for charitable causes for which he does innumerable benefits. He is the recipient of 30 honorary degrees from colleges and universities and has been awarded over 2,000 citations for his humanitarian and professional efforts, including the Medal of Freedom from President Johnson, the Congressional Gold Medal from President Kennedy, a special Oscar and Jean Hersholt Award, the Criss Award, the Pacem in Terris Award and numerous others.

HOPE'S ROAD TO HOLLYWOOD — Bob Hope begins his 1977-78 series of specials with a look back at his spectacular movie career on "Texaco Presents Bob Hope's Road to Hollywood" to be colorcast Friday, Oct. 28 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Excellent Staging Provides Realism

The atmosphere in the delivery room at Riverside Hospital in North Hollywood, Calif., was tense as the double doors swung open. A gurney bearing an obviously pregnant woman was wheeled through to where a gowned and masked medical crew waited.

The setting and equipment was real, as were two legitimate R.N.'s but everything else was make-believe for a sequence in "Having Babies II," airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" Oct. 28, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Padding — not nature — made actress Cassie Yates pregnant, and her attending "obstetrician" was fellow actress Susan Sullivan. Standing up was actor Wayne Rogers as the expectant father.

The scene taking place was the fulfillment of a couple's cherished desire for a baby, but what they were about to get (via the courtesy of four new parents) was twins.

When the scene reached the point where "birth" was imminent, two tiny infants, each in the arms of the R.N., were brought in. The actual birth of one had been photographed 15 days previously but the same crew and the other, a month old, had been born prematurely and consequently was still small enough to look brand new.

As the scene progressed, "Dr." Sullivan worked feverishly. Makeup men dabbed moisture on her brow and on Miss Yates and Rogers so that during the take nurses could wipe it off.

The tension in the room was heightened by the fact that if an actual pregnant woman about to give birth was brought in, the whole company would have to leave.

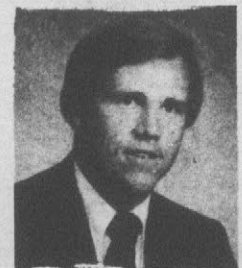

Luck was with them, however. The director called, "That's a wrap" just minutes ahead of the alert that a very expectant mother was on her way.

Skating Helps Boy's Stuttering

"The Skating Rink," the story of a teenage boy who rises above his handicap of stuttering by developing his skills as an accomplished skater, is the "ABC Weekend Special" airing Saturday, Oct. 29, 12-noon to 1 p.m. The realistic and moving story told in "The Skating Rink" exemplifies that notwithstanding a handicap, youngsters may indeed possess and develop strengths which will compensate and, therefore, help them coexist with their handicap. Stewart Peterson stars as Tuck Faraday, whose stuttering problem has been brought on by the trauma of witnessing the tragic death of his mother. He is befriended by Pete Degley (Jerry Dexter), the owner and builder of a new ice skating rink in town, who encourages him to develop skill as a skater. Tuck's realization that he possesses this skill brings him new confidence and self-respect in his own eyes as well as those of his family and schoolmates. Included in the cast are Rance Howard as Tuck's father, Myron, and Betty Beard as his stepmother, Ida. Billy Bowles plays his brother Tom, and Rob Clotworthy his brother, Cleo. Devon Ericson plays the role of Tuck's skating partner, Lilly.

Devon believes that the person responsible for casting her in this role is a "good skate" — despite the fact that there were some chilling aspects to the assignment. She's an excellent skater and has been skating since she was three. Also, her ambition at one time was to star in movies like Sonja Henie. "But for a while, when I was a teenager, I had stopped skating. Then I saw Peggy Fleming and Janet Lynn performing and I decided to go back to it. But I never dreamed it would be possible so early in my career to act and skate in the same role." Stewart Peterson had to be taught how to skate for his role and Devon stepped in as his instructor. "He's such a talented kid," she said. "He picked up a lot of skating skills in the sort time we had to work together. As a skater Stewart has a lot of potential."

A teenage boy, played by Stewart Peterson, rises above the handicap of stuttering by developing his skills as an ice skater — with the help of a newly-found skating partner, played by Devon Ericson, on "The Skating Rink," an ABC Weekend Special, Saturday, Oct. 29 (12-1 p.m.).

Rudd Sleeps Later

Hughes Rudd, co-anchor of the "CBS Morning News," has been getting up at the crack of dawn since July 1973. As he goes into his fifth season on the broadcast, he feels that he would like a change, and has asked to be relieved of his co-anchor duties. Rudd, with his inimitable sense of humor, will still be seen daily on the "CBS Morning News" in his own feature segments. Since he will be able to sleep later, he will also contribute to various CBS News documentaries, now in the planning stage, and other news broadcasts. Richard Threlkeld' who has been based in CBS News' Rome bureau since ril 1977, will replace Rudd as the New York co-anchor, sometime in November. Lesley Stahl became Washington co-anchor on Oct. 3. Rudd joined CBS News in New York in 1959 on the TV news assignment desk and then became a writer of "The World Tonight" and "In Person." He later became a field reporter for "Eyewitness," a weekly television news series. Assignments in Atlanta, Chicago, Moscow and Bonn followed, and he returned to New York in 1968.

 TO C. FRANKLIN, SUFFOLK, VA.: Terence Hill, the handsome actor who starred in "They Call Me Trinity," is an Italian whose films are 'dubbed' when shown in the U.S. When asked why he doesn't come to America to work, he says: "Vy should I?"
 TO 'CURIOUS' IN MULLINS, S.C.: For info about the stars of "One on One," write to them c-o Warner Bros. Studio, 400 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif. 91505. As for Robby Benson..he not only starred in the film, he also co-wrote the story.
 TO C. JOHNSON, WILSON, N.C.: "Adam-12," premiered in 1968 and went into syndication when the series ceased filming in '75. Marty Milner's now 50 years old makes guest appearances in TV series from time to time.
 TO MRS. W. BOOZER, STAUNTON, VA.: Write to Elizabeth Drew, seen on PBS's "Agronsky and Co.," c-o the show, NRACT, 955 L'Enfant Plaza North, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.
 TO B. GENTRY, ELKIN, N.C.: Steve Boyd died this summer shortly after filming an episode of "Hawaii Five-0." The handsome Irishman made over 20 movies during his career, notably "The Fall of the Roman Empire" and "Ben Hur." His last movie was "The Man Called Noon" (1973). Boyd was 49.

Fortifies Offense

The return of Glenn Doughty to the Baltimore Colt lineup adds still another spark to the Colt offense. Doughty, who missed a few games because of a pulled hamstring muscle, gives the Colts balance and consistency at his wide receiver position. Sunday, Oct. 23, the Colts battle the New England Patriots at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV. The "Sack Pack" defensive line which led the American Conference in quarterback tackles in 1976 and the brilliant Baltimore offense should prove a real test to the Patriots.

What happens to New York football fans when a 'giant' Dolphin becomes a 'giant' Giant? Well, New York fans are overjoyed because they know that only one man has made such a change, and that man is Larry Csonka. On Sunday, Oct. 23, at 1:00 p.m. on CBS-TV, Csonka will be doing his thing against the Washington Redskins. "The Giants may lose a lot. The thing that pulls a group of guys together is going through the same low points and not splitting up," says the more level-headed Csonka.

Tony Dorsett Trade Is Understandable

Why did the Seattle Seahawks trade away their rights to Tony Dorsett for four Dallas draft choices?

On Sunday, Oct. 23 at 1 p.m. on NBC-TV, the Seattle Seahawks will meet the Miami Dolphins. In the game, like most Seahawk games, the reason for trading Tony Dorsett will become quite evident.

A running back named Sherman Smith is the reason. He had an outstanding rookie season last year, in spite of adjusting to running back position after playing quarterback in college. He led the Seahawks in rushing with 537 yards on 119 carries for a 4.5 yard average. He was second in scoring with five touchdowns and 30 points, and third in receiving with 36 catches for 384 yards.

Against Atlanta last season, he became the first Seahawk to ever rush for 100 yards in a single game with a 124 yard performance on 14 carries. He also caught seven passes for 93 yards against Detroit.

Smith started nine games after being slowed by a stress fracture of the right leg suffered during the pre-season. During the off-season he underwent surgery for cartilage damage.

Normally Sherman Smith is a bit more reticent than outspoken, and he obviously thinks the trade of the rights to Dorsett was a wise choice.

Smith bubbles with confidence. During a recent conversation when Jack Lambert's name came up, he recalled having played against the famous Pittsburgh linebacker when Lambert was at Kent State.

"I ran over him for a touchdown," Sherman said. Then he watered that down a bit by adding, "Actually, he hit me so hard at the 5-yard line that he turned me around and I backed into the end zone."

The all-rookie backfield of Jim Zorn, Don Testerman and Smith did not come together until game-ten last year in what turned out to be a near-upset of Minnesota.

Smith is sure teammate Don Testerman will soon become one of the league's premier fullbacks and says: "He's strong as an ox. I'm glad he's on my team. I know he'll do a great job of blocking for me, and I want to do a great job for him."

'Sports Spectacular' Features World Championship Competition

Seven international cyclists in competition for the World Motorcycle Jumping Championship, sequences of gymnastic stars of the future in the Women's Junior Gymnastics Invitational from Tokyo, and the fifth event of "The World's Strongest Men" will be featured on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, Oct. 29, 4:30 to 6 p.m.

Seven international motorcycle jumpers from five different nations — the United States, France, England, Czechoslovakia, and Germany — will vie for the title of the World Motorcycle Jumping Champion. The event will be held at Orange County International Raceway in Irvine, Calif. Jumpers representing the United States are Rex Blackwell of Phoenix, Ariz., Dick Stone of Sacramento, Calif., and Gary Wells of Houston, Texas.

Each jumper will attempt two jumps — the first about 100 feet over 20 cars, and the second about 110 feet over 22 cars. Prize money for first place is $4,000, fifth is $3,000, sixth is $2,000, and $1,000 goes to the seventh place finisher. The winner will then attempt a $5,000 bonus jump for a world mark of about 120 feet over 24 cars. The existing AMA-sanctioned mark is 117 feet over 23 cars.

The Women's Junior Gymnastic Invitational competition drew a pair of youthful gymnastic stars from each of eight countries — United States, Canada, Romania, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Japan, USSR and West Germany — to Tokyo's Metropolitan Stadium. The event marked the first international meet for Stephanie Willim, 13-year-old current U.S. Junior Elite Champion from Bethesda, Md.

The athletes performed their routines in the All-Around Individual Competition, which is composed of maneuvers in the vault, uneven bars, balance beam and floor exercise.

Jon Cole competes in the "girl lift," one of the exciting events of "The World's Strongest Men," a unique 10-part series to be presented on "CBS Sports Spectacular." Part V will be broadcast Saturday, Oct. 29 on CBS-TV.

Dick Likes Fans

"There's nothing like an audience to keep a comedy performer on his toes," says Dick Van Dyke. "I've always relied on studio audiences to let me know whether or not they like what I'm doing, so I feel very secure, now, because Carol Burnett's audiences are such fantastic fans."

The "now" referred to above was the first week of production on the eleventh season on "The Carol Burnett Show," broadcast Saturdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Van Dyke is definitely an authority on the responses Carol Burnett gets from her audiences. He not only previously often guested on "The Carol Burnett Show," but this past spring he spent five weeks starring with Miss Burnett in the stage production of "Same Time, Next Year" at the Huntington-Hartford Theater in Hollywood. The intimate romantic comedy brought down the house and gave the pair very happy curtain calls, since they share an appreciation of a live audience for comedy.

"When I was a guest on Carol's show last season, I learned how really friendly an audience can be," says Van Dyke. "When you're working with Carol you can actually feel the love her audiences have for her coming right up on the stage."

"I expect to feel really good this year," Van Dyke notes. "After all, I'll be working with Carol a lot and when that love and appreciation from the studio audience comes rolling up on the stage I can always tell myself that some of it is for me."

Dogs, Cat Take Journey

Bodger, an English bull terrier, Luath, a golden Labrador retriever, and Tao, a Siamese cat, travel 250 miles across Canadian terrain to return to their owner's home, in "The Incredible Journey," a 90-minute presentation on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, Oct. 23, 7 to 8:30 p.m., on NBC-TV.

When Professor Jim Hunter departs from England on a summer teaching assignment, he decides to leave the family pets in the temporary care of a friend, writer John Longridge, who resides 250 miles away in the northwestern part of the province of Ontario. Starring as Hunter and Longridge are John Drainie and Emile Genest.

It's not long before the three animals become restive and lonesome for home. When Longridge leaves on a hunting trip and does not take them with him, the trio believes that they are unwanted and set out across the unknown terrain to get back to the Hunter home.

The domesticated pets face the unknown wilds with its denizens — human and animal. Tao, a great hunter, outmaneuvers a stalking lynx. Bodger meets and beats a vicious farm dog, saving Luath from death. Together, the three fight off an attacking bear.

Wild animals are not the only problems confronting the gritty little party on the trail; survival is the all-important factor. Bodger is a fighter but no hunter, and Luath, an expert at retrieving, has nothing to retrieve. It is Tao who has the brains of the three-some and generally quarterbacks the venture.

It's Grinch Night

A small boy is blown away from Whoville in a howling night wind and finds himself face to face with the dreaded Grinch atop Mt. Crumpit on the special Dr. Seuss presentation, "Halloween Is Grinch Night," Saturday Oct. 29, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

In the deliciously chilling animated production, the townfolk of Whoville run for cover and remain behind bolted doors with the onset of the eerie "sour-sweet" wind. It usually heralds an unwelcome visit from the four-tempered Grinch, as Grandpa Josiah warns family members. They are his wife Mariah and three grandchildren, the oldest of whom is brave, bespectacled Ukariah. Wherever they go, the trio seems to leave some good behind them. They befriend a gentle old hermit; Tao is loved by a lonely Finnish girl, Helvi, who rescues the Siamese from drowning and nurses it back to health with the help of her parents.

Luath, after an encounter with a porcupine, is found wounded by farmer MacKenzie.

Sure enough, on the peak of Mt. Crumpit the Grinch is irritated by wind-inspired night noises. Hitching his unhappy dog, Max, to the paraphernalia wagon, he comes rumbly down the mountain toward Whoville. Meanwhile, young Ukariah has left his grandfather's house to go to the backyard and is swept away — into the part of the Grinch.

"Halloween Is Grinch Night," featuring the voice of Hans Conried as the Grinch, was written by Dr. Seuss and directed by Gerard Baldwin.

REP. PAUL ROGERS:

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR EDWIN NEWMAN, author and news commentator
What's the most difficult part of your job? — C.M., Port Arthur, Texas

● Waiting. You may spend hours or days outside somebody's house and get nothing. You may make dozens of phone calls that yield nothing. It is not easy to keep yourself keyed up and alert when this sort of thing is going on. The next most difficult part of the job is not allowing the routine to take over and not automatically reacting to a story in the same way you reacted to a similar story in the past.

FOR JOAN MONDALE, wife of the Vice President
What about being in the public eye pleases you most and distresses you most? — S.A., Olympia, Wash.

● The loss of privacy can be distressing, but it is exciting to have the opportunities that it brings. I have particularly enjoyed being a sort of spokesperson for the arts. If I can direct more attention to American artistic achievements and to the need for increased support for the arts, it will be well worth the small loss of privacy.

FOR DOLLY PARTON, country singer

● I love the convenience of just slapping on a wig and looking like I spent hours getting my hair to look that way. Wigs are my weakness — dressy ones for shows, softer, shorter ones for off the stage. I do go without one sometimes, but when I leave it off, I feel very strange — almost naked.

FOR JIMMIE WALKER, star of Good Times
Since you're so thin, do you agree that skinny people are more inclined to have temper tantrums than fat people? — S.R., Fayetteville, N.C.

● I don't want to give a definite yes or no, since I haven't taken a poll of all the scrawnies. As for me, I'm not one to throw fits for no reason. What does frustrate me is coming up with a new idea and finding it doesn't work. I also get annoyed with autograph hunters and if I'm recognized on the street. If I never sign another autograph, I'll be happy.

FOR MERV GRIFFIN

When you get time off for peace and quiet, where do you go to be alone? — Mrs. M. Jago, Fords, N.J.

● Every Thursday, when I've finished taping my fifth show of the week, I head for Monterey (I recently sold my home on the Pebble Beach golf course and moved to a ranch in the same area) and lunge into a heavy tennis schedule until the following Monday morning. Between sets, I either entertain or am entertained by close friends.

FOR PEGGY FLEMING, skater
How old were you when you began skating, and why did you start? — Camille More, Livingston, Calif.

● At 9, I rented my first pair of skates. There was a rink down the street, and I went there because it seemed a nice place to spend my time. I had no dreams of becoming another Sonja Henie. In fact, I adored ballet and was taking lessons. Nine months after that first session, I bought my own skates. According to my parents, I was a "natural" and never waddled or fell. What I liked most was the sensation of gliding.

FOR SALLY FIELD, actress

What advice do you have for aspiring actresses? — L.V., Rye, N.Y.

● Start early, at 2, the way I did — I began in my own room. Then get involved with school drama courses. It's an invaluable experience. If you can please a student audience, you can please anyone, because they're the world's worst. If they don't like you, they spit or throw rocks and books. Then act for the family in the living room. You won't get an honest appraisal, but you'll get practice in acting in front of people.

FOR ARTE JOHNSON, actor and comedian
Is it true you have degrees in journalism and law and, if so, have they helped your career? — V.L., Gadsden, Ala.

● It's true. One needs all kinds of knowledge in order to be satirical. If I can take one sentence that is a piece of honest information and use it as a jumping-off place, I have piqued the interest of those knowing the same fact (and those who don't). One of my college professors said that if all those graduating from universities remembered one sentence from each course they took, they'd be well educated. It's quite a remark, and I never forgot it.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

As one who grew up adoring Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, it's sad that today's youngsters aren't exposed to ventriloquism. Why has it died? — I.J., York, Pa.

● It hasn't. In fact, there's an entertainer named Jay Johnson (right), who seems set to take up where Edgar Bergen and Paul Winchell, with his Jerry Mahoney doll, left off. He has been on TV with his Farmer Frogurt doll and is currently making a tour of the country's children's hospitals. Ventriloquism, researchers think, has been around since humans learned how to talk. So the future doesn't look too bleak.

FOR DON WILLIAMS, singer
How did you get interested in the guitar, and how many songs have you written? — M.C., Savannah, Ga.

● My mother was responsible. She was my first and only teacher and gave me my first lesson at 12. We were living in Missouri at the time, and I can remember rushing home from school to get to my guitar and pick out a tune I'd heard on the radio. Reckon I've written about 500 songs.

PRO AND CON Should Parole Be Abolished?

PRO Aryeh Neier, executive director, American Civil Liberties Union

Parole makes a sentence depend on behavior in prison. It assumes parole authorities can predict future crimes on the basis of prison behavior. This is unfair to everyone. The underlying crime should determine the sentence. Predictions based on prison behavior have proved wholly unreliable. While I would abolish parole, I don't advocate that we "throw away the key." Many sentences are far too long. Short, sure punishment is best. Even for the most vicious crimes, a maximum sentence of 15 years — without parole — is adequate. That is a long time. It would protect society since few violent crimes are committed by people after their mid-30's.

CON Robert B. McKay, director, Program on Justice, Society and the Individual, Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies

The only fair answer is that "it depends." If prison sentences continue to be indeterminate, that is, for a time not fixed in advance, parole is necessary to decide upon release dates. If judges continue to sentence without guidelines, to make their sentences more rationally understandable, parole is necessary to relieve injustice. But in most states parole procedures themselves are infected with such great disparities in the handling of individual cases that new injustices result. Parole could be substantially modified or eliminated if sentencing guidelines could be adopted that would lead to a fair and relatively determinate sentencing shortly after conviction.

AN UNKNOWN MENACE PUZZLES CATTLEMEN

By Lawrence Ferguson

Most of the witch hunters, private detectives, state investigators, UFO seekers, bounty hunters, soldiers of fortune, freelance writers, self-appointed sleuths and curiosity seekers gave up on the complex mystery a long time ago.

But not Sheriff H.L. "Tex" Graves of Logan County, Colo.

"It's the strangest thing I've seen in 24 years as a lawman, and I'm not about to give up," he says. "I still don't know who is responsible for these crimes, but one thing is certain — whoever or whatever they are, they're nothing but a bunch of common thieves."

The strange events to which Graves refers are officially categorized as crimes against property but have come to be known simply as "cattle mutilations." Ranchers in at least 22 states, stretching from Oregon to Florida, have reported cattle mutilations, but so far no one has explained the bizarre occurrences. However, dedicated lawmen like Graves are determined to find the answer.

The mutilations began in late 1974 and peaked in the summers of 1975 and 1976. Reports of them started in the North Central states and quickly spread.

Bewildered ranchers began finding their cattle dead in the fields, with precise, surgical cuts. Parts of the dead animals — eyes, ears, tongues, tails, various organs, patches of hide — were cut out and taken. Left behind were tons of choice meat.

In Colorado, the hardest-hit state, about 1,500 suspected mutilations were reported, according to the Colorado Cattlemen's Association.

John Welsh, director of cow-calf stockers service for the National Cattlemen's Association, estimated the national total now to be around 3,000.

As the cases mounted and no solid clues were found, public interest grew. Rural sheriffs like Tex Graves were besieged by people offering advice, many of them convinced they could solve the puzzle.

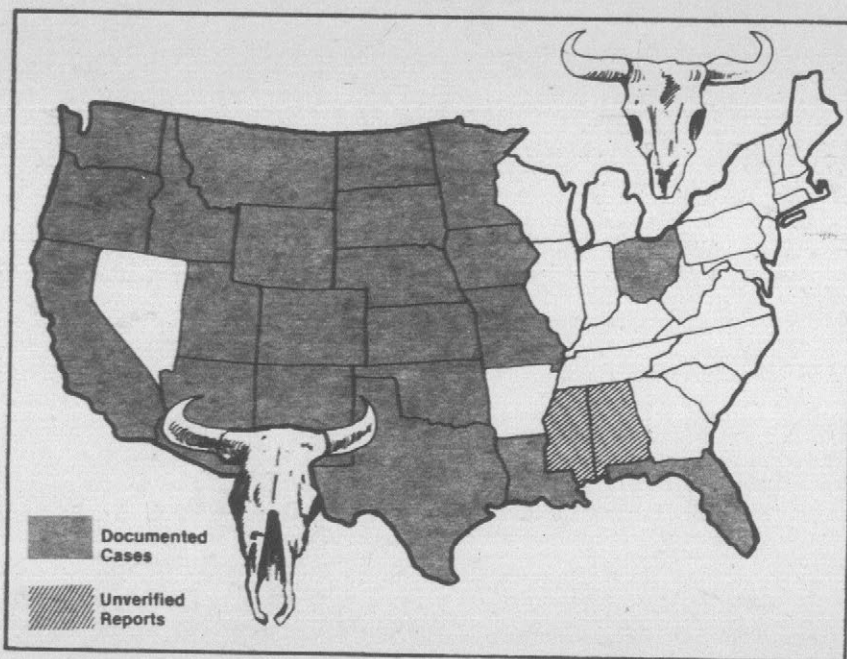

"You wouldn't believe the weirdos we had through here," says Graves. "They came in droves. We never knew when someone might have the clue we were looking for. So we tried to listen."

Soon, sheriffs were facing a new danger. They shuddered at what might happen to curious outsiders wandering the countryside while ranchers patrolled their property with guns.

As the mystery deepened, the theories flourished. Among the most popular:

- The mutilators belong to a satanic cult that uses animals' organs in its rituals.
- The Government is secretly testing new biological and chemical warfare weapons, as well as secret air-land vehicles.
- The mutilators are visitors from outer space, who swoop down out of the night sky and zap the animals with their weapons, taking the parts to create their own herds by cloning.
- The mutilators are hitherto unknown

Lawrence Ferguson is a reporter with The Gazette Telegraph, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Though thousands of animals appear to have been mysteriously destroyed, some scientists say nothing unusual has actually been happening.

humanoids, resembling the Big Foot of West Coast fame or the legendary Abominable Snowman.

• Natural predators, such as coyotes, bears, mountain lions and eagles, are the culprits, and somehow cattlemen are victims of a form of mass hysteria, seeing things that do not exist.

Late in the summer of 1975, Graves and other Colorado sheriffs went to Gov. Richard Lamm for help. He called in the Colorado Bureau of Investigation.

"This is one of the greatest outrages in the history of the Western cattle industry," proclaimed the Governor to officials of the state Cattlemen's Association. "It is important to solve this mystery as soon as possible. The cattle industry is hard hit from an economic point of view. From a humane point of view, we cannot allow these mutilations to continue."

Joining the CBI was the Colorado National Guard, which began searching for unauthorized planes or helicopters flying over cattle country.

A $25,000 reward, put up by various rural groups, was offered to anyone providing information leading to the arrest and conviction of the mutilators. The American Humane Association offered a $500 reward.

In late 1975 law-enforcement officers in Colorado tracked every lead. The CBI infiltrated offbeat cults of devil worshippers and the hippie underground in Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

The veterinary lab at Colorado State University began examining animal carcasses.

One animal subjected to a thorough exam was a female buffalo, found at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo in Colorado Springs on Oct. 20, 1975. An autopsy was performed by Dr. Rodney Walker, zoo veterinarian. Tissues from the animal were submitted to Dr. Raoul Ulrich, El Paso County coroner. Fluid samples were sent to the college lab.

A month later, Don Davis, zoo director, announced the disturbing results of the investigation: "...the animal died from unknown causes. After it was dead, a mutilation was done with a sharp instrument by man. Blood samples and pathology work showed no evidence that the death was caused by drugs, poison or anything else but natural causes."

Sheriffs next staked out farm and ranch locations and patrolled the countryside more frequently. Sheriff Graves and his men spent night after night in Logan County's back country, which is so desolate and unpopulated "you could hide a freight train out there," one of the searchers noted laconically.

When the information gathered in the massive CBI search was analyzed and revealed, cattlemen found that the CBI had come to a curious conclusion: The mutilations were being performed by natural predators, the CBI said, and only in rare cases had the cattle been slain by humans.

The technicians at Colorado State agreed, saying that in 300 examinations of so-called mutilated cattle, only nine or 10 were the result of human butchers.

"When the mutilations first began in Colorado, there was lots of speculation that different types of cults were involved," said Carl Whiteside, CBI agent. "After a two-and-a-half month undercover investigation, we have no evidence whatsoever that this is the cause of the problem."

Astonished sheriffs and ranchers couldn't believe their ears and were outraged. They stopped sending carcasses to the lab. They stopped talking openly about mutilations. They quit trusting what the "experts" said.

Sheriff Graves, a patient and determined man, was bitter. He and his staff have always been more inclined to believe what they see, not what they are told. That bitterness was shared by many other sheriffs, who were baffled by the CBI's findings. To "outsiders," it had been a fascinating puzzle, a good story to read in their newspapers, a curious, oddball mystery to ponder.

But for ranchers it was anything but a game. They were the ones who took the financial loss. They were the ones who wondered if the mutilators would someday take to cutting up people instead of cattle. And they were the ones who had elected men like Tex Graves to uphold the law. It's a responsibility most sheriffs take seriously, especially Graves.

In the corner of his office in Sterling is a metal file cabinet. In one of the well-used drawers are more than 200 photographs of mutilated cattle, and they are damning evidence that the state investigators either didn't know what they were saying or were not telling the whole story.

"Look at these pictures and then tell me how anyone can blame it on natural predators," Graves urges. "I'd like to see the coyote that can do that."

"Predators are never as selective as the mutilators," Graves says. "A coyote wouldn't leave all the tender parts. If he tore a piece of hide from the critter's belly, he'd leave it around, not take it with him. And he'd go after the meat under it."

"At least three of the 74 animals mutilated in Logan County were cut upon while they were still alive, based on the evidence we've collected," he continues. "Also, the blood in 29 animals was completely drained from the animal. Yet we seldom find much blood on the ground."

During the summer of 1977, the number of reported mutilations in Colorado decreased drastically. In Logan County, only five were reported.

"A lot of people are glad to see it slowing down," Graves says. "I'm glad too, mainly because the ranchers are going to need all the profits they can get."

"But there's a bad thing about it slowing down. It means it's going to be even harder to catch them now. It worries me that we don't know why the mutilations ever began or why they are slowing down. That means we don't know when it might get bad again."

The Franklin Mint Record Society presents
the ultimate private library of recorded music

The 100 Greatest Recordings of all time

A unique collection of the greatest performances ever recorded, selected by an international panel of music authorities on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the invention of the phonograph.
Presented on 100 records of superb quality.

For the first time in history, the world's greatest works of music—and the greatest recorded performances of those works—will be brought together in one unique collection of distinctively high-quality records. Truly the ultimate collection of fine recorded music.

These are the supreme masterpieces of man's musical genius, performed by the most outstanding artists of the century. Together, they will form a record library unprecedented—and unsurpassed—in the entire history of music. The 100 Greatest Recordings of All Time.

The greatest music—and the greatest performances

An international panel of renowned music authorities was appointed to participate in the selection of these great recordings. This distinguished panel considered countless recordings of each of the greatest works of music—a momentous task.

For instance, members of the panel reviewed 24 recordings of Beethoven's 7th Symphony and chose the one recording they considered superior to all others: Toscanini with the New York Philharmonic.

From 30 great recordings of Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, the panel selected the one greatest performance: Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

Similarly, the recordings of other great symphonies, concertos, sonatas, rhapsodies, ballet and vocal music were carefully reviewed and the most outstanding recorded performance in each instance recommended.

The creation of this definitive collection has been made possible through the cooperation of leading record companies both here and abroad. And now, The 100 Greatest Recordings of All Time will be issued by The Franklin Mint Record Society on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the invention of the phonograph.

Among the works chosen for this collection are immortal masterpieces by Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart, Tchaikovsky, Schubert, Rachmaninoff, Debussy, Verdi—performed by such superb artists as Vladimir Horowitz, Jascha Heifetz, Enrico Caruso, Van Cliburn, Isaac Stern, Artur Schnabel, Leontyne Price—with the world's great orchestras under the direction of Toscanini, Ormandy, Bernstein, Stokowski, von Karajan.

Superb proof-quality recordings

Each record will be exceptional for its clarity and tonal quality—capturing the beauty of today's finest performances and of the historic performances of the past. Indeed, the recordings of legendary greats such as Caruso and Ponselle will be remarkably improved by electronically removing imperfections in the earlier recordings.

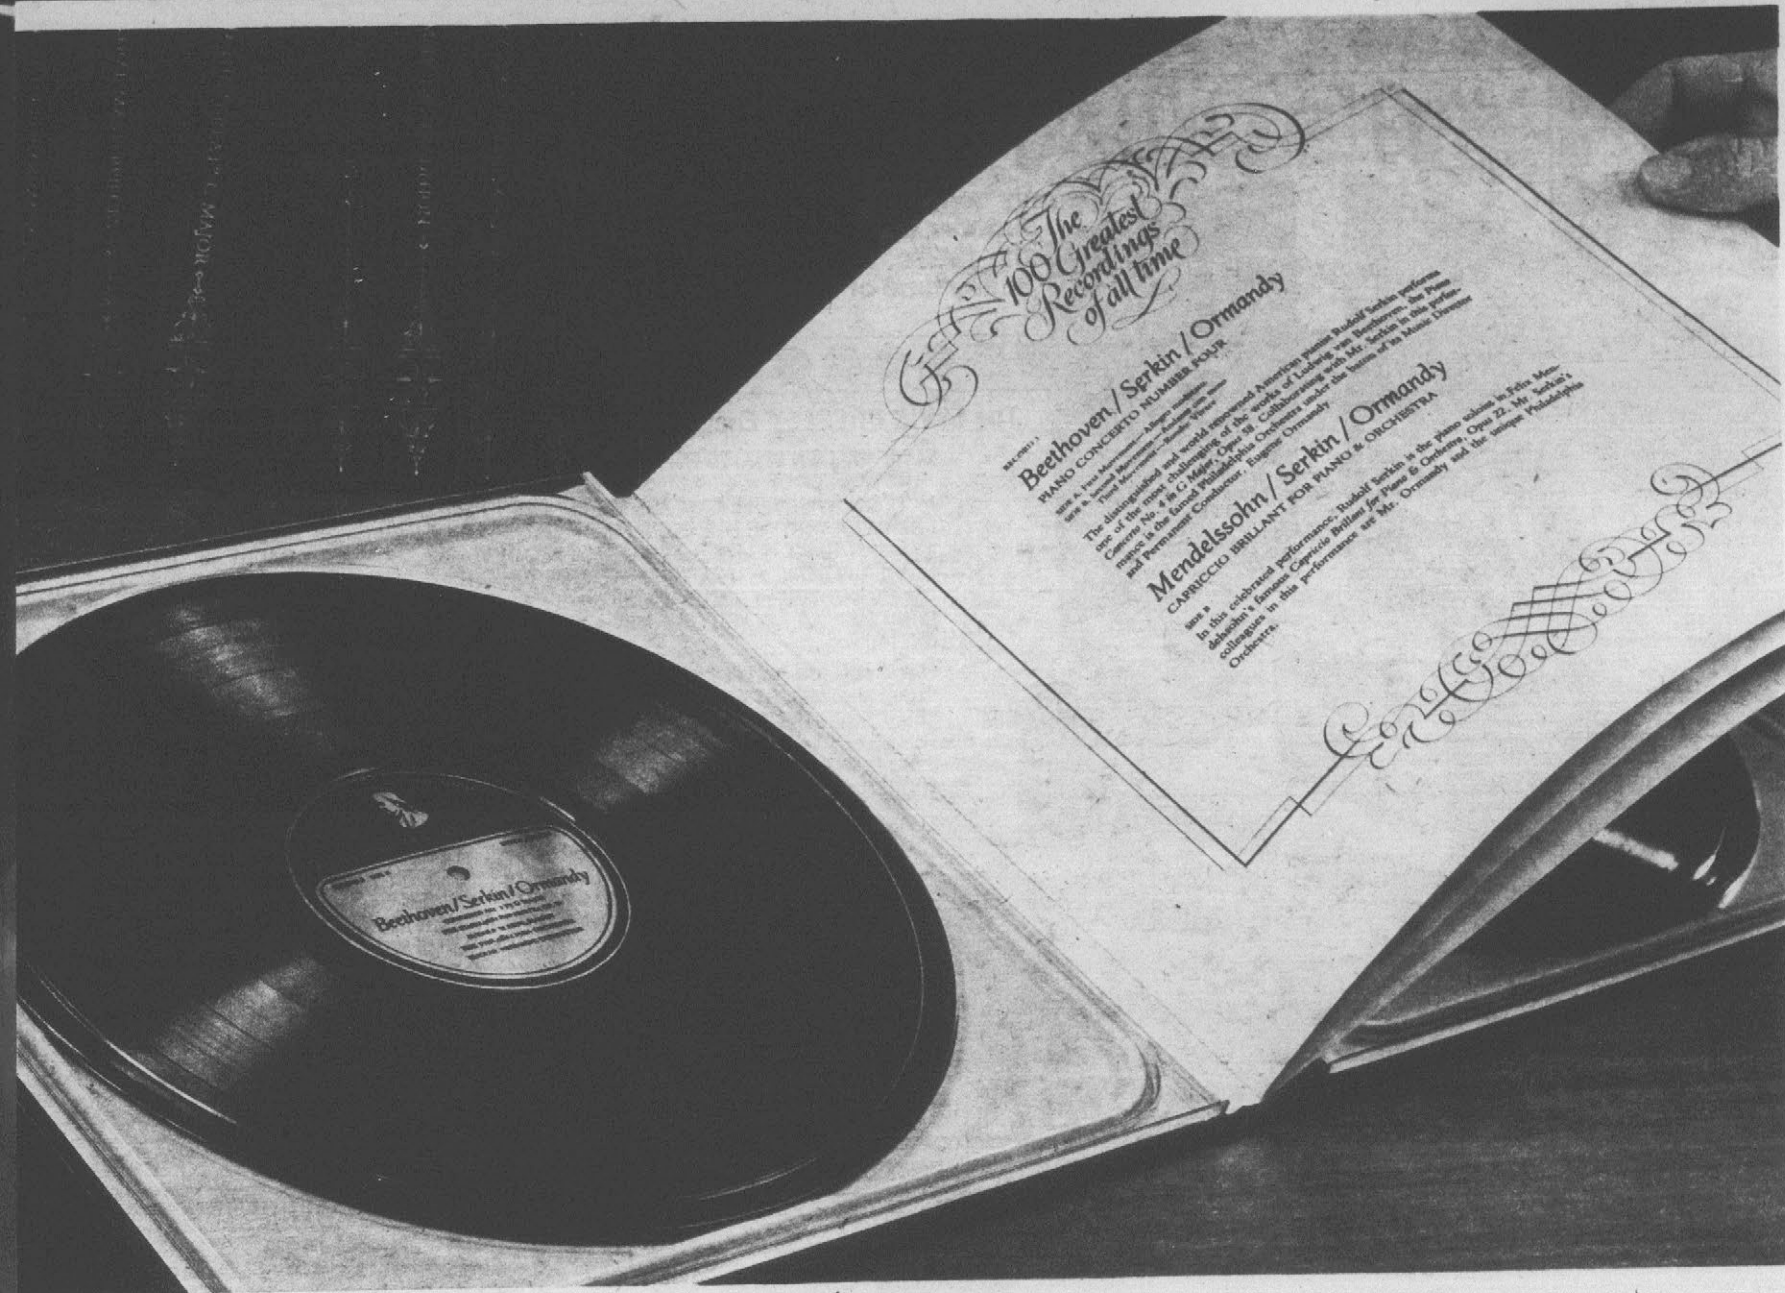

© 1977 FM

A superior vinyl material, containing its own anti-static element, will be used in the production of these records. This special material, and the process by which the pressing is made, will result in a record that is more rigid, durable and resistant to dust. A record that has true fidelity, clearer sound quality and a long life.

To further assure their quality, the records will be pressed in a special "clean room," similar to the facility in which The Franklin Mint produces its flawless proof-quality coins and medals. In this atmosphere-controlled clean room, the most meticulous attention will be paid to the pressing of the records. And each record will be carefully inspected to make certain that the full quality of the original recording is faithfully preserved.

Together, these important features will enable the Society to create a collection of proof-quality records—records that offer greater clarity of sound, and are quieter and clearer.

Library cases of exceptional luxury

To match the quality of the recordings, custom-designed library cases will be provided for all 100 records. Each case will hold two long-playing 12" records. And each record will be housed in a clear, dust-free compartment within the library case. The record will be firmly supported, but held in such a way that the grooved playing surface never touches any part of the case. This exclusive design assures that the record is completely protected, but easy to remove for playing.

These library cases will also include specially written and illustrated commentaries discussing the great masterpieces and their composers, and providing fascinating background on the orchestras, conductors and soloists.

Thus, you will enrich your understanding of great music—and you will introduce your family to a world of pleasure and cultural satisfaction.

Created solely for subscribers to this series

The 100 Greatest Recordings of All Time will be produced exclusively for those who enter subscriptions to this series. The collection may be acquired only by direct subscription from The Franklin Mint Record Society. It will never be made available in any other way.

To begin building your private library of the world's greatest performances on proof-quality records, mail your application by November 15, 1977.

TV'S SWEET LITTLE GIRL BECOMES A MOVIE STAR

A lot has happened to Susan Dey since The Partridge Family, including a starring role in a very grown-up film.

Globe Photos

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Only a few years ago, Susan Dey played the part of a 14-year-old in The Partridge Family, the long-running family-oriented TV series in which she costarred with Shirley Jones and David Cassidy.

A few weeks ago, she finished the lead in her first major motion picture, First Love, in which she has some passionate love scenes and uses a lot more salty language than in her old series. In between these events she married her agent, who is twice her age and has a daughter just 10 years younger than Susan. So what's happened? Well, she has grown up. She's now poised, elegant and beautiful.

After a stint as a model in New York (Vogue, Mademoiselle, Seventeen), Susan moved to California to star in The Partridge Family for four years. "The show was fun and good experience," she recalls, "and David [Cassidy] and I had a marvelous relationship. When the show was canceled, I lost a person out of my life. Of course, I had a nice relationship with Shirley [Jones], too, but David and I were of the same age group. I started playing a 14-year-old and grew up very slowly. In fact, when the show finished, I was 21 and still playing a 16-year-old."

Last December Susan married Leonard Hirshan, who looks 15 years younger than the 50th birthday he recently celebrated. He is a Hollywood superagent, who was impressed by Susan's beauty, potential and personality.

Susan would like children of her own, but not now. "Since Lenny is involved in his work and I'm so involved in mine, we have little time together," she says. "To have a child under those circumstances would be wrong."

Having her husband as her agent is not a bad thing, Susan insists. "I don't mind if he talks about business when he comes home at night," she continues. "It gives him a release to discuss it, but when his business concerns me as his client, not as his wife, we try to do it over the phone. I want to deal with him at home as my husband, not as my agent. So we don't let business interfere with our relationship."

Their relationship was affected, however, when Susan played those love scenes in First Love. The night Lenny first saw the film in a private screening, she was so nervous about his reaction she refused to go with him. "I was so relieved when he came home and told me he was proud of me," she recalls.

What is Susan's feeling about nudity in films? "If there is a reason behind it, as there is in First Love, where it's very important, I don't mind. If it's done for exploitation, then I won't have any part of it."

"Filming First Love became a delicate time for both Lenny and me. So it was my job to reassure Lenny that it was my work. The problem started when I first read the script. Lenny was very funny because when I asked what he thought of it, he suddenly realized that I wasn't asking him as my agent, on a business level, but as my husband. He said, 'Well, as your husband there are a lot of things you do that I don't like' — which I thought was absolutely wonderful. He understood. He knows that our love is secure. He showed no resentment or jealousy. It's obvious that he doesn't have to worry."

Nor does Susan. And with the release of First Love — despite the love scenes, many critics say the film is done with taste and is appealing to young people — her career seems assured as well.

EARLY AMERICA'S FAVORITE SWEETENER

Molasses, loved by Colonial cooks for sweetening and flavoring, still adds its unique personality to old-fashioned dishes.

By Marilyn Hansen

WHAT IS MOLASSES?

A dark, sweet syrup, molasses is a by-product of refined sugar cane. Usually three boilings of the cane juice are made. The molasses extracted during the first boiling, from which only a portion of sugar is removed, is sweeter and lighter in flavor and color than the second boil, or dark molasses, which contains less sugar. Third-boil molasses is often called "blackstrap" and is dark and bitter. Not intended for direct consumption, it is used in industrial processes, such as the manufacture of alcohol, principally rum.

MAKING YOUR OWN BROWN SUGAR

You can use molasses to make your own brown sugar at home. To make the equivalent of 1/2 cup, blend together 1/2 cup ordinary white sugar with 2 tablespoons molasses. You can make any amount of brown sugar, but for best results, it is preferable to make it only as you need it.

BOSTON BAKED BEANS

- 2 qts. water
  - 2 lbs. dried pea beans or Great Northern beans
  - 1 large onion, peeled
  - 2 onions peeled and stuck with 2 whole cloves
  - Salt
  - 1 cup dark molasses
  - 1/2 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
  - 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
  - 1 tablespoon dry mustard
  - 1/2 lb. salt pork with rind left on
1. Bring water to boil, add beans, boil 2 minutes, and then turn off heat and let soak 1 hour.
  2. Add peeled onion and 1 teaspoon salt; bring to boil again and simmer 1 hour.
  3. Drain and discard onion but reserve cooking liquid.
  4. Mix molasses, sugar, mustard and 1 tablespoon salt in large bean pot or Dutch oven. Add bean liquid and beans. Mix to coat beans well.
  5. Place onions with cloves into bean mixture.
  6. Score the fatty side of the salt pork with diagonal cuts. Push salt pork down into beans, letting top edge of pork surface. Cover.
  7. Bake in preheated 300°F. oven for 6 to 7 hours or until deep brown and tender.

AMBER DRESSING

- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup molasses
- 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice

1. Combine all ingredients; blend with wire whisk.
2. Serve with fruit salads or with shredded carrots and raisins. Dressing keeps refrigerated up to 2 weeks. Makes 3/4 cup

BLACK FRENCH DRESSING

- 1/4 cup cider vinegar
- 3/4 cup salad oil
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon molasses

1. Combine all ingredients in jar with tight-fitting lid. Cover; shake well to blend. Makes 1 cup

Editor's note: Imaginative additions include: 1/2 cup thinly sliced pitted black olives, 2 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds or toasted sesame seeds.

SHOO-FLY CAKE

- 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
- Dash ground cloves
- 3/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 teaspoon baking soda

1. Preheat oven to 350°F.; grease and flour a 9-x-13-inch pan.
2. In mixing bowl, combine flour, sugar, butter, salt, spices and walnuts. With pastry blender or two knives, cut in margarine to make "crumbs." Reserve 1 cup crumbs for topping.
3. Combine molasses, boiling

- water and soda; add to remaining crumbs and mix until blended.
4. Pour batter into pan; top with reserved crumbs. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes at 350°F. or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean.
5. Cool; cut into large bars. Sift confectioners' sugar over top if desired. Makes 12 large bars

INDIAN PUDDING

- 2 eggs
- 6 cups milk
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup yellow cornmeal
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease a 2-qt. baking dish.
2. In a heavy 4- to 5-qt. saucepan, beat the eggs with a wire whisk until well mixed. Add 4 cups milk, molasses, sugar, baking soda and salt; blend well.
3. Cook over moderate heat until mixture simmers, stirring until molasses and sugar dissolve.
4. Add cornmeal slowly, making sure mixture continues to simmer; stir constantly.
5. Cook, uncovered, stirring from time to time, until the pudding is thick enough to hold its shape solidly in a spoon.
6. Add butter by tablespoonsful, stirring until melted. Then pour in remaining 2 cups milk in a thin stream, beating constantly.
7. Pour mixture into prepared baking dish and bake in middle of oven 1 hour. Reduce oven temperature to 300°F. and continue baking 4 hours longer or until pudding is very firm.
8. Serve pudding at once, directly from the baking dish, or let it cool and serve at room temperature. Serve with heavy cream, whipped cream or vanilla ice cream. Makes 8 servings

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

There's a great new freedom of spirit in the latest fashions. Everything is relaxed and easy, with simple, uncluttered shapes that let the body move.

The Key Word — Softness

Blouson tops, smocklike dresses and coats and dirndl or full-gored skirts provide a fluid, gentle look. The ultimate accessory — the soft shawl — tops everything this season, even coats.

Softness is found in fabrics — richly patterned challis, mohair, chenille, camel hair, knit jerseys and shearing — all so light even capes and coats have a sense of weightlessness.

Layering is still important. With the new softness of the silhouette, more women than ever can achieve this look without bulk — and stay warm.

The Personal Touch

Gone are the structured dresses of the 60's. Today a woman controls the shape, pulling drawstrings or elasticized waistlines up or down, sashing dresses or blouses as she likes, making adjustments that personalize the clothes.

Lengths have settled in the area of the calf, but precisely where is a matter of taste and how the style looks on you.

Color Trends

The new color directions are to be found in the soft, muted tones of lavender, navy, rose and khaki. Winter whites look very fresh, and lots of "face powder neutrals" are available, such as melon, pale blue, peach and celery. They will be even more in evidence around the holidays. For evening, the hottest shade is black, with the gem colors of amethyst, garnet and dark emerald playing close seconds.

A special word should be said about gold. It is biggest in accessories — in sandals, belts, jewelry and handbags. Expect to see the golden touch being worn for day as well as evening.

All changes this season are subtle. But one thing is obvious: women are going to look a lot more romantic and feminine than in the recent past. Gayle Kirkpatrick, designer for Tudor Square Fashions, says that styles should be selected to suit your own proportions, personality and lifestyle. Here are some of his specific fashion pointers.

If You Have a Full Figure

With a little planning, you can wear the layered look successfully, without adding heaviness. First, try a narrow-pleated challis skirt under a solid-color blazer, perhaps in a bright navy. Wearing a blouse underneath in a paler color and in a light-weight fabric will soften the tailored lines of the blazer. Over all, toss a challis scarf. The shawl-effect is great for a full figure because it draws attention to the neck and face, giving a very romantic look. Capes also are fine for this figure.

Overblouses are always good. This season, many of them, especially for evening, are in satins, crepe de chines and chiffons. Wear one over a long skirt in white flannel or over slender black velvet pants for a festive evening.

While you probably prefer to dress conservatively, don't be afraid occasionally to add something with a lot of flair — such as gold accessories or a pair of sandals that enhance pretty ankles.

If You're Thin

The new fluffy fabrics, like mohair and cloud-soft knits, are perfect. They add bulkiness but aren't overwhelming. The oversized cowl collar is good, too, as it offers a face-flattering look and adds fullness.

You have the perfect figure for layering. This year, try loose and easy shapes worn one over the other, or the blouson look in a dress or jacket. If you wear a slim skirt, select one of the new plaids in a rich, tawny shade. They will "fill out" your figure.

You can add the appearance of width to your legs by wearing boots or the new leg warmers (knitted stockings that go all the way up the leg).

It's easy to go overboard with layers. If you're also small, too many can make you look overdressed. To avoid this, check your finished look in a full-length mirror.

If You're Short

A terrific boost if you're under 5'5" is the new shorter blazer or the box jacket, which is better suited to a short figure than a regular-length jacket. Your skirt should be slightly gored, slim or with tiny pleats, but never gathered, which causes too much bulk around the waistline and tends to shorten the figure.

Wear stockings in a hue to match your skirt or choose boots with the new stacked heels. Make sure the boots aren't too high; you don't want to give the illusion of being on stilts.

Complete your outfit with a wrap coat or short poncho. (Leave full-length capes and ponchos to your tall friends.) Fringed shawls are perfect, too, for the short woman — they add another layer of warmth and fashion.

Caution: Don't try to wear too many colors at once, but don't be afraid of bright accent colors. You, better than any other figure type, can wear them.

If You're Tall

You're going to have a lot of fun wearing the soft look. Some of the new pastel plaids are definitely for you. A flounced plaid skirt in flannel with matching shawl is a great new silhouette. Add a ruffled blouse in crepe de chine for more softness. Scalloped hemlines are another look you can wear well.

One of the latest looks in shoes this fall are flat sandals that add nothing to your height. Wear them with textured stockings in a matching shade.

The blouson top is one of the most feminine shapes around and also is perfect for your figure. If your waistline is your best figure feature, however, a blouson will conceal it and play up your hips, which many women don't want. You can solve the problem by tying the blouson at the natural waistline so the indentation is definite. Avoid bold colors — they're overpowering and maximize your height.

A final recommendation from Gayle Kirkpatrick: "The most important thing is to understand your proportions (don't forget to study yourself before a full-length mirror). Then take the best from a new fashion and adapt it to yourself. I have seen petite women look fabulous in midi-skirts because they understand the proportions of their leg lengths and just where the hemline looks best on them."

THE CAPITOL HILL JOKESTERS

Fall used to be a vacation time. No more. So now merriment helps fill the tedious hours.

By Frances Spatz Leighton

"October and November are the months of the punsters, funsters and pranksters in the halls of Congress," says former Congressional Doorkeeper William "Fishbait" Miller, who has proven to be a colorful reporter of his 28-year tenure in the House.

"It used to be that Congress quit work in summer and was gone till January," continues Fishbait. "No more. Now they have to stay around — but to ease the anguish of the grueling hours they work to wind up all that important legislation, they release their tensions in humor.

According to Fishbait, almost everything has been thought of to beat the October blahs; from shipping in strange foods from home districts, ranging from muskrat and bear meat to billy goat, to tossing strange bills into the hopper, such as a bill to "Tax the Only Thing That Has Not Been Taxed" and without which there would be no future generations.

And then there are the little notes delivered by pages to freshmen members to make them blush. One might say, "If anything interesting happened last night, smile." (During those days when there had been some notice of Congressmen "dallying" after hours, there were many self-conscious smiles.)

Top Joker in recent Congressional history, according to Fishbait, was Bill Ayres, a Republican from Ohio who would do anything for a laugh. One prank of Ayres still remembered on Capitol Hill occurred when John Kennedy moved into the White House with his new baby, John-John. The Ohio Representative went to a store, bought a baby buggy and personally wheeled it to the White House, demanding to see the President. At the front gate, the guards, who were sure they were dealing with a nut, still took the precaution of calling the President's office. "There is a guy out here with a baby carriage who claims to be a Congressman," they said apologetically.

"Wait," said the President.

Frances Spatz Leighton is co-author with William "Fishbait" Miller of the best-selling Fishbait: The Memoirs of the Congressional Doorkeeper.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills — and so important to you.

Now you can get special savings on Geritol at stores where you shop. Try Geritol soon and save.

"That's got to be Bill Ayres. Let him in."

It was a story JFK liked to recall when people asked him how he was doing on Capitol Hill. He would say the Hill wasn't supplying him the votes he needed, but, on the other hand, it was doing very well with supplying him with baby carriages.

The "Top Joker" designation has now been filled by another Republican — Barry Goldwater Jr., who also has a penchant for practical jokes.

He made Capitol history not too long ago by posing as a carpenter and installing a pay toilet in the private office of Rep. John Burton of California, a liberal Democrat. Young Goldwater, a conservative Republican, had gotten tired of hearing the Democrat rail on about the unfairness of placing pay toilets in public places, so he took action. Donning a carpenter's outfit and carrying his tool kit, he shuffled into Burton's office, mumbling that he was supposed to do some work on the door of the Congressman's private bathroom.

Soon there was hammering, and before Rep. Burton had returned from the floor of the House, Goldwater had managed to install a device on the door that would not permit it to open without the insertion of a dime.

Goldwater also takes potshots at the White House. It was he who said, "I wasn't worried when I saw all the Carter relatives moving in with him at the White House. After all, who else is going to help him plow the White House lawns to put in this year's peanut, 'tater and corn pone crop?"

According to Fishbait, the Democrats need no sympathy, since they are well able to defend themselves and give the Republicans a whack. He tells the story of Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, who walked clear across the state drumming up votes.

"Chiles was stopping wherever he saw a crowd gathered. Well, one day he saw a crowd in a farmer's barnyard. There was no place he could stand so they could all get a look at him, so he just climbed aboard a manure spreader and said, 'Gentlemen, I must apologize; I feel a little uncomfortable talking to you from up here because it's the first time I've ever spoken from a Republican platform.'"

The public would be amazed, says Fishbait, at the antics and humor of their elected heroes. What else do they do back there out of sight in the cloakroom? They sit around kidding and making up definitions and lists of things — for example, things at which Republicans would draw the line:

"Democrats buy books that are banned. Republicans draw the line at buying them. They form censorship committees and read them aloud as a group."

But the storyteller most missed on the Hill is Sam Ervin. Senator Sam, as his colleagues called him long before the Watergate hearings, was a legend. This story of his is the one members still use when they want to hint that someone is trying to puff up the value of their possessions.

As the story goes, two down-home North Carolina fellows are discussing their possessions, and the first fellow says, "Whatever became of your old hound dog?"

The other one then replies, "Didn't you hear? I just sold him for exactly $5,000."

The first man said, "Come on now, you know you never got $5,000 for an old hound dog."

"Well I didn't get it in cash," the friend admitted, "but I got it in a trade — I got two alley cats in exchange, each of which are estimated to be worth $2,500 apiece."

Observations

Autumn leaves us feeling a little wistful. Maybe it's because the kids have been packed off to school. Or because the soft evenings of summer are giving way to longer, cooler nights. But there's a happy side to autumn, too. It heralds the start of another "Mobil Season" to brighten those long nights with a varied array of outstanding television programs in the tradition of "Upstairs, Downstairs," "The Ascent of Man," "A Moon for the Misbegotten," and "Ten Who Dared."

"Put your shirt on! This is Masterpiece Theatre!"

By permission of the Ladies' Home Journal

Only the best. An eight-week drama achievement, "The Best of Families," premieres this Thursday evening on the Public Broadcasting Service. The series creates a brilliant portrait of three families in turn-of-the-century New York: the Raffertys, poor Irish immigrants struggling to piece together a new life in the new world; the Baldwins, a middle-class minister's clan; and the Wheelers, wealthy aristocrats building their fortune in step with the rise of industrial America. Despite their wildly disparate economic and social backgrounds, the lives of the Raffertys, Baldwins, and Wheelers are inexorably intertwined. "The Best of Families" unfolds their stories against the rich background of a young and growing city—and nation.

Claudius ... Claudius ... Claudius. He limped, stuttered and twitched—but in his time, he was the most powerful man in the world. For 13 Sunday evenings beginning November 6, "I, Claudius," first Masterpiece Theatre offering of the new season, brings vividly to life the splendor—and treachery—of ancient Rome. The physical defects Claudius carried served to mask his genius. More than once, these same defects saved his life at the hands of his totally mad nephew, the Emperor Caligula. A stunning sequence of events, culminating with Caligula's assassination, sweeps the aging "half-wit" to the throne as Emperor of Rome. The story of "I, Claudius," adapted from the Robert Graves novels, is in a production of stunning power and beauty. Don't miss it.

More goodies. Other highlights of the 1977-78 Mobil season are the 10-week Masterpiece Theatre presentation of Tolstoy's gripping novel "Anna Karenina" □ A 12-week, first-run Mobil Showcase series on commercial television entitled "When Havoc Struck," dealing with disasters which have shocked the world over the past 50 years—and what we've learned from them □ "Between the Wars," 16 half-hour programs, also on commercial television, which traces the course of American diplomatic history during the years from Versailles to Pearl Harbor □ "In Search of the Real America," a refreshing journey with author and commentator Ben Wattenberg to examine some of the things that aren't wrong with our nation. Check your local listings for broadcast dates and times in your area, and keep watching this space for more about the new Mobil Season.

PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Are you likely to live longer if your life is meaningful? Do people dedicated to noble causes neglect companionship?

MEASURING THE PURPOSE IN YOUR LIFE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There is a simple yardstick that can help you measure the purpose and meaning in your life.
2. If your life seems to lack meaning and purpose, you're probably working too hard, and ignoring fun, pleasure and enjoyment.
3. Believing that what you're doing in life is important will help you live longer.
4. Your relationship with the opposite sex may determine whether your life seems meaningful to you.
5. People committed to a high purpose in life, such as those dedicated to a cause, neglect companionship and, as a result, often become neurotic.
6. The degree of meaning, purpose and personal satisfaction in your life depends on a combination of things.

ANSWERS

1. True. A psychological yardstick developed at the University of Vienna provides a rough measurement of how much purpose and meaning you find in your life. You can use a simplified version of this test by simply scoring yourself on a seven-point scale, ranging from point one ("My life consists largely of a state of emptiness, manifested chiefly by boredom.") to point seven ("My life is running over with good things."). Most of us score somewhere between the two poles. It's often enlightening to compare the number you give yourself with your assessment of friends.
2. False. University of Idaho studies, designed to determine "perceived meaning or purpose in life," revealed that subjects with the lowest assessed purpose in life attributed greater importance to pleasure, excitement and comfort than did those who found their lives replete with meaning and purpose. As one researcher wrote, "A direct focusing on pleasure and happiness tends to be self-defeating. Such focusing works against a sense of fulfillment and tends to promote an existential vacuum."
3. True. Dr. Martin Grotjahn, clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California, conducted studies on the subject. His conclusion: the more you have to live for in terms of rewarding achievement and purposeful action, the longer you're likely to live. Other investigations support this conclusion.
4. True. Studies at United States International University show, for example, that when a person experiences frustration in a relationship with the opposite sex, he also tends to sense a lack of meaning and purpose in his life. The studies stress that feelings of deprivation and dissatisfaction with this relationship "may be a manifestation of a more general frustration."

5. False. A team of behavior specialists at Victoria Hospital Clinic (England) used a "Purpose-in-Life" scale to evaluate people. Results showed that those with a high purpose in life had better-adjusted personalities than the others, were less subject to personality conflicts and were more sociable, achieving great pleasure from contacts with others at parties, entertainments and the like.
6. True. University of Michigan researchers interviewed men and women of all ages, ranging from the highest executives to manual laborers and custodians. They found that fulfillment of purpose and life-satisfaction "come from a combination of spheres: typically one's job, family, avocations and related interests." The study noted that "each individual decides what proportion of his energy he should devote to each sphere." He may, for example, expect to get a third of his fulfillment from his career, half from his marriage and family and the rest from hobbies, sports and community activities. If each area yields the expected satisfactions, the person will probably be content. However, dissatisfaction in one area of life carries over to other areas. So, if you are only half-satisfied with your job or marriage, you will find yourself no more than half-satisfied with life in general.

DO YOU WANT MORE FREE TIME?

Who doesn't? And by keeping in mind these simple suggestions, you'll be able to do more things you enjoy.

By Kate Kelly

How often have you wished for more time to finish paneling the family room or to make new curtains? Or perhaps you've wanted an extra hour for a new hobby or to be with your family. If you're among those who feel there's never enough time for things you enjoy, maybe you should consider how you manage your time.

Although time-management techniques have often been applied to office problems, only recently have they been used in family life. Now, with a steadily increasing number of dual-career families and almost 40 percent of the work force made up of women, time management for the home is becoming increasingly important.

Do household chores seem to take the whole evening? Consider distributing the work among family members. Professor Kathryn Walker of Cornell University has conducted studies on this subject and concludes, "Everyone in a family needs to feel the rewards of contributing to the family."

To devise a fair distribution system, list the chores that need to be done each week. Next, the family should agree how many evenings of table setting should equal a larger task like vacuuming. Then — to make them happy participants — let the young people have first pick of the regular chores.

Another point to consider: If no one is home to look after the house all day, perhaps the standards should be eased a little. It's amazing what five minutes of picking up and 10 minutes of light dusting will do to give a room an acceptable appearance. Most people find that it's best to keep one room neat for unexpected company, but the house needn't be spotless. Bedroom doors can be closed, and comforters or quilts used as spreads on young children's beds will easily hide a large number of wrinkles.

Hectic schedules don't allow much time for entertaining. However, since it's the warmth of your home that guests will remember, why not invite people in for a glass of wine or have guests come for coffee and dessert?

Have you ever passed up a special bargain on curtains because you didn't have the measurements and didn't have time to come back the next day? Try carrying a small notebook with window and room measurements, color schemes and even fabric swatches so you can always take advantage of a good buy.

Still haven't gained enough time to take a night class or to teach your son tennis? Then look closely at your schedule. We're all guilty of turning on the TV for a favorite program and then watching for another two hours. Next time, turn off the set after your special program.

Since some of the more obvious time-management tricks are often overlooked, here they are as a reminder.

Calendar. Very necessary so that your daughter's dinner at a friend's doesn't coincide with the night you have bought tickets to the circus.

Lists. A kitchen bulletin board with a check-off list is the best reminder for who is responsible for what.

Lunch time. Errands can be done at noon. You'll probably pay a bit more for necessities in your office neighborhood, but it may be worth it if it frees Saturday for a family outing.

Commuting. If you take public transportation to work, you've got time for reading or thinking. Those who drive can enjoy music, cassettes of lectures or the beauty of peace. Sports enthusiasts have learned that walking or bicycling to work cuts down on after-hours exercise time.

Waiting. Take a book or stationery to write overdue letters.

Procrastinating. Fight this one. Most projects are easier than they seem, and if you dive in and do them, an enormous amount of worry time could be saved. When procrastinating, keep these thoughts in mind: 1) Do it to get it over with. 2) Don't do it at all. Consider the consequences, and you'll know whether a project needs to be done. 3) If you decide it must be done, then divide it into parts and request family participation.

If you're into fitness, Bullworker puts it all together in only 5 minutes a day:

"Looking for a fitness program that's fast, easy and gets results right away?," asks fitness expert, Bob Breton. "Bullworker puts it all together. In just 5 minutes a day you can give your body a complete fitness workout: shoulders, back, arms, chest, abdomen and legs."

It's fast: each exercise takes only 7 seconds, once a day.

It's easy: any man between 15 and 65 in good general health can run through the whole program without getting tired.

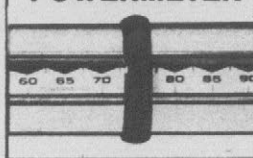

You see your progress right from the very first day on the built-in Power-meter gauge. After two to three weeks of training, most men can expect to measure an extra inch or two of muscle on their shoulders, chest and biceps — and an inch or two less flab around the middle.

And that's just the start: there are specialized exercises for building-up or trimming down any part of your body you want to. What's more, since Bullworker training is progressive, you perform better each time. Yet the training always seems easy since with every workout your strength increases by about 1% — that's an increase of up to 50% in the first three months.

"I earn my living by keeping executives in top shape," says Bob. "My customers want results and they want them fast. I recommend Bullworker for one reason only: because it's the most advanced fitness trainer on the market and you better believe it."

THE DOCTOR AND YOU

How To Read Telltale Health Signs From Your Nails

In healthy people, fingernails and toenails are usually healthy. Most trouble people have with nails comes from things they do to them. Brittle nails is a common complaint. They are caused mainly by dishwater, laundry water and hours in the tub and shower. Vitamins and calcium pills won't harden the nails; in fact, no medicine can help. The best thing for brittle nails is to keep them dry. Wear gloves for housework, avoid getting alkali chemicals, such as ammonia, on the nails and spend less beauty time in the shower and tub.

Nail hardeners aren't much help. They just build up a coating that may hold the nail together a little longer. These hardeners are chemicals and may cause irritation to the skin around the nails. The same goes for nail polish. Some women start out looking for red nails and, instead, get fiery red fingers from the polish. Plastic false nails also can be irritating, and they don't strengthen the nail.

Nail-biting is the commonest cause of damage to nails and fingers. It's a nervous habit that can be broken by putting a helpful habit in its place. Get a nail file or clipper, even a whole manicure kit, to carry with you. Then, when you feel like biting, cut, file and trim. Manicuring doesn't look all that good in public, but neither does walking around with a mouth full of fingers in times of stress. You'll find that the new habit will replace the bad one, and after a while you won't need either. Moreover, your fingers will look better.

Show me your nails and I'll tell you a lot about your general health. Nails are growing parts of the body produced by a growth center just under the "moons." When you're healthy, the nails grow evenly and well. But sickness can leave its mark on the nails. Ridges across nails mean there was a period when the body was sick and the nails grew poorly. A bad case of measles or scarlet fever can leave such ridges. Since nails grow about an inch a month, you can even date the sickness by measuring how far the ridge is from the bottom of the nail.

Diseases turn up in the nails of adults as well as kids. Psoriasis can deform the nails with pits and grooves. Heart trouble and lung disease can make the nails round like the glass of a wristwatch instead of flat. Heart trouble present from birth sometimes gives a blue tinge to the blood (a condition known as cyanosis), which can show through the nails, making them appear blue.

Nails can turn other colors. Some kidney diseases make fingernails white; so does trichinosis. Certain infections tint nails green or yellow. Wilson's disease, a hereditary liver ailment, makes them bright blue. Syphilis colors nails yellow.

Most people have healthy pink nails that stay free of infection. But nails take quite a beating, especially toenails. People with low resistance to infection, diabetics for example, tend to have frequent infections around the nails — the toenails from wear and tear, the fingernails from picking and biting. So little infections around the nails often signal a low resistance to germs.

There's a great deal for doctors to learn from examining nails. That's why some doctors and hospitals have a nurse remove the polish from at least one finger when the patient is set up for a complete exam.

PAUL ROGERS: CONGRESS'S MR. HEALTH

He works expertly where our well-being is at stake and uses clout to push vital medical programs.

Rogers: "We must get the knowledge out of the research centers."

Wide World

By Rochelle Jones

Directly across from the desk of Rep. Paul Rogers (D.-Fla.) is a full-length oil portrait of his father Dwight. He stands with his hands tucked into his pants pockets, revealing an old-fashioned watch chain stretched across the vest of his three-piece suit, and smiles gently down at his son. The painting and its location are appropriate. Rogers' political career has been strongly influenced by his father.

After his father's death from a heart attack at a relatively young age, Rogers vowed to do something to upgrade the nation's health and health care. By dint of hard work he has become Congress's "Mr. Health," its leading expert on health legislation. And as chairman of the House subcommittee on Health and the Environment, he carries clout off Capitol Hill as well. Earlier this year, Rogers interrupted his Easter vacation to fly back to Washington to meet with President Carter, who wanted to discuss the Clean Air Act.

Rogers has had a lot to say about the health of the average American. He has steered legislation containing billions of dollars to combat various killer diseases through Congress. He has been responsible for landmark programs to set up emergency health services and community mental-health centers and to place more doctors in rural areas and the inner city. He has forced the Food and Drug Administration to draft standards for such potentially dangerous medical devices as heart pacemakers and IUD's. He has worked to limit the amount of noise and toxic substances in the environment.

Overall, Rogers believes the country is making good progress toward better health care for all its citizens. Here's how he sees health policy shaping up.

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE. Rogers expects the Carter Administration to send its health insurance plan to Congress sometime next year. The exact form that national health insurance takes, he says, depends on what the country can afford, and that hinges in turn on the state of the economy. "To a degree, our approach

A Washington free-lancer, Rochelle Jones has contributed to The Nation, The National Observer and The Congressional Quarterly and is the author of The Other Generation: The New Power of Older People (Prentice-Hall).

depends on the employment figures and settling the energy issue," Rogers says. "The Administration has given priorities in these areas," he adds, "and we may have to enact national health insurance on an incremental basis."

Rogers can envisage Congress passing health insurance to cover catastrophic illnesses before tackling the more comprehensive — and more expensive — national health insurance.

HEART DISEASE. "For the first time since 1973," he goes on, "we are seeing a decline in the death rate from heart disease. We have actually reduced the death rate from hypertension, stroke and that type of heart disease by 5 percent. That is a rather significant figure." Rogers attributes the striking decline to major research programs launched in the last 10 years.

AGING. "The National Institute on Aging is studying aging causes. I hope that well within 10 years we will have a significant extension of the lifespan," he says.

Despite his major legislative achievements, Rogers believes the most important factors in improving the country's health are "the things each of us could do."

"The health of our people has improved," he points out, "but we still eat too much and too many sweets, and we don't exercise enough. If we all used common sense, it would have a tremendous impact on our individual health and that of our nation."

Rogers advises people who want a long and healthy life to give up junk food, watch their weight, limit their intake of alcoholic beverages and "get out and walk." Our sedentary life, he believes, is our single-biggest health hazard.

Rogers appears to be a good advertisement for a healthy way of life. At 55 he looks a full decade younger. But even he says it's often easier to know what to do than to do it. "I don't follow my own advice as often as I should," he admits.

By Congressional standards Rogers' power and perquisites, like his spacious office with its view of the Capitol, have come early in life. Re-elected last year to his twelfth term, he now ranks fifteenth in House seniority.

Rogers, though, got an early start. His father represented the same south Florida areas of Broward and Palm Beach counties in the late 1940's and early 1950's. When he died, one month after being elected to his sixth term, Rogers won the special election that followed. At the time he was only 33, with a B.A. and law degree from the University of Florida, where he captured national debating titles.

A bachelor in those days, he soon acquired a reputation as a dashing man about town. He settled down personally and professionally when, shortly before Christmas 1962, he married the former Rebecca Mozley of Alabama after an extended courtship sandwiched between his work on the Hill and trips back to his Congressional district. Two years later he was appointed to the health subcommittee. With the help of his constituents, who regularly re-elect him by wide margins, Rogers began to master health policy and to become a man to be reckoned with.

He is considered a moderate Democrat who seeks the middle of the political spectrum on most issues. He also is known as a thoughtful and energetic chairman who is

Warning Signals That Could Save Your Life

Here's a list of symptoms that could signal a serious problem. If you have any of them, see your doctor at once. The symptom probably has no significance, but by taking immediate action, you could be warding off a dangerous situation.

- Nagging cough or hoarseness.
- Pressure or severe pain in chest for more than 2 minutes.
- Sudden, temporary weakness or numbness of face, arm or leg.
- Change in bowel or bladder habits.
- Sore that doesn't heal or slow healing of cuts and scratches.
- Obvious weakness or fatigue.
- Blurred or double vision.
- Unexplained headaches.
- Obvious change in wart or mole.
- Unusual bleeding or discharge.
- Temporary difficulty with speech.
- Thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere.
- Abnormal thirst or hunger.
- Sudden, temporary dimness or loss of vision.
- Dizziness, fainting or unsteadiness.
- Recent change in personality or mental ability.
- Sweating, nausea, shortness of breath.
- Indigestion or difficulty swallowing.
- Rapid weight loss or gain.

well versed in the art of political compromise. Rogers' forensic skills have languished since his undergraduate days. He prefers to work quietly behind the scenes to achieve a consensus on legislation. A reporter who often covers his subcommittee says, "He's a hard worker. He knows his stuff and does a very good job at it."

Rogers possesses enviable composure, but he is disturbed by the number of people whose lives are lost and health is injured unnecessarily. He believes, for instance, that 50 percent of the malignant diseases in the country, "maybe even more," could be cured now with early detection and proper treatment. The problem, he says, is applying what is known. "We must get the knowledge out of the research centers," he says. "Right now a person's chances for effective treatment depend to a large extent on where he lives. It's a lottery."

To begin changing that, Rogers helped pass legislation funding 10 comprehensive centers and 43 smaller centers around the country that will bring the latest knowledge about the treatment of various causes of cancer to local doctors.

But although he can pass legislation to improve the care of the sick, he can't always stop people from getting sick in the first place. That's something they must do for themselves. "We know that vaccination can prevent childhood diseases. We know that the proper use of drugs is important," he says. "Yet we continue in ways that are injurious to us. It is absurd for us not to use the medical knowledge we have."

"Remember — the best approach to health care is always prevention."

CAREY "MAGIC INCH" SMOKING PIPES
So different they are patented by the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT Patent Number 3267941

PERHAPS YOU CAN FIND THE ANSWER IN THE FOLLOWING LETTERS FROM CAREY PIPE SMOKERS WHO HAVE DISCOVERED A NEW PIPE SMOKING EXPERIENCE.

THESE ARE JUST A FEW EXAMPLES OF THE MANY LETTERS I RECEIVE EVERY DAY.

E. A. Carey

"I've only had my Carey for about a month now. It is a new and delightful experience to draw a cool, clean smoke without the mess, bother, trials and tribulations which I've encountered with a variety of other pipes. Many thanks. If you want your pipe back, you'll have to come down here and take it away from me."

J.R.U.
Tulsa, OK

"I am upset! I possess 4 Carey pipes. I also own 32 conventional briars, meerschaums, clays, etc. These latter represent an investment of approximately $350.00. The problem is — what do I do with my earlier extensive collection? Look at them? I occasionally smoke one or two just to remind me how they pale by comparison with my Carey's."

C.F.B.
Winnetka, IL

"May I take this opportunity to thank you for introducing me to the Carey Pipe. The most superb pipe I have ever smoked and I think I have just about tried them all. Its quality is unsurpassed, almost unbelievable. However, the proof is in the smoking. Best wishes for your continued success."

J.R.
Pittsburgh, PA

"Being a heavy and 'wet smoker' I've at last in the Carey Pipe found a pipe that can give me the continued pleasures in smoking that I've been searching for. Needless to say, I'm going to keep my Carey Pipe. My compliments to you for taking the bitterness out of pipe smoking — I didn't believe it could be done."

J.D.McC.
Indianapolis, IN

"Terrific: one word cannot say it all. I have been trying to give up cigarettes for two years to no avail. My Carey Pipe has done it. My Carey Pipe is everything you said it would be, and more."

T.W.
Fremont, OK

"Over the years I must of bought dozens of pipes and got no enjoyment from them and wound up with a drawer full of pipes. I took to, and became a heavy cigar smoker. I came across your ad but I was a little reluctant to try another pipe after being stung so many times, but with your guarantee there was no way I could lose, so I sent for your pipe and I don't mind telling you, it was the best decision I ever made, now I enjoy pipe smoking and I very seldom smoke a cigar anymore."

A.S.
North Bergen, NJ

NO MONEY — JUST SEND YOUR NAME

All I want is your name so I can write and tell you why I'm willing to send you a Carey® pipe for 30 days smoking without a cent of risk on your part. This is not a new model, not a new style, not a new gadget, not an improvement on old style pipes. It's based on an entirely new principle that harnesses four of Nature's immutable laws — contradicts every idea you've ever had about pipe smoking and delivers a smoking pleasure that you've never before experienced. My new kind of pipe smokes cool and mild hour after hour, day after day without rest, without bite, without bitterness. It doesn't have to be "broken in." It never has to be "rested" and it never accumulates sludge! To prove all this, I want to send you a Carey® Pipe to smoke 30 days at my risk. Clip out the coupon and send it to me TODAY. I'll write to you and include a full color brochure absolutely free so you can select your favorite style and shape for your 30 day trial.

E. A. Carey, Dept. 285P, 3932 N. Kilpatrick Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60641

If I should fall and skin myself
Or maybe make a bruise,
It's what I fell against that I

I curse and possibly I beat

On which I scraped my face and may

With care, the clerk worked out a series of connecting flights and wrote it all down. In about an hour the same old lady returned and asked for the same information.

"But I gave all that to you awhile ago," he said.

"I know," she replied smiling, "but this is for my sister. She wants to go, too."

Making Halloween A Treat

With its witches, goblins, jack-o'-lanterns and costumes, Halloween is an exciting time of the year for children. To make sure the holiday ends safely, you should follow some precautions. If you buy your child's costume, check to see that it is nonflammable. If you're making the costume, use light-colored material and attach reflective tape to both it and the trick-or-treat sack so the child can be seen easily at night. Flameproof the costume by wetting it in a solution of 9 ounces borax, 4 ounces boric acid and 1 gallon water. Use colorful face makeup instead of masks, which can restrict vision, and have each child carry a flashlight (no torches or candles, please). For trick or treating, accompany young children yourself or see that another responsible adult does. Confine visits to the immediate neighborhood and to early evening. Tell children not to eat treats until they get home, then examine all treats before allowing children to eat them. Discard unpackaged food. If you're welcoming trick-or-treaters, keep porch lights on. Give only wrapped candy, and don't let pets outside — they may become excited at the sight of strange costumes. Finally, remember to review traffic and pedestrian safety rules with your children.

ID For Nondrivers

Ever try to pay for a purchase by check on a day that you left your drivers license at home? Then you're familiar with the problems faced every day by nondrivers, who soon discover that even if they have several credit cards, most stores prefer a drivers license as proof of identification. But some states have taken action to remedy the situation and now offer an official identification card for anyone of legal driving age without a drivers license. For example, in Ga., nondrivers can get the card at their nearest Drivers License Examining Office by presenting their Social Security card and birth certificate. Three dollars gets them the ID card that includes their name, Social Security number, address, birth date and photograph. And the card never expires. If you're interested in getting a card, ask your local drivers licensing bureau whether your state issues them.

Ears For The Deaf

Seeing-eye dogs have been around for a while, but now the handicapped have a new set of canine friends — hearing dogs. The idea for the hearing dogs came from a deaf Minnesota housewife who had trained her toy poodle to help her. From Minnesota, where a pilot program was run by the local SPCA, the program went national when the American Humane Assn. took it over last year. When deaf or hearing-impaired people request the dogs, they are asked what three sounds they want to be alerted to. Bob White, administrator of the program, says that the most frequently selected sounds are door knocks, alarm clocks, smoke-detector systems and babies' cries. Although it costs $1,800 to train the animals, which are selected from local shelters on the basis of intelligence and temperament, the association provides the dogs free of charge. Before the dog is left in the home, a trainer spends several days teaching the new owner how to handle and care for it. There is currently a waiting list for dogs, but priority is being given to elderly people living alone and deaf couples with infants. For more information, write: Bob White, American Humane Assn., 53-51 South Roslyn, Englewood, Colo. 80110.

Paper Money

If your club or organization is looking for a way to raise money for charity, the answer might be as near as yesterday's newspaper — recycling. Thousands of groups have taken advantage of this fund-raising idea, and with the increasing demand for old newspaper, now is a good time for your group to cash in. If you're thinking of organizing a recycling drive, the first thing to do says the Paper Stock Conservation Committee (PSCC) of the American Paper Institute is to contact a local wastepaper dealer to find out what the market is for paper in your area and how much he will pay. He also can help organize your drive. Once you've made sure there is enough support in your group for the project, you'll have to define your collection area (perhaps in consultation with the wastepaper dealer) and decide whether you will be using a curbside or central-site pickup. Two months before the first drive, you should publicize it with flyers in the collection area, being sure to specify what kinds of paper you want. Then if you plan to continue the collection on a monthly basis, send out reminders 2 weeks before the collection for 3 or 4 months until people get into the recycling habit. For more information on organizing a recycling drive, write: Manager, PSCC, American Paper Institute, Dept. FW, 260 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Quick Takes

Wondering where your gas dollar goes? Gasoline taxes take up part of the bite, and, depending on where you live, you have to pay anywhere from 5¢ to 11¢ on the gallon. Texas has the lowest gas tax, and Del., Wash., and Conn. are tied for the highest...

Drinking and pregnancy don't mix says a study by doctors at Boston Univ. The study reports that women who drink heavily are twice as likely to bear sickly or abnormal babies than women who drink moderately or not at all... Contrary to what you may think, it isn't the kids who spend the most time in front of the TV set. A Nielsen survey found that adult women average 30 hours and 14 minutes a week of television-watching, children 2 to 11 25 hours and 38 minutes and teens 22 hours and 36 minutes...

Where you live makes a difference in how much weight you have to lose. One weight-control group's figures show that overweight Easterners have an average of 46.2 pounds to shed, Westerners 42.7, Southerners 45.8 and those from the Midwest 56.9.

Bus Safety For Children

Even though school has been in session for a while, a lot of children still haven't learned an important lesson — how to ride a bus safely. Why not take a few minutes with your children to go over these safety tips from Kansas State Univ. health-safety specialist Martha Brill.

- Children should stay in their seats and face the front of the bus when riding.
- Aisles of the bus must be kept clear. Musical instruments and other school gear should be placed under the seat.
- If children must cross a street when getting off, they should walk far enough ahead of the bus so that they can see the driver. The size of a bus prevents the driver from seeing a small child who passes close to the bumper.

Prince Valeta

by Hal Foster

Our Story: VALETA HAS FINISHED BRUSHING HER HAIR, AND KAREN THE FINAL POLISH ON HER ARMOR. THE DAY IS TOO HOT TO DO ANYTHING ELSE. "SHALL WE GO TO THE BATHS? IT WILL BE COOL THERE," SUGGESTS VALETA.

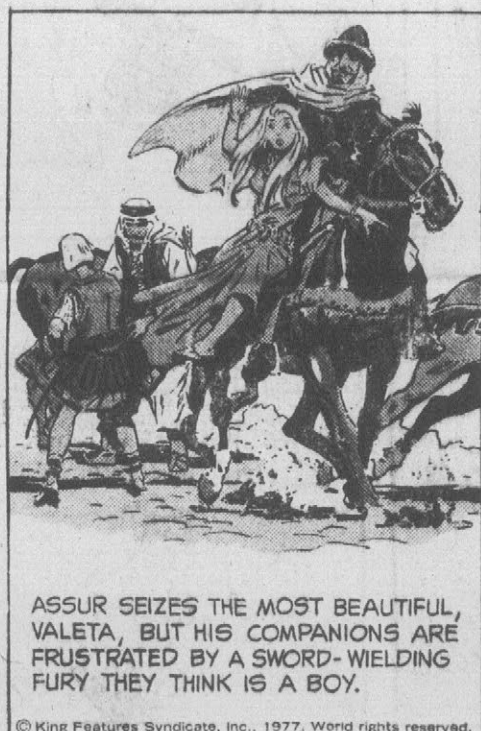

SO THEY SPEND THE DAY IN THE MUNICIPAL BATHS.

ASSUR, SON OF A SHEIK FROM BEYOND THE JORDAN, IS ON A HOLIDAY WITH SOME OF HIS COMPANIONS. ONE DAY HE WILL BE SHEIK AND HE PLANS TO HAVE ALL THE PLEASURES HE CAN BEFORE THAT DAY ARRIVES. HE AND HIS FRIENDS CLATTER INTO BEIRUT.

THE SIGHT OF YOUNG GIRLS LEAVING THE BATHS GIVES THEM AN IDEA. "THERE CAN BE NO FUN WITHOUT GIRLS. LET US TAKE SOME OF THESE BEAUTIES WITH US!"

ASSUR SEIZES THE MOST BEAUTIFUL, VALETA, BUT HIS COMPANIONS ARE FRUSTRATED BY A SWORD-WIELDING FURY THEY THINK IS A BOY.

BUT THE ONE WHO SEIZES KAREN RECEIVES A SWORD STROKE THAT WOULD HAVE SEVERED HIS ARM IF IT HAD NOT BEEN FOR HIS ARMGUARD.

BY NOW A CROWD HAS GATHERED AND AN ALARM SOUNDED, SO THE HOLIDAY YOUTHS RACE FOR THE GATES TAKING THE TWINS WITH THEM.

IF YOU DON'T DO THIS ALASKA JOB RIGHT... YOU GO BACK TO TAKE THE SLAM FOR FLYING HEAVY DRUGS FROM MEXICO INTO THE U.S.

WHEN THE SNOW ALONG THE PIPELINE IS PLENTY DEEP, YOU FLY THE REMOTE SECTIONS IN SHORT SEGMENTS...

..DROPPING THESE PLASTIC EXPLOSIVES RIGGED AS PIECES OF GEAR—WHICH, IF FOUND, COULD HAVE BEEN LEFT BEHIND BY THE ORIGINAL WORK CREWS!

THEY SINK INTO THE DRIFTS, BUT DO NOT BLOW! THEN WE DETONATE ONE BOMB BY REMOTE CONTROL!

NOT UNTIL THE FIRST BREAK IS REPAIRED DO WE BLOW THE NEXT—MILES AWAY!

WE'LL HAVE THE BIG SNAKE DRIED UP ALL WINTER!

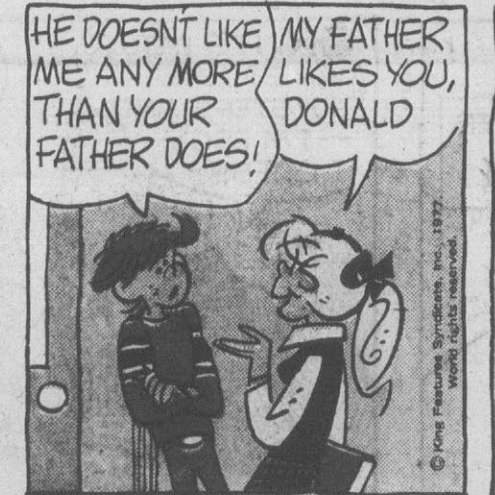

CHIEF, WE PICKED UP THE CREWMAN FROM THE ARAB-OWNED TANKER... ...SO THE BLASTS WILL BE BLAMED ON HIM!

AND WE ALSO SNAGGED A KNOWN-TO-BE BIG STOCK-HOLDER IN CALIFORNIA CRUDE ... SO THE OIL LINE BREAKS COULD BE HUNG ON THAT CROWD

I'M DISGUSTED!

HE DOESN'T LIKE ME ANY MORE, THAN YOUR FATHER DOES!

IT'S BEEN ONE WEEK SINCE I WAS LAST AT YOUR HOUSE!
